

The Complete
EEBO-TCP
Unformatted
Puritan and
Non-Conformist
Collection v-2.0
Vol. 3
Ainsworth pt.2 –
Allestree pt.1

*Compiled & Updated by David Jonescue, Logan West,
& Alex Sarrouf 2022-23*

The Complete
EEBO-TCP
Unformatted
Puritan and
Non-Conformist
Collection v2.0
Vol. 3
Ainsworth pt.2 –
Allestree pt.1

Compiled & Updated by David Jonescue, Logan West, & Alex Sarrouf 2022-23

Project Note – V2

This Work is Licensed Under 4.0 International (CC BY-NC-SA 4.0)

The initial content of this document was downloaded from the Early English Books Online (EEBO-TCP) website. The books were transcribed in a character for character manner and since there was no standard spelling during that time, it can be a bit cumbersome to read, with variations such as "unlesse", "vnlesse", and "vnles" appearing regularly.

With that in mind, this project is intended to clean up those books as much as possible and make them more accessible to the interested reader. A list of variant spellings and their corrections was utilized to clean up the text, but this is only as comprehensive as the list itself. Because of the nature of the original transcription, some words have missing characters or places where the original language (e.g., Greek) was not transcribed. The original text also contained linked footnotes and these have not been incorporated. Included in these works are some, but very limited text taken from other public domain sources.

Although this is admittedly no substitute for a properly proofread and scholarly edition, we believe that the result is a body of work which is far more accessible, particularly for searching and reading, than its predecessor (though our thankfulness for EEBO-TCP cannot be expressed.) The documents have been cleaned and presented to the best of our present ability, in what we hope is a pleasing and useful format for the vast majority of Christian brothers and sisters who desire to access and read these spiritually nourishing works.

For the sake of this collection, it has attempted to take a traditional theological as well as historical approach to Puritan research, meaning that, while there were some Arminian Puritans, those have been omitted if observed, and also, while there were other Non-Conformists that were Catholic, Quaker, Brownist, Pilgrims, etc., this collection has tried to observe only works from theologically reformed Puritans; Baptist, Presbyterian, and Congregational Non-Conformists; as well as CoE or Anglican clergy that were sympathetic or assistive to the Puritan cause. Furthermore, this collection only contains works from the period between 1500-1700, not just because that is the standard historical period of Puritanism, but because this is also the limit of the works found on EEBO-TCP. This is not an exhaustive collection of Puritan/Non-Conformist works, but a collection of those pertinent works which were located on EEBO-TCP which enables the searching thereof by their conversion from facsimile to text. The reason the alphabetical flow of the authors in these titles are not perfectly in order, is because many names were added well into the compiling of these texts, and we had to choose between prolonging publication to start over, or continue and publish with the names somewhat out of order.

Finally, please forgive our eagerness in the midst of imperfection in offering such an errant publication. Given the sheer number of texts, time constraints, and other duties; this is the best we can offer for now; yet, knowing the spiritual treasures within these pages, we pray that this effort, though feeble, will still result in the edification of His Church, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to the glorification of our Gracious God. All of the text and titles included in these works are in the public domain, and can be used in any way; for profit or otherwise, by anybody or entity. Only this specific derivative and creative work is bound by the creative common license listed above. -- Soli Deo Gloria

David Jonescue
Source Retrieval /
Document Preparation

Logan West
Programming /
Word Replacement List

Alex Sarrouf
Initial & Eventual
Word Replacement List

Table of Contents

Henry Ainsworth, 1571-1622?7

P-HA-9. Certain notes of M. Henry Ainsworth his last sermon. Taken by pen in the public delivery by one of his flock, a little before his death. Anno 1622. Published now at last by the said writer, as a love token of remembrance to his brethren to inkindle their affections to prayer, that scandals (of many years continuance) may be removed, that are bars to keep back many godly wise and judicious from us, whereby we might grow to farther perfection again - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Robinson, John, 1575?-1625. aut, Staesmore, Sabine.....7

P-HA-10. Covnterpoyson considerations touching the points in difference between the godly ministers and people of the Church of England, and the seduced brethren of the separation : argvments that the best assemblies of the present church of England are true visible churches : that the preachers in the best assemblies of Engl. are true ministers of Christ : Mr. Bernard's book entitled The Separatists Schism : Mr Crashawes questions propounded in his sermon preached at the cross - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622? 18

P-HA-11. The art of logic; or, The entire body of logic in English. Unfolding to the meanest capacity the way to dispute well, and to refute all fallacies whatsoever. The second edition, corrected and amended. By Zacharias Coke of Grays-Inn, Gent. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Coke, Zacharias, attributed name..... 150

P-HA-12. The communion of saints A treatise of the fellowship that the faithful have with God, and his angels, and one with another; in this present life. Gathered out of the holy Scriptures, by H.A. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?351

P-HA-13. The confession of faith of certain English people living in exile, in the Low countries. Together with a brief note of the special heads of those things wherein we differ fro[m] the Church of Engla[n]d. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Johnson, Francis, 1562-1618.....467

P-HA-14. The orthodox foundation of religion long since collected by that judicious and elegant man, Mr. Henry Ainsworth, for the benefit of his private company, and now divulged for the public good of all that desire to know that Cornerstone, Christ Jesus crucified - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, S. W. (Samuel White)487

Joseph Alleine, 1634-1668.....534

P-JA1-1. A call to Archippus, or, An humble and earnest motion to some ejected ministers (by way of letter) to take heed to their ministry that they fulfil it. - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.534

P-JA1-2. A most familiar explanation of the Assemblies shorter catechism wherein their larger answers are broken into lesser parcels, thereby to let in the light by degrees into the minds of the learners : to which is added in the close, a most brief help for the necessary but much neglected duty of self-examination to be daily perused : and to this is subjoined a letter of Christian counsel to a destitute flock - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668., Westminster Assembly (1643-1652). Shorter catechism549

P-JA1-3. A sure guide to heaven, or, An earnest invitation to sinners to turn to God in order to their eternal salvation showing the thoughtful sinner what he must do to be saved - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.....	660
P-JA1-4. An alarm to unconverted sinners, in a serious treatise ... whereunto are annexed Divers practical cases of conscience judiciously resolved - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668. ...	759
P-JA1-5. Christian letters full of spiritual instructions tending to the promoting of the power of godliness, both in person and families. - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.....	863
P-JA1-6. Divers practical cases of conscience satisfactorily resolved ... to which are added some counsels & cordials - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.	950
P-JA1-7. Remains of that excellent minister of Jesus Christ, Mr. Joseph Alleine being a collection of sundry directions, sermons, sacrament-speeches, and letters, not heretofore published ... - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668., R. A. (Richard Alleine), 1611-1681.	995
P-JA1-8. The way to true happiness in a serious treatise - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668., R. A. (Richard Alleine), 1611-1681., Baxter, Richard, 1615-1691.....	1124
Richard Allestree, 1619-1681.....	1228
P-RA-1. A defense and continuation of the Discourse concerning the period of human life being a reply to a late answer, entitled A letter to a gentleman, &c. : to which is added, an appendix wherein several objections urged in private are considered, and Mr. Gales severe, but groundless charge is examined. - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1228
P-RA-2. A discourse concerning the beauty of holiness by the author of The duty of man, laid down in express words of Scripture. - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1255
P-RA-3. A discourse concerning the period of human life, whether mutable or immutable by the author of The duty of man laid down in express words of Scripture. - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681., R. E.	1304
P-RA-4. A sermon preached before the King, Decemb. 31, 1665, at Christ-Church in Oxford by R. Allestree - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1338
P-RA-5. A sermon preached at Hampton-court on the 29th of May, 1662 being the anniversary of His Sacred Majesty's most happy return - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.	1351
P-RA-6. A sermon preached before the King at White Hall on Sunday Nov. 17, 1667 by Richard Allestree - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1366
P-RA-7. A sermon preached before the King at White-hall, October the 12th 1662 by Richard Allestrey - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1380
P-RA-8. A sermon preached in St. Peter's Westminster on Sunday, Jan. 6, 1660 at the consecration of the Right Reverend Fathers in God, Gilbert, Lord Bishop of Bristol, Edward, Lord Bishop of Norwich, Nicholas, Lord Bishop of Hereford, William, Lord Bishop of Gloucester by Richard Allestry - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.....	1392
P-RA-9. Eighteen sermons whereof fifteen preached the King, the rest upon public occasions - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681.	1409

P-RA-10. Forty sermons whereof twenty one are now first published, the greatest part preached before the King and on solemn occasions - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681., Fell, John, 1625-1686. 1629

P-RA-11. Private devotions for several occasions, ordinary and extraordinary - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681. 2122

P-RA-12. Scala sancta: or The exaltation of the soul. Being a train of pious thoughts, completing the whole duty of man: or, Devotions compiled by R.A. Gent. in his solitudes. - Allestree, Richard, 1619-1681. 2169

Henry Ainsworth, 1571-1622?

P-HA-9. Certain notes of M. Henry Ainsworth his last sermon. Taken by pen in the public delivery by one of his flock, a little before his death. Anno 1622. Published now at last by the said writer, as a love token of remembrance to his brethren to inkindle their affections to prayer, that scandals (of many years continuance) may be removed, that are bars to keep back many godly wise and judicious from us, whereby we might grow to farther perfection again - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Robinson, John, 1575?-1625. aut, Staesmore, Sabine.

CERTAIN NOTES of M. HENRY AYNSWORTH HIS LAST SERMON.

Taken by pen in the public delivery by one of his flock, a little before his death. Anno 1622.

Published now at last by the said writer, as a love token of remembrance to his brethren, to inkindle their affections to prayer, that scandals (of many years continuance) may be removed, that are bars to keep back many godly wise and judicious from us, whereby we might grow to farther perfection again.

Matth. 9. 37. 38.

Surely the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. Wherefore pray the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

Imprinted 1630.

To my beloved brethren in the faith and fellowship of the Gospel in all places specially those my native countrymen resident in Amsterdam, grace and peace from our God in Christ.

BEloved the Scripture tells us that while the Ark of God tarried in Kiriath-jearim, the time being long (for it was twenty years) all Jsraell lamented after the Lord 1. Sam. 7. 2. The same affections me thinks I perceive in many of you, even for the sundry years absence of the Lord's ministers, whereby our comfortable portion in the Lord's house is greatly lessened, for being left now as sheep upon the bare commons, I fear we may truly cry with the Prophet, My leannes, my leannes, and with all being divers times hurried and torn with the loud out cries, and hard handling of furious and unmerciful spirits, who under pretence of godly zeal and hatred against sin, ungodlily massacre the true & living members of Christ's body, and by pulling out the squared living stones endanger the fall of the house. And herewith considering what reproach not only ourselves, but also the truth itself sustains by reason of such courses, for now the ways of Zion mourn, in that few or none come to her solemnities so that we may truly take up that complaint of the Prophet Lament. 1. 8. Jerusalem hath grievously sinned, therefore she is in derision: all that honored her, despise her, because they have seen her filthiness: yea, she sigheth and turneth backward. And besides all this, the vigilant adversary is as forward to discourage and dishearten us by slandering our holy practice with scisme and profaneness. Who duly weighing these things brethren cā refrain pitying us as our savior Christ did the multitude, because they were dispersed, and scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. But this being now toward the end or last days, love in men towards others is grown cold, every man seeking his own and not that that is Christ's, Therefore brethren let us at last learn to be wise for ourselves, in weighing the danger of biting and devouring one another which tends to the consuming one of another Gallat. 5. 15. Let us hereafter study to be quiet. 1. Thess. 4. 11. and if any yet lust to be contentious, we must answer with the same Apostle, We have no such custom. 1. Cor. 11. 16. And touching those that seem to be possessed with Diotrephes spirit, who are unwearied to prate against us with malicious words, & not therewith content thrust them out of the Church that witness for us, and testify against their iniquitye, what shall I say of them (since they reject the word of God, and all wholesome counsel for their amendment, contrary to the very letter of the 38. Article of our published confession of faith) but only leave them to the Lord who only hath power to change them or cut them of. In the mean time read & consider that affectionate exhortation of the Apostle Rom. 16. 17. Now I beseech you brethren mark them diligently which cause division and offenses, contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them, for they that are such serve not the Lord Jesus Christ but themselves. Yet least they should take themselves hereby to be wronged if nothing be said farther, amongst the many evils done us, I have thought fitting to give the Christian reader a taste of some, to will them in the fear of God to consider their ways in their hearts, and judge without partiality their courses by the law of God, so may they soon see, how injuriously and irregularly they have walked ever since the death of our wise, faithful, and honored guides, who spake enough to declare our danger, and the means (through God's blessing) to avoid it, for who can forget those oft pressed speeches of our Teacher upon his death bed when he earnestly exhorted even to his last breath, to Christian moderation in the affairs of the Church, as the main thing wherein our tranquilly would consist, and he had great reason to urge it upon some, because many years experience bad taught him how fierce, unadvised, & preposterous he had found some (to be left now in main trust as the principal) from time to time, in kindling fire that their wisdom and understanding found work enough to quench. And the last deceased Elder that best knew him that was principally aimed at, said in direct words, that it would never be well with the Church while it was guided by a strangers head, & who can deny his words to be true hitherto, nay let even himself and his privy counselors speak, whether in their firey zeal they did not instantly so far forget our Teachers counsel for moderation, that they sought up and forced into the Church new causeless troubles contrary to the Law & Gospel, as the Church of Leyden plainly proved to them, & contrary to the very letter of the 8. Position of our Apology.

For when even in a mere matter of advise (desired of us by another Church) the Church here had come to a peaceable conclusion to the content of each part that differed in matter of judgment, and that the Elder had solemnly promised to write a letter accordingly, certain discontented brethren made a meeting to change that solemn agreement of the Church, the Elder consenting & acting with them, which he bringing and reading to the Church, it was instantly blamed in the Elder, for writing contrary to the Churches joint agreement, and his own promise, and so he was turned back (after much striving by him & his confederats, who were afterwards discovered as guilty of that they unjustly had censured others for) & willed to write the first peaceable agreemēt, that the church might not be farther troubled, but in soms absence (minded chief) the next Lord's day, there was advantage taken of the time, & the letter brought again unaltered in the least, and by a strong and violent hand those many masters then so far prevailed against those that pressed the former conclusiō, that the letter was consented to by the Church to be sent away as it was, only crossing out my name, because I could be no testimony, in that my name was produced for, and now the Church was so transported, that they refused so much as to signify under their letter, either that some brethren were differing minded thereto, or to take the advise of the Church of Leyden that were jointly interested with them.

But farther here was another thing yet worse, for either the Elder alone, or these privy counselors with him, stood not to this second agreement the Church made, but wrote another with alterations, additions, and diminishings besides the Churches knowledge or consent, & sent it for the Churches mind and act; yet behold the other brethren that never saw or heard this new forged letter, till near two years after they were cast out of the Church (which was dispatched in hast, even in 14. days time least they should be prevented) upon the very suspitiō, that a few of thē met to write to cōtradict the Churches action, in hir letter of advise, by the sole, yet false, information of the Elder, two of them were singled out, and selected from the rest, and produced to the Church for evil, which yet the informer professed, that the thing informed and accused, might be holy just, and good, for ought he knew, yet being desirous to get matter, the matter was prosecuted in the Church by interrogatoryes to find out sin, which the brethren testified against, as contrary to the law of love which thinks no evil, & rule of Christ Matth. 18. Yet offered they the suspected act to sight & correctiō wherein soever it should be found amiss, and with all protesting solemnly they had neither done the thing so suspected, nor intended it; & yet behold the brethren were cast out without the knowledge of sin or due dealing for sin, save that for refusing to answer intrapping demands, which they urged submission unto as God's word & Christ's government, they were Consured as contemners of both, and the maintenance of this both Elders & Church are now so wedded to, that the chief of them blush not to affirm, that rather then they will go back from what they have done herein, they will go on in it, yea though two of them do not remain together. And yet who sees not their palpable gross partiallity in sparing their offending favorites in matters of scandalous and evil nature, least their evil combination be weakened, discovered, or broken. Oh how much better were it they would cease to abound in their own sense, and take counsel from such as in the fear of God are both able and willing to direct them better. O that they would learn to be wise at the last, so through the good hand of our God there might be some recovery of what is lost. Whereas now their irregular proceedings have made our brethren in all places to hang down their heads, as they have been plainly certiyed frō sundry Churches. Now from these and the like offenses divers that were of us turn their backs upon us, and betake themselves to live at large, as if now the door of indifferency or libertinisme were set open, that it matters not whom they hear, or where they walk, anywhere or nowhere, and measuring these men's sins with others they think they can hardly go to worse: And whence riseth all this, & much more of the like, but even for the want of faithful Pastors and Teachers, and godly discreet and able guides or Rulers in the Church? but what hope of ever such worthyes coming in, when there is such an hideous noise in the house, by such unruly masters which cruelly smite some, wound others, & cast their dear brethren out at the windows. Hence come families to be divided, the loving husband from his beloved wife, the affectionate parents from their dear Children, hence come families to be spoiled by remissnes in neglect, nay, in utter laying aside of joint family duties; the new vessels want their seasoning, the tender plants their due watering, and so become barren before their full growth. So that we may justly take up the complaint of the Prophet Habakuk 1. 2. 3. 4. Oh Lord how long shall I cry and thou will not hear! even cry out to thee for violence and thou will not help! Why dost thoushew me iniquity, & cause me to behold sorrow? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention, &c. Oh consider this ye that are so bent to spoiling, repent and turn in time, least the living stones crying in the wall of the spiritual house, the corner stone be offended, and fall upon you and grind you to pieces. But I desire your conversion and not subversion, if the will of the Lord so be, though ye have been bold to vent your worst you can imagine against me upon all occasions, and for your presumptuous determining my eternal estate, the Lord forgive you. If you please to read what is here writ, I hope through the Lord it may turn your courses, that ye may see your duty is to build and not to destroy. They were the instructiōs our late faithful Teacher M. Ainsworth, delivered to us all, the last time he ever executed his ministry with us, which was at such a time as his body & natural strength were so decayed, that he wanted (as ye know) ability to come up again, even that very Lord's day in the afternoon as his usual manner was, wherein his faithfullnes may be seen even to his last gasp, in striving to feed the flock even when the hand of God was heavy upon him in that sore perplexing and tedious disease of the stone, of which in a few days after he died, yet since even in his strong pains (that sometime by reason of the extremity caused a stay of speech, to the grief of the hearers and beholders) he was delivered of this, as the last fruit of his ministry, let the Israel of God love it as Jacob did Benjamin the dear son of his beloved wife, of whom she died. It is not for nothing that the Holy Ghost expressly tells us. These be the last words of David 2. Sam. 23. 1. Give me leave therefore (though not to call you together as Jacob did his sons when he was to deliver his last words to them Gen. 49.) yet to entreat you to read what our loving Teacher as a father spake in his charge last to us. And though some or the most of you heard them set out in the lively voice God's solemn ordinance of preaching, yet let it not grieve you, that I write to you some of the same things, so far as my slow hand could extend to compass, the fullness of his words I profess not to report, no nor yet the sum or substance of everything he hence delivered, no nor yet have I published things so well as J might have done, had I set upon the work to write it out fair instantly, while things were green in my own & others memoryes, but now these notes having lain by me near 8. years before I set upon this resolution, it is more defective then is requisite for the report of a work of so able and faithful a man, yet I trust none will be offended at me for this my service of love, since if ought shall be found amiss, I am willing the blame lie upon my misunderstanding or forgetfulness, and so let him be free, whoever approved himself in his ministry to every man's conscience. Besides, had I been exact in taking, yet considering his condition at the time of the delivery, it is not probable to come so refined to satisfy this curious carping age, whom nothing almost pleaseth, but novelly garnished with human art. But as the contents of the sermon tend not that way, so neither do I pass to please the world herein. My chief drift is, to commend the remembrance both of the person and work, that ye may be affected with the days of old, when we went together to the house of God with joy, as those that keep a feast, that so we may resolve with the Prophet Isaiah. 62. 1. 6. 7. Not to hold our tongues for Jerusalem's sake, nor give the Lord rest till he repair and set it up, that so the righteousness thereof may break forth as the light, and salvation thereof as a burning lamp. I end with the heavenly words uttered when our great and good shepherd came into the world. Luk. 2. 14. Glory to God in the highest, & on earth peace, good will toward men.

Your brother in all Christian affection SABINE STARESMORE.

1. PETER 2. 4.

To whom coming as unto a living stone disallowed of men, but chosen of God and precious.

5. Ye also as living stones, be made a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

The purpose of the Apostle in these words and those following, is to exhort all Christians to the increase of faith and holiness of life. He having before mentioned the bounty of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath afforded the sincere milk of his Word, that they might grow thereby: Now because Paul may plant, & Apollos may water, but it is only God that gives the increase, he doth thereby lead them to the Lord Jesus Christ, who hath so provided for his newborn babes that they may have wherewith to grow up.

First he speaks of coming to Christ, describing him a living stone as he is elsewhere called the chief corner stone in this building, upon whom all the people of God ought to rely, he being then the chief corner stone, notwithstanding he be disallowed of men, yet to God he is elect and precious.

The first duty the Holy Ghost here teacheth us is, That we should be careful to get faith and holiness in our persons which we do obtain by coming to Christ: secondly we are next to come to his house, that is, to become members of his visible Church. Now we come to Christ first by his call of us by the preaching of his word, as Christ saith Cometo me, &c. secondly by the drawing of the father. So that there are two ways or means to come to Christ, the one is outward, the other inward, the first is the Word, the second is the Spirit, by persuading our hearts and bringing us to the obedience of the Gospel.

Next we are to consider from what we are called, namely from that that is by nature sinful, from our sinful estate, secondly whereto we are called, that is, to Christ, that we may become living stones, to be built a spiritual house.

Christ is called a living stone as having life in himself, and giving life to his church, he is called the chief corner stone in way of similitude; for as the corner stone to the building, is to join the walls together, so Christ is to the whole Church, he joins all his, both Jews and Gentiles into one spiritual house. Again he is called a stone in respect of his firmness of grace given of God by him; so that all that are built upon him, are as a house built upon a rock which stands sure against all assaults, opposed by our Savior to an house built upon the sand which falls when tempestuous assaults come: so is it with us, we have a firm foundation which is God's decree, his love stablished to us in Christ.

Is Christ then such a firm and sure foundation, it is for the exceeding comfort of all his people, that however they be opposed by the world and Satan yet they shall remain firm forever, the gates of hell shall never prevail against them.

Again hath Christ life not only for himself but for us, this is to show us our duties that we carry ourselves as living stones in his spiritual house which is his Church, he that is Christ's must be a new creature, by faith he must put on Christ, for unless we come to Christ by faith, we shall depart from him without fruit: and by these several comparisons laid down in scripture we are to know the grace of Christ is set forth to us. He is a living stone and he makes us living stones, he gives life to the whole body.

He is called also living bread, whosoever eat him (that is believe in him) shall live by him, if any man eat of this bread he shall live forever.

He is called the vine and we the branches, he that abides in him brings forth fruit, but without him we can do nothing, by him alone we bring forth fruit, and expect salvation in the day of the Lord.

Disallowed of men.) First this was in his own person when he was here, so also in his after. In himself, in that he had neither house nor home; for he was a carpenter & brought up without school learning, and because of his base and low estate, he was despised and men regarded him not.

2. The Jews were crossed in their error, while they expected salvation by the works of the law, but he declares, if they will have salvation they must have it by him, without him none can see God, to the Jews then Christ was a stumbling block, by them judged an enemy to God and Moses.

3. Christ came preaching the death of the cross, which to the Gentiles is foolishness, and in respect of his plain & simple administration of the Gospel, for these causes he may be said to be disallowed of men.

This is spoken to comfort us against the scandal of the cross, when we see he is rejected of the world not only in himself, but in his servants, Is Christ then not respected? let us not be offended, for Christ was to enter into glory by suffering, let us then willingly endure despising here, that we may have glory in the life to come, for this cause are we to arm ourselves against the temptations of this world, because if the master of the house was thus entreated and disallowed of men, we his servants must not murmur if we drink also of the same cup, therefore we are not to think that the Kingdom of Christ here is a pompous outward Kingdom, but it consists in righteousness peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, and those that are his subjects must be meek and humble; and therefore let all take heed that they be not offended at Christ's meanness, nor yet stumble at the afflictions that come for his sake.

The 3. thing, (elect of God and precious.) Whence we may observe, how opposite the actions of God and men are, men make no account of Christ, but count him vile, but God honors and prefers him, it is prophesied of him that he should grow as a branch out of a dry ground, so saith the Prophet Isaiah of him, and David compares him to a worm and no man, despised of men, yet this hinders not God's respect of him, for after suffering he came to glory: Thus it is with all his people, although they are despised of men, yet are they in account with God, God accounts them his treasure, he pitcheth his tabernacle amongst them, with whom he will dwell.

Christ is called the elect of God by the Prophet Isaiah, my servant whom I have chosen, so we are chosen in Christ, before the world was, God gives us eternal life by him.

In that Christ is elect and we in him, it is to show the assurance of salvation by Christ, as Christ died and went to glory, so shall we also, even as God did regard him as his only begotten son, in whom he is well pleased, notwithstanding all his baseness in the world's esteem; so doth God account of all true Christians, for this is for farther manifestation of the glory of God in accepting them in his son Christ.

(Ye also as living stones are built up a Spiritual House.) As in the first place we said, it is not enough to come to Christ in our persons, but we must adjoin to his Church, so now we must not content ourselves with personal good, but we must seek farther perfection to become members of his visible Church, It is not lawful for Christians to wander in the world or to live alone, nor to adjoin themselves in communion with false Churches, but as it is in the Acts, The Lord added to the Church such as should be saved, unto this estate all are bound to come, and so to be made partakers of all Christ's graces, who couples all the body together, for this cause are they called living stones in similitude from the stones of the temple compacted into one body, but the stones of the Temple were liveless, these living, and herein they differ. As the first Temple was a figure of Christ, so also it signified all the body of the faithful, who make all one house, over which Christ is set. If we then be his house let us hold fast our rejoicing to the end.

Moreover although those stones in that first Temple built by Salomō were without life, yet God took possession of it; and dwelt in the midst of it, how much more with them that are a temple joined together of living stones.

Now as this is for encouragement to all to become members of his Church, so also it showeth who are the fit members of his Church, even those only that are living stones.

And in that the members of the Church ought to be living stones, it should teach us, not to be idle in good works, faith without works is dead, and just men live by faith, by faith we are made partakers of the death of Christ and all other benefits, Christ is the head of the body: As is the nature of the head, so must the members be, and as the parts of the body natural, have life from the head, so also we from Christ, as he is the head and is living, so ought all true Christians that come to him; it is a thing against nature that a dead body should be fastened to a living head, and therefore whoever is not fastened to him by faith, cannot be made partakers of his life, therefore however hypocrites may come into the Church by their seeming regeneratiō, yet not having the life of God in them, they can receive no benefitt from Christ by the ministry of man. But because we are to insist upon the similitude of a building we will return to that.

We are built into an house three manner of ways, first by the gifts of the spirit, when God gives ability to build up one another by the graces we receive frō the Spirit of God, 2. Besides these, there are offices proceeding from the Lord Christ, of which some were master builders as the Apostles, and Prophets, next after them the Evangelists, upō the Doctrines they taught and writ the church is built, as the Apostle testifyes to the Ephes. 2. 20. 21. To these he adds the ordinary ministry of the church, Pastors and Teachers Eph. 4. 11. 12. Unto these two we have a third namely the operations of God the father, who makes his word powerful and effectual, giving us grace to understand and apply it; and to bring forth the fruit of it: so that from the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, we receive life & these benefitts here spokē of, and so become a spiritual house. This spiritual house is opposed to the matereall house built by Solomon, which was but a figure as the Apostle saith to the Hebrews.

We are therefore to be careful that the graces of God be not received in us in vain, but that we grow in grace in faith and holiness, that we may be built up an holy house & habitation by his spirit. In this life we are but in the growth, but in the life to come, we shall come to be perfect men, now in the mean time we are to know we are in this world as Christ was in this world, still growing.

There is all ways an end of building, as the Apostle saith Eph. 2. 20. The whole church is built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, in whom all the building is coupled together. 1. groweth to be an holy temple in Lord, whereby the holy Ghost shows, the state of the Church figured by the Temple. The second end is in the 22. verse, to be the habitation of God by the Spirit, hence is it the holy Ghost saith, know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy Ghost?

Thus being the temple of God, we may build upō the assurance of the Lord's promise of dwelling amongst us, as it is said, I will walk & dwell amongst them and pitch my Tabernacle amongst you, I will be your God & ye shall be my people, thus the most heavenly promises are set down under this mystery, the full accomplishment whereof shall be fulfilled in the world to come: In the mean time as Solomon prayed at the dedicatiō of the Temple, behold the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, so we may say, what are we, that God should dwell amongst us, or that he should pour out the graces of his spirit upon us? and forasmuch as we should be a spiritual house, we are to take heed that we defile not our bodies or souls: see what care God had of old of the Temple, none defiled, might enter therein, if a matereall house was so carefully kept, how much more the living house the church of God, if the former were carefully watched and looked to, to keep it from pollution, how much more should we be careful to keep ourselves from our own or others sins, therefore let us take heed that we harbor not uncleanness within us, but that we labor to be holy as he is holy, because we are built a spiritual house. Solomon's house was seven years in building, so we in this house of God must be still in building in that faith to which God hath called us.

The end of that house was to declare God's word amongst them, and there did the Lord promise he would accept their offerings.

From the house we are now to speak of the priesthood, for that he speaks of next, (an holy priesthood.) As of Christ, we are called Christ•ans, so from the particular offices of Christ, as of Prophet, Priest, and King, we are ever with h•m made partakers of the same, we have the anointing of Christ to make us prophets priests and Kings, of his priesthood we see here, that we should be an holy priesthood. Touching the holiness of the priesthood it was appointed by the Lord only to some, for none might take that honor upon them but he that was called of God as was Aaron, so no spiritual priest now, but he that is called of Christ, therefore there is now no true priests but of Christ, as Christ offered to his father a spiritual sacrifice acceptable, so we by him are made able to offer spiritual sacrifices.

The second thing belonging to the priesthood, they must be without blemish, if any were blemished they were to be putt from their office, signifying thereby that he that is our high priest, must be holy harmless and undefiled, separate from sinners, the priest must abstain from unclean things, we are not to marvel the Lord should be so careful of the priests, since he will be honored in those that come near him, they were to be tried and known to be of holy conversation in the sight of God; the same thing is required of us, that we purge out that natural corruption wherein we were born, that we should be changed frō our deformities, and shake off our corruptions in the sight of God, that we may be holy as the priests of God, to offer holy sacrifices to him.

The sacrifices that the priests did offer of old were of two sorts, some were to putt away sin, some for thansgiving to God. These sacrifices are now ceased, for Christ once offering himself hath satisfied all, and hath putt an end to all those legal types, therefore now no sacrifice either bloody or unbloody is any sacrifice for our sin, but only the blood of Christ which cleanseth us from all sin.

First for the burnt offerings they were signs of our offering our bodies and souls to the Lord, for in it the whole creature was given unto God, only the priest had the skin for his labor, other free will offerings, some were of beasts, some of fowls, and other of corn, now in those offerings of beasts ad fowls, they were not to be brought dead: but living, and therefore no fish that dyes so soon as it is out of the water was fit for sacrifice.

God hereby teacheth us, not to bring lame and dead sacrifices, but to present ourselves as living sacrifices, holy, acceptable to the Lord in Jesus Christ. These things did the law of Moses teach them in those legal sacrifices, but unto us we know all those outward sacrifices are abolished, and therefore we are not to do so, but we are to kill our worldly lusts, we must present our bodies and souls to God, and serve him with all our hearts, with all our soul, and with all our strength, and this more then all burnt offerings and sacrifices.

For first spiritual sacrifices do consist in the heart, of which David speaks in the 51. Psalm, The sacrifices of God are a brokenheart, a broken and contrite heart, O God thou wilt not despise. Then is there the fruit of the lips, so that we must not only have holy affections, but also out mouths and lips must sing to his praise, we must have no unprofitable and profane words to come out of our mouths. 3. Likewise all our actions and benefits to the poor are acceptable sacrifices, To do good, and to distribute forgett not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased, so that in general, all good works God appoints us to walk in, in prayer, in thansgiving, in performing duties one to another, in relief of our brethren, wherein we are poured out as in sacrifice for our brethren.

Acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. These sacrifices then must be so offered as they may be accepted in Jesus Christ. If a man offered sacrifice not accepted, he both lost his charge and his reward, so God doth not respect sacrifices that are not offered in Jesus Christ.

He then that would have his service pleasing to God, must first have his person accepted, otherwise his sacrifice cannot be well pleasing to God, so in Cain and Abel, the Lord had respect to Abel, & his offering, first his person was accepted then his offering, the reason is, because the the sacrifice of the wicked is abominable to God, therefore no wicked man can offer a sweet smelling sacrifice to God, because himself being wicked all his actions the Lord hath no respect to. Secondly God doth not only require holiness in our persons, but he farther requires that they be done at his cōmaund, for if men had offered any other sacrifice then he commanded, it was a thing that he abhorred, therefore in offering their children to Moloch the Lord protests against it as a thing he never commanded, whatsoever worship then is done by the precepts of men without the commandment of God it is vain and sinful, In vain do they worship me (saith Christ) that teach for Doctrines the commandments of men.

3. As we have a care to do what God commands, yet are we not to think for the worthiness of the work done to be accepted; but simply to delight to do it as a thing commanded of God in obedience to him.

4. We must have faith, that so it may be well pleasing to him, we must perform it in him in whom the father is well pleased, that is in Jesus Christ, the reason is, because every man by nature being corrupted, we cannot offer anything wherewith God is pleased, As it was impossible that the blood of bulls and goats should purge sin, so is it not possible to offer any other sacrifice pleasing to God, but only that that is done in faith of Christ. 2. It must be by and through Jesus Christ, because he is the Mediator of the new testament, because God & we are not at one, therefore we must have a Mediator, and there is no other Mediator between God and man but Jesus Christ, therefore whosoever offer any duty & not in faith in Christ, they cannot please God, be they prayers or any other service. In the sacrifices of old they were still to have salt, as salt keeps from putrifying, so it also alters the relish of the flesh: which is to teach us, not to think to come to God in the taste of our own works, but by the Covenaut of Jesus Christ.

The sum of all is that we are called of God from our natural and corrupt state, to the state of grace in Jesus Christ, which is despised in the world, but rich in the sight of God, and so ought it to be esteemed of us above all things, even the greatest riches & honors of this world. Let us not then pass for the reproach of the world, for having Christ we have all, therefore we are to esteem of this privilege aright, and forasmuch as God requireth holiness should be in his house of old, and we are his spiritual house, let us not think that God requireth less of us thē of old. Labor we to keep ourselves without spott, As Christ was said to be faithful in his own house, whose house we are if we hold fast the confidence, & rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end, for this is our happiness that we are called to the communion of himself & spiritt, he defends us frō evil, & doth us good, here and forever, and so should we be thankful to God, for if God would be honored of the fathers in the matereall temple, how much more of us, to whom he hath given the spiritual house & spiritual sacrifices, the fathers saluted the promises a far off, God providing some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.

A Postscript to the Brethren absent.

BRethren, it may haply seem strangeto you, that the people here complained of, should be so irregular, in their proceedings, & so singular, as to reject the help of all, but since they had their reasons, I thought it requisite to give thē their due herein. The reason why they proceeded not by the rule Matt. 18. was, because in this case, they had nothing to do with it, but Joshua 22. & 1. Thes. 5. 22. And the reason why they rejected all others help was, because they said they were contrary to all mē. As for farther things observed, J refer myself to the indifferent present, whether I have not set down their offenses sparingly, they having bē mostly in addition in a constant course more then 7. years: yet (with grief I speak it) they are so confidentand overjust in their courses, that they continue wearylesse condemning all others, & censure those within their power that withstand them in it, and this in deed and truth, is the fountain whence all our present troubles have issued. This I thought necessary to declare, because it ministers just occasion to many godly persons to stumble at us. Things thus proposed: Let the Brethren judge between us.

FINIS.

P-HA-10. Covnterpoyson considerations touching the points in difference between the godly ministers and people of the Church of England, and the seduced brethren of the separation : argvments that the best assemblies of the present church of England are true visible churches : that the preachers in the best assemblies of Engl. are true ministers of Christ : Mr. Bernard's book entitled The Separatists Schism : Mr Crashawes questions propounded in his sermon preached at the cross - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?

COVNTERPOYSON CONSIDERATIONS touching the points in difference between the godly ministers and people of the Church of England, and the seduced brethren of the Separation.

ARGVMENTS That the best assemblies of the present Church of England, are true visible Churches.

That the Preachers in the best assemblies of Engl. are true ministers of Christ.

Mr BERNARDS book entitled The SEPARATISTS SCHISME

Mr CRASHAWES Questions propounded in his Sermon preached at the Cross.

Examined and Answered by HENRY AINSWORTH

Lord God the strength of my salvation; cover thou my head, in the Day of battle,
Psal. 140.7.

[illustration]

RIGHT RIGHT

Printed in the year 1642.

A fore-speech to the Christian reader.

THE truth and church of God, by multitude of enemies, hath ever been d•sgraced and trodden down in the world that many which have seemed to love and seek after it, have stumbled at the reproach & oppotision of the same. Yet the godly wise have understood & discerned things that differ. It is a great help unto the weak and simple, when the deceits and snares wherewith the adversary seeketh to destroy the sowl, are o•enly discovered, by the light of God's word and for this cause have I endeavored according to the measure of knowledge and grace given unto me, to make answer unto such reasons cavils and calumniation, as are given out against that part of the truth, which this church witnesseth unto the world, touching our separation from the Church of Engl. the Considerations & Arguments first answered, were written by Mr Spr a Minister of Glocestershire; & in them (as I suppose) the sum and weight of that which may be said for that church, is comprised. Mr Bernard's book hath rather show then weight of reason, as the judicious reader may perceive; and seemeth to be penned by him, rather for disgrace of others then defense of themselves. But no better fruit can be expected from such as rebel against the light which themselves once seemed to regard. Mr Crashawes questions are rather to stumble at, then to direct the ignorant as having neither weight of argument against us nor for themselves. Yet as by all these means the truth is oppugned, so by all contrary good means it should be defended; that wisdom may be justified of all her children, and others left without excuse. How weak and insufficient the adversaries reasons are in particular, the answers unto them more particularly will show. Here I will briefly observe, some general things whereby falsehood endeavoreth to uphold it self; and how it may by the prudente be discried. Vntruth hat sought to preuayl.

1. By perse•uting such as have spoken against, or forsaken her iniquity. iniquity. This the blood of God's martyrs shed in all ages proclaimeth unto all men. And thus have the chief Pastors of the Church of England dealt with Christ's lambs, in these our days. For having gotten into their hands the sword of the Magistrate, they there with have smitten such as with the word, (the sword of the spirit) they could not convince. In which they fulfill the measure of their Fathers; for so have the Papal Prelates used to feed their flocks

2. By blaspheming and preaching against the faith & witnesses thereof. For they that hold forth the truth are exposed to the reproach & venim of the tongue, and many unjust calumniationes come forth against their persons, especially the principal of them, whom evil minded men do most malign. Also the cause it self is often wronged, whiles the truth thereof, and reasons that uphold it, are sv•pressed; arguments feigned and confuted which wer never made, or otherwise made then the adversaries pretend; and sometimes such articles and errors imputed, as from which it is altogether free. How others heretofore have carried themselves this way, all records show: how men at this day have dealt with us and the truth which we embrace; many pulpits in Engl. can witness. besides private calumnies innumerable, and some public pamphletes. The stench of their reproachful mouths, hath caused many to distaste the sweet savor of the Gospel, and caused also for a while a dislike in sundry of us, till God in mercy visited and saved us from the deceitful tongue.

3. Yet is not this enough, but men seek to bear down the truth by writing against and to the defamation of the same, with all exquisite cunning and fraud to disgrace it, and by plausible reasons to persuade unto error. If any would see this, let the general arguments used at this day against us, consonant and agreeable to the reasons of Papists & other ancient adversaries of the Gospel, be observed.

1. The Papists have continually exclaimed against them for leaving their mother the ch: of Rome that bare them; crying out the Church the Church, the Catholic church; and saying that Luther and all the pack of their first fathers, were children of their mother the Catholic Church and are gone out from them. And when the Protestants objected her sins, for which they left her, it was pleaded again, will ye forsake your mother because she wanteth perfect beauty, or because there is some deformity in her &c? Moreover they would allege (to prove them schismatiks) how in that ch: th•y had been regenerated and made h•r citezens and members by baptism. &c that from her they had their first faith and knowledge, yea even the Bible it self, which treasure their church ever had the custody of; and many such like.

These are the main reasons objected to us at this day, they tell us the Church of England is the mother of the faithful, that the ministry thereof hath begotten us, if ever we were truly begotten in the spirit; asking us where else we were regenerate, •f not in the womb of that their church &c. And if we tell them of their transgressions, for which we forsake them, they answer, though there were in our church these wounds you speak of, yet do they not come near the heart, they be not deadly, they may blemish the beauty but endanger not the life of our church. &c. therefor• your separation from us, is scismaticall and unjust. and many such like pleas they pretend.

2, For the church of Rome, it hath by her Mediators been alleged, that in her is retained the profession of Christ authorety of scriptures and Apostolic doctrine, as touching all the chief or capital articles of religion; and that the church is to be esteemed by the foundation thereof which is Christ, on which foundation though they that came after, built wood and hay and stubble instead of silver and gold and precious stones; yet have they not by and by departed from the foundation &c. Now who knoweth not, that this is the bulwark of the church of Eng. now, against all batteries, and one of the chiefest reasons whereby they retain many simple and well affected people among them? and that may be also seen in this book following pag. 43.105 119. & 123. and in many other of their writings.

3. Universal consent agreement and applause of Churches in all nations, of Synods and Councils, of Fathers and learned men have been the continual boast of Papists in all their books against the Protestants: now they in En•l to bear out their estate, urge again and again the like against us; that when God's word will not uphold them, yet man's word at least may honor them before the people. See after in this treatise. pag 9. & 22. & 44, & 5. & 89, 91.92.128.

4. Whereas the truth hath brought for her defense the evident scriptures. papists have been wont to carp at the allegations and interpretations of them, and challenge their adversaries for corrupting them; the formal protestants in Engl. have done the like against the Reformists, and they now use the like color against us; but how truly. let the particulars show after in this book, pag. 90.91.97.

5. To revile and calumniate such as forsook them hath been the common practice of Papists, calling them heretics, schismatics, Lutherens, Calumists &c. and matching them with wicked heretics heretofore, & now living: The same way do our adversaries now walk in proclaiming us to be Schismatiks, Seduced, Brownists, Donatists &c. and to make us the more odious unto the people, they enroll us sometime with the most vile blasphemers that they can mention. For he was esteemed a forward •reacher among them, who to grace his own cause by disgracing the truth, would needs join us with the blasphemer Hacket, (sometimes a brother of the reformists, and hot mainteyner of their cause,) & to make his malice the more remarkable, he puts in the margin of his book, The brownest and Hacket of an evil spirit; and that which he writeth besides, is so fraudulently set down, that the simple reader who know•th not our cause, may think that this Hacket was one of us. This abuse we su•fer, because (forsooth) we were thought to hinder their coūterfeyt reformation, which Hacket would have set up by force for which they bear their reproach at his hands that wrote English Scottizing for discipline; but this man most injuriously would turn it upon us.

These and the like arguments do evil men continually use against the truth which presseth them; and which they seek to suppress, but all in uayne: for it will preuayl, mangre their opposition; and that which they think to hinder the Gospel b•, God will turn to the furtherance of the same, and confusion of his adversaries.

Against these and all other like colors wherewith false churches a• adorned, two means have been used for to discover the falsehood; th• one manifesting the fact or estate of a person or people; the other• the lawfulness of the same. The commandment of God is a lantern; and the law a light to declare what is good or evil: and evidences there are of every public estate and action. For in all ages God hath moved some to observe and speak against the abuses reigning; and some have recorded things for their glory, which turn unto their shame. •y this mean• the skirts of the whore of Rome have been discovered, whiles some that loved, and othersome that loathed her, have painted out her filthiness: which being compared with the chastity of Christ's spouse set forth in holy writ, hath caused righteous men, (as was foretold to judge her children after the manner of harlots and of murderers; and the very horns of that beast, to hate the whore and burn her with fire. And we at this day that witness the truth against the remainders of that whores cup, are driven to break silence & to plead for Christ in public, because the adversaries so importune us, by continual preaching and writing against us, and seeking to bear out all with the cloke •f the gospel, and to hide the iniquities under a veil of professing truths fundamental, they will hardly be a known of the manifold evils and gross corruptions, that preuayl in their assemblies. Therefore also are we forced to produce their own writers for to witness with us; who both heretofore and to this day, complain of the sins that reign among them And worthy it is to be observed how the ministers of England are come to contradict and depart from their own grounds, for to maintain their corrupt estate. For now they utterly deny the visible church to be a company of faithful people that truly worship Christ and readily obey him; co•tra•y both to all the scriptures and to their own Articles d of religio•. A•d Mr Bernard in the name of all the divines in their church, yea (if we •ay bele•ue him) of all the reformed Churches in Christendom, telleth us with a marginal note also to have it well observed, that the true word of God preached. and true sacraments of Christ administered, are infallible toke•s of a true church. I say not (saith he) the word truly preach•d, nor the sacr•m•nts rightly administered: but thus; the true word preached, the true sacr•m•n•• administered. Now lay these things together and see what a holy communion they will make the church of God to be: namely, if not a ro•t of miscreants, yet at least a mesceline multitude of believers and infidel•, holy and profane. Among whom it the true word be preached, though never so curruptly falsely perversely, by any Popeling, Baalist. or Balaamite; if the true sacraments be administered, though never so superstitiously profanely and disorderly, to the open wicked &c. yet there must needs be a true church. Such heavenly doctrine, or rather such hellish error is now taught by the transformed ministers, for to make mē keep communion with Belial.

Against these and other like impostures, have I endeavored to bring out the truth, (though naked and destitute of all worldly ornaments,; and by it to manifest the present aberations of my country from the primitive faith of Christ; I have also produced their own testimonies against them, that the Saints on eart may say, their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies being judges. And if they will yet resist, the world may see, they are condemned by themselves, But my harts desire and prayer for my brethren is, that they may be saved; turning from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheretance among them which are sanctified by faith in Christ.

H•ny Ainsworth,

A Direction to some principal things contained in this book.

- Administration of the Ministers of Engl, scanned; with the effects pag, 14. &c. 58. &c. 60. &c. 62. &c. 109. &c. 110. &c.
- Antichrists kingdom not overthrown by the ministers of Engl. pag. 61. &c.
- Begetting of faith, how it is pag. 5, 6: It is no essential note of a true church, p, 6. It should be before the planting of a church p. 40, 41 146.
- Building of the church, and how it is performed in England p. 33 34: &c
- Christ, not the head, Mediator, Prophet, Priest, or King, of the church of England p, 74. &c. not the spouse of the same, pag, 42. &c
- Compulsion to the faith and church, used in Engl. but unwarrantable. pag 120.78.131. &c.. p 133,
- Constitution of a church. pag, 98.99.
- K. Edwards reformation of religion, and how it was accepted. pag. 120.133
- Foundation Christ; and Fundamental truth. pretended and discused, pag 34.123, &c. 126.117. &c
- Gifts, prove not a true ministry. pag, 13: &c.
- Matter of the church of Engl. pag, 106.
- Ministry of the church of Engl. pag, 108 &c.
- A Papist argument against the church of Engl. pag. 111.
- Pattern of planting a church. pag. 44.
- Popular government, obie•ted and answered. pag. 101, &c.
- Popes authors of many ordinances now in Engl pag. 137, &c.

- Positions concerneng a true church. pag. 65 &c.
- Profession in Engl. contrary to their estate and pra•tise. pag, 124, &c
- Reformation by the Kings of Judah. p. 134. &c
- Reformed churches, alleged for approbation of the church of Engl. and answered, pag. 9, 10.22 &c. 48, 51, •2, &c. 128, 129.
- Repentance not truly preached or practiced in the church of Engl. pag. 45. &c. 56. &c.
- Separation proved necessary: p, 5, 22, granted by our adversaries, pag. 1:
- Synns suffered, how they defile the church. pag. 101. &c.
- Spirits of the Prophets subject to the Prophets scanned pag. 28.29.
- Testimonies of the ministers of Engl. against the estate of that church, concerning
 - The people pag. 2.107.108.59, 60, 62.122.125, 126.127.
 - The ministry and ministers pag. 3.11.112.81, 114.119, 136, 142, 143.
 - The worship, pag, 3,
 - The church governors. pag, 4,
- Worship of God in the church of England, polluted pleaded for & against, pag. 137. &c,

CONSIDERATIONS, Touching the points in difference, between the godly <...> people of the Church of England; and the seduced brethren, of the separation.

A Separation we deny not, from the corruptions of the Church wherein we live; 1 in judgment, 2 profession, 3 practice: 1 of teaching eu•ry part of truth and righteousness; 2 of performing the things we teach; 3 of reprovng every part of sin and error; 4 and abstaining from all corruptions of life and d•ctrine: for which particulars, so many of both parts have suffered and do suffer so many things. But the difference is, we suffer for separating in the Church: you, out of the Church. And this to be true, you know: unless you will cavil, against your own conscience and knowledge.

Answer.

WHO so examineth these your Considerations, and weigheth them in the balance of equity: may find them wanting in many points, touching the differences between your Church, and us that separate frō the same; and insufficient in the points that are handled to persuade any wise heart to return unto you. You ouerpasse 1 the hierarchy of your spiritual Lord's the prelates with their under officers which reign over you; 1 and the form of God's worship by your Liturgy or service book set up and used in all your parishes. These are two main exceptions that we make against you, though you dissemble them in this your writing, and insist upon other two, 1 the people, and 2 inferior ministry (as I conceive you;) as if these only were the points of difference between us and you. Which whether you have done of ignorance, or of fraud rather, to deceive your reader; I leave it upon your conscience to consider of.

Again, the two things that you take upon you to handle, you set down in these terms, the godly Ministers and people of the Church of England; whereas our separation is from your Church in general. wherein many ungodly ministers and people are to be found, standing in commixture, or confusion rather, as one body with those which are esteemed more godly and religious: and therefore you deal not sincerely, to make our separation to seem but from apart and those the godly.

Again, whereas there is a scisme in your Church, by two contrary factions at war with yourselves, Conformitans and Puritans, (as you style one another.) you deal not plainly, to tell us whither party you mean to defend, but lead your reader into clouds and mist, speaking of godly ministers and people; not naming who or where they are. That though one may guess whom you mean, yet you write so generally & covertly that if danger or in convenience come by anything you have said, you may shift it of to either side for your best advantage.

A ¶ you deny not from the corruptions of the Church wherein ¶ live; yet <...> not what those corruptions are, which behooved you to have done, if you would have effected or returned unto you. For we are verily persuaded, that they are nothing but your corruptions ¶ we have separated from; and therefore cannot reioyne our selves unto you till they be removed. And seeing you may mind some things to be corruptions in your Church, and we othersome: it cannot be we should well accord, till particulars be related; which therefore (if you write again,) we pray you in your next to set down

Yet for the present, it is well that the truth hath wrung out such a testimony from your own mouth and pen; whiles you grant and deny not such a separation in general, as you mention: to the branches whereof if you will stand, and abide also by which you have heretofore written; I doubt not but the discreet reader will see, your battle is not so much against us as against yourselves; & the sword which you have drawn ¶ slay such as be upright of way, doth enter into the very heart of your own Church; & the bowes which you have bent at us, are broken.

For we forsake your Church for this main corruption, that all, sorts of profane and wicked men have been and are, both they and their seed, received into and nourished within the bowels of your Church contrary to the first covenant of our redemption, wherein God with his own mouth proclaimed & perpetually enmity and war against the Serpent and his seed, which the woman and her seed should wage; though with the brusing of the heel thereof. Gen. 3. Contrary also to the example of all God's Churches since the world began, who always were separated from the ungodly, as the scriptures show.

Now that this is a corruption among you, yourselves have taught saying and complaining that in the Church are swarms of Atheists, idolaters, Papists erroneous and heretical sectaries, witches, charmers, sorcerers, murderers, thieves, adulterers, liars, &c Also that among you the holy Sacraments are communicated with the Papists, the holy misteris of God profaned, the Gentiles enter into the Temple of God, the holy things are indifferently communicated with clean and unclean, circumcised and uncircumcised. Again that there be thousands which be men and women grown, which if a man ask them how they shall be saved they cannot tell. As for wickedness in pride envy hatred and all sins that can be named almost. it death overflow; and yet you are not ashamed to say are they not Christians? This Testimony being true, I hope yourselves now will be ashamed to plead that such a people are Christians & to be communicated with; or deny that we may separate from them in things concerning God.

An other weighty cause of our separation is, that you have a popish ministry over this profane multitude; touching which, yourselves also have thus written; either we must have a right ministry of God, and a right government of the Church according to the scriptures set up, both which we lack; or else there can be no right religion &c. Now for the present ministry that is among you, as Parsons, Vicars, parish priests, Stipendaries, with the rest, you said, that come from the pope, as out of the Troian horses belly, to the destruction of God's kingdom.

An other cause why we refuse communion with you, is for that you serve God not as himself commandeth, but after your own devising, or by imitation rather of the Roman Antichrist: which yourselves have proclaimed though we should hold our peace; for of your service book you say, it was culled and picked out of the Popish dunhill the portuis and mass bookfull of all abominations: & that in the order of your service, there is no edification but confusion. Now this seemeth unto us no small corruption, that you should offer unto God that filth which you have picked out of the Popes dunghill. May we not say unto you, with the prophet, Offer such things unto your Prince; will he be content with you, or except your person, saith the Lord of hosts? You know that Christ hath said their, offerings of blood I will not offer; and yet will you take your drink offerings out of the great wheres cup, which the holy Ghost saith is full of abominations, and of the filthiness of her fornication? What more loathsome thing could you have found under the sun?

Again we have forsaken your Church because the ecclesiastical government and governors, the Lord's spiritual, are not according to the ordinance of that Lord who is the Spirit, but after the institution of his enemy Antichrist. And that this is a fowl corruption, we have also learned from yourselves, which say, The government now used by Archbishops and Rps. &c, is both Antichristian and diuinish. That it is that which giveth leave to a man, to be anything saving, a sound Christian. Item that that Vgly and ilfavoured hierarchy, or Church princelins, which instituted at the first by antichrists devise did afterward villy serve the Pope of Rome to accomplish the misterie of iniquity, and to destroy the Church of Christ and doth yet still at this day serve him: must be abolished, that no remnants, ne yet any show thereof remain, if so be we will have Christ to reign over us. Item that that profane jurisdiction of Lordly Lord Archbishops, Bps, Archdeacons, Chancellors, Officials &c. as contrary to God's government, and wholly vnderpropt by the canon & Popish law, and with all joined with hypocrisy vaynglorie lordliness and tyranny. even for these respects, (if there were no more,) are to be utterly rooted out of the Church; except possibly we mean by reconciliation to make Christ and Antichrist friends: Thus have we been taught by yourselves, what corruptions there are in the Church, even so many and so great, that you complained thus, as our lacks are, there can be no right religion: and now you have added unto all the former to teach us a separation from your corruptions and this not only in 1 judgment, or 2 profession, but also in 3 practice and that we should not only reprove (as you heretofore have done.) every part of sin and error, but abstain also from a'l corruptions of life and doctrine. And now we would pray you tell us, seeing corruption hath so ceased upon, and possessed (by your own confession (both Priest and people, both worship, and ecclesiastical gouernent; that as your lacks are, there can be no right religion: and seeing from all corruption we mus• separate: What then rema•neth for us to commun•cate with you in? For take away these corruptions out of your church, and you shall se• an utter d•ssolution and abolishing of the same. Though now it spread it self like agreene bay tree: yet will it p•se away and be gone, and though one seek•t, it cannot be found.

And is it not strange, that when yourselves have taught us how esteem of your people, ministry, divine service and church government; how also to walk and carry our selves, where such corrupt•ons ar, and we have but departed from these corruptions, (for, any truth that is among you, we have not forsaken:) that yet you will say we are seduced? Are not you then the seducers? We do but practice that which you have taught us, If you would have us to return unto you, first justify by the word of God, that people, ministry, and worship, that you have condemned: refute your own writings; and build again the things which you have destroyed. So when you have made yourselves trespassers, if we be not able by God's word to prove that the things we refrain from, are as bad as you have written; we will, by his grace, come again unto you. Til then, let the discreet reader m•nde, whither you deal not with us as did the horsemen of Egypt with the Isra•lite•; that after you hau• given us leave to depart, you thus persue us with your writings, to bring us back again to our ancient bondage. Again, whether you that pretend a separating in the church, & condemn our separating out of it though your Church be so thoroughly corru•t, as before is shown and now call us seduced: deserve not rather to be called yourselves The seducing brethren of the separation. But let us hear what it is you now say for yourselves.

On our part, consider,

1. THis separation that we make, is grounded.

1. On God's comm•ndements, Matt. 15.14. Rom. 16.17. Eph. 5.7.11. 2. Thes. 3.•14.15. Tim 6.5. Tit. 3.10. 1. Pet 4.4.

2. On the examples of all the prophets, Apostles, & Christ himself who separated in the Church & not out of th' Ch•. albeit in most corrupt estate, & yet communicated in th•t which was good; reprovng refusing & suffering for abst•yning from evil. Luk. 2.2•. 2 24 & 22.7.8.9. Mat. 22 3. &, 20, & 6, 1 2 5.16 & 11.16.17 18.9.20. &. 12 31.34 39. & 23 totum. And (note) those Churches were Antanosaicall as you say ours are Antichristian: yet for as much 〈...〉 th• 〈◇〉 Christ, as •ur Church doth at least, Luk 1, 9 10, Job. 1 2••1. & 7 23.17 31 4• 42. & 10, 24. Rom. 3 2.3. & 9.4. w•th Gen 49.10 A.t. 2 39. th•y separated not from them.

Answer.

IF by the Comm•ndements of God, by the examples of Christ, his 〈◇〉 and A•stles, we may & m•st separate from all corruptions main te••ed in a true Church: then ought we much more to separate from the• being maynteyned in a false; vnle•se; a false Church have more privileg, t•en • cr•e And we consider that our separation is from the corr•ptiō: of • false Church;

2. The scr•ptures also are plain, that we must separate and forsake all false Churches, as well as corruptions in a true, 2. Cor. 6 17. Come out from among them, and separate your selves saith the Lord, and touch no unclean th•ng, and I will receive you. Revelation. 18 4 Go out of her my people, that ye receive not of her plagues. Hosea. 4.15. Come not ye unto Gilgal, neither give up to Beth•ven; and many the like How rightly then do you allege scriptures, as if they taught us separation in a Church only, and not out of it also; when it is false, and Idolatros?

3. Yo•r selves are a president to us of like practice, in separating not in but out of the Church of Rome: as yo• have dealt with the mother, so do we with the daughter; because like mother like daughter, according to the proverb; Eze. 16.44.

4. You allege th•examples of all the proph•ts; yet show you not any that •all•ed by your r•le, to se•arate in the Church and not out of it. We are sure they called the people out of the Church of Israel when it was idolatrous, a•d forbad them to come at their a•semblies. Hos, 2.2.3.4. & 4 15.17 Amos. 5.5. And how they co•ld themselves join with that Church from which they separated others is strange ūto us; especially cōsi•erin• that Israel in that estate, is noted by the pro•het Azariah to be with•ut the true God, without P•rist to teach, •nd wiht•ut law; 1, Chro. 15.3 and may we think, he separated not from that Church; The Israelites th•n, sacr•icid to Devils, not to G•, Deut. 3• 17. Chron. 11.15 and will yo• s•y the prophets separated not from them?

5. The like I Answer to the examples of Christ and his Apostles; who as t•ey abstained from corruptiōs in the Iewish Church; so were they q••re sep•r•te• from all false Churches as the Sam•ritans and other like Mat 10 5. John. 4.22. Act. 2.40. & 199 so th•r examples also, do approve our practice.

6. W•ere as you would have noted that those Churches (which Christ and h•s Ap•stles co••unicated with) were Antiansaicall as yours we •ay ar• 〈◇〉 : I 〈◇〉 t•e compar•son, For • the Jewish Church consist•d it all, 〈...〉 the same, Levite, 20, 21.16.) of a people separated not only from heathens, but also from f•lse professors, heretics, and idolaters; and were children of the prophets a•d covenant of God; John. 4.9 Act 3.25. But your Church cōns•steth •f an inseparated people, children of Idolatrous Priests, & strangers from the covenant of God.

2. The Jews then, had their sacrifices, services and solemn feasts, according to Moses Law; Mat 8.4. Mar, 14.12. Luk 9.•O. & 2.21, 24 and Chr•st himself j•st•f•ed th•r worship John. 4.22. but your service, worship, and f•stival•, are after Antichrists law, translated out of his mass-book.

3. Th•r Priests were according to Moses inst•tution, of Aaron's line Luk, 1, 5. with 1 Chro. 2.1, 10 their Scribes and Pharisees, sate in Moses cha•re; Mat 23.2, your Priests after the Popes institution your prelates fit in Antichrist chair. So they wer not so much against Moses; as you are against Christ: and that your Church reteyneth not the foundation Christ, shall through his grace anon be proved.

The 2. Consideration.

2. OUR Church hath the essential notes of a true church, able to beget a true saving faith, to work the fruits of the spirit, to make a man a true and perfect Christian, and last of all to save him. To the which also Christ hath tied his gracious promise and blessing to the end of the world Rom, 10, 13, 17, Mat, 28 19.20. Act, 20.32. 2 Tim. 3.15.16. 1. Tim. 4.16 I am. 1.21. Isa 55, 11.

Answer.

These notes which you propound, 1 are not the essential notes of a true Church: a neither (if they were,) are they ordinarily found in your Church

1. These are not essential notes, because; 1 One man may have all this you speak of; and no one man, is or can be a Church, for that consisteth of a multitude or number of persons it is an assembly or convocation; jointly together it is a body, and everyone severally is but a member. 1. Cor 12, 20.27, That one man may have all your essential notes, may appear in Pavls example, who was able to beget a true saving faith, to work the fruits of the spirit, and so the rest. 1. Cor. 4 •5. Gal. 3, 2 5.

2. An Angel may have all the notes you mention; and no Angel is a Church. For example, the Angel Gabriel, who was sent to give Daniel knowledge and understanding, and preached liully of Christ's death, & the benefits thereof. Dan. 9.21.22, &c

3. A wicked man may do all that you speak of; but no wicked man is a true church. Judas sent forth with the other Apostles to preach and work miracles, might bring others to salvation by his doctrine, though h•mselſe were a re•robate Mat. 10.5, 6. &c,

4. A true Church is the spouse & hous of Christ, & bringeth him forth a s•piritually seed. But, as God gave the blessing of multi•lying childrē, only to lawful married estate, yet often it cometh to pass, through h•s almighty power and goodne•e that harlots also are partakers of this ble•sing: and do bring forth children: so the blessing of spiritual propagation, is peculiar to the true Church; yet God, which brought light out of darkness, causeth some children to be borne and brought up unto him in false Churches For example; the Church of Rome, (the mother of whoredoms and abominations of the earth) hath doubtless, since she was wedded to Antichrist, borne and brought up, by the general true grounds of Chrstian rel•geon taught in her, many children of God, and heirs of salvation, This I s•ppose yourselves will not deny, neither yet w•ll you say, that Rome is Christ true Church. Your reason then is, as if Thamer should have pleaded, I am able to bear c•ildren, to nurse and bring them up to man's estate, &c. therefore I am my Father Judah• true and lawful wife, Gen. 38, 15.18. &c.

2. Now if these were essent•all notes, which you have set down: yet help they you nothing, for I deny that they ar ordinarily found in your Ch•rch. For, though I doubt not but the doctrine of your Church hath saved many: yet that is God's extraordinary blessing, not the ordinary effects of your Church. This is the thing you should have proved, by comparing your Church and ministerie with the Laws and promises in God's word: which because you have not done, but only quoted some scriptures generally; which men of all religions may do likewise;) I will by one or two of the scriptures that yourself here cite, show how unlike you are to a true Church and Ministry.

In Rom. 10.3.17. the Apostle treateth of two things, 1 of calling on the name of the Lord, and 2 of faith, by hearing his word.

1. Whosoever call th upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. This we are to understand according to David's exposition, whosoever calleth upon him in truth. Psa. 145 18. for God is a spirit, and must be worshiped in spirit and truth, John. 4.24. but the worship and calling upon God which your Church useth, in reading the prayers letanie collects, and other like things of your Leiturgie, translated out of AntiChrist mass-book, is carnal false Idolatrous; for such a manner of divine service you have no commandment or warrant in the scriptures. And this popish worship, begetteth not, but destroyeth faith and the true calling on God's name, and deceiveth men's souls; for in vain they worship me (saith Christ,) teaching for doctrine the precepts of men; Mat. 15.9, and, they that wait upon lying vanities, forsake their own mercy. Jonah, 1, 8

2. For the other point, Faith is by bearing (or byreport) saith the Apostle; and proveth it by Isa. 53.1. Lord who hath believed our bearing; that is, our report, Now no man can truly and faithfully report unless God hath first spoken unto him; neither can any man fruitfully hear other report or doctrine then the Lord's; and so hearing is by the word of God, in the mouths of such as are sent, as he showeth in the 15 verse. But your Ministers are not truly and lawfully sent, (for they cannot show either calling, ordination, or office, according to Christ's Testament;) therefore they cannot truly and lawfully preach his word and consequently, cannot beget (ordinarily) a true saving faith.

The next scripture also Mat, 28 19, 20, plainly condemneth the state of your Church and ministerie: for,

1. There, is a lawful calling, authorizing and sending; of minister from him that hath all power in heaven and in earth, saying Go therefore and teach: but such a sending your ministers have not; for (as yourselves have said,) they enter not in by Christ but by a Popish and unlawful vocation.

2. There, is a commandment to teach (or make disciples,) before they be received into the Church by baptism, for them that are taught, such only as gladly receive and believe the word, are to be baptized and admitted into the Church. as the practice of the Apostle showeth, Act., 40 41. but your Church was not thus gathered or planted by the preaching of the Gospel: but by the commandment of the Magistrate: neither were only the willing believers received, and others refused; but the whole profane multitudes were admitted, or rather compelled into your church where they and their seed are still retained,

3. There, God's Ministers are willed to teach Christians so baptized to observe all things whatsoever Christ commanded his Apostles verse. 20, & so they have his gracious promise and blessing to the end of the world: but in your church, many things are observed which Christ never commanded. Yea the Ministry and government appointed in his Testament, are held and confirmed by practice among you, not to be perpetual, not necessary, nor fitting for your state: but another pompous ministry, and Lordly ecclesiastical government; after the manner of the court of Rome. And as for power and liberty to observe Christ's commandments, that is far from your people, which all are in bondage to the Bishops and their courts; having not Christian freedom to censure sin or sinners or practice the ordinances of the Gospel, as the Apostles did unless Princes and Parliaments will permit or command them.

The like may be said, and returned upon you, from the other scriptures by you alleged; all which do concern the true church and ministry, as yourselves will not deny: and so will help you nothing until you prove your church and ministry such, Boast not therefore of a true saving faith and fruits of the spirit; when such bitter fruits and works of the flesh, do reign among you: for faith without works $\langle \phi \rangle$ dead. I am. 2.26.

Now then, if you will give us leave to consider the state of your Church aright, we would mind it thus. your Church hath the essential notes of a false Church. namely a confuse profane worldly people, with an Antichristian Prelacie, and priesthood over them; able to beget ordinarily, but a vain and dead faith, through want of the true ministry of the word in Christ's ordinance, and by means of the false worship and false doctrines that are in your Church; to work the fruits of the flesh, as the idolatries and other sinful actions abounding in your Church do show; to make a man a very Antichristian, by resisting persecuting and blaspheming, the true way of Christ and practice of his Gospel; (which alas, too many do,) and last of all to destroy him. if he repent not of his sin and find mercy with the Lord. which we desire you all may find, for the salvation of your souls.

The 3. Consideration.

Our Church and ministry, are approved of and rejoiced for, of all the pure reformed Churches in the world. Our confession by them placed in the Harmonie of Confessions; giving us the right hand of fellowship: as also by all the godly learned, and most sound and excellent fathers & lights of the church, that ever lived in or meddle with our church; Bucer Mar•yr, Fagius, Alasio, Knoxe, who lived in our church; Calvin, Beza, Bullinger, Gualter, Zanchius, Junius, Rolocus &c. with others very many, who have given their testimony and approbation to our church and ministry. Wherein if our errors were fundamental, damnable and Antichristian, (as you term them,) these churches and persons had undoubtedly the spirit of discerning. and could not be deceived all at once. 1. Cor. 11, 16. & 14.33. & 15. & 10.15 & 14.32, 37, 2. Thes. 1.4.

Answer.

Though you come against us with horsemen and chariots, yet we will remember the name of the Lord our God; by whose word alone all doctrines must be tried all persons must judge and be judged. It is incident to the best men and purest churches, to err and be deceived wherefore their sentences and approbations, must be examined by God's word. If you say otherwise you teach corrupt and popish doctrine. With such weapons as these, have the Papists long fought against you, and where you can bring one, they can bring many to witness for them and their Romish superstitions. Antiquity, universality, and such like popular reasons. they seek to uphold their kingdom withal:

2. The word of God condemning your church and ministry, (as we have often proved; and our proofs lie upon you yet unanswered;) though all churches in the world, should approve of you, your case were no whit the better; for all men are vanity.

3. The Jews objected as weighty arguments against Christ himself, when they said, with any of the rulers or of the Pharisees (ϕ) in him, but this people which know not the Law, are cursed. Ioh 7, 1.19.

4. If the reformed Church's approve so well of your Church and ministers, they are not only against us but against themselves: for their own Churches consist of separated and voluntary people, whereas yours are confused and compelled; they condemn and have reprobated the hierarchy and ministry of Archbishop, Lord bishops &c. Priests, Parsons, Vicars &c. which are yet among you and have among them another ministry. Now how they can approve of two sorts of Churches & ministers, so contrary one to another, let them look to it.

5. It seemeth to me, you are very laud in your praise, which now vaunt so of the approbation and rejoicing of all the pure reformed Churches in the world: whereas heretofore you complained that you had all the best reformed Churches throughout Christendom against you. Again the Harmony that you mention, was set forth but by the French and Belgic churches; the things that they approve among you, are certain general heads of religion which a Bishop wrote in an Apology of your Church: most of all which heads, we our selves also approve and rejoice for But the controversies between you and us, touching the gathering and constituting of a Church; the manner of divine service; the form of Church government, and the like; are either not at all, or in very general terms set down in that booke: and so verie slenderly, if ought at all, by them approved or rejoiced for. To give an instance or two; in the tenth section of that Harmony, treating of the Church, your English confession is so short and in general words, I doubt not but the Pope himself will subscribe unto it, letting him have his own interpretation. In the 15 section of Eccliasicall meetings; you speak of prayer, in the tongue which all your people understand. Now because the Reformed churches approve of this, we must take it belike, that they approve of your Leiturgie and service book also, and all your public worship, though it be not set down for any to judge of. In the 16. section, of Holy day's, fasts &c. there you write against purgatory; which being put into the Harmonie, is enough (as seemeth) to prove that other churches approve of all your Pope holy-days and festivals. The like may be minded for other points, as in the 17. section for ceremonies & things indifferent; which being approved of and rejoiced for by all the Reformed churches in the world; the Prelats will have a shrewd hand against you that are called Puritans, for standing so much against the ceremonies of your Church, as you do. And for your ministry, I marvel you say not that, it is approved of and rejoyced for of the Pope also, for in the 11. section of that Harmony, you believe these orders and degrees of ministers in the Church, 1 Deacons. 2 Priests, and 3 Bishops; which orders, whether the Reformed Churches approve of or no, I am sure the Counsel of Trent doth, and hath decreed, If any shall say, that in the Catholik Church there is not a Hirarchie instituted by divine ordination, which consisteth of Bishops. and Priests and ministers, let him be accursed. Council. Trident. Sess 23. Can. 6. But now seeing not only the Fathers of the Counsel of Trent, but all reformed Churches in the world, (as you said, do approve of and rejoice for this your ministry; I hope the Bishops and hirarchie of your Church shall no more be preached & written against by your inferior Priests, (as many a day they have been,) as being Antichristian.

Thus may you see what a weak foundation, you bring for your church and ministry; and if we lyfted to fight against you with your own weapons; we could allege many things from the persons whom you cite; against your present church and ministry: but the word of God yieldeth us armor enough for this battle against you, as in due time through his grace shall be seen.

6. In the meanwhile, it shall not be amiss to put the reader in mind, how yourselves heretofore have judged and written of your ministry, which you say it is approved of and rejoyced for, of all the pure reformed churches in the world. your ministers being (as before is noted, Deacons, Priests and Bishops; Of the Deacenship you have written, that it is a mere human institution, a degree to the Priesthood, and nothing like to the ordinance of God. Of Priests &c. that they cam from the Pope. as out of the Troian horses belly to the destruction of God's kingdom. Of the Bishops &c. that you account them no natural members of the body of Christ church because they are of human addition, not borne with her, nor grown up with her from the cradle, Agayne that they be rather members of the strumpet of Rome, then of the spouse of the Lamb &c. And have not you & the reformed Churches great cause now to rejoice for this ministry.

7. Moreover consider you also, how we may allege, that now 10. years sithence, we have published our Confession of faith, and causes of our separation from your Church and ministry, to the learned Universities of the Reformed churches; with desire if in our faith or practice we erred, that they would show it us: but to this day, we know not any that have undertaken so to do: wherefore we also may suppose by their silence, that they approve our case or at least suspend their judgments and condemn, us not.

8. Finally, it is written in one of the scriptures that you quote, the spiritual man judgeth all things, but he himself is judged of no man; 1 Cor. •, 15. Now every true Christian is a spiritual man Gal. 6. 1. 1 Pet 2.5. therefore he may judge and discern by God's word and spirit, faith from here sie, and the true church from the false; he may see with his eyes & live by his own faith, and not depend upon other men, to live & walk in sin till other churches condemn it. Let every man therefore retayn his liberty, and take heed how he judgeth.

4. The only wicked Papists, Atheists, and most ungodly ones: are adversaries to our godly ministers and people. The godly in all places and times among us, by them alone and ordinarily have been converted unto Christ, and by them approved, reuenced, and obeyed always in the Lord.

Answer.

1. IF the only wicked be adversaries, to your Godly ministers and people; it pertaineth not to us, who hate none of you, but wish well and pray for you all; even for our persecutors we are adversaries only to the sins, & corruption that are among you; & whiles we reprove you for sinne, you should reuend that we love, and hate you not, as the law teacheth. We say therefore with the Apostle; are we become your enemies because we tell you the truth? Gal. 4 16.

2, The Atheists and wicked one that so hate your godly ministers and people; are they not also members of your own Church? So then your church is divided against it self, and you are aduers one to another. And why tell you us of this, as a consideration to reduce us to your church, when we because such Atheists & wicked are (contrary to God's will) suffered among you, do separate from your Church?

3. Again, who be those godly ministers and people you mean? If such as are called Puritans; they have (I suppose) more adversaries than friends in your church; yea the public state, alwes and canons of your church are against them, and all that know the truth of God, and their estate aright, have just cause to blame them for their long halting and dissembling. If the Prelates be those godly ministers, they have in regard of their unlawful places and proceedings; many good people for their adversaries, both within and without the land, and yourselves also which suffer for separation in your church. By neither of these two contrary factions among you, are men ordinarily converted unto Christ, both sorts setting themselves against the true way of Christ for gathering and government of the Church, and worship of God; and so do hinder men's salvation, and deserve to be not approved, but reprov'd in the name of the Lord.

The 5. Consideration.

5. GOD hath given witness for the truth of our ministry, by the undoubted testimony of his gracious presence and approbation of the same; by his gifts of 1. sanctification. 2 knowledge. 3 spirit of discerning. 4. of utterance. 5 of power and authority in teaching, 6 effectual and ordinary calling and begetting to the faith of God, and bringing them from darkness to light, from the old man to the new, from the flesh unto the spirit; which ministry of ours; begat you also, if ever you were truly begotten in the spirit, & by God's mercie hath begotten me, & other his unworthy servants.

Answer

1. The Papists will say as much as all this and more too, (if words will serve for the ministry of their church; they boast of their Friars, & Jesus's holiness, knowledge, utterance & authority in teaching and their marvelous effects in converting to Christianity, the Indians & other heathens all over the world Yea what religion, glorieth not in the sanctity, gifts and effects of their ministry? But God's word must try all.

2. The ministry of our Church being Archbishops, L. Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, &c Priests, and Deacons, as is to be seen in the books statutes, and canons of your church: you bring not here any one word of God, or text of scriptures (which are his testimonies,) to witness for the truth of your ministry: and this is indeed worthy to be considered of us & of all that shall read your Considerations

3. Your own brethren heretofore confessed and complained to the Parliament, that you lack in England a right ministry of God; that the ministers are neither proved, elected, called, nor ordained, according to God's word. This testimony being true, how then doth God give witness for the truth of your ministry.

4. The witnesses that you bring, if they be examined, will say little or nothing to this purpose. For,

1. The gift of sanctification, is a common note of Christianity, 1. Thes. 4.3. 1 Pet. 2.9. and therefore no special note of a ministry. This was Korah's argument when he would have usurped the Priesthood. All the congregation is holy everyone of them: why may they not therefore be Priests? Num. 16.3.10. But what saith the scripture? No man taketh the honor to himself but he that is called of God, as Aaron was. Heb. 5.4.

2.3. The second and third 2 knowledge, 3 of the spirit of discerning, are also general for the whole church, and not special for the ministry; Rom. 15.14. Phil. 1.10. Yea some in the flock, may have a greater measure both of sanctification and of knowledge; then the Pastor or teacher or any Officer

It cannot be denied but Barsabas had knowledge as well as Matthias; yet was he not therefore an Apostle, Act. 1.23.26. and they whose genealogies could not be found, had knowledge as well as the other Priests yet were they not therefore kept in the Priesthood, Ezra 2.62. Boast not you therefore of your knowledge, but show us your genealogies in the scriptures There be a great many in your ministry called dumb Priests which are but bare readers, by whose means many people perish for want of knowledge: these testimonies will be dumb for them; yet your church proclaimeth them to, be true ministers.

Your best ministers, of whose knowledge you boast, show themselves ignorant; (or worse,) in the $\langle \diamond \rangle$ or $\langle \diamond \rangle$ planting of a church whyles; they will have it (as their practice proveth) with commixture of all form without separation: where as they cannot show any true church since the beginning of the world, but was of a separated people. Gen. 61.2. & 12 1. Lev, 20.23.24. Ezr. 6 21. Act. 2, 40.41. & 19:9. &c.

4. 5. The fourth and fifth, 4. utterance, with 5 power & authority in teaching, are needful in such as are ministers, but no necessary proof of a true ministry. For had not the false Apostles and Prophets. utterance and power; that preached with eloquence and wisdom of words disgracing the Apostles and Prophets of the Lord? 2 Cor. 10.10. & 11.13.15. 1. Kin. 22.4. Ier. 23.31. & 28.1.2.10, 11. 2 Tim. 3.8.

Your ministers, many preach not at all many preach to maintain the pompous prelacy, & laudable ceremonies of your Church: and they that preach best, show little power or authority For how many years have they been preaching for Discipline, and against some corruption of your church? yet nothing prevailed, but are further now at last then they were at the first. Who knoweth not that the prelates have closed up the mouths of many Ministers, that the prophesy of Isaiah is verified upon them; Isa. 56.10. and yet you boast of their utterance & authority in teaching.

But lamentable ministers are they all; and the best of them may be seen to be but briars; and to have betrayed the authority of Christ; For when they took the Order of Priesthood as they call it, they solemnly promised even before the Lord, and by his help, that they would give their faithful diligence always so to minister the doctrine and sacraments and the discipline of Christ as the Lord hath commanded, & as this realm hath received the same. according to the commandments of God so that they mought teach the people committed to their care and charge with all diligence to keep & observe the same. They promised also, reverently to obey their ordinary & other chief ministers is to whom the government & charge is committed ou'r them, following with a glad mind and will their godly admoni'ion, and submitting thenseluu to their godly judgement. Yet your forward preachers (as they are esteemed,) do not minister the doctrine sacraments and discipline of Christ as th' Lord hath commanded; but sue and wait for authority from the Magistrate, to have that wh'ch they count the true discipline of Christ erected in their parishes; which because the civil Magistrate doeth not they practice not the discipline, nor teach their people to keep and observe the same yea they blame us for practising Christ's laws without the Magistrates leave, as if Christ wer not head of the church, & Prince of all the Kings of the earth. Again they administer not their doctrine sacraments and discipline, as this realm hath received, neither reverently obey their Ordinaries, but resist, preach and write against the Bishops, their canons, rites and ceremonies. as much as they dare Thus halt they between two opinions, and practice neither the discipline of Chr'st nor of the prelates while; yet they would seem to practise both: being in this point like to the Samaritans, which while they would both fear the Lord and serve their images also, they neither feared God, nor did after their ordinances, as the scriptures saith. What then may we esteem of your ministers power and authority in teaching

Aaine, consider you if some Absalom, Adonia, or other usurper, should say; I have 1 sanctification, 2 knowledge, 3 spirit of discerning, 4 of utterance, 5 of power and authority in judging, 6 effectual & ordinary deciding & ending of controversies &c therefore I am a lawful King, Judge or Magistrate; and God hath given witness by these vndoubted testimonies, of the truth of my Magistracy: whether this should serve him, or these testimonies approve his office? yet are these most pregnant proofs of your Ministry.

6. The 6. and last testimonies is, their effectual & ordinary calling and bringing to the faith of God, &c. This I have before touched and shown that ordinarily they beget not, but hinder the true faith: they keep the people in blindness and idolatry, wh'ch is a work of darkness and of the flesh; and if by their preaching any be brought to the true faith, I account it God's extraordinary work, which I doubt not but is also against the Papist.

Again, if this were granted them, I would know what office they would claim in the church hereby; whether Apostleship of some other function. For in the Church of Corinth were many teachers and instructours yet begat they not their people to the faith, for the Apostle Paul challengeth to be their father only, and to have begotten them in Christ through the gospel. 1. Cor, 4.15. So there may be a lawful Pastor or Teacher in a church, which never begat any of them to the faith, but only nourisheth and increaseth faith in them, that were begotten afore He is chosen to feed the flock. 1. Pet. 5.2. not to beget the same; the flock is a company of faithful people, begotten before they have a Pastor.

The begetting of faith, was first and chiefly by the Apostles and Evangelists, that went about preaching the word, to them that had not heard it. Rom. 15, 20.21. It is also by the ministers of churches, or prophets; (though not in office of ministry,) when unbelievers come into their assemblies, 1 Cor. 14.24.25. It is also by all Christians privately men and women which preaching and witnessing the truth of the Gospel, reading talking, conferring of the scriptures, do convert many unto God inform their children and families in the faith, and save their souls, Act 8.4: & 18.8 1 Cor. 7.16. Eph. 6.4. Deut. 6.7.

So the begetting of faith, is no certain testimony of a true Ministry. Whereas therefore you conclude, that your Ministry begat us also, if ever we were truly begotten in the spirit: we may answer you with Moses we take to much upon you. ye sons of Levi. For know you not the wind bloweth where it listeth, and you hear the sound thereof, but cannot tell whence it cometh or whether it goeth; and so is every man that is born of the spirit? It seemeth you count nothing preaching but that which is in the pulpit; nothing the word of God, but that which cometh out of your Ministers lips: but thanks be unto God that hath given us better to discern the work of his grace, and hath breathed upon us with his holy spirit; whiles your Ministers stood like the 4. Angels in the corners of the earth, holding the winds that they should not blow.

The 6 Consideration.

6. Also our godly people have all the marks and tokens of God's people and elect, 1 which the scriptures set down, 2 which the people in the time of Christ and his Apostles had, 3 which the professors of any church that is now in the world have, 4 yea which yourselves in your supposed perfection can boast of: which is sealed unto them, 1 by the care, peace, and testimony of a good conscience in all things. 2 by suffering for sundry parts both of righteousness and $\langle \diamond \rangle$ 3 by effectual comforts in such sufferings, 4 assurance of faith, of hope, of remission of sins; God's dear love unto them; 5 by spiritual love and the fruits thereof, 6. by the progress and daily growth in knowledge strength and godliness &c.

Answer.

THAT many of your people are God's elect, I undoubtedly acknowledge: and I would to God such were the estate of you everyone. Yet the constitution of your people in your church, is not a Communion of Saints with which we may participate: but a confuse mixture of all sorts of men from which the godly must separate, as touching the worship of God.

In this your defense of them, you begin thus, Our Godly people, But who are they, can we tell? are not all your people godly? of the true church it is written, thy people shall be all righteous if your people be not such? why make you not a separation from the ungodly, that will not be reclaimed; or why cast you them not out from among you? Thus ought you to do by the Testament of Christ. 2. Cor. 6.14.17. 1. Cor. 5.13, If you do it not, you profane God's everlasting covenant.

I deny not but many hypocrites and reprobates will creep into the true church; and much ungodliness will their break out, as in any assembly in the world: but when it is seen, the sinner is presently to be reprov'd; and either must purge himself by repentance, or be excommunicate. Luk. 17.3. Mat, 18.15.16 17. Thus still the church continueth a communion of Saints, an unleavened lump, a holy nation. 1 Cor. 1, & 5. • 1 Pet. 2 9.

Now for your works and tokens; you say they have all 1 which the scriptures set forth. This is denied, and had you searched the scriptures▪ you might easily have seen it otherwise. For;

They are not a separate people called out from the world: which is one principal mark, (as before I have shown,) urged often in the scriptures. 1. King. 8 53. Isa. 52.1• Ier, 15.19. John. 17.14.16, Reu'18.4.

They are not the Lord's free people, enjoying the liberty of the gospel: but in thralldom to strange Lord and laws ecclesiastical. Contrary to Law. •5.42.55. 1 Cor. 7.•3. John, 8, 32 36 Gal. 5 1.

They walk not in the truth of the gospel; but in many things are corrupted with the remainders of popish superstitions and idolatry. Contrarie, to Psal. 26.3. 3 John 3, 4. Rom. 6, 4. Ephe, 2, 10. 1 Cor, 10, 14.2•. Reu. 14, 9.12.

In these and many other particulars, your, people are contrary to the scriptures: so the principal marks are wanting.

2 Next you compare them with the professors of any church new in the world This is more bolle then wiselie spoken of you: show if you can any reformed church, whose people are like yours, for ••rr mixed•re of all sorts or in like bondage to Antichristian •relates; or that use like superstitions and idolatries in the worship of God, and daily conversation. Remember also what some of yourselves have written heretofore; how that Of all the nations that, have rencunced that whore of Rome there is none in the world so far out of square, as England, in reteyning the Popish hierarchy.

Your last comparison is with ourselves, whom you twite with supposed perfection: wherein you injury us, and yet help not yourselves. For we suppose no perfection at all to be in us, either in knowledge or practice but are privy to our selves of our infirmities;; and are sure we have more also then we can discern. Yet by the grace of God we are that we are and his grace is not in vain in us, but as it hath brought us out of confusion bondage and Idolatry, wherein your people still remain, so we trust it will keep us in the truth of the gos•el, until we come to perfection in the kingdom of our father which is in heaven.

3. Next you speak of the sealing hereof unto your people, 1. By the care, peace and testi•ny of a good conscience in all things. what care can be seen in such confused careless walking of your people, commixt in one body, with the profane and serpents seed? what peace of conscience can there be, when men do walk in open transgression of God's law except such as whereby a man falsely bless•eth himself, saying I shall have peace, although I walk according to the stubbornness of my own heart? Deut. 29, 19, There is no peace saith the Lord, unto the wicked, Isa. 48.22. The ways of your people being wicked, their spiritual actions idolatrous it must needs be a blind or corrupt conscience that testifieth for thē in this estate.

2.3. Their 2 sufferings, and 3 effectual comforts in them; we will believe when we see them. For the present, we behold many of your peopl• for avoiding the cross of Christ to subm•t to the Idolatries of your Church against their own conscience and confe•sion, Very few that will suffer for any part of the truth but none at all that suffer for all, except such as forsake your confused assemblies. And if one or two in a shire, do suffer a little trouble, for not being buxome enough to the Prelates and their co•rts: what is that to j•stify the profane multitudes and general state of your people, which are readier to p•rsecute, then to suffer persec•tion for r•ghteousnes sake; as we have had l•entable experience these m•ny yeires. W••refore, as their sufferings, so I think their Comforts are.

4, Their assur•nce of faith, of hope, of remission of sins▪ and of God's dear love unto th••; may well be boast• of, but not soundlie felt. For where so many evil works do abound and reign, there is not true faith, and consequently no ••re hope of remi•sion of sins. Shew us therefore your faith by your works for we c•nnot see your harts. Bnt this we find in the scriptures, that yo•r for•fathers; when the Prophets re•ro•ed the• for their sins, woe•ld vaunt as you do an• lean vpo• the L•rd a•d •ay, is not the Lord a•ong us; no evil can come up•n us. Mic. 3 11. This gl•rying of inward graces when outward transgre•sions do prevail: is mere delusion; common with all sorts and sects of religion. Even the h•rlot can boast of her peace offerings, Pro 7.14. and the Ph•risee thanketh God, that he is not as other men Luk. 18 11.

5 Their spritual love and fr•ites thereof, let them record th•t have tasted of. It is well known in the land, how many of God's children hau• been empouerished, afflicted, tormented, by long and lamentable imprisonment vexation and spoil of goods, exile and other like means women left widows, and children fatherless. How your godly people have visited comforted and relieved them▪ is not so well known: it may be their charity hath been in secret, and their left hand knoweth not what their right hath done. Wherefore you needed not have offered this to our consideration, who are so ūaquainted with their love: let them selves rather consider how they shall answer whē they come to that howr mentioned, Mat. 25.34 35.41, 42. &c. If you think they have shown love to their friends and favorites; that will procure them but little thank, even sinners and publicans do the same. Luk. 6.32.33. &c.

6, Their progress and daily growth in knowledge strength▪ & godliness, is ill seen in the estate they stand; there being at this day rather moe gross abominations urged and observed in your public assemblies, then have been heretofore; and your ch•rch further from reformation now in the end, thē was at the begin•••: that unless you come to walk as your brethren of th•

separation, and quite abandon the hope of reforming Babel; it will shortly appear that all your labors be but spiders webs; and your expectation vanity and vexation of spirit

The 7. Consideration

Consider how God hath witnessed his love and approbation to our church, 1 by many victories and deliverances from the enemies of Christ, 2 long continuance of the gospel among us 3 strange judgments on the enemies & persecutors of the gospel. 4 the power and blessing in casting out Devils. 5 prayer heard both in spiritual and earthly things, 6 by throwing down the Church of ◊, and building of the Church of God, by preaching, disputing and printing of many excellent works and volumes published of all sorts which none of you in anything have ever yet attained, but only to throw down God's church to raise dissension among brethren, to rent the church, to distract the ignorant, to afford the weak to hinder the cause of reformation, to bear false witness against your brethren, and bely the holy ordinances of God.

Answer.

1. IF many victories and deliverances, be an undoubted testimony of God's love and approbation of a people and their religion; then ◊ might well have boasted of his religion, who conquered seventy Kings and made them gather bread under his table. Judge. 1.7. Then Raisak his reason was good, which he alledgeth against the Israelites, for that he had conquered so many nations 2 Kin 18, 33-34, 35. If on the Turks at this day, may triumph over Christian religion, because they have warrayed a great part of the world & taken from Christians many kingdoms and provinces. Yea this very reason did heathen men heretofore allege for defence of pagan Rome, as that by it Rome had been kept against ◊, and therefore Rome had got the Empire of all provinces and parts of the world; because, it worshiped and served ◊ gods that were in the world, even the unknown God's also. I would wish you therefore to mind better ground for the truth of religion: and remember what is written of the ancient Babylonians: after their victories; Then shall they take courage, & transgress and do wickedly imputing this their power unto their God's Habak. 1.11.

2. The long continuance of the gospel among you, will make the more against you at the day of your accounts because you yield no better obedience to the gospel as your present idolatrous estate showeth. The gospel was among the men of the old world; 120, years taught by Noah, a preacher of righteousness; yet at last they perished by the stood for their disobedience: therefore though it hath been with you, about half that time, you also may perish, if you repent not. But (note) you take it for granted which is yet to be proved, that the gospel is among you: whereas the true preaching and practice thereof, you cannot endure. The sound of the Gospel, by the pretence of them that publish peace, is this Thy God o Zion reigneth; Judah keep thy solemn feasts performe thy vows, for the wicked shall no more pass through thee (he is utterly out off. Isa. 52, 7, Nahum. 1.15. with Rom. 10 15. but Christ reigneth not yet among you by his own officers and laws, (as hath been confessed by the best of your Ministers;) you keep the solemn feasts of Antichrist, as your Christmas. Concelinas, Halloweas Easster, and many the like; and the wicked at still in the midst of you, and walk on every side; yea are exalted; which David saith is a form for the sons of men. Psal. 12.8.

3. The strange judgments on enemies and persecutors, are good warnings for you that you persecute your brethren no longer: we have seen & minded some, upon no mean men among you; but wish not to see more we rather desire the conversion of our enemies.

4. The power and blessing in casting out Devils, (though it may be questioned whether it be so or no in your Church,) is a thing that the Papists can boast of more then you. See their late supplication 37. reason of religion. Secondly, such Devils as are said to dwell in Babylon, Reu. 18, 2. we plainly see you have no power to cast out.

3 I would wish you to remember the words of Christ, Many will say to me in that day; Lord Lord, have we not by thy name prophesied. and by thy name cast out devils &c. and then will I profess to them I never knew you depart from me. ye that work iniquity. Mat. 7.22.23.

5 For your prayer heard both in spiritual and earthly things take heed you deceiv not yourselves; many years have you prayed & fasted for your discipline and pretended reformation; but how you have been heard, your present state showeth. As for earthly things, if God give them unto you, it is no sound proof that he approveth your prayers, much less your church. Some evil men's eyes stand out for fatness, they have more then the heart desireth; but their wealth is not in their hand, there for the council of the wicked be far from me. God heard the prayer of the King of the Philistines; Gen 20.4.6, he answered at the sacrifices of the soothsayer Balaam; Num, 23, 3, 4, 15, 16. &c, shall we think God therefore allowed of their religion?

Again, what people in the world is not persuaded and will not say that God heareth their prayers? Evē the heathens would boast thus of their false God's; as Julian protested that Aesulapius had often healed him being sick: and Ovid, that he had often seen Jupiter's anger appeased with incense. &c. See you not then, that as the Saints when they walk upright before the Lord, have assurance, and sound comfort thereby that he heareth their prayers which they make according to his will: so hypocrites and ethnicks have also their false persuasions that their prayers are heard and vain comforts according? Vaunt not therefore of your prayers being heard, so long as you do works which are to be abhorred but remember how it is written, whosoever we ask, we receive. (of God, because we keep his $\langle \diamond \rangle$, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. Heb. 3.21.

6. Your throwing down the church of Antichrist, and building the church of God, by reaching, &c. is according to the proverb, Clowdes and wind without $\langle \diamond \rangle$ . Let your brethren be witnesses; Of the first they say, Antichrist reigneth amongst you: Of the latter, that as yet you are scarce come to $\langle \dots \rangle$ a church rightly reformed, and again; that the walls of Zion he even with the ground. Yet now you vaunt of throwing down Antichrist's church and building God's.

The Martyrs in Q Mary's days did indeed by their faithful testimonies and patient sufferings, throw down a great part of Antichrist church but sithence that time, what have you done, unless it hath been to repayr Jericho? For many gross abuses which those Martyrs abhorred, are now stilly maintained and practiced in your church: but farther thē they went, have you not stepped a foot & if some of your inferior ministry, have spokē or writē against a few foolish ceremonies; yet others of your chiefest ministers have written as much for them, that what superstition your church pulleth down with the left hand, it setteth up with the right. The Prelates and their side have written against you that seek reformation of Babel: and they both have set against us that make separation from Babel: and yet you here offer to our consideration, how you have built Zion. But the Lord will visit both you & your building; then shall your reword be according to your works.

In the end you ease yo•r stomach against us, as they that throw down God's church, raise dissention, with many moe grievous calumniation, which in your distempered affection you throw forth. More wisdom, and much more modesty had it been, if you had spared these reproaches til you had convinced us of such things. But I see how your zeal did carry you Hezekiah threw down the idolatrous places in Israel; and reduced the people unto God's true worship 2 Chro 31.1.2, &c. & 30.1.2 &c. Rabsaketh reproached him for this, as having done sacrilege against his own God. Isa. 36.7 We, by the word of our testimony, throw down your idolatrous high places, superstitions, ceremonies, false worship and m•nister•e you charge us w•th throwing down God's church, and lode us with many criminations. But it is yourselves that trouble Israel; for do we •eproue you for any good thing in doctrine or practice; or have we left any truth that is among you; And if by our testimony of the gospel, diss•ntion be raised and your church rent, the ignorant distracted & weak offended: blame not us which testify the truth, but yourselves and such as re•ist it. Think you that Chr•st came to give peace on the earth? he hath told you may but rather debate. For five in one house shall be, di•ided, three against two and two against three, father against sonn mother against d•ughter: and ble•sed is he that shall not be offended in Christ When the Temple of God is opened in heaven, & the ark of his couen•t seen therein there are lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, & earthquak•, and much bayl. Think it not strange then, if troubles do follow follow the preaching of the Gospel; neither impute your own faults unto us: but submit your necks unto the yoke of Christ, lest he send out his arrows and scatter you. and increase lightnings and destroy you. How your churches •state hat• been justified by you, the reader may se by that you have brought? and how far we are from your unchristian calumnies shall further app•a•, by the help of God, in the answer to your other Considerations, that now next follow.

On your part, consider,

1, YOur Separation is very strange, vnboard of in any age of the Church, having no show of warrant from God's word, either by commandment or example.

Answer.

YOv would not call our separation strange, if yourself were not a stranger from the common wealth of Israel. What age was there ever in the world, since light was separated from darkness; that heard not of separation from the false Ch•rch, the fast man Adam saw it. in the separation of Seths poster•ty from Caines. Noah did the like in Shem posterity from Chams. Abraham was called out of Chaldee: Lot out of Sodom: Israel, out of Egypt and Babel; faithful Judah from rebellious Israel; Christ's disciples, from faithle••e Jews and Gentiles; and all the Lord's people. from your confused Babylon Yea God him self did first teach it when he made a separation between the w^oman's seed and the Serpents, Gen. 3.5. And yet you say, it hath no show of warrant from God's word Hereafter I suppose you will say so no more, but will see if you can prove yourselves a true Church, meet to be communicated withal: which when you do, we by God's grace will return unto you.

The 2. Consideration.

2, THE points in difference between us and you did arise at first from persons, in whom God testified against your present causes, 1 Mr. Bolton hanged himself; • Mr. Brown revolted and came back from you; 3 Mr. Peery, Barrow, and Greenwood were hanged; 4 Mr. Iohnsons and the rest banished: and (note) not by heathen and Ant-Christian tyrants, as were true Martyrs of Christ, but by Christian Magistrate's professing and maynt^yning the Gospel of Christ. Besides your principal pillars of greatest reckoning gifts and judgment, have returned from you unto the Church of England; as Harrison, Smith, Crud, Slad, and sundry other ministers and men of learning and account, who also lived holily, and died most comfortably in the Lord notwithstanding.

Answer.

IT is a wonder, if you be a teacher in your church that your salt is so vasauory. Shall men's persons now be brought against the case of Christ have you no better learned him? Mought not a Cananite or Philistian have reasoned thus against Israel? The wares against us and you did arise at first from persons in whom God testified against your present cause. Some werebrunt with fire, somesunk into the earth alive, some were destroyed byserpents. some bypestilence, some by theenemies sword. some by the sword of their own brethren. even Moses and A•ron your •rincipall pillars of greatest reckoning, died in the desert for their sin, and ofsix hundred thousand men that came out of Egypt to fight against us onlytwo men are left alive: and (note) these things have come upon you b• the hand of your God, whom you say, that he hath sent you to war against us Thus might a Pagā have pleaded against God's church then; with as much truth and more color then you that are called a Christian, can do against us. But let us see your particulars.

1. Mr. Bolton (yo^o say) h•nged himself. And so did Judas, one of the •irst and principal publisher of Christ's Gospel. Will you therefore call Christ^o•aity into question for it? Besides this Bolton. (one of the Elders of that separated Church whereof Mr. Fits. was Pastor in the beginning of Q. Eliz. reign,) first revolted at Paul's Cross, was reprovved and excom•unicate for this by the church: and aft^r not having grace to return or •epent, hanged himself. This is testified to me by one yet living among us, who though• was member of that church & well acquainted with the affairs th^oreof: and with this matter, and saw the man dead. Which being so Boltons Martyrdom is little for the credit of your cause and church where of he died a member

2 Mr. Brown revolted &c. And to did Demas, and divers others in all ages, who loved this present world, more then God. But consider you here the Apostles words: what though some have been unfaithful, shall their unfaithfulness make the faith of God without effect? Far be it. Rom. 3.3 4. besides, how well Mr. Brown approveth of your church, though he live in it; if you ask him I suppose, will tell yov.

3. Mr. Penry Barrow, and Greenwood were hanged. And so was Christ himself; and (note) not by heathen tyranns, (for Pilate washed his hands of his blood;) but by Priests, Scribes, and Pharisees, professing and mainteyning the religion of God, as your church now doth. And you that allege the hanging of these men to reproach our faith: it is probable that if you had then lived, you would have reproached Christ him self; in the fellowship of whose afflictions and reproaches, we now rejoyce and are not ashamed. But fulfill you the measure of your forefathers.

4. Mr. Iohnsens and the rest 〈◇〉 . And so was I•hn, the sonn of thunder; and many other of God's people many t•mes You and your church shall have small cause to boast of your persecuting Christ's witnesses, when the day of your 〈◇〉 shall come.

Your captions note that these •unishments are ne•lie heathen tyrant•• but by profess•ed Christians• is indeed worthy to be noted and lamented: yet is it of no note or force, to disprove the truth of our cause. For who •ersecuted Chr•st and his Apostles more then the Israelites God's peculiar and profess•ed people? who m•re then the builders, refused him the chief corner-stone? whe•e were the Prophets killed, but in Jerusalem? Yea not only false Chr•st•ans and hypocrites, but God's elect-servants may so be overtaken, as to persecute and kill the Lord's people. Did not the Patriarch• sel Joseph into Egypt, when some of them would have k•lled him? was not Sol•m•n a good King? Yet sought he to kill Ierob•am without cause; whom God had appointed to be King after him. Was not Aja a godly King, and good reformer of the church (yet was he wroth with Hanani the Seer, and put him into prison, only for speaking unto him the word of the Lord. What weight is there then in thi• your cavil, that our affliction are by Christian magistrates, therefore out cause is evil? Good princes may be over carried either by their own affections; or by the suggestions and provocations of other men. And if you will not yet see your folly, mind this for yourselves; that you which 〈◇〉 called Puritans, are molested, imprisoned, persecuted: and (note) not by hethen and Antichristian tyranns; but by your own Christian magistrates and Bishops, professing and maynteyning the gospel of Christ. Ergo, either your cause or your argument is naught.

Your last point is partly false, and partly frivolous: for Mr. Harrison• returned not unto your church of England; but died at Middleburgh in this faith that we profess. Mr. Smith, Crud, and some others, (which never were officers. much less pillars, in our Church,) did indeed forsake their first faith, and died soon after; with what comfort, themselves now know. But what if many more had forsaken us, yet the truth of the gospel which we profess, shall stand.

Christian religion was at a low ebb, when so many went back, that Jesus said to the twelve will you also gee away? Yet Christianity still flourisheth, and shall, so long as the moon endureth. And we with comfort do behold; that though many bad ones have gone away• yet God bringeth better in their place daily.

The 3. Consideration

3. NOte your dissensions between 1 Brown and Harrison, 2 Brown 〈◇〉 Barron, 3 Barro• and Francis Johnson; 4 Francis and George Johnson; 5 •r. Johnson and Mr. Slade (that great scholar) 6 Chaph•n and others a•out Anahaptisme, nay none of your great Rab•ines but have grossly disagr•d disagreed among themselves. It pi•ieth us to see your poor congregation, how lamentably it hath been rent with mutual dissensions bitings, and devouring of ech•ethers▪ wh•ch doubtless is no 〈◊〉 •f the spirit of God. These are not lies but matters known; and they are matters horrible and strange.

Answer.

IF you were an Atheist or Pagan▪ as you profess to be a Christian: you mought in this ma••r repr•ch the church of God •uer since the world began; saying. Note the dissensions, •etween Kain and Abel; Cham and Noah; Esaw and Jacob, Joseph and the Patriarchs, Moses and the Israelites; Moses and the Levites, Moses and his •wn sister and brother, Gedeon and the men of Ephraim, of Succ•th. and of Pennel, Ab•melech and his brethren I•phth and his brethren, Benjamin and the other tri•es of Israel, Saul and David, David and Absalom, the ten tribes and the two, from Jereboam's times and after, the Pharisees & Sadducees in the Jewish Church, the Apostles of Christ, the diss•ntions in Corenth and the other Apostolic Chur•hes: These are not lies, but matters known, and r•corded in the scriptures: and they are matters horrible and s•rangem. So then, if your proposed C•nsideration be of weight to turn us from our present faith, because of the dissensions that have been among us: the like consideration •naught turn us also (which God forbid) from all faith and religion, & make us as very Athe•sts, as a many of your church already are. And indeed where unto leadeth this manner reasoning which you use, b•t unto Atheism•? For if an Infidel •hold mind religion, mought he not be kept back, by consid•r•ng the dissensions, in fa•th, between Painims, Jews, Mahometists, and Chr•stians, and a Jew or Turk be kept from Christianity, because of the dis•entions between Protestants, Papists, Arians, Anabaptists and other sects many? Yea are not the Papists at this day hindered from true religion, by noting (as you do) the dissensions between Luther, Zwinglius, Calv•n &c? But it seemeth all these were far from your cons•deration, or if you minded them yet were they but motes in your ey: they be our dissensions, ours only that trouble you It pitieth you to see our poor congregation. how lamentably it hath been rent &c. but you are hard-hearted, and take no pity belike on your own Church. which you so highly commend unto us, though dissensions for discipline, (that I speak not of other matters) have been so great, that you ha•e not only preached & printed on against another now many a year and that in very bitter and hostile manner, but also, persecu•ede imprisoned & fought the blood on of another. Well, howsoever we have indeed just cause to lament, that by our dissensions, you and others have taken occasion to blaspheme the truth of God: yet herein have we comfort that such things must be amongst us (as the Holy Ghost saith,) that they which are approued may be known. And you, if by no means you will learn the estate of a Church here on earth, where it is in continual war with the Serpent and his seed; but still you think these things horrible and strange: take heed you stumble not at the stone Christ to your destruction & have your abiding in that house, which the strongman armed keepeth and the things that he possesseth are in peace. Luk 11.21.

The 4. Consideration.

4. Your chiefest teachers cannot as yet determine, what the discipline is that they would have as what the difference is between a Pastor & a Doctor, whether Apostates ought to be admitted to office in the church &c.

Answer.

1, There is no such dissention among us touching these matters as you would here insinuate: though if there were, yet our imperfection and difference in judgment showeth that we are weak men; but no whit preudceth the truth we profess.

2, The heathen Philosophers, in the Ni•ocean Synod. objected the like against Christians, that they agreed not in opinion among themselves Szozomen. lib. 1, cap. 18.

3. Your self heathen-like, may object against Paul and Barnaba (two of the chiefest teachers of Christian religion,) one of the two things wherewith you here do reproach us; because they not only could not determine whether John Mark, (who had before departed frō them) should accompany them in the work of the Gospel; but were so stirred, that they departed asunder one from the other, Act. 15.37.38.39.40.

4. You might much better blame your own Church and chiefest teachers, that cannot as yet determine what the discipline is that they would have; witness your long continued controversies in print; wherein what ado you make about discipline, all the world knoweth. If yourselves would walk better, in the truth, peace and concord of the gospel, you might with more equity find fault with us: pul therefore the beam first out of your own eye.

The 5 Consideration.

5 THE Lord hath also testified against you, by giving over very many people, 1 to Atheism. 2 carnal life, 3 Papism, 4 Anabaptism, 5 Ari•nijme, 6 Familism, which are not slanders but matters known to all that are acquainted with the course and state of your Church.

Answer.

All this being true, it showeth the badness of some men, not any badness in the faith we profess. An infidel might have objected unto Israel. as you do here: The Lord hath testified against you, by giving over over very many of your people, to Carnal life, Sed•mitrie. Peorisme, Bautisme, & many other idolatries with strange God's. The Papists may and do object the like things to yourselves at this day. much more justly then you do to us. For when any such have appeared among us, we presently cast them out if they repented not: whereas with you, such are still retained in the bosom of your Church; yea such heretics and vicious persons, as we have excommunicate; you do entertayn, as is known to all that ar acquainted with your estate. Wherefore the Lord hath testified for us, not against us, whiles by the light of his word, such hypocrites have been discovered and avoided: but you are condemned by your own doctrine, whiles such miscreants, and flagitioius persons are kept in your communion.

The 6. Consideration

6. THE churches and godly learned persons that ever heard of your separation, did not approve of it, which was the quarrel that Fr Johnson had with Mr Junius, and he sharply replieth on him. Nay Mr Barrow plainly raiseth at Calvin and the Geneva church, and even at all churches in Christendom. in his Discouerie: and counsels not with other reformed churches about their separation. but Answers (as Mr Johnson doth) the word is near us, we need not go over the seas to seek it as if the Spirit of the Prophets were not subject to the Prophets, and himself (as the Pope) had infallible rule of interpretation of the scriptures in his breast.

Answer,

THE strength of this reason, is quelled before, in the answer to the third of your first Considerations: thither I refer the reader.

Further I answer, here that you teach such doctrine, as standeth not with Christian freedom or truth, whiles you would forbid us the profession and practice of the Gospel, til we have consulted with, and be approved of other persons and Churches. For though I grant there is a good use of aduising with other Churches, (if conveniently we can,) either when cases are difficult. or when in any respect it do concern them: yet that in all matters of religiō Christians should be bound thus to walk when the sin to them is evident, which to other Churches (not well acquainted with their estate,) is not so perspicuous; this were to abridge Christian liberty, and to bring our consciences in bondage unto men; that though God forbid us all communion with idolatry, yet we may not separate unless they approve it. It is contrary to the word of God, which teacheth us that God's commandment is not hid from his people neither is far off, not alost in heaven, nor beyond the sea, but in our mouths & •rts to do it. But you to deceive your reader, allege this, as if it were Mr. Barrows or Mr Johnson's reason, and not the doctrine of Moses and of the Apostle.

The col•r that you bring for yourself, is that saying of the Apostle the spirits of the proph•ts are s•biect to the proph•ts 1 Cor. 14.32 which scripture considered by the words and circumstances of it, will in no we•se prove your purpose. F•r. first it may be q•estioned. whether the meanin• be, that the spirits of the prophets are subject to other prophets or to th•mselves. For the Prophets among the gentiles, (such as the Corinthians naturally were, (were s•bjeet unto, & carried and ruled by their spirits, and not their spirits subject to them: so that they could not choose but s•e•ke, (as S•bylla w•tne•seth of her self.) neither could they lin or cease speaking, when they would themselves yea and in holy scripture we see how Balaam prophesied good to Israel, and ble•sed, when he would have cursed th•m• Saul also and his messengers, prophesied (as it were) by constraint, being ouermastered by the spirit, so as he could not co•teyn himself, bu• stripping off his clothes, prophe••e• all that day and all that night, when he had no pur•ose thus to do. Now therefore, where as the Apostle here had ordained, that if anything were re•eled to another that fare by the first prophet should hold his peace, because almight prophesy one by one: if any should allege, that they could not hold their peace, but must speak, so long as their spirit moved thē he telleth them, that the spirits of th• prophets are su•i•ct to the prophets; so intimating that they may, if they will give others le•ue to speak showing also a reason hereof because God is not (the author) q of confusion but of peace. And if thus we understand the Apostle, his words make nothing for that you say. Unto this also may be added, that he speaketh this affirmatively, they are subject, and not by way of ordinance, let them be subject, as else where he useth: and as other things in this place are spoken; as Let the prophets speak; Let the first hold his peace; Let women be silent.

But be it granted (which I will not deny) that he meaneth their spirits were subject to other Prophets; because when they had spoken others were to judge: yet those other, were the Prophets of the same church and there present not in other churches. For Paul meant not, that the spirits of the Prophets in Corinth, were subject to the prophets in Rome or Iudoea and so must send to them for approbation; but appointeth like order in this, as was in all (other) the Churches of the Saints. And if they were bound (as you would have us) to send and submit to other churches, and others likewise to them; then no Church hath no power in itself, to approve of her prophets, or Ministers or of their doctrine, without the good liking of others. Which how far it is from the Apostles mind I leave it for the discreet reader to judge: neither think I but your own brethren will dissent so collecting from this place Howsoever they do, it is very like if you had lived in Ahab's days and should have heard 400 prophets at once prophesying good unto the King, and Micaiah only prophesying evil: you would with Zidkijah have smitten him on the cheek, (as now you do us in reproach,) & told him that his spirit must be subject to the prophets, especially they being so many, and he but alone.

But if it were further granted unto you, that we must be subject to the prophets of other churches: yet I suppose you will not deny but all prophets and churches must try and judge everything by the word of God according to which if any man speak not, his judgment is not to be regarded. And we, have offered and do still offer our doctrine and practice to the trial of all men by that word: if men either will not try nor give sentence at all, or do judge amiss; we are not bound to wait upon them; but must live by our own faith. The reformed churches have been written to by us; (for we know and acknowledge them to be true church and our brethren in the Lord:) they give us no Answer. Shall we continue still in bondage to Antichrist, til they bid us come out? What scripture teacheth us so? If they or any, convince us of error or evil, and we yield not; let us be esteemed accordingly: otherwise if we walk in the truth, and they will not approve it, be it upon them, as they shall answer before the Lord.

Mr. Junius, whom you mention to reply so sharply, neither approveth your Church, nor condemneth our practice. no not though he were instantly urged: the writings between him and us are extant to the world, let the reader judge what both sides have said.

Your censure of Mr, Barrow, (or scoffing rather at him,) neither hurteth him or us, nor helpeth you. His plain dealing in reprovng the corruptions of these times. you call railing; it is marvel you say not also the prophets railed on the people of Israel, when they used sharp rebukes; for I suppose you can hardly show any hard speech that Mr. Barrow there writeth; which the Prophets and Apostles have not used before. But if he were overcaried with some severe speeches in a good cause' neither we not himself ever justified that infirmity, we know that we are frail men let the sharpness therefore be his but the truth (which he sharply teacheth) God's:

And why carp you at the manner of his writing. and meddle not with the matter? That book with others have discovered the idolatries of your church; which neither by you nor any, have ever yet been answered & refuted by the scriptures. For yourself, let the reader judge what you have said.

The 7 Consideration.

7. THE great and gross disorder and partiality in administering of your discipline, which George Johnson showeth cheerly; besides the wants of sanctimony and common duties of godliness, which (he saith) are to be found in far greater measure in the common professors of the church of England: and saith further, that the Dutch churches take you for a most unquiet, contentious, and disorderly people.

Answer.

THIS article you object unto us, upon one man's report that was for lying, and slandering, false accusation, and contention. himself cast out of our Church. By what rule or word of God, can you admit of the testimony of an excommunicate against a whole congregation? Reason also might teach you, that no man standing against a church to excommunication, will ever speak well of that church, in the cause wherein he standeth.

But grant that this all were true which he reporteth what would you urge upon it? that therefore Christianity which we profess, is evil? so perhaps a Turk or Jew would do with as much reason as you can conclude, that our separation from you is evil. Was there ever any truth, (think you,) that men did walk in it as they ought? or any Church in the world, wherein the discipline (as you call it) was administered as it should Julian the Apostate, (that wrote so much against Christ,) reading the testimonies of Moses, the Prophets and Apostles, Deut. 9.7.22.24, Isa. 59 3, 4, 5, &c. Mic. 3.9.11. 1. Cor. 5.1.2, & 11.21.22, &c. 3 John. 9.10. had as good ground to blame the Israelites and Christians for their manners & discipline, and consequently to dissuade them from their faith as you do us: yea he might allege faithful and undeniable witnesses: whereas you rely upon a slanderer.

Finally, what aim you at, in all this, but to draw us back unto your church; and there it is like. we shall find discipline without disorder or partiality to weet, in your Bishops courts, for there the discipline of your church is to be seen. Of which, we need say nothing; the voice almost of all the land crieth out of their abominations. Only we observe how pregnant your persuasions are, to make us believe, that because there are sins in Zion, there be none in Babylon.

The 8 Consideration

8. GOD never witnessed for you, nor gave testimony of his approving your separation whether we consider your ministry or people. For hardly can you show any one person converted by your ministry from papistry or atheism, or other open wickedness; as by God's blessing multitudes have been by ours: but only have you seduced and wrought upon the tender consciences of such as by our ministry were first begotten unto Christ, But (which is specially to be observed) from your distracted and divided congregations, multitudes have fallen away, to every kind of impiety & herisie reigning in the world.

Answer.

IF God approve our separation and our ministry by his word, (as we are sur• he doth) it is yeno•gh, though our ministry have not converted any. Your reason is as if a C•inite should ha•e said unto N•ah God never witnesed for thee nor gave testimony of his approving thy building of the Ark: for hardly canst thou show any one person converted by thy precahng or Ark building, these 120. years.

Our ministry belongeth to our church; the assemblies whereof Papists, Ath•ists & such like wicked ones use not to frequent: and how is it po•sible •ur ministry should convert such as come not to hear it. If we w•ld object unto you, that few Turks and Saracens have been converted by y•ur m••isterie: what would you answer? Yet where you say •e can har•lie sh•w my &c. we can (if need wer) show you many that wer sometime prof•in & irreligious whiles they were of your church but cōm•ng and he•rng by God's providence the doctrine of our church, have been recl•ymed from their lewd life & do walk holily in the faith with us. It is true in •eed that our cause hath wrought most vpō such as being sometimes vn•er yo•r ministry, had tender consciences & pliable to the truth others, of more corrupt consciences have set against & blasphemed it• T•e •••ideratio• of this in any wise man's judgment will rather lead unto, •hen •rom our cause; when the better sort (by your own confession) do come unto us; the worsen and refuse remain still with you.

Your last point which you would have specially to be observed that multitudes ha•e fallen from us, to every kind of heresy and impiety, is indeed worthy to be observed. For first the scripture is fulfilled, which saith, m•ny sh•ll •leave unto them faynedly, Dan. 11.34, Secondly being fallen if they had come to a more holy faith & better walking whē they were gone out from us, it might have import• ours to be evil: but now that they have fallen to gross heresy & impiety; it argueth God's hand so be heavy up on them because they continued not in the truth with us. And this the scripture confirmeth saying of such as receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved; that therefore God will send them strong delusion, that they shall belee• lies; and of such as depart from the faith; that they shall give heed unto spirits of errors and doctrines of Devils. It is also to be observed that all such impious & heretical persons as have departed from us; are interteyned with you in your communion, (unless themselves refuse to commun•cate with you;) your church is the receptacle of all s•ch Apostataes, & there they are suffered in herisie & impiety so as they w•l fr•q•ēt your assemblies. Better reasons therefore & more weithty consid•rations• ha•e you need to allege; before you can persuade us to retur•e unto your church; for these hitherto propounded & examined are found too too l•ght. But it may be, better follow.

ARGVMENTS. That the best assemblies of the present church of ENGLAND, are true visible CHVRCHES.

1. IN what churches soever are found in public practice, the things that essentially constitute a true visible church; they are true visible churches of Christ.

But in the best of our assemblies are found in public practice the things that essentially constitute a true visible church:

Therefore the best of our assemblies, are true visible Churches.

Proof of the assumption

A visible church is the house of God, 1 Tim. 3.15. Now the means or things that constitute it, are 1 Foundation Jesus Christ to build upon; 1 Cor 3.11 Mat 16.18. 2 Builders; that is, such preaching ministers of the word, as do build in godliness, convert and confirm. 1 Cor 3 10. 3 Instrument of building the word of God. Eph. 2.20. 4 Matter to be built; people joined together in the profession of the Gospel. 1 Cor 3.9 Eph. 2, 20.

But all these are found in public practice in the best of our assemblies. Therefore in the best of our assemblies, are found in public practice, the things that constitute a true visible church.

Answer.

THE title of your arguments containeth 1 an error or absurdity; 2 & argueth some check in your own consciences for defense of your Church. 1 The error is, that you divide the church of England into many Churches; making the first (as I conjecture) a national Church; the other, parishionall. This is an error, because it is an human invention and differeth from the scripture, which showeth many churches to be in a nation or country; as in Judea, Asia, Galatia &c, Gal, 1, 2, 21. Reu. 1.4. but showeth not any nationall church. Now that yours is a national church not only the name and title, but also the constitution showeth; for it hath a Pastor over it, the Archbishop of Canterbury Primate and Metropolitan, your most reverend father in God; who maketh and consecrateth the Diocesan Bishops. (whereupon there are Diocesan churches or Sees; and they again make the Parish Priests. To him and to his successors, the inferior Bishops have sworn (so help them god through Jesus Christ.) all due reverence and obedience. If the mould of this Church were not fetched from Rome; show where you learned it.

2. The check which the title argueth to be in your conscience, appeareth it that you plead but for the best assemblies of the present church of England; for do you not hereby intimate, that there is a worsor sort which you will not plead for? yet both best, and worst are all one body, one church and communion: If your Church of England be Christ's why maintain you not the whole? is not every part and parcel of Christ's church to be defended? Think you that the priests and people of Israel, would have maintained the Most holy place of their Temple only, & have suffered the rest of the house to be ruinate and trodden under foot. or if they did thus, should they have done well? How persidiously then do you deal with your church, (if it be the true church of Christ,) that you seek to uphold your Sanctum sanctum, your best assemblies; and neglect the rest. Or, if you would make one piece of your church Christ and another piece Antichrists, where both be in brotherhood and unity together: it is as absurd as if you would make one part of your body human, another bestial one piece God's another Devils. It is contrary also to the plain scriptures which say; what communion hath light with darknese •hat conserd hath Christ with belial meaning. none at all. Either therefore you must justify your whole Church; or you must with us make a separation. How long will you halt between two opinions.

To your Argument I answer; the proofs of your assumption fail you.

A visible church (you say) is the house of God. True; but your Bethel, will be found Betha•en. the hou•e of Idolatry.

You make the things constituting your house to be fowr 1 Foundation 2 Builders, 3 Instruments, 4 Matter, But the form or fashion of the building, you leave quite out: perhaps you saw that it would not endure the trial▪ when it should be compared with the pattern that God shown in the Mount.

The Prophet Haggai reproved the Jews for that God's house was not built among them. If you had bē there. you would have disproud the Prophet by this sophistry. We have the 1 Foundation laid. Hag. 2.9, 2 Builders we have many both priests and people 3 Instruments also for to hew and square the timber and stone as axes &c. 4 and matter wherewith to build, as wood from the mountain, and stone from the qarrie. Therefore (though the stones be neither laid nor squared. nor the timber hewn, fitted or framed: because with us are found the things that essentially constitute a visible house,) we have the true house of God, But if your own material houses were no otherwise built, then your church is, by this your argument. you would have but an uncouth dwelling. If you read Gen. 11. you shall find the tower of Babel, to be as well built as your church; for there was the 1 Foundation laid; 2 Builders many, 3 instruments also; & 4 matter both brick and slime.

Now let us examine the things which you say you have; and do bu• barelie say for you prove it not.

1. The Foundation is Jesus Christ to build upon. 1 Cor. 3.11 Mat. 16.18. But this Foundation is not yet rightly laid in your assemblies you have it only in name and show: Christ is near in your mouths, but far from your actions. If you had shown by the scriptures how Christ is laid for the foundation of the church: it would soon have been seen that your house is set upon the sands. For you have not him for the mediator, prophet, priest, or king of your church, as it is now established. Many truths I acknowledge are taught among you but many untruths are also mixed with them, and the power of godliness is denied; for the truths that are taught cannot be practiced. Your church hath also other spiritual Lord's and laws then Christ and his testament; as your Prelates, with their canons, articles, and decrees imposed upon you to be observed on pain of excommunication and, further penalties So Christ alone, is not your foundation, but his servants also you ar to whom you obey.

2. Your builders are your preaching ministers, but I deny them to be God's builders, let them show when God designed them as he did Bezaleel & Aholia'•, to make his sanctuary. let them show by the word their office and calling as the Apostle Paul, of whom mention is made in the place you allege, 1 Cor 3:10.) did •n all his Epistles. Otherwise, not all that offer themselves to build may be admitted; for you know how it is written; It is not for you, and for us, to build the house unto our God. Ezra. 4.3.

In most of your parish assemblies, you have but one preaching minister; and so but one builder, and he will be a good while in building the house; and if he be taken away (as many are) then your church wanteth one of the 4 essent all things In many parishes there be unpreaching ministers; your church maketh them builders also, (though you do not,) and unto such if we were among you, should we be constrained to submit our souls.

The Bishops are master builders in all your churches, they command and control you their inferior Priests: if you build not by their line they throw down quickly all your building, and thrust the builders out of doors. These are like the horns that Zechariah saw which scattered Judah, so that a man darst not lift up his head; but your preaching ministers are not like the carpenters that came to fray them away. How great a jarr there is between your builders. we all do know; and long it will be ere they agree together to build God's house; or the work be finished for Christ to dwell in, when the master workmen work all awry and when (as you complained to the Parliament) the walls of Zion, lie even with the ground.

3. The instrument of building is the word of God. (as you allege Eph. 2.20. delivered by the Prophets and Apostles and Christ himself. But your builders use not this instrument aright, in doctrine or practice, they new not here with the rough stone, and knotty timber they reform not the profain & rebellious people, neither have they power in their arms to cut off any one wicked man; for the axe of excommunication is in the Bishops hand alone, and his commissaries; he hath the keys to open & shut the doors of your Church; the parish priest hath perhaps a weeding hook, and may suspend from the sacrament a while, by virtue of his service-book: but the greatest wound that he can make herewith, the Bishop or his substitute will quickly heal. Again you have besides the Bible, Apocripha books, commanded by law to be read in your church: also that other instrument called the service book: and with this tool your best min•sters build up your church, and the reading hereof doth now much edify, in all your parishes: though the days hauee been when you could say, that in all the order of your service, there was no edification but confusion. And who put this instrument into your ministers hands? Christ in his testament appointed none such. Your church hath also Homily books to build withal, and many edifying canons and ceremonies, such tools the Prel•es have allowed for your building. even the instruments of the foolish she•heard, Za. 11, 15.16. & if you will not believe me believe yourselves which heretofore have complained and written thus, No preacher may without great danger of the law utter all the truth comprised in the book of God It is so circumscribed and wrapped within the compass of such statutes, such penalties, such iniunctions, such advertisements, such articles, such canons, such sober caueats and such manifold pamphlets that in manner it doth but peep out from behind the skreen. The laws of the land. the book of common prayer, the Queens iniunctions, the Commissioners aduertisements, the Bishops canons, Linwoods provincials, every Bishops articles in his diocese, my Lord of Canterburies sober •aueats, his licences to preachers, and his high court of prerogative or grave fatherly faculties. these to-gither or the worst of them, (as some of them be too bad) may not be broken or offended against, but with more danger then to offend against the bible. To the subscribing & subscribing again, & th• third subscribing are required: for these preachers & others are indited▪ are fined, or prisoned, are excommunicated, are banished, and have worse things threatened them. And the Bible that must have no further scope, then by these it is assigned. Is this to profess God's word Is this a reformation? &c. Thus have we your own confessiō what manner of instruments your church is built with, and all men may, see, what small cause you have to boast of the word of God, amongst you.

The matter of the building, is people joined together in the profession of the Gospel. And what manner of people are joined together in your church? are there not all sorts of profane, wicked and irreligious persons, as well as religious and men of better life? and where find you in the scriptures such matter for God's house? The texts by you alleged teach far otherwise: for the Church of Corinth, were saints by calling, even called of God unto the fellowship of his son Jesus Christ. 1 Cor 1, 2, 9, and the Apostle never said to any profane or confused people ye are God's husbandry. God's building, So for the other text if you had minded either that which is before or after, it might have stayed you from applying it to your church. For the Apostle writing to the Saints, (not to the profane) which were at Ephesus, saith, Now y• are no more strangers and forreners. but citizens with the saints and of the how should of God; and after, he showeth how in Christ all the bulding coupled together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord. But neither are your people saints by calling. neither can you say of your church of England, that all the bulding (of all the parishes) coupled together, groweth to an holy Temple in the Lord; for yourself here defend not all, but the best on•lie. And we know well, that the m•ltitudes of profane wicked persons and miscreants, mere strangers and forreners, are of the matter of your church; and are bu•lded in and with the same (if the word and sacraments do bu•ld among you) even the vilest of the• when they go to the gibbet, as pleasantly as Agag did to his death Now mind with your sel•es, if God have commanded to build his house with the fine Ceder and Sittim trees: & you take the thorns and briars of the wilderness, or wild figtrees of the plain: whether Christ (who is faithful to him that hath appointed him, even as Moses was in all his house,) when he shall take a view of all your work, will allow of your labors, and bless you for them, as Moses blessed the builders of the tabernacle. Exod. 39.43. Your first argument therefore is to weak to uphold your church or best assemblies, and the assumption of your profyllogisme is denied.

The 2 argument,

2. THose Churches whose true members are only espoused to Christ, a true visible Churches; Ephe. 5.30.32 2. Cor. 11.2.

But the true members of our best assemblies. are espoused only to Christ. Therefore &c.

Proof of the assumption,

They are espoused only to Chri•si. which are endued with true saving faith. Eph. 5 30.31.32. with John. 15.3 4.5.7. & 17, 20.21.

But the true members of our best assemblies, are endued with a true saving faith confessed by Mr. Johnson in Jacob. pag. 7· Look also in the confirmation of the 5. argument following here.

Therefore &c.

Answer.

Here again you have gott another starting hole, whiles you plead but for the true members of your best assemblies; yet neither tell you us which are your best assemblies, nor who be the true members of them; that how to follow or where to find you we cannot tell. As is the way of an eagle in the air, such is the way of an adultrous woman, it is hid and cannot be known. But I will see if I can discover your falsehood though I cannot find your footing.

First I deny that the true members of your best assemblies are espoused only to Christ. for (as the prophet said of Israel,) lift up your eyes ūto the high placs & behold where you have not played the harlot. Now whils a church doth play the harlot, Christ willeth us to plead with her, that she is not his wife, ney•her is he her husband. Idolatry is spiritual whoredom, as the Prophets testify, Psa. 106 39. Ier. 3.9. Deut. 31.16. but the true members of your best assemblies, commit idolatry in their daily worship according to their Romish leiturgy or book of commō prayer, an idol of your own inuentiō. How are they thē espoused to Christ alone? Yes they are (say you,) because they ar endued with true saving faith I answer; Faith is in the heart, as it is written, with the heart man believeth, Rom. 10.10. The heart no man knoweth but God alone; as again it is written, thou (Lord) only knowest the harts of all the children of men 1 King, 8, 39, So then I ask you how you know that your members have true faith; your answer must needs be, (unless you w•ll make yourself a God,) you know it not but by their words and works. Well thē let us bring these to th' trial; their confession and the•r practice; leaving their faith to God that knows it The conf•ssion of the•r faith is set down in their service book, the 12. articles of the Creed. But this Creed the Papists also confess and read in their church; and if it will prove your people to have true faith it will prove theirs to have likewise; & you say no more for England, then for Rome. Again the Apostle saith, there are some which profess that they know God but in works do deny him, and are abominable and disobedient and to every good work reprobate. So then words are not enough, to prove true faith But we must come to the Apostle James his trial, show me thy faith out of thy works; for faith without works is dead. Now the works of your people are apparent to be evil; they standing in communion or confusion rather with the unclean, profane and, wicked whereby all God's holy things are defiled; as it is written, Num. 19.22. Hag. 2.14. submitting their souls to Antichristian prelates and priests, and hearing their voice, contrari• to John,) 10, 5. worshiping God in vain, after their own invented service book, which is a high transgression of the second commandment; Exo 20 And these things are general and public; the particular and more private in•q•ities, will not easily be numbered. Whereas therefore you would persuade us your church is espoused only to Christ, (although her fornicat•ions are so manifest between her breasts, because she saith. she believeth only in Christ; it is with no more color, then as if Bilhah (whē she was known to lie with Reuben,) should have pleaded; yet am I an honest woman, and espoused to Jacob only, for my love and hearty affection is towards him alone. But the wise man teacheth us, these be but the tricks of an adultrous woman, she eateth and wipeth her mouth & saith I have done no iniquity. Pro, 30, 20.

The scriptures which yourself alleage; do also make against your chvrch. Eph 5 30. We are members of (Christ's) body. of his flesh and of his bones. First your church can show no covenant that was made between Christ and her, at any time: the gathering and planting of your church having been by the Magistrates authority: not by the word of Christ, winning men's souls unto his faith, separating them from the unbelievers, and taking them to communion with himself. Secondly, in saying his body, the Apostle excludeth all other bodies; as more plainly appeareth in the other scripture, 2 Cor. 11.2. where he prepared the church as a pure virgin for Christ, which cannot be whiles she defileth herself with others; as doth your church with the abominations of the Papists; compāying also in the bed of love, with the Prelates, (whom the better son of you have confessed to be Antichristian) and their infer•our priests, who work upon men's consciences by their jurisdiction, ministry, doctrines, canons &c. being as the bridegrooms of your church, not the friends of the bridegroom which stand and hear and rejoyce for the bridegrooms voice; for, that Christ should speak and rule, unless it be according to their own canons; they cannot endure.

The other places in John. 15. & 17. will confirm also that the true members of your best assemblies are not espoused only to Christ For Christ showeth, that his Father is the husbandman, who calleth and bringeth unto and planteth in him the true vine; all the branches, that is the particular persons of the Church. But the true members of your best assemblies: are as yet the branches of that false Antichristian vine. your confused church of England: not separated from, but living and growing in one stock, body and communion with the idolatrous and profane. So that you cannot say, as did the Israel of God. Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt, thou hast cast out the heathens & plāted it. Christ showeth that his branches were purged of the Father, by the word spoken unto thē; your members ar not yet purged or cleansed by the word of Christ, from their idolatries, and profane communion with the ympes of Satan,. The word of life the word of separatiō from the serpēt & his seed; hath not yet sounded in the ears, or at least, not sunk into the harts of your people. Christ branches bring forth much fruit, through their abiding in him, being able without him to do nothing: your branches bear little fruit but unto themselves; and (as Moses foretold) their grapes are grapes of gal their clusters bitter, for the public idolatries used in your assemblies, after the manner of the mother of Rome. show that your vine is of the vine of Sodom. Christ prayed only for them that should believe in him through the word, that they all might be one in the Father and the Son, as the Father in him, and he in the Father; but the true members of your best assemblies, are one with the world, for whom Christ would not pray; being on spiritual body, & joined in communiō with the whole multitude of profane and wicked of the land; That strange it is you should read the scriptures and not discern, how far you are from being united with Christ, who as himself was not of the world, so neither are his people, but chosen and separated out of the same.

Whereas you bring no proof that your people have true faith, but by Mr, Johnson's confession; it showeth how distressed and helpless your estate is. Yet do you great wrong to Mr. Io, (as the reader may see in the place that you cite;) For although considering them apart from the constitution of your Church he thinketh by the appearance of the knowledge faith and fruits of diverse. that they may well be thought in regard of God's election in Christ, to be heirs of salvation, and in that respect true Christians: yet in respect of the constitution of your Church, he saith, they cannot be judged true Christian. Now we deal against your church in regard of the constitution thereof; not doubting but God hath many elect heirs of salvation among you, which we leave unto him that knows them. Your argument then from Mr Johnson's confession, is faulty, and agreeth not with the rules of right reasoning; for whereas he limiteth his judgment of them, showing in what respect it is & plainly excepteth their church-constitution: you bear your reader in hand as if he granted it without limitation? and that too, according to the Scriptures in your first proposition, which evidently do concern the churches constitution. You may much abuse any man's words, if what he speaketh respectively you will take and allege as spoken absolute. So your proof faileth you.

In the end you refer us, to the confirmation of your 5, Argument following to the Answer whereof I also refer the reader

Now though I have answered first to the assumption or second part of your argument on proof whereof you do insist: yet the first part also shall be better examined, ere I let it pass: Those churches (you say) whose true members are only espoused to Christ. are true visible churches. By true members I conceive you do mean. (not as the truth is, all baptized and so retained in your church, but) some few choice persons, or forward professors, among whom there is an imaginary brotherhood, and separation from the other profane in your parishes; though in every deed they stand all one body. If thus you intend (as the proof of your assumption plainly intimateth you do,) then offer you violence to the similitud of marriage or espousall which all men know is not with some few members of a woman's body, as her fingers, or hands &c, but with the whole woman, who giveth her self by covenant unto her spouse or husband. And as in civil marriage so it is in spiritual; for Israel of old. when the Lord became a husband unto them, did not some of them, but all the multitude generally make covenant with their God: the scriptures also which you alleg, Eph, 5.2 Cor 11 speak of the whole body of the church, not of a few select members of the same. For though it be true of every visible church, that some only are elect howsoever all be called; yet the discerning of this belongeth to God alone, and not to us; who esteem of persons according to their outward covenant profession, and walking. Your reason then seems to be like this; That woman's whose true members,) as namely. her eye, and ear. and some of her fingers) are espoused onlie to such a man. She is his true and lawful wife. But the true members of N, (howsoever her whole body in general is coupled with an adulterer; and the most of her members are affected and wholly given over to that adulterer, and her pretended husband they hate, & never made covenant with,) are espoused only to such a man Therefore. &c. If this reason be not absurd. let him that readeth judge; and if such absurdity be not implied in your argument, show if you can in your next writing; for if you strive to avoid this, you will fall into another evil as shall then be manifested.

The 3. argument

IN what churches soever, is such an ordinance of God in public use and for by which there is ordinarily made an undoubted resurrection or quickening from the death of sin unto the life of grace, and a new birth: they are true visible churches of Christ. I am, 1, 18, 1 Pet, 1 23.

But in the best of our assemblies is such an ordinance of God &c. Therefore &c.

The assumption is manifest. because by that ordinance of preaching which is in public use and force. there is ordinarily made an undoubted new birth; seeing there do ordinarily appear in many. the undoubted fruits and testimonies of God's spirit, after the public and ordinary preaching of the word. in our best assemblies.

Answer.

THE first part of this your argument seemeth to imply an error; as that a church is first gathered & constituted of an unregenerate profane and worldly people; over which are set Pastors and Teachers, who by preaching the Gospel do beget them or some of them unto the faith and quicken them from the death of sin &c which quickening or new birth, is a proof that they are a true visible church. This course I find to be contrary unto the scriptures; which I would thus manifest. When the Lord Jesus would show mercy to the world, and call his elect out of the same, he sent Apostles Prophets and Evangelists to preach his salvation to all people's. The people to whom they preached, were not (for the most part) churches of God. but assemblies of heathens and idolaters; as for example, the men of Lystra of Corinth; of Athens where Paul preached in Mars street; and other like places. By means of this manner preaching many people were regenerate or become a new quickened from the death of sin and turned from idols to the living God. And being thus begotten unto God, they were separated from others that believed not. and joined together into a holy communion, not having other officers over them for a while till men were fitted for such a work. Therefore oft times the Apostles departed to other places and left the Evangelists to redress things that remained, and to ordain them Elders in every city, as the Apostles appointed them These Elders, called generally Bishops or Overseers, had charge of their particular flocks, and might not go from them as did the Apostles. but attend and feed them: These now could not properly be said to beget their people to the faith, (as the Apostle noteth to the Corinthians) but to feed and instruct them; and therefore are not called Fathers, but Feeders, or Pasters. and Pedagogues. Child-leaders or Instructeurs. From which I gather, that people must regenerate and borne again, before they may be admitted into any particular church, or have officers over them; and that ordinary ministers, which feed their flocks, cannot be said to beget them, as is the common want of you Ministers in England. which methinks even reason itself might show you: For you that are now over your parishes, how found you your people at first, a church or no church? If you say a church then you begat them not, but entered upon other men's labors that were before you if you say they were not a church, then you condemn the state of your parishes as they were planted, before you were their Ministers. Now then to come to your proposition; In whats ever churches (that is assemblies. for so I understand you to use the word generally, as the Scripture sometime useth Ecclesia, (is such an ordinance of God in public use and force, by which there is ordinarily made an undoubted new birth &c. they are true visible churches of Christ: This I deny; for in the assemblies of the heathens in the Apostles days (as before is proved) there was such an ordinance of God sometimes in public use and force, as by it ordinarily there was made an undoubted new birth; as the fruit of the Apostles preaching showeth yet were not those assemblies of heathens, true visible churches of Christ. but such only as were converted to God and separated from the rest that believed not; and joined in a holy communion together were true visible churches.

Whereas you assume, that in the best of your assemblies is such an ordinance of God &c this also I deny for your ministers are not God's ordinance, he hath not called or sent them, they execute no lawful office in your assemblies. But your assumption (you say) is manifest, because by that ordinance of preaching which is in public use and force. there is ordinarily made an undoubted new birth. I answer, first in very many of your assemblies there is no such ordinance of preaching in public use, as you here boast of; but bare reading only: yet those assemblies are by the Constitutions of your church, to be reputed as true visible churches as the other. Secondly in those other other where preaching is, I deny that there is ordinarily made an undoubted new birth; Your proof is, because there do ordinarily appear in many, the undoubted fruits and testimonis of God's spirit &c. I answer, first if this be so, yet what will these many, help the most and greatest number, in whom such fruits appear not? When many of the heathens believed the Apostles word, did their belief bring the other that believed not, into the church did not the Apostles separate the believers from the rest. and teach them to come from among them? Yet you for the faith of some, will unite all the assembly unto Christ and his church, contrary to the Apostles practice, and to all the scriptures. Secondly, I deny that there doth ordinarily appear in many such undoubted fruits of God's spirit after your ordinary preaching as for which we may esteem them true visible churches. Some fruits I know there do appear; so do there among the Papists: yea they take occasion for such things to reproach you. that there follow not so many good works after your preaching as after their doctrine; but among neither of you: are those fruits seen, which by the testimony of scriptures will prove you true visible churches. So we have here but your bare affirmation to rest upon: and though I might thus end with as bare a denial: till you bring further proof, yet for to help the reader. I will show that ordinarily there appeareth not a new birth after your preaching. Because of your public idolatrous estate, wherein you stand subject to Antichristian Prelates and canons whiles you have your public worship after the Romish idolatrous manner, and are still coming led in one body with the profane, and serents seed, with many other evils among you: which plainly show you want the new birth and are still in your old mothers womb. This the scriptures which you allege in your proposition will confirm; for the Apostles show, I am, 1, 18 1 Pet 1, 23. that Christ's church is a people begotten of God with the word of truth; that is the Gospel: but your church was first begotten. gathered, constituted, ordered, and is still continued, by the Magistrates word and authority; which if it did not enforce the people. the estate wherein you now stand, would soon be changed; your church dissolved, and either be better or Worse. And where you learned so to enforce faith, and constrein men to be members of your church I cannot tell; unless you follow Muhammad's doctrine who taught that men should be compelled to the faith, by war and sword.

Again, the Apostle addeth this for a testimony and end of our new birth, that we should be as the first fruit of God's creatures This men are not, till they be as was Israel, hallowed to the Lord; Ier, 2, 3, which was by separation from the world Levite, 20.26, and a willing covenant with the Lord Exod. 19.5, 6.8; Dut, 26, 17, 18, 19, And that the like must be of us Christians, another scripture confirmeth, saying, These are they which are not defiled with women, for they are virgins; (this implieth a separation from the world; which follow the Lamb whosoever he goeth, (this argueth a covenant and communion with Christ: and in the next words. both points are repeated.) these are 1 bought from men. being the first fruits 2 unto God and to the Lamb: after this followeth the fruit, and in their mouth found no guile, for they are without spot before the throne of God. Whereas therefore you have stood so long against us for separation and would maintain a mere confusion of all sorts of people in a Church, upon an imaginary separation made in the clouds of your own fancies while outwardly and indeed, you are one body with the wicked: you are undoubtedly not yet borne a new; your Church hath not strength to bring forth: your ministers are unskillful midwives; and the saying of the Prophet concerning the people of Ephraim, is verified also upon your people be is an unwise son. else would be not stand still such a time. even in the breaking forth of the children. Hos 13, 13.

The 4. Argument.

IN what churches soever all things needful to salvation by public authority and general approbation, are ordinarily and publicly taught they are true visible Churches.

But in the best of our assemblies are &c.

Therefore true visible churches.

Proof of the assumption,

In what churches soever are ordinarily and publicly taught. the doctrines whereby the people of God were converted and saved in the time of Christ and his Apostles. in those churches are all things needful to salvation taught. But in the best of our assemblies are &c, Ergo &c. Proof of this assumption appeareth out of Luk. 1.77, 78. with Mar. 1, 4.15. Luk. 24, 47. Act. 2.37, 38, 41. Act, 11, 17 18. Act 16.30.31, and 20.21.

If it be objected that the points in question between us. be needful to salvation: it is thus disproved.

All things needful to salvation are clearly set down in the scriptures to the understanding of the spiritual 1 Cor 2.15. Dan 12.10. Pro. 8 9. and the things that are not open to the spiritual, are not needful to salvation.

But the points in question between us, are not clearly set down in scripture to the understanding of the spiritual; as appeareth both by thousands of ministers and people of the church of England and other foreign churches among whom are the chiefest lights of this age as Calvin, Beza, Junius, Piscator. Gwalther. Zanchius with others, which were undoubtedly spiritual; are of contrary judgment to the Separatists as also in that it is not agreed upon among themselves. what is the discipline and order required by the word in every point, nor in any other points of difference among them. namely touching the differences of the office of Doctor and Pastor &c.

Answer.

First wishing the reader to remember what is answered to the first part of your former Syllogism; I will without further repetition, proceed to proceed in answer of this; where the ground and proposition of your first argument is imperfect, so that which you build thereon is unsound. For whereas you speak of all things needfull to salvation &c. to be publicly taught: you should have added also, are observed or done; according to Christ's saying ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. If men hear truth taught and obey it not, it avayles them nothing Therefore as the Apostle saith, be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only. deceiving yourselves.

Your assumption also is denied: for in your best assemblies all things needful to salvation be not taught, much less done or practiced. To give an instance; to be separated from the unbelievers, and to be joined together unto a holy communion and church; is needful to salvation; 2 Cor, 6, 17.18. Act, 1 47, Isa 65.9, Reu 21, 24. This is neither taught nor practiced in your assemblies but oppugned by all the cavils you can. Your proof of the assumption is, a comparison of your church with those in Christ's time and th' Apostles. I answer you again, your church is not like those in doctrine or in practice of things needful to salvation.

Then you say, the proof of this assumption appeareth out of Luk. 1.77. &c. This is a strange proof of your assumption, which is this, But in the best of our assemblies are taught &c. Doth Luk 1, 77. show what is taught in your assemblies? and why doth not Mat, 15, 9. and 23, 16 17, &c. show what is taught there also? The places that you allege show what doctrine was taught in the Jewish and Apostolic church; not what is taught in yours. It must be therefore your own writings, sermons, doctrine, practice and estate. that must prove your assumption. But you will say (perhaps) your doctrines and practices. agree with those mentioned in these scriptures. That I deny; and would therefore that you should have made application of the particulars: Which because you have not done, I will do for you.

You allege Luk, 1, 77.78. with Mar, 1.4.15 where knowledge of salvation is given unto (God's) people. by remission of their sins, through the tender mercy of our God &c. & this was done, by preaching the baptisime of amendment of life, for remission of sins. and belief in the Gospel. So in Luk. 24, 47 repentance and remission of sins should be preached in Christ's name among all nations. The same things are also taught in all the other places which you cite, as the reader may see in the texts. Now these things (you will say) are taught and observed among you. I show the contrary thus.

First you give knowledge of salvation, (though falsely) unto other then to his, that is to God's people; in as much as you give the sacraments, which are the seals of our salvation unto the profane and wicked and their seed thus prostituting the most holy things. even Christ himselfe, unto haters and blasphemers of God, (as you cannot deny but a number of your church are) and such as make a mock of religion; and herein you are guilty of high sacrilege against God.

Secondly, the doctrine of repentance. is not truly taught nor obeyed in your Church. For unto true repentance is required, 1 a knowledge or notice given and taken of sins; Isa 58, 1, Lam, 2, 14 & 3 39, 40. 2 an acknowledgment or confession made of sins, (as a testimony of true sorrow of heart,) with asking mercy Leu 4, 13, 14. &c, & 5, 5.6, Psal. 32, 3, 5, 3 and a forsaking of sins, or amendment of life. Prov. 28, 13, Psal, 28.21.2 Cor. 7, 11. Eze. 18, 21.

Now the sins of your church have not by your Ministers been signified to your people; as namely their confuse estate and commixture with the wicked; though it be a sin everywhere reprov'd in the scriptures. as before is shown.

The great transgressions which your people daily commit in God's publick worship, whiles, you have your own wilworship, and stinted prayers without warrant from Christs testament, read in place of God's true spiritual service; these are not preached against, reprov'd or cast out by your ministers doctrine; but contrariwise, they have by word & writing sought to maintain the same. The servile subjection that both ministers and people, are in, under your Lord's the Bishops and their courts; is not discovered by your ministers to be a sin and bondage which you must depart from, if you will be subject to that only Lord & master Christ though secretly they have sought to undermine that jurisdiction of Bishops which how can they do, if it be of Christ; or how may any stand under it, if it be of Antichrist?

This being the sinful state of your church, as we well know. (and you are never able to justify yourselves;) your ministers not teaching repentance for these things, nor being suffered by your Church to speak against them, teach not repentance truly. For, It is not enough to cry out of Idolatry, or to preach repentance from sins in general; for so they do among the Papists, but the particular sins of every people and person must be reprov'd; yea every sin that is seen and discerned, or else your preachers do not their duty. God's word teacheth us that if a man walk in any one sin though he do not all he shall not live. but die the death Ezek. 18, 11, 13. When Gibeah was given over to the Sin of Sodom, if the Priests and prophets should have preached against idolatry, swearing, breaking of the Sabbath, and such like evils. and not against that particular filthines which the people followed should they have preached repentance truly? When Israel followed Iereboams calves at Dan and Bethel, if the ministers then had preached against Sodomy, whoredom, drunkenness, and the like, and not cried out against that present idol worship, but pleaded rather for it: should they have taught repentance truly? Even thus it is with your best ministers, they will thunder out in their pulpits, against Popery, and idolatry in general against theft, whoredom, pride, covetousness, and many other iniquities, but the sin which cleaveth so fast to the bones of our Church, these heinous enormities in God's worship amongst you these they meddle not with, neither upon pain of excommunication draw the people to repentance for them; as after I will further show. Perhaps now and then they will glance at the Bps. or some other corruptions, but bring the people from under these iniquities, they do not, nay they plead for them rather, and cry out upon us, which have forsaken so gross abominations.

Now there being no notice given by the ministers, or taken by the people of the sins wherein they live: the other two parts of true repentance do also fail among you: for far you be from confessing your sins, which though you offer the sacrifice of fools, yet will you not know that you do evil, and most far from amending them, when with so high a hand you do maintain them: although the testimony and offerings of us your despised and persecuted brethren, against them, have sounded in your ears now man•e a day. Thus teach they not repentance aright.

As for faith it cannot be sound, and true, where it hath not ground o• the covenant and promise of God: God's covenant and •romise of salvation, you have not without repentance, as Christ said, Except ye repent. you shall all likewise p•rish for surely God will wound the hairie •ate of him that walketh in his sins. To preach faith therefore. and a•ply justification by faith, to an unrepentant people, is to •rofane that holy doctrine, and turn the grace of God into licent•ousnes. But to give the seals of the righteousness of faith, (baptism, and the Lord's supper) to the wicked blasphemers, irreligious, and to their seed, it is a sin of sin• for which your ministers shall give an heavy account to Christ at his appearing. as have counted the •recious blood of his testament an vnholi• thing. and washed and fed therewith e•en dogs and swine, as the scripture calleth such ungodly •ersons. And thus you have not truly taught among you either rep•ntance from dead works or faith towards God, which are the doctrine of the beginning of Christ and the very foundation, as the Apostle saith.

I will now also compare the practice of the Apostles (in the plac• which you cite) with yours, that the reader may see how your right eye is blinded, to bring scripture so plain against yourselves. In Act. 2, 37, &c, the manner of gathering and planting that church' is thus described. There was first the word preached. by the Apostles, verse 14 &c which being heard, pricked the harts of the •eople, verse, 37. there was repentance taught (not for adultery, theft, worshiping of Idols o• the like, whereof it may be that people was not known to be guilty. but) for their particular trespass in refusing of Jesus Christ, into whose name they must be baptized, if they would be saved, verse 38, then followed a plain separation from such as frowardly resisted the truth. verse. 40, and none were baptized or joined to the church but such as gladly received the word verse 41. After this followed a cont•newing (notwithstanding the imminent peril of trouble and persecution for the truth sake,) in the Apostles doct•ne, and fellowship, and breaking of bread, and prayer•; verse 42, If you had walked in this primitive churches steps you should before the constituting of your Church, have preached unto the poor ignorant and idolatrous Papists, (which was the general face of the land at Q Mary's death,) repentance for their sins in all their idolatries. w•ll worships, and superstitions, subjection to Antichrist, his prelacy, priesthood, and government. &c. To such as had their harts pricked with your doctrine, you should have shown the true way of the Gospel faith, and holy walking therein You should have taught• them a separation from the profane and obstinate; and have gathered into the Church, such only as gladly received the word; and with them you should have walked in a holy communion and practice of Christ's ordinances, th•ugh Princes and Parl•aments, though•gh men and Angels, should have forbidden, & threatened you for it. Thus had your church bē the daughter of th•t mother church in Ier•salem, whereas now by neglecting this pattern, and reteyning the Popish confuse multitude, and a great part of their ministry and worship; you have imitated B•bylon •e mother of fornications, a•d •re as unlike Zion, as you are like yourselves.

The objection which you feared, and therefore would prevent with answer.: is yet of more weight then will be eased by your syllogism; the a•sumption whereof I deny For the true constituting of a Church by the word preached, calling men to a willing holy covenant with God separating them from the ways of Satan & Antichrist. his false & idolatrous worship, priesthood and government. uniting them together in the communion of the true faith, and bond of love and peace, (which are the controversies between you and us,) these points are clearly set down in scriptures to the understanding of the spiritual, as the history of all the Bible, and the practice of the Apostles, and primitive churches already alleged do plainly show and I am sure you will not deny, but they were spiritual.

Whereas you would argue, they are not clearly set down to the understanding of the spiritual, because thousands of ministers and people of the church of England, are of contrary judgment to us: first we have many testimonies of your own ministers for the things that we defend against you as in this and other books we have manifested. Secondly, if we had no such testimony, yet what do you but make yourselves judges in your own cause, that though we bring never so plain evidence against you from the word, yet if you see it not, or will not see. it must not be needful for salvation. More unsound and popish doctrine hath seldom been taught But I leave unto you the saying of Christ unto the Pharisees, If you were blind ye should not have sin. but now ye say, WE SEE therefore your sin remaineth, John, 9, 11.

And whereas you further bring against us, foreign churches, and special persons the chiefest lights of this age, first mind whither this be not also a ground of Popery, so to press human authority: and whether the Papists cannot for many of their heresies, allege the ancient fathers, (the chiefest lights of their ages) whom yourselves I suppose will not deny but to be spiritual, seeing their testimonies are often alleged by your church in pulpits and in print.

Secondly, this your dealing is such, as both the better sort of the late Fathers (as Augustine for example, who was of mind that counsels, Bishops &c. ought not to be objected, for trial of controversies, but the holy scriptures only,) and the very superstitious Popelings themselves have condemned: saying that we are rather to believe one private faithful man than a whole Council. and the Pope (himself) if a man have better authority & reason on his side.

Thirdly your objection and pleading against us, is much like as if the Jews should have objected against Christianity. thus: It is not needful to salvation to believe that Jesus who was crucified is the Christ: for then it would be clearly set down in scripture to the understanding of the spiritual Dan 12, 10, Prov, 8, 9, but that it is not for the thousands of priests and people of Israel, God's own people, among whom are the chiefest lights of this age, the Rabbin's, expounders of the law &c. which are undoubtedly spiritual; are of contrary judgment to you his disciples, Job 7 47, 48, 49.52.

Fourthly, (as I have before answered) foreign churches, and the lights in them, have clearly seen the things we stand for, and do assent with us, touching separation from Antichristianism, gathering into and walking in a holy communion of Saints, and other points of greatest moment between you and us. as their Harmony of Confessions, besides other particular books many. do testify. If you object their particular judgment of your churches estate, I answer, that is not needful to salvation therefore they may miss in it; and yet be spiritual: for if men in their own churches profess and walk in the truth so far as God gives them to see; and think better of other churches than they do deserve, such errors even the most spiritual are subject unto.

It was clearly revealed in scriptures that the Gentiles should be called under the Gospel, Deut 32.43 Gen. 12, 3 Psal. 67. & 117 Isa. 11.10 Chr•st •imself plainly confirmed and commanded it, Mat, 28.19, John, 10, 16, Act 1, 8. Yet the Apostle Peter himself and many other spiritual men, perceived it not till in more special and particular wise it was to them revealed Act. 10.14, 28, 34, 3•, & 11, 2, •, 18. As Peter and many other godly then, failed in esteeming worse of the Gentiles than they should: so learned and godly men now may fail, in esteeming better of your est•t• then it doth deseru•.

The 5. Argument.

WHatsoever church is the mother of the faithful, is a true visible church, but the best of our assemblies are &c. Ergo true visible churches.

The preposition is true. because that regeneration and new birth, is only ordinarly wrought by the word preached, Rom, 10.8.17. I am. 1.18. 1, Pet. 1, 23. which is only and ordinarily found in the visible Church. Gal, 5, 26. 1 John. •. 5.

The assumption is true, because many are ordinarily new borne in our best assemblies, by the ordinance of preaching in public use and force; as appeareth by Mr Johnson's foresaid confession, as also by the means of the causes and means ordained by God to beget faith in the hearers, and efficacy, thereof, Esa. 55, 11, Rom. 10.17, and lastly, •y the infallible effects of faith, and fruits of the spirit, appearing in the true members of our best assemblies, Gal. 5, 6, 22.

Answer.

HEre you seem to bring a new argument, though it be but the old in a new coat: for take away this mantel wherewith your Major is clothed, The mother of the faithful; and all the rest will be but regeneration and new birth. wrought as (you say) by the preaching in your best assemblies. Which things we heard in your third argument, and there refuted. As you here urge them again, I further answer, first to your proposition. Whatsoever church (say you) is the mother of the faithful, is a true visible church But Israel (say I) in her idolatrous estate, was the mother of the faithful; yet was she not in that estate a true visible church: therefore your proposition is not true

That Israel then was the mother of the faithful, appeareth by the words of the Lord Plead with your mother Hos, 2, 2, That they which were willed thus to plead, were the faithful appeareth by the•r names Ammi & Ruhamah, that is, My people and she that hath obtained mercy. That yet notwithstanding this mother was not a true visible church, appeareth by the Plea to be made against her, She is not my wife, neither am I her husbād: her estate being (as elsewhere is said) without the true God; and her children that continewed in her idolatry, should obtain no mercy, Thus you see a church may be said to be the mother of the faithful, and yet not be a true Church of God.

You would confirm the proposition to be true. because regeneration and new birth is ordinarily wrought by the word preached, which is one lie and ordinarily, found in the visible church. I answer, the word preached is to be found also in the false church; as among Papists, Anabaptists, Anabaptists &c. as ordinary if not more ordinary then •n many of you• assemblies: and although there be not such or so many truths •aught among them as are among you, yet the word that is taught, hath effect for sanct•fication of life, in as great measure, as ordinar•lie appeareth in your Church of Engl.; where so much profannes reigneth, as all men see and know.

The church of Rome. is as yourselves pr•fe••e, a fall•e church: yet doubt I not, neither do I think you doubt but sundry children have been borne unto God by that harlot. The church of En•land, it as we profess; a false church, your Ministry also fall•e: yet God which brought light out of darkness, hath brought forth, (I do•bt not,) and saved many of his dear ch•ldren among you. But let not thi• embolden the rest to continue with you in your false est•te: least they find no mercy with the Lord, because they be children of fornications.

To your assumption then I answer, as you first set it down. I grant it; yet will not your conclusion follow for it may be a mother of the faithful and yet no true visible church; for the reason foreshowed, But as you afterward explain yourself saying; the assumption is true because many a•e ordinarily new borne, &c. I deny it thus to be true, because neither is a new birth ordinarily to be had among you neither have you God's ordinance of preaching in public use and force. If your people were truel•e regenerate they would not sin; m•stike me not, I know the remainders of sin dwell in the best men, and draw them to that they neither would not ought, but as th• Apostle saith, He that is borne of God sinneth not. And seeing so many and great sins reign in your best assemblies. how can you say you are regenerate? for I have before manifested, that ordinarily people are kept and continued among you, in an unholy communion with the wicked and irreligious, and nourished with s•perstition and idolatr•: these and the like things are no tokens of true regeneration.

Mr Johnson's confession, is before treated of: and will not import that which you would infer.

The causes and means ordained by God to beget faith, are not by Esa, 55 11, R•m, 10.17. proved to be among you For there is spoken of the word going out of the Lord's mouth: but your min•sters are not the Lord's mouth, because they ha•e not from him their calling; sending and authority to preach, b•t have it from his enemy Antichrist, and (as the Apostle saith) how shall th•y preach except they be sent? Neither are they as the Lord's mouth: because they separate not the precious from the vile. Ier. 15 19.

Neither are the infallible effects of faith &c. proved by G•l. 5, 6, •2. to be in the true members of your best assemblies: For seeing faith is there said to work by love, and there is no love of Christ, unless men keep his commandments, and his command•ments are not kept in your idolatrou• assemblies: it cannot be affirmed that you love the Lord, if so you contine• continue in sin: or that you have true faith. But rather, seeing the contrary works of the flesh; which the Apostle there mentioneth. adultery. fornication, &c, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred &c. contentions. seditions heresies, &c. are found in the true members of your church, (for all among you are baptized, and all baptized are true members;) you are more rightly to be reputed unregenerate and vnsanct•fied, in that your sinnfull and confused estate. Neither have you Christ's power in your best assemblies to cast out the wicked from among you: but they are fostered. f•d, and blessed. with your word, prayers, sacraments, &c. and such as abstain from your idolatry and from communion with the wicked; you hate, reproach, excommunicate and persecute: that your church, is indeed, a mother to the profane. But a stepmother to the faithful.

The 6, argument,

THose Churches for whom the Churches of God rei•ice. are true Church• 2. Thes. 1.4.

But our best assemblies are such, for whom the churches of God rejoice.

Ergo.

The reason of the proposition is, because the churches of God have the spirit of discerning; a true church and ministry from a false; as John 10.27, 5. Ma• 24, 24 1 Cor. 14 32. and 10.15• 1 John. 4 1•

The assumption is true; because all the churches of God, rejoice, in our best assemblies; and have given us the right hand of fellowship and testimony of a true••hurch; having joined our public confession with their Harmony.

Answer.

THIS argument is one and the same, with the third of your first Constlerations, save that it hath gotten the fashion of a syllogism. The in s•fficiencie of this reason, I have there shown, and thither do refer the reader. Further here I answer, that you turn the testimony of the reformed churches, to your best advantage, yet neither with equity, nor good success For they joy not for your best assemblies, more then for your worst. but for your Church in general, and the confesion of the same. They rejoice for every Bishop, Priest and Deacon, and for every Parish that maketh such confession. as Bishop Jewel in his Apology hath set down: Part of which Apology they have united with their Harm•nie. And why bring you them as approving your best assemblies only. Your Lord's the Prelates may truly say you do them wrong: to apply unto yourselves the applause which other churches give to their Apology. They will tell you in your own words, the churches of God have the spirit of discerning a true church and Ministry from a false. But the reformed •hurches have discerned the national church of England, (whereof the Archb•shop of Cant• is Pastor• to be a true church; they have discerned the Di•cesan Bish•ps in England as well as the Parish Priests, to be true Ministers; and rejoice as well for their Sees, as for yo•r Parishes, having joined these all alike in their Harmony And what will you (that suff•r s• many things for sep•rating in y•ur ch•rch. as yo• syd) answer to your right reverend Fathers, against whom like unnatural children, yo• hau• striven so long, and would have them with their j•risd•ct•on •ut out of your church th•t the P•rsh priest or Deacon m•ght Lord it alone.

More particularly I answer: yo•r first proposition is unsound, & cannot be pro•ed from the scripture you allege 2 Th•s. 1.4. from which text yo• must conclude on this fa•h•on. P•ul and Siluanus and Timotheu• rejoiced of the Thesalonians in other churches of G•d, because of their patience and faith in all persecutions &c. Therefore the reformed church• rejoicing for the church of England. it must needs be a true church. The conseq•ence is denied. True churches may err in their judgment of another church, especially if the• be not rightly informed of the stat• thereof? as the reformed churches are not by that your Apology. Moreover he that mindeth the things recorded of that church, 1 Thes. 1, 3, 6, 7, 9 &c. and the different estate to be seen in your church: may soon percei•e their is no l•ke cause of joy for you •s for them; that if there be a l•ke effe•t, it is in error.

The reason of the proposition, is no better confirmed by the scriptures you allege: For when Chr•t saith John. 10, 27, 5. M• sheep h•ar my voice and they will not follow a stranger; doeth he send his sheep to other flocks, to try their shepherds by; or if I see my shepherd to be a th•ef, a hireling, a wolf? m•st I commit my sowl unto h•m, because other shepherds w•ll give him the right hand o• fellowship? In the other scriptures, say n•t the Apostles to the particular churches. and persons, judge ye what I sa•? try ye th• spirit and believe not every spirit; But you would not have our selves to iud•e or try, but to send over sea, and hear what other churches judge; if they ap•roue we must not disallow. You may as well bid us. put out our own eyes. that other men may lead us; and as soon will we foll•w you in that, as in this your popish counsel. We have learned to live by our own faith. and know that every man shall bear h•s own b•rden, and answer for himself to God.

But you will tell us, if we can judge and discern the true church: others can do it also and better. I answer, I may err judgment, & so may others, even whole churches, therefore let every man look how he judgeth, and how he de•endeth on other men: and let evey man's •udgment be tried by the scriptures. For this cause we say unto you; seeing we have fought for the judgment of other churches, but can get no answer. procure you some reasons from them, in defense of your church, ministry, worship, and ecclesiastical gouer•meant: and if by God's word they can just•fy those things, and evince that we have done evil to depart from you: we will return unto you. Otherwise if they rejoyce neu•r so m•ch for your estate: we are ver•lie persuaded, that both they and you have more caus• to mourn, for the many abominations that are am•ng <◇>

To conclude, consider in an example, the weight of your argument; for by the like re•son the envious ministers in Paul's time, mought thus ha•e just•fied themselves

That m•nisterie and ministration for which the Apostles of Christ rejoyce, is true to be obeyed, and continued in. But our ministry and min•stration is such as for it the Apostle Paul rejoiceth, yea and will r•ioyce Philip • 16.18.

If you Answer the Apostle rejoiced for the preaching of Christ, not forth envious affection of the preachers, who might be damned themselves, notwithstanding their true doctrine: it is true. And so mind I for the reformed churches. They rejoyce for the many truths you profess•e against Popery, (as we also do the like,) yet may you nevertheless perish for your false constitution, idolatrous worship, popish hierarchy and other transgressions that are among you. Amend your lives therefore, and turn your feet into the ways of peace, for if you rely upon man, an• make •lesh yo•r arm; and will not he•r the word of the Lord that condemneth your iniquities. you sh•ll perish in your sins, & other ch•rches shall not be able to excuse of s•ue you

ARGVMENTS That the PREACHERS of the best assemblies of the church of ENGLAND, are true ministers of Christ. I

TH• pr•achers after whose public & powerful doctrine, of the word do ordinarily follow repē•ance, conversion to God, saving faith in Christ, love to the brethr•n, and o•he• fruits of the spi•it Gal. 5, 6, 22. in the hearers, are true ministers of God and of the visible ch•rc•:

But •fter •he d•ctrine of God's word taught by the preachers of our best asse•bli•s, do ord•narily appear the fruits of the spirit in the hearers.

Th•refore th• preachers of our best assemblies, are true ministers of Christ.

The •roposition is proved, because only the word that God doth send in the ⟨◇⟩ o• his ministers, is ordinarily effectu•ll for these things Ier. 23, 22, Esa. 55 11. Mat, 7, 20, Luk 1, 76 John. 10.1, 2. 1 Cor, 9 1. •, & 4, 15.

Th• assumption is proved by the answer to the assumption of the 4 argume•• ⟨◇⟩ th• church•.

Answer.

OUR separation is from your Church consisting of many assembly• all compact into ore bod•e, and from all your Ministry both prelacy and priesthood. We cannot tell which assemblies or ministers be best; for they that seem best may prove worst, because they most deceive the simple: the wolf that comes in a sheep's coat, is no whit better than he that cometh in his native hiew: but he may do more harm, in that he is disguised. Reason would persuade us, that the Bishops are the preachers of your best assemblies, for they have greatest dignity, fatherhood and authority in your church: they preach in the highest and most honorable assemblies of the land; they are most careful to observe their oath of due obedience, to keep the canon• orders laws and ceremonies of your church and set themselves against such as secretly undermine the state of the church and ministry of England, yet openly stand members and professed friends of the same. They and their assemblies, are best ordered after the constitution and laws of your church. So that to speak as I think, I know not which assemblies be best, where the Leven hath sow red the whole lump; though I can guess which you do mean: but plain dealing about your ministers and as•emblies would have beseemed you best. Tel us therefore (when you next write) what ministers you mean; whether the Bishops, Deans, Doctors &c. that are in the cathedral churches; or the Doctors and Divines that are in your universities; or th• Parsons, Vicars, Lecturers that are in your Parishes? Again what Ministers they be whither Apostles or Prophets or Evangelists or Pastors or Teachers; for all these are ministers, Eph. 4. and meet it is to know your meaning: for though Apostles and Pastors be both ministers ordained of Christ, yet if one will say every Pastor is an Apostle, he is but a liar. So you see it is needful that we ransack these your ambiguous and general terms. Now for your argument; first I answer to the proposition, that though these fruits you mention, do many times follow the doctrine of Christ's ministers, yet not theirs only, nor always Not only because other men that are not in office of Ministry may by exercise of their gifts work such fruits, as appeareth 1 Cor. 14.1.31.3.24, 25. &c. I appeal also to yourselves, whether you think not that your best ministers, though silenced, or degraded, from all ministerial office: may not▪ when they teach, work repentance, faith and other fruits of the spirit.

Neither do these fruits always follow the doctrine of true ministers; for Noah preached 120 years yet followed there not faith, and repentance in the old world: Christ himself preached to Chorazin and Bethsaida; yet left the woe upon them; and complaineth (in Isaiah that he had labored in vain among the Jews: and of Israel it is said, All the day long have I stretched out my hand a disobedient and g•ynsaying people. To reason therefore from the effects, this man wrought faith by his teaching therefore he is a true minister; or this man wrought not faith by his teaching, therefore no true minister; is unsound, and vnconcludable by the scriptures

The proofs of your proposition being examined, will be found to light for your purpose; if you mean that the officers doctrine, only, or always, is effectual for these things, to weat, repentance, faith &c often I know it is; and always it hath effect, either to life or death in the hearers.

Your scriptures are, Ier, 23, 22. which showeth what true prophets should labor to do, namely to turn sinners from their evil way &c, (whereas the false prophets did otherwise, Eze, 13, 22:) but proveth not, that the prophets only did this; for the Priests and Levites did it also Mal, 2, 6, yea private men may often turn their neighbors from evil, Leu 4, 27.8. & 19.17. Prov. 31.26, Mal. 3, 16, Mat. 18.15. I am. 5.19, 20. neither proveth it, that the prophets always did this; for Isaiah crieth, Lord who hath believed our report? Isa. 53.1 and it is written, that the Lord testified to Israel by all the Prophets and by all the Seers, saying, turn from your evil ways &c. nevertheless they would not obey but hardened th•ir necks &c. 2 Ki•, 17, 13, 14

The next place Isa 55.11. showeth the nature of God's word, which is effect••ll to make better or worse as he will that sendeth it: not always t• convert, for Pharaoh was hardened by it: not only by the officers, f•r ••is hono•r is to all the Saints, to have the high acts of God in their m••thes, and a two edged sword in their hands, to execute vengeance in the heathens, and corrections among the people &c. Psal, 149 6, 7.9.

The fruits whereby false prophets are known from true; Mat. 7.0, are not the effects of their doctrine by converting men only; for so many true prophets heretofore should have been judged false: but the doctrine it self, and the works of life and conversation, are the prophets fruits; which also may both be good, in them that have no office at all.

The next place Luk. 1.76. speaketh in part•cular of John's extraordinary office, and work wherein God employed him; and proveth your purpose no more then the other.

*John, 1•, 1, 2. speaketh of lawful enterers into the sheepfold by the door, and of thieves that clime up another way. What this will say for your ministers I know not unless, to prove them thieves; for their entrance into the ministry by the d•ore, that is, by Christ's ordinance i• his church they cannot show; no lawful office or calling have they to witn•sse for them Yea they are ashamed of their office, calling, and entrance by the Bishops, and secretly do disclaym that to their people, & pretend their gifts, graces and effects, for proof of their ministry, <◊ > many of us that have dealt with them; do know: But what say I, secr•lie? nay openly and in print they have yielded, that th•y enter not in by Christ, but by a popish and unlawful vocati•n. The like seemeth •o be closelie implied in these your arguments, where you neither name what office your preachers have, nor how lawfullie they come by it, as the reader may observe.*

The words of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 9.1, 2, & 4.15. show two things, 1 • lawful office of Apostleship, 2 and God's blessing upon his labors in that office: neither of Which can be shown by your ministers; neither proveth it yo•r proposition more then the other places. For I hold with you that God's lawful ministers, are the principal, and most excellent ordinary outward means, for to work repentance, faith, &c. but not the only, as you would have it.

The Assumption, namely, that such effects do follow your preachers doctrine is denied. You refer us for the proof thereof, to that which you wrote before: and I also refer the reader to that which is before answered And here I will add a further demonstration, that true repentance cannot follow your preachers doctrine, in as much as they teach not true repentance, neither can teach it because their mouths are mouzled by your church that they may not speak For thus it hath enacted.

Whosoever shall hereafter affi•me that the form of God's worship in the Church of England established by law, and contained in the book of Common prayer &c. is a corrupt, superstitious or unlawful worship of God, or containeth anything in it, that is repugnant to the scriptures, let him be excommunicated ipso facto; and not restored but by the Bishop of the place, or Archbishop after his repentance and public revocation of such his wicked errors.

Whosoever shall hereafter affirm that the rites and ceremonies of the church of England by law established, are wicked, Antichristian or superstitious, or such as being commanded by lawful authority, men who are zealously and godly affected, may not with any good conscience approve them, use them or as occasion requireth subscribe unto them; let him be excommunicated, ipso facto, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

Whosoever shall hereafter aff•rm that the government of the Church of Eng. under his Majesty by Archbishops, Bishops Deans, Archdeacons and the rest that do bear office in the same, is Antichristian or repugnant to the word of God, let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and so continue until he repent and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

Whosoever shall hereafter affirm or teach that the form and manner of making and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, containeth anything in it that is repugnant to the word of God c let him be excommunicated ipso facto; not to be restored until he repent and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

These and the like constitutions, hath your representative church of England made for maintenance of their worship, ministry, ecclesiastical government, rites ceremonies. &c, against which your forward preachers heretofore so earnestly inveighed, as being corrupt unlawful and antichristian: but now behold their mouths are shut, they may not preach repentance for the many abominations that are among you; if they do, they are excommunicated ipso facto, and then are they neither officers nor members of your church. Wherefore your ministers are either fain to hold their peace, and be such as the Prophet complaineth of, that rise not up in the breaches, nor make up the hedge for the house of Israel, to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord; or else they preach for defense of your own invented worship, pompous clergy, and laudable ceremonies; and are such as the prophet blameth for having seen a vain vision, and spoken a lying divination, saying, the Lord saith it, albeit he hath not spoken. What reward then can they expect for their preaching but as the Lord there threateneth, that his hand shall be upon them, they shall not be in th' assembly of his people, nor written in the writing of the house of Israel. Wherefore if there be any weight or soundness in this your argument, it may be returned upon you thus. The preachers after whose public doctrine do ordinarily follow impenitency, and continuance in an evil and idolatrous estate of life in the hearers, are not the true ministers of God. But after the doctrine of the preachers of your best assemblies, do ordinarily follow and appear impenitency, idolatry and other fruits of the flesh in the hearers: (as is proved by the answer to this and to the assumption of your 4 argument for the churches.) Therefore the preachers of your best assemblies, are not the true Ministers of God.

The 2 Argument

Such Ministers as have promise of salvation in their present standing, are true Ministers of Christ.

But so have the ministers of our best assemblies; Ergo. &c.

Proof of the assumption,

Because the promise of salvation is given to such Ministers as 1, are faithful and wise stewards, giving the household meat in due season Mat, 24, 45. 2. build gold silver or stubble on the foundation 1 Cor 3, 12, 15. 3. continue in taking heed to themselves and unto learning 1 Tim. 4, 16. 4, feed the flock willingly, of a ready mind, as ensamples, 1 Pet. 5.4. 5. turn many souls to righteousness. Dan. 12, 3.6. Ez• 1, 3. Thou shalt save thine own soul.

But these things do the ministers of our best assemblies: Ergo.

Answer.

The assumption of this argument I deny; and will consider the 6. reasons that you bring to prove it.

1. Are faithful and wise stewards &c.] but your ministers are your Lord Bishops stewards or bayliffes, not the Lord Chr•sts: by them the•r m•uthe; are •ened and shut a 〈◊〉. For let them show when, where• & how God gave the st•war•shi• and key of the house to them, as he did to E•akin, Th•s should be first cleared, before they presume to administer as stewards. Did not the Bishop (after they had •romised their reverend obedience unto him) say unto each of them, Rec•ive the holy Ghost wh•se sins thou dost forgive th•y ar forgiven &c, & be thou a faithful dispensour of the word of God, &c? Thus have they their stewardship or •ffice of dispens•tion, fr•m their spiritual Lord, and reverend Father the •relate; who by his presuming to give the Holy Gh•st, should seem to be Christ, or rather, as I think Antichrist: but say you whether he be, when you next write. As is their calling, such is their administration: for, they feed not God's household, but confuse assembly•, wherein are many •rofane, •uch as Christ calleth dogs & swine, unworthy to be at his table; though your stewards admit them to the table of your church, to your most holy actions.

Neither give they them meat in due season; for such diet as is meet for them, to rebuke them for their idolatrous estate, they give them not; false doctr•nes many they give them to feed on and such meats Christ never left for his household. Finally, if the Bishops silence them, & set unpreaching priests in their places, they feed their flocks no longer but leave them to the wolf. And are these your faithful stewards? They are such as was the steward Shebna, to whom the Lord said what hast thou to do• h•r•? I will drive the from thy station. Isa, 22, 15, 19.

2, Build gol• si•uer or stuble on th'fōūda••ō First there is not yet a good foundation laid of your ch•rch; what then is your building? There is no good foundat•on, because your church never yet stroke a holy and orderly covenant with Christ, according to the rules of his testament.

S•condly they ha•e not been called or sent of God to build, but either have intruded themselves, or else by the Bishops, the Lord's of your harvest, have these y•ur laborers been thrist forth.

Thirdly they bu•ld much stubble indeed, little gold or silver that will endure the s•re; let the frame and constitution of your church, the worship, ministry and government thereof, be brought to the trial of God's word, and it w•ll burn these thin•s to ashes. Yet if your min•sters will be content their works shall burn; and will upon the true foundation build better• they •ay through the mercy of God be saved, which I heartily wish unto them all Otherwise, thus saith the Lord; Because th•y hau• deceived my people, saying PEACE and there was no peace; and one built up a wall, and behold the others daubed it with vptempered mortar, say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fallI will destroy the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

3. Continew in taking heed to themselves and unto learn•ng.] First, these words were spoken to one, that had a lawful office, calling and entrance and so serveth nothing for your ministers, that want all these. Secondly by learning is meant teaching of the people, (as the words following also show;) which he willeth Timothy to continue in: but this your ministers do not; for the doctrine that is most needful for the present state of the people, they teach not; besides, if their Lord's the Bishops forbid them, they continue not with their flocks, nor their flocks with them; but another hirel•ng comes in their place.

4. Feed the flock willingly) First Christ's flock is of sheep, not of carnal worldlings, atheists, blasphemers, and other like wild beasts of the forest: Christ would not have his children's bread to be cast unto dogs; as your ministers apply their word and sacraments, to the most profane and their seed.

Secondly to feed importeth also, to rule & govern; but that your ministers do not, both they and their flocks are subject to other Lord's & governors, the Prelates, which love preeminence, and have authority over your church to suspend, silence, and excommunicate priests and people. If the flocks of your Ministers were Christ's sheep, they would not hear the voice of strangers, John, 10.5. But the people of your parishes, if the Bishop depose their shepherd and set a wolf or a blind guide over them they submit unto him, and take him for their priest; and their former shepherd feeds no more, but gives place to the stranger. O idol shepherd, that leaveth the flock Zach, 11, 17.

5. Turn many souls to righteousness.) The contrary is true: they hinder many souls from righteousness, by preaching against the truth and witnesses thereof, by pleading for Baal, and toleration of the evils that are among you

6. Eze 3. Thou shalt save thine own soul.) This was conditional, if he warned the wicked of the evil way wherein he walked; verse. 18.19. &c. which your ministers do not, (as before is shown,) but strengthen the people in an evil way. How then shall they save their souls? Again this was spoken to Ezekiel who had a lawful office, calling & sending from God, verse. 1.4.11. &c. and you should first have proved that your Ministers have these and then you might have spoken of their administration. But seeing they have neither true office, lawful calling, nor good administration: your conclusion is amiss, for the premisses do not prove it.

The 3. Argument.

Those ministers by whom the Saints are gathered, which do the work of the ministry, which edify the body of Christ, are the ministers of Christ. But such are the ministers of our best assemblies: Ergo

The proposition is made manifest by Eph. 4.11, 12, where it approves that these works are proper effects of the public ministry given by Christ: also none can ordinarily build up God's church, but such as God giveth to this end 1 Cor. 3.5, 6, 9, 10.

The assumption is proved, because the ministers of our best assemblies, do gather the Saints from the reprobates, making a manifest separation, and being gathered, do build the body of Christ in godliness, by their ordinary preaching in these assemblies.

Answer.

The assumption or 2, part of your argument that such are the Ministers of your best assemblies, is denied; for these reasons.

1 In Ephes 4. it is said, He, (that is Christ,) gave but your ministers are given by the Bishops: and for disobey•ence to them, are taken away again from your parishes: Christ never gave such hirelings

2. The ministers mentioned in Eph. 4, are Apostle•s Propets Evangelists Pastors and Teachers. Your min•sters are none of these, but Priests, Parsons Vicars, &c. whose very names, besides their offices, calling &c.) show them to be from Antichr•st.

3. Your ministers gather not the Saints, but persecute and scatter them as we know by experience: they gather (or keep being gathered) a cōfused idolatrous multitude, such as is in their parishes: the right way of gathering a church by separation from the world, they know not, or will not acknowledge.

4. They do not the work of Christ's ministry, which is aright to dispense the word, seals, censures &c according to the scriptures: but the work of Antichrists ministry, in reading the service book, marrying, burying, churching of women, & the like; as in your Leiturgie & other church books are set down.

5. They edify not the body of Christ, but build and fortify the tower of Babel their confused assemblies; which were constituted of ignorant idolatrous papists, and other profane, the very body of Antichrist: but the way of truth and such as walk therein, are evil spoken of by your Ministers, as their books, sermons, conferences &c, daily show. For all which reasons, the right conclusion of your argument should be this, that the ministers of your best assemblies. are the ministers of Antichrist.

To prove, your assumption, you give us your bare word, saying they do gather the Saints from the reprobates; making a manifest separatiō &c. This is to prove the same by the same: they do so because they do so; whereas all the world may see, they do not so. For the church of Eng., and parish assemblies thereof, from which we have departed, consist of all sorts of persons; the ministers stand priests by law to the whole parishes, whereof all are partakers of the holy things of God, everyone baptized &c. and can you say, they are not then built in and with your church? And for separation, we know your priests, nor the whole parish, cannot excommunicate any, be they never so blasphemous, wicked or licentious: that power is in the Bishops courts And how few are excommunicated for their heresies, blasphemies, atheism or wicked life, who knoweth not: but for well doing, you have excommunicated many. And further, if any of your ministers should go about to make a separation or gather any other churches or assemblies, then are already by the laws of the land established and allowed they are ipso facto excommunicated, by force of the Canons of your church; made in Anno 1603. Can. 9, 11, 1•. So still the open wicked remain edified with the rest in your church, & there is no such separation, as you against all men's knowledge do pretend. Your argument therefore is no better, then as if Jereboam's priests should thus have pleaded. Those priests that teach Jacob. God's judgments, and Israel his law, that put incense before the face of God, and and b•rnt offerings upon his alter, are the true priests of God: Deut, 33.10 But these things do we: therefore we are true priests. If you say their assum•tion is false; the like is said of yours; and your works plainly prove your assumption most untrue.

The 4. Argument

Those ministers by whose ministry and preaching, the overthrow of the kingdom of Antichrist is effected, are the ministers of Christ. But such are the ministers of our best assemblies: Ergo the true ministers of Christ The proposition is proved, 2 Cor, 10, 4 5.2 Thes 2.8. Reu, 14.6.7.8. & 18 12. & 11, 3, 11.

The assumption is manifest; for that the ministers of our best assemblies have weakened and thrown down and do still fight and prevail against the kingdom of Antichrist, by the power of Christ; 2. Thes, 2, 8, and Satan cannot cast out Satan. Mark. 3.23.

Answer

There is no cause or person so bad, but many have store of such arguments as you bring for your ministers wherein you assume & take for granted that which is most needful to be proved: & if we will not believe your bold affirmation, contrary to our knowledge and the truth of your estate, your ministry hath nothing to justify or confirm it.

The assumption of this argument I deny; for your ministers have not thrown down Antichrists kingdome, but sought rather to hold it up. Here in stead of due proof, you tell us it is manifest, for that the ministers of your best assemblies have weakened &c, the kingdom of Antichrist. Thus again you prou the sae by the saie; & say that is manifest which is most obscur & unknown ūto us: & to discover your falsehood, I will briefly show, how the scriptures that you bring for your propositiō; do disprou your assumptiō.

The weapons of our warfare (saith the Apostle. 2 Cor, 10, 4, 5.) are not carnal but mighty through God, to cast down holds, casting down the imaginations and every high thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God. &c. But the weapons of your ministers warfare, have been carnal, not mighty through God. For against the remaynders of Antichrists kingdom among you, they have sued to Parliaments, that the arm of fleeh might throw down the prelates, their courts, and corruptions but when the state hath not hearkened to them, what have your ministers done but submitted themselves to their spiritual Lord's; or at least wise ceased their warfare against them; and in their sermons and writings, have turned the edge of their sword against us that have departed from Babylon And what have they thrown down by their preaching these half hundred years? Is there any of their Romish abuses, that they have got reformed? any one of the rabble of Antichristian officers, courts, canons &c. cast out of the Church? Nay themselves now are cast out, if they speak or write anymore against them, as they did in times past. Do not all their people stand still in subjection under that Liturgy, prelacy, priesthood and popish ecclesiastical government which were set over them at the first? They have warred with the Antichristians, as did Israel with the Canaanites; when they were mixed among them, and learned their works, and served their idols, which were their ruin. Therefore are these enemies, become thorns to the sides, and pricks to the eyes of your best ministers and people, vexing them in the land wherein they dwell; as God did threaten Num. 33, 55.

So when th' Apostle saith 2 Thes, 2.8. that the Lord shall consume (Antichrist with the spirit of his mouth, and abolish him with the brightness of his coming; may we not hereby learn, that God's spirit is not in your ministers mouths, seeing they have not consumed or abolished, the Antichristian prelacy, and other abominations of that man of sin? nay it is evident they maynten Antichrist, for have they not all, received their ministry from the prelates & promised obedience to their ordinaris, yet your preachers wer woēt to say the prelates ar Antichristiā. Again if your ministers had in them the spirit of the Lord's mouth, they would ere this time, have made a separatiō from the wicked, popish, & sinful generation, for God said unto Jeremiah, if thou take away the precious from the vile, thou shall be as my mouth. But this doctrine of separation, your ministers will neither teach, nor suffer to be taught; but lock up the kingdom of heaven as much as they can, that men may not enter: they blame us for nothing so much, as for separation, when nothing is more needful to be done, if we will keep the covenant of our God, and maintain that war which his own Majesty first proclaimed, between the woman's seed, and the ser•ents, Gen. 3, 15. so unlike your ministers be to the mouth of God. As unlike they are also to those Angels and witnesses Reu. 18. & 14. & 11. wh•ch cried the downfall of Antichrists pompous church and ministry, and called all God's children out of it, saying Go cut of her my people; but your ministers cry that men should tarry within, as the potters, that contrary to God's commandment dwelt with the king (of Babel) for h•s work: and such as are gone out, they labor to bring back again, saying that with them is the true doctrine of salvation; their errors ar not fundamental their corruptions abolish not from Christ, all reformed churches ap•roue of the•r church and ministry: and many such Babylonian songs, have we heard among them And whereas in Re•, 14 there followed an Angel, that with a loud voice threatened all those that worshipped the beast and his image and received his mark in forehead or in hand; your ministers themselves stand under that wrath, whiles the mark of the beast is so open in the•r foreheads, by that false ministry of priesthood which they have received from the Bishops whose unlawful authority and jurisdiction they submit unto and teach men to do the like in wh•ch respect they cannot excuse themselves from worshipping the Beast, seeing that hierarchy and prelacy' is by the light of God's word and by the a•testation of the Christian reformed churches, and by your own confession heretofore, found to be Antichr•stian; if the Pope be Anti•hris•, & R•me be the throne of the Beast. Thus men may see that your ministers are far from overthrowing Antichrist kingdom & yourself have shown a good reason why: Satan cannot cast out Satan.

The 5. argument.

THose ministers which are the savior of death to the wicked, and life to the godly, are the true ministers of Christ, 1 Cor. 2.16.

Such are the ministers of our best ass•mblies. Ergo true ministers of Christ.

Answer.

THis naked argument, hath not a ragg to help to cover the falsehood of the a••umption; wherefore •t may soon be stripped and let go. I dispr•ue that which you have as•umed th•s.

Your min•sters are not the savior of death to the wicked, because they suffer them in the bosom of the•r church; by their sacraments and blessin•s, confirm them in their sins, do not excommunicate the profane or vicious liver, but let them remain in mixture with the rest, and plead for such a people, to be the true church of God.

They are not the savor of life to the godly because they preach not the way of l•fe tr•ely, by separating from idolaters and idolatry, and gathering to a h•lie communi•n in the faith and obedience of the gospel.

B•t while• they persecute, preach, and write against God's children, which pr•ctise the or•inances of his covenant, and by fayr pretexts and tolerable reasons, seek to draw them back to their confused assemblis they are l•ke those whom the Lord reprov'd thus; And will ye pollute me among my people, for hand•uls of barley, and fr• pieces of bread. and to stay the souls of them that should not die, and to give life to the soul• that should not live, in lying to my people, that hear your lies? Ezek 13.19.

The 6. Argument.

These ministers that are hated of all men for the sake of Christ, are the true ministers of Christ; 1 Cor. 4, 9, 10.11..12.13.. 2. Cor. 6.4.5, 6.8.. Mat. 10:•2. Such are the ministers of our best assembly, Therefore true ministers of Christ.

The MINOR is proved, for that th•y are hated of the most part, and of the most evil of all sorts, as were the Apostles and desciples of Christ.

Consider what I say, •nd the Lord give thee understanding in all things, 2 Tim, 2.7.

Answer.

THis your last reason comes all too late, and will help your ministry nothing, For by the discussing of your former arguments We have seen that your ministers c•nnot prove their office, calling or entrance into the sheepfold, by Christ neither administer they according to his testament, but after their own invented leit•rgie laws, and Cannons, So that if they be hated of all men in respect of their ministry, they are not hated for Christ's sake; seeing they have none of his ministry, hated it may be they ar• of many; so, are Fr•ars and Monks, and the rest of Anti-christs clergy, so it is written that the † whore shall be hated, made desolate and naked, her flesh eaten and she burned with fire; but it is the cause, not the suffering which makes the martyr, Whereas therefore your minor is proved by a bare affirmation only, that so it is; (as is your manner of disputing; you must take a better course, and prove things otherwise, ere we, will yield: for the Arian, and Anabaptists, and all sorts of religion, will Plead that both they and their ministers are hated for Christ's sake: but every tree is known by its fruits.

Yet have yea no such cause to complain of hatred; for the ministry of your Church; is aproued and rejoiced for, (as yourself while are said, (of all the, foreign reformed Churches in the world; and at home we know, how it is revered, honored and obeyed. Your chiefest ministers being acknowledged for spiritual Lord's, and right reverend Fathers; the inferior priests, as sound and excellent Divines, followed and flockked after by the people. And how they are provided for by rich Bishopricks. & fat benefices, all over the Land; besides their daily entertainment, at great and rich men's tables; who is there among you that knoweth not, These are not signs of hatred.

Therefore let him that readeth consider indeed what you have said; and the Lord give him understanding in all things.

O England

ISRAEL thy Prophets are like the foxes in the wast places, Ezek. 13.4.

Positions concerning a true Church

INTending to set down some arguments against the corrupt estate of the present church of England; I thought it profitable to prefix some few positions, as a ground, whereby thou mayest (good reader;) judge the better of that which shall be said. Yet mean I not to handle this point at large, which in so many other writings thou moist profitably read: but only to observe such principal things as may give light unto the simple, who many of them mistake this doctrine of the Chur•h, and erring once, are •y seducers further led astray The Lord reduce all hi• that err, and stablish his servants in the truth forever.

THIS our English word Church, through custom of speech is commonly used for the Temple or place where people come together for the worship of God: but they that are any th•ng excercised in religion, know, that it also signifieth the People, which gather together for divine service; and this is the •irst and proper meaning of the word Chur•h, as it is used to express the original scripture terms, Kahal and Ecclesia.

2. This name Church, we English men (which c•me of the Saxons) have received from the Saxon, German, and Duitch comes Cyri•, Kirch, Kerck; whereby those nations now, do usually call their Temples or meeting-places: but the people which come together in them, they call the Gemeine, and the Gemeinte, that is to say, the Communialtie; & we in our first English Bibles called it, the Congregation.

3. As all religion is learned out of holy scriptures, so the name and doctrine of the church, is from thence to be deduced; and there the Church is called in Hebrew Kahal or Kehillab, which signifieth a Convocation or Assemblie of people, and Ghnedah, that is to say a Congregation: in Greek it is named Ecclesia, that is in like manner, a Conuocation or people called forth to an assembly, and sometime Synag•gee, that is a Congregation: which word is also used for the place where•n the people assembled.

4 The Hebrew word Kahal is diversely used; sometimes more generally for a great or universal multitude, as of nations and of pe••les sometimes more particularly for an a••embly of one nation: as of the Israelites; sometimes for apart of them, as the Elders and Governors; or some of the tribes of Israel apart; or some of all the tr•bes, even men, women and children: and indifferently for any assembly, and this not only of God's people, but of heathens also & infidels.

5. Likewise the Greek word Ecclesia is of as large extent and signification; used sometime for the church •enerally, sometime for a particular church or congregation in a city: someti•es more •articula•lie in a house or family, sometimes (in the Greek version of the old test•meant) for an as•embly of Governors, or company of Prophets, or congre•at•on of the people: and finally for any as•embly lawful or unlawful, of good men or of evil.

6. These words thus genreall, are in more special sort both by the scriptures, and by use of speech among all religious peole restrained and applied to such Assemblies and congregations as are called and gathered for divine excercises: and so our English name of church is attributed peculiarly to spiritual or religious assemblies, called ecclesiastica•• and not to any other assemblies civil or pol•t•call.

7. Of religious or ecclesiastical assemblies generally considered, there ar many s•rts in the world, all disalowed of god, save one sort only which he acknowledgeth to be his, and hath separated to himself from all the rest.

8. The many false sorts, may be reduced unto fowr; 1 The as•emblies of Pagans or heathen people, which profess•e some God, God's, or, Goddesses, whom they do worship, ignorantly, having cha•ged the truth of God into a lie, and so serving creatures, not (indeed) the creator, which is blessed forever. Amen. 2 The assemblies of Jews who profess the true God (after a s•rt) and allow the writings of Moses a•d the prophets, b•t abhor Christ Jesus our Savior, and reject the new testament, 3 The a••emblies of *Mahomis*s, as Persians, Turks, Moors, &c. wh•ch profess also after their manner, that one true God of whom Moses and the prophets wrote, and acknowledge Chr•st to be a Pro•het sent of God, yea and the breath or s•irit of God yet believe •hey not that he is God, or the son of God, or savior of the world, but follow the lies and fablies of their false prophet Mahomet. 4. Finally the churches or assemblies of false Christians, which profess God and •i• Son Christ, into whose name they are baptized; but by their works do deny him, and by their errors and heresies, do overthrow the truth of rel••ion.

9. The 1 thre•e sorts, P•gans, Jews, and Mahometists, beca•se of thei• so open and manifest d•ny all of Christ and salvation by him, are generally generally of Christians reputed as no Churches, the la•ter are re•uted no true but *false church*s, and so also do they esteem of true Christians, and one of another Herevpon is continual controversy be•ween true •nd and false chr•stians, which is the true church, and how it •ay be known.

10. To help the weak and doubtful in this case, I will so truly and plainly as by the grace of God I can, describe the tr•e Church, which in the holy scr••tures is called the Congregation and chur•hof God, consisting of godly and holy peole named Saints; opposed to the wicked or *malignant church*s, the Synagoues of Satan.

11. The true church is a people called of God by the Gospel, from the world, unto the communion or fellowshi• of his son Jesus Chr•st, in whom they are coupled and built together. to be the habitation of God by the spirit

12 The church is said to be a people, nation or generation, because it consisteth of many persons, or of a multitude little or great: for though a particular Christian is called, and of the church; yet no man is a church or congregation,

13. It is a people called; because every concourse or assembly is not a true church: none of themselves can come unto this estate, unless they be called or drawn thereunto: and they are said to be called of God, because he only calleth and draweth men unto Christ with a holy calling; and addeth them to his church, no human power or authority is able to do it,

14. The Gospel noted to be the means of our calling, he maketh known unto his people outwardly by his word spoken and written, and inwardly by his holy spirit: and thus the Church are all the taught of God.

15. The state out of which the Church is called, is said to be out of or from the world, whereby is meant, first Satan the Prince of this world, from whose power they are turned unto God; secondly, the wicked people of the world, called the children of the Devil, from whose communion and fellowship in their religion, and all other wicked actions, we must be separated, thirdly, the corruption of nature in our selves, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, all which are of the world. and which we must hate and crucify, & so turn and become like little children, even borne again, that we may see the kingdom of God

16. The estate whereunto God called his church in this life, is generally to the communion (or fellowship) of his son Jesus Christ, as being their only mediator and Savior, the Prophet Priest and King of the church; which they believing and professing, are all made partakers (in a proportion and in their measure) of these three offices with him

17. Jesus Christ is the Prophet raised up of God unto his people to teach them all that God commanded him which also he did, both by himself, and by the Ministry of his servants sent of him. And as all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid in him, so him the church must hear; for all heavenly wisdom and knowledge is to be learned of him; and every person which shall not hear this Prophet, shall be destroyed out of the people.

18, This Prophet call office of Christ, he hath communicated with the church, by giving to the same his word for their instruction and comfort, and grafting the same within them, his spirit also as an Anoynting to teach them all things giving gifts also, or ministers, to open and apply the same unto their souls, likewise power and freedom by witness profession and practice, to hold forth that word of life as lights in the world: thereby to preach unto others the faith of Christ, to edify and build up one another daily therein, to provoke unto love and to good works. to admonish and reprehend for evil and iniquity; to forgive and comfort one another in the bowels of Christ, whose word therefore all ought to labor that it may dwell plenteously in them, that if any man speak, it may be as the words of God.

19. Jesus the son of God, is also the great high priest or Sacrificer of the Church by whose obedience, and sacrifice or oblation of his own body and blood, the church is cleansed from all sin, and reconciled to God: by whose intercession the church, with the holy actions & oblations of the same, are accepted of God, and made heirs of blessing.

20. And this his Priestly office, is imparted to his church, as they have not only interest in his death and sufferings whereby they are reconciled to God, but also are themselves made a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by him: giving up their own bodies a living sacrifice; mortifying their members which are on earth and crucifying the flesh with the affections and lusts; offering up contrite and broken hearts, with sacrifices of praise confessing to his name; and praying not only every man for himself, but one for another, doing good and distributing to the necessities of the Saints, suffering affliction for the Gospel and finally if they be called thereunto, pouring out their souls unto death for the truths sake.

21. The Lord Jesus Christ, is also the governor and king over Zion God's holy mount, and sitteth at his Fathers right hand and reigneth till all his enemies be made his footstool, being a King, judge, and lawgiver, to his people, commanding and ruling them by his word and spirit, judging them in justice and equity, preserving and defending them by his almighty power, from all their enemies.

22. And this his kingly office he so communicateth with his church; as they are by him preserved and defended from all adversary Power, freed from the dominion of sin and tyranny of Satan from subjection to the world, and servitude unto men: and restored to the joyful liberty of the Children of God, the world and all things in it made theirs: that howsoever they have still to combat with the Devil to wrestle against principallities & powers: to suffer hatred & affliction of the world; and to war with the fleshly lusts, which fight against the soul: yet neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor principallities, nor powers, nor, things present nor things to come nor, height nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate them from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord; who hath made them Kings and Priests unto God even his father, and they shall reign on the earth, till their resurrection here their time, they come to reign with him in glory, in the heavens forever

23. Unto the participation of these promises and heavenly graces, are all peoples invited by the Gospel preached; and such as obey the calling of God, and come unto Christ, are united unto him their head and mediator, from whom proceedeth the Justification and sanctification of the Church.

24. Justification is the partaking of Christ's justice or righteousness, in his fulfilling and obeying the law of God, and discharging all our debts and trespasses by his death; so freeing us from the curse, and setting us in full favor with God and under his blessing: which righteousness of Christ's, is fully made ours, and imputed to us by faith for our justification,

25. Sanctification is the partaking of Christ's holiness by being grafted with him to the similitude of his death and resurrection; whereby the corruption of nature or old man in us, becometh crucified and buried with him; and the new man or image of God is put on and renewed daily in a holy conversation.

26. H•th•rto of the Churches union and communion with Christ her head: now followeth the union of the churches member•, one with another: which is their• cou•ling together as one body by the communion of one and the same spirit, faith, and love,

27. The union of the members one with another is to be considered generally or totally; and particularly. Generally as the ch•rch is called universal or ca•holik, comprehending the whole family of God in heaven and in earth, and the fraternity or brotherhood of all Christians which are •n the world: in whom there is but one faith, in one and the same God by that one Lord Ies•s Christ, throu•h one Sp•rit. Thus have they all one Father which is God; one mother, Jerusalem which is above, and by the mediation of Chr•st are all made one, baptized by one spirit into one body, and all made to drink into one spirit.

28 More Particularly, they that are called of God, and members o••he Church universal, are united and gathered into many churches or congregatiōs, in several cities & countr•es: every of which churches being joined together in the profession and practice of the Gospel of Christ, have his power and presence with them, and is to conuene or come together in one for the worsh•p of God, and performance of public duties

29. Whatsoever promise or blessing of God, is bestowed on the church on earth generally considered: the same may be apprehended & enjoyed by every particular church, (though not in like measure by all: as the promises general, and examples particular of the church, in Corinth, and others mentioned in the scr•pture, do confirm.

30. The Testament of Christ showeth us no Prouintiall, National, Em•erial, or other l•ke Church, having several meetings or a•semblies, and special Pastors over the same: neither, since th• Apostles Prophets & •vangelists were taken from this world, are there any other lawful Bishops or Church-governors, then the Bishops or Overseers of the particular churches; neither ever was there other lawful Head, Lord, or Lord's spiritual, of the Church, then Jesus Chr•st alone.

31 Unto the ch•rch are to be admitted, all unto whom the covenant and promise of God doth apperteyn; and they are so many as the Lord our God shall call; and all those are called (in the judgment of man,) which having heard the word of God, do profess repentance from dead works, and faith in God, by Jesus Christ the alone Savior of •he world, and promise obedience to the word, through the holy Ghost the sanctifier of the elect. Such of all sorts and estates of people in the world, are with their seed to be received into, and nourished •n the church; their ignorance being holpen by instruction, their weakness borne by lenity, their faults corrected i with love and meekness; and their feeble consciences comforted with the promises of God.

3•. Out of the Ch•rch are all s•ch to be kept, as are profane, worldly and wicked, until they be called of God unto repentance & faith in his promise: and out of it are to be cast all such as sin against the law of Go•, by error or corruption, in doctrine or conversation; and will not by pr•uate or public admonition, be reclaimed and amended

33; Every particular church or congregation throughout the world hau•ng equal interest in Christ, and in his word or covenant: consequently ha•e equal power. and ought to have a l•ke care; to practice all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, standing fast in the l•berty where with Christ hath made them free.

34, Everyone that would be saved, ought to join himself unto some particular church, where God's name is se•, and known, and called upon: that in and with the same, he may grow up in the fa•th, and love of Christ unto salvation.

35. Although the church consisteth only of s•ch as are called, yet these are of two sorts, some outwardly only and for a time, which though they be in the church yet are they not indeed of the Church; othersome called also inwardly effectually and forever. So that the churches on earth, have many hypocrites and reprobates for members of them: whose secret sins, defile themselves alone. Howbeit the Lord knoweth them that are his; & a true Christian may by the word <◇> spirit of the Lord, and fruits of his faith, have assurance that himself is the Lord's; of others, he is for their outward good profession and conversation which he seeth, to hope and judge as of himself, leauin• the final doom and judgment, until the Lord come, who will l•hten things that are hid in darkness and make the counsels of the harts manifest; and will reward every man according as his works shall be

36, The best churches on eart are always subject to have open & grievous sinas of all sorts, break out in them: all which •niquitie• m•st speedily be redressed, and every church purged by repentance or casting out of the impenitent; least wrath do come on all the congregation,

37. For churches by sinning and impenitence therein, may forfeyt their covenant, and be forsaken of God; and for their adulteries by d•uorced from Christ, and so left of his people, the candlestick being removed out of the place.

38, By this which hath been said, may appear, that every people called of God into covenant and communion, with Christ, and one with another, and, so walking, though with much weakness, ignorance and daily syn; is to be esteemed a true church of God: but they that are not so called and come into covenant with the Lord, howsoever they may profess many excellent truths, yet want they the main essential thing which, makes a true church.

39, A church thus having the essence or being: by ref•rence unto or conjunction with Christ, which is a secret and spiritual thing; cannot now as it is a church, properly be seen with carnal eye Whereas then the church is said to be visible, it is figuratively spoken, and after a sort; to weet so far as by a people's profession and conversation seen or heard, men may discern and judge, by the rules of God's word

40. As Christ the head and savior of his body, cannot be found or known by the wit or wisdom of man, but by the revelation of God: so the Church which is his body kingdom and spouse, ca•ot be discerned by natural or human skill, but by the manifestation of God alone through his word and spirit.

41, Hence it is that the true churches of God, are both contemned and condemned of the world as heretics, schismatiks, sedetious, &c. when the false antichristian assemblies are highly honored and regarded. For they wh•ch understand not the word of God, (wh•ch natural men do not,) nor have the spirit of God, (which natural men have not) how should they rightly judge of, or discern the Church of God?

42. And Satan to deceive the simple, doth deck his synagogues with many ornaments of the church of Christ, as the preaching of the word, prayers, sacraments discipline c he procureth them also honor amplitude and prosperity: when from the true church ofttimes he taketh not only outward peace and glory; but bereaveth the same of Christ's public ministry of the word and sacraments; by, persecuting, imprisoning, banishing and killing the officers of the Church, and scatteting the members.

43. Yet is not Satan's synagogue for all the pomp thereof, a church of God; because it inioyeth and useth not his word and holy things aright according to his heavenly ordinance, Neither can the true churches be spoiled or deprived of the word of God, which is graffed in them, and able to save their souls, is seed immortal and endureth forever: but in the mids of their many afflictions, they both hold forth that word of life, as lights unto the world; and by the same do edify and comfort one another, in the faith and fear of God; whose power and presence they have with them in all estates and places.

44 So to conclude, a true church is a sacred communially, consociate and knit together into a mystical body, whose head is Christ; whose members, Christians of any nation or condition; whose soul is the word and whose spirit is the spirit of the living God: who gathereth together dry desolate bones, layeth synewes on them, makes flesh to grow, and covereth them with skin, and putteth breath in them that they may live, and stand upon their feet an exceeding great army Unto him for all his blessings, be praise in his churches throughout all generations; Amen & Amen.

ARGVMENTS Disprouing the present estate and constitution of the CHURCH of ENGLAND

[I] EVERY true Church, is the body of Christ, and hath him for the head thereof: For •t is wr•tten, (God) hath appointed him over all •h•ngs the head of the church which is his body Eph, 1, 22, 23 and again, to the church of Corinth it is said, y• are the b•dy of Christ 1 Cor, 12, 27.

But the church of England, is not the body of Christ, neither hath him for the h•ad thereof. Because, it wa• first constituted as now it standeth, of the members of Antichrist; namely the idolatrous Pap•sts, which openly professed Antichristian sme in Q. Mary's days, ha•ing Abadden the Pope for their head; and spilled much Christian blood, that they might maintain their Romish abominations. Who all (except some few that of themselves refused,) were at the beginning of Q. Elisabeths reign, rece•ued into the body of the church, and so have continued, they and their seed ever since. Yet did they not then, enter in by repentance and faith in Christ, (which two things are the beginning and foundation of the kingdom of God,) but by the commandment of the Magistrate, were compelled unto the Church, sacraments, ministry &c. which then were by law establ•shed and ever since continewed. Now the Magistrates law, cannot work faith in any; seeing faith is the gift of God, and by his word only is wrought in man's heart So that the Magistrate though he ou•th to abolish idolatr•e, and set up God's true worship, to suppress all errors, and cause the truth to be taught, yet cannot he constreyn men to join unto the church, but they must do it willi•gly and gladly, the Lord persuading them hereunto. And these, (of whom we speak) not being persuaded by the Lord and his word, but (•s the worldly multitude always is,) be•ng ready to receive any religion the prince wo•ld establish, rather than they would suffer persecution, wherein that their popish estate, the body of Antichrist, yet then compelled and vn•ted unto this church. Again, not only those that were popishly <◊> and superstitious; but such also as were profane and irreligi•ous, atheists, blasphemers, whoremongers, thieves, drunkards, witches, and all other ungodly persons, of which then were and still are too too many in the land these all, though by reason of their wicked and miserable estate, •hey w•rlimmes of Satan, and (as the scripture calleth such,) children of the Devil, were yet received, into the Church likewise, they and •heir seed & so continue; as the state of that Church plainly showeth. For e•en to this day, profane people, mockers and contemners of religion, tha• blaspheme God and his holy name even in the streets as they walk; such as cal themselves the donned crew, Familists, Athe•sts, and all other sorts of miscreants and wicked livers, are members of the Church of En•land, united with the body and partakers of the sacraments, and other holy act•ons of the same.

Now these children of wrath, this sinnfull generation, cannot possibly be members of the body of Christ, nor have him for their head, seeing they are not partakers of his life and spirit, nor called to his faith, neither admitteth he any such unto him until they repent; he hath no cōcord with Belial, therefore not with the children of Belial: the members of his glorious body must not be the dead, st•nking, and abominable members of Satan Light and darkness, heaven and hell, will as soon be united together. Neither will it be enough to say that some are affected to reli•ion, are of better life, and conversation &c. and that for their sakes, the residew are sanct•fied, and may be joined unto, and reputed Christ's body and Church: for they that profess more sincerity, yet are not come to a true •rofe•sion of the Gospel, or reno•ncing of Idolatry; but after the•r false and popish manner, worship God with the rest, remaining one body one Church with them. Now we are taught of God that the religious are so far from sanctifying the wicked, as contrariwise the wicked do pollute them, whatsoever the unclean person toucheth saith the Lord,) shall be unclean, and the person which toucheth him shall be unclean: • wherefore come out from among them, and separate yourselves, and touch no vncl•ane thing, and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord almighty. So then the religious and well affected people must separate from the rest, if they would be acknowledged of God for his and not think by their holiness, to sanctify the profane.

Again, it is as easy to make peace & agreement between Christ & the Diuill, as between Christ and such open obstinate sinners, the children of the Devil; yea it overturneth at once the first promise of salvation made by God, and so the very ground of Christian religion. For when God first promised redemption to mankind; it was by Christ the seed of the woman that should crush the serpents head, who in due time appeared for this purpose, that he might loose the works of the Devil; & destroy and abolish him And as then the Lord put enmity between Christ and the serpent so did he also between him and the serpents seed that is wicked men, which being children of the Devil would take the Devils part to hate and kill Christ, and root out his children and religion: according to which decree and word of his Father, our Lord Jesus set himself not only against the Serpent. but against such wicked men also, as would not be turned from their impiety; therefore he saith by his prophets Do not I hate them that hate thee ô Lor? &c, I hate them with an unfeigned hatred, as they were my utter enemies. I hate the assembly of evil doers, and company not with the wicked; Betimes will I destroy all the wicked of the land, that I may cut off all the workers of iniquity from the city of the Lord; Three shepherds I cut of in one month, and my soul loathed loathed them, and their soul abhorred me: with many such like speeches, throughout the scriptures; whereby Christ shown how far he was and would be, from being head unto such wretches, or any way admitting them unto his body, or the communion of his Church. And for his arch-enemy the Roman Antichrist and his adherents, the Lord Jesus Faithful and true that judgeth and warreth righteously, he with his heavenly warriors after him, fighteth with that Beast, and with the kings of the earth that make battle against him; and is so far from peace with them, as he giveth unto all the fowls of heaven for to eat, the flesh of the Kings & his captayns, the flesh of mighty men, and of horses and those that sit on them, the flesh of all freemen and bondmen, of small and great; and casteth the beast into the lake of fire. By this may appear that Christ is no head of such Antichristians, nor of any other profane wicked worldlings; seeing his spirith gives them not life and motion, but they are carried by the spirit of Satan that possesseth them; and warred against with the sword that cometh out of Christ's mouth neither can they be knit unto him by joints or bands; as all his body and members thereof are: & consequently that the Popish and profane multitude of the Realm of England, which at Q. Mary's death, were made and esteemed a Church; and they and their seed ever since without separation so continewing; and at this day all the notorious wicked still commingled with the rest; that this Church cannot be said to have Christ for the head, neither is it his body.

Therefore the Church of England, is not the true Church of God.

[II] EVERY true Church of God, hath Christ for the mediator and Advocate of the same. For it is written there is one God, & one mediator between God & man, which is the man Christ Jesus; and if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the just. Neither is there salvation in any other; for among men there is given no other name under heaven, whereby we must be saved, Act. 4.12.

But the Church of England hath not Christ for the mediator and Advocate of the same, Because, Christ is not Mediator of any other covenant or testament, then that which God promised by his prophits to make with the house of Israel, nor of any other people, then of such as are under that covenant promised, which was that he would put his law in their inward parts (or mind) and write it in their hearts, and he would be their God, and they should be his people, and that he would forgive their iniquity, and remember their sins no more. Of this new testament or covenant, established upon better promises then was the old, is Christ the Mediator, (as the Apostle teacheth) and not of any other human or profane covenant, made by or among the sons of Adam. Now that the Church of England, (as it is publicly and generally constituted,) is not as yet come under this covenant, may appear by the particular conditions of the same. First, let the exceeding profaneness and irreligion that is among them, the open contempt of God, blaspheming of his name, despising of his word, and innumerable wicked acts, without fear or shame committed, besides the idolatrous false worship performed by all in their public assemblies, according to their stunted popish leitoargie, learned and received from the Roman Antichrist: let these (I say) and the like, speak to every Christian conscience, whither God's law be written in the mind or inward parts of such, which is one part of the covenant, whereof Christ is Mediator; and which grace he promised by his Prophets to bestow upon his Church and people, when he should be their God: and when the grace of God, that bringeth salvation unto all men, did appear; it taught so much.

Secondly, that this church of England, hath no promise that their sins and iniquities are forgiven, which is another part of the covenant, appeareth by their impenitency in this evil estate. For the profane, scoff at repentance, and scorn all admonition, they despise wisdoms counsel, and such as reprove, they turn again and rent them. And for the idolatries and false worship of the whole; the great iniquities in the hierarchy ministry, orders, rites, ceremonies &c, they are far from repentance which will here no reproof, nor suffer any to speak against their corruptions, but have generally agreed and decreed such to be excommunicated, as shall affirm any of these things to be wicked or idolatrous; and they that would call them to repentance for their sins, or refuse to communicate with them in these evils, are persecuted, imprisoned, banished, and have long suffered at their hands many calamities. And all people are forced by fair and colorable pretenses or by threatening and punishments, to walk still in these sins. Thus want they the foundation of repentance from dead works, and consequently of faith towards God for without repentance there is no promise of pardon; & without promise, there can be no faith; and without faith; no covenant or testament confirm with them or their seed, as all the scriptures show; & if no Covenant, then also no Mediator.

Thirdly, that the sum of the Covenant, (namely I will be their God and they shall be my people;) is wanting also unto these, may be seen by their estate compared with the Apostles doctrine, who upon this promise, presently inferreth a coming out, and separation of themselves, from the world, if they would have the Lord to receive them. Which separation from the ungodly, as it was not at the first constituting of this Church observed, so unto this day it is resisted, and pleaded against, and the holy scriptures unsufferable abused to mayteyn a confuse mixed multitude of all sorts of people to be a true church. But, Christ is no Mediator for such a mixture, as himself said to his Father I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me for they are thine; and they are not of the world, as I am not of the world.

Fourthly the Church of England is not under this covenant, because every covenant is made upon conditions willingly agreed and assented unto on both parties, as was in that covenant made between God and the Israelites of old. For God being a spirit, must be covenanted with & worshipped in spirit, he requireth the heart and mind, which if it be not freely given him, all religion is in vain. But this hearty and willing submission foretold to be, and seen in God's people heretofore, was not seen in this Church, which was by law of man compelled, not by love of Christ constrained to enter into this communion and religion, at the beginning of Q Elis reign, as in the former argument is shown. Such complusion unto religion, where God persuadeth not the heart, maketh men hypocrites, not true Christians: which not only God's word, but even l•ght of reason teacheth, as Themistius a Philoso•her acknowledged, when he said of state professors, that follow the Emperors religions, that they worship not God, but the purple robe, that is the authority and persons of Pr•nces.

Moreover the church of England hath not Christ for their Mediator, because they cannot come unto God by him, nor have assurance by faith that he maketh intercession for them; for that they offer unto God, a worship or service which themselves have made and taken by im•tation out of Ant•christs Massebook; which Leit•rgie or Divine seru•ce, having in it also many erroneous, superstitious and idolatrous ordi•ances, rites, and ceremonies,) being not required of God, nor warrantable by Christ's testament; they read out of their book daily in their a•semblies, and offer or obtrude •t upon God. By means whereof they also extinguish the true way of calling upon God, by the help of his sp•rit, (as the Apostle teacheth; and bring in a fleshly and dead kind of service, reading other men's words instead of their own praying and calling on the name of the Lord. Which human devise, is contrary to the second commandment, that forbiddeth us to make or submit unto any similitude or likeness of anything in heaven, earth or under the earth, in matters concerning the worsh•p of God. And it, being against the old covenant or testament, which Christ hath confirmed unto every •od and ⟨ϕ⟩; against the new testament also, which calleth us unto a worship of God, in spirit and truth: hath no promise to be sanctified by Christ's Med•ation, who sanctifieth no idols, nor idol service or false worshi•, but contrariwise hath testified, their offerings of blood, will I not offer, nor by make mention of their names with my lips. For as much then, as the people which worshippeth, is not the called, justified, sanct•fied pe•ple of G•d; but an unlawful c•mmixture ⟨ϕ⟩ fall sorts of •ers•ns, and forasmuch as the worship itself which they read with and before •he holy bible, and thrust upon God whither he like it or not, is a false dead and vain invented worship of their own, not commanded of God not justifiable by his word: it cannot be by the doctrine of the scripture or a any prom•ses therein, that Christ should be Mediator for such worship or worship•rs, or put any odors unto such prayers.

Therefore the church of England is not the true church of God.

EVERY true church of God, hath Christ for the Prophet of the same For of ⟨ϕ⟩ it is written, I will raise them up a Prophet from among th•ir brethren [III] &c. and every person which shall not hear that Prophet shall be desered ⟨ϕ⟩ the people. Dut, 18.18. Act, 3 23.

But th••hurch of England hath not Christ for the Prophet of the same. Because it hath neither himself in his own person, to teach them, (for he is now in he•en, and there must be until the time that all things be restored;) neither hath it his appointed ordinan•e of teaching by prophesy or office; which if it had, Christ were the Prophet of the same, as himself said if I send any, he that receiveth him receiveth me. The church of England h•th not Christ's ordinance of prophesy without office; for it is unknown, vnpractised, and unsufferable among them, for private men to preach in their assemblies, they must be ministers allowed by the Ordinary, else it is punishable by the law of their church, though by the law of Christ, all men may prophesy in his church, which is to speak to edifying, to exhortation and to comfort, and all men are exhorted to covet this more than other spiritual gifts. 1. Cor. 14 verse. 31.3.1.39, Neither hath the church of England Christ's appointed officers to teach, which are set down in scripture to be these, Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists Pastors, and Teachers, Ephe 4.11. (Of which the first three served for the first publishing of the gospel throughout the world; the latter two continue still unto the worlds end,) but instead of these it hath the hierarchy and ministry of Antichrist to teach the same; namely Metropolitan Archbishops, Lord Bishops, Deans &c. Priests; and Deacons; which is none of Christ's Ministry, either in name, office, calling, administration or maintenance, but the very ministry of the man of sin as he left it in the land, and as is to be seen at this day in Rome and other his dominions, and in the laws and canons of the popish church, where are all the offices that now be in England. Thus having not the ministry given of Christ, but a different ministry given of Antichrist, it followeth also by proportion from Christ's words, saying he that receiveth him (that I send) receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me: that the church of England receiving such as Antichrist the Pope did send hath received Antichrist himself, and so hath entertained him for their Prophet and not Christ.

Now where it is objected, that there are many excellent truths publicly taught in this church and by this ministry of England; it is answered that is not enough unless it were taught in and according to the ordinance of God. For false Prophets teach much truth, as is to be seen among Papists, Anabaptists, Arians, and other like heretics. And as the moral good works which heathens do, in honoring their parents and Magistrates, giving alms, abstaining from and punishing murder, adultery, theft, &c. are not indeed good works, according to Christian religion, because they are not done in obedience to God's word, by persons that are called justified and sanctified by that word, and so not done in faith, and consequently cannot please God: even so the theological works which Antichristians do, in preaching the truth, praying, ministering the sacraments, &c. are not indeed, works pleasing unto God, because they are not done by persons that please him, (for always the man must be accepted before his work can be;) and such persons please him not, as without his calling and sending presume to administer his holy things. It is not therefore the work, but the word of God that sanctifieth the work, which we must look unto; for as by this the virtuous heroic and religious acts of the Patriarchs and other holy men, differ from the like acts of Pagans, and infidels: so also by this, the difference is to be put between the works and administrations of true and false Christians. And seeing the ministers of England are not by Christ called and sent, (as the better sort of themselves heretofore have confessed,) & so have not his word to warrant their administration: whatsoever good doctrine they teach, it proves them no more to be true ministers, then the excellent doctrines and prophecies of the soothsayer Balaam, will prove him to be a true minister of God, or that the Moabites or Madianites having him to sacrifice, prophesy and teach among them, had an ordinance or prophet of God. See Deut. 18, 10.11.14.15. &c.

Again Christ is not the Prophet of this church, because a great part of his word and scriptures, and of the graces of his spirit, are here never spoken nor heard nor suffered to be uttered: and contrariwise much of man's word and writing is brought in; as Apocrypha books made of old the Service and homily books made of late, in which also there be manifest errors, lies contradictions to the holy scriptures, idolatrous and and superstitious doctrines, rites, ceremonies &c. taught unto and observed, by th' priests & people, an idle & soul-murthering ministry maynteyned, Christs spiritual graces given for teaching and building up his church, quenched, with other like evils. The proof of this may be seen in their communiō book, whose Calendar alotteth what is to be read daily and yerely in all their Assemblies: where many chapters of the Bible are wholly and perpetually excluded, many Apocrypha chapters read as holy scriptures. And by the written homilies, the graces and utterance of God's spirit are extinguished that man's erroneous writing may come in place. Besides this all preaching Ministers so limited and restrained in their doctrine that they may not preach against any sin by public authority established, and if they do, they are silenced excommunicated &c. this indignity and dishonor Christ will not suffer at man's hands, to have his word and man's word matched together, his spirit spirit & truth restrained: he will be Prophet alōe or not at all. as they that with the true God and his true worship, had other God's also, & other worships, are said in scripture to forsake the true God, and to be without him: so they that with the true Prophet and doctor Christ and his doctrine, have other also; may rightly be said to have forsaken him and to be without him. For when men set their thresholds by the Lord's and their posts by his; they defile his holy name with their abominations, and in vain they worship him, that teach such doctrines as be precepts of men

Moreover thi• Church wanteth part and communion with Christ in that propheticall office, which he hath imparted to his people, namely power and freedom to witness, profess, practice, and hold forth the word of life, and all that Christ hath commanded; to admonish & reprove one another for sin and transgression, and either if they repent to forgive them, or if they repent not, to follow them further unto the church and even to excommunication for their obstinate violating God's law. That they have not power or freedom to profess and practice the truth of the Gospel in these things, appeareth by their servile subjection to the hierarchy, laws and canons which are amongst them, whereby they are restrained from professing and practicing any further truth then is by law established among them, but must obey & follow all that their spiritual Lord's the Bishops do enjoin them, and may not speak against or reprove any of the abominations that ar in their church worship, Ministry, ceremonies &c. neither have power to deal according to that rule of Christ Mat. 18 15. &c. for any sin, be it never so horrible and manifest, but must leave it to the censure of the Prelate or hi• Commissarie, who at his pleasure buyeth and selleth the sins and souls of men. This bondage the people should not be in if they had and enjoined the word of God, which is the truth; for that truth would make them free, that they should not in this sort be servants of men. But now not ha•ing power to profess, much less to practice the truth: nor to reprove the evils that reign among them; not having the free use of God's word in private, nor the right and lawful Ministry or use thereof in public; they cannot be said to have Christ for their Prophet, and Therefore the Church of England, is not the true Church of God.

EVERY true Church of God hath Christ for the Priest and Sacrificer of the [IIII,] s^me, for he only is the high Priest of our profession, and to him it was sworn, thou art a Priest forever, after the order of Melchizedek. Heb, 3, 1, & 5.5, 6, 10, & 9, 11. &c.

But the Church of England hath not Christ for the Priest or sacrificer of the s^me. Because the gifts and sacrifices which it offereth unto God, are not presented and offered unto him by Christ; neither is this church reconciled unto God by him. And first the worship and service which they perform unto God, their prayers, praises and confessions, (which now are Christ^an men's sacrifices,) are not offered and sanctified by Christ, because they are false and id^ltrous, wherewith Christ hath no communion. For ^onstead of true spir^tuall prayer and praises the fruits of God's spirit in his ^eo^le; they read a written liturgy translated out of the Mass book: and accord^ong as they are stinted in the same, they speak; obser^oing also the many Popish ordinances, r^otes, and ceremonies commanded in the same, as their holy and festival days, holy eues and fasting d^oyes, absoluti^on of sins by their priests, confirmati^on of Baptism by the^r Prelates, profanation of the Sacraments by pri^ate administration and howsling with them, by gossips, by idolatrous signs and gestures of cro^oe, kneeling &c. also marrying by the Priest with sign of the ring, churching of wom^e, burial of the dead, read^ong curses or comminations instead of discipline, besides the sundry errors and untruths in that book, vain repet^tions in their prayers, and the like. All which being commanded and used daily by law of their church, without ground from God's word, which approveth none of these idolatries but condemneth them; are not sanctified by Christ nor presented unto God hi^o Father; For he will not offer the idol sacrifices, neither will God accept such things as by his law he teacheth all men to abhor.

Secondly; whereas the bodies and souls of men are also spiritual and li^oing sacrifices, and the persons offered in the Church by the Ministe^oy of the Gospel, should be as the holy fl^ock, as the flock of Jerusalem in their solemn feasts, that so the oblation of them might be acceptable being sanctified by the holy Ghost: the people offered in this church are a confuse unsanctified m^oltitude, not separated from the world, (as before in the first argument is shown,) and many of them so wicked, (even by the confesse^on of their own ministers, and in every honest man's conscience, as they neither deseru to be laid on God's alter, nor to be touched of any true Israelite in such respect. Yet ar they by the Priests of this church offered daily unto God, in their administration, and blessed in his name. Yea the precious sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ (remembered and re^oresented by bread and wine at his supper,) is prostitut^o as if it were an unholy thing) to the profane and wicked in this church, which being unworthy receivers, are guilty of the body and blood of Chr^ost as were the wretche^o that crucified h^om. Also Baptism which should be an engraffing into Christ his death burial and resurrection, and a s^ogne of washing away men's sins in his blood; is given to the seed of the ungodly, blasphemers, and enemies of Christ, unto whom by no right it doth apperteyn. Which sacrilegious profanation of the holy mysteries, showeth a manifest contempt of Christ represented in them: who as he communicateth not himself with such wicked persons so neither the signs and seals of himself and the redemption that he wrought for his elect. For by his suffering he consecrated them only that are sanctified, that by faith do eat his flesh and drink his blood, & the wicked which have no portion in his death and oblation, when they participate in these seals of grace, do but eat and drink judgment to themselves; the ministers which so prostitute Christ unto the teeth of his enemies, and tread under foot the son of God, if they repent not shall not escape his hand which said, Vengeance is mine, I will repay: & the people which by an imaginary separation are or seem to be sundered from those profane, and yet communicate together in such things, do even by that action show that they are one body with them; for so it is written, we that are many, are one bread and one body, because we all are partakers of one bread. 1 Cor 10, 17.

This bringing of Satan's seed into the church, unto the altar of God, may further be minded as a high degree of violating the second commandment, whereby all images idols and similitudes whatsoever, of the Devils or men's invention or forming, are severely forbidden to be brought into God's house, or used in his worship. Now such images or Idols, are these wicked persons. For as children are the images of their parents; and all faithful people called the children of God, are God's lively images in Christ, whose image and similitude they carry, himself being truly and properly the sole image of the invisible God his Father, and they all being borne a new of him, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the spirit of the Lord, being renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created them so Satan's children, (as wicked worldlings be called in scripture,) are his lively images, having lost the first image of God, wherein they were created; and into the image of the Serpent are changed daily by his spirit that ruleth in them; and him they represent in his malicious nature and actions. As it is sin, and so esteemed, to have images and representations, of beasts, of fowls, of fishes, &c. brought into the church and worship of God: so would and well might it be esteemed more horrible if in any Christian congregation, there should be brought in pictures of the Devil or other like helish representations. Yet men will not see the horror of this sin, that the living images and pictures of the Serpent, even wicked and profane people, his seed and children, should be brought into the Church and worship of God, to have part and interest in Christ and his covenant, whether he will or not; to be offered unto God & laid upon his altar for spiriritual sacrifices: though they be much more abominable then unclean beasts were under the law, as the substance or figured thing, is more then the figure and shadow.

But doubtless God, who abhorreth all idols and religious images of human devise; and Christ, who would not offer the bloody sacrifices of idolaters; abhorreth this confusion of Satan's images within his church neither will the high-priest after the order of Melchizedek, offer such to his Father, or be priest unto them. Otherwise he should not be so faithful in the house of God, as was Aaron, nor the sacrifice; of the Gospel, be so holy as the shadows of the law, which were vblemished.

Finally, all that have Christ for their Priest, are by him to bring their sacrifices for their sins unto God, that so attonement may be made through his intercession. For every high Priest is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer gifts and sacrifices for sins; and every man is appointed of God to present his sacrifice by the Priest, who is to make atonement for him concerning his sin, that it may be forgiven him. But the church of England, (in as much as it persisteth in sin, and will not repent of the many transgressions daily committed in their public worship and administration of holy things, refuseth reconciliation by him who is the high Priest of good things to come; and able perfectly to save them that come unto God by him. This their impenitency appeareth not only by their perseverance in evil doing, notwithstanding all the admonitions and reproofs that have sounded in their ears these many years,) but above all, by their ungodly Canons & constitutions made by the whole representative church of Engl: and submitted unto by the rest of the people. Whereby they publish unto all the world, how they are hardened in their evils, that excommunicate punish and persecute all that speak against or refuse to communicate with their people, prelacy, priesthood, worship, ceremonies, &c. wherein are so many sins and idolatries.

For as much then as the public service and sacrifice of this church is idolatrous, the holy mysteries, of Christ profaned, the people unsanctified, and their sins unrepented of; there is no word or promise in scripture that Christ is the Priest or sacrificer of such worship or worshippers

Therefore the Church of England is not the true Church of God.

[V] EVERY true church of God, hath Christ for the King thereof; For of him the Father saith I have set my King upon Zion my holy, mountayn; and he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet, and shall sit upon the throne of David & upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever, Isa. 9.7.

But the church of England hath not Christ for the King thereof. first, because it hath not these officers which he hath appointed to govern his church under him, namely, Pastors, Teachers, and Elders: but instead of them it hath the hierarchy or Prelacye of Antichrist, Archbishops, Lord Bishops, Chanellors, Archdeacons, Commissaries, &c. who reign or tyrannize over the souls of men by their unlawful jurisdiction, ruling over many Churches making them constitutions and canons prescribing them words, both for prayer and doctrine; summoning, censuring, excommunicating, absolving, both priests and people, making and deposing ministers, giving the holy Ghost exercising also civil offices in the common wealth, and carrying the titles both of Christ, and of the God's, the Magistrates, into whose places they intrude having no warrant for their spiritual Lordships in the Testament of Christ. Secondly, because this church hath not the Laws and statutes of Christ for to govern the same; for although they have the holy Bible among them, yet are not the ordinances therein written, practiced or suffered to be practiced in these assemblies. As for an instance, the way and means which Christ hath appointed for repressing of sin (that enemy which his scepter always beateth down) namely first private admonition. Secondly with witnesses, Thirdly by telling the Church, and then if the sinner be not reclaimed, casting him out or delivering him to Satan by the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, given to every congregation; this holy and orderly walking, is unknown, this power is wanting in all these Parishes, who cannot excommunicate any person be he never so profane wicked or blasphemous. But contrariwise •ll must repayr to the Bishops Chancellors or Commissaries courts, where things are handled and judged according to their own laws and canons, and not by the rules of Christ.

Thirdly, because the people of this church were and are (even by the confession of our aduersari•s) of all sorts of people, as well wicked as Godly, and sins of all sorts do abound and reign among them that if the good laws of the common wealth did not repre•se them, there would be no living in peace among them. Such profane worldly people. are not the subjects of Christ, his kingdom is not of the world, neither is it for the open wicked, but for the repentant and believing, for the poor in spirit, the meek, the merciful, the persecuted for righteousness; sake not for persecutors haters & cōtemners of the truth. If thus it should be then were Christ's kingdom divided in & against it self, and so could not endure & be perpetual, as the scripture saith it shall be. For both by the oracle of God, Gen 3, and by experience we learn and see there is continual war between the woman's seed and the serpents, Christians and the Antichristians, the children of God and the children of Belial or impiety so that the having of such sinful in the church, is the bane and ruin of Christ's kingdom and religion. The covenant made with the house of David (on whose throne Christ sitteth forever) is an everlasting covenant perfect in all points & sure, but the wicked shall be everyone as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands, but the man that shall touch them must be defended with iron and with the shaft of a spear: and they shall be burnt with fire in the same place.

Finally, this Church wanteth Christ's power against Syn, Satan, and •ntichrist; if any would deal against sin and sinners, he hath no w•y, but by complaint to the Antichristian spiritual courts. (for the civil magistrate punisheth civilly, and not with ecclesiastical censure, which is the power and sceptor whereof we speak,) and if those courts refuse to censure the sinner (as they seldom cast out any except it be for well doing, or not appearing at their Summons,) there is no redress of any evil among them As for ecclesiastical matters, and the many abuses and abominations that are in the church, ministry, worship, ceremonies &c. the Priests and people of the parishes are in bondage to the Prelates, in servile subjection to their ungodly decrees, censures and cursing Canons; no spiritual Christian power have they against this tyranny, but are fain to seek to the arm of flesh, the Prince and Parliament, for redress; who if they refuse or neglect to help them; then remain they under the Prelates Antichristian yoke still, as hath now appeared by their practice these many years. But if they had Christ for their King, his truth, his word, would make them free, he would make them also Kings and Priests unto God his Father; that howsoever the supressing & abolishing of this unruly hierarchy with their many abominations, is to be left unto the Magistrate who only hath power from God to execute this vengeance, yet every man should deliver his own sowl, abstaining from error, false worship, superstition, popish thralldom & all other evil whatsoever, though with affliction, bonds, banishment &c. and stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made him free, without yoke of thralldom. For he will reign in the midst of his enemies; Satan and sin he hath subdued, as for himself so for all his people and subjects, whom he hath redeemed out of all Satanean and Balylonian bondage, that sin should reign no more over them. But if they forsak this fredom, & take vpō them th' yoke of Antichrist, his servants they are to whom they obey, Which this church doing to the Antichristian Prelates whom they acknowledge for their spiritual Lord's, receiving and obeying their hests and canons, retheyning and nourishing such as be enemies and rebels against Christ, and remaining in spiritual bondage: cannot be said to have Christ for their King and Lawgiuer, Therefore the Church of England is not the true Church of God.

THE sum of all that which hath been said, is this, That Church which hath not Christ for th' Head, Mediator, Prophet Priest & King of the same; hath not God his Father for God of the same: because the Father and the son are one. John. 10.0, and whosoever hath not the Son hath not the Father, 1 John. 2 23.3 John, 9.

But the Church of England hath not Christ for the head, Mediator, Prophet, Priest or King of th' same as by the former Arguments hath ben proved.

Wherefore it hath not God the Father for God of the same, and consequently is not his Church.

THat church which is not the true church of Christ and of God; ought not by any true Christian to be continued or communicated with: but must be forsaken & separated from; & a true church of God sought and joined unto, where Christ and salvation by him, may undoubtedly be had. Because we are willed to abstain and separate from the false church, 2, Cor 6 1•, 17; Reu. 18, 4 Hos 4.15. Isa. 48, 20. Ier 51.45, Zach. 2.6, 7, 1 Cor 10.20, 1, &c. We are willed also to seek and join unto a true church, Deut. 12, 5 Song. 1.6. Ier 50 4, 5. Isa, 65, 9. Psal. 26, 5.6, & 87, 2, 5 6, Act, 2, 47.

But the church of Engl. is before proved not to be the true church of Christ and of God. Therefore it ought to be separated from; & a true church sought for, and joined to, of such as would be saved.

THose Ministers which have and execute the ministry of a falls church are not the true ministers of Christ, & consequently not to be heard or obeyed as shepherds of our souls. Because the ministry of a false church, must needs be false also, seeing the church having no interest in Christ, can have no interest in a Christian ministry. Besides Christ hath given his ministry to his own church only, Eph 4.11.12, 14.15, 16. 1 Cor. 12, 27, 28. See also John, 10.1, 4.5, Act, 20, 28. John. 21, 15, 16.

But all the ministers of the church of England, have and execute the ministry of a falls church; for so by the former arguments that church is proved.

Therefore they are not the true ministers of Christ, and consequently not to be heard or obeyed as shepherds of our souls.

For the further descrying of the false ministry of this church, I refer the (good reader) to a treatise lately published entitled, Reasons and Arguments proving that it is not lawful to hear the Ministry of Engl.

And to another heretofore published, called A treatise of the Ministry of the Church of England.

I will put enimitie between thee (ô Serpent) and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: He, shall crush thy head; and thou, shalt crush his heel. Gen. 3.15.

Forasmuch as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also (Christ) himself likewise took part of the same: that through death he might abolish him that had the power of death, that is, the Diuill; and that he might deliver them all which fo• fear of death all their life time were subject to bondage. Heb. 2.14:15.

And there was war in heaven: Michael and his Angels warred against the Dragon; the Dragon also warred, & his Angels; but prevailed not, neither was their place found anymore in heaven And cast was the great Dragon, that old Serpent, called Devil and Satan, that deceaueth the whole world: cast was he into the earth, and his Angels were cast with him Reu, 12.7.8, 9.

A BRIEF ANSWER TO Mr BERNARDS BOOK; INTI•VLED, The Separati•ts Scisme.

WHen the former treatise was almost finished; among other adversaries Mr Bernard cometh forth to fight against the truth, which but a while since he would needs seem to favor: but things not succeeding to his exspectation, he hath changed his love into hatred, And in the bitterness of his zeal, he hath sent out a treatise containing Disswasions from the practice of the Gospel, which he pleaseth to call The separatists schism, or Brownism. Though in his book there be little weight of reason or truth to be seen, nor anything which may grealy trouble a discreet reader, who is but meanly acquainted without cause: yet both for the stopping of the man's mouth, if it may be, who maketh huy and cry after some of us, as in his Prooeme to the reader he proclaimeth; and for help of the simple who may be offended at the truth, not discerning his fraud. I thought it needful to observe and answer briefly, the principal things by him objected; many of which are before in this treatise, and in other books more largely refuted; and all of •hem may, if need require, hereafter by some other, be particularly refelled. Herein now the Lord give me wisdom, to discover this adversaries falsehood; and thee (good reader) understanding to discern it.

Of his PROBABILITIES,

THE first means whereby Mr BERNARD would dissuade from the truth, which he calleth Brownism, are Probabilities or lik•lihoods that the way is not good: and they are in number (as himself hath cast them,) seven.

- 1. The Novelty of it.
- 2. The agreement thereof with ancient schismatiks.
- 3. The ill means by which it is mayteyned, namely, by abuse of scripture & deceauable reasoning.
- 4. The want of approbation of the reformed Churches.
- 5. The conde•nation thereof by all their Divines, (vidz of the church of England.)

- 6. God's judgment against it
- 7. The •ll success• it hath had.

Such likelihoods as these, the Papists heretofore with as much color and truth, have alleged against the church of England; heathens and enemies have in former ages objected the like things to the church of Christ, and Mr Ber. speaketh but that which hath been spoken before him, fulfilling the measure of his forefathers. But to the particulars.

The Novelty he maketh to be in differing from all the best reformed churches in Christendom But if a Papist had to deal with him, he would bring those reformed churches also within the compass of Novelty: and then Mr Bern. would flee, (as his brethren before him have done) to the scriptures for antiquity: as he would answer a Papist, so will I answer him; let the scriptures speak for the differences between other churches and us. But here Mr Bern. is mute; and meddles not with this controversy he thought belike the very name of Noveltie and of the reformed churches would fray the simple

If it be Novelty to differ from the reformed churches, then may he blame his own church of Engl. more than us, seeing it differeth from those churches in more and weightier points than we do: yea it hateth persecuteth silenceth & excommunicateth those ministers & people, that stand up & plead for such things as the reformed churches have and practice. Again these churches have rejected and written against many of the Antichristian enormities that are now in England. So if it be likely, we are not in the truth because we differ from the churches in few things; it is more likely Mr Bern. and his brethren, are not in the truth, because they differ from them in many Wherefore let him first pull the beam out of his own eye. Again where he standeth upon the hard words which some of us have uttered of the Presbytery &c. if he had not an evil and partial eye he might have seen many more hard & reproachful words used by his right reverend Fathers, and fellow priests against the Presbytery and discipline which the reformed churches have, and the reforming ministers of Engl. would have. That still his weapon entereth into his own bowels.

His 2 likelihood he maketh to be our agreement with ancient schismatiks: yet any points wherein we agree with them in evil, he nameth not much less proveth; but referreth us to Mr Giffords pains herein, who had long since his answer by Mr Greenwood to every particular of that his pretended consimilitude between the Donatists and us; to which answer I refer the reader. Again, this objection is such as the Papists make against the church of England for so N. D. compareth Protestants with Donatists; and let us see what answer the Priests of England can make for themselves that will not as well, if not better, clear us And to come a little near to this our adversary, we could put Mr Ber. in mind of his own ways, wherein he might see himself more like a schismatic than any of us: for we openly profess our departure from the church of England, as from a false church, so proved by evident grounds out of Gods word; whereas Mr Bernard holding it to be a true church & abiding in it, yet he and a hundred with him, made not long since a pretended covenant together; whereby they separated from the unpreaching ministers, and all that hate to be reformed Yet are those rearing priests of as good authority by the Laws and Canons of that Church as himself, and the Conformists of far greater esteem in this church, then the Reformists. Whether this be not a plain schism, and Mr Bern a factious person thus to carry himselfe in a church, let himself say: as also whether he be not for this, ipso facto excommunicated, by force of the own Canon which saith, Whosoever shall hereafter separate themselves from the Communion of Saints as it is approved by the Apostles rules in the Church of England, and combine themselves together in a new brotherhood, accounting the Christians who are conformable to the doctrine, governments, rites and ceremonies of the church of England to be profane and unmeet for them to join with in Christian profession: let them be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored but by the Archbishop after their repentance and public revocation of such their wicked errors. Into like danger doth he come by Canon. 11, and 12.

The il means, by which our cause is maintained, he maketh to be strange exposition of scripture, &c.

First Mr Bern. here walketh still in the Papists steps, who object the like unto the Protestants. Let an indifferent reader (say they) peruse the learnedst book of these reformers, and he shall see in them false allegations of Fathers, corruptions of scriptures, fathers, and councils &c. Secondly I answer our expositions may seem strange to such as are themselves strangers from God: but the Godly wise can discern, to whom (if they have read our books,) I lean the judging of this probability. Now this old calumniatio which Satā laid upon the Saint, how truly Mr Bern. hath laid upon us, let his proofs show, which are in these two particulars. First, that one of us saith, All the truth is not taught in the Church of England, and to prove this, Act. 20 21. is cited. Which one of us thus citeth Act. 20 and where; Mr Bern. nameth not. Good cause we have to suspect his faithfulness; for in his book he chargeth us with some errors, which we hold not, as after shall appear. And he that would so injury the whole, what may we think he will do for a part. I suppose therefore the party cited that scripture to prove the whole truth ought to be taught which because it may be questioned whether it be needful at all times, therefore the Apostles example is brought. As for the Priests of England, $\langle \diamond \rangle$ they preach not the whole truth, is proved by their daily practice, who balk many truths, touching the church, ministry worship, government &c. as all that observe their doctrines know very well. It is proved also by the laws and canons of their church, which excommunicate all such as shall by the truth reprove the falsehoods and abominations that are among them, as before in this treatise is shown. And Mr Bern. is very silly, if he expect any scriptures to prove what is now taught in his church. Furthermore if it be granted him, that Act. 20. were by someone of us alleged for the purpose he pretendeth: yet it is no more likelihood that our cause is evil, then that his brethren's cause and plea against us is evil, for they without all doubt do allege scriptures for to prove things done in Engl: which it is not possible by the scriptures for to show, See before in this book pag. 43. &c 44. But what speak I of others Mr Bern, himselfe is faine to use such colors, else would the glory of his church soon fade: for in the 48, page of his book he allegeth God for witness that they are his people, 1 by giving them his word, Psa, 147.19 20. 2 by his effectual working thereby, Ier, 22, 22, therefore there is the voice of the son of God, John. 5.25, &c. If these be found and sufficient proofs, that England hath God's word, because Israel had it, and so in the rest; then why may not men allege like Scriptures and proofs against them, saying, They are stained with their own works, and go a whoring with their own inventions; Psal. 106, 39. from the Prophets of Jerusalem, is hyprocrisie gone forth into all the Land, Ier. 23.15, I have not sent these Prophets saith the Lord: yet they ran &c. Ier. 23.21. and the like. So then Mr Bern. must either bring better reasons for himself, or else he may blush to blame others for that wherein himself is more faulty then they; if they be faulty at all.

The other particular which he specifieth is, that places setting forth the invisible church &c. we bring to set forth the visible church by; as namely; 1. Pet. 2.9, 10. But Mr Bern. shows his reader no reason at all, why that Scripture must be understood of the invisible church, as he Sayth; and it is an easy matter for him to find faults without reasō, in any man's writing. That place of Peter, (as the wise reader may perceive,) Speaketh of and to the visible or Sensible church: for th' Apostle wrote to the visible Christians, the strangers that then dwelt in Pontus Galatia, &c. and this which he speaketh to them in Chap. 2, 9.10. is as Moses of old spake to the visible church of Israel, Exod. 19:6. Again, he mentioneth the end of their calling to this dignity, vidz. to show forth the virtues of him that had called them out of darkness into his marvelous light; which whether it appertaynes not to the visible church, I leave it for every true member thereof to judge. And such as these, are the exceptions that D. Allison (to whom he referreth us,) took heretofore: which because they are unworthy a Dr. of Divinity, we have though best to pass by, as unworthy of reply, till further occasion.

The 4. likelihood is, that we have not the approbation of any reformed churches Churches for our cause. This is much like his first probability, before answered, and seemeth to be a main propp to uphold the church of England, which love to make flesh their arm. The reader may see this point thrice urged before in this book, and thrice answered. I refer him also to our Letters unto Mr Junius whom Mr Bern. mentioneth: & finally to the Apology of the church of England, where themselves say, unto the like objections of the Papists, th' truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ dependeth not upon councils, (add also, nor upon Churches;) nor as S. Paul saith, upon the judgments of mortal creatures.

The 5. is, the condemnation of this way by the Divines (of England) both living and dead, &c. But this is no other likelihood then it is like Mr Bern. (if he had then lived) would have alleged against Christ himself, when the learned Priests, Rabbin's, and Divines of Israel, condemned his way and doctrine John. 7.48.49. & 19, 7. &c. If these learned English Di•ines have confuted us, let Mr Bern. or any show the scriptures and reasons by which they have done it: if they were our adversaries without reason, (as some of them he mentioneth, show little or none at all,) wise men will esteem them accordingly But if such a Divine as Bredwel do but call our curse a by-path, this sentence is authentic enough, for Mr Bern to put in his book.

The 6. is, the Lord's judgment giving sentence with them (of England) & against us. These things as they are before more prudently urged, both for the good success of the English ministers, and bad ys•ue of many of us, so I leave the reader unto the answers before made pag, 13. &c, 23. &c. Only I would advise Mr Bern. to look better to his words, when he next write, and not to set down such positions, as may tend to Atheism or Judaism; as wherein his brother Boltons case that hanged himself he Sayth, which end the Lord letteth not his special instruments to come unto, &c. A Jew upon this grant, would trouble Mr Bernard to defend Christianity; seeing Judas hanged himself, who was a far more special instrument of the Lord, being an Apostle; then Bolton that was but a ruling Elder; and not the first brocher of this way, as Mr Bern. very untruly (upon Mr Giffords report, if he so reported) doth allege. Besides that Judas after a sort repented and acknowledged his sin, and was not (that we know of) excommunicate, yet came to that woeful end; whereas Bolton for revolting from his faith at Paul's cross, was dealt with, excommunicated, and so died (for ought that is known) without repentance, a member of Mr Bernard's church. See before, pag. 23.

The 7. is, the ill success it hath had, these very many years, being no more increased.

The natural man perceiveth not the things of God; but judging by the outward appearance, gives unrighteous judgment. If M. Bernard had lived in Noah's days, and seen his 120. years labors and preaching spent in vain, how would he have stumbled at the work of God, that gave his word no other effect in the world? And loe it is written as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the Days of the Son of man. But had Mr Bern. been in the days following, when Israel very few in number walked from nation to nation, from one kingdom to another people, and notwithstanding the promise of multiplication, yet in 200. years and mo^r, had increased but unto 70. souls, and as many moe years were in Egyptian bondage: and had he in the mean while seen the Princes of Israel, and Dukes of Esau with the Kings that reigned in his land, before any King in Israel. how would this man (may we think) have gathered likelihoods, or rather have concluded out of doubt against the poor afflicted church of God? But it is no new thing to hear this pleading from such carnal gospellers. Well, not totell him of God's gracious work in bringing many to this truth and causing moe to listen after it daily, let Mr Bern. look to himself and his fellow Reformists, and if his right eye be not blent, let him acknowledge God's hand a^ainst themselves, who heretofore had so many fautors, and that not of the meanest in the land: yet now are repressed as troublers of the church, and their counterfeit reformation further from all likelihood of effecting then was at the first. And this much of his unlikely likelihoods.

Of his REASONS.

HIS reasons now follow, of more force (as he pretends) than his bare probabilities. These are threefold, taken 1 from the evil of the entrāce, in to this way; 2 from our persons so greueously sinning in this way; 3 from our opinions which are altogether erroneous and false.

The first sort of reasons, have this foundation.

The entrance is very sinful and cursed. Because of these 2 great evils. 1 That we do not only condemn corruptions and the notorious wicked, but also forsake all former Christian profession amongst them. A man must cast off that word there with them which made them alive; also the faithful messengers of God, the Fathers which begat him: yea he must renounce all fellowship of the godly there &c.

But we may with the Prophet truly complain of this man, that his mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud; for how often have we in our public writings protested our consent in all the holy doctrines that themselves profess: only because we cannot enjoy them without Antichristian abominations; which the Prelates impose, and the Priests and people practice we have separated from those assemblies, where idolatry is publicly set up and maintained from those blind guides that would seem to make concord between light and darkness, Christ and Belial, and under show of many truths, seduce men's souls unto destruction. Did the church of England forsake all former Christian profession among the Papists, when they left the Pope and some of his Prelates, Mass, images &c. If not; then neither do we that have left but the remnants of Popery yet retained; and do walk in the truth to our knowledge and utmost power as God enableth us; not casting off any jote of his word, nor any faithful messenger of his, or other godly person, as this adversary calumniateth. His heart knows better, though it sendeth forth such bitter waters.

2. Next this he saith with such a renunciation of truth, must be retained, much untruth: the particulars are 1 that men must believe our way to be the truth of God; 2 and then condemn their church as a false church.

Whether our way be not the truth of God, let the Godly judge by his word; by it also let them try the estate of the church of England. But Mr Bern. begging the question, will have things to be taken for untruths, before trial or due conviction. To help himself he seeks advantage by that we have published as he saith under our hand, that the differences between us and them, are only such corruptions as are by us set down. Though the word only be not ours, but Mr Bern. own; yet to let this pass as ordinary with him, what gathers he from it? Corruptions saith he, do not make a false church, but a corrupt church, (make the worst of it that can be;) as corruptions in a man, maketh but a corrupt man, and not a false man. First let the reader observe that he speaks not a word of those corruptions which we set down; neither indeed is he able with our corruption to plead for them. Secondly it is very corrupt and gross that he would persuade, no corruptions can make a church to be false: for then rebellious Israel, though they corrupted all their works, was a true church still; but Moses foretold that for corrupting themselves, they should be none of God's children but a froward and crooked generation. Now let Mr Bern make the best of it he can. His similitude of a man is not fit in this case. A man is a substance, but a church consisteth in relation or reference to Christ, as a wife to her husband. But if a man's wife play the whore never so often and openly, she may be, by Mr Bern. doctrine esteemed a corrupt but not a false wife. Such distinctiō he may carry to the stews. Corruptions there may grow in churches and they yet be true churches as at Pergamos, Thyatira, &c. corruptions also there may be that will make true churches false; as in Israel and Rome, where first were assemblies of Saints; afterward they became whores and habitations of Devils. And there may be such corruptions in the constituting of a church that embraceth much truth, as will make it from the first a false church, as in Samaria, 2. Kin. 1^o, 27.28. &c

His second sort of reasons, is from the grievous sins that are among v^o, by reason whereof (from our own ground) we may not (saith he) be joined with. The sins he reckoneth 6.

First, that woeful entrance before named. I answer, that Mr Bern. entered into this reason with untruth, and continued in it with begging the question, as before is shown. So that this his objection is very woeful and the man deserveth rather to be pitied then answered in his iole 〈◇〉 made without proof.

The second is a hie degree of unthankfulness both to God that begat us lie, is word, and to our mother the church of Engl. that bar us. I answer, 〈◇〉 thank God for that knowledge of him wh•ch we atteyned unto in the Church of England, and are thankful also (as is meet) to all the instruments which God hath used to bring us unto knowledge: but now when God hath shown us a further truth, (as what ch•le of his, seeth not more daily,) we should show great vnthankf•lnes if we would not walk in it, much more if we should blaspheme and persecute it, as Mr. Bern. and many of his fellow Priests do, struggling against the light that shineth upon them; A papist may have occasion of thankfulness unto G•d and men, for the knowledge of God and Christ which he hath get in th•Ro•ish church, far abo•e that which he could have had among Pagans: yet if upon sight of the errors in Popery, he forsake that false church and join to some other true, no man can without ungodliness, condemn him of unthankfulness. The Papists heretofore have used such reasons as these aga•nst the Protestants; now they, for want of better apply them a••inst us.

The third sin imputed to us is, that we are full of spiritual vnchariblenes First toward th•m that will not go our way, nor be inclinable to us whom (he saith) we deeply censure and deadly condemn.

First, this also is an old popish cavil, used often against the Protestants. One telleth them, they deserve the punishments of Parricides, for scoffing, taunting, contemning and reviling their forefathers.

2. Our vncharitablenes, (if such it be) is this, that we pray for and wish unto all, as to our own souls, even life and peace we seek to cover a multitude of sins which then is done, when sinners are converted from going astray. And for this cause we speak that which we believe and know, though the world therefore hate us.

3 C•nsu•• or condemn those that go not our way we do not, we know every man shall stand or fall to his own master. It is the sin only which we condemn, the sinner we seek to save, leaving him to the Lord who shall judge both him and us at the last day.

4. But how charitable the ministers of England are unto us let thei• continual reproaches and vituperies in pulpit and in print show: and how they censure and condemn us and all that will not go their way; let Mr. Bernard's own book speak where by the sentence of his godly ministers, everyone is damned, as cutting himself off from Christ, whosoever wittingly and continually separateth from the church of England, where yet so innumerable abominations and idolatries do abound.

2. Secondly our vncharitablenes (as he saith) is a most ungodly desire as ever was heard of, to have the w•rd utterly extinguished among them, Egyptian darkness to come over them, rather then that it should be preachedly such as do not favor our course &c.

Our desire is, that the Egyptian darkness which now covereth the land by means of the false Prophets that are therein, were done away; and that the true light of the Gos•ell were risen unto them. We are sorry to see the prophets (which have night for a vision and darkness for a divination, as was threatened of God,) •o to deceive the people, by preaching lies in the name of the Lord, when he never sent them Christ hath no need of such falsers to help up h•s k•ngdome he hath ways and means enough, by his own ordinance & min•stery to build up his •hurch, though Antichrists clergy be sent back to the bottomless pit from whence they came. We know men gather not grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles. Lamentable experience these many years, showeth what hurt and misery cometh by this false hierarchy and priesthood, which upholds idolatry, profaneness, and human traditions; pleads for sin, and against the truth; to the destruction of men's souls. We wish people therefore to beware of false prophets, though they come in sheep's clothing; and to seek the Lord by his own ministry, not by Ant christ: for the thief cometh not but to steal, to kill and to d•stroy. Let them see by the lamps of God in his own Sanctuary and Candlestick, and walk in the light of Jerusalem his church, which hath the glory of God arisen upon it leaving Vr of the Chaldees, and walking no long•r in the light of the fire and sparks that men have kindled to themselves least they lie down in sorrow.

3. The last point of our vucharital lenes, wh•ch M. Bern. saith is the highest degree of all, is that we are sorry and en•ious that the good things of God do prosper with them. &c.

That the good things of God do prosper with them, and the truth prevail manger all opposition; we have cause to rejoyce for, and do rejoyce, Yea and we doubt not, but the envious writings and dealings of Mr. Bern and his fellows, against the gospel, God will turn to the furtherance of the same; and the generation of the righteous shall be blessed which the wicked shall see and fret and gnash their teeth and pine away; when their desire shall perish. But what are the good things Mr. Bern. meaneth? Not the truth of God indeed, for that he blasphemeth and writeth against as Schism and Brownism. Nor the reformists cause, called Puritanism; for that prospereth not, as all men see, but decreaseth daily. The Prelates are the men that prevail, for a wh•le; their canons are confirmed, their ceremonies flourish, and their horns are exalted. Whether M, Bern, himself (who wrote not l•ng since a book against them, which also he was willing a gentleman should have printed in his own name, that M, Bern. might have slept in a wh•le <◇> whither himself I say, and his fellow Reformists who are disa•oynt•d of their hope, be not sorry for this prosperity, let themselves say. As for vt we have learned not to fret or en•y when we see the wicked flourish; for they shall so•n be cut down as grass, and wither as the green herb. Sorry we are indeed for their lamentable estate and desire that they may find mercy, at the hands of the Lord.

Our fo•rth kind of sin, he saith is, our abusing of the werd, misaleging and <◇> it, &c. This was the third of his probabilities before answered, and is here for a show mustered again among our sins; but nakedly and without all proof: I leave it therefo•e to the reproof of God; and to the godly judgments of all that shall read our writings and allegations of the scriptures.

The 5. sin is our willful persisting in our schism. This is again to beg the question, first let it appear to be schism that we are in, let the reasons a•d grounds of our separation be orderly dealt in, and soundly convinced by God's word: then if we yield not, let us be holden willful.

Otherwise, to persist in well doing is good And as easily do the Papists cal Protestants schismatics, as they us. Whether M Bernard with all the helps that he hath had from other men, hath convinced us of schism, let the godly judge. If reproaching of us, and idle excursions into by matters, be a conviction; doubtle••e he hath done it better then any before him.

The 6. syn, is our railing and s••ffing, and (as he saith) Henry Barrowes blasphemies, who hath •gr•giously abused all their holiest exercises of religion, &c. I answer, if such sin be in any of us, it is even by our selves condemned; and •f by human infirmity any have been overtaken with unseasoned speeches, we desire the Christian reader to bear with and pardon it in us, as himself would have pardon of God The like hath Mr. Barr•• earnestly entreated in his Preface to his Discouery, as the reader may see; so far was he from delighting in such ways.

Secondly I answer (howsoever I will not justify all the words of another man, nor yet mine own, for in many things we sin all;) that many of the th•ngs which this man counteth railings, scoffs and blasphemies, are no other speeches them the hol• Ghost hath used before us in the scriptures, and appl•ed to like persons; and seemed as harsh to men of those times, as these do to men now.

Thirdly it is lkely that some be rather the printers fault (unless Mr. Bernard hath forged them himself), then Mr Barrowes.

Fourthly the Reformists themselves, amongst whom Mr Bern. sometimes seemed one, have uttered as hard speeches against the Prelate• & other corruptions of their own church; though now like time seruers they gloze with their reverend Fathers; as this man maketh the first of Mr Barrowes railings scoffs and blasphemies to be his calling the Bishops Antichristian. But how many volum•s have themselves heretofore written of this argument? And who amongst us hath ever dealt as did Mar•in Marprelate among themselves?

Finally Mr. Barrow did sharply in 〈...〉 against the reforming preachers, as being the greatest deceivers of the people, under show of holiness. This maketh them a•ayn so e•er agai•st him; but whither he spake not right of them, may in part be seen already, & time will show more; they can no longer halt as hitherto they have; but either they must rec•ncile them to th•ir Fath•rs, or quite forsake them: and a ble•sed work of God it is, that the most dangerous seducers should thus first be discou••d.

The third and last sort of reasons which M. Bern. useth against us, is, Our errors, and (as he saith) the matter of our s•hisme.

The errors which he reckoneth up, and undertaketh to confute ar• ten. The first of them is that we hold the constitution of their church to be a false constitution. To this he saith,

1. That we cannot prove this simply by any plain doc•rine of scripture &c. 2. That it is against the evidence of the scriptures, which maketh the word, (Mat. 28.19. Mar 16 15. 2 Cor. 5.19. & 11 2. Job, 23.23.24. Act. 2.14.37.38. & 16.32.33.) the external proof•sion Act. 8.12.37.38.) and Sacraments (Mat. 28, 19. 1 Cor. 10.16.) the visible and true constitution of a company so gathered and knit together; and so was theirs constituted: as that book of (Mr. Ber.) showeth; and as in another ere long shall be plainly manifested &c.

First Mr Ber. setteth down barely this as our position and doctrine, not naming place or book where it is written, nor the proofs that we make of it, but peremptorily saith we cannot prove it. Whereas it hath in many books by many plain doctrines of scripture been evidently proved, so as Mr Bern. and all his fellow priests could never yet, make a plain and direct answer And if when book is written after book, no refutation be made, but a bare deneyall, as here M. Bern. saith we cannot prove it, I say the ministers of Engl. may so turn away anything; but with what credit or conscience, the wise will judge.

Secondly, for M. Bernard's reason, it self wanteth a good constitution, being to confusedly set down, as a man knows not what he makes the constitution of a church; or how he would conclude that their church is constituted aright. He pretends the word to be the Constitution of a church; whereas the scriptures that he quoteth, and reason it self might teach him, that the word is the instrument or means of Constituting, & conseruing the church constituted; so also be the sacraments. But as the constitution of a common wealth or of a city is a gathering and uniting of people together into a civil polity: so the Constitution of the common wealth of Israel, (as the church is called) and of the city of God the new Jerusalem, is a gathering and uniting of people into a diuine polity: the form of which polity is Order, as the heathens acknowledged, calling polity, an order of a city: which Order is requisite in all actions and administrations of the church as the Apostle * showeth, and specially specially in the constitution thereof: so that next unto faith in God, it *s to be esteemed most necessary for all holy societies Wherefore Pa'l rejoiced for these two things in the Church at Col'ss, even their order, & their steadfast faith in Christ. Now whereas to the constitutiō of a church there belong • a people, as the matt'r whereof, and 2 a calling, gathering and uniting together, as the form whereof the church consisteth. in both these the Constitution of the Church of Engl. hath (in sundry treatises) been •roued false. For with them all sorts of profane worldly and wicked •ersons, are received as the matter whereof the church is built, contrary to the •layn and manifest doctrine of the scriptures. Leu. 20.24 1 Kin 8 53. Act. 2.40, and 19.8 •John. 17.16. 2 Cor. 6.14, •7, 18. The form and order of their v'iting is als• strange; for these profane people, even all persons in a familie, an• all families in a parish, are united into one parish church, as it is called; not voluntarily, •as ought to be in the true church, but by constraint, not by any due proof•sion of repentance from •ead work• and faith in God; but by the priests readin• a Confession absolution, and such like popish st•ff as is to be seen in their service book, not under the guidance of Chr•sts officers, but of a Parson, Vicar, Curate or other like creature of the Bishops, who in many places can but read English unto them. And this with the other Parshes of the Dioc••e so gathered also, are united into one See or Doces•• church under a Lord Bishop and his Co•rtiers, and all the Dioces into two Pro•inciall churches, the Provincial, into one national church, called the Church of England, over all which there is a most reverend Father and spiritual Lord, Archbushop, Primate, and Metropolitan: under whom all Bishops and Priests of the land are subject; and all people and parishes in the land bound to obey the dead canons and decrees, which he the Ach Lord with his brethren of the governing clergy, agree of in their repre•atiue church in the Conuocation house, if once the Civil Magistrate give life unto them. This form and order of a church is not to be found in Christs Testament; but received it is from the church of Rome by heritage or succession; as the Papists boast of (to the dishonor of Protestants) when they say; A religion &c. that distinguished the multitude into, p̄rishes ̄roportiōed ̄he tithes, annexed th̄ Glebeland, fōnded the Bishoprics, ̄mitted the Dioceses &c. So, as the mother is the daughter is, false in her c̄stitutiō; though in the doctrine which she profeseth she is far better & purer thē that whoremother of Rome. The discussing of thes things. as Mr Bern. refereth to other places & books, so also do I; seeing in thī place ̄e hath brought nothing of weight to prove his cōstitutiō. For the script̄re that he alegeth, & the 3. things that he colecteth from thē; do make against his pur̄ose. The word is not by Christ's m̄nistry rihtly; reached & applied to the people, but insufferably abused to the maintenance or the confusion and idolatries that are among them: the sacraments are highly profāed and prostituted to the most ungodly and thir seed, and popishly administered, and the external profession which the people, make is by constraint, and therefore naught worth: besides it is corrupt and idolatrous, being a mixed profession, partly of the truth of God, & partly of their own inventions, as appeareth by their Communion book Canons, and the like.

Our second error should be, that we hold their Constitution a real idol, and so them idolaters. To confute this, Mr Ber. saith that he h̄th perused in any scriptures, and can see none that take an idol or idolaters in any such s̄nse; aḡn, that Marlorat mentioneth 47. idols, and not one of them in ̄he s̄nse.

Whether this article be of Mr Bernard's own forgin̄, or where he hath had it, I cannot tell; his reader must take all of his cred̄, for he lets not down his author. As for his confutation hereof, it is very slender, that becāse he seeth it not, or Mālorat nameth it not, therefore it is no idol. For it is no sure position that Mr Bernard seeth all that ̄he scriptures; teach; and both he and Marlorat may as soon number the hayres of their heads, ā all the idols that are in the world. Well therefore yet may ̄t be a real idol, for ōght that this man hath said to save it. And if it be a false constit̄tion (as before is prōed) set up instead of a true, what is it better then a very idol. In the end he t̄rneth and renteth us for making ōr own constitution (as he saith) an idol or goddess; and feigneth that we may say, Great is the Goddess Constitution; great is Diana of the B̄nists B̄t seeing this is but a rēroch of a scorner, and the reproach reacheth unto Christ himself who hath appointed the frame order and constitution of h̄s own ch̄rch, which we have labored for I leave him for this calumination, unto his rebuke, who will teach him one day no more to blaspheme.

And whether (may we think) tendeth the invective of this vain man, who thus skoffeth at the Constitution of Christ's church, but to bring in a mere ataxie or conf̄sion, worse then was at Babels tower-building: for take away the orderly framing and constituting of a church, and there will be but a Tohu, (as the scripture speaketh,) a rude indigest heap or confute Chaos, more beseeming the wild beasts of the wood, then any human, much les̄e divine pol̄ty.

That such as are not of a particular constituted church, (to weet such a one as ours is,) are no subjects of Christ's kingdom.

Neither is this position set down in our words; (to my knowledge;) neither doth Mr Bernard take away, but confirm rather the thing that we hold; for he granteth that they offend God, which may and do not ordinarily, (having 〈ϕ〉 canes offered) live in a church rightly constituted; and we grant that many of Christ's subjects, for want of means, do not live in a true constituted church, If therefore he were not a caviller, he would not have reckoned this among our errors.

That all nor in our way, are without: and we apply against them (in Engl.) 1 Cor. 5, 12, Eph. 2, 12.

The first part of this position, you must impu•e to Mr Bernard's charity, who w•ll needs frame our assertions for us, because he thinks we cannot speak for our selves; we might leave it unto him to frame an answer also. But if he would let us tell, what we hold, it is, that all not in the way •f Ch•ist, are without: and if this be an error, let him make the most of it.

The applying of those scriptures against them, he must be content to bear, til he or his brethren can prove themselves a true church; for though there b• great differences of people's professing religion, some with more truth, •ome with less; yet all not w•thin Christ's church, are without, as th• A•ostle speaketh. Mr Bernard's exception, that those places are meant of s•ch as never professed Christ at all; is childish: why doth he not except a•a•n•t the holy Ghost himself, who ap•lieth against the false Christ•ans of the R•mish Church, words and s•eaches meant first of heathen Babylon, that proof•ed not God or Christ at all.

His boasting of the word, sacraments, effects and deliverances; are before in this traatise taken away. And Mr Bernard's proofs, are but a begging of the question, which he blameth in other•, as before is obs•rued.

That only Sayncts, that is, a people forsaking all known sin, of which they m•y be convinced, doing all the known will of God, increasing and abiding ever thr••, are the only matter of a visi•le church.

Th•s Position I de•ey, and disclaym also the errors which he gathereth from •t: and therefore will spend no time in answering it; but refer Mr Ben to them that have so spoken or written, if any be. This we hold (〈ϕ〉 let us se what Mr Bernard can say against it,) that Saints by calling are the only mater of a true visible church. Yet withal we hold, that •any be calle•, but few chosen.

That •he power of Christ, that is, authority to preach, to administer the sacram••s, and to exercise the censures of the Church, belongeth to the whole Ch•rch, yea to everyone of them. And not the principal members thereof.

This opinion, he calleth the A, b, c, of Brownism: but he may put it if he please in the Criss-cross rew of Bernardisme; he himself being the first that I ever heard to utter such a position. This point he much urgeth and •relleth us with; he mentoned it in his For•speech to the Reader, thus, Th• Pa•ist saith, Christ's ruling power is in the Pope; nay, saith the Protestant. i• is in the ecclestaticall governors, Bishops, may saith the Puritan, it is in the Presbyterte; nay, saith the Brownist, it is in the body of the Congregation, the multitude, called the Church. And in this beginneth Brown•sme. &c.

Here first I require of Mr Bern. that he produce his authors, and show the book, or writing, where we have avouched such things. He tells his reader of all the errors that he chargeth us with, that we hold & cannot deny them, being already avouched under our hands: and that he will not wrong us in setting them down, &c. Yet durst he not (as every honest writer in such controversies use to do; and if he do not in his next, the reader may esteem of his truth and honesty as it is.

Next, for the point it self, I answer, Christ's ruling power, which the Papists say is in the Pope; we say not (as this man calumniateth us) that it is in the body of the Congregation, the multitude, but in Christ himself; and that the Pope is Antichrist, not for taking into his hands the power of the multitude, but of Christ, to rule and govern the church as Head of the same.

Again, Christ's ruling power, which the Protestants say is in the Bishops the Prelates, we do not say it is in the multitude; but in Christ himself: for he only is Lord of the Church, he only is Archbishop or Chief pastor; he only walketh among the seven golden Candlesticks, as Overseer of the seven churches; ruling them by his laws canons and decrees. Whereas the Bishops of England are spirituall Lord's, and one is Archishop and Primate over all: they rule many churches and ministers, make new canons and decrees in their Conuocation house; prescribe forms and words of prayer, and of preaching, by their liturgy and homilies, and other like spiritual jurisdiction, apperteyning to Christ alone, thus are they very Antichrists; and therefore with their exorbitant usurped. power, ought utterly to be abolished out of all Christian churches.

Neither, that ruling power of Christ, which the Protestants (whereby I suppose, Mr Bern. meaneth the Christian reform churches in other countries,) say is in the Presbytery; do we say, is in the multitude for we acknowledge Christ to have ordained a Presbitry; or Eldership, and that in every church, for to teach and rule them by his own word and laws, unto whom all the multitude, the members. the Saints ought to obey and submit themselves, as the scriptures teach And for the particular branches of this 6. Error that Mr Bernard chargeth us with, That the power of Christ, that is, authority to preach, belongeth to the whole church, ye to everyone of them, &c. we deny it, as he sets it down, and for the help of the reader whom he abuseth, will distinctly set down our opinion.

The word of God, is given to all and every member of the Church to read, and exercise privately: but publicly in the Church there is a double use, 1 in prophesy, and 2 in office, as the Apostle distinguisheth. The office of teaching is laid upon some few chosen & ordained thereunto Into this office may no man intrude, or usurp it, without a lawful calling. This we have long since published, as a part of our faith Confess, Art. 19.20.21. Teaching in way of prophesy, (which the Apostle treateth of 1 Cor, 14) is absolutely us lawful for all women in the church, but men, so many as have the gift and ability from God, may all prophesie one by one, of which point see our Confess Art 34. And this is that we hold concerning preaching, which whether it be an error and Mr Bern. hath so proved it, let the indifferent reader judge.

For the second point, authority to administer the sacraments, that it should belong to everyone of the church; we utterly deny; and marvel at Mr Bernard's unconscionable dealing with us, for in our Confession he could not but see, (unless he winked,) this plainly expressed, no sacraments to be administered until the Pastors or Teachers be chosen and ordained into their office.

The third and last, that everyone hath authority to execute the censures of the church we also deny; but hold, that every member hath authority to rebuke his brother for sin, and if he repent to forgive him, if not, to take witness; if yet he repent not, to tell it to the church, which church hath Christ's power to judge all within the same, and cast out from among them all wicked men: Now that everyone hath not this power, nor yet any member or members apart, we have plainly signified in our Confession, Art. 24. If this be an error in Mr Bernard's account, let him by the scriptures confute it, not only in us but in a principal minister of his own church, Folk, who hath written that the keys of the kingdom of heaven whatsoever they are; be committed to the whole church, and not to one person only, as Corian, Augustine, Chrysostom, Jerome, and all the ancient Doctors agree; lie to the scriptures do confess.

So then for popular government, (which Mr Bern. would traduce us by,) we hold it not, we approve it not, for if the multitude govern, then who shall be governed? Christian liberty (which all have) is one thing, the raynes of government (which some have) is another thing. Now how far the people's right and liberty and benefit thereby extendeth, would require a larged course to show, which is not my purpose here. It is ye no^ogh to manifest the iniquity of this adversary who would father such errors on us, dealing like his predecessors the Papists, who in this wise reproched the Protestants, as laboring to bring all things under the rule of the rash unconstant people and unlearned multitude; and to make the church democraticall and popular, because everyone of the people by his private spirit, is supreme judge and head in matters of religion.

Our different judgment and practice from the church of Engl. where all men as they call them, are forbidden all speaking or expounding of the word in the public assemblies, and where a Bishop, Chancellor, or Commissary, hath power to excommunicate by a Latin writ &c. Our difference also and dislike of the Presbyteries practice, whereby people are excluded, and deprived of a great part of their Christian liberty and benefit thereby, is in other books largely treated of, with scriptures & reasons many, which M. Bern. neither orderly handleth, nor soundly confuteth, as the wise reader may see; but ignorantly and confusedly shuffleth them over; running into by matters, and unjust calumniation. I will end therefore with the words of one of his fellow ministers, who touching this point of Church government writeth much more soundly then by Mr. Bern. in his blindness, hath done, Mr Jacob I mean, which saith, It is childish, and without all wit, to cry out against us as our adversaries do▪ Popularity, Anarchy &c. for our so▪ well grounded and so approved an assertion.

That the sin of one man publickly and obstinately stood in, being not reformed nor the offender cast out, doth so pollute the whole congregation, that none may communicate with him same in any of the holy things of God, (though it be a church rightly constituted, till the party be excommunicated.

I deny again this to be either our judgment or practice Mr. Bern. saith the former position is the ground of this; and so it seemeth, he calumniating us in the former, thought he might do likewise in this. We profess and have long since published, that none is to separate for faults &

corru•tiōs, which may & so long as the Church cōsist•th of m•rtall men will fall out and aris• among them; but by due order to s•k r•dress th•reof

Now that every Chr•stian not only may b• tought to rebuke his neighbor for sin, we ha•e plain laws both •n the Old Testament and the new Levite. 19.17. Luk. 17.3. That sinners not repenting, are after the second admonition to be signified unto the church, is also Christ's ordinance, Mat. 18, 15.17.

But what •f •he church will not cast him out? I answer; Synns are either con•rouertible or manifest. If controuertible and d•ubtf•ll; men ought to bear one with another's different judgment; if they do not, but, any for this make a breach or separation, they syn.

But if the sin be manifest, as for example a man is convict of adultery, blasphemy, theft or the like: and the church will not rebuke him nor cast him out, but suffer him obstinate and impenitent in his wickedness; and plead for him aga•nst such us call upon them for iudgem•nt: then are all such abettors of the wicked, sinners themselves; and that in a high degree, as th' Apostle noteth Rom. 1 31 the whole lump is leuened, 1 Cor. 5, 1, 6. &c. and now not that one man's sin, but the sin of them all, is that which polluteth them: for they favor and justify a wicked man more then God; therefore woe is unto them, and Solomon saith, He that saith to the wicked, thou art righteous him shall the people curse, and the multitude shall abhor him. Prov, 24 24

If M, Bern think the sin is the less, because a church maynteyns it; he is much deceived; evil, the more common it is▪ the worse •t is; because God is more dishonored, and men's souls more endangered.

If he think men should regard and reverence the church in this case▪ the law teacheth every man not to follow the many (or, the mighty) to do evil, nor agree in a controversy to decline after many, and overthrow (the right.) The •round of all this is plain in God's law, if any one of the people sinned against any of the commandments of the Lord, and one shown him his sin which he had committed, he was to bring his sacrifice, a testification of his repentance. If a ruler sinned, or the high priest himself, they were to do likewise. If the whole Congregation sinned, the like law was for them: God respected no persons; but if they that sinned were greater or moe in number, they were so far from being savored, as they had the greater sacrifice enjoined them, a private man offered a she-goat, a ruler a he-goat, the high Priest, and the Congregation, a young b•llock. These laws were given to all sorts of persons, for all manner sins' and the law was again repeated and stablished from that day forward throughout their generations, Num. 15.22.23. &c. But if any man despised this law, and sinned with a high hand, the same blasphemed the Lord, and was to be cut off from among his peo•le. Num. 15.30.31 Now further, that the whole congregation taking Part with wicked men in syn, after due admonition, are all defiled and subject to like judgment, we have a plain example in the whole Tribe of Benjamin, where in Gibeh one of their towns filthiness was committed, the Tribe was called upon to deliver th•se wicked men to death, that evil might be put away from Israel, ••t when they would not deliver them, all the other tribes warred against that tr•be, and almost rooted out every man of the same. Likewise the tr•bes of Israel in another case, said to some of their brethren, seeing ye rebel today against the Lord; even tomorrow he will be wroth with all the Congregation of Israel. Did not Achan sin, &c. and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel and this man alone perished not in his wickedness. What Mr Bern. seeth or how he readeth the scriptures I cannot tell; but if he knew the contagion of sin or guilt of the same, he would never have writen as he hath done Now where he pleadeth that men should not for the offender, refrain the holy things of God, abh•rr the sacrifices &c. We grant it. The holy things are always to be revered, God's house and sacrifices frequented, when we may without sin But we deny such an assembly to be God's church, as with a high hand sinneth, and blasphemeth the Lord. The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination. And it cannot be said that any holy thing is lawfully administered in such a society where all agree together to maintain open iniquity, and do despise the word of the Lord, calling them to repentance If they do not thus, we hold it not lawful to separate from them, nor in any wise at any time, till all holy and orderly means be used for their reclayming.

That every of their assemblies are false churches.

This we hold indeed, being understood of the ordinary cathedral & parish assemblies of England, which all are by one line. For defense of these churches Mr Bern. refers the reader to another treatise after, and so do I to the answer of the same, following. Yet least he should seem •o say nothing, Mr Ber excepteth 1 That they have no false head, for, they hold Jesus Christ. I answer, so might Jeroboam have pleaded for himself & his people, that they had no false head, but the true God which brought them out of the Land of Egypt. Yet were they a false church The Papists Papists and Anabaptists at this day, hold and profess Jesus Christ: yet such errors are among them, as Christ in deed is denyed: the parishes of England profess him also, but such is their estate otherwise, that they have him not truly for a head, prophet, priest, or king unto them; as before is proved. But it is enough for Mr Bernard to affirm without proof: and correction with him is a needfuller argument in this case t•ē i•struction For when the Priests li•s preserve not knowledge how should men be answered but by the gaole or gallows?

2. The matter (saith he) is not false: and to show this he noteth a difference between No matter, true matter, and false matter. No matter are th•y which make no profession of Christ at all; as Jews, Turks, and Pagans, True (visible) matter are all such as openly profess this main truth, that Jesus the son of Mary is the son of God• Christ the Lord, by whom only & alone they shall be saved. And false matter is contrary to this true matter.

I answer; this false matter is very rawly set down, for being contrary to the former true, it may imply Jews, and Turks, whom he made no matter: and then it confoundeth his own distinction. But if he mean that they which profess not Christ rightly and truly, as he setteth down, are a false matter, then, say I; •t will evince the matter of their Churches to be false, seeing there is not aright and true profession of Chr•st, made by their parishes• But Mr Ber. leaving out this word rightly & truly, tells us they all profess this faith, as is apparent 1 by the doctrine of their church (vidz. that in the Harmony of Confessions,) 2 by the same publicly preached 3 by the same maintained by their laws, writings and blood of holy martyrs. I answer, if all this were granted▪ yet will it not prove Mr Bernard's purpose, for some may write and preach the truth, the Magistrate may establish it by law, and some may seal it with their blood; and yet not all the nation be a true matter for Christ's church, except they also make like profession Which that the parishes of England do not, the profaneness of the multitudes show. But least I be thought to speak of envy, let us hear the testimony of their own ministers and such as were no favorers of us at all▪ as their malicious writings of us showeth Mr Nichols esteemed a forward preacher among them▪ saith, We find by great experience, (and I have now five and twenty years observed it,) that in those places where there is not preaching and private conferring of the Minister and the people; the most part have as little knowledge of God and of Christ, as Turks and Pagans. To confirm this, he gives us an example in his own flock For I have been in a parish saith he) of fowr hundred communicants, and maruelling that my preaching was so little regarded, I took upon me to confer with every man and woman, before they received the communion. & I asked them of Christ, what he was in his person; what his office; how firm came into the world; what punishment for sin; what becomes of our bodies being rotten in the grave and lastly whither it were possible for a man to live so uprightly, that by well doing he might win heaven. In all the former questions, I scarce found ten in the hundred to have any knowledge, but in the last question, scarce one, but did affirm, that man might be saved▪ by his own well doing, and that he trusted he did so live, that by God's grace he should obt•yn everlasting life by ser•ving of God and god prayers &c. Now then, this being so, tell me I pray yu (saith Mr Ni•hols▪ first for Ath•isme, whether these be any bettor then A•h•is•s, whi•h know not Christ? And tell me I pray you Mr Bernard whether th••• be a •rue matter, such as Christ's church consisteth of? But you would •a•• us believe the Bishops and Priests of Engl. are wondrous men; for i••hey write books, or preach sermons to the people, their whole Dioceses and Parishes must needs be esteemed converts and profelytes. Such effect & grace was never heard of before, since the world began. More absurd it is to say, that the good laws of the Magistrate, do make a profane idolatrous multitude, true professors: but most of all, that because some few were martyrs, therefore they that killed the martyrs, profess Christ truly. If these be not pregnant reasons, then M. Bernard's book is little worth. 3. But he proceedeth and saith, The visible form is not false; which is the uniting of us unto God, and one to another uisibly. This he would prove by 3, reasons 1 because the word is preached and offered to the people; 2 Because of the people's open profession of their faith, unto the doctrine, God working in them a will to receive it. 3 because the Lord's supper is in use among them. Sundry scriptures are alleged to show that thus the primitive churches were planted and constituted; all which we grant; but when he comes to apply these to themselves; he barely assumes, that thus is their case; neither answering any reason of ours to the contrary, nor showing any reason of his own, to confirm that which he saith. And what cause in the world, what church is so bad; but may thus be pleaded for? He knows well, that we except, (and the visible estate of that church, their own monuments, records, complaints, &c. do bear witness with us,) that they were planted in this religion and profession by force of the Magistrates law; that multitudes are profane; that many thousands want the preaching of the word; that they ar all compelled to come to church, be baptized, receive the communion, and the like; and what profession the poor ignorant people make, is before manifested. If he would hear more of their profession, and subjection to the word and ministry, Mr. Nichols shows it thus; How little have they esteemed the godly and learned ministers! How content they be with simple and ignorant men! How hardly are they drawn to pay duties which law hath appointed! How many quarrels they pick against painful ministers! And how little reverence they give to any that are faithful! How they follow their covetousness and pleasures! How they fill all sorts of courts with brawls, foolish and willful strifes, and suits, and demurs in law with murders, whoredoms▪ dronkennes, and all disorder. Loe this is the commendations of the professant people of the Church of Engl, whom Mr Bernard pleadeth for.

As for their constitution and uniting together into parishes▪ dioceses, pro•inces, and at last in to one national church with an Archbishop & his high court over all it is before shown to be a R•mis•t•o•, and antichristian, n•t justifiable by the law or testament of Christ.

4. Lastly, the visi•le properties are (he saith) not false •ut true, namely th•se, 1 Con•inuance in heari•g of the d•ct•ine of Christ received, and using of th• sacraments and prayer. 2 The hol•ing out of this truth an• 〈ϕ〉 sacra•ents as 〈ϕ〉 displ•ed, against the ene•y▪ 3 A care for the welfare of all, and everyone for 〈ϕ〉 and ech for o•her.

But all this build•ng is on a s•ndy ground: for their esta•e (as before is m•nif•stead▪ be•ng evil: the long•r they continue in it, the worse it is f•r them Cont•nuance to read •he service book, and homilies, to •rostitute t•e Sacra•ents to the profane, to administer them after a •opish m•nn•r, by a false m•n•ster•; these are the banners and ensigns of Antichrist▪ dis•laid •n all his a•embles; that poor souls have cause to complain a• in the Psalm, they have s•t up thi• banners for signs. As for the care of the well•are of all, &c. which Mr. B•rn. boasteth of: let Mr. Nichols foresaid complaynt of the people on the one hand▪ and the Bishops, & Priests open neglect & contempt of the people on the other hand, show what care they have one of another. For how many souls are miserably famished by dum, negligent, and non resident priests evil beasts and slow bellies. How many preachers are put out for not subscri•ng and using the ceremonies, &c. These, that I g•ue no other instances, show what care there is of men's sowless am•• them; which he that commendeth, shows himself careless what he speaks or writes.

Our 9. error is, that we say, All th••r minist•rs are false ministers. Against this Mr Bernard allegeth for the truth of their ministry, that they are sent of Christ according to his ordinance in his church, as is manifested by th•, th•t they are quall•fi•d with good gifts, they are called by the church, & such also as d•e diligently, and faithfully preach, and so preach Christ as many th•reby doeth ar and bel•eve, even confirming their calling by the blessed success and effect of th•i• lab•urs. Rom. 10.14.15. 1 Cor. 9.2.

First, if Mr Bernard would indeed have refuted our error, if such it be he should• have answered the reasons which in many writings we have br•ught a••inst th••r min•stery B•t he found that, all too heavy.

The• for the reasons that ••ms•lfe alleg•th, they are naked and without all co•firm•ti•n; such as Pa•ist•, Anabaptists or any other Antichristians might •llege for the•sel•es F•r, a Papist will •oast as well as he, that their Priests are qu•lifi•• wi•h go•d gifts, called, by the church, do diligently an• faithfully pre•ch, so as 〈...〉 h••r an• believe. B•t I will answer ech of •is part•c•l•r• Their qualificatiō is with Good gifts, is no proffe of a lawful ministry; seeing many private men haue as good gifts as they; usurpers and intruders may also haue as excellent gifts, as lawful officers: Jesuits, Smmories and there instruments of Satan, are known to be as learned and well furnished with gifts, as Mr Bern. and his brethren. 4 Moreover I deny that the principal ministers of England are qualified or able to execute their office; the Archbishops, Bishops Archdeacons, &c. that haue whole Dioceses and Provinces under their charge cannot possibly perform the duty of true ministers unto them. 5 And finally a number of ignorant Sir John's can read their Leiturgie unto their parishes; and haue no other good ministerial quality.

The second thing, their calling by the church; which afterward he explaineth thus; being examined, found fit, and so are elect and ordained; this 〈...〉 upon the sands; for the church of England not being a true church of God, as is before manifested, hath no power from God to call and ordeyn ministers. But besides this, I would fain learn of Mr Bern. what Church it is that examined, elected, and ordained his Lord's grace of Canterbory, for Archbishop then whether the same or some other church examined elected and ordained the Diocesan Bishops, the Deans the Archdeacons, and the rest of that Lordly priesthood, then what church ordained the parish Priests, and Deacons. These things if he dare undertake to deal in, and bring to the trial: will be found more agreeable to the Canons of the Pope, then to the testament of Christ.

Their office it self, Mr Bern. balketh quite, and tells us not what functions this pompous clergy haue to execute, yet is it most needful to be known, for how else shall men discern their administration? To begin therefore with his Arch Lord of Cant. the Angel of the church of Engl. what office hath he to execute, of a Pastor; or of a Pope? If he be Pastor of this church, what be the inferior Bishops; petty Pastors, or petty popes? what offices 〈◇〉 the Suffragans, Chancelors, deanes, Archdeacons Commissars, officials, Doctors Proctors, and the residew of that army? what offices haue the Prebendaries, Canons, Pitanons, Chanters, Subchanters, and other like bords of the cloister? what offices haue the Bishops bay lifts the Priests, the half priests or Deacons, the Parsons, and Vicars, the Churchwardens, Clerks, & Sextius? Mr Bern. affirmeth that the Lord only ordeyneth offices in his church 1 Cor. 12. and that the church it self cannot do this, but Jesus Christ both Lord and King. Now seeing he hath ouerskipped in this book, all the stately offices that are in his church: let him in his next show (if he can) the offices that Christ in his testament hath appointed this troop of horsemen and chariots unto.

Now for their administration, he telleth us, they preach the true doctrine or Christ, administer the sacraments, perform their office faithfully, and live consistently, and Christ doth assist such graciously in conuerting souls, and his people do approve of them.

Fayr words, and such as it seemeth Mr Bern. useth to feed his flock with: but if one deny that thus it is, he must tarry for proof, till another treatise come forth; it was enough in this, to affirm it so to be; and for his Lord's grace to confirm it. Well, to let pass the multitude of complaints and testimonies to the contrary in their own books, let him show how it is possible for the Archbishop of the church of Engl. or the inferior Bishops, to preach and perform their office faithfully, unto so many hundreds of parishes, & thousands of people, as are under their charge. Let the infinite number of souls that are famished under them speak, how often their Chief-shepherd of Cant have fed them with the word and sacraments, (unless perhaps he hath blessed some of their youthes with the Sacrament of Confirmation;) how many of their souls he hath converted, yea let them say whether ever he saw their face? As for the Bishops Deputies the parish priests, many of them are dumb by nature, and cannot preach; many are made dumb by their spiritual Lord's power, and silenced for disobeyed•ence; so preaching wexeth geazon, and people perish for want of Instruction. In the mean time, this painful Clergy feedeth the Lay weekly, with their mattings, Euensong, and Homilies; and sometimes in a year with sermon, and reading the Bishops canons. They discipline their notorious sinners, with reading curses and Comminations out of the pulpit, till the Lent penance (which is much to be wished) be restored again: they solemnize the holy days of Angels and of Saints; they give ech man the sacrament at Easter devoutly upon his knees, they baptize with water, and a sign of the cross in the a•er; they wed their parishioners with a ring, & teach the man to worship his wife, in the name of the Father and of the Son & of the holy Ghost: they church the women after childbirth: they visi• the sick, and absolve him from all his sins, and howsel him with a Communion: and last of all, they bury the dead, in sure and certain hope of resurrection to eternal life. And this is enough for priests to do in the country parishes; but in the Cathedral churches, where Bishops, Deans; and other great Doctors do reside; there the Queriste•s and Organ-pipes, make sweeter melody. Mr. Bern. confesseth that the Lord only prescribes the duties to be done in every distinct •ffice: now he that knows not these dutiess to belong to Christ's ministers, or these works to be a faithful performance of ministerial office, let him read Mr Bernard's book, for there he hath quoted many scriptures, the end of all which is to raise an evident proof of the truth of their ministry and administration; as if one should cite the second commandment, for to uphold idolatry.

The effects of their administration, in converting souls, is but a vain boast, as their idolatrous estate, with the lamentable ignorance and profaneness of the people everywhere showeth The reasons brought by others (for Mr Bern bringeth none,) to persuade such effects, are before in this treatise answered.. It maketh also against the estate of this church and ministry; for if these preachers have converted and wrought faith in some of their hearers, then it followeth that before that conversion they were infidels, yet were they of the church and had this ministry set over them, as all men know. Which how it can stand with the r•les of God's word, hath never yet been shown. The example which Mr Bern. allegeth of th' Apostle 1 Cor, 9.1.2. helpeth him nothing: For Apostles were sent to convert heathens, but Pastors are set for to feed converted Christians. And the Priests of England challenge to be Pastors, I ween, and not Apostles. Again the work and seal of Paul's Apostleship was seen in Corinth, by separating the believers from infidels; and g•there•ng the Saints only into the communion of the church, under the officers gi•en of Christ but in England the vnb•leeuers and wicked, were received and are retained in the church. So that Mr. Bern. is but a •alse Apostle (as his work shows) if he be any at all. But in the end he tells us we forget to justify the lawfulness of our own ministers, who are made •i•ist•rs •y s•ch as are no ministers, contrary to the constant practice of the church of God, from the days of Adam hitherto. &c. In which dispute, Mr. Bern. teacheth plain apostasy from the Gospel unto Popery, from wh•ch he deriueth the ministry of his church of Engl. For seeing all the examples that he allegeth from scriptures, are of Divine persons and approved ministers of the true church; and coming to his church of England, he fetcheth her ministry out of the Popish church and from the Prelates thereof, it cannot be (if his last words agree with his first) but the popish church is a true church, and their prelates true ministers. Otherwise his reasoning is absurd, to say, God ordained Adam, Moses ordained Aaron; Christ ordained the Apostles; the Apostles ordained other ministers in churches: therefore Antichrist of Rome, his synagogue of Satan, & his eldest sonnes the Prelates, must or may ordain ministers in the church of Christ. If this be a good consequence let all men judge: if it be not, then Mr. Bern. holdeth the popish church, and the popish ministers true ministers; and so himself and his church of England must needs be schismatiks for leaving that church of Rome. When he hath cleared himself of this his absurd doctrine, then (if he cannot see that the church of Christ hath power to ordain her own ministers) it shall be shown him by the scriptures, Till then, what should we do following of a wavering reed, whom we cannot tell by his writing, whether he be Papist or Protestant. And that the reader may see into what an intricate Labyrinth the ministers of England have brought themselves, about this matter of their ministry, by writing as they have do both of the Papists and of us: I will set down a Papist argument against them: from which how handsomely they can defend themselves, I would fain see. There came out, in anno 1602 a book called A detection of diverse notable untruths &c. wherein the author having to deal with Mr. Sutcliffe, who as (he saith) had reasoned thus, The true church is a society of faithful people under lawful Pastors &c. But the Church of Rome hath long wanted true Pastors and Bishops; for the Romish Bishops have no authority or mission but from the Pope, to whom also they swear feally: but he hath no authority to send them or ordain them, being himself no Bishop, &c. This argument of Mr. Sutcliffe the Papist retorteth thus. The true church of Christ hath always true Pastors and Bishops: but the English Congregation wanteth true Priests and Bishops: Therefore the English congregation (ϕ) *not the true church of Christ. The first proposition (saith the Papist) he must not deny, being of his own making, &c. The 2, proposition is apparent according to Mr. Sutcliffe's divinity. For most certain it is, that their first Bishops received their orders and consecration from our catholic Bishops, as his brother Bel confesseth, Survey. pag. 201. And the thing it self speaketh: seeing when there began, there was not any protestant Bishop or Priest &c. And if Mr. Sutcliffe dare deny that their Bishops were consecrated ours, then let him name who they were that did lay hands upon Mr. Parker the first of Cant. that derived not their mission authority and consecration from the Bishop of Rome. Certayn it is, that yther none at all can be named, or else none besides: therefore if our Bishops be no Bishops, then doth it follow most evidently, that all the English Bishops, be no Bishops at all, as having no other consecration then from them: And if our English Prelates be no true Bishops, then surely yther be they Priests or Ministers or Deacons, that be ordained by them, and so consequently the congregation of E.g., by Mr. Sutcliffe's argument, not the true church of Christ. This is the Catholic's argument and plea: which how Mr. Bern. or his brethren will well answer, and stand also to that which they have written against us; I cannot tell.*

Finally, against that often boasting of the work and effect of the ministry of Engl. I will oppose a testimony of one of their chief ministers, yet our professed adversary, that it cannot be thought he was partial for us at all. Mr. Gifford is the man that thus hath written. Sometime wonder how it should come to pass; that among us there should be so many which being borne since the gospel was restored in this land are so zealously addicted unto Popery, which they never did know. and so utter enemies to the Gospel which they hear. But if they weigh the causes of this deadly mischief, they will cease wondering at that, and rather wonder that there be no more. For how can it be so long as there be so many abuses in the ministry, but that many shall stumble and loath the Gospel. For from thence as it is manifest, the chief cause of this evil doth spring. True it is that our ministry doth fight against them but yet in such sort, that it doth greatly increase them. Seeming and pretending to tread upon those cockatrice eggs, for to break them, and so to destroy utterly the viperous generation: when as indeed they sit upon them, and so hatch the broods of this evil kind, and bring them forth in great plenty. For behold a number cry out against popery, and proclaim utter defiance in speech: but their doings are such, that for everyone which they convert to the gospel, they cause an hundred to revolt, to be hardened in their errors, or to fall into flat Atheism. While many contrary to the professiō which they made when they entered, setting aside the care of souls, not esteeming nor regarding what become of them, study most how to clime high, and to satisfy their ambitious desire of honor: taking together livings covetously and greedily: not caring who feed the flock, so they may come by the fleese, Moreover the door hath been opened also to let into the church { and swarm of such, as are more like the priests of Jeroboam, then ministers of the gospel: not only unlearned idols, which have mouths and speak not; which being weary of their occupations, and covet to live easily, and to that end are entered; but also riotous, dicers, gamesters, quaffers, quarrellers, adulterers and such like. If the matter were secret I should do amiss to make it manifest; but when it is open in the sight and view of all men, who can complain justly when it is spoken of? Let this record of Mr Giffords, for the effect of their administration and their good qualities besides, together with Mr Bernard's former doctrine for their first calling and ordination by the popish prelates; show whether it be not like, that this ministry will ere long make accord with the mother church of Rome that hatched it, and for whom it again hatcheth cockatrices eggs.

The tenth error that we should hold is, that their worship (in Engl.) is a false worship. To prove this to be an error, Mr Bern. bringeth these reasons.

1. That they worship no false God.

I answer. Neither did Jeroboam the son of Neba who made Israel to syn: yet used he a false worship 1 King. 12.

2. That they worship the true God with no false worship; for they have the true word preached, the true sacraments, and their prayers are such as may be warranted by the word. &c.

I answer, this is but taking for granted, that which he should prove; for he knows well that we deny these things, and by many reasons in sundry books (none of which Mr Bern. answereth) have disproved their preaching, ministering of Sacraments, book prayer &c. Seeing he will answer nothing before written by us, let him in his next book, prove that the Apocrypha scriptures and homily books, which they read in God's worship are his true word; that the sacraments which the unpreaching priests minister to their profane parishioners by their popish leiturge, are true sacraments; let him approve by God's word the observation of all their holy days, fasting days, with their prescript peculiar service; briefly, let him show warrant for his service book, the making and use thereof with all the popish contents therein. These are strange incense, new forgeries of their own, never appointed by Christ or his Apostles: wherefore we doubt not to affirm their worship to be false, even an human invention. With these things Mr Bern. medle•h not, but bringeth proof for other matters, which we never denied; and referreth us to an after treatise. which now next followeth to be answered. Yet ere he leaveth us, he will utter all his heart, and from his inner store poureth out against us 12. errors moe, wh•ch he will not spend time (he saith) in con•ut•tion of, they are so absurd and false; being also (as he thinketh) con•ured by the former. Though nothing need be answered where no show of proof is made: yet to satisfy the reader and show him the vanity of this adversary, I will briefly touch them all; and they be these.

[I] 1 That their congregations, as they stand, are all and every of them incapable before God to choose them ministers, though they desire the means of salvation.

Al such as desire the means of salvation in what congregations soever, have, ower and liberty from God to separate from all evil, and join together in good, and so to enjoy God's blessings in his ministry, or any other part of the Gos•el But, we hold that no false church, hath power from God to choose ministers: which he hath ordained only for true churches. 1 Cor. 12.28. E•h. 4, 12 R•m. 12.4, 5 &c. & we wonder with what face any Christian can say otherwise. If Mr Bern. make the error to be in holding them false churches; then is it the same with the 8. error before answered, and is here b•t idly of him repeated.

[II] 2. That God in their best assembli•s, is worshipped after a false manner.

An other idle repetition of that which before he made our Tenth error, which there was answered.

[III] 3. That baptism is not administered into the faith of Christ simply, but into the faith of Bishops, and Church of Engl.

This I think is Mr Bernard's uncharitable collection, not our Position. Though we hold baptism among them to be administered neither by a true minister nor after a lawful manner, but according to their own prescript Liturgy and to the seed of the w•cked, with great dishonor of the precious blood of Christ; and therefore to be no true seal of God's covenant unto them.

[IIII,] 4. That their faith and repentance is a false faith, and a false repentance.

Faithfulness and repentance is desired in Mr Bernard himself, who careth not to calumniate us We profess to judge no secret things such as true faith and repentance are. We are persuaded many in true churches may have a false faith and a false repentance, because there are many hypocrite• also that many in false churches may have true faith and repentance, for there are God's elect But who these are on both sides, we leave unto God that knows them. Of Mr Bernard's church this is that we say, they walk not in the true faith, they bring not forth fruits of tr•e repentance, in the public estate wherein they stand.

[V] 5. That th•ir Ministers converting men to God there, do it not as Pastors but as Teachers.

This distinction which Mr Bern. skoffeth at▪ must rest, skoff and all, in his own bosom, till he bring out another father. I know not who begat it.

[VI] 6. That their church standeth in an adultrous estate. A strange assertion (saith Mr Bern.) what idol worship we?

False worship is spiritual adultery Ier. 3. If Mr Bern. were not a stranger in Christ fold, he would so acknowledge it, and not count it our error. If he say the error is in holding their worship to be false; then say I, he repeteth now the third time, that which before he made our 10. & again our second Errors, and if he go forward thus, he may multiply it to a thousand, and teach us new Arithmetik. If he would know what idol he worships! let him take his Ordinary for one among many, who standeth for a spiritual Lord over many churches, vsur'ing Christ's place: to him doth Mr Bern. with his flock, bow and stoup. An other idol he may •nde in his pue.

7. That we cannot say certaynly by any warrant of God's word, that any of [VII] them hath either faith or fear of God.

A hard speech, If that man whom he mentioneth in the margin, so said; let not one man's word be imputed to our common cause He may see it otherwise minded by others of us, before in this treatise pag. 39 and our Apolog. pag. 91.92.

8. That n•ne of their ministers may be heard. [VIII]

Not heard in the execution of their ministry, for it is of Antichrist. Christ's sheep hear his voice, not a strangers John, 10 All Antichrists ministers are strangers. So are all ministers of every false Church. Such their church and ministry hath been proved to be in many treatises.

9, That it is not lawful to join in prayer with any of them, [IX]

As a false church generally, so the members thereof particularly, may not be communicated with in spiritual actions. Such we hold, & have proved their church to be. Til Mr Bern. take away this foundation, he fighte•h but with shadows; and showeth his ignorance in the communion of the Saints.

10. That ministers may not celebrate marriage nor bury the dead. [X]

There wanteth a third thing to make up the error, Churching of women These and the l•ke ministerial functions, we know the Romish Antichrist layeth on his priests, and the Prelates of England on theirs: But in Christ's testament we find no such duties imposed upon his ministry Let Mr. Ber therefore bury his dead still; for he will quicken but a few by his popish doctrine.

11, That ministers should only live of voluntary contribution, and not either [XI] of set stipends or tithes.

Against this Mr Bern. allegeth God's wisdom who allowed a settled maintenance under the law: and there is nothing against it in the Gospel,

God in wisdom appointed tithes, first fruits & other particulars for his Priests liuelihod ūder the law: Christ in wisdom appoint•th nonee such for his ministers under the gospel; but Pope Paschalis about 827 years after Christ decreed that tithes should be given to the priests. This Popes wisdom Mr Ber. preferreth before Christ's. It cannot be denyed but tithes were a part of the Law, and that Chris• abolished the legal Priesthood; whereupon it followeth by the plain doctrine of the Gospel, if the priesthood be changed, then of necessity must there be a change of the law. Heb. 7.12. But Mr Bern. had rather any shadow should be done away then this of Tithes, for it hath much substance with it. and there be moe siluersmithes of Demetrius mind which said, Siroye know, that by this craft we have our goods. But what saith one of their own ancient Martyrs against Mr Bernard's predecessors. This Priesthood is blown so high and borne up in pride and vain glory of their estate and dignity, and so blinded with worldly covetousness, that th•y disdain to follow Christ in very meekness and willful poverty, living holily, and preaching God's word truly freely and continually, taking th•ir liuelihood at the freewil of the People; of their pure almose, where and when they suffice not for their true and busy preaching to get their sustenance with their hands To this true sentence grounded on Christ's own l•uing, and teaching of his Apostles, these foresaid worldly and fleshly priests, will not consent effect ally, &c. If this martyr were now alive, the Clerg•e of England would sooner condemn him for a Brownist then appro•e of his doctrine; albeit now that he is dead, they garnish his toomb.

[XII] 12. That their churches ought to be raced down, and not to be jmployed to the true worship of God.

To repayr this ruin, M. Bernard telleth us; there is great difference between Antichristianism and Paganism. He might tell us also there is great difference between Paganism & Paganism, some Pagans worship•ng the true God ignorantly; some the Sun and Moon and host of heaven, some the Diuil himself. But what were this to the purpose? The thing he should show is that God more estemeth favoereth alloweth or tolerateth antichrists idol houses, then of the Pagans. Till he do this, we know that by God's word and in his account, as Pagans worship Devils, so Antichristians worship diu•ls Let men feign to themselves what difference they l•st. But it must be proved (saith Mr Bern.) that our churches were built by Antichrist. First God in his law required no such proof, when he commanded utterly to destroy all the places wherein the nations which Israel should possess served their God's; whether it were in the grove which Abraham himself had planted, or on the altars which he had built; the law of God made no inquiry Secondly, If M, Bern. will seek the records of his temples, he may find many to have been built by Papists, if he will grant that they be Antichristians: or if he will go f•rther, he may find some of them built by heathens, and dedicated to Devils. But though the Records said nothing, yet the form and shape of these mass houses, proclaim them to be the very shrines of idols, and liable to the Curse.

Thus are we come to an end with M, Bernard; passing by his impertinent discourses, which in his roving he ran into: leaving him also for his unchristian reproaches, and injurious calumniation, to the mercy or judgment of the Lord, who behold cometh with ten thows•nds of his Saints to give judgment against all men, and to rebuke all the ungodly among them, of all their wicked deeds which they have wickedly committed, and of all their cruel speakings, which wicked sinners have spoke against him.

THE MINISTERS POSITIONS SHAKEN.

There is added to Mr Bernard's book, another work entitled; CERTAIN POSITIONS held and maintained by some godly ministers of the gospel, against those of the separation, and namely against Barrow & Greenwood. The groundwork whereof is thus laid;

That the Church of England is a true Church of Christ and such a one as from which whosoever wittingly and continually separateth himself, cutteth himself off from Christ

I will not stand upon the consequences that may be made of this position, whereby all that abhorring the abominations in that church, and so separating from it, are quite cut off from Christ, whatsoever truth they prove and walk in, or whatsoever other church they join unto: but I will insist in a brief answer to that which these Ministers bring to prove this their peremptory sentence, and they be 4. reasons.

1, For that they enjoy and join together in the use of those outward means which God in his word hath ordained for the gathering of an invisible Church: that is, preaching of the gospel, and administration of the sacraments.

2. For that their whole church maketh profession of the true faith.

3. For that they hold and teach &c. all truths fundamental.

4. For that all known churches in the world acknowledge that church for their sister, and give unto her the right hand of fellowship.

These things have been before handled in this treatise, and the weakness of them discovered: yet because it may be thought new men will make new arguments, and many heads together bring forth deep counsels, let us weigh what these godly ministers have here said.

For proof of the first point, they do allege that the means which they use and enjoy have been effectual to the unfeigned conversion of many: as may appear both by the other fruits of faith that may be found amongst them, and by the martyrdom which sundry have endured &c: yea even we ourselves are able to witness with them, that if there be any true faith and sanctification in us, it was begun and bred in their assemblies,

Secondly, that if Mat. 8.18.20 Eph. 4, 11.12.14 be well examined, it will be found that the means which Christ ordained for the gathering of an invisible church are the very same which they enjoy even the preaching of the word and administration of the sacraments.

I answer; All this that they say will not prove their, Position, namely that the church of England which consisteth of the whole nation, divided in to many dioceses and parishes, under one or two Archbishops &c. is a true church of Christ. For the Papists boast of all these things, as colorable and as truly as these ministers Their priests have converted many from Pagenisme, Judaism, and profaneness of life; their church hath had many martyrs; Luther and others that first left them, had their faith begun in their assemblies; &c. and whatsoever Ministry is in England, from the Archprelate to the half priest, the Papists, have amongst them yea Engl. had it from them. And it is to be admired that these godly ministers can allege nothing for their church, but such old popish stales.

How vainly they assume these things unto themselves, hath been shown before: fruits of faith appear not in their confuse assemblies where God is publicly dishonored by false worship; his enemies (profane & wicked people) fostered and blessed with his most holy things, and Antichristian prelates, and Canons obeyed:

Were it as they say, that many have been converted, is that enough to make all the church? We have testimonies from their own mouths that there be swarms and thousands of profane, irreligeous, atheists, blasphemers and open wicked livers Mr Gifford a champion of their own hath confessed and printed it that through want and absence of sincere ministry, there is a flood of ignorance and darkness overflowing the most part of the land: the fear of God is banished from the greatest part: the wonderful heaps and piles of sin, which should be washed and cleansed away by the word, do undoubtedly with one voice cry allowed in the ears of the Lord for vengeance upon the whole realm &c Shall now a few supposed converts, make all this rowt a Christian church? It is impiety, and an overthrow of the Gospel. Gen. 3.15. 2 Cor. 6.14, 18, Mat, 15.13. Reu. 21..2:3.27. and 28.15.

What mean these Ministers to boast so much of their martyrs whose blood cries against them, in the ears of the Lord of hosts. For did not their church kill them? Let one of themselves speak in this case, least we be thought partial. Who knoweth not (saith Mr Nichols,) how much blood of God's Saints. was spilled in former ages, and how many houses were guilty of blood? And when did this land seriously and sincerely humble it self. & by open repentance make reconciliation for the same? Nay rather how many thousands repined at the happy reign of her majesty, for the casting out of the idolatrous and superstitious worship of God, and for the establishing of his holy name and the liberty in preaching of the Gospel? This testimony is known to be true; the greater is their sin that now plead for such a people to be a true Church of God. Shall the Cainites be honored for Abel's martyrdom; or the Jews for crucifying Christ? then also may the bloody generation of Papists be canonized for Saints, and made members without repentance) of a Christian church. And for these ministers, let them heart and make use of Christ's words to their predecessors. Woe unto you, for ye build the sepulchers of the prophets, and your fathers killed them Truly ye bear witness and allow the deeds of your fathers, for they killed them, and ye build their sepulchers. Fulfil ye also the measure of your Fathers.

It is a slight and simple kind of reasoning, to tell us if those scripture Mat. 28. Eph. 4. be well examined; it will be found that the means which Christ ordained for the gathering of an invisible church, are the very same which they enjoy. First, what dotting Friar will not say this much, for his popish Synagogue? Then, why do not these ministers bring the means they boast of to the examination by these scriptures: is it enough (think they to the examination by these scriptures: is it enough (think they) to cite a text or two, and then ran away; The scriptures they allege have been before examined and the ministers of Engl. being put into the other balance, are found all too light. But if it were true that they had the mean; yet their argument is false if they conclude of the effect. Israel had far better means; then England I am sure: for the Prophets, and Apostles and Christ himself preached among them Yet loe he complaineth that he had labored in vain; for Jerusalem killed the Prophets, and stoned those that were sent unto them, and the Lord by his Apostles stretched forth his hand to a disobedient and gainsaying people. And shall we think that the Pr•ests of Engl. have such power and grace tied to their lips, that because they have •reached, therefore the whole nation is a true church? Or dot• there such virtue proceed from these ministers, as can make the multitu•e of swaggering professors, atheists, blasphemers, and all sorts of profane which swarm in the land, to be turned Christians. worthy to be washed and fed with the body and blood of, Christ. and yet continue atheists and profane as before? what wondrous effect shall we next hear of, but that their preaching hath converted the Devils also.

But let us hear what testimony M. Gifford hath left beh•nde him, of the gra• & learned pr•achers of the church of Engl: among whom himself was one,) and of the people in their parishes, The Diull (saith he) is content those preachers should ride upon his back because he is sure they will not spurg all him: they be very gentle riders. Do ye not think, that if they should set forth God's word as they ought, and spread the light: that all wicked, (of which their parish is full,) would storm and fret against them? the Devil himself would fi•k about, if they should spur him but a little. But they can tell a smooth tale in the pulpit garnished with some merry story, for to make the people merry or else some old rotten allegory; or some far fetched matter out of some great writers, that their people may be at their wits end and admit them. A man would think to see the people come out of the church blowing, that they were fed as full as tikes: when they go home with empty bellies. This I dare warrant, if it be not so let me loose both mine ears, that g•e through the parishes of these gra•e and learned Divines and except such as run to fetch their victuals elsewhere, ye shall not find fi•e among five skore, which are able to understand the necessary grounds and principles of religion: and yet the People will say, they be excellent deep men. But I love not those welles which are so deep, that a man can draw no water out of them. Loe here the means which the, parishes of England do enjoy, and worthy effects that follow. If Mr Barrow. or any of us, should I have written this, it would have been counted s•ffing, r•yling, & blasphemy: but now that Mr Gifford, (so worthy a patron of the church) hath thus recorded, I hope the witness will be thought irrefragable And now let these godly ministers examine Mat 28. & Eph. 4 and see if there they can find these means which they enjoy, justified.

But they proceed and tell us in their second reason that their whole church maketh profession of the true faith. For the Confessiō of their church together together with the Apology thereof, and those articles of religion agreed upon in the Conuocation house, anno 1562, do prove this evidently. But herein they would deceive the simple evidently: for first profession of the true saith, when men in practice do deny it, maketh them not a true church, but they are as the Apostle saith, abominable.

Then for profession it self, if it be by constraint, for fear of punishment, by m•n that otherwise are profan•, lewd, and dissolute and enemies to the gospel this is no true profession, such as will make men a true church, for they ought to receive and profess the truth willingly and gladly Psal, 110.3. Act. 2 41. Now we know that with them, men were and are forced to the profession they make, and if it were at their own choice, many thousands would profess otherwise. Their own acts and Monuments, (besides manifest experience) do witness this. For Mr Fox reporteth, that when K. Edward had established this church and religion many people in Cornwal. Deuenshire and other places, not only misliked it, but openly rebelled for their old idolatry. The Priests, though some allowed, yet others dissembled, and many carelessly con•erned all, and still excercised their old mon•ed Popery. The Justices &c were not only slack in furthering of religion, but hindered so much as lay in them the Kings proceedings &c. So that civil force, not Christian zelo made men Protestants in that Kings days: wherefore at his death, having gotten Q. Mary, they so• up again their Romish superstition, and persecuted the other unto the death. Til Q. Elisah came, and enforced them the second time to put away the•r Latin Mass and images, and receive that English service and ceremonies, wh•ch since have prevailed to this day, Wh•ch how willingly the people ye•lded unto, Mr Nichols testimony (to omit all others) before alleged, showeth.

And How well this religion is liked of now after so many years• let the multitude of church papists in England show: together with the whole row• of rebels in Ireland, all which are of the communion of the church of Engl, having the same Bishops, Priests, service &• the English and Irish that dwell in the country, being joined together in one body and brotherhood: Then add to these papists, the profane time-seruers, such as M. Gifford describeth thus, I know there be many which care not for the Pope, but yet believe much of his doctrine: they be those which we call Atheists of no religion: but look whatsoever any prince doth set forth that they will profess and add unto them those other firarmes in the church of England that Mr Chaderton complaineth of; eronius and heretical sectaries, witches, charmers sorcerers, murderers, thieves, adulterers, liars, &c and all these together being compelled by law into one church and brotherhood, can any man doubt now of that which these ministers, say, that their whole church maketh profession of the true faith?

The Confession, Apology. and Conuocation-house articles, are strange proofs of the people's profession. If a few men in their Studies or Consistories, write books or articles of religion. and send them a broad; must all people that see or hear them, will they nil they, needs be counted professors of that religion? yea such also as never heard of them in their lives nor cannot tell what they meāe? Surly these ministers ar either very ignorant, or careless what they say, when they call this an evident proof. The churches in France and Belgium have published Confessions and Articles also, better then those in England: yet are there thousands and ten thousands dwelling among them, that neither so profess, nor are members of their churches.

But if it were granted that the public writings, articles canons &c. are to be esteemed the faith & profession of all Engl. yet we deny them to make profession of the true faith; for their Service book, homilies. book of Ordination, with the impious canons confirming all the Romish idolatries, Antichristian clergy and ceremonies that are among them, excommunicating, ipso facto, all that speak against them; this is no true Christian profession, whatsoever other truths are mixed with them. For as the Papists holding many good grounds of religion in general, yet by other additions and contradictions, do overthrow the truth: so is it in England, as before in this treatise, and in many others, hath been proved and after shall further appear.

Whereas these Ministers confidently deny that their church accounteth any one for her child or member, that doth not profess the faith of Christ in some measure: it is nothing but a vain flourish. For was there ever such grossnes in the deepest gulf of Popery as to deny Christ utterly, and not to profess him in some measure? Nay it could not be the throne of Antichrist unless he did profess Christ. It is well known, none are baptized among the Papists, but they profess the very same faith that is now professed at the baptism in Engl. namely that which they call th' Apostles Creed So then what have these godly ministers said more then the simplest papist in the world could have said for his church? Now in that they make this a color, as if the profane and wicked were not accounted children of the church: they show themselves to be the snare of a fowler in all their ways: yet set they a snare so slight, that every man may break it. For who knows not that there be multitudes of profane and wicked persons in the land? Who knows not that the whole land generally is baptized? Yea the baptisiing of the seed of the most wicked, is not only practiced but befended in print, by their late Archbishop D. Whitg. who pleaded what if it be the child of a dronkard, or of an harlot? what if the Parents be papists? what if they be heretics? &c. shall not their children be baptized? Yes, he will have it to be a common passage for all uile persons, Good and evil (saith he) clean and unclean, holy and profane, must needs pass by it. And at baptism their service book teacheth the priest to say of everyone, we receive this child into the congregation of Christ's flock. Being thus received, not one of a thousand wicked persons, are ever excommunicated: but are fostered in the church until their death; and then the priest is taught again to say that it hath pleased God to take unto himself the sowle of their dear brother there departed, and so he committeth his body to the ground in sure and certain hope of resurrection to eternal life. This being the general state of the land, as all men know; what dissemblers are these Ministers to intimate. as if their church acknowledged not the open wicked for her children and members? Mr Gifford, when time was, yielded far otherwise. I confess (saith he) that our church, if ye understand the whole assembly, is full of all wicked vices. There are a number among us which are of your brood, speaking to a apist,) whose evil life is seen well enough, there ar• a very great number of mere worldlings which do not greatly esteem any religion although they seem now because of laws, to allow and favor our side. &c.

Now having said somewhat for themselves, such as it is, they cavil at our description of a church, when we say, that it is a company of faithful people that truly worship Christ and rea•lie obey him. This say these Ministers, is utterly untrue if it be understood of the visible church. This is strange. What would they have us describe the Church to be a company of infidels; or a company of faithful and of infidels together: when Paul teacheth that there is no communion between such, 2 Cor 6.14.15 or should we say, a people that falsely worship Christ? Indeed if so we held, we might well return to their Church of England; for there is false worship more then enough. The Apostle writing to the visible church of Ephesus, calleth them Saints, and th• faithful in Christ Jesus. Will they say that this also was utterly untrue? Their own Articles of religion in England say thus; the visible church of Christ, is a congregation of faithful people &c.

and is this also vttrly untrue? But let us hear their reason why this should be untruth. For (say they) if everyone that the church may account a visible member, be truly faithful, how is our Savior to be understood when he compareth the church or ministry thereof to a draw net gathering as well that which must be cast away as good fish &c. Me thinks these godly ministers should be ashamed so to deprave not only our meaning, but our very words, that when we say of faithful people, that truly worship, they will turn and trans• lace them to truly faithful, and then gather (as afterwards they do,) as if men may not account any to be members of the church, by their outward profession, vnlesse they know them to have true faith, which the Lord only is able to dis•srne. Could any reasonable man thus construe our words, or gather from them, unless he purposely would deprave? especially knowing (as these men know well) our constant witness otherwise, who esteem of all men, by their outward profession and walking; and have long since published in our Confussion, that many hypocrites will lurk in the church whiles it is on earth. But thus it pleased these men to abuse us, before the simple reader.

Their third reason for their church is, that they hold teach and maintain every part and article of God's holy truth which is fundamental. The proof of this, they would have to be seen in their Confessions, Catechisnes and Articles of religion published and approved of in their church.

This reason is like (if not the very same with) the former, which s•ache also of professing the true faith, as was to be seen in their Conf•s••n, Apology, & Articles. What mean these ministers to cloy their reader so oftē with one dish of meat, a little diuertly dressed? It is doubtless for want of better store. Yet this wh•ch they bring is very unsavory, for it is not seasoned with the salt of God's covenant. First for that point of fundamentall truth, which they so long have stood upon, and could neu•r be gotten distinctly to show what truth is fundamental, and what not: we have now these ministers resolute judgment of it thus, The only fundamental truth in religion is this; That Jesus Christ the Son of God, who took our nature of the Virgin Mary, is our only and all-sufficient Savior For proof of this, they first allege, that they receive this truth are the people of God, and in the state of salvation: they that receive it not cannot possibly be saved. Mat. 16.18 Mark. 16.16 1 I•h. 4.2. Col 2.7.

But first, none of these scriptures do say, that this one article, which these ministers have set down in this form of words, is the only fundamental truth in religion. Neither doth any other scripture, that I know of, so speak; for though Christ only is the foundation of the Christian church; and though (as they secondly allege) no other point of religion is necessary otherwise then as it tendeth necessarily to teach or confirm this one truth: yet followeth it not, but other points also are fundamental truths the denial of which will abolish from Christ.

Secondly they have altered, added to, and omitted some of the words of these scriptures, for their own advantage: For fearing that we would (as indeed we mean to do) press them with the profession of the Anabaptists Papists and other heretics; they think to prevent us. And first against the Anabaptists which deny that Christ took our flesh, these men have added, who took our nature of the Virgin Mary. Then against the papists which hold merit of works, they adjoin these words, our only and all-sufficient Savior. And this because the church of England mainteyneth the truth in these points, against those fore said heretics. On the other hand to help themselves in their corrupt Antichristian walking, and false constitution; they omit and mention not th' Apostles words Col. 2. where he saith, As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in him, rooted and built in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught &c The discreet reader may soon espy their purpose in this cunning carriage. For let the position be set down in the scripture terms, and we shall see, how weak their plea will be. The only fundamental truth in religion is this: That Jesus is the Christ, the son of the living God, comen in the flesh in whom we must believe and h walk, being rooted and build in him, and stablished in the faith as we are taught in the new testament.

If now these ministers will insist upon the three first scriptures only, and general terms that are in them; it is apparent that the Papists, Anabaptists and many other miscreants, do hold and profess them absolutely: absolutely: But if they join with them, Colos. 2. and compare the walking rooting, building, and stablishing in the faith taught by th' Apostles, with the Popish church, or with their own; it will be found that neither of them hold the fo•ndation Christ aright. Themselves w•ll grant it of the Pap•sts and other heretics. and for their own church, it is before in this treatise proved▪

So then to come again unto their reason, that they hold, •e•ch and maintain every part of God's holy truth which is fundam•ntall; whereby they woul• concl•de themselves to be a true chr•ch the ar•ument is denyed. F•r first if •t were granted that th•y h•ld, •ought and may•teyn•d every part of fund•ental truth, which yet with them is but one article only as we have heard,) it w•ll not follow necessarily that therefore they are a true chr•rch, or that they truly profess the Christ an faith. There wan• two things; 1 obedience to the truth professed; (witho•t which men shall be damned, whatsoever they profess,) 2 and a right profession of the true faith only, without err•urs adjoined that overthrow the same faith, and obedience thereto For if a people proof•sing that only fundamental truth which these ministers speak of; should withal profess Mahomet the prophet of the Turks; or H. N. the God of the Familists; or any other like abomination: were this misceline profession of Christ and Belial together. a true and sound proof•sion? I trow not. So then these ministers must alter their plea thus; that they hold teach maintain and obey every part of the fundamental truth, and nothing else with it, that overthrows the same. If now they say this they do, I have before in this treatise disproved it; and here again will briefly disprove it, thus. They profess to believe the Communion of Saints; and that the visible church is a congregation of faithful people. Yet contrariwise they hold teach and maintain, that their own church is a true church of Christ; though it consists as well of unholy as holy, infidels as believers and innumerable wicked persons openly seen and known. That this they hold & maintain, is proved by their continual clamors and reprochful writings against us, that call upon them for a separation of light from darkness. It is proved by Dr Witgifts plea before mentioned, that the children of Papists, heretics, and other wicked persons are and ought to be baptized among the• It is further proved by the visible estate of their church known unto all among them, and test•fied by her dearest friends & favorers. M•Gifford speaking to his brethren •f the Communion of Saints in Engl. saith, Ye would even pour out your stin•ing and r•t•en p•yson, like blasphemous and venomous beasts: ye would speak after this manner, you that are so full of the spirit; you that are Saints, and su•h like. What are you Di•ils; are ye of the flesh? No do•ut ye are, until God convert ye. But we may se how diu-ishly men ar become wicked: when a man cannot make any appearance to be godly and holy, but it is reproached as though it were a shameful thing to be lead by the spirit &c. These and the like records, with the continuance continuance in this confused estate, plainly prove an overthrow of that article of the true church; which is the body of Christ: and the body being disannulled, Christ the head cannot soundly be retained.

Again, they profess in Engl. that the pu•e word of God is to be preached, the sacraments duly administered &c. also, that in our doings, that will of God is to be followed which we have expressly decleared unto us in the word of God. Yet withal, they profess and practice in that church, to read the Apocrypha •criptures (in which are found untruths and errors, when many parts of the authentic scripture, are never read among them.) they have also written homilies, in stead of preaching; a written Le•tourg•e, Litany, collects &c. in stead of praying; which Leitoargie with all the popish contents therein. must be approved and used by all the Priests and people, and God served by it every day. They have also an antichristian clergy, ca•led and ordained according to their pontifical, or book of ordination, which •n their belief, hath not anything that of it self is s•perstitious and ungodly &c. Finally all the Romish relics yet in England to be seen in the hierarch•e, worship, ceremonies, ordinances church constitution &c. (which things can never be approved by the word of God,) are yet held and upheld, taught and maintained in the church to the excommunicating and persecuting of all such, as speak against them, or refuse to communicate with them. This sinful mixture, and maintenance of so much ant•Christian error, with the Christian truths that they proof••e; is no true Christian profession and practice of our obedience unto the fundamental truth of the gospel: neither can the ministers prove, that these contraries will stand together, when account shall be given before the judgment seat of Christ.

Secondly I answer (as to their former reason that although some Bishops and Priests have written Articles, Catechisms &c. yet are not these approu'd, much less walked in, by the church of Engl. neither are the people rooted, b•ilded, and stablished in the faith according to Colos. 2. but are di•olute and profane in their conversation, rooted in uices, and stablished in iniquitis as lamētable experience teacheth all men; as the test•mon•es of their own ministers before alleged prove, and many other we might allege, and must; if these men still continue to urge that, which is known to be far otherwise. For how well their people do walk in the faith of the foundation Christ, and approve of all fundamental truths in the scriptures; let these testimonies of their own friends show. The most part of your honest men (saith Mr Gifford to and of his brethren) now a days, delight so much in the word of God, and meditate so much in it, that they care not a button though they never hear it. they love it: and set as much by it as they do by an old s••e. Every man (saith another) followeth the pride covetousness, whoredom, dronkennes, of his own heart, and no man remembereth Joseph. The bars are filled with pleadings, & the streets are full of cries of the poor, fullness of meat, and contempt is among us, and who considereth! Yet if this our sin were only against men, and not against God there •ight be some hope. But when the mouth of the bl•spemous swearer is not ti•d up, and the hands of the idolatrous generation of Atheists and profane persons be not chained, when the most holy and precious word of God is manifestly contemned, the joyful and heavenly tidings of salvation so negligently and ungratefully trodden under foot, the true and faithful messengers pursued, arraygnned and diverse ways •fflicted: then if the old world for malicious imaginations Sodom and Gomora for pride fullness of meat and unmercifulness: if Jerusalem for abusing God's Prophets and willfulness were woefully destroyed: what may we poor careless People look for it we do not repent, but (as it is almost universally feared speedy ruin and utter desolation,

The exceptions which these Godly ministers take against Mr Barrowes writings, and yet profess not to answer them; need not now to be stood upon, till the particulars whereby he hath discovered their errors and evil dealings, be by them taken away. They further tax & note it in him as a strange opinion and an error full gross, maintained in pag. 156.157. of his Discouery, vidz that every truth contained in the scripture is fundamental. But the grossnes or crossnes will be found in themselves for that which Mr Barrow there inueigheth against, was this, that though transgressions and errors be obstinately continued in, and openly taught. after they be reprovved and convinced by the word of God, yea and the parties die in that estate without repentance of these transgressions or errors: yet may they hold the foundation and be vadoubtedly saved. Of this mind were, and still continue (saith he) five of the very principal and best esteemed ministers of Engl. both for learning and conscience: although there were alleged against the same these express scriptures, Num. 15.30 31. Exod. 23.21. 1 Sam. 15.22.23. Ezek. 18.26 Mat. 5, 18, 19 I am. 2 10. &c.

This was the thing that M, Bar. there bet down, showing further, that if the whole scripture was given by inspiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to convince, to correct, to instruct in righteousness; if it be the groundwork and foundatiō of the church, of our faith: if it be the law and rule of our life, the light of our eyes &c. If every word of God be holy, pure, perpetual; then is this deep learning of theirs, diuinish and blasphemous, that thus to color and cover their wickedness. make some part of gods word fundamental. substantial, necessary, other accidental, superficial, needless, especially where it showeth reproveth and condemneth their doings &c

Now what say these ministers against this plea? they plainly yield in effect to th'truth, which they could with no colour gainsay; we believe (say they) and teach, that there is no Part of holy scripture, which every Christian is not necessarily bound to seek, & desire knowledge of so far forth as in him lieth. Very well said had they added also this word obeyed, (which I suppose they would be thought to intimate,) there would be no difference between M, Barrow and them, though thus they would traduce him. But least they should seem to condemn themselves, they except. yet darewe not cal every truth fundamental; that is, such as if it be not known and obeyed, the whole religion and faith of the church must needs fall to the ground; and again; we doubt not that some parts are of more use, and more necessary for men to know, then othersome. In these things (excepting the word fundamental which seemeth to be but strife about a word,) We agree with them; neither doth Mr Barrow, that I can perceive disagree for it is one thing not to know and obey every truth, as they speak, and another thing to know, as hau•ng reproof and conviction by the word of God, and yet to disobey and rebel against the truth, and continue obstinately in transgre•sion▪ which was the point in hand. And for the world fundamental, seeing all God's testimonies are true; and David saith that the Lord hath founded them forever; I see no cause why we need be afraid to call every tr•th fundamental that is such as is firm and stable. and on which we shovld ground and build our faith and actions up on always. Yet seeing now what these ministers understand by the word, I will not strive. Also M. Barrow himself in his Observations upon Mr Giffords last reply telleth him that he denieth not in use of speech such distinction, so much as withstand such eronius abuse of that distinction, which M. Gifford and other deuines of these times would infer thereof. And in deed the simple are much beguiled by this subtle distinction. For when the sins and idolatres of these Priests are blamed: answer is made, though they be sins, yet are they not fundamental, they cut us not off from Christ we hold him the foundation, and believe to be saved by him alone and by this color, men continue in transgression and idolatry still. which is as if a thief, dronkard, whormaister, blasphemer, or other vicious, liver, being blamed by the laws of God which condemn these sins, should say; These are petty faults I confess, but they are not fundamental: for the only fundamental truth and ground of all God's law is Love, and that is the fulfilling of the law. Rom. 13.8 9.10. Gal. 5.14. 1 Tim. 1.5. Now this foundatio I hold, for I profess to love God above all, and my neighbor as my selfe, on which ground as Christ saith the law and prophets do depend; and this I do, howsoever I cannot keep my tongue from swearing, lying and i•auldrie, nor my hands from picking and stealing, nor my body chaste, &c. yet my heart is good, I love God and my neighbor, and hope to be saved as well as the *precis*t puritan of them all, And now what will these ministers say to the•r profane parishioners, if thus they pleaded? for do not themselves thus plead for the trans•reossins of the first table, and violating of the testament of Christ, in their own false ministry, idolatrous rites, ceremonies, and forged worship. But as every true Christian heart knoweth that such profane ruffians, howsoever they say they love god, yet in deed they hate him, and howsoever the s•mme and end of all the Law is Love only, yet that love implieth obedience to every particular precept, and he which breaketh the least commandment and teacheth men so, shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; as Christ saith: so know they likewise, or should know, that such superstitious idolaters, false and Antichristian Prelates and priests, howsoever they boast of true faith, yet by their works they deny it; and although Faith in Christ be the foundation of Christian religion, yet in im•lieth necessarily obedience unto the ordinances of his Testament, even whatsoever is commanded them therein; and as the curse is denounced against all the transgressors of Moses law in any part thereof; so they shall not escape vengeance that willfully despise the law of Christ or any part of his testament, confirmed with his precious blood. And if thus we understand not and interpret those scriptures which sum up all christianity in Christ; we must needs confess that many false churches, even Rome it self is a true church; seeing they do profess such general grounds of Christ, as by plain evidence of scripture seem sufficient unto salvation, as appeareth by Council Trident. Se•s, 3. compared with Rom. 10.9. Act. 8.37, 38. 1 John. 4.2. Mark. 16.16. also Reims testam annot. on 1 Tim. 2.5. where they profess, Christ by nature to be truly both God and man, to be that on eternal priest and redeemer, which by his sacrifice and death upon the cross, hath reconciled us to God, and paid his blood as a full and sufficient ransom for all our sins, &c.

Howbeit, that these ministers stumble no more at that we profess, let them know, we hold every general head and ground of doctrine more necessary to be known, then ech particular branch of the same? & an error overthrowing a whole ground of religion, to be much more wicked then that which overturneth but a part thereof. Also that many of God's church, are ignorant of sundry particular doctrines of the Gospel yea all of us in some, for none is perfect; yet that in some general grounds, ignorance is damnable; and further that the willful and obstinate refusal or contempt of the least evident truth of the Gospel, is deadly and damnable of it own nature. Neither see we, how we should believe otherwise, unless with the Papists we think some sins venial some mortal As for Mr Barrowes words from John. 16.13. which also, these ministers mistaking do mislike; it is evident by his own writings to the contrary elsewhere, that he meant not so erroneously as they collect. But that promise made to the Apostles, he applieth unto all the members of Christ by proportion, though not in like measure. Which that it may be done, we learn of the Apostles themselves in other like cases. 2 Cor. 4.13. from Psal. 116. Heb. 13.5.6. from Ios. 1 & Psal. 118. &c.

Their last reason is from the approbation of all the known churches in the world, which acknowledge this church (of Engl.) for their sister, and give unto them the right hand of fellowship. This point is handled before in this treatise, pag. 9. &c. & 48 & 51. &c. unto which places I refer the reader. Many scriptures and reasons these ministers allege from the primitive churches examples, that rejoiced for. and saluted one another; & of and of the comfort that a church may have in the communion and approbation of other churches. All which we grant; and doe observe, how fast they can cite scriptures for things that we deny not. But they say nothing for the controversy between them and us. which consisteth of these 3. points; 1 whither a people may not separate from evil and profess and walk in the truth unless or until other churches allow them 2. whether it be a necessary and vndenyable argument, that whomsoever other churches approve, they are true churches, and so must be esteemed of all men; 3 and whither the reformed churches at this day, do approve of the church of England, in all or any of the differences for which we separate from them. The first of these is proved by all God's commandments, which require every man particularly to refrain all evil, and do that which is good: Exod. 20. The second is disproved by themselves in their writings against the Papists; who pressed them with such reasons. Let councils (saith Mr Whitaker) be esteemed as they deserve: let their decrees be examined by God's word; and if they agree let them be received for that agreement: if not, let them be rejected for the contrary. To this agreeth their own Bishops Articles, ano 1562. Art. 21. and also their Apoligie; before alleged in this treatise; and finally Mr Bernard's own counsel. (though perhaps he knew no more then Caiaphas what he said.) saying; See into the glass of the word by thine own sight, without other men's spectacles &c. For the latter point, we know the reformed churches (as their constitution and writings show) are for us and against them; of which see before pag 10, &c. and it shall hereafter be further confirmed, if these ministers will deny it.

Hitherto of the reasons alleged by the godly ministers wherein how they have proved and settled their first position; let the godly wise judge. Next follow their answers to the objections made by us. And these they make two.

First, that their church of Engl. was not gathered by such means as God in his word hath ordained and sanctified for the gathering of his Church. Secondly, that they communicate together in a false and idolatrous outward worship of God, which is polluted with the writings of men, vidz. with read slinted prayers, homilies, catechisms, &c.

Here let it first be observed, that whereas Mr Barrow (whose books they would seem to answer,) hath given 4. causes of our separation, namely the 1. false worship, 2. profane people, 3 false ministry, and 4. Antichristian hierarchy; these godly ministers like the unjust steward that set down fifty for five skore, have contracted the 4. causes into 2. for what cause let him that readeth consider.

Secondly in the two which they profess to answer, they keep not the words by Mr Barrow there set down; as to begin with the first; he saith For that the profane ungodly multitudes without exception of any one person are with them received into and retained in the bosom of the church These ministers set down the point to be about the not gathering by due means. Whereas if it were granted that they had due means of gathering, yet the exception made is of force against them, rather more then less for they that have the true means of gathering a church, and yet gather it amiss; the greater is their sin.

Now to the particulars, whereas Mr Barrow had first shown by many scriptures and reasons what manner persons were to be the matter of God's church; and then compared here with the people of the church of Engl. where all sorts of wicked persons are admitted & kept in communion: to this the ministers answer, First that they might lawfully be accounted a true church, though it could not appear that they were at the first rightly gathered. For even as the Disciples might be well assured of Christ's bodily presence amongst them when they saw and felt him, though they could not have discerned which way or how he could possibly come in. so may we esteem them a true church, of whose present profession and faith we are well assured, though we cannot see by what means they were first gathered. This answer of theirs is full of error and fraud; for, (not to speak how they corrupt Mr Barrowes words in the places which they quote; by leaving out things of special importance,) first they blamed because all profane & wicked persons are of the matter their church; they tell us, they may esteem them a true church of whose present profession and faith, they are well assured. If this answer be direct and to the purpose then we must believe that the godly ministers are well assured of the present profession and faith of all the lewd, profane. irreligious and wicked persons in the realm, which are members of the church of Engl. Against these was the exception made; for these the answer is given, unless they answer their own fancies. and now what assurance the ministers have of such men's faith, let the faithful judge.

Secondly the similitude which they bring, is a great abuse of the reader, whom they would blind with a false comparison; which if it were duly made, would make against them thus. As the disciples might be well assured of Christ's bodily presence when they saw and felt him &c. so men may be well assured of the wicked's bodily presence in the church of Engl: when they see and feel them, as who do not? But now as these men have made the parable, what likelihood of truth is there in it, for justifying the ungodly? If a man seeing a Priest in bed with one of the Popes courtizans, should blame him for this fornication, and another to defend him should plead thus; As we are sure that Sarah was Abraham's wife, though we cannot tell when or how they were married. so may we esteem these two (of whose present chascity we are well assured,) to be lawful man and wife, though we cannot tell how they came together; would this be a sufficient defense? Yet loe when Mr Barrow blamed the Priests of England for linking themselves in the bed of spiritual love, with the idolatrous Papists and all other wicked of the land, at the beginning of Q. Eliz. and continuing in like sinful commixtur unto this day: these Ministers now, to save their credit, tell us an example of Christ presence, &c. as before is seen. Yea the indignity of it stayeth not here; for as the Apostle by the Ministry of the gospel prepared the church of Corinth, as a pure virgin for her husband Christ, so these men pretending to be true Ministers, will have Papists, Atheists, profane and wicked persons, to be Hephzi-bah people in whom God delighteth; they will bring this sinful and adulterous generation, even all the ungodly in the land, unto the bed of Christ in his church, whether he will or no Which high transgression, is the overthrow of the main ground of the gospel; which ever since it began to be sounded in the world, hath proclaimed a separation of the children of God from the children of Belial, as before hath been proved. This being thus observed, how these ministers have missed at first o the question; the further they go, the further they stray, and run themselves out of breath in vain. For neither the examples of Melchizedek, Job, Cornelius &c. nor their reasons following of 2 other means of gathering the church then by the preaching of the Gospel; 3 of the preaching of Mr. Wycliffe. &c 4 & 5 of the course that Q Elizab. took for bringing the Gospel in again &c. none of these (I say) will prove either that open profane and wicked persons, may be received and kept in the bozome of the church; or that there be not multitudes of open profane and wicked, members of the church of England. Their present lamentable estate proclaimeth this latter to all men that have conscience; their own writings also heretofore do strongly confirm it: and all the scriptures cry out against the former & teach a separation as before in this treatise, and in sundry other books is manifested.

As these ministers have thus passed by the main controversy; so have they in their pretended answers, inserted some things corruptly and fraudulently: which I will briefly touch First, for to bolster out the constrained profession of faith, and joining to the church which their people are compelled unto, they plead; that Synce Kings became nursing fathers &c. to the church; their laws have been means to bring men to the outward society of the church; and the parable proveth, that men may be compelled to come; Luk. 14, 23.

This doctrine openeth a door in the church to all the profane in the world, contrary to the scriptures; Isa 25.2 & 35.8, 9.2 Chron. 23.19. Reu. 21.27. Levite. 10.14. Zac. 14.21, 2 Cor. 6.14, 17. Act. 2.41. & 19.9. For if a prince may compel some of his subjects to be members of the church, he may compel all; and if one prince may do it, all may. So if there were such an Emperor as Augustus that commanded all the world to be taxed, he might also command and compel all the world to be joined unto the church. And thus the world and the church, between whom there hath been perpetual war, mought soon be reconciled. If this be a lawful and orderly course, it is strange that Christ sent forth poor fishermen to convert souls by preaching, and set not the princes, (which he could as easily have done, seeing he had all power in heaven, & in earth) to make disciples by compulsion and penalty.

Now for the parable they allege, it is apparent, that the same servant was sent to compel, that was before sent to call the invited: and if this be meant of the Magistrate then, kings must leave governing and go to preaching. We find in the scripture, that compulsion is not always by the civil sword, but sometime by instant and earnest urging of the word and doctrine; as they that compelled the Galatians to be circumcised; and he that compelled the Gentiles to Judaize. And from this word compel, to urge or gather a civil forced compulsion, is with no more reason or color, then as if some factious rebels should take up arms for to stablish religion; and allege how it is written the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force For as force and violence here, is not civil but spiritual; so is compulsion to be taken in the parable. But a throne (saith Solomon) gets up in a dronkards hand; and a parable in the mouth of fools. Prov. 26.9.

They allege that the first conversion of our land to the faith of Christ, was by preaching of the gospel. Whether this were so or not, remaineth for them to prove in their next book for in this they do it not. They must (I suppose) take the preaching of the gospel in a large sense, if they will prove it. For as it is vncertayn what was the faith of the ancient Britain's, or how they were converted; so for the English Saxons which were conuerred from Paganism, Mr Bale one of their own writers) saith that Agustine the Roman was sent as an Apostle from Gregory 1. to convert them to a popish faith. And by another Chronicler we learn that Pope Gregory 1. sent this Agustine the monk into Engl. with forty monks moe, which entered the ile of Thennet on the east side of Kent, with a cross & with banners displayed, having a crucifix painted vp̄ everyone of them singing the Litany, with Orate pro nobis. to all Angels, Archangels, Patriarchs, Prophets, Priests, Apostles, Martyrs, Confessors, Virgins, Monks Nunns, Heremites, and finally to all he Saints and she Saints, that they might have good luck, and well to fare, in setting forth their Romish religion. But howsoever the conversion of English men was then (which is not now to be stood upon till we hear the testimony of the best approved histories, which these men say they have for their assertion) it is sure by the scripures, that the churches in Rome. Corinth, and many other places were converted by the gospel: yet remain they not true churches still. But (say these ministers) since that time many have from age to age been called by the same means, And so say I, hath there been in Rome: yet is she a harlot and not Christ's spouse. Great numbers (say they) were effuectally called in K. Edwards days. I answer, the whole land was compelled by civil force to change their form of service in part; and sundry true doctrines were taught in some places, which some believed: but many disobeyed and rebelled. as before is shown. Neither was that confuse popish multitude with a few conuers therein, a true visible church. Mr Fox describeth the estate thereof by a similitude; a new face of things began now (saith he) to appear, as it were in a stage, new players coming in, and the old being thrust out. Thus upon that old stage of the popish church, came new players, to weet, new Bishops & Priests; and themass was then (at first) still by law retained, but the gospel and Epistle read in English; yet were not all new players for (as is there noted) the priests and clergy that yielded to the kings laws, were suffered to keep th•ir places, livings &c. After this the king appointed the c Archbishop of Cant, with other Bishops &c. to make one convenient and meet order, rite and fashion of common prayer and administration of Sacraments &c. who did so. Then in the Parliament following, it was agreed that all ministers in the realm should be bound to say and use the mattins, euensong celebrating of the Lord's supper &c. in such order and form as was mentioned in the said book and none other or otherwise. But the players, it seemeth, played not their parts well. for after complaint is made, how by the cloaked contempt, will full winking, and stubborn disobedience of Bishops and old Popish curates; the book of common prayer was long after the publishing thereof either not known at all, or else very irreverently used through many places of the realm. Yet was there no great cause why the people should so despise it; for (as the K. answered to the rebels of Deuonsh.) if the service in the church was good in Latin, it remaineth good in English; for nothing is altered, but to speak with knowledge, that which was spoken in ignorance. Now let the reader mind what was the estate of the church in those days; and see if the word of God will approve it.

But there were say these men) great numbers by preaching so effectually called, that in Q Mary's reign, many sealed the truth with their blood: I acknowledge it; and say also that as there have many martyrs died heretofore in the Popish church, so I doubt not, but great numbers at this day are by preaching so effectually called, in Rome, Spayn &c. that if Turks or Pagans should preuayl over them, they would maintain & seal Christian religion with their blood, rather then submit to Mahomet. For (as one of your best ministers hath truly said) God of his infinite goodness who calleth things that are not as though they were, even in that ministry, hath given grace unto his Saints; & it was impossible that the man of sin should so much adulterat the word of God, but that it should be to the faithful a gospel of salvation. It is further alleged, h there were sundry secret congregations all Q Mary's days which gladly received the gospel offered by Q. Eliz. & (say thes ministers) if it be said that they ceased to be the true churchs of Christ, because they joined & became one body, with such as were newly come (and that not of conscience but for fear only) from idolatry: we answer, that they rather that-had fallen from the Gospel in Q. Mary's days were moved by Q Eliz: proclamation, to join themselves unto them, that had stood faithfully all that while,

Here is still building upon the sands, for the profane & popish multitude had not received the gospel before, but (as hath been shown) wer• constrained by K. Edw. against their wills to hear English Mattins in their churches, where they were wont to hear Lati• Latin mass; and were glad with all their hearts when their old blind devotion did again take place, and they might suck the blood of such as spake against it. So they cannot rightly be said to fall from the gospel, which they never received. And what secret congregations there were in Q. Mary's days, I know not: but if they were so secret, as only they met now and then in private, and ordinarily went to church openly with Papists, they were not a true church of Christ. And that constrained, union of Papists and of Protestants at the beginning of Q Eliz reign, under Archbishops, Bishops, Priests &c. with most of the same mattins, evensongs, rites, ceremonies &c. that before had been imposed; this order can never be warranted by the testament of Christ, nor such a commixture proved to be a true church.

And whereas it is noted for another untruth that Mr. Barrow and Greenu• should say, that in one day by the blast of her Majesty's, trumpet at the Beginning of her reign, all sorts of men were drawn to a prof•ssion of the gospel, without any further means used: these ministers may be seen to be mere cauillers, and bent to deprave. For the words even as themselves have set them down, (whereby the reader may espy their falsehood) were these, where such profane multitudes were all immediately from public idolatry at one instant received or rather compelled to be members of this church, in some parish or other, without any due calling to the faith, by the preaching of the Gospel going before, or orderly joining together in the faith, there being no voluntary or particular confession of their own faith &c.

Now these men to reign an untruth, yea another untruth when non• was afore, have among other things, changed without any due calling to the faith into without any further means used; and then to convince this their own fictiō, they tell us of sundry preachers sent betwē November & Midsommer that called many. But his neither cleareth them of corrupt dealing, nor proveth that the whole realm which at Midsommer was compelled to this church, worsh•p, ministry, &c. was duly called unto the faith: much less that they orderly joined together in the same. So that the untruth must rest in their own bosom.

This being proved (say these ministers) that there was a true Church in thi• land, before her Majesty's reign; the question must not be whether the means she used were the right means for the first calling and converting a people in the faith; but wether she took not a lawful course for the recalling and reuniting of her subjects unto those true professors, whose fellowship they had forsaken.

Loe how these men run on, as if they had proved that, whereof we have yet heard scarce any show of proof. And altering closely the question, they say there was a true church in the land; whereas they must prou• a true church of the land, as now it is and long hath been esteemed the Church of England, having an Archbishop and other officers over it, which •re in their Conuocation house, the Representative Church of England. So it no• not being a true church the examples, they allege of reformation by the Kings of Judah, fit not their turns; for Judah was a true church, though some corruptions had crept in, as will easily do into the best.) Abijah the predecessor of Asa, maintained God's true religion, and worship against idolatrous Israel both by word and sword. So Asa found not his kingdom a false church, as K. Edw. & Q Elizab. found England: yet used he that great care for reformation, mentioned, 2 Chro. 14. & 15. and his son Jehoshaphat after him greater care both to reform and teach the peo•le. 2 Chron. 17. Afterwards when abominations had overspread the land, H•zekiah labored a godly reformation, and opening the doors of the Lord's house, he brought in the Priests and Levites, not the Chemarins or Baals Priests, as the popish clergy (which their own notes on Reu. 9.3. acknowledge to be the Locusts of the bottomless pit) were brought in or rather retained still in this church, as Mr Fox showeth, Hezekiah sent over all the land to convert the people from idolatry; who laughed the messengers to scorn and mocked them howbeit divers submitted themselves and came to Jerusalem; and it was God that gave Judah a heart to obey the King and rulers according to his word Neither were any admitted to the Passover but such as had voluntarily yielded, repented, and either sanctified themselves, or else (being prevented through want of time) were healed (or cleansed) of the Lord, at the Kings prayer. The other disobedient. Israelites God punished by the sword and slavery of Asshur, because they would not obey the voice of the Lord their God. Finally Iosijah purged the land of idols & false worship, reduced his people unto the true service of God; which they with himself had covenanted to walk in.

These examples we acknowledge all Christian princes should follow, having equal power with these Kings of Judah, to abolish all idolatry within their dominions; yea and to punish obstinate idolaters, and not suffer any superstitious worship among their. subjects, but to procure their conversion by the word, yet not to compel them to be members of the church, because they cannot give them faith and repentance, which is the only door into Christ's kingdom, and cannot be opened to any but by God alone. Which doctrine and practice these ministers (if they would not learn out of holy writ) might have seen set forth in their own book of Martyrs; where when Ethelbert King of Kent was converted and Christened, and after him innumerable other daily came and were adjoined to the church yet the King (saith Mr Fox) compelled none; for he had learned that the faith and service of Christ, ought to be voluntary and not coerced.

I acknowledge the Godly and gracious disposition and care of K. Ed. & Q Eliz. at the first for restoring of the Gospel; to be worthy of perpetuall praise and memory: and the error that was, in reteyning the popish profane multitudes, the Antichristian clergy, the Romish worship turned into English, (some few gross things left out;) and the other evils yet to be seen in the ecclesiastical estate; these I judge are rather to be imputed unto the false clergy men, which were trusted too much in these matters & dealt not according to the trust reposed in them but sought to enrich themselves with the spoils of Babel and of Jericho the Bishoprics benefices, and other like Romish revenues, rather than for the build the house of God, upon the foundations of Zion. And this sin cleaveth fast unto these priests, even to this day; who cannot endure to have their portion spoken against, but think all too little that they enjoy; when as for discharge of their functions in teaching the people, the most conscionable among themselves have complained to the Parliament that the word of God is negligently, fantastically, profanely and unchristianly preached; and all the land knoweth, that many ministers preach not at all.

Whereas these ministers tell us of diverse congregations, that have publicly professed their repentance for their former idolatry; it is well if so it be; & God give them grace to go forward in well doing. But they tell us not of any congregation that professeth repentance for their present idolatry, or that renounceth the communion of the other impenitent and profane parishes: which they should also do if they would be the sons and daughters of the Lord almighty. Nay we know that if any among them do this, they are excommunicated ipso facto out of the church of England, by force of their canons, anno 1600.

Finally, whereas these Ministers doubt not to affirm, that the whole land in the parliament held in the first year of her Majesty's reign, did enter into a solemn covenant with the Lord for renouncing of Popery, and receiving the Gospel. First they set not down what covenant the Parliament then made nor how they renounced Popery; and therefore that is to be judged of, when it shall more particularly be produced Secondly if then the Parliament house so did it is commendable in them but that the whole communalitie of the realm can be said to do it with them, I utterly deny. For howsoever all subjects are and ought to submit to the good civil laws there enacted: and obedience may be enforced by the sword, if any man resist: yet in cases of conscience every man must live by his own faith; men must gladly receive the word out of which all religion must be gathered all Kings and kingdoms submitting unto the laws and ordinances in Christs Testament if they would have blessing and salvation by him. And as the honorable in the Parliament, could not be baptized for the commons; so neither could they repent or covenant with God for them: but the people must yield their own willing consent, which they never did; but were and still are compelled by law and penalty to be of the church and religion established. Which how well they have brooked, let the testimonies of the ministers before alleged, and the irreligious walking of many thousands ever since manifest. For now our land is a reproach to the idolatrous Papists for the multitude of Atheists and Machevillians that are therein.

The second thing (which these Ministers say) we object against the whole body of their assemblies is, That they communicate together in a false and idolatrous outward worship of God, which is polluted with the writings of men, vid. with read stinted prayers, homilies, Catechisms and such like. To which they give this answer.

First it is evident by the word, that the church hath used and might lawfully use in prayer, and God's worship, a stinted and set form, of words. And here they allege Num. 6 23.24. Deut 26.3.15. Psal. 22. & 92.1 Chro. 16.8.36. Luk. 11.2.

Very strange it is, that after so much time and consideration; men that profess to be ministers of the Gospel, should give such an answer. The thing objected against their worship made of the invention of the man of sin, was in the first answer to Mr Gifford (who shut his eyes, and would not see th' abominations of the same). shown in sundry particulars; as the Romish fasts; feasts and holy days, Comminations, Rogations, Purifications, &c. blasphemous & heretical collects &c. which after were more plainly refuted These and the like evils contained in their Liturgy translated out of the Massebook, and imposed upon their parishers being by Mr Barrow blamed: now come these ministers and tell us of Psalms that David made, of forms of blessing and prayer, that God and our Lord Christ prescribeth to his church; and these must countenance and bear our all the popish trash that is in their service book.

But it would far better have fitted their estate and worship, if they had cited the Popes in stead of the Patriarchs, Prophets and Apostles, who were altogether unacquainted with this Romish service. For howsoever David made many Psalms, yet not he but Pope Damasus (as writers say) ordained Glory be to the Father &c. to be added unto them, and they to be sung by tournes, (as the church of Engl. yet useth;) and Pope Vitalian to make up the music, brought in the Organs, Yea the foresaid Damasus enjoined Jerome to make an order of service for churches, and appoint what prayers should be said on every day, and how many Psalms &c. which being done, the Pope commanded all churches should use that order and none other And a much like exploit was performed by the Archbishop of Cant. and his brethren in K. Edwards days (as Mr Fox reporteth) for the service now used still in Engl. Agayne, for the particulars, who framed the Anthems, Responds, Collects, and Kyries, that are said at mattins? neither Prophet nor Apostle, but as some say pope Gregory I. and Pope Gelasius. And the same Pope Gregory put k the Pater noster into the mass. and commanded it to be sung; and Pope Mar•us I would have the Nicene Creed sung after; the Gospel. Pope Anacletus thought it fit the priest and people should salute one another another in service time, and therefore appointed the one to say. T••Lord hear•th ⟨♠⟩ , and the other to answer, And with thy spirit.

Pope 〈◇〉 put it at the Sacrament O lamb of God that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy on us; Pope Symmachus added the hymne Glory be to God on high; and the other Popes brought in their parts, and patched together the Letani, & Liturgy out of which the English servicebook is taken, Likewise for the fasting days and holy festivities, though the Apostles appointed them not, yet the Popes did: Telesohorus would have the Lent to be fasted; and Pope Calistus the four times in the year, or Imbring days. Pope Sylvester 1. added the Wednesdays, Frydayes and Saturdayes weekly; and Pope Innocent 3. put unto the former almost all the Apostles eues. The Saints and Angels were also beholding to these Reverend fathers for hallowing their days. For generally all the Saints found such favor with Pope Boniface, that they had not only a catholic holy day given them, called All-hallowmes, but a famous Temple in Rome once dedicated to all the Demons and called Pantheon, was turned by this holy Father into the name of Maria rotunda. and consecrated to the honor of the B Virgin' and all martyrs Pope Felix 3, made holy the day of the archangel Michael, Boniface the 8. shown like honor to the 4, Evangelists, and many other memorable gestures are recorded of the Fathers of the See of Rome, whereof there is not a word in the Testament of Christ, that he or his disciples did ever the like. For they appointed not priests apparall, long gownes, tippers 4. horned capps, as did Pope Zechariah; nor a white linen surplice at service time, as did Pope Sylvester 1. They hallowed no Temples or Churches as did P. Hyginus, nor Churchyards, as did P. Calistus 1, Neither ordained ringing of bells to call the people to divine service, as did P. Sabinian. They appointed no Rood-loft to part the Chancel from the church, as did P. Boniface 2, nor hallowed Font to Christian in; or Godfathers and Godmothers at baptism, as did P. Pius 1. and Hyginus. They commanded not the people to go procession as did Pope Agapetus 1. nor appointed any Bishoping or Confirmation of children, as did P. Clement 1. with a great number more of like pranks used in the Romish service. which Christ's Apostles knew not, as their writings show. But the church of Engl. (as next heir of Rome's constitutions,) reteyneth these relics, observeth these rites and a many more; for which the Papists do insult and say that from their treasure house, the religion now established hath learned the form of christening, Marrying, Churching of women, Visiting the sick, Burying; and sundry other like as the books translated out of theirs, do declare. And now what saith God's law for all such things unto his people? I am (saith he) the Lord your God. After the doing of the land of Egypt wherein ye dwell, shall ye not do: and after the doing of the land of Canaan whether I will bring you; shall ye not do; neither walk in their ordinances. My judgments shall ye do; and my ordinances shall ye keep, to walk in them: I am the Lord your God, Thus he forbade them not only the worship of false God's: but even the imitation of idolatrous worship rites and ordinances in his service: wherefor he charged them again, that they should not so much as inquire or ask how the nations served their God's, that they might do so to the Lord their God. But whatsoever he commanded them, they should make heed to do it; putting nothing thereto, nor taking ought therfrom. Yet the Bishops and Priests of Engl. have almost all things in their Leisure, according to the doings of that spiritual Egypt the Romish church wherein they dwelt, and have imitated her worshipp's orders, ceremonies &c. retained her ministry, prelacy, courts, and canons: the Latin being turned into English, and some gross superfluities left out. And in defense of this worship, have these godly ministers written, & Mr Bernard published their work: wherein if the reader see not a soond proof of the things that Mr Barrow (whose errors they pretend to confute) reproved; he must impute it to the badness of their cause, which will scarce admit of any color from the book of God. For (besides the abuse of holy scriptures alleged to justify these popish stratagems,) how sound & divine, (or rather how fond and corrupt) is the reasoning of these men, from God's example and authority, unto their own practice and power that because the Lord God gave forms of blessing, prayer and psalms to his people, (as the scriptures which they cite do show) therefore their Lord's the Prelates may give them also prescript words for blessing, prayer, and Psalms &c. as is to be seen in their service book. Can we think that Jeroboam had so slender a reason for his gold calves? Why do not these men also plead, that God gave a law by Moses? therefore there may a law be given likewise by the Bishops: or, th' Apostles wrote a New Testament, therefore the Conuocation house may also write a Testament or Gospel; & bring it into the church? If the Prophets practice will bear them out in the one: I see no cause why it may not uphold them in the other. Well, seeing neither Mr Gifford heretofore, nor these ministers now, can bring better defense for the work of their own hands wherewith they worship or rather provoke the Lord's I leave them to consider of those laws that everywhere cry out against and show the punishment of idolatry. Neither is it needful to keep the Reader with longer answer, seeing Mr Barrow in the fornamed books, and Mr Greenwood in a peculiar treatise against these stunted prayers, and se• worship have proved the unlawfulness of them by many reasons, which neither these ministers nor any other have yet taken away. And when they write again, let them not bring proofs for things that we deny not; as that Daunds Psalms may be sung in the church; and that in our prayers we may use or apply, the words that other holy men before used in their prayers, upon like occasions; both these we grant and practice: but let them prove, (if they be able and their right hand can help them, that their own writetnn prayers, psalms &c. may be read and sung in churches, church••, as God's true worship and then also they may command the clouds to rayn no more, and may cause to cease the bottles of heaven.

Like to their former plea, and maintenance of their service book, is also their answer for Catechisms; as for Homilies it seems they leave the the defense of them to the simple priests that read them, but Catechisms are used even by the learned preachers, therefore somewhat they say for them, as that the principles of religion were taught in the churches of old, Rō 2.20, & 6 17.2 Tim, 1 13, Heb. 5.12.13, 14 and 6, 1.2. But these ministers are either simple or very deceitful, so to turn away from the question For we never denyed that the grounds and heads of Christian religion should be taught to the people; far be it from us: but this we say, the Prophets and Apostles are not found to prescribe set words for the minister to teach, or the people to answer being examined. And that therefore these Bishops and Priests are very presumptuous, that will take upon them to do that which Christ's Apostles never did in the churches. Again, that if those men of God had to done; yet seeing the writings of Prophets and Apostles are canonical scriptures, and so are no men's writings now: it will by no means follow, that if they wrote catechisms to be used in the Church, therefore men may writ some for like use now. Yea rather why are they not content with that which is already written in the scriptures, but run to erroneous catechisms of human writers, such as is that authorized catechism in the book of common prayer, commanded to be used in the church of England?

Having heard what these godly ministers say for their people, and service book; I expected somewhat also, for defense of their own minister, and the ecclesiastical government of their Lord's the Prelates; which were the other two heads of error excepted against, in the forenamed books. But in both these they are silent; and reason there may be for it: for the inferior ministry hangs upon the superior, the hierarchy, and now the godly ministers are in a great strait, for either they must loose their ministry, and then what boots it to plead for the same, or else they must, (though they be loath) be buxome and submit to their Fathers the Bishops; and when this is done, it may be we shall see some such defense of two later, as we have already of the former. Mr Bernard himself hath begun fayrly; for whereas a while since he was hot against the Bishops. he now cannot endure they should be called Antichristian proud prelates or the like; and thinks it can never be proved, that the entrance into the ministry by the Prelates, is a false entrance. So it is not to be thought but his Ordinary and he will agree well enough. Well howsoever it be, God (I doubt not) will turn all things to his own glory and furtherance of his truth; yea even the writings of these adversaries, shall be a means to stir men up unto a consideration of their ways, which God give them grace for to do, and to turn their feet into the paths of life and peace that they may find rest unto their souls.

AN ANSWER TO Mr. Crashawes 4. questions propounded in his sermon preached at the Cross Febr: 14, 1607, and printed 1608.

Mr. Crashawe preaching upon Ier. 51, 11. We would have cured Babel but she would not be healed &c. took occasion to inveigh against such as have separated from the Church of Engl. as from Babel, in to a covenant and communion (as he saith) of their own devising. To convince this bitter (as he calleth it) and schismatical separation, he asketh but 4. questions; whereunto if they can give him satisfaction, he promiseth he will be one of them. Now though this promise be not in his own power to perform, (for it is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that showeth mercy;) yet shall it not be amiss to labor for his satisfaction herein; for who can tell, but there may be given him an understanding ear, and tender heart, for to convert that God may heal him if not, that his own writing may be a witness, himself is one of those whom we would have cured in Babel, but he would not be healed. I will not stand upon his interpretation of the scripture treated of whether it be the direct and proper meaning of that place: but will come unto the demands by him propounded.

His first question consisting of many branches is summed up by himself in this one: Wherein are we deadly and incurably wounded?

Your demand being, as the particulars show of the wounds of sin and corruption. I answer. First we deny not, but all your sins are curable, as we trust in the mercy of God, if you repent of them, and believe his promises: neither have we ever thought your wounds in this sense, to be deadly or incurable. Secondly, the sins that your church lieth in, & which if they be not repented of, and pardoned in the mercy of Christ, are deadly and will destroy the sowl forever; have heretofore by such as would have cured you, been set before your eyes, in large and ample treatises, showing these capital transgressions, 1 Your confuse people, 2 false worship, 3 antichristian hierarchy or church-government, 4 and false ministry therefrom derived: that strange it is, you should yet ask what deadly wounds you have; and it makes us fear, your state is like his that sleepeth in the midst of the sea, in the top of the mast, & saith, they have stricken me, but I was not sick, they have beaten me but I knew it not. You have also here in this treatise arguments to prove that Christ is not the head, Mediator, Prophet, Priest & King of your church: which if it be so, no Christian can doubt, but your wounds in then selves are deadly.

Though this were enough for Answer to your question in general; yet because the particulars which you further demand, are stumbling blocks unto the weak; I also will labor to remove them away.

Q. What fundamental wound is in our doctrine.

A. This among others, that you teach and maintain both by word and practice, that all sorts of people, though profane and wicked are to be received into and retained in the church; which is contrary to the foundation of the Gospel laid by God himself Gen. 3 15. That such is your doctrine, both your sermons and printed books, and the estate of your church since the planting thereof, to this time: do confirm.

Q. What deadly corruption is in our discipline, such as e•s out the heart, and life and being of a church.

A. First, they which execute it, as the Prelates Commissaries, &c. are antichristian; so judged & proved long since by the reformed churches by th• better son of your own ministers heretofore & now living & by others. Secondly; in the executiō of it, the good are censured & excommunicated: the wicked favored and tolerated. That the good are censured, appeareth by the late Canons of your church: for in them it is enacted against such, as blame or resist any of your ungodly ceremonies, ordinances, will worship, &c. in your Communion book; book of ordering, Bishops Priests and Deacons, &c. that they shall be excommunicated ipso facto, and not be restored, until they repent and publicly revoke such (as you call them) their wicked errors That the wicked are favored, and tolerated; though experience may teach every man, yet your own testimonies will be most pregnant. Mr Bradshawe one of your fellow Ministers in his 11. Argument against the ceremonies of your church complaineth that the 〈◊〉 missions of your ceremonies make a minister by your law more subject to depriuation and suspension, then the commission of the sowlest crimes, even dr•nke••s, blasphemy, gross ignorance, and uncleanness. Which he proveth. by 〈◊〉 such •ie persons (as he saith that are ministry. Some that have been 〈◊〉 to be carried home in a wheel barrow. Some that coming home drunk from the market town, have been found sleeping under a hedge in their own filth. Some that knowing and consenting to their wives filthiness, that he might swear he knew no such matter by her since he married her, married her again the morning before he was to answer it upon his oath. Deliuering the sacrament to a filthy woman, instead of Take, eat, said Turn thee, turn thee &c. To another that would take it in her hand, he put it in her mouth, and said Cob, Cob, or Daw, Daw, he knows not whether. Dr Henry Parry, tells us of a 〈◊〉 of •aterpillars, the very trash and riff raff of our nation &c. that have like 〈◊〉 of idle and dissolute quallity, only moved, thereto in a lazy speculation, laid wicked & sacrilegious hands on the Lord's ark, taken his undefiled testimonies in their defiled mouths, disgraced, defaced and defamed the glory and Majesty of di•vine rites and mysteries &c. they run like hungry companions with an eye only to the flesh pots; & so sel both themselves and their people formorsel of bread and mess of pottage to the Devil. He mentioneth also accursed and simonical patrons who have soldered & simoned the walls of their houses with the very blood of sowl•s. some others among you speaking of that a miserable vulgus that woe•full• crew that racked regiment of dunsticall and unlettered Sir John's, which have even covered the land like the frogs of Egypt, leading many thow sands with themselves into the ditch; and •he same not still graced & countenanced by the Prelat•s as being their creatures. And others complain that whole swarms of idle. scandalous, popish &, non-resident Ministers are tolerated everywhere amongst you. Your self (Mr Crashawe) in this very sermon tell in of little petty Babylon's, namely incurable sins among you 1. That great sacrilege and church robbing as you call it committed by Impropriations, in which case (you affirm) at this day almost half of the kingdom is, whereby it comes to pass that an ignorant and unpreaching ministry is set over a great part of your people which is the sourse and fountayn of all other evils in your church. 2. The ungodly players interludes. so rise in the nations; which you call a bellish devise, the Devils own recreation to mock at holy things, by him delivered to the heathen, from them to the Papists, and from them to you, And these (you say) bring religion and holy things upon the stage And hypocrisy a child of hell must bear the names of two churches of God Nicholas S. Antlings, Simon, S. Mary•veries: which churches by these miscrean•s are thus dishonored (you say) not on the stage only, but even in print. To this you add, •heir continual profaness on their phrases, and sometime Atheism and blasphemy; their continual profanening of the Sabbath, which generally in the country is their play day, and oftentimes God's divine service hindered, or cut shorter, to make room and give time for the Devils service. Many other like testimonies might I allege frō your own mouths of exceeding impiety openly practiced, not by the people only, but by the Priests and Clergy and how doth your discipline heal these corruptions; when by your own grant, such caitiffs are graced and countenanced by the prelates, when your law punisheth the conscionable ministers, more then such; as yourself say of your petty Babylon of Impropriations. this deep wound was once curable enough &c. but now (alas) how incurable it is, he observes but little that sees not. And unless the K. Majesty vouchsafe to take the matter into his hands, otherwise it is incurable. Again you say of that horrible abuse of the Sabbath &c. that est is hath been complained of, and some have endeavored to heal it, but it is 〈ϙ〉 of Babylon that will not be healed, but rather it creps 〈ϙ〉 a 〈ϙ〉 though the whole state from the foot to the head. and if you would yet have more add hereunto Mr Jacob's testimony, (who hath so manfully stood for your church,) The right and true discipline ecclesiastical (saith he) in •ch proper visible church, is one main part of the ordinary means of salvation appointed by God for every sowl, and this we in England utterly want.

Now let the reader judge, whether there be not deadly corruption in your discipline, which even in a true church, would soon eat out (if it wer not healed) the heart and life and being of a church, according to your demand. But you proceed and ask us.

Q. What book of Canonical scripture receive we not? what hold• we for Canonical: that is not.

A. What book of Canonical scripture received not the idolatrous Is•elites? what held they for Canonical that was not? The like I ask for the Arians, Anabaptists and sundry other heretics of these times and shall these, or any of them be therefore true churches? Again in your own church, there is read for holy scripture, erroneous books and lying stories, as Tobie, Judith and other Apocrypha. Your Homilies citing th̄, call them holy scripture, and say the holy Ghost speaketh so in the scriptures: & the chiefest ministers of your church, sometimes preach and take texts out of them. If this be not to hold them canonical, I know not what you count canonical.

Q. What sacrament that Christ ordained do we want? and what have we more then Christ ordained?

A. What sacrament wanted Jeroboam the son of Nebat? what had he more then God ordained? Or the Anabaptists at this day? Yet if one would stand with you he might by your Communion book prove Confirmation to be a sacrament: but who ordained it, I cannot tell, unless Pope Clement. Again, Mr Bradshaw a man of your own church and profession, hath proved against you in print that your Cross in baptism, ring in marriage, surplice &c. are sacraments in your church, and not of divine institution.

Q. What article of faith deny we? or what hold we for an article of faith this is not?

A. Suppose that the Papists, should ask you such a question, what would you answer? For all the Creeds that are in your communion book; are they not with every article, neither more nor less in the mass book and other popish pamphlets? The Papists and you both confess Christ in words, both deny him in practice

Q. What fundamental heresy doth our doctrine maintayn?

A. The unlawful commixture of the children of God and children of the Devil, in one church and communion, is a fundamental heresy being stiffly maintained. All the scritures condemn it; all well reformed churches avoid it, nature it self teacheth to abhor it: yet in such profane communion your church abiderh; and you will not endure to b•r of a separation.

Q. What have we in our church that overthrows the being of a church?

A. A popish• Clergy, and Laity.

Q. What is necessarily required to make a church that we do want?

A. You want both matter and form of a true church, namely a people called of God, separated from the world, and united with Christ and one with another, according to the rules of his eternal Testament.

Q. I will end as I began, wherein are we deadly and incurably wounded?

A. The sins before mentioned, are deadly wounds of Satan; the only cure is by repentance and faith in Christ Jesus. •ut as yet you be far from cure, for loe you make questions of your diseases; and will not believe that you are sick, Herevpon you refus• all salves and medicines; and will neither have physician nor surgeon to meddle with your sores. If any Leech come with a curing tongue•e. and words that be leaves of the tree of life, which serve to heal the nations with, if he offer to touch the Egyptian ulcers that appear in your worship, church-government, ministry, ceremonies, &c. he is presently thrust out of doors; and if he dare but affirm these or any of these to be diseases and botches in your body, sins against God, or repugnant to his word; he is excommunicated ipso facto, by the decrees of the whole representative church of England. And are you willing now to be healed? Nay if any among you, not meddling with the public estate of your church, but feeling or fearing his own particular sowl sickness, do resort to a physician (whose receipts are not after the common sort,) for advise about his health, or of friendship and acquaintance to see him: he is subject to the censure and thunderbolt of your church. Witness the late practice in Norwich; where certain citizens were excommunicated for resorting unto and praying with Mr Robinson a man worthily revered of all the city for the graces of God in him as yourself also I suppose will acknowledge,) and to whom the cure and charge of their souls, was ere while committed. Would any unmerciful man have dealt so with his bondslave in a case of bodily sickness? But hereby all may see what small hope there is of Curing the Kanker of your church.

The second question is, Are they (themselves) healed? then where were they healed? where were they called? where were they regenerate and begotten to Christ? was it not in the womb of this our church, and by means of the immortal seed of God's word that is daily sown in our church, a holy church, a church of God, where in ordinarily men are called and brought to God.

The wind bloweth where it will, and we hear the sound thereof but know not whence it cometh and whether it goeth: so is every one that is borne of the spirit. To your demand then I answer; we were being in B•y•l•o•n, your Church I mean, which restreyneth the 〈◇〉 by vnri•hteousnes; there was our regeneration begun Where we fa• in darkness and in the shadow of death; the light of God appeared▪ and 〈◇〉 us l•fe. If you yet inquire how this was, I refer you to 〈...〉 brou•ht light out of darkness, and daily bringeth forth the 〈...〉 treas•re; and his ways are past finding out: for as I kn•w 〈◇〉 t•e way of the wind, nor how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child, so know I not the work of God, that worketh all. If you dema•nd of the means; it was doubtless the word and spirit of the Lord, without which there is no calling, no regeneration. Now where you ask, how then we can deny that to be a true church, where•in 〈◇〉 men are called and brough to God? I answer; first, you take up more th•n we lay down when you say •rdinarily: for the ordinary and common fruit of the word among you, is through your own corrupt handling and hearing of it, evil and not good, the many walk the broad way, and God's calling is like, to that which the Prophet saith one of a city and two of a tribe, in respect of the worldly multitudes.

Secondly, all the Saints are not begotten unto Christ in the womb of a true particular church for when the Apostle preached among Pagans & converted many, I would know in the womb of what church they were begotten? they were first converted unto Christ, before ever they were in any other church, then that Jerusalem which is above, & the mother of all the elect. Let us come to later times; yourselves when you began to be a church of protestants, in what particular womb were your people begotten? I suppose if in any, it was in the womb of your mother church of Rome, where they had both received Baptism the seal of regeneration, and been catechised in Christian religion: and then look how yourselves can deny that to be a true church, or be free of unthankfulness towards her that bare you.

But you prosecute your cause against us, and would drive us either to say, there is indeed a true ministry of the word among you. but it is not powerfull to any but our selves; or else that we were not called in your church, but since we left you. To the first I answer; there is no necessity that we must grant a true ministry; for first we hold that the true word may be put in Balaamites mouths, and a false ministry may through God's wondrous grace, beget faith in his elect: if you say otherwise you will shake the foundation of your English church, laid by Aust• the monk Pope Gregory's Apostle; and damn all your late fathers under the Roman Clergy. Secondly, we •ie not the grace of God in the true church to the ministers lips: knowing that men by other means are often converted to the Lord. And if your ministers in England hold that men cannot be begotten to Christ among them, but by their preaching; you may take up your Letanie (which causeless you use for us) and say from this horrible and bellish pride, good Lord deliver them. As they cannot restrain the wind from blowing: so much less the spirit of God from breathing, out of other places then ministers mouths.

To the second also I answer; that it is one thing to be called in your church, as you speak; and another thing to be called by your church or ministry, as I think you mean. It is written Reu. 18.4. Go out of her my people. you see here God's people were in Babylon, and are called out of the same, not by Babel it self, or any minister of it, buy by a voice from heaven. So we might be called in your church. though not by the same. And thus we have not bard our selves from pleading against you, as you would bear men in hand: neither yet show you of whom or where you had that which you say we all stoutly answer and stiffly stand to it, namely that we leave your church merely & only out of conscience &c. We have a better ground if you would receive it, even the Law of the Lord that so commandeth both us and our consciences.

Conscience is the blind Papists common plea: but we know that man's conscience is as much defiled as any other part or power of his sowl or body; and therefore it may be no rule of our actions, but the law of God only, which is pure, perfect, and undefiled. Yet you will needs proceed and say, then we had conscience before we left you. I answer yea, or else we would not have left you. Think you that your predecessors had no conscience when they left the Popish church? Then where (say you of us, and mind whether the Papists will not say as much of you where) came they to that conscience and care of their salvation but in our church? You are answered before, we had it in your church, as God's people had in Babylon. But that (I suppose) will not satisfy you, but it was you will say, by your church and ministry. Therefore I distinguish and consider of conscience in general and in particular General lie, when men so far as they are taught and see, do walk carefully: & this I confess we had through God's grace & by means of your church: this also I acknowledge many among you have, walking conscionably so far as they see and know. The same I am persuaded also of many Papists and other misbeleeuers. But as a conscionable Papist or Anabaptist, when a further light of the Gospel ariseth unto him, must leave that church, wherein his conscience was so far informed, because it is not the true church of God: so must a conscionable Protestant do with your church, when God giveth him to see the false estate wherein you stand although you work many good effects in a man's heart and conscience.

Particularly a good conscience is to be considered in this or that particular action, as for example in this particular of our separation; and so we had not this good conscience from or by your church or ministeristry; for you thought to corrupt our consciences, and keep us still in Babylon; we had not, I say, this good conscience by your means, unless it be by accident and against your wills, and so no thank unto you, as he that would have killed his enemy, and unawares cured him of an impostume: thus indeed many of us have been brought to this good conscience of separation. For whereas heretofore many of your ministers unawares have discovered the unlawfulness of the prelacy, priesthood, leiturgie and other enormities of your church: we have hereupon thought, how it could be the church of Christ, which thus lay under Antichrist. and pressing you with your own doctrines we have found that you cannot but either go from that which before you taught: or else yield us our separation, which you so earnestly condemn. Of which thing there is before spoken in this treatise.

The third question is; How have they sought and sufficiently endeavored our healing? and til they have done all that possible can be done for our healing, how dare they forsake us?

I answer, we have sought your healing, even as by your own doctrine the faithful Jews sought the cure of Babel; and as you selves have sought the healing of Rome. The means which the Jews and yourselves have used to cure Babel, you show in your sermon to be three Instruction, example, prayer. By instruction, you say, laying open their errors, discovering their impieties, and lying before them the excellency of true religion. Thus (say I,) have we done with you witness (besides our speeches and conferences) the many books of this argument, which are published in print. 2 By example (you say) practicing their own religion even before their very faces, nor fearing their scorns and rebukes &c. And to (say I) have we practiced our religion amongst you and before your faces not fearing your scorns and rebukes. And for proof hereof, not one man (as Daniel in Babel) hath been taken in prayer, but very many of us have been apprehended sundry times, when we were praying and exercising in the word of God; and from our public meetings have been carried to your loathsome gaoles and prisons, and there detained many a day, till some were carried out upon the Bere unto their graves, some carried to the tree and executed. Which (to use your own words) had been sufficient to have driven you into deeper and better considerations, had you not been incurable; and it is to be hoped that the sight hereof, hath done good on some of you.

3. Thirdly they endeavored (you, say) to heal them by their prayers, praying continually and desiring God to heal them. Thus also have we endeavored to heal you always mentioning you in our prayers, that God would vouchsafe your mercy: and this we profess and promise to do for you still, (howsoever you reward us for it,) so long as we live on earth.

Thus have we dealt with you, according to all the duties that yourself have shown both from the Jews practice. and from your own. For whereas you allege a fourth thing that yourselves have done, namely, by devising and enacting good and wholesome laws against their errors, superstitions, impieties &c. seeing this cannot be done by subjects or private men, but only where a common weal and magistracy is established; and so neither was nor could be done by the Jews in Babel, nor by us in Engl: I suppose you will not impute this as want to Duty unto us, which if we had attempted to do, mought justly have been esteemed rebellion in us, and so our sufferings should have been as malefactors.

Whereas then we have used all lawful means to cure you that we could, as yourself have laid them down before us- I hope you will be satisfied, or if not, yet any indifferent reader will think you are sufficiently answered.

THE 4. and last demand is, If they Will needs leave our church whether will they go? To leave one thing for another no better, is seely: but for a •orse •s folly and madness. &c.

I answer, We have left Babylon, for to come unto Zion: we forsook your confused assemblies which consist of all sorts of people and an unlawful mixture with the profane and wicked that we might have communion with the people of the Lord, that willingly and gladly profess to believe the gospel and walk in it.

Now where you urge us to join to some other church in other countries. first you pass the bounds of your text, from whence you can gather no such doctrine; for the Jews forsaking Babel, joined not to any other nation or church then their own. Secondly, it is also contrary to your own practice, who when you first left Popery in K. Edwards day• and Q. Eliz. joined not yourselves to any foreign church; but one to another among yourselves. And where you tell us of the approbation of other churches, and quote their Harmony of Confessions; I answer, that book was set out long after your separation from Rome, and communion among yourselves: besides also how far they approve of you, is before in this treatise considered of Pag. 10.

Thirdly we could not join to any of those foreign churches, because• We understood not their languages nor they ours, and therefore unless we would have built a new Babel, with strange tongues, we must join into communion among our selves.

Thus have I answered your 4. demands: and for your further satisfaction, if it may be, will yet give you a view of your own dealings with us, and the Babylonians dealing with the Jews of old, as they are collected by yourself in you sermoon. They of Babel objected (as you say) that their own religion was general and universal over the world, and the Jews, but in a corner: and again they say Look into the world at this day, and see if any nation of all that came from all the • sons of N•ah be of your religion: all that came of Cham are of ours: all that came of Japheth are of ours, and all that came of Sem, but only yourselves. Your self say unto us, in these like words, Look over all Christendom, and you shall not find a Church that condemneth ours, or any that is not of our religion &c. the churches of the Low countries, are of o•r confession, the Ch: of France, the church of Geneva, the church of Scotland, the Cantons of Switzerland. the stats and Princes of Germany, they are all of our confession. Whither then will you go but unto your corners and conventicles &c. The like things are objected to us also by other of your ministers, as before in this trea•ise may be seen pag. 9. The Babylonians are by you feigned to ha•e said unto Israel, Doth not our religion prosper and flourish, and is not yours condemned by the consent of all the world? Your ministerse say for England against us, God hath witnessed his love and approbation to our church by many victories and deliverances, long continuance of the Gospel, prayers, heard &c. And the Churches and godly learned persons that ever heard of your separation did not approve of it. See also Mr Bernard's book pag. 33.

You (said the babylonians to Israel) for holding your religion are justly ouerthrown and conqu•red by u•' Mr Penry, Barrow and Greenwood say your ministers to us) were hanged, Mr Johnson's and the rest banished, by Christian magistrates professing and mainteyning the Gospel of Christ. Alas poor men (said the Babylonians) for one learned Rabbine that your have, have not we twenty? are not the Chaldeans the famoust learned men in the world? Of us your ministers say, setting aside one or two at most, there is never a minister amongst th•m th•t understandeth the sum of religion and grounds of the Catechism: and further they understand not any tongue save only English & where thē is their knowledge. again an other up braydeth us by the preaching disputing and printing of many excellent works and volumes published of all sorts (by the ministers of England): which none of us is anything have ever yet atteyned.

The Babylonians k said to Israel, During the time that you have had your Kings and Priests, show one nation by you converted, or one that came and joined with you of all that time.

Hardly (say your ministers to us) can you show any one person converted by your ministry, from papistry athisme or other opē wickedness; as by God's blessing multitudes have been by ours.

Thus we see how you and your ministers imitate Bab•l, as if they had been set to scool by Nebuchadnezzar, to get the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans; wherein how they have profited, let the reader judge; as also whither we may not apply against you, your own words, that you please yourselves in such like carnal arguments and fleshly conceyts, a• papist in their popery, and other p•fane men in their carnallity, did heretofore, and do at this day.

Of these things as I have labored to give you notice; so I desire God to give you repentance, and to heal all your deadly wounds: least that come upon you which is foretold by the Prophet, I will render unto Babel, and to all the inhabitants of the Chaldeans, all their evil that they have done in Zion; in your sight, saith the Lord.

My people go out of the midst of her; and deliver ye every man his sowl from the fierce wrath of the Lord.

Ier. 51.45.

Go out of her my people, that ye be not partakers in her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues,

Reu. 18.4.

FINIS.

P-HA-11. The art of logic; or, The entire body of logic in English. Unfolding to the meanest capacity the way to dispute well, and to refute all fallacies whatsoever. The second edition, corrected and amended. By Zacharias Coke of Grays-Inn, Gent. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Coke, Zacharias, attributed name.

THE Art of Logic; OR, THE ENTIRE BODY OF LOGICK In ENGLISH. UNFOLDING To the meanest Capacity the Way to dispute well, and to refute all Fallacies whatsoever.

The Second Edition, corrected and amended.

By Zacharias Coke of Grays-Inn, Gent.

Jam. 1. 17.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Multi multa canunt admiranda, haud sat credenda.

Cato Lib. 3. Distich. 17.

LONDON, Printed for John Streater, and are to be sold by the Book-sellers of London. 1657.

TO THE ILLUSTRIOUS, His Excellency Oliver Cromwell, GENERALISSIMO OF England, Scotland, and Ireland, Chancellor of Oxford, &c. AND TO The most Renowned his General Council of Officers.

SIRS,

THE Commodement of the Public in the Appendages of an holy Peace, as it is the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and just Carac of Heroic Enterprizings; so haerentes capiti multâ cum laude Coronae, the Crown and Apex of their Glories, whom God shall honor to contribute thereunto, though but a Grain or Atom.

Whereof (my Lord's) by the conduct of Providence, and Advantage of your incomparable Magnanimities, after long Exagitations and Repugnance of Affairs, we have gotten more then a (glad) glimse, and by your unwearied Zeals may shortly obtain the full Prospect and Fruition. Doubtless Sir, there is a Standard of Reforming all things. Nor is any Model so grateful to good men, as whose footsteps appear in the Word of God; wherein there is no Peccadillo; To which you do well to take heed, as unto a most exact and perfect Rule.

And because, to Tranquillity of Government, Corruption of Manners, and Mazing Errors are grandly opposite (these delude and distract, that doth deboish a people,) It will be your Prudence, Sirs, who sit at Helm, steering affairs of the first Magnitude, to debel and overrun the one, as it may be any ones part (who to common Weal oweth both himself and his Devoire) to abandon in his capacity the other, as Fatal thereunto; Which humble Attempt, my Lord's, here Implor•eth both your Resentment and Patronage.

The smattering (Sciolus) Soul of Lapsed man, in its most vigorous contendings unto Beatitude by its own Acies, cannot now (as in its estate of Native Innocence) with the Eagle behold the refulgence of Sunny Truths; Soaring in the highest Region of Contemplations, Penetrating the Arcana, and Essences of things; But through the flagginesse of her Pinion, flutters Estrich like, in gross and earthy Idaeas; Forming sensual and faint conceptions, and in its survey, often taking shows and shadows for substances, gets the the mind great of Distemperature, and the State of Insecurity.

But this Iargon, my Lord's, or rather System of Logico-Theology, as it will medicine the disease, so it will purge out the humor and serve (with Heavens concurrence) as the Clew of Ariadne, to guide the intricate and perplexed thoughts of the unfixed people through the great Labyrinth of Time, and involvednesse of affairs to a point of consistency; and as a Jacob's staff o• Astralabe, to help them in taking the dimensions and full heights of things, by an infallible Rule of certitude.

And since knowledge is the excellency of man (seeing he abhors more to be accounted ignorant then vicious) surely the excellentest part of him (needs) must be that wherein this perfection inthrones, which being no other then intellect above Inferior Powers, challengeth the prerogative of Ayds and Organs: Of which kind Logic (in our Native Tongue, as most rare, so) is the greated and most proper, which frameth and teacheth the use of Instruments accommodable to every operation of the understanding in its distinct and deliberate Quests of Truth.

This quality in man is the true Philophers stone it turneth all that his mind toucheth into Gold and Treasure of satisfaction. It is Janitrix Scientiarum; the Tutelary and Guardian of all, both Moral and Intellectual Habit: On the raisen wings of whose perfections, the prone and Reptile Soul soars a pitch, Circuiting all the stately Provinces and Dominions of knowledge.

This is that which by (Grace) recovers us to our Primogential condition, unclouds the masqued mide, plows up, and useals the depths of Reason, Evolves the hidden Idaeas of things, and unites the knottinesse of every emergency.

By it are confuse things made Distinct; Abstru•e, Obvious: And the Planetick thoughts to act Syncentrick, and in its Sphere. This also rangeth the Pel-mel Conceptions to Battlia and Order; It unforks Oracles, making them Toothlesse, turneth into Milk bony Paradoxes, and Cloudy AEnigma's to clear Sunshine.

Ignorance, Sirs, benights the Soul, or rather Eclipseth it: By interposinigit makes a man go all his way groping as he were blind: It is the Rack of ingenious and generous Spirits; who will oft rather drown then not dive beyond it; Nor did they ever find a better way to chase or conquer it, then by Logical Adjuments; The faithful Organ to scent the footsteps of Truth (amidst the various Abolets of Error) in the Indagation and Researches after knowledge.

It is a Zealous (but frivolous) Mistake of (the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) some that would be thought Christians in these times; That Learning aversates, & Logic leadeth from the Grace and Truths of God: As if the Donations of Heaven were opposed, subordinated in man's tendency to Bliss and Glory; Can that be erroneous or bad, that teacheth what things be, or what be not, right and good? Such prove but the opinion of those men, who affirm the World groweth old, in their beginnings thus to dote and talk idly; Can there be contrariety in means that conspire one common end, man's perfection and happiness? God's gifts may serve, not shut out one another. Wherein Transcended us the first and second Adam and Solomon too, as to the Complement of their Natures, but in Logic and Philosophick endowments? The Connaturall Imposition of Names, at first to things; That Herbal of Herbals, swallowed of Time; And the famous disputes with the Sanhedrin-doctors, and Saducean Families, abundantly argue the advantages of acquired Habits; Nor can the manner of their having them, diversie the Nature of them.

By this time then it transpires, That, as Nature needs Grace, so Grace desireth Nature: and Art both Grace & Nature. Nature without Grace cannot do well; Grace without Nature cannot do at all: But Grace in Conjunction with nature and art, can do all things, as the great Apostle and Master of Learning affirmeth of himself; and as Symilus saith, Without Art Nature cannot be perfect, and without Nature Art can claim no being, (in non-Latin alphabet) .

Now seeing this is the key of the Sciences, the study whereof is not more pleasing then profitable, and quisque cupit se bear: Why should it longer lie covert and concealed from the community? Is not Communication the excellency and measure of Good? Bonum est sui diffusivum; Doth not the Glorious and Superessentiall Being of beings (in non-Latin alphabet) delight himself in scattering beams, and filling everything with the Expandings and Circumfusions of his goodness? And why should the lesser Beauties of Knowledge, and Arts be veiled with, and confined to Foreign Languages (to the most, Barbarous and unknown) since science is no man's property?

I do not derogate Sirs from the Universities, which I know are the Seminaries and Founts of Learning and Liberall Acquisitions. Rich streams have, do, and may hereafter flow from thence, to Indent the Land with (Rivulets of) Refreshing Blessings: Yet believe I not, they should still (as formerly) have the Monopoly of Letters to inhaunce them as by Patent, above the price of the meanest capacity (if willing) to purchase them.

There cannot be a greater Prop (next that of quenching the heavenly Tapers of the Word) to the black Monarchy of the Prince of Darkness, than the Engrossments and Enclosure of the Sciences (which this lays open.) What were the Hieroglyphicks, and Imagery Resemblances of Egypt, and Ancient Greece, but to captive the People under blindness of mind, whilst some few obtained Titles of Magi, Daemones, and Sophoi; The Guerdon of their most injurious services.

But this Book, my Lord's, as it designeth the Disempa•ing of the Sciences, unlocking to the People the Mysteries of them: So Heaven (no doubt) may follow it with a Correspondence of blessing, and breaking up the Caverns and Cells of reigning ignorance, may enamour the People with the Attractive Beauty of them, and clearly inform them (omitting matters of faith) what is payable to the Magistrate, and practicable each to other. The want whereof agitates their lighter minds, scorched with flashing Zeal (unduly tempered and set on fire) to pinch the Magistrate of their duty, whilst they know it not perfectly, and Ravelling the bond of love in the unity of the Spirit; for minute differences, uncharitably invade one another, contending as for their Fires and Altars.

And seeing Religion is the Pallisado, or rather the Palladium of Republics, and knowledge the Cement of Religion; For that blesseth a people, this blasteth error and drowns their breaches of Harmony; It importeth you Sirs whom God hath honored with the chief Conduct of affairs, to promote both (which struck together, make a Diapason) since not-rare experience hath proved, where they have rung out for one, they have begun to toll for the other.

Indeed my Lord's, you drive courageously, you have almost doubled the Cape of Bon Speranze; Reformation and a happy peace will not longer ride at dead Anchor. These Mountains now removed, who were so long in travel of a Mouse of Reformation; We have hopes to receive (by your hands, as by some good Angels) the first born of our blood, establishment of Religion and liberty, which lately was like to have miscarried in the birth.

Sirs, God hath set you up the Oracles of War, made you to your Enemies Rocks, dashing them as Waves of the Sea; Your Drums▪ like Zizca's, conquering with Alarms, the clashing of your Armor terrible as thunder, your Victories always as sure as the Rancontre; Every Field to bear you new Palms, immense structures to be crowded with Ensigns and Trophies of your admirable Successes: But these my Lord's, are but Meteors adding Blaze, little of true Brightness: They have an Umbrage of Grandeur, not a spark or Dram of Glory; The Enamel of these Gayeti's and Gauds, Sully and soon grow Dusky. It is your Zeals to the Interest of Heavens affairs. and the good of Community, that will be the Heralds to blazon your Escutcheons without stain, and Aggrandize your names to all Posterity.

And when the Ardour of Christian Charity in its sweetest Vigor, and the light of knowledge (by Providence. and your powerful influences) shall flame, & as a flood break in upon us, and our youthful liberty open into a flower, then shall we grow rich with the increases of God, and the World venerate each of you, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; As a little Deity guesting in a body of flesh.

Or what is it to have the airy titles of a great Alexander, a victorious Caesar, a politick Hanibal, a valiant Serpio? What Fate attended these Philomathies? Some of them lived the Idols of the age, and mounting upon the pinacles of State (elevated on the wings of their ambitions) were most ingloriously dashed & precipic'd; whilst others like descending spokes of Fortunes wheel, beheld the solemnities of their Honors funerals: Nor could the Monuments of these Whirligigs serve Muniments to their expiring glories.

Greatness without goodness is a slippery height: The possessor in endeavoring to stand. accerseth his fall: But who builds on the Rock of ages, shall grow still and Bourgeon, his leaves shall refresh and shade the afflicted of the People; his days shall be many and good, his walks shall be on an Helix, still dilating.

And since God hath made you thus Great, may he also make you grateful; he hath given you the Conquest of affairs, to give him the Conquest of yourselves and wills. Be the shadow and

Echo, or rather Heliotropes shutting and opening to his good pleasure: Then having perfected Deliverance for this Nation (whose expectations you are) your greatness shall be complemented with goodness, and your aspirations with Glory.

But that I build not too spacious Gates to my Mynda, or throw the Fabric out at the Casements, I only add, that your Lordships fixing this Land to a happy Temperament of Justice, and Equity, advancing Letters, and reforming all things to the standard of the Word, will render England the Worlds Eutopia, the most Felicitous of Nations, and having absolved your courses thorough the Zodiac of praise-worthy actions, you will set laden with Luster, and satisfying soulpeace: Treasures of an higher Carac than the worlds Magnalia; And the prayers of the Saints ascending with you, will Petarr your enterances thorough Heavens Portcullis; while you scale the Battlements of Glory to perfect your Triumphs, and with Seraphic Hierarchies chaunt Eternal Trisagions in ravishing Division; and every Colon and Column of your lives, quartered with the memory of your Atchievements, cause your Names (Rivalling with time) to survive on Earth, perfumed as Incense, and Odorous as a pile of Spices.

—Magnum hoc ego duco,

Quod placeat tibi, qui turpi secernis honestum.

Your Excellencies, Your Honors, and the Common-wealths most faithful servant. Zach. Coke.

TO THE PEOPLE OF ENGLAND.

GOd hath made you an Ingenious and curious People, may he also make you wise unto Salvation. Not one of you (I presume) but would know much, and dispute well: This Book will serve you in both your ends. It will lead you through the plainness and depths of knowledges, both natural and Divine, which as yet perhaps seem Mysterious to you, and impenetrable; make it but your own, and you have conquered the difficulties of all the Sciences; Truths that before deluge'd you, will take you now but up to the Ancles.

Though it be a little one, it may live to do you much good: and like the Bee of Myrmecides, hath not the less Labor and Artifice. It is not the Enchanted Egg of Oromazes, instead of universal happiness, stuffed only with wind and Vapor, or as the numerous Tomes of the Times, Cui quidlibet scribendi est Cacoethes; which serve but to beat down the price of wastepaper, and to make the world sit straight about you; but securing always the Interests of truth, It will teach you to dispute and form a right Judgment of anything, to discern golden Verities from glaring and gilded; and to assure your faith against the strongest Sconces of error, to Raze or batter it.

It will not lead you out of the right way (as some blind guides) but help you to reduce those that are strayed: From it, as from a spiritual Artillery, you may deprome all weapons of reason, to guard, not affront the truths of God (which not seldom suffer in men's hands.) But as the end of war is a calm and good peace, so Harmony and agreement of spirit, is the Mark, or rather Center of disputings: for Fencing is but fooling in the Faith.

Look then into it, go over it, and you will quickly see the use and Advantage of it: Judge it not by the Frontispiece no more then you would the Riches of the Indian Mines, by the barren and Raggy surface of the Earth, or the Treasure of a Lapidaries store by the presentment at his Window: Yet when you have read it, and (perchance) dispute whether it doth more please or profit you, know that as a passion to the common good both conceived and brought it forth, so I have obtained, if growing up with the peace of the Nation, it shall beget anything of Amity and Unity among the Saints: That Paul being nothing, and Cephas nothing, The God of Truth and Love may be All in all.

Z. C.

The Art of Logic.

The prime perfection and pleasure in this life (second to that supernatural one, Faith in Christ blessed forever, and Sanctification through the Spirit) consists in man's conversing according to understanding and Reason: i. e. to understand, know and judge distinctly of things as they are in their Natures.

To the attainment of such a knowledge, three things are necessary.

1 The object or thing to be known, viz. Every thing in Nature.

2 A natural faculty or power of understanding, which floweth from a reasonable Soul, and is innate to every man.

3 A certain disposition whereby this power is ordinately and regularly, that is in order, and without error, led into Act. Now this is either,

1 Immediate, and by infusion of God, which is extraordinary and rare, and in these Ages of the Church promised to no person in particular.

2 Or it is acquired, and gotten by information and discipline, which is frequent and ordinary.

Now the disciplines disposing a man's understanding to the knowledge of things, are either.

- 1 Objective.
- 2 Directive.

1 Objective disciplines be such as handle things which are in Nature as Objects of our understanding, which are principally four.

- 1 Theology.
- 2 Jurisprudence.
- 3 Medicine.
- 4 Philosophy.

1 Divinity, called by the Greeks Theology, which is the knowledge of God, and things Supernatural, as they are Supernatural, &c.

2 Jurisprudence, or Law, which takes in beside the special Laws of God and Nature, the Canon, Civil Laws, the Law of Nations, our Laws Common, Statute and Municipall, &c.

3 Medicine or Physic, both the Speculative and Practique.

4 Philosophy, which comprehends Metaphysics, which considereth things as they are such, &c Also Physiques, or natural Science; next of all Mathematics, which contains Arithmetic, Geometry, Astronomy▪ Music, Opticks, and last of all Ethics, or Morals, containing Oeconomicks and Politicks, under which again (beside History) is comprised Strategicks, called Martial Discipline.

Directive Disciplines be such as handle not the things themselves to be known, nor do they inform or perfect the understanding of man in those things, but they prepare only some operation of man, and with framed Rules and Instruments do guide and direct it.

Now the operations of man requiring and needing such artificial Rules, are chiefly two. The first is the understanding or cogitation of things. The second the signification either by word or writing of those cogitations (as for the Disciplines Directive of the signification of men's thoughts, as Grammar, Rethorick, Poetry, they are beside our purpose to treat here) and that which thus directs the understanding or cogitations, is Logic only: to the consideration whereof, I mean the Homonymy and AEquivocation of the Word of Term, we now come.

This word Logic

Hath divers significations: For first is meant by it the power or faculty of the understanding and reasoning, which is innate, and floweth from man's Essence or Nature.

2 It may be taken for a frame or constitution of Logical precepts, by this or that man written, called a system; which frame may be also taken for an Art, by a Metonymy of the Cause for the Effect, accepting Art not for an habit ingenerated in the mind by precepts and use, but for a collection of universal precepts, to operate in a determinate latitude and limit of End.

3 It may be accepted for a certain part of this whole frame or constitution, namely that which is of a Syllogism Contingent or Commune.

4 It may signify an Act or Habit, begotten by precepts and use in the mind of the Artist; as when we say Peter is a good Logician: and this is the most proper signification of the word Logic, according to which we define it: So therefore Logic is an Art of ordering and directing of man's understanding in the knowledge things:

Or secondly,

Logic is an Art that teacheth how to think and judge distinctly of all things.

In this Definition are contained,

- 1 The Genus.
- 2 The Object.
- 3 The End.

The Genus of Logic is an Art; for It cannot be Wisdom which teacheth and treateth of the highest causes and things.

2 Its not Understanding which containeth and consisteth of the habit of principles.

3 Nor is it Science, which is made up only of such things as are real and universal.

4 Nor can it be Prudence, which teacheth things that are particular to be done and practiced. It remains therefore that it be an Art: For,

First it imitates and perfecteth Nature.

2 It presupposeth a certain end whereunto it directeth all the means.

3 It is to be known, not for its own, but for the sake of some other; the profit thereof being in use, not speculation.

4 It adviseth nothing of the means, it consults not whether to use these or those means to obtain the end, for that they all are predetermined, and in a certain disposition ordinated to their end.

5 It operates without any contrariety, or repugnancy of the appetite and affections, as not engaging or disengaging them.

6 It is not commendable for the intent or purpose, but for the thing done, the work itself.

7 It is not to be dispraised when it errs of set purpose and industry (for it could have done otherwise) but when it errs of ignorance and unwillingly.

8 It is delivered by an Analytical and Resolutive method, proceeding from the object and end foreknown, unto the means which are to be ordinated.

Ergo, Logic is an Art.

Of the Object of Logic.

The object of Logic is twofold.

- 1 That which it directeth.
- 2 That whereto the understanding is directed.

1 The object which Logic directeth, is the Understanding, Reason, Mind or thought of man: wherein two things are to be foreknown.

- 1 The properties of the understanding.

- 2 The parts and degrees thereof.

1 The properties of the understanding to the preknowledge of Logical precepts necessary, are
1 That those perceived of sense, be first and best known of the understanding; let the understanding deduce thence its original knowledge. 2 That since the defection of our first parents in Paradise, our understanding cannot faithfully and certainly determine to comprehend the natures of things with distinctness and order, and by its own acies and strength to discern the truth, unless by artificial and outward rules, directed and governed, unto which the understanding looks, as the Mariner to the Compass; In which respect and sense, it is in worse case than the sense, which have conserved themselves sound & entire since the first apostasy, of their own force and vigor being still able to determine themselves faithfully to know their own objects. 3 That the understanding of itself, is rather carried to the cogitation of things universal (and such objects as are not determined either by will, place, time, &c. circumstances) then unto determinate things and singular, the effects and products of sense. 4 That the understanding acts not in a moment, but successively, in time, and by order. 5 It understands not the same independently, and of itself, but goeth from one thing to another; and hence it is that the distinct knowledge of God is paramount the reach of the understanding, there being nothing in God diverse from God, or what is not God himself: in man there are many things more obvious to knowledge than man himself, but in God there's no such thing, who is conceivable only (& that but most imperfectly) by himself. 6 That at one and the same time it is occupied about, and understandeth but one thing. 7 That the object must be proportionate to itself, and finite; it cannot understand God who is infinite. 8. That it may assent certainly to conclusions proved, even Testimony (if authentic) yet so as no distinct knowledge can be begotten in the understanding, except there be a mean from the nature of the Predicate or Subject; for that to know, is by the Cause. 9 That the instruments of its operation need be pure and composed, should be spirits void of affectuous humors, as Anger, Fear, Malice, Revenge, &c.

Degrees are three,

1 The first degree of the understanding is simple, viz. the apprehension of a single Term or Theme, as Peter, Paul, a living Creature.

2 Is the conception of two Terms by way of composition, as when we think, A man is a living Creature: or, A man is a reasonable Creature.

3 Is when in order we think of more than two Terms passing the thought from one to the other, till you come to a third. This is discourse.

Discourse now is twofold.

- Illative.
- Ordinative.

Illative is such a moving of our Thoughts, as when by the repeating the co-ordination of things, that is, the third Term with the two former, we judge the co-ordination of these two Terms to be true or false: This discourse is that which is called Syllogistical.

2 Ordinative is a moving of our thoughts from one part of the doctrine to another, that so we may judge how they consist and hang together. This discourse is called Methodical.

The Object to which the understanding is directed and ordered, is everything in Nature; for the understanding and comprehending of which in our thoughts, the Understanding needeth and seeketh rules of Logic.

1 Of this object there is a three-fold partition of things. 1 Some are infinite, as God, and hereunto the serv'ce of Logical Instruments is not sufficient for the eliciting of a perfect conception or knowledge: Others are finite, and create; and of them some be spiritual and imperceptible by sense, and with much ado can the understanding conceive them: Some also be corporal, and to know them and their instruments, Logical instruments chiefly serve.

2 Things in nature are considerable two ways. 1 Indeterminately without respect or restraint to Term, Place, or other circumstances, as a Man. 2 Determinately unto circumstances, as Peter Paul, &c. About the first (as about things universal) are Logical instruments and directions primarily and principally used About the latter (as about singular) they are used but secondarily.

3 Things are considered absolutely and in themselves, and so are called simple beings, or entia, or things, as a Man. Sometime as co-ordinate, and one with another, as a Man, a living creature: now they are called compounded. About the first, the first part of Logic is used; about the latter, the second and third parts.

The proper end of Logic, is, the ordering and directing of man's cogitations (or the acts of man's understanding) in the knowledge of things; this is the true and proper end of Logic. 1 Because every essential end must be equal to its thing ended, (nor straiter nor larger) because the end constituteth the essence. 2 Every end must be one, for the unity of an Art depends of the unity of the end; as the unity of knowledge depends of the unity of the subject. 3 An End in Arts not conjectural, such is Logic, must be put when the means are put; and these three Criteria, or rules, exactly do agree in the direction of the understanding: and hitherto having minded the nature and essence of Logic, lets now consider the properties and effects that followeth the essence.

Properties of Logic.

1 No discipline more helpeth the wit, or contemplative sharpness, i. e. the inclination of the temperature to contemplate distinctly and accurately. 2 Unto the wit belongs, 1, The judgment, or judging faculty, i. e. a disposition soundly to think and perceive whats true, and whats false in 2 things. 2 A facility of learning. 3 Discipline. 4 A witty 3 faculty quickly to find out the mean to prove the truth, and 4 refute the falsehood, all which Logic helpeth, ordereth, directeth.

3 Logic is the directory of the thoughts, making them regular, that whatsoever is conceivable of a thing, may be drawn to a right sum, for an orderly process in them, and to avoid confusion.

4 When a man hath soundly and well thought on a thing, it enableth him exactly and in order to reach and write it.

5 It causeth a man well to learn that which is well taught.

6 It giveth a reflexive knowledge to a man, that is, it makes a man not only know (directly) but makes him know that he knoweth a thing.

7 It enableth a man to resolve what is compositively handled by others.

8 It much avails and profits to conference and collations, whether occasional or other.

9 By it, is a man enabled to an apt and regular placing and acquiring of intellectual virtues, as on which depends the disposition and order of all disciplines, as to their frames and constitution.

10 It is the rule of those habits a man hath acquired, instructing him to work aright; yet I mean but the rules of ingenious and intellectual operations.

11 In respect of man (that is to learn) it is the rule of all other disciplines whatsoever, but especially for Divinity. I say not, it is essential to the simple knowledge of things substantial to salvation (for this may be by infusion from heaven, without any human artifice) but I mean, the ordinary way of erudition and skill to handle places in Theology, depends on Logic.

Now unto Logic (as unto every habit) are required three things, (as it were efficient causes of it) Nature, Method, Exercise.

1. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 or Nature, that is, a natural faculty, which consists of the humors, disposition and temperament of the body, whereby a man is inclinable to this, more then to that Discipline.

2 Method (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 in the Greek) is a Collection and frame of all Logical precepts, needful to the acquisition or getting the habit of the Art.

About this frame two things are considerable.

- 1 Invention. m
- 2 Conformation. n

The principal Inventor of this Art (as of all other) is the Spirit of God, viz. the holy Ghost; then, men his Instruments in all Ages.

Now the Causes motive of men to invent this Art, were 1 The defect of man's nature, who out of a perception that the thoughts of men could not well determinate themselves to the understanding of things without the help of second thoughts, were forced to frame and devise such, and they call them Logical notions. a

2 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : Admiration of natural effects, arising out of abstruseness of the Causes, causing grief to ingenuous spirits (for, wonder speaks ignorance) by which they were irritated to a serious enquiry after the Causes, which without Logical determinations was not feasible.

3 A purification and itch after knowledge (innate to every man) Now he that desireth an end, adviseth of, and desireth the means conducent thereunto, and such in special is Logic.

The means men used at first (I mean since the Fall) for the expoliting and adorning of the Art of Logic, is, first, Outward Sense, principally those of Seeing and Hearing. 2 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Observation; and this ever presupposeth remembrance, which is nothing but a reflection upon something formerly taken notice of. 3 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Experience, that is, the collection of many Observations and Examples, and retaining them in memory. 3 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Induction (the third 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , that is, effect of the understanding, is invention) which from the judgment of the senses, and experience of observations, formeth in the understanding a common and universal notion, which as it were is a rule by which the knowledge and virtue of working are directed in the operation to come.

In the Conformation of this whole Logical Constitution, two things are very observable.

- 1 The Formal. q
- 2 The Material.

1 The formal, &c. consists, 1 In the determinate distribution of the parts. a 2 In the co-ordination of the parts so determined, unto the end of the whole: b

1 In the distribution of the parts, these 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , or rules are observable. 1 Every good distribution should be made with words fit and significative unto the mind, of the parts of the whole distributable, but not of anything not therein contained. 2 Division should be of the whole, not of the parts of the whole. 3 If it be a good division, the parts (divided) will be equal to the whole, and neither more nor less. 4 It should consist of such parts only as are in the whole, retaining the same order, and agreeing with it. 5 In a good partition there should be a disjunction & segregation of the parts one from another, neither presupposing or including one the other. 6 And this disjunction of parts must be such a disjoynor which mensurates the whole, and whereby the whole is constituted. 7 A division should distinguish the whole, not confound or perplex it. 8 The parts (integral) should be amongst themselves of the same order and nature with the whole, that the whole might the better measure them. 9 Lastly, A good division should be commodious, and apt to notificcate the whole.

The second (as it were) efficient cause of Logic, is Method, the division whereof (or the general way to learn it) is into three parts.

1 The first is of the general precepts to be foreknown (which precepts are as the Porch of a building) as of the signification of the word or name, the acception of it▪ the genus, or general title of it, the end, the object, and the parts.

2 Is the Method or frame of the precepts constitutive of the Art; these are the chief rooms of the house.

3 The Exemplar or pattern of this Art of Logic to be used and practiced, which serves as the Postick and hinder part of this Edifice.

Again, the second of these is tripartite, or admits of a threefold division. The first is, which shows the cogitation to co-ordinate two terms one toward another. The second and third, which direct the discursive cogitations▪ when they are first Illative, & go by way of inference and consequence; Or 2 When they are ordinative, methodical, and by conclusion, as is premonstrate; And so much as to the determinate distribution of the parts.

2 Now come we to the Co-ordination of the parts, concerning which, note these 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , or Rules. 1 That every constitution or frame, is a mean to some determinate & certain end, therefore it ought to be proportioned and ordered to this end, with a certain proportion, adornment and method, and adapted to the happy acquisition thereof. 2 Whatsoever is in the end or use, must be put into the constitution and frame, not more or less. 3 Let no precept go into the frame, that maketh not for the end or use. 4 The use should easily and plainly be understood by the precepts, it being a thing unfit that the instrument should be more hardly understood than the use of it. 5 That we may attain without precepts, there should be no precepts delivered of the same. And thus much of the Formal, of the frame of Logic, now come we to the Material.

2 The Material then of the frame of Logic, consists in that wherein the partition and conformation before handled is, and it is twofold.

- 1 Primary.
- 2 Representative and Secondary.

The primary Material also is twofold.

- Simple. a
- Compound. b

1 The simple material, be the Logical terms, words made to represent the sense of the cogitations, so that the understanding is as it were limited and confined within itself in cogitating and thinking; they are called Second Notions.

The first Notions are the conceptions we have of things, as they are things.

Now these second Notions do not directly and by themselves shadow out unto us the things themselves, nor anything accidental or appendant unto them, but point unto certain intellectual Rules, whereby we do with all distinctness and regularity form things, that is, the conceits of things: As the Sailors Compass doth not give direction to the Mariners by subjecting to the sight the very winds themselves really, but the North-wind, South-wind, &c. as they may be specificated, or the Regions wherein they range. Those that primarily imposed names, intended to name first the things themselves, & then secondly they added second Notions, which we call Mental and Logical: As the word Man, is to express primarily the conceit which we form of Humane Nature, and is as the image thereof, and immediately founded therein; for man's nature is the immediate object, and this is a word of the first intention; but when we say, a man is a Species, or a Genus, or Difference, &c. these are words of the second intention, not desumed immediately from the thing, which is human nature, but from the manner of understanding, whereby we understand such Terms to agree unto Peter, John, and every man.

2 The compound Material be the precepts in Logic, framed of and from those Notions of second intention, explicitly & plainly exhibiting to our minds and understandings, those things which the second Notions themselves do but implicitly and darkly; these therefore are necessary unto the learning of this Art of Logic, and ought to be formed according to these subsequent Rules.

1 The precepts of Logic should be made regularly and fully to obtain the End. 2 Both as to the words of them and number, they should be conceived and set down determinately. 3 They should be Homogeneous, that is, of the same kind, mensurated and adapted only to this Art and End. 4 They should be framed plain and with perspicuity. 5 They should be apposite and fit to the teaching and learning of this Art.

And so much for the primary Material of Logic.

The secondary Material, or representative, are Examples added to the Precepts, which is only a particular experiment of this or that precept, either upon ourselves or others; wherein are observable these following Rules.

1 Examples ought to be agreeable and fitting to the nature and end of the Art, deducing carefully the experiments from those had arrived unto the end of the Art, and that accordingly operated 2 Examples, as accommodate to the precepts, so they should be very intelligible, fit to be made use of, and proportionate to the truth and verity of the precepts. And thus much of the first and second efficient causes, by which the habit of Logic is acquirable (viz.) the Nature, and Method. We come briefly to the third Efficient, which is, Exercise of Logic.

The Exercise then of Logic consisteth in this, that we frequently think on, & diligently meditate things conformable to the prescriptions and rules of Logic, that is, orderly and distinctly: This indeed is the chief, most principal, and the nearest Efficient Cause of this habit in us of this Art of Logic, and immediately engenerates and expresseth Logic in us, whereas Wit and Precepts are Causes but remote.

The means and parts of this Exercitation are two.

- Representative.
- Operative.

1 Representative are such as are superadded to the Rules of Logic, as Experiments and manifest Testimonies, Forms of Disputation, Resolution, &c.

2 Operative is the very Art itself of this Exercitation and Use, which should be by an assiduous imitation of the most eminent wits, and by the agitation of our own. And thus much of the Prolegomena's, and things necessary to the foreknowledge of Logic.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE Art of Logic.

Logick is an Art which conducteth the mind in the knowledge of things.

It hath three things to be remarked as parts thereof. The first is, that which directs the first operation of the mind, which objecteth to itself only single or simple things, by the mediation of a single or simple term, which is a notion or instrument of Logic, representing unto the understanding one thing (called therefore incomplex:) and it is called a second notion as it is the minds image and pourtraict, shadowing to itself some outward thing. First notions are (as it were) the string or rule of a Dial; second notions are (as it were) the ombre and shadow made by that rule or string: these both show the hour, but the string or stem first and fundamentally; the second (that is the shadow) but secondarily, as it configurateth to the other.

A single or simple term is,

- 1 On whom the latter depends, and it is either
 - of a word,
 - or of a thing.
- 2 Arising from the first, and it is also either
 - of a word,
 - or of a thing.

Of a Word or Voice.

The term of a Word is that whereby the naming of a thing is considered; a word is the sign of things or conceptions, pronounced or written with a certain frame of letters and syllables.

In a word three things are remarkable.

- 1 The Material.
- 2 The formal.

- 3 The Imposition.

The Material is the sound in the pronouncing of the letters and syllables, whereof the word is constituted, either in speaking or writing.

The Formal is the signification of the word, and by consequence the relation to the conceit of the mind which $\langle \diamond \rangle$ giveth knowledge of: now the efficient cause of this signification, is, the imposition and institution, which in the He brew Tongue is Divine (as God was the institutor and imposer) in other tongues human, as having been invente and imposed by man.

Unto a Word appertain

- 1 Divisions.
- 2 Affections.

1 Of the division of words.

1 Words have their divisions either

- Of the thing signified. a *.
- Of the manner and ordering of signifying. b *

Of things signified, some words are

- Of themselves significative, as a Man or Woman, Worm, &c. and all Nouns that signify a thing wholly.
- Consignificative, and that need other words to express their meaning, as Adverbs, Pronouns, &c.

Significative words also are of the first intention which signify of themselves without the help of the mind, and they are the things themselves, or

2 Of the second intention, which means not a thing (itself) but the manner of it, or word of Art, whereby the thing is understood.

Now the division of the manner of signifying words is into Abstract Concrete Abstract, is which signifieth a thing apart, causing the mind to meditate the simple and precise nature of anything, as Godhead, Manhood, whiteness, redness, &c.

Concrete is that which signifies things conjoynly, as having more natures then one complicate or conjunct, as man, white, holy, &c.

Words also are either of

- 1 A particular signification, as man.

- 2 Collective signification, as a flock, a company, a Church, &c.

Again, of the manner of signifying, words are either

- Distinct.
- Ambiguous.

Distinct, which hath a certain and distinct signification, as fire, earth, air, and other names of things existent in nature.

An ambiguous word, is which indistinctly signifieth things that in nature are divers, as Cancer, which signifieth both a living creature and a disease; hereunto all words that are Equivocall, and have divers senses are referrible.

Now words become doubtful either

- by chance.
- of purpose.

Words ambiguous by chance is, when reason cannot be given why one name should be given to things divers in nature and definition.

Of purpose doubtful, is when a common name is given to divers things upon counsel, and for some certain reasons, and this again is doubtful either of

- Dependance. a
- Similitude. b

Ambiguous of dependance, is when a general name is given to divers things, whereof one is dependant on another (as upon the more principal) touching the nature of it; as this word thing is most general, and therefore doubtful, it being attributed both to substances and accidents, but not equally and alike; for to a substance it is given of itself, and principally; to an accident, less principally, as having its nature dependent of the substance, it is therefore called an Analogous general or Genus.

Ambiguous of similitude, is, when for some consimilitude or likeness, together, one name is given to divers things, and is either 1 Simple, d or 2 Compound e

1 Simple, is, when the Similitude lies between two and no more, and is of

- Conceit.
- Things really.

Ambiguous by similitude of conceit, is, when two things altogether divers (as God and the Creature) obtain one and the same attribute or name upon the conception we make of some similitude betwixt them; so God and man are both said to be good, just, to repent, &c. whereas really, no words can be found to express God's most incomprehensible being.

Ambiguous by similitude of things in reality, is, when the significations of their natures or operation bear an evident and known similitude. As when meat and medicine are called healthful, because both cause health: Or, as when a beast and a disease are called a Wolf, because of the rapacity and ravenousness of both; and upon this account are the Seals of God's Covenant called Sacraments, because of the correspondence and similitude they bear unto those Solemn Oaths, wherewith men were in former ages bound and consecrate to the Wars.

Ambiguous of a Compound Similitude, is, whose likeness consisteth of a proportion between four; and it is called Analogy. As this word Governor is Analogical and proportionable, when attributed to a Magistrate and a Shipmaster; for (here is the proportion between four) as the Master of a ship or Pilot is unto a ship (whereof he hath government) so is the Magistrate unto the Common-wealth. In like manner, flesh is Analogical in respect of beasts, birds, and of apples, cherries, &c. And in this sense are Magistrates called God's upon earth, Psal. 82. 6. And thus much of the divisions of Words; Now follow their affections, or their Canons and Rules, which be three.

The first affection of a word, is, that it should be perspicuous, that is, plain, and significative unto the mind of that which it ought to signify, 2 It should be received by a common consent and use. 3 It should be proper, determined and adapt to the signifying of the thing to be signified.

Of the Order of things.

Having hitherto treated of the first single Term, which is of a word; the next thing to be treated of, is the single Term of a Word which without the word representeth to the understanding somewhat of the thing itself.

And it is either The order of things called Predicament, or some Term or Not on without the Order.

The Predicamental Order is a distinction and disposition of all things by certain orders, and degrees of orders.

Herein are considerable,

- 1 The manner how things are received into this order a
- 2 The graduation or degrees of this order. b
- 3 The particular things themselves. c

1 The manner of receiving them into this order, is first Direct. 2 Proportional. 3 Collateral. 4 Indirect. 5 By accident: all which are declared by eight Rules following.

First then directly and primarily in the order or Predicamental scale, is a thing which is, 1 Real and positive. 2 Simple and of itself. 3 Universal. 4 Compleat or Whole. 5 Univocal (that is) a thing signified by one distinct and certain word; these five are as it were conditions of referribility in things unto a Predicamental order.

2 Receiving things into this order, is by proportion; thus may God (blessed forever) be brought in, not directly, because he is a most simple Being, one in Number, having neither Genus above him, nor difference to restrain him, because whereof, he cannot be placed in the Predicament of substance, but Analogically, and by proportion.

3 Collaterally, side-wise, or obliquely; thus a difference is placed in the Predicamental scale or series (as a reasonable soul, if it be taken for the difference of a living creature, is placed in the Predicament of Substance, but sidewise, not directly: hitherto also may be referred Abstracts, to wit, Abstraction of Inferiors (as they are called) as Humanity, Animality, &c.

4 By Reduction, or indirectly: things placed in this Predicamental scale, are first Concrete, and which simply consist not of one and the same thing, as just, merciful, and other Concretes, containing both substances and accidents: so the Church, the World, and other like Collectives: hither also may the parts of any whole be referred, as the head, hand, foot, &c. but reductively, and by reducing them unto their whole.

5 By Accident do appertain to the Predicamental order things compounded; and this they do by reason of their simple Terms, as Man is a living creature; this sentence is referred to the order of substance; A man is learned, this is referred to the order of substance in part, as it respects the man; and partly to the predicament of quality, as this man is learned. 2 Things Intentional, without the mind, as the Images of true things, colors seen in a glass, &c. 3 Second Notions, as words of Art, Genus, Species, Difference, &c. 4 Relations of Reason, as the right or left side of a pillar, &c. 5 Privations, which are always referred unto the same Predicamental order that the habits thereof are; as blindness is in the same rank that sight is. 6 Fained things, things of fiction, as a Golden Mountain, Hirco-cervus, &c. referred to the predicament of substance.

6 From the predicamentall order be excluded plainly 1 All words of ambiguity and doubt, at least before they be distinguished and limited. 2 Fained things, which are absolutely impossible, as a Created God, Deified flesh, an unbloody Sacrifice, merit of works in a sinner, universal Election, and other such prodigious fantasies.

7 A thing in itself simply one, pertains to one Predicament; if it be Concrete, it may be referred to two, but inequally, and so that it be primarily under one, viz. that which it most respecteth; so Baptism and the Lord's Supper are not to be referred to Substance or Action, but to Relation, because water and the washing therewith are but the material things in Baptism; the formal being the holy Relation in signing and sealing the Spiritual washing away of sin.

8 Lastly, things themselves are placed in the Predicaments of themselves and fundamentally; Conceits and Names of things but secondarily, and so far forth as they represent things: and so much of the manner how things are received into the Predicamentall scale or order: we pass now to the second, viz. The degrees of the order, or Predicamentall Series.

The degrees then of this Order, by which things are to be understood in their ranks, some are superior, some inferior to others, and these degrees are not unfitly called Predicables.

A Degree is

- 1 Direct. a a
- 2 Collateral. b b

1 Direct, when we ascend or descend forthright, that is in a strait and direct line in order, as Genus, Species, Individuum.

2 Collateral, when the ascent or descent is made in an indirect line, and side-long, as Difference.

Again, the direct degree is either Primary or Secondary.

Primary, as Genus, and Species: Secondary, as Individual.

Primary, is that which in the Predicamental order is universal or common to many, and is Genus and Species.

Genus.

Genus, is that which hath Species under it, that is, a general is that which containeth two specials or more under it.

The common Rules hereof are four.

1 The Genus or general is always of the same Predicament or order of things with it Species or special. By which Canon or Rule, you may discern any, and many false generals, as that the body of Christ is not the true Genus or general of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; that water is not the true Genus of Baptism, nor an action the Genus of sin, nor air of sound, that harmony or number is not the Genus of the soul, for such be not in one Predicament; by this also Metaphors are removed, as when the Church is called Noah's Ark, or the Spouse the body of Christ; these are true, but not the true genera or generals: for Metaphors show not what a thing is, but what a thing is like to.

2 The Genus is never the cause of his Species, nor the subject, nor the accident, and therefore is never predicated or spoken of his Species in the Concrete, but always absolutely in the right (that is the nominative) Case: They therefore err, that in the Meteors make water to be the Genus of rain; fire the Genus of a Comet; air of the wind; whereas Meteors are called waterish, fiery, airy; so the cause cannot be the true Genus, as when dubitation is said to be the counterpoise of equal reason; Anger the boiling of the blood about the heart; Death the separating of the soul from body, &c. In such, the causes are placed instead of generals; so also for the subject, when we define wind to be the air moved; Original sin to be corrupt nature, &c.

3 The Genus is always and necessarily more large than all the Species of it, and is not returned or reciprocated with them.

4 The Genus is inseparable from his Species; nor can that be the true Genus without which the Species are or may be in any, or anywhere: this proves motion cannot be the true Genus of pleasure, seeing pleasure may be somewhere, where motion is not or ceaseth.

Genus is twofold

- Supreme.
- Subaltern.

1 The highest and most general, is so a Genus, as it can never be a Species.

2 Subaltern Genus is, that is successive and by turn, that is, when it is Genus of them contained under it, and Species of that which is above it.

Also the Genus is either remote and afar off from the Species, or, 2 Neer and next unto it; as the Genera of a man, a living Creature is the remote Genus, and Animal is the nearest Genus; for there are none other so near man as those two.

Again the Genus is

- Perfect. a
- Imperfect. b

Perfect Genus, or a Synonymous general is, when his Species all of them take equal part of him; as a living creature is the equal and perfect Genus of man and beast; for a beast is a living creature no less than, and equally with a man.

The Canons and Rules of a perfect Genus are five.

1 A perfect Genus hath a Nature not separated, but yet distinct from all his Species.

2 All that which is in the Genus is equally communicated with the Species, so as nothing can be said of the Genus, but the same also may, and must be said of every species.

3 The Genus is in Nature before all his Species, and therefore first in that knowledge which is according to Nature.

4 The Genus hath necessarily many species, as not being able to be conserved in one; for every genus is perfected in determination of opposite differences, and opposition implieth plurality; so that one genus must of necessity have at the least two species.

5 A perfect Genus being put, there needs not therefore any determinate or certain species to be put; and if one species be denied, the genus is not thereupon denied.

There is an Analogy and similitude between a Genus and Matter: For first as the matter is more imperfect than the form, &c. So is the genus more imperfect than the difference or species. 2 As the first matter is undetermined to any of his forms so is the genus to any of his differences; & as the matters have a power unto the opposite forms; so hath the general unto the opposite differences; yet nevertheless there is great discrimination betwixt the genus and the matter, and they be not the same.

An Imperfect Genus is that which is not communicated with his species equally and alike, but to one more, to another less.

The Rules and Canons of this be three.

1 An Imperfect Genus, is immediately, properly and of itself communicated but with one species, with another it is communicated but mediately and secondarily in order to the primary species; so this genus (thing or ens) is an imperfect genus to substance and accident; for thing is communicated primarily to substance; to accident but secondarily in and by the substance, accidents being not so much things Create as Concreate.

2 An Imperfect Genus hath not a Nature altogether distinct from its species; so a thing naturally is not altogether distinct from substance or accident.

3 To put an Imperfect Genus, we must needs put some certain species, viz. that species by which it agreeth to the other; and this species being denied, the genus itself is forthwith denied.

And so much for the first Predicable of the first degree, to wit the genus.

The Species.

Species, or the special, is an universal thing subjected, or subordinate unto the Genus: and it is,

- Perfect. a
- Imperfect. b

Perfect is that which is under a perfect Genus.

The Rules hereof be four.

1 The Species is in Nature after the Genus, & in Knowledge distinct.

2 It ariseth from the determination of the Genus, so as it swalloweth up, as it were, the whole Genus in itself; that whatsoever the Genus hath, it also hath.

3 Perfect Species do equally participate of their Genus, one as well as the other.

4 Perfect Specials be in Nature together. As a Man is not after a Beast in nature, though in time Beasts were first created. So Baptism and the Lord's Supper be in Nature together (being alike Species of the Sacrament of the New Testament) though in time Baptism was first.

Imperfect Species, is that which is under an imperfect Genus.

The Rules hereof be three.

1 Under an imperfect Genus, one Species is more principal than another. So a Substance is the more principal Species of a Thing; An Accident is less principal.

2 The principal Species of an imperfect Genus, communicateth as much to the other Species, as doth the Genus itself. So an Accident is as much bound to a Substance, as to a Thing.

3 The principal Species is in Nature and Knowledge before the less principal, for it depends wholly on the principal, and is that which it is, by benefit thereof. This Rule discovereth the Popish Error, That in the Mass the Accidents of Bread and Wine should remain without the Substance.

Also the Species is either

- Subaltern, that is, Species of one, and Genus of another.
- Most special, or lowest Species, never Genus.

The Rules hereof be two.

1 The lowest Species cannot be divided by opposite differences.

2 It may be conserved in one Individuum.

Hitherto of the direct degree Primary. Now followeth the Secondary, or Individuum.

An Individuum or singular thing, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, is that which under the generals and specials is determined unto certain circumstances of Existence.

The Rules hereof be four.

1 The note of on Individuum is sometime more strict, sometime more large. The word whereby an Individuum •s signified, is sometime single, sometime compound.

Single, as proper names, as Christ, Abraham, Peter, &c. or 〈◇〉 •f proper, as the Apostle, meaning Paul; the Philo•... meaning Aristotle.

1 Compounds be either Demonstrative, as this Man, that Woman, &c. O• uttered by commune names, as a certain man, or the Savior of the world, the Virgins Son, meaning Christ: the enemy of Mankind, i. e. Satan. These some call Individua vaga, and Individua vaga ex hypothesi.

2 Singulars, or Individua, as they are the secondary object of Logic, so also they cannot perfectly be defined; neither of themselves, as they be singulars, are they considered in disciplines: [for they belong to sense, as to be seen, felt, &c.] whereas universal things, appertain to reason; and as sense properly perceives not universal things, so neither doth reason singular things, viz. as they are sensible: nor so excellently as universals.

3 Singulars primarily and by themselves, do exist work, and are perceived, [Essence is of universals. Existence is of singulars:] for hereto is required the Termination of some certain time and place, which is not in universals.

4 Singulars are incommunicable; for they having a most restrained Nature, have no inferiors to communicate with.

An Individuum is either,

- Accidental. a
- Substantial. b

1 Accidental is, which is under the order of Accidents; [as Accidents have their Predicaments, so also their Genus, Species, singulars] So an habit is the Genus of Faith. Faith is the Species; but Abraham's faith, the Centurions faith, &c. are singulars, or Individua.

Substantial is that which is under the order of Substance.

And is

- Absolute. m
- With Addition. n

Absolute, which is looked on absolutely.

With Adjection, is a person, which is the first substance intelligent, incommunicable, not part of another, nor sustained by another.

Some singulars be called indirect, as are the names of Cities, Rivers, Mountains, &c.

Note these Properties, A Person must be 1 A Substance; so no Accident is a Person: It is 2 The first Substance, or a singular thing; so no Universal is a Person. It must have 3 Understanding; so no particular Beast, as Balaam's Ass, is a Person. It is 4 Not part of another; so a man's soul is not a Person. It is not 5 Sustained by another, so Christ's human Nature is not a Person. It is 6 Not communicable; so the divine Essence is not a Person, for it is communicated with the Father, Son, and holy Ghost.

We have seen the direct degrees; now follow the Collateral, or sidelong, which is called Difference.

Difference is here taken in a strict and peculiar signification, only for the determination and restraining of the universal and indifferent Nature, in the Predicamental order, and not for every distinction and diversity of things, whereof we treat hereafter. And thus Difference pertaineth to the degrees of Order, not as constituting or informing, but as binding and knitting, not as causing anything properly, but as determining and tying together the universal in the Predicamental line.

The Difference is that which restraineth and determineth the Genus in the Species.

The Rules hereof are eight.

1 The Difference respecteth the general and the special in a divers respect: the general as determinable; the special as determinated.

2 The Difference, as it is a difference, never noteth a thing complete and separate, but always incomplete.

3 The Difference is after the general, and before the special, yet is it in the general indeterminately, or in power.

Universals are like a long rope, loose without knot: difference is like a knot; the special is as a rope tied with a knot. The knot is after the loose rope, but before the knit rope: and the knot which in power was in the loose rope, is in act in the tied rope. A rope with knots differeth not really from a rope which hath not knots: so the Species restrained by difference, differeth not really from the Genus.

4 Every Difference inferreth his proper and certain Genus. Therefore differences should not be transferred from Genus to Genus.

5 The Difference that is to determine the general, must needs be opposite ; for difference restraineth not the Genus, but by a kind of opposition and se junction of the Species.

6 Every Difference is inseparable from his Species.

7 The Difference is not varied by degrees.

8 The Difference is apt to be avouched (praedicari) of his Genus, but in the Concrete, or in quale. For no difference showeth what a thing is, but of what manner it is: As if one ask, What manner of living creature is a man: The answer is, A reasonable, living creature: so that the difference is not so much spoken of the Species, Man, as of the Genus, Living Creature, or Animal; for it maketh the Genus to differ, and determineth it.

Difference is either,

- Far off.
- Nearest.

Far off, is that which is not reciprocate with his Species, called Generica.

Nearest, is that which is equal with his Species: It is cal-Specifica.

As sensible maketh a man differ from a stone, in a far difference; for other Species, as Beasts, have the same difference, but reasonable is the nearest, whereby he differeth from a stone, beasts, and all other things.

Hitherto hath been handled, 1 The manner how things are received into Predicamental Order. And 2 The degrees of the Order. Now follow, 3 The particular Orders, or Predicaments themselves.

There be ten Predicaments, or Orders, and of them,

- Some principal.
- Some less principal.

The principal are, in which things first and properly so called, are disposed and ordered: and they be the first six.

And these be either,

- Of Substance. a
- Of Accidents. b

1 The Predicament or orderly row of substance, is that where in the substance is orderly disposed by his Generals and Specials.

A Substance is a thing subsisting by itself.

The Rules or properties whereof be three.

1 A substance, as it is a substance, is not contrary to another; but as it hath accidents or qualities, it is contrary, as Fire and Water, Sheep and Wolves, &c. be contrary in quality and temperature.

2 A substance, as it is a substance, is not varied by degrees, or receiveth not more or less; but the variance or comparison is in respect of accidents, as a Wise man, and a Fool, an Old man, and a Child, one water hotter than another: these differ in qualities, not in substance.

3 A substance remaining one in number, may receive into it contrary accidents. As water may be now seething hot, anon frozen cold.

The Order of Substances is to be seen in a Table, As Substance, is either

- Vncreated, infinite, and beyond our understanding, as, the most holy God.

Created, and is either

- Spiritual
 - Absolute: as Angels, good and evil.
 - Determined to another: as Mans soul.
- Corporal, and is either

- Incomplete, and is
 - Passive, called, Matter, first and second.
 - Active, called Form, first and second.
- Complete, or perfect, and is either
 - Far from mixture, as the heavens, whose parts are
 - Orbs
 - without Star.
 - with Star
 - Fixed: The firmament.
 - Planets
 - Stars
 - Fixed.
 - Wandering, Saturn, Mars, &c.
 - Ordained for mixture (and therefore not existing apart and completely) called elements, and is
 - Fire.
 - Air
 - Water.
 - Earth.
 - Mixed
 - Imperfectly, as
 - Smoke,
 - Vapours, whereof are Meteors
 - Fiery, as Lightenings, Comets, &c.
 - Aiery, as Winds, &c.
 - Waterish, as clouds, rain, snow, hail, &c.
 - Perfectly
 - without life

- Metals, perfect and Imperfect, as gold, silver, brass, quicksilver, &c.
- Minerals
 - Hard, as Sand, Stones, precious and base kinds of earth, &c.
 - Soft, as Salt, Alum, Pitch, Myrrh, Frankincense, &c.
- with life
 - Vegetant, as
 - 1 Trees, fruitful and unfruitful: Oke, Ash, Elm, Lawrel, &c.
 - 2 Bushes, Rose, Bramble.
 - 3 Herbs of all sorts, Wheat, Rie, Pease, Rise, Beets, Mallows, &c.
 - Sensible.
 - Reasonable, as Man.
 - Without Reason, as Beasts.
- - 1 Of the Air, Fowls, Swans, Geese.
 - 2 The Earth, Beasts, and creeping things, Horse, Lion, Dog, Worm.
 - 3 The Water, Fishes of all sorts, Whales, Pikes, Eels, Oysters, Serpents, &c.
- Compounded of a created and increated Substance, in a mystery of marvelous union, Christ Jesus, the Son of God and the Virgin.

We have seen the Predicament of substance.

Now followeth Accidents.

An Accident is a thing which dependeth upon a substance, for the essence and existence thereof. The word Accident is commonly used in a large sense, for all that betideth, chanceth, or cleaveth to anything: but here it is more properly taken for that which cleaveth to a substance, and is no part thereof, and yet cannot be without the same.

An Accident is either

Absolute, having an absolute nature, as Relation.

- Quantity.
- Quality.
- Action.
- Passion.

The Predicament of quantity, is that wherein the Generals and Specials of it are orderly disposed. Note that in every Predicament there is the Material, or thing itself (which Logic doth but lightly touch, as belonging to another place) and the Formal or disposing, and Table of the thing, which is chief in all Predicaments.

Quantity is that whereof the greatness or number of anything is named.

And therefore quantity is either

- continued, as greatness.
- dissevered, as number.

1 Greatness is extension, or stretching out, and is called

- Properly.
- Improperly.

Properly so called Extension is of the matter in a Natural Body, which therefore is said to be continued, and divisible.

The Rules or Notes hereof be five.

1 Greatness hath a certain continuance and position of parts.

2 Greatness hath of itself no motion, or efficacy.

3 Unto it nothing is contrary; for contrarities are in qualities.

4 It receiveth not more or less. As one house is not more or less a house than another, though one be a greater house than another.

5 Of greatness, the subject is said to be equal or uneequal; greatness or extension properly so called, is length, breadth, deepness or thickness; the beginning of all which is a point or prick.

Length, is that which of the Mathematics is called a line. Breadth or latitude, is called the Superficies.

Thicknesse or deepness is the threefold dimension, which is called also height, and of the Mathematics, Metaphorice, a body.

2 Number or multitude is the gathering together of Unities. And unity is the beginning of number.

Number is considered

- Abstractly. a
- Concretely. b

Abstractly considered, is that which is primarily in this Predicament. As 2, 4, 10, &c.

The Rules hereof be five.

1. 1 Number is not coupled with any common term, neither hath its parts endued with Position. As 3 and 7 are coupled with no common Term, though they concur to the making of 10.
2. 2. Of number, things are said to be even or odd.
3. 3. Number also as it is number, hath no force, no efficacy.
4. 4. Number of itself hath nothing contrary thereto.
5. 5. Number receiveth not more and less.

Concretely considered Number here, is, things collective, which may be referred hither materially. As a Wood containeth many Trees, an Host many Soldiers, an heap many grains, &c.

The Formal thing of this Predicament is the Table or Order of all Quantities: As, Quantity is taken either for

- Dissevered quantity or number, which is taken
 - Continued extension, which is taken, either
 - Vnproperly, and by proportion, as
 - Continuance of anything: as in time the $\langle \diamond \rangle$ of durance.
 - Extension of degree, called Intension, as one heat • said to be greater than another.
 - Extension of weight, or heaviness.
 - Properly so called, which is the extension of a Body only, and it is either
 - Incompleat, as
 - Length or line, which is either

- Right or straight.
 - Round or circular.
 - Mixt of sundry sorts.
 - Breadth, or superficies, which is either
 - Right lined
 - Of three sides.
 - Of four sides.
 - Of many sides.
 - Crooked lined; As a circle.
 - Mixt of right and crooked; As half a circle.
 - Compleat: the threefold dimension called a Body, which is either
 - Regular, having basis, sides, corners, equal and like, as Pyramids, &c.
 - Irregular, as a wedge, collar, &c.
-
- Largely, for any multitude of divers things, and ye call it T^raⁿs^cendental Number. Such as is the holy Trinity, in spirits, and other things that have no quantity.
 - Strictly for a collection of discontinued quantities. It is called predicamental number, and considered
 - Absolutely, and either it is
 - Simple either
 - Perfect, which is equal to his parts.
 - Imperfect
 - A bounding, which is lesser than the parts of it, as 12.
 - Diminished which is greater than the parts, as 88. Again both perfect and imperfect is either

- Even when it may be divided into two equal parts & it is either
 - A likely even, as 32.
 - A likely odd, as 18.
 - Vnlikely even, as 12.
- Odd, which cannot be divided into two equal parts, and is either
 - First, which unity only measureth, as 3, 5, 7.
 - Compound, divided by 2, or more numbers, as 15.
 - Mean as 9, which 3 only measureth; 25, which 5.
- Figured, which is either
 - Plain, arising of the multiplication of one number by another, as seven times five are 35.
 - Square, arising from multiplication of number into itself, as 25.
 - Cubick, arising from a number led in itself, & that which comes of them multiplied again by the first number, as 125.
- Concretely, or determinately unto some subject to be numbered, as a flock, an host, a talent. Hexameter, for a verse of six feet. A Church, a Common-wealth, a City, an Oration, &c.

The predicament of quality is, wherein the generals and specials thereof be disposed.

The general Rules hereof be five.

1 Quality, is of all absolute antecedents, the most copious and frequent in Nature; for whatsoever we see, hear, taste, smell, feel, all of it is quality.

2 Of all accidents, quality is most accommodate to the sense.

3 Qualities only have contrariety.

4 Qualities have degrees, or more and less. And these they have not in respect of the essence, or definition (which is nowhere varied) but in respect of the existence or singular cleaving to this or that subject, disposed so or so; So Faith in general in respect of the essence, is one and single, without degrees, but faith in this or that person, is greater or lesser, yet retaineth it the same essence and definition in all. For a weak faith, is yet Faith. The like is for other qualities, heat, cold, &c.

5 By reason of qualities, things are said to be like or unlike one another. As men of one color are said to be alike, but of one stature they are said to be equal.

Quality hath four kinds or specials▪ 1 Habit. 2 Natural power. 3 Sufferable quality. 4 Figure.

1 Habit is a quality brought into man, whereby he is liable unto those works which by Nature alone he cannot do. Here habit is taken properly and strictly, and not for every accidental form contrary to privation; nor for the habit and stature of the body, nor for apparel, or any general power, which sometime in a large use are called habits.

The general Rules of Habit are two.

1 Unto Habit there is required a certain inclination going before, and a power of Nature.

2 Habit maketh easiness and cheerfulness in working ought.

Habit is either

- begun. a
- full-ended. b

1 Begun, it is called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Disposition. Taken here strictly, though sometimes it is largely used for all fitness to anything, or unfitness also for disposing and ordering parts in method, for degrees of every accident, as when water waxeth warm, it is said to have a disposition to heat.

The Rules of disposition be two.

1 Disposition goeth before habit, as a Degree thereto.

2 It is more easily lost then is an habit.

2 Full-ended, or complete habit, is that which hath got his confirmation and complement. And it is either infused, or gotten otherwise.

Infused, is that which is shed by the singular grace of the Holy Ghost into men's minds, as Faith, Love and other gifts of God.

Gotten, is that which is gotten by the Humane Industry, precepts and often repetitions of Actions; As the Art of Logic, Rhetoric, &c.

Natural power, is that which is in us by Nature: And is

- Active.
- Passive.

Active, is that whereby we are able and apt to do.

Passive is that by which we are apt to suffer or receive ought.

Natural power also is either

- First.
- Second.

The first power is that which next followeth from the form of the subject, [as in a natural body power to move in a man to speak, &c.

The second power is a disposition of the temperature and instruments by which the first power is brought into act, [as a living creature hath not only the first power of seeing, flowing from the sensitive soul (which it retaineth always) but hath also a disposition of the eye, (which may lost) whereby one seeth clearer then another. Hereto belongs towardness of wit, strength of body, original sin, virtues of Herbs, Gems, &c.

3 Sofferable quality, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , is that which maketh suffering or passion in the senses, Or it may be called efficient quality, for it affects the senses, as sweet smells refreshes a man, and stenches annoy him. So cold and heat.

4 Figure or form is a certain configuration of the color and lineament in the body, [it may be called Figure in respect of the lineaments and disposition; and Form in respect of the color or light.

And it is either

- Natural,
- Artificial.

Natural is the figure which Nature gives everyone.

Artificial is the form which is given by Art: [as the Goldsmith puts Gold into the form of a Ring, Cup, or Chain, &c.]

The rank and order of all qualities followeth.

Quality properly so called, is either

- Potential. *
- Actual. **

Potentiall is either

- Natural.
- Brought in, and it is called Habit.

Natural is

- First. a
- Second. b

First, which is either

- Manifest, whose causes are manifest, as in a man, facility to learn, to laugh, &c.
- Hidden.

Hidden, which is given to a thing, either by

- Proper temperature: As the Loadstone to draw Iron.
- Sympathie, as between the Vine and the Elm.
- Antipathie, as between the Olive and the Oak.

Second, which is either

- Common.
- Singular.

Common is the natural disposition of the instruments which every first power needeth, if it should be brought into Act.

Singular ariseth from the temperature of some persons; as wittiness, boldness, &c.

Habit brought in, is either

- Incompleat, called Disposition.
- Compleat, properly called Habit or Virtue.

Compleat Habit is either

- Extraordinary, such as was in the Prophets and Apostles, and by the image of God in man before his fall.
- Ordinary.

Ordinary Habit or Virtue, is either

- Speculative. m
- Operative. n

Speculative, is either

- In Part, as opinion and knowledge of some conclusion.

- Total.

Total or Aggregative, peculiarly called Science, which is either 1 Metaphysick: Or a Physic, under which is Astronomy. 3 Mathematick, under which is Geometry, Arithmetic, Optick, Music, &c.

Operative is either

- Practick. A
- Factive. B

Practick is

- More perfect. a
- More imperfect. b

More perfect, by the special help of the holy Ghost. And is either

- Total. h
- In part. i

Total or Aggregative is considered

- Absolutely, called Theology.
- Relatively, called Church-policy.

In part, is called spiritual Virtue, and is

- General.
- Special.

General, and the common directive of all other virtues; which are 1 Religion, Love, fear of God, &c. 2 Love of our neighbors. 3 Universal Justice. 4 Prudencie.

Special, and it is ordered towards

- Our selves.
- Another.

For ourselves:

To rule:

- The appetite and pleasure, by Temperance.
- Anger, by Meekness.

- Fear, by Fortitude, Patience, &c.

To another

- God.
- Our Neighbor.

Towards God, Worship, Prayer, Profession, Swearing by him, &c.

Towards our Neighbor

- Superior: Reverence, Obedience.
- Equal: Particular Justice, Peace, Concord, Kindnesse, &c.
- Inferior: Gentlenesse, Mercy, Liberality, &c

More imperfect, by general Grace of God, and for this life; and is also

- Total.
- In part.

Total & Aggregative, & is either

- Absolute: Ethics, or moral virtue.
- Relative, unto
 - The Common-weal, Politicks, Law.
 - Families, as Economics.

In part, commonly called moral virtue, and is

- General, directing others, as
 - Universal Justice.
 - Prudency.
- Special, which is
 - Absolute.
 - In conversation:

Absolute, about Fear, Fortitude, Pleasure, Temperance, Riches, Liberality, Magnificence, Honors, Modesty, Magnanimity, Anger, Meekness.

In conversation, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , as is

- Gentleness.
- Kindness.
- Justice particular.
- Urbanity.
 - Commutative.
 - Distributive.

Factive, called Art, & is either

- More worthy or Liberal. a
- Less worthy or Mechanical. b

Liberal

- Is Directive.
- Or Principal.

Directive and instrumentary, Governing the

- Speech by
 - Forming it Grammatically.
 - Adorning it Rhetorically.
 - Poetry.
- Reason, Logic.

Principal, as Medicine: under it

- Surgery.
- Apothecary Art:

Mechanical, which is profitable to live either

- 1 Absolutely.
- 2 Commodiously.
- 3 Comely.
- 4 Pleasantly.

1 Absolutely: As, 1 A Midwives Art, 2 Husbandry, 3 Shepherdy, 4 Hunting, Fishing, Fowling. 5 Milners Art. 6 Baking, Brewing, Butchery, &c.

2 Commodiously, of which some be

- 1 As the Art of Printing. 2 Warfare 3 Building, 4 Book-binding. 5 Merchandize.
- Mean, As 1 About Metals, Minerals, Smiths, &c. 2 About Wood, Carpenters, Joyners, &c. 3 About Wooll, Clothmakers, &c. Tailors. 4 About Stones, as Stone-hewing, &c.
- Base. As Curriers, Shoemakers, Sadlers, Barbers, &c.

3 Comely, as 1 The art of Painting, 2 Carving, 3 Graving, &c.

4 Pleasantly, as the art of 1 Singing and Minstrel•e, 2 Dancing, 3 Gaming, &c.

Actual quality is either

- Affecting the Senses 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , a
- Conforming. b

Affecting is

- First.
- Second.

The first is either

- More effectual, as
 - Light.
 - Cold.
 - Heat.
- Less effectual, as
 - Moistnesse.
 - Drinesse.

The Second ariseth of the first: either

- Neat: as Thinness, Thicknes, Lightnesse, Heavinesse, Softnesse, Hardness, Smoothnesse, Roughnesse, Slipperinesse, Clamminesse, Drinesse.
- Further off: as, 1 Taste, 2 Smell, 3 Colour, 4 Sound:

1 Taste, which is either

- Hot: as Acrimony, Bitterness, Saltness, Sweetness, Fatness.
- Cold: as Sowness, Austerity, Tartness.

2 Smell

- Simple. Sweet or stinking.
- Mixt.

3 Colour, which is either

- Intentional, as they that appear in
 - a Glass.
 - the Rainbow.
- Real and true, and is either
 - Simple.
 - Mixt.

Simple as

- Whiteness.
- Blackness.

Mixt of the former two either

- Exactly, as redness,
- Inequally, with one of the
- First & redness, and that either
 - exceeding
 - Saffron-
 - Colour
 - Purple.
 - wanting as
 - Yellow-
 - Colour
 - Greenness.

4 Sound, which is

- Direct.
- Reflexive, as the Echo.

Direct is either, 1 Simple, as high and low, or 2 Mixt, as the mean.

Conforming, called form and figure, which is either

- Natural in bodies
 - Unperfect, as Meteors in the Air.
 - Perfect, as in Plants, Beasts, &c.
- Artificial, as the figure of a Garment, Table, Sword, &c.

Action.

Action, is the agitation or stirring of a substance, and as it were, the flowing out and execution of the forces thereof.

The Rules are four.

1 Every Action is taken in hand, and finished to some End.

2 Every Action is before the Passion, in order of Nature and dignity: whereupon it is better always to give than to receive.

3 Action taketh contrariety: Not of itself, but by and for the qualities, by means of which the Agent acteth. As heating and cooling are two contrary actions, because heat and cold are contrary.

4 Action receiveth more and less. In the same respect as before.

Action is either

- Immanent and tarrying.
- Transient and passing.

Immanent, is which inferreth no real & evident change, outward, such is understanding, willing, perceiving. Transient is, which inferreth a change indeed, as warming, cooling, burning &c. Whereby the Patient is changed.

Also Action is either

- Dividuall.
- Individual.

Dividuall, which is distinguished as with certain parts of the progress

Individual, which hath not many parts of progress. So forgiveness of sins is an Individual Action; for it is done in a time inobserveable, but sanctification and regeneration is a divided Action; for it is done by degrees and successively in the Elect in this life.

A Table of Actions followeth.

An Action is either

- Of God. a
- Of a creature. b

Of God; either

- Inward.
- Outward,

Inward or Absolute, not terminate to creatures, and is

- Essential, proceeding from Absolute Essentiall properties.
- Personal proceeding from personal properties, as
 - Generation.
 - Mission.

Outward referred to the creatures, and is

- Commune. A
- Proper. B

Commune to the three persons, and is

- General. c
- Special. d

A General pertaining to all Creatures indifferently, and is

- Ordinary, as the Creation, Conservation, Government of the World.
- Extraordinary, or miraculous.

Extraordinary, when things are either

- Perfected, as raising up the dead, healing diseases.
- Hindred, as the staying of the Sun Josh. 10. of the fire, Dan. 3.

- Used for that which is not of their Nature, as a rock to send forth water: a Virgin to conceive, &c.

Special, pertaining to some creatures, as Election to life, calling to Grace, Redemption, Justification, &c.

Proper to some certain Person, as

- The Father to send the Son.
- The Son take our Nature, and be our Mediator.
- The Holy Ghost to illuminate and sanctify.

A Creatures action on is either of a

- Spiritual, Creature.
- Temporal, Creature.

1 Spiritual, which is

- General, or common to all, as local motion.
- Special of
 - Angels.
 - A reasonable soul, such as it doth apart from the body.

Angels

- Good, as praising of God, executing his Commandments, &c.
- Evil, as afflicting, and tempting of creatures.

2 Corporal, which is

- Superior, and more worthy, as in the heaven. Circular motion Illumination by stars:
- Inferior. Circular motion Illumination by stars:

Inferior in

- General, & is either
 - Alteration.
 - Local motion rightforth either
 - Pulsion or driving:
 - Traction or drawing.

- Vection or carrying.

- Special.

In special, of

- Elements, which have their alteration and motion local.
- Mixt things.

Of mixed things that be Without life, as all operations, mineral and metallical without life or living.

Of living things in

- General.
- Special.

In the general, as be either

- Nourishment, under which be Growth.
- Generation taken actively.

In special, of

- Plants, as the operations of herbs, trees, &c.
- Animals or living Creatures.

Animals or living creatures

- General. a
- Special. b

In general,

- Sense, actively taken
 - Inward
 - Common sense.
 - Fantasy actively taken.
 - Outward
 - more worthy, as
 - Seeing.
 - Hearing.

- less worthy, as
 - Touching
 - Smelling,
 - Tasting.
- Appetite
- Actively taken under which is
 - Desire
 - of Food.
 - of Generation.
 - Affection 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .
- Respiration and local going.

In special

- Of Man. a
- Of brute Beasts. b

a Man, whose actions are

- Natural.
- Habitual.

Natural

- Inward, as be the
 - 1 Understanding The apprehension of simple things, composition, and division.
 - 2 Remembering The apprehension of simple things, composition, and division.

Discourse

- Syllogistical.
- Methodical.
- 3 Willing,
- Outward, as speaking, laughing, weeping,

- Speculation 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , contemplation of the Heavens, and other Natural things.
- Practises, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉
 - Sacred
 - Common, as praying to God, loving of our Neighbor, &c.
 - Ecclesiastical, as preaching, ministering the Sacraments, &c.
 - Moral as
 - Common to exercise Temperance, Meekness, &c.
 - Special
 - Political, to govern a Commonwealth, &c.
 - Oeconomical, to rule the house, bring up children, &c.
- Faction, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉
 - More worthy, as to read, write, dispute, heal the sick, &c.
 - Less worthy, as to weave, spin, &c.
- Of Brute beasts, which are diverse, according to the diversity of kinds in Beasts.

Of Passion.

Passion is the receiving of an Action.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 Passion, is received not so much by the condition of the Agent, as by the disposition of the Patient. So, many Passions and effects of the holy Ghost are imperfect, because of us which receive them, not for the condition of the holy Ghost.

2 Passion receiveth contrariety.

3 Passion receiveth more and less.

Passion is either. 1 Transmutative, or 2 Intentional.

1 Transmutative, when some real change is made in the Patient.

2 Intentionall, when no real change is made, but only a Termination of the Action. Thus a coloured thing is said to suffer, because it receiveth & terminateth the sight. Some call this Spiritual and Logical Passion.

The Table of Passion followeth.

Passion is

- Perfective. a
- Defective. b

Perfective of the Creatures, either

- In general Ordinary, as
 - Government Passive
 - Sustentation Passive
- In special, Extraordinary, as the Sun stay• from moving.

In special, of

- Spirits.
- Bodies.

Of Spirits, as of the

- Good Angels, which have their passions, joy in God, anger against his Foes, &c.
- Holy souls, which also have joy, &c. By which they are perfected.

Of Bodies, and these

- Superior, as Heaven, whose circular motion is a kind of passion.
- Inferior, and this is either
 - In General, as all alteration and motion Passive.
 - In Special.

In Special, as of the

- Elements, in which is mutual alteration.
- Mixt Bodies.

Of mixed bodies, which be either

- Common, as to be heated, cooled, moistened, dried, boiled, &c.
- Special, of things
 - without life, as passions of Metals, &c.
 - with life.

With life

- In general, as Nourishment increasing.
- In special.

In special either of

- Plants, as the Passions of herbs, &c.
- Animals, or things with soul.

Animals in

- General. m
- Special. n

m In general, as the

- Sense, inward and outward, passive.
- Appetite either
 - Desire 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 of
 - Food
 - Dry, as hunger.
 - Moist, as thirst.
 - Generation, as Lust.
 - Affections 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉
 - Approving and following
 - Common, as Pleasure.
 - Special of good
 - Present, as joy, love.
 - Future, as desire.
 - Eschewing and flying
 - Common, as Dolour.
 - Special of evil
 - present, as sorrow, anger.

- future, as fear.

In special

- Of Brute beasts.
- Of Man. *

* Of man either

- Adventitial, as to learn, to receive habit Theoretical.
- Ingrafted.

Ingraft

- Outward, as weeping, laughter passive.
- Inward.

Inward

- Receiving of Intellectual Species, &c.
- Reasonable appetite, or will
 - Approving and following either
 - Common, as human pleasure.
 - Special of good
 - Past, as a good conscience.
 - Present, love, joy.
 - Future, hope, desire.
 - Shunning
 - Grief of mind
 - Special either of
 - Terrible 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉
 - ones
 - own
 - Present heaviness.
 - Future fear.

- Another's mercy.
- Indignity, as shame.

Defective & privative in

- Spirits
 - Evil Angels, as hatred of God and good men, despair, envy, joy in evil. Torments.
 - Souls of Reprobates, despair, pains eternal.
- Bodies
 - Heavenly, as Eclipses of Sun and and Moon.
 - Inferior things
 - In general, Corruption.
 - In special mixed things
 - Generally, Rottenness.
 - Specially in living things
 - In general
 - Diseases of death Intemperatenesse Hot, pestilent, Ague, Apoplexy, Epilepsie, mixed, the joint ague.
 - 2 Ill conformation, as of parts out of joint. Solution of that which is continued. As wounds, impostumes, &c.
 - In special in men
 - all commonly
 - Evil concupiscence, terrors of conscience for sin.
 - Calamities, as punishments.
 - Specially the Reprobates, as Despair, Torments.

Relation.

We have seen the Order of Absolute Accidents: now followeth Relation, which is the Union of two or more.

The Canons hereof are six.

1 Every Relation is more unworthy than any Absolute Accident, and in Nature after it. For Relation is not a thing real by itself, but by the foundation of it, that is, either the subject, or the efficient cause; for every real thing added to another, maketh composition▪ but Relation added to a Subject, makes no composition; for in God be many Relations, but in him is no Composition. So the name of a Doctor or Captain, given to a man, is nothing but a vain title and shadow, except there be qualities of Learning, Virtue, Fortitude. Also Relation may be taken from a Subject, it remaining safe as it was. So relation of the Sacrament may be taken from the water, and yet be water still. So in us after forgiveness of sins, there remains Original sin, as touching the material thereof, that is, inclination to evil; though the formal of it, that is, guiltiness, be taken away by God's gracious imputation.

2 Relations do in company and multitude exceed all Absolute Accidents: for infinite references are added both to qualities, and all other Accidents. All disciplines are full of References. In Theology, all Doctrines have relation, as of sin, of the Law, of the Mediator, of the Persons in the Trinity, of Sacraments, of Miracles, &c.

3 Relation by itself is not perceived by the senses. As a man sees a stone in the field, but knows not whether it be a Dool stone, unless he be admonished of it. Abimelech saw Sarah to be a fair woman, but could not see her to Abraham's wife.

The Relate and the Correlate, as they are such, are together both in Nature and knowledge, and so mutually do put or take away one another, as well in being as in knowing. So the Father and the Son, as they are Relate and Correlate, are together, though materially: as the Father is a man, he must needs be before his Son.

Hereupon Christ saith, He that knoweth me, knoweth the Father.

5 Every Correlate doth so answer to his Relate, that the one may be said to be of the other So Adam was the Father of Cain, and Cain the son of Adam.

6 Relations need no local Touching for the bringing in or conservation of themselves. As a Father being in England, may have a son born in France. Christ now bodily in Heaven, hath true and real union and eleaving with his members on Earth. The same body hath also true and real union Sacramental with the Bread in the Lord's Supper. So as there needs no Popish Transubstantiation.

Moreover, the Term of the Relation is not to be tied to the Relate, as the Communion with the substance and benefits of Christ, is not to be tied to the bread and wine in the Supper; nor the washing away of sins, to water in Baptism.

The Table of Relations Followeth.

Relation is either

- Natural, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .a

- By Institution, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . b a Natural which is either

- 1 Of Measure, either
 - Inward and productive, as is every cause: hither may be referred the degrees of Kindred, which is either
 - Outward,
 - Ruling: as every Rule, Square, &c.
 - Adjacent.
 - Place.
 - Time.
 - Primary, as Degrees of consanguinity in a line.
 - Right, as great Grandfather, Grandfather, Father, Son, &c.
 - Sideloong,
 - Equall, as Brother▪ Sister.
 - Unequall, as Uncle, &c.
 - Secondary, as degrees of affintiy, Father in Law, Son in Law, &c.
- 2 Of Convenience.
- 3 Of Difference.
- 4 Of Disposition.
- 2 Of convenience, or, Agreement, and this either in
 - Substance, called (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) the self-same absolutely.
 - Quantity, called (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) equality and proportion:
 - Quality, called (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) similitude.
 - Representation, called Signification, and all Natural Signs.
- 3 Of Difference; as diversity and opposition of things.
- 4 Of Disposition; or order and situation in the world and worldly bodies.

b By Institution, either

- Divine. A
- Humane. B
- A Divine, which is either
 - Of Power,
 - General as the
 - Regiment of the world.
 - Law of Nature.
 - Special, as touching.
 - The Church, as the Regiment of the Church.
 - The head of the Church, Christ Christ the Mediator.
 - Prophet.
 - Priest.
 - King.
 - The Ministers of the Church, to
 - Preach.
 - Minister Sacraments, &c.
 - Of Conjunction, as
 - The Law.
 - The Gospel.
 - Of Confirmation, as touching.
 - Temporal things, as the Rainbow.
 - Spiritual, as
 - God's Word, which is a sign formally considered.
 - Figures or Types. Sacraments.
 - Old; Circumcision,
 - Passover,
 - New; Baptism,

- Lord's Supper.
- B Humane which is either
 - Of Power, and Office, and Dignity.
 - Greater, as Kingdom, King, Prince, Duke, Earl, Consul, &c.
 - Lesser, as Master, Tutor &c.
 - Of Convention or Consent.
 - To be rightly, as is
 - Marriage.
 - State of the Commonwealth.
 - Monarchy.
 - Aristocrasie.
 - Democraci.
 - To be well, as are
 - Societies and Confederacies, Contracts, Covenants, Testaments, Obligations, &c.
 - Contracts specially so called, and are either
 - Named
 - Borrowing,
 - Lending,
 - Trusting,
 - Pawning;
 - Buying,
 - Selling.
 - Un-named.
 - Of collation, either.
 - Distinction and Disposition: Armies, Order▪ and Method of Diciplines.
 - signification
 - Vocall, as all Towns formally.

- Real
 - Simple, as
 - signing or confirming,
 - Seal, Diadem, Scepter &c. Soldier Coats, Badges, &c. Pawns and Pledges
 - Limits, Bounds, &c.

Hitherto of the principal Predicaments; now follow the less principal, in which only things by accident and secondarily so called, are disposed.

And they be four. When, Where, Situation, Habit.

The Predicament When, is that wherein are placed things in the Concrete, noting the manner or circumstance of the time. Hereunto belong Ages, Infancy, Youth, Old age, parts of the year, Summer, Winter, Spring, Autumn, Morning, Noon, Night, &c. Also the Concretes of Ages, as a Child, an Old man, &c.

The Predicament Where, is that wherein are placed things in the concrete, noting the manner or circumstance of place. As Europe, Germany, England, an English man, a Londoner, an Ilander, a Seaman, &c. All Countries and their Inhabitants.

The Predicament of Situation, is that wherein are placed things in the concrete, noting the certain position and order of the parts of the body. As standing, sitting, lying upright, groveling, &c.

The Predicament of Habit, is that, wherein are placed things in the concrete, noting some artificial Adherent. As armed, cloaked, booted, spur'd, with a breast-plate, &c.

Of the Cause.

We have seen the Order of things: now followeth the Term without that Order, which is no degree of the Predicamental rank.

- And it is either Inward. a a
- And it is either Outward. b b

Inward, is that which inwardly cleaveth with another.

Inwards, be the Cause, the Caused, the Subject, the Accident, the Whole, the Part.

A Cause, is that whereon the thing caused doth depend. And so it differeth from a beginning, which hath not always respect of dependence; as God the Father, may be said to be the beginning of the Son, but not the cause; for the cause and the caused differ in essence, which the Persons in the Trinity do not,

The Canons of the Cause are three.

1 Every Cause is before his thing caused, in order of nature, of knowledge, and dignity.

2 As without a cause nothing is done, so also without it nothing is distinctly known. Therefore God is without Cause; for he is not made, nor done, but existeth of himself.

3 There is a certain Order of Causes, neither is there granted in them a Proceeding to infinite.

There be four Causes. The Efficient, the Matter, the Form, the End.

The efficient Cause, is that whereon the effect dependeth, and is

- By itself. m
- By accident. n

Efficient by itself, is that whereon the effect dependeth by itself.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 No Efficient doth in vain, but all for some certain End.

2 The same Efficient Cause, as it is the same, always doth the same thing.

Idem, quà idem, semper facit idem.

3 The Efficient Cause, properly so called, doth not effect but some good thing in itself. For evil things are not things properly, but defects of things. A Thief puts forth his hand to take another man's goods; this moving of itself proceeds from the soul that moveth, but the misorder [〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉] in this motion, is not from the soul. So the theft is not properly an effect, but a defect and ataxie in the motion, proceeding from the ataxie of the appetite.

Moreover the Efficient cause, as it is a cause, is always a simple thing: so when a man is said to be the cause of his own accidents, properly he is not the cause, but the subject that hath the cause; and things are spoken of him, not as effects but accidents. A man is not the cause of laughter, but the commotion of the heart and midriff by some ridiculous object known; neither is a man the cause of the faculty of laughter, but a reasonable soul.

The Efficient is of itself divided by

- 1 The Force and the manner. of Effecting.
- 2 The order of Effecting.

1 Of the force of effecting, it is

- Principal▪
- Less Principal.

Principal, whereon the effect principally dependeth, and s

- Solitary.
- Partaking.

Solitary, is that which hath alone the chieftly in producing the effect, and is therefore called the total cause 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . As Sampson was the sole cause of carrying away the Philistines gates. Christ, the whole or only cause of Mans Redemption.

Partaking, is, which not alone, but with others hath the chieftly in producing the effect, and is called partial, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

And it is partaking or sociated, either 1 Necessarily, or 2 Contingently,

1 Necessarily sociated, are, when all of them together are needful, if the effect should be produced.

2 Contingently sociated, are, when there is not need of All, &c. So a man and a woman are causes necessarily sociated in producing a child. Again, six-horses may for more pomp be joined together in drawing a chariot, when two or three are sufficient.

Less Principal, is that whereon the effect less principally dependeth.

And it is either, 1 Impulsive: or 2 Instrumental.

Impulsive, is that which impelleth or moveth the principal agent, to do.

And it is

- 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , which within moveth to do.
- 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , which outwardly moveth to do▪ Occasion.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , is always a cause within the Efficient himself; but,

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , is without the Efficient cause.

So of our Justification, the principal Cause is God. The cause Proegumene, is God's good will and love; for these move God in himself to forgive us ou• si•s. The Cause Procatactick, is likewise obedience and merit, whereby outwardly he is provoked to take us into favor, seeing his Justice is satisfied for us. So in an Ague, the Proëgumenon is some corrupt humor in the veins; the Pr•cata•cticon is outward heat of the Sun, or the Northern wind, whereby the pores are stopped, and the humor boileth.

2 Instrumental, is that which is taken of the principal cause, to produce the effect, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , or 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

The Canons hereof are two.

1 The whole Instrument serveth for the Action of the Principal Agent, by whom it is directed. Therefore when it serveth not the principal Agent, it loseth the Nature of an Instrument. As men when they oppose themselves to God's Commands and Rule, are not God's Instruments, but the Devils. Hereupon note, that an Instrument taketh the determination of his action from his principal Agent. As Ink of its own nature blotteth the Paper, but it fashioneth no letter, unless the Writer guideth the Pen.

The whole force of an Instrument consists in the use; for then it is in Act a cause, when it is caused; but when it is idle, it is not an Instrument, but some other thing. Instruments have no dignity of themselves, but of the principal cause, and serve not but in use and work; when the principal Agent can use them no more, they are no longer called Instruments, but 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 by homonymy. And all Instruments▪ because they are indeterminate, are therefore 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , i. e. such as one may use well or ill: as a sword, riches (called of their use 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .)

An Instrument is either

- Co-operative,
- Passive.

Co-operative, is that which by an inward force together is moved in producing the effect. As a servant is an Instrument used by his Master, yet so as he also moveth himself. So the Creatures, though they be instruments in respect of God, yet have they their action distinct from God's. As Paul calleth Ministers God's co-workers 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . Unto such instruments often is given the efficacy of the principal Agent, as Preachers are said to convert and save souls when the Lord doth these by them; so Baptism is said to regenerate, &c. by an improper predication; whereof hereafter in the second Book.

Passive is, that moveth not itself at all, in producing the effect; as the earth under us is an instrument of walking, so a copy to write on other things, or a pattern: some instruments are necessary, some not, as God useth Angels, &c. when as he needeth them not. And it is true the principal efficient cause worketh well by evil instruments, to wit when it needs not the instruments. As God made Joseph▪ Ruler of Egypt by his envious brethren; and by Balaam blessed his people; otherwise in necessary instruments such commonly is the action of the principal doer, as is the instrument; so a man cutteth ill if he have a blunt knife; rideth ill if he have a lame horse, &c. Also in divine things, often instruments do move, but it is all one as if they moved not; for the force of the effect is not in them. So Moses staff was moved at the dividing of the Red-sea, but this motion caused not the Sea to part, save only in a similitude. So Peters shadow, Acts 5. Paul's napkins, Acts 19. had of themselves no force to heal the sick.

Also the efficient cause is either

- Natural. a

- Voluntary. b

Natural is, which of the readiness and necessity of Nature bringeth forth the effect. As fire of necessity naturally burneth, &c.

The Canons hereof are two.

1 A Natural cause is properly determined unto one of the Opposites; As fire naturally is carried upward, not downward, only heateth and cooleth not. The Loadstone draweth iron to it, and doth not both draw and drive it away.

2 A Natural cause doth not add a certain moderation and dilation of the action, but it worketh to the utmost of his power; as fire when it hath fuel, burneth without measure.

3 A voluntary cause is, which doth of certain foreknowledge and counsel.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 A Voluntary cause is free and indifferent to an action; so as it may do or may not do. And freedom is twofold. 1 of Contradiction, and 2 of Contrariety; the first is, when a cause may do or not do; and so every voluntary cause is simply free. But liberty of contrariety is again. 1 Natural, or 2 Moral. Natural when contrary natural effects proceed, as a Physician may use medicines, cooling or heating. Moral is, when men may effect things good or evil, honest or dishonest.

2 A voluntary cause doth by certain moderation; and, at his pleasure, can suspend the action, though occasion be given of doing. So God gives not all his gifts to one, or always punisheth, but deferreth, &c. at his pleasure.

Again, a voluntary cause is free either

- Meerly.
- After a sort.

Meerly free, which with full appetite willeth and produceth the effect:

And it is called, < in non-Latin alphabet > < in non-Latin alphabet > , < in non-Latin alphabet > , & < in non-Latin alphabet > .

After a sort free, which willeth and produceth the effect, but with an heavy and sorrowful appetite. As in a tempest, a Merchant casts his goods into the Sea to escape Shipwrack.

Moreover, the efficient cause is either

- Transmutative.
- Emanative.

Transmutative, which doth with some notable change or motion: as when fire worketh on water and heateth it, &c.

Emanative, when the effects flow without any notable change: as, from the soul flow forth the powers of sense, understanding, speaking, &c. From the Sun comes light, and yet in the soul or Sun is no change.

2 We have seen of the 1 force or manner of effecting; now follow the divisions of 2 the orders of effecting.

The efficient cause is subordinate either

- Essentially. m
- Contingently. n

Essentially, when the inferior doth of itself, and necessarily depends on the superior in effecting: as in Generation, a man depends on the Sun.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 In causes of themselves subordinate, there is not granted a proceeding to infinite; for subordination presupposeth order, and order resisteth infiniteness.

2 Of causes subordinate, the inferior in causing, hangs on the superior.

3 In causes essentially subordinate, that which is cause of a cause, is the cause of the thing caused. This is true only in causes essentially subordinate, but false in contingently subordinate; for God is not the cause of sin, though he be the cause of man's will; which causeth sin, for will is not, o• it, self and as it is will, the cause of sin (for then it should sin always) but as it hath defect; so the nature of the horse is not the cause of halting, though it be the cause of motion.

Causes subordinate be either

- First. a
- Second. b

First is that which hath the highest place in the Order of causing; and it is either, 1 simply first, or 2 after a sort.

1 Absolutely first is, which in no respect is second; as only God.

2 After a sort first, is that which is first in a certain kind only: as in the moving of living Creatures, the soul is the first cause whereon all other causes and effects in such creatures depend.

The second cause, is that which hangeth on the first, either Mediate or Immediate.

Mediate, when others do come between it and the last effect: It is called, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , cause in power, for putting it, the last effect is not yet, but only may be.

And this mediate cause is either

- Far off.
- Or near.

Far off, when many come between it and the last effect: as the motion of Heaven is a cause far off of man's walking, &c. For many other causes come between.

This pertains not to the first cause, God; for he is not far from everyone, Acts. 7. 27. but he walks immediately with every created Agent.

Neer is, when one only comes between it and the effect: as the lifting up of vapors unto the clouds, is a near cause of rain; for one only comes between, even the resolution of the cloud.

Immediate cause is, which produceth the effect by immediate and next force, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

The Canons hereof be five.

First, The next cause presupposeth all the causes farther off.

2 The next cause being granted, needs must the effect be granted or taken away, when it is taken away. For the next cause is the cause in Act, and therefore cannot want an effect, anymore then a father can want a child. So then they greatly err, which strive, that the essential Proprieties may be taken away, the forms of the subjects remaining safe, whereas the form of the subject is the next cause of all those properties that are in the subject.

3 One effect hath but one next cause, though it may have many effects.

4 By the next cause, Accidents are distinctly and perfectly known.

5 The next cause is inquired, both by sense and observation, and by the Examen of Logic: these two Instruments God hath given men to find out the next causes, chiefly of Natural effects.

The next cause, is either

- Inward.
- Outward.

Inward, which is essential to the subject unto whom it produceth the effect. So forms are always next causes of many faculties in subjects, as a reasonable soul is the next cause of laughing, speaking, &c.

Outward, which is without the Essence of that subject, to whom it produceth the effect; so the next cause of laughter, is a moving of the heart and midri• by some ridiculous object known; and this is called outward, because it is neither the form, nor matter, though it be in man.

Contingently subordinate causes, are when the Inferior hangs not on the superior of its self, and its own Nature. As man depends on the Sun, and the picture depends on man; but because this picture depends not on him as a man or natural thing, but as he is an Artificer only, therefore the picture is subordinate to the Sun contingently; So is it for man's will and sin; for though sin hang on the will, yet because it hangs not on it according to the preferment of nature, and as it is will, but as it is corrupted, therefore are they subordinate contingently.

Hitherto of a cause by its self; now followeth a cause by accident, which is either in 1 Natural, or 2 Voluntary Agents.

First, the Natural Agent; That is called a cause by accident, which brings not forth the effect of its own Nature, but by something that happens to it; as an Ague causeth temperance, not of its self, but by accident; for of itself the cause is the will, bridling the appetite. So knowledge puffeth up; The Law causeth wrath, for it lighteth on them that cannot keep it.

2 In voluntary Agents, cause by accident is, which brings forth an effect besides the intent and purpose, or by ignorance: as a man cutting wood, his Ax-head flies off, and kills his neighbor unawares. Thus Judas, Pilate, and the Jews were causes,, by accident of Christ's Passion and man's Redemption; for they never purposed, nor thought of such a good effect.

Hither belongs Fortune, which sometime is taken largely for any chance: as when a glass falleth, and by fortune is not broken: sometime strictly taken, Fortune is the cause voluntary by accident, of that effect which one knew not, meant not, nor hoped for: as a man digging or plowing the ground, finds a bag of gold. Thus many things amongst men may be said to be done by fortune or luck, not in respect of God the first Cause, but in respect of secondary causes.

The Canons of causes by Accident, as well Natural as Voluntary, be four.

1 One end of the same thing may be a cause, both by accident and by its self, in a diverse respect: as the Gospel by its self is the cause of Conversion, by accident the cause of hardening.

2 Every effect of a cause by accident, is reduced to a cause by its self. And thus all chances of Fortune, are to be reduced unto God.

3 Things that be done by chance or fortune, be rare, but of causes by themselves many and often.

4 Causes by accident are infinite and inordinate [〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉]. Some make it a kind of cause, Sine qua non, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . But it needs not; for such causes may be referred to instruments, or some other before.

The matter next followeth, which is either

- Properly so called.
- Improperly so called.

First, properly so called, is

- Principal. a
- Less principal. b

Principal, which is only matter, and in no respect compounded.

Second, which so is matter, as it is also a material compound. As a man's body is the matter of a man, though it be all compounded of Elements.

The Canons hereof be two.

First, every second matter depends on the first, viz. in a certain Order of Nature.

2 Every second matter is necessarily determined in a certain quantity to one only and certain form: So the matter of a man is only determined to a reasonable soul, and cannot receive any unreasonable, and so in all other creatures; that vain is the M 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 or transamination of Pythagoras, the Jews, &c. Hereby is confirmed the doctrine of the Resurrection, when everyone shall receive the same body and soul.

The second matter is either

- Far off.
- Neer.

Far off, which makes a compound, others coming between. So an human body is the next matter of a man.

Less principal is that, whereof it being changed and not remaining, a thing is made; Called therefore matter, passing away, whereas the other is permanent: so seed is the matter passing away of living Creatures; for it is changed, and as it were perished before the constitution of the body.

And it is either

- Far off, when things are made of it from far.
- Neer, whereof a thing is next made.

As of meat and drink a man is engendered afar off, for of it is blood, & of blood seed, but seed is the next matter.

Matter improperly so called, is in a similitude, and by Analogy or proportion called matter.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 That which Artizens work on in their Art, and are occupied about, is called matter. As the matter of the Goldsmith, is gold and silver: The matter of Idols, is silver, gold, wood, or stone, &c.

2 The Notion of matter is also often given to Accidents: so three Propositions are called the matter of a syllogism. The two Tables the matter of God's Law.

3 The name of Matter is also given to a subject wherein the accident is; and the Object about which the Action of a thing is busied.

The form answereth to the matter, and is so called

- Properly. m
- Improperly. n

Form, properly so called, is a cause that with the Matter constituteth a substantial compound or body: it is called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : And the substantial Form.

The General Rules hereof be seven.

1 Every form properly called is a substance.

2 The form is the chiefest part of the essential compound, whereby it is constituted, and essentially distinguished from all others: Every thing is named not of the matter, but of the form: hereupon the form is called Act; for the Antecedent matter is not in esse, but in power, till the form come; and this the Greek name 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 meaneth.

3 Unto the Form are due properly the operations of every compounded thing. The form being put, three things are put: 1 the being of a thing, 2 the distinction of it. 3 the operation; and he that grants the form, grants the consequences of it, that is, the proper operations.

4 The Form in a diverse respect, assumes the relation of the efficient cause and end. Of the efficient in respect of the powers that flow from it, and operations in which the powers cease; and of the end, in respect of the begetter and disposer, who intends nothing but the consequences of the Form.

5 Every Form is more perfect than the matter, and according to Natures scope, before it: wherefore the form is called species, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

6 The Form by itself comes not into the senses; because it is not endued with qualities, which are the Objects of senses: therefore man who begins to understand by sense, is very ignorant of forms, and their names; by reason whereof our knowledge is like the shadow in the Sun.

7 The Form is not varied by degrees, nor increaseth it by its self, though the whole compound be varied in quantity. For the Form consists in indivisibility; it is like a number, which if one add to, or take from it, it continueth not the same it was before.

Form is either

- First.
- Second.

First Form is, which in Order goes before all other: in Order I say, not of intention, but of generation: This also is called the first beginning active, and the common form of all bodies and Nature.

Second Form is that which follows the first; called also the inferior and the particular Form, as Nature is called the Universal Form.

The Canons hereof be two.

First, The second Form is not united to the Matter, unless the matter be rightly disposed and prepared.

Secondly, A certain and specifical Form, is determined to a certain matter, so as it cannot be communicated with another, nor go out of one unto another, nor be together in two disjoined Matters. Men's souls cannot go into the bodies of beasts, &c.

Form, improperly so called is either Natural or Artificial, of which we have spoken in the Predicament of quality. In a most general signification, Privation sometime is called a form: so every relation in Philosophy is called form and formal; as the formal thing of a Syllogism, is, the order of knitting the three Propositions, which are the Material. What formal difference is, shall be shown after in distinction.

The End is, that unto which the Efficient is ordained. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , or 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . End is diversely taken, as for the last or utmost of anything; here properly we treat of the End of intention, called also the scope.

End is either

- By itself. A * •
- By Accident. B

An end by itself, is that whereunto the efficient and means of their own Nature are ordered:

And it is either so called

- Primarily. a
- Secondarily. b

Primarily, which the Efficient intendeth to attain [called Finis, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , i. e. cujus.]

The General Rules hereof be six.

1 The End moveth the efficient to do; therefore is it called the cause of causes; for Matter without Form is rude. Form, if there want the preparing and efficient cause, is not brought into the matter; but the efficient worketh not, if it be not moved with desire; so without the end, no cause is caused.

2 The end by itself and in its own Nature, is only good and of good. So an End and Good are convertible; for the end is that which we most would: what we most would, is most to be desired, and desire naturally is always ordered to good. All vice wanteth both efficient and end.

3 Whatsoever hath an efficient cause, hath also an end.

4 The end is both cause and effect, in a diverse respect; so the celebrating of God's Name, is man's action and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and yet is also the end of man.

5 The end, as it is an end, is also before and better than the means: before it, not in order of production, but of perfection and intention: So Justification is before Faith, though also it be gotten by Faith. I say also (as it is an end) for otherwise as touching the absolute essence, the means may be as perfect, or more. Christ's incarnation and office, hath greater perfection than man's Redemption, absolutely considered.

6 The end and the efficient are causes each of other: the end causeth the efficient, as touching causality, not as touching being, and not causality. Walking before meat is the efficient cause of health, and health is the end or final cause of such walking.

The end is either

- Principal. * 1
- Less principal. * 2

* 1 Principal, unto which a thing is ordered of its own nature, and by first intent of the efficient: as the principal end of the Lord's Supper is the confirmation of Faith, and sealing up of Spiritual benefits, with a thankful remembrance of Christ's death.

And it is either

- A mean between. a
- Last of all. b

A mean between, is, which tendeth yet further. As the intermiddle end of a Soldier, is to fight valiantly; but this tends to a further end, to get the victory.

And it is either

- Work.
- Ending of the work.

The work 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 is a certain thing brought forth by Nature, or by the Artizen: so the house is the end and work of the builder. The ending of the work 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, is the possession and use thereof. As dwelling is the ending of the house.

The last end is whereunto all the rest are ordered, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the first scope and chief intention.

The Canons hereof are seven.

1 The end, which is last in execution, is first in intention.

2 The last end is necessarily and chiefly good, and chiefly moving or to be desired, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Galen.

3 In the last end, both appetite and operation of the efficient is terminate.

4 It gives to all the means, loveliness; order and measure: So tribulations for the Gospel are joyful, because the end is eternal life.

5 Only the last end perfecteth both doer and deeds: wherefore we must know the last end, if we would intend and use the middle end aright; which is against Popish Doctrine of perfection of virtues, even without respect of the last End.
Bellarm▪ 5. de grat. cap. 9.

6 The End being put, all means to the end are put: As, in God's predestination, whom God hath destined to Life, he hath also to Faith in good works.

7 The End entereth the manner of being, and supplieth places of Form, viz. in those things whose essential perfection is in operation.

The last end, is last either

- Simply.
- After a sort.

Simply last, which in respect of all things whatsoever is the last: and this is always the end, and never a mean to the end; so the seeing and celebrating of God is the last and utmost end wherein man's understanding, will, and desires, shall rest, Prov. 8.

After a sort last, which in order of some things is the last: thus the last end of War is Victory and Peace; the last end of Logic, is the direction of the mind in knowledge.

The less principal end, is, whereto things are less principally ordered, viz. not of the nature of the thing, but the appointment of the Agent: So the principal End of the Lord's Supper, is, a faithful and thankful remembrance of Christ's death; but the less principal Ends be many, as exexercise of Repentance, distinction of the Church from other Companies, &c.

The Canons hereof be two.

1 Less principal Ends are not taken away by the principal.

2 One thing may have many less principal Ends; and they either sub-ordinate, or well co-ordinate.

The End secondarily so called, is that whereto the End primary so called is intended, called Finis 〈in non-Latin alphabet〉 cui.

And it is either of

- Imperfection.
- Perfection.

Of Imperfection is, to whose use and need the thing is intended: so the End cui to whom of health is the sick man▪ so the end of the Lord's Supper, is faithful people. So Reprobates are not the end cui of Christ's passion; for the end cui by destination of the efficient and of its nature, ought to be capable of the end cujus, but Reprobates are not intended by Christ, nor are capable in applying of it, and therefore are removed by Christ, John. 17. 7.

Of Perfection the End cui is, of whom the efficient receiveth perfection; called also the end of assimilation; thus God is the End to whom of all our actions, as the perfecter of them.

A• End by Accident, is, unto which the means are ordained by accident, and not of their Nature. So the End of sin is the manifestation of God's Justice: the End of Heresies and Atheism, is the illustration of the truth: such Ends are indeterminate and confuse.

Of the Caused.

The Caused is that which hangeth upon the Cause, and is

- The effect.
- The Mattered.
- The Formed.
- The destinate.

The effect is that which hangeth on the Efficient.

The Canons hereof are three.

First, No effect, exceeds the virtue of its cause: So the Sun, though it hath not formally the heat which it giveth, yet it hath it eminently, that is, something much more excellent than that heat, namely, pure light. Absurdly therefore do the Popish Priests give unto Accidents the power of making a substance; for they say in the Mass, the accidents of Wine in the cup do change the water into another substance.

2 As is the cause, such is the caused; This is meant, 1 of causes by themselves, not of causes by accidents; therefore it followeth not, to say, This Ship-wright is a good man, therefore he makes a good Ship; for he makes the Ship, not as he is a man or good, but as he is a Wright or Artizen.

2 It is meant in causes natural, and those chiefly particular; so it followeth not, to say the effects of the Sun are hot, therefore the Sun is hot; for the Sun is a universal thing, and not a particular in causing. 3 It is meant of causes doing voluntarily, if they would produce an effect conformably: as a good Ship-wright makes a good Ship if he will. 4 It is meant upon condition and manner of the receiver, not of the thing received; so the Argument follows not from the chief perfection of God to the chief perfection of the gifts in the Creatures; for God works voluntarily, and according to the measure of the receiver, and when we speak here of goodness, it is not meant moral goodness, but the Natural and Artificial faculty and force of causing, and by this many Canons of effects are to be understood.

3 That for which anything is so, is itself so much more: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . This Canon hath three limitations. 1 The cause must be by itself; for it follows not, This man is drunken with wine; therefore this wine is more drunken; because wine maketh not a man drunken, but by the abuse of it. 2 It is required, that that affection, whereof the cause and effect is named such, be in both. 3 That it receive more and less.

1 The Mattered is, that which hangs on the matter.

As the whole compound natural body, is the caused of the matter.

3 The Formed is, that which hangs on the form. As the said natural informed body.

4 The Destinate is, that which is ordered unto the End; it may also be called the Ended; for by the End it is determined; so vocation, justification, sanctification, are the Destinates of Eternal Life; for they are ordered as means hereunto.

The Distinctions and Subdivisions of these may be gathered from the divisions of their causes going before; for among Relates, one is known by another.

Of the Subject and the Accident.

A Subject is that whereunto an Accident sticks •and is

- Absolute. a
- Limited. b

Absolute is, that whereto an Accident sticketh absolutely, without any limitation of part: So Christ's person is the absolute subject of the Mediators office, and all things thereto pertaining; for to be Mediator agreeth to the whole person as it is the whole: So the whole man is the subject of life and death; and it cannot rightly be said the body dieth; for that which is compounded, is also dissolved, and consequently dies, and that is the whole man. So also man is the absolute subject of laughter; and an Animal is the absolute subject of sense.

And it is either

- Proper.
- Common.

Proper, which is reciprocate with his Accident, viz. so as it be determined to it alone, not larger nor straighter: so a man is the proper subject of laughter, and Animal of sense.

Common is, which is not reciprocate with his Accident, but may have, or not have the accident, as a man is the subject of whiteness.

A Limited Subject is, that whereto an accident is given in part, not absolutely; as a Black-moor is the limited subject of whiteness, being white but in his teeth; so Christ is the subject of accidents limited 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. As when whole Christ is said to be everywhere, it is by limitation to his infinite Nature or Godhead; so when he is said to be born, die, &c. it is by limitation to his finite nature or manhood: this the Greeks note by the phrase, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉.

An accident is, that which sticketh to the subject; it is called also adjoynt.

The Canons hereof be three.

- 1 An Accident by nature is later than his Subject.
- 2 One Accident in number cannot be in divers Subjects in number.
- 3 One Accident in number goes not from Subject to Subject.

An Accident is either

- Proper. m
- Common. n

Again proper is so called either

- Absolutely and primarily.
- After a sort.

Absolutely so called, is reciprocate with the subject of some certain Species.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 Every proper floweth from the Essential beginnings of his subject, as the power of laughter floweth from a reasonable soul.

2 Every proper is determined to some certain Species in Nature.

3 Every proper accident of one Species is communicable to another that is really divers; everything to the perfection of it requireth three things, knit, undivided. 1 Essence. 2 Essential properties. 3 Operations, wherefore a propriety cannot be communicated, unless first the Essence of things be made common and confounded.

Absolute proper is either

- Perfect.
- Imperfect.

Perfect, is that which is not only alone and in all, but always and perpetually in it, as qualities in respect of a natural body: the faculty of wit, will, speech, &c. in a man.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 A subject cannot without contradiction be conceived under the denial of a perfect proper adjoynt: as I cannot conceive man without power of wit, &c. But it must imply contradiction, a man to be no man.

2 It is not possible for perfect Propers to be severed from their subjects, a moment of time; because they come from the form of the subject, and the next cause being put, the effects are put; and contrary, he that takes away proprieties, takes away Nature.

3 Perfect Propers are first in Universals, as reason is in man generally; then it is in this or that man, more or less.

Imperfect proper, is, that which is in a thing alone, and in all, but not always; as the acts of speaking, laughing, weeping, &c. are only in a man, and in all men, but not always.

Proper after a sort, which is called proper only by comparison with another; as it is proper for a man to be twofooted in respect of a four-footed beast. Fewnesse is proper to the Elect in respect of the Reprobates.

Common accident is, that which commonly and contingently is in subjects that be diverse in specie.

The Canons hereof are five.

1 A Common accident floweth not from the Essential beginnings of the subject.

2 It is such as a subject may be conceived under the opposite thereof, without any implying of contradiction: a man may be conceived under the opposite of an Ague without implying contradiction, a man to be not a man.

3 A common accident may be in two divers, specifically distinct, subjects.

4 It is more and rather in singulars than universals; for they flow not from the essence, but from the existence.

5 Common accidents receive degrees; as one man is whiter than another, but one man is not more risible than another.

A common accident is either

- Separable.
- Inseparable.

Separable, which may easily be separated from the subject; as health from a man, sleep, &c.

Inseparable, which is not easily separated from the subject, though to be separated nothing repugneth, as blackness is inseparable in a raven.

Of the Whole and the Part.

Now follow the inward terms, the Whole, and the Part.

The Whole is that which hath parts, and it is either

- by itself. a
- by accident. b

Whole by itself, is, which hath parts properly and perfectly so called.

And it is either

- Universal.
- Co-ordinate.

Universal whole, is a thing common and universal in respect of Particulars; as an Animal is the whole of man and beast.

Co-ordinate is, which is made of parts co-ordinate in act, and is

- Ordinary. a
- Extraordinary. b

Ordinary, which hath ordinary parts, and is

- Essential.
- Integral.

Essential, which hath essential parts, as Matter and Form, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , as a man in respect of body and soul.

And it is either, 1 Perfectly, or 2 Imperfectly so called.

1 Perfectly called, is substantial, which is compounded of Matter and Form. 2 Improperly so called, as an Oration consists of Letters, Syllables, Words, as the Material; and the signification as the Formal. A Common-weal of Magistrates and Subjects as the Material, and of their union by Laws to felicity as the Formal.

Integral, which consists of Integrant parts, and is

- Perfectly called,
- Imperfectly called,

Perfectly, which consists of substantial parts united.

And is either of

- The same kind, Homogeneum.
- Of another kind, Heterogeneum.

Of the same kind, which hath parts having the same name with the whole; as every part of water, wine, blood, &c. is called water, &c.

Of another kind, which hath parts having a name diverse from the whole as a man's body consists of head, breast, belly, &c.

Imperfectly called, is that which consists of parts imperfect.

And is

- Substantial.
- Accidental.

Substantial, which consists of the Aggregation of substantial parts, as a heap of corn of many grains, &c.

Accidental, when an accident is as it were compounded of other accidents; so the Moral Law is the whole in respect of the ten Commandments; man's conversion is the whole in respect of mortification and vivification.

Extraordinary whole, is, whose parts are united extraordinarily; such a whole is the person of our Mediator Christ, which consists of Natures, as of parts; yet is neither a whole essential nor integral, though it have a great Analogy with the Integral.

The whole by accident, is which is whole improperly and plain accidentally: as the caused, which is divided by his causes; the subject which is divided by accidents, and the accident by the Subject; so heat is the whole in respect of the Sun and fire.

Parts.

A Part is that which is referred to the whole, and is either

- By itself. a
- By accident. b

By its self, which is referred to the whole by itself, and is

- Subject.
- Co-ordering.

Subject is that which is subjected to the universal whole, as a straighter to a larger; so man and beast are the subjective parts of Animal.

Co-ordering is, by whose co-ordination the whole is made or compounded

- Ordinary.
- Extraordinary. †

The Canons hereof be five.

1 Parts as they make their whole, so also they determine and measure it.

2 Parts differ from their whole, though they be taken together: for, the whole is never the constituter, but the constituted, and the parts are always constituters; and the same thing constitutes not itself; also the whole (as it is the whole) is one thing; parts, though taken together, are many.

3 That which is of a part, (as it is a part) the same also is of the whole, viz. according to that part. Note that some things are in the part as a part, that is, cannot be there, but in as much, and as long as it cleaves to the whole.

Again some things are in it, not as it is a part, but as it hath a substance diverse from the whole; and therefore those may remain, though separated from the whole: of this sort attributes and accidents are not rightly given to the whole, but only to the part; as it is rightly said, The eye is mixed of humors, is round, &c. for such is the eye, though it be plucked out of the body; but it is not properly said, the eye seeth, the ear heareth, &c. for those agree to those parts as they are parts and instruments of the whole, which if it be extinct, the eye seeth not, nor the ear heareth. The like is in all other parts, in every essential and integral whole that is one by itself; for in Aggregate totals, as a heap, &c. it is otherwise; for they are not indeed totals; this hath great use in the Doctrine of Christ's Person, which is the whole consisting of two Natures; for rightly and really do agree to the whole person the attributes of either Nature; fitly therefore it is said, Christ is omnipotent, as touching his Divinity; Christ died for us touching his Humanity; and this is more aptly spoken thus than in the Abstract.

4 Note, whatsoever is of the whole, is also of the part. Here distinguish between the whole Universal, and the whole Essential & Integral. For whatsoever is in an universal whole, as an Animal, the same is in the parts of man and beast; but in other totals it is not so; for there, what the whole hath, cannot be properly given to the parts, because such parts receive not the definition of their totals, as in the Universal whole; it is not fitly said, the soul understandeth, thinketh, pitieth, &c. but the man that hath the soul doth those things; so whatsoever is spoken of whole Christ, or the person of the Mediator, is not properly spoken of the Humane Nature, nor of the Divine.

5 Every part in respect of his whole, is an imperfect thing; as the soul and body are things incomplete; but a man, complete.

And this part is either

- Essential. a
- Integral. b

Essential, is, which is referred to the Essential whole. And is

- Perfectly called.
- Imperfectly called.

Perfectly, which is referred to an Essential whole, perfectly so called; as soul and body are perfectly Essential parts; for they make a perfect Essential whole.

Imperfectly, which is referred to an Essential whole imperfectly so called: so sound and signification, are the Essential parts of Speech, but imperfectly called, the sound as the Matter, the signification as the Form.

Integral, is, which is referred to an Integral whole.

And is also

- Perfectly called.
- Imperfectly called.

Perfectly, which is referred to an Integral whole, having quantity.

And perfectly so called. And it is either

- Of the same, Homogenea.
- Of another kind, Heterogenea.

Of the same kind, which hath the same Name with the whole; as every part of flesh is called flesh; of blood, blood; of gold, gold, &c.

Of another kind is, which hath a diverse Name from the whole; as the parts of a man; head, hands, feet, &c.

And it is either

- Principal.
- Less Principal.

1 Principal, without which the whole cannot be: As in man, the heart, the brain, &c.

2 Less principal, which may be away without the destruction of the whole, as the finger, toe, &c.

Imperfectly so called, is, which is referred to an Integral whole, imperfectly so called, named 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Intelligible part; such parts be the propositions in a Syllogism; the ministering of the Word and Sacraments, are the parts of the Ministry.

An Extraordinary part, is, which is referred to an Extraordinary whole; as the two Natures in Christ's person.

A Part by accident, is that which is referred to an whole by accident: as subjects when they are divided by their accidents, and accidents by their subjects, causes by the effects, &c.

Outward Terms.

We have seen the simple terms inward. Now follows the outward term which is preferred unto others outwardly, so as it constituteth them not inwardly; but, in deed and place, is diverse and distinct from them.

The outward Term is either

- Adherent. m *
- Concomitant. n *

Adherent is either

- 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Adjacent. a
- 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Object. b

Adjacent, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, again is either

- Knit together. 1
- Circumstance. 2
- Adjoynt. 3

1 Knit together, or Connex, is that which happeneth, and is done together with the thing: as with Christ's passion the darkening of the Sun, the rending of the veil, &c.

2 Circumstance is, which is about a thing, and to it adjacent, as place and time, named 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; so the circumstances of Christ's suffering, were the place, Golgotha; the time, Tiberius reign; the day, hour, &c. So shadow is the circumstance of the body.

3 Adjoynt, is that which is adjoined near to a thing, as the Thoray Crown, Reed, Purple Robe of Christ, &c.

An Object, is about which a thing or operation of a thing is busied.

And it is either

- By itself. e
- By accident. f

By itself, unto which a thing is ordered by its self, and of its own Nature; such an Object of the Will, is Good, of the understanding, Truth, &c.

And it is either

- Common.
- Proper.

Common, is about which many things together are busied; so the common object of all the senses is greatness, figure, and motion; for these are apprehended and judged of all the senses in common.

Proper, is which is determined to one, as color to seeing, sound to hearing, &c.

Both of them again is

- Primary.
- Secondary.

Primary, unto which a thing is first carried; as universal things, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , are the primary object of the understanding. And God is of the Philosopher (Ethic. 10.) acknowledged to be, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Secondary, unto which a thing is secondly carried; as things singular in respect of the understanding, and things universal in respect of sense.

Also the object is either

- Mediate.
- Immediate.

Mediate, which is objected by means of another: as sensible substances are objects of the senses by means of the qualities▪

Immediate, which is objected without any means; so qualities are objects of the senses, as color of sight, &c.

An Object by accident, is about which a thing is busied by accident; and this is meant both in respect of the action, and of the object; so evil is the object of the will by accident; for about it the will is busied, not of its own Nature, as it is will, but of vice and defect outwardly accident; thus also the understanding by accident is busied about falsehood; the preaching of the Gospel about Reprobates. And of the object, Sarah Abraham's wife was sensible by her accident, when the King saw her not as Abraham's wife, but as a fair woman, &c.

Concomitant, is either

- Antecedent. 1
- Consequent. 2

1 Antecedent is, which goeth in order of time before a thing, so as it cannot be the cause.

And it is either

- Necessary.
- Contingent.

Necessary which goeth before necessarily, either by nature or by will, as Childhood goes before Manhood, Spring time before Harvest, Resurrection before Eternal Life.

Contingent, which goes before a thing contingently; as the redness of the evening, in respect of the next day's fair weather, the red lowering of the morning in respect of rain at evening. Such antecedents may be called signs.

2 Consequent is, which followeth the thing, so as it is not the effect. And it is either

- Necessary.
- Contingent.

Necessary, which needs must follow the antecedent, as in the necessity of God's decree, Christ's suffering necessarily followed his last Supper, death followed his suffering, resurrection his death and burial, &c.

Contingent, which followeth contingently; so fair weather contingently, or it may be followeth the white Moon, for sometime it doth not, &c.

Of simple Terms arising from the first.

Having seen the first single Terms; next follow those that arise, and are conceived by means of the first.

A Term arising from the first is either of

- A Word. 1 *
- A Thing. 2 *

Of a Word.

The Term of a Word is either the

- a Explication of a Word.
- b Conjugation of a Word.

The Explication of a Word, is either 1 a Definition of a Name; or 2 a Distinction of a doubtful word; or a 3 clearing of a dark word.

1 A Definition of a Name, is, which turneth up and unfoldeth the signification of a Word, and is either

- by a Word, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .
- by Notation, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Definition by a word, is, which declareth the signification of a word by some other that is more known, either by a Synonymy and Metalepsis, or by a contrary word: As when I say a Condition is a Promise; Stibium is Antimony; Antichrist is he that is against Christ and for the Devil, &c.

Etymology.

Definition by Notation or Etymology, is, which declares the Word by the Original of it; and this not Grammatically, but Logically, for the meaning and explaining of a thing; as Noble is he which by virtue is nobile, famous or well known.

The Canons or Etymology are three.

1 The Etymology of all words is not to be sought; for many words are primitive.

2 In Etymologies we must not go on without End, but must stay in some that is first; as the English word, Mix, may come from the Latin Misceo, and that from the Greek 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . And the Greek from the Hebrew 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Masach. And here we must rest; for the Hebrew is the first tongue, and many words in it are primitive.

3 Etymologies are taken from the end, effects, proprieties, object, and opposites of a thing; and are therefore from these to be derived, and these by those to be declared; as a River comes from the Latin Rivus, and both of them from the Hebrew 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Ravah, which signifieth to wet or moisten, because Rivers do moisten the dry Land. World so called of War^rold, because the older it is, the War or worse it is, &c.

Distinction 2.

A Distinction is, the freeing of a doubtful word from the variety of hidden significations.

The Canons hereof are seven.

1 The Distinction of a doubtful word must be first in all consideration of things.

2 When one word or name is given to things of divers Orders and kinds, it is doubtful, and needeth distinction; as if one speak of a Canker, it is to be known whether it be of the Canker-worm, or the Canker-sore, &c.

3 When a word is given to any in a diverse respect, viz. Absolutely, and by relation, it is doubtful, and needeth distinction: as Justification is taken either absolutely, as it is in the Justified person only, Rom. 4. or relatively to our neighbor, as he may acknowledge us to be justified by the effects of Faith. Jam. 2.

4 When a word meaneth sometime more things, sometimes fewer, it is doubtful: as Faith is sometime largely used, sometime strictly; so Church, Grace, Election, &c.

5 When the opposite of any word is doubtful, the word itself is doubtful; as Election to life hath opposite, Reprobation: Election to an Office hath no opposite; therefore Election is a doubtful word.

6 When a Primitive word is doubtful, the Derivative is so too; and if one of the conjugates be doubtful, so is the other; as Faith is diversely taken; therefore a faithful man or infidel, is diversely to be taken.

7 Distinction of a word, repugneth not the Nature and use of things, neither darkeneth it, but cleareth the understanding of the mind, viz. a good distinction; but evil distinction doth darken and confound things.

Illustration.

8 The clearing or Illustration of a dark word, is the reducing of it to perspicuity.

The Canons hereof be four.

1 When a word is dark by barbarousness or Soloecism, it is to be judged by Grammar Rules: as Transubstantiation is a monstrous word, and hath bred as monstrous opinions, so Opus operatum, &c.

2 When a word is dark for want of use, let a more usual and safe word be put in place: as the Sacrament of the Altar is an unproper word, not to be used for the Lord's Supper.

3 When a word is larger or straighter than the thing meant thereby, let another word, if it may be had, be put in the room; as when the word Clergy is applied to the Ministers only, which is said to be common to all the Saints, 1 Pet. 5.

4 When a word is figurative, not for any need, but for fineness sake, put a proper word for it.

The Conjugation, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, or yoking together of words, is a depending of words yoked together. And is

- Primitive.
- Derivative.

Primitive, on which another word hangs in deduction.

Derivative, which hangs on the Primitive; as faithful on Faith.

And they are either

- Of a word only.
- Of thing.

Of word only, when not so much the Natural Order of signifying is looked on, as the forming of words, one from another.

Of thing, when there is a union of signification, and is

- Primary.
- Secondary.

Primary, which is in which the dependence, both of signification and determination is observed; of Faith faithful, and Justice just, &c.

Secondary, In which there is a dependence of signification only, and not of termination also; as when of virtue one is said to be studious, gracious, &c.

Of a thing.

The arising term of a thing without the word is

- Resolving.
- Conferring.

Resolving is either

- Definition.
- Division.

Of a Definition.

Definition, is the unfolding, or turning out of the defined thing.

And it is either

- 1 Perfect.
- 2 Imperfect.

1 Perfect is the unfolding of the thing by essential terms, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

The Canons hereof be five.

1 Every defined thing of perfect definition must be by itself, and directly in the predicamental order of things; so then there can be no perfect definition of doubtful things, of Fictions, or Privations, as sin, &c. of things concrete, incomplete, &c.

2 Whatsoever is perfectly defined, is a Species.

3 A Definition must be formed perspicuous and determinate, viz. free from all ambiguity.

4 A Definition should be reciprocal and equal to the thing defined.

5 An essential Definition must consist of things simply before more known, and so indemonstrable. Not regarding what we must know, or what this or that man is able to comprehend, but absolutely and simply what is first in nature, and more known according to the Essential Order of things.

Definition hath two Notions and Conceits.

1 The one of agreement or conveniency, called the Genus.

2 The other of distinction or difference, called the Difference.

The conceit of agreement, or Genus, both of Substances and Accidents, is found by bringing the defined thing into his predicamental Order, and by conferring with his superiors, by the Canons of a true and next Genus.

The Notion of Distinction or Difference, is either

- Of Substances.
- Of Accidents.

In Substances, there is one only and simple Difference, which also may easily be known by the same predicamental Table.

In Definition of Accidents, the Difference is taken from the Subject, the Efficient, the End, and Object.

The Canons of Defining Accidents by every of the Orders are nine.

1 Proper Accidents are defined by the Subject made equal, and the next efficient cause.

2 Common Accidents are defined by the mention of the efficient cause.

3 Quantity taken in general, and completely, is defined by mention of the subject and the efficient: as that it is • bodies Accident, arising from the extension of the matter. Special quantities, as a line, &c. are not defined, because they are things incomplete; neither is number.

4 Qualities potential natural, are defined by the subject, the efficient cause, and act, unto which they are carried as to an end; As, risibility is the power of man to laugh, proceeding from a reasonable soul.

5 Habits are defined by the end & the object: as Logic is an Art directing the operations of the mind about the knowledge of things, Liberality is a virtue of taking & bestowing.

6 Qualities patible, are defined by the efficient cause, and the subject, if they be proper accidents; as color is the quality of a mixed body, arising from the tempering together of bright and dark. Smell is an affecting quality of a mixed body, arising from the predominion of a d•y thing savouring tempered with moist.

7 Actions are defined by mention of the subject, the object, the efficient and the end; as sense is the knowledge of a sensible object, arising from the receiving of sensible species, by a fit sensory instrument, to the conservation and perfection of the living creature. Sight is a sense about Colour and light, arising from the receiving of both by their species, unto the perfection of the living Creature. Adoration is an holy operation of a Faithful man• arising from the acknowledgement, and trust of God Almighty, and (in his Son) merciful, by the holy Ghost stirred up, to the honor of God, and the faithful man's salvation.

8 A Passion is defined by the subject, and the efficient cause; as, anger is an affection arising from heat of the blood, moved about the heart for some hu•t done. Sleep is a passion ceasing from operations in living creatures, arising from the Alimentary, nourishing and profitable humor, imbruing the brain, and as it were congealing the passages of the Animall Spirits.

9 Relations are defined by the subject relate, correlate, foundation and term.

The subject rela•e and correlate, is wherein the relation is of mutual part; some call it the material; as the subject of marriage, is man and woman; hereupon the Relate and Correlate is the husband and wife.

The Foundation, is, from which the relation riseth, or for which it is in the subjects: the foundation is ratio referendi, without which it would be nothing; it is answerable to the efficient cause, and is either near or far off; as the next foundation of Marriage is the lawful consent of each party; the far Foundation, is God's first institution in Paradise.

The term is as the end for which the relation is brought into the subject• it is the office and effect of the relation; so the term of Baptism is the seal and confirmation of the washing of sins by Christ's blood; so marriage is an order or union between husband and wife, established by mutual consent for procreation of seed, and pleasant society of life and goods.

Description 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 :

An Imperfect definition is the unfolding of a thing by terms less essential; it is called Description: and is either.

- Principal.
- Less Principal.

Principal, which unfoldeth the thing by the Genus, and the Accidents, or the proper effects; as a man is a living Creature that can laugh, go upright, made after God's Image.

Less Principal, is the unfolding of a thing by terms merely contingent, or outward, without assigning the exact Genus, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, showing not what, but what manner a thing, it is.

And it is either. 1 Of the part of the concrete, or, 2 of the part of the thing. Of the part of the concrete, when a thing by its nature capable of a perfect definition, is yet unfolded to us unperfectly,

Of the part of the thing, when the thing itself is not capable of a perfect definition; as be all privatives, incomplete, concrete, &c.

The Canons hereof be two.

1 Privations are described by mention of the habits whose privations they are; as original sin is an ataxie, or disorder of the understanding, will and appetite, born with us, and opposite to God's Image.

1 Concrete accidents are not unfitly described by putting the subject in the place of the genus: as a Minister of the word is a person lawfully called and ordained to the preaching of the word, and administrating of the Sacraments. A Magistrate is a public person, ordained of God, to rule and defend the Subjects with Justice, Prudence, and Fortitude.

Boetius gathereth from the Greeks ten forms of Descriptions

1 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, when the name of a thing is unfolded, as Antichrist is he that is against Christ. Justification is a reputed for Just.

2 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, when a thing is declared by its difference; as hatred is that which dureth longer than wrath.

3 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, when a thing is said to be that which it is like to; as a man is a bubble; the Church is Noah's Ark.

4 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, when a thing is declared by removing the contrary; as virtue is to flee vice; death is the privation of life.

5 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, by circumlocution; as Paul was the Teacher of the Gentiles.

6 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by Example; as a substance is, for examples sake, a man, a horse, &c.

7 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by want of the full of the same kind. As an Enthymeme is that which wanteth one of the premisses to be a Syllogism.

8 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by praise; as a history is the witness of Times, the light of Truth, the life of memory, the mistress of life, the shower of Antiquity; also by dispraise; as riches ate the enticements to evil.

9 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , when one thing is said to be another, for natural similitude: as a man is a little world; wine is the soul of a Banquet.

10 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by Notation; as the World is that which waxeth worse and old.

Of Division.

Division is the resolving of the whole into parts, and is

- Perfect. a
- Imperfect. b

Perfect, is the resolving of the whole properly so called and perfect, into parts properly called.

The Canons hereof are nine.

1 That which is rightly divided, must needs have parts;

Therefore the truth is ill divided into Philosophical; seeing, it is not an whole thing, but simple and impartible. So Omniscieny into Ubiquity, &c.

2 The divided and division should be without all doubtfulness and darkness; as works should not be divided into operation, & operantis; nor Faith into Historical, Miraculous, and saving Faith; not blindness into corporal and spiritual, nor liberty into civil and spiritual.

3 The members dividing should agree with the whole; therefore Logic is not well divided into Invention and Judgment, seeing these are actions, and Logic a quality.

4 The members dividing should be equal to the whole; so ceremonies are ill divided into godly and ungodly; for this contains not the whole Nature of ceremonies, because some are mean or indifferent.

5 The members dividing should be disjoined one from another; so a body, is ill divided into head, eyes, belly, heart, &c. for the eyes are contained in that head, and the heart in that body, &c.

6 Division should be made into the next and immediate members: so a body is ill divided into man, beast, and tree; for many members that come between are leaped over; for next a body is, either simple or compound.

7 Division should consist of as few members or parts as the nature of the whole that is to be divided will bear.

8 A true division should be made by those things which are in the whole, and not by the things outward and accidents to the whole; so quantity is ill divided into Mathematical, Physical, and Logical; for Disciplines are accidentary, and outward to things; neither is a thing by and by diverse, when it is diversely considered by sundry disciplines.

9 A perfect division is the beginning of understanding, and of constituting the method of things and disciplines.

A perfect division also is either of

- The whole Subordering.
- The Co-ordered,

Of the sub-ordering is, which resolveth the general into the specials that are subordered or subjected thereto, as to divide Animal into man and beast.

The Canons hereof are two.

1 The divided must be a general; we must learn to discern the diverse respects and considerations of things from the divisions; as when the Church is distinguished into visible and invisible, it is not properly a division, much less a division of the general into specials; for a Church is a lowest special; but it is only a diverse respect and manner of considering the Church; likewise when a man is divided into inward and outward.

2 The difference by whose means the general is divided, should be essential and proper, viz. not translated from one general to another.

The division of the co-ordered, is which resolves the whole into parts co-ordered: and is either

- Essential. a
- Integral. b

Essential, which resolves the essential whole into essential parts, and is either 1 First, or 2 Secondly so called.

1 First, is when the Essential whole properly called is resolved into matter and form: as a man into soul and body. And here, the true and next matter and form must be taken.

Secondarily so called, is when an Essential whole improperly so called, is resolved into his material and formal; as an Oration into a sound, or words written, and their signification. A Church into men called, &c. The union of those with Christ, and one with another by faith and obedience of the Faith; whereof these are the material of the Church, those the formal.

Integral division is which resolveth the whole into integral parts, and it is also either, 1 First primarily. 2 Secondly so called.

1 Primary, is which resolveth into parts the entire whole properly called; as the Tabernacle was divided into the Court, the holy, and the most holy.

This manner of partition should be instituted in right order, descending from the more principal and greater parts unto the lesser.

Secondarily called, is, which resolveth into parts an entire whole improperly called, such as accidents be; as a Syllogism is resolved into three Propositions and Terms: the Law into two Tables, or ten Precepts.

An imperfect division is, when the whole is resolved into parts by accident; and it is either: 1 Of the subject into his accidents and circumstances: or 2 Of accidents by their subjects. 3 Or of the effects by their efficient, or final causes: or 4 Of causes by the effects: or 5 Of things by their objects: as 1 Of men, some are tall, some low, some learned, some unlearned, some dwell in hot countries, some in cold. 2 Agues, some are in the spirits, some in the humors, some in the solid parts. 3 The Scriptures, some were written by the Prophets, some by the Apostles. Gardens, some are for profit, some for pleasure. 4 God's word, either terrifieth the conscience, as the Law; or comforteth it, as the Gospel. 5 Love is either of God, or of our neighbor.

Of the self-same being.

Hitherto of the arising term resolving; now followeth the conferring, whereby thing with thing is compared.

And is either

- Consentany.
- Dissentany.

Consentany (or agreeing) is when the Identity, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, or self-same being of things is looked on.

Identity, is the unity and agreement of things, and is

- Ordinary. a
- Extraordinary. b

Ordinary in ordinary things, and is either

- Greater. a

- Lesser. b

Greater Identity of them, which is are the same in some greater manner, and as it were absolutely.

And is either

- Formal.
- Numerical.

Formal, is of them which differ only in evolution of definition, otherwise are the same in all things. As a man and a reasonable Animal.

Numerical Identity, is the unity of one singular undivided thing.

And is either; 1 Primary. or 2 Secondary.

1 Primary, which simply and properly is one in Number; As Heaven, Peter.

2 Secondary; Which are one in Number by some outward conjunction. As one Church under Christ the head; One heap of Corn, &c.

Lesser Identity, is of them which are one after a sort.

And is

- Inward.
- Outward.

Inward, is of them which agree in some inward manner or Term.

And is either, 1 Subordinate, or 2 Co-ordinate.

1 Subordinate, is of them which agree under the Predicamentall Order, and is either

- Conjunctive,
- Disjunctive.

Identity of Conjunctive subordination, is of them which in the Predicamentall order do straight follow one another: As be all Generalls with their subordinate specials: These are called really the same; as a man, & an Animal; for they are not two disjoined things, but only subordinate,

The Canons hereof are two.

1 They which are really the same, of them the Superior concurrereth to the constitution and the definition of the Inferior.

2 They which are really the same, fight not in anything.

Identity of disjunctive Subordination, is of them which so agree under the predicamentall Order, that they are notwithstanding disjoined one from another, as two diverse things.

And is either

- General.
- Or Specificall.

General, of them which agree in the General, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , As a man and and a beast agree in an Animal.

Specificall, which agree under one lowest special: As Peter and Paul agree in human Species, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

2 Coordinate, is of them which agree in Coordinate Terms, and is

- Causal.
- Co-haesive.

Causal Identity is of them which agree in the causes, or caused: So in 1 Cor. 12. the distinct gifts agree in one efficient, God, &c.

Cohaesive Identity, is either of the Subject, or of the Accident.

Of the Subject, is of Accidents which are in one Subject, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : As the Prophetical, Priestly, and Kingly Office in Christ; this may also be called the same really: so the faculty to understand, to will, &c.

Accidental Identity is of them that agree in Accidents; as a Moor, and a Raven agree in blackness:

And it is either

- Primary,
- Secondary.

Primary, is of them which agree in Primary and properly called Accidents.

And it is either

- Parity.
- Similitude.

Parity, is the Identity of things that agree in quantity: As when two men are of like stature, or having a like number of children.

Of Similitude.

Similitude is the Agreement of things in quality chiefly; and then also in action, passion, and relation.

And is either

- Absolute.
- Parabolicall.

Absolute, is the agreement of things in quality, Action; Passion, Absolutely and simply.

Parabolicall, is when the Accidents of things have a kind of Image among themselves: As Christ's Parables, Mat. 13. &c.

The Canons hereof are four.

1 Parabolicall similitude is the most fit instrument for plain and popular kind of Teaching: Seeing all our Doctrine proceeds from known to unknown, we must needs learn so much the more easily, as that is easy from whence the beginnings of learning are taken, as, are in Parables, sensible things.

2 Every like is also unlike, Simile non estidem.

3 Similitude must not be made between things too much dissevered; As some have compared the ten Commandments with the ten plagues of Egypt.

4 A Parable must be fitted to the Principal scope and intent of the Declarer, and not be stretched beyond this; As when Christ likeneth his coming to a thief, &c.

Similitude is either

- Simple.
- Compound.

Simple, which is between two Terms: As a subtle wit likened to fire.

Compound, which is between four: So a Magistrate is to the Commonwealth in War, as a Governor is to a Ship in a tempest.

Secondary Accidental Identity, is of them that agree in relations: Thus two parts are said to be same, as two Masters, as two Sons, &c:

Outward Indentity, is when things agree in outward Terms, as in Time, Place, Objects, Antecedents, Consequents As Moses and Balaam lived in one age, &c.

Extraordinary Identity is when things agree extraordinarily.

And it is either

- Essentiall.

- Hypostatical.

Essential, is in three persons of the holy Trinity which communicate in one essence in number: Called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Hypostatical, is when two complete Natures are united in one Hypostasis, or persons, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , whereof there is only example in the person of our Mediator Christ, where the Divine and Humane Nature are said to be the same in Hypostasis: such are called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; as they that agree in Essence, are called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Of Distinction.

Hitherto of the arising Term Consentany; Dissentany followeth, whereby the diversity of things is understood.

And is either

- Distinction.
- Opposition.

Distinction is the diversity of things without sight.

And it is either

- Primarily so called.
- Or Secondly.

Secondary is that which is only in consideration and conceit of mind: As when we distinguish in mind the right side of a Pillar from the left; so in light, though it be a most simple quality, we distinguish the form of warming, and of drying. So in the attributes of God from the Essence, and one from another; as when we distinguish between God's understanding, Willing, Punishing, Pardoning, &c. Though in the Godhead there is properly no distinction indeed; but only thus in reason.

Primarily called distinction, is, which is in things immediately without the mind.

And is either

- Ordinary.
- Extraordinary.

Ordinary is in ordinary things, as in the Creatures.

And is

- Formal. a

- Real. b
- Modal. c

Formal, is of those whereof one is taken in the definition of another; as between Genus and Species; Species and Singulars, &c.

The Canons hereof are two.

1 They that are formally distinguished, are not as thing and thing, nor as two separated things; as substance cannot be separate from man, &c.

2 They that are formally distinct, do yet communicate in the same nature and properties.

Real distinction, is of them that are as two severed and distinct things.

The Canons are three.

1 Things that really differ, may be severed one from another, as water from cold.

2 They are never subordinate one to another.

3 They may receive opposition and repugnance; as, man and beast.

Real distinction is either

- Inward.
- Outward.

Inward is of them which differ in inward Terms.

And is

- Subordinate.
- Co-ordinate.

Subordinate, is of them which differ in subordinate or predicamental Terms.

And is either

- Generical Distinction.
- Specific Distinction.
- Individual Distinction.

Generical, is of them which differ in the general, far off or near: As, man and virtue; For one is a substance, and the other is a quality.

Specific, is of them which coming of one general, are separated by essential differences, or put under sundry specials: Thus man and beast differ in species. Also Man, and Lion, Horse, &c.

Individual, is a separation of two or more singulars, which also are said to differ in number: As Peter, Paul, James, &c.

Co-ordinate distinction, is, which is made by co-ordinate Terms:

And is

- Causal.
- Subjective.

Causal is of them which differ in cause far off or near: As man and beast differ in form; laughing and weeping differ in the efficient and end.

Subjective, is either of

- The Subject.
- The Accident.

Distinction of Subject, is when accidents differ in subject; as speaking and bleating, laughing and neighing, &c.

Distinction of accidents, is of subjects that differ in accidents.

And is either

- Primary.
- Secondary.

Primary, is of them that differ in accidents primarily called.

And it is either, 1 Imparity, 2 Dissimilitude.

1 Imparity is when things differ in greater or lesser quantity; as love excels faith, 1 Cor. 13. The soul excels the body, &c.

2 Dissimilitude is distinction of things after diverse qualities, actions, passions, and the image of all these.

Secondary distinction of accidents, is of them that differ in relations: as when one is a father or a master, another not.

Outward real distinction, is when things are distinguished by outward Terms, as by Objects, Time, Place, Antecedents, Consequents, &c.

Modal distinction, is when not the things so much as the manners of the things are distinct; either things by their manners, or manners by their things.

And it is either

- Simple.
- Comparative.

Simple, when manners of things are simply distinguished: so essence and existence differ in a simple modal distinction.

Comparative, is when the same thing or quality is distinguished by more and less. As between hot and lukewarm.

1 More and less do never vary the species; so weak faith and strong faith; Paul a child and a man, do not differ in specie.

2 Things compared by more and less, must not be AEquivocall: As the sharpness of voice, and of a sword, may not be compared.

3 Things compared by more or less, must be of the same species and nature; so it is not meet to compare a Smiths saw to a Carpenters mallet; nor to ask, which was best learned, of Galen (a Physician) or of Bartolus (a Lawyer.)

Extraordinary distinction, is in things extraordinary.

And it is either between God and the Creatures, or between the essence and persons of the Godhead, or of the persons one from another: God differs from Creatures more than in general, and agrees only in Analogy; in the persons there is distinction somewhat like the Modall: For Justin Martyr calls the persons 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Of Opposition.

Now followeth Opposition, which is the Fighting together of two simple Terms, so as neither the one can agree with the other, nor both of them with the third, after one and the same manner. They agree not 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , nor 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , nor 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , nor 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ;

The Canons of Opposition are two.

1 Opposites so far forth as they are such, are together.

2 One Opposite helps the knowledge of another in that that is an Opposite. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Opposition is either

- Common. a

- Special. b

Common, is contradiction, which is the first opposition of a thing and not a thing.

The Canons hereof are four.

1 Contradiction is of all Oppositions the first, and so the measure of all the rest: Cold and heat were not opposed, unless Cold were not Heat, and Heat not Cold.

2 Contradiction is of Oppositions the simplest.

3 It wants simply all mean: For between a thing and not a thing, there is no mean thing.

4 It is of all Oppositions the greatest or strongest.

Contradiction, is either

- 1 Exprest.
- 2 Implied.

1 Exprest, when the note of denial is plainly put to one part: As a man, and not a man.

2 Implicit, when the note of denial being omitted, one part overthrows another: As an unbloody Sacrifice: For that which is not bloody, is not a Sacrifice: so the Catholic Roman Church; Christ's everywhere present Body; for if it be everywhere, it not a body.

Special Opposition, is which is between special extremes; and is

- Primary.
- Secondary.

Primary, whose parts are most strongly opposed.

And is either

- 1 Privative.
- 2 Disparation.
- 3 Repugnancy.
- 4 Contrariety.

1 Privative Opposition, is the fighting betwixt habit and privation▪ Habit is the presence of a thing that cleaveth to some certain and fit Subject. Privation is the absence of an habit in a Substance capable of the habit. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 or 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

The Canons hereof are five.

1 A privative Opposition is near akin to Contradictory.

2 Privative Opposition admits a Mean; as, to the eye, twilight is a Mean between light and dark; God is neither moveable, nor immovable, Privatively.

3 Privative Oppositions have extremes of the same Genus, the Habit directly, the Privation indirectly; as sight and blindness.

4 Habit and Privation are about the same Subject: As, because an Animall only hath sight, therefore an Animall only is blind, not a stone, &c.

5 Privative Opposition requires determination of a certain time▪ neither can privation be given to a Subject but after the time that by its nature and fitness it might receive the habit; as none can be said to be bald until the time by Nature they should have hair.

Privation is either

- Natural.
- Comming otherwise.

Natural, when that is wanting which the Subjects should Naturally have, whether it be Accident that is due to the Subject, or a part required to the constitution of the whole.

And it is again, either, First total, or Secondly after a sort.

Total privation, is from which there is granted no ordinary regresse to the habit.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 Total privation is properly of dispositions, or powers only.

2 Total privation is beside Nature

3 From privation to habit no regresse is granted: As, he that is once quite blind, can never see more, viz. ordinarily.

Privation after a sort, or in part, is when an ordinary, and easy regresse is granted from the privation to that habit. As darkness of the night, which at morning returns to light; so sleep to awaking, sickness to health, &c.

Privation adventitial, or coming otherwise, is of a thing outwardly cleaving; as poverty is the privation of riches, imprisonment of liberty, &c.

2 Disparation is an opposition of specialls, arising from the division of one General by opposite differences; as a man and a beast are disparates, or dissevered.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 Disparates never agree to the same things as they are Disparates; So, bread is the body of Christ, cannot be spoken substantially, but only relatively, as bread hath relation to Christ's body.

2. Compleat Disparates do not concur as body and soul to make a man; so God and man concur to one hypostatical thing in Christ, but not essential.

3. Repugnancy is opposition either between one Disparate, and the property of another, or between two or moe properties of Disparates, and also properties of contraries, and their antecedents and consequences: As to feign, and to be indeed a friend, to be elect, and to fall from the grace of God▪ To be bread, and to be born of the Virgin: To be prudent, and not to be able to dissemble anger; for this is Repugnant to prudence.

4 Contrariety is an opposition between two qualities that drive out one another.

And it is either

- By itself.
- By Accident.

Contrariety by its self is of qualites by themselves, and absolutely taken,

The Canons hereof be eight.

1. Of contrariety, each part is positive, as hot, and cold.

2. Of contraries, both are under a certain general, near or far; As white, and black are under the general of color.

3. Contraries are about the same subject, viz. either the general or the special; But not always about the same in number, or those things which only differ in Accidents: So white and black are in the same mixed body generally taken, but not in the same body in number; As a Swan, and a Raven, &c.

4 If one of the contraries be, the other also must needs be, or at least have possibility to be: If in nature there be fire, there must also be water.

5 Contraries cannot be in the same degree that excel; But may be in degrees that are remiss: So what is hot in extremity, is not cold at all.

6. One contrary if it▪ overcomes, corrupteth another.

7 The remission of one contrary often comes to pass by the weakening of the other.

8 Contraries have contrary Causes, Effects, Properties, and next Subjects: So Virtue is of God, Vice of the Devil, Temyerance helps health, Intemperance hurts it, &c.

Contraties by themselves, are either

- Mediate.
- Immediate.

Mediate, which do admit a Mean, viz. of taking part with the extremes; as heat and cold admit between, lukewarmness

Immediate, which do not admit a Mean: As Virtue and Vice.

Contrariety by accident, is which agreeth unto other things for the qualities: as fire and water are contrary, because of heat and cold.

The secondary opposition is betwixt the Relation and the Correlate.

The Canons hereof be three.

1 Relative opposition is of all the weakest.

2 Opposites relatively have no Mean, viz. which takes part of the extremes, as Father and Son,

3, Opposites relatively are both affirmative.

And thus much of the simple Terms of the first part of Logic.

A General Sum of the first Part of Logic.

The first part of Logic is about a simple Term, and is either

- The first which is either,
 - Of a word with the
 - Divisions.
 - Canons.
 - Of a thing which is either
 - The predicamental Row wherein is considered
 - The manner how things are received into the Rows.
 - The degree,
 - Direct which is
 - Primary
 - The General.
 - The Special.
 - Secondary, the singular.
 - Collateral, or sidelong, the difference.
 - The partition; for a predicament is either

- Primary.
 - Of Substance.
 - Of Accidents.
 - Absolute.
 - Quantity.
 - Quality.
 - Action.
 - Passion.
 - Of Relation.
- Secondary, as
 - When.
 - Where.
 - Situation.
 - Habit.
- the term about the Row, which is either
 - Inward.
 - The cause
 - Efficient.
 - Matter.
 - Form.
 - End.
 - The caused.
 - The Subject and Accident.
 - The Whole and the Part.
 - Outward.
 - Adherent either Adjacent which is either
 - Connex.
 - Circumstance.

- Adjoint.
 - Concomitant, which is either
 - Antecedent.
 - Consequent.
- Arising of the first, and is either
 - Of a word, and is either
 - The unfolding of a word.
 - Conjugates.
 - Definition of a Name.
 - Distinction of the doubtful.
 - Clearing of the obscure.
 - Of a thing, and either
 - Resolving, and is either
 - Definition.
 - Division.
 - Conferring, and either is
 - Consentany, as the identity of things.
 - Dissentany, as
 - Diversity.
 - Distinction.
 - Opposition.

THE SECOND BOOK, Handling the Second Part OF LOGICK; Which is a Director of a Compound conceit.

Of a Proposition.

The second Part of Logic directeth a compounded conceit, which is done by Precepts concerning a Proposition.

A Proposition is a sentence wherein one thing is affirmed or denied of another.

And it is considered either

- In general, and is called Formal. a a
- In Special, and determinatly called material. b b

In General, when the disposition of a sentence is looked on nakedly, and absolutely, without any special condition of the things themselves.

And is again either

- Primary, or simple, and Categorically perfect. c c
- Secondary, or Compound, and Hypothetical, and Imperfect. d d

Primary or Simple, is, which in one simple Composition propoundeth anything to be or not to be. Of this we are to consider both the 1 Constitution, and 2 Division, and also the 3 Affections.

The Constitution of a Proposition is of the parts, and the disposing of the parts, of which those may be called the material, and this the Formal.

The Parts are either the Signed, or the Signers, or Signs.

The parts Signed, or Absolute, are

- The Antecedent, or Subject.
- The Consequent, or Predicate, or Attribute.

The Subject or Antecedent, is, of which anything is pronounced.

The Consequent or Predicate, is, that which is pronounced of the Subject; As in this sentence, True faith doth work by love: the first part, true faith, is called the Subject, or Antecedent; the latter part, work by love, is called the Consequent, or Attribute, or Predication.

The Canons of the Subject and Attribute are two.

1 That is the true natural subject (or antecedent) in a Proposition, which without the proposition, even in the Nature of things is subjected; And that is the true Natural attribute or consequent, which in the very Nature of things is in another: and if in any Proposition that be put first, which is not first in Nature; or last, which is not last in Nature: it is called a proposition against Nature, and Inordinate, which must be marked and brought into order; as, It is not good for man to be alone: Here good is not the true Antecedent or Subject, but the Lonedom of the man, of which it is said that it is not good.

2. The Consequent or Attribute must be diverse from the Subject: For the same is not to be pronounced of the same; as a Sword is a Sword; no though it be in other Terms as the Gospel is glad tidings. Stibium is Antinomy.

The Signing parts of Signs be either

- Significantive, Categorematical.
- Consignificative, Syncategorematical.

A Significantive Sign, is which represents to the mind a certain Antecedent and Consequent.

And it either

- A Noun.
- A Verb.

A Noun is a simple word, signifying a certain and absolute thing without time.

The Canons of a Noun are six.

1. A Noun is a simple word, and never a whole sentence.
2. A Noun should be instituted to signify some certain thine, by institution of God and man.
3. A Noun should be one in Unity of Signification, not equivocal.
4. A Noun should be of finite Signification.
5. A Noun of the first or right case, is properly a Noun in Latin.
6. A Noun by itself signifies not distinction of time.

A Verb is a simple word, inferring with the principal signification of Action or Passion, Distinction of time.

The Canons hereof are four.

1. Every Verb includes in it some Noun or Signification of a certain thing: As I speak, Includes in it Speech.
2. A Verb beside the conceit of some certain things notes fitness of avouching of some other.
3. A Verb primarily infers with it a certain distinction of the time present.
4. A Verb of the Indicative mood is of all, most fit for Enunciative composition and division.

A Consignificative Sign, is, which signifies no certain thing in the Proposition; But the manner only of a thing; As, all, none, some, &c

The Formal thing in a Proposition, is A disposing of the Parts to others: And it is either Signed or Signing.

Signed, is, the Order of the parts of the Proposition absolutely looked on in the mind, agreeing with the order of things without the mind.

Signing is, an outward note of this Disposition & Order.

And it is either Exprest or Included in the Verb.

Express, when the antecedent is put with the consequent, by mean of the Verb Substantive [Is] as▪ Faith without works is dead.

Included, is, when a Verb Consequent, or Attribute, is immediately added to a Noun Antecedent or Subject, As for Peter runneth, understand, Peter is running.

Thus have I shewn the constitution of a Proposition.

Now followeth the Division, taken partly from the Material, partly from the Formal.

Of the Material, a Proposition is either

- Finite.
- Infinite.

Finite, is, which consists of a finite Antecedent and Consequent.

Infinite, which consists of an Infinite Term: as, Faith justifieth, faith is not without works, these are Finite. But, Peter will do anything rather than deny christ: This is an Infinite affirmation. Man was able not to sin, and man was not able to sin; the first is an Infinite affirmative, the later a Negative.

Both of these is either, 1 Universal. 2 Particular, or 3 Singular.

1 Universal, whose Subject or antecedent is universal.

And is either

- Definite. a
- Indefinite. b

Definite, which hath the Sign of Universality expressly added to the Subject: As all, everyone, none, &c.

This Consignificative not all, is either

- Distributive. c
- Collective. d

Distributive, when it signifies that the Consequent may be distributed into those things which are contained in the Antecedent.

And it is again either distributive into Singulars of the Generals, or into Generals of the Singulars.

Distributive into Singulars of the Generals, is which signifieth that the Consequent is distributed into every singular thing contained in the antecedent.

And it is again either

- Restrained, or Limited.
- Absolute.

Absolute, when a thing to which the note of Universality is added, is absolutely distributed without restraint; As, every man is a living creature.

Limited, when there is a restraint included to be understood: As Psalm 8. Thou hast put all things under his feet. Yet he himself is restrained that put all things under, 1 Cor. 15. So, No man received his Testimony, meaning no Reprobate man, &c.

Distributive into Generals of the Singulars, is when the Consequent is distributed not into every singular thing, but into certain Orders and Estates of the Singulars; as, every beast was in Noah's Ark, that is, not every Singular or Particular beast; But some singulars of all sorts of Beasts. Christ cured every disease, that is, every kind of disease; God would all men to be saved, that is, all sorts of men.

Collective, is when the antecedent is so taken under a numbering Collection, that the Consequent cannot be distributed into the Inferiors▪ As, all the Apostles were twelve, all the Evangelists were four, all the Commandments were ten; of this we cannot gather, Peter is an Apostle, therefore he is twelve.

The Canons of an Universal Sign are these.

A Note or Sign of Universality is not added to the Consequent: As we cannot say, every man is every living Creature; But here it must be excepted, if the Consequent be a Verb Adjective; for we may say God preserveth all men, Christ redeemed all the Elect, &c.

2 Adverbs that have the place of a Noun, make also universal propositions: as, Never do the Godly want affliction: No where are the Saints free from troubles?

2 Every Note Collective, as also Distributive into Generals of the Singulars, Imperfectly, and Secondly, do make an Universal Proposition.

An Indefinite Universal, is which hath an Universal Subject (or Antecedent) without Note.

The Canons hereof are two.

1. The chief force and use of Indefinites is in Propositions of the Idea: That is, in such, as where the Universal Subject is taken absolutely: As, The Lord's Supper is a Sacrament, Man is the Noblest Creature, The soul of man is immortal, &c.

2. There is also an use of Indefinites; to signify that the Consequent is in the antecedent, for the most part, though not always 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 As, The Cretans be liars, Mothers are too much Cockerers of their children, &c,

2. A Particular is, which to a particular antecedent adds a particular Note: as, Some men fear God, Few are Elected, not many are Called, &c.

3. A Singular is, which hath an Antecedent singular or undivided: as, John the Baptist is not the Christ; This man is a true Christian, &c.

The Canons hereof are two.

1 When a Note of Universality is added to a singular Antecedent, it means nothing but a Collection of singulars: as all Pharaoh's were Tyrants. All Herod's were cruel.

2. To the Antecedent of a singular Proposition, may not be added a denial Infinite.

From the Formal, a Proposition is divided into

- Affirming.
- Denying.

Affirmative is when the Consequent is joined with the antecedent.

The Affirmation is before, and more worthy than the Negation.

Denying or Negative, is which divideth the Consequent from the Antecedent, As, Good works do not justify: A man is not a stone.

The Canons are two.

1 That a Proposition may be a Negative, it is necessary that the Particle of denying be either set before the whole Proposition: as, No Elect are damned; or be immediately added to the Coupler, and Verb adjective that hath the force of the Coupler, or Band; as, Marriage is not a Sacrament; Works justify not.

2 Every true Negation hangs on a true Affirmation: For it could not rightly be said, Works justify not, unless it were true, that Faith only justifieth.

Both of these (Affirmative and Negative) is either

- Pure.
- Modal.

Pure, is, wherein the Consequent is purely disposed with the antecedent, without the express manner of disposition.

Modal, is, which is affected with a certain mood or manner of disposition.

And it is either

- Primary. a
- Secondary. b

Primary, is, which is affected with some Primary manner, as be those four.

- 1 Necessary, or needs.
- 2 Impossible.
- 3 Possible.
- 4 Contingent, or perhaps.

1 As, It is necessary that a Creature be finite. The Elect must needs be saved. 2 It is impossible that God should be created. 3 It is possible for him that fighteth to win the victory. 4 It is contingent for a man to sit, for he may also not sit.

The Canons of those Modal propositions are five.

1 There is more use of those Modals among the Greeks than the Latins.

2 No other Modes (or manners) are here looked on than Formal, that is such as affect the disposition of the Consequent with the Antecedent.

3 A Modal Proposition hath the manner for the Consequent indirect, and by Analogy so called: in every Modal Proposition, there are two things, the Saying, and the manner; as in this, It is impossible that the Elect should be deceived. That the Elect should be deceived, is a saying; impossible is the manner; the saying is put instead of the Antecedent, the manner instead of the consequent, but this must narrowly be taken.

4 The quantity of a Modal proposition is esteemed partly by the saying, partly by the manner; but chiefly and properly by the saying, as that which hath the quantity of multitude. Secondarily by the manner, as that which hath the quantity of time; Necessary hath the force of an Adverb universally affirming; as, It is necessary for a man to be reasonable, that is, a man is always reasonable; Impossible, hath the force of an universal Negative, as, It is impossible for a man to be a Stone, that is, a man is never a stone: Possible and contingent, have the force of particulars, as sometimes, for the most part, &c.

5 The quality or affirmation and Negation of a modal proposition is esteemed by the manner: as, It is impossible for the Elect to perish. This is a Negative: It is necessary that Christ should be true man, this is affirmative by reason of these Manners, Necessary and Impossible.

Secondary Modals which have a secondary manner, are either

- 1 Exclusive.
- 2 Exceptive.
- 3 Restrictive.

Exclusive, which hath an exclusive significative word, as only, alone, &c.

And it is Exclusive either of the

- Antecedent or Subject.

- Consequent.

Exclusive of the antecedent, is, which with an exclusive word set before it, excludes or shuts out other antecedents from participation of the same consequent: as, Only faith justifieth; Only God is uncreated.

The Exclusive of the antecedent, excludes not concomitants, or them that accompany the same: as only the Father is true God, excludes not the concomitant, the Son and the holy Ghost, but false gods, idols, &c.

Exclusive of the consequent, is, which by a sign of Exclusion put between antecedent and consequent, excludes other consequents from the same antecedent, as, Reprobates do evil only; Carthusians do only eat fish.

2 Exceptive, is, which consists of an excepting particle, as Except, Besides, Unless, &c.

The Canons be four.

1 In an Exceptive proposition, always the antecedent is excepted from participation of the consequent, and not contrary as was in the Exclusive.

2 The antecedent excepted must be contained under the Excepter: For it is foolish to say, Every man, except a beast, is able to laugh, because a beast is not contained under a man.

3 The antecedent from which the exception is made, must be an Universal, that it may be distributed: As it is foolish to say, Some man except Judas is elected.

4 That which is excepted should be straiter than that from which it is excepted; For it is vain to say, A man, except a man, runneth.

3 Restrictive is, which consists of restraint or limitation; as far forth as, in respect of, according to, &c.

Limitation is the determination of that according to which the Consequent agreeth with the Antecedent, or not agreeth.

And is

- General.
- Special.

General, which is conceived with general terms.

Special, which is conceived with special Terms, that is, which pertain to anything in special, and properly.

And it is either of

- One Noun.

- Diverse.

Of one Noun, is, which limits the thing by itself, that the Consequent may be understood to agree essentially: As, A man, as he is a man, hath reason.

Of a diverse Noun, which limits the Antecedent by something diverse from the Antecedent.

And it is either

- Essential. a
- Accidental. b

Essential, which is done by an essential term.

And is either

- General.
- Partial.

General, when it is limited by his Genus: as, a man, as he is a body, is local; as he is a living thing, he is nourished; as he is Animal, he hath sense, &c.

Partial, when a thing is limited by some part Essential, or Integral: As, A man touching his soul is Immortal: Sacraments touching their matter are visible, touching their form are invisible; Christ as man died, &c.

Accidental is which limits a thing Accidentally.

And is

- Inward.
- Outward.

Inward, when a thing is limited by some Inward accident either absolute or Relative: as, Fire, as it is hot, burneth; not as it is dry: God willeth hardening of sinners; not as it is sin, but as it is a punishment.

Outward, when a thing is limited by some outward comparison and respect; as when a mean man is said to be great in respect of a dwarf, Isaac was a Son in respect of Abraham, and a Father in respect of Jacob; Faith justifieth as it hath reference to Christ.

The Canons of limitation are six.

1. A Consequent or Attribute contradictory, can with no Limitation, be made to agree with the antecedent 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; False therefore are the Popish Limitations to prove that Accidents may be without the Subject in their Transubstantiated Sacrament; For it implieth a contradiction.

2. Every lawful Limitation should have possibility to be referred to some form of Limitation, delivered by the Art of Logic,
3. A Limitation should be made by that which agreeably is in the antecedent, or Consequent, whether it be in it absolutely, or Relatively.
4. The manner Limiting in part should be distinct in deed and words, from the Limited in the antecedent and Consequent.
5. Limitation should be perspicuous, casie to be explained.
6. Limitation in a diverse respect, pertaineth to the antecedent and Consequent of the proposition Limited.

The Affection of propositions either

- Consentany. a
- Dissentany. b

Consentany, whereby propositions agree together,

And is

- Equal valor 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a
- Conversion, b

The Canons of equal valor are either

- General.
- Special.

General, which pertain as well to the Pure as to the Modal, though chiefly to the Pure.

And they be ten.

1. Equal Valor of Propositions which is taken from the Signs of quantity, is shown by the signification of the Signs and their mutual correspondence: These therefore are equivalent, Not every man is elected, and some man is not elected; there is no man that is not a sinuer, and every man is a sinner. Not any man is good, and, No man is good, &c.
2. Diversity of words takes not away the equal value of sense, when the things signified by the words in the sense and meaning of the Speaker are the same: These therefore are equipollent, Bread is the body of Christ, and bread is the Communion of Christ's body; For its Christ's intendment, as Paul expounds him.
3. Equivalentents should have Antecedent and consequent the same indeed: The transplating of antecedents and Consequents changeth the sense of propositions; For these are not equivalent, to say, Bread is Christ's body, and in bread is Christ's body, or Christ's body is in the bread; nor these, Bread is Christ's body, and, let Bread be Christ's body, &c.

4. Of Equivalents, one may be more forcible and significant than another; and yet the agreement of sense remain safe: As these agree in sense, Bread is Christ's body, and read is an holy sign of Christ's body; Though the first hath a more forcible signification.

5. A Proposition of this sign [all] having limitation, is of equal value with the particular, when the limitation is taken away: as, All men that believe shall be saved, and, only some men shall be saved.

6 A proposition of the sign All, distributing into general of the singulars, is of equal value also with a particular; as, God would all men to be saved; and, God would some of every sort of men to be saved.

7 A proposition of the sign All collective, is equal to an indefinite; as, All the outward senses are five; and there are five outward senses. Note also, that in the Hebrew, not all, is equivalent to none, as Psal. 143. Not all living shall be justified, i. e. no living.

8 Indefinites sometime are equivalent to universals, sometime to particulars; to those in a matter necessary, to these in a contingent.

9 The affirming of a privation, and denial of an habit, are equivalent in an hable subject; as, He is not just, therefore he is unjust; this is true in a man, not in an infant, nor in a stone.

10 He that puts one equivalent, puts also the other; and contrary, He that takes away one, takes away the other: so when Christ saith, Few are chosen, he saith in effect, All are not chosen.

The special Canons which pertain to the Modals only are five.

1 Propositions of necessary and impossible are equivalent when they have the manner of the same spoken of a diverse quality, as, It is necessary that offenses arise; and, it is impossible that offenses should not arise.

2 Propositions of necessary and contingent are equivalent when they have a diverse quality in a word & in manner; It is necessary for the Elect to abide in God's grace; It is not contingent for the Elect to abide in God's grace.

3 Propositions of impossible and possible are equivalent when they have the saying of the same, and the manner of a diverse quality; It is impossible for the Elect to perish; It is not possible for the Elect to perish.

4 Propositions of possible and contingent, in the Greek, phrase are often equivalent, when the manners considered in themselves import a diverse signification.

5 In Modals secondarily so called, an exclusive in a necessary matter is equivalent to an universal; as, The elect only are saved, and all the elect are saved.

Conversion, is the agreement of two propositions by transposing of the parts; and it is either 1 simple, or 2 by accident, or 3 by counterplacing. 1 Simple, is the mutual change of the Antecedent and consequent, the quantity and quality abiding the same; first, and properly about an universal denier, and particular affirmer: 2 And by reason of the mater, about an universal affirm, necessary and reciprocal; as, No unbeliever eateth Christ's flesh; therefore none that eateth Christ's flesh is an unbeliever.

2 By accident is the mutual change of antecedent and consequent, the quality abiding, but the quantity being changed, viz. the universal into a particular affirmant; as, Every man is a living creature; therefore, some living creature is a man.

3 By counterplacing is the mutual transplacing of the consequent and antecedent, the quantity abiding, but the quality changed, viz. about an universal affirmant; as▪ All that are ordained to life do believe; therefore they that believe not, are not ordained to life, Acts 13.

The Canons of conversion are nine, of which the first four are general, the other pertain to the Modais.

1 That which is to be converted, must have a proper connection, understood without any ambiguity; these therefore are not to be turned; Christ is a vine; Bread is Christ's body, &c.

3 The whole antecedent of that which is converted, must be made the consequent of the converter, not maimed or cut off.

4 In converting, the obique Cases must be made light, as not because, Some tree is in the Garden, therefore some Garden is in the Tree; but thus; therefore something that is in the Garden is a Tree.

5 Conversion of Modals is made by change of those extremes which are in the saying, the manner always abiding fast, and the quality of the saying▪ kept.

6 There is no other conversion in Modals then simple and by accident.

7 Propositions of the manner necessary are converted so as the pure simply, when they are universal negatives, or particular affirmatives; and by accident▪ when they are universal affirmants, though so also they be simply converted; as, It is necessary that no man be a stone, is converted simply, therefore it is necessary that no stone be a man.

8 Propositions of possible are converted as the former of necessary.

9 Propositions of contingent, if they be affirmative, are converted as the former, but negatives not so; for particulars are converted simply, but universals no way.

Thus much of the consentany affections.

Dissentany is the opposition of Propofitions.

Opposition, is the fight of two Propositions according to the disposition, in affirming and denying.

The Canons hereof be four.

1 Opposition must have the same antecedent and consequent understood without ambiguity; as, It is not good for man to be alone; it is good for man to be alone; here is no opposition; for the one is meant simply, the other respectively.

2 Opposition, must be 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 in the same respect, i. e. the consequent must be disposed with the antecedent according to the same part and nature of the antecedent, as, Christ was before Abraham; Christ was not before Abraham: the first is Time, meant as he is God: the other, as he is man; so here is no opposition.

3 Opposition must be 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 unto the same: as the Sun is darkened, the Sun is not darkened; by limitation both those are true, and not opposite; for in respect of our sight the Sun is darkened, but in itself the Sun is not darkened.

4 Opposition must be in respect of the same time; otherwise both may be true; as, Paul was at Rome, Paul was not at Rome, viz. at the same time.

Opposition is either

- Contradictory. a
- Contrary. b

Contradictory 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, which is of perpetual dis-junction; and it is principal or less principal.

Principal, is the fight of Propositions both in quality and quantity, as is between an universal affirmant, and a particular negant; also between a particular affirmant, and universal negant; as, All men are good, Some men are not good, &c.

Less principal, is between two singulars, two indefinites, and two immediate universals, fighting in quality only; as Peter was at Rome: Peter was not at Rome. A man is good; A man is not good, &c.

The Canons of contradiction are three.

1 Contradiction, is of all oppositions the first, the most perfect, and most fighting, and therefore the measure of them.

2 Contradiction, is of eternal dis-junction, so as it is impossible for both parts to be together true or false.

3 Contradiction wanteth all mean.

Contrariety is opposition between two universals, viz. them whose antecedent or subject is manifest without the consequence; as, Every man is wise; no man is wise.

2 Two contraries can never be together true, though they may be together false.

The opposition of Modals hath three Canons.

1 Contradictory Modals are, which have the same manner of diverse qualities, but the saying of the same quality; as, It is not possible for the elect to be deceived, It is possible for the elect to be deceived.

2 Contrarie Medals are, two universals having the same universal manner affirmant; but the saying in one denying, in another affirming; as, It is possible to be; It is possible not to be.

3 In Exclusives (which are Modals secondary) the particular negative added to the only manner exclusive, maketh the opposition: as, Only the elect are reconciled to God; not only the elect are reconciled, &c.

Hitherto of a simple proposition: now followeth the compound, which consisteth of a sense or sentence compounded.

And it is either

- 1 Expressed. m
- 2 Implied. n

1 Expressed, which hath the express note of composition.

And it is either by conjunction, or particular relatives.

Compounded by Conjunction, is, whose parts are tied by a Grammatical Conjunction.

And it is either

- Connexive.
- Separative.

Connexive, whose parts are tied by a connection, and is

- Copulative.
- Conditional.

Copulative, whose conjunction is copulative; as, Love God and thy brother.

The Canons are four.

1 A Copulative is affirmed and denied by reason of the conjunction copulative, whereto if a negation be added, it always maketh a negative; We are justified by faith, and not by works, &c. this is affirmative. Not by faith and works are we justified; this is negative.

2 The whole copulative proposition is esteemed by reason of the conjunction copulative.

3 To the truth of a copulative, there is required the truth of either part; and if one part be false, the proposition wholly is false.

4 Copulation noting the time, is to be taken in respect of one and the same time; otherwise the copulation will be false; as, Paul was at Rome, and saw Jerusalem. This is a deceitful copulation, for both were not at one time; but at several times both were true.

Conditional, is, whose conjunction is conditional, as, If thou sin, thou shalt die.

The Canons are six.

1 A conditional hath two parts, whereof the first is called the antecedent, which contains the condition; the latter the consequent.

2 A conditional putteth nothing in esse, and only suspendeth the sentence, or sense of the mind, unless the manner and condition be put, which the antecedent designeth.

3 All the truth and force of it, is in the union and coherence of the parts, whereby the consequent rightly followeth from the antecedent.

4 The measure of it is some simple composition, to which it must be resolved, that the force of it may appear, and the reason of the connection be manifest.

5 The affirmation hangeth on the affirmation of the condition; therefore it is then Negative, when the denial is put before the conjunction If, not when it is put after: So, If the Lord keep not the city, the Keepers watch in vain: this is affirmative, not negative.

6 A conditional, having an impossible condition annexed, is equivalent to a simple denial: as, If the sands can be numbered, Abraham's seed shall be numbered, meaning they shall not be numbered.

Separative, which hath a separative conjunction: and is either

- Disjoyned. a
- Discrete. b

Disjoyned, whose conjunction is disjunctive; as, either we are justified by faith, or by works.

The Canons hereof be five.

1 The disjoyned parts of a proposition must be subordinate; it is therefore vain to say, Either it is a living creature, or a man.

2 The affirmation or negation is esteemed by the disjunctive conjunction only, whereto there must needs be added a negation, if the sentence must be negative.

3 For the truth of the disjunctive, it is enough if one part be true.

4 That therefore is false which hath no part true, and wherein taking away one, another member can be given which is true: as, Either the Pope is head of the Church, or it hath no head; both are false; and a third is true, Christ is the head, Colos. 1.

5 When the disjunctive opposition is immediate, and either member is removed, it makes the rest reivalent exclusively; as, Either we are justified by faith, or by works; but works are removed, Rom. 3. Therefore this exclusive sentence is true, Only by faith are we justified.

A discrete sentence, is, which hath a discrete conjunction; as, although, yet, notwithstanding, &c.

The Canons are two.

1 To the truth of a discretive is required the truth of both parts.

2 False therefore is the discretive when any one part is false; as, Christ's human nature is not eternal, yet it is everywhere present.

Compounded of particular relatives, is, which hath notes of comparison according to quality, quantity, time and place: as, Such as the Shepherd is, such is the sheep. He is as honest as he is learned▪ Where the treasure is, there is the heart. Then men fast when the Bridegroom is gone, &c.

2 An implied compound sentence, is, which hath no express note of composition.

The Canons are two▪

1 The truth or falsehood of an implied sentence, wholly dependeth upon the manner of the consequence, or knitting of the antecedent or consequent; as, They that are guilty of Christ's body, they eat Christ, body; this is a false compound proposition; for there is no connection of parts.

2 As much as may be, this proposition is to be reduced to a mere simple.

Hitherto of a proposition common, called formal; now followeth a proposition in special, called material; which is determined to a certain condition of things antecedent and consequent.

It is divided partly by the words, partly by the things, and partly by both together.

First therefore every proposition is either

- Dark.
- Clear.

Dark, when the sense needeth Interpretation; Interpretation is the unfolding of the sense or sentence, and bringing of it to clearness.

The darkness of a sentence is cured by six Canons; According to which every lawful Interpretation is to be made.

1 A dark proposition must first of all be called back to a certain Method of some kind of discipline, and judged by the principles and analogy of the things delivered therein.

2 Interpretation is to be made according to the first intent and scope of the Speaker or Writer.

3 The order of the context is carefully to be weighed, and interpretation to be made by the knitting of the antecedents and consequents.

4 Like places are to be compared together, and by conference and agreement the sense to be set down.

5 Let the agreeing expositions of famous Interpreters be looked unto.

6 The dark places are to be expounded by the more clear, and not the dark by as dark.

A clear proposition, is, whose sense is manifest by its self, and needs no interpretation.

Again each of them is either

- True.
- False.

True, is, which agreeth to the composition and division of things without the mind, or which affirmeth or denieth as the thing is.

And it is either

- Connominative Synonimical.
- Denominative Paronimicall.

Synomina, be those that have a common name, and in regard thereof, one and the same essential definition.

Paronima, be those that be derived, and have their denomination from others.

Connominative, is, in which the consequent is spoken of the antecedent connominatively, Synonimice.

And it is either

- Notional,
- Or Real.

Notionall, in which the second Notion is avouched of the first; as Animal is the Genus, Man is the species, &c.

Real, is, in which the consequent Synonimicall Real is disposed with the Antecedent, As, A man is an animal, Faith justifieth.

And it is

- Ordinary.
- Or Extraordinary.

Ordinary, in which the consequent is ordinarily disposed with the antecedent: As, A man is an animal; Peter is a man; Whitenesse is a Colour.

Whatsoever is said of the consequent by a Synonymical attribution, the same may also be said of the antecedent.

Extraordinary, is, in which there is a disposition of the Consequent connominative, with an extraordinary antecedent, viz. the Person of the Mediator Christ; as, Christ is God, Christ is man.

Denominative (or paronimical) attribution, is, which consists of an attribute (or consequent) paronimicall, as when either difference, or part, or accident, or circumstance, &. is spoken of the Subject, or antecedent; as, A man is reasonable; a man is bodied, is headed, is booted, is Temporal, is Local, &c. So, Christ is Eternal, is the Mediator, King, Priest, Prophet; Christ hath redeemed us with his blood, &c.

Each attribution, as well connominative, as denominative,

Is either

- Proper.
- Improper.

Proper, is, whose disposition and words are proper.

And it is Necessary, or Contingent.

Necessary, in which the Consequent is necessarily disposed with the antecedent.

The degrees hereof are three

- 1 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . Universal.
- 2 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . Immediate or of itself.
- 3 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . Reciprocall.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; Or Universal, is, when the Consequent is attributed to an universal antecedent.

And it is either of the

- Subject or Antecedent.
- Adjacent.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , (or Universal) of the Subject, is, when the consequent agreeth to all contained under the subject, viz. Specials or Singulars: as, an animal hath sense, this is spoken of man and beast, as also of all singular men and beasts. Therefore it is an attribution universal, (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) by reason of the subject.

Universal (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) of the adjacent, is, when the consequent is attributed to the antecedent without any exception of time or place: as, Every man is reasonable; this is true in all time and places.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Or Immediate, is when the consequent is in the antecedent immediately.

And it is either of

- The First Manner.
- The Second Manner.

Of the first manner, is, when the consequent is of the Essence or definition of the antecedent: As, a man is a living creature, a man is reasonable, Melchizedek was a man, &c.

Of the second manner, when the antecedent is of the Essence or definition of the consequent; and this is either principal, or less principal.

Principal, when an accident perfectly proper is given to the subject: As, a man laugheth, weepeth, learneth, &c.

Less principal, when an accident imperfectly proper, is given to the subject; as a man is risible, and every risible thing is a man: This is the highest degree of necessity; noted therefore with two titles, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Universe, respecteth the consequent, and signifieth that it is wholly, and every whit drawn up of the antecedent, so as it is neither straighter, nor larger than it. It is not therefore 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 when I say, A man moveth. For moving is also without a man, and is not all contained in him; nor is it 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 when I say, A man is learned; for this consequent is more narrow than a man, and extends not so large; Seeing there are many men that are not learned.

The other term 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , 1 Respecteth the subject or antecedent, and saith that that is the only and sole thing, of which the consequent is strictly spoken, so as there is no other subject to whom it is rather than to this, as there is no subject wherein laughter rather and nearer is; than a man.

The Canons of necessary propositions are six.

1 A Necessary proposition, is not only affirmant but also negant: As, Christ's body is not everywhere; A man is not a stone. As in affirmatives it is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; so in Negatives it is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , in none at all.

2 Of necessary avouching, some is pure, some mixed of necessity, and contingencie: As, A man laugheth: this is mixed.

3 In pure Necessaries the couple or word Is, is freed from all difference of time or place, and from all existence.

4 A necessary consequent can in no respect, limitation, or Distinction be denied of the antecedent: as, A body is finite.

5 The latter degree of necessary propositions, is always more perfect than the former which it includeth: So a perfect 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 includeth a 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and a 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 includeth both a 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and a 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

6 Necessary attributions have the force of principles or beginnings; A Contingent proposition, is, wherein the consequent is contingently, or changeably disposed with the antecedent.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 A Contingent attribution hath such a consequent as may without contradiction be separated from the antecedent, when it is affirmative, or be given to it when it is a Negative.

2 Contingent propositions chiefly consist of common accidents, and integral parts less principal, and of adherents: As, A man is white, is bearded, booted, &c.

3 Contingent propositions are said to be probable, when the truth of them is neither by sense nor by other reason manifest unto us; For that is probable, which when it can neither certainly be affirmed, nor certainly be denied, inclineth the assent unto the one part.

An improper attribution, is, in which the consequent is improperly disposed with the antecedent.

And it is either by reason of

- The Disposition▪ a
- The Words. b

By reason of the disposition, is, when proper words being retained, the consequent 〈...〉 for any inward or Essential •...lation or Union.

And it is either

- Common,

- Or Mystical.

Common, is, when an outward consequent is given to an antecedent for some vulgar and common Union or Relation: these Relations are of four sorts.

1 The Relation of the cause to the effect; As, The Sun is said to be hot, because it causeth heat; the Gospel is the power of God unto Salvation.

2 The Relation or Union of place, and cleaving to; as when Iron is said to burn for the fire united unto it.

3 The Relation or representation; as when the title of the Prince is given to his Ambassador.

4 The Union of consent and indissoluble society; as when the wife hath the titles and dignity of her husband, as to be called Princesse, Prophetess, Doctoresse, &c.

Mystical, is, in which the outward consequent is given to the antecedent for mystical or holy relation.

And it is either

- Typical,
- Or Sacramental.

Typical, when for the certainty of the representation, that is given to the Type which belongs to the Antitype. These attributions are simple or compound.

Simple, as when that which is due to Christ only, is given to his Type and Figure; as of David it is said, Psal. 16. Thou shalt not suffer thy holy One to see corruption; Of Solomon, I will establish his house forever, 2 Sam. 7. These are fulfilled in Christ alone.

Compound, when partly they agree to the type, partly to the antitype, as, thou shalt not break a bone of him, Exod. 12. Joh. 19.

Sacramental, is, in which for the Union Sacramental, and certainty of sealing up, the thing signed or propriety thereof is given to the holy sign: As, Circumcision is a Covenant, the Lamb is a Passover, Sacrifices are expiations of sins, Bread is Christ's body, Baptism is the laver of Regeneration, Bread is the Communion of Christ's body, &c.

Improper by reason of the words, is, in which a word is transferred from the Native signification to some other: As when we say, The Woods do sing, The Seas clap their hands, The Fields laugh, and other figurative speeches.

A false attribution, is, which answereth not to the composition and division of things out of the mind; and it is either wholly false, or false in part; also either necessarily, or contingently false.

And thus much of the second part of Logic.

A Summary View of the Second Part of Logic.

The 2d. part of Logic is about a proposition, which is considered either

- Commonly, and so is
 - Simple, in which the
 - Constitution of
 - Parts
 - Signed
 - Antecedent, or subject.
 - Consequent, or attribute.
 - Signing Significant
 - Noun.
 - Verb.
 - Consignificative.
 - Disposition of parts which is either,
 - Sign
 - Signing
 - Express.
 - Implied.
 - Division from the
 - Material
 - Finite both either
 - Infinit both either
 - Universal
 - Secondary
 - Definite.
 - Indefinite
 - Formal
 - Affirming Each either

- Denying Each either
 - Pure
 - Modal
 - Primary
 - Secondary
 - Exclusive
 - Exceptive
 - Restrictive.
- Affection
 - Consentany
 - Equivalence
 - Conversion
 - Dissentany, opposition, either
 - Contradictory.
 - Contrary.
- Specially & conditionally, and is
 - Compounded
 - Expressed by.
 - Employed
 - Conjunction
 - Connexive
 - Copulative.
 - Conditional.
 - Separative
 - Disjoyned.
 - Discrete.
 - Relative particles.
 - Dark Both is either

- Clear Both is either
 - True
 - Connominative
 - Notionall.
 - Real
 - Ordinary.
 - Extraordinary.
 - False
 - Denominative, And both of them either
 - Proper
 - Necessary.
 - Contingent.
 - Improper by the
 - Disposition.
 - Common.
 - Mystical.
 - Typical.
 - Sarcamental
 - Words.

THE THIRD BOOK, Handling the Third Part OF LOGICK; Which is the Director of DISCOURSE.

Of a Syllogism.

THE third part of Logic is busied in directing the Discourse.

Discourse is an act of the mind of man, moving itself forward from a known thing to an unknown, by a fit collation of things former and latter.

And it is either

- Inferring.
- Ordering.

Inferring Discourse is an action of man's mind by certain premised propositions proving another proposition, or improving it, by help of the Precepts of a Syllogism.

A Syllogism is considered, either

- Commonly. a
- Specially, in certain conditions of matter. b

A Syllogism commonly considered, is either perfectly so called, or imperfectly.

Perfectly called, is, the disposition of three Propositions, wherein from the two former and better known, a third more unknown or doubtful is fitly inferred, and gathered.

In this are to be considered the - Constitution.

- Division.

A Syllogism is constituted of the

- Material. m
- Formal. n

The Material, is either 1. Simple, or 2. Compound.

1. Simple are the Terms into which at last the Syllogism is resolved.

The Term is either the utmost or the mean.

The utmost or extreme, is that which is put both in the Conclusion and in the Premises. And it is greater, or lesser.

The greater or Major, is the Consequent of the Conclusion, always to be put in the first Proposition.

The lesser or Minor, is the Antecedent or Subject of the Conclusion, always to be put in the second Proposition.

The Mean, is, by means whereof the extremes are disposed together.

The compound matter of a Syllogism, is a Proposition.

A Proposition, is either inferring or inferred.

Inferring, is, which inferreth the Conclusion: called therefore Premises: and it is either the major or minor.

The Major, or greater, is, in which the greater extreme is disposed with the Mean.

The Minor, or lesser, is, in which the less extreme is disposed with the Mean.

The Inferred, is that which is gathered from the Premises.

The Formal of a Syllogism, is the fit disposition of the Mean with the extremes.

The disposition of the Mean ariseth from the finding of it out.

The finding out of the Mean, consists in two things. 1. The foreknowledge of the Conclusion.
2. The Collation of the extremes one with another.

1. The foreknowledge of the Conclusion, is either

- Simple. a
- Compound. b

Simple, is, when the nature and propriety is foreknown of both the extremes, as well the Antecedent as the Consequent.

Of this Foreknowledge there are three Canons.

1. Let the Word or Voice of both extremes be diligently examined, what it is, and of what sort; and if it be doubtful, let it be carefully distinguished, and that distinction be presupposed in place of a Principle, as well for confirmation as refutation.
2. Let it be observed, whether the extremes of the conclusion be universal or singular.
3. Let the causes, proprieties, and whole definition of both extremes be set down, either implicitly or expressly, as a certain and necessary Principle of the confirmation and refutation to come.

The Compound foreknowledge of the conclusion, is, when the nature, quality, and quantity thereof is considered.

The Canons hereof are seven:

1. Let the conclusion or state of the controversy be rightly informed.
 2. Let a compound or Hypothetical, never be put in the place of a conclusion, but only a Simple or Categorical.
 3. That conclusion is more easily proved, which may be concluded in many figures and moods; And that which can be but in few, is harder to be proved.
 4. An universal affirmative is hardly proved, not easily refuted.
 5. An universal negative is easily proved, hardly refuted.
 6. A particular affirmant is more easily proved, more hardly refuted.
 7. A particular negant is easy to prove, most hard to refute.
2. Now followeth the taking of the mean by Collation of the extremes.

The mean or medium, is either Perfectly so called or Imperfectly.

Perfectly called, is that simple Term which being taken from the nature of both extremes, either knitteth or disjoyneth them one with another.

Hereof, are three Canons.

1. Every mean is taken from the Terms of both extremes in the conclusion, as well the natural, as the repugnant Terms; therefore he that would find a medium, must mind the general, the special, the causes, the accidents, the parts, the cognata, the opposites of both Terms in the conclusion.
2. What manner of mean is required to make a Syllogism of this or that quantity, the Vowel Letters in the Modes of every Figure, do evidently show.
3. The mean, though it may be taken from the part of the antecedent as well as of the consequent, yet that is counted more noble which is drawn from the nature of the consequent; As for example, a mean is to be found to prove this conclusion, Every man is an Animal; mind the nature of this consequent Animal, and from it take the property of it, which is sense; this agreeth with both Terms, and is an excellent mean, or Argument to prove the conclusion, thus, Every thing that hath sense is an Animal. Every man hath sense; therefore every man is an Animal.
4. One and the same mean for a diverse respect of the Antecedent or consequent, may be referred to diverse places of Inventiom; as for example, A man hath sense, because he is an Animal: This Argument in respect of the Antecedent man, is from the place of the genus; but in respect of the consequent, it is from the place of the subject; for an Animal is the proper subject of sense.
5. Store of Means or Arguments is gotten chiefly two ways: 1. By deducing both extremes one after another through the places of invention, as well contingent as necessary. 2. By discerning the principal means from the less principal; for example, take the consequent of thy opposed conclusion particularly, and lead it through the contingent places; argue and reason from the Notation of it, the likes, equales, conjugates, and the other contingent titles of places: which are at least 16. now thou hast so many Means. Then come to the others storehouse of necessary places; and reason from the Genus, the difference, the subject and accident, the proper, the causes, and the other titles of necessary places, which are at least 17. Then do the like about the Antecedent of the proposed conclusion; and thus mayest thou have for one Conclusion fifty Means or Arguments: but not the store of Arguments is to be respected so much as the weight or force of them; three or four sound Arguments are enough to prove any common Conclusion.

The Mean imperfectly so called, is when a Testimony, or speech of any Author is taken to prove the conclusion. This mean is called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 inartificial, because testimonies want artificial force to prove anything of themselves. It is called also the Place from authority, that is, the dignity of the speaket.

And thus much of the constitution of a Syllogism; Now followeth the division of it.

Of the three Figures of Syllogisms,

A Syllogism is divided by three Figures.

A Figure is the conformation of a Syllogism, according to the certain situation of the Mean term, and certain manners (or modes) of quantity and quality; Figura est 〈in non-Latin alphabet〉 . Alexand.

A mode or manner, is a lawful constitution of Propositions in every figure, according to the quality and quantity.

And it is either

- Principal.
- Less Principal.

Principal, is, when the Propositions are general, that is, joined with universals, or indefinite, or particular.

Less Principal, is, when the premises are singular.

The Figures of Syllogisms are three:

The first Figure, is, in which the mean or middle Term is the Antecedent (subject or foregoer) in the major or first proposition: and the consequent (Attribute or follower) in the minor or second Proposition.

The Modes of this Figure are four, called Barbara▪ Celarent, Darii, Ferio; these are but words of Art, and serve for no other meaning then that the vowel Letters in them denote the quality and quantity of the Propositions; a noteth an universal affirmative; e an universal negative. i Noteth a particular affirmative, and o noteth a particular negative.

As may be seen in the examples following.

Barbara.

- Every sinner is subject to God's wrath.
- Every man is a sinner: therefore,
- Every man is subject to God's wrath.

Celarent.

- No sinner deserveth God's favor.
- Every man is a sinner: therefore,

- No man deserveth God's favor.

Darii.

- All sin is to be shunned.
- Some pleasure is sin: therefore,
- Some pleasure is to be shunned.

Ferio.

- No sin giveth a man true comfort:
- Some pleasure is sin: therefore,
- Some pleasure giveth a man no true comfort.

A Singular Syllogism.

- The promised Messias ought to die for the sins of the world.
- Jesus Christ is the promised Messiah: Therefore,
- He ought to die for the sins of the world.

The second Figure, is, in which the Mean or middle term is in both the Premises put in the place of the Consequent.

The Modes of this Figure are also four, Called, Cesare, Camestres, Festino, Baroco.

Cesare.

- No true Christian loveth this worlds good:
- Every covetous man loveth this worlds good: therefore,
- No covetous man is a true Christian.

Camestres.

- All righteousness pleaseth God.
- No faith without works pleaseth God: therefore,
- No faith without works is righteousness.

Festino.

- No true Worship displeaseth God:
- Some prayer displeaseth God: therefore,

- Some prayer is not true worship.

Baroco.

- All virtue deserveth praise:
- Some love deserveth not praise: therefore,
- Some love is not virtue.

Singular Syllogisms.

- Jupiter Belus was an Assyrian.
- Jupiter of the Poets was not an Assyrian: therefore,
- Jupiter of the Poets, is not Jupiter Belus.
- Jude Iscariot was a Traitor.
- Jude that wrote the Epistle, was not a Ttaylor: therefore,
- Jude that wrote the Epistle, was not Jude Iscariot.

The third Figure is, in which the Mean or Medium is put in the place of the Antecedent in both premises.

The Modes of this Figure are six.

Called, Darapti, Felapton, Disamis, Datisi, Bocardo, Ferison.

Darapti.

- Every godly man is happy.
- Every godly man is hated of the world; therefore,
- Some that is hated of the world is happy.

Felapton.

- No will worship pleaseth God.
- All will-worship is the invention of man: therefore,
- Some invention of man pleaseth not God.

Disamis.

- Some man shall be saved,
- Every man is a sinner: therefore,

- Some sinner shall be saved.

Datisi.

- Every holy man is loved of God.
- Some holy man is afflicted of God: therefore,
- Some that is afflicted of God, is loved of God.

Bocardo.

- Some in the visible Church shall not be saved.
- All in the visible Church profess Christ▪ therefore,
- Some that profess Christ shall not be saved.

Ferison.

- None whom God loveth are wretched.
- Some whom God loveth are poor: therefore,
- Some poor men are not wretched.

Singular Syllogisms:

- Judas was not saved.
- Judas was an Apostle: therefore,
- Some Apostle was not saved.
- Abraham entered into the Kingdom of Heaven.
- Abraham was rich: therefore,
- Some rich man entereth into the Kingdom of Heaven.

And thus much of the Species or Figures of a perfect Syllogism.

Now followeth the proprieties.

Of the Proprieties of a Syllogism.

The Proprieties of a Syllogism are either

- General.
- Special.

General, are which agree to all the Figures together.

And they are comprehended in these Canons.

1. The disposition of a Syllogism is called by the principles set in the mind of man, of which the first is that which is called Spoken of All, and of None; to wit, when anything is said or denied of the Universal, the same is also said or denied of the particulars contained under it.

The other Principle is of proportion.

Whatsoever do agree in one third Term, do agree between themselves; and they that disagree in one third, disagree between themselves.

2. In a Syllogism three Terms are only disposed, not more, nor fewer: The fourth Term must needs trouble the frame: For the mean is referred unto two: And four Terms may either be expressed, or implied in a doubtful word; For every doubtful word, is a double word. Neither can there be less than three Terms; For two extremes cannot be disposed and knit without a third mean; Not but that one Term repeated more effectually may stand for two Terms; as in this A man in extreme poverty is yet a man.

3. The mean (or middle Term) may not come into the conclusion.

4. If Abstract Terms be confounded with Concrete: and Oblique cases, with Right; so as the Principle of the spoken Of all, Of none, be violated, or that there be four Terms, the Syllogism must needs be naught.

5. Let there be a right placing of consignificative, or exceptive, and restrictive words, lest that which pertains to the conclusion be plucked from it, or lest the particular restrictive be twice repeated in the premises; For if that be, it is mere trifling; As in this example, Good, as it is good, is lovely; Justice is good, as it is good, Ergo, &c.

6. A Syllogism consisting of mere particulars is naught. One Term must be universal, else 'tis against both those Syllogistical principles noted before in the first Canon of All, and of None, and agreeing in one third; Moreover in pure particulars there be four Terms; For the Major speaks of one subject, and the Minor of another; As Some man is rich, some man is learned, Therefore learned men are rich.

7. A Syllogism of mere Negatives is naught: For it is against the second Syllogistical principle, which will have the middle Term at least attributed to the one extreme. Example, No Infidel pleaseth God; No Elect is an Infidel; Therefore, No Elect pleaseth God.

8. Let the Premises in a Syllogism have the same kind of Attribution, or Predication; that is, the major must not be proper, and the minor improper, or otherwise. As, Bread is eaten with the mouth; Bread is Christ's body; Therefore, Christ's body is eaten with the mouth: Here that which is attributed or spoken of the Bread, in the first proposition, is proper; in the 2d. figurative: the conclusion therefore is false.

9. The major and minor Term, must be brought into the conclusion, as they were disposed in the Premises, not changed or maimed; Therefore it is not right to say; All sinners repentant find mercy; Some men find not mercy; Therefore, some men are not finners: Here the conclusion is maimed, and is not as in the first proposition.

10. There must be no more in the conclusion then was in the premises.

11. The conclusion must imitate the more unworthy and weaker part that is premised: The worthiness is esteemed by the quality, and quantity; so that an Affirmative is always more worthy then a Negative, and an Universal then a Particular. It is therefore ill to reason thus; Some faithful are saved; Every faithful man is called; Therefore, every man that is called is saved. Here, of a particular Major is inferred a general conclusion; And it followeth not the weaker, but the stronger.

12. In a Syllogism, sometime by reason of the form, a true conclusion is gathered from false premises: But it is impossible for a false Conclusion to be gathered from true premises: Truth cannot be gathered from falsehood▪ but by accident; as, Every man is a Living creature: Every man is a stone: therefore, Every man is a living creature: Here the conclusion is true, (by reason of the form) though both the premises be false.

13. Of one Syllogism rightly framed, many conclusions may be gathered. And this, four manner of ways.

1. By consequence; As, They that have communion with the Devil abide not in Christ, and consequently do not eat Christ's body.

2. By conversion of propositions; As, No elect abideth in sin all his life; Every believer is an elect; Therefore, none that abideth in sin all his life, is a Believer.

3. By inclusion of one proposition in another; As, All the Elect believe in Christ; Some men believe not in Christ; Therefore some men are not Elect; Therefore also it is false that all men are Elect; For in proving the truth of the one part of the contradictory, the falsehood of the other part is included and proved.

4. By descention, or undertaking a particular term under an Universal; As, All that conserveth society, is profitable; All virtue conserveth society; Therefore, all Virtue is profitable, Therefore every lawful contract (because it conserveth society) is profitable.

And thus much of the general properties, common to all the Figures. Now followeth the special.

Of these some pertain to the - Primary. Figure.

- Secondary, Figure.

The properties of the primary Figure, are five, contained in so many Canons

1. The disposition (or frame) of the first Figure, is most perfect: And this for three causes.

1. Because the frame of this Figure most agreeth to natural sense, and the Syllogistical principles that are in all men, and is of all the most evident.
2. Because the Mean of this Figure, is indeed the Mean or middle in place and situation; whereas in other figures, it is the Mean 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and by reason of illation.
3. Because in this, all kind of conclusion may be gathered; Affirmative, Negative, Universal, and Particulars, which is done in none of the other Figures.
2. In the first figure there is a proceeding from Universals to Particulars, or from the Genus to the Species.
3. The major of the first Figure must always be Universal.
4. The minor must always be Affirmative.
5. The Antecedent of the minor proposition in the first figure, must be included in the Antecedent of the Major, as the Special in his General. This Canon is most profitable to be noted: For the whole frame, and form of this first figure is overthrown, if in the Antecedents of the major, and minor be two disjoined things, and not subordinate one to another.

The properties of the secondary figures, are either common to both, as well the second as the third, or special to each one.

Common to both, is imperfection arising both from lesser evidence, and from placing of the mean with the extremes.

Imperfection requireth both

- Reduction, and
- Exposition.

Reduction, is the transforming of a Syllogism formed in the first or second Figure, into a Syllogism of the first Figure.

Reduction is either

- Direct, or
- Indirect.

1. Direct, is, which is done by the only transposing, or turning of the Propositions, the extremes of the conclusion remaining.

The Canons of this Reduction are eight.

1. Reduction of the second and third Figure unto the first, is not always necessary; therefore not always carefully to be essayed.

2. The Consonants in the beginning and the midst, do show the manner of Reduction.
3. The Consonants in the beginning are four; B C D F showing unto which Mode of the figure, every Mode of the second and third figure is to be reduced; Namely to that which beginneth with the same Consonant. As Cesare and Camestres are reduced to Celarent; Festino and Felapton unto Ferio; Disamis and Datisi unto Darii.
4. Also the four Consonants in the midst. C M P S, do show by what Instrument the reduction is to be made, whether by Conversion, Transposition, or deduction unto impossible.
5. C, therefore noteth indirect Reduction, or that which is done by the Impossible, and is only in those words, Baroco and Bocardo.
6. M, noteth that there must be a transposition made of the propositions, the Minor in the place of the Major, and the Major in place of the Minor.
7. P, noteth conversion of the proposition by accident: to wit of the minor, into which the syllable having P, falleth, if the syllable of the modes be rightly distributed into the propositions.
8. S, showeth that there must be a simple conversion made either of the Major, or the Minor, and the conclusion together: as this letter is hard, either in the first, or middle, or last syllable: For if it be heard in the first syllable, As Cesare, it noteth the simple conversion of the major; if in the midst, it notes the conversion of the minor: And if in the last, the conversion of the conclusion, as in Camestres it is twice heard, in the midst and the last, and therefore noteth the conversion to be made of the Minor and of the conclusion. As take the syllogism in Cesare.

Cessare.

- No true Christian loveth the World,
- Every covetous man loveth the World: therefore
- No covetous man is a true Christian.

First the letter C showeth it must be reduced to Celarent; S, in the first syllable shows the manner of reduction; to wit, by a simple conversion of the major, thus.

Celarent

- None that loveth the world is a true Christian.
- Every covetous man loveth the world: therefore,
- No covetous man is a true Christian.

Indirect Reduction, is, when we show the evidence of the Illation by absurdity of the contradiction to be admitted.

The Canons hereof are six.

1. Indirect Reduction hath place only in two Moods Baroco of the second, and Bocardo of the third Figure.
- 2 Indirect Reduction is made by concession, and by Assumption.
3. By concession, because the adversary granteth both premises, and yet denies the inference of the Conclusion.
4. The premises therefore, being granted, by supposition, the contradictory is to be taken of the conclusion, which is in the imperfect Syllogism, that is to be reduced.
5. The contradictory of the conclusion being taken, is put in the place of the Minor, if it be Baroco of the second Figure: and in place of the Major, if it be Bocardo of the third Figure: and so the Major in the second Figure, is always left in his place, as the Minor in the third.
6. Hence is made the conclusion in the first Figure, wherein contradiction is made to the proposition left of the imperfect Syllogism; and so the adversary is driven to an absurdity, that is, to the contradictory of that proposition, which before he had granted as true.

And thus much of showing the evidence by Reduction.

Exposition, is the declaration of a Syllogism formed with a middle Mean general Term in the third Figure, by a singular Mean contained under the general, as nearer to the sense; for example,

- None of the Elect sin unto death.
- Some of the elect sin grievously,
- Therefore, Some that sin grievously, sin not to death.

Exposition of this may be made by singulars known unto us, as David, Peter, &c. David sinned not unto death; David sinned grievously; therefore, some grievously sinning, sin not to death.

The Properties peculiar to the second Figure now follow, which are comprehended in three Canons.

1. The second Figure is (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) most sit to refute with; for it disjoyneth two diverse things, because they agree not in one third.
2. In the second Figure the Major must always be Universal, even as in the first Figure.
- 3 In the second Figure, may be no mere affirmants.

The Proprieties of the third Figure, are four, set down in four Canons.

1. The proceeding of the third Figure is, for the most part, from the straighter to the larger. Therefore Logicians say, the first figure hath process 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : the third, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

2. The Minor must always be affirmant.

3. The whole and entire consequent of the Minor must needs be inferred in the conclusion, and put in the place of the Antecedent; for if it be maimed, or in part, all is troubled, and there are four Terms. As, Whole Christ is everywhere; whole Christ consisteth of the Godhead and the Manhood; therefore the Manhood is everywhere. Yea, though the Matter be good, the Form may be evil; as, God is the God of the living; God is the God of Abraham: therefore, Abraham liveth. Here, in the Conclusion, the Consequent of the Minor is impaired; which whole is not Abraham, but the God of Abraham. The Argument then must not be in the third, but the first Figure; thus, They, of whom God is God, do live; but God yet, is the God of Abraham; therefore he liveth: the Major followeth, because to be God, is to exercise Divine properties in the Object; and in whom such things are done, he must needs exist.

4. The Conclusion in the third Figure, is never Universal. And hitherto, of a perfect Syllogism.

Animperfect Syllogism, is, which hath an imperfect disposition of Syllogistical Form.

And it is

- Direct. f
- Indirect. g

g Indirect, is which concludeth by indirect or absurd.

And it is

- Primary. a
- Secondary. b

Primary, is, when the adversary by the contradictory of the conclusion which he denieth, and by the complication of a proposition manifestly true and granted, is driven to an absurdity.

The Canons hereof are seven.

1. Let the contradictory be taken of the conclusion which the adversary denieth.

2. Let a contradiction be assumed manifestly true, and which the adversary cannot deny; and let that be placed instead of the Major.

3. Let the contradictory of the conclusion be put instead of the Minor: and thereupon with the Major manifestly true, let be inferrd an absurd conclusion.

4. From the absurd conclusion inferred, go back to the absurd proposition, or contradictory of the first conclusion.

5. The falsehood of the Minor being shown by the force of the contradictory principle, let it be shown that the first conclusion is true, as, that whereto the Minor is contradictorily opposed; for example, Arians deny this conclusion, The Holy Ghost is God. I take the contradictory, The Holy Ghost is not God, but a Creature: and thus I infer, The spirit of God is not God, but a Creature; therefore, the The spirit of God is without God. This Conclusion is absurd; for no spirit is without that whose spirit it is: therefore Paul saith plainly, The spirit of God is in God. Therefore either the Major or Minor is absurd; not the Major, for it is manifest, the creatures are without the Creator; therefore the Minor: And therefore the right conclusion is true, which is opposed to this Minor.

6 Therefore a Syllogism leading to absurdity, is faulty either when the Major is infirm, or the conclusion not absurd or opposed to a true conclusion.

7 A Syllogism leading to absurdity, much urgeth in disputing, and hath the chief use in showing the verity of principles, and specially of those conclusions which are nigh to principles, so as they cannot well be proved by demonstration.

Secondary, is, which by the Adversaries grant of concontradictories, inferreth the denial of the same by itself; as, No Natural body is infinite; somebody, viz. Christ's, by the Ubiquitaries opinion is infinite: therefore somebody, viz. Christ's, is not a body.

A direct, imperfect Syllogism, is, 1 Enthymema. 2 Consecution of sentences. 3 Induction. 4 Sorites

1 An Enthymema is a Syllogism wherein one of the premises is kept in.

The Canons are three.

1 In an Enthymema; the first proposition is called the antecedent, the other the consequent.

2 It may easily be made a Syllogism by adding the proposition that wanteth.

3 Which of the premises is wanting, may easily be judged by the conclusion; whereof, if the attribute (or latter part) appear not in the antecedent; the Major is wanting; if the subject (or first part) appear not, the Minor is wanting; as, a living creature moveth; therefore man moveth. Here wants the Minor; for this word man appeareth not in the antecedent. A man is a living creature; therefore he moveth; Here wants the Major; for the attribute in the conclusion, moveth, appeareth not in the antecedent.

Consecution of sentences, is, when without disposition of the Mean, one sentence followeth another.

And it is

- Consentanie. a

- Dissentanie. b

Consentanie, is, when the consecution proceedeth by consent of the sentences; Namely by conversion, inclusion, and other natural Relations of the Sentences.

The Canons hereof are nine.

1 The converting to the converted▪ in all kinds of conversion, followeth rightly: as, No Infidel eats Christ's body; therefore, None that eats Christ's body is an Infidel.

2 That inference which is made from a contrary sense is near kin to conversion by contrary placing: as, Virtue is to be praised, therefore, Vice is to be dispraised.

3 From the Superior or Universal unto the Inferior or Particular distributely there is a good consecution: as, All sinners repenting find mercy: Therefore all great sinners repenting do find mercy. But from one particular to another, it followeth not rightly; As to say: Some sin is not forgiven in the life to come, therefore some sin is forgiven in the life to come.

4 From the affirmative of a finite consequent (or attribute) followeth the Negative of an infinite consequent: as man is just, therefore man is not not-just.

5 From the affirmative of an infinite consequent followeth the Negative of a finite consequent, if the antecedent be capable of the habit: as, Man is not just, therefore neither is he just, neither un just. But of an infant it follows not, he is not just, therefore he is unjust; for he is not capable.

6 From a conjoined consequent are inferred things divided, where there is no ambiguity nor repugnancy in the adjunct: as, Man is a living sensible body; Therefore man is a body, man is living, man is sensible. But it follows not, a Carkase is a dead man, therefore it is a man; For between a Carkase and a man there is a repugnancy.

7 From two or mo disjoined consequents that cleave together by themselves, and are taken without ambiguity, we may infer conjoined things: as, Man is a body, and he is mixed, and he is living, and he is sensible; therefore, man is a living mixed sensible body. But it followeth not if one say; This man is a Musician, and he is good, therefore he is a good Musician; because Musician and good, cleave together by accident; And there is ambiguity in the word good, which may be understood either of Moral good, or of perfection of Arts. Neither is this right to say; This servant is a father, and he is thine; therefore, he is thy father; For there is ambiguity in the word thing.

8 From an exclusive to an Universal of transposed terms, is a good consequence. As, Only man can laugh▪ therefore whatsoever can laugh is a man.

9 From the removing of the one immediate member, unto the exclusive, is a good consequence: As, We are not justified by works: therefore by faith only.

Dissentany consecution, is, when from the truth of the one of the opposites is understood the falsehood of the other; and contrary from the falsehood of the one, the truth of the other. As, It is true that some man is not chosen to life: therefore, It is false that every man is chosen to life. It is true that every Christian man is to be baptized: therefore, it is false that no Christian Infant is to be baptized.

Induction is either

- Principal. a
- Less principal. b

Principal, is, when from many singulars, or particulars, there is drawn a general conclusion.

The Canons hereof are three.

1 An Induction standing of particular propositions, may bring in all the particulars: As if one would prove that Wine heateth, he may reckon up all sorts of Wine in the World, as French, Spanish, Rhenish, European, Asian, African Wine, &c.

2 When singulars are infinite, it is enough to allege some chief, with addition of this clause, Neither can an unlike example be shewn: As Paul in Heb. 11. to prove that all that are saved, are not saved but by faith, alledgeth Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, &c. and at last saith, There are many moe examples; Neither can any be shown unlike to those.

3 An Induction may be made a Syllogism of the first Figure, by putting in the place of the Major such a proposition in which the consequent of the conclusion is spoken of all particulars or singulars (reckoned up or understood) as of the mean; and adding a Minor, in which the same particulars or singulars are spoken of the Antecedent (or first part) of the conclusion. As, Spanish, French, Rhenish, and all Wines do heat. All Wine is Spanish, French, Rhenish, &c. therefore, all Wines do heat.

Less Principal Induction, is, when one or two singulars are induced, or when one is proved by another: As, Abraham was justified by faith: therefore, other godly are so justified also.

Sorites is an imperfect Syllogism, wherein the consequent of the first proposition is made the Antecedent of the second; and so forward as by a chain, until at length the last consequent be spoken of the Antecedent of the first proposition: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 an heap, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a coacervator, an heaper together. This is called a Stoical argument.

The Canons are five.

1 The reason of the consequence in a Sorites is both the connection of the subordinates in the same predicament, and also the coherence of the causes and effects by themselves.

For Example. A man is an animal, an animal is a sensual body, a sensual body is living, that that is living is mixed, that that is mixed is a substance: therefore, a man is a substance; also, Rom. 8. All foreknown are predestinate, all predestinate are called, all called are justified, all justified are glorified: therefore, all foreknown are glorified.

2 When terms not subordinate are confounded, and causes by themselves are mixed with causes by accident, the Sorites is naught: as, Of evil manners spring good Laws, good Laws are worthy of praise, things worthy of praise are to be desired: therefore, Evil manners are to be desired. This conclusion is naught; for evil manners are not causes of themselves of good Laws, but by accident.

3 A denial makes a faulty Sorites, when it cannot be reduced to some figure; and begetteth either both premises negant, or a negant Minor in the first figure: otherwise when there is a good connection of negative consequents or attributes, Negative Sorites are not simply to be rejected; as, Affliction bringeth patience, patience bringeth experience, experience brings forth hope, hope makes not ashamed, therefore affliction makes not ashamed.

4 When a particular proposition in a Sorites it put in the second or third place, or when the particular negant is put in any place, the Sorites is naught; for the Major is particular, or the Minor negant in the first Figure.

5 In a Sorites, the Antecedent or first part of the conclusion is the Minor term, the consequent the Major; the other which besides these are found in a Sorites, are Means; and look how many Means, so many Syllogisms.

An imperfect Syllogism also, is either

- Simple.
- Compound.

Simple, which consisteth of simple Propositions; of which we have heard before.

Compound, is, which consisteth of a compound Proposition, called also hypothetical, and \langle in non-Latin alphabet \rangle .

And it is either

- 1 Conditional.
- 2 Disjunctive.

Conditional, whose Major is Conditional or Hyprthetical.

The Canons hereof are seven.

1 An Hypothetical Syllogism, consists of antecedent and consequent: the antecedent is of the first part of the Proposition; the consequent of the latter.

2 The Union of antecedent and consequent, is called the reason of the consequent, which is the very form of an hypothetical Syllogism; and therefore if it cannot be granted, the hypothetical Syllogism must needs be faulty.

3 That Hypothetical Syllogism is good, which may be reduced to a good simple Syllogism; for as the perfect is always the measure of the imperfect, so a simple Syllogism is the measure of a compound.

4 Therefore in an Hypothetical Syllogism, from the assumption of the antecedent to the conclusion of the consequent, the inference is of force, but not from the assumption or putting of the consequent, to the putting of the antecedent; for so in the second figure should be mere affirmants; as, If Infidels be grafted into Christ, they eat his flesh: But they eat his flesh; therefore they are grafted into Christ. The Argument is not of force.

5 From removing the consequent to the removing of the antecedent, the inference is of force; but not from the destruction of the antecedent to the destruction of the consequent; for so there should be a minor negant in the first figure: as, If he be a man, he hath reason; but he is not a man: therefore he hath not reason. The Conclusion is true, but it followeth not of the premisses formally, but by accident only.

6 When an Hypothetical hath three terms in the first Proposition, it is easily reduced to a Categorical (or simple) Syllogism; for the reason of the consequence being granted, is put for the Major in a simple Syllogism, and then the Minor followeth of its own accord; as, If the Heaven be hot, it may be corrupted by another body: the reason of the consequence is, Every hot thing may be corrupted with another body that is cold; but it is not corruptible; therefore neither is it hot. Here of make a simple Syllogism in the second figure, thus▪ Every hot thing is corruptible. Heaven is not corruptible: therefore Heaven is not hot.

7 But when four terms are in the first Proposition, the reduction is hard and laborious, because the reason of the consequence cannot so easily be rendered by a simple Proposition: as, If Justice be by the Law, Christ died in vain; But Christ died not in vain: therefore Justice is not by the Law. Here are four terms in the first Proposition.

2 A Disjunctive Syllogism is, which hath the first Proposition a Disjunctive.

And it is either

- Uniform. c
- Biformed, or a Dilemma. d

Uniform, is, which of members disjoined takes away the one to put the other, or puts the one to take away the other. as, Either we are justified by faith, or by works: not by works; therefore by Faith.

The Canons hereof are two.

1 The whole force of the consequence in a disjoined Syllogism, consists in the opposition and disjunction of the parts, whereupon that must needs be naught whose parts are subordinate: as, We have instruction either from God, or from our teachers; but it is from God; therefore not from our teachers. The disjunction is naught, for it disjoyneth things subordinate.

2 A right disjunction, requires a full enumeration of parts: if therefore a third part can be given, or a fourth, the disjunction is naught: as, Heaven is either Hot or Cold: but it is not cold; therefore it is hot,

Here the first proposition hath an imperfect enumeration; for we should add, or else it is without all Elementary quality.

A Biformed disjunctive is, that when a disjunction of parts is made, which soever be granted, the adversary is fast: it is called a Dilemma 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , as it were 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , twice taken and taking; also an Horned Syllogism, and a Crocodile Syllogism. As, Johns Baptism is either of God or of men. If of God, why do we not receive it? If of men, we are in danger of the people which count him a Prophet.

The Conons hereof are four.

1 The force of consequence in a Dilemma dependeth on the full enumeration of the disjoined members, and the convenient removing of them both.

2 The Dilemma hath no force, if there be not a full disjunction, but a third or fourth member may be given.

3 It is also without force if both members be granted, as making nothing against us. As the Jews reasoned against Christ: Tribute must be given to Caesar, or unto God; If to God, then not to Caesar, and this is Treason: If to Caesar, then not to God, and this is Sacrilege. Our Savior answereth by granting both, Give to Caesar that which is Caesar's, and to God that which is God's.

4 Finally, A Dilemma hath no force if it may be turned and returned upon the adversary.

Often also in the undertaking of a Dilemma, they are faulty in evil consequence, and then we must answer by denying the consequence, as, Infants which while they are a Baptizing, do cry and resist, either they understand, or not: If they understand not, neither believe they; and therefore should not be baptized: If they understand, they are Sacrilegious that oppugn God's Institution.

Here be evil consequences in both branches; for it followeth not, That Infants do believe, although they understand not explicitly what there is done. Neither followeth it, That they are Sacrilegious and repugn God's Ordinance though they cry and struggle; for they stuggle not against the water as it is an holy sign, or with formal reason; but as it is a cold Element offensive to their tender body. Even as a godly man that loves no wine, doth naturally abhor the wine which is in the Lord's Supper; but he abhors it only as it is wine, and not as it is a Sacred sign of Christ's blood.

And thus much of a Syllogism Formal, or commonly considered.

A Special or Material Syllogism, is, which is restrained unto certain conditions of matter.

And it is either

- True.

- Apparent.

True, is, when not only the form, but also the matter of it is good.

And is either

- Notional. a
- Real. b

A notional Syllogism, is, whose conclusion and premises have some second Notion or term of Logic.

The Canons hereof are two.

Of which the first for foreknowledge of the conclusion.

The latter is for finding out of the mean.

1. Every simple Notion handled in the first part of Logic comes into the conclusion of a Notional Syllogism; for every second Notion may be compared with the first. We ask, Whether time and place be words conjoined or absolute? Whether the Genus of sin be an action, or the Genus of faith be knowledge? Whether Antichrist is to be one singular person? Whether faith be proper to the Elect? Whether persons in the Trinity be really, modally, or formally distinguished, and so of all other points. So as there is great use of a Notional Syllogism.

2. The Mean term for a notional Syllogism, is easily taken from the nature and properties of that second Notion, of which question is made in the conclusion; so as from the first part of Logic the Canons of every second Notion may be put for the Major in the Syllogism, and then let the assumption be made affirmative or negative.

For example. It is asked, Whether an action be the genus of sin, or not. For a denial, there is found out a mean term, from the nature and properties of a good genus. As by this Canon. No subject is the genus of that whereof it is the subject. l. 4. Top. cap. 6. But an action is the subject whereto sin cleaveth; therefore it is not the genus of sin.

Again, It is asked, Whether good works be the cause of Justification. Take for Major this Canon of a cause; No cause is after the effect; but good works are after Justification; for the person must first be justified and please God before he can do any good work: therefore good works are not the cause. And so of all other Notions, with their Canons treated of in the first part of Logic, whereby appeareth the great use of those Rules: and that there needs here no long discourse of a Notional or topical Syllogism.

A Comparative Syllogism.

Seeing every Syllogism is first absolute; As when we ask whether this be that or not: or else secondly Comparative, as when we ask whether this be more or less then that; here shall be added Canons of a Comparative Syllogism.

The general Canons hereof are two.

The 1 For the foreknowledge of the conclusion. 2 The other to find the Mean.

1 The conclusion of a Comparative Syllogism being contingent, and for the most part taken confusedly, needeth therefore diligent distinction and limitation: As it one ask, whether this or that be better; We must distinguish between better simply and absolutely, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and better in respect, and after a sort, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, rather to be chosen in respect of time and place: So marriage is simply better than a single life, because of propagation, Gen. 2. Yet single life is rather to be chosen in time of persecution, 1 Cor. 7.

2 The mean term of a comparative Syllogism, is hardly found by the places of real invention; because the attribute is most common, and almost Notional, not real; therefore this is here handled after a Notional Syllogism.

The special Canons pertain either to the question as it is asked indefinitely, whether this be rather then that? or unto the question as it is asked, whether this be better then that, or worse?

1 That which is such by Nature, is rather such then that which is not such by Nature; as, flowers are fairer then garments; For, they have a natural beauty, these but an artificial.

2 That which maketh another such, is rather such then that which maketh not; and if both do make, that which rather maketh, is rather such; As Fire is hotter then Water; for it maketh the Water such.

The Canons pertaining to a conclusion, better or not better, are these.

1 That which is more lasting and constant, is better than that which is less lasting; So 1 Cor. 13. Love is better than faith; For love endureth always.

2 That which is of itself good, is better than that which is good by another, and by accident; So, To live is better than to eat, because we eat to live, and live not to eat.

3 Simply good, is better than that which is good for some; As marriage is better than single life; Study of learning better than Merchandize.

4 That is more excellent which is in the more worthy and honorable thing; As a Monarchy is the best Regiment; For God is a Monarch. It is better to give, than to receive; For God giveth only.

5 The end is better than the means unto the end; As better is health than the use of Physic; better is peace than Triumph.

6 That which is possible, is better than that which is impossible.

7 That is better which of itself is more fair and honorable.

8 That which is after, is oftentimes better than the former; to wit, if other things be like, &c. As, the later thoughts are better than the former.

9 Many good things are to be preferred before few.

10 That which effecteth many good things, is better than that which doth but few; So a Public person is better than a Private.

11 That which is joined with pleasure, is better than that which wanteth pleasure.

12 At what time a thing is more necessary, at that time it is more to be chosen; So comfort is better in sorrow than in prosperity.

13 That which is always profitable, is better than that which is but sometime; So, Bread is better then all Pheasants, Partridges, &c. For it is always needful.

14 That which hath all kinds of good, as honest, profitable, and pleasant, is better than that which is under but one kind of good.

15 That is most to be shunned, which most hindereth things to be chosen.

16 They are most to be chosen, whose opposites are most to be shunned: So prudence is better than knowledge, because imprudence is more hurtful than simple ignorance.

17 That is best which is most famous and notable.

18 Hard things are to be preferred before easy.

19 Things that we may communicate with others, specially with friends, are better than those which we may not; So learning is better than health, liberality than temperance.

20 That is best which is most proper; So God's grace is better for his children, than worldly riches; For these are common with the wicked, that proper to the elect; To use reason, is better than to use sense; For that is proper to man, this is common with beasts. So wit is better than memory, which many fools have.

21 Of those which are under the same Genus or Species, that is better which hath its own proper virtue; So cold water is better than hot; Natural gesture than affected.

22 They which are of abundant, seem better than necessary things; As to have fair clothes better than mean, to be a good Artizen better than a mean.

23 Things that cannot be given by men, are better than those that can: So wit is better than riches.

24 That is more to be chosen, the abundance whereof is more to be chosen than of any other thing.

25 Better is when a thing may be chosen without another, than when without another it is not to be chosen: As prudence is better than strength.

26 Of what things we deny the one, that the other may seem to be in it; that is the better which we would have seem to be in it: So many deny they took pains about a thing, that they may seem to be witty; therefore, wit is better than pains taking.

27 Such things as whose loss we take not more grievously, we are more blamed for, are more to be chosen, As children than riches, for we are more blamed if we be not sorry for loss of our children, than of our goods.

28 That which effecteth good, is better than that which doth not.

29 Conjugates follow mutually; therefore, if one be better, the other also shall be better; As the New Testament is better than the old; therefore, also a Minister of the New, is better than a Minister of the old.

30 That which pleaseth God, is better than that which pleaseth man.

31 That which we choose for itself, is better than that which we choose for glory.

And this much of a Notional Syllogism, and a comparative.

A Real Syllogism, is, whose terms are Real: that is, first Notions put without the mind.

And it is either

- Contingent. a
- Or Necessary. b

A Contingent is, whose contingent mean contingently disposed with the extremes, getteth a suspended and weak assent to the conclusion, and is called opinion.

A contingent mean, is that which is taken from a contingent place.

Contingent places be either

- From the word. c
- From the things. d

Places from the word, are either

- 1 From the definition of a Noun.
- 2 From the Conjugates.

A place from the definition of a Noun, hath three Canons.

1 To what the definition and notation of a noun is given, to that also the defined thing is given.

2 When the definition and Notation is larger than the thing defined and noted, the consequence is of force only negatively; As, it is not a sacred sign; therefore, not a Sacrament.

3 When the Notation is equal to the noted, the consequence is of force as well affirmatively as negatively: as, He foretells things to come, therefore he is a prophet: he is not a prophet, therefore he foretells not things to come.

A place of Conjugates hath three Canons.

1 One of the conjugates being put, another is put; and one taken away, another is taken away; as, Sin pleaseth not God: therefore not the sinner.

• That which is given to one of the Conjugates, is given also to the other: as, Religion is contemned, because the Religious are contemned. They that have one God, one Spirit, one Baptism, ought to have Unity amongst themselves: In the Trinity there is Unity, because the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghost are one.

A place from the things is either

- Artificial. h
- Inartificial. i

Artificial, is, which containeth Terms arguing of themselves.

And it is either

- First.
- Or, rising from the first.

First, is, which containeth the first Terms.

And it is either

- Inward. m
- Outward. n

Inward, is, which containeth inward Terms: as, Of the cause and caused, of the subject and accident; of the whole and the part.

The place of the cause and caused hath five Canons.

1 The far-off efficient cause being put, it is probable that the effect should be put: as, The clouds gather, therefore it will rain.

2 The cause 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 being put, it is probable the effect is put, and contrariwise; also the effect being put, it is probable such a cause is put: as, He loves her, therefore he will marry her: He married her, therefore he loved her.

3 The Instruments being put, it is probable the effect is put; and contrary, the effect being put, it is probable the instruments are put, and contrary: as, He reads good books, therefore he will be learned: He useth proper physic; therefore he shall recover health, &c.

4 From the common matter put or taken away, or the matter whereof, to put or take away the mattered, and so on the contrary, is a contingent inference: as, In Germany is much wood, therefore they have many ships.

5 From a voluntary end to the means, and from these to the end, is a contingent inference: as, He studied hard, therefore he means to have the degree of a Doctor, &c.

The Canons of Subject and Accident, Whole and Part, are four.

1 From the common accident being put unto the subject, is a contingent inference; as from the accident removed, to the removing of the subject: as, It is a black Bird, therefore a Crow: She loves the child, therefore she is the mother of it.

2 From a common subject being put, to the putting of a common accident, and contrary, is a contingent inference: as, She is a Mother, therefore she loves the children: He is a Cretian, therefore a liar.

3 The whole being put, it is probable this or that part is put: as, He is a man grown, therefore he hath a Beard.

4 Some integral part being put, it is probable the whole is put; and contrariwise: as, There is a foundation and walls, therefore a house.

Places of outward terms have five Canons.

1 The adherent being put, it is probable that is put which it is wont to cleave to, and contrary; As he goeth brave; therefore he is rich.

2 The contingent object being put, it is probable that is put, about which it is busied, and contrary; as, There are many sick; therefore, many Physicians.

3 The circumstance of place or time being put, it is probable that is put which is wont to be therein, and contrary; as, It is eight of the clock in the morning; therefore, he is not drunk: He was not seen about the house in the night, therefore, he is a thief.

4 The antecedent being put, it is probable the consequent is put, and contrary; as, The Moon is pale; therefore, it will rain.

5 The contingent consequent being put, it is probable the antecedent was, and contrary; as, It raineth; therefore, the Moon was pale.

Places of terms arising from the first,

Are either

- From Description.
- From Comparison.

The place from description hath one Canon.

To whom the less principal description agreeth, it is probable that the described agreeth, or agreeth not thereto; as, It is not a Bush bigger then a Biamble, with strong twigs, and red Berries; therefore, it is not the Dogg-briar.

The place from comparisons, the place is either from

- Consentany a Comparison.
- Dissentany b Comparison.

From consentany comparisons, the place is either from,

- Even.
- Like.

The place from Even hath two Canons.

1. Even things agree ro Even; and what is given to the one, is given to the other of even things, and contrary: as Rom. 5. By one man salvation may be restored to the world; seeing by one man sin and death came on the world.

2. Where to one of the even things agreeth or not, thereto it is probable the other also agreeth, or not; as, Christ had power to heal the Palsy-sick; therefore, he had power to forgive sins, Mat. 9.

The place from Like hath three Canons.

1 That which agreeth or not, to one of the like things, that also agreeth or not to the other: as, The rain returns not back to heaven, but watereth the earth; neither God's Word returneth in vain.

2. To whom one of the Similies agreeth, or not▪ the other also agreeth, or not.

3. A similitude, or comparison allegericall, if it should have any force in arguing, it must needs have authority in the Scriptures, and application Ministred by the Holy Ghost.

Of Proportionals, there is the same Judgment; and what is affirmed or denied of one by proportion, that is also of another: For as is the seed in the land, so is the word to the heart, but seed falling into good ground, bears good fruit; therefore doth God's Word likewise in a good heart.

Neer to the place of Even and Like things, is the place from a singular thing and example, whose Canon is one.

Of Even and Like things, there is the same Judgment; and that which agreeth, or not, to one singular of the same kind, doth so to the other: as, Abraham was justified by faith, therefore also other men.

An example is either

- True.
- Feigned.

True, which hath indeed come to pass.

Feigned, which is devised for the teaching of children.

And it is

- A Parable.
- A Fable.

A Parable, is a feigned example, drawn from such actions of men, as may or are wont to be done.

A Fable, is a feigned example, drawn from beasts and other such things, whereunto human actions do not agree.

From dissentany comparison the places are from

- Uneven.
- Unlike.

Uneven, either greater or lesser.

The place from the greater hath two Canons.

1. If there be the greater, there will also be the lesser, and whereto the greater agreeth, the less doth also: as, God hath given us life, therefore he will give us food and raiment.

2. That which in the same proportion agreeth not to the greater, agreeth not also to the lesser: as, The Just is scarce saved, therefore much less the wicked.

The place from the Lesser, hath only this one Canon.

If the lesser be not, then the greater will not be; as, Of ourselves we cannot think a good thought; much less, do a good deed.

2. The place from Unlike, is either

- Simple.
- Compound.

Simple Unlikes agree to Unlikes; and whatsoever agreeth to one of the Unlikes, as it is unlike▪ agrees not to the other: as, Though beasts have all things common, tis unfitting men should.

For compound unlikes, they which are not proportionate, to them proportionals do not agree: as, A good shepherd deals not with his flock like an hireling: the hireling flies when the wolf comes; therefore the good shepherd doth not so. And thus much of places Artificial.

Inartificial, is a place which argueth not of itself, but by the assumed force of an artificial place, and it is called the place of testimony.

Contingent testimony, is that which cometh from man as he is man.

The Canons of human Testimony are 13.

1 Though no human testimony as such, be of necessary truth, yet admitteth it certain degrees, and one is more strong, or weak than the other.

2 Proper, or ones own testimony of things, done or not done, especially in the worser part, if it be not wrung out of force, is counted for firm.

3 Public testimonies of public seals are firm.

4 Testimony of public and long-lasting fame is also to be esteemed for meanly firm,

5 Old testimony is more worth than new.

6 Grammatical testimonies, to wit, which treat of the use, signification, quantity of words, syllables, &c. gathered out of the best Authors, are firm.

7 Testimonies Practick, that is Ethick, Politick, Legal, of honest, filthy, right, wrong, spoken of grave Authors, are firm.

8 Testimonies historical, of approved Historians, are firm.

9 Testimonies Theoretical of some great and received Author, alleged after reasons of a Theoretical conclusion, have great force.

10 Testimony of many Wise men and Famous, is to be preferred before the testimony of one and an obscure man.

11 Testimony of a skillful Artizen, is to be preferred before the testimony of another unskillful, however famous otherwise.

12. Testimonies of ancient Fathers, if they be subordinate to the holy Scripture, have a force in proving Theological conclusions, but no proving human, yet greater.

13. An Argument from human Testimony negatively, is of no force.

And thus much of a contingent Syllogism.

Of a necessary Syllogism.

A necessary Syllogism, is, which hath a Mean or Medium of necessary disposition to bring in the mind firm and immovable assent to the conclusion. It is called Science.

The general Canons thereof are three.

1. The Conclusion of a necessary Syllogism sometime is pure, or proper to one discipline; sometime mixed, or of divers Disciplines: as, Only Faith justifieth, this is a pure conclusion; for both the terms, faith, and justifieth, are terms of Theology, and handled therein.

A naturall body is in a place; this is pure; for only Natural Philosophy treateth of a place, and a body; but this, Accidents in the Lord's Supper are not without the holy bread and wine, is necessary, and may be proved by a necessary Syllogism; but it is not pure; for the word Accident is Metaphysical or Logical; the other terms Theological.

2. In a pure conclusion we must needs use a Mean of the same kind, that is, such as together with the extreme of the conclusion, pertaineth to one and the same discipline, and not to diverse.

3. Of a necessary Syllogism, the propositions also are necessary.

A necessary Syllogism is either

- Monstrative, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . f
- Demonstrative, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . g

Monstrative, is, whose Mean is taken from a monstrative place that is, from every place of necessary invention▪ except the place of the efficient cause, the end, and the effect.

And it is either

- Artificial. c
- Inartificial. d

Artificial places again are either of first Terms, or secondly of Arisen.

Places of the first terms be

- Inward. a
- Outward. b

Inward, are they which are taken from inward terms, and they are nine.

1. From the Genus. 2. From the Species. 3. From the cause material. 4. The Formal. 5. The Subject. 6. The Accident. 7. The proper. 8. The whole. 9. And the part.

The first place of the Genus hath two Canons.

1. To what the Genus is given, to the same some Species must needs be given, but indeterminate; as, It is sin; therefore Original, or Actual.
2. From what the Genus is taken away, from that necessarily all the Species are taken: as, It is no sin, therefore neither original nor actual; therefore no sin.

The place of the Species hath two Canons.

1. To what the Species is given, to the same the Genus must needs be given: as, He is a man, therefore a living creature.
2. From what all the Species are taken, from it the Genus must needs be taken: as, It is neither original $\langle \diamond \rangle$ actual sin, therefore no sin.

The place from the Form and specific difference hath two Canons.

1. Whereto the Form is given, or taken away, thereto the formed is given or taken away: as, Satyrs have no reason, therefore are •o men.
2. Whereto the Form is given, thereto the determinate matter must needs also be given; and contrariwise: as, Nebuchadnezzar kept the Form of a man still; therefore also the body.

The place from the matter hath three Canons.

1. Whereto the matter is given or taken away, thereto the mattered thing must needs also be given or taken away: as, Glorified bodies shall consist of the four Elements; therefore they shall be mixed
2. Whereto the matter is given, thereto the determined Form must needs also be given; and contrariwise▪ as, Pig•eyes have the bodies of men, therefore the Forms also.
3. As is the matter, such is the mattered thing: as, The Image is of rotten wood; therefore it is also rotten.

The place from the proper subject hath this one Canon.

Whereto a proper accident is given, or taken from it, thereto the subject also must needs be given or taken from it: as, Christ is God, therefore hath power to forgive sins.

The place from the proper accident hath two Canons.

1. Whereto a proper accident is given, or taken from it, thereto the subject must needs be given, or taken from it: as, Christ forgiveth sins, hath life▪in himself, and gives life to others; and therefore he is God.

2. That which is said of the proper accident in the concrete, is said also of the subject: as, A questioner is to be shunned, because a blab is to be shunned.

The place from the whole and parts hath three Canons.

1. The whole being put or taken away, needs must the parts be put or taken away: as, the whole Supper pertaineth to Lay men, therefore the Cup.

2. That which agreeth, or not, to an whole of the same kind, that also agreeth, or not, to the part, if the attribute be such, as may by proportion agree to the part: as, Water is moist, therefore every drop of water is so.

3 One principal part being destroyed, the whole is taken away. as, This building hath no Roof, therefore is no house: He hath no head, therefore is no living body.

Places of outward terms, are Circumstances, Object, Concomitancy.

The place of Circumstances hath this one Canon.

Circumstances being put or taken away, the adject is put or taken away; and the adject put or taken away, so is the Circumstance: as, The flowers are badded, therefore it is spring time: it is a body, therefore there is a place wherein it is.

The place of the necessary object hath also one Canon.

Whereto an even object is given or taken from it, thereto that which is busied about the object is given or taken from it; and contrariwise: as, He is exercised about the worship of Idols; therefore he is an Idolater: Christ is true God; therefore he is to be worshipped.

The place from the necessary Antecedent, hath this one Canon.

A necessary Antecedent being put or taken away, the consequent of it, is put or taken away: as, he is dead in Christ, therefore he shall rise to eternal $\langle \diamond \rangle$. The woman is not with child, therefore she shall not bring forth.

The place from the necessary consequent hath also one Canon.

A necessary consequent being put, the antecedent is put▪ as, The woman brought forth, therefore she had conceived: he is a man, therefore he was a child.

2. Places of terms arisen from the first, are of Definition, Division, and Opposites.

The place of definition and description principal, hath one Canon.

Whereto a definition or description is given or taken from it, thereto the defined or described thing is given or taken from it; and that which agrees, or not, to the definition, or description, the same agreeth, or not, to the defined or described; and contrariwise: as, In the Old Testament there was a state of worshipping God in and by Christ; therefore in the Old Testament, there were Christians.

The place of Division hath these two Canons.

1. All the members of the divided being taken away, the divided itself is taken away.
2. One of the Immediate members of a Division being taken away, the other is left.

The place of Opposites hath seven Canons.

1. Of Opposites, so far forth as they be such, the attributes are opposite; so as the opposition be made by the differences whereby the opposites disagree, and not by the genus or common accidents▪ and that proportion be kept between the causes and effects of the opposites. So, It follows not, Whitenesse is color, therefore blackness is no color; for the opposition is made by the common Genus. Neither followeth this, Evil works condemn, therefore good works justify; for there is no proportion of good works to salvation, when our works cannot be said to be truly good of themselves, as Evil deeds are truly evil. Neither this, We must do good to our friends; therefore evil to our Enemies; For Enemies, in that respect that injuries are to be forgiven them, are not so much our enemies as our friends. Neither followeth, virginity is good, therefore marriage is evil; for goodness is common to both in divers respects▪ But this follweth, Heat disseve•eth things of diverse kinds, therefore cold gathereth them: Purity cherisheth the Spirit, therefore impurity expelleth it.

2. From what a disparate is removed, from it all in the disparate are removed: As 1 Sam. 15. God is not as man, that he should lie, or the Son of man, that he should repent.

3. One of the 〈◊〉 and repugnants being put, the other is removed; As, It is unbloody; therefore, it is no Sacrifice; For these are contradictory, 1 Cor. 10. Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and of Devils.

4. One of the contraries in an high degree being put, the other is removed. As, He is in despair: therefore, he hath no comfort.

5. One of the privatives being put, the other is removed, and contrariwise: As, He is blind: therefore he seeth not.

6. One of the Relatives being put, the other is put; As, God is an eternal Father; therefore he hath a coeternal Son. Christ is always Mediator and head: therefore, he will always have a Church.

7. Where to one of the Relatives is giving, thereto the other cannot be given in the same respect; And from the remotion of the Relative▪ to the remotion of the Correlative, the inference is right: As Christ is David's Lord: therefore, he is not his servant.

An Inartificiall place, is necessary Testimony.

Necessary Testimony, is either

- Of God. a
- Or of the Senses. b.

God's Testimony is a sentence spoken of God.

And is

- Mediate.
- Immediate.

Immediate, which God uttereth without means of any Minister.

And it is either. First, By Vision, as of old to the Prophets.

Or Secondly, By Voice; as, at Christ's Baptism,

Mediate, is, which God hath uttered by his Son sent in the flesh; Or by inferior Ministers, the Prophets and Apostles.

The Canons of God's Testimony, Mediate, and Immediate, are twelve.

1. God's Testimony is believed for God himself, and his Authority, not for the man's sake by whom it was uttered.
2. There is no Divine testimony written this day; But in the Bible.
3. All principles of Theological conclusions, pertaining to the perfection and Salvation of the Elect, are sufficiently delivered in the Scriptures.
4. Argumentation from God's testimony, proceedeth both Affirmatively and Negatively in things pertaining to Salvation.
5. It ceaseth to be the testimony of God, if wrested either to a wrong sense or unmeet allegories.
6. From places or testimonies doubtful, Doctrines of faith are not firmly stablished.
- 7 That which by good consequence is gathered from any Divine testimony, it hath the same force with it.
8. What is proved or explained by the Scripture, that is understood to be also proved and explained by the true Church, Lawfull Councils, and Antient Doctors.
9. From God's revealed will to his power, the argumeent always is of force; But it follows not, because he will not, that therefore he cannot.
10. From God's will Indefinite and Hypothetical unto the simple execution thereof, an argument is not of Force: as, God would all men should be saved: therefore, they shall all be saved; It follows not; For that Will is Hypotheticall or Conditional, If they believe.
11. God's affirmative Commandments are to be taken with limitation.
12. God's negative Commandments do bind simply.

Testimony of sense, is that which every ones sense telleth him.

And it is

- Outward.
- Inward.

Inward, is, which Laws of Nature and Conscience tells us.

Outward, is, that with the outward senses (as seeing, hearing, &c.) rightly disposed, and so the sensual observation and experience doth confirm: Matth. 11. Go tell John what ye hear and see. Come see the place where the Lord was laid.

And thus much of the first kind of necessary Syllogism.

The other kind of necessary Syllogism hath the mean term from the place of the Efficient cause, the Final, and the Effect. And it is called Demonstration 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

And it is either

- Perfect, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . a
- Imperfect. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . b

Perfect Demonstration called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . (i. e.) Wherefore, is, whose mean is taken from the place of the efficient cause or end, for to get the knowledge of such a conclusion as wherein the accident is attributed to (or spoken of) his subject.

The general Canons of this Demonstration are eight.

1 Three things are in every demonstration. 1 The subject 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . 2 The affection, or accident 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . 3 The cause 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

2 The conclusion of a demonstration consisteth of two extremes, viz. the affection or accident which is put in place of the attribute; and then secondly, the subject wherein the affection is.

3 The foreknowledge of the conclusion is the same that was of others, viz. that the subjects both name and existence, and definition of the Essence be foreknown, and the name of the attribute or affection.

4 The finding of the mean also agreeth unto the general precepts; For it is taken from the nature of the extremes, viz. the efficient cause of the attribute, which often is the form of the Subject, and from the end of the same attribute.

5 A demonstration hath certain degrees; So that one exceeds another in necessity, and so hath propositions, one more necessary, another less.

6. Demonstrations are given in all kinds of disciplines contemplative, of practick, though the demonstrations of contemplative disciplines be more worthy.

7. There are given demonstrations as well Negative as Affirmative, though the affirmative be more worthy.

8. A Demonstration perfect (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) hath great kin with the perfect definition of an accident: For the things that are in a perfect definition, as Efficient, Cause, End, and Subject, the same are also in a demonstration.

A perfect Demonstration, is either

- Of the Efficient. a
- Of the End. b

A Demonstration of the efficient cause, is, whose mean is taken from the place of the next efficient cause.

And it is either

- Principal. c c
- Less Principal. d d

Principal, whose mean is the next principal efficient cause; and it is either of the inward cause, or Outward.

Of the Inward, whose mean is the next principal efficient.

Outward, whose mean is the outward principal next efficient cause.

The Canons of both these are two.

1. Whereto the next efficient cause is given, thereto the effect must needs be given; and from what the cause is taken, the effect is also.

2. A Demonstration of the Inward cause, is perfecter then a Demonstration of the Outward cause: Examples of Demonstration: That which hath the guilt of sin, is wretched; But all mankind since the fall, hath guiltiness: therefore, it is wretched. Whatsoever differeth from the Law and will of God, deserveth God's wrath; but every small sin differeth, &c. therefore, it deserveth God's wrath. He that hath satisfied God's wrath, hath perfectly redeemed us; Only Christ hath satisfied, &c. therefore, he hath redeemed us. They that are constantly kept of God in the purpose of Election once made, their Salvation is sure: But all the faithful are so kept: therefore, their Salvation is sure. Whatsoever hath matter, is moveable; Every natural body hath matter; therefore, Every natural body is moveable.

Less Principal, is, whose mean term is a less principal efficient cause, viz. either▪ Impulsive, or first Instrumental.

The Canon hereof, is.

Whereto the Impulsive and Instrumental which is more matching, is given; thereto also must needs be given the effect and power or faculty unto which the instrument is ordained: and contrary, from what the instrument is taken, from that also the end or effect must needs be taken; Thus Demonstration is made▪ that fishes do not breathe, because they have no lungs, that the wicked eat not Christ's body, because they have no faith; So man is a communicable and sociable creature, because he hath speech, the Instrument of communion.

Demonstration of the end, is, whose mean term is drawn from the place of the final cause.

The Canons thereof are two.

1. The end being put, (specially the fitted end) needs must the means to the end be put, or contrariwise.
2. Even as the end is either fitted and principal, or less principal, accordingly the Demonstration is more perfect, or imperfect. Thus Christ shown they ought not to buy and sell in the Temple, because it was an house of prayer. Heresies must be, that the approved may be known; &c.

Imperfect Demonstration (or 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : That a thing is) whose mean is taken from the place of the effect.

The Canons hereof are three.

- 1▪ The effect being put, the cause is necessarily put; and the effect being taken away, so is the cause (as it is a cause of that effect); So it is shown that some men are Elect; because in time they are called justified, and sanctified; and contrary, that some are not Elect, because they are not called, &c. So, Infants are sinners, because they die, Romans 5.
2. Even as the effect is either principal, or less principal, accordingly is the demonstration more or less principal.
3. When by the effect it is proved, the cause is, or not; on the contrary also, the effect may be shown by the cause; which Reciprocation, Logicians call Regresse.

And thus much of Demonstration:

Of an Apparent Syllogism, or Fallacie.

Hitherto we have treated of a true Syllogism; Now followeth the Apparent, which hath a false disposition or matter, painted with a show of a true; Whereupon ignorance or naughty disposition is begotten in the mind.

The Doctrine hereof hath two parts.

The 1. whereof is the caution of a deprehended Fallacie.

The 2. is, Showing and loosing of that Fallacie.

First, Of the deprehension, or finding out of a Fallacie.

A Sophism or Fallacie is a deceit, either

- In Form. a
- In Matter. b

A Fallacie of Form, is when men sin against the disposition of a Syllogism, violating the Canons, either general or special of all the Figures.

A Fallacy of matter, is either

- In words. m
- In things. n

A Fallacy of words, is either in a word

- Simple. g
- Compound. b

A fallacy of a simple word is either

- Of want of use. k
- Of Ambiguity. l

A Fallacy of the want of use of a word, is either

- 1. For the darkness of it.
- 2. For the oldness.
- 3. For the Novelty.
- 4. For the impropriety of it.

These are opened in the first part of Logic.

Ambiguity of a word is either

- For the many meanings.
- For the doubtful forming.

Ambiguity for many meanings, is, when a term in a Syllogism is taken in this meaning or in that: as, That which is begotten beginneth to be: The Son of God is begotten, therefore beginneth to be.

Here is ambiguity in the word, begetting; for the generation that is in the Holy Trinity, differeth generally from the generation of the creatures.

Ambiguity for the forming of a word, is either in respect of the

- 1. Orthography.
- 2. Etymology,
- 3. Prosodie.

1. In respect of the Orthography, is when the doubtfulness ariseth from the diverse pronouncing of word, or writing: as, If a man, pretending to make one his heir, should say, I will make thee mine hair; or to commend one for a full-hardy soldier, saith, He is fool-hardy.

2. In respect of the Etymology, doubtfulness is which ariseth either of likeness of ending, or confounding one number for another. This Fallacy is called, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

3. In respect of Prosodie, doubtfulness is which ariseth from wrong pronounciation; a long syllable for a short, or otherwise.

A Fallacy of a compound word, is, which is in a sentence and is called Amphiboly which is a double uncertainty of the meaning in a sentence.

And it ariseth either

- 1. Of the construction and distinction.
- 2. Of the phrase.
- 3. Of the Composition and Division.

1. Of the construction, when the coherence and construction of words is doubtful.

2. Of the phrase, when not the construction, but the kind of speech makes uncertainty of sense: as, Christ went up to Heaven to fill all things. Therefore, His body is diffused everywhere. It is a Fallacy, by not understanding the Apostles phrase, Fill all things, which is meant of the effusion of the Holy Ghost, not of the diffusion of his body.

3. Of Composition and Division, when words are joined together which should be disjoined, or contrariwise: as, Two, and three are even and odd; but five are two and three; therefore five are even and odd.

A Fallacy in things, is either

- 1. About the conclusion, or question. a
- 2. About the proof of the conclusion, on omitting the Mean. b

About the conclusion, is either

- 1. Asking of many questions, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .
- 2. Asking of another question, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

- 3. Ignorance of the argument 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

1 The Fallacie of many questions, is, when many questions or conclusions are confounded in one: As, Were Moses, and Aaron, and David, good Kings? Here is confusion; for Aaron was not a King. So, when we ask, Have you left your stealing? If one answer, Yea, it intimateth he was once a thief; if he answereth, No, he argueth himself now to be a thief.

For every ambiguous question is not one, but manifold. As, Was Judas elected? Here tis doubtful, whether tis meant Election to life, or election to an Apostleship; therefore, it is no simple question.

Ubiquitaries reason thus; That which is Sacramentally united with the Bread, is eaten; though not after a natural, yet a supernatural manner. But Christ's body is Sacramentally united with the Bread: Therefore, it is eaten, though not after a natural manner, &c. Answer is, In the conclusion, there is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

For two questions are confounded,

- 1 Whether Christ's body be eaten.
- 2 How it is eaten.

2 Ignorance of the Argument or Elench, is, when either the state of the question is quite turned and wrested, or the adversaries conclusion is not directly opposite to our Thesis, according to the Canons of lawful opposition: As, They that are conceived and born in sin, are not holy, The children of the faithful are conceived and born in sin: therefore, the children of the faithful are not holy. Here is ignorance of the Elench; for the conclusion is not directly opposed to our conclusion, who make the children of the faithful holy with the holiness of the Covenant of calling and promise; But the Adversaries conclusion speaketh of holiness which is immunity from sin.

About the proof of the conclusion, Fallacies are either

- 1 About the finding of the mean.
- 2 About the premisses risen of the disposition of the mean.

1 About the finding of the mean is

- Begging of the question. a
- Assumption of a false mean, b

Begging of the question (or Petio Principii) is when no mean is taken, but the conclusion is proved by itself, repeated either by the same words, or by others Equivalent: As if one would prove pleasure to be the chiefest good, because delight is the chiefest good; or one would prove Jeconias to be the father of Salathiel, because Salathiel was son of Jeconias.

The Fallacie of a false mean, is when to prove a question, there is taken a false mean having the appearance of a true: Whereupon, either the Major, or Minor is false.

A false mean is either

- Of Contingency apparent.
- Of Necessity apparent.

Of Contingency apparent, is that which seemeth to be drawn from some place of contingent invention: As Peter is named à Petra, the Rock of the Church: therefore, he is the Foundation and Head.

Answer. It is a Sophisticall Syllogism taken from the place of false Notation; And so of the places.

Of Necessity apparent, is, when a false mean is so propounded as taken from some necessary place, Monstrative, or Demonstrative: As from a false Genus, false Difference, Definition, &c.

As, Extream Unction is a Sacrament: therefore, it sealet spiritual graces: It is from a false Genus.

Also, That which is united to the word, is everywhere; Christ's human nature is united to the word: therefore, it is everywhere; It is a Sophism, having for the Medium a false efficient cause.

2 Fallacies about the premises or disposition of the mean, are

- Fallacie of the consequent.
- Fallacie from a thing spoken after a sort.

Fallacie of the consequent, is, when there is a naughty connection of the mean with the greater extreme in the Major Proposition: as, He that said, Bread is my body, said, my body lieth hid in the Bread, but Christ said, &c, Ergo It is a Sophism of the consequence, whereof no good reason can be rendered: So Christ taught us to pray for our daily Bread: therefore, Lay-men must not drink of the Wine in the Lord's Supper.

Fallacie from a thing spoken after a sort, to spoken simply, is when from the mean Term disposed with limitation, or after a sort with both or either of the extremes, a conclusion is inferred absolutely and simply true: as, He that is less then the father is not equal with him; Christ is less then the Father. Joh. 14. therefore, he is not equal with him. It is a Sophism from that which is limited, to that which is not limited. It should be thus, He that is less, simply and in all respects, is not equal: but then the Minor is false, For Christ is less, not in degree of Essence, or of substantial perfection; But, First, By hiding the Godhead in the State of Humility. Secondly, By Office of Mediator, whose parts he handleth with the Father. So he that saith, thy words are words, saith true; He that saith, thy words are lying words, saith, thy words are words: therefore, He that saith thy words are lying words, saith true. Answer,

He that saith thy words are words, viz. Absolutely, or Indeterminately, not adding false difference, saith true, and so the Minor is false. Under this is contained Fallacia Accidentis.

Of the loosing or soluting of Fallacies.

The Detection and loosing of Fallacies,

Is either

- True. a
- Apparent, b

True Solution, is the showing of the deceit used by the Sophister.

And it is either

- Direct. a
- Indirect. b

Direct, is when answer is made directly to the Syllogism Showing, and naming the Fallacie.

And it is either of the

- 1 Form.
- 2 Matter.

Solution of the Form, is the rejecting of the Syllogism; by showing some Syllogisticall Canon against which the form of it sinneth.

Solution of the matter, is either of the - Word.

- Thing.

Solution of the word, is, when the ambiguity of simple words, and the amphiboly of joined words is shown and distinguished.

Solution of the Thing, is, either of the - Question.

- Proof.

Solution of the Question, is, when the state of the controversy is rightly constituted, the manifold question discerned, and the fault of evil opposition shown.

Solution of the proof, is either about the

- 1 Finding of the Mean.

- 2 Disposition with the Extrems.

About the finding of the Mean, is either the showing, and denying of a vicious consequence in the Major, or a limitation: when there is a fault by omitting a limitation.

So there are in all, five direct Solutions and answers to the matter.

- 1 Distinction or explication of a word simple or conjoined.
- 2 Information and distinction of the conclusion or question,
- 3 Denial of one of the Premises.
- 4 Rejection of a naughty consequence. And
- 5 Limitation.

Of these three be three Canons.

1 When the form is plain, straightwayes we must think of the conclusion of the proposed Syllogism▪ and see whether it be constituted rightly, or opposed to our position.

2 When the conclusion is plain, We must answer to the Premises either by distinguishing and limiting, or by denying.

3 We must never answer by denial when the argument may be soluted by distinguishing and limiting.

Indirect Solution, is when we answer indirectly, and thwartly to the Syllogism proposed.

And that is either unto the

- Thing. †
- Person. *

Indirect answer unto the thing, is either

- 1 By Retortion.
- 2 By Contrary objection.
- 3 By showing contradiction.
- 4 By opposition of equal or less private authority.
- 5 By comparison, &c.

1 Answer by Retortion, is, when we show that the mean or proof brought by the adversary maketh for us, or overthroweth the same conclusion which he would prove by it, or at least other assertions of the adversary: As, Christ is first begotten before the creature: therefore he is a creature. Answer, Nay, therefore he is not a creature, because he was begotten before any creature was.

2 Solution by contrary objection (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) is when the objection is not solved, but another stronger objection is propounded to the adversary: So Christ answered them that would have the Ointment sold and given to the poor, by opposing a stronger reason: The poor ye have always with you, but me not.

3 Showing of contradiction, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , is when we show contradiction in our adversaries words▪ As, when the Papists except that in their Mass, Christ is not crucified again, because the sacrifice is unbloody; it is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 : for a Sacrifice and unbloody are contradictory.

4 Opposition of equal authority, is, when to an human Testimony we oppose another Testimony as good, or better.

5 Comparison with like absurd, is when we compare our adversaris argument with the like absurd.

Indirect answer unto the person, is either

- A Blame.
- A Comparison.

A Blam or chiding (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) is, when we blame the adversary for that he disputeth against Piety and Honesty, or against manifest sense and Experience.

A Comparison of the like, or greater, is, when we put away anything objected against our or an others person, with another personal objection: As, Christ, when the Pharisees blamed his Disciples for eating with unwashed hands, answered, Why do you also transgress God's Commandments by your traditions?

Apparent Solutions, are, by which nothing is fitly answered; Only in show something is said.

Of this Solution there be five sorts.

1 The first, when nothing is answered to the Syllogism propounded: But somewhat is said of the thing generally, lest the Answerer should seem to say nothing.

2 When general and ill understood Fallacies are applied, which pertain not to the Syllogism proposed.

3 Provocation unto wrath.

4 Is a setting at naught (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) when we mock the adversaries reasons as light.

5 Is running aside (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) and leading from the matter in hand (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉)

And thus much touching the Doctrine of Syllogism.

A Type of the whole Doctrine of the Fallacies.

The finding out of the Fallacies; For it is either of the

- Form
 - In the word
 - Simple of
 - Want of use.
 - Ambiguity.
 - Compound, wherein is Amphiboly by the - Construction. Phrase.
 - Composition. And division.
 - Matter & that
 - Out of the word, and that either about.
 - The conclusion or question.
 - Many questions.
 - Ignorance of the Elench.
 - The proof and that either
 - The Mean
 - Begging of the question.
 - Taking a false Mean.
 - The premises as the Fallacie
 - Of consequence.
 - From spoken after a sort. to spoken absolutely.

The resolution, which is either

- True.
 - Direct

- Of the Form.
- Of the matter.
 - 1 True constitution of the state of the controversy.
 - 2 Distinction and Explication of doubtful words and phrase.
 - 3 Denial of false premises.
 - 4 Rejection of a naughty consequence,
 - 5 Limitation.
- Indirect; which is either unto
 - The thing
 - Retortion.
 - Contrary Objection.
 - Showing contradiction.
 - Opposition of Authority.
 - Comparison.
 - The person
 - Blame.
 - Comparison.

Apparent,

- 1 When nothing is answered to the matter.
- 2 Applying of a fallacy ill understood.
- 3 Provoking of the Adversary.
- 4 Setting at naught.
- 5 Running aside.

A Type of the Doctrine of Syllogisms.

A Syllogism is to be considered.

- Commonly
 - Primary of the Figure, First, Second, and Third,

- Secondary either
 - Indirect,
 - Prima.
 - Secondary.

Both which are

- Simple.
 - Compound:
 - Conditional
 - Disjunctive.
 - Vniform.
 - Biform, or
 - Dilemma.
-
- Diarect,
 - Enthymeme.
 - Consecution of sentences.
 - Induction.
 - Sorites.
-
- Speially under condition of some certain matter, and it is either.
 - True
 - Real which is either,
 - Contingent wich is either
 - Notionall
 - Of the word
 - Definition.
 - Conjugates.
 - Of things which is either
 - Artificial, which is either
 - First,

- Inward
 - Caused caused.
 - Subject, Accident.
 - Whole, part.
 - Outward
 - Adjacent
 - Object.
 - Concomitant,
 - Risen of the First from
 - Description.
 - Comparison.
 - Consentany.
 - Even.
 - Example,
 - Like.
 - Dissentany
 - Vneven.
 - Vnlike.
- Great.
- Less.
- Inartificiall, Humane Testimony.
- Apparent of which see before,
 - Necessary.
 - Monstrative from places.
 - Artificial.
 - First.
 - Arisen.
 - Definition.

- Opposites.
 - Inward
 - Genus, Species.
 - Matter, Form,
 - Proper Subject.
 - Proper accident.
 - Whole, parts.
 - Outward.
 - Circumstances.
 - Objects concomitants.
- Demonstrative, or Apodictike. which is either
 - Inartificial or testimony,
 - Of God.
 - Of the Senses.
 - Perfect
 - The efficient.
 - The End,
 - Principal.
 - Less principal.
 - 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Imperfect 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 from the place of the effects.

OF METHOD, OR ORDER.

Hitherto hath been the directnesse of discourse Illative.

Now followeth the directnesse of discourse Ordinate, which is an act of the mind or understanding proceeding from one part of Doctrine to another, by conferring them one with another, & knitting them together with the help of the precepts of the Method.

Method is the constitution of the parts of Doctrine, from a certain beginning unto a certain end.

And it is either

- Artificial. a
- Inartificial. b

Artificial, is which is Instituted according to the Nature of Things, and Rules of art.

The Canons hereof are five.

1 Let no Part be wanting, none Overplus.

2 Let the proceeding of Method imitate the natural proceeding and order of things; going on from things first and best known, to things after.

3 The parts before and after distinct between themselves, must agree with a kind of Harmony, in a certain beginning and end, or scope.

4 The knitting together of things before and after, should be shown in the Chapters, and Heads of the Treatise by Bands and Forms of Transition.

5 Let all the parts of the Method be of the same kind.

Method also is either

- Compositive, Synthetical. a
- Resolutive, Analytical. bb

The Canons of the Precepts of a Discipline are two.

1 Let every Precept be, Definition, Division, or Canou.

2 Let the Precepts be True, Methodical, Profitable, and informed with proper and perspicuous words.

Compositive Method, is wherein the parts of a contemplative Discipline are so disposed as that progress is made from the Universal Subject of contemplation unto the particulars, and so from Simples to Compounds.

The Canons hereof are five,

1 The parts of Compositive Method are three; First, the Subject. Secondly, The beginnings or causes. Thirdly, The affections.

2 The subject of a Science is necessarily one in Unity of Collection, and of Universality

3 The Subject is foreknown. First, That it is, Secondly, What it is. Thirdly That it hath certain Properties, or Affections.

4 The beginnings are foreknown that they are, and what they signify.

5 The Affections are foreknown what they signify.

Resolutive Method, is, wherein the parts of an operative discipline are disposed so as that from the knowledge of the end, the progress is made to the knowledge of the beginnings or means, by which that end may be brought into his subject,

The Canons hereof are six.

1 The Parts of this Method are three. First, the end to be brought in. Secondly, the Subject whereinto it is brought. Thirdly, the beginnings or means by which the end is brought in.

2 The end is foreknown, First, that it is, or that it may be produced: and Secondly, What it is.

3 The end hath double accidents; Of which, some pertain to the finding of the means by which it should be produced, and they are to be known at the first; Others pertain to the Possession and conservation of the end, and that is not needful to be foreknown.

4 The Unity of an operative discipline, dependeth on the Unity of the end.

5 The Subject is foreknown. First, that it is. Secondly, that it is capable of the end. Thirdly, that it hath accidents, which pertain next unto the end.

6 The means are not foreknown, but are handled in proceeding from Universals to Particulars; from Simples to Compounds; so as that they be profitable, and sufficient for the end.

Particular Method, is wherein a certain and special theme is disposed.

And it is either of a theme,

- Simple a
- Compound. b

Method of a Simple, is, in which a simple Theme is handled and declared.

And it is either

- Principal. 1
- Less Principal. 2

Principal, is, in which a full Progress is made from simples to more compounded.

This Progress hath nine parts.

1 The name or word of every simple thing is considered, whether Concrete, or Abstract; Withall the definition of the name is given, &c. If it be ambiguous, it is distinguished.

2 The Genus of the thing is found out by looking in the predicamental order.

3 The causes are found out and put; In substances, in respect of the Essence, Matter, and Form, in respect of the Existence, Efficient, and End; In accidentals, because Essence and Existence fall together, the Efficient and Final causes, the Object and the Subject are found out.

4 If it be a singular accident, also the antecedents, consequents, and other circumstances are considered.

5 The whole definition is made, viz. divers, even as the Theme is either Accident, or Substance.

6 The proper accidents and Effects of this thing are proposed, and often also the adjacents and concomitants are taught.

7 The theme is divided into the parts chiefly integral; For the division into the Species, if the theme be a Genus, is kept till the last place, if one would handle the matter at large.

8 The things akin unto it are laid down.

9 The things diverse and opposite are added.

Less Principal, is, when first the Definition is laid down, and then it is resolved by parts.

The Method of a compound or conjoined theme, is, wherein the handling of a conjoynt question or probleme is instituted.

The parts thereof are eight.

1 A right constitution of the probleme or state of the controversy.

2 A choice or setting down of a position, Negative; or Affirmative, which you will defend.

3 A foreknowledge of both extremes, viz. of the antecedent and consequent; as touching Limitations, Definitions, Distinctions, and so the presupposition of thine Hypothesis.

4 Confirmation of thy position.

5 A laying down of the adversaries position.

6 A foreknowledge and refutation of the adversities distinctions.

7 A solution of the adversaries Objections.

8 A repetition of the proved position, and a collection of consequences or conclusions.

In artificial Method, is, which is instituted not so much by the Order of Nature and rules of Art, as by the circumstance of the Learner and Auditor at the discretion and pleasure of the Teacher and Learner.

And thus much of the whole frame and body of the art of Logic.

OF The use and Exercise OF LOGICK.

AFTER the absolute Frame or method of the Precepts of Logic, followeth in order of Nature, and of Doctrine, the use and Exercise of the Art more fully and plainly to be delivered.

Exercise of Logic, is a function of the mind or reason, whereby the Precepts of art comprehended in the mind are indeed and work applied to the things that are to be known out of the art.

And it is either

- Particular.
- Universal.

The particular or special Exercise of Logic, is, when someone particular Logical precept, is by the example thereof illustrated and exercised: Unto this special use there need no other direction then the frame of Logical Precepts before laid down; For there the use through every Precept is declared by special Examples,

The Universal Exercise, is when some whole Rank of Logical precepts is applied to things that are to be known or recognized: Like as a Smith, when some little part of a work is to be done, taketh in his hand the Hammer only, or the Tongs; But when he hath a whole work to do, he useth the furniture of all his Smiths Tools.

So in Logic, sometime the genus, or the cause, or some accident of a thing only, is to be dealt of, and proved or refuted by a Syllogism or two; and for this the special Rules before delivered are sufficient: But these are not enough when one hath a general argument, or whole matter to treat of Logically. For a larger course is now to be taken.

This Universal Exercise is either

- The handling of a thing, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .
- The recognizing of a thing handled, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 .

Of the Tractation or handling of a thing, called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , or Generation.

Tractation (or Handling) is the meditation of a Theme, or matter to be done by Instruments of Art.

And it is either

- Simple. a
- Conjunct. b

Simple treating, is, whereby a simple Theme is explained.

A simple Theme is one thing signified by one Term only.

The handling of a simple Theme, is either

- Universal.

- Singular.

The general Canons of handling a Theme are five.

1 Let the name of the propounded theme be considered, whether it be simple; and if it be not simple, but combined of many words, whether it may be reduced to one simple word, either in the Latin, or in the Greek, or other tongue. For a word of that language is to be preferred, which signifieth a simple thing most simply.

2 When the word is found to be simple; Let it be considered whether it be a Noun Abstract or Concrete.

3 It is also to be considered whether the word of the proposed Theme be certain, or ambiguous; and if it be ambiguous, let it carefully be distinguished.

Let there be added a definition of the Noun; Either 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, according to the term, or 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, according to the Etymology and Notation: And especially the latter.

5 Having considered the definition, think then carefully of the Genus (or general) of a Theme; Namely, in what order of things, and how it is placed: and if it be nowhere found in this order among the predicaments, let it be counted for a Non •ns; And so the handling of it be ended with the consideration of the Name.

For example. If a man would treat of Purgatory; First, let him weigh the name; Then mind the Definition and Declaration of the Name by the Etymology, viz. That by this Name is signified some Infernal fire; But somewhat gentler, wherein the souls of them that are to be saved, must be purged, and roasted therein, so long as till full satisfaction be made for their sins. This Declaration of the name showeth that such a fire there is nowhere: therefore, Not to be sought in any predicament (or Rank of things.) And so it is but folly, either to define it, or declare it by the causes and properties thereof. But here note, that this consideration, Whether a thing be or not, is not to be according to the Existence (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) in some certain place, or time; but it is to be minded essentially (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) As if one would treat of Christ's Incarnation; The question, Whether it be or no, is not to be minded so, as whether it be today, or whether it shall be; But this is enough, that at any time it hath been, and now also dureth in effect, although Christ be no more Incarnate, nor brought forth. The like is also to be minded for things to come, as the day of Judgment, Resurrection, &c. For though these have not yet Existence, yet have they Essence; and because it is sure they shall be, they are to be treated of, in order and manner of things that now are.

Treating also is either

- Of a Perfect Theme. a b
- Of an Imperfect Theme. a b

A perfect theme, is, that which is perfectly placed in the order of things or predicaments; as an Universal thing, one, and whole by itself.

And it is either

- Substantial.
- Accidental.

The treating of both these is either

- Primary. 1
- Secondary. 2

Primary treating is, which, when the beginnings of the Definition are foreknown, gathereth from them the Definition, and then useth the other Logical terms for explaining the term, according to those Canons that follow pertaining to the explication of a substance.

1 When the name of the theme is weighed, and the lawful Genus found, let the difference be sought for, either by the predicamental Tables, or by some notable effect, or antecedent of a Theme known to the senses.

2 When the Genus and difference are found by its self, the Definition must be gathered and made.

3 The Definition of a substance being gathered, the form thereof and matter is distinctly to be considered.

4 Let the Form then be assigned, and (so far as the perspicuity of the Doctrine will suffer) declared.

5 After the Form, let the matter generally be weighed.

6 After, the Integral parts, which make the matter entire; let those parts at least be considered which are most principal, and primary Instruments to bring forth the operations of the Form.

7 The efficient cause Principal and Instrumental, although it pertains not to the Essence of a Substance, yet it is to be considered for the knowledge of the Existence; The like is also to be minded for the final cause.

8 The proper accidents or effects flowing from the Form, and cleaving to the whole compound, must be reckoned.

9 Then let there be added a Division of the proposed substance, by the Primary accidents, by the Integral parts, inferring a manifest distinction; and if the Theme be a Genus, let the Species thereof be recounted, which after may have their peculiar handling also if the handler be so purposed.

10 Let the things that are akin to the proposed substance be added.

11 And then let there be shown the things that are diverse and contrary.

For example, Let this Theme Animal (or living creature) be to be handled.

1 Weigh the name, which in Latin is of Anima, a Soul; which signifieth any living Form, which also is in plants; but is by an excellency given to other sensible creatures, in whom the Soul more manifestly appeareth by sense and motion. In Hebrew it is called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Cajah, of life; for that such creatures seem only to have life. Of the ambiguity of the name, or concretion, or abstraction, there needs none ado.

2 Next look for the Genus which is found in the Table of Substances to be a living body.

3 The difference restraining that Genus, is found in the same Table also to be sensitive.

4 The whole Definition therefore is, that an Animal is a living body sensitive.

5 The matter far off of an Animal, are the Instruments of life; The next matter is the Instruments of sense and motion; which taken all together are called the body of the Animal.

6 The Form near, is the Soul Vegetant; the nearest, is the Soul sensitive, which by the effects or proper accidents that cleave to the Animal, are as it were by the latter words evidently perceived.

7 Then come to the existence, and here weigh the efficient cause of an Animal: The principal Efficient, is the Forming of the youngling of an Animal, whereby the sensitive Soul is united with the body; The Instrumental cause is the Seed, the Womb, the Birth; all which may be treated of peculiarly.

8 The end is to be shown wherefore an Animal was at first created, and wherefore in time gendered; The End Universal is the glory of God the Creator; The particular is the Complement of all the degrees of life, and so the perfection of the World and Creatures, which require not only a Body vegetant, but also sensible.

9 The proper accidents of an Animal are principally, 1 Sense Inward and Outward. 2 Appetite. 3 Going. Secondarily, 1 Breathing, 2 Watching, Sleep, Dreaming.

10 The Integrant parts of the body or matter, are, 1 Similary parts, as blood and other Humours, Flesh, Bones, Sinews, Arteries. 2 Dissimilary parts principal, are the Brain, Heart, Stomack, Liver; and other less principal all over the body.

11 The division of an Animal, is, 1 By reason of the temperature and parts, into Male, and Female. 2 By the Species, into Man and Beast, which also may severally and distinctly be considered.

12 The things akin to an Animal, are, Plants, especially those that are called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Plant Animals, and half Animals, as Sponges, &c.

13 The Opposites of an Animal, are things that want Life, Sense and Motion; and Poysons, which are pernicious to the Life.

And thus much for handling a perfect Theme Substantial.

A Theme Accidental is handled according to these Canons.

1 After due consideration of the name, First think of the Order or predicament of the proposed accident; whether it be quantity, quality, Action, Passion, or Relation; For so it will appear, whether it indeed be an accident, or a Non ens, and feigned Theme.

2 When the Genus is found, let the Subject of the accident be shown; And withal, consider whether the accident treated of, be common or proper; For these two have diverse explications; Wherefore an accident should always be reduced to his first and even subject, that of a common it may be made proper.

3 Because Relation is busied between two Subjects, of which one is called the Relate, the other the Correlate, therefore in explaining of a relation, both of them must be assigned.

4 The Object then is to be minded about which the accident is occupied; and Objects bear rule in qualities and Actions.

5 The Principal efficient causes must be found out; First the near, and then the nearest causes.

6 In Relations the ground or Fundament must be inquired, and it differeth not from the nearest cause.

7 Then let the end of the accident be shown, which also bears sway chiefly in quality and action.

8 But in Relations the Term must be inquired, which is the same with the final cause.

9 Then give the definition of the accident according to the nature of every predicament, assigning besides the Genus the essential terms, as the Subject, the Object, the Efficient cause, and the End.

10 Often also the Antecedents, Connexes, Circumstances and Consequences are to be reckoned; As when the propounded Theme is an Action or Passion.

11 The effects of the proposed accident must be distinctly told.

12 A Division must be added, either into the Species, if the proposed accident be a Genus: or into other members fitting to an accident.

13 Then show the things akin thereto, or which have some affinity of nature with the proposed theme.

14 Let the diversity which is between Themes akin be shown.

15 Let the Opposites or Contraries be added.

For Example. This accidental Theme is to be handled; Calling upon God.

1 The Name is absolute.

2 The Genus in the Predicament of Action is found to be this, a religious action.

3 The Subject of this Action, is, a faithful man.

4 The Object, First, to whom it should be directed, is the whole Trinity, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, reconciled by the Son. Secondly, The Object of the things to be asked, which are Bodily and Spiritual. Thirdly, The Object for whom, is ourselves and others.

5 The Efficient cause principal, is, the manner of confidence, stirred up by the holy Ghost, by the authority and merit of Christ the Mediator, Joh. 4. Rom. 6. The outward moving cause (< in non-Latin alphabet >) is God's commandment, and his promise to hear us, Joh. 16. Psal. 150. The inward moving cause (< in non-Latin alphabet >) is, the feeling of our own wants, and remembrance of God's benefits before received▪ The Instrumental causes are the Form given by Christ, Mat. 6. and our members Inward and Outward; as heart, tongues, eyes, hands, knees, &c.

6 The end, is the obtaining of benefits, and thankful glorifying of God.

7 So the whole definition is this; Invocation is a Religious action, or operation from the motion of faith, kindled by the holy Ghost, with trust and authority of Christ the Mediator, done by a faithful man, and directed unto God propitious in his Son, for the obtaining of good things needful, and for the glorification of God's holy Name.

8 The proper accidents or things requisite, are, First, That it be done in true faith without wavering. Jam. 1. Secondly, That it be directed to God's will. Thirdly, That it be with devout inward Motions and outward gestures (if it may be.) Fourthly, That it be not hasty, limiting God a time or manner. Jsaiah 28. Fifthly, That it be conceived with brief words without any redundance of speech.

9. The effects, are Union with God, joy and comfort of mind, the obtaining of good things needful.

10. The Circumstances, are the place, now free. Joh. 4. public, or private; the time also free, at all hours, &c.

11. The things connected unto it, are, purity of life, sobriety, temptations of the Devil much to be resisted.

12. The Division, is by circumstance of the place, public or private: By the object: it is supplication (< in non-Latin alphabet >) Prayer (< in non-Latin alphabet >) Intercession (< in non-Latin alphabet >)

13. The things akin unto it, are, diligent reading of the Scripture, Meditation of holy things, continual diligence in the works of our calling.

14. The contraries, are, A corrupt conscience, an unclean life, doubting, profaneness, and contempt, blasphemy and execration.

And thus much of the primary handling of a perfect Theme.

The Secondary, is when the Definition of a Theme is put at the first beginning, and afterwards is resolved and explained by parts: This way is commonly used of many in an their treatises: And though it be good, yet is it not so artificial and profitable as the former.

Now followeth the handling of Imperfect Themes.

Imperfect Themes, are they that are imperfectly placed in the Predicaments and Order of things.

And they are imperfect, either

- In respect of our understanding.
- Of their own Nature.

In respect of our understanding, only the nature of the most high God cannot perfectly be treated of & explained.

Of its own nature, a Theme Imperfect is five-fold,

- 1 A singular thing.
- 2 A Part.
- 3 A Concrete.
- 4 A Collective.
- 5 A Privation.

A Singular thing or Individuum, is either

- Substantial. a
- Accidental. b

Substantial hath these Canons.

1 Among substantial Themes, those chiefly come to be handled in use which are called persons.

2 The Genus and Species are, in secret thought, presupposed in singulars.

3 The persons name, and Etymology, and reason of the giving of it, is to be considered.

4 Then comes to be considered the efficient cause, or beginning and birth of the person, with the Circumstances of place and Country, of time when; and then the subjects of this birth, his Father and Mother.

5 These are to be told; the accidents of the person; First, Pertaining to his body; as Stature, and Health. Secondly, to his mind; as Wit, Judgment, Memory, Learning; Also Moral Virtues, Chastity, Liberality, &c. And these may be led along his ages, as his childhood, youth, man's age,

6 The effects of the person are to be recited, what memorable things he hath done in every age, especially in his manhood.

7▪ Let the things which are akin be shown, as they that live in his time, his friends, and the things wherein the person most delighteth.

8 Finally, let the diverse things and contrary to the person, be rehearsed, as Foes, Enviars; and his death with the cause thereof, as the disease; or if it were violent, by what adversity he perished; Then the things connex to his death, if any strange signs went before: or if he spake any memorable thing at last; whereto add the consequents of his death, as his Burial and Funerals.

A singular accident, is, which cleaves to a singular substance, as either the quality▪ or action, or Passion, or Relation of it.

The Canons for handling this Theme are these.

1 Let the name be weighed, as was in a theme universal.

2 Let the Genus and Species of the propounded theme be presupposed.

3 The Subject, namely, the singular substance is to be considered; as also the Object about which it is occupied.

4 Let the antecedents, connexes, adjacents, and circumstances specially be explained.

5 Let the causes Efficient, both Principal, and Impulsive, and Instrumental be diligently discussed, and the final cause also added.

6 Let the description be gathered, by naming of the Species, assignation also of the subject, object, circumstances of time and place, with mention also of the efficient and final causes.

7 Let the proper Requisites and Effects be added.

8 Let the Consequents be named.

9 Let the things akin be rehearsed,

10 Let the things diverse be compared, and the opposites at last assigned.

For example, Let Christ's ascension be the theme to be handled,

1 Ascension is the scansion or moving from an inferior place to a superior.

2 The Genus of it is a motion local, whose extremes are 〈...〉 what, and unto what, and then the mean by which the 〈...〉 is made▪ Now here we are to mind whether Christ's Ascension be a Natural moving, or Supernatural. And we may find it to be a Natural moving, First, In respect of the Subject, which is a natural Body. Secondly, and in respect of the terms and mean. But in respect of the Efficient cause and end, it is Supernatural.

3 The Subject of this ascension, is Christ's whole person; not absolutely, but restrictively, according to that part which could move from place to place, which is his human nature. As for the Object, Local moving is not occupied about it.

4 The Antecedents far off, were Christ's Ministry, and all that he did in his life, the nearer, are his Passion, Resurrection, conversing after with his Disciples forty days, and bringing of them to Mount-Olivet &c. The Connexes, are the term from whence; Namely, Mount-Olivet: The term whereto, namely, the Heaven of Heavens. The means by which, are the Air, and Sphere of fire, and other Orbs, thorough which his Body went. The Circumstance of places agrees with the terms; The time was forty days after his Resurrection: The other Connexes, were, the gazing of his Disciples, the appearing of the Angels, &c.

5 The principal Efficient cause, was the virtue of the Godhead, the inward moving cause (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) is Christ's love to his Elect: The outward moving cause (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) is the profit and salvation of his Elect. The final cause in respect of Christ, is, the full possession of glory. Secondly, In respect of his Elect, to fulfill his kingly office, by defending and ruling of his Church; Also, his Prophetical and Priestly office, by sending the holy Ghost to teach them, and the interceding for them with the Father.

6 Hereupon the Description ariseth, this, That Christ's ascension was a Local moving, whereby he, as touching his body, leaving the earth on Mount-Olivet, came thorough all the Regions of the Elements by virtue of the Godhead into the glorious Heaven to possess full glory, and to defend his Church against all Enemies, and by the power of the holy Ghost from Heaven to teach and instruct, and by Intercession to commend us to the Father.

7 The Effects of his ascension, are, the sending of the holy Ghost, the gathering of his Church by the Ministry of his Apostles; the suppressing of the Enemies, and defense of his Church; sitting on God's right hand, and Intercession.

8 The Consequent of his Ascension, was, the Apostles wondering, and returning to Jerusalem; Fear, and dwelling together till the Spirit was sent down.

9 The things akin to his Ascension, were, his Resurrection, the ascending of Enoch, and especially of Elias.

10 Diversity may be shown between those; for the ascension of Enoch and Elias was not a Victory over sin and the Devil; nor a triumph of merit, but of grace; not by their own power, but by another's, &c. And the Opposites of his ascension, are, His base estate on earth, and that disparition & vanishing away, which Ubiquitaries feign of his Body, &c.

And thus much of the handling of a singular accident.

The handling of a Part hath these Canons.

1 Let the name of the part in several tongues be considered, and the Notation shown.

2 Because every Part is a thing Incomplete, a complete Genus or Species of it cannot be had, but it must be referred unto the predicament in which the whole is: therefore, by Comparison to the whole, and Relation to the whole, the Nature of the Part is of our understanding to be conceived; For every part is part of the whole; and if it be cut from the whole, it deserves almost no consideration, because the use of it is ceased.

3 It must be considered whether the part be Essential, or Integral.

4 If the part be Essential, let it be minded whether it be the Form, or the Matter: If the Form, it must chiefly be explained by his Operations, or Forces, and Effects. If it be the Matter, the disposition of it must be considered, by which it is apt to receive the Form, and so the Instruments by which the operations of the Form are wrought; and so let the whole body be subdivided into parts greater and principal, lesser and least of all.

5 Let it be considered, whether the Integral part be similar, or dissimilar: For Similars come rarely under consideration, because it is of the same name, nature, and properties with the whole, but dissimilars are wont chiefly to deserve explication.

6 In every part therefore, besides the name, there must be considered 1 The quantity and figure▪ 2 The quality or temperature. 3 The situation, and how it is placed, and knit with other parts. 4 The uses or actions of the parts, for whose sake this Instrument is of Nature made. 5 The lesser parts of which it is compounded.

7 After this, let the things akin to the part be weighed as are either parts like unto it; and finally let the Opposites be added, as are in man's body, the peculiar diseases of the parts.

The use of this Doctrine of the Part is chiefly seen in anatomies, and in astronomy, and architecture or building; But most of all in the anatomy, and parts of a man's body.

A Concrete accident is explained chiefly by these Canons.

1 Besides the ambiguity of the name, and the Etymology, let the Absolute accident be considered of which the Concrete is denominated, because the resolution of the Concrete into the Absolute is the best explication of the Concrete.

2 In the accident absolute, whereinto the Concrete is resolved; let the Genus, Causes, Objects, Effects, Things akin, and Opposites be considered, and let them be applied to the Concrete accident after the same manner.

3 In relations, concretis are often wont to be taken for absolutes, by the unheedy: therefore, there needeth great discretiō.

4 When the nature of the absolute accident is perceived, the description of the Concrete may be annexed, viz. that which is built by the consideration of the absolute.

Collectives are diverse things, especially substances united together, not by any essential Band, but by Number and Relation.

The Canons for explaining Collectives, are these.

1 Besides the Name, consider whether the Collection be made of many accidents, or of Substances.

2 Consider whither unto those many Subjects gathered together, there cleave any Relation, and then that Relation is to be explained by the Precepts given before.

For example. To treat of the Church, which is a collection of many singular persons, 1 Consider the name in Hebrew, Greek, and other Languages; And then mind it after a double kind. 1 In respect of the Material thing. 2 And in respect of the Formal. The Material of the Church, be God's people: therefore, the Church may after a sort be referred unto Substance: And after a sort to quantity, or Number. But because to this Number there cleaves a Relation, therefore first of all thou must turn thy mind to Relation: For the Church is the Communion of Saints; and all Communion is Relation. Now the Relation of the Church is twofold. 1 Of the members to the head. 2 And of the members one to another: therefore, the Church may be defined, The company of the Elect united in one head Christ, and one with another in the Bond of the Holy Ghost, unto the fruition of eternal Salvation.

A Privative Theme hath these Canons.

1 Besides the name, consider the Genus of that thing whose Privation is propounded, to wit, so as that there may be a calling back unto the Habit.

2 Then let the description of the Privation be added, the Privative causes being added to the denial of the habit, and the Subject wherein the privation is.

3 Things akin and repugnant, may so be added in Privatives, that it may be thought the opposition of the privation is perfection.

And thus much of the handling of a simple Theme.

A conjoined Theme, is, which is combined of simples; So as it is made the matter and object of the second and third function which the reason or understanding of man exerciseth.

The handling of a conjunct Theme, according to the second part of Logic, is, which combineth and constituteth some proposition or sentence.

The Canons hereof are these.

1 Let the antecedent and consequent of the proposition be rightly ordered, each one in his place.

2 Let the Negative Particle to make a Negative Proposition, be put in that place where the Band of the Affirmation may be broken.

3 Let the note of universality be rightly placed, & shown, whether it be absolute or limited, distributive or collective.

4 Let the consequent rightly be restrained and limited to the antecedent.

5 Let the Conjunctions, specially the conditionals rightly be distinguished in the proposition from the other parts.

6 Let a conditional proposition be revoked by cogitation of the mind unto a simple proposition.

7 Let the sentence constituted be rightly reciprocate and turned.

8 Let an improper proposition be reduced to a proper.

9 Let a contingent proposition be called to a necessary.

10 Let it be considered unto what Discipline the proposed sentence doth pertain: Which may be learned by the Nature of the simple terms in the proposition; For if these be Theological, the proposition belongs to Theology: If Political, to Politicks, and so the rest.

And this may suffice for the handling of a conjoynt theme, by the Instruments of the second part of Logic.

The handling or generation of the third part, is either

- Syllogistical. a
- Methodical. b

Syllogistical, is, when any probleme or conjoynt proposition is handled by confirming, or refuting, that the truth, if it be unknown, may be found out: if obscure, may be declared; if doubtful, may be confirmed.

And this handling of Logic, is called Disputation. Disputation is either

- Solitary. 1 *
- Social. 2 *

Solitary disputation, is when ourselves secretly treat of any controverted Problem, or question, the adversary being not present, or instant.

In this, two things are to be considered. 1 The question itself, or state of the controversy. 2 The manner of confirming and refuting.

The question (or Problem) is the matter subjected to Disputation. The Canons of this matter are these.

1 Let not the matter propounded to be disputed of, violate Piety and Religion. (As, whether there be a God, whether Parents are to be honored, &c.)

2 Let it not be of things plainly manifest, & without doubt.

3 Let it be profitable, grave, not inept, or ridiculous.

4 Let it not exceed the capacity of man's mind.

5 Let it be framed with words perspicuous, and not ambiguous.

6 Let it be such as is this day controverted.

A Problem propounded to be disputed of, is either

- Perfect.
- Imperfect.

Perfect is, whose terms are Universal, so as they may be proved, or disproved, by necessary and artificial arguments.

Imperfect, is, whose terms are singular, so as they have need to be proved; chiefly by Inartificial arguments taken from authority of Writers, or from testimony of the senses.

The handling of a Problem, is either

- Primary.
- Secondary.

Primary, is, which is instituted according to these Canons.

1 Let the state of the controversy be rightly constituted, and without all ambiguity, by choosing the Affirmant, or Negant Thesis which thou wilt defend.

2 Let a full precognition of the future proving and refuting be instituted by definition of the Antecedent & Consequent; Also by fit Limitations and Distinctions which are the future Principles of all the disputation to come.

3 Let the propounded Thesis be confirmed by arguments. 1 Artificial, drawn from the nature of the Antecedent and Consequent. 2 By Inartificial, that is, Testimonies and Authorities.

4 After confirmation let our Adversaries Thesis be set down directly opposite to our Thesis.

5 Let a Refutation be added, both of the Distinctions by which they answer unto our arguments, and also of the adversaries Objections.

6 Let the proved Thesis be repeated, and let the Consequences (〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) be gathered from the conclusion, confirmed by the arguments.

Sociall disputation hath in it two parts, one of the Opponent, the other of the Answerer.

The Canons of these parts, some are common to both parts, and some proper to each of them.

The common Canons are six.

1 Let there be brought unto disputation a good intention of the mind, which seeks not glory, but truth.

2 Let the mind be pure from all prejudices.

3 Let the disputers agree whether of them shall oppose, or answer.

4 Let both parties bind themselves to the Laws and Rules of Logic.

5 Let them agree between themselves of certain foreknown Principles.

6 Let brevity and plainness be kept in opposing, and answering all ambiguities, and Ambages of Oratorious Declamations be avoided.

The Canons of the Opponent are six.

1 The Opponents parts are two: 1 To move the objection. 2 To insist upon the solution given

2 As touching moving the question, let the position diligently be weighed, against which thou wilt oppose.

3 The position being carefully weighed, let the mean terms be brought forth for that conclusion thou desirest to infer, from the nature of the Antecedent and Consequent, and then also from testimony of chief Authors; Yet having withal a choice of arguments.

4 Let the arguments be clearly and briefly included in a Syllogistical Form.

5 Let the Opponent use a double kind of argumentation; Direct, or Offensive, and then that which leadeth to absurdity; and let him prefer this oft times before the other

6 If either of the premises in the Syllogism need manifest proof, let not the Opponent expect until the proof of the Major, or Minor be required; But let himself by and by confirm his proposition by making a Prosylogism.

The Opponents duty in urging, or insisting on the Objection, hath these Canons.

1 Having heard the answer to the objection, let the Opponent in secret thought examine with himself, whether it be unto the Form, or the Matter.

2 If the Form of the argument be refused, let the Rule of Logic, against which it faulteth, be required; and if he acknowledge it to be a fault, let him urge it no more. For it is childish to go about to defend a naughty Form of Syllogism.

3 If answer be given to the matter, as for the most part it is, he must look whether it be by the distinction of an ambiguous Word, or a Limitation, or a Denial; And if it be none of these, let the Answerer be minded to deal Logically, and to use some certain form of Answer, which is fitting unto either of the Premises.

4 If the Answer be by Distinction, let it be examined by the Rules and Laws of a good Distinction, set down in the Frame of Logic, and let the like be done for Limitation.

5 Let there be endeavor also that from the answer given there be a Syllogism made leading to absurdity: Namely, so that the sum of the answer be put in place of the Minor, and some other proposition manifestly true in place of the Major; from which an absurd conclusion being inferred, may convince the answer to have been evil.

And thus much for the Opponents duty.

The Answerer is either Inferior, or Superior.

The Inferior Answerer, is he that absolutely is so called, as that hath propounded the Thesis to dispute of.

The Answerers duty, is both to assume the argument, and to solve it.

The taking of the argument hath two Canons.

1 Let the Answerer diligently look that he take the argument faithfully without any Circumlocutions; and for that purpose let him take to himself some leisure.

2 If the argument be not formed by the Opponent, let him bid it to be formed; and if he cannot form it, let the Objection be rejected; or if the Form of the argument be not plainly desperate, let the Answerer himself form it.

His other Duty to Solve, hath these Canons,

1 When the Form is agreed of, let first the conclusion be minded, as whether the Opponent hath rightly formed the state of the controversy: and whether he hath lawfully opposed his position or conclusion unto our position.

2 If the conclusion be rightly framed, Let the mind have recourse straightway to the Major Proposition: As, weigh whether it be true, and whether it be simply true, or but after a sort, and whether it be compounded, having a faulty knitting or composition.

3 Let the Answer never be by denial, if the argument may be by Distinction and Limitation.

4 The Minor Proposition seldom comes to be limited, or distinguished, but often to be denied.

5 Let not the Answerer rashly reject the authorities of famous men, but deal thus. 1 Let him cause their words faithfully to be recited. 2 Let him reconcile them what he can to his sentence. 3 If he cannot, then let him oppose the authority of another man as famous as he, or more.

6 To a direct Answer, which is so to be made as we now have shown, let there be sometime added an indirect answer, as, chiefly a Retortion, whereby we show how the Adversaries argument maketh for us.

The duties of the Superior Answerer or President, are two, to Rule, and to Help.

For Ruling, Let the President diligently attend whether they dispute to the purpose, and abide in the matter that is within the lists of Disputation: which if it be not done, let him warn both the Opponent and Answerer of their duty.

For Help. If the Answerer fail, let the President show a more solid and firm answer; Yet, without the Answerers shame; But if the Answerer give a tolerable answer, let him praise it, and explain it somewhat more fully for the Audtories sake.

And thus much for Generation, or Syllogistical handling.

The Generation or handling of Method, is, whereby we frame a Method and Order to our Tractation.

Ordination therefore or Disposition, is either

- Particular.
- Universal.

Particular Ordination, is, whereby the Method is framed of any simple or conjoined Question or Theme; This hath been treated of enough before in the Precepts of handling a single and conjoined Theme.

Universal Ordination, is whereby the whole Discipline or Frame of any Art or Science is disposed.

The Canons hereof are these.

1. He that would orderly Frame any Discipline, let him first mind of what sort it is, either Contemplative, or Operative.

2. Necessary things which cannot by man be produced, are Delivered in Contemplative Disciplines, whose Method is called Compositive.

3. He therefore that would dispose a Contemplative Discipline, must proceed thus. 1. That he fore know the Subject of it touching the name. 2. That he deliver the Principles of the Subject. 3. And that he follow the properties of the Subject which flow from the Principles or Causes.

4. Operative Disciplines are handled. 1. By the End. 2. By the Subject whereinto the end is to be brought. And 3. By the means whereby his end may be obtained. And this Method is called Resolutive, (< in non-Latin alphabet >).

The Operative Disciplines thus to be disposed, are, Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Ethics, Economics, Politicks; and the three Superior Faculties, Theology, Law, Physic or Medicine.

For example, In the disposition of Logic, First, there is mention made of the end; Namely, The direction of men's thoughts in the knowledge of things; then the Subject of it: Namely, the three Operations of man's mind. And then that w^{ch} remaineth in this Art, is all spent in handling the Instruments or means, by which this end may be obtained of man, which means are taught in the three parts of Logic.

Hitherto we have heard of handling or Generation separate, or a part, which is instituted according to each of the parts of Logic.

Now followeth combined generation which mingleth the use of all the parts of Logic together.

Combined generation or treating is either

- In Teaching. a
- In Learning. b

Teaching is of two kinds,

- Accurate or exact, called Acroamatical▪ a
- Popular, called Exoterical, b

The accurate kind of Teaching, is, which is instituted according to the strict Rules of Logic, and is not so much applied to the capacity of the Learner, as to the nature and distinct knowledge of the things.

The General Canons hereof are five.

1. In Teaching, three things are to be looked on. 1. The Teacher. 2. The Learner. 3. The manner of teaching.
2. Let the Teacher apply himself chiefly to the nature of that thing which he would teach; and therefore let him not choose every Learner; but one that is of a good wit, and capable of exact Doctrine.
3. The Method of teaching must be esteemed by the nature of the things and Laws of Logic, not by the pleasure of the Teacher, or capacity of the Learner.
4. Let brevity in teaching be used, such as is fitted for the nature and greatness of the thing.
5. Let the words be fitted only to the understanding and mind, not to the affections and delight.

Exact manner of teaching is either

- Free. a

- Textual. b

Free, is when we do not explain other men's words or writings: But we ourselves propound the thing

And it is either

- Of the whole Discipline. a
- Of some part or Theme. b

A whole entire Discipline is taught by these Canons.

1. Let the Teachers first care be, to perceive whether the Discipline that he will teach, be Contemplative or Operative.
2. Let the Frame of the Discipline, if it be Contemplative▪ be disposed according to the Precepts of Compositiv▪ Method; if it be Operative, according to the Precepts of resolute Method.
3. After the things to be foreknown, let there be a right partition of the Discipline.
4. Let the Precepts be given in a Lawful Order by Partition, and Subpartition, by Definitions, Divisions and Canons.
5. Let the Precepts have these three Requisites. 1. That they be true. 2. That they be profitable. 3. That they be Methodically disposed.
6. Let Commentaries be added to the Precepts; But so as the Scholar may discern the difference between the Precepts and Commentaries.

A Theme is taught by these Canons.

1. Let the teacher look whether the Theme he is about to propound be Simple or Compound.
2. If it be Simple, let him handle it by a simple Method; if conjoined, then by a conjoynt Method [Of both these, Rules have been before.]

Textual, or a strict kind of teaching, is when we declare to the Hearers any Authors text.

And this is handled both by

- Resolution.
- Illustration.

Resolution, is the recognizing of those Artifices by which the Author hath handled his purpose.

Illustration, is either of Words or Things.

Words are either

- Simple.
- Conjoynt.

Both of them are Illustrated by help of

- Grammar.
- Logic.

By Grammar help, the Natural meaning of words is shown, Synonomies are compared, Constructions are weighed.

By help of Logic a doubtful word is distinguished, and a Figurative is reduced to a Proper, a dark Proposition is made clear.

The Things themselves are declared by the Essential *•*ope of the text propounded.

Ev•ry Text is either

- Doctrinal. 1. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉
- Practical. 2.
- Mixt. 3.

A Doctrinal Text, is, which is referred unto knowledge only. This is declared, 1. By revocation to some Method. 2. By filling up those things which in the Text are wanting for the full handling of it.

Practical writings are declared either

- Historically.
- Rhetorically.

Historically we declare anything, 1. By bringing like Histories. 2. By explaining the Chronology, Topography, and Prosopography (that is, description of time, place and person,) 3. And by translating the Hypothesis to a Thesis, or Particular to a General.

Rhetorical kind of Teaching pertains to popular, and consisteth chiefly in Amplifying and Augmenting: Of these it is not here further to be spoken of, they rather pertaining to Rhetoric then Logic.

And thus much for the way of right teaching.

To Learn, is to comprehend in mind those things which the Teacher propoundeth, and we in our Judgment do approve.

The manner of Learning is either

- Exact.

- Popular.

To Learn exactly, Acroamatic, is to conform ones judgment in the comprehension of things to the Nature and Order of the things themselves, and to the exact judgment of the Teacher.

And thus men learn by these four things. 1. Attention▪ 2. Ordination. 3. Selection. 4. Imitation.

Attention, is the attaining and firm impression of the things taught.

The Canons hereof are three.

1. Let a Teacher be chosen Methodical and perspicuous, and one that knoweth the exact manner of teaching, and is willing faithfully to communicate it with thee.

2. A living voice is always to be preferred before a dead or written.

3. Let the Learner meditate with himself alone the things heard or read, and let him take occasion of speaking to others that which he learneth.

The Ordination or ordering of studies hath these Canons.

1. Let the Study of words be discerned at first from the Study of things, and let one time be bestowed in the learning of Tongues, another in the comprehending of things.

2. On Tongues, let the flowring years of youth be bestowed: For unto these there needeth little judgment, but only memory which hath vigor in youth.

3. Because Tongues are learned for the things, and Words are only Images of things: therefore less time is to be bestowed in manly age, on words, then on things.

4. For the right ordering of the Study of any Tongue, two things are required. 1. A Methodical & dexter Frame of the Art of Grammar. 2. A Comprehension of the meaning of every word in that Tongue.

5. As for the Study of things, they are learned either in whole Disciplines, or in particular Themes.

6. Frames of Instrumental Disciplines must needs be learned before the Principal.

7. Instrumental Disciplines pertaining to things, are Rhetoric and Logic, needful to be learned before other Disciplines: For they are the keys whereby the doors of other Disciplines are unlocked.

8. Among Principal Disciplines, one may begin with Ethics then proceed to Physicks, Mathematics, Metaphysics, till at length they stay in Theology, or some other that is aimed at.

9. When the Frame of the Discipline is rightly ordered and comprehended in the mind, then come to the reading of Authors, which serve to confirm or illustrate that Discipline.

10. The Learner must diligently distinguish the Commentaries of the Precepts, from the Precepts themselves: and in the Precepts observe this Order, that he keep in mind the Definitions and Divisions, making Tables for the same use; And then, that he turn him to the Canons and Rules, and have them diligently, both in understanding and Memory.

11. Let the Learner handle one Discipline only at one time; and having done that, let him go then to another in order as before is said, beginning at the Instrumentals.

12. In the Learning, let Ardent love of the thing which is learned be cherished in thy mind; and that which is begun, let it be continued without interruption.

Selection, is whereby the things which we read in others, worthy observation; or which we ourselves do find out, we dispose under certain Classes and Titles: commonly it is called the gathering of Common places.

Common places are titles Methodically disposed, unto which things read and meditated, are referred.

And they are either of

- Words.
- Things.

Places of Words are either of

- Common Words.
- Words of Art.

Places of common Words, are again either of

- Single. Words.
- Conjoynt. Words.

Places of Single words are in Lexicons, and in the Nomenclator.

Places of Conjoynt Words or Phrases, seem to be things best disposed, if you gather only the more solemn and usual Forms, either in common life, or in the faculty which thou profesest according to the order of the things themselves.

Common places of Words of Art, are so gathered as the places of the things themselves.

Places of things themselves are either

- Theoretical.
- Practical. †

Theoretical, which pertain to knowledge only.

And they be either of

- Essential Precepts.
- Commentaries.

Places of Precepts, are the seats of matters which are disposed in every Discipline, according to the proper Method; The matters of every Discipline are to be disposed according to the Method of the simple Question, as, that the first title be of the name of every Theme, another of the Genus, and so forward as the Order is diligently designed in the handling of a simple Theme.

Places or Commentaries pertain chiefly to Disputations and Controversies which are moved about any matter of the Frame of any Discipline.

The Canons of the common places of controversies, are.

1. The Controversies that fall about the matter, ought diligently to be severed, and the titles or places of these, from the titles of the simple things themselves looked upon in their nature.
2. The order of the Controversies, depends upon the Order of the things.
3. Under-titles also of Controversies must be disposed according to the members of the Problem to be handled.
4. But whether to absolute simple titles any man will subject the titles of Controversies, or assign a peculiar Volume to Controversies, that is Arbitrary, or at ones pleasure.
5. Controversies should be brought to a few, as much as may be, that in every Discipline, only the necessary sums, and such as be this day in use, be set into a common place.

Practick places be either

- Rhetorical. a
- Historical. b

By Rhetorical places here we mean not those that pertain to the Precepts of Rhetoric; But which are referred to the use and practice of the Precepts.

The Canons of gathering common places Ecclesiastical are these.

1. Let the Common places of Ecclesiastical Rhetoric be distributed into two Volumes; Of which let the first contain places gathered for teaching, the other places that pertain to moving.
2. The first Volume of teaching-places, let it be so furnished, that, according to the Chapters of the Catechism, the titles of the Common places, of which the people are wont to be taught, may be noted.

3. Under these titles, let Forms be written in which any head of Religion may popularly be propounded in the mother Tongue, that the people may be taught both truly and perspicuously.

4. The other Volume of moving places, should be disposed according to the chief affections, which by Sermons are to be moved.

5. In the first place may be put the title of the motion of Repentance, which again may be divided into his undertitles.

6. Next we may come to the Affection of love and desire, or Adhortation.

7. Let the last Affection be of Joy and Consolation.

Historical places are either

- Simple.
- Compound.

Simple, are examples of Virtues, Vices, Punishment, and of Rewards, whose disposition is to be made according to the Frame of Ethics.

Compound places are titles of Aphorisms, Ethick, Oeconomick, Politick, Ecclesiastic; which (as it were Practick Conclusions) are proved by their Examples as Induction.

Imitation is the Conformation of the Learner unto the Image of some Notable Doctor.

Imitation is either

- Grammatical.
- Rhetorical.
- Logical.

Grammatical Imitation is about Words and Phrases.

Rhetorical is chiefly in Amplifying and Adorning, and it is learned in Institutes best from Rhetorical common places.

Logical Imitation, is, when we conform our understanding unto the understanding and judgment of excellentest Wits in the handling of a simple and conjoined Theme.

And thus much of the first part of the Exercise of Logic; Namely, of Tractation or Generation.

OF The Recognizing of a thing handled, OR ANALYSIS.

ANalysis (or Resolution) is a Logical Exercise whereby the Artifices are recognized, by which the handling of any matter hath been instituted.

The General Canons of Resolution are two.

1. Every Resolution is understood by the Construction; for with what Artifices anything is constructed or framed; with them it is also resolved or unloosed.

2. Every Analysis consisteth in two things. 1. In the knowledge of the thing or work to be resolved. 2. In the weighing the manner or Artifice whereby the work is Framed.

Analysis is either

- Grammatical.
- Rhetorical.
- Logical.

Grammatical resolution, is which weigheth a simple or compounded word, as touching the forming and fit knitting together for the learning of any Language.

Rhetorical resolution, is whereby the Artifices are examined of Amplifications and Adornations in any Oration, or other writing.

Logical resolution, is whereby are weighed the Artifices of Explication, Probation, and Ordination or Method: which are used of the Author in making the work.

This resolution is either

- Separate. a
- Combined. b

Separate, wherein the handling of one Theme is weighed apart.

And it is either of a Theme

- Simple, a
- Conjoyned. b

Resolution of a Simple Theme, is whereby the Artifices used in a simple Tractation are Recognized.

The Canons hereof are these.

First of all, let the Theme itself be gathered out of the Text, as being the Object and Scope of the whole Resolution.

2. Let it be diligently minded, whether the Theme be perfect or imperfect, Singular or Universal; for hereon hangeth the applying of the Terms, which may be used in the handling of any Theme.

3. It is also to be minded to what Discipline the Theme of the propounded Text doth belong.

4. Because it seldom falls out that the Authors do explain any Theme by all the Instruments of the first Part of Logic: therefore in Resolving, the mind is to be applied unto some certain Instruments by which the Author handled his Theme.

5. Let Amplifications be diligently severed from the Explication of the Theme, instituted by the Terms thereof.

6. Let the Terms by which a Theme is handled of an Author, be judged by the Canons of the first Part of Logic; as whether it be a Genus, a Cause, a Property, or an Effect.

Resolution of a conjoined Theme is either of the second, or of the third Part of Logic.

Resolution of the second part of Logic, is, which turns over Sententious Texts; wherein mere propositions are contained without proofs.

Resolution of the third Part of Logic is either.

- Syllogistical. a
- Methodical. b

Syllogistical Resolution, is, whereby the handling of a Conjoynt Question is unfolded, According to these Canons following.

1. Let the Propositions or Conjoynt Theme of the Author be first of all gathered out of the Text.

2. That Proposition, if it be not by the Author put in the Indicative Mood must be reduced thereunto.

We must look if the proposition be often repeated in the Text; for these repetitions must be gathered into one, and counted but for one Proposition.

4. But if the Proposition be not only repeated, but also explained, or limited by the Author, that explication and limitation is to be shown before the Resolution of the Arguments. And if the Author have not explained or limited it, and yet the Proposition needeth explanation and limitation, we ourselves ought to do it.

5. Let it be considered, whether the propounded Theme be universal or singular, or whether it be a \langle in non-Latin alphabet \rangle , or an \langle in non-Latin alphabet \rangle .

6. Let it also be considered whether it be a Theme doctrinal, or practical.

7. After the Theme is thus considered, let the next ca•e be of the Means by which the Theme is handled of the Author, which are Arguments either proving or refuting, or Anticipations, or unloosing of objections, or amplifications, or exaggerations.

8. Of the Arguments, We are first to mind whether they be artificial, or inartificial i. e. Testimonies.

9. Let the artificial Mean be reduced to the place of Invention; and conferred with the Antecedent and Consequent of the propounded Conclusion.

10. We must look whether any of the premises be omitted▪ by the Author in the Text, and then he that resolveth must add them.

11. If any of the Premises be proved by a Prosyllogism, then must we use the same process in resolving the Prosyllogism that was used before in the primary Syllogism.

12. Let the confirming Arguments be distinguished from the refuting.

13. If the Author bring in a secret Objection, that also must diligently be distinguished from the Confirmation, and reduced to a syllogistical form: We must also mark how the Text answers to this Objection.

14. Let Amplifications be referred to their certain places, and Adornations to the certain Figures of Rhetoric.

Methodical Resolution, is, whereby the Artifices of Method are examined.

The Canons thereof are three.

1. As Method is Universal or Particular; so must the Resolution also needs be made, Either according to the Parts of Universal Method, or according to the Canons of particular Method.

2. The Bonds of knitting together, and of passing from one point to another in the Method, must in the Resolving diligently be shown.

3. If any things occur in the Author, either superfluous, or strange from the propounded Theme; he that resolveth must give warning of them.

And thus much of Simple Resolution or separate.

Combined Resolution, is, whereby is unfolded any Treatise made by the Author, according to more Parts of Logic.

And it is either of a whole Discipline, or of some Writing or Treatise pertaining to some Discipline.

The Resolution of a whole Discipline, is, whereby the Method of any Frame or Body of Discipline is unfolded.

The Canons of which Resolution, are these.

1. Let the Praecognita, or things fore-known of the proposed Discipline be so instituted, that first it may appear whether it be a Contemplative, or an Operative Discipline.

2. If it be Contemplative, then the whole Resolution must be directed to these three as to a most certain Loadstar; Namely, that first the Subject of the Discipline be inquired;

Afterwards, the Species of this Subject, and also the affections both General and Special, and then the causes or beginnings of these affections.

3. And if it be an Operative Discipline, also three things must be inquired in the Authors Writings. 1. The end that is to be got by the Operation. 2. The Subject whereunto this end is to be brought. And 3. The means by which it is to be brought in.

4. Let the Precepts always be distinguished from the Commentaries.

An Authors Treatise is Resolved by these Canons.

1. Mind, whether the writing be accurate (Acroamatical)▪ or popu•ar (Exoterical), or mixed.

2. Let lawful foreknowledges be made of the Efficient cause, or Author of the Writing, of the Scope of his Writing; of the Object, if it be an Epistle to any.

3. Let a general partition be made of the whole Treatise; and if it be divided into Chapters, let every Chapter be referred to his part.

4. A general Resolution being so made, then come to a particular Resolution of every Member & Chapter; wherein, when any Theme, Simple or Conjoynt is handled, let the process of the Resolution be made according to the Precepts before given of either Theme.

And thus endeth the Doctrine of the Exercise of Logic:

Blessed be God.

FINIS.

P-HA-12. The communion of saints A treatise of the fellowship that the faithful have with God, and his angels, and one with another; in this present life. Gathered out of the holy Scriptures, by H.A. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?

THE COMMVNION of Saints. A treatise of the fellowship that the faithful have with God, and his Angels, and one with another; in this present life.

Gathered out of the holy Scriptures, by H. A.

Let thy hand help me (Lord,) for I have chosen thy precepts.

Psal. 119. 173.

Imprinted at Amsterdam by Giles Thorp. 1607.

To the Christian Reader, Grace mercy and peace from God be multiplied.

THE communion of Christians with the Lord and among themselves, is a doctrine (good reader) both needful and comfortable to be known: for it is the stay and strength of the soul in many temptations, and the means to conserve the Church steadfast in faith and love. And if in this point men's minds be settled aright, upon the ground of God's word; they will be as the boards of the Tabernacle standing upright, with their tenons sasted in sockets of silver. For what is sweeter to a troubled conscience, then the assurance of salvation; and what is better to stablish our weak & fainting faith, then when both flesh and heart do fail, to know & feel, that God is the rock of our heart, and our portion forever? Again, how good is it, & how pleasant, for brethren to dwell together in unity! like the precious ointment on Aaron's head, & the dew on the mountains of Zion. God hath appointed his holy son Jesus, to be the head and governor of his people; the author of eternal salvation to all the that obey him. He hath set up also the kingdom of Christ on earth, which is his Church▪ the pillar and ground of truth. He is the light of the world, whom all must follow, that would have the light of life; & Jerusalem his spouse, is made bright by his glory, & the people which ar saved shall walk in the light of it. He is the Father, this the mother of us all. Of the Son it is said,happy ar all that shroud in him, for he is our hiding place from the wind, our refuge from the tempest of God's wrath: of Zion also it is said, y' the poor of his people shall shroud in it; for there hath the Lord created a cloud by day, and flaming fire by night, (as when he brought his Israel out of Egypt) & upon all the glory, is a defense; there is a shadow in the day for the heat, a refuge & shelter for the storm and for the rayn. It is requisite therefore, that all men come to Christ, if they would have life, and by him unto the Father, & abide in communion with them both; that they may be found in him, and have the justice which is of God through faith; that they may know him, and the virtue of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his afflictions, & be made conformable unto his death: this is as the first and great commandment of the law, & the second is like unto it, that they seek the place which he hath chosen to put his name there, & love the place where his honor dwelleth, where he feedeth & causeth (his flock) to lie-down at noon; that thither they bring their riches, their glory & honor, that of every such one the Lord may count when he writeth the people, He was born there; that so being Christ's, and children of the free woman, & heirs by promise; they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among thē which ar sanctified by faith in him: for he hath said, that his elect shall inherit his mountayn, & his servants shall dwell there. But, two things there are, which will hinder our feet frō running this way, if we beware not of them: the one is, too much liberty which many men take in the faith of the gospel and obedience of the same, whiles they turn God's grace into wantonness, and abuse his mercy to the fulfilling of their own lusts and licenciousnes; whereas they should make an end of their salvation in fear and trembling, knowing that even the righteous ar scarcely saved. Whiles also they take boldness to communicate in spiritual actions with any, supposing that the sins of some, or of the public congregation cannot hurt them, especially if in heart they disallow the evil, and condemn the same. Such men seem not to discern the nature of communion, how far it reacheth; or the contagiō of syn, how far it infecteth. They seem neither to hav learned the Law which taught that a man by bearing or touching holy things, was not himself made holy thereby, but a polluted person touching any of them, made them vnclear: nor the doctrine of the gospel, which confirmeth, that they which eat of the sacrifices ar par takers of the altar; & all they one bread & one body, w^{ch} partake of one bread; where if there be but a little leaven, it maketh sour the whole lump. And then look how far they partake with other men's sins; so far ar they in danger, to receive of their plagues.

The other impediment, is over much straytnes which some men hav in their own bowels: whiles their feeble consciences ar too much affected, both with their own & others infirmities. Such had need to have their knowledge and faith increased, their harts enlarged, least by expecting a greater perfection in themselves and others, then is to be found upon earth, they faint & fall. Let such look on the image of Christ, as he is portrahed in the scriptures, whiles the chastisemē of our peace was laid vpō him; so shall they find balm for their wounded consciences; and healing for their souls by his stripes; and their shivered bones will rejoice. •or of his cup must we all drinck our parts, & be baptized with his baptism, into his death, before we can taste the sweetness of his life; & be under the rigor of that school-master the Law like servants, ere we can perceive the adoption of sons, & liberty of his faith and Gospel. And if he which knew no syn, and had but our sins imputed unto him, felt such fears and sorrows in his precious sowl, and was so smitt•n of God and humbled, so despised and rejected of the world: what shall we expect, in whose•le•h there dwelleth no good thing. Let them also look upon the estate of Christ's church in all ages from the beginning, how it hath been vexed with troubles & terrors, within & without, & they shall find Zion's case to be continually as a woman in travel, whose payns & infirmities are sometimes so great, that the children come to the birth, and there is no strength to bring forth. And when they hav viewed the many tribulations through w^{ch} the Lord hath led his people, how he hath suffered them to be buffeted of Satan, persecuted by enemies without, and molested wth hypocrites within, for their trial & humiliation; they will confess that we must walk here by faith and not by sight, for our life is hid with Christ in God; his spouse is black, for the Sun hath looked upon her, her own mothers sons hav been angry against her, and all the glory of the kings daughter is inward.

And furthest astray are such vain men as imagine to themselves a state of perfection, as if they had already attained the resurrection of the dead: & do disclaim all Churches and societies where sins are to be seen. Moses face is hid frō thē as with a veil, they discern not the use of his law, nor end of his ministry, for a veil covereth their harts; neither see they the possession that syn hath in them, yea in all Saints, so long as they dwell in these houses of clay, for which cause they sigh desiring to be clothed with their house which is from heaven, to be loosed and to be with Christ. And when the voyl shall be taken from those men's harts, who so far mistake themselves to be that they are not: they will cry with the Leper, I am unclean, I am unclean; & will remember their wares and be ashamed, & never open their mouth anymore because of their shame, but will judge themselves worthy to be cut of, for all their evils that that they have committed. Such also as either of ignorance, or worse humor, do vnorderly depart, and rend themselves upon every occasion from the church and body of Christ; will walk better, when they have learned to bear one an others burden, and tread in the steps of Christ, his prophets and Apostles; who used all good means with patience, to reclaim the offenders, before they forsook them. Yet because the faith must not be held in respect of persons, neither may we follow a multitude to do evil; and it often falleth out, that the faithful city becometh a harlot, and they which wer yesterday God's people, are risen up on the other side as against an enemy: therefore the Saints should be wise in heart, and not hold communion with any but in the Light, in the faith, in the true worship of God; for he is jealous even over his own people, and will not spare their misdeeds, but will take his kingdom from them, and remove the candlestick out of the place, if they repent not; & as he saith by his prophet, You only hav I known of all the families of the earth, therefore will I visit you for all your iniquities. Thus may Christians walk as they are counseled by the wisdom of God, not being just overmuch, neither wicked overmuch, laying hold, and not withdrawing their hand from this, that he which feareth God, shall come forth of them all.

For this cause hav I endeavored, (though the vnfittest among many,) to help forward in the way of truth, such as love the same with me; and hav penned this treatise following, for their sakes, that hav not means and leisure to serch the scriptures as they should and would, or by reason of their weakness cannot gather and compare the scriptures together for their comfort & assurance in these points, as they desire. I have labored both for playnnes & brevity, as I could in so large & ample argument; & by references rather sent the reader to look himself into God's book, then to insist upon collections or expositions of mine own. Wherein if any places be alleged amiss or impertinent, or things gathered otherwise then the text will afford; (as through my ignorance, or vnheedines, no doubt many may •e:) I humbly ask pardon for the same, both of God and his people; and do <◇> ••• reader not to rely upon my judgment in anything, but as himself by the wisdom of God's spirit, shall see agreeable unto truth. For if any shall buyld upon my words, without sure ground from the Law of the Lord; he shall first offend God, who hath given his scriptures by divine inspiration to teach and persuade all truth, to improve and correct all error, to instruct in righteousness, & make men perfect unto every good work; he shall injury me also, who have written these things to be tried and examined by Christ's law, not to be accepted for a law; and he shall injury his own sowl, by relying upon the word of frayl man whose breath is in his nostrils, which cannot stablish the heart, nor assure the conscience in anything. Let therefore the grass wither & the flower fade, for it is the word of our God that shall stand forever.

Finally this one thing I would advertise thee of, (good reader,) that sometimes I allege the scriptures otherwise then our common translations hav them; when the force of the Original words, doth afford another or more ample sense. Herin I fear not to be blamed of any that love the truth in incorruption; and for the places so changed, I leave them to their trial, that are men of judgment. The Lord who is author of every good gift unto all men, who passeth by the sins of his servants, and covereth all their trespasses; pass by in mercy, whatsoever in this work is done amiss: & turn these my labors, to the glory of his name, & the benefit of his people. Amen.

Henry Ainsworth.

The contents of the Chapters.

- O• the communion and peace that was at the first; and how soon it was broken. Chapt. 1
- of the horrible miseries that Devils and men fell into, after they had forsaken God.— Chapt. 2
- Of man's redemption, & the renewing of his peace, by the grace of God in Jesus Christ.— Chapt. 3.
- Who be the Saints of this communion.— Chapt. 4.
- Holynes or sanctity, what it is.— Chapt. 5.
- How holiness is given unto God and Christ, and how unto creatures.— Chapt. 6.
- How the word was communicated with Adam & his children and of the Saints interest in the same.— Chapt. 7.
- How God by his word hath always called and separated a people, from communion with Devils and wickedmen, to the fellowship of his grace, by faith in Christ.— Chapt. 8.
- How far we must avoid communion with Devils, and how far with wickedmen— Chapt. 9.
- How the Saints are called out of themselves, & taught to forsake their own ways and works, thatthey may have communion with God in Christ Chapt.— 10.

- Of the communion that we have with God, in general.— Chapt. 11
- Of the communion that we hav with Jesus Christ our mediator— Chapt. 12
- Of our communion with the holy Ghost.— Chapt. 13
- How the foresaid communion & peace between God & his Saints, is sometimes interrupted by their sins: what unrest and trouble they then feel in themselves, & how their ancient peace is renewed. Ch. 14.
- Of the communion that the Saints have in this life with Angels.— Chapt. 15
- How the Saints on earth are called to a holy communion among themselves.— Chapt. 16.
- How the Saints gather into communion, & grow up unto a body or church.— Chap. 17.
- Of the communion that the Saints in all churches have in things spiritual.— Chapt. 18
- Of the communion of the Saints in civil things and human— Chapt. 19.
- How the communion and peace of the saints is hindered by enemies without.— Chapt. 20
- How the peace and communion of the church, isdisturbed by troubles & sins within itself Chapt. 21
- How the commuion of Saints may be purged of the evils that arise therein, by the power & censures of Christ: and how needful it is for the Saints all, to look hereunto.— Chapt. 22.
- How far the Saints may hold and walk in communion together, if offenses be not removed. Ch. 23
- Of the communion that one Church hath with another.— Chapt. 24.
- The conclusion.

The Communion of Saints.

CHAPTER 1.

Of the Communion and peace that was at the first; and how soon it was broken.

FOR as much as we find in the Scriptures so great a difference made between the sons of Adam, that some ar named the children of God, of the Light and Day, the Saints of the Most-high, the Lord's chief treasure, the heirs of blessing; othersom, the children of men, of this world, of the Devil, & of curse; & the one of these sorts commanded to separate from the other, but to entertayn and continue a holy communion among themselves endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace: it is good and needful that we know, both who are the persons, and what be the causes & conditions of this communion; how far the bounds and limits of it do extend. For the better perceiving hereof; let us take a summary view, of the first state of us all.

2. God which hath made of one bloodal mankind, to dwell on all the face of the earth; made in the beginning, all things good: but chiefly imprinted the image of his Majesty, on Angels & on men, & communicated his graces with them. The Angels he created holy Spirits, excelling in strength, and in glory; & in all ability & readiness to do his will; and set them to serve himself in heaven, there to behold the joyful light of his face; where the many thousands of them minister unto him, & are as chariots whereon his Majesty rideth. Unto them he vouchsafed this love & honor, that they should be named the Sōnes of God; yea his own glorious title he imparteth unto them, when in the scripture he calleth them God's. And for this their excellent creation, he requireth of them praise & glory; which those heavenly soldiers cheerfully perform to the Lord of hosts of whose glory the whole earth is full.

3. God's favor unto man above all earthly creatures, appeareth in the goodly frame and fashion, first of his body made of earthly mould in admirable comeliness, beauty & proportion; and with all-sufficient furniture of several members, for his own use and service of his Maker. He is so clad with skin and flesh and joined together with bones & synewes; the veins & arteries are so dispersed over all, and every part so cunningly framed, in such curious wise, that the Prophet compareth his fashioning, to an embroiderie beneath in the earth; and minding this excellent workmanship, saith unto God, I will praise thee, for I am fearfully & wonderfully made. Into the body (the house of clay) God did inspire the breath of lives, & the man became a living soul; for the breath of the Almighty gave him life, and this breath or mind of man, is the light or candle of the Lord, which searcheth all the bowels of the belly. This spiritual and immortal substance so infused had very singular and gracious endowments of wisdom, understanding, will, and many affections, all good for the holy Trinity had consulted together to make him an excellent creature; and so the man did carry the image of God, for in it he was created. He had knowledge, righteousness & holiness for performance of all duties to his maker, & his fellow creatures; & this in truth simpleness and sincerity. He had rule and sovereignty over the earth and seas, & all the plenty of them; he knew the hidden nature of the creatures, & gave them names accordingly; this world was made for his sake, even the glorious Sun and Moon and Stars for his use & service. He had the blessing of the Lord upon himself & the creatures under him; a help like unto himself made and given unto him for comfort & procreation of his kind; a garden of delight, full of all pleasant fruits planted by God's own hand for to yield him food & solace; he was all honorable inwardly & outwardly there was nothing in soul or body whereof he might be ashamed; for he was the generation and glory of his God, he had given him life & grace, and his visitation preserved his spirit.

4. And God which made all things for his own sake, made this earthly king to be his subject & to serve him: Wherefore he communicated with him his word, informing him how to walk both in body and mind obedient to his will. For outward exercise he had the garden to dress

& to keep; for inward contemplation, the seventh day sanctified as a holy rest: and two trees before him of divers end & use, the one of life, by the eating whereof he might hav hope to live in God forever; the other of knowledge of good & evil, the tasting whereof would bring him unto assured death, with all his posterity. Thus God gav a law to man in his innocence, and required obedience which was easy to be performed; which he graciously would accept; for which, his blessing should hav abidden, his favor & light of his face hav shined still upon him continually. Then did the Lord rejoice in his works, & his Wisdom took solace in the compass of his earth; peace was between him & his creatures, all his works did praise him, and his Saints did bless him; the stars of the morning sang praises together, and all the sons of God (the Angels) rejoiced.

5. And then some beams of the incomprehensible light and joy & sweet society, which the Father Son & Holy Ghost had frō all eternity among themselves in the unity of the Godhead; wer communicated with those principal creatures the Angels & men; whiles the one sort did always behold his face in heaven, the other enjoyed his favors in paradise: then also was sweet harmony & most comfortable fellowship, peace and amity, between the creatures, for their mutual delight & consolation; without division discord or enmity. Ther wer no hateful spirits made to rebel against God, to tempt & torment man, or misvse any other creature. No death diseases or calamities to molest them; no terrors to drive them from their Maker; no guilty fears to afflict the sowl, no noisome lusts to reign or rebel in their bodies; nor any other means to hinder or disturb the peace and communion, or cause jarr and debate among all or any God's handy works.

6. But some of those sons of God the Angels, soon sinned; & abode not in the truth, neither kept their first estate; but forsook their own habitation where they dwelt in bliss with God: and so became the causes of their own endless and unspeakable miseries. For they having fallen of their own accord; wer not holpen nor spared, but forsaken of God, separated from the other holy and elect Angels, thrust out of Heaven, and bound in bonds of eternal night and darkness, to be reserved for judgment at the appointed time.

7. These Spirits, being of Saints become unclean Devils, hateful to the Lord, impenitent and malicious in themselves; fell also to be mankillers even from the beginning; and liars against the truth of God's word; assaulted our first Parents, the woman by the Serpent, the man by the woman; & by subtlety drew them into transgression of God's plain Law, and so into the snares of sin and death: and this soon after their seating in paradise, as by Moses narration doth appear. For which willing transgressiō, whereby those our progenitours wrapped themselves & all their offspring in everlasting woe and wretchedness: the communion and peace between God and man, was soon disannulled also; & with all earthly creatures for man's sake. Then was God's curse poured out on the head of that old Serpent, & his wrath into the world; where the creature became subject to vanity. Man which had hid himself from the face of his Maker, was found out, arraigned and judged for his disobedience; was thrust out of the garden of pleasure, and the holy Angels kept him from the tree of life. Thus was his happiness suddenly changed into misery; in labor & sorrow to spend his days til the spirit go out of him unto God for judgment; & the body return to dust.

Man (that is) in honor, and understandeth not; he is like to the beasts, that perish.

Psalm 49. 20.

Chapt. 2.

Of the horrible miseries that Devils and men fell into, after they had forsaken God.

That we may the better discern God's grace unto us in Christ, who hath freed us from all calamities, and restored us to a most happy state, from which we shall never fall: let us take a view more particularly of the many miseries which syn did bring upon the creatures; so will the benefit of our redemption appear most precious our harts shall be filled with gladness, and our mouth with songs of praise, to him that hath saved us from so great a destruction.

2. The Devil having willingly rebelled against God, repented not of his wickedness, but being full of malice, set himself as an enemy against the Lord and his creatures. And for this cause is named in Hebrew Satan, that is • ffiend, an adversary, enemy or resister, hindering all good, beginning and helping forward all evil. He is called also with his fellows Shedim, that is wasters; for the scath and hurt which they do, preying upon the creatures and spoiling them: and Seghnirim, that is rough, rugged or hairy, for the horror of there hiew wherein they appeared like Satyrs, or other ugly creatures; and wherewith they terrified such as saw thē. In Greek he is named Diabolos (Devil,) that is a calumniator, because he maliciously accuseth, detracteth & depraveth, the persons, words, actions, not of men only, but even of God himself. He is called also the wicked or malignant one, for molesting, & with his fiery darts endeavoring man's ruin & misery: the Tempter, for assaying to draw men unto sin: a Serpent & a Drago, for his subteltie & fierceness, and venomous nature; an unclean spirit, for his filthiness: a lying spirit, for his falsehood and deceit, being a Liar, and the father thereof, no truth is in him. And though one Devil be principal, yet hath he many partners called his Angels; all of them malicious and unclean spirits like himself, going about with him that roaring lion, to rend and to devour. These spiritual wickednesses, ar authors, instruments and abettors of all manner ungodliness, unrighteousness, abomination and uncleanness; they seek by all means to overthrow God's kingdom, & to stablish their own; therefore like ravenous birds they devour up the seed of the word, least men should believe it and be saved: & like envious men, sow tares among the wheat, and go their way; they corrupt men's minds with errors & heresies, the doctrines of Devils. Great knowledge they hav to do evil, and ar therefore called daemones that is cunning or skilful; great ability also to effect it, and ar therefore named principalities & powers; their captain being called the Prince of this world, for his effectual working in the children of disobedience; & is compared to a strong man armed, keeping his palace; yet is he also raunging abroad and very diligent to work mischief; & therefore compasseth the earth to and fro, and walketh about in it; seeking, to winnow the godly as wheat, and make their saith to fail. And as there is no end of these fiends wickedness in themselves, & their own abominable nature: so neither would there be end or measure, of their cursed actions and effects; wer it not, that God restreyneth their malice, and hath set up the kingdom of his holy son Jesus, to loose the works of the Devil; to destroy & abolish him.

3, And as these fowl spirits, being fallen from grace, thus set them selves against God & all goodness; so God again cast them out of his favor & from his presence, wherein is the fullness of joy,) from the cheerful light liberty and happiness which they enjoyed, & thrust them down into hell, there keeping them in everlasting chains under darkness unto damnation in that day when he will come to judge the world. And although they have in the mean space some loosnes & liberty, not only to range abroad in the world but even to appear before God in heaven, when, he pleaseth so to suffer them: yet hav they no joy in his presence, but horror & trembling; neither is there any comfortable communion between his majesty and them, nor peace between the holy spirits & them; but Michael and his Angels warreth against them, striveth with them, and rebuketh them in the name of the Lord, for his chosens sake. Enmitie hath he also put, & war between the saints on earth and them; the saints whom he hath redeemed from their damnation by the blood of his beloved son; by whose blood they overcome; and under their feet, the God of peace will tread down Satan shortly. In dread those damned spirits are of the bottomless-deep, which they desired Christ that he would not command them into; and fearfully they expect from his hand, torment, the effect of that curse which is come upon them to the utmost, and shall be executed in unspeakable manner & measure in that day when (having fulfilled the measure of their sin,) they shall be cast into the lake of everlasting fire & brimstō, prepared for them; & so without end or relaxation of their misery, be separated from the Lord and all his Saints, from his life, light, and blessed communion, forever and yet.

4. Men that had ben made in the similitude of God, holy just happy & immortal, without any want or imperfection in sowl or body; not cōtinewing in this honor but making shipwreck of faith by believing the word of Satan; & of good conscience, by obeying his counsel, & acting the same: whereas they were promised to be as God's knowing good & evil, fell by this means into corruption and misery, and became like devils, without God in the world; subject to the horror of his wrath, and eternal damnation. Whose woeful estate is to be considered, first in regard of sin; (which stayed not in one actiō but fretted as a canker and overflowed all:) secōdly of punishments for sin; Both of these are in sowl and body and their full measure or accomplishment is, of the one in this world, of the other in the world to come.

5. The first sin of man was as venim, that soddēlie spread itself into all the powers of sowl & body: & subdued thē all under death & corruption so soon as the serpent had bittē him. And as he was the root of all mankind; so did the contagion also spread into all the branches his children. By his disobedience, many wer made sinners, and became • dead; even by the one offense of that one man, was the evil propagated unto all men, to condemnation: who now being evil by nature, could neither speak nor do good, but daily wexed worse. So that when the Lord from heaven looked down upon the son•s of Adam, to see if there wer any that did understand, that did seek God: behold all wer gone back, all wer corrupt, none that did good, no not one; yea even the children from their birth & conception, unclean and sinful.

6. The corruption and nakedness of man in sowl, is to be seen in the Understanding, which perceiveth not, neither can know the things of God; yea though light shine into this darkness, yet doth not the darkness comprehend it, the heart knows not, the ey sees not, the ear hears not after much instruction: man's wisdom is but foolishness, and whatsoever he savoreth in mind, is enmity against God, and death to himself. The heart of man, which is the fountayn whence all the actions of life do flow; is crooked, crafty, deceitful above all, and wretched, desperately sick even unto death: so that every fiction of the thoughts of his heart, is only evil every day, even from his childhood. And as the mind is without the knowledge of God, or forgetful if it hav known him; so is it otherwise corrupted in the faculties thereof, & carried with vanity. The Conscience which all mē hav within them, to bear witness of their works, this also is defiled together with the mind; and through custom of syn, & Satan's effectual working is seared as with a hot iron and bcome without remorse or feeling. The Will is also alienated from God, and from his correction counsel, or hearing the same. Al the other affections in like manner corrupted, by cruel hatred one of another, even of own brethren; of that which is good, yea even of God himself: the love and delight being set on vanity & wickedness Finally the sowle of sinful man is fraught wth all unrighteousness wickedness, malicioiusness, wrath, envy, debate, covetousness, inordinate lusts, ambition, pride, unmercifulness, and deep hypocrisy, with all other vices: being empty and destitute of every good grace & virtue; he hath neither fear of God, nor reverence of man; yea, that there is no God, be all his cogitations.

7. The body (which is the earthly tabernacle & sheath of the sowl,) and all the members of the same, ar fit instruments to fulfill the evil thoughts of the mind; & be given over in like wise to y^e service of vncleānes & iniquity. The evils which lust hath conceived inwardly, ar by Satan's help and these instruments, brought forth and effected. Herevpon doth man commit all iniquity with greediness: his hands execute wickedness and cruelty; his feet run to evil, and make hast to shed blood; his eyes ar full of adultery and cannot cease to syn, defiled with haughtines and mockinge, with murder and malicioiusness; his thorat is an open sepulcher, the venim of asps is under his lips; his mouth, full of cursing and bitterness; his tongue, an unruly evil full of deadly poisō, a world of wickedness, defiling the whole body, & setting on fire the wheel or course of nature, being itself set on fire of hell, wherewith he curseth men & blasphemeth God. His carkesse he decketh & clotheth with pride; his belly he pampereth & filleth with excess, for it is his God; he is poured out into all lasciviousnes. Neither is there any uncleanness, fornication, unnatural filthiness or beastliness, wherewith he abuseth not his own body: no treachery, theft, murder, Witchcraft, worship of idols, yea even of Devils, which he committeth not. And these things he doth with an high hand & obstinate heart, til he become most abominable & fiilthy, drinking iniquity as water; making it a pastime to do wickedly, refusing not any evil; but for to glutt himself with his lothsom delites, addeth syn unto syn, and drunkenness unto thirst, groweth past feeling, and after his hardness & heart which cannot repent, heapeth up wrath against the day of wrath, and of the revelation of the just judgment of God, unto whom he hath said depart from me, for Idesire not the knowledge of thy ways; who is the Almighty that I should serv him, and what profit should I hav, if I should pray unto him;

8. So men that would themselves be God's, or fallen to such impiety that they are not far from the loathsom nature of devils; which our Savior signified, when he called Judas a Devil; and the Jews, the Devils children. And now God abhorreth all wretched man's works & even his most religious actions, which his troubled, ignorant & hypocritical conscience, causeth him to perform. The Lord regardeth neither him nor his offering, his sacrifice is an abomination, his prayer is turned to syn, all his worship is vain, his works of mercy unprofitable, and nothing is pure unto him, his labor & his revenues are unto syn, he himself lieth dead in sins, & the sowl of God doth hate him. Therefore his eyes shall fail, his refuge shall perish, and his hope be expiration of sowl: for he offereth the sacrifice of fools, and knoweth not that he doth evil; he is reprobate concerning faith, abominable and unto every good work reprobate.

9. The reward of syn unto man, from the just hand of God, is fearful vengeance curse and death, begun in this world, to be fulfilled in the next. His vengeance and curse God inflicteth, sometime by his own powerful hand, upon the bodies and souls of sinners; sometime he useth his creatures to torment them: yea often he vexeth one man by another, and even by himself. For man in himself hath confusion, and is ashamed of his own body and members; his reason, will and affections, are often at war one with another, & his concupiscences fight within him: rankerous envy fretteth and consumeth him; carking covetousness pierceth him through with many sorrows; his own inordinate lusts do vex and make him sick and lean; generally his whole life he leadeth in vanity and vexation of spirit, all his days are sorrows, & his travail grief; his heart taketh not rest in the night; for he is like the raging sea that cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt; there is no peace unto him. Again he is often troubled in mind for his misdeeds, guilty fears do torment his conscience, and he is condemned of his own heart; dispayring of all help & mercy at God's hand: where upon men dread oft-times where no dread is, and the sound of a leaf shaken, doth chase them away, they flee as from a sword and fall, no man pursuing them; a sound of fear is in their ears, that in their prosperity the destroyer shall come upon them, neither believe they to return out of darkness. So that in this misery, loathing longer life; some lay violent hands on their own bodies, and murder themselves. And man to man, doth all manner mischief and outrage, that they are as beasts unto themselves by reproaching, blaspheming, robbing, defying, captiving and murdering one another both secretly and openly, not sparing their own brethren, wives, children, or dearest friends, in their savage wrath, hatred and cruelty. The Lord moreover afflicteth their bodies with many grievous and noisesome sicknesses; their bowels are inwardly tormented with payns, their joints and limbs with aches; silthy leprosy, sores and botches do vex and deform them; burning & pestilent fevers do afflict & consume them: neither is there any part or member from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, which is not smitten & wounded; even the mind and understanding with frenzy and madness; and the bodies sometime devoured with lice and vermin, whiles they are yet alive.

10. The creatures all, are executioners of God's just judgments upon wicked men. The heavens sometime withhold their dew and rayn, and become like brass: sometime they send down stormy tempests with haylstones and fire and other evil influences, to destroy the earth, the inhabitants & fruits thereof. The Sun smiteth them by day, the moon by night; the stars from their bulwarks fight against them. The earth either yieldeth not her fruit, but is like iron; or bringeth forth thorns and thistles and venomous weeds: yea sometimes openeth her mouth, and swalloweth men up alive. Hunger and famine do afflict them, that for want of food, they are enforced to eat the flesh of their own children. The wild beasts prey upon & devour them; even the smallest and vilest creatures, as frogs, flies, lice and the like; are ministers of wrath and vengeance upon the disobedient. The syre breaketh out & burneth them with their substance; the water overfloweth & drowneth them. The Angels of the Lord, do pursue, scatter and destroy them. And the Devils unto whom wretched men yield homage & obedience, do tyrannize over their goods, their bodies and their souls; tearing and tormenting them, casting them into fire and into water; depriving them of reason sense and speech: having them also in horrible bondage under syn, working effectually in them, and holding them as in a snare unto their own will. So that the benefits of God towards them, wicked men do abuse to further licentiousnes and presumption; by his punishments also they are not bettered, but increase impiety as it is written Men blasphemed the name of God; which hath power over these plagues, and they repented not to give him glory: they blasphemed the God of heaven for their payns and for their sores, and repented not of their works.

11. Therefore after a few evil days on earth, which also for his sins are shortened, the man being broken, decayed and worn out with miseries, is caused at last to go to the King of fears; death feazeth upon him, and separateth the soul from the body; neither can any man redeem his brother, or give his ransom to God, that he may live still forever, and not see the grave: but terrors take him away as waters, a tempest stealeth him away by night; God casteth upon him (his plagues,) & spareth not, though he would fain slee out of his hand; as a whirlwind that passeth, so is the wicked no more. For his spirit departeth, he returneth to his earth, then his thoughts perish, his form & beauty consumeth; & as he himself, so his Name also shall rot. His soul being fetched away from the body, (wherein it lived and joyed but a little while in the momentary pleasures of sin,) is brought to the prison of hell; where all damned ghosts fearfully expect their final doom, at the great day of God; when the souls being again joined with their carcasses which the Lord will raise out of the dust; the seas and death and hell having delivered up the dead which were in them, they shall be judged every man according to their works done in the body. the books shall be opened, and all things brought to light that were hid in darkness, the counsels of the hearts, made manifest; the heavens shall declare man's wickedness, and the earth shall rise up against him; account shall be given of every evil work and idle word, and God will render to these sinners indignation and wrath; they shall be cast into the fiery lake prepared for the Devil and his Angels, & with them be tormented in those eternal flames; being forever separated from the presence of the Lord, & from the glory of his power, from his comfort life and light: & Death shall feed upon them, the fire that is not blown shall devour them. Then shall be weeping & wayling and gnashing of teeth, with too late repentance and fruitless lamentation, in that second death, and utter darkness, where the worm shall not die, nor the fire be quenched for evermore. This is the portion of the wicked from God; and the reward of their sins, from the hand of the Most High.

The wicked is kept unto the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.

Job. 21. 30.

CHAP. III.

Of man's redemption, & the renewing of his peace; by the grace of God in Jesus Christ.

1. God, though he spared not the Angels which sinned of their own accord, and maliciously drew man into their condemnation: yet shown he favor to Adam and his children, when it was neither deserved nor asked. For of them, he had chosen to be his, before the foundations of the world, & prepared for them a kingdom, which it was his pleasure to give unto them; therefore could he not be hindered, no wisdom nor understanding, nor counsel could prevail against him, but his own counsel did stand forever, & the thoughts of his heart, throughout all ages; he also is greater then all, and none is able to take his sheep out of his hand; therefore he said unto them, when they were polluted in their own blood, ye shall live; even when they were in their blood, he said unto them, ye shall live; I will redeem them from the power of the grave, I will deliver them from death.

2. Yet because as his mercy should be magnified, his justice also was to be satisfied, and death inflicted for the transgression of his law; & now man's misery & weakness was such, as endure death he might, but overcome it he could not, nor deliver his soul from the hand of the grave: therefore had God of his rich grace and incomprehensible love, ordained his only begotten Son, who was in his bosom, one with himself, and in glory with him before the world was; by whom all things were created in heaven and in earth, things visible & invisible, and in whom all things consist; even this his own dear son had by his Father ordained before the foundation of the world, that he should save his people from their sins, and deliver them from the wrath to come.

3. And forasmuch as being in the form of God, and very God himself, (who liveth and is blessed forever) he could not in that nature & glory (wherein only is immortality,) partake with man's wretchedness, or taste of his death, which yet by God's grace he was to taste for all men: therefore was it also ordained, that the Word should be made flesh, even the Son of God, when he came into the world, should be made of a woman, and of the seed of earthly man according to the flesh; that he should take on him the form of a servant, and be found in shape as a man, partaker with his children of flesh and blood, that he might suffer for their sake, be touched with the feeling of their infirmities and in all things tempted in like sort, yet without syn.

4. This incarnation of the Lord whereby he should become our Emmanuel, that is, God with us; was not to be man's work, or brought to pass by carnal generation, but by the holy Ghost, and power of the most high, overshadowing a virgin, whereby she should conceive in her womb, and bear a holy thing that should be called the Son of God. Who for the fullness of the grace of the Godhead, which was to dwell in him bodily, & the spirit wherewith he was to be anointed; should be named the Messiah and the Christ, that is the Anointed of God: & for the salvation of sinners, should be crowned with the title of Jesus, that is the Savior or Deliverer, at whose name every knee should bow, both of things in heaven & things in earth, & things under the earth; and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord, unto the glory of God the Father; who gave him to be his salvation to the end of the earth.

5. For by this his Son, the brightness of his glory, God would reconcile the world to himself, not imputing but freely forgiving their sins unto them; and by this image of his own invisible majesty, would renew the heavenly image in man, which now was defaced, giving him a new heart and a new spirit, even putting his own spirit within him, & making him a new creature. For whereas the first Adam was made but a living sowl, and having lost his life by syn, could not recover the same again, but death reigned over all: this second Adam which was a live-making spirit, should quicken them that wer dead in trespasses and sins, and by his voice should raise them up, and give them life eternal; that so the dead men might liv again, and they awake and sing, that dwell in dust.

6. The way to work out this woēdrous grace for men's redemption, was appointed to be by great afflictions through which the Prince of their salvation was to be consecrate, that many children might be brought unto glory. For this Son of God the Lord and heyr of all things, was to † empty himself, and take on him the form of a servant, to become lesser then the Angels, yea more deformed then the sons of Adam, even a worm and not a man, the shame of men and contempt of the people, that when we should see him, he should have neither form nor bewtie that we should desire him: though yet in himself, he was much fairer then the sons of Adam, all his parts and features and countenance so excellent, as he was wholly delectable.

7. So when the first begotten of the Father was brought into the world, though all the Angels of God did worship him, the winds and seas obeyed him, the Fish paid his tribute, the wild beasts lived at peace with him, and the very Devils confessed him, and were afraid: yet wretched man would not acknowledge him, his own received him not, he was a stranger to his brethren, an alliant to his Mothers sons, despised he was & we esteemed him not. Yea God himself would break him & make him subject to infirmities, & lay vpō him y^e iniquity of vsal; for we made him to serve for our sins, we wearied him with our iniquities; so that innumerable troubles compassed him about, & our sins which now were his, took such hold upon him, that he was not able to lookvp; for which a cup was givē him of y^e Father to drink, full of sorrow, fear, heaviness, & agony, that made his sowl heavy even unto the death, & he prayed his Father, that if it had been possible, it might hav passed from him; offering up his prayers with strong crying and tears, & sweat like drops of blood trickling down to the ground, the shadow of death being upon his eyes. But because it could not be but he must drink (for therefore came he to that howr,) and the Lord God had opened his ear that he was not rebellious, neither turned back: he willingly gave up his body for a sacrifice, & bore the wrath of God due for our trespasses, he which knew no sin was made sin for us; and poured out his sowle unto death.

8. Then came Satan the Prince of this world to see if he could hav conquered him, but he had nothing in him: yea his own time was now come, now was he to be cast out, & Christ being lifted up from the earth, would draw all men to himself. The serpent beset him with the snares of death, and with floods of Belial to make him afraid; but he said unto death I will be thy death, and unto the grave, I will be thy destruction; so he spoiled the Principalities and powers of that kingdom of darkness, made a show of them openly, triumphed over them in the same cross, & destroyed through death him that had the power of death, that is the Devil.

9. They for whom he suffered all these things regarded not the rock of their salvation, but judged him as plagued and smitten of God & humbled. He trode the winepresle alone, and of all the people there was none with him, his own disciples had all forsaken him and fled, that he by himself might purge our sins. He looked for some to have pity on him, but there was none; for comforters, but none he found; there was not any that would know him, all refuge failed him, none cared for his sowl. His own people betrayed him, and denied in the presence of Pilate, when he had judged him to be delivered, they denied the holy one and the just, and desired a murderer to be given them. Then was the Lord of glory misused, & suffered much speaking against of sinners they opened upon him the mouth of deceit, and compassed him about with words of hatred, they rewarded him evil for good, and hatred for his friendship; they spate on his face & buffeted him; they crowned him with thorns and scourged him; he became a reproach unto them, they that looked upon him shaked their heads, yea rebuke did break his heart, and he was full of heaviness, for dogs did compass him about, the assembly of the wicked enclosed him, they pierced his hands and his feet, and gored his side; they slew & hanged him on a tree, so was he made a curse for us, for the curse of God was on him that was hanged.

10. But in his trouble he called upon the Lord & cried unto his God, why hast thou forsaken me? thou art my hope my portion in the land of the living. Deliver me out of the mire that I sink not, let me be delivered frō them that hate me, & out of the deep waters, let not the water flood drown me, and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me; deliver my sowl from the Sword, my desolate sowl from the hand of the Dog. In the end, he commended his spirit into the hands of his Father, confirmed the Testament by his death, and unto the dust of death he was brought, his grave was with the wicked.

11. But the sorrows of death were soon losed, because it was impossible that the Lord of life should be holden of it: for as he had power to lay down his life, so had he power to take it again, this commandmēt he had received of his Father, who shown him also the path of life, and brought again from the dead, this great Shepherd of the sheep. Wherefore the third day he rose up alive, he rose up, and his enemies wer scattered, and they that hated him fled from before him; & now behold he is alive for evermore, Amen: and hath the keys of hell and of death; death hath no more dominion over him, for it is swallowed up in victory.

12. Thus God's hand was with the man of his right hand, with the son of man whom he made strong for himself; the Lord heard him in the day of trouble, and sent him help from his Sanctuary, remembered all his oblations and turned his burnt-offering into ashes, gave him according to his heart, & fulfilled all his counsel, that we might rejoice in his salvation, and set up banners in the name of our God, when the Lord had performed all his petitions. For he having thus through the eternal spirit offered himself without spott unto God, obtained eternal redemption; & having drunk of the brook in the way, he therefore lifted up the head. He ascended up on high with triumph, leading captivity captive, and approached unto the Ancient of days, who set him at his right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality & power, and might, & domination, and every name that is named, not in this world only but also in that which is to come, & made all things subject under his feet; gave him dominion and honor and a kingdom, that all people's nations and languages should serve him, his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall never be taken away, & his kingdom shall never be corrupted, and this is the name whereby we must call him, Jehovah our justice.

13. And now the gates of the heavenly Paradise were opened to the sons of Adam, and the tree of Life, better then that from which the Cherubims sword had kept man, was given him by Christ to eat of, and live forever. Now felt men the effect of that heavenly oracle that came out of Caiaphas mouth, It is expedient for us that one man die for the people, and the Whol nation perish not: for loe the wrath of God kindled for man's syn, was appeased by the death of this man Christ Jesus who gave himself a ransom for all men, and bare our sins in his body on the tree, being the surety of the Testament. It pleased the Father by him, the Prince of peace, to reconcile all things to himself, & to set at peace through the blood of his cross both the things in earth and the things in heaven. For it was his beloved son in whom he was well pleased, his chosen one in whom his sowl delighted, that had given himself to be an offering and a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savor to God, who smelled here a savor of rest, sweeter then that in Noah's sacrifice, which caused him to say in his heart, that he would curse the ground no more for man's cause though y^e imaginatiō of man's heart were evil frō his youth: for now there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God & of the Lamb (that was slain) shall be in the city, he will be merciful unto his land, unto his people. The Angels saw this, & were glad for our salvation, they sung at our Savior's birth, Glory to God in the highest (heavens) and upon earth peace, towards men goodwill. And when he was glorified, the thousand thousands of them praised him saying, worthy is the Lamb that was killed, to receive power and riches and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory and praise. The heavens rejoiced for that the Lord had done, the lower parts of the earth showed, the mountaynes forests and every tree burst forth into praises, for that the Lord had redeemed Jacob, & would be glorified in Israel. and all creatures in heaven & in earth, under the earth, and in the sea, & all that are in them, gave Praise & honor and glory & power, unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever more. Amen.

14. This grace was the Wisdom of God in a mystery, the hidden wisdom which God had foredetermined before the world unto our glory; but it was hid from the eyes of all the living, & hid from the fowls of y^e heavē; none of y^e Princes of this world knew it, no ye had seen it, nor ear heard it, neither came it into man's heart, only God understood the Way thereof, and from the beginning of the world it was kept secret and hid in him, and still he hideth it from the wise & men of understanding, neither can the natural perceive it until he revel it unto them by his spirit, which spirit searcheth all things even the deep things of God, and by it we know the things that are given to us of God.

15. And now he hath opened unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he had purposed in Christ; he hath proclaimed unto the ends of the world, that the Savior of the daughter Zion is come, his wages with him, and his work before him; that we might clearly see the fellowship of the mystery, & might be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth and length and depth and height, & to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, and might be filled with all fullness of God; who hath given us beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of gladness <1 page duplicate > <1 page duplicate> for the spirit of heaviness, because our warfare is accomplished, and our iniquity is pardoned. For while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us; and when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by his death, and now shall be saved by his life; for the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed; he hath washed us from our sins in his blood, and purged our conscience from dead works, to serve the living God; and is gone up into very heaven to appear now in the sight of God for us, and there to prepare us a place, that where he is we may be also. From whence he will shortly show himself with his mighty Angels, to be glorified in his Saints, and made marvelous in them that believe; who after that they have drunk of his cup, & been baptized into his death and burial, and walked with him in newness of life in this vale of tears, and fulfilled the rest of his afflictions in their flesh, shall have their vile bodies changed & fashioned like to his glorious body, the dead being raised up incorruptible, and such as live & remain, being changed and caught up with them also in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord, their faces shining as the Sun, in the kingdom of their Father.

16. Although this mystery of Christ, was not opened unto the sons of men in other ages, as it was at last revealed unto his holy Apostles and Prophets by the spirit: yet was the effect and sum thereof, made known to all the Patriarchs from the beginning. For Jesus Christ was yesterday, is today, & the same forever, & Abraham saw his day and was glad; Abel also by faith in him obtained testimony that he was righteous; which faith he learned of his father Adam; who heard of God the riches of this grace freely preached in paradise, before the sentence of exile and death was pronounced upon him; namely that the womansseed should crush the Serpents head; who also was shown the way to be by death and sacrifice, a shadow whereof he saw in the Lambs then slain and sacrificed in the service of the Lord. The great afflictions of Christ and of his people, were foretold in the Serpents crushing of his heel, and the enmity between the woman's seed & that Serpents; foreshowed also in the murder of Abel the just by Cain his wicked brother. To Christ gave all the Prophets witness, that through his name all that believed in him, should receive remission of sins: and the twelve tribes instantly serving God night & day, hoped to come unto this promise. So in this hope and expectation of redemption, by the Son of God, the Fathers rested, and comforted their fainting souls by faith, the evidence of things not seen: by which faith they saw the promises a far off, were persuaded, saluted them, & confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims upon earth, and so died, having through their faith obtained testimony, but received not the promise; God providing a better thing for us, that they without us, should not be made perfect; but in patient hope pass out their days on earth; & after death wait all the days of their appointed time, til their changing shall come, and then stand up in their lot, (with us and all Saints,) at the end of the days.

17. But all this grace, and riches of the glorious mystery now manifested to the Saints, which is, Christ in us the hope of glory; God did not communicate with all men, neither yet doeth: save with some few chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. Which little flock have their election, not by works, but by him that calleth, according to the good pleasure of his own will: who without any unrighteousness hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth; having made as the clay-potter of one lump, some men vessels of mercy prepared unto glory, & some vessels of wrath prepared to destruction; which yet notwithstanding have many favors and benefits from God to draw them to repentance out of the snare of Satan, but all in vain for they despise the grace proffered unto them, and run headlong into the condemnation, whereto they were of old ordained; let mercy be shown them, yet will they not learn righteousness, in the land of equities they will do wickedly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord.

18. And of these there ar two sorts; some that are called to the knowledge of the truth, & hav received it with joy▪ yet having no roots, beleiv but for a while, and in time of tentatiō go away. Yea of these there are, that have been once lightened, and hav tasted of the heavenly gift, and been made partakers of the holy Ghost, & hav tasted of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come: and yet not with standing fall away, and crucify again to them selves the son of God▪ and make a mock of him; and tread him under foot, and count the blood of the Testament as an unholy thing, wherewith they were sanctified, and do despite the spirit of grace. Such, it is impossible they should be renewed again unto repentance; neither remaineth anymore sacrifice for their sins, but a fearful looking for of judgment and violent fire which shall devour them. And such, howsoever they were among the Saints, yet wer they not of them, for then they would hav continewed with them; neither wer they of Christ's sheep, for then he would hav given them eternal life, and they should never hav perished, neither should any hav plucked them out of his hand; he would hav put his fear in their harts, that they should not hav departed from him; though they had fallen they should not hav been cast off, for the Lord would hav put under his hand.

19. Othersome there are, not called to the faith but strangers from the covenants of promise, whom God suffereth to walk in their own ways, not showing thē his word nor his statutes and judgments. Or if he cause his gospel to come unto them, yet will not they come unto him that they might hav life; they hear not his words because they are not of God; neither believe, because they are not Christ's sheep; all the day long he stretcheth forth his hand to an vnperswadeable and gainsaying people. Yea believe they cannot, because he hath blynded their eyes, and hardened their heart, that they should not see with eyes nor understand with heart, and be converted, and he to heal them: the Lord hath covered them with the spirit of slomber.

20. And these are for the most part the wise and learned of the world from whom God hideth the secret of his Gospel, and worketh a marvelous work in this people, even a marvelous work & a wonder (as saith the Prophet) that the wisdom of the wise men perish, for the Lord knoweth that their thoughts be vain. Therefore he maketh their wisdom to perish, and casteth away the understanding of the prudent; he poureth contempt upon princes, and causeth them to err in desert places, out of the way, and maketh the strength of the mighty weak: he scattereth the proud in the imagination of their hearts, and putteth down the mighty from the thrones: the wisdom of this world maketh he foolishness, and by the foolishness of preaching saveth them that believe; which also are the foolish weak vile and despised things of the world, even things that are not; which yet he hath chosen to bring to naught the things that are: that no flesh should rejoice in his presence, but as it is written, he that rejoiceth let him rejoice in the Lord.

21. Thus Christ crucified is to the Jews a stumbling block, and to the Greeks, foolishness; and only to them which are called, both of Jews & Greeks, he is the power of God, & the wisdom of God; in whom they triumph & say, Lo this is our God, we waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord whom we waited for, we will joy and be glad in his salvation.

22. And thus is there a distinction made of the sons of Adam, some left to perish in their sins, the children of wrath as they were by nature, who because they are not borne again, they cannot see the kingdom of God: othersome are bought from the earth and born a new of immortal seed, and are not of this world, but have their conversation in heaven, & power given them of Christ to be the sons of God, which are born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

23. Between these two sorts of men is great difference; both in the affections of God, who loveth the one and hateth the other: and of Christ, who prayeth for one & not for another: and in their affections again towards God, & one towards another. For the Saints love the Lord, and have mutual love among themselves; but the wicked's soul abhorreth him; and they hate such as he hath chosen out of the world; and are hated again of them with perfect hatred. Thus is there war & enmity betwixt the just and the wicked, the one of them being an abomination to the other.

24. Hence is it, that the scripture speaketh so much of the fellowship and communion of the Saints, with God and among themselves; and of their separation from the Devil, and from his children the wicked men evē in this life, whiles yet they live together with them in civil society, & breath one commune aier: expecting with patience the full and final separation, which Christ and his Angels will make at the last and great day of doom.

Of this holy communion here on earth, I purpose to entreat, as God hath given me to discern by his word. His gracious spirit breath upon my soul, and guld my pen to set down his truth.

CHAPT. III.

Who be the Saints of this Communion.

THat we may the better discern the Coṃuniō of Saints, whereof we treat; let us first consider who the persons be, that hav fellowship together. The Head & highest in this holy society is the Lord our God; who is not only Most holy in himself, but communicateth his holiness wth us his creatures: & doth vouchsafe to hav fellowship with us even in this life & world, as it is written, If we say that we have communion with him, & walk in darkness, we lie & do not the truth: but if we walk in the light as he is in the light; we hav communion one with another, (that is God with us, and we with him:) and the blood of Jesus Christ his son, cleanseth us from all syn. For this cause he is often called in the scripture, the Saint or Holy-one of Israel; and the King of the Saints. This is to be understood of all three persons in the unity of the Godhead; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, of whom it is writ He (is) holy God's; & accordingly his people ar named, thepeople of the Holy ones.

2. Jesus Christ, as he is God manifested in the flesh, is the Saint of God, the Holy one and the True, even the holy one of Israel; being himself full of the Holy ghost, and therewith baptizeth his church whereof he is the mediator. And was figured out by the High priest in the law, who in type of him was also called the Saint of the Lord, and carried this writing graven in gold upon his forehead, Holines to Jehovah. With this Jesus our redeemer, we that believe, hav a very near communion; according to that which is written, He that Sanctifieth (which is Christ) and they that aresanctified (which are his people) are all of one, for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren. And again, God is faithful, by whom ye are called unto the communion of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

3. The elect and blessed Angels, are also Saints; having sanctity by creation, continewed and confirmed unto them forever. These heavenly spirits have communion not only with God, in whose presence they stand; but also with us the children of God through faith; by which we are come unto the great assembly of the many thousands of them, have them for our guardians, and acknowledging themselves to be our fellow servants.

4. Al men and women, called to the faith of God, ar Saints by calling; being sanctified by Christ Jesus, and one with another are holybrethren. Of these some are Saints departed this life, and sleeping in the Lord: othersome ar on earth, & whiles they here live (notwithstanding their many infirmities & afflictions) ar Saints of the most High; aholie nation

5. This happy society. our fathers of old saw shadowed in the Tabernacle, where God dwelt among mē. His own gracious presence appeared, when his glory filled the Tabernacle, & his voice was heard of Moses out of the same; and the Ark of his strength was a continual sign of his residence and rest therein. His son Christ was represented by the Mercy-seat or Propitiatorie covering the Ark, in whom and by whom God is reconciled with his people, who therefore is called the Propititiatory or Reconciliation; from that was the voice of God
 〈1 page duplicate〉 〈1 page duplicate〉 heard speaking, even as by Christ he speaketh to the end. The Angels were figured in the Cherubims upon the mercy-seat, and in the courtaines of the tent round about, for so those blessed Spirits 'minister unto Christ and to his church the heys of his salvation. The multitude of believers were resembled in the twelve cakes (according to the number of the twelve tribes of Israel,) set upon the pure table before the Lord, with pure incense upon them, to be for a remembrance & offering by fire to the Lord in stead of them. So we Christians are unleavened cakes, standing before the Lord in his church, and being in Christ a sweet odour unto him, who still hath his spiritual Tabernacle with men, and dwelleth with them.

CHAP. V.

HOLynes or Sanctitie what it is.

THE Scripture calleth that thing or person holy, which is separated from profaneness & pollution, and is addicted or applied to divine use or service of God. Thus the Sabbath day was hallowed, when God had severed it from commune labor and human employments, to be spent in heavenly exercises and meditations, whereupon it is named the holy Sabbath of rest to the Lord: The like is to minded for all other feast days appointed of God for holy convocations. The firstborn of man and beast were sanctified to the Lord, by being exempted from man's use; dedicated to God, and employed in his service. Hence was it, that all strange or unclean persons were forbidden to eat, yea or to touch the holy things. And when the Israelites were sanctified ceremonially, it was by washing their garments, abstaining from their wives, thus preparing their bodies and minds to converse with God. And in the whole course of their life, this was their sanctification and signs thereof, to abstain from all syn and uncleanness, as also from communion with the sinners and unclean: and to give themselves to the service of God & keeping of his laws.

2. This is to be seen in many particulars. As, the calling and separating of Israel from other people that they might be holy unto God. The shadow hereof; namely abstinence from eating unclean meats (which figured their refreyning from the fellowship of wicked men,) for a sign and testimony of their sanctification & holiness with the Lord. To Moloch they might not offer their childrē, for that was to defile God's sanctuary and pollute his holy name; nor turn after sooth-sayers, for the same cause. All monuments of idolatry they were to destroy, because they were a holy people to the Lord their God. Idolatrous rites and customs they were to refrain, for the same cause. Even their bodily excrements were to be covered, that their host might be holy before the Lord. And being thus cleansed from evil, they wer willed to remember, and do all his commandments, and so be holy unto their God.

3. The new testament also teacheth this same, whiles it opposeth sanctity unto all manner syn and uncleanness; and exhorteth us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and so grow up unto full holiness in the fear of God: that being sanctified throughout, we may by good works give all our members servants unto righteousness in holiness.

CHAPTER. VI.

HOW holiness is given unto God and Christ, and how unto creatures.

HOLynes is ascribed unto God in the word, both by Angels & men, in two respects; 1. Because he in himself is sanctity and purity itself; and it is impossible that in him should be any evil syn, or uncleanness. He is light, & darkness in him there is not any; he delighteth not wickedness, neither shall evil soiourn with him he cannot so much as be tempted with evil; therefore is he sequestered from this sinful world, and heaven is the habitation of his holiness. 2. Again because he is the only author and effecter of all holiness & sanctimony in whomsoever; sanctifying us his people, & giving his Sabbath for a sign hereof; & advancing us hereby, above all nations which he hath made; this being one of his principal blessings. He giveth holiness to all things about him, to the heavens, and to earthly places where he voucheth safe to appear or remain. So that none is holy as Jehovah; he is a holy God sanctified in justice, and let all flesh bless the name of his holiness forever and ay.

2. Jesus Christ hath holiness in his divine nature equal with the Father, and Holy Ghost: and in his manhood he was holy by birth; in life also and conversation he shown all manner holiness without syn or spott. For such an high priest it became us to hav, as is holy, harmless, undefiled, and separated from sinners. And he giveth holiness and purity to his church, for whose sake he sanctified himself; and is therefore worthily entitled the holy one of God, even the Holy of holies; unto whom the Seraphim do sing as he sitteth on y^e high throne of his glory within his temple, Holy holy holy (is) the Lord of hosts.

3. The Angels are spirits holy by nature, so created of God at the first, and having kept their original, are stablished by God's election through Christ their head, in their holy & happy estate forever, & therefore carry the title of Angels elect and holy. Yet even these heavenly spirits, being compared with God himself, the bottomless fountain of holiness; ar as impure in his sight & hide their faces: though through the grace of God by which they ar confirmed, they always do behold his face.

4. Holines in men, by nature there is not any, for they ar sinners & unclean from the womb; children of wrath, and rather to be reputed beasts then men: having lost the holiness wherein God at first created them; as before is shown. But holiness is restored again to men by the Lord; as it is written I The Lord sanctify you: and again, Now the God of peace sanctify you throughout: wherefor he calleth himself, the Lord our Holy one.

5. This our sanctification, is ascribed unto the Father: according to the prayer of Christ Sanctify them with thy truth, and in the epistle of Jude, to them that ar called and sanctified of God the Father. It is ascribed to the Son who loved the church and gav himself for it that he might sanctify it, and of God is made unto us wisdom and justice & sanctification & redemption; Also to the holy Ghost, as it is written, ye ar washed ye ar sanctified ye ar justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the spirit of our God

6. Our sanctification in Christ is two ways; First by imputation of that which himself wrought for us, when by the will of God we wer sanctified by the offering of his body once; and thus are we washed from our sins in his blood, and God reconciled us to himself, in the body of his flesh through death to make us Holy and unblameable, & without fault in his sight. Secondly, it is by his own gracious work in us baptising us with the holy spirit into his death, burial & resurrection; that our old man being crucified with him, the body of sin might be destroyed, & henceforth we should not serv sin, but give our members servants unto righteousness in holiness: and so being freed from sin, and made servants unto God, may have our fruit in holiness, and the end everlasting life. Both which ways of our sanctification, were shadowed out unto Israel by blood and by oil.

7. For when the body of that church was purged once a year; the blood of the syn offering was sprinkled in the inmost holy place of the Sanctuary and upon the altar without, to •ense and sanctify them from the sin and uncleanness of the sons of Israel. When the priests were consecrate the blood of their sacrifice was put upon their right ears, thumbs, & toes; and sprinkled upon their bodies and garments, that so they might be sanctified: even as before at the making of the covenant, the people had bē sprinkled with blood. The holy Ghost thereby signifiing, how by the blood of Christ much more, our consciences should be purged; and therefore calleth it the blood of the testament wherewith we are sanctified.

8. The precious ointing oil, made of principal spices, and called holy, did hallow and sanctify the Tabernacle and all therein, the brazen alter and all his instruments; the Laver and his foot; the Priests & their garments, on whom it was sprinkled together with the blood of their consecraion, for their sanctification; and figured out the graces of the Spirit, and ointment that we have from him that is holy; that Christ and his spirit being in us, the body may be dead because of syn, and the Spirit life for righteousness sake; whiles the anointing that we have received dwelleth in us, & Christ as a bundle of myrrh lodgeth between our breasts. Thus are we made an acceptable sacrifice unto God, being sanctified by the holy Ghost.

9. The outward means which God useth, for our sanctification, is his truth or word, as it is written, Sanctify them with thy truth, thy Word is truth. By this word faith is wrought in us, which faith purifieth the heart, sanctifieth the believers, and causeth them to sanctify the Lord, (as unbelief maketh men that they sanctify him not;) and therefore is worthily called the most holy faith. The seals of the covenant, do also confirm and help forward our faith and sanctification; yea even the chastisements of God upon us, have this use & end, that we might be partakers of his holiness. And we by prayer obtain at God's hand, as other blessings, so this sanctification both of ourselves and of all his creatures to our use. Finally, this grace is conveyghed both into our bodies & into our spirits even into the whole man throughout; so great is the Holy-one of Israel in the mids of us.

CHAPT. VII.

How the word of God was communicated with Adam & his children & of the Saints interest in the same.

Forasmuch as the word of God is the truth whereby we our selves ar sanctified, and all his creatures unto our use; even the immortal seed by which we ar begotten and born anew of God's own will, that we should be as the first fruits of his creatures; and the sincere milk without guile, whereby we ar nourished & grow in faith: let us take a view of this treasure and tree of life, which is better to the Saints then thousands of gold and silver, sweeter also then honey or y^e honey comb, even sweetness to the sowl and health to the bones, which if a man keep, he shall never see death.

2. Three ways there are whereby God maketh himself known unto mē. The first is by his works; for the invisible things of him, that is, his eternal power and Godhead, are seen by the creation of the world; the heavens declare his glory, & the firmament showeth the work of his hands; the beasts if they be asked will teach man, & the fowls of the heaven will tell him, the earth will show him, and the fishes of the sea will declare unto him; for how manifold are the works of God? & in wisdom hath he made them all.

3. But because the world by wisdom knew not God in this wisdom of God, (though it be enough to make all men without excuse:) it pleased God of his grace to give us his word; as a second and more excellent means of knowledge, by which word he hath magnified his name above all; for it is able to make man wise unto salvation; and he that is of God, heareth that his word, and if any man love him he will keep the same, & the Lord will love him again & dwell with him: but they that refuse & put it away, do judge themselves unworthy of everlasting life, and that word shall judge them in the last day; & for despising of it, they shall be destroyed.

4. Yet is not the outward ministry of the word sufficient, unless we be also taught of God himself; who therefore voucheth safe to give us a third help, even his own good spirit to instruct us, without which no man can say that Jesus is the Lord. By this his spirit God reveleth unto us the deep mysteries of his gospel, this Anoynting teacheth us all things; and that worthy thing which is committed to us, we keep through the Holy Ghost that dwelleth in us. Of whom and our communion with him, more is to be spoken in due place.

5. The Word of God, (whereof here we entreat,) was given to Adam even in his upright state; to be a law for him to lead his life in paradise. It was again revealed unto him after his fall; to restore him grace and life which he had lost. And not for himself alone, received he this light; but for all his children, that were fallen with him into darkness and the shadow of death: wherefore he imparted it to them, as by the sacrifices of Cain and Abel, doth appear. Yea God himself spake unto Cain, (though he was wicked and without faith,) and gave him warning of his evil way. Likewise in the new world, the covenant of God was by his word renewed with all Noah's household, wherein were Cham and Canaan, the vessels of destruction. Christ also, the sower of that precious seed, let some fall on the high way, some on stony ground, & some among thorns; from which places no fruit did grow. And his disciples were sent to preach the gospel to every creature, to all nations under heaven. By which appeareth the bounty of God, that offereth the word of life unto all, even as he causeth his Sun to shine upon just and unjust: and we are taught, that the word of God, may not be forbidden to be preached unto any people, be they never so profane or heathenish.

6. But all people to whom the words of this life were spoken, received not life by them; for the word profiteth not if it be not mixed with belief in them that hear it. And the God of this world hath blinded the eyes of many unbelievers, that the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, which is the image of God, should not shine unto thē, therefore they stumble at the word, being vnperswaded; to the which thing they were even ordained; and the ambassadors of Christ, (to whom he hath committed the word of reconciliation;) are unto such, the savor of death unto death. They hate the light because they do evil, & will not come to it, least their deeds should be reprov'd; for wickedness is sweet in their mouth, they hide it under their tongue, they favor it and will not forsake it; therefore abhor they the light and know not the ways thereof, the morning is unto them even as the shadow of death: so salvation is far from them, for that they seek not the statutes of the Lord.

7. Again, because the word of God is contrary to human reason, and condemneth for foolishness the wisdom of this world, and calleth men out of themselves, making all the glory and grace of the flesh, to fade as the flower of grass; and leading us to Christ alone, and him crucified: therefore is the preaching of the cross, to them that perish, foolishness; they despise all wisdoms counsel and correction, and seek after another wisdom, & prudence of the flesh, which is enmity against God, and cannot be subject to his law; and her they follow as an ox that goeth to the slaughter, and as a fool to the stocks for correction, though her house is the way unto the grave, which goeth down to the chambers of death, and her guests are in the depth of hell.

8. And forasmuch as many afflictions do accompany the word of Christ's patience, that on them which receive it, the Sun of tribulation or persecution often ariseth, and for it they are hated, imprisoned exiled or killed; so that a man must forsake himself, and take up his cross and follow Christ: therefore also many men, are offended & ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, & will not be partakers of the tribulations of the gospel; but choose iniquity rather than affliction, & count it pleasure to live deliciously for a season, till ease do slay the foolish, and the prosperity of the fools destroy them.

9. For when they thus contemn the word; God withdraweth from them this favor and food of their souls, sending a famine in the land, that their fair virgins & young men perish for thirst; & having caused the Sun to go down at noon, & darkened the earth, he letteth them walk in their own ignorance unto perdition. So Cain for his cruelty & contempt, being banished from the presence of God; we find not the benefit of God's oracles to be afterwards vouchsafed him or his, as was unto Seth's posterity. The like is to be minded in the children of Cham, Ishmael, Esau &c. Who after they were removed from God's church, were also deprived of his word and doctrine, which he continued & increased unto the people that of his grace he called and kept to himself as his own.

10. For the light of the Gospel and day of Christ was revealed unto Abram Isaac and Jacob; and to the Israelites their posterity, did God give his law by Moses, and continued the preaching and opening of the same by other prophets and ministers; when as the heathens had not this help but lay in darkness, hearkening unto witches, soothsayers, sorcerers, necromancers and other like abominable instruments of Satan which turned to their eternal confusion: when as for Israel the Lord their God suffered them not so; but out of heaven he made them hear his voice to instruct them, and upon earth he shown them his great fire, and they heard his voice out of the midst of the fire; they had ordinances and laws most righteous, to keep and to do, which was their praise for wisdom and understanding in the sight and mouths of all people's. Wherefore David provokes them again to praise the Lord, who had shown his word unto Jacob his statutes and his judgments unto Israel, and had not dealt so with any nation. Paul likewise magnifieth this people greatly, because to them were committed the oracles of God; to them were the covenants and the giving of the law, the service, and the promises. And this grace was so peculiar to God's people, that the Law is called by the Holy Ghost, the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob, as being their proper right given them of God, as any other possessiō which they enjoyed: the Saints again taking his testimonies as an heritage forever, for they were the joy of their harts.

11. The drift and scope of all God's oracles was to call and lead men unto Christ, and by him to the kingdom of heavē where we might glorify God in our salvation and life eternal. Our Fathers from Adam to Moses, were quickened & comforted with this promise. And though Moses gave us a law, which was the ministry of death and condemnation by reason of syn that dwelleth in us: yet even he wrote also of Christ, and foreshowed his crucifying and sufferings for our sins, in the serpent, sacrifices and manyfold services; yea the law itself was our schoolmaister to bring us to Christ that we might be made righteous by faith in him, in respect of whō the covenant was many years afore confirmed of God, & could not by the Law that came after, be disannulled.

12. The hope of salvation for all mankind, was in the promised seed: and as God by his word taught men more particularly from whose loins he should spring; so were they to expect him if they would have life, and keep communion with such as should be his Fathers after the flesh. When the woman Evah's sons were multiplied, and many of them proved wicked; the hope of the saving Seed, was restrained unto Seth set in place of Abel whom the Serpents seed had murdered. Then were all to look for the Savior from him; and if they sought him in Cain's posterity, they perished forever. Among Noah's children, Sem had the prerogative, and into his tents must Japheth (though his elder brother) come for to dwell and partake of his blessing; & Chams house was condemned to bondage. After that unto Abraham was the Gospel preached that in him all nations should be blessed; and to his Seed Christ were the promises made: then who so believed (after knowledge of this promise) in a Savior to come of any other man; set up an idol in his heart, in stead of Christ. Among Abraham's offspring, Judah was chosen governor, and of him should Shiloh come, therefore his fathers sons wer to bow down unto him, because of him should be the Prince. Of the tribe of Judah, David was named to be the father of Christ according to the flesh; then wer all to believe in David's son, for redemption from syn, and life eternal. In fullness of time the Messiah Jesus came, and was born of Marie the virgin, according to the promises: unto him now wer all people to repayr; and so they did both Jews & Gentiles, so many as wer ordained unto life. And if Adam, Noah, Abraham & the other fathers, had now been on earth, they must hav embraced this man for their Savior, and not hav sought nor waited for any other. Therefore the Jews that rejected him, died in their sins, because they believed not that he was He, and the word of God they had not abiding in them, because whom he had sent, him they believed not: but many of the gentiles trusted in him, after that they heard the word of truth, even the gospel of their salvation; and by faith became the sons of Abraham, and heirs by promise

13. And always before, if any of them heathens, hearing of God's great name, would repay unto his people, they there might freely enjoy this heavenly blessing, to hear the law and promises red & taught; & being united with them in faith, had one law for sacrifice & alother services. Yea many such strangers wer in Israel, in the days of Moses, that went with them out of Egypt; and afterwards daily their number increased, that in Solomon's time they were counted and found a hundred fifty three thousand and six hundred persons. Sometimes also the Lord sent his word in some measure, home to their own countries, as by Jonah to the Ninevites; though this was more rare, til the Apostles days, and then the partition wall being broken down, God imparted again the glad tidings of his salvatiō to all people's, though the Jews could not endure it.

14. For Christ though he restrained this grace a while, saying to his disciples, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, & into the cities of the Samaritans enterye not: yet when he was risen from the dead, he said they should be his witnesses both in Judea & Samaria & to y^e utmost of y^e earth. And as he had willed them, where his word should be refused, to shake off the dust of their feet against them, and depart thence: so the Apostles did, and travayled from place to place, til the people to whom God had not been spoken of did see; & they that had not heard, did understand.

15. When thus there was one sheepfold made both of Jews and Gentiles, and their eyes wer opened to see the wonders of God's law, & the glorious mystery of man's redemption, reveled and published amongal nations by the scriptures of the prophets: they whose harts God opened, received the word with all readiness, and searched the scriptures daily, taking heed to that most sure word of the prophets as to a light shining in a dark place, til the day dawned, and the day star arose in their harts. And though for that word they found tribulation as others before them, for whō Christ complained to his father saying, I hav given them thy word, & the world hath hated them: yet received they that word † in much affliction, with joy of the holy Ghost; accepting it not as the word of men but of God, and holding it forth as the word of life, which being graffed in them was able to save their souls.

16. For such is the grace and virtue of God's word, that it turneth the sowl, rejoiceth the heart, giveth light to the eyes, wisdō to the simple; worketh faith in God, quickeneth them that hear it; comforteth the Saints in their troubles, & strengtheneth them in their temptations, being the sword of the Spirit, by help whereof they vanquish their enemies and Satan himself, and their own corruptions, & are freed thereby from the servitude of syn. It is a sovereign preservative from all evils that might befall us; for as Solomon saith, It leadeth us when we walk, it watcheth for us when we sleep; & whē we wake, it talketh with us. Also it is lively & mighty in operation, sharper then any two edged sword, entering through even to the dividing asunder of the sowl & the spirit, of the joints & marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart; and Christ hath sanctified and cleansed his church by the washing of water through this word, as also himself said to his disciples, Now ar ye clean through the word which I hav spoken to yow.

17. And unto this church hath he specially commended & committed those heavenly oracles, binding up the testimony and sealing up the law among his disciples, directing his words & writings unto them, & promising that his spirit which is upon them, & his words which he hath put in their mouth, shall not depart out of their mouth, nor out of the mouth of their seed, nor their seeds seed forever. Who again rejoice for this word as if they had found a great spoil, and their lips do utter praise, when he hath taught them his statutes. And having all and every of them a commune right in this treasure, they use it for the good of their own souls and one of another, teaching, exhorting, admonishing, reproofing and comforting one another; which that they may the better do, they are willed the word of Christ should dwell in them plenteously, that if any man speak, it may be as the words of God.

Hear my law ô my people▪ incline your ear• unto the words of my mouth.

Psal. 78. 1.

The secret things belong to the Lord our God; but the things revealed, belong unto us, and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this Law.

Deut. 29. 29.

CHAP. VIII.

HOw God by his word, hath always called and separated a people▪, from communion with Devils and wicked men; to the fellowship of his grace, by faith in Christ.

WHen our first parents had revolted from God, forsaken his word the ground of their faith and obedience, and embraced the contrary word of the Serpent; whereby they were brought unto syn, & by syn being finished, unto death: they were estranged from God, afraid of his face and voice, ashamed of themselves; & sought to shroud them among the trees, to hide their shame with •igleaves, and to excuse their syn by trāslating the fault unto others, the man to the woman, given him of God, the womā to the serpent; but shown no repentance, neither asked mercy for their misdeeds, though they were sūmoned to the judgment of God. Wherefore, had not his grace prevented them, they had proceeded on to all manner impiety, as did and do the Devils, (whō God hath left in their wretchedness;) in whose slavish subjection, they and we all their children had continued captives, unto eternal damnation.

2. But God immediately manifested his purpose, according to his election of grace, by giving to men that were dead in syn, the word of life whereby they were revived; by which word he called them from Satan's service to his own again by faith in Christ, who should in time become the woman's seed, and crush that Serpents head for his chosens sake. He also brake that cursed amity between men and Devils, and said that the would put enmity between them; & not that only, but between the Serpents seed (that is the wicked men and reprobates, who are named the sons of Belial and of the Devil;) and the woman's seed, that is Christ & his church, even all men and women that should embrace the faith of the woman now named Evah, that is Living, and the mother of all that live.

3. And Adam which had shown that singular faith in God's promise, by naming her Life, whom of late he accused to be the instrument of his death: informed his childrē in this grace of God; who together w^t their parents professed one commune faith & obedience, which also they testified by their service and sacrifices offered to the Lord. Thus he & his house were freed from Satan's bondage by the word of truth the Gospel which was taught them, and were made Saints by calling.

4. But Cain who was the first seed of the serpent, and therefore said in scripture to be of that Wicked-one, being an hypocrite and without faith, for which cause his works also were evil: though he were among the Saints, yet was he not of them, and therefore continued not with them. Yea though he were warned of God, he would not be amended; but shown the malice and enmity of his father the Devil, by killing his righteous brother. Neither then relented he, but added obstinacy to his bloody act: wherefor he was cursed of God, and fell into desperation, & condemnation of the Devil.

5. The peace and communion of the Saints, being by that caytiff thus disturbed and broken; & the deadly war with the woman's seed, by that trump of Satan thus proclaimed: God for the good & preservation of his Church, cast out this sinner from his presence on earth, (as he had don the Angels which sinned, from the same in heaven;) and he being separated from the fellowship of the faithful, dwelt a runagate in a land of that name, and another seed was given to Eve in stead of just Abel decessed. And so the Church of Christ was propagated, governed by ten faithful patriarchs successively; distinguished from the seven generations of Cain, as in place and estate, so in name; the one sort called the children of God, the other of men. And whereas the Cainites increased, as well in wickedness as in multitude: the Lord to keep his people from mixture with them, gave warning by Enoch the seventh from Adam; who prophesied the destruction of them and all ungodly persons, for their wicked deeds & cruel speakings; when God should come to give judgment, with ten thousands of his Saints.

6. But neither his word whereby he admonished his people, nor yet his spirit which strove in them; could restrain them from being commingled with the profane, and Serpents seed: for they coupled themselves in marriage with their fayr women, whereby there sprong a tyrannous race of Giants, by whom the earth was filled with cruelty. That God seeing how his children wer degenerat & become also flesh, and that the wickedness of man was wexen great, repented that he had made man in the earth, and was sory in his heart: Yet warned them again by Noah a preacher of righteousness, and by the building of the ark 120. years: which patience they contemning, God brought the flood upon the world of the ungodly, & destroyed them; only Noah and his house wer reserved, finding grace in the eyes of the Lord.

7. Yet even in that little family of eight souls, so wondrously saved in the water as by a Baptism; the Serpent had his seed still, which in process of time was discovered, in the person of Cham & his posterity and by the Patriarch Noah was accursed. Which wicked brood to get themselves a name, went about to build a tower up to heaven, in the land of Shinar the place and habitation of Wickedness; where God confounded their lips, scattered them from thence, stayed their proud building, and Babel or Confusion is their monument to this day. And when not only Chams cursed progeny, but also the seed of blessed Sem, even •erah the father of Abram, and Nachor fell to idolatry, and they served other God's, or rather in deed Devils as the scripture also nameth them; then God called Abram from his country, kindred and fathers house, to go into the land which he would show him, unto which calling he by faith obeyed, and departed, not knowing wither he went.

8. The Lord who was the caller and redeemer of Abram, gav him two gracious promises to confirm his faith; as 1. that he should inherit the land of Canaan to which he brought him: 2. & that he should hav heirs of his own seed to inherit it after him even a great nation, and one seed specially (which was Christ) in whom all families of the earth should be blessed. With these promises, and blessing and ronoume adjoined to them, the Lord persuaded him to forsake his idolatrous country and communion with idols, and to walk before him, who was God the All-sufficient, and to be upright; and gav him the covnant of circumcision, the seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had; he gav him also two sons, Ishmael of Hagar a servant born after the flesh; and Isaac of Sarah a free woman, born by promise.

9. But he that was born after the flesh, fell to profaneness, became a mocker and persecutor of the true and promised seed: wherefor he was cast out of the church, the house of Abraham; and lost the honor of being reputed his seed, or heyr with Isaac the freeborne, and child of promise.

10. Again, unto Isaac wer born Esau and Jacob; but God loved Jacob, and hated Esau; and he also degenerated and became profane; sold his birthright and lost his blessing, and was separated from his brother Jacob, unto whom alone the blessing of Abraham was derived.

11. Jacob (whose name was Israel) being willed of God to build him an altar at Bethel before he would do it, had a care to purge his howshold of the false God's wherewith they wer defiled, who giving him both their Idols & idolatrous jewels he hid them under an oke at Shechem, for he knew that the worship of God & of Idols could not stand together. Afterwards he went with his family by the word of the Lord from Canaan into Egypt, & was a sojourner in the land of Cham: where God multiplied his church exceedingly, as he had promised to Abraham his friend. There when the Israelites forgot the Lord their God, and defiled themselves with the Idols of Egypt: he recaled them by his word from those abominations, & had almost destroyed them for their disobedience. But respecting his own name and glory, he ceased not to visit them, first by his punishments, then by his promises & miracles; til he had won them again unto his faith and service.

12. Then bringing them forth from that both spiritual and corporal bondage, & executing judgments upon the Egyptians and upon their God's; he certified Israel of his end and purpose herein, which was to bring them to himself, that they might hear his voice, and keep his covenant, and be his chief treasure above all people, though all the earth wer his. Charging them, not to do after the doings of the land of Egypt wherein they dwelt, neither to do after the manner of the land of Canaan whither he would bring them, nor walk in their ordinances; but to do after his judgments and keep his ordinances to walk in them, for he was the Lord their God; and to this end had separated them from other people, even from among all people of the earth did he separate them unto himself for an inheritance. Wherefore he commanded them utterly to destroy those cursed nations, to make no covenant with them, nor have compassion on them, nor make marriages with them: for they would cause them to turn from him, and serve other God's, which would be to their destruction, & willed to abolish all their idolatry with the names & monuments of the same; for that they were a holy people unto him.

13. Joshua, treating with Israel of serving the Lord in uprightness & truth, exhorted them to put away the God's which their fathers had served in Mesopotamia and in Egypt; & so to serve the Lord, who he calleth holy and jealous, that would not pardon their iniquity or their sins, if they should forsake him, & serve strange God's. And when the people made choice of the Lord, to serve him; he required them again, to put away the strange God's that were among them: teaching them and us thereby; that God's true worship, & the service of Idols, cannot be joined together, but the one will expel the other. Which law when they kept not, but worshiped the God's of the people's round about them, and so forsook the Lord: his wrath was hot against them, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and they could no longer stand before their enemies; yea the Lord would no more cast out before them any of the nations which Joshua left when he died. Again when Samuel reconciled them unto the Lord; he in like manner first procured them to put away their false religion, (which was the cause of their calamity,) and to direct their hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only.

14. Neither did this warning of idolatry respect the idols of Canaan only, but the false religions of all other people's near or far off, for any other God besides or with Jehovah they might not have or serve. Therefore though they had no commission to root out any idols save those in Canaan, because that should be their possession; yet were they to avoid communion with all other idolaters; which when they did not, but coupled themselves with Baalpeor the God of the Moabites, and separated themselves unto that Shame, and did eat the sacrifices of the dead: the plague of God brake out upon them, and there fell of the Israelites in one day four & twenty thousand; even every man that followed Baal-peor the Lord destroyed him from among his people.

15. And in no better account were the idols and voluntary services of the Israelites themselves; for God by his word forbade them either to make or use any manner idol or similitude upon pain of his jealous indignation. Therefore when they had made a resemblance & memorial of their God that brought them out of the land of Egypt; and turned him their Glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass: then were they esteemed to have forgotten God their savior, and committed great blasphemies; & for that syn many of them died, & all of them had been rooted out, (with Aaron himself,) but that Moses stood in the breach and by his instant prayer, turned away the Lord's wrath from destroying them.

16. Again when Jeroboam the king of Israel had set up signs for the people to worship their God (as they thought) that brought them out of the Land of Egypt; because they were in the Lord's account but Devils, & so all that followed them worshiped Satan & not God, yea the people in that estate were without the true God: therefore he ceased not both by doctrines and judgments to keep & reclaim his people from them; warning Judah not to syn, though Israel played the harlot; and forasmuch as Ephraim was joined to Idols, they should let him alone; and not seek Bethel, nor enter to Gilgal, nor go to Beersheba, (which were the places of public worship among them,) but to seek the Lord and they should live, whereas all those sinners of his people should die; even as Jereboam's house for his syn was rooted out and destroyed from the face of the earth.

17. As the Prophets thus witnessed unto Israel in their several ages: so our Savior Christ when he came, with his Apostles, first labored to keep and withdraw the people from the service of Devils and idols, whither more open or secret. For as he appeared for this purpose that he might loose the works of the Devil, and was that promised seed which should crush the serpents head: so did he first himself hand to hand combat with Satan, resisted his temptations, overcame and put him to flight, and would not admit of any communion between the Fiends and him, nor suffer them to say so much as that they knew him. He dispossessed them of many men over whom they tyrannized, and commanded his disciples to do the like; and ceased not this war, til Satan which had usurped the principedom of this world was cast out; even to the death did he resist him, and by death destroyed him which had the power of death. For though in him the Serpent could find nothing, yet for his chosens sake he endured all things: till he had spoiled the principalities and powers, and triumphed over them in his cross: thus teaching us in his own example and person, to hate with perfect hatred that enemy of God & man; and to know, that there can no concord be, betwixt Christ and Belial.

18. Satan being thus like lightning fallen down from heaven, & his place not found there anymore, after our Michael had overcome him taken from him all his armor wherein he trusted, and divided his spoils: many people's were more easily recovered and drawn out of his snares; who were all taught by the trumpet of the gospel to prepare themselves to battle against him, to take unto them the whole armor of God, that they might be able to resist in the evil day; to fight the good fight of faith, and by it steadfastly to resist that roaring Lion which walked about, seeking whom he might devour: being with this comforted and assured, that the God of peace would tread Satan under their feet shortly.

19. But because this Adversary would transfigure himself into an Angel of light, and his ministers also, as though they wer ministers of righteousness: the more care & watchfulness the Saints were warned to have, least they should be circumvented. They wer taught therefore touching all the heathens religion, that whatsoever they sacrificed, they sacrificed to Devils and not to God; and that Christians might have no fellowship with Devils, and consequently neither with those idolaters which ignorantly worshiped such: but must come out from among them, separate themselves and touch no unclean thing: for they could not be partakers both of the Lord's table and of the table of Devils, two such contrary masters they could by no means serve. And if they joined with the wicked in their worship, or haunted their assemblies; even as in Israel they that did eat of the sacrifices were partakers of the Altar; whereby they had part and interest in the whole worship, and the God worshiped: even so had they with Satan, that did eat of his sacrifices in his temples; how ever they might persuade themselves otherwise, because they did know the idol was nothing. Wherefore they were forbidden all communion with such, and exhorted to flee from idolatry, for behold all that are of the fellowship thereof shall be confounded, as saith the Prophet.

20. And because this old serpent would creep again into the church and paradise of God, to seduce the Saints, & set his own throne there: the Lord Jesus by his Angel certified his servant John, and by him hath warned us all, that the Christians also would in time forsake the true service of God in spirit, & would worship Devils; even idols of gold and silver and brass and stone & wood; being drawn hereunto by the effectual delusion of Satan in his eldest son Antichrist the child of perdition; whose doctrines would be the doctrines of Devils; whose kingdom should be managed by spirits of Devils, and men drawn by them to battle against God almighty. Herevpon is that glorious synagogue proclaimed with the loud voice of an heavenly Angel, to be become the habitation of Devils, and with another voice all God's people ar willed to go out of her, that they partake not in her sins, and receive not of her plagues: for if any man worship that beast or his image, or take his mark; he shall drink of the wine of God's wrath, and be tormented in fire and brimstone before the holy Angels & before the Lamb, and the smoke of their torment shall ascend evermore.

21. And as by the word of Christ men wer withdrawn from idolatry and communion with the wicked; so wer they also exhorted to draw near to the Lord and in faith and love to cleave unto him alone: that turning from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, they might receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which ar sanctified by faith in him. They were therefore informed in the mysteries of the gospel, baptized into the name of the Lord in whom they believed, separated from others that frowardly refused, had their assemblies for prayer doctrine and other holy exercises, which they wer exhorted to cōtinew, taking heed that they wer not unequally yoked with infidels of the world; nor commingled with open sinners in the church, but to cast out the wicked from among them, that they might be jointly a sweet new lump as they were severally vnleavened loaves, and so to serve the Lord as they might please him with reverence and fear, keeping themselves from idols, and unspotted of the world.

22. Thus hath God taught us, that all idolatry, whither of Paynims Jews or Christians, is the worship of Devils: & from it, hath in all ages since the world began, called his elect; that they shūning the society of the Serpent & his seed, might repair to the Lamb that standeth on mount Zion, having his Fathers name written on their foreheads, and follow him whither soever he goeth; might walk in the light of the heavenly Jerusalem, and there hav fellowship with the Lord and one with another; to their preservatiō from death, & the glory of God in their eternal life & salvation.

CHAPTER IX.

How far we must avoid communion with Devils: & how far with the wicked men.

Forasmuch as Satan is an open professed adversary of God & men always, and all his endeavors tend to the Lord's dishonor and our destruction; neither is there any bond of nature or otherwise between him & us that we should have intercourse with him or seek his good or peace forever: therefore are we absolutely forbidden all manner communion with him, in things spiritual or human; all which we may reduce unto four heads.

2. The first concerneth our faith, that we give no credit to his word as did our first parents, nor admit into our hearts any of his doctrines or dānable heresies; which are called by the Apostle doctrines of Devils: but that we hold fast the word of life taught us of God in his scriptures only, avoiding all errors and lies in religion; whither hethenish Jewish or antichristian; for who soever be the instruments, Satan is the Father of them, and by them doth draw men unto destruction.

3. The second concerneth our outward carriage, that we do not present our bodies; or by anything that we have, give maintenance to his worship and service, where or howsoever: but as our bodies and spirits are the Lord's, so with them both to glorify, and serve him only, and honor him with our substance; fleeing all idolatry which is Satan's worship, and outward communion therewith; & not upon any pretense, either of our own knowledge and inward dislike of the idol, or the pleasing of others, or winning them by this means to the faith, or avoiding of our trouble, or presuming of the mercy of God, or the like, to participate in the service & sacrifice of Devils. God in his law gave this general precept for his people They shall no more offer their offerings to devils; and in the Gospel we have this instruction, ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of Devils.

4. The third concerneth all devilish arts, whereby many men have fellowship with the damned spirits; as Conjuring, enchantment, Witchcraft, sorcerie, divination, charming, necromantie, and all other of the like nature. Touching which God's law forbiddeth two things, 1. that no man should himself use any such cursed craft, many of which are particularly named Deut. 18. 10. 11. but man or woman that had such spirits, should die the death: 2. also that none should seek unto such for instruction or counsel in any matter, for so they should forsake the living God, & turn to the dead. Wherefore this transgression is noted for one of the two causes of King Saul's death: that he sought and asked counsel of a familiar spirit, (by a witch at Endor,) and asked not of the Lord. And as Christ would not have the Devils to bear witness of him; so neither would the Apostles suffer a maid which had a spirit of Divination to acknowledge them to be the servants of the most high God, and preachers of the way of salvation. Finally, not only these evil arts and practicers of them; but all books or writings, or other means which may nourish the same, are to be shunned & abolished: as the practice of the Christians, that burned their books of curious crafts, doth teach us.

5. The fourth head concerneth Satan's temptations, suggestions, & provocations unto evil; whereby he daily solliciteth every man unto syn: all which we are taught of God carefully to resist, giving no place to the Devil, but by faith to quench all his fiery darts; and being armed with the whole armor of God to stand fast in the evil day, and in our prayers to desire that we may be delivered from that Wicked one. Herein all the Saints, while they live on earth, come short of their duty; and too often do admit of fellowship with the Devil; by reason of the corruption of nature, and infirmity of the flesh: but by faith in Christ we overcome and triumph, and shall in the end have full redemption from all these evils.

6. Thus are we taught of God to resist Satan, and avoid all manner fellowship with him to the utmost of our power: because all his endeavors are against us for evil, neither can we work in him any good, by any means, at any time. But the estate of wicked men, is otherwise to be considered; because they and we are all one flesh and blood; are all placed of God, to live together in this world, and enjoy mutually his common blessings, as the light of the sun, the rayn, & fiuits of the earth, and other creatures; besides our civil society in common weales: so that we cannot avoid all meddling with them, except we should go out of the world as the Apostle teacheth. Also of many of them there is hope, that they may be converted frō their evil ways; which by all good & gentle means we should procure. Howbeit of sīners there is difference to be made; for some are yet vncaled to the knowledge and faith of Christ; others are called, and do profess one commō faith in Christ's Church with us, but walk unworthy of the same; and some have departed from the faith and obedience whereunto they were come, and are cast out of the church, delivered unto Satan. Of our special duty to such as being in the church do transgress, it resteth to be spoken hereafter; here I will treat of wicked men in general.

7 Concerning whom, we are taught of God, not to communicate with them in any evil action; as not to run with the thief nor partake with the adulterer, not to walk in the way with those that lay wait for blood; nor keep company with drunkards or gluttons, nor have fellowship with any other their unfruitful works of darkness, but reprove them rather and avoid them; especially their spiritual & religious actions, as not to offer their offerings of blood, nor make mention of their names with our lips, not to frequent their assemblies, nor eat of their sacrifices, though they cal and invite us thereto; for even the word of God, and all other holy things are polluted among them, their prayers turned to syn, and their sacrifices abomination to the Lord.

8. And not in heart and mind alone, are we to mislike & eschew their idolatries, & other evil actions: but to keep our bodies as well as our spirits pure, because Christ hath redeemed both, & with both we must glorify God. We may not therefore swear by their idols, nor make any other religious mention of them with our lips. We may not kiss them, nor bow the knee, nor do any other sign of reverence unto them. We may not present our bodies at their holy feasts, in their hallowed places, nor suffer our mouths to eat of their delicates; much less repayr to any such places for the repast or feeding of our souls. We may not either at allurement of parents, brethren, or most dear friends; or by the example or enticement of the multitude, or by the commandment of the Magistrate, do these or any of these evils: but following the word of God to separate ourselves, touch no unclean thing, cleanse us from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, & so grow up unto full holiness in the fear of God. Finally; we may not join ourselves in marriage, with any that are no• of the same faith and fellowship with us, in the Gospel of Christ.

9. The causes of this restraynt & separation from the wicked, are. First the will & glory of God, who to the end we might be his hath severed us from other people: and upon this condition hath promised to accept us, & marie us unto himself in faith, that we should give ourselves alone to him and to his service, and not run a whoring after strangers. And hath made this our refreyning from communion with the wicked, one express & special part of his covenant with us. Secondly it is for our own good, least by familiarity with the wicked we should learn their ways, & receive destruction to our sowls, as others before us, by and for like carriage hav done. Therefore a• we warned, not to wander in their paths, nor let our heart decline to their ways; for they go down to the chambers of death: and if we be partakers in their sins, we shall receive also of their plagues. Thirdly it is for the good of those wicked men themselves, (if such be the grace of God towards them) or for their more certain & just condemnation; that seeing us to separate from them, and thinking it strange that we run not with them unto the same evils; hearing our reproofs and witness against them; are either drawn to consider their ways and turn their feet unto God's testimonies, or else blaspheming, persist and are hardened in their evil course unto judgment. Fourthly it is for the overthrow of Satan's throne and kingdom, which the words and works of the Saints do beat down daily, discovering his errors and abominations, keeping themselves, and drawing others from his deceits and snares: whereas by cōmunicating in those evils, they should both honor and advance that enemy; and strengthen the wicked's hands, that they should not turn from their impiety.

10. But though we may have no communion with the wicked in their religion, nor any other evil action, against either table of God's Law: yet in civil affairs we are taught of God to converse with them in peace. As to eat and drink with them, buy & sell, make covenants of peace, show kindness to them, pity their estate, love them, relieve their wants, and receive from them for our relief; pray for them, labor by all gentle demeanure to convert them from their evil way, and do any good we can to their souls or bodies, or anything that is theirs. And if we live in their policies and dominions, we ought to be subject to all civil Magistrates high or low, and that of conscience; pay thē their tributes, customs & other like duties for their common wealth; to bear their exactions, oppressions, persecutions, patiently, without rebellion or resistance; and even pray for them that shall so misuse us: that thus as much as in us lieth, we may do good unto, & have peace with all men, in all things except syn; & be perfect, as our father which is in heaven is perfect.

CHAP. X.

How the Saints are called out of themselves, & taught to forsake their own ways and works, that they may have communion with God in Christ.

FORasmuch as all mē bear in their bosoms natural corruptions, bred with them in the womb, & brought up with them from the cradle, whereby they ar all alike children of wrath: our separation from other wicked, will little avail us, unless we be also separated from ourselves, and learn to renounce the lusts and affections, yea even the fayr-seeming works and wisdom of the flesh. For what ar we the better for avoiding outward pollution by others, if a fretting leprosy cleav to our flesh & bones, and our own clothes do make us filthy?

2 To draw us therefore quite out of the miry pit of corruption, the Lord hath called us from the love and liking of ourselves also; as being naturally both his enemies and our own; teaching us that our wits are incapable of his heavenly mysteries, our reason enmity against him & his Law; our thoughts & purposes evil, our affections brutish, our wisdom foolishness, all our glorious grace as the flour of grass: and that therefore we must be turned and become as little children; even born again, or else we cannot see the kingdom of God.

3. In matters of religion, we must not do what seemeth good in our own eyes, nor choose our own ways, nor forge things out of our own hearts, nor make to ourselves any similitude of things in heaven or earth, nor walk in our own counsels: for what is man that he should invent services of God, or do anything which the Lord requireth not at his hands. The things of God knoweth no man but the spirit of God; of him therefore we must learn his fear, what he commandeth, that only must we do, we may not put to it, nor take ought from it. For when Israel set their own thresholds and posts by the Lord's, they defiled his holy name with their abominations.

4. The mysteries of his faith, we may not measure by carnal reason, or our own shallow understanding; but learn with reverence to believe all his words; knowing that the things which eye hath not seen, neither ear heard, neither came into man's heart, are which God hath prepared for them that love him: and neither flesh nor blood, but himself doth manifest them unto us; and as his words are spirit and life, so is it his spirit that searcheth all, even the deep things of God, reveleth them unto us, and quickeneth us.

5. The promises which are made us, we must embrace not by sight but by faith which is the evidence of things not seen. And seem they never so unlikely or impossible, yet ought we not to doubt of them, or reason against them through unbelief; but even above hope to believe under hope: being fully assured that he which hath promised is able to do it. For as Sara received strength to bring forth a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful which had promised: so contrariwise, the children of Israel, when God had brought them through the wilderness even to the borders of the land of promise; yet could they not enter in, because of their unbelief.

6. The commandments of God, how hard or unreasonable soever they seem, we must readily and cheerfully obey; laying aside all excuses, delays, fears, or other things that may hinder us: knowing that all his precepts are perfect, righteous, pure, and just. Therefore when God calleth us, we must follow him though we know not whither we shall come; when he sendeth us to any place, of danger, we must go though we know not what may befall us there; when he commandeth us a thing, that is both against nature of man, and promise of God, we must obey without murmuring or reasoning: yea even to the death must we be obedient, that we may receive the crown of life.

7. In all our trials and tribulations, we must in faith & patience possess our souls. We may not murmur, though we want both bread and water; nor speak against God, though our way be never so grievous. When we be in danger of our foes pursuing us, we must not complain; nor be afraid, when they beset us round about. If God cause men to ride over our heads; if he lead us into fire and into water, if he give us as sheep to be eaten, & scatter us among the nations; if he smite us down into the place of dragons, and cover us with the shadow of death: yet may we not forget him, nor deal falsely concerning his covenant; but in all these triumph as more then conquerors, through him that loved us. When in our troubles we expect his salvation, we must not make hast, & though it tarry, we must wait; if he hide his face from us, and be angry against our prayer, so y^t we cry by day, but he heareth not, and by night, but hav no audience; if he put us back as dogs unworthy of his grace; if he turn himself to be cruel against us, & to be enemy to us w^t y^e strength of his hand: yet must we remember that he is the rock of our salvation, and say, I will wait for the Lord that hath hid his face from Jacob, and I will look for him; Lo though he slay me, yet will I trust in him.

8, Notwithstanding all these & whatsoever else we can do or suffer for his names sake, yet must we empty & cast down ourselves before him, confessing that we ar but unprofitable servants, we hav done that which was our duty to do: & it is nothing to y^e Almighty that we are righteous, our well-doing extendeth not to him. Neither for our works done, or of him foreseen to be done, hath he saved & called us with a holy calling; but according to his own purpose and grace, w^c was given to us through Christ Jesus before the world was. And because we ar all too well persuaded of ourselves & our good deserts, the Lord useth two means for to humble us; the one is his Law which showeth us our sins and infirmities; the other, Corrections whereby he openeth our ears, to cause us to turn away our work, & that he might cover our pride; of both these Solomon saith the commandment is a lantern, and the law alight; & correcttions for instructiō, are the way of life.

9. The Law reveleth our sins which lay hid within us, & showeth our weakness to be greater then we could imagine. For first we are alive (in our own conceit) without the law, and will not stick to say Al that the Lord commandeth, we will do. But when he speaketh, we cannot endure to hear the law at his mouth, but run away. Or if we do receive it, it is with a veil over Moses face, not discerning the true nature of the Law which is spiritual, or end of the same, which is to bring us to Christ: but in hypocrisy, with hollow and covered harts, imagining the outward observation thereof howsoever it be, to be sufficient. But when it cometh in deed to our conscience, we die, for syn (which we thought was dead) reviveth, and taking occasion by the cōmandemēt, deceiveth us, and thereby slayeth us; and when the law saith Thou shalt not lust, syn worketh in us all manner of lust. And as the Israelites having heard the thundering voice of the Lord from heaven, forbidding them to have any other God's before his face; did before forty days were expired, forget both their promise, and their fear, & God himself their savior, and made them God's of metal: so is it with us all, when the commandment cometh, syn aboundeth and appeareth to be syn, yea out of measure sinful. And because the wages of syn is death, the law also causeth wrath, which is reveled from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men. Then are we cast down with sight and horror of our wretched case; and the more we strive to rid ourselves out of these snares of hell, the faster we are entangled: for we find ourselves carnal, & sold under syn; so as if we have will to do good, yet find we no means to perform it; and without God's grace we can neither will nor do. Wherefore we cry out upon our misery, and should die in desp•yr, wer it not that God did cause his favor in the face of Christ to shine upon us:

in whom being graffed by faith, we ar dead to the law, but alive unto God by belief in his son, who hath loved us, given himself for us, and liveth in us. Thus is the law, a light to discover, a fire to burn, a hammer to break whatsoever in us is exalted against God, & is a scholemayster to lead us to Christ, that we might be made righteous by him, after that we ar stripped naked of our own misconceived righteousness; & having our filthy garments taken frō us, may be arrayed with chan•• of raiment, even that fine-li••n pure and shining, which ⟨
 ◇ the righteousness of the Saint▪

10. The chastisements ⟨ God, ar another good means to •umble our stubborn nature, & baptized harts: making us to ⟨ & try our ways, and turn ⟨ to the Lord; to cry unto ⟨
 ◇ our distress; to hav care to ⟨ and keep his word. By them he proveth us, to know what is in our harts, and letteth us hav experience both of our own infirmities, and of his power & grace. By them he bringeth us to an humble confession & sorrow for our sins, and so delivereth our souls from going into the pit. By them and our weakness in thē, he teacheth us to trust in him & not in ourselves. Thus the rod and correction giveth us wisdom, and we are chastened for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11. And thus God calleth us out of ourselves, from the unbelief, blindness, hypocrisy, hardness of heart, pride, wantonness, & all other inordinate affections that do possess us, that we may believe, love, fear and obey him alone; that we may remember and do all his commandments, and be holy unto our God▪ He teacheth us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, even such as fight in our own members; that our old man being crucified with Christ, the body of syn may be destroyed, & we serve syn no more. But having our souls as weanlings with us, withdrawn from all carnal pleasures, and having cast off everything that presseth down, and the syn that so easily compasseth us about; may delight in the Lord & in his law, depending upon him alone for life succor and salvation; neither dispayring for our evil deeds, nor boasting of our good, but by faith taking hold upon Christ and saying, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and I desire none in the earth with thee: my flesh faileth, and my heart, but God is the rock of my heart and my portion forever. Then bidding farewell to the world, and meekly taking our cross upon us, as men hateing our own life here, to follow the Lamb whither soever he goeth and shall bring us, to mountains or deserts, to hunger or thirst, to cold or nakedness, to trouble of body, or grief of mind, to fears or terrors, or even to the dust of death: knowing that in all he will susteyn us, & in the end, wipe all tears from our eyes; after we have gone into fire and into water, he will bring us out into a welthie place; in our weakness he will strengthen us, in our wants he will reliev us, in all our cares, doubts, dangers, & distresses, he will guide us by his counsel, and after receive us to glory.

12. But these things ar so hard unto flesh and blood, that the natural man chooseth rather to remain still in his woeful state, and enjoy the momentary pleasures of syn, then in such straits and difficulties to follow Christ. For it is a heavy thing to renounce and forsake his own affections, to condemn his own wisdom for foolishness, to rest wholly upon God's word and promises, when nothing is seen but present want & calamity; to abandon pleasures, to tame and subdue his wanton lusts, to bear cheerfully the reproaches and persecutions of the world, and whatsoever else God shall bring upon him; oftentimes to the lost of friends, wife, children, goods, lands and life itself. Therefore this state is in deed a Denial of ourselves, & carrying of our cross daily: a Mortification of our earthly members, even a daily dying and breathing out of the ghost. As the sacrifices given unto God were killed, salted, and sent up in fire; so we that must give up our own bodies for a living sacrifice, must also be salted with fire, as Christ hath said. And as himself (fulfilling the figure of the syn offerings which were burnt without the camp,) that he might sanctify us with his own blood, suffered without the gate of Jerusalem, so must we likewise go out of the camp, bearing his reproach; which we never do willingly, til he draw us. For this our new birth, is not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God; who regenerateth, calleth, and sanctifieth his Israel, increasing them with men like a flock; and as the flock of holinesses, as the flock of Jerusalem in their solemn feasts, so filleth he desolate cities with flocks of men, which being by the ministry of the gospel offered up for sacrifices, are acceptable being sanctified by the holy Ghost.

13. When thus we be changed by the power of God's grace, and have got the victory of ourselves, subduing and ruling over our own spirits, which as Solomon saith is better then if we wan a city; whē we have hearkened to the cry of the Voice that all flesh is grass, & all the grace thereof as the flower of the field, and when we have found our grass to be withered and flower faded, because the spirit of the Lord hath blown upon it: when the strong hold of our imaginations is cast down, and every thought brought into captivity to the obedience of Christ; when we have discerned our sins, felt the smart of them in our consciences, pined away for our iniquities, and judged ourselves worthy to be cut off for all our evils; when we have renounced all confidence in ourselves, rejected all our righteousnesses as filthy clouts, and being humbled under the mighty hand of God, do with Job abhor ourselves & repent in dust and ashes: then will he look upon us and turn our captivity, and bring us into his promised rest, into which we entering by faith shall there keep the true Sabbath of God, cease from our own works as he did from his, & wholly give ourselves to work the works of God, which is to believe in him whom he hath sent, even Jesus Christ our wisdom, justice, sanctification, and redemption, who calleth us with a holy calling from the fellowship of Satan, Syn, this world, and our own corruptions, to the happy communion with himself and with his Father, by faith a while on earth; til we shall behold his face in justice, and when we awake, be satisfied with his image.

O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall thy wicked thoughts remain within thee?

Ier. 4. 14.

CHAPT. XI.

Of the Communion that we have with God, in general

God having graciously freed us from the captivity of Satan, and called us out of the world, & from our own corruptions▪ doth after this take us near unto him, bestoweth more graces and blessings upon us, and accepteth again the fruits of his own spirit in us. For he hath separated us from others, to receive us unto himself, and he will be a Father unto us, and we shall be the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty.

2. This grace God signified to our fathers, when he had freed them from the bondage of Egypt, saying; ye have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I carried yow upon eagles wings, and hav brought yow unto me: now therefore, if ye will hear my voice in deed, and keep my covenant; then shall ye be my chief treasure above all people's, though all the earth be mine; ye shall be unto me also a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation.

3. The manifestation and assurance of this grace, is to be seen in that eternal Covenant and Oth which he maketh with us, and whereby he stablisheth us for a people unto himself, and will be unto us a God; as he also sware unto our fathers Abraham Isaac and Jacob. Who were themselves joined in league with the Lord, that had stablished this everlasting covenant with Abraham and his posterity, to be God unto him, and to his seed after him; but hath now fully and finally ratified in Christ, and by that new Testamental bond confirmed in his blood, whereby he hath covenanted, that he will be our God, and we shall be his people: whereupon it followeth that he being ours, and we his, assured hereof by faith in his gospel, we have communion with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ, to the praise of the glory of his grace, & our eternal happiness. Whiles he being our God, applieth his wisdō, strength, grace, and all other goodness unto us for good: & causeth us again to apply our bodies & our minds, with all the faculties of them, to the honor and service of his majesty; and this with such mutual love, and near conjunction, as God is said to dwelin us and we in him; and with such peace, as passeth all understanding, that not without cause doth the Psalmist sing, Blessed is the people whese God Jehovah is.

4. The persons whom God admitteth into this gracious communion, are all sorts of people without respect of persons: Jews & Gentiles, bond men and free, male & female, kings of the earth and all people's, Princes and all judges of the world, young men & maidens, old men and children, wise men and fools; even as many as the Lord our God shall cal. The riches of which grace, Moses also manifested unto Israel, when he said; Ye stand this day everyone of yow before the Lord your God, your heads of your tribes, your elders and your officers, all the men of Israel, your children, your wives, and thy stranger that is in thy camp, from the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water; that thou shouldest pass into the covenant of the Lord thy God, & into his oth which the Lord thy God maketh with thee this day &c. This ample mercy, God shown even then, but hath much enlarged since by the sending of his Sō; that it might be seen how he is good to all, and his mercies over all his works; and that * all flesh might bless his holy name, forever and ever.

5 The original of this grace to the Saints, cometh frō the electiō of God, who having set his delight in them to love thē, choseth them & their seed, to be a precious people to himself, above all people's upon the earth, and as he saith by the Prophet, I hav loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with mercy I hav drawn thee. From which further grace proceedeth; for they being thus drawn, do run after him, and chose him again to be their God, and to serv him; they chose the way of faith, they chose his precepts. So is there a willing & joyful covenant made between God and them, by mutual agreement, upon most holy and happy conditions; which Moses briefly describeth thus: Thou hast made the Lord to say this day, (that is, thou hast taken promise of, conditioned with, and consequently hast chosen him,) to be to thee for a God, and to walk in his ways and to keep his statutes & his commandments and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice. And the Lord hath made thee to say this day (hath conditioned with & chosen thee,) to be unto him for a peculiar people, even as he spake unto thee, and to keep all his commandments; and to set thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise and in name & in glory; and that thou shouldst be an holy people to the Lord thy God, even as he hath spoken.

6. The good things communicated with us of God by that covenant of his grace, the Apostle summeth up, when he saith that this divine power hath given us all things that pertain to Life & godliness. For as he is himself the Living God, & giver of life unto all things; so is he not the God of the Dead, but of the Living. To the end therefore that we, which were dead in trespasses and sins, and strangers from the Life of God, through the ignorance that was in us, and in that estate were not his people; might be the sons of the Living God, and heirs of the grace of Life: it was needful, that we should receive from him this grace, which else we could not have from any other; because with him is the well of life, and in his light shall we see light; he is our Life and the length of our days, his precepts and his promises do quick us, and by all that proceedeth out of his mouth, doth a man live; as that good king Hezekiah confessed upon his recovery from death, O Lord by them (men) live, and by all of them (is) the life of my spirit; and thou hast caused me to sleep, and hast given life unto me.

7. And when we are made partakers of the life of God, then feel we the fellowship and communion spoken of; and as our life increaseth, so doth our joy, by the perceiving of our happiness; & we give ourselves unto God, as they that are alive from the dead, walking before him in the light of the living. God also himself walketh with us, leading us by the rivers of waters, in a straight way wherein we shall not stumble, and our soul shall be as a watered garden; we shall have no more sorrow, but shall be satisfied with the goodness of the Lord; our heart shall live forever. To the end therefore that we may in some sort discern this incomprehensible grace, let us consider some principal of the many good things, that God doth give us pertaining unto Life and godliness.

8. And first, for that Vnderstanding is a wellspring of Life unto them that have it; the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, giveth unto us the Spirit of wisdom, and revelation through the knowledge of him, whereby the eyes of our understanding are lightened, and we know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of his glorious inheritance is in the Saints: so he having opened our eyes, we see the wonders of his law, & he causeth us to understand the way of his precepts. This is a special point of the happiness of God's people, above all people's of the earth that they have both his Law for a light, and himself for their instructor, and so are all the taught of God, and have an Ointment from him that is holy, whereby they know all things, and need not that any man teach them, but as the same anointing teacheth them all things. Hereupon the Prophet said unto God, I have not declined from thy judgments, because thou didst teach me; and himself saith unto his people, I am the Lord thy God, which teach thee to profit, and lead thee by the way that thou shouldst go; & thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying; This is the way, walk ye in it, whē thou turnest to the right hand, & when thou turnest to the left. Thus the secret of the Lord is reveled to them that fear him; & his covenant, for to give them knowledge; he openeth their mind, that they may understand the scriptures, he openeth unto thē the mystery of his will, and ⁊ filleth them with knowledge of the same, in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, that so they may be partakers of his life, as David saith, Give me understanding, and I shall live. And that this grace proceedeth from his covenant, and confirmeth the same, himself showeth when he saith; I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

9. An other of the gifts per•eyning unto Life and godliness, is Faith; whereby our Fathers walked with God, pleased him, wrought many good works, obtained good report, and in the end, the salvation of their souls. This grace we have not of ourselves, it is the gift of God, who openeth the door thereof unto his chosen people, which therefore is called the faith of God's elect; and wondrous is the force thereof in our souls, for by it all things are made possible to us, it is our breastplate, & it is our shield whereby we quench all the fiery darts of the Devil; it is the victory whereby we overcome the world; by it we walk, whiles we are pilgrims here on earth, and absent from the Lord; by it we stand in the grace & favor of God; by it we Live, by it our God doth purify our harts, and through it doth keep us by his power unto salvation.

10. This Faith, doth always respect the word of God, from whence it ariseth, and by which it is wrought in us through his Spirit: which therefore is called, theword of faith, and is no vain word concerning us, but is our Life. It looketh also unto all God's oracles, teaching us to believe all things that are written in the law and prophets, and in the gospel. It causeth us to apprehend God's ancient mercies shown to our fathers, as belonging also to us; for so we learn of the Apostles, to apply the promise of God's presence and continued favor with Joshua; his imputation of justice unto Abraham; the boldness and courage of David, upon God's assistance; & generally whatsoever things are writ aforetyme, as being written for our learning, comfort, and increase of faith. So also we learn of the Prophets, which spake of things done long before, as if they had been seen and felt by themselves. Hosea's saith of Jacob, God found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us; the Psalmist singeth of God's bringing Israel through the Sea & Iarden, He turned sea into dry land, they passed through the river on foot, there did we rejoyce in him. According to whose examples, we that now live and believe, because we have received the same spirit of faith with the Patriarchs, and have obtained a like-precious faith with the Apostles; may also say with them, my well-beloved is mine & I am his; I know that my redeemer liveth; and I live by faith in him who hath loved me, and given himself for me.

11. The most excellent fruit that we reap of Faith, is our Iustificatiō in the sight of God, by his grace in Christ Jesus. For whereas two ways of Life & Justice are set before us in the scriptures, the one by keeping the Law of the Lord, even all his precepts, of which it is said, The man that doth them, shall live by them; and again, This shall be our Justice before the Lord our God, if we take heed to keep all his commandments, as he hath commanded us: the other by faith in Christ; as it is written, God so loved the world that he hath given his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life: the first of these ways is such, as no flesh can be justified by. For though the Law consisteth of Living oracles, and every commandment is holy and just and good; yet by reason of syn that dwelleth in us, the same commandment which was ordained unto life, is found to be unto us to death. For syn taketh occasion by the commādemēt, & deceiveth us, & thereby killeth us; as when the Law saith, Thow shalt not lust, syn worketh in us all manner of lust; so the Law is the life and strength of syn, in us that a carnal and sold under syn; and syn is made out of measure sinful by the commandment, & the Law entered that the offense might abound. Therefore can it not give us Life, neither was it given to that end, but was added unto the promise of grace by Christ, because of the transgressions; and by it cometh the knowledge of syn; it also condemneth and curseth all syn and sinners, and through it are we dead unto it, that we might live unto God. For the terrors thereof tormenting our sinful souls, we ar forced to seek refuge from God's wrath in some other, which we cannot find in any but in Christ, whom God hath proposed to be the reconciliation for all our sins, whom we apprehend by faith; & until faith come ar kept fast, and as it were locked up under the Law, whereof we have this excellent use and benefit, that it is a child-leader or scholmayster, to bring us unto Christ. In whom the justice of God is satisfied for all our trespasses by his death on the tree whereon he was made a curse for us, and redeemed us from the curse of the Law. And so our sins which were imputed unto him, shall no more be imputed unto us, but forgiven for his sake, and that blessedness cometh on us which is written, Blessed ar they whose iniquities ar forgiven, and whose sins ar covered, blessed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth not syn. Yea God, as he imputeth not but pardoneth syn, so doth he impute justice or righteousness to us without works of ours; because Christ fulfilled all righteousness for us that believe, and we shall be found in him not having our own justice which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, even the justice which is of God through Faith. To teach us this, the first man whom Moses mentioneth to have believed the Lord; he presently adorneth with this grace, that God imputed that to him for justice. And he being made the Father of all believers; that is written for us also, unto whom Beleef shall be imputed for Justice in like wise. Thus are we justified by Faith, without the works of the Law; yea Faith is come in place of all good works, as Christ hath said, This is the work of God, that ye believe in him whom he hath sent; this also is his commandment, that we believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ; whom he that hath, hath Life, & he that hath not the son of God hath not Life: but who so trusteth to his own righteousness, and committeth iniquity shall surely die, as saith the prophet. Thus live we by faith in Christ, and that heavenly oracle is fulfilled, The just shall live by his faith.

12. This Life and grace, is one condition of that everlasting covenant which our God hath made with us, and said I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and will remember their sins and their iniquities no more. And being thus justified by faith, we have peace towards God through our Lord Jesus Christ, whom he hath given to be our covenant and our light; he hideth his face from our sins, and wipeth away all our iniquities, and saith deliver them that they go not down into the pit, for I have found a ransom. Yea now he seeth no iniquity in Jacob, nor transgressiō in Israel; the Lord his God is with him, and the joyful showt of a king is among them; though the sins of Judah be sought for, they shall be no more found, for the Lord is merciful to them whom he reserveth, he hath washed the filthiness of the daughters of Zion, their transgressions are put away as a cloud, and like a mist, their sins are all cast into the bottom of the sea. For this, the Saints do triumph and say, who shall lay anything to the charge of God's chosen? it is God that justifieth, who shall condemn? we will go forward in the strength of the Lord God, we will make mention of thy Justice, even of thine only. And thus is fulfilled the saying of the prophet The whole seed of Israel shall be Justified, and glory, in the Lord.

13. Yet is their also further grace pertaining to life and godliness given us of God, even our Sanctification; whereunto he hath called us, and which we attain unto by faith in Christ. For the grace of God, that bringeth salvation unto all men, and hath appeared; doth teach us that we should deny ungodliness & worldly lusts, and that we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world, and not continue still in syn, that grace may abound. We are the people of God's holiness, and he will be hallowed among us, he the Lord doth sanctify us; he poureth clean water upon us that we may be clean, sprinkled in our hearts from an evil conscience, and washed in our bodies with pure water; he taketh away the stony heart out of our body, and giveth us an heart of flesh, he putteth his spirit within us, and causeth us to walk in his statutes, to keep his judgments and do them, that we be polluted no more with our abominations, nor any of our transgressions; and saith unto us ye shall be holy, for I the Lord your God am holy. And this is another condition of his gracious covenant with us, as it is written, I will put my laws in their mind and in their heart I will write them, & I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

14. Of this Sanctification there be two parts, which they that long after Life and to see good days, must seek; 1 to eschew evil, 2 & to do good. The way to attain these, is by the death & burial of the old man, the corruption of nature; and the resurrection of the new: that so being dead unto syn, we may be alive unto God in Jesus Christ our Lord. The old man or body of syn, is the whole man soul and body, as he is born by nature, even all flesh, & all the grace and glory thereof, which the Spirit of the Lord must blow upon, and cause to fade as the flower of grass, that the man may be born again, and made a new creature, even born of God. To work this wondrous change in us; the Lord giveth two special graces, the 1 Fear & 2 Love of his name; by the one to restrain us from evil, and by the other to allure us unto good.

15. The Fear of the Lord, as it is the beginning of wisdom; so <2 pages missing> did David's) for fear of the Lord, and we being afraid of his judgments. His mercies also are shown us to this end, as it is written, Mercy is with thee that thou mayst be feared. This grace God giveth to his Saints, to humble them, that they be not high-minded, but may walk in reverence before him, and their hearts be in his fear continually, that it may go well with them and with their children forever; for he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded. By this grace have his people communion with him, and feel his goodness, for the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, & trust in his mercy; he delighteth in them, he will fulfil the desire of them, and nothing shall be wanting unto them, as he hath promised by his prophet; their souls shall dwell in good, their seed shall inherit the land, and the secret of the Lord, and his covenant shall be revealed unto them. Wherefore unto man he saith, Behold the Fear of the Lord is wisdom, and to depart from evil is understanding; the reward of humility and the fear of God, is riches and glory & Life. Unto this therefore let us take heed, for in it is an assured strength; by it we shall come out of all extremities that are either too much or too little; and to fear God and keep his commandments is the whole man; this leadeth him unto Life, and being filled therewith, he shall continue and not be visited with evil: that he may know, that the fear of the Lord is his treasure, as saith the Prophet.

16. But because the end of the Commandment, is Love, out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience & of faith vnfeigned, & Love is the fulfilling of the Law: therefore hath God comprised his whole will touching our Sanctification and obedience in two precepts, 1 Thou shalt Love thy Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy sowl, and with all thy mind; & 2 Thou shalt Love thy neighbor as thyself; on these two commandments hangeth the whole Law, and the Prophets. As evil therefore is to be hated and eschewed, so that which is good ought to be loved, and cleaved unto: the head and fountain of all which good, is only God himself; who first is to be loved, and above all; but hath given us this commandment, that he which loveth God, should love his brother also.

17. And as we have of him this Law of love, so have we from him the grace to love both him & his law, and shall from him receive the fruit thereof which is Life. This Moses shown Israel of old, saying, The Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart and the heart of thy seed, that thou mayst Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy sowl, that thou mayst Live. Thus we love him, because he loved us first, and hath inclined our harts & drawn us after him. Again because as Christ saith, he that hath his commandments and keepeth them, is he that Loveth him; therefore have we this rule & direction given us by Moses further, joining these two together, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, and shalt keep that which he commandeth to be kept; that is, his ordinances and his laws and his commandments always.

18. From this ariseth much comfort to the Saints, which finding themselves affected with the Lov of God, & feeling his love shed abroad in their harts by the holy Ghost which is given unto thē, do grow in this grace, & keep themselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. They lov his commandments above the finest gold, & therefore have much peace, and shall have no hurt or scandal; their delight is in his commandments which they have loved, their hands also do they lift up unto them; and hereupon do expect to be quickened and conserved in life according to the loving kindness of the Lord, who preserveth all them that love him, keepeth covenant and mercy towards them, and causeth all things to work together for the best unto them. For Godis Love (as saith the disciple whom Jesus loved,) and he that dwelleth in lovedwelleth in God, and God in him; and grace shall be unto all them that love him, unto immortality. Moses in spirit foreseeing this, said unto Israel; I cal heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you Life & death, the blessing & the curse: therefore choose Life that thou and thy seed may live; by loving the Lord thy God, by obeying his voice, and by cleaving unto him; for he is thy Life, and the length of thy days.

19. But because our Life is hid with Christ in God, & though now we be the sons of God, yet it doth not appear what we shall be, but when Christ which is our Life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory, be like unto him, and see him as he is: therefore hath he given us another grace pertaining to Life and godliness, called a living Hope, unto which God of his aboundant mercy hath begotten us by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. This virtue respecteth our good that is to come, our inheritance reserved for us in heaven, yea thither hath it power to come, entering (as the Apostle saith) into that which is within the veil, whither the forerunner Jesus is for us entered in, & this Hope we have as an anker of the soul both sure & steadfast, holding it fast in all tempests of tribulations or temptations, knowing (as Solomon saith) that there is an end, and our hope shall not be cut-off.

20. Ther be two companions and as it were sisters of this grace; 1 Faith & 2 patience; Faith goeth before as the guide and susteyner, being the subsistence or ground of things hoped for; as Abraham by faith, even above hope, believed under hope; Patience accompanieth it, and teacheth to wait, as it is written, if we hope for that we see not, we do with patience abide for it. And thus is fulfilled that which Isaiah saith, he that believeth shall not make hast, and consequently, shall not be ashamed; but being assured that he which shall come will come, and will not delay, though he tarry yet we wait, as the prophet biddeth us, because the Father which hath loved us, hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace; and hope maketh not ashamed; yea we rejoyce in hope, as being the thing whereby we are saved, & he which is the God of hope filleth us with all joy and peace in believing, and causeth us to abound in hope, through the power of the holy Ghost.

21. One of the special promises which the anker of Hope layeth hold upon, and that by reason of the Covenant of God with us, is the Resurrection of the Dead. For as God calling himself the God of Abraham Isaac & Jacob, when they were dead unto the world, but Living unto him, did teach his people thereby, that he would raise them up again from death, as our Savior expoundeth his Fathers oracle: even so we all that are in the same covenant of grace, and have him for our God, do believe that after our flesh hath been sown in dishonor, and seen corruption, it shall be raised in glory by the power of God; for in our graves, we shall hear the voice of Christ at his appearing, & shall come forth unto the resurrection of Life. And then shall we enjoy all the good promises in that City which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, who is not ashamed of us to be called our God, because he hath prepared for us a city.

22. Thus have we through the grace of our God, those three heavenly virtues mentioned by the Apostle; 1 an effectual Faith, 2 adiligent Love, 3 and the patience of Hope in our Lord Jesus Christ; by Faith to believe the mysteries of life and all his word; by Love to cleave unto him and keep his commandments; by hope to expect the fulfilling of all good promises which God that cannot lie hath made unto us; and these three things do abide with us during this present life, that walking in them, we may have fellowship with the Lord in spirit, who having thus decked us with the garments of bewtie and glory, with mercy and salvation through faith in his name, doth then seal us with that holy spirit of Promise which is the earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the possession purchased, (the full redemption of all Saints,) unto the praise of his glory. For as he hath chosen us in Christ before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love: so having effectually called justified and sanctified us of his unspeakable grace, he giveth us also certainty and assurance of our election, that we shall never fall from, nor be forsaken of him. For the seed wherewith we are born anew, is an immortal seed, which can never die, & this seed remaineth in us, to keep us from syn: and if we syn, we have an advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the just, who maketh intercession, and prayeth for us that our faith fail not; he also giveth us repentance unto Life, and worketh in us godly sorrow for our misdeeds; so we ar renewed by repentance daily, and revived by faith, knowing that God hath stablished to himself his people Israel, to be his people forever, & he is their God, his gifts and calling are without repentance; he that hath begun his good work in us, will perform it unto the day of Jesus Christ; for he hath made an everlasting covenant with us, that he will never turn away from us to do us good, and hath put his fear in our harts, that we shall never depart from him; and hath said concerning us by his prophet, My people shall never be ashamed. Thus the hope of salvation, is for an helmet upon our heads; for that God hath not appointed us unto wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ; and we rejoyce with joy unspeakable & glorious, being persuaded that neither death nor life nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us fiō the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

23. Our God it is w^c thus stablisheth us in Christ, & hath anointed us, and also sealed us, and given us the earnest of his spirit in our hearts, even the spirit of adoption whereby we cry unto him Abba Father; and of us he saith, This people have I formed for myself, they shall show forth my praise. And being thus furnished with his graces, we find & feel the sweetness of that fellowship and communion, that we hav with him in Christ Jesus and by his Spirit.

24. This communion the scripture setteth down by similitude of walking and dwelling together. For God hath promised I will walk among you, and I will be your God & ye shall be my people; and for his habitation, although he filleth heavens and earth, & the heavens of heavens ar not able to cōteyn him, being considered in his infinite majesty: yet abaseth he himself to converse with us that dwell in houses of clay, as he saith by the Prophet, I dwell in the high & holy place; with him also that is of a contrite & humble spirit to revive the spirit of the humble, and to give life to them that are of a contrite heart. Which grace that all the Saints might take knowledge of, the voice is written which was heard out of heaven to say, Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself will be their God with them. This Tabernacle is the bodies and souls of the Saints, as the Apostle saith, Ye are the Temple of the Living God, even as God hath said, I will dwell in thē, & walk (with them:) your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost. On the other side, we are said to walk with God, as did Enoch, & Noah, and as the Lord requireth of every man that he humble himself to walk with his God; we dwell in his tabernacle forever, our trust is under the covering of his wings, & as the Apostle John saith, He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him.

25. This grace is so heavenly and supernatural, as it cannot be comprehended by the carnal man; nor embraced & walked in with comfort by sinners & hypocrites. The natural man thinketh the dwelling of God is not with flesh; the unbelieving among the Saints, in day of their distress do say, Is the Lord among us or no? The sinners and hypocrites 〈...〉 Zion, are afraid saying, who among us shall dwell with the devouring syre? who among us shall dwell with the everlasting burnings? And indeed y^e throne of iniquity hath no fellowship with him; but y^e pure of heart edure as seeing him who is invisible; they sing, The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge; they serve him and see his face, his name is on their foreheads, & they say, It is good for us to draw near unto God; Lord lift up the light of thy countenance upon us.

26 This conversing of the Saints with God is spiritual and mystical; we walk by faith and not by sight; faith which is the evidence of things not seen. He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit saith the Apostle. Again God's walking with us is strange and uncouth to the world; for he bringeth us into many tribulations; his way is in the sea, his paths in the great waters, and his footsteps ar not known; he leadeth us through the wilderness, through a desert and wast land, and by the shadow of death; where fyry serpents are, and scorpions, and drought, without water; to humble us and to prove us, to know what is in our heart, that he may do us good in the latter end; he bringeth us through the fire, and fineth us as the silver is fined, and trieth us as gold is tried; & yet he saith It is my people, & we do say, The Lord is our God.

27. And hence ariseth, the comfort of our harts, that always we behold God with us, yea feel him within us; and answer Amen by faith to all his promises. He saith Fear not for I am with thee, be not afraid for I am thy God; we say again, Though I should walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, because thou art with me. He saith of every of his Saints, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him and glorify him; they testify & say; I beheld the Lord always before me, for he is at my right hand that I should not be shaken; gather together on heaps ô ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces, take counsel together, yet shall it be brought to naught, pronounce a decree, yet shall it not stand, for God is with us. The Patriarchs moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt, but God was with him (saith the scripture,) and delivered him out of all his afflictions. To Jacob God said, turn again to the land of thy fathers & to thy kindred, & I •ilbe with thee; in his return, he was in danger & prayed, ô God of my father Abrahā &c, Lord which said est unto me return to thy country and kindred, and I will do thee good. Thus always y^e Saints assure themselves of good by God's presence with thē, and of shelter frō evil; & count them selves naked and helpless when he withdraws his face; as when in displeasure he had moved his Tabernacle far off from the host of Israel, and seemed as if he would have walked no further with them; then Moses said, If thy presence go not with us carry us not hence; & wherein now shall it be known that I and thy people have found favor in thy sight? shall it not be when thou goest with us? so I and thy people shall have preeminence before all people that are on the earth. Finally, as the Saints encourage themselves against their foe• with this, their shadow is departed from them, & the Lord is with us, fear them not: so God foretold that when many tribulations should come upon his people, they then would say, Are not these troubles come upon me, because my God is not with me?

28 For the presence of God, & communion of his graces, so saveth his Saints out of all adversities; that no wisdom counsel or strength of any enemy can hurt, no creature can hinder them frō their happiness; the Lord their God who goeth before them, he fighteth for them, and rideth upon the heavens for their help▪ the eternal God is their refuge, & under his arms they are forever, he casteth out the enemy before them and saith, Destroy; so as wax melteth frō the presence of the fire, the wicked perish from the presence of God; But his people he upholdeth in their integrity, and doth set them before his face forever, both they and their seed shall stand fast in his sight; for they ar his portion or inheritance, and they shall walk in the light of his countenance, he leadeth them with his own glorious arm, dividing the waters before them, to make himself an everlasting name; he saith, prepare the way, take up the stumbling blocks out of the way of my people, so causeth he them to go upright, giving strength unto him that fainteth, & multiplying might to him that hath no power, and they renew strength, they lift up the wings as the eagles, they run & are not weary, they walk & faint not. He supply 〈...〉 their wāts, filling the hungry sowl with good, & satisfying the soul that thirsteth after righteousness; for righteousness goeth before him, & setteth her steps in the way; he bringeth near his justice, it is not far off, and his salvation shall not tarie, for he giveth it in Zion, and his glory unto Israel.

29. And they again, being a people in whose heart is his law, & knowing that two cannot walk together (as saith the prophet,) except they be agreed; labor by faith to hav peace with him, and to walk before him in uprightness, to walk worthy of him, and please him in all things, being fruitful in all good works, and increasing in the knowledge of God. For this they hav promised unto him when they entered into his covenant; & therefore are their souls delivered from death, that they may walk before the Lord in the land of the living. And because to walk before God, is to walk in his Law, (as the scripture teacheth;) therefore love they the law of the Lord, it is their meditation continually, and it is written upon the table of their heart; their delight is in his commandments which they have loved, their hands also do they lift up unto them, their mouth talketh of them, their feet run in them, their soul keepeth them, and they will never forget them; all their members are given up as instruments of righteousness to serve and please the Lord, & they apply their heart to fulfil his statutes always even unto the end. Thus their righteousness goeth before them, and the glory of the Lord embraceth thē, he strengtheneth thē in the Lord, & they walk in his name, their harts being stable and unblameable in holiness before him, and there is no condemnation unto them, for that they are in Christ Jesus, and walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.

30. And now they eat their bread with joy, and drink their wine with a cheerful heart, because God accepteth their works, the words of their mouths, & the meditation of their harts. They please him and have his blessing even in their civil affairs and handy labors: the world and all earthly creatures are subdued unto them, and they use them for their service and comfort in the Lord; if they eat, it is to the Lord, if they eat not it is to him also, giving God thanks, and doing all things that they do, unto his glory. So though they be in the world, yet are they not of the world, and though they walk in the flesh yet war they not, neither walk they after the flesh; but being on earth, their conversation is in heaven, and the way of Life is on high unto them, to avoid from hell beneath. They seek the Lord and his strength, they seek his face continually, and with the joy of his face he maketh them glad, and in the secret thereof, he hideth them from the pride of men, he keepeth them as the apple of his eye. He saith unto them, Hear my law o my people, incline your ears to the words of my mouth, obey my voice and do all things which I command yow, so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God: they answer, all people's will walk everyone in the name of his God, and we will walk in the name of our God forever and ever; teach us thy way o Lord, and we will walk in thy truth, knit our harts to thee, that we may fear thy name, Thus hoping for his glory which is to be reveled, they purge themselves as he is pure, and walk in the light, as he is in the light, having fellowship one with another, & the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleansing them from all syn. And the Lord giveth strength unto his people, the Lord blesseth his people with peace; he is as the dew unto thē, they grow as lilies and fasten their roots as the trees of Lebanon, dwelling under his shadow they revive as the corn and flourish as the vine, and still bring forth fruit even in their hoary age, and God is their guid even unto the death. Yet then forsaketh he thē not; but as when they lived, they lived unto him, so now when they die, they die unto him & are his; peace cometh, and they rest in their beds, everyone that walketh before him, til their changing shall come, and they be translated from death to life, to see the king in his glory, even God as he is, & to be satisfied with his image.

31. For notwithstanding all this grace, and communion that we have with God by faith; we ar not perfect, neither shall be, til we have attained the resurrectiō of the dead: here we see through a glass darkly, & not face to face, we know in part only, and do grow in grace and knowledge daily; we behold the, glory of the Lord with open face, but as in a mirror, and ar changed into the same image from glory to glory as by the Spirit of the Lord. We have first our infancy, and are as babes in Christ; after we are as young men strong in faith, and do overcome the wicked one; and proceed in riper years, waxing old in faith, and knowledge of him which is from the beginning: thus our way shineth as the morning light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day; and we walk on earth, as did Abram in Canaan, going and journeying towards the South.

32. But of all the ways & means, whereby we hav communion with God, there is none more lively, powrful & comfortable then Prayer; whereby we converse with the Lord most nearly, pour out our complaints as children into the bosom of their father, & praise his name; ar heard & answered of him to y^e glory of his grace, y^e joy of our harts, & the increase of our faith, with all virtues and fruits of the Spirit.

33. The ground of this heavenly exercise, whereby man is so bold as to come unto the throne of grace, and talk with God, is his commaundment which saith, * Cal uponme in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me; Cal unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee groat & mighty things which thou knowest not. Moreover he willeth us to be nothing careful, but in all things to let our requests be shown unto him, in prayer and supplicatiō; with giving of thanks; yea to pray continually, and in all things to give thanks, because this is the will of God in Christ Jesus towards us.

34. To guide us in this action, he hath given us outward instruction in his word, that we may ask according to his will; with assurance, that whatsoever we so ask, he heareth us, and we have the petitions that we desire of him. He giveth us also inward assistance by his Spirit which dwelleth in us, and is the Spirit of the adoption-of-sons whereby we cry Abba Father; which spirit also helpeth our infirmities, (who know not what to pray as we ought,) and itself maketh requests for us with sighs & groans unutterable. Thus pouring out upon his people (as he did promise,) the spirit of grace & of supplications, and furnishing them with gifts for this heavenly work, he heareth & granteth their requests, as David saith Lord thow hearest the desire of the poor, thow preparest their heart, thow bendest thine ear.

35. So when we cal upon the Lord in our trouble and cry unto our God, he heareth our voice out of his temple, & our cry comes before him into his ears; yea before we cal, he answereth, & whiles we speak he heareth; for by the blood of Jesus we may be bold to enter into the holy place, & ask the Father in his name, & we shall receive that our joy may be full; the spirit also maketh request for us, according to the will of God; & he that searcheth the harts, knoweth what is the meaning of the Spirit; and the odour of our prayers, cometh up as the sweet incense before him, being perfumed with those odors that are offered with the prayers of all Saints, out of the Angels hand, that Angel of the Covenant, who is now at the right hand of God, and maketh request also for us.

36. Thus the Saints have access unto God, and near communion with him in prayer; (though the wicked cal not upon him, or if they call, he heareth them not.) Their golden vials are full of odors, they delight in the Almighty, and lift up their faces unto God, they make their prayer unto him, and he heareth them, & they pay their vows, saying, I will thank thee for thou hast heard me, and hast been my salvation, Blessed be God which hath not put back my prayer, nor his mercy frō me.

37. The fruits that come vntovs by this holy exercise are moe then can be told; there being infinite occasions from day today, of making request to the Lord, and filling our mouths with new sōgs of praise for our salvations. Admirable is the force and valor of this actiō, which peirceth the heavens and cometh unto God, and prevaileth with him, in whatsoever we ask according to his will, if we ask in faith, & waver not: for he is near to all that cal upon him, to all that cal upon him in truth; & fulfilleth the desire of them that fear him, unto whō he hath promised, Open thy mouth wide and I will fil it. Herevpon Moses said, What nation is so great, unto whom the God's come so near unto them, as the Lord our God is near unto us, in all that we cal unto him for? And if he be so near unto everyone of us; let us know also, that it will be our good to draw near unto him, & to say revive thou us, and we will cal upon thy name, because thou hearest the prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come; trust in him always ye people, pour out your harts before him, for God is our hope; our God will hear us.

38. By all these things (& many other the like,) we may see how God hath exalted the horn of his people, which is a praise for all his Saints the sons of Israel, a people near unto him; unto whom he hath given most great & precious promises, that by thē they should be partakers of the godly nature, in that they flee the corruptiō which is in the world through lust; with whom he so graciously communicateth his goodness, y^t they taste in this world, of the powers of the world to come, and o•e walk in the light of his face, & feel his holy presence with them. Which presence, although it be with every of his Saints, in all places where they become; yet is it most lively seen in their Assemblie, and there he is very terrible. For this cause did his people love the habitation of his house, & desired to dwell there all their days, that they might be hold his bewtie; and being absent from it, their souls thirsted for God, saving, when shall we come and appear before the presence of God? for they knew his promise which had said, In every place where I shall put the remembrance of my name, I will come unto thee & bless thee; they knew God was in the mids of his sanctuary, it should not be moved, he would help it very early. But of this holy society, more is to be spoken particularly in another place.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Communion that we have with Jesus Christ our Mediator.

IEsus Christ being God manifested in the flesh, is given of the Father to be the only mediator between him and us; and he hath given him power to execute judgment, in that he is the son of Man. He is the head of the body of the Church; in him all the buylding coupled together groweth unto an holy Temple in the Lord, and we all are built together in him, to be the habitation of God by the Spirit; he is the way, the truth, & the life, no man cometh to the Father but by him. And of him and his mediation, this Oracle was spoken of old to the Saints; that their Noble-ruler should be of themselves, & their Governor (Christ) should proceed from the mids of them; & God would cause him to draw near and approach unto himself, (when he should ascend and sit at his right hand to make intercession for us;) for who is he (else) that warranteth his heart to come unto me saith the Lord: And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.

2. As we are made the people and portion of God by Christ, & brought by him unto the fellowship and glory of his Father; so is there a special fellowship and communion that we have with Christ, being called thereunto of the Father, as it is written, God is faithful, by whom ye are called unto the communion of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord. And that this hath always been the chief end and scope of God in all his Oracles, since the world began, to draw men unto Christ, & so unto himself, is before shown.

3. The sum of the grace given us through communion with our Lord Jesus, is cōprised in those words of the Apostle saying, that Christ is of God made unto us Wisdom, and Justice, and Sanctification, and Redemption. These things he is unto us by virtue of his Mediatorship, which consisteth in the three functions or offices of Prophecy, Priesthood, & Kingdom, committed unto him by the Father. For frō the in most holy place, and from the bosom of the Father, is he come to declare God unto us; he is a Prophet raised up of the Lord, to speak unto us all that he commanded him, and him are we willed for to hear; the yles are to wait for his Law. And as he being worthy obtained to open the book that is in the right hand of him that sitteth on the throne, & to loose the seven seals thereof; because all the treasures of wisdom, and knowledge ar hid in him: so having made known to us all things that he heard of his Father, having declared and still declaring his Name by his word and spirit, he is the Power of God and the wisdom of God unto us. And the things which he hath declared are two; 1 the Law to show us our syn, and the evils due for the same: 2 the Gospel to show us our righteousness by grace from God, with the blessings that flow therfrō. He also being our great high priest or sacrificer hath taken away our sins and all the evils accompanying them, hath redeemed us from the Curse of the Law, finished wickedness, & sealed up sins, made reconciliatiō for iniquity, & brought the gift of righteousness or Justice: so by his obedience we ar made just, & grace shall reign by justice, unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, whose blood doth also purge our consciences from dead works to serv the Living God, and by the same hath he sanctified his people, and contineweth a Priest forever, and is both our Justice & Sanctification. Finally this our redemption from evil, and restauration unto happiness, he conserveth & maynteyneth by his mighty power, frō all enemies whō he hath subdued under his own feet, & will also subdue under ours: and is therefore named our King, whom all kings shall worship, all nations shall serv, who will redeem our souls from deceit & violence, will give us also the redemption of our body, and cause our last enemy Death to be swallowed up in victory, & so will be our full Redemptiō forever & ever, at his appearing with glory, in the day of Redemptiō.

4. More particularly, touching his Prophecy and our communion with him therein; as God gave him for a witness to the people, for a Prince and a Commander unto them; so shown he himself to be a faithful and true witness, in that he spake to the world, the things which he had heard of the Father. This he did in his own person whiles he walked with mē; teaching the true meaning and end of all his Fathers Law, and urging the sincere keeping of it in Love; freeing it also from the false glosses and leaven of the Pharisees, and cutting down their traditions; for the Lord to this end, had made his mouth like a sharp sword; that by the breath of his lips he might slay the wicked. He also taught the glad tidings of the Gospel unto the poor; thereby healing the broken hearted, preaching deliverance to the captives, recovering of sight to the blind, and the acceptable yere of the Lord: that whosoever should hear his word and believe in him that sent him; should hav everlasting life and not come into condemnation, but was passed from death unto life. So he hid not his Fathers righteousness within his heart, but declared his truth and his salvation; he concealed not his mercy and his truth from the great congregation, but preached peace and comfort to his people. For God had given him a tongue of the Learned, that he might know to minister a word in time to him that is weary: grace was poured in his lips, and they they were like lilies dropping down pure myrrh, and his mouth was sweet things.

5. As in his own person, so did he by others publish the will of his Father, using hereto the ministry both of men and Angels. He gave and still giveth the gifts of ministry unto many men; above all other he furnished his Apostles with power from on high, & sent them to teach all nations to observe all things whatsoever he had commauned them, (and he had made known to them all things that he had heard of his Father:) and they faithfully performed their charge keeping nothing back, but showing mē all the counsel of God, for Christ spake in them: so that now we have the mind of Christ, and the word is near us, even in our mouth and in our heart, neither may we admit of any other doctrie though it should be taught by Angels from heaven, but that w^{ch} we have, we must hold fast til he come. And Christ it is, that hath always reveled God's will unto the world since the begīning. He it was that preached in Spirit, to those that were disobedient in the days of Noah; he sent Esaia• to preach unto Israel, and furnished him with gifts & graces for that work; and still he sendeth his messengers daily for the gathering together of the Saints, the work of the ministry, and edification of his body, til the worlds end; & they are his glory. Finally the heavenly Spirits ar also his messengers for this end and purpose, when he seeth meet so to employ them, as it is written, I Jesus have sent my Angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. Thus opening unto us by all means, the secrets of his Gospel, our souls ar comforted, for he bringeth us into his wine cellar, and Love is his •anner over us.

6 To assure the world that he was both the wisdom and power of God, he confirmed his doctrine •y signs and wonders, doing such works as no other man did; even as his words were such as never man spake, his enemies being judges. He gave also of this power, to such as believed in his name and wer his witnesses; himself working with them, & confirming the word with signs that followed.

7. Unto this outward administration, Christ annexeth his inward grace by divine power; making even the Dead to hear his voice and live, for he hath the words of eternal life, he openeth the harts and causeth attention, he openeth the minds and causeth men to understand the scriptures; he giveth them also a mouth and wisdom, which all their adversaries are not able to speak against, nor resist.

8. Now all this life and grace doth Christ communicate with the Saints, being their Head, & they his members. For first the Ministers of the word, how great gifts or authority soever they have, they all are ours, and we Christ's, and Christ God's; we are to try their doctrine by the scriptures, for they have not dominion over our faith, but are helpers of our joy; and in declaration of the truth are to approve themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God. Secondly the Word itself, even all the scriptures, are given unto us, and written for our learning and comfort; & this not only to know for ourselves, but to teach exhort and edify one another. Therefore is the word said to be graffed in us, and what by it we do believe, we also may boldly speak, and freely practice, even all that Christ hath commanded; that as he is a faithful and true witness, so we also that are the Lord's witnesses with him his chosen servant, (as saith the Prophet,) may bear a good testimony unto the truth; & having his word dwelling in us plenteously in all wisdom, may thereby ourselves understand righteousness & judgment, and equity, and every good path, and be preserved from the evil way; and unto others may impart the honey and milk of God's graces that are under our tongue: and having the high-acts of God in our mouth, and the two-edged sword (of his word) in our hands, may execute vengeance on the hethen, corrections among the people; binding their kings in chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; this honor is to all his Saints: who holding forth the word of life, do shine as lights in the world; Christ illuminating them with his glory continually, and making his Church by his Prophecy, the valley of Vision, as of old it was named.

9. Touching his Priesthood, and our communion therewith, two things ar to be considered; First What of his grace in his own person he hath wrought and worketh for us; to weet, the things pertaining to God, (as the Apostle speaketh:) which are, the Offring of a sacrifice, to make reconciliation for our sins; and Intercession, which as our Advocate he maketh with the Father for us. Secondly, what by his mighty power he graciously worketh in us, and applieth unto us; whiles he maketh us also Priests unto God his Father, and communicateth with us his obedience, death, burial, resurrection, & ascension; so causing the Blessing of God to come upon us, (as he is that seed in whom all families of the earth shall be blessed.) and giving us comfort and peace. Under these two heads, are all things comprehended, that pertain to our Justification, & Sanctification, in the sight of God.

10. These three things of Reconciliation, Intercession and Blessing; the Priests of Moses law, in shadow & figure of him performed of old for Israel. The first, whiles at the brazen altar, they offered Burnt- offerings, and For-syn; made atonement, & obtained forgiveness at the hands of God, for the sinners: but chiefly when the high-priest sanctified the Most holy place, with blood of the Sacrifice, & made an atonement for the children of Israel, for all their sins once a yere. The second; whiles at the golden altar, he burned sweet incense every morning and evening; and once a yere also, made recōciliatiō upon the horns thereof, with the blood of y' Syn-offering; & entered with in the veil; putting incense on the fire in the cēser before the Lord, that the cloud of the incense covered the Mercyseat. The third, when having finished his ministry, the Sacrificer lifted up his hand towards the people, and Blessed them; as he was separated of God to bless in his name forever, and to put his name upon the childrē of Israel, that he might bless them, as he had promised.

11. The truth of these three, are fully performed by the Apostle and High priest of our profession Christ Jesus. For, that he might reconcile us unto God, because it was impossible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sins, neither would his Father accept other sacrifice or offering, then the body which he had ordained his Son: therefore through the eternal Spirit he offered himself without spot unto God, and gave his sowe for the ransom of many, bare our sins in his body on the tree, and by his own blood entered in once unto the holy place, (not the holy places made with hands, but into very heaven,) and obtained eternal redemption. So the Lord took away the iniquity of his land in one day, (as he had promised;) for the ransom was most precious, even of infinite value & effect, seeing by the union of the God head with the manhood in this our High-priests person, it was the blood of God himself, (as the scripture speaketh,) wherewith we are purchased. Thus Christ hath reconciled us that were enemies, unto God by his death; and hath put away syn, by the sacrifice of himself: for he was the † Lamb of God, that taketh away the syn of the world; and the prophesy of Abraham was fulfilled, God will provide him a Lamb for a burnt offering, my son.

12. Touching Christ's Intercession, as he prayed for his church when he was on earth, and his Father heard him always; so now being ascended and set at the right hand of God, he still maketh request for us, being therefore entered into very heaven, to appear now in the sight of God for us. Whose prayer as it is pure and perfect, so prevaieth it with God, and is of unspeakable efficacy, to make us to be accepted. For the Father loveth the Son, and accepteth him better then he did his servant Job, when he prayed for the trespassers. This is that Angel, (the Angel or messenger of the covenant,) that hath a golden censer, & much odors, which he offereth with the prayers of all Saints, upon the golden altar that is before the throne; the smoke of which odors, with the prayers of the Saints, goeth up before God out of the Angels hand: and unto his requests, which he maketh for his afflicted people, the Lord answereth good and comfortable words. Thus our high sacrificer, having the names of the whole Israel of God, as it were graven upon two precious stones, and embossed in gold; beareth us upon his two shoulders, for a remembrance; and presenteth us pure & holy & just, before the Lord.

13. The things towards us, which ar his Blessing and the fruits that follow, he graciously communicateth as a merciful & faithful high priest, touched with the feeling of our infirmities; being raised up unto us of God, and sent to Bless us, in turning everyone of us from our iniquities. And as at the end of his ministry upon earth, he lifted up his hands and blessed his disciples, and then was taken from them into heaven: so, continewing still a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek, (who met Abrahā & blessed him,) he still blesseth the children of Abraham; giving and applying the promises of the Gospel, unto the harts and consciences of his people; even the favor & protection of God, the light of his countenance, and his peace. So the blessing of Abraham cometh on us through Christ Jesus, who is that promised seed, in whom all nations ar blessed; and whom God hath set to be Blessings forever. Thus Christ, by Sacrifice hath merited, by Intercession obteyneth, and by Blessing bestoweth and distributeth unto us, the love & graces of God his Father, even all things pertaining to life and godliness: that we being partakers of his peace, may again bless God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly things in Christ, as the Apostle saith.

14. The communion of this Blessing, is more particularly to be discerned in that honor of Priesthood, which is given to all Christians; & the seals of God's grace, and love towards us in Christ. For he hath made us Priests unto God even his Father, and we as lively stones are made a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. For first, applying him unto ourselves by Faith, his sufferings death & burial are ours; his righteousness, resurrection, and glorious victory over syn, Satan, Death and Hel, ours; so that we by the blood of Jesus, may be bold to enter into the holy place, (though the Levitical Priests might not enter into the shadow thereof at all times;) by the new & living way which he hath prepared for us, through the veyl that is his flesh: even boldly may we go unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Presenting unto God his Father and ours, this Lamb that was slain for our sins, who is our surety and our sacrifice, by whose stripes we are healed, by whose death we are restored to life, by whose body once offered we are sanctified; upon whose head we have laid the burden of our sins, and by whose curse, we are made the heirs of blessing, and of all the riches of God's grace.

15. We also give up our own bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable serving of God; so the heavenly Jerusalem is filled with the Flocks of men, as the earthly once was with Flocks of holinesses or sacrifices external. Our spirits being contrite, our harts humbled and broken for our sins; ar the sacrifices of God also, which he will not despise. By Christ, we offer the sacrifice of Praise always to God that is the fruit (or calves) of our lips, which confess his name, and magnify him with thanksgiving: this also pleaseth the Lord, better then ox or heifer, that beareth horns, that parteth the hoof. Our alms and offerings for relief of the poor, especially the ministers of the Gospel of Christ: are an odour that smelleth sweet, a sacrifice acceptable & pleasant to God. Finally if we be poured out as a drink offering, upon the sacrifice & service of the faith of Christ's church, & do resist unto blood striving against syn: we have cause to rejoice; for precious in y^e sight of the Lord, is the death of his Saints; & the † souls of such, rest under the altar, til the Lord holy and true, do avenge their blood on thē that dwell on the earth.

16. This honor of Priesthood, (which no man can take to himself, nor any other thing except it be given him frō heavē,) Christ giveth unto us, of his rich grace by his word & spirit. For as by the preaching of y^e Gospel, he is daily described in our sight, and among us crucified: so we by the ministry of the Gospel, are made an acceptable offering unto the Lord, being sāctified by the Holy Ghost. His word is a sharp two edged sword, and divideth a sunder the sowl and the spirit, the joints and the marrow; by it we are taught to mortify our members which are on earth; his spirit is as fire, where with we being baptized, do also mortify the deeds of the body, that we may live, & give ourselves up unto God for a living sacrifice. The afflictions that we feel in this world, when for his sake we are killed all the day long, & are counted as sheep for the slaughter, do bear about in our body the dying of the Lord Jesus, and are always delivered unto death for Jesus sake, that the life also of our Lord Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh: these serve for furtherances of our sanctification, by being partakers of his holiness; and make us as sacrifices, and a prey for the ravenous fowls, whiles we liv strangers here on earth, the land that is not ours, as did Ahrahams seed. Thus ar we named the Priests of the Lord, and hav authority in every place to offer incense unto his name, and a pure offering, both we and our works, (our spiritual sacrifices,) being acceptable unto God in Christ Jesus.

17. To illustrate and seal up more assuredly our communion with Christ's Priesthood, We ar washed with water, for a sign & assurance, of the forgiveness & washing away of our sins, and to be as the laver of our regeneration & new birth; whereby we ar also baptized into his death, and buried with him by baptism; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also should walk in newness of life, our old man being crucified with him, that the body of syn might be destroyed, and ourselves be dead to syn, but alive to God in Jesus Christ our Lord; whom by this symbol we have put on, and do bear his name upon us, with the name of the Father and of the holy Spirit. And after this, Christ often feedeth our souls, with his own body & blood, which was broken & poured out for our sakes, figured out unto us by bread & wine: hereby cōfirming the former grace of remission of sins, and a further growth in Christ continually, into whom we ar incorporate, & have so near a communion with him, under these visible earthly elements; which we looking past by the eye of faith, seeing and feeding upon Christ, have our life by him, do dwell in him & he in us, and shall by him be raised up at the last day, unto life eternal.

18. Having seen how Christ being our Prophet informeth us in all the wisdom of God, and by the Law showeth us our syn & wretchedness; by the Gospel, our justice & happiness; and being our Priest & Sacrifice, hath by himself purged us frō all syn, & given us the gift of justice and sanctity to present us pure & blameless before God his Father: it remaineth, that we also consider, how he conserveth and mainteyneth this our blessed state; against all enemies, by his mighty power and sovereignty, which as Lord and King he hath over all.

19. This sovereignty, is set forth by divers titles of honor and dignity given him in the scriptures; as when he is named Messiah the Governor, Captain or Fore-leader; the Ruler, that is, having dominion right and authority, to govern and guide his people; Michael the great Prince; the Captain of the Lord's host; a master or Commander to the people's; a Potentate or Mighty one; the king of kings & Lord of Lord's, and Prince of the kings of the earth, the Lord of all, unto whom is given all power in heaven & in earth, an everlasting dominion, & honor and kingdom, that all people's nations and languages shall serv him. And he the true Melchizedek king of Salem, shall reign as king in justice, and sit as Prince of Peace, upon the throne of David, & upon his kingdom; to order it & to stablish it, with judgment & with justice, frō henceforth even forever.

20. This kingdom of Christ, is no earthly Monarchy, nor of this world; but spiritual and heavenly: and therefore is more mighty then the kingdoms of the earth, able to beat down, break in pieces, & grind to powder all adverse power and domination; whither of this world, or the spiritual wickednesses which are in the high places.

21. Therefore also is the manner of administering this kingdom, no worldly nor pompous; but a Christ the king himself, came unto us poor, and riding upon an asse and he the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David, was fo to see to, like a killed Lamb: s menageth he his kingdom still neither by an army, nor a Power but by his Spirit; that it cometh not with observation, for men to say, Loe here or loe there, but is with in us; wielded by the spiritual scepter of his word (the Gospel of the kingdom,) and by the almighty working of the Spirit, and therefore containeth in it mysteris or secrets, that cannot be understood but by the gift of God.

22. Our Lord himself, hath subdued, and daily subdueth all his foes; the world he hath overcome; syn he hath condemned and putaway, Death he hath abolished; & the Devil that had the power there of, he hath destroyed: neither shall these, or any of these, ever have dominion over him; but he shall reign, til he hath put all his enemies under his feet, and death and hell be cast into the lake of fire.

23. This his power & regiment, he communicateth with his Saints, two manner of ways; First by applying unto them for their benefit and salvation, all that himself hath done and doeth; as the Lord saith by his prophet I will camp about mine house, against the army, against him that passeth by, and against him that returneth, & no oppressor shall come upon them anymore. And as for their sakes, Christ sanctified himself, so for their comfort he overcame the world; to take away their sins, did he appear, when in himself there was no syn; for the children of the people Israel standeth this Michael the great prince, & fighteth against the Dragon and casteth him out of heaven; where now is salvatin, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ; the accuser of the Saints being cast down. Wherefore the Lord being king, the earth may rejoice, and the multitude of the yles be glad; because he preserveth the souls of his Saints, he will deliver them from the hand of the wicked; he will judge the people of God in justice, and his poor with equity, that the mountaynes & the hills shall bring peace to the people by justice, and in his days the righteous shall flourish, and abundance of peace shall be so long as the moon endureth. For the chariots being cut off from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem, the bow of the battle shall be broken, and he shall speak peace unto the natiōs; but in y' mornings he will destroy all the wicked of the land, smiting the earth with the rod of his mouth, and slaying the wicked with the breath of his lips; woūding kings & treading down people's in the day of his wrath. Therefore the poor shall commit themselves unto him, and triumph in his salvation saying; The Lord is king forever and ever, the hethen are destroyed forth of his land; the kingdoms of this world are our Lord's, and his Christ's, and he shall reign for evermore.

24. Secondly he communicateth with his Saints this grace, to be Kings also with him, and to reign on earth: that as himself sitteth & ruleth upon his throne, & is a Priest upon his throne, and the counsel of peace is between them both: so they whom he hath made kings & Priests unto God his Father, being a kingly priesthood, even a kingdom of Priests and an holy nation; having part in the first resurrection, the second death may hav no power over them; but being the Priests of God and of Christ, and reigning with him the term of years limited; at last, whē they have overcome, may sit with Christ in his throne; even as he overcame, & sitteth w^t his Father in his throne.

25. This spiritual kingdom, whereby the Saints reign on earth, is first over their own sins and corruptions; for they are careful to be upright with God, and to keep themselves from their wickedness; and the Lord subdueth their iniquities, that syn shall not have dominiō over them, because they are freed from it, and made servants unto God, having their fruit in holiness, and the end everlasting life. And this victory whereby they overcome themselves, is greater thē all earthly conquests, according to the true proverb; He that is slow to anger, is better then the Mighty man; & he that ruleth his own spirit, (is better) then he that winneth a city. Secondly it is over the world, which also they set themselves against, as knowing that it lieth in wickedness; the wisdom thereof is foolishness, & cometh to naught; the pleasures of it are vanity, and vexatiō of spirit; the sorrows of it work death; and the amity thereof is the enmity of God: therefore flee they the corruption that is in the world through lust, walking before God as strangers & pilgrims on earth, not loving the world, nor the things that are in the world, which have neither satisfying nor fruit in thē but being crucified unto it, & it unto them, they keep themselves unspotted of it, & free frō y^e bondage & servitude of the same; they use it, as though they used it not; they bear with patience all the reproaches & injuries that it offereth; yea though they be made the gazing stock & as the filth of the same, yet are they more then conquerors through him that loved thē, and do fulfil that which is written, All that is born of God overcometh the world; & this is the victory that overcometh the world, evē our faith. Thirdly the conquest of the Saints is over Satan himself, the prince of this world, and worker of all mischief. Him also they resist steadfast in the faith, and do overcome him by the blood of the Lamb, & by the word of their testimony, and love not their lives unto the death: so that wicked one fleeth from them, and toucheth them not, for they keep themselves, because they are begotten of God, who will tread that adversary under their feet shortly, & with him shall be destroyed the last enemy, Death. And as now, the Saints do reign with Christ on earth, by faith and patience: so then, having judged the world, and even the Angels; they shall reign with him in glory, in heaven for evermore.

26. To teach us this Communion with Christ, we have in the scripture many doctrines & similitudes; as that he will make his church a roller & a new threshing instrument having teeth, for to thresh the mountayns, and bring them to powder; & make the hills as chaff: that he giveth strength and power to his people, making their horn iron, & their hoofs brass, & themselves as his bewtiful horse in the battle; that they shall be as the mighty men, which tread down (their enemies) in the mire of the streets in the battle; for the Lord of hosts shall defend them, & they shall devowr and subdue their foes. That Christ shall make his children Princes throughout all the earth; & as himself hath many Crowns upon his head, so will he communicate them with his Saints; as the crowns of his figure Jesus son of Iehozadak the high Priest, were to Helem, Tobijah and others for a memorial in the temple of the Lord. That as Christ is the head corner stone, upon which whosoever fall, shall be broken, & on whomsoever it fall, it shall grind them to powder: so Jerusalem (his church) shall be made a heavy stone for all people▪ all that lift it up shall be torn, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it. That as Christ shall crush the nations with a scepter of iron, and break them in pieces like a potters vessel: so he that overcometh and keepeth his works unto the end; to him will he give power over nations, & he shall rule them with a rod of iron, that as potters vessels they shall be broken; even as he received of his Father, so will he give to that man, the morning star.

27. To illustrate this Cōmunion between our Savior and us, we have the similitude of an human body, the members whereof by their due joints and synewes ar joined to the head, receive from it life and motion, and government in all the actions and affairs: so Christ is the head of the body of his church, & communicateth with all the Saints his members, life and grace, and all good things for their conservation. Also of a vine or Olive tree whose branches ar made partakers of the juice sap and fatness that is in the root & stock: so we abiding in Christ the true vine, do by the juice & moisture of his grace live and bear fruits to the praise of God. Again as the husband and wife, ar not two, but one flesh; & the first woman built of the rib of man, was flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, and so did love & live together partaking ech with others well fare: in like manner are we joined to the Lord, & made one spirit; he that made us is our husband, and we are married to him in faith; whereupon he nourisheth & cherisheth us; for we are members of his body, of his flesh and of his bones; and this is a great Secret, as the Apostle saith, which they that would behold, had need be carried in Spirit (as was John) to a great & an high Mountain, there to be shown this Spouse adorned with the glory of God, & all precious ornaments of his Spirit. And so greatly doth the King delight in her beauty, that the words which were spoken to the first woman Evah, how her desire should be unto her husband; are now on the other hand, (as touching the affection of love) applied by the Spowse unto him whom her sowl loveth, I am my well-beloveds, and his desire is towards me.

28. From all that which is before spoken, of the Cōmunion that God hath called us unto with his Son, it followeth, that whatsoever justice and holiness was in Christ manifested in the flesh, either by nature or by actiō; the same is made ours by grace and imputation: as on the contrary, whatsoever syn & unrighteousness is in us by nature or action, the same is made his by imputation, and by him is healed and taken away; that it cannot be we now should perish, if we hold fast our faith and confidence of rejoicing unto the end. Whatsoever troubles, sorrows or temptations, (syn only excepted,) do befall us in this life; the like have befallen unto him, were by him overcome, and shall from us, as already they are from him, be done away. Finally whatsoever freedom & liberty, Christ as mā, in ordinary estate, had on earth cōversing among men the like hath he given, daily giveth & confirmeth unto Christians; whither we respect the spiritual law of God, or the politick laws of men, and civil states. For he it is that liveth in us; himself is ours, and we are his, graffed into his death and resurrection to eternal life: he hath given his glory unto Israel; even the glory that the Father gav him, hath he given us, that we may be one; as the Father and he are one, he in us, and God in him; & where he is, there shall we also be to behold his glory; though for the present we walk by faith and not by sight, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be. The cōsideration of which riches of his grace, may cause us to say with the prophet, how great is his goodness, & how great is his bewtie? And we may conclude with the last word of Moses the man of God, Blessed art thou o Israel: who is like unto thee, o people saved by the Lord, the shield of thine help, and which is the sword of thy glory? therefore thine enemies shall be in subjectiō to thee, & thou shalt tread upon their high places.

CHAP. XIII.

Of our Communion with the holy Ghost.

Although the fellowship that we have with the holy Ghost, (who is one with the Father and the Son,) may much be discerned by that which is before spoken of God & of Christ: yet because the scripture speaketh many things of the work of God's Spirit in us, and particularly of the Cōmunion of the Holy Ghost with us; it will be for the good and comfort of the Saints, to consider the graces and benefits that do come unto them, by this communion also in particular.

2. And this the rather, for that the Spirit is the Comforter, (that other Comforter or Advocate,) which the Father at Christ's request doth give unto us for to abide with us forever, and cheer us in the absence of our Lord Jesus from us, (who is gone unto his Father and ours) that we should not be left as orphans on earth, destitute of help and comfort amidst our many trials and tribulations.

3. Very great is the grace, & admirable the strength and consolation, which this Comforter giveth to the Saints; as the example of the Apostles themselves doth confirm; who all the while that Christ was with them in this world, though he ceased not to teach & inform thē, to comfort and embolden them, to reprove and blame them, as there was occasion: yet were they weak and faint in faith, fearful of their enemies, forgetful of Christ's promises, without understanding of his mysteries, and overcaried many ways with their own infirmities. But when he had sent down upon them the promise of his Father, & endued them with power from on high, baptising them with the holy Ghost: then began they to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance, the wonderful works of God; shown great boldness in preaching the word, & with great power witnessed the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and many signs and wonders were shown by their hands, and they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ amongst many troubles; rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer rebuke for his name.

4. Neither unto them alone was the holy Ghost given, (though the abundance of his graces was poured most plentifully upon them;) but all that in those days, or before, or since, do believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, are sealed also with the same spirit of promise▪ & furnished in some measure with the gifts of the same. Which grace the Lord himself proclaimed in that last and great day of the Feast of Tabernacles, saying, He that believeth in me, as saith the scripture, out of his belly shall flow rivers of water of life; speaking this of the Spirit, which they that believed in him, should receive; for if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, the same is not his.

5. As there is but one God and Father of all, and one Lord Jesus Christ; so is there but one and the same Spirit: although for the diversities of gifts which that Spirit distributeth among the Saints, the scripture sometime speaketh as of seven Spirits which are before the throne of God; (seven being a full and perfect number, and signifying Many;) and these seven Spirits be the seven horns & seven eyes, (that is the manifold and absolute power & providence) of the Lamb Christ Jesus; of whom it was prophesied, that the Spirit of the Lord should rest upon him; the Spirit of wisdom, and Understanding; the Spirit of counsel, & of strength; the Spirit of knowledge, & of the fear of the Lord: of which also it was witnessed, God giveth him not the Spirit by measure.

6. The Spirit, as he was at first creator of the world, with the Father & y^e Son; & garnished the heavens: so is he still the finger of God, that worketh effectually all his actions, creating the creatures, & renewing the face of the earth. And generally as God speaketh unto men outwardly, by the ministry of his word: so sendeth he also inwardly, motions of his Spirit; against which many struggle, to their just judgment. In the old world God's spirit strove in man, as his word was preached by Noah; but they said unto God, Depart from us: wherefor they were wrinkled before the time, and the flood was poured out vpon their foundation. When Israel came out of Egypt, the Lord sent before them Moses Aaron & Miriam, to guide them outwardly by kingdom priesthood and prophesy; he gave them also his good Spirit to instruct them, and Jesus Christ his Son, the Angel of his face or presence, saved them: yet they both envied Moses, and Aaron the holy one of the Lord; and often provoked, grieved, & tempted God himself, and limited the Holy one of Israel; they rebelled & vexed his holy spirit, (y^e Spirit of y^e Lord which had given them rest▪) therefore was he turned to be their enemy, and fought against them. In these last days of the Gospel, we are also taught, how some that have tasted of the heavenly gift, & were made partakers of the Holy Ghost; yet fall so away that they cannot be renewed unto repentance. So that even▪ wicked men and reprobates, do often receive the gifts of the Spirit, whereby they do many great works, yet are not benefited hereby unto salvation▪ for they have not the grace of God to sanctify those gifts, & seal thē up unto the day of redemption; therefore God taketh his holy Spirit from them, and sometime sendeth his evil spirit in stead thereof, to vex them, as he did unto Saul; & this worthily, seeing there are of these wretches, that do even despite the Spirit of grace.

7. But the Saints elect of God, have another manner communion with the Holy Ghost; for their help comfort and sanctification in this life, and assurance of life eternal. For, because they are sons, God sendeth the Spirit of his son into their harts, which crieth Abba Father; so they are no more servants but sons, and heirs also of God through Christ, who hath obtained of his Father this Comforter to abide with them▪ forever, even the Spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive▪ because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but they know him, for he dwelleth with them, & shall be in them; their bodies are the Temples of the Holy Ghost.

8. The communion which the Saints have with the Spirit, is in many particulars; and that from the beginning of their days, unto the end. For Jeremiah was sanctified, and John the Baptist filled with the Holy Ghost, even from their mothers wombs. And we all that are born of God, have our regeneration and new birth of the Spirit: & according to his mercy are saved, by the washing of the new birth, & the renewing of the Holy Ghost.

9. The word of God, which is the immortal seed whereby we are begotten, hath always been uttered, explained, and understood, by means of this Spirit. David testifieth of himself, that the Spirit of the Lord spake in him, & his word was in his tongue: our savior Christ, and his Apostles do witness also the same concerning him; so the things that he spake, we must receive, as the sayings of the Holy Ghost. The like is to be minded for Isaiah Michaias, and all other Prophets, by whose hands the Lord protested among his people by his spirit; for Prophecy (as the Apostle saith) came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God, spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; the Lord Jehovah & his Spirit sent them. Yea Christ himself had the Spirit of God put on him, that he might show judgment to the Gentiles; and was anointed with the Spirit, that he might preach the Gospel to the poor; and unto the Apostles whom he had chosen, gave he commandments through the Holy Ghost, who also having received the Spirit which is of God, spake the things that were given them of him, not in the words which man's wisdom taught, but which the holy Ghost did teach them: so preached they y^e Gospel unto the Saints, by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

10. Unto this Gospel of salvation first preached by the Lord, and after confirmed by them that heard him; God bare witness both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost. For to one (as the Apostle saith) was given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge, by the same spirit; to another Faith, by the same Spirit; to another, the gifts of healing, by the same Spirit; to another the operations of great works; to another Prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another diversities of tongues; to another, the interpretations of tōgues▪ and all these things wrought even the self same Spirit, distributing to every man severally as he would.

11. But these spiritual gifts, though they were poured out upon many; yet are they not, neither ever were given unto all; as it is written, Are all doers of miracles? have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret? Again, to all that have them, they are not seals of the adoption of Sons; for if men have prophesy, and know all secrets and all knowledge; if they have all faith, so that they can remove mountayns, and have not Love, they are nothing. Yet is this manifestation of the Spirit given to every man to profit withal: & as the Apostles were God's witnesses concerning the things which they said; so was the holy Ghost, whom God gave to them that obeyed him; the Spirit was one of the three witnesses on earth, as the Apostle John saith.

12. As the mystery of Christ was revealed to his holy Apostles and Prophets by the Spirit, & they preached the Gospel unto others, by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; & as the ordinary permanent officers of the Churches, are made Overseers by the Holy Ghost, to feed the Church of God: so by the hearing of Faith preached, do men receive the Spirit; which God openly shown, when while Peter yet was speaking, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And as by the work of the Spirit, the word is received and believed; so is the same also obeyed, kept and retained, through the Holy Ghost that dwelleth in us. The Sacraments also have by him their effects in us, as it is written, by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whither Jews or Greeks, whither bond or free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

13. And having thus our new birth, calling unto, and establishing in the faith, by the work of the holy Ghost; we are further by him confirmed, comforted, emboldened, & assisted, in all our spiritual battles against Satan, this world, and our own corruptions. For we are strengthened by God's Spirit in the inner man; & being armed with the word of God which is the sword of the Spirit, we stand fast; and though the enemy come like a flood, yet the Spirit of the Lord shall chase him away, as saith the Prophet. And in rebuking the world, he useth great boldness, convincing them of syn, of righteousness, and of judgment: so that God's servants are full of power by the Spirit of the Lord and of judgment, and of strength, to declare unto the people their transgression, and their syn; an example whereof we may see in Saul, who being full of the Holy Ghost, set his eyes upon Elymas the sorcerer and said; O full of all subtlety, & all mischief, child of the Devil, enemy of all righteousness; wilt thou not cease to pervert the straight ways of the Lord? Now therefore behold the hand of the Lord is upon thee, & thou shalt be blind, and not see the Sun for a season. And this courage the Saints have even before Princes and potentates of ◊ earth ◊ may be ◊ in Zech•••ah son of Iehojada, who being clothed with the Spirit, and rebuking the transgressions of the people, was therefore stoned with stones, at the commandment of the king. For the Holy Ghost teacheth them in that manner what they ought to say; wherefore they are to take no thought how or what to answer, but resting upon the aid of God's Spirit, do boldly say, • will speak of thy testimonies (Lord) before kings, and will not be ashamed.

14 But in the Saints themselves, the Spirit is most mighty in operation for the subduing and sanctifying of their affections, and confirmation of their souls and spirits in the love & favor of God. For whereas before time, some of them were fornicators, idolaters, thieves, covetous, extortioners, or given to other like vices: they washed, they are justified, they are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God. And whereas while they were fleshly, having not the Spirit they walked after the flesh, and favoured the things thereof, & could not please God, but were subject unto death: now he that raised up Christ from the Dead, doth also quicken their mortal bodies, because that his Spirit dwelleth in them; and so is fulfilled that which in figure God said of old unto Israel; Ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your sepulchers, and shall put my Spirit in you, & ye shall live. Who then living in the Spirit, do also walk in the Spirit, and by it do mortify the deeds of the body, not fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, which they have crucified, but bringing forth the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance for when the Spirit is poured upon them from above; then the wilderness becometh a fruitful field, as saith the Prophet.

15. And God which hath promised to pour water upon the thirsty, stands upon the dry ground, to pour his Spirit upon the seed of his Church, and his blessing upon their buds; will not only give the Holy Ghost to them that desire him; but also continue his gifts and graces for the assurance of their hearts; so that they shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth in fear, because they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord, & their buds with them. The love of God is shed abroad in their hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given unto them, and by him are they sealed unto the day of redemption; the same Spirit beareth witness with their spirits that they are the Sons of God; and hereby they know that they dwell in God, and he in them, because he hath given them of his Spirit, which is as a pawn or earnest in their hearts, whereby they do not only behold the glory of the Lord with open face, but are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. And this Spirit which they have received, is not the Spirit of bondage to fear again, (as at the giving of the Law, and looking upon Moses face,) but is the Spirit of adoption-of-children, whereby they cry Abba Father, even the Spirit of his Son Christ, which God hath sent into their hearts, because they also are sons, and the blessing of Abraham is come upon them through Christ Jesus. So God's good Spirit leadeth them unto the Land of righteousness, and this is a part of his covenant with them, that his Spirit which is upon them, and his words which he hath put in their mouth, shall not depart out of the mouth of them or their seed or their seeds seed forever. Neither will he hide his face anymore from them because he hath poured out his spirit upon the house of Israel, as he hath promised by his Prophet. From which proceedeth unto the Saints unspeakable peace comfort & joy which they find and feel, both in the receiving of the word, (as the Apostle saith ye received the word in much affliction with joy of the holy Ghost;) in the obedience thereof unto in the kingdom of God; which is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the holy Ghost.

16. Amongst other benefits which the Spirit affordeth, this is one special, that it helpeth the Saints infirmities in prayer; who themselves know not what to pray as they ought, but the Spirit itself maketh request for them with sighs which cannot be expressed; & the request which he maketh is according to the will of God, who searcheth the hearts, and knoweth what the meaning of the Spirit is.

17. But that the Saints be not deceived, and led astray from the truth, by any motion, suggestion, vision, revelation, or other means whatsoever, as from the Spirit of the Lord; our Savior hath given us a rule, to discern the work of his Spirit, from the delusion of Satan; which is this, that his Spirit speaketh not of himself, but whatsoever he heareth he speaketh: that he glorifieth Christ, for he receiveth of Christ's, (& all things that the Father hath at Christ's,) and showeth it unto Christians. Therefore is he the Spirit of truth, and leadeth into altruth, because he teacheth nothing but according to the word of God, which word is truth. And by that word must all spirits be tried; by it may be discerned the Spirit of truth from the Spirit of error: and Joshua, though he were full of the Spirit of wisdom; yet was charged of God to attend unto the book of the Law, (for his direction,) to observe and do, according to all that was written therein.

18. Finally, the Spirit of God, hath generally in all things wrought much and mightily in and by the Saints. With this was Bezaleel filled, in wisdom and in understanding, & in knowledge, & in all workmanship, to find out curious works for the Lord's Tabernacle; with this were the seventy Ancients furnished for the government of Israel, & prophesied. With the wisdom of this Spirit, was Joshua full, after that Moses had put his hands upon him, & given him of his glory, when he ordained him to be his successor in the kingdom. And what should I speak of all the Judges, as of Othoniel, of Gideon, of Ephraim & of Samson, upon whom the Spirit of the Lord came, clothed them, strengthened them, and prospered upon them; whereby they went boldly unto great battles, overcame their enemies, and slew the wild beasts that roared upon them. The Prophets also & Apostles, were carried and guided by the Spirit, in their ways words, and works; taught whom for to go to, and from whom to refrain; and had great intelligence of things for to come; and in every city, the Holy Ghost witnessed, such things as God's wisdom saw good to reveal. So that the help which the Spirit ministereth to the Saints, is infinite and incomprehensible; and they may say to the Lord with the Prophet, whishal I go from thy Spirit? for loe, the wisdom of God poureth out her Spirit unto them, & maketh them understand her words: this Ointment they have from him that is holy, & do know all things: through the power of the Holy Ghost they abound in hope; by the comfort of the Holy Ghost, they and the Churches of them are multiplied and by him the offering up of the Gentiles (by the ministry of the Gospel) is sanctified: and whatsoever good thing is done among God's people, is not by an Army nor strength, but by the Spirit of the Lord of hosts, without which no man can say, that Jesus is the Lord.

19. Thus are the Saints of God, advanced to honor & dignity, above all people's on the earth; being themselves the Temple of God, & having his Spirit dwelling in them: enjoying a most holy and happy communion, with the Father, and with his son Jesus Christ, and with the Holy Ghost; the grace and peace and comfort whereof, passeth all understanding, and can no way be sufficiently expressed, by the tongue or pen of man. And this holy communion with his people God shown of old by his prophet, in these gracious words, I am with you saith the Lord of hosts with the Word, by whom I covenanted with you when you came out of Egypt; and my Spirit remaining among you: Fear you not.

Al thy works praise thee, ô Lord; & thy Saints bless thee.

Psal. 145. 10.

CHAP. XIII.

How the sores yd communion and peace between God and his Sainsts, is sometimes interrupted by their sins: what unrest & trouble, they then feel in themselves; and how their ancient peace is renewed.

B•cause there is no man just in the earth, that doeth good and sinneth not; and whiles men dwell in these houses of clay, they be compassed about with their own infirmities, tempted of their own concupiscences, and besett with Devils, that always lie in wait to entrap and devour: it falleth out, that the Saints of God ar not only assaulted, but oftentimes foiled by their enemies, and do fall into snares, and loathsome trespasses, whereby God is dishonored, the Devil delighted, & their own harts wounded and distressed.

2. For our knowledge in this life, is but in part; so that through error & ignorance we oft do amiss; neither can any man understand or discern those errors. Our affections & lusts are not fully subdued, but do yet war in our members; the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and these lusts fight against the sowle, & ar as a law in our members, rebelling against the law of our mind, and captivating us to the law of syn which is in our members. Our strength is infirm; and though we would do good, yet find we no means to perform it. Our enemy Satan, is both subtle and strong, and seeketh daily to circumvent us, & often prevaieth through our weakness and vnheedines, that in many things we syn all, & no man can say I hav purified my heart, I am clean from my syn.

3. Sometime the pleasures of the flesh, do bewitch and draw us into grievous offenses; drunkenness, adultery, fornication, murder, and idolatry itself; sometime the blessings of God upon us, do make us proud, our harts are lifted up, we commit vainglorious actions, forgetting ourselves, and God that begat us, even forsaking the Rock of our salvatiō; sometime our affections are so stirred, that we fall into intemperance both in word & work, not only against men, but even God himself; sometime fears, doubts, dangers, threatenings, and afflictions, do daunt and discourage us, making the heart to faint, the tongue to deny and forswear the truth, the hands to work impiety, our faith to quail, that we forsake Christ and flee away. Yea God's children have in error and blind zeal, persecuted the truth and professors thereof, even killed Christ himself, & crucified the Lord of Glory; as the example of Saul & sondrie other elect Israelites doth manifest. These and many like grievous sins do the Saints sometimes fall into through their infirmities, (God withdrawing his hand, & leaving them to themselves,) besides their ignorances & defaults which multiply daily: so as they surmount in number the hayres of their heads. And many times such mē lie sleeping in their sins long, forgetting themselves in their voluptuous delights; til God awakeneth them of his grace, least they should sleep the death, and perish forever.

4. He awakeneth us sometime by the sound of his word, knocking at the door of our harts; and by his Spirit wherewith he striveth in us: sometime by corrections & punishments for our misdeeds inflicted upon our bodies; sometime by striking our consciences with dread dismay and terror for our sins, and withdrawing the cheerful light of his countenance from us, so as we feel not the joy of his spirit, neither have peace in ourselves; but the comfortable cōmuniō betweē his Majesty & us, seemeth quite to be disanulled & brokē.

5. For he withdraweth his face and favor from us, kindleth his anger against us, & coūteth us as his enemies, the horror of his wrath is as fire sent from above into our bones; the curse written in the law, is poured upon us, and is as the arrows of the Almighty, the venom whereof drinketh up our spirit. He setteth our iniquities before himself, & our secret sins in the light of his countenance; he setteth them also in our own sight, and our syn is before us continually; with his hand he bindeth the yoke of our transgressions, & with them being wrapped & laid upon our neck, he maketh our strength to fail; bitter things doth he write against us, & make us to inherit the iniquities of our youth; so as there is nothing found in our flesh because of his anger; neither is there rest in our bones because of our sin: our wounds stink and ar corrupt, our reins ar full of burning, our heart is as wax, it melteth in the mids of our bowels; our bones are parched like an hearth, & our moisture is turned to a summers drouth, so heavy is his hand upon us night and day. Then cry we out for grief of heart, we roar like bears, and mourn like doves; looking for judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far from us; because our trespasses are many both before him and ourselves, for which his terrors do fight against us, he visiteth us every morning, and trieth us every moment; setteth us as a mark against him, so that we are a burden to ourselves. Also when we cry & shout, he shutteth out our prayer, and is even angry against it; because our iniquities have separated between us and him, and our sins have hid his face from us, that he will not hear; so loathsome are our trespasses unto him, so venomous to ourselves is the biting of those fiery serpents.

6. Then are we left comfortless and desolate, cast down in ourselves, our soul poured out vpō us, and our salvation passed away as a cloud; we are kept out of the paradise of God with the terror of his law and judgments, as with the blade of the Cherubims brandishing sword; we are laid ”in the lowest pit, in darkness, in the deep; where God's indignation lieth upon us, and we are vexed with all his waves. We ar a reproach to wicked men, who because of our misdeeds do blaspheme: we ar a scorn to the Devils, who insult at our sins, cease not to accuse us before God day and night, and hope to hav us in the end, a prey to their teeth. Our lovers and our friends stand a side from our plague, and our kinsmen stand far off. They that should guide & direct us to Christ, in stead of good counsel do often smite and wound us, persecuting them whom God hath smitten, & adding to their sorrows whom he hath wounded. The worm of our own conscience continually biteth us, so as when we would forget our complaint, and comfort ourselves; then ar we afraid of all our sorrows, knowing that God will not judge us innocent, who inquireth of our iniquity and sercheth out our syn; yet hideth his face, and reputeth us for his enemies. Thus our sowl is far off from peace, we have forgotten prosperity, saying, Our strength and our hope is perished from the Lord; and wherefor is the light given to them that are in misery, and life unto thē that hav heavy harts? for our harp is turned to mourning; and our organs, into the voice of them that weep.

7 But the root of the word w^{ch} is found in us, and the seed of God which remaineth in us; stirreth up the spark of faith, and suffereth it not to die in these distresses. It bringeth to mind God's ancient mercies, his faith confirmed, and love sealed towards us in Christ; it telleth us, where syn aboundeth, grace doth abound much more. Then remembering our song in the night, communing with our own heart, & our spirit serching diligently, we say, Will the Lord absent himself forever? and will he show no more favor? Is his mercy clean gone forever? doth his promise fail for evermore? hath God forgotten to be merciful? hath he shut up his tender mercies in displeasure? we hav sinned, what shall we do unto thee, ô thou preserver of men? If thou straitly markest iniquities, Lord who shall stand? surely then the mountain would fall and come to naught, and the rock would be removed from his place; neither shall any that liveth be justified in thy sight. But mercy is with thee, that thou mayst be feared. And now Lord thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou art the potter, we all are the work of thine hands; be not angry ô Lord above measure, neither remember iniquity forever; purge thou us with hyssop and we shall be clean, wash us and we shall be whiter then snow; make us to hear joy and gladness, that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice, turn us again ô God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine, that we may be saved.

8. When thus we shall submit ourselves under the mighty hand of God, and drawing waters from the well of our harts, shall pour them out before the Lord: when we shall confess our iniquities, and in faith ask mercy at his hands, hūgring and thirsting after his righteousness, and braying for it as the hinde for the rivers of waters: the Lord will repent towards his servants, whē he seeth that their power is gone; he will pour water upon the thirsty, & floods upon the dry ground, and will say unto us, Fear not for I am with you; be not afraid, for I am your God, I will strengthen you and help you and susteyn you with the right hand of my justice; though your sins were as crimson, they shall be made white as snow, though they were red like scarlet, they shall be as wool: for a little while I have forsaken you, but with great compassion will I gather you; for a moment in anger I hid my face from you for a little season, but with everlasting mercy have I had compassiō on you, saith the Lord your redeemer. Then shall we see in the black cloud of our tribulations, the bow of the Lord, even himself will appear with the rayn-bow about his throne, the token of his covenant of grace, which he remembereth; and as he sware that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so sweareth he not to be angry with us nor rebuke us; though the mountains remove, and the hills fall down, yet his mercy shall not depart from us, nor the covenant of his peace fall away.

9. Thus God which had woūded us, bindeth us up; after two days [troubles] he reviveth us, in the third day he raiseth us up & we live in his sight; he healeth our broken harts, and bindeth up our sores. For Christ our mediator, that Angel of the covenant, hath asked for us mercy of God his Father, who was so long displeased with us, and the Lord hath answered him with good and comfortable words; this man is unto us, as an hiding place from the wind, & as a secret from the tempest; as rivers of waters in a dry place, & as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. And though our bark hath been tossed in the sea of afflictions, where Christ himself seemed to us a spright, and made us afraid; yet now his gracious voice doth comfort us, and his presence ceaseth all wind & tempest. It is he, even he that putteth away our iniquities for his own sake, & remēbreth not our sins; but restoreth to us the joy of his salvatiō, giveth us beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of gladness for the spirit of heaviness; so that our youth is renewed, and we lift up the wings as the Eagles; our flesh is as fresh as a child's; strength is increased in our souls; and being now as widows divorced frō our sins, delivered from that law; and returned to our Fathers house, like the Priests daughters we eat of our Fathers bread, as we did in our youth; we shall feel no more hunger, nor thirst, neither shall the heat smite on us, nor the sun; God wipeth all tears frō our eyes, there is no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor payn; for the first things are passed.

10 Having thus after long seeking found him whom our sowlloveth, we take hold upon him, and leave him •ot, til we hav brought him home unto us; and after this nights wrestling with the Angel, we will not let him go, until he bless us, and give unto weak Jacob the new name of Israel; for that by strong faith we have power with God & prevail, having wept and prayed unto him. And now he putteth in our mouth, a new song of praise unto our God; our tongues sing joyfully of his justice, & our souls do bless him, which hath pardoned all our iniquities, healed all our infirmities, redeemed our life from the pit, and crowned us with mercy and compassions. And because we believe, therefore we speak and say, We shall not die but live, and declare the works of the Lord; the Lord hath chastened us sore, but hath not delivered us to death. Wherefore after our agonies & conflicts with death, terrors within, and fears round about; we repose in Christ our redeemer, who hath taken away our sins, vāquisht all our foes, put Satan to flight, renewed our peace, and quieted our consciences: and then we rejoyce and say, My soul return unto thy rest, for the Lord hath been bountiful unto thee.

11. Then giveth he us to see, how in all these troubles and torments, we have most near communion with Christ, and are by them made conformable unto him; for he was wounded for our transgressions, he was broken for our iniquities, innumerable troubles compassed him, the sins of the elect, which by imputatiō were his, took such hold upon him that he was not able to look up; for the Lord laid upon him the iniquity of us all; though he had done no wickedness, neither was any deceit in his mouth, yet the Lord would break him and make him subject to infirmities, so that he felt terror and anguish, and heaviness in his sowl even unto the death; his sweat in his agony was like drops of blood trickling down to the ground, and his cry unto his God was, why hast thou forsaken me? And we in our afflictions do but drink of his cup, and are baptized but with his baptism; that after we have suffered with him, we may also reign with him, & by many tribulations must we enter into his kingdom. And he that was thus smitten of God, & humbled even to the death; thus troubled in sowl, and left of his Father for a seasō; found an issue out of all temptations, not for himself alone, but for us whose surety he was; who therefore have this hope for an anker to our souls, that as we now suffer with him, so shall we also reign with him, notwithstanding that for the present we are brought into the dust of death.

12. After this, admiring the mercies of our God, and the unsearchable depth of his counsels, who worketh & turneth all things, even our own sins unto our good; who leadeth us in such ways and wildernesses, where fiery serpents and scorpions are, & drought without water; which maketh us follow him when his way is in the sea, and his paths in the great waters, and his footsteps ar not known; in all which dangers he defendeth us, & afterwards bringeth us into his rest: we say the Lord dwelleth in a dark cloud, Verily thou ô God hidest thyself, ô God the savior of Israel; how unsearchable ar thy judgments, and thy ways past finding out? Then minding our frayl estate in this flesh, how we are sold under syn, & do trespass against God every day, and cannot do the good that we would▪ we abase our horns unto the dust, and by repentance do die daily, washing Christ's feet with our tears, knowing that notwithstanding the communion that we have with him here by faith, yet are we but strangers and pilgrims on earth, and whiles we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord; whiles our flesh is vpō us we shall be sorowful, and whiles our soul is in us, it shall mourn. Therefore strengthening our weak hands and comforting our feeble knees, we make straight steps unto our feet, being careful & circumspect least Satan further circumvent us, seeking to make an end of our salvation with fear & trembling, giving all diligence to join virtue with our faith, and to make our calling and election sure; for behold the righteous have [for their sins] recompense in the earth and are scarcely saved, where then shall the ungodly & sinner appear? but we which believe in Christ, expect with patience our full redemption, & as we have cast our burden on the Lord, and committed our poor selves unto him; so we are persuaded that he is able to keep that which is committed unto him against that day, even to keep us that we fall not, and to present us faultles before the presence of his glory with joy; where we shall always behold his face, and being quite freed from our sins, & from all possibility of ever synning more; shall perpetually serve and honor him, with his Angels at his right hand, where pleasures ar for evermore.

He that walketh in darkness, & hath no light, let him trust in the name of the Lord, & stay upon his God.

Isa. 50. 10.

CHAPT. XV.

Of the communion that the Saints have in this life with Angels.

The name of Angel, which is in English a Messēger, is in y^e scriptures attributed, 1. to our Lord Christ; 2. to the spiritual creatures in heaven; 3. and to some certain men on earth, employed in the message and service of God.

2. Christ, is the Angel whom God sent to bring Israel out of Egypt, in whom God's name is, and is therefore called the Angel of his Face or Presence, even the Face of God itself; the Angel of the Covenāt, whom the Israelites desired; the Angel that delivered Jacob from all evil; the Angel that dwelt in the bush, whiles it burned and was not consumed; who was the God of Abraham Isaac & Jacob; the Angel Jehovah, who emboldened Gideon to battle against the Madianits, and was with him in the same; the Angel with the golden censer that giveth many odors to the prayers of all Saints, and out of whose hand the odors with the prayers go up before God in his throne. He is no created Angel, but the creator of Angels, and all other things in heaven and earth; therefore is he the Archangel, the head of all principality and power the first of the chief Princes, even Michael our prince, whom all the Angels of God do worship. Of him and our communion with him is before spoken.

3. The ministers of God, though mē on the earth, yet for the service wherein they be employed ar called Angels or Messengers. Such were the priests in the time of the Law, as Malachi entitleth them; such was John the Baptist; & such ar Christ's ordinary ministers the Angels of the Churches. Of whom it remaineth to be spoken elsewhere.

4. The blessed spirits which are about the throne of God, where thousand thousands minister unto him, and ten thousand thousands stand before him; these heavenly creatures being often sent forth into this world on God's message, are therefore most properly & usually called Angels. Of thē do we treat in this place. These ar wise & excel in strength, and in all ready and swift performance of the will of God; They ar Thrones; Dominions, principalities, & powers, they ar the chief princes above all the princes of the earth; and the title of God's is given unto them: God imparteth to them his counsels and useth their ministry in the government of the world.

5. These heavenly creatures, ar parties in the communion of the Saints, as is before touched; for they & we hav all one head which is Christ, & are all elect to be partakers of the glory of God forever. But because they are spirits, and hav not flesh and blood as we; therefore the fellowship between them and us is spiritual, to be learned out of the scriptures, and discerned by faith, not by ey-sight. Again God hath in ages past, before y^e incarnatiō of Christ, more employed them outwardly in reveling his will unto men, then in these last days he doeth; since he hath opened unto us the whole mystery of his counsel, by his Son. Yet as at the giving of the Law, when the Lord came from mount Sinai, & rose up from Seir unto his people, he came with ten thousands of the Saints: so in the time of the Gospel, when his feet stood on the mount of Olives, the Lord our God came, and all the Saints with him, to do him worship and minister unto him; to guard his throne & church; & to be sēt forth in ministry for their sakes w^{ch} shall be heirs of salvation.

6. Somtimes the Angels appeared in visible forms of men, and for a while so conversed with men, eating and drinking, and talking familiarly of the matters whereabout they were sent; as in the history of Abrahā & Lot is to be seen. Somtimes they appeared in more glorious shapes, like winged creatures, and so would treat with men about their affairs vocally: but their celestial majesty, then much daunted the sons of Adam. Sometimes they appeared, but spake not; & again sometime they spake, whē no mention is made of their appearing.

7. The causes also and effects of their appearing, were many and weighty. For by them Abrahā was told of the birth of Isaac; & the destruction of Sodom; Manoah & his wife, of y^e birth of Sāson; Zecharie, of y^e birth of John the Baptist; Mary, of y^e cōceptiō, & y^e shepherds, of y^r birth of our Lord Christ; the womē of his resurrectiō; & the Apostles, of his second coming at the last day. By them Zecharie was certified of the restauration of Jerusalem; Daniel was informed of the state of the church from his time to Christ; and John, of the * estate thereof, frō his days, to the worlds end. By them, Lot was delivered from the burning of Sodom; Shadrach, Meshach, & Abednego, from the fiery furnace; Daniel, from the Lions mouths; & Peter, out of Herod's prison. By them, Abraham's servant, was guided in his journey; Philip, was directed to go and preach to the Eunuch; Paul to the Macedonians; Jacob, was encouraged in his going towards, & retourning from Mesopotomia, Elijah, was refreshed with food in his flight frō Jezebel; Joseph was counseled to flee with Christ, from Herod's persecution; and Paul was comforted against peril of shipwreck. Their ministry was used at the giving of the fiery law on mount Sinai; their melody was heard at the birth of the Lamb, that reigneth on mount Zion; and they still sing loud his praises about God's throne; and they shall be the harvestmen to reap the earth and to sever the bad from among the just, at the end of this world.

8. They ar God's powrful instruments as for smiting the wicked with sore diseases; so for the help and healing of our sicknesses, when it pleaseth God so to employ them: as appeareth by that famous miracle, often wrought in the pool at Jerusalem, whose waters were at certain times troubled by an Angel; after which stirring, who so first stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had. In memory of which heavenly grace, the place was called Bethesda, that is the house of bountifulness or mercy.

9. And although now a days they appear not visibly, nor afford us such outward help: yet are these heavenly messengers, still secretly employed for the safeguard and benefit of the Saints. For who so dwelleth in the secret of the Most high, and lodgeth in the shadow of the Almighty; over him (as the Psalmist saith,) God giveth his Angels charge to keep him in all his ways: yea even unto little children doth their care extend, & as the embroydred Cherubims environed the Tabernacle, so do those heavenly soldiers cōpass and guard God's true tabernacle the Church. And whereas we are in danger two manner wise, 1. by our own infirmity, 2. and our enemies might & subtlety: these watchmen and guardians of our salvation, do succor us in both. For as the mother, carrieth in her arms the child which cannot well go; so these do bear-us-up in their hands, that we hurt not our foot against a stone; and when we are besieged by our foes, these pitch roūd about us, and deliver us; being as a bulwark betwixt the fiends, even all our enemies, and us. So that if God gave us to see with the eye, as we are taught to believe by faith; we might behold with Elishaes servant the mountains to be full of horses & chariots of fire round about us: and would say with Jacob, This is God's host. Neither do they only save us from peril; but as heavenly warriors that excel in strength, they fight against our enemies, pursuing and scattering them, as chaff before the wind; like as at Hezekiah's prayer, an Angel came and killed 185. thousand of his foes. And as they attend upon us in our life, so do they also at our death; being sent to fetch our flitting souls, & carry thē into Abraham's bosom, in the Paradise of God.

10. These things as those blessed spirits the sons of God, do at the commandment of their heavenly father, redily and cheerfully, for his elect: so also ar they beholders of our ways & conversation, & affected (after their spiritual manner) with the things they see in us. For they ar, evē the thousād thowsāds of thē, as about God's throne, so about the four living creatures & the 24. Elders, together with them magnifying Christ the killed Lamb, & prostrate on their faces do worship God, and give glory unto him for evermore. Into the celestial mysteries reveled by the Gospel, they hav a desire to look; because God hath by his church made known his manifold wisdom unto them. Loving also they ar, glad and desirous of our good; as appeareth by their glorifying of the Lamb that was killed for us, not for them; and by the joy which they have, when any one of us converteth from our sins; as Christ hath shown. Witnesses they ar with the Lord, of the charges & contestations laid upon us, for the observing of our duties; as by the Apostles words to Timothy, we be taught. Wherefore we ought holily, righteously, & soberly to carry ourselves, in all our actions; seeing we ar a spectacle to those heavenly Flames, and are come to the great assembly of innumerable of them: yea the Apostle seemeth to require of women, modest and submissivattire, in respect of them.

11. Al this notwithstanding, we must take heed, both of superstitiō, and curiosity about them; for we are forbidden of God the religion or worship of Angels: which when John for the revelations shown him would hav done; the Angel refused, and said, See thou do it not. If therefore we hav need of succor let us pray unto our Father, and he can send us legions of them; and if we would give thanks for their help, & offer a sacrifice; themselves hav taught us, to offer it to the Lord; whose servants they are, even fellow servants with us; though much more excellent, able, and obedient. He it is, that sendeth them forth, for our sakes which ar heys of salvation; he also will change this our corruptible estate, & cloth us with immortality, and make us equal to those holy Angels, and give us • place among them: whose cōmuniō at that day we shall fully enjoy, together with them serving our God, and lauding his Majesty, in his own blessed presence forever.

The Angel of the Lord pitcheth round about them that fear him, & delivereth them.

Psal. 34. 7.

CHAPT. XVI.

How the Saints on earth, ar called to a holy communion among themselves.

God who hath chosen and called us in Christ from this world, and fellowship of all wicked ones therein, to be his, and to serv him: hath further required at our hands, that we which ar called, should not live alone, or a sunder by ourselves, but join together, and so entertayn and nourish, a loving & holy communion one with another, in the unity of the faith and spirit, by the bond of peace. For man is made a sociable creature; and when he was in his perfection, God saw & said, it was not good for him to be alone, and therefore made him a help meet for him: but after, when we were corrupted, there was much more need of fellowship one with another for our mutal help and comfort. And many are the benefits which we reap hereby; evē as on the contrary, the evils, dangers, and discomforts, which arise for want hereof, are moe then can be told.

2. When God had brought his people out of Egypt, to lead them into Canaan; whiles thither they were traveyling, even in the wilderness caused he a Tent to be made, for himself to dwell among them, and in midst of their tents; which when it was perfected, he took possession of, filled and sanctified it with his glory; commanded also the people; thither for to bring their services and their sacrifices; promised there to meet with thē, to speak there unto them; whereupon that place was called the Tent (or Tabernacle) of Meeting or Congregation. And whereas this Sanctuary was flitting & moveable not only in the wilderness, but also in the land of Canaan: therefore God gav Israel a charge by Moses, that they should seek the place which he should choose out of all their tribes, to put his Name there, and there to dwell; that thither they should come, to sacrifice, and rejoyce before the Lord; themselves their children, and their servants; there to keep their solemn feasts, and take heed they offered not in any other place. For he had told thē, whosoever, Israelite or stranger sojourning among them, that resorted not to this Tabernacle with his oblations, but sacrificed other where, either within or without the host, that man should be reputed as if he had shed blood, or offered unto Devils; and was to be cut off from among his people. This tent, (together with the Ternple which for like holy use, succeeded the same,) was a figure of the church or congregation of Christians, amongst whom God hath placed his tabernacle, to dwell as their God with them, and they to be his people, even his house and habitation; & should therefore gather themselves together in his name, to keep their spiritual feasts, not withdrawing from, nor leaving the mutual assembling or fellowship that they have among themselves; for who so repayreth not to the Church the true Jerusalem, of all the families of the earth, there to keep the feast of Tabernacles, & worship the king the Lord of hosts; no rayn (of God's grace or blessing) shall come upon them.

3. This gathering together of the Saints, is not a bare assembly or concourse only, of people; but a near uniting and knitting of themselves, in one holy communion and fellowship. For as the foresaid Tent was made of many courtaines, but all of thē so coupled one to another, with loops & taches, that they were but one Tabernacle; and as the many costly hewed stones, wherewith Solomon built the Temple, whē they were laid together, made one Howse wherein God had his habitatiō: so the servants of Christ though they be many, yet are so built & coupled together by faith, that they grow unto an holy temple in the Lord, to be the habitation of God by the spirit; and are built as a city that is compact together in itself. Which near cōiunction is further set forth, by similitude of a body, wherein there be many members of several shape & use, yet by the wisdom of God so united & set together, that there appeareth a goodly frame and proportion of the man; and every lim so fastened to other, and all the parts so serviceable needful & comfortable ech to other, that they cannot without pain, loss, and deformity be pulled asunder: even so the Saints of God, ar (as the Apostle saith) one body in Christ, & everyone, one another's members; being by one spirit all baptized into one body; w^{ch} is called Christ's Church or Congregation, because we ar gathered and joined together unto him our head, by whom all the body being coupled and knit together by every joint, for the furniture thereof, (according to the effectual power which is in the measure of every part,) receiveth increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

4. The strength & virtue of this union of the Saints, proceedeth from the unity of their Faith and spirit. For faith is the door, by which we hav entry & access both unto God, and into his Church or assembly, which thereupon is called the multitude of the faithful, or believers; even theshowhold of faith. And as by it we ēter into this society so being entered, we there build up ourselves in our most holy faith; by it we * live, by it we stand, by it we all are the sons of God, the seed of Abraham, & consequently heirs by promise, of the blessed inheritance, and so do enter into his rest. Which faith because it is one as the Lord is one, and is by his holy spirit communicated with all the Saints; it is therefore called the commune faith, from which, the communion of faith, that is of all Christian duties do flow; and especially is seen in our conversing together, for the better performance of them. For as Christ prayed, that they which should believe in him, might all be one, as the Father & He were one, in and with another; so the effect of that his prayer appeareth in the union & communion of the first believers which were of one heart & of one soul, and continued daily with one accord their meetings and fellowships for duties both spiritual & human. Of which happy day the Lord did foretell by his prophets saying, I will give them one heart and one way that they may fear me forever, for the wealth of them and of their children after them; and I will make them one people, in the land, upon the mountains of Israel; & one king shall be king to them all; & they shall be no more two people's, nor divided anymore henceforth into two kingdoms. This fellowship ought all men to labor that they may come unto; and being come, there to abide; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, and to continue in one spirit & in one mind, fighting together through the faith of the Gospel.

5. The causes why God requireth this gathering and knitting together of ourselves, are these. First for the better service of his Majesty, which he most esteemeth when it is done of us with joint consent and agreement, that we with one mind & one mouth, praise God even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and (as the prophet saith) serve him with one shoulder. And for this cause, at the first constitution of the Church of Israel, he commanded that at their solemn feasts they should, all the males, three times in the yere appear before the Lord Jehovah, (besides their usual meetings on the Sabbaths,) which feasts were called holy assemblies or convocations, and had special days for calling and assembling the people, wherein God's word was read & expounded unto them; his name magnified with songs & praises; the people answering Amen, bowing down and worshiping; sacrifices were offered for the whole congregation; feasts were celebrated with relief of the poor; and the people received a blessing, in the name of the Lord. Which open & solemn service, as it was pleasing to the Lord, who there required the service, offerings, & all the holy things of all his people: so the neglect and omission hereof, was a forsaking of him and a procuring of his wrath. Wherefore the godly magistrates, were careful to establish & maintain that public worship, appointing the Priests & Levites for the burnt offerings and peace offerings, to minister and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the Lord; and the faithful used to frequent that place, and those solemnities, that they might praise God in the midst of the congregation, among much people, & there declare with the voice of thanksgiving, and set forth all his wondrous works; & pay their vows unto him, in the presence of all the folk, within the courts of his house, which he had chosen for his rest forever, loved there to dwell, and delighted therein. They used also to call the people unto the mountain, there to offer the sacrifices of righteousness; to stir up, and exhort one another, to bless God in the Assemblies, and exalt him in the congregation of the people. The like public worship, the Lamb solemnizeth unto his Father, while he standeth upon Mount Zion with his 144.

thousand; where the voice of the heavenly congregation, is heard like the sound of many waters, and of a great thunder, and like harpers harping with their harps, & singing a new sōg before the throne. And there Christ's praise is of God, in the great assembly, his vows he performeth before them that fear him, he declareth God's justice and mercy, his truth and his salvation. Whose praise therefore is heard in the Cōgregation of Saints, Israel joying in his maker, and the sons of Zion rejoicing in their king; saying Halelu-jah, salvation and glory & honor & power, unto the Lord our God; Halelu-jah for the Lord God almighty reigneth.

6. An other cause of the joining together of the Saints; is their edification, in the knowledge and fear of God. For although they have his word privately to meditate therein day & night, which also he blesseth unto them; yet in his church or assembly he more plentifully poureth out his blessings, as he promised by Moses, In every place where I shall put the remembrance of my name, I will come unto thee & bless thee. And as his name was in his house and Temple, so there he appointed ministers to rehearse or make mention of the same, to teach Jacob his judgments and Israel his laws. Which Law when he first gav unto them, he said unto Moses, Gather me the people together, & I will cause them to hear my words; and when afterwards it was solemnly repeated, every Sabbath yere; by like commaundment the people were to be gathered together, men, women, children, and strangers; to hear and learn the same. Yea every Sabbath day, the people assembled in their synagogues, throughout all their cities, for the same purpose. And in these last days, it was foretold, how many people should provoke one another to go up to the mountayn and house of God, where he would teach them his ways, and they would walk in his paths; because the law was to go forth of Zion, & the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Wherefore Christ often visited the Temple and synagogues, (as did also his disciples,) to show how he regarded the assemblies of his people, in which he uttered so many gracious words, and wrought so many great miracles. And after that he had gathered a new people to himself, they also usually met together, for the food of God's word, and other holy things, in the churches or assemblies; where Christ had given gifts unto men, in the persons of his officers, for the gathering together of the Saints, & edification of his body. Then the nations walked in the light of Jerusalem, & there the Lord gathered his sheep into their folds, where they might grow and increase; & set up shepherds over thē, which should feed them; he fed them in good pasture, & they lay in a good fold, he brought them to their rest, reduced that which was driven away, bound up that which was broken, and strengthened the weak, by the doctrines of his gospel. There God is very terrible in the mystery of the Saints, whiles by the fire of his spirit, he causeth on earth & in his heavenly temple, lightnings, and Voices, and thunderings, and earthquake, and much hayl. For the words that his wise men there speak, given by him the One pastor, are like go•ds to excite and stir up our dull nature, that being pricked in our harts we may be drawn to repentance; like a fire to devour y^e adversaries; like a two edged sword to execute vengeance; like a •anmer to break the stone; like mighty weapons of war, to cast down bulwarks, and whereby the wise goeth up into the city of the mighty, and casteth down the strength of the confidence thereof. Again, there are uttered y^e words of life, which qui•ken the hearers, and bring thē o• of the graves of syn; the words o• reconciliation, which make peac• between God and the conscience are as flagons of wine, and comfortable apples, to refresh the si• soul; even the words of salvation▪ and of eternal life. These Chris• putteth in the mouths of his ministers; and by the oil of his spirit, causeth the seven lamps of the golden candlestick of his law, to give light continually in his tabernacle. With these waters, he moystneth the garden of his church, and the several roots and brnches of the same; whereupon such as are planted in the Lord; house, do flou•ish in his courts, & still bring forth fruit; their leaf fadeth not, neither doth their fruit fail, because their waters run out of the sanctuary.

7. A third reason of the Saints gathering together, is that they might the better resist the commune adversaries. For there is war continual, between the serpents seed and the church; and they band themselves together, to bese•t the •ents of the Saints and the beloved city. Against that kingdom of darkness, God gathereth and setteth a contrary kingdom, a band of Christian soldiers, or heavenly warriors, the host of the Lord; who standing & fighting together under the banner of his gospel, by the conduct of his Spirit, and Christ their captain; are an help, strength and comfort one to another. These come willingly, at the time of assembling Christ's army in holy beauty; among them ar guides and leaders, the overseers of the Churches, as the chariots & horsemen of Israel; they ar all furnished with the armor of God, having his word for asword, his faith for a shield, his salvation for a helmet upon their heads. These weapons of their warfare, ar mighty through God; and here are more shields & targets, thē hung on David's tower; the trumpets of the Lord do sound an alarm against the enemies, and in their conflicts the people of God do help one another as need requireth, whereby they ar emboldened and comforted among themselves, ar terrible to their foes as an army with banners, and having fought together the good fight of faith, do get the victory over the Dragon and his Angels, by the blood of the Lamb, through many▪ afflictions, & so at last, do triumph in glory.

8. A fourth cause and benefit of this society, is the mutual aid strengthening, and consolation one of another in all other Christiā duties both public & private. For as the several members of a man's body ar serviceable to the whole and each to other; so ar the Saints among themselves, having everyone their measure of faith, their diversity of gifts and graces from God, that what is wanting in one, may be supplied by another. And as the eye cannot say to the hand, nor the head to the feet, I have no need of yow: so cannot the least member in the church of Christ, be refused as unnecessary, but may be beneficial to the greatest. For as yton sharpeneth iron; so doth man sharpen the face of his friend. And hence do arise the mutual exhorting and building up one of another in the faith laboring together unto the truth; admonishing the unruly, comforting the feeble minded, bearing with the weak, considering one another to provoke unto love and good works; rebuking for syn & trespass, confessing of faults one to another, & praying one for another, bearing one another's burden; rejoicing with them that rejoyce, & weeping with them that are in trouble; communicating to the afflictions and distributing to the necessities one of another; visiting them in sickness, mourning & laboring together in prayer for thē; with many other offices of like nature, for the refreshing of soul & body; all which ar found and felt in this holy communion and body, wherein if one member suffer, all suffer with it; & if one be had in honor, all rejoyce with it; so near a conjunctiō doth God's spirit work in the hearts of the faithful, which maketh them to look, not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

9. For these and the like reasons, hath the communion and society of the Church been always praised, sought for, loved and esteemed. For as God though he love his people, and hath all his saints in his hand; yet loveth the gates of Zion, above all the habitations of Jacob: so his people likewise have loved the habitation of his house, & desired this one thing of the Lord, y^t they might dwell in the same all days of their life, to behold the Lord's beauty and to inquire in his temple▪ esteeming a day in his courts better thē a thousand other where; lamenting their lot when they were exiled therfrō; & pouring out their very heart, when they remembered how they had gone with the multitude into God's house, with voice of song, praise, and solemnity; for which now their souls longed, and even faynted in thē. Yea the very ways of Zion lamented, when no man came to the solemn feasts; & Israel mourned, when the Lord had destroyed his congregation, caused the feasts and Sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and forsaken his altar; their heart was heavy, & their eyes dim, because the mountain of Zion was desolate. And so comfortable was the fellowship of God's children, unto the Apostles themselves (though they were the pillars & foundations of the church, & needed this help less then others,) that they often longed to see the brethren, for their comfort, through their mutual faith; and earnestly entreated the help of their prayers, even as they again prayed for them, had great joy & consolation in their love, and holy walking in the truth; yea esteemed them the crown of their rejoicing, their glory & their joy. Even Christ himself in the heaviness of his heart, sought comfort by the prayers of his disciples; to teach us how to esteem the fellowship of the faithful.

10. Of all these, and many moe blessings, are those deprived, that refuse or neglect to unite them selves with Christ in his Church; or do with draw & separate themselves therefrom, to live alone, as in the desert; or to frequent the company of the wicked. They want the benefit and comfort of God's graces in his childrē, they want the help, strengthening, and encouragement in time of trouble; and the labor of such foolish ones do• weary them, because they kno• not to go into the City; they a• exposed to many perils, like wa• dring sheep upon the mountay• ready to be devoured of the w 〈...〉 beasts, and made a prey unto S 〈...〉 tan. If they err, there is none to 〈...〉 duce them into the right way; 〈...〉 they be wounded or broken, the• is none to bind them up; if they 〈◇〉 in misery and want, there is none 〈...〉 give thē so much as husks to •t if they fall, woe unto them, 〈◇〉 there is not a second to lift them 〈...〉 What remaineth then, but seeing Wisdom hath built her house, furnished her table, and invited t 〈...〉 poor and simple unto her fest: th 〈...〉 all repayr thither without excu 〈...〉 or delay, there to eat that whi 〈...〉 is good and let their fowl delig• in fatness; remembering how it is wri 〈...〉 ten, the Lord added to the church fromday today, such as should be saved And if any know not the place, of their repast, or fold of Christ; let them beseech him whō their sowl loveth, to show them where he feedeth, & maketh (his flock) to lie down at noon; least they turn a side to the flocks of his companions, or remain still in dispersion; For behold how good & how pleasant it is, brethren to dwell even together! for there the Lord hath commanded the blessing, life everlasting.

Send thy light & thy truth (ô God;) let them lead me, let thē bring me, to thy holy mountayn• & to thy tabernacles.

Psal. 43. 3.

CHAP. XVII.

How the Saints gather into communiō, & grow up unto a body or church.

The calling of the Saints into communion, we hav seen to cōsist of two branches, 1. A separation from the wicked of the world; 2. and a collection or gathering together of themselves in the faith & love of Christ. Which two things were also implied in the first calling of our father Abraham, when he was willed; 1. to get him out from his country, kindred, and fathers house, (which were idolaters:) 2, and to come to the place which God would show him, (where he & his posterity, might serv & obey the Lord. It remaineth yet further to be spoken, of the covenant and communion, that the Saints enter into, & keep among themselves.

2. This congregation of Saints, when it is at the greatest, is but a little flock and small remnant; being compared with the multitudes of y^e world: but the beginnings hereof, are marvelously weak, small and cōtemptible; like the grain of mustard-seed which is the least of all seeds; and as Israel, which were the fewest of all people's. For God taking them one of a city & two of a tribe, and these the foolish, weak, and vile of the world, the poor, the maimed, the halt & the blind, whose dwelling is by the highwayes and hedges, he brings thē neither by an army, nor strength, but by his own spirit, into his house and kingdom, where though there be but two or three gathered together in his name, he is in the mids of them. These being once borne of God, begotten by the immortal seed of his word, unto the faith of the Gospel; know also that there is a Jerusalem from above, which is the mother of us all; that of Zion it shall be said, Man & man, (that is many men) are borne in her, & the Lord will count when he writeth the people, He was borne there; therefore they seek to enter into this estate and happy communion; they ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come and join to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

3. This covenant which they make together, standeth upon two pillars; 1. to keep their faith in God by Jesus Christ, 2. & to observe his laws in love. In both these are they to build up and help forward one another, saying, all people's will walk everyone in the name of his God, and we will walk in the name of Jehovah our God forever and ever. Herevpon follow their assembling or gathering together for the instruction one of another; their mutual ex hortations to continue in the faith grounded & stablished, & to stand fast therein; their prayers one with and for another, that Christ may dwell in their harts by faith; their rebuking such as teach unwholesome doctrine, that so they may be hayl or sound in the faith; of which if any make shipwreck, they ar to be thrust out of the communion of the Saints, and delivered unto Satan. And for their conversation, they set up the Lord in that day to be their God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his ordinances, and his commandments and his laws, & to hearken unto his voice: & they promise to walk in y^e paths of God as he shall teach them; from whence arise (both publicly and privately) their mutual love & care ech of other, provoking unto love & good works, & walking worthy of their calling whereunto they are called: their admonitions and reproofs one of another when they syn, seeking to restore them with the spirit of meekness; but withdrawing from the disobedient, & putting away such as are wicked from among them.

4. Unto this covenant, ar all that make profession of faith and obedience, to be admitted, without respect of persons; for in Christ Jesus there is no difference of Jew or Gentile, of rich or poor, of bond or free, of male or female, for all are one, and alike redeemed by his blood, whereby he hath confirmed the covenant for the many; and he hath poured out his spirit upon all flesh, upon sons & daughters, upon old and young, upon servants and mayds. And together with themselves, their infants also ar recived, by virtue of God's, promise unto Abraham, which promise by Christ is confirmed unto us, with all the benefits & privileges of the same. Which infants, though they want discretion to perceive the favor of God for the present; yet want they not sanctification, but ar holy, if but one parent believe in Christ, & this through the mighty work of God's spirit, who sanctifieth his from the womb; and by this grace, doth comfort the parents, in that he is both God of them and of their seed; and after, the children also hav their faith confirmed, by knowing that they wer cast upon him from the womb; and he was their God, from their mothers belly.

5. And as the number of believers groweth, so ought they to gather together and we accept into our fellowship, all that gladly receive the word; even such as be weak in faith must we receive, bearing their infirmities after Christ's example, who would not break the bruised reed, nor quēch the smoking week, but nourish it rather by the oil and breath of his spirit, that it might burn bright. And if notorious infamous sinners, repent and believe the Gospel; they may not be repelled, for Christ came to cal, and save such; neither are they to be refused▪ as impure, whō he hath washed and cleansed by his blood, and received to the glory of his father. Which grace of his David did fore shadow, unto whom there gathered all men that were in trouble, & all men that were in debt, and all those that were vexed in mind, & he was their Prince. Also when God converteth the child and not the father, the servant and not the master, the wife and not the husband, the subject & not the magistrate; such as he calleth must come to his church; we also must admit, knowing that Christ hath said, he cameto set variance betwixt parents and children, so that a man's enemies should be they of his own howshold. Yet is not their entrance into the faith and church of God, any discharge of them from their duty and obedience towards their former governors; but let every man (as saith the Apostle) abide in the same vocation wherein he was called. The believing wife, may not forsake her vnbelieving husband; nor the servant his master; and every sowl must▪ be subject to the higher powers, even to every human creature for the Lord's sake. As Christ's kingdom is not of this world, so neither doth it destroy or abolish the policies of the same, but maintain them rather, whiles it teacheth all men to do their duty, and subject themselves, even for conscience sake.

6. Again as no earthly power can compel a man unto this estate of grace, (for no man cometh unto Christ, except the Father draw him; faith is the gift of God not of men, & he addeth to his church such as he will save:) so neither can any creature hinder this good work; but when Christ draweth us, we will run after him; & when he effectually calleth us, we will leave father and friends and all to follow him. And as our gathering together is in his name, so must we defend it by his authority, answering as did the Apostles to thē that blame us, we ought rather to obey God than men.

7. But forasmuch as the Saints are dispersed over all the face of the earth, in several cities & countries; God requireth not y^t they should all go to one place; for that could not stand with civil policy, neither were possible for them to perform. Therefore, albeit whiles the seat of his church was in the little land of Iewrie, he commanded all the men to appear together before him at Jerusalem, thrice every year: yet when all nations were admitted into his covenant, adopted to be Abraham's seed, & the Israel of God; he gathered them together by his Apostles, in several cities where they dwelt, and so established many congregations in one country, as the seven churches in the lesser Asia, the churches of Galatia, of Syria & Silicia, and sundry other mentioned in scripture, do witness; even in Judea were moe churches planted as the Apostle Paul noteth.

8. And God which called the people unto his faith; furnished them also with divers gifts of his spirit, wisdom, and knowledge, & prophesy, & tongues, and many other graces wherewith he adorned the spouse & bride of his beloved son; that by them they might serve him, and help, comfort, and edify one another in their most holy faith. He appointed also that some which for their gifts and conversation were found fit, should have the care and oversight of that congregation where they were set, to watch for their souls, and to feed and rule them with the word of God. These for their gravity ar called Elders; for the charge committed to them, Bishops or Overseers; for the message whereon they are sent, the Angels of the churches; and for the effect of their administration, they are named Savior's, by the doctrine of the Gospel, saving those that hear them. Yet are not these Lord's over God's heritage, but the administers of his graces and blessings among them, and ensamples to the flock; not having dominion over their faith, but helpers of their joy.

9 By the seed of the Word in the mouths of these ministers and the other members of of the church, ar children begotten & multiplied daily, that Ierusalē enlargeth the place of her tents, and they spread out the curtains of her habitatiōs. For she increaseth on the right hand & on the left, until this host of our David become great, like the host of God; & his seed, as the army of heaven that cannot be numbered. By the same word, as by milk and wine, ar the people nourished up unto life eternal; & their covenant w^t God & one with another, ar the two staves, Be wtie & Bands, which Christ the good shepherd hath taken to feed and rule his flock. His covenant with them, is Beauty or Pleasance, for by it he giveth thē knowledge, which is pleasant to their sowl, as is also himself and his ways. By this covenant he cōfirmeth his spirit vpō thē & his words in the mouth of thē & their seed, w^{ch} words are pleasant & as the honey cōb, sweetness to y^r sowl, & health to the bones; which causeth thē to desire that they may dwell in his house all their days, to behold his beauty, and always they say, Let the Bewty of the Lord our God be upon us. His other staff, Bands, conserveth the brotherhood of his people, whereby they ar lincked together in love, laboring to be all of one mind, one suffering with another, loving as brethren, living & growing together as one tree or staff in his hand. This brotherhood the Saints are all exhorted to love, and endeavor to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, being clothed with the bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing & forgiving one another, even as Christ forgave them; and above all these things, having Love, which is the bond of perfectness.

10. Sometimes God bringeth unto his faith and church, the governors & great men of the earth; whose authority and scepters are a great help to the conservation of true religion, and outward peace of his people, by their defense of the just, and punishment of evil-doers. These notwithstanding their high places, yet are to have no haughty harts nor lofty eyes, but behave themselves, and compose their souls, like weyned childrē; learning daily from the ministry and book of God, to fear the Lord & to keep all the words of his law, that their harts be not lifted up above their brethren; They are with them to begin & end the public worship of God; they may not take of the people's inheritance, nor thrust them out of their possession; they are to conteyn as well themselves as their subjects in the obedience of Christ, to be foster fathers and nourses of the church; unto which they have brought their glory and their honor; expecting a better and an eternal glory with all Saints in the kingdom of God. For there is a covenant between them and their subjects that they will be the Lord's people, yea themselves are the foremost to make it, & to order all things in their kingdoms according to God's word. As that good king Josiah in the assembly of all his people, both great and small, first covenanted himself to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments & his testimonies and his statutes, with all his heart and with all his sowl, that he would accomplish the words of the covenant written in God's book: and then caused all that were found in Jerusalem and Benajamin, to stand to the same.

11. But because in times of worldly peace, many will press to enter into the church, for company, favor, or fashion sake; which otherwise would never regard the same, being profane, idolatrous or irreligious, the children of this world: therefore care must be had that no such unclean wicked persons be accepted. For though the gates be open, that the righteous nation which keepeth the faith, may enter in: yet seeing it is said, that the way shall be called holy, & the polluted shall not pass by it; that Jerusalem shall be holy, & no strangers shall go through her, nor a Canaanite be anymore in the house of the Lord of hosts: there must be seen in them, the seed and foundation of religion, before they be received, namely repentance fiō dead works, & faith towards God. For this was the voice, of the crier that proclaimed the kingdom of heaven; which they that obeyed, wer baptized unto remission of sins; the residue were rejected, as a viperous generation: the same thing also Christ made the beginning and groundwork of his kingdom, saying Repent, and believe the Gospel. Until therefore, such willingly receive and confess the truth, renouncing their former evil ways; promising submissiō, meekness, & obedience in the faith of the Gospel: until the wolf have, learned to dwell in peace with the lamb, the leopard to lie with the kidd, the bear to feed with the kow, and the Lion to eat straw like the bullock: we may not admit them into communiō with us, (for what part hath the believer with the vnbeleever?) but refuse their proffered and pretended service, as the fathers of Israel answered the like intruders, It is not for you & for us (jointly,) to build an house unto our God, but we ourselves together will build it, unto the Lord God of Israel. And as there were porters in the fowr winds or quarters of God's ancient house; evē porters set, that none that was unclean in anything, should enter in; and diligent watch and ward was kept at the gates of Jerusalem, for fear of enemies: so in this new and Christian Jerusalem, though the gates thereof be never shut, yet is there such watch to be kept, that no no unclean thing may enter into it, neither whatsoever worketh abominatiō or lies, but they w^{ch} a• written in the Lambs book of life.

12. The Saints being thus gathered, as a people that shall dwe• by themselves, and not be reckne• among the nations, (for that the ar chosen out of the world, & separated from the same;) and being built as a city compact together in itself, and growing up in Christ the chief corner stone unto an holy Temple in the Lord: are made the habitation of God by the spirit, and do dwell alone in safety, in a land of wheat and wine, also their heavens do drop the dew. For the graces of God, by his word and spirit, are as a river of water of life clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the lamb, whose streams make glad this city of God, and moisten the trees planted in this gardein. Yea God himself dwelleth here, & is in the middes of it, therefore it shall not be moved. As the good husbandman, he purgeth every fruitful branch in this vine, that it may bring forth more fruit; for this his vineyard is before himself, not let out to others; he keepeth it & watereth it every moment; least any assayl it, he keepeth it night & day, from injury of enemies, making the bars of the gates strong, and in itself he setteth peace, and this not in one, but in all the churches of the Saints, amidst whom he walketh, visiting and knowing their works and all their ways. which churches though they be many in number, yet are they one in unity. To them all, he hath given one faith order and canon, to be kept forever unto the worlds end▪ & to every of them a like power and grace. And as he guided his ancient Israel the twelv tribes, by day in the pillar of a cloud, & by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light, that they might go both by day & night: so hath he created (according to his promise,) upon every place of mount Zion, the church under the Gospel,) & upon the assemblies thereof, a cloud & smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night, that all Christiā churches, have frō him their directiō & protectiō; whiles in the ministry of his word & spirit, he speaks unto thē as in y^e cloudy pillar; & is their shelter against the tēpest, their shadow against the heat. For which grace, praise ye God in the Assemblies; even the Lord, ye that are of the fountain of Israel.

13. Thus every Church is like mount Zion, fair in situation, the joy of the whole earth, the city of the great king, in y^e palaces whereof God is known for a refuge, w^{ch} he will stablish forever, and where his people wait for his mercy in the mids of his temple. And as the house of Jacob, walketh in the light of the Lord, which shineth in the face of Christ, in which light they believe, that they may be the children of the light: so also they, even all nations and people which are saved, walk in the light of the church, which it hath fi ō the Lord who is her light everlasting, her sun & shield, in whose light she seeth light. This is y^r city of truth, the mount of holiness, the secret and congregatiō of the righteous; which looketh forth as the Morning, fair as the Moon, pure as the Sun; terrible as an army with banners. It is the house of the living God, the gate of heaven, the pillar & ground of truth; all the limits thereof roūd about, ar most holy; the Lord hath stablished it, & y^e poor of his people will shroud themselves in it, the glory and honor of the nations shall be brought unto it, & upon all the glory shall be a defense; it shall be a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that cannot be removed, a kingdom that cannot be shakē, and the nation or kingdom that will not serve it, shall perish: but the people that dwell therein, shall have their iniquity forgiven, and from the day that this city is built, the name thereof is, THE LORD IS THERE.

The Lord bless thee, ô habitation of 〈...〉, holy mountain.

Ier. 31. 23.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the communion that the Saints in all Churches have in things spiritual.

NOW as the faithful are thus cōpact, like living and precious stones, in one holy Temple, and members of one body; so havethy fellowship together in all Christian offices spiritual and human, & ech with other do willingly communicate the manifold graces of God. Their spiritual communion may be considered in three things: First in all duties from themselves towards God; as be praises, thanksgivings, prayers supplications &c. which they pour out one with & for another. Secondly in all graces given them of God, as are the words of his covenant, the comforts and seals of the same, opened and applied for the helping forward and assurance of their salvation. Thirdly in all duties among themselves, one towards another, as counsels, deliberations, exhortations, consolations, admonitions, rebukes, censures, and such like: all which for the honor of God and their mutual good, they carefully together do keep & execute.

2. Their communion in the Worship of God, is when at time and place appointed, they all come together, to serve, confess, and praise the Lord, and cal upon his name. For which as Israel of old had their assemblies, where the ministers of God publicly and solemnly uttered his praises, discoursing of all his wonderful works, and giving unto him the glory of his name; made also their requests unto God for their wants, unto all which, all the people said Amen, and praised the Lord: so also in the Apostles days, God's people had still their places of prayer, for which holy exercise, the Christians assembled, & in which they continued with one accord, both men & women. Where the ministers of Christ, gav themselves unto this business, that minding the public state of the church, they might for & with the same, make requests & give thanks, in y^e ears & understanding of y^e people w^{ch} thereunto answered Amen. These now ar not y^e prayers or praises-of him alone y^t speaketh, but of y^e whole assēblie, w^{ch} attēd wth their ears, assēt with their harts, & seal w^t their lips, that part of public administratiō; cōfirming it also by signs and gestures, beseeming such an action. In these, (whither ordinary, or extraordinary with fasting and humiliatiō of sowl, vpō special occasions,) there is a cōmuniō & harmony among the Saints, that with one mind & one mouth do praise God, and their prayer cometh up unto heaven to his holy habitatiō And as the public assemblies of the whole church; so the more private meetings in families, or of other friends for special causes, is both comfortable to themselves, and acceptable to the Lord: for he had promised that where there is a sy•phonie or agreemēt, but of two o• his together in earth, to desire anything, it shall be given them; so much he respecteth the fellowship & vn•nimitie of his people, and the• gathering together in his name•

3. But when through distance of place, or other just occasion, they cannot or do not come together• as also in their private prayers, which they pour out before the Lord, either some few together, o• ech one apart; the faithful hav yet spiritual communion and benefit by praying one for another; while they remember and make mention of their brethren unto God, rejoicing and giving thanks for his blessings upon thē, desiring things that may benefit & comfort them, praying for deliverance from bāds or other afflictions, for strength & stability in the truth, for remission of sins, or for other graces as the necessities of the Saints do require, for all whō we are exhorted to pray, with all manner prayer and supplication in the spirit, and for special persons, to make more earnest suit, to strive or wrestle together with them, by prayers to God for them. This fellowship is comfortable, to all that know the use of prayer; & how much it prevaileth with God if it be fervēt. Wherefore the Apostles did not only perform this duty for others in their absence, but themselves so earnestly desired it at the hands of all, and trusted for help by it. Also the Saints that were before thē knew well, and nourished this communion, whiles they requested their brethren to pray unto God for thē especially the prophets, whose petitions were exceeding beneficial, not only to the church & mem•bers thereof, whom they sometime saved from death by this means; but also for strangers; so effectual with the Lord is the prayer of the Saints, and the odour thereof, as sweet incense before him: and a token it was of his heavy indignation, when he for bad his prophets to pray for the people.

4. Concerning the word of God and our fellowship in the same, we hav before seē how God bestowed it specially upon his own people, as a testimony of his grace towards them, though also in a general favor he communicateth it with the whole world. Now the saints whose peculiar right & inheritance it is, must be careful to use it as a commune blessing, everyone in himself, and all of them with and for one another both privately and publicly. Privately to read & speak of y^e same, unto their families & neighbors, continually-rehersing or whe•ting y^e words of God, vpō & unto their children, talking of them when they are in the house, and as they walk by the way, when they lie down, and when they rise up; that so mē may learn & know the scriptures from their childhood, & by them be made wise unto salvation, through the faith w^{ch} is in Christ Jesus. And that all Christians, may by this means be able, to exhort & edify one another, in the knowledge & faith of God; may hav their speech gracious always, & powdred with sal•; may discern truth frō error, whiles by serching the scripture, as did the men of Berea, they see whither the things taught them be so. And this was foretold to be a special part of God's covenant with his people, that his words which he hath put in their mouth, shall no• depart out of their mouth, nor on of the mouth of their seed, nor out of the mouth of their seeds seed, frō henceforth even forever.

5. But in the Assemblies of the Saints, the light of this grace shineth more clearly; for in thē hav the scriptures bē read and preached of old every Sabbath day; there all men hav not only liberty, but ar exhorted to desire that they may prophesy; that is, speak unto the church, to edifying, to exhortation, and to comfort: which is therefore to be coveted rather then other spiritual gifts, because it tēdeath both to the building up of the brethren, and conversion of the unbelievers, and glory of God thereby. Al therefore that hav received this gift, may in seemlines and order use and manifest it, for the profit of the whole & every member; being careful that it be done according to the proportion of faith, & when any speak, that it be as the words of God. And although a woman, in regard of her sex, may not speak or teach in the church: yet with other women, and in her private family, she openeth her mouth in wisdom, & the doctrine of grace is in her tongue. So Marie the prophetesse, was guid to the women of Israel, in their songs of thanksgiving: so Priscilla at home, helped to expound the way of God more perfectly to learned Apollos; and was (together with other women) acknowledged of the Apostle Paul, to be one of his fellowhelpers in Christ Jesus. And the Lord both in those days, and before, had furnished sundry holy women with the gift of prophesy, as he promised also by his servant Joel: to teach, that his graces are given unto all as he seeth good to bestow them; though there is a difference between the extraordinary gift of prophesy, givē but unto few, & the ordinary prophesy or expositiō of scripture, w^{ch} is commune wth many.

6. Above all other, the Officers given of Christ, for the work of the ministry, the Overseers of the churches, are to study and labor in the word and doctrine, to feed the flocks that depend upon them, to show them the good and right way, to build up the body of Christ, to divide the word aright, to speak it faithfully, to keep nothing back, either through negligence fear or flattery, but to show them the whole counsel of God, & teach thē all the statutes which the Lord hath commanded, not keeping back a word. These watch for their people's souls, as they that shall give accounts; and necessity is laid vpō them, therefore woe unto thē, if they preach not the Gospel. These must hav care both of strong and weak, of sheep and lambs; to feed with strong meat or with milk, as their flock hath need, & is capable. Vpō these the charge lieth, to dress the lamps of God's law, from evening to morning, that they may always burn in the Tabernacle of the congregation; to give to the how should, their portion of meat in season; and to communicate this heavenly Manna with all the Israel of God, that there may be an equality, as it is written, he that gathered much had nothing over, & he that gathered little had no lack.

7. And together with the words of God's eternal covenant, these also dispense the s^{als} of the same; by which the communion of the Saints is more illustrated & confirmed. For by baptism which is one, we all are made one in Christ Jesus. And as our fathers were ⟨◇⟩ baptized unto Moses, in the cloud & in y^e sea; so now under Christ▪ by one Spirit, we all are baptized into one body, whither we be Jews or Greeks, bond or free. Neither can any man forbid water from those which hav received the holy Ghost and faith; it is the commune symbol and pledge of our salvatiō, & (like circumcision,) the seal of our righteousness by faith, even the seal of God's covenant to us & to our seed. The Supper also of our Lord, is to be distributed to all the Saints that can examine themselves, & discern his body therein by faith; and is another seal, as of our union with Christ, whose flesh we eat, and drink his blood; so of our uniting together in his faith. For we (saith the Apostle) that are many, are one bread & one body, because we all are partakers of one bread. Therefore must we come together for this communion, and tarry one for another, that as brethren we may eat and drink and rejoice together before the Lord; which he that refuseth, or neglecteth; is worthy to be rooted out from amongst his people.

8. As the Saints have all a right & interest in the covenant of God, & seals of the same, wherein they have and hold communion together: so have and do they also, in all other Christian spiritual duties, public or private. For all the actions of the Church, being but a practice and performance of God's Law; as the members have their portion in the general, so have they also in the particulars: ech one according to his place, calling, and measure of grace, given him from Christ the head. In the primitive church established by Moses, when public actions were to be performed, the whole congregation was assembled▪ as about the making of the Tabernacle, and all the furniture for the service of God; at the ordination and authorizing of the Priests and Levites; at the first making and solemnizing of the covenant, at the renewing of the same; and at the repetitiō of all the Laws & ordinances of the Lord. Unto all & every of the Israelites, was cōm•nded the care and observation of all God's statutes; that neither all nor any of them, man nor woman, nor family, nor tribe, should forsake the Lord, nor suffer among thē any root to bring forth gall and wormwood; but plainly rebuke their neighbor when he sinned in private, or testify against him in public if they could, and there were need; to bewray & execute judgment upon open & notorious malefactors; even the leprous and unclean, though the trial of them apperteyned to the Priests, yet all the children of Israel were to look that such were removed out of the host; yea the care of the Priests purity in their administration, apperteyned to all the people. And long after, both in counsels, and in the redressing of public evils & trespasses, all Israel indifferently, had their hand and presence; as the scripture showeth. Ezra. 10. 1. 9. 12. &c.

9. The churches in the Apostles days had also the like right & liberty▪ for the multitudes of believers. wer both beholders & acto• in the commune affairs; as at the choice & ordinatiō of church-officers; at the deciding of questions & controversies; at the excommunication or casting out of impeniten• sinners; at the choice & appointment of men, to carry the grace or benevolence of the Saints, • their needy brethren; at the receving and reading of the Apostles Letters; and generally, in the public communion and fellowship of the Apostles, & one of another. They were also willed to exhort, • admonish ech other; even the Officers of the churches; to ma• diligently, and avoid, the causer• of division and offenses; & to loo• that † no root of bitterness sprung 〈◇〉 and troubled thē, least thereby many should be defiled.

10. These & the like privileges in the faith and practice of the Gospel ar permitted to all Saints in all churches; which they must use in all sobriety, order, and peace: not presuming above their calling, place, or measure of understanding; nor abusing their liberty to the trouble or annoyance of their brethren. And therefore Elders or Governors ar set to rule the people, and together with the other Officers to weild the churches affairs. By which means confusion is avoided, & order observed in the Assemblies; as was in the primitive churches, where the Overseers and public Ministers, propounded, discussed, & carried matters in seemlines and peace. These guides ar to be heard, revered, and submitted unto in the Lord; they attend to the public service of the church, and are as the hand, mouth, & eyes of the same; by such God of old signified his will to the people; & 〈2 pages missing〉 for the obtaining of that promised seed that should bruise the Serpēt's head, and bring blessing upon all families of the earth. And until that seed, (which was Christ,) came; our Fathers generally embraced that kind of life, & thought it a dishonor to die childless: a• since that time, it hath still been kept in, and sanctified unto the church, to such as saw good, or had need so to live; both for the avoiding of syn, and for other help and comfort which that estate affordeth. But they which have from God, the gift to conteyn their vessels in holiness and honor without marriage, and which addicting themselves to the service of Christ, find it best for avoiding the burdens & cares of this life, to keep themselves single, in virginity or widowhood; are counseled by Christ and his Apostle so to rest. Yet if any marry they syn not; only they must so •ive as if they were not married, & so use all other worldly things, as if they used them not, because the fashion of this world passeth away. And in their marrying, they must have care not to match themselves in an unequal yoke with unbelievers, (for that hath always been reprov'd,) but only in the Lord: though if they be married to unbelievers before they are called to the faith, they must not then depart, or put away.

3. The faithful man & woman thus fastened in wedlock, are heirs together of the grace of life; and so ought to live in peace and love, the wife being subject to her husbād (whose glory she is) as unto the Lord. Their fellowship as it is in spiritual duties, so also in human; such as be living & cōversing together; educatiō of children, governmēt offervants, & ordering of y family; joint labor & diligence for their livelihood; and all other offices, whereby their mutual love, help, and comfort may be maintained, in this honorable state of life, which to forbid any Christian, ⟨◇⟩ a doctrine of Devils; and which• a shadow of that mystical & heavenly communion between Christ & his church, whiles the man loveth & cherisheth his wife as his own body, the womā again loveth, feareth, & obeyeth her husband. This society endureth until death and cannot be dissolved except for adultery, for which trespass if the magistrate inflict not death, according to God's law; y^e injured person may lawfully divorce and put away the offender.

4. The next in the family, a• children; which as they are the inheritance and wages of the Lord, so must they be brought up & nour•ured in his fear; for they are his, & holy frō the womb. And because foolishness is bound in the harts of children, therefore, the parents ar to govern & correct, but without provoking them to wrath, least they be discouraged. For them are parents also to store up, & provide for their maintenance, marriage, and other necessities, what in them •ieth; the children again, honoring and obeying their fathers and mothers in the Lord; & recompensing them, (if they can & there be need,) in their old age & poverty. And they that shall smite, curse, or blaspheme their parents, o stubbornly refuse to obey them; are for such vnnaturalnes, to die the death.

5 Servants ar the last in the family, inferior unto children both in durāce and fidelity; yet as their fellowship may be in the faith, for which their masters should regard them above servants, even brethren beloved: so in civil society they are notwithstanding to be in subjection to their masters, faithful and pleasing them in all things. Of these, there be two sorts, 1. Free or hired servants; 2. and Bōdmen or Slaves. Of the first sort wer• the poor

Israelites, which sold or hired out themselves for necessity to their brethren, or were chaffed by their creditors. These were to be well entreated like brethren, not overruled with cruelty; they were to be dismissed in the seventh, or at furthest in the fiftith year called the Jubilee. And when they went out, they were to be liberally rewarded with their masters goods. Of the latter sort were the heathens, either bought with price, or conquered by battle; which remained servants always, themselves and their seed after thē. Servitude, especially bondage, is a judgment of God upon the world for syn; inflicted upon Chams posterity as a curse; yet is the curse by Christ taken away, in whom the bond & the free are one. And this was the case of many strangers in Israel, as of the Gibeonites the offspring of Canaā, upon whom their fathers curse for outward slavery was inflicted, w^{ch} they cheerfully vnderwent, and had God's favor and blessing vpon their souls; they serving him, and he continewing thē, (though Saul sought to root them out,) & punishing all Israel for their injury. The like was also to be seen in others of that progeny, whom Solomon subdued under servile tribute, & whose children remained among the Israelites after the captivity of Babylon, (as did also the Nethinims of Gibeon,) and were named the sons of Solomon's servants. When such bondmen are brought to the faith of the Gospel, their civil servitude is not thereby at an end, no not though they have believing masters; but they are still to give honor, and do service, even heartily as to the Lord and not to men; ⟨◇⟩ they serve the Lord Christ in that estate, and are his freemen; therefore they should not care for this yoke, yet if they may be free, they should use it rather. The masters, are to do unto their servants that which is just and equal, knowing that they also have a master in heaven: they may chasten thē but not oppress them, nor contemn their judgment when they cōtend with thē. Thus servants notwithstanding their freedom in the faith, are to be in subjection, and humble themselves under the hand of their governors; they are to obey in labor and attendance, in service at home or abroad, in peace or in war; and both master and servant are to keep communion together in their holy faith, (wherein is no respect of persons,) without oppression, fawd, murmuring, or debate; til they end their days in peace, and come to the place appointed for all the living; where small & great do lodge together, and the servant free from his master.

6. This much of families, which being well ordered, and conjoined in the faith of Christ, are as little churches, so called by the Apostle; and ought to have care, whatsoever be done in others, that God's true worship be continewed in them. The second sort of human society, is in Policies or Commune weals; w^{ch} may be diversely cōstituted, lesser or greater, & under sūdry sorts of governmēt. As, many families cōpact together in one tribe; many tribes in one nation or Kingdom; many kingdoms in one Empire; & these managed by one or by many; by Princes, S[•]natouis, Judges, Kings or Kaesa's, as God shall dispose, & the public states see best. For all powers are of God, whatsoever be their names, titles •dignities or forms of regiment; and when or howsoever they be altered at the discretion of man, (in respect whereof they are called •mancreations• or ordinances,) they are to be submitted unto for the Lord's sake. And this though they be unbelievers; how much more if they also believe, & have brought their glory to the Church of Christ, and have their portion in the holy land.

7. These magistrats if they be freely chosen of the church, must be of their brethren, men of wisdom and good conscience, who must judge all causes aright, & govern the people in justice, and in the fear of God: whom the Commons are to honor, submit unto, and reverence, in deed, word, and gesture, as to the Lord; for the word of God is committed unto them, and they therefore are called God's. This subjection is due unto all, whither unto the King as to the superior, or unto the Governors, as they that are sent of him. It must be both openly & secretly, even of conscience, & not for fear of wrath only. The communion of the faith, is not a cause, why either princes should forsake their place, titles, or dignities; or the people shake off their subjection. For seeing Magistracy is still God's ordinance; none are meet to execute it, to have his word and sword committed to them, to carry his titles, & to judge in his congregation, then his own servants furnished with his spirit. And seeing it is still his ministry for the good of his people, y^e punishment of malefactors, & praise of weldoers; none can better perform this duty, & be nursing fathers & mothers of Christ's church, then Christians. Kings are not to cast away, but bring their glory & honor to Jerusalem, (as the gentiles do their riches,) & themselves to minister thereunto.

8. In which ministration, they both maintain and conserve the true religion of God according to his word, & reform things amiss, in themselves and their subjects, (as is before touched:) and also maintain civil peace, by executing mercy and judgment, justifying & delivering the poor and needy, and beating down the oppressor. Such magistrates are eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, fathers to the poor; whose cause when they know not, they seek out diligently; breaking the jaws of the unrighteous man, & plucking the prey out of his teeth. And as their sword preserveth peace at home, so it resisteth injuries from abroad; that they are not only ornaments of common weals, but their safety and strength under God; and may well be called, (as the Prophets name them,) the Shields of the world. For which cause, all Christians as they may (by Paul's example) be partakers of the benefit of their laws politick; so do they owe homage, service, and subjection unto them, should allow them maintenance, pay them tributes, and other like duties; in recompense of their cares, labors, and employments: that so mutual peace and concord in the communion of the Saints, may all manner ways be conserved.

9. There remaineth yet another sort of civil duties among the Saints, general unto all, married or unmarried, bond or free, magistrate or subject; which are, love, mercy, relief, kindness, courtesy, and many other the like sociable actions, at all times to be performed, of all persons as there is occasion, and according to their power and place. For Christians are to have care of those that labor among them, as over them in the Lord, and admonish them; that they have them in singular love for their works sake, & let them reap their carnal things, which sow unto them spiritual. For God w^{ch} willed Israel to beware that they forsake not the Levite, as long as they lived upon the earth, because he had neither part nor inheritance with them, but was busied in teaching them the law, & other ministerial actions, for which the Lord himself would be his inheritance: hath also ordained, that they which preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel. And seeing for the service of Christ in that warfare, they entangle not themselves with the affairs of life, because they would please him that hath chosen them to be soldiers: they should have their wants supplied by the church, that they be not forced to war at their own cost; but may partake of the milk of the flock which they feed, & be made partakers of all their goods; which will not only be an encouragement to them in their ministry, but also turn to the great good of such as relieve them, as it is written, yeshall give unto the Priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest upon thy house. And together with them, the poor, the strangers, the fatherless, and the widows, (as was the manner in Israel,) are also to be relieved; to them we must open the hand and lend sufficient for their need, and that without grief of heart, and evē freely, looking for nothing again, but expecting a blessing & reward from God▪ Pilgrims and strangers are to be harboured; our brethren in bo•• to be remembered, as though we were bound with them; the naked to be clothed; the hungry sowl filled; the sick and distressed, to be visited, tended, and comforted; and all other good works, which are to be done unto all men, especially to them which are of the howshold of faith. For these works of mercy, are better then sacrifices; they are odors that smell sweet, a sacrifice acceptable and pleasant to God, who can make all grace to abound towards us, that we always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work, to an everlasting memory of our justice, the prayers of the Saints for us, with praise and thanks unto God for his unspeakable gifts. These human duties, are so united unto true religion, as God of old commanded them on his Sabbaths and solemn feasts; Christ hath ordained Deacons in his Church, and other Helpers for this ministration; besides the general care of all the faithful; and on every first day of the week, (which were days of the churches assēblies,) such care & provisiō for the poor was made. yea when occasion so required, the Christians sold their possessions & goods, and parted them to all men as everyone had need; which work the Apostles themselves a while looked unto. Good therefore and comfortable is it for all the Saints that have this worlds good, to do good and to distribute, because with such sacrifices God is well pleased; that they be rich in good works, and ready to communicate; that with the godly Tyrians, their occupying and their gain may be holy unto the Lord; whiles they hoard it not up, nor keep it in store, but let it be for them that dwell before the Lord, for food & clothing: by this means laying up in store for themselves, a good foundation against the time to come, that they may obtain eternal life.

10. Concerning other Christiā offices special regard must be had in all our actions of reverence & lov; for towards superiors, & the aged, men must show all honor in giving them their titles of dignity, when they speak or write unto them; rising up; and bowing down before them for honor sake; they may not rebuke, but exhort them as fathers, they are to give them the upper places, and suffer them first to speak in causes; And they again ar kindly to entreat the younger sort as children and as brethren; yet as they may deserv, sharply to rebuke also. Amongst all, there should be, in behavior, seemlines & courtesy; in giving honor, to go one before another; saluting, kissing, and embracing of friends, as there is occasion. In words, softnes, meekness and gentleness towards all, without bitterness or wrath, clamorous or evil speaking: even then giving good words, & blessing, when we ar reproached. In actions; dealing friendly, simply, faithfully; neither by force oppressing, nor by fraud deceiving our brethren in anything; ready to give, lend, or pleasure them any way; and unto every honest action easy to be entreated; rejoicing with them for their joy, & mourning for their sorrow. Nourishing good will by affability, sociableness, lowly carriage, love-feasts, and rejoicing together; that the bond of peace may by all good and lawful means be preserved amongst us during life; and when we are parted by death, the living to carry and accompany the dead unto the grave.

11. In this manner men carrying themselves, towards God whom they serv with reverence and with fear, and adore in spirit and truth; also to their neighbors, with whō they ar coupled in peace and amity: the blessings of the Lord, as the rayn & showers from heaven, ar poured upon them; his own tabernacle and gracious presence, and the joyful showt of a king is among them; and he will glorify the place of his feet. Against all foreign enemies he will defend them, making the bars of their gates strong; salvation will he set for walls & bulwarks, even himself, will be a wall of fire round about them; that they shall dwell in the tabernacle of peace in sure dwellings, and in safe resting places: He will cloth them with garments of salvation, will cover them with the robe of righteousness; & adorn them with his graces, as a bride garnisheth herself with her jewels. Here will he make unto all people, a fest of fat things and full of marrow, a feast of wines fined and purified; feeding them with the fat of wheat, and filling them with honey out of the rock. Zion shall be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diademe in the hand of her God; and as a bridegroom is glad of the bride, so will he rejoyce over her; and she again shall joy in him, & praise his name, because he hath exalted the horn of his people, which is a praise for all his Saints, even for the sons of Israel, a people near unto him.

Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: let them prosper that love thee.

Psal. 122. 6.

CHAPT. XX.

How the communion and peace of the Saints, is hindered by enemies without.

ALTHOUGH the Church hath received such grace and glory, from the Lord God her Sun and shield, that she may well be an astonishment to the kings of the earth, and wonder of the world; as having the Sun for her clothing, the moon for her footstool, and the twelve stars for a crown upon her head, whiles by faith and holiness she hath put on Christ, the Sun of righteousness that is risen unto her, as she hath learned him of his Apostles; and is herby advanced to heavenly dignity, that even her conversation is in heaven, so as she loveth no more this world, of which she herself is not, and the fashion whereof passeth away: yet forasmuch as she hath both in her own body, pains of childbirth, whiles she is in travail to bring forth Christ, which by the preaching of the Gospel is formed in her; and without herself, Satan (for his fierceness a dragon) persecuting her in wrath, & warring with the remnant of her seed, gathering his soldiers which are as the sand of the sea, to compass about the tents of the Saints, the beloved city; it shall be therefore good, that we take a view of these troubles and assaults, learn of God the end and use of them, and how we may either escape or overcome them, least we be offended & our faith fail.

2. That old crooked serpēt, the enemy of man's salvatiō, perceiving the uniting & communion of the Saints, to be a great help & furtherāce of their happiness; a praise to their

God, a daunting to the world, & a comfort to themselves: doth therefore bend his utmost might and malice against this brotherhood, that he may dissolve the same. He stirreth up the wicked multitudes, like the raging waves of the sea, that some out mire & dirt, to bely and blaspheme the truth and witnesses of Christ, accusing them of noveltie, heresy, sedition, treason, and rebellion. He further kindleth this fire, by his false Prophets, that cease not to inveigh against, and caluminate this little flock; and by their abused wit and learning, to prove & persuade that they are as bad or worse then they be reported of, both for their faith towards God, and loyalty to the princes of the earth. which princes also, for like malice in themselves, or for that they fear the loss or impeachment of their honor and dignities; or because they loath the bonds and yoke of the gospel; or for to gratify their people and subjects; are ready to turn the dint of their sword, (wherewith they should conserv the truth and peace of Christian religion,) against the Saints, and especially their cōmuniō & assemblies; which seem most dangerous, and are indeed terrible to the world, as an army with banners.

3. Herevpō they think to work wisely, if any way they can hinder the propagation and increase of the church; whither by privy oppressiō, or open persecution: though the wisdom of God hath said, Sure• it is not good to condemn the just; 〈ϕ〉 that princes should smite for equity. Especially the men-children, the teachers, guides, and principal of Christ's flock, are most maligned, & exposed to their tyranny: though sōtime neither women nor infants, can be exempted from their rage and cruelty. For which, these civil polities, with the heads and governors of thē, unto whom erewhile it was said ye ar God's & ye all are children of the most high; ar now become more base then any men; and are called in holy scripture, Lions, Wolves, bears, Libbards, wild-bores, and foxes, even pourtrahed out by mōstrous, savage, and deformed bestes; for such their barbarous havoc, and misusage of the Saints.

4. For loe, in their malignant harts, they fret against the people of God, and against the holy covenant; with their mouths they speak evil, even marvelous and presumptuous things, blaspheming God's name and tabernacle, & them that dwell in heaven; with their hands and horns they smite and push the poor flock of Christ, spoiling them of their goods, banishing them out of their dominions, casting them into prisons and dungeons, feeding thē with bread of adversity and water of afflictiō; devising all cruel and exquisite torments, to make their death miserable, racking, stoning, hanging, hewing in pieces, burning in fire, casting to wild beasts, and many moe horrible tortures; as the lambs of Christ have felt in all ages; whiles children have been brought from the womb to their martirdom; & women with child, ripped up in their unnatural cruelty.

5. By this means, the communion of the Saints is oft times dissolved and scattered; their shepherds and watchmen apprehended and killed; the whole flock pursued, as sheep appointed to the slaughter. Some for fear deny and forsake the faith, and are compelled to blaspheme. Some by flattery are caused to syn, and wickedly break the holy covenant, and to be the betrayers of their brethren. Such as escape these evils, sometime wander up and down in sheep's skins and goat-skins, destitute, afflicted, and tormented, in deserts and mountains, in dens, and caves of the earth. Thus waters of a full cup ar wrung out unto them; and now the ways of Zion lament, because no man cometh to the solemn feasts; for the daily sacrifice (whereby they were wont publicly to worship God,) is taken away, and abominable desolation put in the place. The sanctuary & synagogues of God are burned; Jerusalem broken up, made a ruinous heap, the stones thereof laid in dust, and the dead bodies of the Saints, cast to the fowls & bestes of the earth. Then the faithful mourn, because God hath destroyed his congregation, caused the sabbaths to be forgottē, forsaken his sanctuary, and given into the enemies hand the walls of her palaces: their eyes fail with tears, their bowels swel, their liver is poured upon the earth; & they cry out with the Prophet, O Lord God, spare we beseech thee: who shall raise up Jacob, for he is small.

6. Thus God who hath his fire in Siō, & furnace in Ierusalē, melteth his metal, trieth & fineth his people as silver, & purifieth thē as gold, by the spirit of judgment and the spirit of burning; draweth them to repentance, by chastening them for their sins, and making judgment to begin at his own house; cōsuming the dross, & making known them, that ar approved▪ that the trial of their faith being much more precious thē gold that perisheth, (though it be tried with fire,) may be found unto praise & honor & glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ. For notwithstanding all the rage of the persecutors, God will preserv to himself a little flock, unto whom he will be a little Sanctuary, in all places where they ar dispersed: who in this their desolation, yet pray with their faces towards Jerusalem; do convene and meet together secretly for fear of their foes, and cease not to perform all holy duties unto God and one to another, to the utmost of their power; and in all their afflictions ar more then conquerors through him that loved them. For they account the sufferings of this present time, not worthy of the glory which shall be shown unto them; they consider Christ their head, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, and despised the shame, and is set at the right hand of the throne of God; who when he was both in name & power a Lion, appeared as a Lamb killed; yet behold he is alive for evermore, Amen; and hath the keys of hell and of death. And he it is, that raiseth up his children fiō death; he will prophesy, and their dispersed bones shall come together, sinews and flesh shall grow upon them, breath shall enter into thē, & they stand vpō their feet an exceeding great army. For in their tribulations, they have but washed their garments white in his blood; and this is all the fruit, the taking away of their syn; and the more the adversaries vex them, thinking to root them out, the more they multiply & grow: by patient suffering, they triumph; and by dying daily, they attayn to life eternal. And God who hath chastened thē with rods for their good, will turn his hand vpō their enemies, & scourge thē with scoriōs; they shall wring out and drink the dregs of this cup of wrath; he that made them will not have compassion of them, and he that formed them will have no mercy on them; the beasts shall be destroyed and given to the burning fire, & the righteous shall have dominion over them in the morning. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it.

The Lord preserveth the souls of his Saints, he will deliver them from the hand of the wicked.

CHAPT. XXI.

How the peace and communion of the Church, is disturbed by troubles, & sins within itself.

BVt it is a small thing for Satan thus to molest the Saints with troubles from abroad; for he hath means and instruments many in the church itself, to work the woe, yea often the ruin of the same; & he most delighteth to kindle contentions among brethren, knowing that such things are most offensive unto God, heavy to his people, & give to the enemy occasion of reproach. The means are two, that he chiefly useth hereunto; 1. the infirmities of the Saints, who though they would do good, yet through syn that dwelleth in thē, oft times do the evil which they hate; 2. & the iniquities of false brethren and hypocrites; who always are corrupted in themselves, and seek to bring corruptiō into the whole body of the church.

2. For whē the faithful through commune •iaylty, defyle their precious souls and bodies, through the remaynders of •yn; both the enemies without take occasiō to blaspheme; and the brethren within to stumble & contend: as Moses was murmured against by his own sister and brother, because he had married an Ethiopian wife. And God himself is often angry with the whole church, and punisheth many, for the fault of a few; as whē David sinned in numbering the people, God in displeasure plagued Israel, that of them there died seventy thousand men. Again, the home-bred wars and dessentions, are heavier to the brethren's harts, then all foreign troubles, & many weak ones are offended, no less then was Rebekah, who feeling the childrē to strive in her body, made question of her conception, and said, If it be so, why am I thus? But above all, the hypocrites in heart, do increase wrath, & oftentimes molest the church, of which they ar not, though they be in the same, (like the Apes & peacocks in Solomōs ships;) being in deed the serpents seed, and apperteyning to another kingdom then Christ's; yet are thrust among the Saints through Satan's malice, for to annoy them; God also permitting this for the trial of his elect. By these means, the little bark of Christ's church, hathever been tossed as with winds and tempests; and is like ever to be, so l•g as it is on the seas of this world: that none may look for Angelical perfection, or absolute peace upon the earth.

3. The Saints ar subject, (if they be not wary, & hav their wits exercised to discern good and evil,) to be carried about with divers and, strange doctrines; to fall into errors heresies, & idolatries; Satan raiseth up even among the teachers of the church, some speaking perverse things to draw disciples after thē, and the people many of them ar through their own corruption prone unto vice, even set on mischief. The children of Israel living in Egypt, defiled themselves with the abominations and idols of that land; being brought out into the wilderness, and informed in the statuts of the Lord, they there rebelled against him, sinned still, & provoked the most High, tempted God, and limited the holy one of Israel, made them a molten calf, & said this is thy God ô Israel that brought thee out of the lād of Egypt, & committed great blasphemies. When they were entered into the good lād promised to their fathers, there also they mingled themselves among the hethen, & learned thir works, and served their idols, which were their ruin. False prophets there were many among them, that seduced the people to error and idolatry, strengthened their hands in evil, preached peace to y^e wicked, & put pillows under their arms; but smote the righteous, grieved and killed

(what in thē lay,) the sowls of such as should not hav died. False teachers, (the Apostle saith) there will be also amongst us, which privily shall bring in damnable heresies, evē denying the Lord that hath bought them. The primitive churches had woeful experience hereof, whiles in Galatia they wer soon removed away to another gospel, being bewitched by their misleaders, who under pretence of the law of God, abolished them from Christ, and made them fall from grace. And in many other churches, false doctrine fretted as a canker, and destroyed the faith of certain, whiles some taught the resurrection was past already; some with Jezebel & Balaā persuaded to eat of things sacrificed to idols, and to commit fornication, with other hateful doctrine of the Nicolaitās, idolatrous doctrine of worshiping Angels, Christ the head being let go; the grace of God turned to wantonness, & God the only Lord & our Lord Jesus Christ, denied; Antichrist, even many Antichrists entered in, to decey & destroy men's souls.

4. By such seducers, much trouble & discord was wrought among the people, some of ignorance, some of willfulness receiving and walking in their errors; by whom the way of truth was evil spoken of: others opposing against them, and earnestly contending for the faith once given to the Saints. Especially the Apostles, and other trusty ministers of Christ, (to whose care the souls of men were committed,) set themselves against those falsers, by the word of truth, by the power of God, & by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left: cōmaunding mē to teach no other doctrine, nor give heed thereto, but keep the true pattern of wholesome words, in faith & love which is in Christ Jesus; exhorting thereunto, improving and convincing them that spoke against it, stopping their mouths, & rebuking them sharply that they might be sound in the faith. Those again like Iannes & Jambres resisting the truth, with profane vain babblings, disputations, and oppositions of science falsely so called, & prating against them with malicious words; and seeking to disgrace them. And well was it with the churches then, whiles those circumspect careful watchmen the Apostles and Evangelists lived among them, & took those foxes which destroyed the Lord's vines: but after their departure, there entered grievous wolves, not sparing the flock; as by the innumerable heresies, and lamentable decay of churches since their time doth appear.

5. As for doctrine, so about many other things also, contention hath often risen through men's infirmities, malice, and pride: that by errors in faith, & corruptions in manners, as by a double chain of iniquity, many souls hav been fettered & afflicted. For some moved with envy, hav sold their brethren to aliens, & sought for tokil them: some through ambition would clime above their calling; & intrude into higher offices; presuming vpō their own holiness, & seeking to disgrace others. And as the church of Israel was infamous all Moses days, for their idolatries, rebellions, & many murmurings, for which thei carcasses fell in the wilderness; & strife & blood-shed came among them: so after that they were seated in the land of Canaan, they continewed not long in peace together, but tribe with tribe made war, and rent themselves asunder, to the great reproach of God's true religion, & giving advantage to the commune adversary, to invade and dispossess them of their land. Yea even in families betweē brethren, parents and children, most bitter & bloody strife brake forth, as the stories of Abimelech, Amnon and Absalom, Absalom and David, & sundry others do declare. Also how they were divided, when Christ lived among thē, into Sects & factions, Pharisees, Sadducees, & other like: the history of the Gospel, everywhere showeth. Neither were the Christian Churches which the Apostles had planted, free of this •even; but contentions among thē grew unto schisms and factions, whiles sundry men followed and re 〈...〉 ed upon sundry Teachers; in their public meetings also, dissensions were among them. Some ministers would of strife and envy preach Christ to the people; some loving the praeeminence, would tyrannize over the flock, forbidding to receive brethren sent by the Apostles, and thrusting them out of the Church. And amongst God's elect, most faithful servants, and loving friends, Satan did his utmost to kindle the coles of emulation, dissention, and strife; as between Abraham and Lot, Moses & Aaron, Peter and Paul, Paul and Barnabas; and among the Apostles generally, when there was contention who should be greatest, till they had learned better of their master Christ.

6. The poison of syn hath spread itself exceeding far in churches, & corrupted the manners & actions of all degrees. For Magistrates leaving the love & cherishing of the people, loved gifts, and followed after rewards; judged not the fatherless, neither did the widows cause come before them: they plucked off their skins from them, and their flesh from their bones, did eat their flesh and break their bones, and chop them in pieces as for the pot. Again the subjects despised and spake evil of their rulers, rose up & rebelled against them. The rich were vnmerciful, and cruel to the poor; Among the people and brethren of the church, was bitter envying, strife, sedition, & reproach; every man hunted his brother with a net, that they could not trust in any friend, but must beware even of her that lay in their bosom. The teachers were vain talkers and deceivers of minds, subverting whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre sake; the priests wrested the law; the Prophets were like foxes in the wast places, and from them wickedness went forth into all the land. Thus judgment was turned into wormwood, faith into heresy, God's grace into wantonness, the liberty of his Gospel made a cloak of malicioiusness; and in stead of the gracious ornaments of his spirit, there was wretchedness, misery, poverty, blindness & nakedness; they had a name to be alive, but wer dead. Nor this alone; for they hated such as rebuked them, and would not admit of reproof, but made their faces harder then a stone; they killed the prophets and stoned those that were sent unto them; even when Christ himself came among them, they would not receive him, but said, this is the heir, come let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours.

7. These and many moe like evils have crept into the Churches of God, whereby they have been troubled, distracted, and rent in pieces; much pople hav been defiled & corrupted, & the Saints hav had cause to complain Thou hast multiplied the nation, but hast not increased their joy. Against these, the ministers and witnesses of the Lord, hav cried out in their several ages; being sent & rising early to recall the sinners into the right way. Who wer threatened, that Zion for their sakes should be plowed as a field, and Ierusalē made a ruinous heap, & her habitation left unto her desolate; that Christ would war against thē with the sword of his mouth, and remove the candlestick out of the place, except they amended. And such as hearkened to the voice of their God, & turned unto him; had their iniquities forgiven, and their crimson sins made white as snow: but such as obeyed not, wer devoured of the sword; and woe was unto their souls, for they rewarded evil unto themselves; and wer called reprobate silver, because the Lord rejected them.

8. Thus cometh it to pass, through Satan's malice, and men's corruption, that the city of God, of which so glorious things are spoken in the scriptures; seemeth more vile and contemptible then any other place; the spouse of Christ appeareth black, which was named the fairest among women; her foes which feared and marveyled at her, do hiss & say, Is this the city that men cal, The perfection of beauty, the joy of the whole earth? her children, to whom much peace was promised; do mourn and cry, for the many abominations that ar done in the middes of her; & from the daughter Zion▪ all her bewtie is departed; being thus persecuted by the Dragon, hated & reproached of the world, molested and forsaken of her own children, misvsed and wounded of her watchmen, to the grief & affliction of her spirit.

9. And if there wer not a healing of this error in time, but the gangrene suffered to spread & fret; it grew at length incurable, brought death and desolation upon the diseased Churches. For God after many warnings and much correction, did at length disclaym the faithful city as a harlot, give her a bill of divorce, & put her away; she was no more his wife, nor he her husband; his heart forsook her, he left his heritage, he gave the dearly beloved of his sowl, into the hands of her enemies; & removed his glory from amids her. Then Jerusalem became, with all the inhabitants thereof as Sodom & Gomorrah: the house of Israel was reputed as dross, the congregation of the Saints, turned to an habitation of devils. And the Lord's people that feared his name were willed to forsake and come out from among them, to judge them as harlots, to plead against them, & forsake all communion with them. Wherevpō followed again most bitter strife, hatred & persecution, whiles they that refrained frō evil, made themselves a prey, & suffered all manner of misusage & affliction at their hands which made themselves drunken with the blood of the Saints, & yet boasted to be the church & spouse of Christ, when they were the synagogue of Satan.

10. This is the troublous estate of the church of God on earth, more tossed and tormēted then any other people; of which church, (by reason of the many hypocrites and vessels of dishonor that are therein,) though the number wer as the sand of the sea, yet but a remnant shall be saved; & except the Lord of hosts had left us a seed, we had been made as Sodom, & had been like to Gomorrah. For which cause, it behooveth the Saints, to seek the Lord while he may be found, and medicine, while the disease is curable; for Christ hath ordained ways and means, for the purging of his church from corruptions; or at least, for his elect to keep themselves pure and unspotted of these sins; of which it remaineth to be spoken in the next place.

CHAPT. XXII.

How the Communion of Saints, may be purged of the evils that arise therein, by the power and censures of Christ: and how needful it is for the Saints all, to look hereunto.

The Lord Jesus, who is the author of grace & salvation unto his people, is also the finisher of the same, and performer of his good work towards them; & as he sweetened with a tree, the bitter waters of Marah, where also he made Israel an ordinance, promising that if they would hearken to his voice, he would free them frō all the diseases of Egypt: so hath he set & shown us in the gardein of his church, the tree of life, whose fruit is for meat, and leaves for medicine, to heal the nations with; that there is no disease incurable to his obedient people, but in all their troubles, temptations, offenses, fears, and other sowl-sicknesses; when they cry unto 〈...〉, 〈...〉 sendeth his word & healeth 〈...〉 & delivereth them siō their graves of corruptiō. Most wholesome laws ar left unto all churches, to redress the evils that arise within thē; which being wisely handled and applied, by those whose tōgues ar also t•es of life; are more effectual then the balm of Gilead, to recover the health of the daughter Siō, though Bables sore cannot be cured.

2. And first, the Saints as they ar most nearly united together in one body; so in the bowels of love and mercy, they ar to tender e• one his neighbor as himself, And seeing all men hav their burdē of sins and infirmities upon them▪ we ar exhorted to bear one an others burden, and so fulfil the law of Christ. If occasions thē of offēce be offered by misspeakīg; we should remember, that he that sinneth not in word is a perfect man and in many things, we sin all; & that therefore we take that which▪ is spoken▪ in the best part, bear hard words with meekness of spirit, not rendering again evil for evil, but with a soft answer to put away wrath. If actions seem offensive, or begin to breed strife; love will teach us▪ not to be provoked to anger, but with long sufferance to bear all things; and to seek by all gentleness to compound the controversy, for it is a man's honor to cease▪ from strife: therefore as God's elect holy & beloved, we should forbear & forgiv one another, evē as Christ forgave us. Thus by loving and gentle demeanure, Abram stayed strife between Lo• and him; Gideon, between the Ephramits & him; David, betweē his soldiers: Moses sought to do y• like▪ between two Israelites: and we ought all in the love of Christ to labor thus to do; for when offenses arise, it shall be out glory if we can pass them by, as Solomon hath said.

3. But if the trespass be such as we may not but insist upon, both for the honor of God who is offended, and sowl of the sinner which is endangered, and o• own or neighbors good, who ar endamaged thereby: then 〈◇〉 we bound to admonish the trespasser hereof, observing two rules, 1. Loving carriage as becometh brethren; 2. and secrecy, to cōcese the fault as much as we may. For the first, as all our things 〈...〉 be done in Love; so when a man • fallen by occasion into any fault, we are willed to restore him withthe spirit of meekness, considering ourselves least we also be tempted. For the second, we ar taught to debate the matter with our neighbourhimself, and not to discover the secret to another; but to tell him his fault between us & him alone. And if by our reproof he do repent, then is he won or gained, his sowl saved from death, and we ar to forgiv him in tenderness of heart, as God for Christ's sake hath forgivē us; and in love we ought to cōcele his transgression and bury the same, not discovering it to others, nor repeting it to himself; for such dealing makes division among principal friends. But if he hear not our private admonitiō, then should we take with usone or two, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word may be confirmed; and that so by the second or third admonition, he may either be reclaimed, or not spared, but brought to further blame and censure. And if he will not vouchsafe to hear thē, then ar we to tell it▪unto the Church. where he may be rebuked of many: and if he refuse to hear the church also, then is he by the power of Christ, which is given thereunto for the judging of all within the same, to be cast out from among the Saints when they ar assembled, & to be delivered unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus; & whiles he remaineth in that impenitence and excommunicate estate; all Christians ar to avoid him, & all communion with him, as the Jews avoided heathens and publicans.

4. The keeping of this rule, causeth much peace in the communiō of the Saints; for by this orderly dealing with the party all whispering, Backbiting, slandering, and calumniating one of another, are stayed; sins which reign in deed among the profane work lings, and heathens; but ar not sufferable in the city of the Lord. By this, occasions of grief and contention ar cut off: for as without wood, the fire is quenched, so without a whisperer strife is silent. By this, either the sinner is amended, wherat men & Angels do rejoyce; or the church atleast wise purged of the evil: for he that hardeneth his neck, when he is often rebuked, shall suddenly be broken off, and cannot be cured; but the churches wound is cured hereby, as another proverb saith, Cast out the scorner, and strife shall go out: so contention & reproach shall cease.

5. But if the syn be openly committed, then must the sinner be rebuked openly, that others also may fear; or if it be of such a nature as tendeth to the seducing of men frō God, though he that entiseth be near and dear unto us; we are forbidden to spare or keep him secret, for so may many be defiled by his privy suggestions; Or if any secret hypocritical practice be seen to impeach the truth of the Gospel or upright walking therein; such ought in public to be reprov'd, as Paul for the like fault, blamed Peter before all mē. Or if the crime be heinous, bloody, & dāgerous to y^e life of others, by treason or treachery such mischief is both to be be••ed, prevented, and punished; and bloodshed so defileth the land, ⟨◇⟩ it cannot be cleansed but by the blood of him that shed it: such therefore (saith Solomon) shall flee to ⟨◇⟩ › grave, let them not stay him.

6. The foresaid censures of Christ for rebuke and excommunication, ar to be inflicted upon all the members of the church without †respect of persons, as for other sins so specially for errors & heresies, & contentions against the true faith. For an heretic must be rejected after one and the second admonition; they that teach or receive doctrines which they ought not, must, be rebuked sharply, that they may be sound in the faith, they that cause divisions and offenses, contrary to the doctrine learned, must be diligently marked and avoided; and such disquieters of the church, to be cut off. Generally all sinners & all unruly persons, ar liable to the Saints admonitions; and if any lust to be contentious, the churches of God have no such custom; for the Lord is author of peace in them all; neither may the wicked be suffered to remain in the cōmuniō of his people, but judgment must be execu'd in the morning; neither may any favor evil doers; for he that justifieth the wicked, him (saith Solomon) shall the people's curse, & the nations shall abhor him, but to them that rebuke, that be pleasant ⟨...⟩ & upon them shall come the blessing of good.

7. The causes why the Saints must thus redress the evils that arise among them, are these. First, for the glory of God, who commanded this duty in his law play•y to rebuke our neighbor; that so upon warning and sight of his syn, he might bring his sacrifice & reconcile himself unto the Lord w[•] he had offended; which if he reg[•]ded not, but should do oug <...> with a high hand, he then was said to blaspheme the Lord, and must be <...> off from among his people, because <...> despised the word of the Lord, <...> broke his commandment. God th[•] who is dishonored by men's transgressions, will again be glorified among them, either by their confession of, or punishment for the same. For his way is holy, the polluted may not pass by it; they defile his sanctuary and holy things; therefore they must sanctify themselves that draw near unto him, for holinessbecometh his house forever.

8. Secondly, for the good of the sinner himself, who by these admonitions rebukes and censures, is often-times bettered; especially if he be the Lord's elect. For a prudent man when he is reproved, will understand knowledge, and a rebuke sinketh more into him, then a hundred stripes into a fool: the censures of the church ar for his hūbling, & salvatiō of his spirit in the day of the Lord. We owe this therefore as a duty of love unto our brethren, for their good; seeing lovecovereth a multitude of sins; & that is done, when we convert the sinner from going astray, and save his sowl from death. And hervpō it was, that God gave that Law of rebukes in these words, Thoushalt not hate thy brother in thy <◇> thou shalt plainly rebuke thy neigh^{•••} & suffer not syn upon him. For what greater hatred can there be shown, then to see and suffer our brothers sowl to perish? therefore Solomon was not afraid to say, that open rebuke was better then secret love. And David minding this did desire th[•] the righteous might smite him[•] f[•] it should be a benefit; and r <...> him, for it should be a precious <◇> which hewished might not fail[•] <...> being on his head. How ever then the wicked esteem of this heavenly ordinance, and hate those that rebuke them, for which cause Christ forbad to cast these holy thing[•] & pearls, to dogs & swine, which would but rent the giver; and Solomon, to speak in the [•]ares of a fool, which would despise the wisdom of their words[•] yet he saith[•] rebuke[•] wise mā, & he will love th[•]. And another prophet showeth, how men that by such wounds are drawn to amendment of life, will acknowledge & say, thus was I woūded in the house of my friends. To verify the proverb which teacheth, that howsoever the kisses of an enemy be pleasant, the wounds of a lover are faithful.

9. A third cause of these censures, is the benefit of the church; that it may be kept from the contagion & corruptiō of sinners, which is great and dangerous. For in as much as they ar all one body and brotherhood; the fault of a few, yea even of one, may be a snare unto the whole company. This Israel felt of old, when for Achan's syn the Lord chastised the whole congregation, yea told them they were execrable, and said he would be with them no more, except they destroyed the excerable thing frō among them. And that correct^{••} was a warning to the church a good while after, and made them for fear of the like again, severely to look to their brethren's actions, whē they seemed evil in their eyes, and to say unto them, if[•] we rebel today against the Lord, even to mor^{•••} he will be wroth with at the congreg^{••} tion of Israel. This also the Church of Corinth felt, whiles for the suffering of one wicked man as l[•]ven among them, the whole lump of the congregation was so l[•]vened as the Apostle told them, their rejoicing was not good, for that they kept the fest of their[•] passover Christ, with such so w^{•••}even among them, whereas in the shadow thereof, the leaven of material bread was forbid to be eaten upon pain of cutting off from Israel. The whole Church is endangered when they neglect this duty; first, because whiles impenitent sinners are suffered, their example is on evil president, & an emboldning of others, to do likewise: as even the heathens could tell King Ahasuerus, about Queen Vashties offense; whereas if the scorner be smitten the foolish will beware. And God who punisheth some, for an example to others, would also have his church to chasten evil doers, that Israel may hear & fear, & do no more presumptuously; because some will not stick to entice & persuade others unto their vices; especially heretics, which leaven men's souls with false doctrine, entangle the weak consciences, draw disciples after them▪ subvert whole houses, and steal away the hearts of the people as did Absalom; such therefore are to be discovered & cast out, that all may know and beware of them. Needfully then the Apostle warneth to let no root of bitterness spring up & trouble us, least thereby many be defiled; for deceitful as flies causeth to stink & patrify the ornament of the Apocryphal carriage; scornful men (as the proverb saith▪) bring the city into a snare; and one sinner destroyeth much good.

10. A fourth cause why the evil must be purged out of the church is to stopp the reproaches of the world, and those without. For they take occasion by the sins of God's people to speak evil of them and of the truth and doctrine they profess; how much more will & may they do this, if there be no rebuking and censuring of the sinners: As God himself therefore hath a care that his name should not be polluted before the heathen, by the punishment and destruction of us his people; so ought we again, to have our conversation honest among them▪ that God may be glorified, & his name not blasphemed by our transgression of his law. And such as break out unto infamous vices, either speedily to repent & amend them, or to be cast out from the fellowship of God and his people; so shall the throne of Christ our king be stablished in justice, when the wicked are taken away before him, as when the dross is taken from the silver, there proceedeth a vessel for the finer.

11. This care of keeping the church clean and pure, the Lord hath required in all ages, by many laws and rites, leading men hereunto. Himself first practiced it, by the rebuking and calling to repentance of our first parents that sinned in paradise; and afterwards by admonishing, & excommunicating Cain. The patriarchs Noah & Abraham, executed these judgements on their own children▪ when the height of their syn so deserved▪ So soon as the host of Israel was constituted & ordered, God provided for their holiness & purity in that order wherein he had set them, by causing all sorts of evil to be removed away. First he commanded that such as had corporal & ceremonial pollutions, as leprosy, or yssues, or wer defiled by the dead, should be put out of the host. After that for sins & trespasses, whereby both sowl & body were in deed defiled; he required confession, restitution, & sacrifice. And lastly for the finding out and purging of secret syn, he ordained that severe Law of gealously, with the bitter curse bringing water, & dreadful, effects of the same; by all these teaching them carefully to cleanse, both themselves and the congregation; which that they might the better mind, & observe, he afterwards enacted for the lightest, even the ceremonial uncleanness, that the man which purified not himself according unto the rites prescribed, should be cut off from among the congregation, as having defiled the sanctuary of the Lord: the like he did for all other presumptuous sinners whosoever. And these lawes were kept in Israel, executed among the people, even upon kings, who were rebuked for their sins, and thrust out for their leprosy. Christ also and his Apostles have givē many rules, (as is before shown) for cleansing the churches of syn.

12. The keeping of which rules, belongeth to all the Saints, as the commandment directed of old to the children of Israel, & in the new testament to all the brethren and church, doth show. It is a duty of love, frō which no Christian can be exempted; to be performed by the word of God, which is given unto all, as a two edged sword, to execute vengeance and rebukes, to bind both Kings and Nobles, and execute on them the judgment written: this honor (saith David) shall beto all the Saint. But chiefly this pertaineth to the ministers & watchmē of y^e church, who having the word of reconciliation committed unto them, & overseing the manners of all the flock; must preach that word, be instant in season and out of season improve, rebuke, and exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine; they must hear y^e word at God's mouth, & give the people warning from him, admonishing them of their wicked ways, else they shall die in their sins, and their blood shall be required at those watchmēs hands: they must teach the people the difference between the holy & profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean. These hav the keys of the kingdōe of heaven, in more special manner given unto them, for the binding and loosing of sins by the public ministry of the word: they ar to guide and go before the people, as in other affairs, so in administering the censures of the church. By such God of old did pluck up and root out, destroy and throw down, and again build and plant; by such he cut down sinners in Israel, and slew them by the words of his mouth: Unto such the people ar to hearken, obey, and submit themselves; yet also to admonish them again if need so require, and not suffer themselves to be seduced by false doctrine, brought into bondage, devoured or smitten on the face; but stand fast in the faith and liberty of the Gospel, & whē any is cast out from among them, or again received in, that it be the joint actiō of the church assembled, as Christ and his Apostle have given direction.

13. Thus ar the hurts of the daughter of God's people to be healed by admonitions, exhortations, rebukes, denunciations, censures, and woes; a more wholesome and pleasant balm, thē the sweet words of thē that cry peace peace, when there is no peace: for the blownes of the •••nd serveth sometimes topurge the evil, & the stripes within the bowels of the bery. By such means the Saints ar brought to a sight of their sins, which they do away with tears and sacrifice; they fear the Lord and pray before him, & he repenteth of the plague pronounced against them. Therefore ought all God's servants, to love his rebukes and censures, sent by the hands of their brethren; to hear counsel & receive instruction, that they may be wise in their later end: to be more careful to bury the doung & syn of their souls, in the grave of Christ by repentance, thē y^e Israelites in their canp to cover their excrements, for offending the Lord: to judge themselves worthy to hav bē destroyed for their iniquities, & to cry with the Leper, I am unclean I am unclean: to acknowledge their faults one to another and pray one for another that they may be healed; for mercy is promised to them that confess and forsake their sins, and is to be pronounced unto them in the name of the Lord; they ar to be forgiven of their brethren and cōforted, least they be swallowed up with overmuch heaviness. Thus the ear that hearkneth to the correction of life, shall lodge among the wise: but he that hardeneth his neck when he is rebuked, shall suddenly be destroyed & cannot be cured. Such therefore must more roughly be entreated, and judgments denounced against them; & if they convert not, as in their transgression is their snare, and they are holden with the cords of their own syn; so must they also by their brethren be bound, and their sins retained; and God in heaven will confirm this censure against them. Then are they till they repent and humble themselves; put away and separated from among God's people, excluded the heavenly Ierusalē, regarded as strangers frō the commune wealth of Israel, as heathens and publicans; & for despising correction, are almost brought into all evil, in the midst of the congregation and assembly. And if they cōtinew still to hate correction, they shall die, such judgments hath the Lord appointed for scorers, and stripes for the back of fools. By this means the body of Christ is disburdened of noisome rotten members, the fruitless branches are taken away from the vine; the woman wickedness pressed down in her bushel, is lifted up and carried away from Jerusalem to Babylon in the land of Shinar, her own proper place; the old leaven being purged out, the congregation jointly is a sweet & new lump, as the members severally are unlevend; and keep a holy and joyful feast unto the Lord; who now is turned frō his fierce wrath which was kindled for the transgressors. Then he that is left in Zion, and remaineth in Jerusalem, may be called holy, everyone written unto life in Jerusalem, when the Lord hath washed the filthiness of the daughters of Zion, and purged the blood of Jerusalem out of the midst thereof, by the spirit of judgment, & by the spirit of burning.

The ways of the Lord are righteous, & the just shall walk in them; but the wicked shall fall thereon.

Hos. 14 10.

CHAPTER XXIII.

How far the Saints may hold & walk in communion together, if offenses be not removed.

IT falleth often out, through the default and neglect of churches, that the foresaid law & power of Christ is not duly practiced, but sinners suffered and winked at, yea sometimes justified and upheld by reason whereof, all kind of iniquity waxeth & aboundeth, to the dishonor of God, the reproach and grief of men. The duties therefore of the Saints, what then they are to do themselves, & what to bear in others, is needful to be considered: for their covenant with the church, persuadeth them to peace and concord, and not to schism or rent away from the fellowship; again their covenant with God, bindeth them to the obedience & keeping of all his commandments, with reproof of, and departure from all evil.

2. In this straight, regard is to be given, first unto the cause & thing itself, which is done or suffered amiss; secondly unto the handling thereof, & dealing about the same. For the cause itself, that in questions and disputable controversies the Saints bear one with another's infirmities & diversity of judgment, especially for the present, till the truth be tried out, either among themselves, or by the help of other churches; which was the practice in th'

Apostles days; as also in Moses law, for hard and doubtful matters, the people dispersed through their cities & tribes had aid of the Senate in Jerusalem. In this case therefore all Christians should mind y^t counsel of God's wisdom, not to be wise in themselves; if they be otherwise minded, God shall revele even the same unto them, they know not perfectly but in part. Or if it be a personal controyersie, that as much as they may, they fulfil Christ's law to bear their brothers burden, & procure their own glory, bypassing by an offense: rather to suffer wrong & susteyn harm, then by strife and contention to cause reproach; remembering his counsel which said, be not just overmuch. But if the doctrine be erroneous, and pernicious for the infecting of men's souls, and withdrawing them from the faith; if the practice be wicked, superstitious, or idolatrous, violating God's covenant, injuring their brethren, or defiling themselves, to the slander of the Gospel; then all the Saints must neither suffer (so far as is in their power,) nor partake at all in any such evil. Yet before they make any breach or departure from the Church, they are to use all means in holy, meek, peaceable, and orderly manner, for their redress, as is before shown.

3. That transgressions may not be suffered in churches, the reasons in the former chapter alleged, do prove; and may further be confirmed by the reproof that Christ sent to the Angels and Churches of Pergamos & Thyatira, for having and suffering false teachers among thē, y^t drew the people into syn; of this fault they were willed to repent, or else he would fight against them with the sword of his mouth; and kill their children with death. And such as had kept themselves from these corruptions, were willed to hold first that which they had, unto the end▪ On the other hand, he p•us•d y^e Ephesians, that they could not bear with thē which wer evil, but had tried & found out false Apostles. And this m•rke Solomon set on them that keep the law, that they will set themselves against the wicked.

4. And that the Saints may not for fellowship with the church or any members thereof, do any evil thing, either in God's worship or th'affairs of man; the very form of the law given to them▪ all jon•y & severally showeth; for God speaketh to every sowl apart, Thou shalt have no other God's before my face; and •o in all the other precepts. And least by the error of many, any should be withdrawn from this obedience; he gav another express law, Then shalt not follow a multitude to do evil. After that, when corruption spread among the people, he said though thou Israel play the harlot, yet let not Judah syn. And so far ought all to be from synning for company, as they should say with •aak•b, into their secret let not my sowl •me; my glory be not thou joined with their assembly; and with David should hate the assembly of the evil, and not s•t with the wicked, but wash their hands in innocence, & compass the Lord's altar; for howsoever men join together in syn, yet •and in band*the wicked shall not be unpunished*; the sowl that sinneth it shall die; & whither it be ⟨...⟩ or womā or family or tribe, whi ⟨...⟩ shall turn their heart away from th ⟨...⟩ Lord, and so persist, blessing th ⟨...⟩ selves in their evil; he will not be merciful to such a person, but p ⟨...⟩ out his name frō under heavē. A ⟨...⟩ the Lord when he taketh his ⟨...⟩ the hand, teacheth them ⟨...⟩ walk in the way of such people, b ⟨...⟩ to sanctify and fear him. This then is the duty of every sowl, that they keep themselves pure, and refrayn from all wickedness, that so th• praise of Judah may come upon them, which yet •led with God • was faithful with the Saints, when Ephraim compassed the Lord with lies, • the house of Israel with deceit. So also shall their reward be with those few names in Sardi (which church had a name that it lived, but was dead,) which had not defiled their garments, and should walk with Christ in whites, for they wer worthy.

5. Moreover the Saints must hav a care of their communion in the church, that by reason of their brotherhood & corporation, they partake not with other men's sins. True it is, that some hypocrites will carry them selves so cunningly, that they can hardly be discovered or avoided, howsoever in godly gealousie they may be suspected; such must be born with patience, til their sins be ripe. And it appeareth, that the Apostles themselves were much troubled with such, whom they theifore called deceitful workers, for that they could, (like Satan) transform themselves into the Apostles of Christ, and ministers of righteousness; and these sought occasion against the faithful servants of God, & would impurely, even of envy and strife; preach Christ, supposing to add more afflictiō to their band• neither hath the church in any age been without such tares; whose judgment is with the Lord not far off, and their damnation sleepeth not. But if their wickedness be apparent, they must either be reclaimed frō their syn, or rejected: otherwise the whole church may be leavened, and in fault also, as before is proved. And when either in God's worship, corruptions ar admitted; or the open wicked suffered vnamended: all the godly ought not only to reprove and witness against these evils, but refrayn frō partaking with the church in them. So did the prophets, and holy men of old themselves; & so they taught others. Whē false worship was set up in the churches, they warned the people not to come there; when false prophets taught, not to hear them; yea though they were their own children, to thrust them through when they prophesied. And generally for all iniquity against God & men, they taught everyone to refrayn as they loved their lives and salvation; to turn themselves, and cause others to turn from all their transgressions; because they should be judged everyone according to his ways. Herevpon the godly when they could not reclaim their brethren, both mourned and cried for all the abominations done among them, and also refrained from evil, whereby they made themselves a prey to the wicked; who hated them & cast them out for God's name sake; yet they again were taught to judge them after the manner of harlots; to plead with their mother (the Church) that she was not the wife of the Lord, nor he her husbād, but for her adulteries she should be slain, & her children vnpittied, if she took not away her fornications out of her sight. And in Jeremiah's days the Lord asketh what his beloved should tarry in his house, seeing it had committed abomination with many? and the holy flesh, (that is the flesh of the sacrifices,) was gone away from them, (being defiled by there impure actions, & therefore rather to be burnt with fire then eaten of any man;) for when they did evil, they rejoiced; so that it wer better for every Godly one to separate, then communicate with that worship, where (as another Prophet saith,) the sacrificing of bulloks & sheep, was as if they had slain a man, or cut off a dogs neck, or offered swine's blood, and the memory of incense, as if they blessed an Idol; they having chosen their own ways, and their sowl delighting in their abominations. In like manner did Christ inform his Apostles, and they the churches; that they should not admit of any erroneous doctrines, or partake in any evil act with the Scribes and Pharisees, but let them alone like blind guides, and save themselves from that froward generation; to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; to separate, and turn away frō false teachers, & evil doers; to try the spirits, & having tried all things, to keep only that which was good; to refuse all fellowship with false teachers, not to receive them to house, nor bid them God speed; to hold such accursed as should preach otherwise then they had received of the Apostles; And generally not topartake in the sins of others, that they received not of their plagues.

6. By which and many other like scriptures, we ar taught, not to keep communion with people or church, in any open or known wickedness, against either table of God's law; for that were to honor man morethen God. Our fellowship is in the light, not in darkness; neither is it good walking to speak against faults in others, and ourselves do the same with thē how should our reproofs or admonitions be regarded of men, when the beam is in our own eye, and our works do more justify, then our words can condemn them? The prophets of old, our savior, and his Apostles, ar never found either to do, or join in the doing of any unlawful thing, for which they blamed their people's: in like wise must we walk; else shall we be inexcusable before God and men; for (as itis written,) he that judgeth another and doth the same things, condemneth himself.

7. And in our assemblies where God's presēce is, ought our holiness, fear, and obedience, most to shine; & all evil things most be shunned: where by reasō of our near cōjunction, & communion, the cōtagion of syn may spread over all. For there all ar one loaf, & one body, because we ar all partakers of one bread. And if the wicked partake with us, neither we nor the holy things can sanctify thē; but contrariwise they defile us and everything they touch, as the law saith whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean, and the person that toucheth him, shall be unclean. And this touching, figured our fellowship together in the Church, as the Apostle showeth; & by this, the prophet Haggai convinced the people of Israel to be unclean in God's sight, they and all their works and sacrifices. Wherefore straight laws were given to that nation, as well priests as people, evē vpō payn of death, that none in his uncleanness should touch the holy things of the church, for that was not only a defiling of the things themselves, but of God's name also. For avoiding whereof, the Priests were to teach the people how to discern between holy and profane, clean and unclean Which if they did, and took away the precious frō the vile, then were they as God's mouth: otherwise, when they put no difference between holy and profane, they broke God's law, & defiled his holy things; for which cause, he poured out his indignation upon them. And now that all Christians ar made Priests unto God, even a kingly priesthood to reign vpō earth, & hav the power of Christ, to judge all that are within the church, & cast out the wicked from among them: they ought to retain and use their power, to execute the judgment that is written; and as the priests of old, to keep God's laws and statutes in all his assemblies, or else to depart frō among them.

8. For if any church or people, violate God's covenant, by synning against him, & one against another: and if their ears be uncircumcised that they cannot hearken to admonition, nor be ashamed when they hav committed abomination; but despising the word, walk stubbornly with God, & will not be reclaimed: thē they that were yesterday God's people, ar risen up for an enemy, & he will walk stubbornly in anger against thē, & his sowe will abhor them, he will bring their sanctuary to naught, and will not smell the savor of their sweet odors; the incense of their prayers is an abominatiō unto him; he hateth, he abhorreth their feast days, and will not smell in their solemn assemblies; both them and the house which he had hallowed for his name, will he cast out of his sight, and remove the candlestick out of his place; the Lord of hosts that planted thē, pronounceth a plague against them, he will take his kingdom from them, & give it to a nation which shall bring forth the fruits thereof, and their habitation shall be left unto them desolate. He will do unto them as he threateneth by his prophet, For the wickedness of their inventions I will cast them out of my house, I will love them no more; & again my God will cast them away because they did not obey him. For rebellion is as the syn of witch craft, and transgression is wickedness and idolatry; seeing they have cast away the word of the Lord, therefore he casteth away thē; the curse is poured upon them, and the oth that is written in the Law. For God proclaimeth, Cursed be the man, that obeyeth not the words of this covenant, which I commanded your fathers, saying, obey my voice, and do according to all these things which I command you, so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God: And his servants answer and say, Amen ô Lord. Thus the curse devoureth the land, of that Assemblie or people, and the inhabitants thereof ar desolate, for that they transgressed y^e laws, changed the ordinances, & brake the everlasting covenant; & then the Lord sweareth and saith, I abhor the excellency of Jacob, and hate his palaces.

9. Then they, that cried out against their abominations, ar marked and saved from destruction; a book of remembrance, is written before the Lord, for them that fear him, and think on his name, & they shall be unto him for a flock, and he will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him; they shall discern between the righteou^s and the wicked; unto them shall the sun of righteousness arise, with health under his wings, and they shall tread down the wicked as dust under the soles of their feet. Thus the redeemer will come unto thē that turn from iniquity in Jacob; & he will leave in the mids of it, an humble and poor people, and they shall trust in his name, and the remnant of Israel shall do no iniquity nor speak lies: And over them will the Lord rejoyce with joy, he will quiet himself in his love, even with joy will he rejoyce over them.

The Lord preserveth all them that love him▪ but he will destroy all the wicked.

Psalm. 145. 20.

CHAPT. XXIII

Of the communion that one church hath with another.

HAVING spoken of the Saints communion in their several Congregations, wherein they are distinct bodies, and owe special duty and care one toward another: it remaineth that something be said, of the communion between Church and church. For though they be disjoined in place, yet ar they united in heart and spirit; so as they generally are but one body or church, under one head Christ, called in one hope of their vocation, by one God and Father of all; and must endeavor, to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

2. When Christ sent forth his Apostles into the world, he gave them one and the same commission, for preaching the Gospel in alnations, and teaching them to observe whatsoever he had commanded: who thereupon preached one commune faith, a covenant & Gospel everlasting, for every tongue and people; and exhorted them earnestly to contend for that faith once given to the Saints. And as the faith was one, so was there one rule or canon for all God's Israel to walk by, the same officers in all churches; the same ordinances & decrees; the same ways taught by the Apostles everywhere in every Church, and all other forbidden: so peace was set by God in all churches of the Saints.

3. And as the church generally considered is the mother of all the faithful; so the particular churches ar sisters ech to other, and there is abrotherhood of the Saints throughout the world; they being all one in Christ Jesus, the one shepherd that hath made one sheepfold: and are therefore exhorted to be all of one mind, and to lov as brethren. For so was it prophefied of the latter days, that people's should jointly seek for knowledge of God's ways, in the mountayn of his house; and nation not lift up a sword against natiō, nor learn to fight anymore.

4. From hence ariseth, the communion of love, & all God's graces and blessings among the churches; wherein our elder sister, the Congregation of Israel, hath walked before us for an example. For she had mind and care of us when we were small and without breasts, not able to bear or nurse up children to the Lord; she prayed for us unto God, made mention of us to her acquaintance, & taught her children by many prophesies, to expect our birth, calling, and cōjoining in one spiritual body, faith, worship and religion. And now that we through Christ hav obtained this riches & mercy, though it be by her fall and diminishing; we ought both to nourish unity & peace among ourselves, and to remember her again, who notwithstanding her present misery, is beloved for her fathers sakes, & shall again obtain mercy; which what will it be unto us, but life from the dead?

5. Examples also we have of y' churches in the Apostles days who cōmunicated ech with other, in blessings spiritual and temporal, as amongst others chiefly appeareth in those two loving sisters the Churches at Jerusalem and Antiochia, the one of which wer Jews, the other Gentiles. For they in Jerusalem hearing that many in Antioch wer turned unto Christ; sent for their further edification, Bainabas unto them, a good man and full of the holy Ghost, and of faith; by whose means, much people joined themselves unto the Lord. The Antiochians knowing, (as the Apostle saith,) that if they were made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty was to minister unto them in carnal things: whē they heard of a famine foretold to come over all the world, sent succor to their brethren in Judea, by the hands of Barnabas and Saul. Again when there grew a dissention by means of false doctrine sown among thē; they sent the said Paul and Barnabas for advise and help unto Jerusalem; which church after great disputation even by the Apostles themselves, sent back choice and chief men of their own company, to Antiochia with Paul and Barnabas, and wrote letters also, of the same matter; so bot• by word & writing, the multitude of believers there, were confirmed in the truth, and rejoiced for the consolation.

6. Thus have we a pattern and president of Christian duties between Churches, in that Church which first was crowned with the name of Christians; & have besides this, many other instructions and examples proposed in the scriptures; as of the Churches in Macedonia, so ready and instant to bestow grace and fellowship of ministering to other Saints; of Corinth also in the like case, whose readiness of mind, Paul boasted of to other congregations, and their zeal provoked many. And well was it with the churches thē, which strove not for primacy, nor knew no preeminence one over another; but walked all as brethren under one Archpastour Christ, who still walked among thē, visiting the ways and works of those golden candlesticks, whose lights shined not only in them selves, but unto others, so as they wer followers of the Apostles & of y' Lord, ensamples to their sister churches, in doctrine, faith, virtue; & followers of thē in patience; for which the Apostles rejoiced in the churches of God. Herevpon followed prayers one for another, thanks, & salutations, with all other means to nourish lov, and continue peace. Then was fulfilled the prophesy of Isaiah, which foretold of a path from Egypt to Asshur, (that is from one church and nation of the Gentiles, to another,) whereby they should come and communicate together in the worship of God, Israel also being a third with them, even a blessing in the midst of the land, (as we hav seen before in the church at Jerusalem,) and the blessing of the Lord upon it, in this holy communion, saying, Blessed be my people Egypt, and Asshur the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance.

7 From these few examples, compared with the former general duties of all Christians; may appear how churches owe help, comfort, and refreshing one to another, as they hav need & ability, and should not one envy or vex another, but as Ephraim and Judah, flee together upon the shoulders of the common enemy; yet avoiding both ambition & confusiō. For although we may advise, exhort, warn, reprove &c, so far as Christian love and power extendeth: yet find we no authority committed to one congregation over another, for excōmunicating the same, as every church hath over her own members. Christ reserveth this power in his own hand, to remove the Candlestiks out of their places, if they syn and repent not. And he in his Epistles to the seven churches, dealeth with every of them severally for their own estate and faults; not imputing the sins of one unto another: though the admonitions given to everyone, were to be a warning to all churches, evē whosoever had an ear to hear. Neither may members disorderly run from church to church, which may work trouble and confusion; for avoiding whereof, in the Apostles days, letters of commendation wer written, for such as by occasion traveled to other places; that they might be esteemed and received as brethren; as on the contrary, false teachers, heretics, excommunicats, and such like; be shunned & avoided.

8. As for communicating with another church, when it lieth in syn; Christians ar to consider the rules mentioned in the former chapter. For when they may not partake with their own congregation, unto which they ar joined; neither may they partake with another, being in the same estate and transgression. A Multitude cannot make an evil thing good; neither can many or all churches together, justify or make tolerable, that which God's law condemne; for all men, though they be laid together in the balance, ar lighter then vanity as the prophet saith. It is justice (according to the true proverb) which exalteth a nation: but syn, is the shame of people's. As therefore when Israel was in trespass, Judah was forbidden to syn, and every godly Jew, to go to their assemblies: so the Christians in Sardi, which wer commended of Christ for not dofilng their garments, in the sins of that church; could not hav been blameless, if they had joined with their sister church of Thyatira, where Jezebel sate as Doctresse, to teach & to deceive God's servants.

9. When •holah, (the church of Samaria,) had defiled herself with the idols of Asshur, and was therefore chastised of God; it should hav been a warning to Aholihah, (the church of Jerusalem,) not to do the like, nor partake in her sisters evils: but when they became both after one sort, the Lord's heart forsook them both alike; and because Jerusalem walked in her sisters way, therefore God gave the others cup into her hand, the cup of destruction and desolation. For the Lord being exceeding wroth with Israel, and having put them out of his sight, that none was left but the tribe of Judah only, yet Judah not keeping the commandments of the Lord their God, but walking after the fashion of Israel which they used, the Lord did therefore cast off all the seed of Israel, & afflicted them, and delivered them into the hands of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight. It behooveth all therefore to mind well their communion, both with their own and other churches; and to nourish peace, but in holiness; to keep communion, but in light, not in darkness; for we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, where everyone of us shall give account of himself unto God, and every man bear his own burthē. As we have sown in this flesh, so shall we reap; the sowl that hath sinned shall die; Noah, Daniel, and Job, shall deliver neither son nor daughter, but their own souls by their righteousness. And whosoever overcometh, shall inherit all things; and shall not be hurt of the second death.

Sow to yourselves in righteousness: reap after the measure of mercy.

Hos. 10. 12.

The conclusion.

SEeing thē we hav received such grace from God, (so many as believe in the name of his son Christ,) as that we are raised up from the graves of syn, wherein we all lay naturally the children of wrath; & ar called with a holy calling, from the servitude of Satan and syn, and all communion with the wickedness of this world to serv the Lord in freedom of spirit, and newness of life; according to his word; & are conjoined in a holy society with himself, after a wonderful & incomprehensible manner, apprehended by faith; and one with another in the fellowship of the Gospel; being through his mercy made a chosen generation, a kingly priesthood, washed frō all our sins in the blood of Christ, and reigning with him on earth, by mortifying & subduing our earthly members; and seeing we hav in this estate, all the promises of life, blessing, and salvation, the presence and protection of him our God, the guard and assistance of his holy Angels, & whatsoever thing is good, for our help, joy, and comfort, whiles we live on earth▪ What remaineth thē, but that we purge ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, & so grow up unto full holiness in the fear of God, making straight steps unto our seet, rūning with patience the race that is set before us, fighting the good fight of faith and of afflictions, resisting syn both in ourselves and others, nourishing mutual love and peace, & making an end of our salvation in fear & trembling. That after we hav ended this warfare in the flesh, and hav so fought as we win the victory, and none other get our crown; when our souls shall flit out of these earthly tabernacles, our bodies may sleep and rest in their beds, til our change come, & our souls not sent to the spirits in prison, but received among the spirits of just and perfect men, we may so rest from our labors, and wait for the full redemption of our bodies; at that day, when our Lord Jesus shall show himself from heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming syre, to render vengeance unto them that know not God; nor obey y^e Gospel of our Lord Christ; punishing them with everlasting perdition, frō his presence & from the glory of his power; and to be glorified in his saints, and made marvelous in all them that believe▪ which all shall be where himself is, & see the blessed face of God, & there enjoy that heavenly communiō in the great assembly of all Saints, with everlasting joy upon the 〈...〉 heads, where sorrow and mourning shall be forgotten, and all happiness & pleasures possessed for evermore. For desire of that day, the spirit & the Bride say, Come. And let him that heareth, say Come. The faithful and true witness saith, Surely 〈...〉 quickly: Amen. Even so come Lord▪ Jesus.

He that is a Saint, let him be sanctified still

Rev. 22. 11.

Of the three sorts of mē, all diversely affected in things concerning God.

Men are either

OPEN WICKED,	HYPOCRITES,	SAINCTS,
•icentious and profane livers▪ professed enemies of the law of the Lord. Job . 21. 14. 15.	outwardly religious, but inwardly wicked, hating God's law, and the true righteousness▪ Isa . 29. 13. Mic . 3▪ 11▪	that rightly believe & obey God's word, with their utmost power; the friends of the Lord. Psal . 119. 3, 5, 10. 11, &c.
These are born but after the flesh / therefore savor they only the things of the flesh / and remain as they ar by nature / Children of wrath. John . 3. 6. 1 Cor . 2. 14. ••h. 2. 3.	These seem to be renewed, & born again of ye Spirit, they are enlightened, and boast of heavenly grace: yet continue they still in their old natural corruption, unwashed from their filthiness. Heb 6. 4. Isa , 65. 5. John . 8. 41. 42. Pro . 30. 12.	These are born a new, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, or of man, but of God: therefore they savor the things of God, and mind heavenly things, being children of Wisdom. John . 1. 13. & 3. 3• Luk . 7. 35.
These ar neither chosen of God / nor called▪ being neither of the church / nor in	These are called, but not chosen; ar in the church for a a	These are called and chosen of God; ar both in & of the

the saine. Psa. 11. 5 Rev. 22. 15. 1 Cor. 5. 82.	while, but not of it. Math. 22. 14. 1 John. 2. 19.	Church, and so continew. Ephes. 1. 4. &c. Job. 17. 9.
In these / syn daily increaseth inwardly and outwardly / til righteousness in them be utterly extinct Psal. 36. 1. 2. 3. 4.	In these, righteousness increaseth outwardly, but sin liveth inwardly, and aboundeth. Isa. 1. 11. &c. Ier. 3. 4. 5.	In these, syn dieth, and righteousness rev••eth daily, both inwardly and outwardly. ⟨ϕ⟩ . 6. 2. •. 4. &c.
To these the Law if it be sent / cometh in tables of stone / (for such is the nature of their harts;) but they receive it not; the tables ar broken before they come at them; for these dance (as it were) about the gold calf of their own impiety / I••w not what: is become of Moses; they break and violate all. Exod. 32. Yet unto such / the law is given / mid lieth upon them as a •urse and condēnation. 1 Tim.•. 9. Deut. 27. 15-26.	To these God giveth the stony tables, and they receive them; but Moses face so shineth, that they cannot look vpō him, unless heveil his coūtenāce. They outwardly keep the law, and rest therein, they also teach others to keep it, yet ar themselves transgressors of it; the inward power and end thereof, they cannot see Exod. 34. 29. 30 &c. 2 Cor. 3. 13. 14. Rom. 2. 17. 22 23. &c.	To these the Law is not given, or it lieth ⟨ϕ⟩ (⟨in non-Latin alphabet ⟩) on them; 1 Tim. 1. 2. ⟨ϕ⟩ they have the Gospel, the Law and ministry of the spirit• and ⟨ϕ ⟩ word ⟨...⟩ fleshly tables of their harts, ⟨ϕ⟩ on and without by the finger of God: & they ⟨ϕ⟩ behold as in a ⟨ϕ ⟩ , the glory of the Lord with open face, andar changed into the same image frō glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Cor. 3. 3. 18. Ezek. 11. 19. Heb. 8. 10.
These keep not the Law / neither ar they kept by the Law; but break forth into all syn and wickedness. Job. 24. 13. &c. Psal. 73. 8. 9.	These, though they keep not the Law, yet are kept by the law, and restrained by terror thereof, frō open wickedness. Mat. 23. 13. 16. 23. 25.	These are the right keepers of the Law in spirit; which sometime also were kept of the Law, til Faith came. Ps. 119. 33. 34. Gal. 3. 23. 25.
These hate the Law / and profess their hatred Psa. 2, 3. Job. 22. 17.	These hate the Law, but profess to love it. Psal. 78. 36. 37.	These love the the Law, & profess their love. Psa. 119. 97. Rom. 7. 22.
These ar naked / yet without s•ame: though all men see their filthiness / they hide it not. Ior. 6. ⟨ϕ⟩ . & ⟨ϕ⟩ .	These ashamed of their nakedness. cover it with figleaves, or spiders webs of their own external righteousness. Isa. 59. 5. 6.	These have their nakedness covered of Christ, and by the garments of his righteousness. Rev. 3 1•, & 16. 15.

⟨1+ pages missing⟩ • sa•iters / Numb. 3•. the •niorite• / Sihon / ••gh / and the like.	come not into the land of promise.	an• the rest that ••mayneth for the p••ple of God. Heb. • 8, 9.
These both shall perish; and be punished with everlasting perdition, from the presence of the Lord; their portion shall be with the Devils in the lake of fire and brimston, which is the second death. Mat. 25. 30, 41, &•4, 51, Job, 13, 16. 2 Thes, 1, 8, 9, Rev, 20, •0. 13, 15.	These shall enter into the joy of then Lord; shall live and reign with him in heaven, & with his holy Angels for evermore Amen. Mat, 25. 21, 34, 4•
The Wicked shall turn into hell Psa. 9, 17.	The Hypocrites hope shall perish. Job, 8. 13.	The Saints shall be preserved forever, Psal, 37, 28.
The rejoicing of the Wicked is short; the joy of Hypocrites is but a moment. Job. 20. 5.	And men shall say. Verily there is fruit for the righteous, doubtless there is a God that judgeth in ye earth. Psa. 58. 15.

Finis

P-HA-13. The confession of faith of certain English people living in exile, in the Low countries. Together with a brief note of the special heads of those things wherein we differ fro[m] the Church of Engla[n]d. - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, Johnson, Francis, 1562-1618.

THE CONFESSION of faith of certain English people, living in exile, in the Low countries.

Together with a brief note of the special heads of those things wherein we differ frō the Church of England.

2 Cor. 4, 13.

We believe: therefore have we spoken.

Harmony of Confess. in the preface set before it, in the Name of the French & Belgic Churches.

The Prelates & Priests always cry out, that we are Heretics, Schismatics, and Sectaryes. Howbeit let them know that the crime of Heresy is not to be imputed to them whose faith doth wholly rely upon most sure grounds of the Scripture; That they are not Schismatics, who entierly cleave to the true Church of God, such as the Prophets & Apostles do describe unto us; Nor they to be counted Sectaryes, who embrace the truth of God which is one and always like itself.

Reprinted in the year. 1607.

To the reverend and learned men, Students of holy Scripture, in the Christian Universities, of Leyden in Holland, of Sanctandrewes in Scotland, of Heidelberg, Geneva, and other the like famous schools of learning in the Low countries. Scotland, Germany, & France.

The English people exiled, in the Low coūtreys, wish grace and peace in Jesus Christ.

THIS true Confession of our faith, in our judgment wholly agreeable to the sacred Scripture, we here exhibit unto all to be discussed: and unto you (reverend Sirs) we dedicate it for two causes. First, for that we know you are able in respect of your singular knowledge in the Scriptures, and hope you are willing in respect of your sincere piety, to convince our errors by the light of God's word, if anywhere we err out of the way. Secondly, that this testimony of Christian faith, if you also find it to agree with the word of truth, may by you be approved, either in silence or by writing, as you shall think best.

It may be, we shall be thought very bold, that being despised of all, yet doubted not to solicit you so many and so great learned men. But this we did, partly at the request of others to whom we would not deny it; partly with desire to have the truth through your help more defended & further spread abroad; partly constrained by our exile & other calamities almost infinite; partly also moved with love of our native country, and of these wherein now we live and others else where; wishing that all may walk with a right foot to the truth of the Gospel, & praying daily unto God, that the great work of restoring religion & the Church decayed, which he hath happily begun in these latter times, by our Gracious Sovereign and the other Princes of these countries & ages (his servants) he would fully accomplish, to the glory of his name & eternal salvation in Christ of his elect in all places of the earth.

Touching the causes which moved us to publish this Confession of faith, & to forsake the Church of England as now it standeth, we have truly & as briefly as we could related them, in the Preface to the Reader, hereafter following: & therefore thought here to omit the repetition of them. The Lord Jesus always preserve you & your Universities to the praise of his name, the ornament of good learning, the propagation & maintenance of his pure Religion.

From Amsterdam in the low countries. The year of the last patience of the saints, 1598.

☛ The preface to the Christian Reader.

IT may seem strange unto thee (Christian Reader) that any of the English nation should for the truth of the Gospel be forced to forsake their native country, & live in exile, especially in these days when the Gospel seemeth to have free passage & flourish in that land. And for this cause have our exile been hardly thought of by many, and evil spoken of by some, who know not (as it seemeth) either the true estate of the Church of England, or causes of our forsaking and separation from the same, but hearing this sect (as they call it) to be everywhere spoken against, have (without all further search) accounted and divulged us as heretics, or Schismatics at the least. Yea some (and such as worst might) have sought the increase of our afflictions, even here also if they could: which thing they have both secretly and openly attempted. This hath Satan added unto all our former sorrows, envying that we should have rest in any part of the inhabited world, and therefore ceaseth not to make war with the remnant of the woman's seed, which keep the commandments of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ. But the Lord that brought his former Israel out of Egypt & when they walked about from nation to nation, from one Kingdom to another people, suffered no man to do them wrong, but reproved Kings for their sakes: the same Lord yet liveth to maintain the right of his afflicted servants, whom he hath severed, and daily gathereth out of the world, to be unto himself a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people & Israel of God: He is our hope and strength and help in troubles ready to be found, he will hyde us under his wings, and under his feathers we shall be sure, until these miseries be overpast.

And though we could for our partes well have borne this rebuke of Christ in silence, and left our cause to him who judgeth justly all the children of men: yet for the manifestation & clearing of the truth of God from reproaches of men, and for the bringing others together with ourselves to the same knowledge and fellowship off the Gospel, we have thought it needful & our duty to make known unto the world, our unfeyned faith in God, and loyal obedience towards our Prince and all Governours set over us in the Lord, together with the reasons of our leaving the Ministry worship and Church of England. Which are not (as they pretend) for some few faults & corruptions remaining, such as we acknowledge may be found in the perfectest Church on earth: Neither count we it lawful for any member to forsake the fellowship off the Church for blemishes and imperfections, which everyone according to his calling should studiously seek to cure, and to expect and further it, until either there follow redress or the disease be grow incurable, & the candlestick be moved out of the place. But we having through God's mercy learned to discern betwixt the true worship of God & the Antichristiā leitourgy; the true ministry of Christ & Antichristiā prelacy; the ordinances of Christ's testament & Popish canons: have also learned to leave the evil & choose the good, to forsake Babel the land of our captivity, & get us unto Zion the mount of the Lord's holiness, and place where his honor dwelleth.

But first we desire thee, good Reader, to understand, and mind that we have not in any dislyke of the Civil estate and politick government in that Common wealth, which we much like and love, separated ourselves from that Church: Neither have we shaken of our allegiance and dutiful obedience to our Sovereign PRINCE, the honorable Counsellors, and other Magistrates set over us, but have always and still do reverēce love and obey them everyone in the Lord, opposing ourselves against all enemies foreign or domestical: against all invasions, insurrections, treasons or conspiracies by whomsoever intended against the Prince and the State, and are ready to adventure our lives in their defense, if need require. Neither have our greatest adversaries ever ben able to attaint us of the least disloyalty in this regard. And though now we be exiled, yet do we daily pray & will for the preservation peace & prosperity of our Sovereign Prince & all the dominions of that kingdom.

And whereas we have been accused of intrusion into the Magistrates office, as going about ourselves to reform the abuses in that land, it is a mere malicious calumny, which our adversaries have forged out of their own heart. We have always both by word & practice shown the contrary, neither ever attempted or purposed any such thing: but have endeavored thus only to reform ourselves and our lives according to the rule of God's word, by abstaining from all evil & keeping the commandments of Jesus: leaving the suppressing and casting out of those remnants of Idolatry, unto the Magistrates, to whom it belongeth.

And further we testify by these presents unto all men, & desire them to take knowledge heerof, that we have not forsaken any point of the true Ancient Catholic and Apostolic faith professed in our land: but hold the same grounds of Christian religion with them still, agreeing likewise herein, with the Dutch, Scottish, Germane, French, Helvetian, and all other Christian reformed Churches round about us, whose Confessions published, we cal to witness our agreement with them, in matters of greatest moment, being conferred with these Articles of our saith following. The things then only against which we contend, & which we mislike in the English parish assemblies, are many reliques of that mō of sin (whom they pretend to have abandoned) yet retained among them, and with a high hand maynteyned, upholden, and imposed. The particulars whereof (being almost infinite) cannot well of us be set down, and would be tedious and irksome to thee (good Reader:) But the principal heads we will truly relate, and that so briefly as in so large and confuse a subject we can.

First, in the planting and constituting of their Church (at the beginning of Queen Elizabeths reign) they received at once into the body of that Church, as members, the whole land, which generally then stood for the most part professed Papists, who had revolted from the profession, which they made in the days of King Edward of happy memory, and shed much blood of many Christian Martyrs in Queen Mary's days. This people yet standing in this fearful sinful state, in Idolatry, blindness, superstition, and all manner wickedness, without any professed repentance, and without the means thereof, namely the preaching of the word going before, were by force & authority of Law only compelled, and together received into the bosom and body of the Church, their seed baptized, themselves received and compelled to the Lord's supper, had this ministry and service (which now they use) enjoined & set over thē, and ever since they and their seed remain in this estate, being all but one body commonly called the Church of England. Here are none exempted or excluded, be they never so profane or wretched, no Atheist, adulterer, thief, or murderer, no liar, perjurer, Witch or conjurer, &c▪ all are one fellowship, one body, one Church. Now let the law of God be looked into, and there will be found, that such persons are not fit stones for the Lord's spiritual house, no meet members for Christ's glorious body. None of years may be received into the Church without fr̄e professed faith repentance and submission unto the Gospel of Christ & his heavenly ordinances. Neither may any contynew there longer then they bring forth the fruyts of faith, walking as becometh the Gospel of Christ. Christ Jesus hath called & severed his servants out of and from the world. How then should this confused and mixed people be esteemed the orderly gathered true planted and right constituted Church of God?

Secondly, as they have retained the whole rout of the popish multitude without any distinctiō, for members of their Church▪ so have they set over them (as reason was) the same popish Clergy & Prelacy, which they received from the Romish Apostasy, and this day is to be found in the popish Churches: to wit, Archbbs, Primates, Bbs. Metropolitans, Suffraganes, Archdeacōs, Deans, Chauncellors, Commissaries, and the rest of that rabble, which rule and govern these assemblies according to the Popish Canons, Rites, and Customs. These have the power and authority in their hands to set forth Injunctions, to make and depose Ministers, to excommunicate both Priests and people, which they do very exquisitly, if they yield not unto them their due homage and obedience. These have both Ecclesiastical and Civil authority, to reign as Princes in the Church and live as Lord's in the Common wealth, to punish, imprison, and persecute even to death all that dare but once mutter against their unlawful proceedings. Of these Prelates tyranny cruelty & unlawful authority, the better sort both of preachers and people have cried out, and long time sued unto the Prince and Parliament to have them removed out of the Church as bei•g the lymmes of Antichrist. But not prevailing. they are now content (fo• avoiding of the cross of Christ) to submit themselves & their souls to this Antichris•tian Hierarchy, and bear the sinful yok• and burden of their traditions, and to re•ceive and carry about the dreadful and d•testable mark of the Beast upon them.

Thirdly, the inferior ministry of tha• Church, consisteth of Priests, Parsons, Vi•cars, Curats, hired preachers or Lecturers, with Clerks and other like Officers, which have received their offices callings and authority from their forenamed Lord's the Prelates to whom they swear their canonical obedience, and promise to perform it with all reverence and submission. Their office is to read over the service book & Bbs Decrees thereby to worship God, to marry, to bury, to church women, to visit the sick, give him the Sacrament, and forgive him all his sins: & if their livings or benefices (as they are called) amount to a certain sūme of money in the Princes book, then must they preach, or get some other to preach for them four sermons in a year in their parish. Where also must be noted that the most part of these Priests are utterly unlearned, and cannot preach at all: whereby it cometh to pass that most of the people are as blind as they were in the dark days of popery. These Ministers generally, as well preachers as other, live in fear & servitude under their foresaid Lord's the Bbs. For as without their license written and sealed they cannot preach, so upon their displeasure and for not obeying their injunctions, they are many times suspended, degraded, and if they will not be ruled, put in prison: so that sundry of thē have ben suspended and imprisoned for preaching against the Prelates, not subscribing to their devised Articles and Book of common prayer, not wearing the square cap and surplice, not reading the service book, & be tied to the same, not coming to the Bbs courts, visitations, inquisitions, &c. till now of late being wearied with these troubles, they give place to their tyranny, and are content to conform themselves, and yield their canonical obedience according to their oath, keeping now silence, yea going back, bearing & bolstering the things which heretofore by word and writing they stood against, so long as there was any hope that the Prince & Counsel would have hearkened unto them, and put these adversary Prelates out of the Church.

Fourthly, for administratiō, which is by Law imposed upon all both Clergy and Laity, (for so they distinguish them) they have gathered their Service book verbatim out of the Mass book, turning out of Latin into English the Suffrages, Prayers, Let any Collects, &c. (leaving out some of the gross pointes therein) keeping still the old fashio of Psalms, Chapters, Pistles, Gospel-versicles, respondes, also T Deum, Benedictus, Magnificat, Nunc dimittis, Our Father Lord have mercy upon us, The Lord be wi you, O Lord open thow my lyps, Glory to God high, Lyft up your harts, O come let us reioyce Glory be to the Father, Quicunque vult, &c. These do they read daily morninge an evening all the year long in their priest vestures, Surplice, cope, &c. some the say, and some they sing, having in the Cathedral Churches, the Organs, Quersters, singing men and boys, as in times past in popey. Many popish errors yet remain in that book, which their own preacher have noted, & found fault with. There as they prescribed what prayers to read over the dead, over the co'n & grass, some time in the year. By it are they enjoined to keep their holy days to their Lady (as they call her) to all Saints and Angel to all Christ's Apostles, (except Paul as Barnabas) whose eyes they are comāde to fast, as also their Lent & Ember day besides frydayes and saturdayes throug out the whole year. By this book are the Ministers instructed how to marry, with the sign of the Ring, &c. to baptize the hallowed Font, with sign of the cross, with Godfathers and Godmothers, asking the child whether it will forsake the devil and all his works, &c. to minister also their other sacrament or communion to the people kneeling, as when in popery they received their maker, the words of Christ's institution altered, and others instead of them taken out of the popes portuis, with innumerable such like enormities and fopperies wherewith it swarmeth. And this is all the worship and service which many parishes have usually, except peradventure some written Homilies which the unlearned Priests read unto them. This service must first be read, and hath the preeminence, even on the Lord's days, before any preaching, yea before the Bible itself. He that can read this book distinctly, is fit enough with them to be a Priest, yea many that have ben Artificers, as Shoemakers, Tailors, Weavers, Porters, &c, and without any gifts or knowledge at all, save only to read English, have ben and are admitted, & to this day maynteyned by the Prelates in the Ministry.

To these Churches Ministers & Service must all the people there come every day, yea though they hav in the next parish a Preacher, and in their own a dumb unlearned Priest, yet are they all tied to their own Church and Minister, and must at the least twice a year, receve the Sacrament at his hands. If they refuse this, or do not ordinarily come to their parish Church, thē are they sūmoned, excommunicated, & imprisoned till they become obedient▪ In this bōdage are our countrymen there held under their Priests and Prelates: and such as by the word of God witness against and condemn these abominations, they hate, punish, put to death, and persecute out of the Land.

Who now in whom any spark of true light is. cannot plainly perceive this their Ministry worship and Church to be false & adulterate? Doth Christ's eternal testament ordain and approve of such popish Lord's and Prelates to reign over his Church? Are these, those Christian Bishops that is Pastors, Teachers, and Elders, which he hath set in his Church and over his own people unto the end of the world? Or can those Preachers which are thus created and deposed by, thus sworn and obedient unto their spiritual Lord's, be deemed true Teachers of the Gospel of Christ lawfully called and ordained to that Ministry? Is that their English Mass the true & spiritual worship of God according to his own will? We are taught in the scriptures that there can be no agreement made betwixt Christ and Antichrist, betwixt the Laws of God and men's traditions; that the servants of Jesus may not submit unto or receive the mark of that Beast, neither drink of the cup of the whore of Babylon's fornications, or buy any of her wares; but must contend for the maintenance of that saith which was once gyven unto the saints, keeping their souls and bodies pure frō Antichristiā pollutions, touching no unclean thing, nor having any fellowship with the vnfruteful works of darkness, least by partaking with their sins they receve also of their plagues, & drynck of the wyne of the wrath of God, & be tormented in fire and brimstone, before the holy Angels and before the Lamb for evermore. If Christ be God, let us follow him: but if the Pope be God, what shall we say? Why have we left him, his Church and ministry, his worship & jurisdiction, or what halting and mocking with the Lord is this, to put away the Popes person, and retain his Prelacy and Ministry, his Laws, Traditions and Canons, his worship & service: or at the least to frame unto ourselves a worship Ministry and Church after the pattern and mould of the Apostasy of Rome? which what other thing is it, then to make an Image of that wild beast, and force men to worship it?

Thus seest thow briefly (good Christian Reader) the things which we mislike in the Church of England, and for which we have separated ourselves as God commandeth. To all these, if we were amongst them, should we be forced to submit our bodies & souls, or else suffer violence at the hands of the Prelates, & end our lives by violent death or most miserable imprisonment, as many of our brethren before us have done. For so great is the malice and power of those Romish Priests, that they persecute unto death such as speak against them: and such poor Christians as they cast into their noisome prysons, can seldom or never get out (except with shipwreck of conscience) until they be carried forth upon the Bere. Neither is there any care taken for their relief in this case: but being cast into prison, there they are detained without any alloweance of meat or money for their maintenance, be their want and poverty never so great. If they have anything of their own, there they are driven to spend it up: if they have nothing, there they are left by the Prelates to feed on the air. And that they may more readily be sterved, or weakened in the truth, they are commonly shut up in close prison, their friends & acquayntance being not suffered to come at them: Nay even their wives & children being kept and debarred from them by the tyranny of these bloody Prelates and their Instruments: whose hard harts and unnatural cruelty, if thou diddest understand (gentle Reader) as many of us have felt and to this day yet feel, it would make thy heart to bleed, considering their vnmercyfull and barbarous dealing. And how many souls have perished in their prisons through miserable usage, how many have ben put to death, and how many banished, though we could to their eternal infamy relate to all the world, yet will we not blaze abroad their acts (for we take no delight in laying opē their shame) but mourn for them in secret, cōmitting our cause to God that judgeth justly, knowing that he that maketh inquisition for blood remembereth it, and will not forget the complaint of the poor. And thou (Christian Reader) vouch safe to remember unto God in thy prayers such as yet remain in bands and prison amongst them for the testimony of Jesus, enduring a hard sight of afflictions, and having the sentence of death in them selves, are like (if the Lord send not vnexpected deliverance) there to end their days.

Concerning ourselves, who through the mercy of God have found a place of rest in this land, for which benefyt we are always and everywhere humbly thankful: we desire (Christian Reader) thy charitable and Christian opinion of and holy prayers unto God for us, whose kingdom we seek, whose ordinances we desire to establish and obey: protesting with good consciences, that it is the truth of his Gospel only for which we strive against those cursed relics of Antichristian apostasy: unto which we dare in no wise submit ourselves, no not for a moment. For if it be not lawful for Christians at this day to retain the ceremonies of Moses Law together with the Gospel, as the Passover, Circumcision, the Priesthood, Sacrifices, &c. which yet were once commanded by God himself: how can we think it tolerable to observe the odious ceremonies of Antichrist, or submit ourselves to his laws, Priesthood, Hierarchy, & traditions, which the Lord never allowed, & which never entered into his heart: yea which he hath so severely forbidden, with fearful judgments threatened unto all that shall so do.

But because we have ben very grievously slaundred in our own nation, and the brute thereof hath followed us unto this land, whereby we have ben hardly deemed of by many without cause, we have ben forced at length to publysh this brief but true Confession of our faith, for the clearing of ourselves from sclaunder, and satisfying of many who desired to know the things we hold. Wherein if in anything we err (as who is so perfect that he erreth not) we crave (good Reader) thy Christian brotherly censure and information, promising always

(through the grace of God) to yield unto the truth when it shall be further shown us, and leave our errors when by the light of his word they shall be reprov'd. In like manner it shall be thy par• and duty to acknowledge and submytt unto the truth, by whomsoever it is professed, looking always rather to the preciousnes of the treasure itself then to the baseness of the vessels which contain it, or the infirmities of those that witness the same: in whose mortal bodies thou shalt see nothing but the marks and dying of our Lord Jesus Christ. But hold not thy faith in respect of men's persons, neither be thou moved at the evyl reports which have ben raised of us. Here hast thou the true sum of our Christian saith: try all things by the true light of God's word: and if thou shalt reap any profit by these our labors, give God the glory, and remember us unto him in thy prayers. Farewell in Christ Jesus.

1596.

THE CONFESSION of Faith of certain English people, living in the Low countries, exiled.
WE believe with the heart & confess with the mouth.

I.

THat there is but one God, one Christ, one Spirit, one Church, on• truth, one Faith, one true Religion, on• rule of godliness & obedience for all Chri•tians, in all places, at all times, to be observed.

II.

God is a spirit, whose being is 〈◇〉 himself, and giveth being, moving, & preservation to all other things, being himself eternal, most holy, every way infinite, in greatness, wisdom, power, goodness, justice, truth, &c. In this Godhead there be three distinct persons, coeternal, coequal, and coessential, being everyone of them one and the same God, & therefore not divided but distinguished one from another by their several and peculiar property: The Father, of whom are the other persons, but he of none; the Son, begotten of the Father from everlasting; the holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son before all beginnings.

III.

God hath decreed in himself from everlasting touching all things, and the very least circumstances of everything, effectually to work and dispose them according to the counsel of his own will, to the glory of his name. And touching his chiefest creatures, GOD hath in Christ before the foundation of the world, according to the good pleasure of his will, foreordayned some men and Angels, to eternal life, to be accomplished through Jesus Christ, to the praise of the glory of his grace. And hath also of old according to his just purpose foreappointed other both Angels and men, to eternal condēnation, to be accōplished through their own corruption and desert, to the praise of his justice.

IIII.

In the beginning, God made all things of nothing very good: and created man after his own image and likeness in righteousness and holiness of truth. But straightwayes after, by the subtlety of the serpent which Satan used as his instrument (himself with his Angels having sinned before, & not kept their first estate, but left their own habitation:) first Eva, then Adam being seduced, did wittingly and willingly fall into disobedience and transgression of the commandment of God. For the which, death came upon all, and reigneth over all: yea even over infants also, which have not sinned after the like manner of the transgression of Adam, that is, actually: Hence also it is, that all since the fall of Adam, are begotten in his own likeness after his image, being conceived and formed in iniquity, and so by nature children of wrath and servants of sin, and subject to death, and all other calamities due unto sin, in this world and forever.

V.

All mankind being thus fallen and become altogether dead in sin, & subject to the eternal wrath of God, both by original and actual corruption: Yet the elect, all and only, are redeemed, quickened, raised up and saved again, not of themselves, neither by works (least any man should boast himself) but wholly and only by God, of his free grace and mercy; through faith in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, that according as it is written, He that rejoiceth should rejoice in the Lord.

VI.

This therefore is life eternal, to know the only true God, and whom he hath sent into the world Jesus Christ. And on the contrary, the Lord will render vengeance in flaming fire unto them that know not God, and which obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

VII.

Now the rule of this knowledge faith and obedience, concerning the worship and service of God and all other Christian duties, is not men's opinions, devises, laws, constitutions, or traditions unwritten whatsoever, but only the written word of God, contained in the Canonical books of the old and New Testament.

VIII.

In this written word, God hath plainly reveled whatsoever he thought needful for us to know believe and acknowledge, touching the person & Office of Jesus Christ; in whom all the promises of God are Yea, and in whom they are Amen, to the praise of God through us.

IX.

Touching his Person, the Lord Jesus, of whom Moses & the Prophets wrote, and whom the Apostles preached, is the everlasting Son of God the father by eternal generation, the brightness of his glory, & the engraven form of his Person, coessential coequal & coeternal God with him and with the holy Ghost: By whom he made the worlds, by whom he upholdeth and governeth all the works he hath made: Who also, when the fullness of time was come, was made man of a woman, of the Tribe of Judah, of the seed of David and Abraham, to wyt, of Mary that blessed Virgin, by the holy Ghost coming upon her, & the power of the most High overshadowing her: and was also in all things like unto us, sin only excepted.

X

Touching his Office, Jesus Christ only is made the Mediator of the new Testament, even of the everlasting Covenant of grace between God & Man, to be perfectly and fully the Prophet, Priest, and King of the Church of God for evermore.

XI.

Unto this office, he was from everlasting by the just and sufficient authority of the Father, & in respect of his Manhood, from the woēb, called & separated & anointed also most fully & abundantly with all necessary gifts, as it is writ, God hath not measured out the Spirit unto him.

XII,

This office to be Mediator, that is, Prophet, Priest, and King of the Church of God, is so proper to Christ, as neither in the whole, not in any part thereof, it can be transferred from him to any other.

XIII.

Touching his Prophecy, Christ hath perfectly revealed out of the bosom of his Father, the whole word and will of God, that is needful for his servants, either jointly or severally to know believe or obey: He also hath spoken and doth speak to his Church in his own ordinance, by his own Ministers and instruments only, and not by any false Ministry at any time.

XIIII.

Touching his Priesthood, Christ being consecrated, hath appeared once to put away sin, by the offering and sacrificing of himself: and to this end hath fully performed & suffered all those things by which God through the blood of that his cross, in an acceptable sacrifice, might be reconciled to his elect, and the blessing of Abraham come upon us to eternal life wherefore also having broken down th• partition wall, and therewith finished and removed all those rites, shadows, and ceremonies, he is now entered within the veil into the holy of holies, that is t• the very heaven, and presence of God where he forever liveth and sitteth a• the right hand of Majesty appearing before the face of his Father, to make intercession for such as come unto the throne of grace by that new and living way: and not that only, but maketh his people a spiritual house, an holy Priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through him. Neither doth the Father accept or Christ offer unto the Father any other worship, or worshippers.

XV.

Towching his Kingdom, Christ being risen from the dead, ascended into heaven, set at the right hand of God the Father, having all power in heaven and earth given unto him, he doth spiritually govern his Church: exercising his power over all Angels and men, good and bad, to the preservation and salvation of the elect to the overruling and destruction of the reprobate: communicating & applying the benefits, virtue, & fruit of his prophecy and priesthood unto his elect, namely to their remission, subduing, & taking away of their sins, to their iustification, adoption of sons regeneration, sanctification, preservation & strengthening in all their conflicts against Satan, the world, the flesh, & the temptations of them: continually dwelling in governing, and keeping their hearts in his true faith & fear by his holy spirit: which having once given it, he never take away from them, but by it still beget and nourisheth in them repentance, faith love, obedience, comfort, peace, joy hope, and all Christian virtues, unto immortality; notwithstanding that it be sometimes through sin and temptation interrupted, smothered, and as it were overwhelmed for the time. And on the contrary, ruling in the world over the enemies, Satan, and all the vessels of wrath, limiting, using, restraining them by his mighty power, as seemeth good in his divine wisdom and justice, to the execution of his determinate counsel, to wit, to their seduction, hardening, and condemnation, delivering them up to a reprobate mind, to be kept through their own desert in darkness, sin, and sensuality, unto judgment.

XVI

The Kingdom shall be then fully perfected, when he shall the second time come in glory with his mighty Angels, to judge both quick and dead, to abolish a rule authority and power, to put all his enemies under his feet, to separate and free all his chosen from them forever to punish the wicked with everlasting perdition from his presence, to gather join, and carry the godly with himself into endless glory, and then to deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, that so the glory of the Father may be full and perfect in the Son, the glory of the Son in all his members, & God be all in all.

XVII.

In the mean time, besides his absolute rule in the world, Christ hath here in earth a spiritual Kingdom & oeconomic regiment in his Church, which he hath purchased and redeemed to himself, as a peculiar inheritance. And albeit that many hypocrites do for the time lurk amongst them whiles the Church militant here on earth, yet Christ notwithstanding by the power of his word gathereth them which be his into the body of his Church, calleth them from out of the world, bringeth them to his true faith, separating them from unbelievers, from idolatry, false worship, superstitious, vanity, dissolute life, and the works of darkness, &c. making them a royal Priesthood, an holy nation, a people set at liberty, to show forth the virtues of him that hath called them out of darkness into his marvelous light; gathering and uniting them together, as members of one body, in his faith, love, and holy order, unto all general and mutual duties, through his spirit instructing and governing them by such Officers & laws as he hath prescribed in his word, by which Officers and Laws he governeth his Church, and by none other.

XVIII.

To this Church he hath made the promises, and given the seals of his Covenant, presence, love, blessing & protection. Here are the holy Oracles, as in the Ark, surely kept and puerly taught. Here are all the fountains and springs of grace continually replenished & flowing forth. Here is Christ lifted up to all Nations, hither he inviteth all men to supper, his marriage feast: hither out all men of all estates and degrees, that know him their Prophet, Priest and King to repair, to be enrolled amongst his household servants, to be under his heavenly conduct and government, to lead their lives in his walled sheepfold and watered orchard, to have communion here with the Saints, that they may be made meet to be partakers of their inheritance in the kingdom of God.

XIX.

And as all his servants and subjects are called hither, to present their bodies and souls, and to bring the gifts God hath given them, so being come, they are here by himself bestowed in their several order, peculiar place, due use, being fitly compact and knit together by every joint of help, according to their effectual work in the measure of every part, unto the edification of itself in love. Whereunto when he ascended up on high he gave gifts unto men, and distributed them unto several public function in his Church, having instituted and ratified to continue unto the worlds end only this public ordinary ministry of Pastors, Teachers, Elders, Deacons, Helpers, & the instruction, government, and service of his Church.

XX,

This Ministry is exactly described distinguished, limited concerning their office, their calling to their office their administration of their office, and their maintenance in their office, by most perfect and plain laws in God's word: which laws it is not lawful for these Ministers, or for the whole Church wittingly to neglect, transgress, or violate in any part, nor yet to receive any other laws brought into the Church by any person whatsoever.

XXI.

None may usurp or execute a ministry, but such as are rightly called by the Church whereof they stand Ministers, unto such offices, and in such manner, as God hath prescribed in his word. And being so called, they ought to give all diligence to fulfil their Ministry to be found faithful and unblameable in all things.

XXII.

This Ministry is alike given to every Christian congregation, with like and equal power and commission to have & enjoy the same, as God offereth fit men and means, the same rules given to all for the election and execution thereof in all places.

XXIII,

As every Christian congregation hath power and commandment to elect and ordain their own Ministry according to the rules in God's word prescribed, & whilst they shall faithfully execute their office, to have them in superabundant love for their work sake, to provide for them, to honor them & reverence them, according to the dignity of the office they execute: So have they also power and commandment, when any such default, either in their life, doctrine, or administration breaketh out, as by the rule of the word debarreth them from, or depriveth them of their Ministry, by due order to depose them from the Ministry they exercised: yea if the case so require, and they remain obstinate & impenitent, orderly to cut them off by excommunication.

XXIII.

Christ hath given this power to receive in or to cut of any member, to the whole body together of every Christian congregation, and not to any one member apart, or to more members sequestered from the whole, or to any other Congregation to do it for them: Yet so, as ech Congregation ought to use the best help they can heervnto, and the most meet member they have to pronounce the same in their public assembly.

XXV,

Every member• of each Christian congregation, how excellent, great, or learned soever, ought to be subject to this censure & judgment of Christ: Yet ought not the Church without great care and due advise to proced against such public persons.

XXVI,

As Christ hath for the keeping of this Church in holy and orderly communion, placed some special men over the Church, who by their office are to govern, oversee, visit, watch &c. So likewise for the better keeping thereof in all places, by all the members, he hath given authority and laid duty upon them all to watch one over another.

XXVII.

Finally, whilst the Ministers & people thus remain together in this holy order & Christian communion, ech one endeavoring to do the will of God in their calling, and thus to walk to the glory of God, in the obedience of faith: Christ hath promised to be present with them, to bless & defend them against all fraud and force of their enemies, so as the gates of hell shall not prevail against thē.

XXVIII.

But when and where this holy order and diligent watch was intermitted, neglected, violated: Antichrist that man of sin, did together with other points of Christian faith corrupt also and alter the holy ordinances, offices, and administrations of the Church: and instead thereof brought in, and erected a strange new forged ministry, Liturgy, and government. Yea and the nations kingdoms and inhabitants of the earth were made druncken with this cup of fornications and abominations, and all people enforced to receive the Beasts mark and worship his image, and so brought into confusion and Babylonish bondage.

XXIX.

The present Hierarchy retained and used in England of Archbbs, Primates, Lordbps, Metropolitans, Suffraganes, Deans, Prebendaries, Canons, Peticanons, Archdeacōs, Chancellors, Commissaries, Priests, Deacons or Halfpriests, Parsons, Vicars, Curats, Hierling roving Preachers, Church-ward̄s, Parish-clerks: Also their Doctors, Proctors, and other Officers of their spiritual Courts (as they call them) together with the whole rabble of the Prelates, and their Servitours from and under them set over these Cathedral and Parishonal Assemblies in this confusion, are a strange & Antichristian Ministry and Offices: and are not that Ministry above named, instituted in Christ's Testament, nor placed in or over his Church.

XXX,

These their Popish Offices, Entrance, Administration, and Maintenance, with their names, titles, privileges, & prerogatives: also the power and rule they usurp over and in these Ecclesiastical assemblies, over the whole Ministration and affairs thereof, yea one over another, creating Priests, citing, suspēding, silencing, deposing, absolving, excommunicating, &c, Their confounding of Ecclesiastical & Civil jurisdiction, causes, and proceedings in their persons, Courts, Cōmissions, Visitations, the Priests of less rule taking their Ministry from & exercising it under them by their prescription & limitation, swearing Canonical obedience unto thē, administering by their devised imposed stinted popish Liturgy, &c. Finally the dispensations which they use for Plurality of benefices, licences of Non residency, Licences to mary and eat flesh (both which with them are on certain days & times forbidden, &c,) These, we say, are sufficient proofs of the former assertion, the particulars therein being duly examined by & compared to the rules of Christ's Testament. Not to speak here, of their private Baptism, of the sign of the Cross used in Baptism, of questions propounded to the infants, of the Priests surplice, prayer over the dead at burial, kneeling at the Lord's supper, and other the like popish corruptions, almost infinite, retained and allowed among them.

XXXI.

These Ecclesiastical Assemblies, remaining thus in confusion & bondage under this Antichristian Ministry, Courts, Canons, worship, Ordinances &c. without freedom and power to redress any enormitie among them, cannot be said in this confusion and subjection, truly to have Christ their Prophet Priest and King, neither can be in this estate (whilst we judge them by the rules of God's word) esteemed the true, visible, orderly gathered or cōstituted Churches of Christ, whereof the faithful may become or stand Members, or have any spiritual communion with them in their public worship and Administration.

XXXII.

Therefore are all that will be saved, bound by God's commandment, with speed to come forth of this Antichristian estate, leaving the suppression of it unto the Magistrate to whom it belongeth. And all such also as have received or exercised any of these false Offices or any pretended function or Ministry in or to this false and Antichristian constitution, are willingly in God's fear to give over and leave those unlawful Offices, and no longer to minister in this manner to these assemblies in this estate. Neither may any of what sort or condition soever, give any part of their goods, Lands, Money, or money worth to the maintenance of this false Ministry and worship, upon any commandment or under any color whatsoever.

XXXIII.

And being come forth of this Antichristiā-estate unto the freedom & true profession of Christ, besides the instructing and well guiding of their own families, they are willingly to join together in Christian communion and orderly covenant, and by free confession of the faith & obedience of Christ to unite themselves into peculiar & visible Congregations: wherein, as members of one body whereof Christ is the only head, they are to worship and serve God according to his word, remembering to keep holy the Lord's day.

XXXIII.

Then also such to whom God hath given gifts to interpret the Scriptures, tried in the exercise of Prophecy, attending to study and learning may and ought (by the appointment of the Congregation) to prophesy, according to the proportion of faith, and so to teach publicly the word of God, for the edification, exhortation and comfort of the Church: Until such time as the people be meet for and God manifest men with able gifts and fitness to such Office or Offices as Christ hath appointed to the public Ministry of his Church: But no Sacraments to be administered until the Pastors or Teachers be chosen and ordained into their Office.

XXXV.

And then wheresoever there shall be a people fit, and men furnished with meet and necessary gifts, they are not only still to continue the exercise of Prophecy aforesaid, but also upon due trial to proceed unto choice and ordination of Officers for the Ministry and service of the Church, according to the rule of God's word: & so hold on still to walk forward in the ways of Christ for their mutual edification and comfort, as it shall please God to give knowledge and grace thereunto. And particularly, that such as be of the seed, or under the government of any of the Church, be even in their infancy received to Baptism and made partakers of the sign of God's covenant made with the Faithful & their seed throughout all generations. And that all of the Church that are of years, and able to examine themselves, do communicate also in the Lord's supper, both men and women, and in both kind• bread and wine. In which elements as also in the water of baptism, even after they are consecrate, there is neither transubstantiation into, nor consubstantiation with the body and blood of Jesus Christ: whom the heavens must contain, until the time that all things be restored: But they are in the ordinance of God signs and seals of God's everlasting covenant with us, representing & offering to all the receivers, but exhibiting only to the true believers the Lord Jesus Christ & all his benefits unto righteousness, sanctification, and eternal life, through faith in his name, to the glory and praise of God.

XXXVI.

Thus being rightly gathered, established, & still proceeding in Christian communion and obedience of the Gospel of Christ, none is to separate for faults and corruptions, which may & so long as the Church consisteth of mortal men will fall out & arise among them, even in true constituted Churches, but by due order to seek redres•e thereof.

XXXVII.

Such as yet see not the truth, may not withstanding hear the public doctrine and prayers of the church, and with a meekness are to be sought by all means Yet none who are grown in years may be received into their communion as members, but such as do make confession of their faith, publicly desiring to be received as members, and promising to walk in the obedience of Christ. Neither any infants, but such as are the seed of the faithful by one of the parents, or under their education and government. And further not any from one congregation to be received members in another, without bringing certificate of their former estate & present purpose.

XXXVIII.

And although the particular Congregations be thus distinct and several bodies, everyone as a compact and knit city in itself, yet are they all to walk by one and the same rule, and by all means convenient to have the counsel and help one of another in all needful affairs of the Church, as members of one body in the common faith, under Christ their only head.

XXXIX.

It is the office and duty of Princes & Magistrates (who by the ordinance of God are supreme governors under him over all persons and causes within their Realms and dominions) to suppress and root out by their authority all false Ministries, voluntary religions, & counterfeit worship of God; to abolish and destroy the Idol Temples, Images, Altars, Vestments, & all other monuments of Idolatry and superstition; and to take and convert to their own civil uses not only the benefit of all such idolatrous buildings and monuments, but also the Revenues, Demeanes, Lordships, Possessions, Gleabes, and Maintenance of any false Ministries, and unlawful ecclesiastical functions whatsoever within their dominions. And on the other hand, to stablish and maintain by their laws every part of God's word, his Christian Religion, pure worship, and true Ministry described in his word; to cherish and protect all such as are careful to worship God according to his word, and to lead a godly life in all peace and loyalty; yea to enforce all their subjects whether Ecclesiastical or Civil, to do their duties to God and men, protecting & maintaining the good, punishing and restraining the evil, according as God hath commanded, whose Lieutenants they are here on earth.

XL.

And thus the protectiō & commandment of the Princes and Magistrates maketh it much more peaceable, though no whit at all more lawful, to walk in the ways and ordinances of Jesus Christ: which he hath commanded his Church to keep without spot and vurebukeable until his appearing in the end of the world, And in this behalf, therefore, the brethren thus minded and proceeding as is before said, are both continually to supplicate to God and as they may, to their Princes & Governors, that thus & under thē they may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

XLI.

And if God incline the Magistrates hearts to the allowance and protection of the Church therein, it ought to be accōuted a singular & happy blessing of God who grāteth such noursing Fathers & Mothers to his Church. And it behooveth all to be careful to walk worthy so great a mercy of God, in all thankfulness and obedience.

XLII,

But if God withhold the Magistrates allowance & furtherance herein, yet must we notwithstanding proceed together in Christian covenant & communion thus to walk in the obedience of Christ and confession of his faith and Gospel, even through the midst of all trials & afflictions, not accounting our goods, lands, wives, children, Fathers, Mothers, brethren, sisters, no nor our lives, dear unto us, so as we may finish our course with joy, remembering always that we ought to obey God rather than man: & grounding upon the commandment, commission, & promise of our Savior Christ, who as he hath all power in heaven and in earth, so hath also promised (if we keep his commandments, which he hath given without limitation of time, place, Magistrates allowance or disallowance) to be with us unto the end of the world: and when we have finished our course and kept the faith, to give us the crown of righteousness which is laid up for all that love his appearing.

XLIII.

Unto all men is to be given whatsoever is due unto them. Tributes, Customs, and all other such lawful & accustomed duties, ought willingly and orderly to be paid and performed: Our lands, goods, and bodies, to be submitted in the Lord to the Magistrates pleasure. And the Magistrates themselves every way to be acknowledged, reverenced, and obeyed according to godliness, not because of wrath only but also for conscience sake: And finally, all men so to be esteemed and regarded, as is due and meet for their place, age, estate and condition.

XLIIII.

And thus, we labor to give unto God y^t which is God's & unto Caesar that which is Caesars, and unto all men, that which belongeth unto them: Endeavoring ourselves to have always a clear conscience towards God and towards men: And having hope in God that the resurrection of the dead shall be of the just unto life, & of the unjust unto condemnation, everlasting. Now if any take this to be heresy, then do we with the Apostle freely confess that after the way which they call heresy, we worship God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, believing all things that are written in the Law and in the Prophets and Apostles: and whatsoever is according to this rule of truth published in our own country or holden by any reformed Churches in their Confessions abroad in the world. We do also reject and detest all strange and heretical opinions & doctrines of all Heretics both old and new whatsoever.

XLV.

Finally, whereas we are much slandered and traduced as if we denied or misliked that form of prayer commonly called the Lord's prayer: we thought it needful here also concerning it to make known, that we believe and acknowledge it to be a most absolute and most excellent form of prayer, such as no men nor Angels can set down the like. And that it was taught and appointed by our Lord Jesus Christ, not that we should be tied to the use of those very words, but that we should according to that rule make all our requests and thanksgiving unto God, forasmuch as it is a perfect form & pattern, containing in it plain & sufficient directions of prayer, for all occasions & necessities, that have ben, are, or shall be, to the Church of God, or any member thereof, to the end of the world.

Now unto him that is able to keep us that woe fall <◇> and to present us faultless before the presence of his glory with joy, that is, to God only wise, our Savior, be glory and majesty, and dominion, & power, both now <◇> forever, Amen.

The heads of the differences between us and the Church of England as it standeth at this day, concerning divers corruptions of Antichrist yet remaining among them.

I.

THat Christ the Lord hath by his last Testament given to his Church, and set therein, sufficient ordinary Offices, with the manner of calling or Entrance, Works, and Maintenance, for the administration of his holy things, and for the sufficient ordinary instruction guydance & service of his Church, to the end of the world.

2. That every particular Church hath like & full interest & power to enjoy and practice all the ordinances of Christ given by him to his Church to be observed therein perpetually.

3. That a true visible Church, is a company of people called and separated from the world by the word of God, and joined together by voluntary profession of the faith of Christ, in the fellowship of the Gospel. And that therefore no profane persons, unbelievers or wicked livers, may be received retained or c̄pelled to be members in the Church of Christ, which is his body; God having in all ages appointed & made a separation of his people from the world, before the Law, under the Law, & now in the time of the Gospel.

4. That discreet, faithful, & able men (though not yet in office of Ministry) may preach the Gospel and whole truth of God, that men being first brought to knowledge, & converted to the Lord, may then be joined together in holy comunion with Christ our head and one with another.

5. That being thus joined, every Church hath power in Christ to choose and take unto themselves meet and sufficient persons, into the Offices and functions of Pastors, Teachers,

Elders, Deacons and Helpers, as those which Christ hath appointed in his Testament, for the feeding, governing, serving, & building up of his Church. And that no Antichristian Hierarchy or ministry, of Popes. Arch-bishops, Lord bishops, Suffraganes, Deans, Archdeacons, Chauncellors, Parsons, Vicars, Priests, Dumb-ministers, or any such like, may be set over the Spouse & Church of Christ, nor retained therein.

6. That the Ministers aforesaid being lawfully called by the Church where they are to administer, ought to continue in their functions according to God's ordinance, and carefully to feed the flock of Christ committed unto them, being not enjoined or suffered to bear Civil offices withal, neither burdened with the execution of Civil affairs, as the celebration of marriage, burying the dead &c. which things belong as well to those without as within the Church.

7. That the due maintenance of the Officers aforesaid, should be of the free and voluntary contribution of the Church, that according to Christ's ordinance, they which preach the Gospel may live of the Gospel: and not by Popish Lordships and livings, or Jewish Tithes & Offerings. And that therefore the Lands & other like revenues of the Prelates & Clergy yet remaining (being still also baits to allure the Jesuits & Seminaries into the Land, & incitements unto them to plot & prosecute their wonted evil courses, in hope to enjoy them in time to come) may and ought to be taken away, & converted to better use, as those of the Abbeys & Nunneries have been heretofore by the Princes power and authority, to the honor of God & great good of the Reāme.

8. That all particular Churches ought to be so constituted, as having their own peculiar Officers, the whole body of every Church may meet together in one place, & jointly perform their duties to God & one towards another. And that the censures of admonition and excommunicatiō should in due manner be executed, for sin, convicted, & obstinately stood in. This power also to be in the body of the Church whereof the parties so offending & persisting are members.

9. That the Church is not to be governed by Popish Canons, Courts, Classes, Customs, or any human inventions, but by the Laws & rules which Christ hath appointed in his Testament. That no Apocrypha writings, but only the Canonical scriptures are to be used in the Church. And that the Lord is to be worshipped and called upon in spirit & truth, according to that form of prayer given by the Lord Jesus, Mat. 6. & after the Liturgy of his own Testament, not by any other framed or imposed by men, much less by one translated from the Popish <ϕ> , as the Book of common prayer &c.

10. That the Sacraments, being seals of God's covenant, ought to be administered only to the faithful, & Baptism to their seed or those under their government. And that according to the simplicity of the Gospel, without any Popish or other abuses, in either Sacrament.

11. That the Church is not to be urged to the observation of days & times, Jewish or Popish, save only to sanctify the Lord's day: Neither to be laden in things indifferent, with rites & ceremonies, whatsoever invented by men; but that Christian liberty may be retained: And what God hath left free, none to make bound.

12. That all monuments of Idolatry in garments or any other things, all Temples, Altars, Chapels, & other places dedicated hertofore by the Heathens or Antichristians to their false worship, ought by authority to be rased & abolished, not suffered to remain, for nourishing superstition, much less employed to the true worship of God.

13. That Popish degrees in Theology, imposition of single life in Colleges, abuse the study of profane heathen Writers, with other like corruptions in Schools & Academies should be removed & redressed, that so they may be the wellsprings & fountains of true learning & godliness.

14. Finally that all Churches & people (without exception) are bound in Religion onely to receive & submit unto that constitution Ministry, Worship, & order, which Christ Lord & King hath appointed unto his Church & not to any other devised by Man whatsoever.

Let him that readeth, consider.

P-HA-14. The orthodox foundation of religion long since collected by that judicious and elegant man, Mr. Henry Ainsworth, for the benefit of his private company, and now divulged for the public good of all that desire to know that Cornerstone, Christ Jesus crucified - Ainsworth, Henry, 1571-1622?, S. W. (Samuel White)

THE ORTHODOX FOVNDATION OF RELIGION, LONG SINCE COLLECTED by that Judicious and Elegant man M^r HENRY AINSWORTH, for the benefit of his private company: And now divulged for the public good of all that desire to know that Cornerstone Christ Jesus Crucified.

By S. W.

1 Chron. 28.9. Thou Solomon my son, know the Lord the God of thy Father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind.

Joh. 17.3. This is life eternal, that they may know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.

LONDON, Printed by R.C. for M. Sparke junior, and are to be sold at the Blew Bible in Green-Arbor. 1641.

TO MY MVCH HONOVRED, THE two virtuous young Gentlewomen, M^{ris} Elionor Carent, and M^{ris} Elionor War, Cousin Germans in the flesh, Concordants in the Spirit, and Co-inhabitants under the domestic government of the Right Worshipful, and truly religious Matron M^{ris} Amy Long widow, of Steeple Ashton, in the County of Wilts, my singular good friends, and neighbors, peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost, be multiplied here in this life, and endless glory be assured hereafter, in the life to come.

Sweet Lady,

AS I desire not to flatter your apparent youthful, and future hopeful deserts, both for your Christian profession, and godly conversation: so for your farther encouragement herein, I fear not to publish to the World (under your only protection & countenance) this ensuing Treatise, wherein my aim is only at God's Glory, the Churches good, and your acceptance. It hath in a Manuscript long lain by me, as a dead letter, without any vulgar use; but now having the approbation of some judicious Divines my Friends and Acquaintance, I am resolved (maugre all the malice of Belial's Brats, who fancy nothing but to satiate themselves with terrene pleasures and profits) to propose it to the reading & perusing of all that cheerfully endeavor to know the Lord Jesus, and him crucified, to the salvation of their souls; in comparison whereof the whole World, & all things therein cannot afford the least parallel.

Let me make so bold with you (lovely M^{rs} Carent) as to call to your remembrance, how Solomon (unto whom your Sexe is much beholding for divine instructions) concludes his Proverbs; Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vanity, but the woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised: wherein (be it spoken in verity without any obsequiousnesse) you have exceeded many of your Sexe, and Age, but yet I know that you acknowledge, that it is the Lord only that hath put this fear in your heart, and I pray God continue it unto the end; then shall his eyes be always upon you, and nothing shall be wanting unto you, to make you complete in the whole duty of man, & then shall you be incomparably more rare and precious in the sight of God in respect of your soul, then you are now fair, and comely in the eyes of man in regard of your body. I doubt not, but you well consider, what an invaluable thing it is to be one of the Lord's Jewels; as all his children are termed, Mal. 3.17. whereas others are compared to the loathsomest of all vessels, wherein there is no pleasure. Muster up, I pray you, all the devout women, from Sarah the mother of the faithful, Heb. 11.11. to the Elect Lady, to whom S. John dedicated his second Epistle, and you shall find a whole Army to animate you in the Lord's battle, and receive in the end with them the Salary of your victory, 2 Tim. 4.7. Once more, meditate upon the Honorable Prerogatives God's children have: for their nobleness they are the Sons of God; for their education, they are the Scholars of Christ; for their protection, the Angels are their servants; for their calling, they are Saints; for their riches, it is Christ, and with him all things else; for their life, it is spiritual, for their death, it is precious in God's own sight, and their birth-day to all felicity.

Now to conclude; that you are already of this Tribe, I am thoroughly persuaded, earnestly imploring the highest Mercy Seat, that you may so persist to the end. In the interim, let me beseech you diligently to read this your own Book, and the Lord give his Blessing, that you may increase your knowledge of him, your faith in him, your delight to serve him, and your fear to offend him; which the Almighty granting, and you my misprisions pardoning, you have nobly gratified the poor endeavors of

Your real and affectionate friend SAMUEL WHITE.

Polsholt, the first Moneth of this hopeful year. 1641.

TO THE READER.

I Do earnestly entreat thee (curieous Reader) whether thou dost already abound in knowledge, and judgment, or having but as yet a little, thou desirest more, to read this Treatise here before thou give any censure upon it, I doubt not but the Book will commend it self, as others of his works hath done, viz. his Exposition upon the five Books of Moses, and the Canticles, and his Communion of Saints, long ago published: all which (as in this) he is famous in accumulating the sacred Text: But for the life of the man, myself being an eye witness (living somewhile with him in Amsterdam) of his humility, sobriety, and discretion, setting aside his preposterous zeal in the point and practice of Separation; he lived and died unblameable to the world, and I am thoroughly persuaded that his soul rests with his Savior: and therefore once more I beseech thee, accept of my good will in publishing, and my prayers for a blessing upon reading, hoping that either for the increasing or confirming of thy knowledge in grace to glory, thou wilt glean something out of this more fruitful than large field, which shall be the prayer of thy friend and brother

S.W.

A SHORT COMPENDIOUS WAY HOW TO TEACH AND LEARN RELIGION.

Part I.

All Religion must be learned of God, Joh. 6.45. Mat. 25.9. God teacheth men, 1. inwardly by his Spirit: 2. outwardly, by his Word, 2 Cor. 2.11, 12. Neh. 9.20. Psal. 119.105. Jam. 1.18. Joh. 17.17.

God's Word is contained in the Scriptures of the Prophets and Apostles, Mal. 4.4. 2 Pet. 1.21. 2 Pet. 3.1, 2.

The holy Scriptures contain doctrine sufficient for every good work, and to bring men to salvation, 2 Tim. 3.16, 17.

All people of all sorts should learn to know the Scriptures, and so God's fear by them.

They which have knowledge of God's Word, and will, should teach others that are ignorant, Deut. 32.4.

Of men expert in the Law, some are to be chosen for public Ministers of the Word unto the Church, unto which work they must attend.

All others that have gifts from God, may teach publicly in order, 2 Cor. 14.31.

But men that are ignorant themselves, should not presume to be teachers of others.

The means to attain to the knowledge of God's Word, are first, prayer unto God, Psal. 119.12, 18. Psal. 119.97, 98. Secondly, meditation in the Scriptures. Thirdly, conversation with the wise and learned, Prov. 13.20.

The end of teaching and learning God's Word, is, that by attending unto faith and holiness, men may glorify God in their salvation, Rom. 10.17. Ja. 2.22.

He that is to teach God's Word must have respect unto these two things, 1. for preparation, and minding of things in himself. 2. for declaration, and delivering them to others, 2 Tim. 2.15. Mat. 13.32.

In preparation to preach the Word, men may either choose some text of Scripture to treat of, or without a certain text of Scripture, may handle some ground or grounds of Religion, and common places, so Luk. 4.17, 18.21. here Christ preached from a text, and Mat. 5.2, 3. here he preached without, binding himself to any text.

He that is to preach from any text of Scripture, let him first consider the general scope, and drift of the Scripture, so shall he more soundly explain, and apply the same: So Rom. 4.6, 7. here Paul minded beforehand the drift that David aimed at, which way to show, wherein man's blessedness consisted, namely, in the forgiveness of sin.

Portions of Scripture are, some for to illuminate our understanding; some for to sanctify and direct our affections, and actions; some for both of these together; some to illuminate our understanding, by manifesting the truth, and persuading it; some by manifesting error, and confuting it: So Heb. 1.8. here Paul by Scripture proveth Christ to be God, and so more excellent than the Angels. And Act. 17.29. here this Scripture confuteth man's carnal conceit of God.

Some Scriptures serve especially to direct, and sanctify our affections and actions, by persuading to virtue: some by dissuading from vice: so 1 Pet. 1.15, 16. and Rom. 12.19.

Again, some texts of Scripture treat of single matters; some of sundry matters, joined together: so Heb. 11.1. here Paul treateth of faith, the nature and effects of it; Gal. 3.11, 12. here he treateth not of saith simply, but of confirming a doctrine, that we are justified by faith, and refuting an error, that we are not justified by the works of the Law; Joh. 4.24. here is treated of divers joined together. This difference the Reader should observe.

Having observed the nature and scope of the Scriptures, to be handled, let him that teacheth the Scripture reduce them to some general head, as to someone of the Commandments, or to some ground of faith, according to Rom. 13.9. Or to Act. 2.25, 30. where Peter reduceth David's 16. Psal. to the doctrine of Christ's resurrection.

If the Scripture serve not so much to inform the mind, as move the affections, then consider which of the affections it most concerns, whether repentance, and sorrow, or hatred and shunning of vice, or love of God and our neighbor, and of virtue and fear of God, or consolation and patience in afflictions, or mercy and compassion to the poor and afflicted.

If the text be an history, (for as much as whatsoever is written is for our learning) the teacher should reduce the story of some general point of doctrine, or doctrines, either of the Law or of the Gospel; either from knowledge, or conversation. So Mat. 12.41. Christ draweth the history of the Ninevites to the doctrine of repentance from dead works: so the History of Elias is drawn to the doctrine of Prayer, Jam. 5.16, 17. so the history of Noah, is by Peter applied to the Doctrine of God's mercy and judgment, 2 Pet. 2.5. by Paul to the Doctrine of faith, Heb. 11.7.

If the text divide it self into sundry parts, or points of doctrine, order in handling must be observed, and point after point, duly entreated of without confusion, which is hurtful both to the teacher and learner; according to 1 Cor. 14.40. and to 2 Tim. 2.15. Let not divisions be curious, or manifold, for they trouble and confound the memory.

Every word in the text should be weighed with the true and proper meaning of the same, for an error in one word, may mar the whole sense of the Scripture, as in Mal. 2.16. some read it thus (If thou hatest her, put her away) where the text is corruptly translated, (for he hateth putting away) that is, God hateth divorce, these senses be contrary.

If the Words be against the common light of reason, being taken properly, we must understand them figuratively, as in Joh. 15.5. reason showeth that this is but a similitude.

Figurative speeches are many, and of many sorts, which by much labor, and observation, must be learned and understood, 2 Pet. 3.16. Luk. 8.10.

The coherence, circumstances, and scope of the Scripture handled, must be carefully weighed: so Paul, Heb. 3.7, &c. and 4.1.7. where he scanneth the words, and circumstances of that sentence.

The surest way to expound the Scriptures is by the Scriptures themselves, comparing place with place: so Neh. 8.9. so Paul conferreth many Scriptures, Heb. 1.2.

The principal matters and circumstances in a text are most to be insisted on, others not to be neglected, but more briefly handled, as Gen. 13.8. here the nature of contention, and the duties of brotherhood, are duly to be particularized; 1 Cor. 15.50. here the word brethren is not so much to be insisted on, as the more weighty purposed doctrine.

Special regard must be had of gathering doctrines, and applying them: Doctrines may be gathered from the cause of a thing, as Heb. 1.10. where Christ's God-head is proved by the making of the world. So also by the effects, adjuncts, comparisons, contraries, and as the doctrines of Christ, and his Apostles, everywhere from the Old Testament do manifest.

Application is when the doctrine generally, or concerning others, is by the teacher applied to the time, or persons present: as in Rom. 4.23, 24. So Paul applieth that of the Psalms. to his present time, Heb. 1.7. and 4.1, 2, 3.

Application is to be made in wisdom, according to the time, persons, occasions, and matters in hand, so Noah's history is applied by Paul to faith, by Peter to God's mercy and judgment, 2 Pet. 2.5. by Christ to the security of men, Mat. 24.37, 38.

The manner of delivering the Word, should be with simplicity, sincerity, and godly pureness, and not with affected words, flattering speeches, or human wisdom. And I brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of words, or of human wisdom, declaring unto you the testimonies of God. The gesture of the body should be grave and sober, the continuance of preaching ordinarily should not be long, for the Sermons of Christ, and his Apostles expressed in the Scriptures, are brief.

Deo soli Gratia.

THE MYSTERY OF PIETY, OR, Doctrine of truth, which is according to godliness.

Part II.

Divinity, Theology, or Religion, is called in Scripture, the fear of Jehovah, or reverence of God; and by the Apostle it is named, the truth which is according to godliness; and so the doctrine of it is likewise called, 1 Tim. 6.3.

The end of teaching, learning, profession, and practice of Religion or godliness, is the glory of God in our salvation. Our salvation shall be the full knowledge, light, and fruition of God, forever in Heaven, it is called eternal life.

The way to salvation or life eternal is, 1. by the knowledge and faith of God. 2. By the service of him. Jo. 17.3. 1. Chron. 28.9.

Of GOD.

This word (GOD) is used sometimes properly, sometimes improperly: properly it is a title given to the Creator of all things, so Gen. 1.1. Improperly it is a title given to principal creatures, as Angels, Psal. 8.5. Heb. 2.7. and Princes and Magistrates of the world are called God's, Psal. 82.6. Jo. 10.34, 35. But here we treat of God properly so called.

Of God there are four things to be considered:

- 1 That there is a God.
- 2 What God is.
- 3 That there is but one God.
- 4 That there be 3. distinct persons.

That there is a God, is proved, besides the testimony of Scripture, as by the works of creation, especially man's soul, Zach. 12.1. by works of providence, especially judgments on the wicked, Psal. 9.16. and 58.10, 11. by deliverance of the Saints, Exod. 14.15. and by the terrors of conscience, Isaiah 32.14. God cannot be known by face of us in this life, that is to say, perfectly known in this barbarous nature, Exod. 23.20.

Not only our bodily eyes, but also the eyes of our mind, or understanding and reason, are uncapable in this life of God, and cannot comprehend him, Job. 11.7. Neither can any name or names express unto us, the infinite, and incomprehensible being of God.

But God of his goodness doth make himself known unto us in this life, in part darkly, and imperfectly, as in 1 Cor. 13.12. and Exod. 33.23.

God is a Spirit, Job. 4.23. the first and the last, infinite, filling heaven and earth, Jer. 23.24. most simple, without commixture or composition, eternal, without beginning or end, 1 Tim. 1.17. Infinite without comprehension of place, or strength, 1 King. 8.27. Constant without shadow of change. Jam. 1.17. absolute in power, holiness, and glory, Gen. 17.1. Goodness, even goodness it self.

In that God is a spirit, we ought not to think the God-head is like to gold or silver, or stone graven by art, or any invention of man.

In that he is the first, he dependeth upon no other, neither may anything be imagined before him, but whatsoever is, hath its being from him: Rom. 22.36. Act. 17.28.

In that God is infinite, he is not to be thought as limitable, or bounded within any place, or restrained to any time, or comprehensible of any, or of all the Creatures.

We may learn to know God both by his Works, Word, and Spirit, Rom. 1.20. Psal. 119.104. 1 Cor. 2.10, 11, 12. Isaiah 59.21.

God is known three manner of ways by his works: 1 By the excellency of the creatures, which must needs be much more in the Creator, Psal. 94.9, 10. 2 By imperfections and want in the creatures, which are not in God at all, Psal. 102.25, 26, 27. 3 By causing and working, what is good in all things, Isaiah 44.24. Jam. 1.17. Phil. 2.13.

The Word of God, and Holy Scripture teacheth us to know God.

- 1 By names, and titles given unto him.
- 2 By his Essence.
- 3 By his Properties.
- 4 By his effects.

Object. God's Will, and his Essence be one, then God willeth all things that he doth, so God is all things that he doth.

Answ. When we say, God willeth many things, or knoweth all things, we speak not of God's Essence simply, or absolutely, but all things are subject to God's knowledge, which knowledge he is: and some things are subject to God's will, that is, God is he to whose knowledge (which is his being) all things are subject.

The names and titles given unto God, do concern some his essence, and eternal being, as Jehovah Jah, Ehieh, I am he that is, was, and is to come; which show that God hath his essence, being, and existence of himself, and not of, from, by, or thorough any other, Exod. 3.14. that he giveth essence, or existence to all creatures, Act. 17.28. Amos 5.8. that he giveth being to his promises, and fulleth them, Exod. 6.3, 4. and 26.2. Isaiah 42.8. Rom. 4.14. that he is eternal, without beginning and end.

Some titles set forth God's Power, and Almightyness, as all-strong, or Almighty, Aloah, most mighty, Gelbor, puissant, Mouzzim, almighty, Shaddaie, sufficient, Adonai, Lord, Stay, or Sustainer.

Some names contain the mystery of the Trinity, as Alohim Adonai, which are in the form plural, yet joined with other words singular.

The essence of God is taught us in the Scripture, either absolutely, or diversely in respect of the three persons. God's Essence is absolutely to be considered (thus set forth) that the Godhead or Essence of God is one, undivided, Deut. 6.4.

That the Godhead, or most Divine Essence, is most perfect, absolute, and sufficient in it self, Isaiah 40.28. Rom. 11.34, 35. Gen. 17.1.

That the Godhead is a meare act substantially, and therefore cannot suffer anything, nor be resisted by any; neither hath, or ever had, or ever possibly can have, to be otherwise than he is, Psalm. 102.27. Jam. 1.17.

The Godhead considered diversely, for the manner of being, is three Persons in one Essence, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, 1 Joh. 5.7.

The Father is the first person of the Trinity, having foundation in none, of personal substance.

The Son is the second person in the Trinity, having foundation of personal substance, of whom he is eternally begotten, Joh. 5.26.

The Holy Ghost is the third person in the Trinity, having foundation from the Father and the Son, from both which, he especially proceedeth, Joh. 14.26, &c.

In the order and manner of the creatures, the original of the actions is ascribed to the Father, Joh. 5.17.19. The nature and manner of working to the Son, Joh. 1.3. Heb. 12. The efficacy and power to the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 11, 12.

God hath the most excellent understanding, that is, the Essence of God▪ for all in God is Essentiall, therefore this is infinite, and eternal, as the Godhead is; therefore the things which it understandeth must also be eternal. Therefore it must be most perfect, as the understanding is most perfect. But nothing is more perfect than God, therefore nothing but God can be the eternal act of God's understanding. Therefore God's understanding hath reflection eternally to it self, as when a man's mind thinketh upon it self.

The understanding hath in it an image of the thing understood; therefore God eternally understanding himself, conceived a most perfect image of himself.

This most perfect bringing forth of the Image in the Godhead, is rightly called a conception, or generation, for it is the bringing forth of a thing most like to God, and the conception or bringing forth of a thing most like it self, is generation; the more perfect the nature of the begetter is, the more near, and conjoined is the thing begotten; and God's life being most perfect, and it being all an understanding, needs must this conception of his be most perfect; And so a most perfect generation, which is a second manner of being, called the Image, (or person) called the Image of the Son of God, the Image of his hypostasis. And seeing that which God understandeth, and his Essence is one and the same, needs must the Essence, and excellency of the Father, and the Son, be both one, and eternal. Thus God cannot be minded to be, but with his coeternal Son.

As there is an understanding in the Godhead, so needs must there be a will also, and the more understanding, the more, and perfecter is the will, and in God there being a perfect understanding, there must be also needs a perfect will; and as the understanding is active essentially in the Godhead, so is the will; and as he understandeth himself, as the most perfect thing, so also he willeth himself as the most perfect good; and thus the will reflecteth as did the understanding. God's infinite will embracing an infinite willed thing, there must needs be infinite love, and highest pleasure proceed there-from: so whilst the eternal Father conceiveth his Son, and perfectly willeth it, there must needs be full and perfect love from the Father to the Son, and from the Son to the Father, so from both proceedeth a third manner of being, called the third person, the Holy Spirit.

It is called a Spirit for three causes; 1 Because love is the enforcing, or motive of the Will, to the thing loved, and as it were, a spring and breathing to it; and because the Father breatheth in love to the Son, and the Son again to the Father, therefore the Holy Spirit is right said to proceed from them both. 2 It is called a Spirit, because the proceeding of the motive between the Father and the Son, is by a hidden way. 3 Because God's children perceive God's gifts, the gifts of love, by secret inspiration.

It is called holy to discern it from other spirits, and because nothing can be more holy than this in God, and because it maketh holy, and sanctifieth the Church.

And seeing God's Will and Essence is one in him, the Holy Ghost must needs be one with the Father, and the Son, coequal, and eternal. Thus by undoubted principles from God's essence, there are three manner of subsistings in God, and there can be neither more nor less, unless we will deny God.

The Holy Spirit is taken as spoken substantially, or accidentally; substantially it meaneth a thing most simple in essence, most active in efficacy. Again, that it is taken, either essentially, and so it comprehendeth God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, as Joh. 4.24. or personally applied to the third person of the Trinity. Accidentally, the word is used for a gift or motion of the Holy Spirit, Joh. 7.39. but in the 1 Cor. 12. the Spirit, and the gifts are plainly distinguished.

The three persons have one and the same common Essence, and common works of the Essence, and of one divine Essence there are three persons.

The persons are distinguished from the essence, as the manner of a thing is from the matter; and they are distinguished one from another, as the manner of the Essence, one from another. The difference of the persons, is inward and outward; the inward difference, is the personal property, which floweth from the manner of being.

The Father is of himself, not only in respect of Essence, but also in respect of being, the Father begetteth his Image, or Son: the Father sendeth the Holy Ghost.

The Son as touching the Essence is of himself, as touching the manner of being, he is of the Father. The Son is begotten of the Father; the Son sendeth the Holy Ghost.

The Holy Ghost in respect of the Essence is of himself, in respect of the manner of the Essence, he proceedeth from the Father and the Son.

The outward difference is when the persons are distinguished by the effects and operations towards the creatures.

As is the order of being, so is the order of doing in the persons; the Father doth of himself, the Son in the Father, and the Holy Ghost in both.

The Father createth, conserveth, and governeth the world, the Son Redeemeth the world, the Holy Ghost sanctifieth it.

God's properties are either absolute, or they have relations to the creatures.

Properties of the Essence, generally considered, are 1 unchangeableness, as that the Essence of God, is without all corruption, alteration, or local motion, Jam. 1.17.

2 Infiniteness, as that God cannot be measured, or determined by any, hath no quantity, no determination of his power, virtue, time, and place.

Properties of the Essence specially considered, are understanding, will, and holiness.

1 God's understanding is such, as he perfectly knoweth all things in himself, without discoursing of things, or distance of time.

2 God's will is such that he approveth the good, and refuseth the evil, himself directly is all good, and indirectly other things are good, as they carry his image, and whatsoever he will that he can, but not whatsoever he can, he will.

3 Holiness is that high perfection, and pattern of all virtue, in respect whereof the holiness, and virtues of all men, and Angels are but shadows; of this holiness ariseth high blessedness, and contentation in God.

God's properties referred to the creatures, are virtues, or virtuous acts.

God's virtues in respect of his nature, is power, whereby he can effect what, when, and howsoever he will, concerning any creature, Psalms. 145.6. Job. 41.2.3.

God's power is only active and not passive, depending on any other, Eph. 1.19, 20.

God's power is infinite in respect of his Essence, of the objects, of the effects and of the duration.

God can do all things, that absolutely, simply, and in nature are possible; Job 42.3.

Thus things are absolutely possible to be done, which are not contradictory to the nature of God, nor to the Essence of other things without God; he cannot deny himself, 2 Tim. 2.13.

Quest. Whether can God do a thing against Nature?

Answ. If against be meant contradictory to Nature, so as it repugneth the Essence, essential properties, and definition of things, then God cannot do such; as God cannot make a body should be infinite, a reasonable creature without reason; for the nature of things are subordinate to the nature of God, as second causes to the first, and things subordinate overthrow not their nature: if (against) be meant above the power of secondary causes, as of water to make wine, to make water out of stones: or if it be meant the hindrance of their natural actions, of things flowing from their particular properties, as to let the fire from burning, the sun from moving, such things God hath done, and can do daily.

God's virtue in respect of understanding, is his fore-knowledge; whatsoever is, or cometh to pass in time, be it good or evil, with all the effects and events of actions, God foreknew before all eternity, for all things are of God, and his ordering; and he being infinite, his understanding admitteth no distinction of time: he hath all objects always present: God's knowledge is certain, and infallible, so as it is not possible things should fall out otherwise, than he knew; for he hath his knowledge from himself, not from the creatures. God's fore-knowledge imposeth no necessity upon the events.

God's virtues in respect of his will are bounty, and justice: Bounty is that, by which out of love, God procureth to every creature the good thereof, and it is common, and particular: common bounty is towards all creatures, even such as offend him, directing them to their natural good, and sustaining them therein, so long as justice suffereth, Luk. 6.36. God cannot hate his creatures, as his works, for so they carry a similitude of God, the first cause: and none can hate himself, or his similitude, for a similitude is something of himself. God's bounty to his creatures presupposeth not any debt or duty, which implieth imperfection; and if God were bound to his creatures, he should depend on them, and be imperfect.

God's bounty which is infinite, giveth creatures good things, of nature, of soul, and body, and of outward things.

Such is God's bounty, as the creatures suffer no evil, unless God's justice require it, or a greater good confirm it; of this virtue God is called patient, and long suffering.

Particular, or special bounty, is that whereby God loved some men (in Christ) fallen into sin, and furthereth them to eternal salvation. God's special bounty, is the first beginning, both of salvation, and of the means thereto. This bounty is no inherent quality in us, but we are the object of it, it is a grace making us grateful, not finding us so.

God's Justice is a virtue by which he executeth his love to reasonable creatures, giving rewards to the obedient, and punishment to the obstinate, Gen 18.24.

God's Justice is essential and unchangeable, as he cannot of his bounty forgive the creatures punishment, unless his justice be satisfied.

God's virtue in respect of his understanding, and will together, is truth, or veracity, whereby he so manifesteth himself to the reasonable creature, both by words, signs, and works, as indeed he is, Revel. 15.3.

God hath in himself the pattern of all true things, so that whatsoever in the creature is true, is so because of the first truth in the mind of God.

Truth in God is essential, and so unchangeable; but truth in man is contingent, and so changeable.

Seeing God's truth is essential, his testimony must needs be authentic. Hither of God's virtue, now follow their acts, that is, the exercise & the applications of these virtues, to the manifestation of his glory.

God's actions are either the decreeing of things, or the execution of the decree.

God's decree, purpose, or counsel, is his purpose of exercising operations about the creatures, and of decreeing them unto their end: God worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, Act. 4.28.

Whatsoever God doth in time, that he did decree to do from all eternity even as he doth it.

The execution of the decree is an act, whereby God's counsel and purpose is shown forth, and applied to the creatures, by an effectual operation, Eph. 1.11. This is either first, or arising of the first.

God's first operation, or execution of the decree, is the creation of the world, Gen. 1.1. Creation is the first perfect making of all things pure, and good: so the original word importeth, Gen. 1.1.

Creation is of two sorts,

- Immediate.
- Mediate.

Immediate creation, is the making things of mere nothing, Heb. 11.3.

Mediate creation, is the making of things of some former matter, but that matter so rude as that it is no better than nothing, so God created man of the dust of the earth, Gen. 2.7.

Creation proceedeth from an infinite power, and therefore excludeth all necessary matters, for though God made man of the dust of the earth, yet did he this not of necessity, but could have made him also of nothing. If God needed any matter to work upon, his power were not infinite, but should depend on another thing, and not be absolute.

The creation of the world was distinguished by the space of six days, in respect of the effects, and whole world created; and for our better capacity. And for as much as God is above all time, and of infinite power, it is to be thought he created everything particular in a moment, saying, Let there be light, and there was light, Gen. 1.3.

In the first day were created the heavens, and the earth, and matter mixed together, and light, Gen. 1.1, 2. Angels, Job. 38.7. minerals, and precious stones.

In the second day was the out-spread firmament, or heaven, the division of waters above from the waters beneath, Gen. 1.6, 7, 8.

The heavens are threefold, 1 The Air, wherein are the clouds and the fowls fly, called thereupon the clouds of Heaven; Dan. 7.13. and, The fowls of Heaven, Psal. 88. 2 The higher place, wherein are set, the Sun, Moon, and Stars, Gen. 1.17. 3 The highest heavens, where God's glory is most manifest, and the Angels attend upon his Majesty, Mat. 6.9. hereupon Paul mentioneth the third heaven, 2 Cor. 11.2. This seemeth to be made the first day, and the Angels, the inhabitants therein, Gen. 1.1. Job 38.6, 7. The division of the waters was such, that some remained below with the earth, some as the watery vapors, were lift up above the heavens; that is, above the lower region of the air, wherein they congeale, and after dissolve into rain, snow, and dew.

In the third day was a twofold work: first, gathering of the nether waters into one place or sea, that the dry land might appear. Secondly, the bringing forth of herbs, and trees, Gen. 1.9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

In the fourth day was made the Sun, Moon, and Stars, to give light on the earth, and to be for signs, and seasons, Gen. 1.14.

In the fifth day was a twofold work; first, fishes: secondly, fowls, Gen. 1.22, 23.

In the sixth day was a twofold work; first, beasts of all sorts: secondly men, Gen. 1.24, 25, 26.

Man, as touching his body, was made of the dust of the earth, to admonish him to humiliation; his soul was imbreathed of God. The woman, as touching her body, was made of Adams ribbe, to admonish man and wife of their conjunction, her soul being also imbreathed.

Man, besides natural gifts, had also superiority, and carrieth God's Image, whereof more hereafter.

This whole creation God hath so compact together, as that it is one world, environed about with the heavens; neither have we ground in God's Word, nor in reason to think, there are more Worlds than this one.

The world is knit together by the several parts: the heavens to the fire, the fire to the air, air to the Water, water to the earth, so that it is not possible to find any empty place.

The figure of the world is round.

The perfection of the world consisteth in the parts, and degrees; perfection of parts is such, as God sufficiently furnisheth the world with variety of creatures for his glory: perfection of degrees is such, as that all creatures have such force and virtue, as may serve to God's glory, conservation of the world, and use of man.

The beauty of the world is the wonderful property, shape and color, which appeareth in all things, the perpetual succession of things by generation, that plants, and living things dying, are yet continued.

The causes of creating the world were; first, his love towards us: Secondly, the showing forth of his glory: Thirdly, the fulfilling of his decree.

The end, that God may be known, and honored of his creatures.

The use, for men, generally all, specially the elect.

The seventh day God made a Sabbath of rest, and of it are to be noted three things, 1 God's resting from creating: 2 His blessing it above other days: 3 His sanctifying it for the use of the Church.

Chiefest creatures which God created, were Angels, and men, in whom he imprinted his own divine Image.

Angels were created of God, Psal. 148.1, 5. Col. 1.16. Although it be uncertain what day they were created, yet it may be probably supposed on the first day.

Angels are spirits finite and complete; they are finite, as all other creatures are, and so differ from God the infinite, and uncreated spirit; and they are complete and full, and so subsisting of themselves, and therein differ from the souls of men, which are incomplete, and Essential parts of man.

Angels are in nature more excellent than men, and therefore the most excellent creatures; they are called the sons of God, therefore were created in holiness and truth, the Image of God.

The bodies wherein Angels sometimes appeared, were not essentially united with them, as men's bodies be, but were assumed for a time, though it be uncertain whereof they were made.

The end why they were created, was first, to praise, and celebrate God's glory, Psal. 148.2, 3. Job 38.6, 7. Secondly, to execute his Commandments, Psal. 103.20. Thirdly, to observe and conserve the creatures, Psal. 91.11. Therefore Angels are mighty, Psal. 103.20. they are swift and nimble, and so fly in their administration: they execute God's will with all readiness and cheerfulness.

They are wise, & of great understanding, 2 Sam. 14.20. they are by nature mutable, & can change from good to evil, as they that sinned are an example, Jud. 6.

Man the excellentest of all earthly creatures, was made both male and female in the image of God, Gen. 5.1, 2, 3.

God's Image in man, was the understanding and mind of man, so as he had the full, right, clear and orderly knowledge of all things created of God, and of God himself, so far as concerned man's happiness: this is manifest by Adams naming of all creatures, and by the restoring of God's Image in us by Christ, which is in all wisdom, and spiritual understanding, Col. 1.9.

God's Image was in the will, the perfection whereof was such, as it had a right inclination, and appetite to that which was good, and a free execution of the appetite, or a free will, without impediment inward or outward, Eph. 4.24.

God Image was in the affections, as the sensitive desires of nature, eating, drinking, generation, in love, hatred, that these are mere conformable to truth, reason, and holiness, Eph. 4.24.

God's Image was in the body of man, in that it was perfectly framed, and disposed in the parts, not subject to death, or disease, his stature upright, his proportion most exact, his color amiable, have nothing whereof to be ashamed; these admirable parts and members, also shadowing God's virtues, as the eye, God's all-seeing; the tongue, God's Word; the hand, his Almighty power.

The soul carrieth an image of the unity of the Godhead, and trinity of persons, in that there is one soul with three faculties; of understanding, will, and memory: the whole man carrieth God's Image, in that he had the rule, and sovereignty over all the earth, Gen. 1.28. Psal. 8.

The end of the Image of God in man, was the glory of the Creator, and the inseparable joy and delight of man, in his own similitude and union with God, Psal. 17.51. Gen. 2.25.—19.20.

The place where man was set (with this image of God upon him) was the Garden of Eden, or of pleasure, commonly called Paradise, Gen. 2.8. This Garden seemeth by the description thereof, and the rivers therein, to have been about Mesopotamia, or Babylon, Gen. 2.

In this Garden, watered with a goodly river, God caused to grow every tree, pleasant to the eye, and good for meat, Gen. 2.9.

The tree of knowledge of good and evil, was forbidden man to eat, upon the pain of assured death, by eating whereof man should know the difference between evil and Good, and how heavy a thing it was to disobey the Commandments of God.

The tree of life was a Sacramental tree, confirming, and assuring man of God's grace, favor, and conservation in life forever, Gen. 2.9. Rev. 2.7.

In all likelihood, this Garden of Paradise, which is now nowhere to be found, was defaced by Noah's flood, until which time it was kept, and warded by Cherubims, that men may seek the paradise which is in the highest heavens, Gen. 3.24. 2 Cor. 12.4. Luk. 23.43.

In the Paradise man was employed, first to serve God his Creator, & procure his own eternal bliss, whereunto he was fitted with freedom of will for perfect obedience, according to the tenor of the covenant of works. Secondly, to dress, and till the garden.

This covenant of works graven in man's heart, as may be gathered by Gen. 3.8. & 4.6. Rev. 2.14.16. was sealed with two Sacramental trees; the first the tree of life, assuring life and glory if he obeyed: the second of knowledge, assuring death if he transgressed: hitherto of the creation of the world, now followeth the conservation, and government of the same.

Unto the conservation of the world, pertaineth first the knowledge of God, which is such as he exactly, and fully discerneth all things, what they are, of what sort, what they can do, and what shall become of them in the end, for from the beginning of the world he knoweth all his works.

God's knowledge is not only in general, but of every particular, and of their several actions, words, and thoughts, Psal. 139.2, 3, 4. It reacheth to smallest and vilest creatures, Mat. 10.30.

As God knoweth, so he willeth, and appointeth all things concerning the creatures, Jer. 25.5, 6, 7.

God's Will and appointment extendeth also to beasts, and the vilest creatures, Mat. 10.29.

God manifesteth not all his will concerning his creatures and his dealing with them, Mat. 24.36. so then God's revealed will, and his secret will are not opposite, but only members and degrees of will. God's will is 1 Absolute. 2 Conditional.

Absolute, are things absolutely promised, or spoken without condition, on our part: Conditional, when God willeth anything of us, but with condition; as he willeth that all men should be saved, namely if they will believe in Christ, Mat. 28.20.

As God hath a determining will, concerning his creatures, so he hath an appointing will unto them, Heb. 10.5, 6, 7.

Whatsoever God willeth absolutely, and of it self, is good, Jam. 1.13. Psal. 119.12.

God willeth sins, not simply, but by accident, as he knoweth and meaneth to bring good out of them.

God's appointing will is wholly manifested in the law of nature, and in the written law.

God's appointing will pertains to all men, God would have all to believe, as belief is a point of obedience, and honor to him; but as belief is a grace, and a gift of God, he willeth not all men to believe, but his elect.

God doth not only know all things, and prescribe his will, but also his providence, and determinate counsel, reacheth unto all his creatures, Jer. 10.23. Lam. 3.37. God's providence extendeth even to the very least things, Mat. 20.29. Prov. 16.9.

God's providence consisteth in conserving and governing his creatures; which creatures are of four sorts: 1 some that have being, as heaven and earth: 2 some that have being and life, as plants, and herbs: 3 some that have being, life, and sense as beasts, birds, and fishes: 4 some that having being, life, sense, and reason, as men.

God conserveth in his creatures, their existence, or being, and their virtues.

God's conservation of their existence, is the continuing of the substance of the creatures; In him we live, move, and have our being: moving being not only local, but the moving of the heart, spirit, reason, will, &c.

God's government is the ordering, and ruling, and disposing of his creatures, to his own pleasure and glory, Psal. 104. Isaiah 45.7. Job 12.10.

God's government in special is towards Angels and Men, for in them first he determineth and ordereth their actions: secondly, he giveth them laws: thirdly, he executeth justice.

God determineth, and ordereth the actions, and inclinations of men, moving them, and directing them to their end.

Mans actions and inclinations he moveth and ruleth effectually.

God ordereth them to the good of this life, and of the life to come, which is the chiefest good.

God ordereth sin two ways; first, by limitation, and binding it, that it shall go no further than he please. Secondly, by turning it against the nature, and will of the sinner into good.

God's providence is double, mediate, and immediate; mediate is when he conserveth, and governeth one creature by another, as by instruments: immediate is when he useth no means, or worketh against means.

God useth not means of necessity, but of pleasure; these means are not to be excluded from God's providence, but included: God can use evil instruments for good, against their power and will. The chief means to govern the world are Angels.

The end of all is God's glory, Deus vult gloriam suam necessitate naturae suae, non libere. The foundation of true glory is virtue, or goodness.

God's glory is spoken of two ways:

- 1 As an essential property of his.
- 2 As the glorifying of himself, so God's glory consisteth in the knowledge of himself.

God when he had created the world, saw all that he had made, and lo it was very good: but after, God looked upon the earth, and loe it was corrupt, for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. It is then now to be minded, how corruption, and evil came into the world.

The corruption of the world is set forth by divers names, in respect of truth, it is called lying, or falsehood: in respect of good, it is called evil: in respect of righteousness, it is called iniquity or unrighteousness: in respect of God's law, it is called unlaw sunesse, or transgression of the law: generally it is called sin, that is, aberration or missing of the scope or mark: in respect of duty, it is called disobedience, rebellion, defection, or apostasy, disloyalty, perfidiousness: in respect of our first estate, it is called a fault or ruin.

Evil hath no efficient cause, but a deficient; evil hath neither nature nor substance, for all such are of God, but so is not evil; all such are good, but so is not sin.

Evil is an accident cleaving unto natures substance, actions, Rom. 7.21. The creatures were made of nothing, and being of themselves not able to sustain themselves, have an inclination to come to nothing, if God do not uphold them: so evil is caused of nothing.

Evil began in Heaven amongst the Angels, and so spread into other reasonable creatures, as men; is called sin, their fall, and is the privation of God's Image in them.

God himself cannot do evil, or be tempted thereto, and he only hath this privilege, men and Angels want it.

The Angels therefore being subject to temptation, were tempted of their own motions, and willingly gave place to their evil thoughts, and being not sustained of God did fall, Jud. 5, 6.

Though we know not how many, yet there were many that fell from their heavenly estate; of those many that fell, one seemeth to be the chief, and others drawn by, or accompanying him, called therefore his Angels, Mat. 25.4.

Being fallen, they could not of themselves rise again, neither did God minister any grace or help unto them, therefore they added sin unto sin, and so do continue sinning still extremely until the appointed time of their damnation.

The Angels that are fallen have divers names to denote their evil condition, sometime they are called evil Spirits, lying Spirits, unclean Spirits, Devil, that is, a calumniator, Mat. 25.41. Satan, that is, adversary, or fiend, Job 1.6. demons, of their knowledge, Mat. 9.34. wasters, or destroyers, Deut. 32.17. rugged satyrs, of their horrible hew, Lev. 17.7. dragon, and serpent, of their craft and venomous nature, Rev. 12.9. the Tempter, Mat. 4.3. the Malitious one, 1 Joh. 3. the Enemy, Mat. 13.28. Roaring Lyon, 2 Pet. 5.8. the Strong-armed one, Mat. 12.29. Prince of the World, Job. 12.31. that ruleth in the air, Eph. 6.12. & 2.2. Belial, the unruly, or without yoke.

Mans first sin is fitly called disobedience, or fall, for the Law was significantly given to testify man to be subject to God's Law, and his obedience. And whereas before man walked with a steady foot in God's ordinance, by this fact he stumbled, and fell from the seat of integrity. The efficient immediate cause was man himself, of his own free will, without any necessity, inward or outward, transgressing the Law. The efficient cause remote, and mediate, was the Devil tempting man to sin. The instrumental cause was the serpent, whose tongue the Devil abused to frame arguments to beguile with. The arguments, or causes to move inwardly were first directly persuading for good, that they should be as God's. Secondly, persuading from fear of punishment. Add to these the two qualities in the tree: first, that it was good to eat: secondly, to be desired in the eye; these two might persuade Adam to eat, if he could do it carefully, but the other two of Satan was directly to persuade to sin, as it is sin.

The Angels that fell to be Devils, and malicious, sought leave of God to tempt mankind, and obtained it, Gen. 3.1. with Job 1.6, 11, 12. and 2.3, 5, 6.

The Devil used the Serpent, the subtlest beast of the field, for his instrument, for it could more easily creep into the garden secretly, and carrieth with it a show of smooth simplicity: he first assault the woman, and beguiled her, then by the woman the man, Gen. 3. 1 Tim. 2.13. The woman was stirred to sin by outward means, and by inward motions. The outward means was partly the alluring words of the serpent, partly the forbidden fruits beauty. The serpents words, after he had made a subtle entrance of communication with the woman, contain 4. horrible evils, 1 Fraud, & imposture, Ye shall not surely die, Gen 3.4. 2 Against God's Word, and truth, in faying they should not die, if they did eat, but be like God's, Gen. 3.4, 5. 3 Calumniation of God, as if for envy of man's good, he had forbidden the eating of the fruit. 4 Wresting of God's Word, and of the name of the tree of knowledge, as if it were so called, because it had virtue in it, to give men such knowledge of good and evil, as God himself hath, who is to continue in good, and avoid evil forever. Thus the serpent sought to alienate the mind and will of Adam from God, and from his Word.

The inward means to draw unto sin, was the fairness of the forbidden fruit, which the woman saw to be graceful to the eyes.

The inward motions of the woman to sin were generally three: first, the lust of the flesh, for the woman saw that the tree was good for meat. Secondly, the lust of the eyes, for she saw it was pleasant to the eyes. Thirdly, the pride of life, for she saw it was a tree to be desired to get knowledge; and of these three the Apostle speaketh: more particularly her inward motions may be minded by their degrees; first, an impression of the Serpents suggestions: Secondly, a darting of her thoughts concerning God, and the image of God within her: thirdly, forgetfulness of God's works, and words: Fourthly, a doubtfulness of the truth of God: Fifthly, an affection of a better state, & more dignity. Sixthly, a belief of the Devils imposture. Seventhly, an inclination of the will and affections to the forbidden fruit.

The causes by accident were both man's affections, to be like God, which affections God had given him to be used orderly, for God's actions made in man tended to the glorious Image. Secondly, also natural affection to the savoury tree for conserving and refreshing natural life, the efficacy of all these causes man could and should have resisted, rejecting the outward, subjecting, and ordering the inward: had he so done, he had been conserved. The matter of this sin, is the eating of the forbidden fruit, the unlawfulness of the act, being forbidden by God's Law. The end, or final cause of evil is done: but the end of the act (as it had a show of good) was that man might be as God, knowing good and evil.

When these lusts had conceived they brought forth sin, for the woman took of the forbidden fruit, and did eat.

the woman having sinned, sought to propagate her sin, and was the devils instrument to tempt her husband, and he also did eat: there is no mention of the woman's persuasion to the man; nor how sin seised upon him; but the same degrees may be minded in him also, as were in her; this one more especially, his immoderate love and affection to his wife, that made him yield so suddenly to her temptation.

Adams sin yielding, and falling as it is set down, Gen. 3.6. noteth the marvelous force and swiftness that is in the first motions of sin, whose work even in a moment, and suddenly, doth deprive of life and grace, even as a man's natural life is taken away in a moment of an hour, which is many months ere it came to the perfection of birth.

It added much to the greatness of Adams sin, that the fruit which he eat was of the Sacramental tree, and so he violateth the divine mystery through ambition to be like God himself.

It much increased their sin also, that they had God's Image, and perfection of grace, not for them alone, but for all their posterity, if they had continued in God's fear; who lost the same not in themselves only, but deprived all their seed of these blessings: thus our first parents fall was not only sin, but the cause of sin. Thus much of the first sin, and entrance of it, now followeth a secondary sin, which is propagation and fruit of the first, and this is of two sorts; first, native corruption; secondly, actual transgression.

Native corruption, which we commonly call original, is that sin, which man draweth with him from his first origin, or beginning, Psal. 51.5.

This native corruption is called flesh, Joh. 3.5. Gen. 6.3. Rom. 7.14. It is called also lust or concupiscence, 1 Pet. 1.4. Jam. 1.14.

So then not the substance of our flesh, or nature of our flesh is sin, but the vicious quality adherent, or cleaving thereto.

It is called also, the old man, Eph. 4.22. by this also it appeareth that the natural flesh, or substance is not sin, for that it is not put off, nor crucified.

This native or original is worse than actual sin, because it is more largely spread, even unto infants also, which actual sin is not, because it is the fountain and cause of other sins, Rom. 7.20.23.

This native sin is ours two ways; 1 by imputation; 2 by inhabitation.

By imputation, because Adam being the root of mankind, as he had God's image for him and his posterity, so he lost it from himself and his posterity; so that which in Adam was personal, unto us is natural.

By inhabitation, because there dwelleth in us an inclination, and disposition of all the faculties unto evil, Rom. 7.20, 23. For by sin we are not barely bereft of God's image, as rest depriveth man of motion, but this privation, and bereaving, hath within it an inclination of the man to evil; as sickness doth both deprive a man of health, and ill affects the patient, for sin is soul sickness, Psal. 103.3. Rom. 7.23, 24.

Original sin possesseth the whole man, body, and soul, and spirit, as the image of God was not in the body only, but in the whole man, so was this contrary privation, Rom. 7.24.

Native corruption is propagated from parents to children, by reason of the beginning thereof, not properly by it self, that is to say, that cometh from the parents to the children, whereof this sin may arise, namely a disposition to such an evil tempter of the man, as was in original sin: There is an impression from the mother to the children, in her womb, of which impression, this sin buddeth; as tinder taketh fire, which is not fire it self; this impression children draw, as they do natural diseases, as stone, gout, not the actual griefs, but impressions, which are the beginnings of them: Though the soul be not in the seed, yet is there in it a dispositive virtue of the body, for the receiving of the soul, which when it is put into the body, it conformed in his manners thereunto; hence it is that one angry man begetteth another, one hearty man another: for though the feet, which is the subject of the gout, be not in the head, nor the soul, which is the subject of anger, be not in the seed, a formative virtue of the natural members, and a dispositive virtue unto the soul.

The soul is at one instant both created and united unto the body, and deprived of the grace of the spirit, which Adam had for all, and lost for all; as actual sin is done by the persons sinning, so original sin is the sin of nature, done by the will of the beginning of human nature: for as one man hath many members, so one mankind hath many persons; and as one actual sin done by the hand, and not the reason of the guilt, from the will of the hand, but from the whole heart, from which, as from a fountain, the motions of sin are derived unto the members, so from the will of Adam, which was the beginning of mankind, the whole inordination of nature hath the reason of guilt: and as actual sin, which is the sin of the person, is drawn unto all the members by some personal act, so original is drawn unto all men, by natural act, which is generation: and as human nature is drawn by generation, so the defect of human nature is drawn also, yet this rather of God's ordination, than of man's generation, 1 Cor. 15.22.

Original sin remaineth in the baptized, and in the regenerate, and in their posterity, Rom. 7.22. and man begetteth children, not by the spirit, but by the flesh, and therefore he draweth not the spirit, but the flesh, Joh. 1.13. Ps. 51.7. yet hath not Original sin so great degree and efficacy in the regenerate, as in the wicked.

The parts of this native sin are four; first, in respect of the mind, want of understanding, a ready inclination to doubt of God and his will. Secondly, in respect of the will, a ready inclination to take hold on, and to perform evil. Thirdly, in respect of the affections, a prone inclination to too much, or to too little, as inordinate anger, love, and the like. Fourthly, in respect of the appetite, a proneness to immoderatenesse, as meat, drink, venery, &c.

Actual sin is that which floweth from the original, and that which is so properly called, is the difference from God's Laws, unrighteousness or disorder of the action from the Law and Will of God. The unrighteousness of actions must be discerned, from the actions, and motions themselves, as defects from effects: as a man goeth halting, his halting as it is a moving of the body, or natural is good, as it is a lame, imperfect, or wrong moving, it is evil & against nature.

Actual sins are all actions, inward and outward, contrary to God's law, in the will, thoughts, purposes, demises, desires, and in the outward members, all our actions aberring from God's law.

Sin leaving a spot, or stain in the soul, as the Leopards spo• in the skin, Jer. 13.23.

Sin distinguished by the causes, are either ignorance, as Paul's persecuting the Church, or of infirmity, as Peter through fear and trouble of mind, denied Christ, and 3. of malice, as Judas betrayed Christ. 4. of negligence, when a man is not wary of Satan's subtleties. Against ignorance is opposed the revelation of God's will to man: against infirmity, the strengthening of the spirit, to withstand the assaults of the flesh, the world, and the Devil: against malice is the changing of the stony heart into flesh: against negligence is true and holy fear in the hearts of the Saints.

Actions are twofold, 1 Inward: 2 Outward.

Inward, of the mind, and appetite: Actual sin of the mind, is an unrighteousness of man's thoughts, as doubtings of God, false opinions, evil imaginations, Jer. 10.24. Psal. 14.2, 3. Actual sin of the appetite, is the inordinatenesse of the motions of it, called concupiscence, Jam. 1.14. Concupiscence remaineth in the regenerate, Rom. 7.1. The first motions of concupiscence or lust, are sin, though there be not a full assent of the will.

Outward sins, are the unlawfulness of, and unorderliness in outward actions, as in false worshipping of God, swearing, killing, stealing, lying, whoring, and the like.

Sin is pardonable, or unpardonable; sin unpardonable is the sin against the Holy Ghost: other sins are pardonable, not of their own nature, properly, but of God's mercy, against whom they are done.

The sin against the Holy Ghost, is the denying of the faith, and truth, which was once acknowledged, and this done of mere presumption, and contemned unto the end, without repentance, Mat. 12.24. Heb. 6. 1 Joh. 5.

This sin is only in the reprobates.

Again, sin either reigneth, or reigneth not: reigning sin is that, which is against manifest conscience, that the sinner doth please himself with it, or at least doth not repent for it; Ro. 6.12. He that committeth sin is of the devil; that is, with will, and delight falleth into it, and continueth in it; Not reigning sin, is for which the sinner is sorry, and repenteth.

Actual sin, imperfectly so called, is sin of omission, not doing, in respect of our duty to God, men, ourselves, Mat. 25. I was an hungry, &c.

Sin against negative Commandments, as not to preserve life, chastity, good name, when a man can; or against an affirmative precept, as when one curseth his parents, are sins of omission.

The punishment of sin comes now to be handled: touching the Angels that sinned, whom God spared not, but cast them down into hell, and delivered into chains of darkness, to be kept unto damnation, 2 Pet. 2.4. Jud. 6. for overthrowing of mankind: God's wrath was heavy against Satan, and his kingdom was threatened to be destroyed, and his head crushed, Gen. 3.

Touching the serpent, Satan's instrument, there was a curse above all other beasts, creeping on his belly, eating of dust, and enmity between mankind and him.

Touching the punishment of Adam, and his wife, 1 there was a perceiving with shame, of their nakedness: 2 Sorrow and pain in diseases, and in labor. 3 Griefe of mind, and prick of conscience, Gen. 3. Adams punishment in special, labor and sweat. The woman's punishment in special, sorrow of child-bearing.

Their outward punishment, casting out of Paradise.

The punishment laid on all mankind, was in respect of the mind, and of the body.

Punishments in respect of the mind are these: 1 Ignorance, whereby we cannot know the truth, nay not often with much labor. 2 Obscurity, and confusion in the understanding. 3 Hardness to conceive and retain things in the memory.

Punishments in respect of the body are, 1 Common weakness, and frailties of all men. 2 Special disposition to sickness, and diseases. 3 Paine and labor, especially in women, pain of child-bearing. 4 Deformity, and want of beauty, and comeliness, thorough evil proportion of the members, or evil color. 5 Famine, withholding or taking away the fruits of our lands, chattels, &c. 6 Want, or loss of children. 7 Contentions, emulations, reproaches, infamies, wars among men. 8 Many things against health, good name, goods, and livelihood; yea there is the punishment of deaths temporal, the separation of soul and body, and deaths eternal, separation of soul and body from God, from all felicity and glory, called the second death.

The second death is to be minded, first for the parts and degrees of it: secondly, for the circumstance of time and place.

The parts and degrees are these: 1 the damned have no communion with God, nor participation of grace, 2 Thes. 1.9. 2 They are united unto Satan, and are partakers of his punishments. 3 They are ashamed and confounded, because their sins are manifested, Rev. 20.12. 4 They are ashamed, and fret, and envy the felicity of the Saints in Heaven; Psal. 112.10. 5 They are horribly pained and tormented with feeling God's wrath, and the worm of conscience.

The circumstances of time and place, are these; first, of place, which is hell, the bottomless deep, the utter darkness, Gen. 16. Luk. 13.21. 2 Pet. 2. Secondly, of time, and that will ever break the heart of the damned, (which is eternity) that he is past hope of ever going out, or having end of his pains, Mat. 25.46. All sin of its own nature requireth punishment, Rom. 6.23.

Punishment is evil in respect of the sufferer, good in respect of God that afflicteth it justly for sin.

As sin hath taken away the agreement with the nature of God, so punishment hath taken away the communion with the felicity of God.

Mans misery is remediable through the mercy of God; though God spared not the Angels that sinned, yet the grace of God that bringeth salvation to all men hath appeared.

The remedy of our misery, consisteth of two things. 1 A deliverance from sin. Secondly, our reformation to the Image of God, Psal. 32.1. 2 Cor. 3.18.

Our deliverance from sin containeth four things.

- 1 Election to life eternal, by God the Father.
- 2 Redemption by God the Son. Psal. 130.8.
- 3 Justification, Rom. 5.1.
- 4 Sanctification, and reformation into the Image of God, by the Holy Ghost.

In our first estate we had two things, God's favor, and Image. In our fall and misery we have two things, Satan's Image, and God's displeasure. In our restauration are had two things, reconciliation to God's favor, and restoring of his Image.

God from all eternity did predestinate, appoint and elect some Angels, and some men, to be forever heirs of the riches of his grace, and glory, 1 Tim. 5.2. 1 Pet. 2.8.

God keepeth the Angels that they cannot fall, conserving and increasing their happiness, Joh. 13. Jer. 22.40. Mat. 24.24.

Election is of God the Father, Eph. 1.2, 3. and only some few men are elected unto life, and they out of all sorts, Jews and Gentiles, Matt. 20.16. Rom. 9.24. Rev. 7.9.

Election hath two acts and degrees concerning the end, which is eternal glory, the first of God, then of the creature. Secondly, the means to the end, Rom. 9.11.

The first act touching the end, is God's purpose, to take some men, which were to be created to eternal grace and glory, leaving other some.

The second act is his purpose, whereby he ordaineth these men, being to fall in Adam, unto eternal glory through Christ, Joh. 3.16. & 6.47. The signs, testimonies, and benefits of our election in Christ, are an effectual calling, the gifts of lively faith, Act. 13.4, 5. 2 Thess. 2.13, 14.

Justification, Rom. 8.30. and glorification, begun in this life by holiness, being predestinated thereunto, Eph. 1.4.

That unto which God hath elected us, is first, Adoption of sons. Secondly, Sanctification. Thirdly, Eternal life. The first, and only moving cause of Election, is the good-pleasure, and love of God, Eph. 1.5. Rom. 9.18. Eph. 1.11. Christ being the ground-work hereof.

This is further confirmed thus, God is the beginning of his actions, Rom. 11.35. The first beginning dependeth upon no other outward beginning; but God should depend upon another outward beginning, if he could not elect whom he would, without having respect of their faith: faith is the effect of election, Act. 13.48. therefore it cannot be the cause, or before election. The means whereby we are predestinated, is Jesus Christ, Eph. 1.5. Christ is not the first moving cause, but the mean, for he is only God's Son, and we being predestinated to the adoption of Sons, have the Son-ship by communion with Christ.

God's election is firm, and immutable, Isaiah 46.10. 2 Tim. 2.19.

The means whereby we come to be assured that we are elected, are these: First, the Gospel teaching, that all truly believing shall be saved, Tit. 1.2. and we knowing we believe, assure ourselves by the effects of election found in ourselves, as effectual calling, faith, justification, sanctification, and good works. Secondly, by the testimony of God's Spirit in us, Rom. 8.9.16, 17. 1 Cor. 2.10, 11, 12. 2 Cor. 1.21.23. We judge ourselves elect by the judgment of faith, which is infallible, 1 Thes. 1.4.

Adoption is the first and proper thing whereunto we are predestinated, and there is no exceeding benefit, whereof it should not be the effect: as in the Trinity the Father is first, then the Son, and the Holy Ghost. In the order of working our salvation: the first is the Father predestinating, the second is the Son redeeming, the third is the Holy Ghost sanctifying. That the Father is first in working, see Joh. 5.19.30. & 16.13, 14. Adoption being then the work of the Father, it is before Redemption, and so before Justification, and Sanctification. The first work of Grace in bringing us to Christ, is given by the Father, Joh. 6.65, & 44, 37, 39.

Opposite to Election is Reprobation, which is God's decree, to leave some in their sin and misery, and for sin to damn them; or reprobation is God's decree, to pass by some and not elect them, and to permit those to fall into sin, and to punish them eternally for sin.

Herein are two acts, 1 Negative: 2 Positive.

Negative, to refuse, or not elect: positive, to punish for sin: for that from which they are reprobate, is from grace and glory, and that whereto they are appointed, is damnation: the cause of not electing, God's just pleasure and will, Mat. 11. Rom. 9. without respect of good or evil in the creature; the cause of the second act, (damnation) is man's sin.

God is he that reprobate some sinners, Rom. 9.18. 1 Thes. 5.9. This is also from eternity, Jud. 4. and many are passed by and reprobated, Mat. 20.16. The things whereof men are reprobate, are true faith, 2 Tim. 3.6. true sanctification, Tit. 1.16. eternal life, Act. 13.38. compared with 1 Thes. 5.9. & Jud. 4. The cause of punishing the wicked is their sin, for justice must needs respect the innocence, or guilt of the creature. The end of reprobation is properly God's glory, Prov. 16.14.

The perdition of the Reprobate is also the end, but by accident: unchangeable also is the decree of God. Thus much of Election and reprobation.

We are redeemed by Jesus Christ, Gen. 3.15. Gen. 22.18. Gal. 3.16. & 3.13. Rom. 16.20.

In Christ two things are to be considered, 1 his person, 2 his office.

In his person are to be considered two natures, divine, and human, Rom. 9.5. with 1 Tim. 2.5. and Mat. 1.13.

Christ's divine nature, is the same essence with the Father, and the Holy Ghost, from eternity, Rom. 9.5. 1 Joh. 5.20. Heb. 1.10. from Psal. 102.25.

Our Redeemer was to be God, because the greatness of the evil, wherewith men were possessed, could not be taken away but by God himself: for God's wrath being infinite, could not by any creature which is finite, be overcome: He also that must be our Mediator, must know us, and all our estate, wants, thoughts, desires, which no creature can do.

Christ's human nature is of the same essence, and substance with the sons of Adam, 1 Tim. 2.5. Heb. 2.14. It could not stand with God's justice to punish Christ for our sins, if he had not our nature; neither could it have been satisfactory for us, if it had not been done by a man.

The union of these two natures, the Godhead, and the manhood to make one person, and mediator Jesus Christ, is the great mystery of godliness, God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. 3.16.

The manner of union of these two natures, is extraordinary, and therefore hath a peculiar name of Person, or hypostatical union, and it was by the Godhead, assuming the manhood, as is shewn, He. 2.16.

This human nature was to be particularly, of the seed of Abraham, Gen. 22.18. of David, Ps. 132, 11. Act. 2.30. of the virgin Mary, Isaiah 7. Mat. 1.23. to fulfill the promises, and to have right to the kingdom of Israel, and to be free from original sin, which is in ordinary generation, the nature, seed, or blood of the woman was sanctified and formed by the Spirit of God, and thereof Christ's flesh created: Christ had the same time, degrees, and progress, for his formation, as other children have, Luk. 1.26, 36, 39, 56. and 2.4, 5, 6. when the forming of human nature was absolute, so as there was the matter, and form of a man, then was the Godhead of Christ united thereto, by a mystical and incomprehensible union, Luk. 1. Col. 2.9.

The union is most near, and indissoluble, that Christ from thenceforth forever continueth God and man in the unity of one person.

The union of natures is not a confounding of them, or of their properties, for the Godhead remaineth infinite, invisible, incomprehensible, the body finite, visible, local, Act. 3.21. 1 Cor. 15.26, 27, 28.

By this union ariseth the dignity of Christ's person above men and Angels, that he is next to God, or the Godhead it self, such is the grace of eminency by the joining of these two natures, Act. 20.28.

By this union Christ's human nature purchaseth habitual grace, as knowledge, wisdom, holiness, such as a creature cannot have, Mark. 13.32. This gradation showeth, Christ as man to have greater knowledge, than men or Angels.

From this union is given unto Christ, the highest power of office, as to be head of the Church. In respect of this union, the whole person of Christ is worshipped, though the direct object of worship is the Godhead only, Heb. 1.6. Mat. 4.10.

From this union ariseth a communion both of the names, and titles, and operations, so as these two natures conjoined, and distinguished, are called one Christ, Lord, Head, Mediator, King, Priest, Justice, Wisdom. In every work the operations of the Godhead, are Christ's operations, as equal with the Father, which giveth an infinite worth, and most perfect force together with the operation of the manhood, unto the work of mediation, Act. 20.28. Heb. 9.14.

From this union also ariseth, figurative and unproper speeches, as when things common to the whole person, are attributed to one of the natures: There is one mediator between God and man, the man Jesus Christ; whereas Christ is Mediator as God and man; As also when things proper to one nature, is given to another, as in Act. 20.28. The Church of God which he hath purchased with his blood, yet blood is proper to man, and not God, Luk. 24.39. Hitherto of Christ's person, now of his office, under which name the proper accidents and effects of Christ's person be contained.

In general, it is to be Mediator between God and man, 1 Tim. 2.5. Without a Mediator man could not be reconciled unto God, nor saved from his wrath, because it was the good pleasure of God, by him to reconcile all things to himself, and to set at peace through the blood of his Cross, both the things in earth, and the things in heaven, Col. 1.19, 20.

And because the Majesty of God was offended by sin, and could not pass it over without punishment, Rom. 3.5, 6.

Christ's Mediatorship containeth all the office, and functions, and operations which he performed for man's Redemption.

By prophesy; first, decerning the cause between the parties differing, as an arbitrator. Secondly, relation of covenants and conditions, on both parties, as a messenger. By Priesthood; thirdly, the request or intercession for the offending party. Fourthly, payment or satisfaction to the party offended. Fifthly, effectual application of the satisfaction. By kingdom; sixthly, by defense, and conservation of the parties satisfied for, from all their enemies, and so sanctification, and restauration of God's Image.

The office of Mediator requireth both divine and human nature in one person. God the Father ordained Christ to be the Mediator before the foundation of the world, 1 Pet. 1.20. Heb. 5.4, 5. God continually conserveth Christ in the office of Mediation, Isaiah 49.8. Christ's Mediatorship is eternal, and everlasting, Heb. 7.21. Psal. 45.6.

In respect of this office our Mediator is called Christ Jesus, a Savior that is anointed of God, for the Father continually and perfectly filleth his humanity with plenty of grace, sufficient every moment to perform the work, Psal. 48.8. This anointing comprehendeth collation of gifts unto the human nature, and ordination to office in respect of both natures; it is the person of Christ, God and man, that is Mediator, Heb. 9. and not one nature only, either Godhead or manhood.

In the administration of this office, though Christ's whole person do things, yet must we distinguish of the work, or the action or effecting of the work; for every work of our Mediator is one, as his person is one, but distinct actions concur, one of the Godhead, another of the manhood, as the body and the soul concur in many works: as for example, Christ offering himself for a sacrifice to God, was a work, and a function of his office common to both natures, but to accomplish this work, there concurs a diverse operation, one of the Godhead, another of the manhood; for the manhood suffered the punishment for our sins, and the Godhead offered it up a most worthy satisfaction to the Father, Heb. 9.14. The blood of Christ (that was the manhood) which through the eternal Spirit (that was the Godhead) offered himself. Hitherto of Christ's office in general, now to the several parts or branches: The parts or branches of Christ's office are three, 1 Prophesy, 2 Priesthood, 3 Kingdom.

Christ's Prophetical office, is a function of his person, whereby he teacheth and informeth his Church, Joh. 1.18. Act. 3.22. Deut. 18.18. Act. 7.37. and of this office he is called the Word, Joh. 1.1. In this work of mediation is to be considered, 1 what he doth in respect of God: 2 in respect of us. In respect of God, Christ the Mediator goeth up into Heaven, Joh. 3.18. to receive the lively oracles of life; and speak things as the Father taught him, Joh. 8.28. In respect of men he came down from Heaven, Joh. 6.38. to teach the doctrine of the Father which sent him, Joh. 7.16. And to give unto his Disciples the word which the Father gave to him, Joh. 15.15. even all things that he heard of his Father.

This prophetic office hath two parts: first, the function of teaching: Secondly, the efficacy of things taught.

The function of teaching is, whereby Christ instructeth his Church in things needful to salvation, videlicet, by doctrine, exhortation, dehortation, conviction, consolation, reproof, 2 Tim. 3.15, 16.

This work Christ fulfilled mediately, and immediately.

Immediately in his own person, when for three years and more, he preached publicly, and privately, with great power of the spirit, Mark. 1.14. Christ's doctrine was also confirmed by signs and miracles, which partly belong to his Prophetic, partly to his Kingly office. The sum of Christ's Doctrine was the two Covenants or Testaments, the Law and Gospel, Luk. 4.18. He preached the Law, by showing the true meaning and fulfilling it, against the corrupt and false glosses of the Scribes and Pharisees. Again, Christ's preaching was more public, or more private; public, when he taught in the Synagogues, and Temple; private, when apart he opened the mysteries of the Kingdom of God unto his Disciples. Christ also foretold by the Spirit things to come, as the destruction of Jerusalem, the coming of false Prophets, Antichrist, and the end of the world. Christ's preaching was of things present, and of things to come; of things present he taught, 1 the doctrines of faith to be delivered, good works to be practiced: of things to come, as before. Christ confirmed his doctrine by signs and miracles, by seals and Sacraments, which partly belonged to his Prophetic office, partly to his Kingdom, and Priesthood.

Mediately Christ preached by his servants, which were Angels and men, Rev. 22.16. 1 Pet. 3.18, 19, 20. By Angels, as at the giving of the Law; by Gabriel to Daniel, Zacharias, and John. And by men before his coming, as Patriarchs, Prophets, Priests, 2 Pet. 3.18, 19, 20. After his coming in the flesh, by Apostles, Evangelists, Prophets, Pastors, and Teachers. When Christ sendeth any, he that receiveth them, receiveth him; and he that refuseth them, refuseth him.

The means whereby he furnisheth his Ministers, are two: 1 the word spoken and written: 2 the Spirit. Thus much of the function of teaching, the efficacy of the things taught, is a virtue whereby Christ worketh in all men by his Spirit, pricking their hearts, illuminating their understanding, changing their affections, working repentance, faith and comfort; these effects he worketh by his Spirit, which he sendeth into the hearts of his people, Job. 16.1.

Christ's Priestly office, is whereby he is ordained to satisfy for the sins of the elect, and redeem them to God, Heb. 9.11, 12.

The works of his priesthood are four; first, obedience: secondly, satisfaction: thirdly, intercession: and fourthly, blessing.

Touching obedience, Christ having taken upon him our flesh, perfectly fulfilled the Law, that his obedience might be imputed unto us, Rom. 5.19.

Touching satisfaction, Christ made satisfaction for sin to God's Justice, that the elect might be delivered from the guilt and punishment of sin; only the expiation and satisfaction that Christ made, is the proper and perfect price, that serveth for the sins of the world; neither have the works of sufferings of men or Angels any place herein, Heb. 9.12. The expiation of sin was made by Christ's suffering, 1 Pet. 3.18.

Christ's sufferings are, 1 Privation of good, 2 Infliction of evil.

Privation of good, is the want of joy, glory, and happiness, which otherwise he should have had, had he not willingly emptied himself for our sakes.

Infliction of evil, was all the miseries which he suffered for our sakes: which we may consider in three ends; 1 the things he suffered in the whole course of his life: secondly, the special things he suffered before his death: thirdly, his death it self before his burial. His sufferings in the whole course of his life, was outward, and inward: his outward sufferings were hunger, Mat. 4.2. Joh. 4.7. poverty, Mat. 8.20. cold, weariness, injuries, reproaches, perils, flight into Egypt, and from the Jews, Mat. 2.14. & 11.19. Luk. 7.34. Joh. 15.20. 2 Cor. 8.9. Mar. 9.34. & 21, 22. Joh. 8.48, 59. & 11.57. His inward sufferings were, grief, and sorrow for the hardness of men's hearts, ignorance and temptation of the devil, Mat. 4.

His special sufferings before his death were inward and outward: inward was his trouble, agony, deadly sorrow, wherein the Holy Ghost noteth the passions, fear, amazedness, agony, or conflict, grievous trouble, near unto fainting, Mat. 26.37. Mark. 14.33. that his soul was very sorrowful, even unto death, Joh. 12.28. Mat. 26.38.

Three things are to be considered in sin, and sinners. First, the turning away from God and his Law. Secondly, the turning unto Satan, and the pleasures of sin. Thirdly, the continuance in that sinful estate. Accordingly in God's justice or punishment, which God must inflict on sinners, are 3. things to be considered: 1 The loss, and deprivation of God's presence, and joys that are in the same; 2 Thes. 1.9. Psal. 16.11. 2 The torments and sensible pains answerable to the pleasures of sin, Rev. 14.10.18.7. 3 The eternity of the torments, in such as never break off, nor cease from sin by repentance, and conversion unto God, Act. 25.18. Rom. 1.4. which is the state and case of all reprobates: and naturally this was the case of all men; but supernaturally, by the grace of Christ, in the elect, their continuance in sin is broken off by repentance, and conversion unto God, Act. 25.18. Ro. 6.1, 4. Where continuance of sin is not, there God's justice requireth not eternity of punishment, but only the extremity of it for a time. Christ therefore, suffering but for the elect, whom he converteth from their sins, was not to suffer eternal punishment; but temporary, such as for the extremity of it, and in respect of the dignity of his person, who was God and man, was equivalent to that which the elect should have suffered: be suffered not for the damned, for why then should themselves also suffer, seeing Christ's death is not in vain? but he suffered for them which otherwise should be damned, his blood was shed for remission of sins, and where sins are remitted, punishment is not inflicted.

This intolerable sorrow in Christ's soul arose from the feeling of the burden of all the sins of the elect, and of God's wrath for them, all which as in one view were set before him, 2 Cor. 5.21 Isaiah 35.6. Psal. 40.12. & 38.3. Psal. 22.14, 15. here was Christ's conscience afflicting him for the sins of the elect now made his, the devils and all the powers of hell loading and charging him, Joh. 14.30. the heavy ire and wrath of God laid upon him, Psal. 38.3. The highest degree of Christ's inward afflictions, was on the cross, when he cried, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, Mat. 27.46. The greatest sorrow, fear, trouble, and temptation that possibly could be in human nature, without being overcome, was in Christ; the Lord would break him, and make him subject to infirmities, Isaiah 53. Act. 8.22. 1 Pet. 2.24.

The outward sufferings, was the ignominy, reproach, contempt of men, which he suffered, Psal. 22.6. Psal. 69.20. Heb. 12.13. Mat. 27.

The effects of Christ's sorrows in him were these: 1 prayer, that if it were possible the cup might pass from him, Mat. 26.39. 2 More fervency in prayer, with strong crying and tears, Heb. 5.7. 3 A strong sweat in his agony, and prayer, like drops of blood falling to the ground, Luk. 22.44.

In this agony the blood in the veins, was so troubled, the vital spirits so forcibly urged, that the blood came out of the veins, and skin, the like whereof is never seen nor heard of.

In this his agony an Angel appeared from heaven comforting him, Luk. 22.48. Thus Christ was made inferior to the Angels, Heb. 2.9.

Other outward afflictions besides the fore-mentioned, he had, which I thus particular.

1 The betraying of him into the hands of the Sergeants, and officers, by Judas, as a thief, Mat. 26.

2 His leading about the city, as a malefactor, to the high Priests house, to Pilate, to Herod, and back again to Pilate, Mat. 26.5. & 27.2. Luk. 23.2, 8, 9, 10, 11. where by the Ecclesiastical Judge, he was condemned of blasphemy; and worthy to die, Mat. 26.65, 66. he was accused to the civil Judge, as an enemy to Caesar, but the Judge found him innocent, and so pronounced him; Mat. 27.78. Luk. 23.4. he was by Herod and his servants mocked, set at naught, clothed with a robe, and sent away with derision, Luk. 23.11. To appease the rage and tumult of the wicked Jews, contrary to justice, and the manifestation of his conscience, he was condemned of Pilate, Mat. 27.24, 25, 26. he was scourged, crowned with thorns, spit on, & buffeted by the Ministers and soldiers, a reed was put in his hand, they bowed the knee before him to deride him, they smote him on the head, that he might prophesy, Mat. 27.29, 30, 31. the Jews cried out, Crucify him, crucify him; Thus they denied the holy One, & the just, and desired a murderer to be given them: then was Christ condemned to die, and being led out of the City to execution with two evil doers, he carried his Cross himself, but being weary and faint, by reason of his agony and scourging, Simon of Cyren was compelled to help him, Joh. 19.17. Mar. 15.21. He was hanged upon a cross by nales that pierced him in his hands, and feet; his death was cursed in respect of God, Gal. 3.13. in respect of man, shameful; in respect of punishment, painful; in respect of the extension of the veins, and sinues, and the piercing of them in the hands and feet (where they all met, and were knit together) it was very horrible; he was hanged between two thieves, for more shame, and so was accounted amongst the wicked, being nailed on the cross; he endured thirst, reproaches, and scoffings of the wicked, they wagged their heads, and derided him of his faith and doctrine, Mat. 27.42, 43. here he wrestled with the devil, and all his Angels, the powers of darkness, Col. 2.15. Heb. 2.14. and by faith with his Father, who seemed to have forsaken him: at the horror, and indignity of this his passion, the sun was ashamed, and turned black, the earth quaked, the rocks rent, and the veil of the Temple cleft, Mat. 27.45, 51. and at the last he breathed out the ghost, commending his spirit into his Fathers hands, and so death seized on him, and separated his soul and body; being dead his side was pierced with a lance, out of which water and blood issued, but his legs were not broken.

The end of Christ's sufferings were partly in respect of God, of himself, and of us: as that God the Father, for his wisdom, mercy and justice, might be glorified in the same, Joh. 13.31, 32. That Christ by suffering might enter into his glory, Luk. 20. that he might bring, and reconcile us unto God, 1 Pet. 3.18. that he might know to pity and succor us, Heb. 2.18. that he might lend us an example to suffer with him, that he might destroy the devil, that had the power of death, and death it self, Heb. 2. that he might ratify the two testaments, Heb. 9. that he might alish sin, Rom. 6. that we might be married to Christ, Rom. 7.

Christ was to die by effusion of blood, for to be a perfect sacrifice, and to confirm the testament by his death, Heb. 9.16, 22.

Christ was not a mere patient only in his death, but an agent also, offering himself to God willingly, Heb. 9.14. Joh. 10.17, 18. Christ himself was the Priest, Heb. 9.1. the sacrifice was himself, Heb. 9.14. the Altar was the eternal Spirit. 9.1.14. the fire was the afflictions he felt in himself, and the spirit.

Christ's person being God and man, the sacrifice was of more worth, and esteem, than if all men and Angels had died, Act. 20.28. Therefore was his death, not only a punishment, but a satisfaction: Christ's body was laid in grave until the third day. Christ's Kingdom is either essential by nature, which he hath common with the Father, and Holy Ghost, Prov. 8.22.30, or it is the second Persons by dispensation, as he is God manifested in the flesh, and mediator of the Church, Phil. 2.6, 1 Cor. 15.24. Of this latter do we treat of in this place.

The works and parts of Christ's kingly office, are these; 1 Victory for himself and us. 2 Glory. 3 The taking of the Kingdom. 4 The administration of the Kingdom. 5 The resignation of the Kingdom to his Father.

Victory, is whereby Christ overcometh the devil, and sin, and death, and subdued them under him and his, Heb. 2.14. 1 Cor. 15.54, 57.

Glory, is the exaltation and glorification of Christ, and that of the whole person, but in divers respects, for his divine nature was exalted, not by increase of essence, or of glory, his human nature was exalted, both by increase and manifestation. Glory is the Kingly dignity, consisting of three things, 1 Putting off infirmities. 2 Glorification of the human nature. 3 Triumph over enemies.

Putting off infirmities, was when Christ was delivered from all weakness of body and mind, which for our sakes he took upon him, as death, pain, hunger, thirst, sorrow, Rom. 6.9. 1 Cor. 15.42, 43.

Glorification of the human nature, is its perfection, by assuming new habits, and powers, Joh. 7.39.

Christ's body was glorified, in that it was made incorruptible, 1 Cor. 15.33. firm, strong, nimble, spiritual, splendent, 1 Cor. 15.43. Mat. 17.2, 3. His soul was glorified by the perfection of the understanding, such as in his base estate he knew not, even all things in all places and times, so far forth as a created mind is capable of, and by perfection of will, and all virtues that a created will is capable of.

Triumph over enemies, was his resurrection, and manifestation after, Psal. 68.1. This arising again was the restoring of the human nature unto life, and the glorious, and powerful lifting of it out of the grave.

As by Christ's sufferings and death he wrought satisfaction, and justice for his elect, so by his resurrection (as the principal cause) he conferreth the effectual application of justice and satisfaction. The efficient cause of Christ's resurrection was God the Father, Act. 2.24. the Son, Joh. 17.18. the Holy Ghost, Rom. 18.11. The end of his rising is the glory of God the Father, Rom. 6.4. of the Son, Act. 3.15. to fulfill propheties and figures, 1 Cor. 15.4. to confirm the legal covenants, Do this and live: to justify us by applying benefits, Rom. 4.25.

The benefits and fruits we have by his resurrection are these: 1 A full assurance and certainty of faith touching him. 2 Full satisfaction for us, as our surety, and our applied justification, Rom. 4.25. and 8.34. 4 The gift of the Holy Ghost, to quicken us from sin, Rom. 6.4. Eph. 2.5. 5 Assurance of our last resurrection, 1 Cor. 15.12, 20, 22. 1 Thess. 4.14. 6 Certainty of our perseverance in faith, Rom. 6.9. Gal. 2.20. 7 Confidence of our hope, and eternal life, Col. 1.18. Rom. 8.17. & 5.10. 1 Pet. 3.20, 21.

The form and manner of Christ's resurrection, was, first his soul returned to the body: secondly, the time was the third day: thirdly, the earth trembled for joy, as for horror at his death. As he died the sixth, wherein Adam was made and fell: so he rose the first day, wherein the world began to be created. he rose in the dawning, Mat. 28.1, 2. so he was the Sun, and light of the world. As the Angels served him at his birth, Luk. 2. so did they at his resurrection; Christ was the first that should rise from the dead, Act. 26.23. 1 Cor. 15.

Object. But some rose before him, raised by the Prophets.

Answ. Their resurrection was actual, and imperfect, for they died again afterward, but Christ's was perfect, never dying more, nor subject to mortality, Act. 13.34.

The manifestation of his resurrection, was his glorious appearing to his Disciples forty days, to confirm their faith, and teaching them things pertaining to the Kingdom of God, Act. 2.3.

Testimonies of his resurrection were, 1 Angels, Mat. 28.3, 4. Luk. 24. 2 The watchmen, Mat. 28.4, 11. 3 His Disciples, to whom he appeared oftentimes, as to Mary Magdalene at the grave, Mat. 28.9. To Simon Peter; to two Disciples, in the way to Emaus, Luk. 24.13. To the company of Disciples, Joh. 20.19. To Thomas, Joh. 20.26. To his Disciples at the sea of Tiberias, Joh. 22.1. To James, 1 Cor. 15.7. To his Disciples on the mount at Galilee, Mat. 28.16. To more than 500 brethren at once, 1 Cor. 15.6. To his Disciples on mount Olivet, when he ascended into Heaven. Another testimony was the bodies of the Saints which arose: and prophesies of the Scripture, Luk. 24.25, 26. Mat. 27 52, 53.

Christ's taking of his Kingdom, was: 1 By ascending into heaven. 2 By sitting at God's right hand, Dan. 7.13, 14. Christ in his natural body glorified, went up in a cloud through the air, or orbs into the imperial heavens: by his ascension he also made way for us, and is an assurance that we also shall come thither, Heb. 10.19. Joh. 14.3. Also by his ascension, he furnisheth his Church with gifts of the Holy Ghost, Joh. 7.39.

Christ's sitting at his Father's right hand meaneth a dignity next unto the power of God, and is the highest degree of exaltation: whereby he fully occupieth his kingdom, gotten by his battle, by repressing his enemies, and conserving his Church, Psal. 101.1 Cor. 15.1. This sitting at God's right hand, in respect of Christ's Godhead, was the restauration of the glory which he had with the Father before the world was: in respect of the manhood, it is the glorification of him, with the glory he never had before, above all other creatures.

Christ's Kingdom may be considered absolutely, or specially.

His absolute Kingdom, is the rule which he hath over-all creatures, whether they obey or not, and it may be called the Kingdom of power, 1 Pet. 3.22.

His special Kingdom, is his rule over the Church, which may be called the Kingdom of Grace. The nature of this Kingdom is spiritual, not of this World; the limits of this Kingdom are the ends of the earth, Psal. 2.

Administration of Christ's Kingdom is, 1 His giving laws: 2 By executing them.

His giving of Laws are, outward, or inward.

Outward, propounded by the Word, and Ministry.

Inward, by the Spirit, opening the conscience, and giving power to do them, Act. 1.3.

Executing Laws is, by rewarding good deeds, and punishing evil. Rewards are, 1 Spiritual: 2 Temporal.

Spiritual, are, remission of sins, victories over temptations, justification, sanctification.

Temporal, are the things of this life with the condition of the Cross; in the next life joys of Heaven, Matt. 25.

Punishments are, inward, and outward: Inward are griefs, fears, and torments of conscience; Outward, are pains, sicknesses, diseases, and in the next life damnation. The course of administration in all ages, are the opening of the seals, sounding of the trumpets, shedding of the vials, discovery of Antichrist. The great and last work of his Kingdom, is the last Judgment; the day as he knew not on earth, so neither we: the manner will be glorious with innumerable companies of Angels, and flaming fire. The resurrection of the just, and unjust, the change of the living, the separating the good, and evil by the 〈1 page duplicate〉 〈1 page duplicate〉 Angels, the pronouncing of the sentence of mercy to the elect, and of judgment to the wicked: in the end the delivering up of the Kingdom to his Father, that God may be all in all, 1 Cor. 15.24. Hitherto of Christ's person and office, next followeth the object, the people upon whom Christ exerciseth his office, whom he teacheth as a Prophet, redeemeth as a Priest, and ruleth as a King.

This people are called his Church, or Congregation, Eph. 5.25, 26, 27.

Object. But Christ is the propitiation for the sins of the whole world, for all men, 1 Cor. 5.15.

Ans. By the World are meant the elect of all ages, & not the Jews only, or them that then lived, but the Gentiles also. So, all men, are meant, all the elect, 1 Pet. 1.2. & 2.5, 9, 24. Heb. 2.9. 1 Thes. 2.13. Mat. 24.24. compared with Jud. 4.

Object. In Rom. 5.18. it is said, The offense of one man came on all men to condemnation, so the justifying of one is toward all men to justification of life.

Answ. The Apostle maketh Adam a type of Christ, that as all that came of Adam have sin, & death by generation, so all that came of Christ shall have righteousness, and life through him. Adam communicateth his sin to none, but such as are borne of him: so Christ communicateth his justice to none, but such as are borne of him.

Object. In 2 Pet. 2.1. mention is made of some bringing in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them; and Rom. 14.15. the Apostle saith, Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died: so 1 Cor. 8.11. therefore Christ died for them that perish.

Answ. All professing faith in Christ, profess to be redeemed by him, and so are to be hoped for of us in charity, until the contrary appear; in this respect are they said to be bought, and not absolutely.

Object. Adam was redeemed, Gen. 3. and in him all mankind, therefore in his loins all men are redeemed.

Answ. As Adams house was the visible Church, embracing the promises, so were they and theirs visibly redeemed in the judgment of men, till the contrary appeared by their sin, as it did in Cain and his, but as in the Church many are called, and few elected, so then in Adams posterity it soon appeared, Gen. 4. and afterward in Noah's seed, Gen. 9.10. but justice and sin are not alike propagated by Adam, for all borne of him are partakers of sin by imputation, and have it inherent in them, but all borne of him are not partakers of his faith, and Christian sanctity, which is not propagated carnally, but by the Spirit of Christ, Joh. 1.

The truth hereof is laid down thus:

Christ saved his people from their sins, Mat. 1.21. Joh. 10.15. Heb. 9.15. & 10.14. he prayed for them and not for the world, Joh. 17.9. Now if Christ ready to die prayed not for the world, but for them which his Father had given him out of the world, then the world is not by him redeemed, that is, the reprobates of the world.

Christ is the Mediator of the New Testament, which is, that God would put his Law in their minds, and be their God, Heb. 9.10. But such is not the state of many wicked, 2 Thes. 5.2. All men have not faith, but the Elect, and they believed that Word ordained to life, Act. 13.4.8. and others believe not, because they are none of Christ's sheep, Joh. 10.26.

Christ saith, My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: but all hear not Christ's voice, nor follow him; Ergo, he is not a propitiation for the sins of all men in general, but for the elect in all places and times, which the Apostle meaneth.

The word Church, is used sometimes more largely, for such an Assembly as profess Christ the King, Priest; and Prophet; which comprehendeth in it hypocrites, and reprobates, as well as God's elect: in which respect Paul saith of the Church of Israel; All our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, were all baptized unto Moses, did all drink of the same spiritual rock, but with some of them God was not pleased, 1 Cor. 10.1, 2, 3.

Hypocrites, or reprobates in the Church, are not properly of the Church, but by homonymie of speech, as in the 1 Joh. 2.19.

Strictly, and properly, the Church is the company of them whom the Father hath chosen to life, given to the Son to redeem, sanctifying them by the Spirit, and uniting them together among themselves, by the bond of faith and love.

The Church is considered generally, and particularly: generally, as it comprehendeth all God's family in heaven and earth, Eph. 3.15. and brotherhood of all Christians, 1 Pet. 5.9. commonly called the Catholic Church.

Particularly, when companies of Christians are united, and compact together, in particular places, towns, or cities, as Rom. 1. 1 Cor. 1. Rev. 2. & 3. chap.

Hitherto I have spoken of two means of our salvation, and remedies of our miseries, namely of election and redemption. Now followeth the third, which is our Justification, being the absolution of sinful man from punishment, because of the satisfaction of Christ the Redeemer, apprehended by faith.

This word Justification is used here for Absolution judicial, when God the Judge absolveth the fault of the man, that is accused before him, and pronounceth him just and innocent; and it is opposed to condemnation, as Rom. 8.33, 34. We may not with the Papists understand here Justification to be the infusion of justice.

This judicial act is in this life exercised in a man's conscience, wherein God hath his tribunal, men's thoughts accusing or excusing, Rom. 2.15. After this life, it shall be exercised by the sentence of Christ, Rom. 2.16. As sin is a difference from God's Law, so justice is a congruence with the Law, both of our nature and actions: and as there is a legal justice inherent in men, by fulfilling the Law, and an Evangelical justice, by God imputed to him that believeth the Evangel, Rom. 4.5, 6. so is there also a legal justification, and an Evangelical: Legal justification, is from works done, according to God's Law, we stand in the trial of the justice of God, Levite. 18.5. Gal. 3.12.

Evangelical justification is when God's Law being violated, we are absolved from the sin and punishment by the grace of God, and mercy of his Son apprehended by faith: And by him all that believe are justified, in all things in which they could not be justified by the Law of Moses, Act. 13.

Before the fall legal justice had place, and shall have again in the life to come: but since the fall in this life the Evangelical justice is to be sought for. The reason hereof is, that justification by the Law must be upon the full, perfect, & continual keeping of the same, Gal. 3.10. which is impossible by man's weakness, Rom. 8.3.

The Law of God being violated by sin, his justice must be satisfied first, before any legal justice can be established in us, which being satisfied by Christ, and so we absolved from our sins past, the legal justice beginneth in us again in this life, but shall not be perfected till the next life.

Justification is an act undivided, and all at once, and so it differeth from Sanctification which is done by degrees and parts.

Justification of a sinner in this life is done essentially but once, though it be often repaired and renewed, as faith once given to the elect, is never quite taken away, for the seed of God remaineth in him; Justification and Faith are most nearly united.

The causes of Justification are either

- Principal:
- Instrumental:
 - Outward,
 - Inward.

The principal outward cause, is the merit, and satisfaction of Christ, Rom. 3.24, 25. which in respect of us is the meritorious cause, in respect of God it is the cause that is outwardly moving him to pronounce us just.

Both these are true, that we are justified for the satisfaction and merit of Christ, as the outward moving cause, and yet are justified freely of mere mercy, as the inward moving cause.

Object. How can it be said that God freely forgiveth us our sins, out of his own grace, and mercy freely, seeing he hath required satisfaction to the full of Christ our head, and surety, and without such satisfaction forgiveth no sin?

Answ. Though he forgive it not freely in respect of his Son, who was wounded for our iniquities, yet in respect of us that were the sinners, it is free.

Object. But we merited it in Christ our head, and therefore are not freely forgiven.

Answ. His merit was not ours by original possession, or cleaving in us (as sin is from Adam) but only by relation and application, and this mere grace, that we never thinking on any such thing, God found this way for our redemption, Rom. 5.8, 10. and that he applieth his Sons redemption unto us, that were by no gift or merit disposed to such a thing, Eph. 1.6, 9. & 2.8.

As Christ's satisfaction is most sufficient and full, so as it is sufficiently, and fully to justify us, without any merit of ours, or any other creatures, Rom. 3.25, 26. Our works being imperfect have no proportion to the justice of God, neither are they ours, but God's, due unto him, and proceeding from him: now that which is not ours originally, or by possession, but is wholly owing unto another, by it we can merit nothing to ourselves.

The principal inward cause of our justification is both, 1 an effectual calling, 2 the imputation of Christ's merits.

The effectual calling is the more remote cause of our justification, when God by his Spirit effectually moveth the heart, the understanding, will, and affections, to the acknowledgement of our own miseries, to seek deliverance, and to believe the promise, or grace.

This inward calling of the elect, differeth from outward calling, by the word, whereby God offereth his grace to all in general. to this inward calling a man is merely passive, in respect of the beginning, that is, he cannot anymore prepare, or dispose himself by strength of nature unto this calling, or justification. Herein therefore the Papists err, who ascribe to man a preparation to justification, called the foundation of justification, as faith, that is, a certain general knowledge, and certainty of the truth of God's Word: Secondly, an acknowledgement of our sins. Thirdly, fear of hell: Fourthly, love of God: Fifthly, repentance. Sixthly, hope of salvation; which sufficiently prepare a man (they say) to receive justification, but the Apostle saith the contrary, that our sufficiency is of God.

The imputation of Christ's merit, & satisfaction, is the near and next cause of justification, and constituteth the essence and definition of it, which is, when God for union with Christ, doth so apply and make proper Christ's merit to us, as if we ourselves had died, and satisfied for our sins: As from Adam we draw, 1 guilt, 2 native evil: so from Christ we draw, 1 absolution from guilt, 2 reparation of God's Image, called Regeneration.

The instrumental cause of justification is Faith, which is taken sometime largely, sometime strictly: largely, faith is taken for an assent to those things written in the Word, called historical faith: strictly, faith is justifying, or miraculous; justifying faith, is a trustfull assurance, which the Spirit of God stirreth up in the elect, firmly to apply the promises of God's grace. This faith presupposeth knowledge, Rom. 10.14. but formally it is assertion towards God's promise.

Faith justifieth not, as it is a quality, passion, or action in us, but as it is a relation, and uniteth us to Christ, whose satisfaction is imputed for righteousness to us, Gal. 2.20.

Faith applieth the promise to the particular person, and not the general only: Gal. 2.20. 1 Job. 4.16.

Faith necessarily bringeth forth good works, yet it justifieth not in that respect, Rom. 4.5.

The proper object of faith, is the evangelical promise of grace in Christ, Rom. 1.16.

Faith hath degrees, increasing, and diminishing, yet the essence and force of justifying remaineth in the least degree, Rom. 12.3. Mark. 9.24.

Faith once wrought in the elect, can never be utterly extinguished, for faith is of the elect only, 2 Thess. 3.2. as the elect cannot perish, neither can their faith, Rom. 8.38, 39.

The immediate effect of justification known, is Adoption, by which the elect do now actually please God, as his children and co-heirs with Christ.

Another effect of justification, is peace of Conscience, when we perceive ourselves absolved from the guilt of sin, before God's judgment, and the judgment of our own conscience, Rom. 5.1.

Peace of conscience, hath degrees sometimes more, sometimes less, Psal. 30.7. and 51.12, and 38.3. From peace of conscience ariseth confidence, that our prayers are heard: Also assurance that our good works please God; also patient suffering of the cross, ariseth from the feeling of justification, Rom. 5.3.

Thus much of our deliverance from sin, and the misery thereof, also the punishment of sin, which was Christ's work in himself.

Now followeth our Sanctification or, reformation into the image of God, which is Christ's work in us; it is the change of our nature into better, that is, into the similitude of the perfection of God, called also our Glorification, 2 Cor. 3.18.

Justification, and Sanctification differ thus: Justification, is the imputing of another's justice; (to wit Christ's) Sanctification is the impression of justice; that it may be in us: in Justification there is the satisfaction of Christ; in Sanctification there is the obedience of a Christian: Justice is perfect and absolute, an undivided act at once; Sanctification is a work begun, not equal in all: Justification is first, Sanctification is after; Sanctification: is a separation from filthiness of sin, from common profane use, and a preparation, and application to holy use, by the Spirit of God, 2 Cor. 7.1.

Absolution from sin is not sufficient to salvation, unless there be also a restoring, or putting on of good, called Sanctification, Heb. 12.14. As Election is the peculiar work of the Father, Eph. 1.3, 4. Redemption of the Son, 1 Joh. 2.1, 2. so Sanctification is the proper work of the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 6.11.

Christ by his obedience, and death hath merited for us the gift of sanctification of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 1.30. This he hath merited with God, who for his Sons sake giveth us the Spirit, Gal. 4.6.

Our Sanctification hath two parts, 1 the putting off the old, which is corrupt, through the deceivable lust: 2 the putting on the new man, which is after God, created in righteousness, and true holiness.

The putting off the old man, is the subduing, breaking, and abolishing of the sinful disposition, and inclination that is in our nature, 1 Pet. 4.5. and of it there be two parts, 1 Death: 2 Burial of the old man.

Death or mortification, is an actual effect of the application of Christ's death, by the holy Ghost (to our nature) whereby our corruption, or body of sin, receiveth a deadly wound, is feebled, and dieth daily.

Burial, is the going forward of death, and is an effect of the application of Christ's burial by the Spirit, whereby the old man, our body of sin, is more and more corrupted, and as it were rotted in the grave, Rom. 6.4.

Putting on the new man, is when we take again God's habits, and disposition to virtue, and it is called the rising or the quickening of the new man, which is an effect of the application by the Spirit of Christ's resurrection, whereby inherent holiness is begun, and by degrees continually increased, Rom. 6.4. Thus Christ's death, burial, and resurrection, is to us, 1 A gift of justification, Rom. 5.15.18. 2 A power to mortify, and quicken us, Eph. 1.19, 20. and 2.1, 5, 6. And an example or type to follow in our course of life, 1 Pet. 2.21.

The 〈...〉 .

The justified • understanding 〈◇〉 will. 3 The 〈...〉 .

The 〈...〉 is 〈...〉 By teaching and 〈...〉 necessary knowledge. 〈...〉 God's favor to the 〈...〉 4.17. Rom 5.5. 3 By confirming us in the 〈◇〉 of perseverance, and eternal life, 2 Cor. 1.22.

The will is 〈...〉 by making 〈◇〉 and ready: Right, when the will is inclined and carried in a straight course to that which is good, rightly known. 〈◇〉 when there 〈...〉 and faculty to follow, and to the good, •reheeded, and he 〈...〉 .

〈...〉 , when our desires of meats, drinks and other things, that we lust after, are moderated, according to God's Law, and reason, Rom. 13.1. And, when our affections of joy, sorrow, love, hatred 〈...〉 to God's Law • 〈...〉 , and too 〈◇〉 , and keep the holy mea••e, Psal. 119.

This sanctification is, 1 begun: 2 perfected 〈...〉 in this life.

Always in this life there is a mixture of the old 〈◇〉 with the new, an 〈...〉 to good by 〈...〉 are contrary 〈...〉

The 〈...〉 Eph. 6.13, 14.

The conflict is the resisting of sinful temptations, arising in us, or suggested any way to us; and the victory is, when we so resist, as sin ruleth not in us, Rom. 6.14.

The infirmities, and defects of our sanctification, are forgiven us in Christ.

Sanctification hath many degrees, sometime more, sometime less, Rev. 2, & 3. The children of God have some special sin, or sins whereunto they are most prone, which they must have most special care to mortify.

Any one sin reigning in a man, argueth him to be wicked, and unsanctified, Ezek. 18.10, 11.

The effect of regeneration or sanctification, is good works, namely, acts and operations, proceeding from a regenerate will, understanding and affections.

In good works are to be considered, 1 The rule. 2 The partition of them.

The rule of good works is God's Law, comprehended in the ten Commandments, which God gave by voice, and by writing on 2. Tables of stone at mount Sinay.

The 1 Table containeth four Commandments, informing us of our duties, and good works towards God.

The first commandment chargeth us not to be Atheists, without God, Psal. 14.1. Secondly, not to have false gods with the true, Exod. 20.23. 1 Cor. 10.20. Thirdly, not to have false gods without the true, 2 King. 17.25. Fourthly, not to have the true God near in thy mouth, and far from thy heart, Isaiah 29.13. 〈◇〉 1.16▪ but requireth us to have Jehovah the true God, and him only and sincerely to be our God, Deut. 4.35.

The second Commandment forbideth us to make (in God's worship) any shape, image, representation or ordinance, whereby to worship God, or to bow down, or to submit to any such, made by any other, Act. 17.29. Mat. 15.9. Col. 2.23. and commandeth us to worship the true God truly, according to his own prescription.

The third Commandment forbiddeth all profanation, and abuse of God's Name, Word, & Ordinances, and requireth a reverent and holy use, and estimation of those means, and instruments, whereby God hath made known himself unto us, and requireth to be worshipped of us, Deut. 19.12. & 23.21. and 18.20. Lev. 19.12. & 24.11.

The fourth Commandment requireth the observation of the due time of God's public worship, and of all holy means, whereby we may grow in grace, knowledge, and sanctification, Act. 15.21. & 16.13. & 17.2, 3.

The second Table containeth six Commandments, all teaching love and duty to our neighbor.

The first requireth special duties to our parents, governors, and all superiors, that we honor them.

The second concerneth our neighbors life, and good: Thou shalt not kill.

The third concerneth his chastity, as our own: Thou shalt not commit adultery.

The fourth concerneth our neighbors goods: that we steal not.

The fifth concerneth his good name, that we bear not false witness, but speak the truth.

The sixth forbiddeth all lust, or desire to anything that is our neighbors, and requireth us to be contented with our own: Thou shalt not covet.

The sum of these Commandments is, to call men from all natural corruption, or vice, unto the true God, having him in an unfeigned love above all, and our neighbor as ourselves.

Touching the Law of God, these rules are to be considered.

As the Law was given by God, who is most perfect, so in the keeping of it is required absolute perfection, Psal. 19. Jam. 2.10. Gen. 6.4, 5. This perfection is inward, and outward.

Inward, in the Image of God, expressed in the understanding, will, and appetite of man.

Outward, in the entire effect of this image shown in operation, Rom. 7.14. Isaiah 2.10.

Unregenerate men are utterly unable to keep the Law, the regenerate are able to keep it in part, but but not fully in this life, Gen. 8.22. Psal. 14. Eph. 2.1. Rom. 7.22, 23. 1 Joh. 1.8, 10.

Seeing the Law cannot be by us perfectly fulfilled, we may not seek for justification by the works of the same, Gal. 2.16. & 3.10, 13. Psal. 3 9.

The common use which all men have of the Law, is to bind them to perfect obedience unto God, though they cannot perform it, and to rule their outward actions, and inward motions, that confusion be not amongst men, Lev. 18.5.

The special use which the regenerate hath of the Law, is, 1 That they may know sin, Ro. 3.20. 2 That it might move them to repentance, Ro. 7.23, 24. 3 That it might move them to desire mercy in Christ, Gal. 3.24. 4 That it may direct their motions, words, & works, which by the sanctification of the spirit they walk in.

The special use which the unregenerate hath of the Law, is, 1 To torment their conscience. 2 To restrain them from outrageous sins.

The partition of good works, whereof the Law is a rule, is that some are referred unto God, some to ourselves, some to our neighbors.

There appertaineth to the worship and service of God for his perfection, wisdom, powers and goodness, the invocation, and celebration of his name.

Invocation or Prayer, is the lifting up of our minds unto God, as to a most bountiful and good doer, Psal. 25.1. It is also a pouring out of the hearts meditation before God, Psal. 62.8.

In prayer note five essential things.

1 Who is to pray. 2 To whom we must pray, 3 What things are to be asked. 4 For whom we must pray. 5 How we must pray.

1 The Commandment to pray, is given to Christ's Disciples: hypocrites and infidels sometime so pray, as that God heareth them, 2 King. 13.2, 4. 1 King. 21.27, 28. yet God's people only effectually receive the Commandment, and pray in faith, that is far from the wicked, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

2 Prayer is to be made to God only; Mat. 6. Say, Our Father. Psal. 65.2. Psal. 50.15.

Prayer is to be made holily, according to God's will, and the directions by him given.

Prayer must be made with preparation, and meditation, Psal. 10.17. Eccles. 5.1. The preface in the form of prayer teacheth thus much, Mat. 6.

There must be a feeling of our wants, and a fervent desire of the thing we would have, Jam. 1.5. The name of prayer, supplication, or desire teacheth this.

Prayer must be in faith, and confidence, as to a Father, that is willing, and in hearing able, Jam. 1.6. It must be in humility as beggars, Heb. 11.6. for God is in heaven, Eccles. 5.1. our kneeling and prostrating ourselves showeth this. It must be in the name of our Mediator. It must be in few words: Bable not much, Eccles. 5. Mat. 6. No certain words are limited, 1 Tim. 2.8. 1 Thess. 5.17. In prayer we must be careful to purge ourselves by faith, and repentance, that sin be not in us before the Lord, Psal. 68.16.

We are to pray for others, and not only for ourselves: Mat. 6. Say, Our Father.

The things to be prayed for are taught by Christ, in Mat. 6. & Luk. 11. whereof there are two parts, 1 Petitions. 2 Confession or blessing. 1 Petitions, there are 6, whereof the first concerneth the principal end of our life and being, which is God's glory, Hallowed be thy Name.

The second concerneth the secondary, and subordinate end of our life, which is our salvation; Thy Kingdom come.

The third concerneth the principal means to bring us to the foresaid ends, which is godliness wrought in us here on earth; Thy will be done.

The fourth concerneth the secondary means, to bring us to the aforesaid ends, which are the outward blessings of this life: Our daily bread.

The fifth concerneth the removal of such lets past, as may hinder us from attaining the foresaid ends, which are our sins committed: Forgive us our debts.

The sixth concerneth the removal of such lets to come, as may hinder us, which are our future sins and relapse; Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

Confession, blessing, or thanksgiving, is for three things belonging unto God.

1 Kingdom: whereby we acknowledge his Kingly, or Fatherly right, dominion or authority, over us forever.

2 Power: whereby we celebrate his might, and ability to do all that he will forever.

3 Glory: whereby we magnify this most wise, just, and merciful administration of all things, according to his sovereignty and might, for which he is to be celebrated forever.

Amen, teacheth us first, fervently to desire the things aforesaid: secondly, to believe they shall be accomplished.

Hitherto of Invocation, now followeth celebration of God's name, which is when we confess our Lord God his properties, and works. This done two ways, by Speech, by Song.

By speech, when rehearsal is made to others, to strangers, and to our children, of God's powerful and gracious works.

By songs, when to ourselves, or others, we celebrate God's works, by Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual songs, Exod. 15.1.

Songs are of two sorts; suggested to the mind by the spirit and mouth of man, or prescribed by God in his word, 1 Cor. 14.26.

Songs of holy Scripture are to be sung in the Church; first, because God hath given his Word partly in prose to be read, partly in meter to be sung, Col. 3.16. 2 Sam. 23.1, 2.

Songs ministered by the spirit, are to be sung by one, 1 Cor. 14.26. Songs by the spirit, unless in extraordinary person, are subject to error, 1 Cor. 14.29, 32. Songs of Scripture are authentic as all other Scriptures are, Luk. 24.44. Secondly, because God hath given men, not only the faculty of speaking, but also of singing, and all our faculties are to be used, in the praising of God, Psal. 103.1, 2. 1 Cor. 6.20. Thirdly, because the Church of old used to sing such Psalms, 2 Chron. 29.28, 29, 30. Fourthly, because all people are exhorted to sing Psalms, not only by David, but by the Apostles themselves, Eph. 5.19. Col. 3.16. Jam. 5.13.

The manner of singing, is to be holy, reverent, grave, orderly, with understanding, feeling, and comfort, to the edification of the Church, Psal. 93.5. and 5.7. & 44. & 7. & 33. 2 Cor.

14.15.19.44. Instruments of music were coannexed to the songs in the Temple; as incense to the prayers, 2 Chron. 29. Such shadows are ceased, but the substance remaineth. The times of Psalms were not prescribed, but left to the discretion of the singers; each country therefore is to use the most decent order and manner of singing, according to form given, 1 Cor. 14.40. Psal. 93.5.

The rules of singing Psalms are, 1 The glory of God, and celebrating his name, 2 Teaching, instructing and comforting ourselves, and one another, Psal. 78. Col. 3. Eph. 5. 3 The allaying of our inordinate affections, of sorrow, grief, care. 4 The stirring up of good affections in us, as zeal, fervency, 2 Sam. 6.15, 16. Psal. 57.7, 8. 5 Faculty and ease to learn the Laws of God with delight, Deut. 32.

The saving grace of God teacheth us to live soberly, in respect of ourselves, righteously towards God, and godly in this present world, Tit. 4.1, 11, 12.

Our duties towards ourselves are:

1 Love of ourselves, as is meet, taught all men by nature, Eph. 5.29. by God's Law, Love thy neighbor as thyself; by the law of grace, 1 Cor. 3.16. & 6.19. but immoderate self-love is vice, 2 Tim. 3.2.

2 Sobriety, or moderation in getting worldly goods; this grace is, contentation with that a man hath, Heb. 13.5. 1 Tim. 6.6, 8. Against which is covetousness, which pierceth men with many sorrows, 1 Tim. 6.10. Also contempt of God's blessings is against this grace, Prov. 30.8. Eccles. 7.11.

3 Spending goods gotten, neither sumptuously, wastfully, or niggardly, Luk. 15.14. Prov. 32.15. but to use and expend them moderately, and thriftily.

4 Temperance, in eating and drinking, Eccles. 10.16, 17. Opposite hereunto is gluttony and drunkenness, which surfeteth the body, and corrupteth the mind; and pining the body with too much fasting, or evil fare. 1 Tim. 5.23.

5 Constancy, or chastity, in the sober use of marriage, or in the holy use of single life; opposite whereunto is excess of venery, whoredom, fornication, and burning lusts, which destroy body and soul, 1 Cor. 6.18. Prov. 5.8, 9, 11. & 13.3.

6 Magnanimity or courage in enterprising hard, or laborious things, not being too bold, nor too fearful, Prov. 28.1. Use of this in the wars, Isaiah 7.2, 3.

Patience to bear troubles, with an equal and unbroken mind: against which are rash thrusting ourselves into danger, tempting God, and fear, anger, impatience, also insensibleness of affliction, Prov. 23.35.

8 Modesty in the moderating our desire of honor, and glory, that we desire it not more than is meet, nor for itself, but for our encouragement to good, nor from evil men, but from good, and that it be for virtues sake: against which are ambition and love of vain glory, and too much contempt or neglect of our own good name or honor, Prov. 22.1.

9 Diligent labor of the body and mind, in the sweat of our face, but without too much care of the mind: against which are excessive toil, and sloth, Mat. 6.31, 34. Eccles. 4.8. & 5.17. Prov. 14.23. & 19.24. Eccl. 10.18.

10 To moderate our rest, and keep a measure in sleeping and waking, Prov. 6.9, 10, 11.

God's Will meaneth either 1 the faculty of willing, or 2 the act of willing, or 3 the object, that is, the thing willed: In the first and second meaning, God's Will differeth not really from his essence, or being; in the third, it really differeth, as he willeth other things besides himself: In the first and second meaning there can be no cause properly assigned, for there is no cause superior to God himself; in the third meaning, vid. the outward object or thing willed, it hath a cause of absolute necessity. God willeth himself only, but of other things without himself, he willeth only of conditional necessity, or most freely: of conditional necessity, because such things as he actually willeth, he cannot but will, seeing his will is unchangeable, most free he willeth, because he was indifferent, by himself to will this, or that thing without himself.

In the third meaning, God's will may change, as he would of old be worshipped by sacrifices of beasts, but now since Christ's death, he will not so be worshipped, Joh. 4. In the 1. and 2. meaning, God's will is unchangeable, neither doth God begin to will that which before he would not, nor ever ceaseth to will that which before he would. So it is one thing for God to change his will, which can never be; another thing to will the change of the thing, which before he would, which is often.

Quest. Seeing God's will is the first, and universal cause of all things, and that cannot be changed, nor hindered, whether doth God's will impose a necessity upon the things that he would have done?

Answ. It doth on some things, but not on all, for seeing his will is most effectual, therefore not only are these things done, which he would have done, but they are done after that manner which he would: now God would have some things done necessarily, and some things contingently; and therefore he hath for some things fitted necessary causes, by force whereof they are necessarily done; and for some things contingent causes, whereby they are contingently done. And seeing his will is unchangeable, and not letted, it followeth, that not only those things are done which he would to have done, but also those things are done contingently, or necessarily, which he would have so to be done: so things have such a necessity, as God would they should; to wit, either absolute necessity, or conditional.

Touching evil things, neither is it God's will they should be, neither is it his will they should not be, but it is his will to suffer them to be done; it is not his will that they should be, because they be not good of themselves, but by accident: it is his will to suffer them to be done, because of his wisdom, and goodness, he can bring forth good out of sinful actions. Things must not be esteemed as they are by accident, but as they are of themselves.

God hath dominion over all things by creation, exercised as a creator: it may be called Lordly power, which he useth, or may use without any intention of the good, or profit of the creature.

Secondly, as a King or Father, which power he useth of his goodness, and sufficient grace, with the intendement of the creatures good also, and thereupon maketh atonement with men, that they might serve him, not so much of duty and necessity, as of free, and voluntary obedience: wherefore his commandment hath stipulations or duties required of us, and promises of further good, to be performed unto us: And the covenants of God with men are of two sorts;

1 Legal, when upon condition of present, and continued obedience to all his precepts, he promiseth life eternal.

2 Evangelical, when upon condition of repentance, faith, and newness of life, he promiseth forgiveness of sins, and eternal life through Christ.

Thirdly, as Judge & avenger, which power he exerciseth, when men forgetting or neglecting his covenant made out of his love, and grace, do sin, and provoke his wrath, whereupon he inflicteth punishment on the bodies and souls of sinners. There is not, nor can be imagined, a greater dominion, sovereignty, and power, than the Creator hath over his creatures; for it being absolute, he may nullify, and bring to nothing his creatures, as he made them of nothing, if he so please, and so long as the creature hath being, he may command it wholly, and every part: and this power and dominion is so proper to God, as it cannot be to any other.

After the sin of man, there was due to all mankind, God's wrath, and our eternal punishment: but God pitying our misery, hath restored us by grace in Christ, whereupon ariseth another right, and sovereignty, which God hath over us, not only as Creator, but as restorer; in which name he hath power to command, and we are in duty to obey.

God afflicteth his children:

- 1 For his own Glory.
- 2 For their good and salvation.
- 3 For the profit of others.

First, for his own glory, Israel was afflicted in Egypt, that his power and goodness might appear in their deliverance.

Secondly, for our good, seven ways.

- 1 To humble us, and keep us from sinning.
- 2 To work repentance in us, Heb. 6. 1 Cor. 11.
- 3 To make us compassionate towards others.
- 4 To stir us up to prayer, Psal. 50.15.
- 5 To try our faith and patience, Jam. 1.
- 6 To work in us a loathing of this life, and love of a better.
- 7 To testify his love unto us, as unto children, Heb. 12.

Thirdly, for the profit of others, three ways.

- 1 That seeing our affliction they might take warning.

- 2 Seeing our faith and patience they might be comforted.
- 3 Seeing our deliverance they may be confirmed.

Two-evils we must take heed of when God afflicteth us; first, that we despise them not, or make no use of them, Isaiah 1. Secondly, that we faint not under the burden of them.

Fear is sometime by figure, put for the whole worship and service of God: Isaiah 29.13. with Mat. 15.9. sometime particularly for an affection of the heart shunning evil.

Three sorts of fear were in Adam, and are yet in the world: 1 The fear which he had in his integrity, which is yet in the Angels. 2 The fear which he had being fallen into sin, which is yet in devils, and wicked men. 3 The fear which he had when he was regenerated, by the promise and grace of Christ, which is yet in all Saints.

1 The fear which he had in his integrity, is whereby he eschewed sin, and the punishment of sin, but without sorrow, because he was without sin, and free from punishment.

2 His fear, when he was fallen from God, was whereby he was afraid of punishment, but without faith, or desire of leaving sin, and so fleeing from God.

3 His fear when he was regenerate, was whereby he acknowledging his sin, and God's wrath for it, he was very sorrowful for his sin, committed to the offense of God, and feared to sin anymore, having a care, & desire to eschew all evil, because he knew & felt God's mercy towards him in Christ, Prov. 14.17. God is loved in respect of his goodness, as a Father; he is feared in respect of his power, and justice, as a Lord. The fear of the Lord is to hate iniquity, Prov. 8.13. and by his fear men depart from evil, Prov. 16.6. but the wicked run into evil, and the fear that is in them is in respect of God's wrath, and their torment, not hating their sin, but God, who punisheth them. Godly fear ariseth from the feeling of God's mercy. Psal. 130.4. Sinful fear ariseth from the feeling of man's misery only, Gen. 3.10.

Godly fear draweth us near to him, Psal. 5.7. but sinful fear draweth men from God, as Adam fled from his presence.

Godly fear is in the Saints continually, Prov. 23.17. Sinful fear is by fits, when God appeareth, or when his judgments are revealed, Isaiah 7.1, 2. but oft times the wicked are secure, Ezek. 8.12. Godly fear is joined with faith, hope, and love of God, Psal. 33.18. Prov. 24.26. Jer. 39.32.40. but sinful is destitute of faith, accompanied with torment, and despair.

Godly fear is an holy affection, whereby we fear to offend God, not only because we shall be punished, but chiefly because we account it most unworthy, and unjust to offend him, who is most great in power, and good in grace, who hath shown such Fatherly love, and mercy towards us: To whom be all Glory forever.

FINIS.

Joseph Alleine, 1634-1668

P-JA1-1. A call to Archippus, or, An humble and earnest motion to some ejected ministers (by way of letter) to take heed to their ministry that they fulfil it. - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.

A Call to Archippus; OR, An humble and earnest MOTION TO SOME Ejected Ministers, (by way of LETTER) To take heed to their MINISTRY, That they Fulfil it.

Col. 4. 17. And say to Archippus, Take heed to the Ministry, which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.

Acts 20. 28. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the Flock, over which the holy Ghost hath made you Overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous Wolves enter in among you, not sparing the Flock.

1 Pet. 5. 1, 2. The Elders which are among you, I exhort, who am also an Elder, &c. Feed the Flock of God, which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, &c.

Printed in the year, 1664.

A Call to ARCHIPPUS: or, an humble and earnest Motion to some Ejected Ministers, &c.

Reverend Fathers and Brethren,

WE said days should speak, and waited for the words of the Ancient; But an aged Paul would not have others despise Timothy his youth, much less would he do it himself. Your long silence hath made us speak, to utter to you our own troubles, and the sighs and groans of your helpless Flocks. We cannot inform you, but have only writ to stir you up by way of remembrance, and humbly to put you in mind, that you stir up the gift of God that is in you, and suffer not your worthy Talents to be buried in the Napkin, now the sinking Church and dying Religion hath such pressing need for their utmost improvement.

These Letters are to you in behalf of the poor Flocks, like the man of Macedonia crying to you, Come and help us: or, a Call to Archippus, to take heed to the Ministry that he hath received, that he fulfill it.

Fathers and Brethren, we unfeignedly reverence you, we magnify the grace of God in and unto you. Did not we reverence your Parts, Gifts and Graces, and esteem them every way so useful to the Churches, we should contentedly see you sit still, and never be at the pains to excite you. But our high value of you, hath made us humbly bold to expostulate the case a little with you, and passionately to beseech you, to remember how great a work it is that lies upon you, and to set your hands to it in this time of difficulty.

Some of yours were the holy hands by which we were called to our Office, when you made us publicly promise (according to the obligation of our Office) that we would never, for fear of any persecution, desist from preaching the Gospel; and far be it from our Fathers to withdraw, as soon as persecution begins. Suffer us with all modesty and submission, to reason with you. Hath not God said, Necessity is laid on you, and WO unto you if you preach not the Gospel? Who shall free you from that Woe, or loose your bonds of that nesesse, if yet you sit still in silence?

Shall we mind you of Paul's example and charge? No bonds nor afflictions could move him, nor make him shun to declare the whole counsel of God. And how strict is the command, That you take heed to yourselves, and all theFlock, over whom the holy Ghost hath made you Bishops? And let it be noted, how pertinent the motive is, Because grievousWolves are entered in, not sparing the Flock: And will you, at such a time, give over your care for the Flock? Are we not most dreadfully charged, before God, and our Lord JesusChrist, and the elect Angels, to observe these things, and to preach the Word, and be instant, and reprove, rebuke, exhort with all LONG SUFFERING? and shall we flinch at the beginning of any Suffering? Are we not required to continue in Doctrine, as ever we would save ourselves, or themthat hear us? Hath not our Lord told us, That he that hath set his hand to the Plough, and looketh back, is not fit for theKingdom of God?

Let us call upon your Bowels. Where there is no Vision, the People perish: and can you see them perish, when you have bread enough, and to spare? Further, Are not you they, that are set for the defense and confirmation of the Gospel? and will not you stand to your work, against the contradictions of men, that would make the work of the Lord to cease? Besides, now is the time for you toapprove yourselves to be Ministers of God, in much patience, affliction, necessity, distress, imprisonment, labor, watchings, fastings; by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by Love unfeigned, Word of Truth, Power of God, Armor of Righteousness, on the right hand and on the left. Is not this the Work of your Office and Calling, To watch in all things, to suffer afflictions, and thereby to make full proof of your Ministry, and, as good Soldiers of Jesus Christ, to endure hardness? Shall you with Jonah, fly to Tarshish, when the Lord sends you about your work? will you not rather say, with resolution, as holy Nehemiah, Shall such a man as I flee? Whois there, that being as I am, would flee? &c. And as the Apostles, your Leaders, when in your case; And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant unto thy Servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy Word.

Shall we humbly mind you of the relation wherein you stand, and the strong obligations resulting thence? O how much is the glory of Christ, and good of souls, bound up in you? Who will not presage a fatal change, when the keepers of the house tremble, and the strong men bow themselves? Should not the Pillars of the Lord's House stand upright under their weight? shall the Jachin and Boaz of the Temple be as a man without strength? You are the Champions of the Lord; and shall not you be valiant for the Truth upon Earth? and confess your Lord in the face of danger, though inmidst of a wicked and adulterous generation?

Are not you the Shepherds of the Flocks? And shall the true Shepherds flee, as soon as they see the Wolves, and leave the Sheep? When should they show their care and diligence, their solicitude and watchfulness, if not when the beasts of prey come to tear, and to destroy?

You are the Stewards and Dispensers of the Mysteries of God, that are to give to all the Family their portion, everyone in their season; and blessed is that servant (only) whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing: And how will the Master look on you at his return, if you suffer the Family to starve, when he hath left with you for their supply till he come? And hath not God charged, that you trade with your Talents? and as you have received the gift, so you minister the same to others, without which you cannot be good Stewards of the manifold Grace of God? and yet do you let your Talents lie unoccupied?

Are not you the Physicians of the Churches? and when should they ply their Patients, unless when in most danger to be infected with the mortal Plague, and common Leprosy of the Times?

In a word, Are you Nurses, and yet deny your Sucklings your breast? Fathers and yet will not give bread to your Sons that ask it? Watchmen of the Lord, and yet neglect your fearful Charge; Who would not tremble at those dreadful Injunctions, Ezk. 3. 17. and 33. 7. whereby we are required to give men warning, or else, if they should perish, their blood shall be required at our hands.

Finally, Hath not the Lord ordained you to be his Prophets? and shall not your souls be moved, neither at the thundering Charge at the entrance, nor the sweet Promise in the close of those piercing and powerful words, Jer. 1. 17, 18. Thou therefore gird up thy loins, and arise and speak unto them all that I command thee; be not dismayed at their fears, lest I confound thee before them: For behold I have made thee this day, a defensed City, and an iron Pillar, and brazen walls against, &c. And they shall fight against thee, but shall not prevail against thee, for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee. The passage seems like the stormy Wind, the amazing Earthquake, and the Fire of God, in the Vision of the Prophet, ending in the sweet, soft and still Voice. O let the Words of the living God work either upon your Fear or upon your Hope.

Suffer us to stay you a while with a few serious Questions, which in all humility we do request you, to let your grave considerations dwell for a time upon. We beseech you, let not our importunity be grievous, nor our words seem tedious, in so ponderous and important a case.

But to prevent misunderstandings in what we say, we must be forced more than we would to lengthen, by premising a three-fold Caution.

We would not be so understood in anything, as if we did undervalue the Sufferings of our most deserving Brethren, or were unthankful to God, or them, that they have so manfully stood for the TRUTH, and resisted the strong Temptations to sinful compliance, even to the peril of their Families, the loss of Goods and Livelihood, and their beloved Employment amongst their dear People. We must, we do, and shall while we live, bless the Lord for this their Courage and Constancy; that they have kept the Word of His Patience, and have not denied His Name: And have born their public Testimony against the Corruptions of the times; though we are forced (with submission) to mind them, what pity it is, that they that did run so well, should not reach to the end of their race.

We would not be understood, as if we did lay the blame of silence upon all our Fathers and Brethren, that have been thrust out for Conscience towards God. We know there are of them, and that not a few, (Glory be to God) that are harder at work than ever; laboring in season, and out of season, by night and by day; whose Reward is with the Lord, yea, a great Reward, and their praise throughout all the Churches.

We would not have what we speak of the present Ministry, to be understood de omni. We may not without grievous breach of Charity deny, but some few (alas too few) are pious, sedulous, as well as singularly endowed with learning and abilities; but we speak only of the generality; and would to God their lives and labors would confute our too just complaints.

After these Cautions, we humbly subjoin a few moving Questions.

Whether you think in your hearts, that the Ministry that now is, will ever keep up the Power of Godliness? O that we could but charitably believe it! But who can deny his senses! Alas! how should Christ's Kingdom and Interest, and the Power of Holiness be supported by these hands? If Idleness will do it, if Ignorance will do it, if Looseness will do it, if Malice will do it, then these men will bear up the Power of Godliness. Do you not know that too many of them hate it, both name and thing? do not they plainly make it, not the Prize they aim at, but the But they shoot at? These things are a Lamentation, and shall be for a Lamentation. In this we know you are sufficiently convinced.

Whether you can see Religion sinking, falling, dying away, and you never put your hands and shoulders to it, and yet be blameless? Fathers and Brethren, you are the shoulders that must bear up the Ark of the Lord. Do not your hearts tremble for the Ark of GOD? Do you see it falling, and yet withdraw your shoulders, and keep your hands in your bosoms? you would condemn that man deservedly, as void of Christian Charity, yea, common humanity, that should not take up his neighbor, and labor to chafe and rub, and recover him to life when fallen down by you in a swooning fit. Fathers, where then are your Bowels? where are your Compassions, and your Zeal for the Interest of Christ and Holiness: If you see Religion itself in this swooning fit, and hast not with your utmost help, will the Lord hold you guiltless, if you should altogether hold your peace at such a time as this?

Whether there will a blessing follow him that keepeth in his Corn in a time of Famine? Behold England is crying unto you in her Famine, as Egypt to Joseph, for with you is the store; for the Lord's sake open the store-houses. Now or never stir up your Gifts, we seem to hear the fainting souls of the forsaken, starving Flocks, coming and crying to you, as they to him, O give us Bread, for why should we die in thy presence? We seem to see the famishing cheeks approaching you, and calling for relief, expostulating as they, Wherefore should wedye before thine eyes? Give us Food that we may live and not die, Gen. 47. 19. For the Lord's sake bear with us to be a little plain with you; Are your souls sensible of the Famine upon the Land, or are they not? if not (as we cannot, we dare not, we do not think so of you Fathers; for we doubt not your Integrity with God) you were, we will not say no Fathers, but not so much as true Children or Members of the Church, having no Natural Affection, no Christian Sympathy. If you are indeed sensible of the Famine, how can you keep in the Corn? Surely the Voice of God to a withholding-Minister, seems like that, Lam. 2. 20. Arise, Cry out in the Night, in the beginning of the Watches; pour out thine heart like water before the Lord; lift up thine hands towards him for the life of thy young children, that faint for hunger in the top of every street: It grieves us to urge what yet we cannot keep in. Fathers, we reverence you from our hearts, but cannot but set before you the gemitus & suspiria of grieved souls, who seem to cry to you, as Lam. 4. 3. Even the Sea-Monsters draw out the Breasts, they give suck to their young ones; the Daughter of my People is become cruel, like the Ostriches of the Wilderness.

Whether it will not impair the honor of our Glorious Profession, if the Followers should be of more courage and resolution than their Leaders, and leave their Spiritual Commanders behind? To be plain, the People are willing and forward to venture with you; and to run the risk of it, and shall their Leaders be more backward than they? Were you like to be alone it were more excusable; But they are ready to suffer with you, and run all hazards that may come upon them for their duty in hearing: and shall we only stand back? shall not a willing People, make a willing Ministry? O let the Governors of Israel offer themselves willingly amongst the People.

Whether a great part of your Flocks will not be in extremest danger to run wild to Seducers, and despisers of Government, if you do not step in: evident it is that somewhere they must & will hear; and for the formal Pharisees, or profane Hophnies, these they will never be induced to sit down under. What then will be the consequence, but that they will be under strongest temptations, to run to the Tents of Erroneous Teachers, and (to their great peril) lend their ears to the instruction that causeth to er from the words of knowledge. Experience writes a sad Probatum est to what we say in this; of which how mischievous the issue may be, we leave you to consider. Yea, judge your own selves, we beseech you, whether false Teachers will not have a fairer advantage than ever, to get in with our People, and glory over our Ministry and Churches, if they be ready and forward in hazarding themselves among their parties, when ours only shall decline their Flocks and Labors, as soon as times grow perilous?

Whether you will not put a reproach into the mouths of our Adversaries, and give them occasion to speak evil of our Office, when you shall be found to give over the Work, as soon as ever the Pay doth cease? Our hearts do honor you, but there be that reproach you as Hirelings, which they now strengthen themselves in, and more confidently and colourably than ever, persuade others off; (first) Because you give over the Work as soon as ever the Maintenance do fail. (Secondly) Because (they say) you flee as soon as the Wolf doth approach, and will not bide by the Sheep, when your liberty and outward comfort is thereby like to be in danger. Will you not care that the Ministry be not blamed, and study to roll off so colorable an occasion of reproach? shall we suffer the world to think that the spring of all our Motion, the oil to our Wheels, the wind in our Sails was nothing but outward Advantage?

Whether you had your Commission, Office and Authority from the Magistrate, and your Power in, and relation to the Church, be of a Civil Stamp? We know the Magistrate doth not pretend to this: And if none but Christ did, nor could Commissionate you, can any but He discharge you? or can the Relation between the Church and you (if Divine and Spiritual) cease upon the interposition of a Power merely Political, which is toto genere distinct? If the Magistrate did not constitute and cause this Relation, how can he make it to cease? or take away what (confessedly) he cannot give? were not this to make it to be at the Magistrates pleasure whether Christ shall have any Ministry or no? any Service or no? whether there shall be any Preaching or not? and so indeed, whether God shall have any Church or no? And if the Magistrate cannot make your Relation to the Church to cease, how can he make the Duty of that Relation to cease? since the shadow doth not more naturally and necessarily follow the substance, than the Duty doth the Relation. In a word; Will it be a sufficient Answer, at God's Righteous Judgment, when the Lord shall ask us why we did not preach the Gospel as he had bid us? to say, Lord, it was because the Magistrate did forbid us. God is our Record in Heaven, that we are of those that do unfeignedly fear the Lord, and honor the King; to whom we shall ever yield obedience in licitis, deny submission in nullis. Only we are afraid, that it will not be sufficient in that dreadful day, to produce the Magistrates Warrant for our discharge, when directly contradicting the tremendous Charge of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge both quick and dead at his appearing. We verily fear, the Magistrates Dispensation will not be allowed before his Tribunal; and then what a sorry case were we in, should we desist thereupon from our work?

Whether God hath forsaken those of his Ministers, that have set to their work, since the day of that fatal stroke? or, whether he hath not owned them by his Assistance, Presence, Approbation, and the ample Testimonies of his Favor, & honored his Name and Gospel by their Labors, Trials, Imprisonments, and Sufferings whatever, that they have endured? Hath the Gospel lost ground by them? It may be inquired, Whether there be any place for Repentance in their prisons, (where they have time enough to reflect upon their actions and correct what was amiss) or whether they are not forever settled, strengthened, and doubly confirmed in their resolutions, by their Prison comforts and encouragements? and whom should we believe in this, sooner than those that have tried the worst?

There is another Question, that we fear to put to you, But will rather let the Apostle himself ask you, 1 John 3. 16, 17, 18. Whoso hath the worlds goods (and we add, much more, whoso hath the heavenly Goods to dispence) and seeth his Brother (much more his distressed Mother) hath need, and shutteth up his Bowels of compassion from him, How dwelleth the Love of God in him?

Whether you will be able comfortably to answer the Lord, when He shall put to any of you this Interrogatory, With whom hast thou left those few Sheep in the Wilderness? O that you would but consider with whom you have left them! Is it not manifestly and mostly with [Blind-Guides] with Spiteful Shepherds, or rather Wolves in Shepherds clothing? with [Cruel Fathers] that that give stones instead of bread, and Scorpions for Fish? with [Violent Watchmen] that when the distressed Spouse hath come to seek her Beloved, have wounded her, and smitten her, and took away her veil? Shall not our hearts melt, to think of leaving the steerage of our Vessels in such unskillful hands, or with such selfish Pilots, as look no further then their own Cabin? or sensual Shepherds, that feed themselves, and not the Flocks? or Physicians, that have themselves the Plague sores running upon them? May we not say unto our neighbor, Goaway and come again when we have it by us, and shall we deny our People our care and over-sight, when their cries, or at least their wants, do call so loudly for it? Have we gained many to the profession of the Gospel, and begotten many of them in truth unto Christ, and now shall we leave them to sink or swim, when no man careth for their souls? Is this our tenderness to the Children that God hath given us? Is this like Timothy naturally to care for their state? Is this to cherish them as a Nurse cherisheth her Children? Is this, like Paul, to be ready to be offered up, upon the service of their Faith, and not account our lives dear unto us so we may finish our course with joy; and the Ministry we have reserved, to testify the Gospel of the Grace of God? Fathers and Brethren, it grieveth us, that you who are Worthies should be compared to the unnatural among the Birds, which leaveth her Eggs in the earth, and forgetteth that the feet may crush them, or that the Wild Beasts may break them, she is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not hers.

—pudet haec opprobia nobis

Et dici potuisse, et non potuisse refelli.

Whether your Prayers and good wishes for your People, while you draw not forth your souls to the hungry, be not like their cold Alms, that if a Brother or Sister be naked and destitute of daily food, do only say unto them, Depart in peace, be you warmed and filled, notwithstanding not giving them those things, which are needful to the Body?

Whether you can, without highest Injustice, yea (we would tremble to speak it) without most dreadful Sacrilege, withhold the Churches Goods when she is ready to perish for want? Fathers and Brethren, whoever say their tongues are their own, yours are not: you are the Churches, a part of her legal Dowry, you are her most proper Goods, her most rightful Claim, given her by Christ himself, yea given to her forever, for her use. Your Gifts, your Graces, all you Talents, they are unquestionably Church Goods, a public Stock, for common use, in which all may claim a share. You are debtors to all. And have you forgotten the charge of the Lord, Prov. 3. 27. Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.

Whether it be not better to Glorify God by a Prison (if that you fear should come upon you) than to be an Offence and Stumbling-Block by sitting still? Consider we beseech you, what are we for, but our Maker's Ends? what are we good for, for what do we serve, but only for his Pleasure? better we had no being, than not to be for Him. Better we were without liberty, than that it should not serve Him. What a small thing is Riches or Poverty; Sickness or Health; Liberty or Bonds, unless in order to his Glory? Let us but live in the power of this acknowledged Principle, That it is our business and our blessedness to glorify God, and all will be set at rights. If that be true, then that is the best condition, wherein we may best glorify God, and the happiness of every estate, is to be esteemed, according to the order and reference that it hath to this end. Now then, let God glorify himself in us, and it cannot but be well.

What should you then do but set to the Work? For either God will preserve your Liberties, and then you will wonderfully glorify him by your acting and venturing yourselves for him; or else he will send you to Prison, and then you will more glorify him by suffering, lying there as the Public Hostages of the Churches, and Witnesses of God's Truth; Besides that it may render you the more serviceable in your Generation all your days after. But how little is God glorified by you either way, while you sit still? Or, are you not rather an Offence, and a grief to the spirits of the Godly, weakening the hands of your Active Brethren, and wounding the spirits of your dear People? Who can see others at work, and partake of strangers labors, when you their Shepherds give over your care for their souls?

Whether by this Recess you do not neglect the fairest opportunity that ever you had, or may have, in all your lives, to honor the God that sent you, to save sinners, build up Saints, and everlastingly to vindicate the Reputation of Christ's Ministry, and further your own Peace and Comfort here, and Glory hereafter? Never had you so clear and so loud a Call to hazard yourselves for God, and thereby to prove your integrity before him, and resolution for him, and to give public Testimony of your Zeal, and the ardour of your Love to his Name, as now. Never had you such an open and effectual door for the doing good to souls, whether for Conversion or Edification. Now the hearts of the People cleave to you more than ever, if you lose them not by your own neglect. Now they see the difference between the Precious and the Vile; between the Hay and Stubble of the present materials, and the Gold and Silver that you did build with; between the burning and shining Lights, and the stinking and loathsome Snuffs. O how erect are their ears! and their hearts long, and their mouths water (as we say) and their souls wait for your words. We seem to see the thronging crowd, the willing people, watching at the gates of Wisdom, waiting at the posts of her doors, looking when you will speak, that they might be refreshed; when your words will distill as the dew, and drop as the showers upon the mown grass, or parched ground. We see them gathering about you, and saying with them, Behold, we are all here ready to hear all things that are commanded you of God. Now may the Messenger of the Lord indeed say, Theywaited for me as the rain, and they opened their mouths wide as for the latter rain. How hungry are their souls? how do they hang upon your lips? how far will they travel? how early will they rise? how hard will they venture (expertis credit, glory be to God, we speak what we know) to get a wholesome meal, to enjoy God in the pure and powerful Administration of his Ordinances. Verily the Field is even white to the Harvest. O how great is the pity, that at such a time you should have your hands out, and not thrust in your Sickle. The People seem ready to catch at your words, as Benhadad's servants, as soon as they dropped from the mouth of the King of Israel.

If you think it would not be so with you, we fear it is either, first, for want of experience, because you have not tried; or, secondly, (if we may presume to be so plain) through the neglect of too many, who are otherwise Worthies, but have here through their own supineness, suffered the affections of People to die, and the coal of Religious Zeal to go out, for want of blowing. But if they will but blow up this sacred Fire out of the Ashes, and lay the Coals together, and give their People to taste of the pure Milk of the Word, we miss our mark, if they want an encouraging Auditory, unless where Religion, in the most professing times, hath been a stranger. Awake then, for now is the time for you to settle yourselves forever in the Affections of your People. Now you may prove your love to them, as you never could before, by hazarding yourselves for their good. Now you may prove their love to your Ministry, and to the Ways of God, as never you could till now.

Do you say, This is a carnal Argument?

We answer, 'Tis true, he is but an Hypocrite, that looks no higher than the approbation of men, yea the best of men; But yet we add, that the Affections of God's People, is a very choice and special Mercy. He that hath their hearts, shall have their prayers; and is that a little thing? But these are little, to that we would especially answer, and that is; He that hath the Peoples Esteem and Affections, for the Lord's sake, hath the directest way in the world to their hearts, and the fairest advantage possible to serve God's Interest upon them, and further his Work in them, which every gracious Minister must needs value above all this worlds goods, as that upon which the success of his Ministry, for winning and furthering souls, doth wonderfully depend.

Once again; Never had you such an opportunity in your lives, fore ver to put to silence the slanderous tongues of Seducers, as now; they have vilified you as Hirelings, Flesh-pleasers, that will go no further in Religion than will stand with your own Advantage: O now or never confute them. What a loud refutation of their calumnies would your engaging to purpose in the work of God be at such a time as this? All sorts of men have been ready to take up prejudices against us, as Self-seekers, and such as looked little further than their Maintenance. Now pluck up these prejudices by the roots: now show you can serve the Lord for naught. What lewd lies will all these imputations appear to be, if the Lord stir you up to holy an activity? We can but touch upon your own advantage, as indeed, we cannot dwell upon anything, having so much to say in a little. When had you such an advantage to get settled Assurance and Peace as now? You can tell us better then ourselves, (who yet blessed be God, speak what we have seen and felt) that the most self-denying services are the best evidences, and so bring in greatest comforts. When was there such a time to lay up treasure in Heaven as now? You know the massiest Crown is for them that endure the hardest service.

But we see there are many Lions in the way. The flesh is loath to labor (much more to suffer) but cries, Master spare thy Self, and will find an hundred Arguments to turn off a costly and hazardous duty. We dispair the work will be done without removing the prejudices, and therefore shall not dissemble the difficulties and objections that be in the way.

Object. 1. It will be said, We are prohibited by the Magistrate.

Sol. 1. Was not this the Apostles case again and again? were not they commanded, yea strictly charged, not to preach anymore? But did they give over? Why should not we answer with them, It is better to obey God than man? Doth God charge us so deeply, so dreadfully, and shall we think ourselves discharged if man contradict it? If the Magistrate should be thought indeed to have such a power of Dispensations, will not here be a fine easy way for idle Drones to shift the Yoke, and leave the Plow? for 'twil but be to get an Order from above for not Preaching; and then when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, to pluck out his Indulgence, and no more can be said. But we fear God will not be so put off. Are not God's forbidden Messengers, yet charged by Him to speak without fear, and that under a dreadful penalty, and shall we fear man's wrath for preaching, more than God's WO if we preach not?

Repl. But it is said, Here is Preaching though we sit still: Whereas then the Gospel was wholly forbidden to be preached, and so would have been extinct if they had obeyed.

Ans. 1. 'Tis true here is preaching, but if not by us, how badly have we answered, the formidable charge of Almighty God to us, or our sacred and solemn vows to him? Will our Lord be put off by this, as a sufficient answer for our loitering, that others were a laboring?

Ans. 2. There is indeed a Ministry, and Preaching (such as it is) but whether such as is like to answer the ends of either, judge you. What are the next ends of the Ministry in sum, but Conversion and Edification? and are these like to convert souls, that have neither will nor skill to deal with them about their Conversion, but persuade them they are all regenerated and converted already? O how evidently do they harden them in their sins (for the most part) both by their Doctrine and Lives, instead of turning them from them! And are they like to edify in holiness, who are apparently the venomous Enemies of Holiness? who for strict and precise walking (without which no man shall see God) do openly, though covertly, inveigh against it, as needless niceness, and the worst of folly. Now if we have a Ministry, but such as doth not answer the ends of a Ministry, how few degrees are we the better for them than if we had none?

3. Your eyes will convince you, if you will but look abroad, that where there is no better help, than of an Idle, Ignorant, Loose-living Ministry (under which rank God knows, we speak it with grief of heart, too many, not to say the most of those that are late come in, may be reckoned) or than the cold and heartless way that is generally in use; the Coal of Religion doth even go out, and the Heat and Spirit of Christianity die away: And is it not high time then, for you to blow up the remaining sparks?

Sol. 2. Is it so indeed, our Reverend Fathers and Brethren, is it conscience of the Magistrates prohibition that keeps you back (bear with us if we be a little free with you) Why then do you neglect what you might do, without crossing the Magistrate's command? if men did see you go so far as the Magistrate gives you leave, they would be likely to believe, the conscience of his Authority did keep you in; otherwise they will suspect this (too too groundedly) for a pretext. If the Magistrate doth forbid Sermons to your People, he doth not forbid Letters. Why do you not call upon and quicken them frequently by these? If he forbid you the Pulpits, he doth not forbid you your neighbors houses. Why are they no more visited? may you not preach to a private Family, or single person? And such was our Savior's, and the Apostles preaching, oftentimes. You might be the shorter and the oftener this way, and this would be a likely means of doing no little good, if painfully followed. Though you are forbidden to set open the Windows and keep Public Trading, yet what hinders but that you may have a private Warehouse? Is it forbidden you to write out a Sermon once or twice a week and send it amongst your People, and let it be read in their Families, and Copies conveyed from hand to hand. This some have done, and this would be a Testimony to your

People of your constant care for their souls, and that you are willing to do what you thought you lawfully might: whereas now they will say, they see the contrary.

Object. 2. But Abiathar's quiet Secession is objected, who ('tis said) when thrust out of the Office of the Priesthood, did not turbulently busy himself in doing the work of that Office, but retired to a private life, and dwelt quietly in his own house.

Sol. This is not an Objection for the friends of our Call and Office to make; the case between him and us being so wonderfully disproportionate, as we might many ways show. We shall instance but in four things.

1. Abiathar, as it seems, had no right to the Priesthood: for it did, by right, belong to another Line. For Abiathar was of the line of Eli, who it is not known how he came to the Priesthood: Whereas Zadok (put in in his room) was the son of Phinehas, and heir in a direct line to Aaron, and so seems to have the right of Priesthood belonging to him, both by lineal descent, being the proper heir to it, and also by God's special Promise.

2. Abiathar was put out by two Princes, who were inspired by God, (and who knows but they may do it by extraordinary direction?) by David, who anointed Zadok Priest in his room, while he was yet living; and also by Solomon, ratifying his Fathers Act.

3. When Abiathar was thrust out, Zadok (not Hophni or Phinehas) was put in his room; a man owned and beloved of God, sufficiently, yea eminently fitted for the Work; so that he might recede, without fear of miscarrying of the Work of the Lord, by the ignorance or wickedness of him that it was entrusted with. Were this the case here, that your Work were put into the hands of the best of men, and like to be better carried on by those, to whom 'tis now committed, than before: Yea, if it were not like to sink and fail, we should not think ourselves so much concerned, to offer these ungrateful lines unto you.

4. Above all, Abiathar had forfeited his place by his Treason; so that the King might justly have cut off his Person and Priesthood too: for, he was a man of death, 1 Kings 2. 26. and the Sentence of death Solomon is thought to have held him under, so that he should be only upon his good-behavior, and responsible for his crime upon any new provocation.

Object. 3. But it's further said, This will be a great occasion of Separation, if Ministers set up in private, and draw away a great part of the People from the Service of God in Public.

Sol. 1. The Separation be upon others, who when we were quietly settled in the administration of Church-Ordinances, in a more pure and reformed sort, are come in upon us, and have possessed our Places and Pulpits, and thrust us by the places of public Convention. We continue still but in the same station, and the same work, watching over our Flocks, and administering according to our Office, with no other difference, but only that the place is altered; which being at the Magistrates dispose, we quietly left it, according to our duty upon his command.

2. Yea, your not preaching will occasion Separation indeed: for whither will the People run headlong, if not stayed and guided by the interposition of your wisdom and prudence? Your moderation will be the likeliest means to keep them from extremes: for you are they that have their hearts; by others they will not be guided. For this, experience affords abundant instances, and too sad proof; People everywhere joining themselves to the greatest of Separatists, rather than they will rest satisfied with lifeless Jeune, sapless Administrations, offered withal by hands so unclean, and in vessels so impure, as somewhere they are.

3. What is done in private, may be so prudently and inoffensively managed, as to the season, as that (in case you and others are so satisfied) you, and they, may orderly and timely attend, what is done in public, and show your readiness to Unity and Peace, though you bear your Testimony against the Corruptions that are on foot, evidencing your non-acquiescence in such impure and imperfect modes of Administration and Ignorant and Ungodly Dispensers, as too generally use them.

4. The most commendable endeavors after Christian Unity, must be conjunct with a study of Gospel-Purity and the Power of Godliness, together with the testifying of our vehement anhelation after it, and our vigorous endeavors (in all lawful and peaceable means) for the obtaining of it. But how this should be evidenced and effected (not to mention the hardening of others to think they are in the right, and all is well) when men do fully jump in with all that is on foot and acquiesce in it, looking for no farther help, we cannot well understand.

Obj. 4. But it is added, That this will destroy God's Public Worship, and alienate men from it.

Sol. 1. It is not the place, but the company convened, that makes the Worship to be public. The Meeting is public, and so the Worship public, though the place may not be public: Else there was no Public Worship in the time of great Persecution, when the Assemblies of Christians Met by stealth in private houses.

2. It hath been already shown, that there is a possibility of doing this, without neglecting the Ordinances of God more publicly dispensed.

Obj. 5. But there is a secret and most forcible Objection yet behind, which we fear lies with many at the bottom, though it come not so freely out; That this is against our safety, and will certainly expose us to Persecution; and for a man to adventure himself for an opportunity or two, to so great a hazard, as to become a miserable Captive, and a prey to the Sons of violence, seems but folly.

Sol. 1. Why then do you neglect that of your work which would not expose to Persecution? cannot you dwell with your People, and keep the oversight of them, and watch to see when danger approaches, and give them warning (though more privately) whereby to prevent their Ruin? We humbly conceive, it is a part, and no little part of a Ministers duty personally to instruct his People and to visit his Charge, and to preach from house to house, and that distinct from public preaching: now this would not expose you to any suffering, and yet how sadly is this neglected? There was a time when this duty, being urged, the great objection against it was, because Ministers had not time from their public Employments. Brethren, let us deal plainly with God and with men; Why then is this great Duty now neglected? Now when we have little else to do; especially since 'tis acknowledgely the great duty of Ministers, and they may do it with safety, and be greatly instrumental in it: And have now few other ways to edify their People; Is it for want of time now that they do not do it? or from the multitude and weight of their public Employments? But,

2. Is it true indeed, shall the fear of Persecution make us desist from the work that God hath committed to us with such a dreadful charge to fulfil it? wherein we may so wonderfully glorify him that sent us, and in the doing whereof, the saving of our own and our Peoples souls is so much concerned: Will not the People say that our own safety is dearer to us, either than their souls, or our own, yea than God's Glory, if this should keep us back? as we verily fear this will be found the greatest Remora. We do but desire that conscience may plainly speak in the case, and tell men truly, whether if this were removed, they would not fall forthwith to their Work. But hath not God said Blessed are they that are persecuted for Righteousness sake, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven. Blessed are ye when men persecute you and revile you, &c. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your Reward in Heaven: For so persecuted they the Prophets which were before you? Hath not He assured us we shall come off no losers by him, but shall have an hundred-fold even with Persecution; yea, and that in this time, and in the World to come Life Eternal? Is it not really a Glorious Privilege to suffer for Christ, and a Badge of singular Honor? Have the former Saints thirsted for the Crown of Martyrdom, and gloried in the Cross of Christ? And is a Fine or a Prison enough to stop the mouths of God's Servants nowadays by the hundreds? Is it indeed all joy to fall into divers temptations, and are we afraid to venture? Where doth the Spirit of God and of Glory rest but upon suffering Saints? By whom is God Glorified so much as by his suffering Witnesses? By what is the Gospel more furthered than by the Bonds and Tribulations of its Ministers? What better way to ensure the Crown of Life, and get the double Portion in the Blessing, than by enduring Temptations and Persecutions for the Gospel? What will so much intend our Graces, further our experiences, help on Mortification, and enhance our Eternal Glory, as our patient bearing for Christ?

Brethren, what will work upon us, if we will be quickened neither by the consideration of God's Glory, nor our own? Hath Christ suffered for us, both as our Surety, and Pattern? and have we such a Cloud of Martyrs, that have so stoutly led the Van? and shall We shift off our Work for fear of Persecution? Let us humbly request you but to view the encouraging Promises, that Christ hath made to Sufferers for his Name, which we can but hint, not handle, and let us submissively reason with you; Are not these the very things which we have over and over preached, and pressed on our People? and shall we make them believe, by our flinching, that these things were not so? Bear with us, we beseech you; Are these things true, or are they not? If not, why have we taught them? if they be, why do we not live up to them? O that we did but act as if we ourselves had believed in what we have preached! Will it not be a real confutation of what we have taught concerning the blessed Advantage and Glory of the Cross, if we (when put to it) shall decline the Cross, notwithstanding all the blessedness, we made People believe, we thought to be in it? God forbid that We should tempt men to Atheism and Infidelity; and make them believe, there is no more in Preaching, no more in Promises, than a flourishing talk.

The Conclusion.

But now it is time to think of closing. We fear we have been tedious and troublesome; but suffer us yet to utter a few sighs more unto you. We should not have thus pressed and presumed upon you, had not the necessity of the case required it. Reverend and Beloved, if we cannot prevail with you; yea rather, if God (that hath the power of hearts) do not prevail with you, poor souls will rue it, and Christ's Honor and Interest will suffer for it, his Gospel will be a great loser by it. Pardon us therefore if we are loath to let you go: fain we would that you should not be at the end of this Paper, before it hath attained its end; That you should not turn away your eyes from these Lines, till you have resolved to set to your Work. O when will you be weary with forbearing. Jer. 20. 9. I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak anymore in his Name; but his Word was in my heart, as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I could not stay. Have you sate down in your discouragements, and said with him in his infirmity, Yet now may your hearts wax hot within you, that you may speak with your tongue. O that we could hear you saying with Elihu, I am full of matter, the Spirit within me constraineth me; I will speak that I may be refreshed, I will open my lips and answer. What shall we say, Ourmouth is open to you, our heart is enlarged. O that we did but know what would prevail with you! we would fill our mouths with Arguments: We would not let you go, till you had granted our humble Motion. Who shall choose our words for us? Alas, that we did but know what would pierce! It grieves us to think we should have done, before the Work be done; and that after all this, we should leave you as we found you. We verily fear, lest the Argument of Self-preservation will at last prove more forcible upon you, than all the moving Arguments that we can choose; and that men are so in love with the way they have settled in, (from which they mostly think it dishonorable to recede) that they will not be turned. Shall we go from Words to Tears? O that we could command them! But we have not, (the Lord pardon us) we have not the bowels and meltings, that we should have in presenting you such a pitiful case. Shall we we fall from arguing to begging? O that this would do it! Verily, we could creep on our knees unto you, For the Lord's sake, let our words be accepted with you, do not despise our request; Accept this Petition, as if it were written in the mingled tears, of us and your People. Verily, these are the things, that they do sigh out before the Lord in secret. Shall none of their miseries nor necessities move you? Was the tongue of the dumb-born son of Croesus loosed, by the vehement commotion of Nature in him, when he saw one about to murder his father? And shall not the necessity of Souls loose yours? O think, by whom shall these be gathered? We beseech you, by the Children (as it were) of your own bodies, by the Love you bear to our precious Savior, (whose Interest it is, not our own, that we have all this while pleaded with you;) We beseech you, by your high and holy Calling, by all the Commands and Promises of the glorious Gospel, by all your Vows to the most high God at your solemn Admission to your sacred Function, Feed the Flock of God, which he hath purchased with his own Blood. In a word, by the bowels of Fathers, by the tears and cries of Children, by the necessities, distresses, groans, and sorrows of our afflicted Mother, we beseech you do not turn a deaf ear to these Requests. Fulfil you your Peoples joy: refresh their bowels in the Lord. We are in deepest earnest with you, and do in some measure feel what we speak. We go not to act a part. The case is very deplorable, that is before you. You see what havoc is made, and what is like to become of poor souls. O if there be any consolation in Christ, any Comfort of Love, any fellowship of the Spirit, any bowels and mercies, feed Christ's Lambs, feed his Sheep. We humbly and tremblingly leave all at your feet; and fearing lest all our beggings to you will not prevail, we turn ourselves to beg of God for you, and the souls committed to you and us.

O thou Shepherd and Bishop of Souls, the great and good Shepherd of the Sheep, that gavest thyself for them, that gavest thy Ministry to them, for the perfecting of thy Saints, for the edifying of thy Body; Quicken thy forgetful Stewards, to look to the pinching wants of thy distressed Family. Awaken thine Under-Shepherds; call up thy Watchmen to watch over thy Flock by night, that the beasts of prey may not devour them. Sleep not thou, O Lord, in the sides of the Ship, when the Water is come in, even to the soul, and we are all in jeopardy. Hear the moving cries of thy Children and Disciples, about thee; Lord, save us, or else we perish. Behold how thy Flock is scattered, and few search or seek after them, so that they become a prey to every beast of the field, because there is no Shepherd. O fulfill thy Promise, and take the Work into thine own hands. Do thou feed thy Flock, and cause them to lie down. Thou hast said, I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat, and the strong, and will feed them with Judgment. Remember thy Word unto thy Servants, in which thou hast caused us to hope. O Lord God, thou art that God, and thy Words are true, and thou hast promised this Goodness unto thy Servants. Thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it; be it unto thy Servants according to thy Word. O turn the hearts of the Fathers to the Children, and of the Children to the Fathers. Where are the soundings of thy Bowels? where are the movings of their Bowels? O let the Distresses of thy Servants make their hearts to turn within them, and their Repentings to kindle together, and give us once again, the men after thine own heart, and set thou up Shepherds over us, that we fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither be lacking, as thou hast promised. So we thy People, and Sheep of thy Pasture, will give thee thanks forever, and praise thy Name to all Generations. O Lord, thy People say, Amen. Let all thy Ministers say, Amen, Lord Jesus, say thou, Amen.

FINIS.

P-JA1-2. A most familiar explanation of the Assemblies shorter catechism wherein their larger answers are broken into lesser parcels, thereby to let in the light by degrees into the minds of the learners : to which is added in the close, a most brief help for the necessary but much neglected duty of self-examination to be daily perused : and to this is subjoined a letter of Christian counsel to a destitute flock - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668., Westminster Assembly (1643-1652). Shorter catechism

A Most Familiar EXPLANATION OF THE ASSEMBLIES Shorter Catechism. Wherein their Larger Answers are broken into Lesser Parcels, thereby to let in the light, by degrees, into the minds of the Learners. To which is added, in the close, a most brief help for the necessary, but much neglected duty of self-examination, to be daily perused. And to this is subjoined; a Letter of Christian Counsel, to a destitute Flock.

The last Edition Corrected and much amended.

By JOS. ALLAINE, late Preacher of the Gospel at Taunton in Somerset-shire, a Lover of Truth and Peace.

London, Printed for Edw. Brewster at the Crane in St. Paul's Church-yard. 1674.

AN ADMONITION TO THE READERS.

I Am not insensible, that this little tract may seem to many, as a thing born out of due time. But they that have their spiritual senses exercised, and have seen and tasted, how jejune, and lifeless, and insipid the more public exercises of religion somewhere are; will be easily convinced, that now they are called to double their diligence in family duties. And since it is the great charge of Householders (), to teach their Children, and their (), households after them, and to () catechize them in the way wherein they should go (whereunto the present exigencies, do more than ordinarily oblige them) it may not seem altogether unseasonable, to have added this plain and familiar help for their assistance.

If therefore the earnest Calls of your suffering Ministers, the dreadful Charge of immortal souls, the strict Commands of your Maker and Judge, have engaged you in a resolution to set up this much neglected, but necessary and most beneficial exercise, let me advise you to take this plain method. First, let those under your charge learn the Answers in the Assemblies Catechism, Then ask them these little Questions drawn from thence, and if they are at a loss, show them out of which part of the greater Answer, they should have made return to the lesser Question. And this would be the more effectual, if you did run over all a second time, that they might observe the force of every clause and word in the Answer out of the Assembly, before you pass to examine them further on. Do not put them upon learning the Scriptures, till they can get through all the Catechism, and then examine them, how they can prove such or such a clause in the answer, leaving the order that the Scriptures lie in. And as ever you desire to see the happy issue, of this most useful exercise.

1. Let it be done solemnly, and appoint stated times for the weekly performing it; and if through necessity, or negligence, you should omit the season, watch for an opportunity speedily to do it, at least let it be done once the oftener the next week.
2. Set to everyone his task, according to their several capacities, and be punctual in requiring it, and show yourselves as zealous for the doing of God's work, as you are for your own. But let not the explicatory Questions and Answers be learnt without book by any, because this would be a needless burden, and they are in effect learnt already by them that can give an account of the Catechism itself.

This I cannot omit, that it is my fervent desire, that not only the younger, but also the elder sort would become students of the Catechism, and (if able) commit it to memory. Beloved, would you know wherein you might rejoice the soul of your Minister, would you do me a pleasure and refresh me in my tribulations for your sakes? why, herein you may do it. This would be no little pleasure to me, and (I am sure) no little profit to you. O the miserable defect of knowledge, even among Professors themselves, for want of humility and diligence to commit to memory the principles of religion?

There is a twofold knowledge; Confused and Distinct; The confused knowledge is only to know the quod sit, that there is such or such a thing: and here, too often, many Professors rest. The distinct knowledge is, to understand the quid sit, and to be able to give a description of any grace, privilege, or the like, and the difference of it from any other; and also the cur sit, or the ground or reason from the Scripture, why they do believe such or such a truth: and here men do (generally) unhappily fail.

Beloved, my ambition is, that you should grow in grace, and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you should be clear and distinct in your knowledge, that there should not be one among you, but should be able to give a good account of his faith from the Word of Truth. Verily, it is no small shame for men of years, under the Gospel (especially for Professors, and this when we have yet such easy and excellent helps) not to be able to prove the main point of our religion from the Scriptures, and to give a solid description of faith, repentance, justification, sanctification, effectual calling, and the like; which will never be done to purpose, except they will learn a Catechism. If any think themselves above it, I fear it is from their pride and ignorance: for my part, I profess myself a learner. Well, will you learn with me? why should you not stir up each other, and engage together, that you will set to this work? O that I might but hear that you would so far gratify the request of a Messenger of Christ, and his Ambassador to youward.

Quest. 1. What is the chief end of man?

Ans. Mans chief end is to glorify God, and to enjoy him forever.

Q. Is man's chief end to seek himself?

A. No.

Q. Is it to enjoy the profits and pleasures of this world?

A. No.

Q. Is it to glorify God, and enjoy him forever?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by man's chief end?

A. That which God did chiefly intend, or aim at, in making man; and which man is chiefly to intend.

Q. What is man's chief duty?

A. To glorify God.

Q. What is man's chief happiness?

A. To enjoy God.

Q. May a man have another subordinate, or less principal end, besides glorifying, and enjoying God?

A. Yes.

Q. May a man make anything else his ultimate, or principal end, besides glorifying and enjoying God?

A. No.

Q. Is the glorifying, and enjoying of God, man's subordinate end, or else his ultimate, and chief end?

A. His chief end.

Q. 2. What rule hath God given to direct us how we may glorify and enjoy him?

A. The Word of God which is contained in the Scriptures (of the Old and New Testament) is the only rule to direct us how we may glorify and enjoy him.

Q. Hath God given any rule to direct us?

A. Yes, the Scriptures.

Q. Whose Word is the Scriptures?

A. The Word of God.

Q. Where is the Word of God contained?

A. In the Scriptures.

Q. How are the Scriptures divided?

A. Into the Old and New Testament.

Q. Are not the Apocryphal Books Scripture, nor any other, but the Books of the Old and New Testament?

A. No.

Q. What is the Word to be with reference unto us?

A. A Rule.

Q. Is any other Rule sufficient for our direction?

A. No, this is the only Rule.

Q. Can we receive sufficient directions from our own wisdom, or the light of nature, to come to glorify, and enjoy God?

A. No.

Q. Can we receive sufficient direction from God's works of Creation, and Providence?

A. No.

Q. Is the Scripture a sufficient Guide?

A. Yes.

Q. In what do the Scriptures direct us?

H. How we may glorify God, and enjoy him forever.

Q. Can we never learn then how to glorify God here, or to enjoy him hereafter, without the guidance, and directions of the Scriptures?

A. No.

Q. 3. What do the Scriptures principally teach?

A. The Scriptures principally teach what man is to believe concerning God, and what God requires of man.

Q. Doth the Scripture teach us all matters of Faith, or all that we are bound to believe?

A. Yes.

Q. And all matters of practice, or what we are bound to do?

A. Yes.

Q. Is not a Christian bound to believe anything, as a point of Faith, but what is taught in the Scriptures?

A. No.

Q. Nor bound to do anything, as necessary to Salvation, but what is taught in the Scriptures?

A. No.

Q. 4. What is God?

A. God is a Spirit, I finite, Eternal and Unchangeable, in his Being, Wisdom, Power, Holiness, Justice, Goodness and Truth.

Q Is God a man like unto us?

A. No.

Q. What kind of substance is he then?

A. A Spirit.

Q. Is he a corporal, visible Substance?

A No.

Q Is he a Spirit without body, or bodily parts?

A. Yes.

Q. Is he an infinite, or finite Spirit?

A. An Infinite.

Q. What do you mean by infinite?

A. Without bounds, or limits.

Q. Is God an eternal Spirit?

A. Yes.

Q. What is to be eternal?

A. To be from everlasting to everlasting, or without beginning, or end.

Q Is God unchangeable?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it proper to God only to be Infinite, Eternal, and Unchangeable?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these then incommunicable attributes in God, (viz. his Infiniteness, Eternity and unchangeableness) and such as are not to be found in any Creature?

A. Yes.

Q. What is God Infinite, Eternal, and Unchangeable in?

A. In his Being, Wisdom, Power, Holiness, Justice, Goodness and Truth.

Q May a Creature be wise, holy, just, good and true?

A. Yes.

Q. Are Wisdom, Power, Holiness, &c. proper to God only?

A. No.

Q. Are these communicable attributes then?

A. Yes.

Q. But are they in the same manner in the Creatures as in God;

A. No.

Q. Is any Creature infinite, eternal, or unchangeable in being, wisdom, power, &c.

A. No.

Q. Is God infinite in being?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he fill all things, and all places?

A. Yes.

Q. But is he not besides his general and essential presence, which is equally everywhere, by a special, and gracious presence amongst his people?

A. Yes.

Q. And by a special manifestation of his presence in Heaven?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God infinite in his Wisdom?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything that God is ignorant of?

A. No.

Q. Doth he know our very hearts and thoughts?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God infinite in power, or Almighty?

A. Yes.

Q. Is nothing too hard for him?

A. No.

Q. Is God infinite in holiness?

A. Yes.

Q. Does he love, or allow of sin?

A. No.

Q. Is God infinite in justice?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything unjust that God doth?

A. No.

Q. Is he just in all his Decrees, Actions, and Dispensations?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God Infinite, Eternal, and Unchangeable in Goodness?

A. Yes.

Q. Is he good in himself, and is all goodness from him?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God infinite in his truth?

A. Yes.

Q. Can he err, or be deceived?

A. No.

Q. And is God eternal and unchangeable, as well as infinite, in his being, Wisdom, Power &c.

A. Yes.

Q. 5. Are there more God's than one?

A. There is but one only, the living and true God.

Q. Is there a God?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there many false God's?

A. Yes.

Q. Were not the Heathen-idols God's?

A. No.

Q. Is there but only one true God?

A. No.

Q. And is he the living God?

A. Yes.

Q. 6. How many persons are there in the God-head?

A. There are three persons in the Godhead, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one God, the same in substance, equal in power and glory.

Q. Are there many persons in the Godhead?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. Three.

Q. Do all these three persons subsist in the same essence, or God-head?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there three God-heads?

A. No.

Q. Which of these three persons was made man for us, and became our Redeemer?

A. The Son.

Q. Is the Son God as well as the Father?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the Holy Ghost God?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there three God's then?

A. No but one, and the same.

Q. What are these the same in, in personal properties?

A. No.

Q. In what then?

A. In substance, or essence.

Q. Is one of these persons greater than the other?

A. No.

Q. Are they equal?

A. Yes.

Q. What are they equal in?

A. In power, and glory.

Q. 8. What are the decrees of God?

A. The decrees of God are his eternal purpose according to the counsel of his Will, whereby, for his own glory, he hath fore-ordained whatsoever comes to pass.

Q. What hath God fore-ordained in his Decrees?

A. Whatsoever comes to pass.

Q. Doth nothing come to pass, but what, and when, and how God hath fore ordained in his Decrees?

A. No.

Q. To what end hath God fore-ordained whatsoever comes to pass?

A. For his own glory.

Q. Doth nothing come to pass but God intends his glory by it?

A. No.

Q. Of what date is the purpose of God's Decree?

A. It is eternal.

Q. What did God take up his Decrees for, was he moved thereto by his creatures, or by anything in or with him?

A. No.

Q. Did he Decree all things merely according to the counsel of his Will?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth God execute his decrees?

A. God executeth his decrees in the works of Creation and Providence.

Q. How manifold are the works of God?

A. Twofold, of Creation and Providence.

Q. Are the works of Creation, and Providence, the execution of his eternal Decrees?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth God do nothing in the works of Creation, and Providence, but what he from eternity decreed?

A. No.

Q. 9. What is the work of Creation?

A. The work of Creation is God's making all things of nothing, by the Word of his Power, in the space of six days, and all very good.

Q. Whose work is the work of Creation?

A. God's.

Q. What is it to create?

A. To make of nothing.

Q. Can none create, or make a thing of nothing, but God?

A. No.

Q. What did God make in the Creation?

A. All things.

Q. Of what did he make them?

A. Of nothing.

Q. By what did he make them?

A. By the Word of his Power.

Q. In what time did he make them?

A. In the space of six days.

Q. Of what quality did he make them?

A. All very good.

Q. 10. How did God create man?

A. God created man male and female after his own Image, in knowledge, righteousness, and holiness, with dominion over the Creatures.

Q. Who created man?

A. God.

Q. Of what kind did he create him?

A. Male, and Female.

Q. What mean you by Male, and Female?

A. Man, and Woman.

Q. After what image or likeness did he create them?

A. After his own image.

Q. Wherein did the image of God on man consist?

A. In Knowledge, Righteousness and Holiness, and Dominion over the Creatures.

Q. Which was the internal part of God's image?

A. Knowledge, Righteousness, and Holiness.

Q. Which the external?

A. Dominion over the Creatures.

Q. Did God make man in a state of sin, or holy, and righteous?

A. Holy, and righteous.

Q. 11. What are God's works of Providence?

A. God's Works of providence are his most holy, wise, and powerful preserving, and governing all his Creatures, and all their actions.

Q. Is there a Providence?

A. Yes.

Q. Which are the parts of God's Providence?

A. Preserving, and Governing all things.

Q. What things doth God preserve, and govern in his Providence?

A. All his Creatures.

Q. What even the least, yea and the worst, and the most casual?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there nothing then but God's Providence doth reach to it?

A. No.

Q. In what doth God preserve and govern all his Creatures?

A. In all their actions.

Q. Is there anything that doth need his preservation?

A. No.

Q. Is there anything that is not under his government?

A. No.

Q. After what manner doth God preserve and govern all his Creatures?

A. Holily, powerfully, wisely.

Q. Is there wisdom in all God's Providences?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there no sin nor unrighteousness in God's Providences?

A. No.

Q. 12. What special Act of Providence did God exercise towards man in the estate wherein he was created?

A. When God created man, he entered into a Covenant of life with him, upon condition of perfect obedience: forbidding him to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, upon pain of death.

Q. When God created man, what did he do with him?

A. He entered into a Covenant with him.

Q. Into what Covenant?

A. A Covenant of life.

Q. Why do you call it a Covenant of life?

A. Because in this Covenant God promised eternal life.

Q. How many Covenants hath God made with man?

A. Two, the Covenant of works, and the Covenant of grace.

Q. Which of these was the Covenant, which God entered into first with man, when he was created?

A. The Covenant of works.

Q. Did God promise life to man upon any condition on his part?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the condition of this Covenant?

A. Works, or obedience.

Q. Why was the first Covenant called a Covenant of works?

A. Because works or obedience, was the alone condition of this Covenant.

Q. What special command did God give to man, for the trial of his obedience?

A. He forbid him to eat of the tree of Knowledge, of good, and evil.

Q. Why was the forbidden tree, called the tree of Knowledge, of good, and evil.

A. Because thereby man came to know good, and evil; good by the loss of it, and evil by the feeling of it.

Q. Under what penalty did God forbid him to eat?

A. Upon pain of death.

Q. 13. Did our first Parents continue in the state wherein they were created?

A. Our first Parents, being left to the freedom of their own will, fell from the estate wherein they were created, by sinning against God.

Q. Did our first Parents fall?

A. Yes.

Q. From what did they fall?

A. From the estate wherein they were created.

Q. What estate was that?

A. A Holy, and happy estate.

Q. What did they fall by?

A. By sinning against God.

Q. Who fell from the estate wherein they were created?

A. Our first Parents.

Q. What were they forced to sin?

A. No.

Q. Was it by the voluntary abuse of their own free will•?

A. Yes.

Q. Had man free will in the state of innocence, till he sinned it away?

A. Yes.

Q. Were not our first Parents confirmed in the state of innocence?

A. No.

Q. 14. What is Sin?

A. Sin is any want of conformity unto, or transgression of the Law of God.

Q. What is the Rule which sin is an offense against?

A. The Law of God.

Q. What is meant by the Law of God?

A. The whole word of God Ps. 119. 7.

Q. How many ways may we offend against the Law of God?

A. By coming short of it, or transgressing against it.

Q. Is any want of Conformity to the Law, or coming short of it, a sin?

A. Yes.

Q. Is any transgressing of it a sin?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it to transgress the Law?

A. To pass the bounds that the Law sets.

Q. What do you mean by Conformity to the Law?

A. Agreeableness, or suitableness to it.

Q. Is any want of agreeableness to the Law a sin?

A. Yes.

Q. What? if we come short of it in the least?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth want of Conformity to the Law, take in original sin, and sins of omission; and transgressing of the Law, sins of commission?

A. Yes.

Q. Is nothing sin, but what is against God's Law?

A. No.

Q. Is the Law the Rule then by which we may know what is duty, and what is sin?

A. Yes.

Q. 15. What was the Sin whereby our First Parents fell from the Estate wherein they were Created?

A. The sin whereby our first Parents fell from the state wherein they were created, was their eating the forbidden fruit.

Q. What did our first Parents fall by?

A. By sin.

Q. By what sin?

A. Eating the forbidden fruit.

Q. 16. Did all Mankind fall in Adams first transgression?

A. The Covenant being made with Adam not only for himself, but for his posterity, all mankind descending from him by ordinary generation, sinned in him, and fell with him in his first transgression.

Q. Who sinned with Adam, and fell with him?

A. All mankind.

Q. What did Christ sin in him, and fall with him?

A. No, but only all mankind that descended from him, by ordinary generation?

Q. Who of all mankind had an extraordinary generation?

A. Jesus Christ.

Q. In what transgression of Adam did all mankind sin in him, and fall with him?

A. In the first transgression.

Q. Did they sin in him in all the transgressions that ever he committed?

A. No.

Q. With whom was the Covenant made?

A. With Adam.

Q. Was it made with him for himself?

A. Yes.

Q. For himself only?

A. No.

Q. For whom was it made with him besides himself?

A. For all his posterity.

Q. Is this the reason, why all mankind sinned in Adam, and fell with him, because the Covenant was made with him, not only for himself, but for all his posterity?

A. Yes.

Q. 17. Into what estate did the fall bring Mankind?

A. The fall brought mankind into an estate of sin and misery.

Q. What brought mankind into the estate of sin and misery.

A. The fall.

Q. Whom did it bring into an estate of sin and misery?

A. All mankind.

Q. Is all mankind by nature in a state of sin?

A. Yes.

Q. Is any man without sin?

A. No.

Q. Is misery the consequence of sin?

A. Yes.

Q. 18. Wherein consists the sinfulness of that estate whereinto man fell?

A. The sinfulness of that estate whereinto a man fell, consists in the guilt of Adams first sin, the want of Original righteousness, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called Original sin, together with all actual transgressions which proceed from it.

Q. Doth the sinfulness of man consist in the guilt of Original sin?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the guilt of actual transgressions, which proceed from these?

A. Yes.

Q. How many sorts of sin be there then in which the sinfulness of that estate, into which man fell, doth consist?

A. Two, Original, and Actual.

Q. Wherein consists Original sin?

A. In three things, as

- 1. The guilt of Adams first sin.
- 2. The want of Original righteousness.
- 3. The corruption of the whole nature.

Q. What is guilt?

A. A binding over to punishment.

Q. Are we guilty of Adams sin?

A. Yes.

Q. Of what sin of Adams?

A. Of his first sin.

Q. Is the guilt of Adams first sin, part of Original sin?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by Original righteousness?

A. That holiness, and righteousness, that m•n was at first created in.

Q. Is man born with the Image of God upon him, in holiness, and righteousness?

A. No.

Q. Doth he want then that first righteousness in which he was created?

A. Yes.

Q. Is man's nature corrupted?

A. Yes.

Q. How much of his nature?

A. His whole nature.

Q What is he all over defiled, and corrupted in every part, and in every faculty of soul, and body?

A. Yes.

Q. By what is man so universally corrupted?

A. By Original sin.

Q. What is the guilt of Adams first sin, want of Original righteousness, and corruption of man's whole nature, commonly called?

A. Original sin.

Q. Why is it called Original sin?

A. Because it is the sin that we have from our very birth, and Original, or the beginning of our being.

Q. Is man guilty of actual sin besides his Original?

A. Yes.

Q. What is actual sin?

A. That which proceeds from Original.

Q. Do all actual transgressions, or sins of our lives, proceed from Original, or that of our natures?

A. Yes.

Q. 19. What is the misery of that estate whereinto man fell?

A. The misery of that estate whereinto man fell is, that all mankind by their fall, lost communion with God, are under his wrath and curse, and so made liable to all miseries in this life, to death itself, and to the pains of Hell forever.

Q. What hath man lost?

A. Communion with God.

Q. What do you mean by communion with God?

A. Fellowship, and Friendship with God.

Q. Is this lost by the fall?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth part of man's misery by his fall consist in his loss?

A. Yes.

Q. What is man brought under by the fall?

A. Under God's wrath, and curse.

Q. Is man in the favor of God since the fall?

A. No.

Q. Is there an enmity bred between God and man by the fall?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the fruit of God's wrath upon man?

A. His curse.

Q. Is man since the fall under the blessing of God?

A. No.

Q. What are the parts of this curse?

A. All misery in this life, death itself, and the pains of Hell forever.

Q. What is man made liable to in his lifetime by the fall?

A. All miseries of this life.

Q. What is he liable to at the end of this life?

A. Death itself.

Q. Doth man's misery end with his life?

A. No.

Q. What is he made liable unto after this life?

A. The pains of Hell.

Q. How long?

A. For ever.

Q. What are all the miseries of this life, and the pains of death, and Hell, the fruit of the fall?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it that hath brought us to lose communion with God, to be under his wrath and curse? &c.

A. The fall.

Q. whom hath the fall brought into this miserable condition?

A. All mankind.

Q. 20. Did God leave all Mankind to perish in the state of sin and misery?

A. God having out of his mere good pleasure from all eternity, elected some to everlasting life, did enter into a Covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the estate of sin and misery, and to bring them into an estate of salvation by a Redeemer.

Q. Must all mankind unavoidably perish in their sins, and misery?

A. No.

Q. Doth he save all from their sins, and misery?

A. No.

Q. Whom doth he save?

A. Only the Elect.

Q. What do you mean by the Elect?

A. those whom God hath chosen to everlasting life.

Q. Hath God elected any?

A. Yes.

Q. Hath God elected all?

A. No, but only some.

Q. What hath God chosen or elected them unto?

A. To everlasting life.

Q. What was the reason of God's choosing, or electing them?

A. His mere good pleasure.

Q. Was it for no desert of theirs that they were chosen?

A. No.

Q. When did God choose, or elect them?

A. From all eternity.

Q. What did God do for his Elect, to accomplish his decree touching their salvation?

A. He entered into Covenant with them.

Q. What Covenant did God establish with the Elect, to bring about their salvation?

A. The Covenant of Grace.

Q. Could not the salvation of the Elect be brought about by the Covenant of Works?

A. No.

Q. What did God make a new Covenant then?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is it called the Covenant of grace?

A. Because in this Covenant, God doth most especially manifest his free, and undeserved grace or favor.

Q. What doth God promise to deliver the Elect out of in the Covenant of grace?

A. Out of the estate of sin and misery.

Q. What doth God promise to bring them into, in the Covenant of grace?

A. Into a state of salvation.

Q. How doth he promise to do this?

A. By a Redeemer.

Q. Doth the Covenant of grace find the Elect in a state of sin and misery?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth it put them into a state of salvation?

A. Yes.

Q. 21. Who is the Redeemer of the Elect?

A. The only Redeemer of God's Elect, is the Lord Jesus Christ, who being the eternal Son of God, became Man, and so was, and continueth to be God and Man in two distinct natures, and one Person forever.

Q. What is the name of our Redeemer?

A. Jesus Christ.

Q. Why is he called Jesus?

A. Because he is a Savior.

Q. Why Christ?

A. Because he is anointed to the Offices of a Prophet, Priest and King, which persons were usually anointed under the Law.

Q. What Relation doth Christ stand in to us?

A. He is our Redeemer.

Q. What is it to Redeem?

A. By price, or power to save any from bondage, or misery.

Q. Did Christ thus Redeem us?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is Christ the Redeemer of?

A. Of God's Elect.

Q. Whose Son was Christ?

A. The Son of God.

Q. What kind of Son?

A. His Eternal Son.

Q. Are there any other Sons of God besides Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any other Eternal Son?

A. No.

Q. Is the Son of God Eternal, in respect of his manhood, or only in respect of his Godhead?

A. In respect of his Godhead.

Q. What did the Eternal Son of God become that he might be our Redeemer?

A. He became man.

Q. Was Christ God, or Man?

A. Both God, and Man.

Q. How many natures be there in Christ?

A. Two, his Godhead, and his manhood.

Q. Was Christ God, and man here upon the Earth?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he continue to be man, as well as God, now he is in Heaven?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there two distinct Persons in Christ?

No.

Q. Are there two distinct natures in Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. Are not these two natures in Christ confounded, nor compounded?

A. No, they are distinct.

Q. How long doth Christ continue God, and man in two distinct natures, and one person?

A: For ever.

Q. 22. How did Christ, being the Son of God, become man?

A. Christ the Son of God became man, by taking to himself a true body, and a reasonable soul, being conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, yet without sin.

Q. What did Christ take to himself; when he became man?

A. A true body, and reasonable soul.

Q. Are these the necessary parts of a true man?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Christ take to himself a Phantastical body, i.e. only the shape and appearance of a body?

A. No, a true body.

Q. Did Christ's Divine nature enliven, and actuate his body instead of a soul?

A. No.

Q. Had Christ a reasonable soul, such as men have, as well as a true body?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he conceived in an ordinary way as others be?

A. No.

Q. How was he conceived then?

A. By the power of the Holy Ghost.

Q. In whose womb?

A. In the womb of the Virgin Mary.

Q. Was he made of her substance, and born of her?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he born in sin as others be, or without sin?

A. Without sin.

Q. 23. What Offices doth Christ execute as our Redeemer?

A. Christ as our Redeemer, executeth the Offices of a Prophet, of a Priest, and of a King, both in his estate of humiliation and exaltation.

Q. Doth Christ carry on the work of our Redemption, in the execution, or discharge of his several Offices?

A. Yes.

Q. How many are the Offices of Christ?

A. Three, viz. of a Prophet, of a Priest, and of a King.

Q. How manifold was the state of Christ?

A. Twofold, of humiliation, and exaltation.

Q. Which estate was Christ in here upon the Earth?

A. The estate of humiliation.

Q. What estate is Christ now in in Heaven?

A. The estate of exaltation.

Q. In which of these estates doth Christ execute, or carry on these Offices of a Prophet, Priest, and King?

A. In both.

Q. Did Christ execute these Offices, when he was here upon Earth?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he cease to execute them now he is in Heaven?

A. No.

Q. 24. How doth Christ execute the office of a Prophet?

A. Christ executeth the Office of a Prophet, in revealing to us by his Word and Spirit the will of God for our salvation.

Q. Who doth execute for us the Office of a Prophet?

A. Christ.

Q. What doth Christ reveal to us as a Prophet?

A. The will of God:

Q. What do you mean by revealing?

A. Making known to us.

Q. For what end doth Christ reveal the will of God to us?

A. For our Salvation.

Q. By what means doth he reveal the will of God to us?

A, By his Word, and Spirit.

Q. Is his Word the outward means?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the Spirit the inward means?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the word alone sufficient without the help of the Spirit, to make a saving discovery of the will of God unto us?

A. No.

Q. May we expect that the Spirit will discover to us the Will of God without the Word?

A. No.

Q. What, must the Word and Spirit go together then?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything necessary to our Salvation that Christ hath not revealed, or made known to us?

A. No.

Q. To which of Christ's Offices doth it belong to reveal, or make known to us the will of God?

A. To his prophetic Office.

Q. 25. How doth Christ execute the Office of a Priest?

A. Christ executeth the Office of a Priest in his once offering up of himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine Justice, and reconcile us to God, and in making continual intercession for us.

Q. Who doth execute for us the Office of a Priest?

A. Christ.

Q. Is Christ our only High Priest?

A. Yes.

Q. What be the parts of Christ's Priestly Office?

A. They are two, viz. His offering himself a sacrifice, and his making intercession.

Q. What did he offer up as a Priest to God?

A. Himself.

Q. In what way did he offer up himself?

A. As a Sacrifice.

Q. Was he offered up by some other against his own will.

A. No.

Q. Did he of his own accord offer up himself?

A. Yes.

Q. What, was Christ's body and soul the sacrifice that was offered up?

A. Yes.

Q. Was the Cross the altar on which he offered himself a sacrifice?

A. No.

Q. Was his Divine nature the altar that sanctified the gift of the Humane nature, and made it an acceptable Sacrifice for the end for which it was offered?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did Christ offer up himself a sacrifice?

A. Only once.

Q. Is he to be offered up no more?

A. No.

Q. Was his sacrifice, and oblation finished at his death?

A. Yes.

Q. To what end did Christ offer up himself a sacrifice?

A. To satisfy Divine Justice.

Q. And for what else?

A. To reconcile us to God.

Q. What do you mean by Divine Justice?

A. The Justice of God.

Q. What do you mean by reconciling us to God?

A. Making God and us Friends.

Q. Is Christ's once offering up of himself, sufficient for these ends? viz. to satisfy God's Justice and make God and us Friends?

A. Yes.

Q. What doth Christ do for us as a Priest, besides his offering up himself as a sacrifice?

A. He maketh intercession for us.

Q. What do you mean by Christ's making intercession for us?

A. His praying, and making request to God for us.

Q. Is Christ's intercession part of his Priestly office, as well as his oblation, or offering up himself a sacrifice?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Christ intercede for us on earth?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he continue to make intercession for us now he is in Heaven?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he intercede for us, by presenting his sacrifice, and merits for us before his Father?

A. Yes.

Q. And by presenting his will before his Father for us?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he not pray for us vocally then?

A. No.

Q. But virtually?

A. Yes.

Q. Hath he finished his intercession, together with his sacrifice?

A. No.

Q. To which of Christ's offices doth it belong to offer sacrifices, and make intercession for us?

A. To his priestly office.

Q. 26. How doth Christ execute the office of a King?

A. Christ executeth the office of a King, in subduing us to himself, in ruling and defending us, and restraining and conquering all his and our enemies.

Q. Who is the King of the Church?

A. Christ.

Q. Doth Christ execute his Kingly office towards his people?

A. Yes.

Q. And towards his enemies?

A. Yes.

Q. How towards his people?

A. First in subduing them to himself, and then in ruling, and defending them.

Q. Do we submit to Christ of our own accord?

A. No.

Q. Are we by nature enemies to him?

A. Yes.

Q. Is he fain to subdue us by his Kingly power, before we become his peculiar people?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom doth Christ subdue us?

A. To himself.

Q. Are all true believers then Christ's subjects, and he their King?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the Church Christ's Kingdom in an especial manner?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth Christ leave us to our own care after he hath once subdued us?

A. No.

Q. Doth he rule, and govern his people as a King doth his subjects?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he rule them by his Laws, and Spirit, and Officers, and Discipline?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it then belong to Christ's Kingly Office, to ordain Laws, wake Officers, and appoint the use of censures for his Church?

A. Yes.

Q. What doth Christ do as a King with reference to his enemies?

A. Restrain them, and conquer them.

Q. Are his enemies ours, and ours his?

A. Yes.

Q. Whom of our enemies doth Christ restrain and conquer?

A. All.

Q. What Sin, Satan, Death, wicked men, the world, and all?

A. Yes.

Q. Will he suffer his, and our enemies to do what they list with us?

A. No, he will restrain them.

Q. Will he leave us to shift for ourselves?

A. No.

Q. Will he suffer any of our enemies finally to prevail against us?

A. No.

Q. Will he conquer them all at last?

A. Yes.

Q. To which of Christ's Offices doth it belong to subdue, and govern us, and to restrain, and conquer our enemies?

A. To his Kingly Office.

Q. 27. Wherein consists Christ's Humiliation?

A. Christ's Humiliation consists in his being Born, and that in a low Condition, made under the Law, undergoing the miseries of this Life, the Wrath of God, and the cursed Death of the Cross, in being Buried, and continuing under the Power of Death for a time.

Q. Wherein be the four steps of Christ's Humiliation?

A. In his Birth, Life, Death, and after Death.

Q. What was the first step of Christ's Humiliation:

A. His being Born.

Q. In what condition was he Born?

A. In a low condition.

Q. Under what was Christ made?

A. Under the Law.

Q. Was this part of Christ's Humiliation, to be born, and that in a low condition too, and made under the Law?

A. Yes.

Q. What did Christ undergo in the course of his life?

A. The Miseries of this life.

Q. And was this another step of his Humiliation?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did he undergo in the close of his life?

A. The wrath of God, and cursed death of the Cross.

Q. Did Christ die an ordinary, natural death?

A. No.

Q. What kind of death did he die?

A. The death of the Cross.

Q. What death was that?

A. A cursed death.

Q. Was it not a most shameful, and painful death withal?

A. Yes.

Q: And did God's Wrath as well as his curse light upon Christ at his death?

A. Yes.

Q. And was his suffering of death another step of his Humiliation?

A. Yes.

Q. How was Christ humbled after death?

A. In his being buried, and remaining under the power of death.

Q. Did Christ immediately rise again?

A. No.

Q. For how long did he remain under the power of Death?

A. For a time.

Q. Not forever?

A. No.

Q. 28. Wherein consists Christ's Exaltation?

A. Christ's Exaltation consists in his rising again from the dead on the third day, in ascending up into heaven, in sitting at the right hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the World at the last day.

Q: Which be the four steps of Christ's Exaltation?

A. His Resurrection, Ascension, Session at the Right hand of God, and coming to Judgment.

Q. Did Christ rise again?

A. Yes.

Q. Whence did he arise?

A. From the Dead.

Q. When did he arise?

A. On the third day.

Q. Whither did he ascend?

A. Up into Heaven.

Q. Where doth he sit?

A. At the Right hand of God the Father.

Q. What mean you by sitting at God's Right hand?

A. His being exalted to chief honor, power, and favor with God: as Princes do set them whom they highly love, and favor at their right hand, as I Kings 2. 19.

Q. Shall he come again?

A. Yes.

Q. To what end?

A. To judge the World.

Q. Who shall be the Judge at the last judgment?

A. Christ.

Q. Whom shall he judge?

A. The World.

Q. When shall he judge them?

A. At the last day.

Q. Was Christ exalted at his Resurrection, Ascension, and Session at God's Right hand?

A. Yes.

Q. And shall he be farther exalted in his coming to judgment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Christ's Divine nature capable of a real Exaltation?

A. No.

Q. Was that exalted only declaratively?

A. Yes.

Q. Was his human Nature exalted not only declaratively, but really?

A. Yes.

Q. 29. How are we made partakers of the Redemption purchased by Christ?

A. We are made partakers of the Redemption purchased by Christ, by the effectual application of it to us, by his holy Spirit.

Q. By whom is Redemption purchased?

A. By Christ.

Q. By whom is Redemption applied?

A. By his Holy Spirit.

Q. What do you mean by the applying Redemption to us?

A. Making it ours.

Q. Must there be a work of the Spirit then in us, without which Christ's work for us cannot be available, or made ours?

A. Yes.

Q. Can we no other way be made partakers of Christ's Redemption, but by the Spirits application?

A. No.

Q. What kind of applications is that which the Spirit makes?

A. An effectual application.

Q. Cannot the Minister do it effectually, without the Spirit?

A. No.

Q. 30. How doth the Spirit apply to us the Redemption purchased by Christ?

A. The Spirit applieth to us the Redemption purchased by Christ by working faith in us, and thereby uniting us to Christ in our effectual calling.

Q. What doth the Spirit work in us in order to the applying of Christ's Redemption to us?

A. He works Faith in us.

Q. Can we believe of ourselves?

A. No.

Q. Will not the word of itself work faith in us without the Spirit?

A. No.

Q. No• the Spirit ordinarily without the Word?

A. No.

Q. What doth the Spirit do for us by Faith?

A. He doth thereby unite us to Christ.

Q. Are believers then united to Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. By the Spirit.

Q. By what?

A. By Faith.

Q. When is it that the Spirit works faith in us, and by faith unites us unto Christ?

A. In our effectual Calling.

Q. 31. What is Effectual Calling?

A. Effectual Calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby, convincing us of our sin and misery, enlightening our minds in the knowledge of Christ, and renewing our wills, he doth persuade and enable us to embrace Jesus Christ, freely offered to us in the Gospel.

Q. What kind of calling is it that is here described, a common, external, and ineffectual calling?

A. No.

Q. A saving, internal, and effectual calling?

A. Yes.

Q. May men be externally called by the ministry of the Word, and yet not effectually, and savingly called?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose work is effectual calling?

A. The work of God's Spirit.

Q. Is effectual vocation then the proper work of the Spirit, as our Redemption is the proper work of Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the first thing the Spirit doth for men in effectual calling?

A. He doth convince them.

Q. What doth he convince them of?

A. Of their sin, and misery.

Q. What do you mean by convincing them of their sin, and misery?

A. Making them feeling to know what a sinful, miserable, and undone condition they are in.

Q. Are none effectually called but they that have been some way or other convinced of their sin, and misery?

A. No.

Q. What doth the Spirit do for the Elect, after he hath shown them soundly their sin, and misery?

A. He doth farther enlighten their minds.

Q. Have all that be effectually called their minds enlightened with saving knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. Is gross ignorance then a certain sign of one that remains uncalled, and unconverted?

A. Yes.

Q. To the knowledge of whom doth the Spirit lead the convinced sinner?

A. To the Knowledge of Christ.

Q. Is it sufficient to our effectual calling to have our minds enlightened and changed from ignorance to knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Must there be a change upon our wills too?

A. Yes.

Q. What then doth the Spirit do farther for the sinner when he hath enlightened his mind?

A. He doth renew his Will.

Q. Do the Wills of men remain unchanged, when they are effectually called?

A. No.

Q. Are there new inclinations then in the Wills of those that are effectually called, that they love the good that they hated before, and bate the evil that they loved before?

A. Yes.

Q. Why doth the Spirit convince us of our Sins, enlighten our Minds, and renew our Wills?

A. That he may persuade and enable us to embrace Jesus Christ.

Q. Doth he no more then persuade our Wills?

A. He doth also enable us.

Q. Are not we able of ourselves to embrace Christ though he be offered to us?

A. No.

Q. Are we as unwilling, as unable to embrace Jesus Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is it that persuadeth us, and enableth us, and makes us willing?

A. The Spirit.

Q. Doth the upshot of our effectual calling consist in answering Christ's call, and embracing him?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Christ offered to us sinners then?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In the Gospel.

Q. How is Christ offered to them?

A. Freely.

Q. 32. What benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this life?

A. They that are effectually called do in this life partake of justification, Adoption, Sanctification, and the several benefits which in this life do either accompany or flow from them.

Q. What do you mean by Justification?

A. Making of us righteous, or guiltless.

Q. What by Adoption?

A. A making of us Children.

Q. What by Sanctification?

A. Making us holy.

Q. Who are they that partake of Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. All they that are effectually called.

Q. Are no others justified, sanctified, and adopted, but only they that are effectually called?

A. No.

Q. When do they partake of these benefits of Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. In this life.

Q. And do they partake of any other benefits?

A. Yes. The benefits that do accompany, or flow from Justification, Adoption and Sanctification.

Q. 33. What is Justification?

A. Justification is an act of God's free grace, wherein he pardoneth all our sins, and accepteth us as righteous in his sight, only for the righteousness of Christ imputed to us, and received by faith alone.

Q. Whose act is Justification?

A. God's.

Q. Is it because of something in us moving him thereunto that he doth justify us?

A. No.

Q. What is the moving cause then of our Justification?

A. God's free Grace.

Q. What doth God do for us in Justifying us?

A. Pardon our sins.

Q. What sins?

A. All our sins.

Q. What else doth he do for us in Justifying us?

A. Accepts as righteous

Q. How? in the sight of men, or of God?

A. In the sight of God.

Q. Doth then the justification of a sinner lie in God's pardoning of his sin, and accepting of his person as righteous?

A. Yes.

Q. For what is it that God doth pardon and accept us as Righteous?

A. For the righteousness of Christ:

Q. Is it not for some merits, or satisfaction of ours, in part at least, that God doth pardon our sins, and accept us righteous?

A. No, But [only] for the Righteousness of Christ.

Q. What is necessary on God's part for making this righteousness of his, ours?

A. His imputing it to us.

Q. What do you mean by his imputing righteousness to us?

A. His accounting it ours.

Q. What is necessary on our part to the making of this righteousness of Christ ours?

A. Our receiving it.

Q. How is this righteousness received by us?

A. By Faith.

Q. Are we not justified by our works then?

A. No.

Q. But by Faith alone?

A. Yes.

Q. How and why by Faith alone?

A. As that grace which alone receiveth the righteousness of Christ.

Q. 34. What is Adoption?

A. Adoption is an act of God's free grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of God.

Q. Whose act is adoption?

A. God's.

Q. What doth move him to adopt us? any desert of ours?

A. No.

Q. What then?

A. His free gree.

Q. Are we not by nature children of God.

A. No: but children of wrath.

Q. What doth God do for us in Adoption?

A. Receive us into the number of children, and give us a right to all the privileges of children.

Q. Are there any special privileges belonging to God's children?

A. Yes.

Q. And have we a right to all those by adoption?

A. Yes.

Q. 33. What is Sanctification?

A. Sanctification is the work of God's free grace? whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the Image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin, and live unto righteousness.

Q. Are we able to renew or satisfy ourselves?

A. No.

Q. Whose work is it then to sanctify us?

A. The work of the Spirit.

Q. Can none but he sanctify us?

A. No.

Q. Can we merit, or deserve it at his hands, that he should do it for us?

A. No.

Q. What doth move him then to sanctify us?

A. Free grace.

Q. What do you mean by God's free grace?

A. His free and undeserved favor.

Q. What is done for us in Sanctification?

A. We are renewed.

Q. Wherein are we renewed by Sanctification?

A. In the whole Man.

Q. Is it enough to be renewed in some part?

A. No.

Q. Must it be a total and universal renovation then?

A. Yes.

Q. After what Image, or pattern are we renewed in Sanctification?

A. After the Image of God.

Q. What is it to be made new after the Image of God?

A. To be made like to him in knowledge, righteousness, and holiness.

Q. Is none truly sanctified, but he that is quite changed and become a new man?

A. No.

Q. You have described the habit of Sanctification, which lies in being renewed in the whole man after the Image of God: Wherein stands the exercise of Sanctification?

A. In dying to sin, and living to righteousness.

Q. Do those that are truly sanctified live in their sins?

A. No.

Q. Do all that are truly sanctified, mortify their sins, or die to them?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Mortification, or dying to sin, a necessary part of Sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it to live unto righteousness?

A. As living Trees to bring forth the fruits of righteousness, or good works.

Q. Do all they that are truly sanctified not only abstain from, and mortify sin; but also bring forth the fruits of righteousness or good works?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Vivification or living to righteousness, a necessary part of the exercise of Sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we perfectly sanctified or renewed at once?

A. No.

Q. Are we by degrees then more and more enabled to die unto sin by Sanctification, and live unto Righteousness?

A. Yes.

Q. 35. What are the benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. The benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification, are assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, increase of grace, and perseverance therein to the end.

Q. Are there any benefits which flow from justification, adoption, and sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. How many are they?

A. Five, viz. 1. Assurance of God's love. 2. Peace of Conscience. 3. Joy in the holy Ghost. 4. Increase of grace. 5. Perseverance therein to the end.

Q. Whence doth assurance of God's love, peace of Conscience, joy in the holy Ghost, &c. flow?

A. From our Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification.

Q. What can none have assurance of God's love, nor true peace, or joy, but they that are truly justified and sanctified?

A. No.

Q. What is it a false peace and comfort then that men have while they remain unsanctified?

A. Yes.

Q. When do these benefits flow from Justification, Adoption and Sanctification?

A. In this life.

Q. May one that is truly justified and sanctified have assurance of God's love in this life?

A. Yes.

Q. And from thence peace of Conscience, and joy in the holy Ghost also?

A. Yes.

Q. Which of these benefits do flow from the sense and sight of our Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. Assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, and joy in the holy Ghost.

Q. Which of them do flow from the being of Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. Increase of grace, and perseverance therein to the end.

Q. Is it requisite to the getting of peace and assurance, that we get the sight and sense of our justification and sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. May a man that is truly justified, and sanctified, be without assurance, peace, and joy, (at least for a time) if he have not the sense of his Justification and Sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. Do increase of grace, and perseverance therein to the end, necessarily flow from Justification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. Yes.

Q. What do all then that are truly sanctified increase in grace, and persevere therein to the end?

A. Yes.

Q. Do they always actually, and sensibly increase?

A. No.

Q. Are they always of a growing disposition, and desirous to grow?

A. Yes.

Q. And do they actually grow at some time or other if there be time, and opportunity?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it consistent with grace to rest satisfied in present attainments, and not to desire and reach out after a farther growth?

A. No.

Q. Do none that are truly justified and sanctified fall away totally and finally?

A. No.

Q. 37. What benefits do believers receive from Christ at death?

A. The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory, and their bodies being still united to Christ, do rest in their graves till the resurrection.

Q. Do the benefits and privileges of believers end with their lives?

A. No.

Q. What benefits have they in respect of their souls at death?

A. They are made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory.

Q. What benefit have they in respect of their bodies at death?

A. They are still united to Christ, and do rest in their graves until the Resurrection.

Q. Are believers made perfect in this life?

A. No.

Q. When are they made perfect?

A. At death.

Q. What are they then made perfect in?

A. In holiness.

Q. What is it of believers that is made perfect at death?

A. Their souls.

Q. Whose souls are made perfect?

A. Believers.

Q. None but believers?

A. No.

Q. Do their souls die with their bodies, and see corruption?

A. No.

Q. Are their souls made perfect when their bodies are corrupted?

A. Yes.

Q. Whither do the souls of believers pass after death?

A. Into glory.

Q. How long after death do they pass into glory?

A. Immediately.

Q. What, as soon as they are out of their bodies?

A. Yes.

Q. Do not their souls sleep in the grave with their bodies? or stay in Purgatory?

A. No.

Q. Are their bodies at rest?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In their graves.

Q. What forever?

A. No.

Q. How long then?

A. Only until the Resurrection.

Q. Are believers united to Christ in their bodies as well as their souls?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth not Death break that union, and separate them from Christ?

A. No.

Q. Do their bodies still continue united unto Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. 38. What benefit do believers receive from Christ at the Resurrection?

A. At the resurrection, believers being raised up in glory, shall be openly acknowledged, and acquitted in the day of judgment, and made perfectly blessed in full enjoying of God to all eternity.

Q. Shall believers be raised up?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. At the Resurrection.

Q. What do you mean by the Resurrection?

A. The rising from the dead.

Q. What estate shall believers be raised in?

A In glory.

Q. Who shall be raised in glory?

A. Believers.

Q. Shall they rise in such an estate as they were in before?

A. No.

Q. What benefits shall believers have at Judgment?

A. They shall be acknowledged, and acquitted.

Q. After what manner shall they be acknowledged and acquitted?

A. Openly.

Q. Will God acquit them from all their sins, and the wicked slanders?

A. Yes.

Q. And acknowledge and own them before all the world?

A. Yes.

Q. When shall they be thus acknowledged and acquitted?

A. In the day of Judgment.

Q. What benefits shall they have after Judgment?

A. They shall be made perfectly blessed.

Q. Wherein?

A. In the enjoyment of God.

Q. What kind of enjoyment of God shall they then have?

A. A full enjoyment.

Q. What without interruption, or intermission?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long?

A. To all eternity.

Q. Doth true blessedness stand in the enjoyment of God?

A. Yes.

Q. And perfect blessedness in the full enjoyment of God, to all eternity?

A. Yes.

Hitherto are the matters of faith, which make up the first part of the Catechism, or what man is to believe concerning God. Now follows the second part concerning the duty of which God requires of man.

Q. 39. What is the duty which God requireth of man?

A. The duty which God requireth of man, is obedience to his revealed will.

Q. Is there any duty which God requireth of man?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that duty?

A. Obedience.

Q. To what?

A. To his will.

Q. Is God's secret will the rule of our duty?

A. No.

Q. What then?

A. His revealed will.

Q. Where is the will of God revealed?

A. In his Word.

Q. And is that the rule of our duty?

A. Yes.

Q. 40. What did God at first reveal to man for the rule of his obedience?

A. The rule which God at first revealed to man for his obedience, was the Moral Law.

Q. Did God at first give any Law to man for the rule of his obedience?

A. Yes.

Q. What, the Ceremonial, or judicial Law?

A. No.

Q. What Law then did he give at first for the rule of man's obedience?

A: The Moral Law.

Q. Doth God rule man by Law?

A. Yes.

Q. Why was God's Law revealed to man?

A. For the rule of his obedience.

Q. Is man then in his obedience to look that it be according to the Law, as his Rule?

A. Yes.

Q. 41. Where is the Moral Law summarily comprehended?

A. The Moral Law is summarily comprehended in the ten Commandments.

Q. How many Commandments are there?

A. Ten.

Q. Is that which you call the Moral Law, the same that we have in the ten Commandments?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the whole Law of God, and duty of man, shortly summed up, and briefly comprehended in these Commandments?

A. Yes.

Q 42. What is the sum of the ten Commandments?

A. The sum of the ten Commandments is, To love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our soul, with all our strength, and with all our mind: and our neighbor as ourselves.

Q. What is the comprehensive duty of all the Commandments?

A. Love.

Q How manifold is this love?

A. To God, and our neighbor.

Q. How must we love God?

A. With all our heart, and with all our soul, with all our mind, and with all our strength.

Q. How must we love our Neighbor?

A. As ourselves.

Q. Who is our Neighbor?

A. Every man.

Q. Must we love our Neighbor with the same degree of love as we do ourselves?

A. No.

Q. Must we love our Neighbor with the same truth of love as we do ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this the sum of all the Commandments, to love God with all our hearts, and our Neighbor as ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q. 43. What is the Preface to the ten Commandments?

A. The Preface to the ten Commandments is in these words, I am the Lord thy God which hath brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Q. What doth the Preface to the ten Commandments teach us?

A. The Preface to the ten Commandments teacheth us, That because God is the Lord, and our God, and Redeemer, therefore we are bound to keep all his Commandments.

Q. Are we bound to keep God's Commandments?

A. Yes.

Q. Which of his Commandments?

A. All his Commands.

Q. Is there any reason why we should keep God's Commandments?

A. Yes.

Q. How many are the Reasons why we should keep God's Commandments?

A. Three: viz. 1. God is the Lord. 2. And our God. 3. And our Redeemer.

Q. Is this a Reason why we should keep his Commandments, because he is the Lord?

A. Yes.

Q. And because he is our God?

A. Yes.

Q. And because he is our Redeemer?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are we taught, that because God is the Lord, and our God, and Redeemer, therefore we must keep his Commandments?

A. In the Preface to the ten Commandments.

Q. Which words in the Preface do teach us that God is the Lord?

A. These words [I am the Lord].

Q. Which words do teach us that he is our God?

A. These words [Thy God].

Q. Which words do teach us that he is our Redeemer?

A. These words [That brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and out of the house of bondage].

Q. Were we ever in Egypt, or the house of bondage?

A. Yes: in a spiritual Egypt, and bondage under sin.

These two Rules must be learnt for the understanding of the Commandments.

- R. 1. That when any sin is forbidden, the contrary duty is required; and when any duty is required, the contrary sin is forbidden.
- R. 2. That where any sin is forbidden, all the kinds and degrees of it, temptations and incentives to it are likewise forbidden; and when any duty is required, all the kinds, and the highest perfection of it, together with all the means and helps to it, are also required.

Q. 45. Which is the first Commandment?

A. The first Commandment is, [Thou shalt have no other God's before me].

Q. 46. What is required in the first Commandment?

A. The first Commandment requireth us to know and acknowledge God to be the only true God, and our God, and to worship and glorify him accordingly.

Q. Is there something required, as well as something forbidden in this and every Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we required to know God?

A. Yes.

Q. May we lawfully or safely live in ignorance of God?

A. No.

Q. Against what Commandment is ignorance?

A. Against the first.

Q. Is it sufficient to know there is a God, though we do not own, nor acknowledge him to be a God to us?

A. No.

Q. How must we own or acknowledge God?

A. To be the only true God, and our God.

Q. Doth the first Commandment require us to have a God?

A. Yes.

Q. And to have the true God for our God?

A. Yes.

Q. May we have any other God besides him?

A. No.

Q. May we have any other God with him?

A. No.

Q. Must we own him for the [only] true God?

A. Yes.

Q. And for our only God?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth the First Commandment determine then of the only right Object of Divine worship, or whom only we must worship?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it enough for us to know and verbally to acknowledge and make profession of him?

A. No.

Q. What must we do more?

A. We must worship and glorify him.

Q. What worship of God is here required, either inward or outward?

A. Both.

Q. Are we required then to worship God with the inward worship of the mind, as for example, to trust in him, and to love, fear, esteem, desire, and obey him?

A. Yes.

Q. And with the outward worship too, as to pray to and praise him?

A. Yes.

Q. How manifold then is the worship here required?

A. Inward and outward.

Q. How are we to worship and glorify God?

A. Accordingly: That is, as the only true God, and our God.

Q. What above, and before all others?

A. Yes.

Q. Do we worship and glorify him as God, when we love, fear, or obey any other more than him, or before him?

A. No.

Q. In what Commandment are we required to make profession of worship, and glorify God?

A. In the First Commandment.

Q. 47. What is forbidden in the first Commandment?

A. The first Commandment forbiddeth the denying or not worshipping and glorifying the true God, as God, and our God, and the giving that worship and glory to any other, which is due to him alone.

Q. Is it a sin to deny God not only in our words, but in our works, or in our thoughts?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Atheism forbidden in this Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Atheism?

A. The having of no God.

Q. And are Profaneness and Idolatry forbidden in this Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Profaneness?

A. The not worshipping and glorifying of God.

Q. Is it not enough to give some kind of external worship to God, unless we do worship and glorify him [as] God?

A. No.

Q. What is Idolatry?

A. The giving to anything that worship and glory which is due to God alone.

Q. Is it Idolatry to give God's outward worship to any other; as for example, to pray to Saints, or Angels, or the like?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it Idolatry to give God's inward worship to any other; as for example, to love, fear, desire, or trust in anything more than God?

A. Yes.

Q. Are all vile Idolaters then that prefer anything before God; that do seek themselves & their own ends more than the glory of God?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these the three great sins forbidden in this Commandment, as Atheism, or denying of God; Profaneness, or the not worshipping and glorifying of God, and idolatry, or the giving of his worship and glory to any other.

A. Yes.

Q. 48. What are we specially taught by these words [before me] in the first Commandment?

A. These words before me, in the first Commandment, teach us, that God who seeth all things, taketh notice of, and is much displeased with the sin of having any other God.

Q. Doth God see all things?, even the inward thoughts and motions of the heart.

A. Yes.

Q. Doth he take notice of it if we have any other God;

A. Yes.

Q. And is he much displeased with it?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are we taught, that God taketh notice of us, and is much displeased with the sin of having any other God?

A. In these words [before me] in the first Commandment.

Q. 49. Which is the second Commandment?

A: The second Commandment is, [Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven Image, or any likeness of anything that is in Heaven above, or that is in the Earth beneath, or that is in the Water under the Earth; thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands, of them that love me, and keep my Commandments.

Q. 50. What is required in the second Commandment?

A. The second Commandment requireth, the receiving, observing, and keeping pure and entire, all such religious worship and Ordinances as God hath appointed in his word.

Q. Is there anything required in the second Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. How can you say it requireth anything, since it seems only to forbid, viz. [Thou shalt not make to thyself any graven Image, &c.]

A. Where any sin is forbidden, the contrary duty is required.

Q. May we worship God after our own imaginations and inventions?

A. No.

Q. Must we worship him only according to his own appointment and institution?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth the second Commandment determine then of the only right way and means in and by which God will be worshipped?

A. Yes.

Q. What is required of us here with reference to God's worship and ordinances?

A. To receive them, observe them, keep them pure and entire.

Q. What are we required to receive, observe, keep pure and entire?

A. The religious worship, and ordinances that God hath appointed.

Q. And not the superstitious inventions that men have ordained?

A. No.

Q. Which of God's ordinances are we required to receive, observe, keep pure and entire.

A. All.

Q. Hath he appointed what worship and ordinances he will be served in?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In his word.

Q. May we reject God's worship and ordinances?

A. No.

Q. Must we receive them?

A. Yes.

Q. May we neglect or oppose them?

A. No.

Q. Must we observe them?

A. Yes.

Q. May we corrupt them?

A. No.

Q. Must we keep them pure?

A. Yes.

Q. Must we not mix human inventions with them?

A. No.

Q. May we not suffer any of them to be lost?

A. No.

Q. Must we keep them whole and entire, neither adding to them, nor taking from them?

A. Yes.

Q. 51. What is forbidden in the second Commandment?

A. The second Commandment forbiddeth the worshipping of God by images, or any other way not appointed in his word.

Q. May we worship Images as God?

A. No.

Q. May we worship the true God in and by Images?

A. No.

Q. Is it Idolatry not only to worship Images instead of God, which is forbidden in the first Commandment, but also to worship God by Images?

A. Yes.

Q. And is this the Idolatry forbidden in this Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. And is all will-worship forbidden here?

A. Yes.

Q. What is will-worship?

A. The worshipping of God any way not appointed in his word.

A. Is it sinful to worship God after a way of our own devising?

A. Yes.

Q. May we worship him what way we please?

A. No.

Q. Are these the great sins forbidden in the second Commandment, viz. Idolatry, or the worshipping of God by images, and all will-worship, or the worshipping of God any other way then, he hath appointed in his word?

A. Yes.

Q. 52. What are the reasons annexed to the second Commandment?

A. The reasons annexed to the second Commandment are, God's sovereignty over us, his propriety in us, and his zeal he hath to his own worship.

Q. Hath God a sovereignty over us, propriety in us, and a zeal for his own worship?

A. Yes.

Q. And must we upon this account keep his Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by a sovereignty over us?

A. Supreme power, dominion, and authority over us.

Q. What do you mean by propriety in us?

A. His just Right, and Title to us as his own.

Q. Will he suffer men to corrupt his worship, and set up their own inventions in his service, and not be greatly angry with them?

A. No.

Q. In which words of the second Commandment are these reasons hinted?

A. In these words (For I the Lord thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the Fathers upon the Children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, and showing mercy to thousands of them that love me, and keep my Commandments.

Q. In which of these words is the first reason hinted, why we should keep this Commandment, viz. God's sovereignty over us?

A. In these words (for I the Lord.)

Q. In which words is the second reason contained, viz. God's propriety in us?

A. In these words [my God.]

Q. In which words is the third reason contained, viz. The zeal that he hath to his own worship?

A. In these words [Am a jealous God.]

Q. Wherein doth God express his zeal for, and jealousy about, his own worship.

A. In punishing the breakers, and rewarding the keepers of this Commandment, to many generations.

Q. In which words of the Commandment is that held forth?

A. In these words [Visiting the iniquity of the Fathers upon the children unto the third, &c. and showing mercy to thousands, &c.]

Q. 53. Which is the third Commandment?

A. The third Commandment is, [Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.]

Q. 53. Which is the third Commandment?

A. The third Commandment requireth the holy and reverend use of God's Names, Titles, Attributes, Ordinances, Word, and Works.

Q. Doth the third Command require the use of God's Names, Titles, Ordinances, &c.

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of use doth it require?

A. An holy and reverent use.

Q. Doth God look then that not only his worship be performed aright for the matter of it, but doth he also heed the manner [how] it be performed?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth the third Commandment determine of the only right manner of God's worship?

A. Yes.

Q. What is meant by the name of God, when its said, [Thou shalt not take the name, &c.]

A. By his Name is understood anything whereby he makes himself known.

Q. Doth God make himself known to us by his Name, Titles, and Attributes?

A. Yes.

Q. And by his Ordinances, Words, and Works?

A. Yes.

Q. And are all these comprehended under the [Name] of God?

A. Yes.

Q. Is this then that which is meant, when it is said, [Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord in vain] That we should not use his Names, Titles, or Attributes, Ordinances, Words, or Works, in a vain, irreverent, or unholy manner?

A. Yes.

Q. What are some of God's Names?

A. Jehovah, Jah, Lord, God, &c.

Q. May we use these slightly, and irreverently in our ordinary speech, crying on every slight occasion, O Lord, O God, O Jesus, God forgive me, and the like?

A. No.

Q. Must not this be done without seriousness and holy reverence?

A. No.

Q. What are some of God's Titles?

A. Creator, Father, Preserver of men, Hearer of Prayers, King of Kings, King of Saints, and the like.

Q. What do you mean by God's Attributes?

A. These perfections and properties of his Nature, whereby he makes himself known to us, and is distinguished from his Creatures.

Q. What are some of them?

A. Infiniteness, eternity, and unchangeableness, &c.

Q. Are God's ordinances, as Prayer, and the like, a part of his name?

A. Yes.

Q. May we be vain or irreverent in praying, hearing, &c. or suffer our minds to wander about other things?

A. No.

Q. Is there required then in this Commandment, not only an outward reverence of the body in the use of God's ordinances, but especially in the inward reverence of the mind?

A. Yes.

Q. Must there be some care taken too of outward reverence, so far as it may serve to express and further the inward affections of the mind?

A. Yes.

Q. May we read or hear the holy word of God vainly, and slightly, without Consideration, Observation, Meditation?

A. No.

Q. Must we make a holy use of God's works, taking notice of God in them?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a sin not to take notice of the glorious wisdom, power and goodness of God, expressed in his works of Creation?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a sin not to take notice of, or not to be afflicted with God's works of Providence, and his dealings with us, and with others, especially the Church?

A. Yes.

Q. In what Commandment is the holy use of God's Creatures, and of his Providences and dispensations required?

A. In the third.

Q. 55. What is forbidden in the third Commandment?

A. The third Commandment forbiddeth all profaning or abusing of anything, whereby God maketh himself known.

Q. Doth it forbid the profaning of anything whereby God makes himself known?

A. Yes.

Q. What, the profaning of his names by swearing, for swearing, cursing? &c.

A. Yes.

Q. And the profaning of his Ordinances by formality and slightness?

A. Yes.

Q. And the profaning of his word by idle jests, or wresting it to color our sins?

A. Yes.

Q. And the profaning of his works, by making an unholy use of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it forbid the abusing of anything, whereby God makes himself known?

A. Yes.

Q. What is it to abuse?

A. To use to a wrong end, or in a wrong manner.

Q. Doth this Command forbid the abusing of God's works; as for example, of his Creatures, to pamper our lusts, or of his Providences, to harden us in our sins?

A. Yes.

Q. And the abusing of his Ordinances to low, and carnal, much more to carnal men's sinful, and wicked ends?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is hypocrisy, or the making use of Religion for carnal ends, eminently forbidden?

A. In the third Commandment.

Q. 56. What is the reason annexed to the third Commandment?

A. The reason annexed to the third Commandment, is, that however the breakers of this Commandment may escape punishment from men, yet the Lord our God will not suffer them to escape his righteous judgment.

Q. Is there any reason annexed to the third Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by being annexed?

A. Added or joined to it.

Q. In which words is the reason annexed to the third Commandment expressed?

A. In these words [For the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain]

Q. What is meant by God's not holding him guiltless?

A. That he will not suffer him to escape his righteous Judgments.

Q. May the breakers of this Commandment escape punishment from men?

A. Yes.

Q. Will God suffer them to escape?

A. No.

Q. Will not God hold us guiltless then, though we do perform the worship he requires, except we do it in a holy, serious, and reverent manner?

A. No.

Q. 57. Which is the fourth Commandment?

A. The fourth Commandment is, [Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labor and do all thy works: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made Heaven and Earth, the Sea, and all that is in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it.]

Q. 58. What is required in the fourth Commandment?

A. The fourth Commandment requireth the keeping holy to God such set times as he hath appointed in his Word; expressly one whole day in seven, to be a holy Sabbath unto himself.

Q. Doth the fourth Commandment require any especial time to be kept holy?

A. Yes.

Q. What time?

A. Such as God hath appointed in his Word.

Q. Doth the fourth Commandment then determine of the special time for divine worship, as the three foregoing Commands do of the Object, means, and manner of worship?

A. Yes.

Q. Hath God left us to keep what time we please?

A. No.

Q. What proportion of time hath God expressly set apart in his word to be kept holy to himself.

A. One whole day in seven.

Q. Is this Commandment to be understood of the seventh day in order, that is, the last of the seven, or the seventh in number, that is, one in seven?

A. Of the seventh in number.

Q. Hath God left the determining which day in seven it should be (whether the first or the last) to some other precept?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the fourth Command then a Moral precept, that is to say, of perpetual force, binding Christians now, as well as Jews heretofore, to the observation of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it cease to be of force?

A. No.

Q. 59. Which day of the seven hath God appointed to be the weekly Sabbath?

A. From the beginning of the world to the Resurrection of Christ, God hath appointed the seventh day of the week to be the weekly Sabbath: and the first day of the week, ever since to continue to the end of the world, which is the Christian Sabbath.

Q. Which day of seven was at first appointed for the Sabbath?

A. The last.

Q. Which day of the seven did God since appoint to be the Sabbath?

A. The first.

Q. When was the seventh or last day of the week appointed to be the Sabbath?

A. From the beginning of the world.

Q. Was it only from the time of the giving of the Law of Moses?

A. No.

Q. Was it ordained for man in Paradise at the beginning of the world?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did the seventh or last day of the week continue to be the Sabbath?

A. Until the Resurrection of Christ.

Q. How long hath the first day been the weekly Sabbath?

A. Ever since the Resurrection of Christ.

Q. Was the Resurrection of Christ, and the finishing the work of our Redemption on the first day of the week, the reasons why Christians do keep it as the Sabbath?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it therefore called the Lord's day?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the first day of the week, or the Lord's day, a Christian Sabbath.

A. Yes.

Q. How long doth it continue to be the Sabbath?

A. To the end of the World.

Q. What is the meaning of the word Sabbath?

A. A day of holy rest.

Q. 60. How is the Sabbath to be sanctified?

A. The Sabbath is to be sanctified, by an holy resting all that day, even from such worldly employments and recreations as are lawful on other days, and spending the whole time in the public and private exercises of God's worship, except so much as is to be taken up in the works of necessity and mercy.

Q. Is the Sabbath to be sanctified?

A. Yes.

Q. In what sense is God said to sanctify the holy Sabbath?

A. By making it holy.

Q. In what sense are we said to sanctify the Sabbath?

A. By keeping it holy.

Q. Did God sanctify it by way of consecration?

Q. Yes.

Q. And must we sanctify it by way of application, i.e. applying it to those ends and exercises for which God did consecrate it?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the rest of the Sabbath a part of our sanctifying it?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of rest must it be? a mere civil rest?

A. No.

Q. Or a mere carnal and bodily rest, such as the Ox and the Ass must have on the Sabbath?

A. No.

Q: What rest then?

A. An holy rest.

Q. How long must this be?

A. All that day.

Q. From what must we rest? from spiritual employments and recreations?

A. No.

Q. From what then?

A. From worldly employments and recreations?

Q May we not do our own work upon the Sabbath day?

A. No.

Q. Nor follow our own sports and pastimes, nor spend the time in our ease and sloth?

A. No.

Q From what worldly employments and recreations must we rest? from such as are sinful in themselves, and unlawful at any time?

A. Yes.

Q. And not only from such, but even from those that are lawful at other times?

A. Yes.

Q. And how must we spend the time?

A. In the exercise of God's worship.

Q. May we spend it idly?

A. No.

Q. In what exercise must we spend it?

A. Both in the public and private exercises of God's worship.

Q. May we stay at home, and spend our time in the Private Exercises of God's Worship with the neglect of the Public?

A. No.

Q. May we not rest satisfied in giving attendance on the public worship, but must we also be careful at home in the Private?

A. Yes.

Q. May not worldly business be done in any Case upon the Sabbath day.

A. Yes.

Q. What works then may lawfully be done on the Sabbath day, besides the works of Piety.

A. The works of Necessity and Mercy.

Q What do you call the works of Necessity?

A. Such as could not be done before, and cannot be deferred until after the Sabbath.

Q. May works of mercy be done upon the Sabbath day, such as visiting the sick, feeding our bodies, and our beast? &c.

A. Yes.

Q. And why is this Commandment delivered as to all in general, so especially to governors of families? Is it because it is not enough for them to sanctify the Sabbath themselves, but they must also look that it be strictly observed, in, and by their families, and because they are apt to hinder their households in and by business of their own?

A. Yes.

Q. 61. What is forbidden in the fourth Commandment?

A. The fourth Commandment forbiddeth the omission or careful performance of the duties required, and the profaning the day by idleness, or doing that which is in itself sinful, or by unnecessary thoughts, words, or works, about worldly employments or recreations.

Q. Doth it forbid the omission of the duties required?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by the omission of them?

A. The leaving them undone.

Q. Doth it forbid the careless performance of the duties of the Sabbath?

A. Yes.

Q. And the profaning of the day?

A. Yes.

Q. How many ways may the Sabbath be profaned?

A. Three.

- 1. By idleness.
- 2. By doing that which is in itself sinful.
- 3. By unnecessary thoughts, words, or works, about worldly employments and recreations:

Q. May we not be idle upon the Sabbath day?

A. No.

Q. May we sleep and loiter away the time?

A. No.

Q. Is it profaning the day by doing that which is in itself sinful?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it enough to forbear that which is sinful, though we do neglect that which is good?

A. No.

Q. Is it a profanation of the Sabbath, to let our thoughts unnecessarily run upon worldly affairs?

A. Yes.

Q. Or to let our tongues run upon worldly business?

A. Yes.

Q. Or to set our hands to worldly employments?

A. Yes.

Q. Must we neither work nor play upon the Sabbath day?

A. No.

Q. But spend all the day in God's special Service?

A. Yes.

Quest. 62. What are the Reasons annexed to the Fourth Commandment?

A. The reasons annexed to the fourth Commandment are, God's allowing us six days of the week for our own employment, his challenging a special propriety in the seventh, his own example, and his blessing the Sabbath-day.

Q. Are there many reasons annexed to the fourth Commandment to enforce it?

A. Yes.

Q. How many are there?

A. Four, viz.

- 1. God's allowing us six days of the week for our own employment.
- 2. His challenging an especial propriety in the seventh.
- 3. His own example.
- 4. His blessing the Sabbath day.

Q. Hath God allowed us any days in the week?

A. Yes.

Q. What hath he allowed them to us for?

A. For our own employments.

Q. Is it God's will that everyone should have some employment?

A. Yes.

Q. How many days hath God allowed us for our own employments?

A. Six.

Q. And is it his will that men should ordinarily spend the six days of the week in their employments?

A. Yes.

Q. And is this a reason why we should not cut short God's allowance of one day for his work, because he hath allowed six times as much for ours?

A. Yes.

Q. In which words of the Commandment is this reason hinted, of God's allowing of us six days of the week for our own employment?

A. In these words, [Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work.]

Q. Must we dispatch all our work upon the six days, that we may have nothing to hinder us upon the Lord's day?

A. Yes.

Q. In which words doth God challenge a special propriety in the seventh day?

A. In these words, [but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God.]

Q. In which words is God's own example urged, as a reason why we should work six days, and keep holy the seventh?

A. In these words, [for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day.]

Q. In which words is God's blessing the Sabbath day hinted, as a reason why we should keep it?

A. In these words, [wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it.]

Q. Hath God then blessed the Sabbath day, and appointed it to be a means of blessing unto us?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth God require us to [Remember] the Sabbath-day, as a means for the keeping of it holy?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we apt to forget it?

A. Yes.

Q. And cannot we duly sanctify it without we remember it before hand, to prepare for it, and conveniently to dispatch our worldly business in season out of the way?

A. No.

Q. 63. Which is the fifth Commandment?

A. The fifth Commandment is, [Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the Land which the Lord thy God giveth thee].

Q. 64. What is required in the fifth Commandment?

A. The fifth Commandment requireth the preserving the honor, and performing the duties belonging to everyone in their several places and relations, as superiors, inferiors, or equals.

Q. Are all sorts of Relations comprehended under the words [Father and Mother] in the fifth Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. And all sorts of duties in the word [Honor]?

A. Yes.

Q. What doth this Commandment require with reverence to our Relations?

A. Preserving the honor, and performing the duty belonging to them.

Q. How many sorts of Relations be there?

A. Three, Superiors, Inferiors, and Equals.

Q. What do you mean by superiors?

A. Such as are any way above us, whether in Family, Church, or State.

Q. Are all that are above us, whether in Power, or Wealth, or age, or gifts, Superiors?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth this Commandment require reverence, respect, submission, and obedience towards Parents, Masters, Husbands, Magistrates, Ministers, &c. as being Superiors?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by Inferiors?

A. Such as are below us in Gifts, Place, Estate, or otherwise.

Q. Are Subjects, Wives, Children, Servants, Hearers, the Poor, the weak in grace or knowledge, comprehended under the name of Inferiors?

A. Yes.

Q. And must their Superiors be careful in performing their duties towards them; by caring for their bodies and souls, governing them with meekness and gentleness, correcting and reprovng with moderation and wisdom?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there duties to be performed to our equals?

A. Yes.

Q. May we slight them, and carry ourselves scornfully towards them?

A. No.

Q. Doth this Command require kindness and affableness towards our Equals, readiness to yield to them, and prefer them before ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q. 65. What is forbidden in the fifth Commandment?

A. The fifth Commandment forbiddeth the neglecting of, or doing anything against the honor and duty which belongeth to everyone in their several places and relations.

Q. Doth it forbid the neglecting our duty to our relations?

A. Yes.

Q. And the doing anything against it?

A. Yes.

Q. May we disgrace or despise our superiours, or speak evil of them, or carry ourselves irreverently towards them, or oppose and resist them?

A. No.

Q. May we despise and slight our inferiours, or be rigorous towards them, and careless of their spiritual or temporal good?

A. No.

Q. Is it a sin to neglect to instruct them, correct them, and keep them under government, or to neglect to encourage and countenance them when they do well?

A. Yes.

Q. May we be discourteous, or envious towards our equals, or usurp over them, or rigorously stand upon our terms with them?

A. No.

Q. 66. What is the reason annexed to the fifth Commandment?

A. The Reason annexed to the fifth Commandment, is a promise of long life and prosperity, (as far as it shall serve for God's glory, and their own good) to all such as keep this Commandment.

Q. Is there any reason annexed, or joined to the fifth Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the reason?

A. A promise of long life and prosperity.

Q. How far forth are these (and other temporal) mercies promised?

A. As far as they shall serve for God's glory, and our own good.

Q. To whom is long life and prosperity promised?

A. To all such as keep this Commandment.

Q. 67. Which is the sixth Commandment?

A. The sixth Commandment is, [Thou shalt not kill].

Q. 68. What is required in the sixth Commandment?

A. The sixth Commandment requireth all lawful endeavors to preserve our own life and the life of others.

Q. Doth the sixth Commandment concern the life of ourselves and others?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it only forbid us to take away man's life?

A. No.

Q. Doth it require us also to use endeavors to preserve it?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose life doth it require us to use endeavors to preserve?

A. Our own life, and the life of others.

Q. May we then endeavor by any means whatsoever to preserve our own or others lives?

A. No.

Q. What kind of endeavors then must we use?

A. Lawful endeavors.

Q. What must we use [All] lawful means and endeavors?

A. Yes.

Q. May we not use unlawful means though our lives did hang upon it?

A. No.

Q. Are there here required all the means and helps to preserve the life of man?

A. Yes.

Q. Is temperance in meat, drink, sleep, labor, recreations, and all other things here required, because this is a means to preserve our own life?

A. Yes.

Q. Is contentedness, peaceableness, patience, meekness, readiness to forgive injuries, required in this Commandment, because these are means to preserve the life of others, as well as our own?

A. Yes.

Q. 69. What is forbidden in the sixth Commandment?

A. The sixth Commandment forbiddeth the taking away of our own life, or the life of our neighbor unjustly, or whatsoever tendeth thereunto.

Q. Whose lives doth it forbid us to take away?

A. Our own or our neighbors.

Q. Doth it forbid the taking away the life of our neighbor in any case whatsoever?

A. No.

Q. How then doth it forbid us to take away our Neighbors life?

A. Unjustly.

Q. May there be a just cause of taking away our Neighbors life, as in executing a Malefactor at the command of a Magistrate, or in a lawful war, or upon the necessary defense of ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it forbid only the direct taking away of our own, or our Neighbors life?

A. No.

Q. What else doth it forbid?

A. Whatsoever tendeth thereunto.

Q. Is all kind of intemperance here forbidden, and all carking care, and excessive passions, because these do tend to take away our own life?

A. Yes.

Q. And is hatred, and envy against others, and rash anger, strife, quarrelling, contention, and desire of revenge, here forbidden, because they do tend to the taking away of our neighbors life, as well as our own?

A. Yes.

Q. 70. Which is the seventh Commandment?

A. The seventh Commandment is, [Thou shalt not commit Adultery].

Q. 71. What is required in the seventh Commandment?

A. The seventh Commandment requireth the preservation of our own and our neighbors chastity in heart, speech and behavior.

Q. Doth the seventh Commandment concern the chastity of ourselves and others?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it only forbid the taking away of chastity?

A. No.

Q. Doth it require us to preserve it?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose chastity doth it require the preservation of?

A. Of our own, and our Neighbors.

Q. Wherein doth it require us to preserve our own and our Neighbors chastity?

A. In heart, speech, and behavior.

Q. Must our words, and behavior be chaste?

A. Yes.

Q. And must our hearts, thoughts, and desires be kept chaste?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth this Commandment require us to use the means to preserve our own and others chastity?

A. Yes.

Q. Are watchfulness over our eyes, and all our senses, and temperance, prayer, diligence in our callings, modesty, both in married and unmarried and avoiding all temptations to, and occasions of uncleanness required here, because they are means to preserve our own, and others chastity?

A. Yes.

Q. 72. What is forbidden in the seventh Commandment.

A. The seventh Commandment forbiddeth all unchaste thoughts, words, and actions.

Q. Are all sorts and degrees of uncleanness forbidden here; under the name of adultery in this Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a sin to use any dalliance, wanton looks, or any unchaste behavior?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a sin to use any unchaste words, corrupt communications, and filthy songs?

A. Yes.

Q. May we not give entertainment so much as to an uncast thought, without breaking this Commandment?

A. No.

Q. Doth it forbid self-pollution, and secret wantonness with ourselves, and corrupting our own chastity?

A. Yes.

Q. And all desires and attempts to corrupt others chastity?

A. Yes.

Q. Are all provocations to uncleanness, as filthy Pictures, mixed dancings, keeping company with filthy talkers, idleness gluttony, drunkenness, light and impudent carriage, forbidden in this commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. 73. Which is the eighth Commandment?

A. The eighth Commandment is, [Thou shalt not steal].

Q. 74. What is required in the eighth Commandment?

A. The eighth Commandment requireth the lawful procuring and furthering the wealth and outward estate of ourselves and others.

Q. What doth the eighth Commandment concern?

A. The wealth of ourselves and others.

Q. Doth it only forbid the wronging and prejudicing of our Neighbors, and of our own estate and wealth?

A. No.

Q. Doth it also require us to procure and further it?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth this Commandment bind us to use the means of Procuring, Preserving, and furthering our own estates, as for example, to be frugal and thrifty in our expenses, to have a Calling, to be diligent in our labors, and careful, as far as we may, to secure our estates?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we to use the means to procure and further our Neighbors wealth and outward estate, by justice in our dealings, faithfulness in our trusts, making restitution where we have done wrong, giving and lending according to others necessity and our own ability, and otherwise helping of our Neighbors?

A. Yes.

Q. May we use any unlawful means, as lying and deceit, to procure and further our wealth and outward estate?

A. No.

Q. Doth this Commandment require only the use of lawful endeavors?

A. Yes.

Q. 75. What is forbidden in the eighth Commandment?

A. The eighth Commandment forbiddeth whatsoever doth, or may, unjustly hinder our own, or our neighbors wealth or outward estate.

Q. Doth it forbid not only stealing, but whatever else may unjustly hinder our own and our neighbors wealth?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it forbid nothing but what doth hinder us, or others, unjustly?

A. No.

Q. Doth it forbid prodigality, idleness, wastefulness in gaming, and company-keeping, riot, carelessness, living above our estates, because these do hinder our own wealth, and outward estates?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it forbid oppression, and false weight, false measures, corrupting, and adulterating of wares, and all fraudul••• and deceitful dealing, and injustice, because these do hinder the wealth and outward estate of others?

A. Yes.

Q. 76. Which is the ninth Commandment?

A. The ninth Commandment is [Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.]

Q. 77. What is required in the ninth Commandment?

A. The ninth Commandment requireth the maintaining and promoting of truth between man and man, and of our own, and our neighbors good name, especially in witness-bearing.

Q. What doth the ninth Commandment concern?

A. The good name of ourselves and others.

Q. Is all that is prejudicial to our own good name, and our Neighbors, forbidden in this Commandment?

A. Yes.

Q. Is all that is helpful to procure and further our own and our neighbors good name here required?

A. Yes.

Q. Are we required here to maintain the Truth?

A. Yes.

Q. And not only maintain it, but also promote it?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is the truth especially to be maintained?

A. In witness-bearing.

Q. Doth this Commandment require us to use the means for the manifesting of truth, by appearing, and standing for it, and speaking it fully and clearly, when we are called, and by a careful keeping of our promises?

A. Yes.

Q. Is the defending of our innocence, and practicing whatsoever is lovely, and of good report, here required because these are means to maintain and promote our own good name?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the covering of others failings, defending their names, commending what is praise-worthy in them, readiness to believe any good we see in them, or bear of concerning them, required in the ninth Command, in as far, and because these are means to maintain and promote our neighbors good name?

A. Yes.

Q. 78. What is forbidden in the ninth Commandment?

A. The ninth Commandment forbiddeth whatsoever is prejudicial to truth, or injurious to our own, or our neighbors good name.

Q. What Commandment forbiddeth that which is prejudicial to the truth?

A. The ninth.

Q. What do you mean by that which is prejudicial to the truth?

A. That which doth wrong the truth, or hinder the knowing of it.

Q. Is lying then, or speaking falsely, equivocating, or speaking doubtfully, to the wronging of truth, or justice, and the perverting, and undue concealing of the truth here forbidden, because these are are prejudicial to the truth, and hinder its being known?

A. Yes.

Q. May we not lie for our own advantage, or to cover our faults, or for good ends?

A. No.

Q. Is all truth to be spoken at all times?

A. No.

Q. May untruths be spoken at any time?

A. No.

Q. Doth this Commandment forbid whatsoever is injurious to our own good nam•?

A. Yes,

Q. What do you mean by being injurious to our good name?

A. That which doth hurt, or wrong our good name.

Q. May we lay ourselves open to contempt, and give occasion unto others to despise us?

A. No.

Q. Must we avoid the appearance of evil in things that be of an evil report?

A. Yes.

Q. May we speak or do that which is injurious to our neighbors good name?

A. No.

Q. Is it forbidden in this Commandment, causelessly to entertain jealousies, and evil surmises of others; to speak evil of them behind their backs, to receive or spread evil reports of them, to carry tales, or countenance and hearken to tale-bearers?

A. Yes.

Q. And to rail at, and revile others, and put misconstructions upon their carriage and actions, and to scoff at them?

A. Yes.

Q. May we rejoice in their falls, and aggravate their sins, extenuate their graces, and lessen their praises?

A. No.

Q. And are all these forbidden, because they do hinder our neighbors good name?

A. Yes.

Q. 79. Which is the tenth Commandment?

A. The tenth Commandment is, [Thou shalt not covet thy neighbors house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbors wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbors].

Q. 80. What is required in the tenth Commandment?

A. The tenth Commandment requireth full contentment with our own condition, with a right and charitable frame of spirit toward our neighbor, and all that is his.

Q. What frame of spirit doth the tenth Commandment require us to have, with reference to our own condition?

A. Contentment.

Q. What degree of contentment?

A. Full contentment.

Q. What frame of spirit doth it require us to have with reference to our neighbor?

A. A right and charitable frame of spirit.

Q. Towards himself only?

A. Towards him, and all that is his.

Q. What is that right and charitable frame of spirit towards our neighbors? Is it to think no evil of them (without manifest cause) and to wish no evil to them, and to rejoice in their joy, and mourn in their affliction?

A. Yes.

Q. In what Commandment is contentment with our own condition, and a sympathizing, or fellow feeling with our neighbor in his condition, required?

A. In the tenth.

Q. 81. What is forbidden in the tenth Commandment?

A. The tenth Commandment forbiddeth all discontentment with our own estate, envying or grieving at the good of our neighbor, and all inordinate motions and affections to anything that is his.

Q. What sin is here forbidden touching our own condition?

A. Discontentment.

Q. And what is forbidden touching our neighbors condition?

A. Envy.

Q. What is envy?

A. Grieving at the good of our neighbor.

Q. May we grieve and grudge at their honor, riches, preferment, esteem, and applause?

A. No.

Q. Or at their eminency above us in gifts, or graces, or precedency before us, secretly wishing that they stood out of our light?

A. No.

Q. Is it a sin then inwardly to rejoice in their disgrace, or suppress their deserved commendation, or envy their worth, because they are not of our party, and p^ro^pri^et^y?

A. Yes.

Q. What sin against our neighbor, besides envy, is forbidden in this Commandment?

A. All inordinate motions and affections to anything that is his.

Q. What do you mean by inordinate motions?

A. Such as are not ordered rightly according to the rule.

Q. What special evil motion of the mind is here forbidden?

A. Coveting.

Q. What is it to covet?

A. Unlawfully to desire that which is not our own.

Q. What must we not covet?

A. Any thing that is our neighbors.

Q. 80. Is any man able perfectly to keep the Commandments of God?

A. No mere man since the fall, is able in this life, perfectly to keep the Commandments of God, but doth daily break them in thought, word, and deed.

Q. Was Adam able perfectly to keep the Commandments of God before the fall?

A. Yes.

Q. Is man able perfectly to keep them now?

A. No.

Q. How long hath m•n been rendered unable perfectly to keep the commandments of God?

A. Since the fall.

Q. Christ was a man, and was not ee able perfectly to keep the Commandments of God though since the fall?

A. He was not a mere man.

Q. What do you mean by mere man?

A. One that is only a man.

Q. Is Christ not a mere man then, but God as well as man?

A. Yes

Q. Shall we be able to keep God's Commandments perfectly after this life, if we get to heaven?

A Yes.

Q. When then is man able perfectly to keep them?

A. In this life.

Q. May not we keep them sincerely in this life?

A. Yes.

Q. How cannot we keep them then in this life?

A. Not perfectly.

Q. Do we break God's Commandments?

A. Yes.

Q What, daily, and con•inually?

A. Yes.

Q. In what?

A. In thought, word, and deed.

Q. 82. Are all transgressions of the Law equally heinous?

A. Some sins in themselves, and by reason of several aggravations, are more heinous in the sight of God than others.

Q. What do you mean by more heinous?

A. More grievous, and more offensive in the sight of God.

Q. How many ways may some sins be more grievous and hein•us than others?

A. Two ways, viz.

- 1. Of themselves, and of their own nature.
- 2. By reason of their aggravations.

Q. What do you mean by aggravations?

A. Such circumstances as do make a sin to be greater then without them it were.

Q. Do sins grow greater then of themselves, they were by their aggravating, or heightening circumstances: as for example, from the time when, the place where, the manner in which, the means by which, the reason why, the person by whom, the person against whom they are committed?

A. Yes.

Q. And are some sins of themselves, or in their own nature more heinous than others? As the highest sins against the First Table more heinous than the highest against the Second Table?

A. Yes.

Q. And willful sins more heinous then fins of infirmity; sins against knowledge, then those of ignoranc; sins ripened into action, then sins begun in the thoughts; and sins of custom and deliberation, then those committed through some sudden passion and instant force of temptation?

A. Yes.

Qu. 82. What doth every sin deserve?

A. Every sin deserveth God's wrath and curse, both in this life, and that which is to come.

Q. What is it that deserveth God's wrath and curse?

A. Sin.

Q. What sin?

A. Every sin.

Q. What the least sin?

A. Yes.

Q. What an evil thought, or an idle word?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the just deserts of the least sin?

A. God's wrath and curse.

Q. When doth sin deserve God's wrath and curse to be inflicted on man?

A. Both in this life, and that which is to come.

Q. 83. What doth God require of us that we may escape his wrath and curse, due to us for sin?

A. To escape the wrath and curse of God due to us for sin, God requireth of us Faith in Jesus Christ, repentance unto life, with the diligent use of all the outward means whereby Christ communicateth to us the benefits of Redemption.

Q. Is God's wrath and curse due to us?

A. Yes.

Q. For what?

A. For sin.

Q. Is there any way to escape this wrath and curse?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything required on our part to escape them?

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. Faith, Repentance, and a diligent use of means.

Q. And doth he require repentance as well as Faith of us, or hath Christ repented and believed for us?

A. He requireth them of us.

Q. Who communicates to us the benefits of redemption?

A. Christ.

Q. What do you mean by communicating them to us?

A. Conveying them, or imparting them to us?

Q. Doth he communicate or convey his benefits by means, or without means?

A. By means.

Q. Doth he make use of any outward means to communicate or convey his benefits to us?

A. Yes.

Q. What benefits doth he by these means convey unto us?

A. The benefits of redemption.

Q. And cannot we escape without the use of these means?

A. No.

Q. What kind of use must we make of these means?

A. A diligent use.

Q. May we neglect them and yet escape?

A. No.

Q. Or will a careless use of them be enough?

A. No.

Q. Why doth God require of us Faith, and Repentance, and the diligent use of the outward means?

A. That we may escape his wrath and curse due to us for sin.

Q. 84. What is faith in Jesus Christ?

A. Faith in Jesus Christ is a saving grace, whereby we receive and rest upon him alone for salvation, as he is offered to us in the Gospel.

Q. In whom must our Faith be?

A. In Jesus Christ.

Q. Is Faith in Christ a common or a saving grace?

A. A saving grace.

Q. What do we do by Faith?

A. Thereby we receive and rest upon Christ

Q. What, do we receive by Faith only the benefi•s of Christ?

A. No.

Q. What, himself?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth faith rest upon Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. Upon any other besides Christ?

A. No.

Q. Or upon any other together with Christ?

A. No.

Q. Doth it receive and rest upon him alone?

A. Yes.

Q. For what doth Faith receive and rest upon Christ alone?

A. For salvation.

Q. Is Faith only the believing that Christ died for sinners?

A. No.

Q. Or is it the believing that he died in particular for me to save me?

A. No.

Q. Is it the receiving and resting upon Christ alone for salvation?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Christ offered to us?

A. Yes.

Q. Where?

A. In the Gospel.

Q. And doth true faith take or receive an offered Christ?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth it take him?

A. As he is offered in the Gospel.

Q. Is Christ offered to us in the Gospel as our King, Priest, and Prophet?

A. Yes.

Q. And is it not true faith, except we thus take Christ, as he is offered?

A. No.

Q. Doth faith enable us to take Christ as a King, to be ruled by him alone?

A. Yes.

Q. And as a Priest, to be saved by him alone?

A. Yes.

Q. And as a Prophet, to be guided by him alone?

A. Yes.

Q. And have not they true faith that do not take Christ in all these respects?

A. No.

Q. 85. What is Repentance unto life?

A. Repentance unto life is a saving grace, whereby a sinner out of the true sense of his sin, and apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ, doth with grief and hatred of his sin, turn from it unto God, with full purpose of, and endeavor after new obedience.

Q. What repentance is here described?

A. Repentance unto life.

Q. Why is it called Repentance unto life?

A. Because God hath promised us life upon our repentance.

Q. What do we in repentance turn from?

A. From sin.

Q. What do we turn unto?

A. Unto God.

Q. Doth it turn the heart?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth it turn the life?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth true repentance chiefly lie in our turning from sin unto God both in heart and life?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth the penitent turn from sin unto God?

A. With grief for, and hatred of it:

Q. Is there never true repentance without real grief for sin?

A. No.

Q. Is it not true repentance to forbear sin out of fear, except there be also an hatred of it?

A. No.

Q. Whence doth this grief for, and hatred of sin arise in the sinner?

A. Out of the true sight of sin, and apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ.

Q. Can there be no true repentance without a true sight and discovery of sin?

A. No.

Q. Will it be despair and not repentance, except with the sight of sin there be an apprehension (at least of a possibility) of mercy?

A. Yes.

Q. In and through whom doth the Penitent sinner apprehend some hope of mercy?

A. In, and through Christ.

Q. Doth he see any hope in himself, his own duties and deservings?

A. No.

Q. What purposes doth true Repentance make the sinner to take up?

A. A purpose of new obedience.

Q. Will true Repentance stand with a purpose to go on in sin?

A. No.

Q. Doth it always bring forth a purpose of new Obedience?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth it bring forth a wavering, and unsettled purpose only?

A. No.

Q. What purpose then?

A. A full purpose.

Q. And is it an idle and ineffectual purpose?

A. No.

Q. What is this sincere purpose of obedience iyned with?

A. Endeavour after it.

Q. 83. What are the outward means whereby Christ communicateth to us the benefits of Redemption?

A. The outward and ordinary means whereby Christ communicateth to us the benefits of Redemption, are his Ordinances, especially the Word, Sacraments and Prayer, all which are made effectual to the Elect for salvation.

Q. Are Christ's Ordinances the means whereby he communicates to us the benefits of Redemption?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by Christ's Ordinances?

A. The means or ways of worship ordained by him.

Q. What are the special Ordinances whereby he communicates to us his benefits?

A. The Word, Sacraments, and Prayer.

Q. What kind of means are these?

A. The outward and ordinary means.

Q. May Christ extraordinarily make use of other means, when men are not capable of receiving benefits by these means?

A. Yes.

Q. May men ordinarily expect salvation without the use of these means?

A. No.

Q. Are there any other inward means besides that which Christ doth make use of?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom are these means made effectual?

A. To the Elect.

Q. What are these means rightly used effectual to them for?

A. For Salvation.

Q. 87. How is the Word made effectual to Salvation?

A. The Spirit of God maketh the reading, but especially the preaching of the Word, an effectual means of convincing and converting sinners, and of building them up in holiness and comfort, through faith unto salvation.

Q. Who is it that makes the Word effectual to salvation?

A. The Spirit of God.

Q. In what kind of exercises of the word doth the spirit use to make it effectual?

A. In the reading, but especially in the preaching of the word.

Q. Will not the word be effectual without the working of the spirit?

A. No.

Q. How is it effectual to sinners?

A. To convince and convert them.

Q. What do you mean by convincing of them?

A. Giving them a lively sight and sense of their sins and misery.

Q. What do you mean by converting of them?

A. Turning them from sin unto God.

Q. How is it made effectual to the Saints?

A. To build them up.

Q. What do you mean by building them up?

A. A furthering, strengthening, and increasing them.

Q. Wherein doth the word build them up?

A. In holiness and comfort.

Q. To what doth the word thus build them up?

A. To salvation.

Q. Through what means?

A. Through Faith.

Q. Will not the word profit us then, except it be mixed with Faith?

A. No.

Q. Is the conviction, conversion, sanctification, and consolation of sinners, the work of the Spirit, by the word, through faith?

A. Yes.

Q. 88. How is the Word to be read and heard, that it may become effectual to salvation?

A. That the word may become effectual to salvation, we must attend thereunto with diligence, preparation, and prayer, receive it with saith and love, lay it up in your hearts and practice it in our lives.

Q. How must we attend upon the word?

A. With diligence, preparation, and prayer.

Q. Must we come diligently and frequently to the hearing and reading of it?

A. Yes.

Q. And must we observe it, and attend to it with diligence, when we do read or hear it?

A. Yes.

Q. Will negligent, slight, and seldom attendance upon the word be sufficient?

A. No.

Q Is prayer necessary to the making of the word effectual?

A. Yes.

Q Do we not rightly attend upon the word, except we make preparation for it before we come?

A. No.

Q What? must we pray before we come to it, and after we have been at it?

A. Yes.

Q And how must we receive it?

A. With faith and love.

Q What is it to receive the word with faith?

A. Soundly to believe the truth and goodness of it, and accept of both.

Q What is it to receive it with love?

A. Lovingly and willingly to embrace it.

Q What must we do with it, when we have received it?

A. Lay it up?

Q Where, in our heads only?

A. In our hearts.

Q Will it nothing avail us to attend to it, receive it, and retain it, except we practice it in our lives?

A. No.

Q Will the word be effectual to our salvation if thus attended to and received, thus laid up and practiced.

A. Yes.

Q 89. How do the Sacraments become effectual means of salvation?

A. The Sacraments become effectual means of salvation, not from any virtue in them, or in him that doth administer them, but only by the blessing of Christ, and the working of his Spirit in them that by saith receive them.

Q How do they not become effectual?

A. Not from any virtue in them, or in him that doth administer them.

Q Doth the efficacy of the Sacraments depend upon the goodness or badness of him that doth administer them?

A. No.

Q. Is the efficacy of the sacraments from themselves, or do they work upon the soul by own own nature?

A. No.

Q. By what do they become effectual?

A. Only by the blessing of Christ.

Q. How doth Christ bless the Sacrament that it may become effectual to us?

A. By the working of his Spirit.

Q. Are the Sacraments thus blessed, and made effectual unto all?

A. No.

Q. To whom then are they effectual?

A. To them that by faith receive them.

Q. Do not the Sacraments profit them that are in unbelief, and either have not, or use not Faith to receive them?

A. No.

Q. 90. What is a Sacrament?

A. A Sacrament is an holy Ordinance instituted by Christ, wherein, by 〈◊〉 signs, Christ and the benefits of through Covenant are represented, sealed, and •plied to believers.

Q. Is the Sacrament a civil Ordinance, or an holy Ordinance?

A. An holy Ordinance.

Q. By whom are the 〈◊〉 ?

A By Christ.

Q. What do you mean by being [instituted] by Christ?

A. Appointed and ordained by Christ.

Q. What are the parts of a Sacrament?

A. The sign, and the thing signified.

Q. What is the outward part of the Sacrament?

A. The outward and sensible sign.

Q. Do the signs offer themselves to the senses?

A. Yes.

Q. And offer the things signified to our Faith?

A. Yes.

Q. Are they empty signs, useless, and unprofitable?

A. No.

Q. What do they signify and convey to us?

A. Christ and the benefits of the New-Covenant.

Q. After what manner are Christ and the benefits of the New-Covenant shown forth, and conveyed to us in the Sacraments?

A. They are represented, sealed, and applied.

Q. Are the sacraments then the seals, or the confirming of the New Covenant?

A. Yes.

Q. Do we seal our covenant with God, and God his covenant with us at the Sacrament?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom are Christ, and the benefits of the new Covenant sealed, and applied?

A. To believers.

Q. To all believers?

A. Yes.

Q. And to none but believers?

A. No.

Q 91. Which are the Sacraments of the New Testament?

A. The Sacraments of the New Testament are Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Q. Were there other Sacraments under the Old Testament, as Circumcision, and the Passover.

A. Yes.

Q. Do these remain in use now?

A. No.

Q. What Sacraments hath Christ appointed under the New Testament in the room of these?

A. Baptism, and the Lord's Supper.

Q. Are there no other Sacraments but these two?

A. No.

Q. 92. What is Baptism?

A. Baptism is a Sacrament, wherein the washing with water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, doth signify and seal our ingrafting into Christ, and partaking of the benefits of the Covenant of Grace, and our engagement to be the Lord's:

Q. What kind of Ordinance is Baptism?

A. A Sacrament.

Q. What is the Elemental sign in Baptism?

A. Water.

Q. What is the Ceremonial sign?

A. Washing, or application of the water?

Q. In whose name is the person baptized to be washed with water?

A. In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Q. What do you mean by baptizing [in the Name] of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost?

A. In the authority, and into the faith, profession, and obedience of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Q. What is signified, sealed, and engaged to, as to be done on God's part in Baptism?

A. Our ingrafting into Christ, and being made partakers of the benefits, of the Covenant of Grace.

Q. What is sealed to on our part in Baptism, or what do we engage to?

A. To be the Lord's.

Q. Are our ingrafting into Christ, partaking of the benefits of the Covenant of Grace, and our engagement to be the Lord's, signified and sealed to in Baptism?

A. Yes.

Q. 93. To whom is Baptism to be administered?

A. Baptism is not to be administered to any that are out of the visible Church, till they profess their faith in Christ, and obedience to him, but the infants of such as are members of the visible Church are to be baptized.

Q. To whom is Baptism not to be administered?

A. Not to any that are out of the visible Church.

Q. Till when is it not to be administered to such?

A. Not till they profess their faith in Christ, and obedience to him.

Q. What kind of profession must such make then before they be baptized?

A. Of faith in Christ, and obedience to him.

Q. May infants be baptized?

A. Yes.

Q. What all infants whatever?

A. No.

Q. Whose infants then?

A. The infants of such as are members of the visible Church.

Q. 94. What is the Lord's Supper?

A. The Lord's Supper is a Sacrament, wherein, by giving and receiving Bread and Wine according to Christ's appointment, his death is shewed forth; and the worthy receivers are not after a corporal and carnal manner, but by faith, made partakers of his Body and Blood, with all his benefits to their spiritual nourishment and growth in grace.

Q. What kind of Ordinance is the Lord's; Supper?

A. A Sacrament.

Q. What are the Elemental signs in the Lord's Supper?

A. Bread and Wine.

Q. What are the Ceremonial signs?

A. Breaking the Bread, giving, and receiving the Bread and Wine.

Q. What is signified by the Bread?

A. The Body of Christ.

Q. What by the Wine?

A. The Blood of Christ.

Q. What by the giving of the Bread and Wine?

A. God's giving all Christ to us.

Q. What by our receiving?

A. Our taking All of Christ.

Q. What by breaking of the Bread?

A. Christ being broken, bruised, and tormented for us.

Q. Why are the Bread and Wine given apart, and not together?

A. To show forth Christ's death in the parting his blood from his body.

Q. What are we made partakers of in the Supper?

A. Christ's body and blood, with all his benefits.

Q. How are we not partakers of his Body and Blood?

A. Not after a corporal and carnal manner.

Q. How are we partakers?

A. By Faith.

Q. Who are made partakers of Christ's body and blood?

A. The worthy receivers.

Q. What do you mean by worthy receivers?

A. Such as are in some measure qualified, fitted, and prepared for receiving.

Q. To what end are we here made partakers of Christ's body and blood?

A. To our spiritual nourishment and growth in Grace.

Q. 95. What is required in the worthy receiving of the Lord's Supper?

A. It is required of them that would worthily partake of the Lord's Supper, that they examine themselves, of their knowledge, to discern the Lord's body, of their faith to feed upon him, of their repentance, love, and new obedience, lest coming unworthily, they eat and drink judgment to themselves.

Q. What is the great duty of those that are to come to the Lord's Supper?

A. To examine themselves.

Q. How many things must they examine themselves about?

A. Five, viz. 1. Knowledge. 2. Faith. 3. Love. 4. Repentance. 5. New Obedience.

Q. Must everyone that cometh to the Lord's Supper have knowledge.

A. Yes.

Q. And examine himself of his knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q Why is knowledge necessary?

A. To discern the Lord's body.

Q. Are all persons that are grossly ignorant unworthy receivers.

A. Yes.

Q. And do such eat and drink damnation to themselves?

A. Yes.

Q Cannot a man be a worthy receiver without faith?

A. No.

Q. And must he examine himself in his faith?

A. Yes.

Q. Why is faith necessary?

A. To feed upon Christ.

Q. Whom do we feed on in the Lord's Supper?

A. On Christ.

Q. By what?

A. By faith.

Q. Must we have love as well as faith: love to God, and love to the brethren, if we would worthily partake of the Lord's Supper?

A. Yes.

Q. And is the having and trying of repentance and new obedience, necessary to worthy receiving?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any danger if we come unworthily?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the danger?

A. We should eat and drink damnation to ourselves.

Q. Are all that come to the Sacraments without faith, love, repentance, and new obedience, unworthy receivers, that eat and drink their own damnation?

A. Yes.

Q. 96. What is Prayer?

A. Prayer is an offering up of our desires unto God, for things agreeable to his will, in the Name of Christ, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgment of his mercies.

Q. Do we offer up anything to God in Prayer?

A. Y s.

Q. What, our words only?

A. No.

Q. What then?

A. Our desires.

Q. Is it prayer to repeat a few lifeless words, when our hearts and desires are not offered up?

A. No.

Q. To whom must we offer up our desires in Prayer?

A. To God.

Q. To none but God?

A. No.

Q. For what must we pray?

A. For things agreeable to God's will.

Q. What to his revealed will?

A. Yes.

Q. Is not God's secret will the rule of our Prayer?

A. No.

Q. In whose Name must we pray?

A. In the name of Christ.

Q. What is it to pray in the Name of Christ?

A. To pray at his command, depending on his strength for assistance, and on his merits and intercession for acceptance.

Q. What must our desires to God be joined with?

A. Confession of our sins.

Q. And what else?

A. Thankful acknowledgment of his mercies.

Q. How many parts are there then of Prayer?

A. Three; Confession, Petition, and Thanksgiving.

Q. And how many things are there as the matter of these?

A. Three; our sins, wants, and mercies.

Q. Which of these is the matter of Confession?

A. Our sins.

Q. Which of Petition?

A. Our desires and wants.

Q. Which of Thanksgiving.

A. Our mercies.

Q. 97. What rule hath God given for our direction in Prayer?

A. The whole word of God is of use to direct us in Prayer; but the special rule of direction is, that form of Prayer which Christ taught his Disciples, commonly called the Lord's Prayer.

Q. What is our general rule for our direction in Prayer?

A. The whole word of God.

Q. What is the special rule?

A. The Lord's Prayer.

Q. Of what special use is the Lord's Prayer?

A. To direct us in Prayer.

Q. 98. What doth the Preface of the Lord's Prayer teach us?

A. The Preface of the Lord's Prayer [which is, Our Father which art in heaven] teacheth us, to draw near to God with all holy reverence and confidence, as children to a father able and ready to help us, and that we should pray with and for others.

Q. How many parts be there of the Lord's Prayer?

Three; viz. The Preface, six Petitions, and the Conclusion.

Q. Which is the Preface?

A. Our Father which art in heaven.

Q. How must we draw nigh to God in Prayer?

A. As children to a Father.

Q. How is that?

A. With Reverence and Confidence.

Q. Must we come to God with all holy reverence and confidence, because he is our heavenly Father?

A. Yes.

Q. What ground have we for our confidence?

A. Because he is a Father able and ready to help us.

Q. Why do we say [our Father] and not [my Father]? what doth this teach us?

A. That we should not only pray by ourselves, and for ourselves, but with and for others.

Q. Must we pray for others then?

A. Yes.

Q. For whom must we pray? for all?

A. Yes, except those that have sinned the sin unto death.

Q. What for our enemies?

A. Yes.

Q. And especially for the Church of God, for our Magistrates, Ministers, and those that we are most related and engaged to, or desired to pray for?

A. Yes.

Q. 99. What do we pray for in the first Petition?

A. In the first Petition [which is, Hallowed be thy name] we pray, that God would enable us and others, to glorify him in all that whereby he maketh himself known, and that he would dispose all things to his own glory.

Q. Which is the first Petition?

A. Hallowed be thy Name.

Q. What do you mean by the [Name] of God?

A. Any thing whereby he maketh himself known.

Q. What do you mean by [Hallowed] be thy Name?

A. Let thy name be sanctified, or glorified.

Q. Are we here then to bewail the dishonor that we have brought to God's name by our self-seeking, and other sins, whereby we have robbed him of, and obscured his glory?

A. Yes.

Q. Do we pray that he would enable others too, as well as ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q. How do we here desire God to dispose of all things in the world?

A. To his own glory.

Q. Is this the first and principal thing that we should seek in our prayers, that God's name may be hallowed, or sanctified, and glorified.

A. Yes.

Q. What, that his works may be magnified, and his word glorified, his worship observed, and all his attributes and excellencies highly honored, commended, adored, and admired by us, and all his creatures.

A. Yes.

Q. 100. What do we pray for in the second Petition?

A. In the second Petition [which is, Thy Kingdom come] we pray, that Satan's Kingdom may be destroyed, and that the Kingdom of Grace may be advanced, ourselves and others brought into it, and kept in it, and that the Kingdom of Glory may be hastened.

Q. Which is the second Petition?

A. Thy Kingdom come.

Q. Whose Kingdom do we here pray against?

A. The Kingdom of Satan.

Q. Whose Kingdom do we pray for?

A. The Kingdom of Christ.

Q. What do we pray for with reference to Satan's Kingdom?

A. That it may be destroyed.

Q. Do we here pray that our sins may be mortified, in the prevalency whereof Satan's Kingdom stands?

A. Yes.

Q. How manifold is the Kingdom of Christ?

A. Two-fold: The Kingdom of Grace; and the Kingdom of Glory.

Q. What do we pray for with reference to the Kingdom of Glory?

A. That it may be hastened.

Q. What do we pray for with reference to the Kingdom of Grace?

A. That it may be advanced.

Q. How?

A. By ourselves, and others, being brought into it, and kept in it.

Q. Are we naturally the subjects of Satan's Kingdom?

A. Yes.

Q. And is this here to be acknowledged by us?

A. Yes.

Q. And are we to pray that we may be brought into, and made real subjects of Christ's Kingdom, and that not only of his more general Kingdom, the visible Church, but his more special Kingdom, the Church invisible?

A. Yes.

Q. Must we pray here that the Gospel may be propagated among those that know it not, and prosperously succeed among those that know it, that so others may be brought into, and kept in it, as well as ourselves?

A. Yes.

Q 101. What do we pray for in the third Petition?

A. In the third Petition, [which is, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven] we pray, that God would make us able and willing to know, obey, & submit to his will in all things, as the Angels do in heaven.

Q Which is the third Petition?

A. Thy will be done.

Q. What do we pray here with reference to the will of God.

A. That we may know it, obey it, and submit to it.

Q. What do we pray for with reference to the will of his Precept?

A. That we may know and obey it.

Q. And for what with reference to the will of his Providence?

A. That we may submit to it.

Q. Wherein are we to obey and submit?

A. In all things.

Q. Are we naturally ignorant of his will?

A. Yes.

Q. And neither able, nor willing to know it?

A. No.

Q. Are we naturally contrary to his will, and unwilling as well as unable to obey or submit to it, though we did know it?

A. Yes.

Q. And are we to acknowledge this in our prayers?

A. Yes.

Q. How may we come to know, obey, and submit to his will?

A. By his grace.

Q. How doth grace qualify us for the knowing, obeying, submitting to his will?

A. It makes us both able and willing.

Q. After what pattern must we obey and submit to the will of God?

A. As the Angels do in heaven.

Q. What, universally, cheerfully, constantly, zealously, as they do?

A. Yes.

Q. 102. What do we pray for in the fourth Petition.

A. In the fourth Petition, [which is, Give us this day our daily bread] we pray, that of God's free gift, we may receive a competent portion of the good things of this life, and enjoy his blessing with them.

Q. Which is the fourth Petition?

A. Give us this day our daily bread.

Q. What things do we pray for in this Petition?

A. The good things of this life.

Q. Are these meant by our [daily bread]?

A. Yes.

Q. What measure or proportion of them do we pray for?

A. A competent portion.

Q. What do you mean by a competent portion?

A. Such a portion of them as is sufficient and convenient for us.

Q. Can we deserve the good things of this life?

A. No.

Q. Can we procure them by our own industry?

A. No.

Q. How do we come to receive them then?

A. Of God's free gift.

Q. Do we acknowledge them to be God's free gifts, when we say [Give us] our daily bread?

A. Yes.

Q. What else do we pray for to enjoy with them?

A. God's blessing.

Q. Is it not sufficient that we have the things themselves, without we have his blessing with them?

A. No.

Q. Why do we say, Give us [this day] our daily bread? Is it to teach us not to care for tomorrow, and to instruct us that we must pray daily?

A. Yes.

Q. And why do we pray for bread? Is this to teach us to moderate our affection to, and desires after earthly things; and not to desire above what may be sufficient for our comfort, and to be content if we have but Necessaries?

A. Yes.

Q. In what Petition do we pray for temporal things?

A. In the fourth.

Q. 103. What do we pray for in the fifth Petition?

A. In the fifth Petition, [which is, And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors], we pray, that God for Christ's sake would freely pardon all our sins, which we are the rather encouraged to ask, because by his grace we are enabled from the heart to forgive others.

Q. Which is the fifth Petition?

A. Forgive us our Debts, as we forgive our Debtors.

Q. What do you mean by our debts.

A. Our sins.

Q. Must we acknowledge ourselves debtors to God's Justice by sin?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is it that alone can forgive the debt of sin?

A. God.

Q. For whose sake do we pray that God would forgive us?

A. For Christ's sake.

Q. Are we able to make any satisfaction for our sins, and to pay our debts?

A. No.

Q. Must God forgive the debt if ever we be freed?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth God forgive our sins for any desert of ours?

A. No.

Q. How then?

A. Freely.

Q. Whence have we encouragement to ask of God the forgiveness of our debts?

A. Because we that are infinitely short of his goodness, do yet forgive our debtors.

Q. Must we then forgive others wrongs against us, as ever we expect that God should forgive us?

A. Yes.

Q. After what manner must we forgive others?

A. From the heart.

Q. Is it enough to forgive them in words only?

A. No.

Q. May we not have desires of revenge towards them, nor wish them evil in our hearts?

A. No.

Q. Can we do this of ourselves?

A. No.

Q. How should we then be enabled hereunto?

A. By his grace.

Q. Is this an encouragement to us to ask and expect that God should forgive us, when we by his grace are enabled from the heart to forgive others?

A. Yes.

Q. 104. What do we pray for in the sixth Petition?

A. In the sixth Petition, [which is, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil] we pray, that God would either keep us from being tempted to sin, or support and deliver us when we are tempted.

Q. Which is the sixth Petition?

A. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

Q. Do we here acknowledge our apiness to fall, and to run into temptation?

A. Yes.

Q. And our inability without God's special assistance to stand in and under temptation?

A. Yes.

Q. What do we here pray to be kept from?

A. From being tempted to any sin.

Q. And what mercy do we pray we may have when we are tempted?

A. That we may be supported and delivered.

Q. Do we pray absolutely to be delivered from the sin, and in God's time from the temptation also?

A. Yes.

Q. May we run into temptation?

A. No.

Q. And must we pray that God (if it be his will) would not in his providence expose us to temptation?

A. Yes.

Q. 105. What doth the Conclusion of the Lord's Prayer teach us?

A. The conclusion of the Lord's Prayer, [which is, For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory forever, Amen.] teacheth us, to take our encouragement in prayer from God only, and in our prayers to praise him, ascribing Kingdom, power, and glory to him: And in testimony of our desire and assurance to be heard, we say, Amen.

Q. Which is the conclusion of the Lord's Prayer?

A. For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory forever and ever, Amen.

Q. Whence are we to take our encouragement in Prayer?

A. From God only.

Q. May we take it from any worthiness in ourselves, or in any other creature?

A. No.

Q. Where are we taught to take our encouragement in Prayer from God only?

A. In the conclusion of the Lord's Prayer.

Q. Is this an encouragement to us in prayer, that the Kingdom, and Rule, and Sovereignty is God's, and therefore he may give us what he pleaseth?

A. Yes.

Q. And that the power is God's, and therefore he can do according to, and above all our necessities, let our Case be what it will?

A. Yes,

Q. And that the glory belongs to God, and therefore we are encouraged from the glorious excellencies of his nature to expect, and for the furtherance of his own honor to desire the fulfilling of our requests?

A. Yes.

Q. And doth the conclusion also teach us to join Praises to our Prayers?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God's kingdom, power, and glory then, the matter both of our encouragement, and of his praise?

A. Yes.

Q. Is God praised by us in our ascribing all glory, power, and dominion to him, and in commending his excellencies and Prerogatives?

A. Yes.

Q. And why do we say [Amen]?

A. In testimony of our desire, and assurance to be heard.

Q. Doth it imply both earnestness in desiring, and confidence of speeding?

A Yes.

Q. What is the meaning of Amen?

A. 1. So let it be. 2. So it shall be.

Useful Questions, Whereby a Christian may every day examine himself.

Psal. 4. 4.

Commune with your heart upon your beds.

EVERY Evening before you sleep (unless you find some other time in the day more for your advantage in this work) sequester yourself from the world, and having set your heart in the presence of the Lord, charge it before God to answer to these Interrogatories.

For your Duties.

- Q. 1. Did not God find me on my Bed, when he looked for me on my knees? Job 1. 5. Psal. 5. 3.
- Q. 2. Have not I prayed to no purpose, or suffered wandering thoughts to eat out my duties? Mat. 15. 8, 9. Jer. 12. 2.
- Q. 3. Have not I neglected or been very overly in the reading God's holy word? Deut. 17. 19. Josh. 1. 7, 8.
- Q. 4. Have I digested the Sermon I heard last? Have I repeated it over, and prayed it over? Luke 2. 19, 51. Psal. 1. 2. & 119. 5, 11, 97.
- Q. 5. Was there not more of custom and fashion in my family-duties than of conscience? Psal. 101. 2. Jer. 30. 21.
- Q. 6. Wherein have I denied myself this day for God? Luke 9. 23.
- Q. 7. Have I redeemed my time from too long or needless visits, idle imaginations, fruitless, discourse, unnecessary sleep, more than needs of the world? Eph. 5. 16. Col. 4. 5.
- Q. 8. Have I done anything more than ordinary for the Church of God, in this time extraordinary? 2 Cor. 11. 28. Isa. 62. 6.
- Q. 9. Have I took care of my company? Prov. 13. 20. Psal. 119. 63.
- Q. 10. Have not I neglected or done something against the duties of my Relations, as a Master, Servant, Husband, Wife, Parent, Child, &c. Eph. 5. 22. to chap. 6. v. 10. Col. 3. 18. to the 4. v. 2.

For your Sins.

- Q. 1. Doth not sin sit light? Psal. 38. 4. Rom. 7. 24.
- Q. 2. Am I a mourner for the sins of the Land? Ezek. 9. 4: Jer. 9. 1, 2, 3.
- Q. 3. Do I live in nothing that I know or fear to be a sin? Psal. 119. 101, 104.

For your Heart.

- Q. 1. Have I been much in holy Ejaculations? Neh. 2. 4, 5.

Q. 2. Hath not God been out of mind? Heaven out of sight? Psal. 16. 8: Jer. 2. 32. Col. 3. 1, 2.

Q. 3. Have I been often looking into mine own heart, and made conscience even of vain thoughts? Prov. 3. 23. Psal. 119. 113.

Q. 4. Have not I given way to the workings of pride, or passion? 2 Chron. 32. 26. James 4. 5, 6, 7.

For my Tongue.

Have I bridled my Tongue and forced it in, Jam. 1. 26. Jam. 3. 2, 3, 4. Psal. 39. 1.

Q. 2. Have I spoken evil of no man? Tit. 3. 2. Jam. 4. 11.

Q. 3. Hath the Law of the Lord been in my mouth as I sate in my house, went by the way, was lying down, and rising up? Deut. 6. 6, 7.

Q. 4. Is there no company I have come into, but I have dropped something of God, and left some good savor behind? Col. 4. 6. Eph. 4. 29.

For your Table:

Q. 1. Did not I sit down with no higher end than a beast, merely to please my appetite? Did I eat and drink to the glory of God? 1 Cor. 10. 31.

Q. 2. Was not my appetite too hard for me? Jude 12. 2 Pet. 1. 6.

Q. 3. Did not I arise from the Table without dropping anything of God there? Luke 7. 36, &c. Luke 14. 1, &c. John 6.

Q. 4. Did not I mock God, when I pretended to crave a blessing, and return thanks? Acts 27. 35, 36. Mat. 15. 36. Col. 3. 17. 23.

For your Calling.

Q. 1: Have I been diligent in the duties of my Calling? Eccles. 9. 1 Cor. 7. 17. 20. 24.

Q. 2. Have I defrauded no man? 1 Thes. 4. 6. 1 Cor. 6. 8.

Q. 3. Have I dropped never a lie in my shop, or trade? Prov. 21. 6. Eph. 4. 25.

Q. 4. Did not I rashly make, nor falsely break some promise? Psal. 106. 33. Josh. 9. verse 14, &c. Psal. 15. 4.

An Addition of some brief Directions for the Morning.

- D. 1. If through necessity or carelessness you have omitted the reading and weighing of these questions in the Evening, be sure to do it now.
- D. 2. Ask yourself, what sin have I committed? what duty have I omitted? Against which of these Rules have I offended in the day foregoing? And renew your repentance, and double your watch.

- D. 3. Examine whether God were last in your thoughts when you went to sleep; and first, when you awoke.
- D. 4. Enquire whether your care of your heart and ways doth increase upon your constant using of this course for self-examination, or whether it doth abate, and you grow more remiss.
- D. 6. Impose a task of some good meditation upon yourselves while you are making ready, either to go over these Rules in your thoughts, or the heads of the Sermon you heard last, or the holy meditations for the purpose in the practice of Piety, or Scudders daily walk.
- D. 6. Set your ends right for all that day.
- D. 7. Set your watch, especially against those sins and temptations that you are like to be most incident to, that day.

To the most endeared People, the Inhabitants of Taunton; Salvation.

Most dearly beloved and longed for, my Joy and Crown.

MY hearts desire, and prayer for you is, that you may be saved. This is that which I have been praying, and studying, and preaching for these many years; and this is the end of my venturing, and suffering, and writing at this present time. God that knoweth all things, he knoweth that this is my wish; Oh that I could but come at your souls! And that this is the prize and the gain that I run for, that I might win souls. I seek not other gifts give me your hearts, let me but part between your sins and you; suffer me but to save you. Give me leave to carry you over to Jesus Christ, and I will not ask you anymore. I will serve you gladly, I will suffer for you thankfully, so I may but save you. Do not wonder why I follow you so pressingly, why I call upon you so frequently; let not my importunity be grievous to you; all this is but to save you. Christ did not bethink his blood, and shall I bethink my breath, or ink, in order to your salvation? What pity is it, that any of you should miscarry at last, under the power of ignorance, or by a profane negligence, or a formal and lifeless profession of strict godliness.

Beloved, I am afraid of you, lest (as to many of you) I have run in vain. I cannot but most thankfully acknowledge, that (considering the paucity of these that are saved) there are not a few of you who are the joy of your Ministers & the glory of Christ. But it cannot be dissembled, that far the greater number give little ground to hope, that they are in the state of salvation. And must not this be a pinching thought, to a compassionate teacher, to think, that he cannot for his heart persuade men but that the most of them will willfully throw away themselves? Is it not a woeful sight, to behold the devils driving a great part of our miserable flocks, (as they did once the herd of swine, the keepers themselves amazed looking on,) I say driving them violently down the hill, till they be choked in the water, & drowned irrecoverably in the gulf of endless perdition? Ah miserable spectacle! what through the looseness and sensuality of some, what through the willful blindness of others, what through the halving, and cold, and customary religion of others, how great a number of our flocks is Satan like to carry utterly away from us, after all that hath been done to save them?

Yet I cannot but call after them. Hearken unto me, O ye Children. How long will you love vanity, and follow after leasing, and trust in lying words? As the Lord liveth you are lost, except you turn: wherefore turn yourselves and live ye. Ah how mercy wooeth you! how it waiteth to be gracious to you! Hear, O sinners, hear. See you not how the merciful Savior of the world stretcheth forth his hands all the day long, and spreadeth forth his wings, and calleth you as a hen doth her chicken? Hear you not the soundings of his bowels? he hath no need of you; yet how do his compassions melt over perishing sinners? his heart is turned within him, and shall not this turn your hearts? his repentings are kindled together? and shall not this lead you to repentance? Behold, he standeth at the door and knocketh. O man wilt thou keep Jesus at the door, and lodge Barabbas in thy bosom? and prefer thy cruel lusts, before thy compassionate Lord? Oh his melting love to sinners! he calleth after them, he weepeth over them, he crieth to them; How long ye simple ones, will you love simplicity? will you not be made clean? when shall it once be? why will you die? Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you. Sinner, art thou not yet melted? Oh come in at his loving calls. Come out from thy sins: touch the scepter of grace and live: why shouldst thou be dashed in pieces by his iron rod? kiss the Son: why shouldst thou perish in the way? set up Jesus as thy King, lest he count thee for his enemy, because thou wouldest that he should not reign over thee, and so thou be called forth and slain before him. Oh how dreadful will this case be to perish under the pitiful eyes of his mercy, and to die by the hand of a Savior! Oh double hell, to have thy redeemer become thine executioner! and the hand that was so long stretched forth to save thee, to be now stretched forth to slay thee! and the merciful heart of Christ himself hardened against thee, so as that he should call thee forth, and with his own hand hew thee in pieces, (as Samuel did Agag) before the Lord.

But I have been too too long in prefacing to what I intended forthwith to have fallen upon: indeed I am apt to run out in matters that do so nearly touch upon your greatest concernments.

Beloved, I despair of ever bringing you to salvation, without sanctification: or possessing you of happiness, without persuading you to holiness. God knows I have not the least hope ever to see one of your faces in heaven, except you be converted and sanctified, and exercise yourselves unto godliness. This is that I drive at. I beseech you study to further personal godliness and family godliness.

1. Personal godliness. Let it be your first care to set up Christ in your hearts. See that you make all your worldly interests to stoop to him, that you be entirely and unreservedly devoted unto him. If you willfully and deliberately and ordinarily harbor any sin, you are undone? See that you unfeignedly take the Laws of Christ, as the rule of your words, thoughts, and actions; and subject your whole man, members and mind faithfully to him. If you have not a true respect to all God's Commandments, you are unsound at heart. Oh study to get the image and impress of Christ upon you within. Begin with your hearts, else you build without a foundation. Labor to get a saving change within, or else all external performances will be to no purpose. And then study to show forth the power of godliness in the life. Let piety be your first and great business. 'Tis the highest point of Justice, to give God his due. Beware that none of you be a Prayer-less person: for that is a most certain discovery of a Christless and a graceless person, of one that is a very stranger to the fear of God. Suffer not your Bibles to gather dust. See that you converse daily with the word. That man can never lay claim to blessedness, whose delight is not in the Law of the Lord. Let meditation and self-examination be your daily exercise, else the Papists, yea, the Pagans, will condemn us. That the short questions, which I have given you as a help to self-examination, may be daily perused by you, is the matter of my passionate request unto you. If ever you come to any growth in holiness, without the constant use of this practice, I am grossly deceived; and therefore I would beseech, yea, even charge you, by the Lord, that you would daily examine yourselves by these questions, till you have found a better help to this duty.

But Piety, without Charity, is but the half of Christianity, or rather impious hypocrisy. We may not divide the Tables. See therefore that you do justly, and love mercy, and let Equity and Charity run like an even thread, throughout all your dealings. Be you temperate in all things, & let Chastity and Sobriety be your undivided companions. Let Truth and Purity, Seriousness and Modesty, Heavenliness and Gravity, be the constant ornaments of your speech. Let patience and humility, simplicity and sincerity shine out in all the parts of your conversations. See that you forget and forgive wrongs, and requite them with kindness, as you would be found children of the most High. Be merciful in your censures, and put the most favorable construction upon your brethren's carriage, that their actions will reasonably bear. Be slow in promising, punctual in fulfilling. Let meekness and innocence, affableness, yieldingness, and courtesy, commend your conversations to all men. Let none of your relations want that love and loyalty, that reverence and duty, that tenderness, care, and vigilancy, which their several places and capacities call for. This is throughout godliness. I charge you before the most high God, that none of you be found a swearer, or a liar, a lover of evil company, or a scoffer, or malicious, or covetous, or a drunkard, or a glutton, unrighteous in his dealing, unclean in his living, or a quarreller, or a thief, or a backbiter, or a railer: for I denounce unto you from the living God, that destruction and damnation is the end of all such.

2. Family godliness. He that hath set up Christ in his heart, will be sure to study to set him up in his house. Let every family with you be a Christian Church; every house, a house of Prayer; every household, a household of faith. Let every householder say, with Joshua, I and my house will serve the Lord; and resolve with David, I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. Let me press upon you a few duties, which I have been long harping upon, but alas (I speak it to your shame) with many (too too many) of you, to little purpose in general.

First, Let Religion be in your families, not as a matter by the by (to be minded at leisure, when the world will give you leave) but the standing business of the house. Let them have your prayers as duly as their meals; is there any of your families, but have time for their taking food? wretched man! canst thou find time to eat it, and not find time to pray in?

Secondly, settle it upon your hearts, that your souls are bound up in the souls of your family. They are committed unto you, & (if they be lost through your neglect) will be required at your hands. Sirs, if you do not, you shall know, that the charge of souls is a heavy charge, and that the blood of souls is a heavy guilt. O man, hast thou a charge of souls to answer for, and dost thou not yet bestir thyself for them, that their blood be not found in thy skirts? wilt thou do no more for immortal souls, then thou wilt do for thy beasts that perish? What dost thou do for thy children, and servants? Thou providest meat and drink for them, agreeable to their natures, and dost thou not the same for thy beasts? Thou givest them medicines, and cherishest them when they be sick, and dost thou not as much for thy swine? more particularly.

1. Let the solemn reading of the word and singing of Psalms, be your family exercises.
2. Let every person in your families be duly called to an account, of their profiting by the word heard or read, as they be about doing your own business. This is a duty of consequence unspeakable, and would be a means to bring those under your charge, to remember and profit by what they receive. See Christ's example in calling his family to an account, Mat. 16. 11. 13. 15.
3. Often take an account of the souls under your care, concerning their spiritual estates, make inquiry into their conditions, insist much upon the sinfulness and misery of their natural estate, and upon the necessity of regeneration and conversion, in order to their salvation. Admonish them gravely of their sins, encourage beginnings. Follow them earnestly, and let them have no quiet for you, till you see them in a saving change. This is a duty of high consequence, but (I am afraid) fearfully neglected, even by some that are godly. Doth not Conscience say, Thou art the man?
4. Look to the strict sanctifying of the Sabbath by all your households. Many poor families have little time else. O improve but your Sabbath days as diligently in laboring for knowledge, and doing your Makers work, as you do the other days in doing your own work, and I doubt not, but you may come to some proficiency.
5. Let the Morning and Evening Sacrifice of solemn Prayer, be daily offered up in all your families. Beware they be not found among the families that call not upon God's name; for why should there be wrath from the Lord upon your families? O miserable families, without God in the world, that are without family Prayer! What have you so many family sins, family wants, family mercies, what and yet no family Prayers? How do you pray with All prayer and supplication, if you do not with family prayer? Say not, I have no time. What hast thou all thy time on purpose to serve God, and save thy soul? and yet is this for which thou canst find no time. Find but a heart, and I will find time. Pinch out of your meals, and sleep, rather than want for Prayer. Say not, my business will not give leave. This is the greatest business to save thyself, and the souls committed to thee. Besides, a whet will be no let. In a word, the blessing of all is to be got by prayer; and what is thy business without God's blessing? Say not, I am not able. Use the one talent, and God will increase. Helps are to be had, till thou art better able. But if there be no other remedy, thou must join with thine abler neighbor. God hath special regard to joint-prayer, and therefore you must improve family advantages for the performing of it.

6. Put everyone in your families upon private prayer. Observe whether they do perform it. Get them the help of a form, if they need it, till they are able to go without it. Direct them how to pray, by minding them of their sins, wants, and mercies, the materials of prayer. This was the practice of John, and of Jesus, Luke 11. 1, 2, &c.

7. Set up Catechizing in your Families, at the least once every week. It was my parting, dying request, that you would set up and maintain this duty constantly in your families. Have you done it all accordingly? Cannot your consciences witness, cannot your families witness you have not? Well, I thought my parting words would have done something with you: I hoped the fervent request of a dying Minister, would have prevailed for such a small matter with you. What, to this day without solemn catechizing in your houses? Ah, what a discouragement to your Teacher is this? Brethren, shall I yet prevail with you? will you reject me now also? O let me persuade you, before you take off your eyes from these lines, to resolve to set upon the constant exercise of this duty. Surely I have done and suffered more for you than this comes to: will you now deny me? I beseech you let me find, if ever God do again bring me to visit your houses, that the words of a suffering Minister have some power with you. I have sent you an help on purpose: what, shall all my persuasions be but speaking in the wind? and all my pains but laboring in the fire? Beloved, have you no dread of the Almighty's charge, That you should teach these things diligently to your children, and talk of them as you sit in your houses, &c. and train them up in the way wherein they should go. Hath God so commended Abraham that he would teach his children and household, and that he had many instructed servants, and given such a promise to him thereupon, and will not you put in for a share neither in the praise, nor the promise? Hath Christ honored catechizing with his presence, and will not you own it with your practice? Say not, they are careless, and will not learn. What have you your authority for, if not to use it for God, and the good of their souls? You will call them up, and force them to do your work; and should you not at least be as zealous in putting them upon God's work? Say not, they are dull, and are not capable: If they be dull, God requires of you the more pains and patience; but so dull as they are, you will make them to learn how to work; and can they not learn as well how to live! Are they capable of the mysteries of your trade, and are they not capable of the plain principles of Religion? well, as ever you would see the growth of religion, the cure of ignorance, the remedy of profaneness, the downfall of error, fulfil you my joy in going through with this duty.

I have been too long already, and yet I am afraid my letter will be ended before my work be done. How loath am I to leave you, before I have prevailed with you to set to the work to which you are here directed will you pass your promise? will you give me your hands? Oh that you would! you cannot do me a greater pleasure. Ask what you will of me. See if I will not do as much for you. Oh that your families might be a joy to me, as that twice noble

Ladies to John; who professes he had no greater joy, then to find her children walking in the truth! Beloved, why should you not give the hand one to another, & mutually engage each to other, for more vigorous and diligent endeavors, in promoting family godliness. I must tell you, God looks for more than ordinary from you, in such a day as this. He expects that you should do, both in your hearts, & in your houses, somewhat more than ever, under these his extraordinary dispensations; my most dearly beloved, mine own bowels in the Lord, will you satisfy the longings of a travelling Minister? will you answer the calls of divine providence? would you remove the incumbent, or prevent the impending calamities? would you plant nurseries for the Church of God? would you that God should build your houses, and bless your substance? would you that your children should bless you? that your Father should bless you? Oh then set up Piety in your families as ever you would be blessed, or be a blessing; let your hearts and your houses be the temples of the living God, in which his worship (according to all the forementioned directions) may be, with constancy reverently performed. Pardon my prolixity, and importunity in so earnest pursuing of you, I am yet afraid I have done too soon, and shall end without my errand. The Lord God persuade you. To him I turn me; for I am well assured he can prevail with you.

O Father of Spirits, that hast set me over thy flock to watch for their souls as one that must give an account. I have long studied thy will, and taught in thy name, and do unfeignedly bless thee, that any have believed my report. I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them. I have manifested thy name unto them, and they have kept thy word. And now I am no more with them, but I come unto thee: Holy Father, keep them through thine own name, for they are thine. As they have kept the word of thy promise, so keep thou them in the hour of temptation. They are but a flock, a little and a helpless flock: but thou art their shepherd, suffer them not to want. Do thou feed them and fold them. Let thy rod and thy staff comfort them, and let not the beasts of prey fall upon them to the spoiling of their souls.

But what shall I do for them that will not be gathered. I have called after them but they would not answer. I have charged them in thy name, but they would not hear. I have studied to speak persuasively to them, but I cannot prevail. Yea, I said I have labored in vain, I have spent my strength for naught, and in vain, yet I cannot give them over, much less may I give thee over. Lord persuade Japheth, to dwell in the tents of Shem. Lord compel them to come in, and lay the hands of mercy upon them, as thou didst on lingering Lot, and bring them forth, that they may escape for their lives, and not be consumed. Lord, I pray thee, open their eyes that they may see, and lay hold upon their hearts by thine omnipotent grace. Do thou turn them, and they shall be turned. O bring back the miserable captives, and suffer not the enemy of mankind to drive away the most of the flock before mine eyes, and to deride the fruitless endeavors of thy laborers, and boast over them, that he can do more with them, though he seek to ruin them, than all the beseechings, counsels, and charges of thy servants that seek to save them. Lord, if I could find out anything that would pierce them, that would make its way into their hearts, thou knowest I would use it. But I have been many years pleading thy cause in vain. O let not these endeavors also be lost. O God, find out every ignorant, every profane sinner, every prayerless soul, and every prayerless family, and convince them of their miserable condition, while without thee in the world. Set thy image upon their souls, set up thy worship in their families. Let not pride, ignorance, or slothfulness, keep them in neglect of the means of knowledge. Let thine eyes be over the place of my desires for good, from one end of the year to the other end thereof. Let every house therein be a seminary of Religion, and let those that cast their eyes upon these lines, find thee sliding in by the secret influence of thy grvce into their hearts, and irresistibly engaging them to do thy pleasure.

Amen. Amen. FINIS.

Books printed for Edw. Brewster, at the Crane in Paul's Church-yard. 1674.

THE Apostolical History containing the Acts, Labors, Sermons, Discourses, Miracles, Successes of the Holy Apostles from Christ's Ascension to the Destruction of Jerusalem by Titsn; By Sam. Cradock, B. D. Fol.

A Prospect of Divine Providence; By T. C. M. A. 8 vo.

Cases of Conscience; Practically Resolved by the Reverend and Learned John Norman, late Minister of Bridgewater. 8 vo.

The Righteous man's Evidence for Heaven; By Timothy Rogers. 12.

Mr. John Ball his large and small Catechism. 8 vo.

The Doctrine of the Bible. 12.

The last Will and Testament of Basil Valentine Monk, of the Order of St. Bennet, which he hid under the Table of Marble, behind the High Altar of the Cathedral Church of the Imperial City of Erford, leaving it there to be found by him who in God's Providence should make worthy, &c. 8 vo.

Moses Revived, A Treatise proving that it is not lawful, and therefore sinful for any man or woman to eat blood. 8 vo.

The History of Reynard Fox, 1. & 2 p. 4.

P-JA1-3. A sure guide to heaven, or, An earnest invitation to sinners to turn to God in order to their eternal salvation showing the thoughtful sinner what he must do to be saved - Alleine, Joseph, 1634-1668.

A Sure Guide TO HEAVEN: OR An Earnest Invitation to Sinners to turn to God, in order to their Eternal Salvation.

Showing the thoughtful Sinner what he must do to be saved.

By Joseph Alleine late Minister of the Gospel at Taunton in Somersetshire.

John 3. 3.

Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God.

LONDON, Printed for Tho. Parkhurst at the Bible and Three Crowns, at the lower end of Cheapside near Mercers Chapel. 1688.

TO THE READER That would be safe and happy.

IF it were only possible thou mayst live hereafter, and be called to account in another world for what thou dost in this, it would be thy wisdom to take the safest course, and not to run the constant hazard of being dragged by death to Judgment, before thou wert prepared to meet thy Judge. But another Life, and a Judgment to come, are more than possible; there is an high probability, yea as great a certainty as can with reason be expected, that death will not put an end to thy being, that thou shalt live after the return of thy body to the Earth, and that then thou shalt be tried, and sentenced to such an happiness or misery, as will be incomparably greater than anything, nay than all thou didst ever feel or see, hear of or imagine. These weighty Truths are taught and established in some measure by the Light of Nature, but much more clearly and firmly by the Oracles of God in the Holy Scriptures. Besides what they say of the different states of separated Souls, they plainly teach, and strongly assert, That God hath appointed a time in which he will judge the whole world by the Mediator Jesus Christ; that that great Mediator who is God as well as Man, will descend from Heaven, attended by its glorious Inhabitants, with triumphant Acclamations to his Royal Throne; that a mighty Voice will cite all that ever dwelt on Earth to make their personal appearance; that that awakening and commanding Summons shall be presently heard and obeyed by the dead, and they with the quick then remaining alive, shall all stand before the Judgment Seat; that after a thoroughly searching and impartial trial, which will reach men's several talents, trusts and opportunities of getting and doing good, and their most secret actions, words and thoughts, everyone shall receive an unalterable Sentence of Absolution or Condemnation; and that then such as are approved and absolved, shall inherit an heavenly Kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world, be like the Angels their delightful Companions, converse with their most amiable and loving Savior, beholding and partaking of his glory, yea resemble, see and enjoy God himself in completed Holiness, and everlasting Bliss: And those on the other hand, that are reprobated and damned shall never be admitted into the Regions of Light, nor yet be favored with a glimpse thereof; but suffer with Devils in the blackness of darkness forever, the perpetual gnawings of the Worm that dieth not, and the extreme torments of unquenchable fire. Seeing then these things cannot be denied, thou must be guilty of such woeful abuses of reason as far exceed all the extravagancies of them that want it; thou must be most grossly foolish, most unnaturally cruel to thine own Soul, to thy whole self, if thou dost not earnestly desire to be one of those unto whom the Lord shall say, Come ye blessed, and not, Depart ye cursed; if thou dost not readily welcome, and diligently use any proper helps for the avoiding of the heaviest endless misery, and for the attaining of the purest, vastest, everlasting happiness. And such helps are now offered thee in this little Book, which hath a taking tincture of the excellent Author's flaming love to God, and useful Charity to the Souls of men; and now it is in thine hand, let me tell thee, it cannot be refused the reading, or read without doing what it so plainly teacheth and affectionately urgeth, but at thy greatest peril. If thou wilt not be at a small expense of time and pains to read it over, if after the neglect of so many means of instruction this also be rejected, how justly mayst thou be destroyed for lack of knowledge? How soon may the things which belong unto thy peace be hid from thine eyes? A continued willful want of understanding is large ground for fear, lest he that made thee should not have mercy on thee, and he that formed and redeemed thee should show thee no favor: If thou readest, but dost not practice what Scripture and Reason so pathetically plead for, the increase of thy knowledge will increase thy sorrow, because it will aggravate thy sin; for to him that knows his Lord's will, how and why to do good, and doth it not but the forbidden evil, to him 'tis heinous, inexcusable sin, for which he is liable to be beaten with many stripes, in constant dreadful danger of severer punishment. I hope therefore thou wilt peruse so short a discourse, and art not unwilling to do it in such a manner as to grow acquainted with, and be persuaded to thy great duty, and which is inseparable from it, thy greatest advantage; and that thou mayest not fail thereof, is the design of the following Directions.

1. Pray in the name of Christ as thou art and shalt be enabled, for the more effectual assistances of the Holy Spirit. Such is the corruption of our nature, that it utterly disables to make a saving use of outward means without inward aids. Unless the Spirit by his powerful operations work thee into a serious teachable temper, set home the attempts of God's Messengers, and give them an efficacy far beyond their own, the most concerning truths and weightiest arguments can never be so represented and inforc'd, as to overcome thy sensual, worldly inclinations, rescue thee from the dominion of sin and Satan, and bring thee back to God. Thou must therefore pray, and that with becoming apprehensions of the great God, due regard to the gracious Mediator, deep shame and sorrow for the sins thou confessest, ardent desires of all the grace thou beggest, and faithful improvements of such measures as thou hast already received. And if thou thus askest, with fervent importunity and persevering constancy, thou wilt undoubtedly find that God bade thee not to seek his face in vain. As our Lord warrants us to argue, Luke II. If a man will not deny a Friend what he is importunate for, and if a Father will grant his Son what he asks and wants, much more will thy Heavenly Father give thee the Holy Spirit for all needful purposes, to produce all those effects in thee, that are truly necessary for thine Eternal Salvation.

2. Consider seriously what thou readest, and work it on thy Soul as far as thou art concerned therein. Medicines for the Body will operate though they are not thought of; but Spiritual Remedies for the mind require its co-operation with them; the clearest explications, fullest proofs and strongest motives about matters of nearest and greatest concernment will not do the Soul any good, unless by thinking it apply them, and extract their virtue; nor will the Spirit heal its lamentable Diseases, if his influences be not answered with suitable endeavors. Work then as he works in and with thee; take into most serious consideration whatever is apt to promote thy recovery; lay those things closest to heart which are likeliest to cure the hardness thereof; inculcate and urge them, and withal cry mightily unto him, who is able, and no less willing to help thee, till thou feelest his gentle force, and comest to a conquering resolution, that thou must and wilt do as thou art advised, till thou dost not only assent to the course proposed as fit to be taken, but art steadily determined, that it is best for thee, that it is absolutely necessary, and must effectually be prosecuted; that by the grace of God thou wilt thoroughly change thy heart and life, and so escape from the greatest evil, and make sure of the chiefest good.

3. When thou hast seriously considered and resolved, proceed presently to practice, with all thy might, and without the least delay. 'Tis commonly a work of some time to alter the temper of the Soul, and change the course of the life; and according to God's usual methods, the longer thou hast been accustom'd to do evil, the more time and pains will be requisite, to break the force of stubborn lusts, to weaken and subdue vicious habits, and to gain those of grace and goodness, to travel back the way thou hast gone wrong, and to get out of it into the path of life. 'Tis well then if there be days enough before thee to do the one thing needful, to be sure thou art not certain of an hour to spare, the loss of so small a part may prove the loss of all. Besides, if thou putt'st off thy reformation though but for a little while, 'tis a sign thou dost not really intend it at all, for thou purposeth against conviction to add sin to sin at present, and how can that consist with an hearty design of growing good afterward? Delude not therefore thyself with such a desperate cheat, but imitate the Royal Ps•lmist, When thou hast thought on thy ways turn thy feet unto God's testimonies; Make haste and delay not to keep his Commandments.

4. Remember that conversion unto God is but the beginning of thy duty, that thou must afterward obey him all the days of thy life, and that there is no other way to preserve an interest in his favor, and a right to the great expressions thereof. They are the largest and the last discoveries of Divine Grace, that teach thee to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, and so doing to look for the blessed Object of thy hope; they plainly enough warn thee against drawing back unto perdition; they threaten a final rejection if thou deniest thy Savior in words or works, and they oft direct and command thee to seek for glory and honor, and immortality, by patient continuance in well-doing; to be faith full unto death whatever it cost thee, that thy Lord may give thee a crown of life: These may seem hard sayings, but they contain nothing like a reasonable discouragement. There's misery more than enough in Hell to necessitate a prevention by any temporary labors, wants and suff•rings, and an abundantly sufficient happiness in Heaven to encourage a steadfast perseverance in the work of the Lord, though it were more harsh and grievous than sinners imagine. And even at present, Religion is not without a reward, yea thou wilt find it, if thou triest as thou shouldst, a reward to itself, when the main difficulties at first are over, thy duty will grow daily easier, it will have many pleasures mixed with it, and become at length itself the greatest. It will not abridge thy appetites of any desirable gratifications, but give them a new delicious relish of the Fountain from which they flow. Instead of the girds and twinges of a bad Conscience, and dread of an after-reckoning, 'twill settle peace within, and fill thee with comfortable reflections and joyful hopes; and a loving, thankful, praising obedience will by degrees become thy sweetest employment. Therein thou mayest draw still nearer to God, delight thyself in, and receive from him the desires of thine heart, thou mayest walk always in the light of his countenance, and feed on his loving kindness, which is better than life.

In short, before thou ascendest to Heaven thou mayest be in an Heaven on Earth, and find by happy experience, that the way to have all thou canst wish hereafter, is to be and do what is best for thyself here.

Useful Questions, whereby a Christian may every day examine himself.

Psal. 4. 4.

Commune with your heart upon your beds.

EVERY Evening before you sleep (unless you find some other time of the day more for your advantage in this work) sequester yourself from the World, and having set your heart in the presence of the Lord, charge it before God to answer to these Interrogatories.

For your Duties.

Q. 1. Did not God find me on my Bed, when he looked for me on my knees? Job 1. 5. Psal. 5. 3.

Q. 2. Have not I prayed to no purpose, or suffered wandering thoughts to eat out my duties? Mat. 15. 8, 9. Jer. 12. 2.

Q. 3. Have not I neglected or been very overly in the reading God's holy word? Deut. 17. 19. Josh. 1. 7, 8.

Q. 4. Have I digested the Sermon I heard last? Have I repeated it over, and prayed it over? Luke 2. 19, 51. Psal. 1. 2. and 119. 5, 11, 97.

Q. 5. Was there not more of custom and fashion in my family-duties than of Conscience? Psal. 101. 2. Jer 30. 21.

Q. 6. Where in have I denied myself this day for God? Luke 9. 23.

Q. 7. Have I redeemed my time from too long or needless visits; idle imaginations, fruitless discourse, unnecessary sleep, more than needs of the World? Eph. 5. 16. Col. 4. 5.

Q. 8. Have I done anything more than ordinary for the Church of God, in this time extraordinary? 2 Cor. 11. 28. Isa. 62. 6.

Q. 9. Have I look care of my company? Prov. 13. 20. Psal. 119. 63.

Q. 10. Have not Ineglected or done something against the duties of my Relations, as a Master, Servant, Husband, Wife, Parent, Child, &c. Eph. 5. 22. to chap. 6. V. 10. Col. 3. 18. to the 4. V. 2.

For your Sins.

Q. 1. Doth not sin sit light? Psal. 38. 4. Rom. 7. 24.

Q. 2. Am I a mourner for the sins of the Land? Ezek. 9. 4. Jer. 9. 1, 2, 3.

Q. 3. Do I live in nothing that I know or fear to be a sin? Psal. 119. 101, 104.

For your Heart.

Q. 1. Have I been much in holy Ejaculations? Neh. 2. 4, 5.

Q. 2. Hath not God been out of mind: Heaven out of sight? Psal. 16. 8 Jer. 2. 32. Col. 3. 1, 2.

Q. 3. Have I been often looking into mine own heart, and made conscience even of vain thoughts? Prov. 3. 23. Psal. 119. 113.

Q. 4. Have not I given way to the workings of pride, or passion? 2 Chron. 32. 26. James 4. 5, 6, 7.

For your Tongue.

Q. 1. Have I bridled my Tongue, and forced it in? Jam. 1. 26. Jam. 3. 2, 3, 4, Psal. 39. 1.

Q. 2. Have I spoken evil of no man? Tit. 3. 2. Jam. 4. 11.

Q. 3. Hath the Law of the Lord been in my mouth as I sate in my house, went by the way, was lying down, and rising up? Deut. 6. 6, 7.

Q. 4. Is there no company I come into, but I have dropped something of God, and left some good savor behind? Col. 4. 6. Eph. 4. 29.

For your Table.

Q. 1. Did not I sit down with no higher end than a beast, merely to please my Appetite? did I eat and drink to the glory of God? 1 Cor. 10. 31.

Q. 2. Was not my Appetite too hard for me? Jude 12. 2 Pet. 1. 6.

Q. 3. Did not I arise from the Table without dropping anything of God there? Luke 7. 36, &c. Luke 14. 1, &c. John 6.

Q. 4. Did not I mock God, when I pretended to crave a blessing, and return thanks? Acts 27. 35, 36. Mat. 15. 36. Col. 3. 17, 23.

For your Calling.

Q. 1. Have I been diligent in the duties of my Calling? Eccles. 9. 1 Cor. 7. 17, 20, 24.

Q. 2. Have I defrauded no man? 1 Thes. 4. 6. 1 Cor. 6. 8.

Q. 3. Have I dropped never a lie in my shop, or trade? Prov. 28. 6. Eph. 4. 25.

Q. 4. Did not I rashly make, nor falsely break some promise? Psal. 106. 33. Josh. 9. V. 14, &c. Psal. 15. 4.

An Addition of some brief Directions for the Morning.

D. 1. If through necessity or carelessness you have omitted the reading and weighing of these questions in the Evening, be sure to do it now.

D. 2. Ask yourself, what sin have I committed? what duty have I omitted? against which of these Rules have I offended in the day foregoing? and renew your repentance, and double your watch.

D. 3. Examine whether God were last in your thoughts when you went to sleep; and first, when you awoke.

D. 4. Enquire whether your care of your heart and ways doth increase upon your constant using of this course for self-examination; or whether it doth abate, and you grow more remiss.

D. 5. Impose a task of some good meditation upon yourselves while you are making ready, either to go over these Rules in your thoughts, or the heads of the Sermon you heard last, or the holy meditations for the purpose in the practice of Piety, or Scudder's daily walk.

D. 6. Set your ends right for all that day.

D. 7. Set your watch, especially against those sins and temptations that you are like to be most incident to that day.

THE CONTENTS.

- I. What Conversion is not, and correcting some Mistakes about it.
- II. What Conversion is, and wherein it consists.
- III. The Necessity of Conversion.
- IV. The Marks of the Unconverted.
- V. The Miseries of the Unconverted.
- VI. Directions for Conversion.
- VII. Motives to Conversion.
- VIII. Conclusion.
- IX. Counsel for Personal and Family-Godliness.

This same Book is Printed in large Octavo of a bigger Print for ease of Antient Persons.

Whereunto are annexed diverse Practical Cases of Conscience Judiciously Resolved.

Printed for Tho. Parkhurst, &c.

An Earnest Invitation to Sinners to Turn to God in order to their Eternal Salvation.

DEarly Beloved, and longed for, I gladly acknowledge myself a debtor to you all, and am concerned, as I would be found a good Steward to the Household of God, to give to everyone his Portion. But the Physician is most solicitous for those Patients, whose case is most doubtful and hazardous, and the Father's bowels are especially turned towards his dying Child. The numbers of the unconverted souls among you, call for my most earnest compassions and hasty diligence to pluck them out of the burning, Jude 23. and therefore to these first I shall apply myself in these lines.

But whence shall I fetch my arguments, or how shall I choose my words? Lord, wherewith shall I woo them? wherewith shall I win them? Oh that I could but tell! I would write unto them in tears, would weep out every argument, I would empty my veins for Ink, I would petition them on my knees, verily (were I able) I would. O how thankful I would be, if they would be prevailed with to repent and turn.

How long have I travelled in birth with you? how frequently have I made suit to you? how often would I have gathered you? how instant have I been with you? this is that I have prayed for, and studied for, for many years, that I might bring you to God: Oh that I might but do it! Will you yet be entreated? Oh what a happy man might you make me, if you would but hearken to me, and suffer me to carry you over to Jesus Christ!

But, Lord, how insufficient am I for this work! I have been many a year wooing for thee, but the Damsel would not go with me. Lord, what a task hast thou set me to do! Alas, wherewith shall I pierce the scales of Leviathan, or make the heart to feel that is hard as a stone; hard as a piece of the nether Milstone! Shall I go and lay my mouth to the grave, and look when the dead will obey me and come forth? Shall I make an Oration to the Rocks? or declaim to the Mountains, and think to move them with arguments? Shall I give the blind to see? From the beginning of the world was it not heard that a man opened the eyes of the blind; But thou, O Lord, canst pierce the scales and prick the heart of the Sinner. I can but shoot at rovers, and draw the bow at a venture, and do thou direct the arrow between the joints of the harness, and kill the sin, and save the Soul of a sinner, that casts his eyes into these labors.

But I must apply myself to you, to whom I am sent: yet I am at a great loss. Would to God I knew how to go to work with you! would I stick at the pains? God knoweth you yourselves are my witnesses, how I have followed you in private, as well as in public, and have brought the Gospel to your doors, testifying to you the necessity of the new birth, and persuading you to look in time after a sound and thorough change. Beloved, I have not acted a part among you, to serve my own advantage: your Gospel is not yea and nay. Have you not heard the same truths, from the Pulpit, by public labors, and by private letters, by personal instructions? Brethren, I am of the same mind as ever, that holiness is the best choice, that there is no entering into Heaven, but by the straight passages of the second birth, that without holiness you shall never see God, Heb. 12. 14. Ah my beloved! refresh my bowels in the Lord. If there be any consolation in Christ, any comfort of love, any fellowship of the Spirit, any bowels and mercies, fulfil you my joy. Now give yourselves unto the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. Now set yourselves to seek him. Now set up the Lord Jesus in your hearts, and set him up in your houses: Now come in and kiss the Son, Psal. 2. 12. and embrace the tenders of mercy. Touch his Scepter and live; why will you die? I beg not for myself; but fain I would have you happy: This is the prize I run for, and the white I aim at. My soul's desire and prayer for you is, that you may be saved, Rom. 10. 1.

The famous Lycurgus, having instituted most strict and wholesome Laws for his people, told them he was necessitated to go a Journey from them and got them to bind themselves in an Oath, that his Laws should be observed till his return. This done, he went into a voluntary banishment, and never returned more, that they might, by virtue of their Oath, be engaged to the perpetual observing of his Laws. Methinks I should be glad of the hard conditions which he endured (though I love you tenderly) so I might but hereby engage you thoroughly to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Dearly beloved, would you rejoice the heart of your Minister? Why then, embrace the Counsels of the Lord by me: forgo your sins: set to prayer: up with the Worship of God in your families: keep at a distance from the corruptions of the times. What greater joy to a Minister, than to hear of souls born unto Christ by him, and that his Children walk in the truth? 2 John 4.

Brethren, I beseech you suffer friendly plainness and freedom with you in your deepest concernments. I am not playing the Orator, to make a learned speech to you, nor dressing my dish with eloquence, wherewith to please you. These lines are upon a weighty errand indeed, viz. to convince, and convert, and to save you. I am not baiting my hook with Rhetoric, nor fishing for your applause, but for your souls. My work is not to please you, but to save you; nor is my business with your fancies, but your hearts. If I have not your hearts, I have nothing. If I were to please your ears, I could sing another song. If I were to preach myself, I would steer another course; I could then tell you a smoother tale: I would make you pillows, and speak you peace; for how can Ahab love this Micaiah that always prophesies evil concerning him? 1 Kings 22. 8. But how much better are the wounds of a Friend, than the fair speeches of the Harlot, who flattereth with her lips, till the Dart strike through the liver, and hunteth for the precious life? Prov. 7. 21, 22, 23. and Prov. 6. 26. If I were to quiet a crying infant, I might sing him to a pleasant mood, and rock him asleep. But when the Child is fallen into the Fire, the parent takes another course; he will not go to still him with a song or trifle. I know if we speed not with you, you are lost. If we cannot get your consent to arise, and come away, you perish forever. No Conversion, and no Salvation: I must get your good will, or leave you miserable.

But here the difficulty of my work again recurs upon me. Lord choose my stones out of the Rocks, 1 Sam. 17. 40, 45. I come in the name of the Lord of Hosts, the God of the Armies of Israel. I come forth like the stripling Goliath, to wrestle, not with flesh and blood, but with Principalities and Powers, and the Rulers of the darkness of this world, Eph. 6. 12. This day let the Lord smite the Philistine, and spoil the strong man of his Armor and give me to fetch off the captives out of his hand. Lord choose my words, choose my weapons for me, and when I put my hand into the bag, and take thence a stone, and sling it, do thou carry it to the mark and make it sink, not into the forehead, 1 Sam. 17. 49. but the heart of the unconverted sinner, and smite him to the ground, with Saul in his so happy fall, Acts 9. 4. Thou hast sent me, as Abraham did Eliezer, to take a wife unto my master thy Son, Gen. 24. 4. But my discouraged soul is ready to fear the woman will not be willing to follow me. O Lord God of my Master, I pray thee send me good speed this day, and show kindness to my Master, and send thine Angel before me, and prosper my way, that I may take a wife unto thy son, Gen. 24. 12. That as the servant rested not till he had brought Isaac and Rebekah together, so I may be successful to bring Christ and the souls of my people together, before we part.

But I turn me unto you. Some of you do not know what I mean by conversion, and in vain shall I persuade you to that which you do not understand, and therefore for your sakes, I shall show what this Conversion is. Others do cherish secret hopes of mercy, though they continue as they be; and for them I must show the necessity of Conversion. Others are like to harden themselves with a vain conceit, that they are converted already, unto them I must show the marks of the unconverted. Others because they feel no harm, fear none, and so sleep upon the top of the mast; to them I shall show the misery of the unconverted. Others sit still, because they see not their way out; to them I shall show the means of conversion. And finally for the quickening of all, I shall close with the motives of Conversion.

Chap I. Showing the Negative, what Conversion is not, and correcting some mistakes about it.

LET the blind Samaritans worship they know not what, John. 4. 22. Let the Heathen Athenians superscribe their Altar unto the unknown God, Acts 17. 23. Let the guileful Papists commend the mother of destruction, Hos. 4. 6. for the mother of devotion: they that know man's constitution, and the nature of the reasonable souls' operation, cannot but know, that the understanding having the Empire in the soul, he that will go rationally to work, must labor to let in the light here. Ignoranti non est consensus. And therefore that you may not mistake me, I shall show you what I mean by the conversion I persuade you to endeavor after.

It is storied, that when Jupiter let down the golden Chaplets from Heaven, all of them but one were stolen: Whereupon (lest they should lose a relique of so great esteem) they made five others so like it that if any were so wickedly minded, as to steal that also, they should not be able to discern which was it. And truly my beloved the Devil hath made many counterfeits of this Conversion; and cheats one with this, and another with that; and such a craft and artifice he hath, in this mystery of deceits; (that if it were possible) he would deceive the very Elect. Now that I may cure the damnable mistakes of some, who think they are converted when they are not, as well as remove the troubles, and fears of others, that think they are not converted when they are; I shall show you the nature of conversion, both negatively, or what it is not; and positively what it is.

We will begin with the Negative.

1. It is not the taking on us the Profession of Christianity. Doubtless Christianity is more than a name. If we will hear Paul, it lies not in word, but in power • 1 Cor. 4. 20. if to cease to be Jews and Pagans, and to put on the Christian Profession had been true Conversion (as this is all, that some would have to be understood by it) who better Christians than they of Sardis and Laodicea? These were all Christians by profession, and had a name to live, but because they had but a name, are condemned by Christ, and threatened to be spewed out, Rev. 3. 1. 16. Are there not many that name the name of the Lord Jesus, that yet depart not from iniquity? 2 Tim. 2. 19. and profess they know God, but in works deny him? Tit. 1. 16. And will God receive these for true converts, because turned to the Christian Religion? What, converts from sin, when yet they do live in sin? 'Tis a visible contradiction. Surely if the lamp of profession would have served the turn, the foolish Virgins had never been shut out, Mat. 25. 3, 12. We find not only professors but Preachers of Christ, and Wonder-workers turned off, because evil workers, Mat. 7. 22, 23.

2. It is not the being washed in the laver of Regeneration, or putting on the badge of Christ in baptism. Many take the press-money, and wear the Livery of Christ, that yet never stand to their colors, nor follow their leader. Ananias and Sapphira, and Magus were baptized as well as the rest. How fondly do many mistake here, deceiving, and being deceived! dreaming that effectual grace is necessarily tied to the external administration of Baptism (which what is it, but to revive the Popish Tenent, of the Sacraments working grace, ex opere operato?) and so every Infant should be regenerated not only (Sacramento tenus) sacramentally, but really and properly. Hence men do fancy, that being regenerated already, when baptized, they need no further work.

But if this were so, then all that were baptized (in their infancy) must necessarily be saved: because the promise of pardon and salvation is made to conversion and regeneration.

Acts 3. 19. 1 Pet. 3. 4. Mat. 19. 28. Our Calling, Sanctification, (as to the beginnings of it) on Conversion (which are but the same thing, under different conceptions and expressions) is but a middle link in the golden chain, fastened to election at the one end, and glorification at the other, Rom. 8. 30. 2 Thes. 2. 13. 1 Pet. 1. 2. The silver cord may not be broken, nor the connection between Sanctification and Salvation, between grace and glory, impiously violated, Mat. 5. 8. if we were indeed begotten again, it is to an inheritance incorruptible reserved in heaven for us, and the divine power is engaged to keep us for it, 1 Pet. 1. 5. And if the very regenerate may perish at last in their sins, we will no more say, that he that is born of God, his seed remaineth in him, and that he cannot sin, 1 John. 3. 9. i. e. unto death, nor that it is impossible to deceive the very elect, Mat. 24. 24.

And indeed were this true, then we need look no farther to see our names written in Heaven, than only to search the Register, and see whether we were baptized: then I would keep the certificate of my baptism, as my fairest evidence for Heaven, and should come by assurance of my gracious state, with a wet finger; then men should do well to carry but a certificate of their baptism under the Registers hand, when they died (as the Philosopher would be buried with the Bishops Bond in his hand which he had given him for receiving his alms in another world,) and upon sight of this, there were no doubt of their admission into Heaven.

In short, if there be no more necessary to conversion or regeneration, than to be turned to the Christian Religion, or to be baptized in infancy, this will fly directly in the face of that Scripture, Mat. 7. 14. as well as multitudes of others. For first we will then no more say, strait is the gate and narrow is the way; for if all that are baptized, and of true Religion are saved, the door is become heavenly wide, and we will henceforth say, wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth unto life; for if this be true, whole Parishes, yea whole Countries, and whole Kingdoms may go in a breast, and we will no more teach, that the righteous is scarcely saved, or that there is need of such a stir in taking the Kingdom of Heaven by violence, and striving to enter in. Surely if the way be so easy as many make it, that there is little more necessary, than to be regenerated in our baptism, and cry God mercy, and be absolved by the Minister at our end; 'tis more ado than needs to put ourselves to such running, and seeking, and knocking, and fighting, and wrestling, as the word requires as necessary to Salvation. Secondly, if this be true, we will no more say, Few there be that find it; yea we will rather say, Few there be that miss it: we will no more say, that of the many that are called, but few are chosen, Mat. 22. 14. and that even of the professing Israel, but a remnant shall be saved, Rom. 11. 5. If this Doctrine be true, we will not say anymore with the Disciples, Who then shall be saved? but rather who then shall not be saved? Then if a man be called a brother, (that is a Christian) and be baptized, though he be a fornicator, or a •ailer, or covetous, or a drunkard, yet he shall inherit the Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 5. 11. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.

But the Arminian will reply; such as these though they did receive regenerating grace in Baptism, are since fallen away, and must be renewed again, or else they cannot be saved.

I answer, 1. That there is an infallible connection between regeneration and salvation, as we have already shown, and I itch to be farther evidencing but that 'tis against designed brevity. 2. Then men must be born again, which carries a great deal of absurdity in its very face. And why may not men be twice born in nature, as well as in grace? Why not as great an absurdity to be twice regenerated as to be twice generated? But 3. and above all, This grants however the thing I contend for, that what ever men do, or pretend to receive in baptism, if they be sound afterwards to be grossly ignorant, or profane, or formal, without the power of godliness, they must be born again, or else be shut out of the Kingdom of God. So then they must have more to plead for themselves, than their baptismal regeneration.

Well, in this you see all are agreed, that be it more or less that is received in baptism, if (when men come to years) they are evidently unsanctified, they must be renewed again by a through and powerful change, or else they cannot escape the damnation of Hell. Friends and Brethren be not deceived God is not mocked; Gal. 6. 7. Whether it be your baptism, or what ever else that you pretend, I tell you from the living God, that if any of you be a prayerless person, John. 15. 14. or unclean, or malicious, or covetous, or riotous, or a scoffer, or a lover of evil company, Prov. 13. 20. in a word, if you are not holy, strict and self-denying Christians, Heb. 12. 14. Mat. 16. 24. you cannot be saved, except you be transformed by a further work upon you, and renewed again by repentance.

Thus I have shown, that it is not enough to evidence a man to be regenerate, that he hath been baptized, effectual grace not necessarily accompanying baptism, as some have vainly asserted. But I must answer one Objection before I pass.

Object. The Sacraments do certainly attain their ends, where man doth not ponere obi'em, or lay some obstruction, which infants do not.

Sol. I answer, it is not the end of Baptism to regenerate, 1. Because then there would be no reason, why it should be confined only to the seed of Believers, for both the Law of God and the nature of Charity, requires us to use the means of conversion for all, as far as we can have opportunity. Were this true, no such Charity as to catch the children of Turks and Heathens, and baptize them, and dispatch them to Heaven out of hand; like the bloody Wretches, that made the poor Protestants (to save their lives) to swear they would come to Mass, and that they would never depart from it, and then put them forthwith to death, saying, They would hang them while in a good mind. 2. Because it presupposeth regeneration, and therefore cannot be intended to confer it. In all the express instances in Scripture, we find that baptism doth suppose their repenting, believing, receiving the Holy Ghost, Acts 8. 37. Acts. 2. 38. Acts. 10. 47. Mark 16. 16. And to imagine, that baptism was instituted for an end of which not one of the first subjects was capable (for they were all adult persons and supposed to have faith and repentance according as they professed, and their Children were not baptized till after them, in their right,) were no little absurdity. Were this Doctrine true, baptism would make Disciples, but we find it doth bespeak them such beforehand, Mat. 28. 19. 3. Because Baptism, being but a Seal of the Covenant cannot convey the benefits, but according to the tenor of the Covenant, to which it is set.

Now the Covenant is conditional, therefore the Seal conveys conditionally. The Covenant requires faith and repentance, as the condition of the grand benefits, pardon, and life, Acts 16. 31. Acts 3. 19. And what the Covenant doth not convey but upon these conditions, the Seal cannot. So that Baptism doth presuppose faith and repentance in the subject, without which it neither doth, nor can convey the saving benefits; otherwise the Seal should convey contrary to the tenor of the Covenant to which it is affixed.

3. It lies not in a moral righteousness. This exceeds not the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, and therefore cannot bring us to the Kingdom of God, Mat. 5. 20. Paul, while unconverted touching the righteousness which is in the Law blameless, Phil. 3. 6. None could say black is thine eye. The self-justiciary could say, I am no Extortioner, Adulterer, Unjust, &c. Luke 18. 11. Thou must have something more than all this to show, or else (however thou mayest justify thyself) God will condemn thee. I condemn not morality, but warn you not to rest here. Piety includes morality, as Christianity doth humanity, and Grace reason. But we must not divide the tables.

4. It consists not in an external conformity to the Rules of Piety 'Tis too manifest, men may have a form of godliness, without the power, 2 Tim. 3. 5. Men may pray long, Mat. 23. 14. and fast often, Luke 18. 12. and heav gladly, Mark 6. 20. and be very forward in the service of God, though costly and expensive, Isa. 1. 11. and yet be strangers to Conversion. They must have more to plead for themselves, than that they keep their Church, and give alms, and make use of prayer to prove themselves sound Converts. No outward service but an hypocrite may do it; even to the giving all his goods to the poor, and his members to the fire, 1 Cor. 13. 3.

5. It lies not in the chaining up of corruption, by education, human laws, or the force of incumbent affliction. 'Tis too common and easy, to mistake education for grace; but if this were enough, who a better man than Iehoash: While Iehojadah his uncle lived he was very forward in God's service, and calls upon him to repair the house of the Lord, 2 Kings 12. 2, 7. But here was nothing more than good education all this while: for when his good Tutor was taken out of the way, he appears to have been but a wolf chained up; and falls on to Idolatry.

6. In short, it consists only in illumination, or conviction, in a superficial change, or partial reformation. An Apostate may be a man enlightened, Heb. 6. 4. and a Felix tremble under convictions, Acts 24. 25. and a Herod amend many things, Mar. 6. 20. 'Tis one thing to have sin alarmed only by convictions, and another to have it captivated and crucified by converting grace. Many because they have been troubled in conscience for their sins, think well of their case; miserably mistaking conviction for Conversion. With these Cain might have passed for a Convert, who ran up and down the world, like a man distracted under the rage of a guilty conscience, till with building and business he had worn it away, Gen. 4. 13, 14. Others think, that because they have given, off their riotous courses, and are broken off from evil company, or some particular lust, and reduced to sobriety and civility, they are now no other than real Converts, forgetting that there is a vast difference between being sanctified, and civilized: and that many seek to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, Luke 13. 24. and are not far from it, Mark. 12. 34. and arrive to the almost of Christianity, Acts 26. 28. and yet fall short at last. While conscience holds the whip over them, many will pray, hear, read, and forbear their delightful sins: but no sooner is this Lyon asleep, but they are at their Vomit again. Who more religious than the Jews, when God's hand was upon them? Psal. 78. 34, 35. but no sooner was the affliction over, but they forgot God, and shown their Religion to be a fit, ver. 36, 37. Thou mayst have disgorged a troublesome fin, that will not sit in thy stomach, and have escaped those gross pollutions of the world, and yet not have changed thy swinish nature all the while, 2 Pet. 2, 20. 22.

You may cast the lead out of the rude mass, into the more comely proportion of a plant, and then into the shape of a beast, and thence into the form and features of a man; but all the while it is but lead still. So a man may pass thro' divers transmutations, from ignorance to knowledge, from profaneness to civility, thence to a form of Religion; and all this while he is but carnal and unregenerate, while his nature remains unchanged.

Application. Hear then O sinners, hear as you would live; so come and hear; Isa. 55. 3. Why would you so willfully deceive yourselves, or build your hopes upon the sand? I know he shall find hard work of it that goes to pluck away your hopes. It cannot but be ungrateful to you, and truly it is not pleasing to me. I set about it as a Surgeon, when to cut off a putrefied Member from his well Beloved friend; which of force he must do, but with an aking heart, a pitiful eye, a trembling hand. But understand me, Brethren, I am only taking down the ruinous house, (which will otherwise speedily fall of itself, and bury you in the rubbish) that I may build fair, and strong, and firm forever. The hope of the wicked shall perish, if God be true of his word Prov. 11. 7. And wert not thou better, O sinner, to let the word convince thee now in time, and let go thy false and self-deluding hopes, than to have death too late to open thine eyes, and find thyself in hell, before thou art aware? I should be a false and faithless Shepherd, if I should not tell you, that you who have built your hopes upon no better grounds, than these forementioned, are yet in your sins. Let your conscience speak? what is it, that you have to plead for yourselves? Is it that you wear Christ's livery? that you bear his name? that you are of the visible Church? that you have knowledge in the Points of Religion? are civilized, perform religious duties, are just in your dealings; have been troubled in conscience for your sins? I tell you from the Lord, these pleas will never be accepted at God's Bar. All this, though good in itself, will not prove you converted, and so will not suffice to your salvation. Oh look about you, and bethink yourselves of turning speedily and soundly. Set to praying, and to reading, and studying your own hearts; rest not, till God hath made thorough work with you; for you must be other men, or else you are lost men.

But if these be short of Conversion, what shall I say of the profane sinner? It may be, he will scarce cast his Eyes, or lend his Ears to this discourse. But if there be any such reading, or within hearing, he must know from the Lord that made him, that he is far from the Kingdom of God. May a man be civilized and not converted; where then shall the Drunkard, and Glutton appear? May a man keep company with the wise Virgins, and yet be shut out? Shall not a companion of fools much more be destroyed? Prov. 13. 20. May a man be true and just in his dealing, and yet not be justified of God? What then will become of thee, O wretched man, whose conscience tells thee thou art false in thy trade, and false of thy word, and makest thy advantage by a lying tongue? If men may be enlightened, and brought to the performance of holy duties, and yet go down to perdition, for resting in them, and sitting down on this side of conversion; what will become of you, O miserable families, that live as without God in the world? and of you, O wretched sinners, with whom God is scarce in all your thoughts: that are so ignorant, that you cannot, or so careless, that you will not pray? O repent and be converted? break off your sins by righteousness; away to Christ for pardoning and renewing grace: give up yourselves to him, to walk with him in holiness, or else you shall never see God. Oh that you would take the warnings of God! In his name I once more admonish you. Turn you at my reproof, Prov. 1. 23. Forsake the foolish, and live, Prov. 9. 6. Be sober, righteous, godly, Tit. 2. 12. Wash your hands you sinners, purify your hearts ye double minded, James 4. 8. Cease to do evil, learn to do well, Isa. 1. 16, 17. But if you will on, you must die, Ezek. 33. 11.

Chap. II. Showing positively what Conversion is.

I May not leave you with your eyes half open, as he that saw men as trees walking, Mark 8. 24. The word is profitable for Doctrine, as well as reproof; 2 Tim. 3. 16. And therefore having thus far conducted you by the shelves and rocks of so many dangerous mistakes, I would guide you at length into the Harbour of truth.

Conversion then (in short) lies, in the thorough change both of the heart, and life. I shall briefly describe it in its nature and causes.

1. The Author, it is the spirit of God; and therefore it is called the sanctification of the spirit; 2. Thes. 2. 13. and the renewing of the holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5. Yet not excluding the other Persons in the Trinity: For the Apostle •eacheth us, to bless the father of our Lord Jesus Christ, for that he hath begotten us again; 1 Pet. 1. 3. and Christ is said to give repentance to Israel; Acts 5. 31. and is called the everlasting Father, Isa. 9. 6. and we his seed, and the Children which God hath given him, Heb, 2. 13. Isa. 53. 10. O blessed Birth! Seven Cities contended for the Birth of Homer: but the whole Trinity fathers the new creature. Yet is this work principally ascribed to the Holy Ghost, and so we are said to be born of the Spirit, Job. 3. 8.

So then it is a work above man's power. We are born, not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man; but of God, John. 1. 13. Never think thou canst convert thyself. If ever thou wouldst be saveingly converted, thou must despair of doing it in thine own strength, Ier. 13. 18. It is a Resurrection from the dead, Rev. 20. 5. Eph. 2. 1. a new creation, Gal. 6. 15. Eph. 2. 10. a work of absolute omnipotency, Eph. 1. 19. Are these out of the reach of human power? If thou hast no more than thou hadst by thy first birth, a good nature, a meek and chaste temper, &c. thou art a very stranger to true Conversion. This is a supernatural work.

2. The moving Cause is Internal, or External.

The Internal mover is only free grace. Not by works of righteousness which we have done: But of his own mercy he saved us—by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5. Of his own will begat he us, I am. 1. We are chosen and called unto Sanctification, not for it, Eph. 1. 4.

God finds nothing in a man to turn his heart, but to turn his stomach: enough to provoke his loathing, nothing to provoke his love. Look back upon thyself, O Christian: Take up thy verminous rags: Look upon thyself in thy blood, Ez. 16. 6. O reflect upon thy swinish Nature, thy filthy swill, thy once beloved mire, 2 Pet. 2. Canst thou think without loathing of thy trough and draugh? Open thy Sepulcher, Mat. 23. 27. Art thou struck almost dead with the hellish damp? behold thy putrid soul, thy loathsome members. O stench unsufferable, if thou dost but sense thy own putrifaction! Psal. 14. 3. Behold thy ghastly visage, they crawling Iusts, thy slime and corruption. Do not thine own Cloaths abhor thee? Job 9. 31. How then should holiness and purity love thee? Be astonished O Heavens at this, be moved O Earth, Ier. 2. 12. Who but must needs cry, Grace! Grace! Zech. 4. 7. Hear and blush you Children of the most high; O you unthankful generation! that free grace is no more in your mouths, in your thoughts; no more adored, admired, commended by such as you. One would think you should be nothing but praising and admiring God, whatever you are. How can you make a shift to forget such grace, or to pass it over with a slight and seldom mention; What but free grace should move God to love you, unless enmity could do it, or deformity could do it, unless vomit or rottenness could do it? How affectionately doth Peter lift up his hands? Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who of his abundant mercy hath begotten us again. 1 Pet. 1. 3. How feelingly doth Paul magnify the free mercy of God in it? God who is rich in mercy for his great love wherewith he loved us; hath quickened us together with Christ; by grace ye are saved, Eph. 2. 4, 5.

The External mover is the merit and intercession of the blessed Jesus. He hath obtained gifts for the rebellious, Psal. 68. 18. and through him it is, that God worketh in us, what is well pleasing in his sight, Heb. 13. 21. Through him are all spiritual blessings, bestowed upon us in Heavenly things, Eph. 1. 3. He intercedeth for the Elect, that believe not, John 17. 20. Every Convert is the fruit of his travel, Isa. 53. 11. O never was Infant born into the world with that difficulty, that Christ endured for us. How emphatically he groaneth in his travel; All the pains that he suffered on his Cross they were our birth pains, Acts 2. 24. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the pulls and throws that Christ endured for us. He is made sanctification to us, 1 Cor. 1 30. He sanctified himself (that is, set apart himself as a sacrifice) that we may be sanctified, John 17. 19. We are sanctified through the offering of his Body once for all, Heb. 10. 10.

'Tis nothing then without his own bowels, but the merit and intercession of Christ, that prevails with God to bestow on us converting grace. If thou art a new creature, thou knowest to whom thou owest it, to Christ's pangs and prayers. Hence the natural affection of a believer to Christ. The Foal doth not more naturally run after the Dam, nor the Suckling to the Dugs, than a Believer to Jesus Christ. And whither else shouldst thou go? If any in the World can show that for thy heart that Christ can, let them carry it. Doth Satan put in, doth the World court thee? Doth sin sue for thy heart? Why, were these crucified for thee? 1 Cor. 1. 13. O Christian, love and serve the Lord whilst thou hast a Being. Do not even the Publicans love those that love them? And show kindness to them that are kind to them? Mat. 5. 46, 47.

3. The Instrument is either Personal, or Real.

The personal is the Ministry. I have begotten you to Christ through the Gospel, 1 Cor. 4. 15. Christ's Ministers are they that are sent to open men's eyes, and to turn them to God, Acts 26. 18.

O unthankful World, little do you know what you are doing, while you are persecuting the Messengers of the Lord. These are they whose business is (under Christ) to save you. Whom have you reproached and blasphemed? Against whom you have exalted your voice, and lifted your eyes on high? Isa. 37. 23. These are the servants of the most high God that show unto you the way of salvation • Acts 16. 17. and do you thus requite them, O foolish and unwise? Deut. 32. 6. O Sons of ingratitude, against whom do you sport yourselves? against whom make you a wide mouth, and draw out the tongue? Isa. 57. 34. These are the Instruments that God useth to convert and save you, and do you spit in the face of your Physicians, and throw your Pilots over-board? Father forgive them, for they know not what they do.

The Instrument Real is the word: We were begotten by the word of truth: This is it that enlightens the eyes, that converteth the soul, Psal. 19. 7, 8. that maketh wise to salvation, 2 Tim. 3. 15. This is the incorruptible seed, by which we are born again, 1 Pet. 1. 23. If we are washed, 'tis by the word, Eph. 5. 26. if we are sanctified, 'tis through the truth, John 17. 17. This generates faith, and regenerates us, Rom. 10. 17. I am. 1. 18.

O ye Saints, how should you love the word? for by this you have been converted: O ye sinners, how should you ply the Word? For by this you must be converted: No other ordinary means but this. You that have felt its renewing power, make much of it while you live, be forever thankful for it. Tie it about your Necks, write it upon your hands, lay it in your bosoms, Prov. 6. 21, 22. When you go let it lead you, when you sleep let it keep you; when you wake let it talk with you: Say with holy David, I will never forget thy precepts, for by them hast thou quickened me, Psal. 119. 93. You that are unconverted, read the word with diligence, flock to it, where powerfully preached, fill the porches, as the multitude of the impotent, blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water, John 5. 3. Pray for the coming of the spirit in the word. Come off thy knees to the sermon; and come to thy knees from the Sermon. The seed doth not prosper because not watered by prayers and tears, nor covered by meditation.

4. The final cause is man's salvation, and God's glory, We are chosen through sanctification to salvation • 2 The. 2. 13. Called that we might be glorified, Rom. 8. 30. but especially, that God might be glorified. Isa. 60. 21. that we should show forth his praises, 1•Pet. 2. 9, and be fruitful in good works, Col. 1. 10.

O Christian, do not forget the end of thy Calling, let thy light shine, Mat. 5. 16. Let thy Lamp burn, let thy Fruits be good, and many, and in season, Psal. 1. 3. Let all thy designs fall in with God's, that he may be magnified in thee, Phil. 1. 20. Why should God repent that he hath made thee a Christian, as in the time of the old world, that he made them men? Gen. 6. 6. Why shouldst thou be an eyesore in his Orchard, Luke 7. by thy unfruitfulness? or a son that causeth shame, as it were a grief to thy father, and a bitterness to her that bare thee, Prov. 17, 25. Prov. 10. 5. O let the Womb bless thee that bare thee, Prov. 17. 21. He that begets a fool doth it to his sorrow; and the father of a fool hath no joy.

5. The subject is the elect sinner, and that in all his parts and powers, members, and mind. Whom God predestinates, them only he calls, Rom. 8. 30. None are drawn to Christ by their calling, nor come to him by believing, but his Sheep, those whom the father hath given him, John 6. 37, 44. Effectual calling runs parallel with eternal election, 2 Pet. 1. 10.

Thou beginnest at the wrong end, if thou disputest first about thine election. Prove thy Conversion, and then never doubt of thine election. Or canst thou not yet prove it? Set upon a present and thorough turning. Whatever God's purposes be, (which are secret) I am sure his promises are plain. How desperately do rebels argue? If I am elected I shall be saved, do what I will; if not, I shall be damned, do what I can. Perverse sinner, wilt thou begin where thou shouldest end? Is not the word before thee? What saith it? Repent and be converted, that your sins may be blotted su•, Acts 3. 19. If you mortify the deeds of the body, you shall live, Rom. 8. 13. Believe and be saved, Acts 16. 31. What can be plainer? Do not stand still, disputing about thine election, but set to repenting and believing. Cry to God for converting grace. Revealed things belong to thee, in these busy thyself. 'Tis just (as one well said) that they that will not feed on the plain food of the word, should be choked with the bones. Whatever God's purposes be, I am sure his promises be true. Whatever the decrees of Heaven be, I am sure, that if I repent and believe I shall be saved; and that if I repent not, I shall be damned. Is not here plain ground for thee, and wilt thou yet run upon the rocks?

More particularly, this change of conversion passes throughout in the whole subject. A carnal person may have some Shreds of good morality, a little near the list, but he is never good throughout the whole cloth, the whole body of Holiness and Christianity; Feel him a little further near the ridge, and you shall see him to be but a deceitful piece. Conversion is not repairing of the old building, but it takes all down and erects a new structure: it is not the putting in a patch, or sowing on a list of holiness; but with the true convert, holiness is woven into all his powers, principles, and practice. The sincere Christian is quite a new fabric, from the foundation to the Top-stone, all fire-new. He is a new man, Eph. 4. 24. a new creature. All things are become new, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Conversion is a deep work; a heart work, Acts 2. 37. and 6. 14. it turns all upside down, and makes a man be in a new world. It goes throughout with Men, throughout the Mind, throughout the Members, throughout the Motions of the whole Life.

1. Throughout the Mind. It makes an universal change within. First, it turns the balance of the judgment, so that God and his Glory do weigh down all carnal and worldly interest, Acts 20. 24. Phil. 1. 20. Psal. 73. 25. It opens the eye of the mind, and makes the Scales of its Native Ignorance to fall off, and turns men from darkness to light, Acts 26. 18. Eph. 5. 8. 1 Pet. 2. 9. The man that before saw no danger in his condition, now concludes himself lost and forever undone, Acts 2. 37. except renewed by the power of Grace. He that formerly thought there was little hurt in sin, now comes to see it to be the chief of evils; he sees the unreasonableness, unrighteousness, the deformity and filthiness that is in sin, so that he is affrighted with it, loathes it, dreads it, flies it, and even abhors himself for it, Rom. 7. 15. Job 42. 6. Ezek. 36. 31. He that could see little sin in himself, and could find no matter for confession (as it was said of that learned Ignoramus Bellarmino, who it seems while he knew so much abroad, was a miserable stranger to himself) that when he was to be confessed by the Priest, could not remember anything to confess; but was fain to run back to the sins of his youth: I say he that could not find matter for confession, unless it were some few gross and staring evils, now sin reviveth with him, Rom. 7. 9. he sees the rottenness of his heart, and desperate and deep pollution of his whole nature: he cries, unclean, unclean, Lev. 13. 45. Lord purge me with Hyssop, wash me thoroughly, create in me a new heart, Psal. 51. 2, 7, 10. He sees himself altogether become filthy, Psal. 14. 3. corrupt, both root and tree, Mat. 7. 17, 18. he writes unclean upon all his parts and powers, and performances, Isa. 64. 6. Rom. 7. 18. He discovers the nasty corners that he was never aware of, and sees the blasphemy, and theft, and murder, and adultery that is in his heart, which before he was ignorant of. Heretofore he saw no form, nor comeliness in Christ, no beauty that he should desire him; but now he finds the hid treasure, and will sell all to buy this field. Christ is the pearl he seeks, sin the puddle he loathes.

Now according to this new light, the man is of another mind, another judgment, than before he was: Now God is all with him, he hath none in Heaven nor in Earth like him, Psal. 73. 25. He prefers him truly before all the World; his favor is his life; the light of his Countenance is more than Corn, or Wine, and Oil, (the good that he formerly inquired after, and set his heart upon, Psal. 4. 6, 7.) Now let all the world be set on one side, and God alone on the other; Let the Harlot put on her paint, and gallantry, and present herself to the soul (as when Satan would have tempted our Savior with her) in all the glory of her Kingdoms, yet the soul will not fall down and worship her; but will prefer a naked, yea a crucified, persecuted Christ before her, Phil. 3. 8. 1 Cor. 2. 2. Not but that a Hypocrite may come to yield a general assent to this, that God is the chief good: yea the wiser Heathens (some few of them) have at last stumbled upon this, but there is a difference between the absolute and comparative judgment of the understanding. No hypocrite comes so far as to look upon God, as the most desirable and suitable good to him, and thereupon to acquiesce in him. This was the Converts voice, The Lord is my portion, saith my soul: Whom have I in Heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth, that I desire besides thee. God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever, Psal. 73. 25, 26. Lam. 3. 24.

Secondly, it turns the bias of the Will, both as to means and end. (1.) The intention of the Will is altered, Ezek. 36. 26. Ier. 31. 33. Isaiah 26. 8, 9. Now the man hath new ends and designs. Now he intends God above all, and desires and designs nothing in all the world so much, as that Christ may be magnified in him, Phil. 1. 20. He accounts himself more happy in this, than in all that the earth could yield, that he may be serviceable to Christ, and bring him glory in his generation. This is the mark he aims at that the name of Jesus may be great in the world, and that all the Sheaves of his Brethren may bow to this Sheaf.

Reader, dost thou view this, and never ask thyself, whether it be thus with thee? Pause a while, and breath on this great concernment.

2. The Election also is changed, so that he chooses another way, Psal. 119. 30. He pitches upon God, as his blessedness, and upon Christ as the principal, and holiness as the subordinate means to bring him to God, John 14. 6. Rom. 2. 7. He chooses Jesus for his Lord, Col. 2. 6. He is not merely forced into Christ by the storm, nor doth he take Christ for bare necessity, as the man begged from the gallows, when he takes the wife rather than the halter: but he comes off freely in the choice. This match is not made in a fright as with the terrified conscience or dying sinner; that will seemingly do anything for Christ, but doth only take Christ, rather than Hell: but he deliberately resolves, that Christ is his best choice, Phil. 1. 23. and would rather have him to choose, than all the good of this world, might he enjoy it while he would. Again, he takes holiness for his path: He doth not out of mere necessity submit to it: but he likes and loves it. I have chosen the way of thy Precepts, Ps. 119. 173. He takes God's testimonies not as his bondage, but as his heritage, yea his heritage forever, v. 111. He counts them not his burden, but his Bliss, not his cords, but his cordials, 1 John 5. 3. Psal. 119. 14, 16, 17. He doth not only bear, but take up Christ's yoke: He takes not holiness as the stomach doth the loathed potion, (which it will down with rather than die) but as the hungry doth his beloved food: Now time passes so sweetly with him (when he is himself) as that he spends in the exercises of holiness; these are both his content, and element, the desire of his eyes, and the joy of his heart, Job 23. 12. Psal. 119. 82, 131, 162, 174. Psal. 63. 5.

Put thy conscience to it as thou goest, whether thou art the man; O happy man, if this be thy case; But see thou be thorough and impartial in the search.

Thirdly, It turns the bent of the affection, 2 Cor. 7. 11. These run all in a new channel. The Jordan is now driven back, and the water runs upward against its natural course.

Christ is his Hope, 1 Tim. 1. 1. this is his prize, Phil. 3. 8. here his eye is, here his heart is. He is contented to cast all over board (as the merchant in the Storm, ready to perish) so he may but keep this Jewel.

The first of his Desires is, not after gold, but grace, Phil. 3. 13. He hungers after it, he seeks it as silver, he digs for it as for hid treasure; He had rather be gracious, than be great; he had rather be the holiest man on earth, than the most learned, the most famous, most prosperous. While carnal, he said: Oh if I were but in great esteem, and rolled in wealth, and swim'd in pleasure, if my debts were paid, and I and mine provided for, then I were a happy man; but now the tune is changed. Oh, saith the convert, if I had but my corruptions subdued, if I had such measures of grace, such fellowship with God, though' I were poor and despised, I should not care, I should account myself a blessed man. Reader, is this the language of thy soul?

His Joys are changed. He rejoiceth in the ways of God's Testimonies, as much as in all Riches, Psal. 119. 14. He delights in the Law of the Lord, wherein once he had little favor. He hath no such Joy, as in the thoughts of Christ, the fruition of his company, the prosperity of his people.

His Cares are quite altered. He was once set for the World, and any scraps of by time, nothing (too often) was enough for his soul. Now he gives over caring for the Asses, and sets his heart on the Kingdom. Now all the cry is, What shall I do to be saved? Acts 16. 30. His great solicitude is, how to secure his soul. Oh! how he would bless you, if you could but put him out of doubt of this!

His Fears are not so much of suffering, but of sinning, Heb. 11. 25, 27. Once he was afraid of nothing so much as the loss of his estate, or esteem, the pleasure of friends, the frowns of the great: Nothing sounded so terrible to him as pain, or poverty, or disgrace. Now these are little to him, in comparison of God's dishonor or displeasure. How warily doth he walk, lest he should tread on a sn••e? He feareth always, he looks before and behind; he hath his eye upon his heart, and is often casting over his shoulder; lest he should be overtaken with sin, Psal. 39. 1. Prov. 28. 14. Eccles. 2. 14. It kills his heart to think of losing God's favor; this he dreads as his only undoing, Psal. 51. 11, 12. Psal. 119. 8. No thought in the world doth pinch him, and pain him so much, as to think of parting with Christ.

His Love runs a new course. My love was crucified (said holy Ignatius) that is, my Christ. This is my Beloved, saith the Spouse, Cant. 5. 18. How doth Augustine often pour his loves upon Christ. O Eternal Blessedness, &c.

He can find no words sweet enough. Let me see thee, O light of mine eyes. Come, O thou joy of my spirit; Let me behold thee, O the gladness of my heart. Let me love thee, O life of my soul.

Appear unto me, O my great delight, my sweet comfort, O my God, my life, and the whole glory of my soul. Let me find thee, O desire of my heart. Let me hold thee, O love of my soul. Let me embrace thee, O heavenly Bridegroom. Let me possess thee.

His Sorrows have now a new vent, 2 Cor. 7. 9, 10. The view of his sins, the sight of a Christ crucified, that would scarce stir him before, now how much do they affect his heart?

His Hatred boils, his Anger burns against sin, Psal. 119. 104. He hath no patience with himself; he calls himself fool, and beast, and thinks any Name too good for himself, when his indignation is stirred up against sin, Psal. 73. 22. Prov. 30. 2. He could once swill in it, with too much pleasure, now he loathes the thought of returning to it, as much as of licking up the filthiest vomit.

Commune then with thine own heart, and attend the common and general current of thine affections, whether it be towards God in Christ above all other concernments. Indeed sudden and strong commotions of the affections and sensitive part, are oftentimes found in Hypocrites, especially where the natural constitution leads thereunto, and contrariwise, the sanctified themselves are many times without sensible stirrings of the affections, where the temper is more low, dry and dull. The great inquiry is, whether the judgment and will be standingly determined for God, above all other good, real or apparent: and if the affections do sincerely follow their choice, and conduct: though it be not so strongly and sensibly, as is to be desired, there is no doubt, but the change is saving.

2. Thorowout the Members. Those that were before the instruments of sin, are now become the holy utensils of Christ's living Temple, Rom. 6. 16. 1 Cor. 3. 16. He that before made, as it were, a baud or a barrel of his body, now possesseth his vessel in sanctification, and honor, in temperance, chastity, and sobriety, and dedicated to the Lord, 1 Thes. 4. 4. Gal. 5. 22, 23. 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20.

The Eye that was once a wandering Eye, a wanton Eye, a haughty, a covetous Eye, is now employed, as Mary, in weeping over her sins, Luke 7. 38. in beholding God in his works, Psal. 8. •. in reading his word, Acts 8. 30. in looking up and down for objects of Mercy, and opportunities for his service.

The Ear that was once open to Satan's call, and that (like a vitiated Palate) did relish nothing so much as filthy, as at least frothy talk, and the Fools laughter, is now bored to the Door of Christ's House and open to his discipline. It saith, Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth. It cries with him, Veniat verbum Domini, and waits for his word •s the Rain, and relishes them more than the appointed food, Job 23. 12. than the Honey, and the Honey-Comb, Psal. 19. 10.

The Head, that was the Shop of worldly designs, is now filled with other matters, and set on the study of God's will, Psalm. 1. 2. Psal. 119. 97. and though Man beats his head, not so much about his gain, but about his duty. The Thoughts and Cares that now fill his head are principally, how he may please God, and fly Sin.

His Heart, that was a Sty of filthy lusts, is now become an Altar of incense, where the fire of divine Love is ever kept in, and whence the daily Sacrifice of Prayer and Praises, and sweet Incense of holy desires, Ejaculations, and Anhelations are continually ascending, Psal. 108. 1. Psal. 119. 20. Psal. 139. 17, 18.

The mouth is become a Well of Life, his Tongue as choice Silver, and his Lips feed many; Now the Salt of Grace hath seasoned his Speech and eat out the Corruption, Col. 4. 6. and cleansed the mouth from his filthy Communication, Flattery, Boasting, Railing, Lying, Swearing, Backbiting, that once came like the flashes proceeding from the Hell that was in the Heart, James 3. 6, 7. The Throat, that was once an open Sepulcher, Rom. 3. 13. now sends forth the sweet Breath of Prayer, and holy Discourse, and the man speaks in another Tongue, in the Language of Canaan, and is never so well, as when talking of God, and Christ, and the matters of another World. His Mouth bringeth forth Wisdom, his Tongue is become the silver Trumpet of his Makers Praise, his glory, and the best member that he hath.

Now here you shall have the Hypocrite halting. He speaks it may be like an Angel, but he hath a covetous eye, or the gain of unrighteousness in his hand. Or the hand is white, but his heart is full of rottenness, Mat. 23. 27. full of unmortified cares, a very Oven of Lust, a Shop of Pride, the Seat of Malice. It may be with Nebuchadnezzar's Image, he hath a Golden Head, a great deal of Knowledge: but he hath Feet of Clay, his Affections are Worldly, he minds earthly things, and his way and walk are sensual, and carnal, you may trace him in his secret haunts, and his footsteps will be found in some bypaths of sin. The work is not throughout with him.

3. Thorowout the Motions, or the Life, and Practice. The new Man takes a new course, Eph. 2. 2, 3. His Conversation is in Heaven, Phil. 3. 20. No sooner doth Christ call by effectual grace, but he straightway becomes a follower of him, Mat. 4. 20. When God hath given the new heart and writ his Law in his mind, he forthwith walks in his Statutes, and keeps his Judgments, Ezek. 36. 26, 27.

Though sin may dwell (God knows a wearisome and unwelcome guest) in him, yet it hath no more Dominion over him, Rom. 6. 7, 14. He hath his fruit unto holiness, Rom. 6. 22. and though he makes many a blot, yet the Law and Life of Jesus is that he eyes, as his copy, Psal. 119. 30. Heb. 12. 2. and hath••n unfeigned respect to all God's Commandments, Psal. 119. 6. He makes Conscience even of little sins and little duties, Psal. 119. 113. His very infirmities which he cannot help, though he would, are his souls burden, and are like the dust in a man's eye, which though but little, yet are not a little troublesome. [O man dost thou read this, and never turn in upon thy soul by self-examination?] The sincere Convert is not one man at Church, and another at home, he is not a Saint on his Knees, and a Cheat in his Shop: he will not Tithe Mint and Cumin, and neglect Mercy and Judgment, and the weighty matters of the Law; he doth not pretend Piety, and neglect Morality, Mat 23. 14. but he turns from all his sins, and keeps all God's Statutes, Ezek. 18. 21. though not perfectly. (except in desire and endeavor) yet sincerely, not allowing himself in the breach of any, Rom. 7. 15. Now he delights in the word, and sets himself to Prayer, and opens his Hand, (if able) and draws out his Soul to the hungry, Rom. 7. 22. Psal. 109. 4. Isa. 58. 10. He breaketh off his Sins by Righteousness, and his Iniquities by showing Mercy, to the poor, Dan. 4. 27. and hath a good Conscience, willing in all things to live honestly, Heb. 13. 18. and to keep without offense towards God and Men.

Here again you shall find the unsoundness of many Professors, that take themselves for good Christians. They are partial in the Law, Mal. 2. 9. and take up with the cheap and easy duties of Religion, but they go not thorough with the work. They are as a Cake not turned, half toasted, and half raw; It may be you shall have them exact in their words; punctual in their dealings; but then they do not exercise themselves unto Godliness; and for examining themselves, and governing their hearts, to this they are strangers. You may have them duly at the Church; but follow them to their Families, and there you shall see little but the World minded; or if they have a Road of Family Duties; follow them to their Closets, and there you shall find their Souls are little looked after; It may be they seem otherwise religious, but bridle not their Tongues, and so all their Religion is in vain, I am. 1. 26. It may be they come up to Closet and Family Prayer; but follow them to their Shops, and there you shall find them in a Trade of Lying, or some covert and cleanly way of deceit. Thus the Hypocrite goes not throughout in the course of his Obedience.

And thus much for the subject of Conversion. 6.

The Terms are either from which, or to which.

1. The Terms from which we turn in this motion of Conversion, are Sin, Satan, the World and our own Righteousness.

First, Sin. When a Man is converted, he is forever out with Sin, yea with all sin, Psal. 119. 128. but most of all with his own Sins, and especially with his Bosom Sin, Psal. 18. 23. Sin is now the Butt of his indignation, 2 Cor. 7. 11. he thirsts to bathe his hands in the blood of his Sins. His Sins set a broach in sorrows. It is Sin that pierces him and wounds him, he feels it like a Thorn in his side, like a prick in his Eyes, he groans and struggles under it, and not formally, but feelingly cries out, O wretched Man! he is not impatient of any burden so much as of his sin, Psal. 40. 12. If God should give him his choice, he would choose any affliction, so he might be rid of Sin. He feels it like the cutting gravel in his Shoes, pricking and paining him as he goes.

Before Conversion he had light thoughts of Sin: he cherished it in his Bosom, as Uriah his Lamb; he nourished it up, and it grew up together with him; it did eat as it were of his own Meat, and drank of his own Cup, and lay in his Bosom, and was to him as a Daughter: but when God opens his Eyes by Conversion, he throws it away with abhorrence, Isa. 30. 22. as a man would a loathsome Toad, Which in the dark he had hugged fast in his Bosom, and thought it had been some pretty and harmless bird. When a man is savingly changed, he is not only deeply convinced of the danger, but defilement of sin: and O how earnest is he with God to be purified: He loathes himself for his sins, Ezek. 36. 31. He runs to Christ, and casts himself into the Fountain for sin and for uncleanness, Zech. 13. 1. If he fall what a *•*ir is there to get all clean again? He flies to the Word and washes, and rubs, and rinches; laboring to cleanse himself from all filthiness both of Flesh and Spirit: He abhors his once beloved sin, Psal. 18. 23. as a cleanly nature doth the Trough and Mire, wherein he sees the Swine delight.

The sound Convert is heartily engaged against sin. He wrestles with it, he wars against it. He is too often foiled, but he never yields the Cause, nor lays down the Weapons; but he will up and to it again, while he hath breath in his body. He will never give quiet possession, he will make no peace; he will give no quarter, he falls upon it, and fires upon it, and is still disquieting of it with continual alarms. He can forgive his other Enemies, he can pity them, and pray for them, Acts 7. 60. but here he is implacable, here is he set upon revenge: he hunteth, as it were for the precious life; his Eye shall not pity, his Hand shall not spare, though it be a right Hand or a right Eye. Be it a gainful Sin most delightful to his Nature, or support to his Esteem with carnal Friends, yet he will rather throw his gain down the Ke•nel, see hi• credit fall, or the Flower of pleasure wither in his hand, than he will allow himself in any known way of sin, Luke 19. 8. He will grant no indulgence, he will give not toleration, but he draws upon sin wherever he meets it, and frowns upon it with this unwelcome salute, Have I found thee, O mine Enemy!

Reader, hath Conscience been at work, while thou hast been looking over these Lines? Hast thou pondered these things in thine heart? Hast thou searched the Book within, to see if these things be so? If not, read it again, and make thy Conscience speak whether or no it be thus with thee.

Hast thou crucified thy Flesh with its affections and lusts; and not only confessed, but forsaken thy sins; all sin in thy fervent desires, and the ordinary practice of every deliberate and willful sin in thy life? If not, thou art yet unconverted. Doth not Conscience fly in thy Face, as thou readest, and tell thee that thou livest in a way of lying for thy advantage, that thou usest deceit in thy Calling, that there is some way of secret wantonness that thou livest in? why then, do not deceive thyself, thou art in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity.

Doth not thy unbridled Tongue, thy brutish Intemperance, thy wicked Company, thy neglect of Prayer, of hearing and reading the Word, now witness against thee, and say, We are thy works, and we will follow thee? Or if I have not hit thee right, doth not the Bird within tell them, there is such or such a way, that thou knowest to be evil, that yet for some carnal respect thou dost tolerate thyself in, and art willing to spare? If this be thy Case, thou art to this day unregenerate, and must be changed or condemned.

Secondly, Satan. Conversion binds the strong man, spoils his Armor, casts out his Goods, turns men from the power of Satan unto God, Acts. 26. 18. Before, the Devil could no sooner hold up his Finger to the Sinner, to call him to his wicked Company, sinful Games, filthy Delights, but presently he followed, like an Ox to the Slaughter, and a Fool to the correction of the Stocks, as the Bird that hasteth to the prey, and knoweth not that it is for his life. No sooner could Satan bid him lie, but presently he had it upon the top of his Tongue, Acts 5. 3. no sooner could Satan offer a wanton Object, but he was stung with lust. The Devil could do more with him than God could. If the Devil say, Away with these Family Duties, be sure they shall be rarely enough performed in his house. If the Devil say, Away with this strictness, this preciseness, he will keep far enough from it: If he tells him there's no need of these Closet Duties, he shall go from day today, and scarce perform them. But now he is converted, he serves another Master, and takes quite another Course, 1 Pet. 4. 4. he goes and comes at Christ's beck, Col. 3. 24. Satan may sometimes catch his foot in a Trap; but he will no longer be a willing Captive. He watches against the Snares and Baits of Satan, and studies to be acquainted with his devices. He is very suspicious of his Plots, and is very jealous, in what comes athwart him, lest Satan should have some design upon him. He wrestles against Principalities and Powers, Eph. 6. He entertains the Messenger of Satan as men do the Messenger of Death. He keeps his Eye upon his Enemy, 1 Pet. 5. 8. and watches in his duties, lest Satan should put in his Foot.

Thirdly, The World. Before a sound faith, a man is overcome of the World. Either he bows down to Mammon, or idolizes his reputation, or is a lover of pleasure more than a lover of God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. Here's the root of Mans misery by the fall; he is turned aside to the Creature instead of God, and gives that esteem, confidence and affection to the Creature, that is due to him alone, Rom. 1. 25. Mat. 10. 37. Prov. 18. 11. Jer. 17. 5.

O miserable Man! What a deformed Monster hath sin made thee? God made thee little lower than the Angels, Sin little better than the Devils, John 6. 70. and 8. 44. a Monster that hath his Head and Heart, where his Feet should be; and his Feet kicking against Heaven, and everything out of place; the World, that was formed to serve thee, is come to rule thee; and the deceitful Harlot hath bewitched thee with her enchantments, and made thee bow down and serve her.

But converting Grace sets all in order again, and puts God in the Throne, and the world at his Footstool, Psal. 73. 25. Christ in the heart, and the World under Feet, Eph. 3. 17. Rev. 12. 1. So Paul, I am crucified to the World, and the World to me, Gal. 6. 14. Before this change all the cry was, Who will show us any (worldly) good? but now he sings another tune, Lord list thou up the light of thy Countenance upon me, and take the Corn and Wine whoso will, Psal. 4. 6, 7. Before, his hearts delight and content was in the World; then the Song was, Soul take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry, thou hast much Goods laid up for many Years; but now all this is withered, and there is no comeliness that he should desire it, and he tunes up with the sweet Psalmist of Israel, The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance; the Lines are fallen to me in a fair place, and I have a goodly heritage. He blesses himself, and boasts himself in God, Psal. 34. 2. Lam. 3. 24. nothing else can give him content. He hath written Vanity and Vexation upon all his Worldly Enjoyments, Eccles. 1. 2. and loss and dung upon all human Excellencies, Phil. 3. 7, 8. He hath life and immortality now in chase, Rom. 2. 7. he trades for grace and glory, and hath a Crown incorruptible in pursuit, 1 Cor. 9. 25. His Heart is set in him to seek the Lord, 1 Chron. 22. 19. and 2 Chron. 15. 15. He first seeks the Kingdom of Hearen and the Righteousness thereof, and Religion is no longer a matter by the by with him, but the main of his care, Mat. 6. 33. Psalm 27. 4. Now the gaudy Idol is become Nehushtan, 2 Kin. 18. 4. and he gets up and treads upon it, as Diogenes trampling on Plato's hangings, saying Calco, Platonis fastum. Before the World had the swaying interest with him • he would do more for gain than godliness, 1 Tim. 6. 6. more to please his friend; or his flesh, than to please the God that made him, and God must stand by till the world were first served; but now all must stand by; he hates father, and mother, and life, and all in comparison of Christ, Luke 1. 26.

Well then, pause a little, and look within: Doth not this nearly concern thee? Thou pretendest for Christ; but doth not the world sway thee? Dost thou not take more real delight and content in the world, than in him? Dost not thou find thyself better at ease when the World goes to thy mind and thou art encompassed with carnal delights, than when retired to prayer and meditat on in thy closet, or attending upon God's Word and Worship? No surer Evidence of an unconverted State, than to have the things of the World uppermost in our aims, love, and estimation, John 2. 15. James 4. 4.

With the sound convert Christ hath the supremacy. How dear is this name to him? How precious is its savor, Cant. 1. 3. Psal. 54. 8. The name of Jesus is engraven upon his heart, Gal. 4. 19. and lies as a bundle of Myrrh between his Breasts, Cant. 1. 13, 14. Honor is but air, and laughter is but madness, and Mammon is fallen like Dagon before the Ark, with hands and head broken off on the threshold, when once Christ is savingly revealed. Here is the pearl of great price to the true Convert; here is his treasure, here is his hope, Mat. 13. 44, 45. This is his glory, my beloved is mine, and I am his, Gal. 6. 14. Cant. 2. 16. O 'tis sweeter to him to be able to say, Christ is mine, than if he could say the kingdom is mine, the Indians are mine.

Fourthly, Your own Righteousness: Before Conversion, Man seeks to cover himself with his own Fig leaves, Phil. 3. 6, 7. and to lick himself whole with his own Duties, Mic. 6. 6, 7. He is apt to trust in himself, Luk. 16. 15. and 18. 9. and set up his own Righteousness, and to reckon his Counters for Gold, and not submit to the righteousness of God, Rom. 10. 3. But Conversion changes his mind; now he casts away his filthy Rags, and counts his own Righteousness, but a menstruous Cloth: he casts it off, as a Man would the verminous Tatters of a nasty Begger, Isaiah 64. 7. Now he is brought to poverty of Spirit, Mat. 5. 3. complains of and condemns himself, Rom. 7. and all his inventory is, Poor, and miserable, and wretched, and blind, and naked, Rev. 3. 17. he sees a world of iniquity in his holy things, and calls his once idolized Righteousness, but flesh, I and loss, and dogs-meat, and would not for a thousand Worlds be found in himself, Phil. 3. 4, 7, 8, 9. His finger is ever upon his sores, Psal. 51. 3. his sins, his wants. Now he begins to set a high price upon Christ's Righteousness; he sees the need of a Christ in every duty, to justify his person, and justify his performances, he cannot live without him; he cannot pray without him; Christ must go with him, or else he cannot come into the presence of God; he leans upon the hand of Christ and so he bows himself in the house of his God. He sets himself down for a lost, undone man without him. His life is hid in Christ, as the life of man in the heart. He is fixed in Christ, as the roots of the tree spread in the earth for stability and nutriment. Before the news of a Christ was a stale and sapless thing; but now how sweet is a Christ? Augustine could not relish his before so much admired Cicero, because he could not find the name of Christ; how pathetically cries he, Dulcissime, amantis. benignis. caris. &c. quando te videbo? quando satiabor de pulchritudine tua? Medit. c. 37. O most sweet, most loving, most kind, most dear, most precious, most desired, most lovely, most fair, &c. all in a breath, when he speaks of and to his Christ; in a word, the voice of the Convert, is with the Martyr, None but Christ.

2. The terms which, are either ultimate, or Subordinate and Mediate.

The ultimate is God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, whom the true Convert takes, as his All Sufficient and eternal blessedness. A Man is never truly sanctified, till his very heart be in truth set upon God above all things, as his portion and chief good. These are the natural breathings of a believers heart: Thou art my portion, Psal. 119. 57. My soul shall make her boast in the Lord, Psalm. 34. 2. My expectation is from him, he only is my rock, and my salvation, he is my defense: in God is my salvation and my glory, the Rock of my strength, and my Refuge is in God, Psalm 62. 1. 2, 5, 6, 7. Psalm 18. 1, 2.

Would you put it to an issue whether you be converted or not? Now then let thy soul and all that is within thee attend.

Hast thou taken God for thy happiness? Where doth the content of thy heart lie? Whence doth thy choicest comfort come in? Come then and with Abraham lift up thine eyes Eastward, and Westward, and Northward, and Southward, and cast about thee, what it is, that thou wouldst have in Heaven or Earth to make thee happy. If God should give thee thy choice as he did to Solomon, or should say to thee, as Ahasuerus to Esther, What is thy petition, and what is thy request? and it shall be granted thee, Esther 5. 3. What wouldst thou ask? go into the gardens of pleasure, and gather all the fragrant flowers from thence; would these content thee? Go to the treasures of Mammon; suppose thou mightest lade thyself while thou wouldst from hence: go to the towers, to the trophies of honor: what thinkest thou of being a man of renown, and having a name like the name of the great men of the earth? Would any of this, all this suffice thee, and make thee count thyself a happy man? If so, then certainly thou art carnal and unconverted. If not, go farther; w^ode into the divine excellencies, the store of his mercies, the hiding of his power, the deeps unfathomable of his All-sufficiency: Doth this sⁱt thee best, and please thee most? Dost thou say, 'Tis good to be here? Mat. 17. 4. Here I will pitch, here I will live and die? Wilt thou let all the world go, rather than this? Then 'tis well between God and thee: Happy art thou, O man, happy art thou that ever thou wast born. If a God can make thee happy, thou must needs be happy; for thou hast avouched the Lord to be thy God, Deut. 26. 17. Dost thou say to Christ, as he to us, Thy Father shall be my Father, and thy God my God? John 20. 17. Here is the turning Point. An unsound professor never takes up his rest in God; but converting grace does the work and so cures the fatal misery of the fall, by turning the heart from its idols, to the living God, 1 Thes. 1. 9. Now says the soul, Lord, whither should I go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, John 6. 68. Here he centers, here he settles. O 'tis as the entrance of Heaven to him, to see his interest in God When he discovers this, he saith Return unto thy rest, O my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee, Psalm 116. 7. and it is even ready to breath out Simon's Song, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, Luke 2. 29. and saith with Jacob, when his old heart revived at the welcome tidings, It is enough, Gen. 45. 28. When he sees he hath a God in Covenant to go to, this is all his salvation and all his desire, 2 Sam. 23. 5.

Man, is this thy case? Hast thou experienced this? Why, then blessed art thou of the Lord. God hath been at work with thee, he hath laid hold on thy heart by the power of converting grace, or else thou couldst never have done this.

The Mediate term of Conversion is either Principal, or less Principal.

The Principal, is Christ, the only Mediator between God and Man, 1 Tim. 2. 5. His work is to bring us to God, 1 Pet. 3. 18. he is the way to the Father, John 14. 6. the only plank on which we may escape; the only door by which we may enter, John 10. 9. Conversion brings over the soul to Christ, to accept of him, Col. 2. 6. as the only means to life, as the only way, the only name given under Heaven, Acts 4. 12. He looks not for salvation in any other but him; nor in any other with him, but throws himself on Christ alone; as one that should cast himself with spread arms upon the Sea.

Here (saith the convinced sinner) here I will venture, and if I perish, I perish: If I d•, I will die here. But Lord suffer me not to perish under the pitiful eyes of thy mercy. Intreat me not to leave thee, or to turn away from following after thee, Ruth 1. 16. Here I will throw myself, If thou kick me, if thou kill me, Job 13. 15. I will not go from thy door.

Thus the poor soul doth venture on Christ, and resolvedly adhere to him. Before Conversion the man made light of Christ, minded the Farm, Friends, Merchandise, more than Christ, M•t. 22. 5. Now Christ is to him as his necessary food, his daily bread, the life of his heart, the staff of his life, Phil. 3. 9. His great design is, that Christ may be magnified in him, Phil. 1. 20. His heart once said, as they to the Spouse, What is thy Beloved more than another? Cant. 5. 9. He found more sweetness in his merry company, wicked games, earthly delights, than in Christ. He took Religion of a fancy, and the talk of great enjoyments for an idle dream. But now to him to live, is Christ. He sets light by all that he accounted precious, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, Phil. 3. 8.

All of Christ is accepted by the sincere Convert. He loves not only the Wages, but work of Christ. Ro. 7. 12. not only the benefits, but the burden of Christ: He is willing not only to tread out the corn, but to draw under the yoke: he takes up the commands of Christ, yea and Cross of Christ, Mat. 11. Mat. 16. 24.

The unsound closes by the halves with Christ; He is all for the Salvation of Christ; but he is not for sanctification: he is for the privileges, but appretiates not the person of Christ. He divides the offices and benefits of Christ. This is an error in the foundation. Whoso loveth life, let him beware here. 'Tis an undoing mistake, of which you have been often warned, and yet none more common. Jesus is a sweet name, but men love not the Lord Jesus in sincerity, Eph. 6. 24. They will not have him as God offers, To be a Prince and a Savior, Acts 5. 31. They divide what God hath joined, the King and the Priest. Yea, they will not accept the Salvation of Christ, as he intends it; they divide it here. Every man's vote is for Salvation from suffering, but they desire not to be saved from sinning. They would have their lives saved, but withal they would have their lusts. Yea, many divide here again, they would be content to ha•e some of their sins destroyed; but they cannot leave the lap of Delilah, or divorce the beloved Herodias. They cannot be cruel to the right eye, or right hand; the Lord must pardon them in this thing, 2 Kings 5. 18. Oh be infinitely tender here; your souls lie upon it. The sound Convert takes a whole Christ, and takes him for all intents and purposes, without exceptions, without limitations, without reserves. He is willing to have Christ, upon his terms, upon any terms. He is willing of the dominion of Christ, as well as deliverance by Christ; he saith with Paul, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. Any thing Lord. He sends the blank to Christ to set down his own Conditions, Acts 2. 37. Acts 16. 30.

The less Principal is the Laws, Ordinances, and ways of Christ. The heart that was once set against these, and could not endure the strictness of these bonds, the severity of these ways, now falls in love with them, and chooses them as its rule and guide forever, Psalms 119. 111, 12.

Four things (I observe) God doth work in every sound Convert, with reference to the Laws and Ways of Christ, by which you may come to know your estates, if you will be faithful to you own souls; and therefore keep your eyes upon your hearts, as you go along.

1. The Judgment is brought to approve of them, and subscribe to them, as most righteous and most reasonable, Psalms 119. 112, 128, 137, 138. The mind is brought to like the ways of God, and the corrupt prejudices that were once against them, as unreasonable, and intolerable, are now removed. The understanding assents to them all, as holy, just, and good, Rom. 7. 12. How is David taken up with these excellencies of God's Laws? How doth he expatiate in their praises both from their inherent qualities, and admirable effects, Psalms 19. 8, 9, 10, &c.

There is a twofold judgment of the understanding; Judicium absolutum, & comparatum. The absolute judgment is, when a man thinks such a course best in the general, but not for him, or not under the present Circumstances he is in, pro hic & nunc. Now a godly man's judgment is for the ways of God, and that not only the absolute, but comparative judgment; he thinks them not only best in general, but best for him. He looks upon the rules of Religion, not only as tolerable, but desireable, yea more desireable than gold, fine gold, yea much fine gold, Psalms 19. 10.

His judgments are settledly determined, that 'tis best to be holy, that 'tis best to be strict, that it is in itself the most eligible course; and that 'tis for him the wisest and most rational, and desireable choice. Hear the godly man's judgment, I know O Lord, that thy judgments are right. I love thy Commandments above Gold, yea above fine Gold; I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way, Psalms 119. 127, 128. Mark he did approve of all that God required, and disallowed of all that he forbad, Righteous O Lord, and upright are thy judgments. Thy testimonies that thou hast commanded are righteous, and very faithful. Thy word is true from the beginning, and every one of thy righteous judgments endureth for ever, Psalms 119. 86, 160. 162, 163. See how readily and fully he subscribes, he declares his assent, and consent to it, and all and everything therein contained.

2. The desire of the heart is to know the whole mind of Christ, Psalms 119. 124, 125, 169. Psalms 25. 4, 5. He would not have one sin undiscovered, nor be ignorant of one duty required. 'Tis the natural and earnest breathing of a sanctified heart,

Lord if there be any way of wickedness in me, do thou discover it. What I know not teach thou me, and if I have done iniquity, I will do it no more.

The unsound is willingly ignorant, 2 Pet. 3. 5. loves not to come to the light, John 3. 20. He is willing to keep such or such a sin; and therefore is loath to know it to be a sin, and will not let in the light at that Window. Now the gracious heart is willing to know the whole latitude and compass of his makers Law, Psalm 119. 18, 19, 27, 33, 64, 66, 68, 78, 108, 124. He receives with all acceptation the word that convinceth him of any duty that he knew not, or minded not before, or discovered any sin that lay hid before, Psalm 119. 11.

3.

The free and resolved choice of the will is determined for the ways of Christ, before all the pleasures of sin and prosperities of the World,

Psalm 119. 103, 127, 162. His consent is not extorted by some extremity of anguish, nor is it only a sudden and hasty resolve, but he is deliberately purposed, and comes off freely in the choice, Psalm 17. 3. Psal. 119. 30. True, the Flesh will rebel, yet the prevailing part of his Will is for Christ's Laws and Government; so that he takes them not up as his toil or burden, but his bliss. 1 John 5. 3. Psalm 119. 60, 72. When the unsanctified goes in Christ's ways, as in Chains and Fetters, he doth them naturally, Psalm 40. 8. Ier. 31. 33. and counts Christ's Law his Liberty, Psalm. 119. 32, 45. James 1. 25.

He is willing in the beauties of holiness,

Psalm. 110. 3. and hath this inseparable Mark.

That he had rather (if he might have his choice) live a strict and holy life than the most prosperous and flourishing life in the world,

1 Sam. 10. 26.

There went with Saul a band of men whose hearts God had touched.

When God touches the heart of his chosen, they presently follow Christ, Mat. 4. 22. and (though drawn) do freely run after him. Cant. 1. 4. and willingly offer themselves to the service of the Lord, 2 Chron. 7. 16. seeking him with their whole desire. 2 Chron. 15. 15. Fear hath its use; but this is not the main Spring of Motion with a sanctified heart. Christ keeps not his Subjects in by force, but is King of a willing people. They are (through his grace) freely resolved for his service, and do it out of choice, not as slaves, but as the Sun or Spouse, from a Spring of Love, and a Loyal Mind. In a Word, the Laws of Christ are the Converts Love, Psalm 119. 159, 163, 167. desire, ver. 5, 20, 40. delight, ver. 77, 92, 103, 111, 143. and continual study, ver. 99, 79. Psalm 1. 2.

4. The bent of his course is directed to keep God's Statutes, Psalm 119. 4, 8, 167, 168. 'Tis the daily care of his life to walk with God. He seeks great things: he hath noble designs, though he fall too short. He aims at nothing less than perfection: he desires it, he reaches after it, he would not rest in any pitch of grace, till he were quite rid of sin and had perfected holiness, Phil. 3. 11, 12, 13, 14.

Here the Hypocrites rottenness may be discovered. He desires holiness (as one well) only as a Bridge to Heaven, and enquires earnestly, what is the least that will serve his turn; and if he can get but so much as may just bring him to Heaven, this is all he cares for. But the sound Convert desires holiness for holiness sake, Psalm 119. 97. Mat. 5. 6. and not only for Heaven's sake. He would not be satisfied with so much as might save him from Hell; but desires the highest pitch. Yet desires are not enough. What is thy way and thy course? Is the drift and scope of thy life altered? Is holiness thy trade, and religion thy business? Rom. 8. 1. Mat. 25. 16. Phil. 1. 20. If not, thou art short of sound Conversion.

Application. And is this, that we have described, the Conversion that is of absolute necessity to salvation? Then be informed. 1. That strait is the gate and narrow the way that leadeth unto life. 2. That there be but few that find it. 3. That there is need of a Divine power, savingly to convert a sinner to Jesus Christ.

Again, then be exhorted, O man that readest, to turn in upon thine own self. What saith Conscience? Doth it not begin to bite? Doth it not twitch thee as thou goest? Is this thy Judgment, and this thy Choice, and this thy way, that we have described? If so, then 'tis well. But doth not thy heart condemn thee, and tell thee, there is such a sin thou livest in against thy Conscience? Doth it not tell thee, there is such and such a secret way of wickedness, that thou makest no bones of? Such or such a Duty, that thou makest no Conscience of?

Doth not Conscience carry thee to thy Closet, and tell thee how seldom prayer, and reading is performed there? Doth it not carry thee to thy family, and show thee the charge of God, and the souls of thy children and servants, that be neglected there? doth not Conscience lead thee to thy Shop, thy Trade, and tell thee of some mystery of iniquity there? Doth it not carry thee to the Ale-Shop, or to the Sack-Shop, and round thee in thine ear for the loose Company thou keepest there, the precious time thou mis-spendest there, for the talents of God which thou throwest down this Sink, for thy gaming, and thy swilling, &c. Doth it not carry thee into thy secret Chamber, and read thee a Curtain Lecture?

O Conscience do thy duty. In the name of the living God I command thee discharge thine office. Lay hold upon this sinner, fall upon him, arrest him apprehend him, undeceive him. What, wilt thou flatter and sooth him, while he lives in his sins? Awake, O Conscience. What meanest thou, O sleeper? What, hast thou never a reproof in thy mouth? What, shall this soul die in his careless neglect of God and Eternity, and thou altogether hold thy peace? What, shall he go on still in his trespasses, and yet have peace? O rouse up thyself, and do thy work. Now let the Preacher in the bosom speak. Cry aloud and spare not, lift up thy voice like a Trumpet; let not the blood of this Soul be required at thy hands.

Chap. III. Of the Necessity of Conversion.

IT may be you are ready to say, what meaneth this stir? And are apt to wonder, why I follow you with such earnestness, still ringing one lesson in your ears, That you should repent and be converted, Acts 3. 19. But I must say unto you, as Ruth to Naomi, Intreat me not to leave you, nor to turn aside from following after you, Ruth 1. 16. Were it a matter of indifferency, I would never keep so much ado. Might you be saved as you be, I would gladly let you alone. But would you not have me solicitous for you, when I see you ready to perish? As the Lord liveth, before whom I am, I have not the least hopes to see one of your faces in Heaven, except you be converted. I utterly despair of your salvation, except you will be prevailed with to turn thoroughly, and give up yourselves to God in holiness and newness of life. Hath God said,

Except you be born again, you cannot see the Kingdom of God, John 3. 3. and yet do you wonder, why your Ministers do so plainly travel in birth with you? Think it not strange, that I am earnest with you to follow after holiness, and long to see the Image of God upon you. Never did any, nor shall any enter into Heaven by any other way but this. The Conversion described is not an high pitch of some taller Christians, but every soul, that is saved, passes this universal change.

It was a passage of the Noble Roman, when he was hasting with Corn to the City in the famine, and the Mariners were loath to set sail in foul weather, Necessarium est navigar•, non est necessarium vivere. Our voyage is of more necessity than our lives. What is it that thou dost account necessary? Is thy Bread necessary? Is thy Breath necessary? then thy Conversion is much more necessary. Indeed this is the •num necessarium, the one thing necessary. Thine Estate is not necessary; thou mayest sell all for the Pearl of great price, and yet be a gainer by the purchase, Mat. 13. 46. Thy life is not necessary; thou mayest part with it for Christ to infinite advantage. Thine esteem is no• necessary; thou mayest be reproached for the name of Christ, and yet happy, yea much more happy in reproach than in repute, 1 Pet. 4. 4. Mat. 5. 10, 11. But thy Conversion is necessary, thy damnation lies upon it, and is it not needful in so important a case to look about thee? Upon this one point depends thy making, or marring to all eternity.

But I shall more particularly show the necessity of Conversion in five things; for without this,

1. ⟨⟩ being is in vai•. Is it not pity thou shouldst be good for nothing, an unprofitable burden of the earth, a wart, or wen in the Body of the universe? Thus thou art, whilst unconverted, for thou canst not answer the end of thy Being. Is it not for the divine pleasure thou art and wert created? Rev. 4. 11. Did not he make thee for himself? Prov. 16. 4. Art thou a man, and hast thou reason? Why then bethink thyself, why and whence thy Being is. Behold God's workmanship in thy body, and ask thyself, to what end did God rear this fabric? Consider the noble faculties or my Heaven-born soul: to what end did God bestow these excellencies? To no other, than that ⟨⟩ shouldst please thyself, and gratify thy senses? Did God send men, like the Swallows, into the World, only to gather a few sticks and dirt, and build their Nests, and breed up their young, and then away? The very Heathens could see farther than this. Art thou so fearfully and wonderfully made, Psal. 139. 14. and dost thou not yet think with thyself, surely it was for some noble and raised end?

O man, set thy reason a little in the Chair. Is it not pity such a goodly fabric should be raised in vain? Verily thou art in vain, except thou art for God. Better thou hadst no Being, than not to be for him. Wouldst thou serve thy end? Thou must repent, and be converted. Without this thou art to no purpose, yea, to bad purpose.

First, To No purpose. Man unconverted, is like a choice instrument, that hath every string broke, or out of tune. The Spirit of the living God must repair, and tune it, by the grace of regeneration, and sweetly move it by the power of actuating grace, or else thy prayers will be but howlings, and all thy services will make no Music in the Ears of the most Holy, Eph. 2.

10. Phil. 2. 13. Hos. 7. 14. Isa. 1. 15. All thy powers and faculties are so corrupt in thy natural State, that except thou be purged from dead works, thou canst not serve the living God, Heb. 9. 14. Tit. 1. 15.

An unsanctified man cannot work the work of God. 1. He hath no skill in it. He is altogether as unskillful in the work, as in the word of righteousness, Heb. 5. 13. There are great mysteries as well in the practices, as principles of godliness: now the unregenerate knoweth not the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 13. 11. 1 Tim. 3. 16. You may as well expect him that never learned the Alphabet to read, or look for goodly Music on the Lute, from one that never set his hand to an instrument, as that a natural man should do the Lord any pleasing service. He must first be taught of God, John 6. 45. taught to pray, Luke 11. 1. taught to profit, Isaiah 48. 17. taught to go, Hos. 11. 3. or else he will be utterly at a loss.] 2. He hath no strength for it. How weak is his heart? Ezek. 16. 30. He is presently tired. The Sabbath what a weariness is it? Ma. 1. 13. He is without strength, Rom. 5. 6. yea stark dead in sin, Eph. 2. 5.] 3. He hath no mind to it; he desires not the knowledge of God's ways, Job 21. 14. He doth not know them, and he doth not care to know them, Psalms 82. 5. He knows not, neither will he understand.] 4. He hath neither due instruments, nor materials for it. A man may as well hew the Marble without Tools; or Limn without Colours, or Instruments, or build without Materials, as perform any acceptable service without the graces of the Spirit, which are both the Materials, and Instruments in the work. Alms giving is not a service of God, but of vain glory, unless dealt forth by the hand of divine love. What is the prayer of the lips without grace in the heart, but the carcass without the life? What are all our confessions, unless they be the exercises of godly sorrow and unfeigned repentance? What our petitions, unless animated all along with holy desires, and faith in divine attributes and promises? What our praises and thanksgivings, unless from the Love of God, and a holy grattiude, and sense of God's mercies in the heart? So that a man may as well expect the trees should speak, or look for Logic from the brutes, or motion from the dead, as for any service holy and acceptable to God, from the unconverted. When the tree is evil, how can the fruit be good? Mat. 7. 18.

Secondly, To Bad purpose: The unconverted soul is a very cage of unclean birds, Rev. 18. 2. a Sepulcher full of Corruption and Rottenness, Mat. 23. 27. a loathsome carcass full of crawling Worms, and sending forth a hellish and most noisome favor in the nostrils of God. Psalms 14. 3. O dreadful case! Dost thou not yet see a change to be needful? would it not have grieved one, to have seen the golden consecrated Vessels of God's Temple turned into quaffing bowls for drunkenness, and polluted with the Idols service? Dan. 5. 2, 3. Was it such an abomination to the Jews, when Antiechus set up the picture of a Swine at the entrance of the temple? How much more abominable then would it have been to have had the very Temple itself turned into a Stable, or a Sty, and to have the holy of holies served like the house of Baul; to have the Image of God taken down, and be turned into a draught-house? 2 Kings 10. 27. This is the very case of the unregenerate; all thy Members a^e turned into instruments of unrighteousness, Rom. 6. 19. Servants of Satan; and thy in most powers into receptacles of uncleanness, Eph. 2. 2. Tit. 1. 15. You may see the goodly guests within, by what comes out. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornications, Theits, False witness, Blasphemies, &c. This black guard discovers what a Hell there is within.

Oh abuse unsufferable! to see a Heaven-born soul abased to the filthiest drudgery, to see the glory of God's creation, the chief of the ways of God, the Lord of the Universe, a lapping with the prodigal at the trough, or licking up with greediness the most loathsome vomit. Was it such a lamentation, to see those that did feed delicately, to sit desolate in the streets? and the precious Sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, to be esteemed as earthen Pitchers; and those that were clothed in Scarlet, to embrace dunghills? Lam. 4. 2, 5. And is it not much more fearful, to see the only thing that hath immortality in this lower world, and carries the stamp of God, to become as a vessel wherein there is no pleasure, Ier. 22. 28. (which is but the modest expression of the vessel, men put to the most sordid use.) Oh indignity intolerable! Better thou wert dashed in a thousand pieces, than continue to be abused to so filthy a service.

II. Not only man, but the whole visible creation is in vain without this. Beloved, God hath made all the visible creatures in heaven and earth for the service of man, and man only is the spokesman for all the rest. Man is in the universe, like the tongue in the body, which speaks for all the Members. The other creatures cannot praise their Maker, but by dumb signs and hints to man, that he should speak for them. Man is, as it were, the high Priest of God's creation, to offer the Sacrifice of praise for all his fellow creatures, Psal. 147. and 148. and 150. The Lord God expecteth a tribute of praise from all his works, Psalms 103. 2. now all the rest do bring in their tribute to man, and pay it in by his hand. So then, if man be false, and faithless, and selfish, God is wronged of all, and shall have no active glory from his works.

O dreadful thought to think of! That God should build such a world as this, and lay out such infinite power, and wisdom, and goodness, thereupon, and all in vain, and man should be guilty at last, of robbing, and Spoiling him of the glory of all. O think of this, while thou art unconverted, all the Offices of the creatures to thee are in vain; thy meat nourishes thee in vain, the Sun holds forth his light to thee in vain, the Stars, that serve thee in their courses by their most powerful, though hidden influence, Judges 5. 20. Hos. 2. 21, 22. do it in vain; thy Cloaths warm thee in vain; thy Beast carries thee in vain: in a word, the unwearied labor, and continual travel of the whole Creation (as to thee) is in vain. The service of all the creatures, that drudge for thee, and yield forth their strength unto thee (that therewith thou shouldst serve their Maker) is all but lost labor. Hence the whole Creation groaneth under the abuse of this unsanctified world. Rom. 8. 22. that pervert them to the service of their lusts, quite contrary to the very end of their Being.

III. Without this, thy Religion is in vain. Jam. 1. 26. All thy religious performances will be but lost; for they can neither please God, Rom. 8. 8. nor save thy soul. 1. Cor. 13. 2, 3. Which are the very ends of Religion. Be thy services never so specious, yet $\langle \diamond \rangle$ hath no pleasure in them, Isai. 1. 14. Mal. 1. 10. Is not that man's case dreadful, whose sacrifices are as Murder, and whose prayers are a breath of abomination? Isa. 66. 3. Prov. 28. 9. Many under convictions think they will set upon mending, and that a few prayers and alms will salve all again; but alas, sirs, while your hearts remain unsanctified, your duties will not pass. How punctual was Iebu? and yet all was rejected, because his heart was not upright, 2 Kings 10. with Hos. 1. 4. How blameless was Paul? and yet being unconverted all was but loss. Phil. 3. 6, 7. Men think they do much in attending God's Service, and are ready to twit him with it, Isa. 58. 3. Mat. 7. 22. and set him down so much their debtor, when as (their persons being unsanctified) their duties cannot be accepted.

O soul, do not think, when thy sins pursue thee, a little praying and reforming thy course will pacify God: thou must begin with thine heart. If that be not renewed, thou canst no more please God, than one that having unspeakably offended thee, should bring thee his vomit in a dish to pacify thee, or having fallen into the mire, should think with his loathed embraces to reconcile thee.

It is a great misery to labor in the fire. The Poets could not invent a worser Hell for Sisyphus than to be getting the Barrel still up the Hill, and then that it should presently fall down again and renew his labor. God threatens it, as the greatest of temporal judgments, that they should build and not inhabit, plant and not gather, and their labors should be eat up by strangers, Deut. 28. 30, 38, 39, 41. Is it so great a misery to lose our common labors, to sow in vain and build in vain? how much more to lose our pains in Religion to pray and hear, and fast in vain? This is an undoing and eternal loss. Be not deceived. If thou goest on in thy sinful state, though thou shouldst spread forth thine hands, God will hide his eyes; though thou make many prayers, he will not hear, Eccl. 1. 15. If a man without skill set about our work, and mar it in the doing, though he take much pains, we give him but small thanks. God will be worshipped after the due order, 1 Chron. 15. 13. If a servant do our work, but quite contrary to our order, he shall have rather stripes than praise. God's work must be done according to God's mind, or he will not be pleased; and this cannot be, except it be done with a holy heart, 2 Chron. 25. 2.

IV. Without this, thy hopes are in vain, Job 8. 12, 13. The Lord hath rejected thy Confidence, Ier. 2. 37.

First, Thy hopes of Comfort here are in vain. 'Tis not only necessary to the safety, but comfort of your condition, that you be converted. Without this you shall not know peace. Isai. 59. 8. Without the fear of God, you cannot have the comforts of the Holy Ghost, Acts 9. 31. God speaks peace only to his people, and to his Saints, Pal. 85. 8. If you have a false peace, continuing in your sins, 'tis not of God's speaking; and then you may guess the Author. Sin is a real Sickness, Isai. 1. 5. Yea the worst of sickness, 'tis a Leprosy in the head, Lev. 13. 44. the plague in the heart, 1 Kings 8. 38. 'tis brokenness in the bones, Psal. 51. 8. it pierceth, it racketh, it tormenteth, 1 Kings 10. 10. A man may as well expect ease, when his diseases are in their strength, or his bones out of joint, as true comfort, while in his sins.

O wretched man, that canst have no ease in this case, but what comes from the deadliness of the disease. You shall have the poor-sick man, saying in his lightness, he is well; when you see death in his face. He will needs up and about his business, when the very next step is like to be into the grave. The unsanctified often see nothing amiss, they think themselves whole, and cry not out for the Physician, but this shows the danger of their Case.

Sin doth naturally breed distempers and disturbances in the soul•• What a continual tempest and commotion is there in a discontēted mind? What an eating evil is inordinate care? What is passion but a very fever in the mind? What is lust but a fire in thē bones? What is pride but a deadly tympany; or covetousness but an un•atiabable and unsufferable thirst? Or malice and envy but venom in the very heart? Spiritual sloth is but a scurvy in the mind, and carnal security a mortal lethargy; and how can that soul have true comfort that is under so many diseases? But converting grace cures, and so eases the mind, and prepares the soul for a settled, standing, immortal peace. Great peace have they that love thy Commands, and nothing shall offend them, Psal 119. 165. They are the ways of wisdom that afford pleasure and peace, Prov. 3. 17. David had infinitely more pleasure in the word, than in all the delights of his Court, Psal. 119. 103, 127. The Conscience cannot be truly pacified, till soundly purified, Heb. 10. 22. Cursed is that peace, that is maintained in a way of sin, Deut. 29. 19, 20. Two sorts of peace are more to be dreaded than all the troubles in the world; peace with sin, and peace in sin.

Secondly, Thy hopes of Salvation hereafter are in vain: yea, worse than in vain, they are most injurious to God, most pernicious to thyself; there is death, desperation, blasphemy in the bowels of this hope. 1. There is death in it. Thy Confidence shall be rooted out of thy Tabernacles (God will up with it root and branch) it shall bring thee to the King of Terrors, *Job 18. 14. though thou mayest lean upon this house it will not stand. Job 8. 1•. but will prove like a ruinous building, which when a man trusts to; it falls down about his ears. 2. There is desperation in it. Where is the Hope of the Hypocrite, when God takes away his soul? Job 27. 8. Then there is an end forever of his hope. Indeed, the hope of the righteous hath an end, but then 'tis not a destructive, but a perfective end; his hope ends in fruition, others in frustration, Prov. 10. 28. The godly must say at death, It is finished, but the wicked, It is perished; and in too sad earnest bemoan himself, (as Job in a mistake) Where now is my hope? He hath destroyed me, I am gone, and my hope is removed like a tree, Job 19. 10. The righteous hath hope in his death, Prov. 14. 32. When nature is dying, his hopes are living, when his body is languishing, his hopes are flourishing; his hope is a living hope, 1 Pet. 1. 3. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 but others a dying, yea a damning, soul-undoing hope. When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish, and the hope of unjust men perisheth, Prov. 11. 7. It shall be cut off, and prove like the Spiders Web, Job 8. 14. which he spins out of his own bowels, but then comes death with the broom, and takes down all, and so there is an eternal end of his confidence, wherein he trusted. For the eyes of the wicked shall fail, and their hope shall be as the giving up of the Ghost, *Job 11. 20. Wicked men are settled in their carnal hope, and will not be beaten out of it. They hold it fast, they will not let it go. Yea but death will knock off their fingers. Though we cannot undeceive them, death and judgment will. When death strikes his dart through thy liver, it will let out thy soul and thy hopes together. The unsanctified have hope only in this life, 1 Cor. 15. 19. and therefore are of all men most miserable. When death comes, it lets them out into the amazing gulf of endless desperation. 3. There is blasphemy in it. To hope we shall be saved, though continuing unconverted, is to hope we shall prove God a liar. He hath told you, that so merciful and pitiful as he is, he will never save you notwithstanding, if you go on in ignorance, or a course of unrighteousness, Isa. 27. 11. 1. Cor. 6. 9. In a word, he he hath told you, that whatever you be or do, nothing shall avail you to Salvation without you be new creatures, Gal. 6. 15. Now to say God is merciful, and we hope he will save us nevertheless, is to say in effect, we hope God will not do as he saith. We may not set God's Attributes at variance. God is resolved to glorify mercy, but not with the prejudice of truth, as the presumptuous sinner will find to his everlasting sorrow.

Object. Why but we hope in Jesus Christ, we put our whole trust in God, and therefore doubt not but we shall be saved.

Ans. 1. This is not to hope in Christ, but against Christ. To hope to see the Kingdom of God, without being born again, to hope to find eternal life in the broad way, is to hope Christ will prove a false Prophet. 'Tis David's plea, I hope in thy word, Psalm 119. 81. but this hope is against the word. Shew me a word of Christ for thy hope, that he will save thee in thine ignorance, or profane neglects of his service, and I will never go to shake thy confidence.

2. God doth with abhorrence reject this hope: Those condemned in the Prophet, went on in their sins, yet (faith the Text) they will lean upon the Lord, Mic. 3. 11. God will not endure to be made a prop to men in their sins: The Lord rejected those presumptuous sinners, that went on still in their trespasses, and yet would stay themselves upon the God of Israel, Isa. 48. 1, 2. as a man would shake off the briars (as one said well) that cleaves to his garment.

3. If thy hope be anything worth, it will purify thee from thy sins, 1 John 3. 3. but cursed is that hope, which doth cherish men in their sins.

Object. Would you have us to despair?

Answ. You must despair of ever coming to Heaven as you are, Acts 2. 37. that is, while you remain unconverted. You must despair ever to see the face of God without holiness, but you must by no means despair of finding mercy, upon your thorough repentance and conversion; neither may you despair of attaining to repentance and conversion, in the use of God's means.

V. Without this, all that Christ hath done and suffered will be (as to you) in vain, John 13. 8. Tit. 2. 14. that is, it will no way avail to your salvation. Many urge this as a sufficient ground for their hopes, that Christ died for sinners: but I must tell you, Christ never died to save impenitent and unconverted sinners (so continuing) 2 Tim. 2. 19. A great Divine was wont, in his private dealings with souls, to ask two questions, 1. What hath Christ done for you? 2. What hath Christ wrought in you? Without the application of the Spirit in Regeneration, we can have no saving 〈◇〉 rest in the benefits of Redemption. I tell you from the Lord, Christ himself cannot save you, if you go on in this estate.

I. It were against his trust. The Mediator is the Servant of the Father, Isa. 42. 1. shows his commission from him, acts in his name, and pleads his command for his justification, John 10. 18, 36. John 6. 38, 40. And God hath committed all things to him, entrusted his own glory, and the salvation of his elect with him, Mat. 11. 27. John 17. 2. Accordingly, Christ gives his Father an account of both parts of his trust, before he leaves the world, John 17. 4, 6, 12. Now Christ should quite cross his Fathers glory, his greatest trust, if he should save men in their sins; for this were to overturn all his counsels, and to offer violence to all his attributes.

First, To overturn all his Councils; of which this is the order, that men should be brought through sanctification, to salvation, 2 Thes. 2. 13. He hath chosen them, that they should be holy, Eph. 1. 4. They are elected to pardon and life through sanctification, 1 Pet. 1. 2. If thou canst repeal the Law of God's immutable counsel, or corrupt him, whom the Father hath sealed, to go directly against his Commission, then and not otherwise, mayest thou get to Heaven in this condition. To hope that Christ will save thee while unconverted, is to hope that Christ will falsify his trust. He never did, nor will save one soul, but whom the Father hath given him in election, and drawn to him in effectual calling, John 6. 34, 37. Be assured, Christ will save none, in a way contrary to his Fathers will, John 6. 38.

Secondly, To offer violence to all his attributes.

1. To his Justice. For the righteousness of God's judgment lies, in rendering to all according to their works, Rom. 2. 5, 6. Now, should men sow to the flesh, and yet of the Spirit reap everlasting life, Gal. 6. 7, 8. where were the glory of divine Justice, since it should be given to the wicked according to the work of the righteous?

2. To his holiness. If God should not only save sinners, but save them in their sins, his most pure and strict holiness would be exceedingly defaced. The unsanctified is in the eyes of God's holiness, worse than a Swine or Viper, Mat. 23. 33. 2 Pet. 2. 23. Now what cleanly nature could endure to have the filthy Swine Bed and Board with him in his Parlour, or Bed-chamber? It would offer the extremist violence to the infinite purity of the divine nature, to have such to dwell with him. They cannot stand in his judgment, they cannot abide in his presence, Psalms 1. 5. Psalm 5. 4, 5. If holy David would not endure such in his house, no nor in his sight, Psalms 101. 3, 7. shall we think God will? Should he take men as they be from the Trough to the Table, from the Harlots lips, from the Sty and Draff, to the glory of Heaven, the world would think God were at no such a distance from sin, nor had such dislike of it, as we are told he hath• they would conclude, God were altogether such a one as themselves (as they wickedly did, but from the very forbearance of God, Psal. 50. 21.)

3. To his Veracity. For God hath declared from Heaven. That if any shall say he shall have peace, though' he should go on in the imagination of his heart: his wrath shall smoke against that man, Deut. 29. 19, 20. That they (only) that confess, and forsake their sins, shall find mercy, Prov. 28. 13. That they that shall enter into his Hill, must be of clean hands and a pure heart, Psal. 24. 3, 4. Where were God's truth, if notwithstanding all this, he should bring men to Salvation without Conversion? O desperate sinner, that darest to hope, that Christ will put the lie upon his Father, and nullify his word to save thee!

4. To his Wisdom. For this were to throw away the choicest mercies, on them that would not value them, nor were any way suited to them. First, they would not value them. The unsanctified sinner puts but little price upon God's great Salvation, Mat. 22. 5. He sets no more by Christ than the whole by the Physician, Matthew 9. 12. he prizes not his balm, values not his cure, tramples upon his blood, Heb. 10. 29. Now would it stand with wisdom, to force pardon and life, upon them that would give him no thanks for them? Will the all-wise God (when he hath forbidden us to do it) throw his holy things to Dogs, and his pearls to Swine, that would (as it were) but turn again, and rend him? Mat. 7. 6. This would make mercy to be despised indeed. Wisdom requires that life be given, in a way suitable to God's honor, and that God provide for the securing his own glory, as well as Man's felicity. It would be dishonorable to God, to set his Jewels on the snouts of Swine (continuing such) and to bestow his choicest riches on them, that have more pleasure in their swill, than the heavenly delights that he doth offer. God should lose the praise and glory of his grace, if he should cast it away on them, that were not only unworthy, but unwilling. Secondly, They are no way suited to them. The Divine Wisdom is seen in suiting things each to other, the means to the end, the object to the faculty, the quality of the gift to the capacity of the receiver. Now, if Christ should bring the unregenerate sinner to Heaven, he could take no more felicity there, than a Beast if you should bring him into a beautiful room, to the Society of learned men, and a well-furnished Table: when as the poor thing had much rather be grazing with his fellow-brutes. Alas, what should an unsanctified creature do in Heaven! He could take no content there, because nothing suits him. The place doth not suit him, he would be but piscis in arido, quite out of his element, as a Swine in the parlor, or a Fish out of water. The Company doth not suit him. What communion hath darkness with light, corruption with perfection? Filth and rottenness, with glory and immortality? The employment doth not suit him: The Anthems of Heaven fit not his mouth, suit not his ear. Canst thou charm thy Beast with Music? Or wilt thou bring him to thy Organ, and expect that he should make thee melody, or keep time with the skilful Choir? Or had he skill, he would have no will, and so could find no pleasure, no more than the nauseous stomach in the meat, on which it hath newly surfeited. Spread thy Table with delicates before a languishing Patient, and it will be but a very offense. Alas, if the poor man think a Sermon long, and say of a Sabbath, What a weariness is it? Mal. 1. 13. how miserable would he think it, to be held to it to all eternity? 5. To his immutability, or else to his Omniscency, Omnipotency. For this is enacted in the Conclave of Heaven, and enrolled in the decrees of the Court above, that none but the pure in heart shall ever see God, Mat. 5. 8. This is laid up with him, and sealed among his Treasures. Now if Christ, yet, bring any to Heaven unconverted, either he must get them in without his Fathers knowledge, and then where is his Omniscency? Or against his will, and then where were his Omnipotency? Or he must change his will, and then where were his Immutability?

Sinner, wilt thou not yet give up thy vain hope of being saved in this condition? Saith Bildad, Shall the earth be forsaken for thee? Or the rocks moved out of their place? Job 18. 4. May not I, much more reason so with thee? Shall the Laws of Heaven be reversed for thee? Shall the everlasting foundations be overturned for thee? Shall Christ put out the eye of his Fathers Omniscency, or shorten the arm of his eternal power for thee? Shall divine Justice be violated for thee? or the brightness of the glory of his holiness be blemished for thee? Oh the impossibility, absurdity, blasphemy, that is in such a confidence! To think Christ will ever save thee in this condition, is to make thy Savior to become a Sinner, and to do more wrong to the infinite Majesty, than all the wicked on Earth, or Devils in Hell ever did, or could. And yet wilt thou not give up such a blasphemous hope?

II. Against his word. We need not say, Who shall ascend into Heaven, to bring down Christ from above? Or who shall descend into the deep, to bring up Christ from beneath? The word is nigh us, Rom. 10. 6, 7, 8. Are you agreed that Christ shall end the controversy? Hear then his own words; Except you be converted you shall in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 18. 3. You must be born again, John 3. 7. If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me, John 13. 8. Repent or perish, Luke 13. 3. One word, one would think, were enough from Christ; but how often and earnestly doth he reiterate it, verily, verily, verily, verily, except a man, be born again, he shall not see the Kingdom of God, John 3. 3, 5. Yea, he doth not only assert, but prove the necessity of the new birth, viz. from the fleshliness and filthiness of man's first birth, John 3. 6. by reason of which, man is no more fit for Heaven than the Beast is for the Chamber of the Kings presence. And wilt thou yet believe thine own presumptuous confidence, directly against Christ's words? He must go quite against the Law of his Kingdom, and Rule of his Judgment, to save thee in this estate.

III. Against his Oath. He hath lifted up his hand to heaven, he hath sworn, that those that remain in unbelief, and know not his ways (that is, are ignorant of them, or disobedient to them) shall not enter into his rest, Psal 95. 11. Heb. 3. 18. and wilt thou not yet believe, O sinner, that he is in earnest? Canst thou hope he will be forsworn for thee? The Covenant of Grace is confirmed by an Oath, and sealed by blood, Heb. 6. 17. Heb. 9. 16, 18, 19. Mat. 26. 28. But all must be made void, and another way to heaven found out, if thou be saved, living and dying un sanctified. God is come to his lowest and last terms with man, and hath condescended as far as with honor he could, hath set up his Pillars with a Ne plus ultra. Men cannot be saved, while unconverted, except they could get another Covenant made, and the whole frame of the Gospel, (which was established forever, with such dreadful solemnities) quite altered; and would not this be a distracted hope?

IV. Against his honor. God will so show his love to the sinner as withal to show his hatred to sin. Therefore he that names the name of Jesus must depart from iniquity, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and deny all ungodliness; and he that hath hope of life by Christ must purify himself as he is pure, 1 John 3. 3. Tit. 2. 12. otherwise Christ would be thought a favourer of sin. The Lord Jesus would have all the world to know, though he pardon sin, he will not protect it. If holy David shall say, Depart from me all you workers of iniquity, Psal. 6. 8. and shall shut the doors against them, Psal. 101. 7. shall not such much more expect it from Christ's holiness? Would it be for his honor, to have the dogs to the table? or to lodge the swine with his children? or to have Abraham's bosom to be a nest of Vipers.

V. Against his Offices. God hath exalted him to be a Prince and a Savior, Acts 5. 31. he should act against both, should he save men in their sins. It is the Office of a King.

Parcere subjectis, & debellare superbos.

To be a terrer to evil doers and a praise to them that do well, Rom. 13. 3, 4. He is a Minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath on him that doth evil. Now should Christ favor the ungodly (so continuing) and take those to reign with him that would not that he should reign over them, Luke 19. 27. this were quite against his Office: He therefore reigns, that he may put his enemies under his feet, 1 Cor. 15. 25. now should he lay them in his bosom he should cross the end of his regal power. It belongs to Christ, as a King to subdue the hearts, and slay the lusts of his chosen, Psal 45. 5. Psal 110. 3. What King would take the rebels, in open hostility, into his Court? What were this but to betray Life, Kingdom, Government and all together? If Christ be a King, he must have homage, honor, subjection, &c. Mat. 1. 6. Now to save men while in their natural enmity, were to obscure his Dignity, lose his Authority, bring contempt on his Government, and sell his dear-bought rights for naught.

Again, as Christ should not be a Prince, so neither a Savior, if he should do this. For his Salvation is spiritual, he is called Jesus, because he saves his people from their sins, Mat. 1. 21. So that should he save them in their sins, he should be neither Lord nor Jesus. To save men from the punishment, and not from the power of sin, were to do his work by halves, and be an imperfect Savior. His Office, as the Deliverer, is to turn away ungodliness from Jacob, Rom. 11. 26. He is sent to bless men in turning them from their iniquities, Acts 3. 26. to make an end of sin, Dan. 9. 24. so that he should destroy his own designs, and nullify his offices, to save men abiding in their unconverted estate.

Application, Arise then, what meanest thou O sleeper? Awake, O secure sinner, lest thou be consumed in thine iniquities, Say as the Lepers, If we sit here we shall die, 2 Kings 7. 3, 4. Verily, it is not more certain that thou art now out of hell, than that thou shalt speedily be in it, except thou repent and be converted, there is but this one door for thee to escape by. Arise then, O sluggard, and shake off thine excuses. How long wilt thou slumber, and fold thine hands to sleep? Prov. 6. 10, 11. Wilt thou lie down in the midst of the Sea, or sleep on the top of the mast? Prov. 23. 34. There is no remedy; but thou must either turn or burn. There is an unchangeable necessity of the change of thy condition, except thou art resolved to abide the worst of it, and try it out with the Almighty. If thou lovest thy life, O man, arise and come away. Methinks I see the Lord Jesus laying the merciful hands of an holy violence upon thee; methinks he carries it like the Angels to Let, Gen. 19. 15, &c. Then the Angels stoned Lot, saying, Arise, lest thou be consumed, And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, the Lord being merciful unto him, and they brought him without the City and said, Escape for thy life. stay not in all the plain, escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

Oh how willful will thy destruction be, if thou shouldst yet harden thyself in thy sinful states But none of you can say, but you have had fair warning. Yet methinks I cannot tell how to leave you so: It is not enough to me to have delivered my own soul. What, shall I go away without my errand? Will none of you arise, and follow me? Have I been all this while speaking to the wind? Have I been charming the deaf Adder, or allaying the tumbling Ocean with arguments? Do I speak to the trees or rocks, or to men? to the tombs and monuments of the dead, or to a living auditory? If you be men, and not senseless stocks, stand still, and consider whither you are going: if you have the reason and understanding of men, dare not to run into the flames, and fall into hell with your eyes open: but bethink yourselves, and set to the work of repentance. What! men, and yet run into the pit, when the very beasts will not be forced in! What, endowed with reason, and yet dally with death and hell, and the vengeance of the Almighty! Are men herein distinguished from the very brutes, that they have no foresight of, and care to provide for the things to come; and will you not hasten your escape from eternal torments? O show yourselves men, and let reason prevail with you; Is it a reasonable thing for you to contend against the Lord your Maker? Isa. 45. 9. or to harden yourselves against his word? Job 9. 4. as though the strength of Israel would lie? 1. Sam. 15. 29. Is it reasonable that an understanding creature should lose, yea live quite against the very end of his Being, and be as a broken pitcher, only fit for the dunghill? Is it tolerable, that the only thing in this world that God hath made capable of knowing his will, and bringing him glor•, should yet live in ignorance of his Maker, and be unserviceable to his use; yea should be engaged against him, and spit his venom in the face of his Creator? Hear, O Heavens, and give Ear, O earth, and let the Creatures without sense be judge, if this be reason, that man, when God hath nourished and brought him up, should rebel against him, Isa. 1. 2. Judge in our own selves: Is it a reasonable undertaking, for briars and thorns, to set themselves in Battle against the devouring sire? Isa. 27. 4. or for the Potsherd of the earth to strive with his Maker? If you will say, this is not reason, surely the eye of reason, is quite put out. And if this be reason, then there is no reason that you should continue as you be, but 'tis all the reason in the world, you should forthwith repent and turn.

What shall I say? I could spend myself in this argument. Oh that you would but hearken to me! that you would presently set upon a new course! will you not be made clean? When shall it once be? What! will nobody be persuaded? Reader, shall I prevail with thee for one? Wilt thou sit down and consider the forementioned arguments, and debate it, whether it be not best to turn? Come and let us reason together. Is it good for thee to be here? Wilt thou fit still, till the tide come in upon thee? Is it good for thee to try whether God will be so good as his word? and to harden thyself in a conceit, that all is well with thee, while thou remainest un sanctified.

But I know you will not be persuaded, but the greatest part will be as they have been, and do as they have done. I know the drunkard will to his vomit again, and the deceiver will to his deceit again, and the lustful wanton to his dalliance again. Alas, that I must leave you where you were; in your ignorance or looseness, or in your lifeless formality and customary devotions! however, I will sit down and bemoan my fruitless labors, and spend some sighs over m• perishing hearers.

O distracted sinners! What will their end be? What will they do in the day of visitation? Whither will they flee for help? Where will they leave their glory? Isa. 10. 3. how powerfully hath sin bewitched them? How effectually hath the God of this world blinded them? How strong is their delusion? How uncircumcised their ears? How obdurate their hearts? Satan hath them at his beck. But how long may I call, and can get no answer? I may dispute with them year after year, and they will give me the hearing, and that is all. They must and will have their sins, say what I will. Though I tell them there is death in the Cup, yet they will take it up. Though I tell them 'tis the broad way, and endeth in destruction, yet they will go on in it. I warn them, yet cannot win them. Sometimes I think, the mercies of God will melt them, and his winning invitations will overcome them: but I find them as they were: Sometimes, that the terror of the Lord will persuade them; yet neither will this do it. They will approve the word, like the Sermon, commend the Preacher; but they will yet live as they did. They will not deny me, yet they will not obey me. They will flock to the word of God, and sit before me as his people, and hear my words; but they will not do them. They value and will plead for Ministers; and I am to them as the lovely Song of one that hath a pleasant voice; yet I cannot get them to come under Christ's Yoke. They love me, and will be ready to say they will do anything for me; but for my life, I cannot persuade them to leave their sins to forgo their Evil Company, their intemperance, their unjust gains, &c. I cannot prevail with them, to set up prayer in their Families and Closets, yet they will promise me, like the forward Son, that said, I go Sir, but went not. Mat. 21. 30. I cannot persuade them to learn the principles of Religion, though else they will die without knowledge, Job 36. 12. I tell them their misery; but they will not believe but 'tis well enough; If I tell them particularly I fear for such reasons their State is bad, they will judge me censorious; or if they be at present a little awakened, are quickly lull'd asleep by Satan again, and have lost the sense of all.

Alas for my poor hearers! Must they perish at last by hundreds, when Ministers would so fain save them? What course shall I use with them that I have not tried? What shall I do for the daughter of my people? Jer. 9. 7. O Lord God help. Alas shall I leave them thus? If they will not hear me; yet do thou hear me. Oh that they might yet live in thy sight! Lord save them, or else they perish. My heart would melt to see their houses on fire about their ears, when they were fast asleep in their Beds: and shall not my soul be moved within me, to see them falling into endless perdition? Lord have compassion, and save them out of the burning. Put forth thy divine power, and the work will be done: but as for me I cannot prevail.

Chap. IV. Showing the Marks of the Unconverted.

WHILE we keep aloof in generals there is little fruit to be expected. It is the hand-fight that does execution. David is not awakened by the Prophet's hovering at a distance, in parabolical insinuations: he is forced to close with him, and tell him home, Thou art the man. Few will, in words, deny the necessity of the new Birth; But they have a self deluding confidence, that the work is not now to do. And because they know themselves free from that gross hypocrisy, that doth take up Religion merely for a color to deceive others, and for the covering of wicked designs: they are confident of their sincerity, and suspect not that more close hypocrisy (where the greatest danger lies) by which a man deceiveth his own soul, I am. 1. 26. But man's deceitful heart is such a matchless cheat, and self delusion, so reigning and so fatal a disease that I know not whether be the greater, the difficulty, or the displicency, or the necessity of the undeceiving work that I am now upon. Alas for my unconverted hearers! They must be undeceived, or undone; but how shall this be effected? hic labor, hoc opus est.

Help, O all-searching light, and let thy discerning eye discover the rotten foundation of the self-deceiver; and lead me, O Lord God, as thou didst thy Prophet, into the Chambers of Imagery, and dig brough the wall of Sinners hearts, and discover the hidden abominations that are lking out of ⟨...⟩ the dark. O send thine Angel before me, to ⟨◇⟩ undry Wards of their hearts, as thou didst before Peter, and make ever the Iron G••es to fly open of their own accord. And as Jonathan no sooner tasted the Hon•y, but his eyes were •lightened; so grant O Lord, that when the poor decei•ed ••ls with whom I have to do, shall cast their eyes upon the•e lin•s, their minds may be illuminated, and their consciences convinced and awakened, that they may see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and be converted, and thou shalt heal them.

This must be premised, before we proceed to the discovery, that it is most certain men may have a confident persuasion, that their hearts and states be good, and yet be unsound. Hear the Truth himself, who shows in Laodicea's case, that men may be wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked, and yet not know it, yea they may be confident they are rich and increased in grace, Rev. 3. 17. There is a generation that is pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness, Prov. 30. 12. who better persuaded of his Case, than Paul, while yet he remained unconverted? Rom. 7. 9. So that they are miserably deceived, that take a strong confidence, for a sufficient evidence. They that have no better proof, than barely a strong persuasion, that they are converted, are certainly as yet strangers to Conversion.

But to come more close; as it was said of the adherents of Antichrist, so here; some of the unconverted carry their Marks in their foreheads, more openly; and some in their hands, more covertly. The Apostle reckons up some, upon whom he writes the sentence of Death, as in these dreadful Catalogues, which I beseech you to attend with all diligence, Eph. 5. 5, 6. For this you know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an Idolater, hath an inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the Children of disobedience. Rev. 21. 8. But the fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable, and Murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Know you not, that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor idolaters and adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, or extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God? See Gal. 5. 19, 20, 21. Woe to them that have their names written in these bed-rolls: such may know, as certainly as if God had told it them from Heaven, that they are unsanctified, and under an impossibility of being saved in this condition.

There are then these several sorts, that, past all dispute, are unconverted, they carry their marks in their foreheads.

1. The unclean. These are ever reckoned among the Goats, and have their Names, whoever be left out, in all the forementioned Catalogues, Eph. 5. 5. Rev. 21. 8. 1 Cor. 5. 9, 10.

2. The Covetous. These are ever branded for Idolaters, and the Doors of the Kingdom are shut against them by Name, Eph. 5. 5. Col. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.

3. Drunkards. Not only such as drink away their reason, but withal, yea, above all, such as are too strong for strong drink. The Lord fills his mouth with woes against these, and declares them to have no inheritance in the Kingdom of God, Isa. 5. 11, 12, 22. Gal. 5. 21.

4. Liars. The God that cannot lie hath told them that there is no place for them in his Kingdom, no entrance into his hill; but their portion is with the Father of lies (whose children they are) in the Lake of burnings, Psal. 15. 1, 2. Rev. 21. 8, 27. John 8. 44. Prov. 6. 17.

5. Swearers. The end of these, without deep and speedy repentance, is swift destruction, and most certain and unavoidable condemnation, I am. 5. 12. Zech. 5. 1, 2, 3.

6. Railers and Back-biters, that love to take up a reproach against their Neighbor, and fling all the dirt they can in his face, or else wound him secretly behind his back, Psal. 15. 1, 3. 1 Cor. 6. 10. 1 Cor. 5. 11.

7. Thieves. Extortioners, Oppressors, that grind the poor, over-reach their Brethren, when they have them at an advantage, these must know, that God is the avenger of all such, 1 Thes. 4. 6. Hear, O ye false and purloining and wastful servants: Hear, O ye deceitful tradesmen, hear your sentence. God will certainly hold his door against you, and turn your treasures of unrighteousness into the treasures of wrath, and make your ill-gotten silver and gold, to torment you like burning Metal in your Bowels, 1 Cor. 6. 9. 10. James 5. 2, 3.

8. All that do ordinarily live in the profane neglect of God's Worship, that hear not his word, that call not on his name, that restrain prayer before God, that mind not their own, nor their families souls, but live without God in the world, John. 8. 47. John. 15. 4. Psal. 14. 4. Psal. 79. 6. Eph. 2. 12. and 4. 18.

9. Those that are frequenters and lovers of evil company. God hath declared, he will be the destruction of all such, and that they shall never enter into the hill of his rest, Prov. 13. 20. Psalm 15. 4. Prov. 9. 6.

10. Scoffers at Religion, that make a scorn of precise walking, and mock at the messengers and diligent servants of the Lord, and at their holy profession, and make themselves merry with the weakness and failings of professors: Hear, ye despisers, hear your dreadful doom, Prov. 19. 29. 2 Chron. 36. 16. Prov. 3. 34.

Sinner, consider diligently, whether thou art not to be found in one of these ranks; for if this be thy case thou art in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity; for all these do carry their marks in their foreheads, and are undoubtedly the sons of death.

And if so, the Lord pity our poor congregations; Oh how little a number will be left, when these ten sorts are set out! Alas on how many doors, on how many faces must we write, Lord have mercy upon us! Sirs, what shift do you make to keep up your confidence of your good estate, when God from Heaven declares against you, and pronounces you in a state of damnation? I would reason with you, 〈◇〉 God with them; How canst thou say, I am not polluted? Jer. 2. 23. See thy way in the valley, know what thou hast done. Man, is not thy conscience privy to thy tricks of deceit, to thy chamber pranks, to thy way of lying? Yea, are not thy friends, thy family, thy neighbors, witnesses to thy profane neglects of God's worship, to thy covetous practices, to thy envious and malicious carriage? may not they point at thee, as thou goest, there goes a gaming Prodigal; there goes a drunken Nabal, a companion of evil-doors; there goes a Railer, or a Scoffer, a loose-liver? Beloved, God hath written it, as with a Sun-beam, in the book out of which you must be judged, that these are not the spots of his Children, and that none such (except renewed by converting grace) shall ever escape the damnation of Hell.

Oh that such of you would now be persuaded to repent and turn from all your transgressions; or else iniquity will be your ruin! Ezek. 18. 30. Alas for poor hardened sinners! Must I leave you at last where you were? Must I leave the tipler still at the Ale-bench? Must I leave the wanton still at his dalliance? Must I leave the malicious still in his venom? And the drunkard still at his vomit? However you must know that you have been warned, and that I am clear of your blood. And whether men will hear, or whether they will forbear, I will leave these Scriptures with them, either as thunderbolts to awaken them, or as searing Irons to harden them to a reprobate sense, Psal. 68. 21. God shall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such a one, as goeth on still in his trespasses. Prov. 29. 1. He that being often reprov'd hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. Prov. 1. 24, &c. Because I have called, and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded, &c. I will mock at your calamity—when your destruction cometh as a whirlwind.

And now I imagine, many will begin to bless themselves, and think all is well, because they cannot be spotted with the grosser evils above mentioned. But I must further tell you, that there are another sort of unsanctified persons, that carry not their marks in their foreheads, but more secretly and covertly in their hands. These do frequently deceive themselves and others, and pass for good Christians, when they are all the while unsound at bottom. Many pass undiscovered, till death and judgment bring all to light. Those self-deceivers seem to come even to Heaven's gate with confidence of their admission, and yet are turned off at last, Mat. 7. 22. Brethren, Beloved, I beseech you deeply to lay to heart, and firmly to retain this awakening consideration: That Multitudes miscarry by the hand of some secret sin, that is not only hidden from others but (for want of observing their own hearts) even from themselves. A man may be free from open pollutions, and yet die at last by the fatal hand of some unobserved iniquity. And there be these twelve hidden sins, by which souls go down by numbers into the Chambers of death. These you must search carefully for, and take them as black marks (wherever they be found) discovering a graceless and unconverted estate. And as you love your lives, read carefully, with a holy jealousy of yourselves, lest you should be the persons concerned.

1. Gross Ignorance. Ah how many poor souls doth this sin kill in the dark, Hos. 4. 6. while they think verily they have good hearts, and are in the ready way to Heaven! This is the murderer that dispatches thousands in a silent manner, when (poor hearts!) they suspect nothing, and see not the hand that mischiefs them. You shall find whatever excuses you have for ignorance, that 'tis a soul-undoing, evil, Isa. 27. 11. 2 Thes. 1. 8. 2 Cor. 4. 3. Ah would it not have pitted a man's heart to have seen that woeful spectacle, when the poor Protestants were shut up a multitude together in a Barn, and a Butcher comes with his inhumane hands warm in human blood, and leads them one by one blind-fold to a Block, where he slew them (poor Innocents!) one after another by the scores in cold blood? But how much more should our hearts bleed, to think of the hundreds in great Congregations, that ignorance doth butcher in secret, and lead them blind-fold to the Block? Beware this be none of your case. Make no pleas for ignorance. If you spare that sin, know that that will not spare you. Will a man keep a Murderer in his Bosom?

2. Secret reserves in closing with Christ. To forsake all for Christ, to hate father and mother, yea, and a man's own life for him, this is a hard saying, Luke 14. 26. Some will do much, but they will not be of the Religion that will undo them; they never come to be entirely devoted to Christ, nor fully to resign to him: They must have the sweet sin: They mean to do themselves no harm: They have secret exceptions, for Life, Liberty, or Estate. Many take Christ thus hand over head, and never consider his self denying terms, nor cast up the cost; and this error in the foundation mars all, and secretly ruins them forever, Luke 14. 28. Mat. 13. 21.

3. Formality in Religion. Many stick in the bark, and rest in the outside of Religion, and in the external performances of holy duties, Mat. 23. 25. and this oftentimes doth most effectually deceive men, and doth more certainly undo them, than open looseness; as it was in the Pharisees case, Mat. 23. 31. They hear, they fast, they pray, they give alms, and therefore will not believe but their Case is good, Luke 18. 11. whereas resting in the work done, and coming short of the heart-work, and the inward power and vitals of Religion, they fall at last into the burning, from the flattering hopes, and confident persuasions of their being in the ready way to Heaven, Mat. 7. 22, 23. Oh dreadful case; when a man's Religion shall serve only to harden him, and effectually to delude and deceive his own Soul•

4. The prevalency of false ends in holy duties. Mat. 23. 25. This was the bane of the Pharisees. Oh how many a poor soul is undone by this, and drops into Hell, before he discerns his mistake! He performs good duties, and so thinks all is well, and perceives not that he is actuated by carnal Motives all the while. It is too true that even with the truly sanctified, many carnal ends will oftentimes creep in; but they are the matter of his hatred and humiliation, and never come to be habitually prevalent with him, and to bear the greatest sway, Rom. 14. 7. But now when the main thing that doth ordinarily carry a man out to religious duties, shall be some carnal end, as to satisfy his conscience, to get the repute of being religious, to be seen of men, to show his own gifts and parts, to avoid the reproach of a profane and irreligious person, or the like; this discovers an unsound heart, Hos. 10. 1. Zech. 7. 5, 6. O Christians, if you would avoid self-deceit, see that you mind, not only your acts, but withal, yea, above all, your ends.

5. Trusting in their own righteousness, Luk. 18. 9. This is a soul undoing mischief, Rom. 10. 3. When men do trust in their own righteousness, they do indeed reject Christ's. Beloved, you had need be watchful on every hand, for, not only your sins, but your duties, may undo you. It may be you never thought of this, but so it is, that a man may as certainly miscarry by his seeming righteousness, and supposed graces, as by gross sins; and that is when a man doth trust to these as his righteousness before God, for the satisfying his justice, appeasing his wrath, procuring his favor, and obtaining of his own pardon: for this is to put Christ out of office, and make a Savior of our own duties and graces. Beware of this, O professors; you are much in duties, but this one fly will spoil all the Ointment. When you have done most, and best, be sure to go out of yourselves to Christ, reckon your own righteousness but rags, Psalms 143. 2. Phil. 3. 8. Isa. 64. 6. Neh. 13. 22.

6. A secret enmity against the strictness of Religion. Many moral persons, punctual in their formal devotion, have yet a bitter enmity against preciseness, and hate the life and power of Religion, Phil. 3. 6. compared with Acts 9. 1. They like not this forwardness, nor that men should keep such a stir in Religion. They condemn the strictness of Religion, as singularity, indiscretion, and intemperate zeal, and with them a lively Preacher, or lively Christian, is but a heady fellow. These men love not holiness, as holiness, (for then they would love the height of holiness) and therefore are undoubtedly rotten at heart, whatever good opinion they have of themselves.

7. The resting in a certain pitch of Religion. When they have so much as will save them (as they suppose) they look no further, and so show themselves short of true Grace, which will ever put men upon aspiring to further perfection. Phil. 3. 13. Pro. 4. 18.

8. The predominant love of the World. This is the sure evidence of an unsanctified heart, Mar. 10. 37. 1 John 2. 15.

But how close doth this sin lurk oftentimes under a fair covert of forward profession? Luke 8. 14. Yea such a power of deceit is there in this sin, that many times when everybody else can see the man's worldliness, and covetousness, he cannot see it himself, but hath so many colors, and excuses, and pretences for his eagerness, on the world, that he doth blind his own eyes, and perish in his self-deceit. How many professors be here, with whom the world hath more of their hearts and affections than Christ? Who mind earthly things, and thereby are evidently after the flesh, and like to end in destruction? Rom. 8. 5. Phil. 3. 19. Yet ask these men; and they will tell you confidently, they prize Christ above all, God forbid else! and see not their own earthly mindedness for want of a narrow observation of the workings of their own hearts. Did they but carefully search, they would quickly find that their greatest content is in the world, Luke 12. 19. and their greatest care and main endeavor to get and secure the world, which are the certain discovery of an unconverted sinner. May the professing part of the world take earnest heed, that they perish not by the hand of this sin unobserved. Men may be, and often are kept off from Christ, as effectually, by the inordinate love of lawful comforts, as by the most unlawful courses, Mat. 22. 5. Luke 14. 18, 19, 20, 24.

9. Reigning Malice and Envy against those that disrespect them, or are injurious to them, 1 John 2. 9, 11. O how do many that seem to be religious remember injuries, and carry grudges, and will return men as good as they bring, rendering evil for evil, loving to take revenge, wishing evil to them that wrong them, directly against the rule of the Gospel, the pattern of Christ, and the nature of God, Rom. 12. 14, 17. 1 Pet. 2. 21, 23. Neh. 9. 17. Doubtless where this evil is kept boiling in the heart, and is not hated, resisted, mortified, but doth habitually prevail, that person is in the very gall of bitterness, and in a state of death, Mat. 18. 34, 35. 1 John 3. 14, 15.

Reader, doth nothing of this touch thee? Art thou in none of the forementioned Ranks? O search and search again; take thy heart solemnly to task. Woe unto thee, if after all thy profession thou shouldst be found under the power of ignorance, lost in formality, drowned in earthly mindedness, envenomed with malice, exalted in an opinion of thine own righteousness, leavened with hypocrisy, and carnal ends in God's service, imbittered against strictness: this would be a sad discovery that all thy Religion were in vain. But I must proceed.

10. Unmortified Pride. When men love the praise of men, more than the praise of God; and set their hearts upon men's esteem, applause and approbation, it is most certain they are yet in their sins, and strangers to true conversion. John 12. 43. Gal. 1. 10. When men see not, nor complain of, nor groan under the pride of their own hearts, it's a sign they are stark dead in sin. O how secretly doth this sin live and reign in many hearts, and they know it not, but are very strangers to themselves! John 9. 40.

11. The prevailing love of pleasure, 2 Tim. 3. 4. This is a black mark. When men give the flesh the liberty that it craves, and pamper, and please it, and do not deny and restrain it: when their great delight is in gratifying their bellies, and pleasing their senses; whatever appearance they may have of Religion, all is unsound, Rom. 16. 18. Tit. 3. 3. A flesh-pleasing life, cannot be pleasing to God, They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, and are careful to cross it, and keep it under, as their enemy, Gal. 5. 24. 1 Cor. 9. 25, 26, 27.

12. Carnal security, or a presumptuous and ungrounded confidence, that their condition is already good, Rev. 3. 17. Many cry, Peace and safety, when sudden destruction is coming upon them, 1. Thes. 5. 3. This was that which kept the foolish Virgins sleeping, when they should have been working; upon their Beds, when they should have been at the Markets, Mat. 25. 5, 10. Prov. 10. 5. They perceived not their want of Oil, till the Bridegroom was come; and while they went to buy, the door was shut. And O that these foolish Virgins had no successors! where is the place, yea where is the house almost, where these do not dwell? Men are willing to cherish in themselves, upon never so slight grounds, a hope that their condition is good, and so look not out after a change, and by this means perish in their sins. Are you at peace? Shew me upon what grounds your peace is maintained. Is it a Scripture peace? Can you show the distinguishing marks of a sound Believer? Can you evidence that you have something more than any Hypocrite in the world ever had? If not, fear this peace more than any trouble; and know that a carnal peace doth commonly prove the most mortal enemy of the poor soul; and while it smiles and kisses, and speaks it fair, doth fatally smite it, as it were under the fifth rib.

By this time methinks I hear my Reader crying out with the Disciples, Who then shall be saved? Set out from among our Congregations all those ten ranks of the profane, on the one hand, and then besides, take out all these twelve sorts of close and self-deceiving Hypocrites on the other hand, and tell me then, whether it be not a remnant that shall be saved. How few will be the Sheep that shall be left, when all these shall be separated, and set among the Goats? For my part, of all my numerous hearers, I have no hope to see any of them in Heaven, that are to be found among these two and twenty sorts that are here mentioned, except by sound conversion they be brought into another condition.

Application. And now, Conscience, do thine office, Speak out, and speak home to him that heareth or readeth these lines. If thou find any of these marks upon him, thou must pronounce him utterly unclean, Levite. 13. 44. Take not up a lie into thy mouth: speak not peace to him, to whom God speaks no peace. Let not lust bribe thee, or self-love, or carnal prejudice blind thee. I subpoena thee from the Court of Heaven, to come and give in evidence: I require thee in the name of God to go with me to the search of the suspected house. As thou wilt answer it at thy peril, give in a true report of the state and case of him that readeth this Book. Conscience, wilt thou altogether hold thy peace at such a time as this? I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us the truth. Mat. 26. 63. Is the man converted, or is he not? Doth he allow himself in any way of sin, or doth he not? Doth he truly love, and please, and prize, and delight in God above all other things, or not? Come put it to an issue.

How long shall this soul live at uncertainties? Oh Conscience, bring in thy verdict. Is this man a new man, or is he not? How dost thou find it? Hath there passed a thorough and mighty change upon him, or not? when was the time, where was the place, or what was the means, by which this thorough change of the new birth was wrought in his Soul? Speak Conscience: Or if thou canst not tell time and place, canst thou show Scripture Evidence, that the work is done? Hath the man been ever taken off from his false bottom, from the false hopes, and false peace wherein once he trusted? Hath he been deeply convinced of sin, and of his lost and undone condition, and brought out of himself, and off from his sins, to give up himself entirely to Jesus Christ; Or dost thou not find him to this day under the power of ignorance, or in the mire of profaneness? Hast thou not taken upon him the gains of unrighteousness? Dost not thou find him a stranger to prayer, a neglecter of the word, a lover of this present world? Dost not thou often catch him in a lie? Dost not thou find his heart fermented with malice, or burning with lust, or going after his covetousness? Speak plainly to all the forementioned particulars: Canst thou acquit this man, this woman, from being any of the two and twenty sorts here described? If he be found with any of them, set him aside, his portion is not with the Saints. He must be converted and made a new creature, or else he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

Beloved, be not your own betrayers, do not deceive your own hearts, nor set your hands to your own ruin, by a willful blinding of yourselves. Set up a tribunal in your own breasts. Bring the word and conscience together. To the Law and to the Testimony, Isa. 8. 20. Hear what the word concludes of your estates. O follow the search, till you have found how the case stands. Mistake here, and perish. And such is the treachery of the Heart, the subtlety of the Tempter, and the deceitfulness of Sin, Ier. 17. 9. 2 Cor. 11. 3. Heb. 3. 13. all conspire to flatter and deceive the poor soul, and withal so common and easy it is to be mistaken, that it's a thousand to one but you will be deceived, unless you be very careful, and thorough, and impartial in the enquiry into your spiritual conditions. Oh therefore ply your work, go to the bottom, search as with candles, weigh you in the balance, come to the Standard of the Sanctuary, bring your Coin to the Touch-stone. You have the archest Cheats in the world to deal with: a world of counterfeit Coin is going, happy is he that takes no Counters for Gold. Satan is master of deceits, he can draw to the life: he is perfect in the trade: there is nothing but he can imitate. You cannot wish for any Grace, but he can fit you to a hair with a Counterfeit. Trade wearily, look on every piece you take, be jealous; •rust not so much as your own hearts. Run to God to search you, and try you, to examine you, and prove your reins, Psalms 26. 2. Psal. 139. 23, 24. If other helps suffice not to bring all to an issue, but you are still at a loss, open your cases faithfully to some godly and faithful Minister, Mal. 2. 7. Rest not, till you have put the business of your eternal welfare out of question, 1 Pet. 2. 10. O searcher of hearts, put thou this soul upon and help him in the search.

Chap. V. Showing the Miseries of the Unconverted.

SO unspeakably dreadful is the case of every unconverted soul, that I have sometimes thoughts, if we could but convince men, that they are yet unregenerate, the work were upon the matter done. But I sadly experience, that such a spirit of sloth and slumber (Rom. 11. 8. Mat. 13. 15.) possesses the unsanctified, that though they be convinced that they are yet unconverted; yet they oftentimes carelessly sit still, and what through the avocation of sensual pleasures, or hurry of worldly business, or noise and clamour of earthly cares, and lusts, and affections, Luke 8. 14. the voice of Conscience is drowned, and men go no farther than some cold wishes, and general purposes of repenting and amending, Acts 24. 25.

It's therefore of high necessity, that I do not only convince men, that they are unconverted; but that I also endeavor to bring them to a sense of the fearful misery of this estate.

But here I find myself aground at first putting forth. What Tongue can tell the Heirs of Hell sufficiently of their misery, unless 'twere Dives's in that flame, Luke 16. 24. Where is the ready Writer, whose Pen can decipher their misery, that are without God in the World? Eph. 2. 12. This cannot fully be done, unless we knew the infinite Ocean of that bliss and perfection which is in that God, which a state of sin doth exclude men from. Who knoweth (saith Moses) the power of thine anger? Psal. 90. 11. And how shall I tell men, that which I do not know? Yet so much we know, as one would think would shake the hear• of that man, that had the least degree of spiritual life and sense.

But this is yet the more posing difficulty, that I am to speak to them that are without sense. Alas this is not the least part of man's misery upon him that he is dead, stark dead in trespasses and sins, Eph. 2. 1.

Could I bring Paradise into view, or represent the Kingdom of Heaven to as much advantage as the tempter did the Kingdoms of the world, and all the glory thereof, to our Savior: or could I uncover the race of the deep and devouring Gulf of Tophet in all its terrors, and open the Gates of the infernal furnace, alas he hath no eyes to see it, Mat. 13. 14, 15. Could I paint out the Beauties of Holiness, or glory of the Gospel to the life; or could I bring above-board the more than Diabolical deformity and ugliness of sin, he can no more judge of the loveliness and beauty of the one, nor the filthiness and hatefulness of the other, than the blind man of colors. He is alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in him, because of the blindness of his heart, Eph. 4. 18. He neither doth nor can know the things of God, because they are spiritually discerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14. His eyes cannot be savingly opened, but by converting grace, Acts 26. 18. he is a Child of darkness, and walks in darkness, 1 John. 1. 6. yea the light in him is darkness, Mat. 6. 2, 3.

Shall I ring his knell, or read his sentence, or sound in his ear, the terrible trump of God's Judgments, that one would think should make both his ears to tingle, and strike him into Belshazzar's fit, even to appale his countenance, and loose his joints, and make his knees smite one against another? Yet alas! he perceives me not, he hath no ears to hear. Or shall I call up all the Daughters of Music, and sing the Song of Moses, and of the Lamb? yet he will not be stirred. Shall I allure him with the joyful sound, and the lovely Song, and glad tidings of the Gospel? with the most sweet and inviting calls, comforts, cordials, of the divine promises, so exceeding great and precious, it will not affect him savingly, unless I could find him ears, Mat. 13. 15. as well as tell him the news.

Shall I set before him the feast of fat things, the wine of wisdom, the bread of God, the tree of life, the hidden Manna? he hath no appetite for them, no mind to them, 1 Cor. 2. 14. Mat. 22. 5. Should I press the choicest grapes, the heavenly clusters of Gospel privileges, and drink to him in the richest wine of God's own cellar, yea of his own side, or set before him the delicious honey-comb of God's Testimonies, Psal. 19. 10. alas, he hath no taste to discern them. Shall I invite the dead to arise and eat the banquet of their funerals? No more can the dead in sin favor the holy food wherewith the Lord of life hath spread his table.

What then shall I do? shall I burn the brimstone of hell at his nostrils? or shall I open the box of Spikenard, very precious that filleth the whole house of this universe with its perfume, Mark. 14. 3. John 12. 8. and hope that the favor of Christ's ointments, and the smell of his garments will attract him? Psal. 45. 8. Alas! dead sinners are like the dumb Idols, they have mouths, but they speak not; eyes have they, but they see not; they have ears, but they hear not; noses have they, but they smell not; they have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not: neither speak they through their throat, Psal. 115. 5, 6, 7. They are destitute of all spiritual sense and motion.

But let me try the sense that doth last leave us, and draw the Sword of the word; yet lay at him while I will; yea though I choose mine arrows out of God's quiver, and direct them to the heart, nevertheless he feeleth it not; for how should he, being past feeling? Eph. 4. 19. So that though the wrath of God abideth on him, and the mountainous weight of so many thousand sins, yet he goes up and down as light as if nothing •iled him. Rom. 7. 9. In a word he carries a dead soul in a living body, and his flesh is but the walking Coffin of a corrupted mind, that is twice dead, Jude 12. rotting in the slime and putrefaction of noisome lusts, Mat. 23. 27, 28.

Which way then shall I come at the miserable objects that I have to deal with; who shall make the heart of stone to relent? Zech. 11. 12. or the lifeless Carkass to feel and move? That God that is able of Stones to raise up Children unto Abraham, Mat. 3. 9. that raiseth the Dead, 2 Cor. 1. 9. and melteth the Mountains, Nah. 1. 5. and strikes water out of the Flints, Deut. 8. 15. that loves to work like himself, beyond the hopes and belief of man, that peopleth his Church with dry bones, and planteth his Orchard with dry sticks; he is able to do this. Therefore I bow my knee to the most high God, Eph. 3. 14. and as our Savior prayed at the Sepulcher of Lazarus, John 11. 38, 41. and the Shunamite ran to the man of God for her dead Child, 2 Kings 4. 25. so doth your mourning Minister kneel about your graves, and carry you in the arms of prayer to that God in whom your help is found.

Oh thou all powerful Jehovah, that workest, and none can lett thee, that hast the keys of Hell and of death, pity thou the dead souls that lie here intombed, and roll away the grave stone, and say as to Lazarus, when already •tinking, Come forth. Lighten thou this darkness, O inaccessible light, and let the day-spring from on high, visit the darksome region of the dead to whom I speak: for thou canst open the eyes that death itself hath closed. Thou that formedst the ear, canst restore the hearing. Say thou to these ears, Ephphatah, and they shall be opened. Give thou eyes to see thine excellencies; a taste that may relish thy sweetness; a scent that may savor thine Ointments, a feeling that may sense the privilege of thy favor, the burden of thy wrath, the intolerable weight of unpardoned sin, and give thy servants command to prophesy to the dry bones, and let the effect of this prophesy, be, as of thy Prophet, when he prophesied the valley of dry bones into a living Army, exceeding great, Ezek. 37. 1, &c. The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley, which was full of bones; He said unto me, prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, bear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live. And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with Skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. So I prophesied as I was commanded, and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together bone to his bone. And when I beheld, Lo the sinew and the flesh came up upon them, and covered them above, but there was no breath in them, Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy son of man, and say unto the wind: Thus saith the Lord God, Come from the four winds, O breath and breathe upon these slain, that they may live, So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

But I must proceed, as I am able, to unfold that misery, which I confess no tongue can unfold; no heart can sufficiently comprehend. Know therefore that while thou art unconverted.

1. The infinite God is engaged against thee.

It is no small part of thy misery, that thou art without God, Eph. 2. 12. How doth Micah run crying after the Danites; You have taken away my God's, and what have I more? Judges 18. 23, 24. O what a mourning then must thou lift up, that art without God, that canst lay no claim to him, without daring usurpation! Thou mayst say of God, as Sheba of David; We have no part in David, neither have we inheritance in the Son of Jesse, 2. Sam. 20. 1. How pitiful and piercing a moan is that of Saul in his extremity; The Philistines are upon me, and God is departed from me, 1. Sam. 28. 15. Sinners, but what will you do in the day of your visitation? whither will you flee for help? where will you leave your glory? Isa. 10. 3. What will you do when the Philistines are upon you? When the World shall take its eternal leave of you; when you must bid your friends, houses, lands, farewell for evermore? What will you do then, I say, that have never a God to go to? Will you call on him, will you cry to him for help? alas he will not own you, Prov. 1. 28, 29. he will not take any knowledge of you, but send you packing, with an I never knew you. Mat. 7. 23. They that know what 'tis to have a God to go to, a God to live upon, they know a little, what a fearful misery it is to be without God. This made that holy man cry out, Let me have a God, or nothing. Let me know him and his will, and what will please him, and how I may come to enjoy him, or would I had never had an understanding to know anything, &c.

But thou art not only without God, but God is against thee, Ezek. 5. 8, 9. Nah. 2. 13. Oh if God would but stand a neuter, though he did not own, nor help the poor sinner, his case were not so deeply miserable. Though God should give up the poor creature to the will of all his enemies, to do their worst with him; though he should deliver him over to the tormentors, Mat. 18. 〈◇〉 that devils should tear and torture him to their 〈◇〉 most power and skill, yet this were not half so fearful. But God will set himself against the sinner; and believe it, 'Tis a fearful thing, to fall into the hands of the living God, Heb. 10. 31. There's no friend like him, no enemy like him. As much as Heaven is above the Earth, Omnipotency, above Impotency, Infinity above Nullity, so much more horrible is it to fall into the hands of the living God, than into the paws of Bears or Lions, yea Furies, or Devils. God himself will be thy tormentor; thy destruction shall come from the presence of the Lord, 2 Thes. 1. 9.

Tophet is deep and large, and the wrath of the Lord, like a river of Brimstone, doth kindle it, Isa. 30. 33. If God be against thee, who shall be for thee? If one man sin against another, the Judge shall judge him; but if a man sin against the Lord, who shall entreat for him? 1 Sam. 2. 25. Thou, even thou, art to be feared; and who shall stand in thy fight, when once thou art angry? Psal. 76. 7. Who is that God, that shall deliver you out of his hands,

Dan. 3. 15. Can Mammon? Riches profit not in the day of Wrath, Prov. 11. 4. Can Kings, or Warriors?

No, they shall cry to the Mountains and Rocks to fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the Throne, and from the Wrath of the Lamb, for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?

Rev. 6. 15, 16, 17.

Sinner, methinks this should go like a dagger to thine heart, to know that God is thine enemy. Oh whither wilt thou go, where wilt thou shelter thee? There is no hope for thee, unless thou lay down thy weapons, and sue out thy pardon, and get Christ to stand thy friend, and make thy peace. If it were not for this, thou mightest go into some howling wilderness, and there pine in sorrow: and run mad for anguish of heart and horrible despair. But in Christ there is a possibility of mercy for thee, yea a proffer of mercy to thee, that thou mayst have God to be more for thee, than he is now against thee. But if thou wilt not forsake thy sins, nor turn thoroughly and to purpose unto God, by a sound Conversion, the wrath of God, abideth on thee, and he proclaims himself to be against thee, as in the Prophet, Ezek. 5. 8. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I, even I, am against thee.

I. His face is against thee. Psal. 34. 16. The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them. Woe unto them whom God shall set his face against. When he did but look upon the host of the Egyptians, how terrible was the consequence? Ezek. 14. 8.

I will set my face against that man, and will make him a sign, and proverb, and will cut him off from the midst of my people, and you shall know that I am the Lord. 2. His heart is against thee: He hateth all the workers of iniquity. Man, doth not thine heart tremble to think of thy being an object of God's hatred? Ier. 15. 1. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be towards this people, cast them out of my sight, Zech. 7. 8. My soul loathed them, and their souls also abhorred me. 3. His hand is against thee, 1 Sam. 12. 14, 15. All his Attributes are against thee.

First, His Justice is like a flaming Sword unsheathed against thee. If I whet my glittering Sword, and my Hand take hold on Judgment, I will render vengeance to mine adversaries, and will reward them that hate me. I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, &c.

Deut. 32. 40, 41. So exact is Justice, that 'twill by no means clear the guilty, Exod. 34. 7. God will not discharge thee, he will not hold thee guiltless, Exod. 20. 7. but will require the whole debt in person of thee; unless thou canst make a Scripture claim to Christ and his satisfaction. When the enlightened Sinner looks on justice, and sees the balance in which he must be weighed, and the sword by which he must be executed, he feels an earth-quake in his Breast. But Satan keeps this out of sight, and persuades the Soul while he can, that the Lord is all made up of mercy, and so lulls it asleep in sin. Divine justice is very strict; it must have satisfaction to the utmost farthing; it denounceth indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, to every soul that doth evil, Rom. 2. 8, 9. It curseth everyone that continueth not in everything that is written in the Law to do it, Gal. 3. 10. The justice of God to the unpardoned sinner, that hath a sense of his misery is more terrible than the sight of the Bailiff or Creditor to the bankrupt debtor, or than the sight of the Judge, and Bench to the Robber, or of the Irons and Gibbet to the guilty Murderer. When Justice sits upon life and death, Oh what dreadful work doth it make with the wretched sinner? Bind him hand and foot, cast him, into utter darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, Mat. 22. 13. Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, Mat. 25. 41. This is the terrible sentence that Justice pronounceth. Why sinner, by this severe Justice must thou be tried; and as God liveth, this killing sentence shalt thou hear, unless thou repent and be converted.

Secondly, The holiness of God is full of antipathy against thee, Psal. 5. 4, 5. He is not only angry with thee (so he may be with his own Children) but he hath a fixed, rooted, habitual displeasure against thee; he loathes thee, Zech. 11. 8. and what is done by thee, though for substance commanded by him, Isa. 1. 14. Mal. 1. 10. As if a man should give his servant never so good meat to dress: yet if he should mingle filth, or poison with it, he would not touch it. God's Nature is infinitely contrary to sin, and so he cannot but hate a sinner out of Christ.

O what a misery is this, to be out of the favor, yea, under the hatred of God! Eccles. 5. 4. Hos. 9. 15. that God can as easily lay aside his Nature, and cease to be God, as not be contrary to thee and detest thee, except thou be changed and renewed by grace! O sinner, how darest thou to think of the bright and radiant Sun of purity, upon the beauties, the glory of holiness that is in God! The Stars are not pure in his sight; Job 25. 5. He humbleth himself to behold things that are done in Heaven, Psal. 11. 3. 6. O those light and sparkling eyes of his! what do they espy in thee? and thou hast no interest in Christ neither, that he should plead for thee. Methinks I should hear thee crying out astonished, with the Bethshemites, Who shall stand before this holy Lord God? 1 Sam. 6. 20.

Thirdly, The power of God is mounted like a mighty Cannon against thee. The glory of God's power is to be displayed, in the wonderful confusion and destruction of them that obey not the Gospel, 2 Thes. 1. 8, 9. He will make his power known in them, Rom. 9. 22. How mightily he can torment them: For this end he raiseth them up, that he might make his power known, Rom. 9. 17. O man, art thou able to make thy party good with thy Maker? No more than a silly

Reed, against the Cedars of God, or a little Cock-boat against the tumbling Ocean; or the Children's Bubbles, against the blustering Winds.

Sinner, the power of God's anger is against thee, Psal. 90. 11. and power and anger together, make fearful work. 'Twere better thou hadst all the world in arms against thee, than to have the power of God against thee. There is no escaping his hands, no breaking his prison:

The thunder of his power who can understand? Job 26. 14. Unhappy man that shall understand it by feeling it! If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him one of a thousand. He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength; who hath hardened himself against him, and prospered? Which removeth the Mountains and they know it not, which overturneth them in his anger: Which shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble: Which commandeth the Sun, and it riseth not, and seaeth up the Stars. Behold he taketh away, who can hinder him? who will say unto him, What dost thou? If God will not withdraw his anger, the proud helpers do stoop under him, Job 9. 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. And art thou a fit match for such an antagonist? O consider, this you that forget God, lest he tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you,

Psal. 50. 22. Submit to mercy. Let not dust and stubble stand it out against the Almighty. Set not Briars and Thorns against him in Battle, lest he go through them, and consume them together; but tay hold on his strength, that you may make peace with him, Isa. 27. 4, 5. Woe to him that striveth with his Maker, Isa. 45. 9.

Fourthly, The wisdom of God is set to ruin thee. He hath ordained his arrows, and prepared the instruments of death, and made all things ready, Psal. 7. 12, 13. His counsels are against thee, to contrive thy destruction, Ier. 18. 11. He laughs in himself, to see how thou wilt be taken and ensnared in the evil day, Psal. 37. 13. The Lord shall laugh at him, for he seeth that the day is coming. He sees how thou wilt come down mightily in a moment; how thou wilt wring thine hands, and tear thine hair, and eat thy flesh, and gnash thy teeth for anguish and astonishment of heart, when thou seest thou art fallen remedilessly into the pit of destruction.

Fifthly, The truth of God is sworn against thee, Psal. 95. 11. If he be true and faithful thou must perish, if thou goest on, Luke 13. 3. Unless he be false of his word, thou must die, except thou repent, Ezek. 33. 11. If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself, 2 Tim. 2. 13. That is, he is faithful to his threatenings, as well as promises, and will show his faithfulness in our confusion, if we believe not. God hath told thee, as plain as it can be spoken, That if he wash thee not, thou hast no part in him, John 13. 8. that if thou livest after the flesh, thou shalt die, Rom. 8. 13. That except thou be converted, thou shalt in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 18. 3. and he abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself. Beloved, as the immutable faithfulness of God in his promise and oath, afford Believers strong consolation, Heb. 6. 18. so they are to Unbelievers, for strong consternation and confusion. O sinner, tell me, what shift dost thou make to think of all the threatenings of God's word, that stand upon record against thee? Dost thou believe their truth, or not? If not, thou art a wretched idol, and not a Christian; and therefore give over the name and hopes of a Christian. But if thou dost believe them, O heart of steel that thou hast, that canst walk up and down in quiet, when the truth and faithfulness of God is engaged to destroy thee! That if God Almighty can do it, thou shalt surely perish and be damned. Why man, the whole book of God doth testify against thee, while thou remainest unsanctified: It condemns thee in every leaf, and is to thee, like Ezekiel's roll, written within and without with lamentation and mourning and woe, Ezek. 2. 10. and all this shall surely come upon thee, and overtake thee, Deut. 28. 15. except thou repent. Heaven and Earth shall pass away, but one jot, or tittle of this word shall never pass away, Mat. 5. 18.

Now put all this together, and tell me, if the case of the unconverted be not deplorably miserable As we read of some persons, that had bound themselves in an oath, and in a curse to kill Paul: So thou must know, O sinner, to thy terror, that all the Attributes of the Infinite God are bound in an oath to destroy thee, Heb. 3. 28. O man, what wilt thou do? Whither wilt thou fly? If God's Omniscency can find thee, thou shalt not escape. If the true and faithful God will save his Oath, perish thou must, except thou believe and repent. If the Almighty hath power to torment thee, thou shalt be perfectly miserable in Soul and Body to all eternity, unless it be prevented by thy speedy Conversion.

II. The whole Creation of God is against thee. The whole Creation (saith Paul) groaneth and travelleth in pain, Rom. 8. 22. But what is it that the Creation groaneth under? Why, the fearful abuse that it is subject to, in serving the lusts of unsanctified men. And what is it that the Creation groaneth for? Why, for freedom and liberty from this abuse; for the creature is very unwillingly subject to this bondage, Rom. 8. 19, 20, 21. If the unreasonable and inanimate creatures had speech and reason, they would cry out under it, as bondage unsufferable, to be abused by the ungodly, contrary to their natures, and the ends that the great Creator made them for. It is a passage of an eminent Divine;

The liquor that the drunkard drinketh, if it had reason as well as a man, to know how shamefully 'tis abused and spoiled, it would groan in the Barrels against him, it would groan in the Cup against him, groan in his Throat, in his Belly, against him. It would fly in his Face, if it could speak. And if God should open the mouths of the Creatures as he did the mouth of Balaam's Ass, the proud man's garments on his back would groan against him. There is never a creature but if it had reason to know how 'tis abused, till a man be converted, it would groan against him. The land would groan to bear him, the air would groan to give him breathing, their houses would groan to lodge them, their beds would groan to ease them, their food to nourish them, their clothes to cover them, and the creature would groan to give them any help and comfort, so long as they live in sin against God.

Thus far he. Methinks this should be a terror to an unconverted soul, to think that he is a burden to the Creation, Luke 13. 7. Cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground? If the poor inanimate creatures could but speak, they would say to the ungodly, as Moses to Israel

Must we fetch you water out of the Rock, ye rebe's? Numb. 2. 10. Thy food would say, Lord, must I nourish such a wretch as this, and yield forth my strength for him, to dishonor thee withal? No. I will choke him rather, if thou wilt give me commission. The very air would say,

Lord, must I give this man breath, to set his tongue against Heaven, and scorn thy people, and vent his pride and wrath, and filthy communication, and belch our oaths and blasphemy against thee? No, if thou but say the word, he shall be breathless for me. His poor Beast would say, Lord, must I carry him upon his wicked designs? No, I will break his bones, I will end his days rather, if I may have but leave from thee.

A wicked man, the earth groans under him, and Hell groans for him, till death satisfies both, and unburdens the earth, and stops the mouth of Hell with him. While the Lord of Hosts is against thee, be sure the Hosts of the Lord are against thee, and all the creatures as it were up in arms, till upon a man's conversion, the controversy being taken up between God and him, he makes a covenant of peace with the creatures for him, Job 5. 22, 23, 24. Hos. 2. 18, 19, 20.

III. The roaring Lyon hath his full power upon thee, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Thou art fast in the paw of that Lion, that is greedy to devour;

In the snare of the Devil, led captive by him at $\langle\phi\rangle$ will,

2 Tim. 2. 26. This is the spirit that worketh in $\langle\phi\rangle$ Children of disobedience, Eph. 2. 2. His Drudge• they are, and his lusts they do. He is the Ruler of the darkness of this world, Eph. 6. 12. that is, of ignorant sinners that live in darkness. You pity the poor Indians, that worship the Devil for their God, but little think that 'tis your own case. Why, 'tis the common misery of all the unsanctified, that the Devil is their God, 2 Cor. 4. 4. Not that they do intend to do him homage and worship, they will be ready to defy him, and him that should say so by them; but all this while they serve him, and come and go at his beck, and live under his government. His servants you are, to whom you yield yourselves to obey, Rom. 6. 16. Oh how many then will be found the real servants of the Devil, that take themselves for no other than the Children of God? he can no sooner offer a sinful delight, or opportunity for your unlawful advantage, but you embrace it. If he suggest a lie, or prompt you to revenge, you readily obey. If he forbid you to read, or pray, you hearken to him, and therefore his servants you are. Indeed he lies behind the curtain, he acts in the dark, and sinners •ee not who setteth them on work; but all the while he leads them in a string. Doubtless the L•ar intends not a service to Satan, but his own advantage: yet 'tis he that stands in the corner unobserved, and putteth the thing into his heart, Acts 5. 3. John 8. 44. Questionless Judas when he sold his Master for money, and the Chaldea•s and Sabaeans when they plundered Job, intended not to do the Devil a pleasure, but to satisfy their own covetous thirst: yet 'twas he that actuated them in their wickedness, John 13. 27. Job 1. 12, 15, 17. Men may be very slaves and common drudges for the Devil, and never know it; nay they may please themselves in the thoughts of a happy liberty, 2 Pet. 2. 19.

Art thou yet in ignorance, and not turned from darkness to light? Why thou art under the power of Satan Acts 6. 18. Dost thou live in the ordinary and willful practice of any known sin? Know that thou art of the Devil, 1 John 3. 8. Dost thou live in stri•• or envy, or malice? verily he is thy Father, Io•. 8. 40. 41. O dreadful case! However Satan $\langle\dots\rangle$ his slaves with divers pleasures, Tit. 3. 5. $\langle\dots\rangle$ to $\langle\phi\rangle$ them into endless perdition. $\langle\dots\rangle$ with the •pple in his Mouth, 〈...〉 thou seest not the deadly sting 〈...〉 that is now thy temprer will be one 〈...〉 could b• give thee to see how 〈...〉 how filthy 〈...〉 thou gratified, all whose pleasure is to set thee on work to make thy perdition and damnation sure, and to hear the 〈 ◇〉 hotter and hotter, in which thou must burn for millions of mi•ions of Ages.

IV. The 〈...〉 like a Mountain upon thee. Poor Soul • Thou feelest it not, but this is that which seals thy misery upon thee. While unconverted, none of thy sins are blotted out, Acts 3. 19. They are all upon the score against thee: Regeneration and remission are never separated; the unsanctified are unquestionably unjustified and unpardoned, 1 Cor. 6. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 2. Heb. 9. 14. Beloved, it's a fearful thing to be in debt, but above all in God's debt: for there is no arrest so formidable as his; no prison so horrible as his. Look upon an enlightened sinner, who feels the weight of his own guilt, oh how frightful are his looks, how fearful are his complaints? His comforts are turned into Wormwood, and his Moisture into Drought, and his sleep departeth from his eyes. He is a terror to himself and all that are about him, and is ready to envy the very stones that lie in the Street, because they are senseless, and feel not his misery; and wishes he had been a Dog, or a Toad, or a Serpent rather than a man, because then death, had put an end to his misery, whereas now it will be but the beginning of that which will know no ending.

How light soever you may make of it now, you will one day find the guilt of unpardoned sin to be a heavy burden. This is a Milstone that whosoever falleth upon it shall be broken, but upon whomsoever it shall fall it shall grind him to powder, Mat. 21. 44. What work did it make with our Savior? It pressed the very blood (to a wonder) out of his veins, and broke all his bones: and if it did this in the green tree, what will it do in the dry?

Oh think of thy case in time. Canst thou think of that threat without trembling, Ye shall die in your sins, John 8. 24. Oh better were it for thee to die in a Goal, die in a Ditch, in a Dungeon, than die in thy Sins. If death, as it will take away all thy other Comforts, would take away thy sins too, it were some •itigation. But thy sins will follow thee, when thy friends leave thee, and all worldly enjoyments shake hands with thee: Thy sins will not die with thee, 2 Cor. 5• 10. Rev. 20. 12. as a prisoners other debts will; but they will to judgment with thee, there to be thine accusers, and they will to Hell with thee, there to be thy tormentors. Better to have so many fiends and furies about thee, than thy sins to fall upon thee and fasten in thee. Oh the work that these will make thee! O look over thy debts in time! How much art thou in the Books of everyone of God's Laws? How is everyone of God's Commandments ready to arrest thee, and take thee by the throat for innumerable Bonds that it hath upon thee? What wilt thou do then, when they shall altogether lay in against thee? Hold open the eyes of conscience to consider this, that thou mayst despair of thyself, and be driven to Christ, and fly for refuge, to lay hold upon the hope that is set before thee, Heb. 6. 18.

V. Thy raging l•sts do miserably enslave thee. While unconverted thou art a very servant to sin, it reigns over thee, and holds thee under its dominion, till thou art brought within the bond of God's Covenant, John 8. 34. 36. Tit. 3. 3. Rom. 6. 12, 14. Rom. 6. 16, 17. Now there's no such Tyrant as sin. Oh the filthy and fearful work, that it doth engage its servants in! would it not pierce a man's heart to see a company of poor creatures drudging and toiling, and all to carry together faggots and fuel for their own burning? Why, this is the employment of sins drudges. Even while they bless themselves in their unrighteous gains; while they sing and swill in pleasures, they are but treasuring up wrath and vengeance for their eternal burnings; they are but laying in Powder and Bullers, and adding to the Pile of T•pher, and slinging in Oil to make the flame rage the fiercer. Who would serve such a Master, whose work is drudgery, and whose wages is death? Rom. 6. 23.

What a woeful spectacle was that poor wretch possessed with the legion? Would it not have pitied thine heart to have seen him among the Tombs, cutting and wounding of himself? Mark. 5. 5. This is thy case, such is thy work. Every stroke is a thrust at thine heart, 1 Tim. 6. 10. Conscience indeed is now asleep; but when death and judgment shall bring thee to thy senses, then wilt thou feel the raging smart and anguish of every wound. The convinced sinner is a sensible instance of the miserable bondage of sin. Conscience flies upon him, and tells him what the end of these things will be; and yet such a slave is he to his lusts, that on he must, though he see it will be his endless perdition; and when the temptation comes, lust gets the bit in his mouth, breaks all the cords of his vows and promises, and carries him headlong to his own destruction.

VI. The furnace of eternal vengeance is heated ready for thee, Isa. 30. 33. Hell and destruction open their mouths upon thee, they gape for thee, they groan for thee, Isa. 5. 14. waiting as it were with a greedy eye, as thou standest upon the brink, when thou wilt drop in. If the wrath of a man be as the roaring of a Lion, Prov. 20. 2. more heavy than the sand, Prov. 27. 3. what is the wrath of the infinite God? If the burning furnace heated in Nebuchad•zzar's fiery rage, when he commanded it to be made yet seven times hotter, were so fierce as to burn up even those that drew near it, to throw the three children in Dan. 3. 19, 22. How hot is that burning Oven of the Almighty's fury? Mal. 4. 1. Surely this is seventy times seven more fierce. What thinkest thou, O man, of being a saggo•in Hell to all eternity? Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong in the day that I shall deal with thee, saith the Lord of Hosts? Ezek. 22. 14. Canst thou dwell with everlasting burnings? Canst thou abide the consuming fire? Isa 33. 4. When thou shalt be as a glowing Iron in Hell, and thy whole body and soul shall be as perfectly possessed by God's burning vengeance, as the fiery sparkling Iron, when heated in the •iercest forge? Thou canst not bear God's whip, how then wilt thou endure his scorpions? Thou art even crushed, and ready to with thyself dead, under the weight of his finger, how then wilt thou bear the weight of his loins? The most patient man that ever was, did curse the day that ever he was born, Job 3. 1. and even wish death to come and end his misery, Job 7. 15, 16. when God did but let out one little drop of his wrath. How then wilt thou endure when God shall pour out all his Vials, and set himself against thee to torment thee? when he shall make thy conscience the tunnel, by which he will be pouring his burning wrath into thy soul forever; and when he shall fill all thy powers as full of torment, as they be now full of sin? When immortality shall be thy misery, and to die the death of a brute, and be swallowed into the gulf of annihilation, shall be such a felicity, as the whole eternity of wishes & an Ocean of tears shall never purchase? Now thou canst put off the evil day, and canst laugh and be merry, and forget the terror of the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 11. but how wilt thou hold out, or hold up, when God will cast thee into a bed of torments, Rev. 2. 21, and make thee to ⟨◇⟩ down in sorrows? Isa. 50. 11. When roarings and blasphemy shall be thine only music, and the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the Cup of his indignation, shall be thine only drink? Rev. 14. 10. When thou shalt draw in flames for thy breath, and the horrid stench of sulphur shall be thy only perfume? In a word, when the smoke of thy torment shall ascend forever and ever, and thou shalt have no rest, night nor day no rest in thy conscience, no ease in thy bones, but thou shalt be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach for evermore? Ier. 42. ⟨◇⟩

O sinner, stop here; and consider. If thou art a man, and not a senseless block, consider. Bethink thyself where thou standest, why upon the very brink of his •urnace. As the Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, there is but a step between thee and this, 1 Sam. 20. 3. Thou knowest not when thou liest down, but thou mayest be in before the Morning, thou knowest not when thou risest, but thou may ⟨◇⟩ drop in before the Night. Darest thou make light of this? Wilt thou go on in such a dreadful condition• as if nothing ailed thee? If thou puttest it off, and sayest, this doth not belong to thee; look again over the foregoing Chapter, and tell me the truth, are none of these black marks found upon thee? Do not blind thine eyes, do not deceive thyself: see thy misery while thou mayst prevent it. Think what 'tis to be a vile cast-out, a damned reprobate, a vessel of wrath, into which the Lord will be pouring out his tormenting fury, while he hath a Being, Rom. 9. 22.

Divine wrath is a fierce, Deut. 32. 22. devouring Isa. 33. 14. everlasting, Mat. 25. 41. unquenchable fire, Mat. 3. 12. and thy soul and body must be the fuel upon which it will be feeding forever, unless thou consider thy ways, and speedily turn to the Lord by a sound conversion. They that have been only singed by this fire, and had no more but the smell thereof passing upon them; Oh what amazing spectacles have they been! Whose heart would not have melted, to have heard Spira's out-cries; to have seen Chaloner that monument of Justice, worn to Skin and Bones, Blaspheming, the God of Heaven, cursing himself, and continually crying out, O Torture, Torture, Torture, O Torture, Torture, as if the flames of wrath had already took hold on him? To have heard Rogers crying out, I have had a little pleasure, but now I must to Hell for evermore; wishing but for this mitigation, that God would but let him lie burning forever behind the back of that fire (on the earth) and bringing in this sad conclusion still, at the end of whatever was spoken to him, to afford him some hope, I must to Hell, I must to the furnace of Hell, for millions of millions of Ages? O if the fears and forethoughts of the wrath to come be so terrible, so intolerable, what is the feeling of it?

Sinner, 'tis but in vain to flatter you, this would be but to toll you into the unquenchable fire; know ye from the living God, that here you must lie, with these burnings must you dwell, till immortality die, and immutability change, till Eternity run out, and Omnipotency is not longer able to torment, except you be in good earnest renewed throughout by sanctifying grace.

VII. The Law dischargeth all its threats and curses at thee, Gal. 3. 10. Rom. 7. Oh how dreadfully doth it thunder? It spits fire and brimstone in thy face. Its words are as drawn swords, and as the sharp arrows of the mighty, it demands satisfaction to the utmost, and cries Justice, Justice. It speaks Blood and War, and Wounds, and Death against thee. Oh the Execrations, and Plagues, and Deaths, that this murdering piece is loaded with (read Deut. 28. 15, 16, &c.) and thou art the mark at which this sno• is levelled. O man, away to the strong hold, Zech. 9. 12. away from thy sins, haste to the sanctuary, the City of refuge, Heb. 13. 13. even the Lord Jesus Christ, hide thee in him, or else thou art lost without any hope of recovery.

VIII. The Gospel itself been death the sentence of eternal damnation upon thee, Mark 16. 16. If thou continuest in thine impenitent and unconverted estate, know that the Gospel denounceth a much forer condemnation, than ever would have been for the transgression only of the first Covenant. Is it not a dreadful case to have the Gospel itself fill its mouth with threats, and thunder, and damnation?

To have the Lord to roar from Mount Zion against thee? Joel 3. 16. Hear the terror of the Lord. He that believeth not shall be damned; except ye repent ye shall all perish, Luke 13. 3. This is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, John 3. 19. He that believeth not, the wrath of God abideth on him, John. 3. 36. If the word spoken by Angels wasstedfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? Heb. 2. 2, 3. He that despised Moses's Law died without mercy: Of how much sorer punishment shall he be thought worthy, that hath trampled underfoot the Son of God? Heb. 10. 28, 29.

Application. And is this true indeed? Is this thy misery? Yea, 'tis as true as God is. Better open thine eyes and see it now, while thou mayst remedy it, than blind and harden thyself, till, to thine eternal sorrow, thou shalt feel what thou wouldst not believe; and if it be true, what dost thou mean to loiter, and linger in such a case as this?

Alas for thee, poor man, how effectually hath sin undone thee, and deprived and despoiled thee even of thy reason to look after thine own everlasting good? O miserable Caitiff, what stupidity and senselessness hath surprised thee? Oh! let me knock up and awake this sleeper. Who dwells within the walls of this flesh? Is there ever a soul here, a rational understanding soul? Or art thou only a walking Ghost, a senseless lump? Art thou a reasonable soul, and yet so far brutified, as to forget thyself immortal, and to think thyself to be as the beasts that perish? Art thou turned into flesh? that thou savorest nothing but gratifying the sense, and making provision for the flesh? Or else having reason to understand the eternity of thy future estate, dost thou yet make light of being everlastingly miserable? which is to be so much below a brute, as it is worse to act against reason, than to act without it. O unhappy soul, that wast the glory of man, the mate of Angels, and the image of God! that wast God's representative in the world, and hadst the supremacy amongst the creatures, and the dominion over thy Maker's works! Art thou now become a slave to sense, a servant to so base an Idol, as thy Belly? for no higher felicity than to fill thee with the wind of man's applause, or heaping together a little refined earth, no more suitable to thy spiritual, immortal nature, than the dirt, and sticks? Oh, why dost thou not bethink thee where thou shalt be forever? Death is at hand, The Judge is even at the door, Jam. 5. 9. Yet, a little while and time shall be no longer, Rev. 10. 5, 6. And wilt thou run the hazard of continuing in such a state, in which if thou be overtaken, thou art irrecoverably miserable.

Come then, arise, and attend thy nearest concernments. Tell me whither art thou going? What, wilt thou live in such a course, wherein every act is a step to perdition? And thou dost not know, but the next night, thou mayst make thy Bed in Hell? Oh! if thou hast a spark of reason, consider and turn, and hearken to thy very friend, who would therefore show thee thy present misery, that thou mightest in time make thine escape, and be eternally happy.

Hear what the Lord saith; Fear ye not me, saith the Lord? Will ye not tremble at my presence? Jer. 5. 22. O sinners do ye make light of the wrath to come? Mat, 3. 7. I am sure there is a time coming, when you will not make light of it. Why, the very Devils do believe and tremble, James 2. 19. What! you more hardened than they? Will you run upon the Edge of the Rock? will you play at the hole of the Asp? will you put your hand upon the Cockatrice's den? Will you dance about the fire, till you are burnt? or dally with devouring wrath, as if you were at a point of indifferency, whether you did escape it, or endure it? O madness of folly! Solomon's mad-man, that casteth fire-brands and arrows, and death, and saith, Am I not in jest? Prov. 26. 18. is nothing so distracted as the willful sinner, Luke 15. 17. that goeth on in his unconverted estate without sense, as if nothing ailed him. The man that runs on the Cannons mouth, that sports with his blood, or lets out his life in a frolick, is sensible, sober and serious, to him that goeth on still in his trespasses, Psalms 68. 21. For he stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against the Almighty. He runneth upon him, even upon his neck, upon the thick Bosses of his Buckler, Job 15. 25, 26. Is it wisdom to dally with the second death, or to venture into the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, Rev. 21. 8. as if thou wert but going to wash thee, or swim for thy recreation? Wilt thou, as it were, fetch thy vize, and jump into eternal flames, as the children through the bon-fire? What shall I say? I can find out no expression, no comparison whereby to set forth the dreadful distraction of that soul, that shall go on in sin.

Awake, awake, Eph. 5. 14. Oh sinner, arise and take thy flight. There is but one door that thou mayst fly by, and that is the strait door of conversion and the new birth. Unless thou turn unfeignedly from all thy sins, and come in to Jesus Christ, and take him for the Lord thy righteousness, and walk in him in holiness and newness of life; as the Lord liveth, it is not more certain that thou art now out of Hell, than that thou shalt without fail be in it, but a few days and nights from hence. O set thine heart to think of thy case. Is not thine everlasting misery or welfare that which doth deserve a little consideration? Lo•• again over the miseries of the unconverted. If the Lord hath not spoken by me, regard me not. But if it be the very word of God, that all this miser• lies upon thee, what a case art thou in? Is it for one that hath his senses, to live in such a condition, and not to make all possible expedition for preventing his utter ruin? O man, who hath bewitched thee, Gal. 3. 1. that in the matters of the present life thou shouldst be wise enough to forecast thy business, foresee thy danger, and prevent thy mischief, but in matters of everlasting consequence shouldst be slight and careless, as if they little concerned thee? Why, is it nothing to thee to have all the Attributes of God engaged against thee? Canst thou do well without his favor? Canst thou escape his hands, or endure his vengeance? Dost thou hear the creation groaning under thee, and hell groaning for thee, and yet think thy case good enough? Art thou in the paw of the Lion, under the power of corruption, in the dark and noisome prison, fettered with thy lusts, working out thine own damnation; and is not this worth the considering? Wilt thou make light of all the terrors of the Law; of all its curses, and thunderbolts; as if they were but the report of the Children's pot• guns, or thou went to war with their paper pellets? dost thou laugh at hell and destruction, or canst thou drink the envenomed Cup of the Almighty's fury, as if it were but a common portion?

Gird up now thy lovns like a man, for I will demand of thee, and answer thou me, Job 40. 7. Art thou such a Leviathan, as that the scales of thy pride should keep thee from thy Makers coming at thee? Wilt thou esteem his Arrows as straw, and the instruments of death as rotten wood? Art thou chief of all the Children of pride, even that thou shouldst count his darts as stubble; and laugh at the shaking of his spear? Art thou made without fear, and contemnest his barbed Irons? Job 41. Art thou like the horse that paweth in the valley, and rejo•ceth in his strength, who 〈◇〉 out to meet the armed men? Dost thou mock at fear, and art not affrighted, neither turnest back from God's sword; when his quiver rattleth against thee, the glittering spear and the shield? Job 39. 21, 22, 23. Well, if the threats and calls of the word will not fear thee, nor awaken thee, I am sure death and judgment will. Oh what wilt thou do when the Lord cometh forth against thee, and in his fury falleth upon thee, and thou shalt feel what thou readest? If when Daniel's enemies were cast into the Den of Lions, both they and their wives and their children, the Lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces, ere ever they came at the bottom of the Den, Dan. 6. 24. what shall be done with thee, when thou fallest into the hands of the living God? When he shall gripe thee in his Iron arms, and grind and crush thee to a thousand pieces in his wrath?

Oh do not then contend with God. Repent and be converted, so none of this shall come upon thee; Isa. 55. 6, 7. Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy on him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

Chap. VI. Containing DIRECTIONS for Conversion.

Mark 10. 17.

And there came one, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

BEfore thou readest these Directions, I advise thee, yea, I charge thee before God, and his holy Angels, to resolve to follow them (as far as Conscience shall be convin•d of their agreeableness to God's word, and thy estate, and call in his assistance and blessing that they may succeed. And as I have sought the Lord, and consulted his Oracles what advice to give thee, so must thou entertain it, with that awe, reverence, and purpose of obedience that the word of the living God doth require.

Now then attend. Set thine heart unto all that I shall testify unto thee in this day; for it is not a vain thing, it is your life, Deut. 32. 46. This is the end of all that hath been spoken hitherto, to bring you to set upon turning, and making use of God's means for your conversion. I would not trouble you, nor torment you before the time with the forethoughts of your eternal misery, but in order to your making your escape. Were you shut up under your present misery, without remedy, it were but mercy (as one speaks) to let you alone, that you might take in that little poor comfort, that you are capable of here in this world. But you may yet be happy: If you do not willfully refuse the means of your recovery. Behold, I hold open the door unto you, arise take your flight; I set the way of life before you, walk in it, and you shall live and not die, Deut 30. 19. Jer. 9. 16. It pities me to think you should be your own Murderers, and throw yourselves headlong, when God and men cry out to you, as Peter, in another Case, to his Master, Spare thyself. A noble Virgin, that attended the Court of Spain, was wickedly ravished by the King and hereupon exciting the Duke her Father to revenge, he called in the Moors to his help, who when they had executed his design, miserably wasted and spoiled the Country, which this Virgin laying so exceedingly to heart, shut herself up in a Tower belonging to her Father's house, and desired her Father and Mother might be called forth; and bewailing to them her own wretchedness, that she should have occasioned so much misery and desolation to her Country, for the satisfying of her revenge, she told them she was resolved to be avenged upon herself. Her Father and Mother besought her to pity herself and them, but nothing could prevail, but she took her leave of them, and threw herself off the battlements, and so perished before their faces.

Just thus is the willful destruction of ungodly men. The God that made them beseecheth them, and crieth out to them, as Paul to the distracted Jailor, when about to murder himself, Do thyself no harm. The Ministers of Christ forewarn them and follow them, and vain would have them back. But alas! No expostulations, nor obtestations will prevail; but men will hurl themselves into perdition, while pity itself looketh on.

What shall I say? would it not grieve a person of any humanity, if in the time of a reigning plague he should have a receipt (as one said well) that would infallibly cure all the Country, and recover the most hopeless patients, and yet his friends and neighbors should die by the hundreds about him, because they would not use it? Men and Brethren, though you carry the certain Symptoms of death in your faces, yet I have a receipt that will cure you all, that will cure infallibly. Follow but these few Directions, and if you do not then win Heaven, I will be content to lose it.

Hear then, Oh sinner, and as ever thou wouldst be converted and saved, embrace this following counsel.

Direct. I. Set it down with thyself, as an undoubted truth, that it is impossible for thee ever to get to Heaven in this thy unconverted state. Can any other but Christ save thee? And he tells thee he will never do it, except thou be regenerated and converted, Mat. 18. 3. John 3. 3. Doth he not keep the keys of Heaven? And canst thou get in without his leave, as thou must, if ever thou comest thither in thy natural condition, without a sound and thorough renovation?

Direct. II. Labor to get a thorough sight and lively sense and feeling of thy sins. Till men are weary and heavy laden, and pricked at the heart. and stark sick of sin, they will not come to Christ in his way for ease and cure, nor to purpose enquire, What shall we do? Mat. 11. 28. Acts 2. 37. Mat. 9. 12. They must set themselves down for dead men before they will come unto Christ, that they may have life, John 5. 40. Labor therefore to set all thy sins in order before thee. Never be afraid to look upon them, but let thy spirit make diligent search, Psal. 77. 6. Enquire into thine heart and into thy life, enter into a thorough examination of thyself, and of all thy ways, Psal. 119. 59. that thou mayst make a full discovery, and call in the help of God's Spirit, in the sense of thine own inability hereunto, for it is his proper work to convince of sin. John 16. 8. Spread all before the face of thy Conscience, till thine heart and eyes be set abroad. Leave not striving with God, and thine own soul, till it cry out under the sense of thy sins, as the enlightened Ja•lor, What must I do to •e saved? Acts 16. 30. To this purpose.

Meditate of the numerousness of thy sins. David's heart failed when he thought of this, and considered that he had more sins than hairs, Psal. 40. 12. This made him to cry out upon the multitudes of God's tender mercies, Psal. 51. 1. The loathsome carcass doth not more hatefully swarm with crawling worms than an unsanctified soul with filthy lusts. They fill the head, the heart, the eyes and mouth of him. Look backward, where was ever the place, what was ever the time, in which thou didst not sin? Look inward, what part or power canst thou find in soul or body, but it is poisoned with sin? What duty dost thou ever perform into which poison is not shed? Oh how great is the sum of thy debts, who hast been all thy life long running upon the hooks, and never didst, nor canst pay off one penny? Look over the sin of thy Nature, and all its cursed brood, the sins of thy life. Call to mind thy Omissions, Commissions, the sins of thy thoughts, of thy words, of thine actions, the sins of thy youth, the sins of thy years, &c. Be not like a desperate Bankrupt, that is afraid to look over his Books. Read the Records of Conscience carefully. These Books must be opened sooner, or later, Rev. 20. 12.

Meditate upon the aggravations of thy sin, as they are the grand enemies against the God of thy life, against the life of thy soul; in a word, they <...> publi•k enemies of all mankind. How do David, Ezra, Daniel and the good Levites aggravate their sins, from the consideration of their injuriousness to God, their opposition to his good and righteous Laws, the mercies, the warnings that they were committed against, N••. 9. Da•. 9. Ezra 9. O the work that sin hath made in the world. This is the enemy that hath brought in death, that hath robbed and enslaved man, that hath blacked the Devil, that hath digged Hell; Rom. 5. 12. 2 Pet. 2. 4. John 8. 34. This is the enemy that hath turned the Creation upside down, and sown dissention between man and the creatures, between man and man, yea between man and himself, setting the sensitive part against the rational, the will against the judgment, lust against conscience, yea worst of all, between God and man, making the lapsed sinner both hateful to God, and a hater of him, Zech. 11. 8. O man, how canst thou make so light of sin? This is the Traitor that sucked the blood of the Son of God, that sold him, that mocked him, that scourged him, that spit in his face, that digged his hands, that pierced his side, that pressed his soul, that mangled his body, that never left, till it had bound him, condemned him, nailed him, crucified him, and put him to open shame, Isa. 53. 4, 5, 6. This is that deadly poison, so powerful of operation, as that one drop of it shed upon the root of mankind, hath corrupted, spoiled, and poisoned, and undone his whole race at once, Rom. 5. 18, 19. This is the common Butcher, the bloody Executioner, that hath killed the Prophets, burnt the Martyrs, murdered all the Apostles, all the Patriarchs, all the Kings and Potentates, that hath destroyed Cities, swallowed Empires, butchered and devoured whole Nations. Whatever was the weapon that 'twas done by, sin was it that did Execution, Rom. 6. 23. dost thou yet think it but a small thing? If Adam and all his Children could be digged out of their Graves, and their Bodies piled up to Heaven, and an inquest were made, what matchless murderer were guilty of all this blood; it would be all found in the skirts of sin. Study the nature of sin, till thy heart be brought to fear and loath it. And meditate on the aggravations of thy particular sins, how thou hast sinned against all God's warnings, against thine own prayers, against mercies, against corrections, against clearest light, against freest love, against thine own resolutions, against promises, vows, covenants of better obedience, &c. charge thy heart home with these things, till it blush for shame, and be brought out of all good opinion of itself, Ezra 9. 6.

Meditate upon the desert of sin: It crieth up to Heaven: It calls for vengeance, Gen. 18. 21. Its due wages is death, and damnation. It pulls the curse of God upon the Soul and Body, Gal. 3. 10. Deut. 28. The least sinful word or thought, lays thee under the infinite wrath of God Almighty, Rom. 2. 8, 9. Mat. 12. 36. Oh what a load of wrath, what a weight of curses, what treasure of vengeance have all the millions of thy sins then deserved? Rom. 2. 5. John 3. 36. Oh Judge thyself, that the Lord may not •udge thee, 1 Cor. 11. 31.

Meditate upon the deformity, and defilement of sin. 'Tis as black as Hell, the very image and likeness of the Devil drawn upon the Soul, 1 John 3. 8, 10. It would more affright thee, to see thyself in the hateful deformity of thy nature, than to see the Devil. There is no mire so unclean, no vomit so loathsome, no carcass or carrion so offensive, no plague or leprosy so noisome as sin, in which thou art all enrolled, and covered with its odious filth, whereby thou art rendered more displeasing to the pure and holy nature of the glorious God, than the most filthy object, composed of whatever is hateful to all thy senses, can be to thee, Job 15. 15, 16. Couldst thou take up a Toad into thy bosom? Couldst thou cherish it, and take delight in it? Why, thou art as contrary to the pure and perfect holiness of the divine nature, and as loathsome as that is to thee, Mat. 3. 33. til• thou art purified by the blood of Jesus, and the power of renewing grace.

Above all other sins fix the eye of Consideration• on these two. 1. The sin of thy nature. 'Tis to little purpose to lop the branches, while the root of original corruption remains untouched. In vain do men lave out the streams, when the fountain is running, that fills up all again. Let the Axe of thy repentance (with David's) go to the root of sin, Psal. 51. 5. Study how deep, how close, how permanent is thy natural pollution; how universal it is, till thou dost cry out with Paul's•ee•ng, upon thy body of death, Rom. 7. 2. Look into all thy parts and powers, and see what unclean vessels, what fi•es, what dunghills, what sinks they are become. He•miser, quid sum? vas ster quilimi 〈...〉 faetore & horrorc. August. 〈ϕ〉 . c. 2. The heart is never soundly broken, till thoroughly convinced of the heinousness of original sin. Here fix thy thoughts. This is that, that makes thee backward to all good, prone to all evil, Rom. 7. 15. that sheds blindness, pride, prejudice, unbelief into thy mind, enmit•, inconstancy, obstinacy, into thy will; inordinate heats and colds into thy affections; insensibleness, benumbedness, unfaithfulness into thy conscience, slipperiness into thy memory, and in a word, hath put every wheel of thy soul out of order, and made it of an habitation of holiness to become a very hell of iniquity, James 3. 6. This is that that hath defiled, corrupted, perverted all thy members, and turned them into weapons of unrighteousness, and servants of sin, Rom. 6. 19. that hath filled the head with carnal and corrupt designs, Mic. 2. 1. the hand with sinful practices, Isa. 1. 15. the eyes with wandering and wantonness, 2 Pet. 2. 14. the tongue with deadly poison, James 3. 8. that hath opened the ears to tales, flattery, and filthy communication, and shut them against the instruction of life, Zech. 7. 11• 12. and hath rendered thy heart a very mint and forge for sin, and the cursed womb of all deadly conceptions, Mat. 15. 16. So that it poureth forth its wickedness without ceasing 2 Pet. 2. 14. even as naturally, freely, and unweariedly, as a fountain doth pour forth its waters, Ier. 6. 7. or the raging Sea doth cast forth mire and dirt, Isa. 57. 20. And wilt thou yet be in love with thyself, and tell us any longer of thy good heart? O never leave meditating on this desperate contagion of original corruption, till with E•hraim thou bemoan thyself, Ier. 31. 18. and with deepest shame and sorrow smite on thy breast as the Publican, Luke 18. 13. and with Job abhor thyself, and repent in dust and ashes, Job 42. 6, 22. The particular evil that thou art most addicted to. Find out all its aggravations. Set home upon thy heart all God's threatenings against it. Repentance drives before it the whole herd, but especially sticks the arrow in the beloved sin, and singles this out, above the rest, to run it down, Psal. 18. 23. O labor to make this sin odious to thy soul, and double thy guards, and thy resolutions against it, because this hath, and doth, most dishonor God and endanger thee.

Direct. III. Strive to affect thy heart with a deep sense of thy present misery. Read over the foregoing Chapter again, and again, and get it out of the Book into thine heart. Remember when thou liest down, that for ought thou knowest, thou mayst awake in flames, and when thou risest up, that by the next night thou mayst make thy bed in Hell. Is it a just matter to live in such a fearful case? to stand tottering upon the brink of the bottomless Pit, and to live at the mercy of every disease, that if it will but fall upon thee, will send thee forthwith into the burnings? Suppose thou sawest a condemned wretch hanging ove•Nebuchadnezzar's burning fiery furnace, by nothing but a twine thread, which were ready to break every moment, would not thine heart tremble for such an one? Why thou art the man: This is thy very case, O man, woman, that readest this, if thou be yet unconverted. What if the thread of thy life should break? (Why, thou knowest not but it may be the next night, yea the next moment) where wouldst thou be then? Whither wouldst thou drop? Verily upon the crack but of this thread, thou fallest into the lake that burneth with Fire and Brimstone where thou must lie scalding and sweltering in a fiery Ocean, while God hath a Being, if thou die in thy present Case. And doth not thy soul tremble as thou readest? Do not thy tears bedew the paper, and thy heart throb in thy bosom? Dost thou not yet begin to smite on thy breast, and bethink thyself what need thou hast of a change? O what is thy heart made of? Hast thou not only lost all regard to God, but art without any love and pity to thyself?

O study thy misery, till thy heart do cry out for Christ, as earnestly, as ever a drowning man did for a Boar, or the wounded for a Chirurgeon. Men must come to see the danger, and feel the smart of their deadly sores and sickness, or else Christ will be to them a Physician of no value, Mat. 9. 12. Then the man-slayer hastens to the City of refuge, when pursued by the avenger of blood. Men must be even forced and fired out of themselves, or else they will not come to Christ. •Twas distress and extremity, that made the Prodigal think of returning, Luke 15. 16, 17. While L••o•icea thinks herself rich, increased in goods, in need of nothing, there is little hope. She must be deeply convinced of her wretchedness, blindness, poverty, nakedness, before she will come to Christ for his gold, raiment, eye-salve, Rev 3. 17, 18. Therefore hold the eyes of conscience open, amplify thy misery as much as possible. Do not fly the sight of it, for fear it should fill thee with terror. The sense of thy misery is but as it were the suppuration of the wound, which is necessary to the Cure. Better •ear the torments that abide thee now, than feel them hereafter.

Direct. IV. Settle it upon thy heart, that thou art under an everlasting inability ever to recover thyself. Never think thy praying, reading, hearing, con••sing, amending will do the Cure. These must be attended; but thou art undone if thou restest in them, Rom. 10. 3. Thou art a lost man, if thou hopest to escape drowning upon any other plank• but Jesus Christ, Acts 4. 12. Thou must unlearn t•y self, and renounce thine own wisdom, thine own righteousness, thine own strength, and throw thyself wholly upon Christ, as a man that swimmeth casteth himself upon the water, or else thou canst not escape. While men trust in themselves, and establish their own righteousness, and have confidence in the flesh, they will not come savingly to Christ, Luke 18. 9. Phil. 3. 3. Thou must know thy gain to be but loss and dung, thy strength but weakness, thy righteousness rags and rottenness, before there will be an effectual closure between Christ and thee, Phil. 3. 7, 8, 9. 2 Cor. 3. 5. Isa. 64. 6. Can the lifeless carcass shake off its grave cloths, and loose the bonds of death? Then mayst thou recover thyself who art dead in trespasses and sins, and under an impossibility of serving thy Maker, (acceptably) in this condition, Rom. 8. 8. Heb. 1. 6. Therefore when thou goest to pray, or meditate, or to do any of the duties, to which thou art here directed, go out of thyself, call in the help of the Spirit, as despairing to do anything pleasing to God, in thine own strength. Yet neglect not thy duty, but lie at the pool, and wait in the way of the Spirit. While the Eunuch was reading, then the Holy Ghost sent Philip to him, Acts 8. 28, 29. when the Disciples were praying, Acts 4. 31. when Cornelius and his friends were hearing, Acts 10. 44. then the Holy Ghost fell upon them, and filled them all. Strive to give up thyself to Christ: Strive to pray, strive to meditate, strive an hundred and an hundred times, try to do it as well as thou canst, and while thou art endeavoring in the way of thy duty, the Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee, and help thee to do, what of thyself thou art utterly unable unto, Prov. 1. 23.

Direct. V. Forthwith renounce all thy sins. If thou yield thyself to the contrary practice of any sin, thou art undone, Rom. 6. 17. in vain dost thou hope for life by Christ, except thou d•part from iniquity, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Forsake thy sins, or else thou canst not find mercy, Prov. 28. 13. Thou canst not be married to Christ except divorced from sin. Give up the Traitor, or you can have no peace with Heaven. Cast the head of Sheba over the wall. Keep not Delilah in thy lap. Thou must part with thy sins, or with thy soul. Spare but one sin, and God will not spare thee. Never make excuses, thy sins must die, or thou must die for them, Psal. 68. 21. If thou allow of one sin, though but a little, a secret one, though thou mayest plead necessity, and have a hundred. shifts and excuses for it, the life of thy soul must go for the life of that sin, Ezek. 18. 21. and will it not be dearly bought?

O sinner, hear and consider. If thou wilt part with thy sins, God will give thee his Christ; Is not this a fair exchange? I testify unto thee this day, that if thou perish, it is not because there was never a Savior provided, nor life tendered, but because thou preferredst (with the Jews) the Murderer before thy Saviour, sin before Christ, and lovedst darkness rather than light, John 3. 19. Search thy heart therefore with Candles, as the Jews did their Houses for Leaven, before the Passover: Labor to find out thy sins, enter into thy Closet, and consider, What evil have I lived in? What duty have I neglected towards God? What sin have I lived in against my Brother? And now strike the darts through the heart of thy sin, as I•ab did through Absalom's, 2 Sam. 18. 14. Never stand looking upon thy sin, nor rolling the morsel under thy tongue, Job 20. 11. but spit it out as poison, with fear and detestation. Alas, what will thy sins do for thee, that thou shouldst stick at parting with them? They will flatter thee, but they will undo thee, and cut thy throat, while they smile upon thee, and poison thee while they please thee, and arm the justice and wrath of the infinite God against thee. They will open Hell for thee, and pile up fuel to burn thee. Behold the Gibbet that they have prepared for thee. Oh serve them like Haman, and do upon them the Execution, they would else have done upon thee. Away with them, crucify them, and let Christ only be Lord over thee.

Direct. VI. Make a solemn choice of God for thy portion and blessedness, Deut. 26. With all possible devotion and veneration avouch the Lord for thy God. Set the world with all its glory, and paint, and gallantry, with all its pleasures and promotions on the one hand, and set God with all his infinite excellencies, and perfections on the other, and see that thou do deliberately make thy choice, Josh. 24. 15. Take up thy rest in God, Job. 6. 68. Set thee down under his shadow, Cant. 2. 3. Let his promises and perfections turn the scale against all the world. Settle it upon thy heart that the Lord is an all-sufficient portion, that thou canst not be miserable, while thou hast a God to live upon, take him for thy shield and exceeding great reward. God alone is more than all the world. Content thyself with him. Let others carry the preferments and glory of the world, place thou thy happiness in his favor, and the light of his countenance, Psal. 4. 6, 7.

Poor sinner, thou art fallen off from God, and hast engaged his power, and wrath against thee. Yet know that of his abundant grace, he doth offer to be thy God again in Christ, 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18. What sayest thou man? Wilt thou have the Lord for thy God? Why, take this counsel, and thou shalt have him. Come to him by his Christ, John. 14. 6. Renounce the Idols of thine own pleasures, gain, reputation, 1 Thes. 1. 9. Let these be pulled out of the Throne, and set God's interest uppermost in thine ear. Take him as God, to be chief in thine affections, estimations, intentions; for he will not endure to have any set above him, Rom. 1. 24, Psal. 73. 25. In a word, thou must take him in all his Personal Relations, and in all his Essential Perfections.

First, In all his Personal Relations. God the Father must be taken for thy Father, Ier. 3. 4, 19, 22. O come to him with the Prodigal, Father, I have sinned against Heaven, and in thy sight, and am not worthy to be called thy Son, but since of thy wonderful mercy, thou art pleased to take me, that am of myself a dog, a swine, a devil, to be thy child, I solemnly take thee for my Father, commend myself to thy care, and trust to thy providence, and cast my burden on thy shoulders. I depend on thy provision, and submit to thy corrections, and trust under the shadow of thy wings, and hide in thy chambers, and lie to thy name. I renounce all confidence in myself, I repose my confidence in thee, I depose my concernments with thee. I will be for thee, and for no other. Again, God the Son must be taken for thy Savior, for thy Redeemer and Righteousness, John 1. 2. He must be accepted as the only way to the Father, and the only means of Life, Heb. 7. 25. O then put off the raiment of thy captivity, on with the wedding garment, and go and marry thyself to Jesus Christ. Lord I am thine, and all that I have, my body, my soul, my name, my estate. I send a bill of divorce to my other lovers. I give my heart to thee, I will be thine undividedly, thine ever lastingly. I will set thy name on all I have, and use it only as thy goods, as thy loan during thy leave, resigning ad to thee. I will have no King but thee: Reign thou over me. Other Lord's have had dominion over me: But now I will make mention of thy name only, and do here take an oath of fealty to thee, promising and vowing to serve, and love, and hear thee, above all competitors. I disavow mine own righteousness, and despair of ever being pardoned and saved for mine own duties, or graces, and lean only on thine all-sufficient sacrifice and intercession, for pardon, and life, and acceptance before God. I take thee for mine only guide and instructor, resolving to be led and directed by thee, and to wait for thy counsel, and that thine shall be the casting voice with me. Lastly, God the Spirit must be taken for thy sanctifier. Rom. 8. 9, 14. Gal. 5. 16, 18. for thine Advocate, thy Counselor, thy Comforter, the teacher of thine ignorance, the pledge and earnest of thine inheritance, Rom. 8. 26. Psal. 73. 24. John 14. 16. Eph. 1. 14. John 14. 26. Eph. 4. 30. Awake thou North wind, and come thou South, and blow upon my Garden, Cant. 4. 16. Come, thou Spirit of the most high here is a house for thee, here is a Temple for thee. Here do thou rest forever; dwell here, and rest here. Lo, I give up the possession to thee, full possession. I send thee the keys of my heart, that all may be for thy use, that thou mayst put thy goods, thy grace into every Room. I give up the use of all to thee, that every faculty, and every member may be thine instrument, to work righteousness, and do the will of my Father which is in Heaven.

Secondly, In all his essential perfections. Consider how the Lord hath revealed himself to you in his word: will you take him as such a God? O sinner, here's the blessedest News that ever came to the sons of Men. The Lord will be thy God, Gen. 17. 7. Rev. 21. 3. if thou wilt but close with him in his excellencies. Wilt thou have the merciful, the gracious, the sin-pardoning God, to be thy God? O yes, (saith the sinner,) I am undone else. But he farther tells thee, I am the holy and sin-hating God. If thou wilt be owned as one of my people, thou must be holy, 1 Pet. 1. 16. holy in heart, holy in life. Thou must put away all thine iniquities, be they never so near, never so natural, never so necessary to the maintaining thy fleshly interest. Unless thou wilt be at defiance with sin, I cannot be thy God. Cast out the leaven, put away the evil of thy doings, cease to do evil, learn to do well, or else I can have nothing to do with thee, Isa.

1. 16, 17, 18. Bring forth mine enemies, or there is no peace to be had with me. What doth thine heart answer? Lord I desire to have thee as such a God. I desire to be holy as thou art holy, to be made partaker of thy holiness. I love thee, not only for thy goodness and mercy, but for thy holiness and parity. I take thy holiness for my happiness. Oh! be to me a fountain of holiness: set on me the stamp and impress of thy holiness, I will thankfully part with all my sins at thy command. My wi•full sins I do forthwith forsake; and for my infirmities that I cannot get rid of, though I would, I will strive against them in the use of the mea•s. I detest them, and will pray and war against them, and never let them have quiet rest in my soul. Beloved, whosoever of you will thus accept of the Lord for his God, he shall have him.

Again, he tells you; I am the All-sufficient God, Gen. 17. 1. Will you lay all at my feet, and give it up to my dispose, and take me for your only portion? Will you own and honor mine All-sufficiency? Will you take me as your happiness and treasure, your hope and bliss? I am a Sun and a Shield, all in one: will you have me for your all? Gen. 15. 1. Psal 84. 11. Now what dost thou say to this? Doth thy mouth water after the Onions and Fleshpots of Egypt? Art thou loath to exchange the earthly happiness, for a part in God, and though thou wouldest be glad to have God and the World too, yet canst thou not think of having him, and nothing but him, but hadst rather take up with the earth below, if God would but let thee keep it, as long as thou wouldest? This is a fearful sign. But now if thou art willing to sell all for the Pearl of great price, Mat. 13. 46. If thine heart answer, Lord I desire no other portion but thee. Take the Corn, and the Wine, and the Oil whoso will, so I may have the light of thy Countenance. I pitch upon thee for my happiness, I gladly venture myself on thee, and trust myself with thee. I set my hopes in thee, I take up my rest with thee, let me hear thee say, I am thy God, thy Salvation, and I have enough, all I wish for. I will make no terms with thee, but for thyself. Let me but have thee sure, let me •e able to make my claim, and see my Title to thyself, and for other things, I leave them to thee, give me more or $\langle \diamond \rangle$, anything or nothing, I will be satisfied in my God. Take him thus, and he is thine own.

Again, he tells you; I am the Sovereign Lord: If you will have me for your God, you must give me the supremacy, Mat. 6. 24. I will not be an underling. You must not make me a second to sin, or $\langle \diamond \rangle$ worldly interest. If you will be my people, I must have the rule over you. You must not live at your down list. Will you come under my yoke? Will you bow to my government? Will you submit to my discipline? to my word? to my rod? Sinner, What sayest thou to this? Lord I had rather be •t thy command, than live at mine own list, I had rather have thy •ill to be done, than mine, I approve of and consent to thy Laws, and account it my privilege to lie under them. And though the flesh rebel, and often break over bounds, I am resolved to take no other Lord but thee. I willingly take the Oath of thy supremacy, and acknowledge thee for my Liege Sovereign, and resolve all my days to pay the tribute of Worship, Obedience, and Love, and Service is thee, and to live to thee, as the end of my Life. This is a right accepting of God.

To be short, he tells you; I am the true and faithful God. If you wi•l have me for your God, you must be content to trust me, 2 Tim. 1. 12. Prov. 3. 5. Will you venture yourselves upon my word, and depend on my faithfulness, and take my bond for your security? Will you be content to follow me, in poverty, and reproach, and affliction here, and to see much going out, and little coming in, and to tarry till the next world for your preferment? Mat. 9. 21. I deal much upon trust, will you be content to labor, and suffer, and to tarry for your returns till the Resurrection of the Just? Luke 14. 14. The womb of my Promise will not presently bring forth; will you have the patience to wait? Heb. 10. 36. Now Beloved, what say you to this? Will you have this God for your God? Will you be content to live by faith, and trust him for an unseen happiness, an unseen heaven, an unseen glory? Do your hearts answer, Lord we will venture ourselves upon thee, we commit ourselves to thee: We roll upon thee, we know whom we have trusted, we are willing to take thy word, we will prefer thy promises before our own possessions; and the hopes of Heaven before all the enjoyments of the Earth. We will wait thy leisure. What thou wilt here, so that we may have but thy faithful promise for Heaven hereafter. If you can in truth, and upon deliberation, thus accept of God, he will be yours. Thus there must be in a right conversion to God, a closing with him suitable to his excellencies. But when men close with his mercy, but yet love sin, hating holiness and purity, or will take him for their Benefactor, but not for their Sovereign; or for their Patron, but not for their Portion, this is no thorough, and no sound Conversion.

Direct. VII. Accept of the Lord Jesus in all his Offices, with all his inconveniences, as thine. Upon these terms Christ may be had. Sinner, thou hast undone thyself, and art plunged into the Ditch of most deplorable misery out of which thou art never able to climb up. But Jesus Christ is able and ready to help thee, and he freely tenders himself to thee, Heb. 7. 25. John 3. 36. Be thy sins never so many, never so great, of never so long continuance, yet thou shalt be most certainly pardoned and saved, if thou dost not wretchedly neglect the offer that in the name of God is here made unto thee. The Lord Jesus calleth unto thee, to look unto him and be saved, Isa. 45. 22. to come unto him, and he will in no wise cast thee out, John 6. 37. Yea he is a suitor to thee, and beseecheth thee to be reconciled, 2 Cor. 5. 20. he crieth in the streets, he knocketh at thy door, he wooeth thee to accept of him, and live with him, Prov. 1. 20. Rev. 2. 30. If thou diest 'tis because thou wouldst not come to him for life, John 5. 40. Now accept of an offered Christ, and thou art made forever. Now give up thy consent to him, and the match is made, all the world cannot hinder it. Do not stand off because of thine unworthiness. Man, I tell thee, nothing in all the world can undo thee, but thine unwillingness. Speak man, art thou willing of the match? Wilt thou have Christ in all his relations to be thine; thy King, thy Priest, thy Prophet? Wilt thou have him with all his inconveniences? Take not Christ hand over head, but sit down first, and count the cost. Wilt thou lay all at his feet? Wilt thou be content to run all hazards with him? Wilt thou take thy lot with him, fall where it will? Wilt thou deny thyself, take up thy Cross, and follow him? Art thou deliberately, understandingly, freely, fixedly, determined to leave to him in all times, and conditions? If so, my soul for thine, thou shalt never perish, John 3. 16. but art passed from death to life. Here lies the main point of thy salvation, that thou be found in thy covenant-closure with Jesus Christ, and therefore if thou love thyself, see that thou be faithful to God and thy soul ere.

Direct. VIII. Resign up all thy powers and faculties, and thy whole interest to be his. They gave their own selves unto the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. Present your bodies as a living Sacrifice, Rom. 12. 1. The Lord seeks not yours, but you. Resing therefore thy body with all its members to him, and thy soul with all its powers, that he may be glorified in thy body and in thy spirit which are his, 1 Cor. 6. 20. In a right closure with Christ, all the faculties give up to him. The Judgment subscribes, Lord thou art worthy of all acceptation, chief of ten thousand: Happy is the man that fineth thee. All the things that are to be desired, are not to be compared with thee, Prov. 3. 13, 14, 15. The understanding lays aside its corrupt reasonings and cavils, and its prejudices against Christ and his ways. It is now past questioning and disputing, and casts it for Christ against all the World. It concludes, it's good to be here, and sees such a treasure in this field, such value in this pearl, as is worth all, Mat. 13. 44. Oh here's the richest bargain that ever I made, here's the richest prize that ever man was offered, here's the sovereignest remedy that ever mercy prepared, he is worthy of my esteem, worthy of my choice, worthy of my love, worthy to be embraced, <...>, admired forever more, Rev. 5. 12. I approve of his <ϕ> his terms are righteous & reasonable, full of equity and mercy. Again the will resigns. It stands no longer wavering, nor wishing and wounding but is peremptorily determined: Lord thy love hath overcome me, thou hast won me, and thou shalt have me: Come in Lord, to thee I freely open, I consent to be saved in thine own way, thou shalt have anything, thou shall have all, let me have but thee. The memory gives up to Christ: Lord here is a storehouse for thee. Out with this trash, lay in thy treasure. Let me be a granary, a repository of thy truths, thy promises, thy providences. The Conscience comes in; Lord I will ever side with thee. I will be thy faithful Register, I will warn when the sinner is tempted, and smite when thou art offended. I will witness for thee, and judge for thee, and guide into thy ways, and will never let sin have quiet in this soul. The affections also come in to Christ. O saith love, I am sick of thee. O saith desire, now I have my longing. Here's the satisfaction I sought for. Here's the desire of Nations. Here's bread for me, and balm for me, all that I want. Fear bows the knee with awe and veneration. Welcome Lord, to thee will I pay my homage. Thy word and thy rod shall command my motions. Thee will I reverence and adore, before thee will I fall down and worship. Grief likewise puts in, Lord thy displeasure and thy dishonor, thy people's calamities, and mine own iniquities shall be that that shall set me abroad, I will mourn when thou art offended, I will weep when thy cause is wounded: Anger likewise comes in for Christ: Lord nothing so enrages me, as my folly against thee, that I should be so befooled and bewitched as to hearken to the flatteries of sin, and temptations of Satan against thee. Hatred too will side with Christ. I protest mortal enmity with thine enemies that I will never be friends with thy foes, I vow an immortal quarrel with every sin. I will give no quarter, I will make no peace. Thus let all thy powers give up to Jesus Christ.

Again, thou must give up thy whole interest to him. If there be anything that thou keepest back from Christ it will be thine undoing, Luke. 14. 33. Unless thou wilt forsake all (in preparation and resolution of thy heart) thou canst not be his Disciple. Thou must hate Father and Mother, yea and thine own life also in comparison of him, and as far as it stands in competition with him, Mat. 10. 37. Luke 14. 26, 27, &c. In a word, thou must give him thyself, and all that thou hast without reservation, or else thou canst have no part in him.

Direct. IX. Make choice of the Laws of Christ as the rule of thy words, thoughts and actions, Psal. 119. 30. This is the true Converts choice. But here remember these three rules. 1. You must choose them all. There's no coming to Heaven by a partial obedience; Read Psal. 119. 6, 128, 160. Ezek. 18. 21. None may think it enough to take up with the cheap and easy part of Religion, and let alone the duties that are costly, and self-denying, and grate upon the interest of the flesh.

You must take all or none. A sincere Convert, though he makes most conscience of the greatest sins and weightiest duties; yet he makes true conscience of little sins, and of all duties, Psal. 119. 6, 113. Mat. 23. 23. 2. For all times, for prosperity, and for adversity, whether it rain or shine. A true Convert is resolved in his way, he will stand to his choice, and will not set his back to the wind, and be of the religion of the times. I have stuck to thy testimonies, I have inclined my heart to perform thy statutes always, even to the end. Thy testimonies have I taken, as an heritage forever, Psal. 119. 31, 111, 117, 44, 93. I will have respect unto thy statutes continually. 3. This must not be done hand over head, but deliberately and understandingly. That disobedient Son said, I go •ir, but he went not, Mat. 24. 30. How fairly did they promise? All that the Lord our God shall speak unto thee, we will do it; and it's like they spake as they meant, but when it came to trial it was found that there was not such a heart in them, as to do what they had promised, Deut. 5. 27, 29. If you would be sincere in closing with the laws and ways of Christ, First, Study the meaning, and latitude and compass of them. Remember, that they are very spiritual: they reach the very thoughts and inclinations of the heart; so that if you will walk by this rule, your very thoughts and inward motions must be under government. Again, that they are very strict and self-denying, quite contrary to the grain of your natural inclinations, Mat. 16. 24. You must take the strait gate, the narrow way, and be content to have the flesh curbed from the liberty it desires, Mat. 7. 14. In a word, that they are very large: For thy Commandment is exceeding broad, Psal. 119. 96. Secondly, rest not in generals (for there's much deceit in that) but bring down thy heart to the particular commands of Christ. Those Jews in the Prophet seemed as well resolved as any in the world, and called God to witness, that they meant as they said: But they stuck in generals. When God's command crosses their inclination, they will not obey, Ier. 42. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. compared with Chap. 43. v. 2. Take the Assemblies larger Catechism, and see their excellent and most compendious exposition of the Commandments, and put thy heart to it. Art thou resolved in the strength of Christ, to set upon the conscientious practice of every duty that thou findest to be there required of thee, and to set against every sin that thou findest there forbidden? This is the way to be found in God's statutes, that thou mayest never be ashamed, Psal. 119. 80. Thirdly, Observe the special duties that thy heart is most against, and the special sins that 'tis most inclined unto, and see whether it be truly resolved to perform the one, and forgo the other. What sayest thou to thy bosom sin, thy gainful sin? What sayest thou to costly and hazardous, and flesh displeasing duties? If thou hal•est here, and dost not resolve, by the grace of God, to cross thy flesh, and put to it, thou art unsound, Psal. 18. 23. Psal. 119. 6.

Direct. X Let all this be completed in a solemn Covenant between God and thy soul, Psalm 119. 106. Neh, 10. 29. For thy better help therein, take these few Directions.

First, Set apart some time, more than once to be spent in secret before the Lord.

1. In seeking earnestly his special assistance, and gracious acceptance of thee.
2. In considering distinctly all the terms or conditions of the Covenant, expressed in the form hereafter proposed.

3. In searching thine heart, whether thou art sincerely willing to for sake all thy sins, and to resign up thyself, body and soul unto God, and his service, to serve him in holiness and righteousness, all the days of thy life.

Secondly, Compose thy Spirit into the most serious frame possible, suitable to a transaction of so high importance.

Thirdly, Lay hold on the Covenant of God, and rely upon his promise of giving grace and strength, whereby thou mayest be enabled to perform thy promise. Trust not to thine own strength, to the strength of thine own resolutions, but take hold on his strength

Fourthly, Resolve to be faithful, having engaged thine heart, opened thy mouth, and subscribed with thy hand unto the Lord, resolve in his strength never to go back.

Lastly, Being thus prepared, on some convenient time set apart for the purpose, set upon the work, and in the most solemn manner possible, as if the Lord were visibly present before thine eyes, fall down on thy knees, and spreading forth thine hands toward Heaven, open thine heart to the Lord in these, or the like words.

O Most dreadful God, for the Passion of thy Son, I beseech thee accept of thy poor Prodidigal now prostrating himself at thy Door; I have fallen from thee by mine iniquity, and am by Nature a Son of Death, and a thousand-fold more the Child of Hell by my wicked practice: But of thine infinite Grace thou hast promised Mercy to me in Christ if I will but turn to Thee with all my Heart: Therefore upon the Call of thy Gospel, I am now come in, and throwing down my weapons, submit myself to thy Mercy.

And because thou requirest, as the Condition of my Peace with Thee, that I should put away mine Idols and be at defiance with all thine Enemies, which I acknowledge I have wickedly sided with against Thee, I here from the bottom of my heart renounce them all, firmly Covenanting with thee not to allow myself in any known sin; but conscientiously to use all the means that I know thou hast prescribed, for the death and utter destruction of all my corruptions. And whereas I have formerly inordinately and idolatrously let out my affections upon the World, I do here resign up my heart to Thee that madest it, humbly protesting before thy Glorious Majesty, that it is the firm resolution of my heart, and that I do unfeignedly desire Grace from Thee, that when thou shalt call me hereunto, I may practice this my resolution through thy assistance, to forsake all that is dear unto me in this world, rather than to turn from thee to the ways of sin; and that I will watch against all its temptations, whether of Prosperity, or Adversity, lest they should withdraw my heart from thee: beseeching thee also to help me against the temptations of Satan, to whose wicked Suggestions I resolve by thy grace never to yield myself a Servant. And because my own righteousness is but menstruous rags• I renounce all confidence therein, and acknowledge that I am of myself a hopeless, helpless, undone creature, without righteousness or strength.

And forasmuch as thou hast of thy bottomless Mercy offered most graciously to me wretched sinner, to be again my God through Christ, if I would accept of thee: I call Heaven and Earth to record this day, that I do here solemnly avouch thee for the Lord my God, and with all possible veneration, bowing the neck of my Soul under the feet of thy most Sacred Majesty, I do here take thee, Lord Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, for my Portion, and chief good, and to give up myself, Body and Soul, for thy Servant, promising and vowing to serve thee in Holiness and Righteousness all the days of my life.

And since thou hast appointed the Lord Jesus Christ, the only means of coming unto thee, I do here upon the bended knees of my Soul accept of him as the only new and living way, by which sinners may have access to thee, and do here solemnly join myself in Marriage Covenant to him.

O Blessed Jesus, I come to thee hungry and hardly bested, poor and wretched, and miserable, and blind, and naked; a most loathsome, polluted wretch, a guilty, condemned Malefactor, unworthy forever to wash the feet of the servants of my Lord, much more to be solemnly married to the King of Glory, but since such is thine unparalleled love, I do here with all my power accept thee, and do take thee for my Head and Husband, for better for worse, for richer, for poorer, for all times and conditions, to love, honor, and obey thee before all others, and this to the death; I embrace thee in all thine offices: I renounce mine own worthiness, and do here avow thee to be the Lord my Righteousness, I renounce mine own wisdom, and do here take thee for mine only guide? I renounce mine own Will, and take thy Will for my Law.

And since thou hast told me that I must suffer if I will reign, I do here Covenant with thee to take my Lot, as it falls, with thee, and by thy grace assisting, to run all hazards with thee, verily supposing that neither life nor death shall part between thee and me.

And because thou hast been pleased to give me thy holy laws, as the rule of my life, and the way in which I should walk to thy Kingdom, I do here willingly put my Neck under thy Yoak, and set my shoulder to thy burden; and subscribing to all thy Laws, as holy, just, and good, I solemnly take them as the rule of my words, thoughts and actions, promising that though my flesh contradict and rebel, yet I will endeavor to order and govern my whole life according to thy direction, and will not allow myself in the neglect of anything that I know to be my duty.

Only because through the frailty of my flesh, I am subject to many failings; I am bold humbly to protest, That unallowed miscarriages, contrary to the settled bent and resolution of my heart, shall not make void this Covenant, for so thou hast said.

Now Almighty God, searcher of hearts, thou knowest that I make this Covenant with thee this day, without any known guile, or reservation, beseeching thee, that if thou espiest any flaw or falsehood therein, thou wouldst discover it to me, and help me to do it aright.

And now glory be to thee, O God the Father, whom I shall be bold from this day forward, to look upon as my God and Father, that ever thou shouldst find out such a way for the recovery of undone sinners. Glory be to thee, O God the Son, who hast loved me, and washed me from my sins in thine own Blood, and art now become my Savior and Redeemer. Glory be to thee, O God the Holy Ghost, who by the finger of thine Almighty Power hast turned about my Heart from Sin to God.

O dreadful Jehovah, the Lord God Omnipotent, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, thou art now become my Covenant friend, and I through thine infinite Grace, am become thy Covenant Servant, Amen. So be it. And the Covenant which I have made on Earth let it be ratified in Heaven.

The AUTHORS Advice.

THIS Covenant I advise you to make, not only in Heart, but in Word; not only in Word, but in Writing; and that you would with all possible reverence spread the Writing before the Lord, as if you would present it to him as your Act and Deed. And when you have done this, set your hand to it. Keep it ‹◊› a Memorial of the Solemn Transactions that have passed between God and you, that you may have recourse to it in Doubts and Temptations.

Direct. XI. Take heed of delaying thy Conversion, and set upon a speedy and present turning. I made haste, and delayed not, Psal. 119. 60. Remember, and tremble at the sad instance of the foolish Virgins, that came not till the door of mercy was shut, Mat. 25. and of a convinced Felix, that put off Paul to another season, and we never find that he had such a season more, Acts 24. 25. O come in while it is called today, lest thou shouldst be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin; lest thy day of grace should be over, and the things that belong to thy peace should be hid from thine eyes. Now mercy is wooing of thee. Now Christ is waiting to be gracious to thee, and the Spirit of God is striving with thee. Now Ministers are calling, now Conscience is stirring; now the Market is open, and Oil may be had, thou hast opportunity for the buying. Now Christ is to be had for the taking. Oh! strike in with the offers of Grace. Oh! now or never. If thou make light of this offer, God may swear in his wrath thou shalt never taste of his Supper, Luke 14. 24.

Direct. XII. Attend conscientiously upon the Word as the means appointed for thy Conversion, James 1. 18, 19. 1 Cor. 4. 15. Attend, I say, not customarily, but conscientiously; with this desire, design, hope and expectation, that thou mayest be converted by it. To every Sermon thou hearest, come with this thought, Oh, I hope God will now come in. I hope this day may be the time, this may be the man by whom God will bring me home. When thou art coming to the Ordinances, lift up thine heart thus to God. Lord let this be the Sabbath, let this be the Season, wherein I may receive renewing Grace. Oh let it be said, that today such a one was born unto thee.

Object. Thou wilt say, I have been long a hearer of the word, and yet it hath not been effectual to my Conversion. Ans. Yea, but thou hast not attended upon it in this manner, as a means of thy Conversion, nor with this design, nor praying for, and expecting of this happy effect of it.

Direct. XIII. Strike in with the Spirit, when he begins to work upon thy heart. When he works convictions, O do not stifle them, but join in with him, and beg the Lord to carry on convictions to conversion. Quench not the Spirit; do not out-strive him: do not resist him. Beware of putting out convictions by evil company, or worldly business. When thou findest any troubles for sin, and fears about thine eternal State, beg of God that they may never leave thee till they have wrought off thy heart thoroughly from sin, and wrought it over to Jesus Christ. Say to him, Strike home, Lord, leave not the work in the midst. If thou seest that I am not yet wounded enough, that I am not troubled enough, wound me yet deeper, Lord. O go to the bottom of my Corruption, let out the life-blood of my sins. Thus yield up thyself to the workings of the Spirit, and hoise thy Sails to his gusts.

Direct. XIV. Set upon the constant and diligent use of serious and fervent Prayer. He that neglects prayer, is a profane and unsanctified sinner, Job 15. 4. He that is not constant in prayer, is but an Hypocrite, Job 27. 10. (unless the Omission be contrary to his ordinary course, under the force of some instant temptation.) This is one of the first things Conversion appears in, that it sets men on praying, Acts 9. 11. Therefore set to this duty. Let never a day pass over thee, wherein thou hast not, Morning, and Evening, set apart some time for set and solemn prayer in secret. Call thy family also together daily and duly, to worship God with thee. Woe be unto thee if thine be found amongst the families that call not on God's name, Ier. 10. 25. But cold and lifeless devotions will not reach half way to Heaven. Be fervent, and importunate. Importunity will carry it. But without violence the Kingdom of Heaven will not be taken, Mat. 11. 12. Thou must strive to enter, Luke 13. 24. and wrestle with tears and supplications, as Jacob, if thou meanest to carry the blessing, Gen. 32. 24. comp. with Hos. 12. 4. Thou art undone forever without grace, and therefore thou must put to it, and resolve to take no denial. That man that is fixed in this resolution; Well I must have grace, and I will never give over, till I have grace, and I will never leave seeking and waiting, and striving with God, and mine own heart, till he do renew me by the power of his grace; this man is in the likeliest way to win Grace.

Obj. But God heareth not sinners, their prayer is an abomination.

Ans. Distinguish between sinners. 1. There are resolved sinners: their prayers God abhors. 2. Returning sinners; these God will come forth to, and meet with mercy, though yet afar off, Luke 15. 20. Though the prayers of the unsanctified cannot have full acceptance; yet God hath done much at the request of such, as at Ahab's humiliation, and Nineveh's Fast, 1 Kings 21. 26. Jonah 3. 8, 9, 10. Surely thou mayst go as far as these, though thou hast no grace: and how dost thou know but thou mayst speed in thy suit, as they did in theirs? Yea, is he not far more likely to grant thee, than them; since thou askest in the Name of Christ, and that not for temporal blessings, as they, but for things much more pleasing to him, viz. for Christ, Grace, Pardon, that thou mayst be justified, sanctified, renewed and fitted to serve him? Turn to these soul encouraging Scriptures, Prov. 2. 1, to 6. Luk. 11. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. Prov. 8. 34. 35.

Is it not good comfort, that he calleth thee? Mark 10. 49. Doth he set thee on the use of means, and dost thou think he will mock thee? Doubtless, he will not fail thee, if thou be not wanting to thyself. O pray and faint not, Luke 18. 1. A person of great Quality having offended the Duke of Buckingham, the Kings great Favorite, being admitted into his presence after long waiting, prostrates himself at his feet, saying, I am resolved never to rise more, till I have obtained your Grace's favor, with which carriage he did overcome him. With such a resolution, do thou throw thyself at the feet of God. 'Tis for thy life, and therefore follow him, and give not over. Resolve thou wilt not be put off with bones, with common mercies.

What though God do not presently open to thee? Is not grace worth the waiting for? Knock, and wait, and no doubt but sooner or later, mercy will come.

And this know, that thou hast the very same encouragement to seek and wait, that the Saints now in glory once had: for they were once in thy very case. And have they sped so well? and wilt thou not go to the same door, and wait upon God in the same course?

Direct. XV. Forsake thy evil Company, Prov. 9. 6. and forbear the occasions of sin, Prov. 23. 31. Thou wilt never be turned from sin till thou wilt decline and forego the temptations of sin.

I never expect thy Conversion from sin, unless thou art brought to some self-denial, as to fly the occasions. If thou wilt be •ibling at the bait, and playing on the brink, and tampering and meddling with the snare, thy soul will surely be taken. Where God doth expose men in his providence, unavoidably, to temptations, and the occasions are such as we cannot remove, we may expect special assistance in the use of his means. But when we tempt God by running into danger, he will not engage to support us, when we are tempted. And of all temptations one of the most fatal and pernicious, is evil company. Oh what hopeful beginnings have these often stifled! Oh the souls, the estates, the families, the towns that these have ruined! How many a poor sinner hath been enlightened, and convinced, and hath been just ready to give the Devil the slip, and hath even escaped his snare and yet wicked company have pulled him back at last, and made him seven fold more the Child of Hell. In one word, I have no hopes of thee, except thou wilt shake off thy evil company. Christ speaketh to thee, as to them, in another case; If thou seek me, then let these go their way, Joh. 18. 8. Thy life lies upon it: Forsake these, or else thou canst not live, Prov. 9. 6. Wilt thou be worse than the beast, to run on, when thou seest the Lord with a drawn sword in the way? Numb. 22. 33. Let this sentence be written in Capitals upon thy Conscience, A COMPANION OF FOOLS SHALL BE DESTROYED, Prov. 13. 20. The Lord hath spoken it, and who shall reverse it? And wilt thou run upon destruction, when God himself doth forewa• thee? If God do ever change thy heart it will appear in the change of thy company. Oh fear, and fly this Gulf by which so many thousand souls have been swallowed into perdition. It will be hard for thee indeed, to make thine escape. Thy Companions will be mocking thee out of thy Religion, and will study to fill thee with prejudices against strictness, as ridiculous and comfortless. They will be flattering thee, and alluring thee; but remember the warnings of the Holy Ghost, My Son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not. If they say come with us, e•st in thy lot among us; walk not thou in the way with them, refrain thy foot from their path. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away. For the way of the wicked is as darkness, they know not at what they stumble. They l•y wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives. Prov. 1. 10. to the 18. Prov. 4. 14. to the 19. My soul is moved within me, to see how many of my hearers are like to perish both they and their houses, by this wretched mischief, even the haunting of such places, and company, whereby th•y are drawn into sin, Once more I admonish you, as Moses did Israel, Num. 16. 26. And he spake unto the Congregation, saying, Depart, I pray you, from the Tents of these wicked men. Oh! flee them as you would those that had the Plague-Sores running in their fore-heads; these are the Devils Panders, and Decoys; and if thou dost not make thine escape, they will toll thee into perdition, and will prove thine eternal ruin.

Direct. XVI. Lastly, Set apart a day to humble thy soul in secret, by fasting and prayer, to work the sense of thy sins and miseries upon thy heart. Read over the Assemblies Exposition of the Commandments, and write down the duties omitted, and sins committed by thee against every Commandment, and so make a Catalogue of thy sins, and with shame and sorrow spread them before the Lord. And if thy heart be truly willing to the terms, join thyself solemnly to the Lord in that Covenant, set down in the IXth. Direction, and the Lord grant thee mercy in his sight.

Thus I have told thee, what thou must do to be saved. Wilt thou not now obey the voice of the Lord? Wilt thou arise and set to thy work? Oh man, what answer wilt thou make, what excuse wilt thou have, if thou shouldst perish at last through very willfulness, when thou hast known the way of life? I do not fear thy miscarrying, if thine own idleness do not at 〈◇〉 undo thee, in neglecting the use of the means, that are so plainly here prescribed. Rouze up, Oh sluggard, and ply thy work. Be doing, and the Lord will be with thee.

A Short Soliloquy for an Unregenerate Sinner.

AH wretched man that I am! What a condition have I brought myself into by sin? Oh! I see my heart hath but deceived me all this wh••e, in flattering me, that my condition was good. I see, I see, I am but a lost and undone man; forever undone, unless the Lord help me out of this condition. My sins! My sins! Lord, what an unclean, polluted wretch am I! more loathsome and odious to thee, than the most hateful Venom, or noisome carcase, can be to me. Oh! what a Hell of sin is in this heart of mine, which I have flattered myself to be a good heart? Lord, how universally am I corrupted, in all my parts, powers, performances? All the imaginations of the thoughts of my heart, are only evil, continually. I am under an inability to, averseness from, and enmity against anything that is good; and am prone to all that is evil. My heart is a very sink of all sin: And Oh the innumerable hosts, and swarms of sinful thoughts, words, and actions, that have flown from thence. Oh the load of guilt that is on my soul! My ••ad is •ull, my heartfull, my mind and my members, they are all full of sin. Oh my sins! How do they stare upon me! How do they witness against me! Woe i• me, my Creditors are upon me, every Commandm••• taketh hold upon me, for more than ten thousand 〈◇〉 Talents, yea ten thousand times ten thousand. How endless then is the sum of all my debts? If this whole world were filled up from Earth to Heaven with paper, and all this paper written over, within and without, by Arithmeticians: yet when all were case up together, it would come inconceivably short of what I owe to the least of God's Commandments. Woe unto me! for my debts are infinite, and my sins are increased. They are wrongs to an infinite Majesty: And if he that committeth Treason against a silken Mortal, is worthy to be racked, drawn and quartered: What have I deserved, that have so often lifted up my hand against Heaven, and have struck at the Crown and Dignity of the Almighty?

Oh my sins! my sins! Behold a Troop cometh! Multitudes! Multitudes! there is no number of their Armies. Innumerable evils have compassed me about: Mine iniquities have taken hold upon me; they have set themselves in array against me. Oh! it were better to have all the Regiments of Hell come against me, than to have my sins to fall upon me, to the spoiling of my soul. Lord, how am I surrounded? How many are they that rise up against me? They have beset me behind and before: They swarm within me and without me: They have possessed all my powers, and have fortified mine unhappy soul, as a Garrison, which this brood of Hell doth man, and maintain, against the God that made me.

And they are as mighty, as they be many. The Sands are many, but then they are not great: The Mountains great, but then they are not many. But woe is me! my sins are as many as the Sands, and as mighty as the Mountains. Their weight is greater than their number. It were better that the Rocks and the Mountains should fall upon me, than the crushing and insupportable load of my own sins. Lord, I am heavy laden; let mercy help, or I am gone. Unload me of this heavy guilt, this sinking load, or I am crushed without hope, and must be pressed down to Hell. If my grief were thoroughly weighed, and my sins laid in the balances together, they would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea, therefore my words are swallowed up: They would weigh down all the rocks and the hills, and turn the balance against all the Isles of the Earth. O Lord, thou knowest my manifold transgressions, and my mighty sins.

Ah my Soul! Alas my Glory / Whither art thou humbled? Once the Glory of the Creation, and the Image of God; now, a Lump of filthiness; a Coffin of rottenness, replenished with stench and loathsomeness. O what work hath sin made with thee? thou shalt be termed Forsaken, and all the rooms of thy faculties Desolate, and the name that thou shalt be called by is, Ichabod, or, Where is the Glory? How art thou come down mightily? My Beauty is turned into deformity, and my Glory into shame. Lord, what a loathsome Leper am I? The Ulcerous Bodies of Job or Lazarus were not more offensive to the eyes and nostrils of men, than I must needs be to the most holy God, whose eyes cannot behold iniquity.

And what misery have my sins brought upon me? Lord, what a case am I in? Sold under sin, cast out of God's favor, accursed from the Lord, cursed in my body, cursed in my soul, cursed in my name, in my estate, my relations, and all that I have. My sins are unpardoned, and my soul within a step of death. Alas! What shall I do? Whither shall I go? Which way shall I look? God is frowning on me from above; Hell gaping for me beneath; Conscience smiting me within; temptations and dangers surrounding me without. Oh, whither shall I flee? What place can hide me from Omniscience? What power can secure me from Omnipotency?

What meanest thou, O my soul, to go on thus? Art thou in league with Hell? Hast thou made a Covenant with Death? Art thou in love with thy misery? Is it good for thee to be here? Alas what shall I do! Shall I go on in my sinful ways? Why then certain damnation will be mine end: and shall I be so besotted and bemaddened, as to go and sell my soul to the flames, for a little Ale, and a little ease, for a little pleasure, or gain, or content to my flesh? Shall I linger any longer in this wretched estate? No, if I tarry here, I shall die; What then? Is there no help, no hope? None except I turn, Why, but is there any remedy for such woeful misery? Any mercy after such provoking iniquity? Yes, as sure as God's Oath is true, I shall have pardon, and mercy yet, if presently, unfeignedly, and unreservedly I turn by Christ to him.

Why then I thank thee upon the bended knees of my soul, O most merciful Jehovah, that thy Patience hath waited upon me hitherto: For hadst thou took me away in this estate, I had perished forever. And now I adore thy grace, and accept the offers of thy mercy. I renounce all my sins, and resolve by thy grace, to set myself against them, and to follow thee in holiness and righteousness all the days of my life.

Who am I, Lord, that I should make any claim unto thee, or have any part or portion in thee, who am not worthy to lick up the dust of thy feet! Yet since thou holdest forth the golden Scepter, I am bold, to come and touch. To despair, would be to disparage thy mercy; and to stand off when thou biddest me come, would be at once to undo myself, and rebel against thee, under the pretence of humility. Therefore I bow my soul to thee, and with all possible thankfulness accept thee, as mine, and give up myself to thee, as thine. Thou shalt be Sovereign over me, my King, and my God: Thou shalt be in the Throne, and all my powers shall bow to thee, they shall come and worship before thy feet. Thou shalt be my Portion, O Lord, and I will rest in thee.

Thou callest for my heart. O that it were any way fit for thine acceptance! I am unworthy, O Lord, everlastingly unworthy to be thine. But since thou wilt have it so, I freely give up my heart to thee: Take it; it is thine. Oh that it were better! But Lord, I put it into thine hand, who alone canst mend it. Mould it after thine own heart; make it as thou wouldst have it, holy, humble, heavenly, soft, tender, flexible, and write thy Law upon it.

Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly: Enter in triumphantly: take me up to thee forever. I give up to thee, I come to thee, as the only way to the Father, as the only Mediator, the means ordained to bring me to God. I have destroyed myself, but in thee is my help. Save Lord, or else I perish, I come to thee with the rope about my Neck. I am worthy to die, and to be damned. Never was the hire more due to the servant, never was penny more due to the laborer, then Death and Hell, my just wages, is due to $\langle \diamond \rangle$ for my sins. But I fly to thy merits, I trust alone to the value and virtue of thy Sacrifice, and preva•••cy of thine intercession. I submit to thy teaching, • make choice of thy Government. Stand open $\langle \dots \rangle$ doors, that the King of Glory may come in.

O thou spirit of the most high, the comforter and sanctifier of thy chosen; come in with all thy glorious train, all thy courtly $\langle \diamond \rangle$, thy fruits, and graces. Let ••e be thine habitacion. • I can give $\langle \diamond \rangle$ But what is thine $\langle \diamond \rangle$ already; but here with the poor Widow, I cas• my two mi•es, my soul, and my body into thy treasury; fully resigning them up to t••e, to be sanctified by thee, to be servants to thee. They it all •e thy Patients, Cure thou their Malady; they shall be thy Agents, Govern thou their Mo••c.s. Too long have I served the world, too long have I hearkened to Satan, but now I renounce them all, and will be ruled by thy Dictates, and Directions, and guided by thy Counsel.

O blessed Trinity! O glorious Unity! I deliver up myself to thee; receive me; write thy name, O Lord, upon me, and upon all that I have as thy proper goods. Set thy mark upon me, upon every member of my body, and every faculty of my soul. I have chosen thy precepts. Thy law will I lay before me: This shall be the Copy, which I will keep in my eye, and study to write after. According to this rule do I resolve, by thy Grace, to walk: After this law shall my whole man be governed. And though I cannot perfectly keep one of thy Commandments, yet I will allow myself in the breach of none. I know my flesh will hang back: But I resolve, in the power of thy Grace, to cleave to thee, and thy holy ways, what ever it cost me. I am sure I cannot come off a loser by thee, therefore I will be content with reproach, and difficulties, and hardships here, and will deny myself, and take up my Cross, and follow thee. Lord Jesus thy Yoke is easy, thy Cross is welcome, as it is the way to thee. I lay aside all hopes of worldly happiness. I will be content to tarry till I come to thee. Let me be poor and low, little and despised here, so I may but be admitted to live, and reign with thee hereafter. Lord, thou hast my heart and hand to this agreement. Be it as the laws of the Medes and Persians, never to be reversed. To this, I will stand; In this resolution, by Grace I will live and die. I have sworn and will perform it that I will keep thy righteous judgments. I have given my free consent, I have made my everlasting choice. Lord Jesus confirm the Contract, Amen.

Chap. VII. Containing the Motives to Conversion.

THOUGH what is already said of the Necessity of Conversion, and of the Miseries of the Unconverted, might be sufficient to induce any considering mind to resolve upon a present Turning, or Conversion unto God: Yet knowing what a piece of desperate obstinacy and untractableness the heart of man naturally is, I have thought it necessary, to add to the means of Conversion and Directions for a Covenant-closure with God in Christ, some Motives to persuade you hereunto.

O Lord, fail me not now at my last attempts. If any soul hath read hitherto, and be yet untouched, now Lord fasten in him and do thy work; Now take him by the heart, overcome him, persuade him, till he say• thou hast prevailed, for thou wast stronger than I. Lord; didst thou not make me a Fisher of men? And have I toiled all this while and caught nothing? Alas that I should have spent my strength for naught! And now I am casting my last; Lord Jesus, stand thou upon the Shore, and direct, how, and where I shall spread my Net, and let me so enclose with arguments the souls I seek for, that they may not be able to get out. Now Lord for a multitude of souls I Now for a full draught• O Lord God, remember me I pray thee, and strengthen me this once, O God.

But I turn me unto you.

Men and Brethren, Heaven and Earth do call upon you, yea Hell itself doth preach the Doctrine of Repentance unto you. The Angels of the Churches travel with you, Gal. 4. 19. the Angels of Heaven wait for you, for your repenting and turning unto God. O sinner, why should the Devils make merry with thee? Why shouldst thou be a morsel for that devouring Leviathan? Why should Harpies and Hell-Hounds tear thee, and make a feast upon thee, and when they have got thee into the Snare, and have fastened their Talons in thee, laugh at thy destruction, and deride thy misery, and sport themselves with thy damnable folly? This must be thy case, except thou turn. And were it not better thou shouldst be a joy to Angels, than a laughing stock and sport for Devils? Verily if thou wouldst but come in, the Heavenly Host would take up their Anthems, and sing, Glory be to God in the Highest; the Morning Stars would sing together, and all the Sons of God shout for joy, and celebrate this new Creation as they did the first. Thy Repentance would, as it were, make Holy-day in Heaven, and the glorious Spirits would rejoice in that there is a new Brother added to their society, Rev. 22. 9. another Heir born to their Lord, and the lost Son received safe and sound. The true penitents tears are indeed the Wine that cheereth both God and Man.

If it be little, that Men and Angels would rejoice at thy Conversion, know that God himself would rejoice over thee, even with singing, and rest in his love, Luke 15. 9. Isa. 62. 5. Never did Jacob with such joy weep over the Neck of his Joseph as thy Heavenly Father would rejoice over thee, upon thy coming in to him. Look over the Story of the Prodigal. Methinks I see how the Aged Father lays aside his estate, and forgets his years: Behold how he runneth! Luke 15. 20. Oh the haste that mercy makes! The Sinner makes not half that speed. Methinks I see how his Bowels turn, how his compassions yearn. (How quick-sighted is love!) Mercy spies him a great way off, forgets his riotous courses, unnatural rebellion, horrid unthankfulness, debauched practices (not a word of these) but receives him with open Arms, clasps about his Neck, forgets the nastiness of his Rags, kisses the Lips that deserve to be loathed, the Lips that had been joined to Harlots, that had been commoners with the Swine, calls for the fatted Calf, the best Robe, the Ring, the Shooes, the best cheer in Heavens Store, the best attire in Heavens Wardrobe, Luke 15. 6, 9, 23. yea the joy cannot be held in one breast, &c. others must be called to participate: the friends must meet and make merry. Angels must wait but the Prodigal must be set at the Table under his Fathers wing. He is the joy of the feast: He is the sweet subject of the Fathers delight. The Friends sympathize, but none knows the felicity the Father takes in his new born Son, whom he hath received from the dead. Methinks I hear the Music and the Dancing at a distance. Oh the Melody of the Heavenly Choristers! I cannot learn the Song, Rev. 14. 3. But methinks I over-hear the burden, at which all the harmonious Choir with one consent strikes sweetly in, for thus goes the round at Heavens Table, For this my Son was dead, and is alive again; was lost, and is found, Luke 5. 23, 24, 32. I need not farther explain the parable. God is the Father, Christ the Cheer, his Righteousness the Robe, his Graces the Ornaments, Ministers, Saints, Angels the Friends and Servants, and thou that readest (if thou wilt but unfeignedly repent and turn) the welcome Prodigal, the happy instance of all this grace, and blessed subject of this joy and love.

O Rock! Oh Adamant! What! not moved yet? not yet resolved to turn forthwith, and to close with mercy? I will try thee yet once again: If one were sent to thee from the dead, wouldst thou be persuaded? Why, hear the voice from the dead, from the damned, crying to thee that thou shouldst repent. I pray thee that thou wouldst send him to my Fathers house, for I have five Brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. If one went unto them from the dead, they will repent, Luke 16. 27, 28, &c. Hear, O man, thy Predecessors in impenitence Preach to thee from the infernal Gibbets, from the Flames, from the Rack, that thou shouldst repent. O look down into the bottomless Pit. Seest thou how the smoke of their torment ascendeth forever and ever, Rev. 14. 11. How black are the Fiends? How furious are their Tormentors? 'Tis their only music to hear how their miserable Patients roar, to hear their bones crack. 'Tis their meat and drink, to see how their flesh frieth and their fat droppeth, to drench them with burning metal, and to rip open their bodies, and to pour in the fierce burning brass into their bowels, and the recesses and ventricles of their hearts. What thinks• thou of those chains of darkness, of those instruments of cruelty? Canst thou be content to burn? Seest thou how the worm gnaweth, how the oven gloweth? how the fire rageth? What say'st thou to that River of Brimstone, that dark and horrible vault, that gulf of perdition? Wilt thou take up thy habitation here? O lay thine ear to the door of Hell. Hearest thou the curses and blasphemies, the weepings and the wailings, how they lament their folly, and curse their day? Mat. 22. 13. Rev. 16. 9. How do they roar and yell, and gnash their teeth? How deep are their groans? How feeling are their moans? How unconceivable are their miseries. If the shrieks of ⟨...⟩, and Abiram, were so terrible (when the Earth ⟨◇⟩ asunder, and opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and all that apperained to them,) that all Israel fled at the cry of them, ⟨◇⟩ 16. 3, 4. Oh how fearful would the cry be, if God should take off the covering, from the mouth of Hell, and let the cry of the damned ascend in all its terror among the Children or men? And of all their moans and miseries, this the piercing, killing emphasis and burden, forever, for ever. Why, as God liveth, that made thy soul, thou art but a few hours distant from all this, except thou repent and be converted.

Oh! I am even lost and swallowed up in the abundance of those arguments that I might suggest. If there be any point of wisdom in all the world, it is to repent and come in, if there be anything righteous, anything reasonable, this is it. If there be anything in the world that may be called madness, and folly, and anything that may be counted sottish, absurd, brutish, unreasonable, it is this, to go on in thine unconverted estate. Let me beg thee, as thou wouldst not willfully destroy thyself, to sit down and weigh, besides what hath been said, these following Motives, and let conscience speak, if it be not reason, that thou shouldst repent and turn.

1. The God that made thee doth most graciously invite thee.

First, His most sweet and merciful nature doth invite thee; Oh the kindness of God, his working bowels, his tender mercies! they are infinitely above our thoughts, higher than heaven, what can we do? Deeper than hell, what can we know? Job 11. 7, 8, 9. He is full of compassion, and gracious; long suffering, and plenteous in mercy, Psal. 86. 15. This is a great argument to persuade sinners to come in. Turn unto the Lord your God, for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil. If God would not repent of the evil, it were some discouragement to us, why we should not repent. If there were no hope of mercy, it were no such wonder, if rebels should stand out; but never had Subjects such a gracious Prince, such Piety, Patience, Clemency, pity to deal with, as you have. Who is a God like unto thee that pardoneth iniquity? &c. Mic. 7. 18. Oh sinners: See what a God you have to deal with; if you will but turn, He will turn again, and have compassion on you, he will subdue your iniquities, and cast all your sins into the depth of the Sea, V. 19. Return unto me, saith the Lord of Hosts, and I will return unto you, Mal. 3. 7. Zech. 1. 3. Sinners do not fail in that they have too high thoughts of God's mercies, but in that, 1. They overlook his Justice. 2. They promise themselves mercy out of God's way. His mercy is beyond all imagination, Isa. 55. 9. great mercies, 1 Chron. 21. 13. manifold mercies, Neh. 9. 19. tender mercies, Psal. 25. 6. sure mercies, Isa. 55. 3. everlasting mercies, Psal. 103. 17. Isa. 54. 8. and all thine own, if thou wilt but turn. Art thou willing to come in? Why the Lord hath laid aside his terror, erected a Throne of Grace, holds forth the golden Scepter: Touch and live. Would a merciful man slay his enemy, when prostrate at his feet, acknowledging his wrong, begging pardon, and offering to enter with him into a Covenant of peace? Much less will the merciful God. Study his Name, Exod. 34. 7. Read their experience, Neh. 9. 17.

