MALLORCA'S TOP 10

TOP 10 Highlights of Mallorca

Known variously as the "Golden Isle", the "Wooded Isle" and the "Tranquil Isle", Mallorca is all of these, despite its decades-long dependence on mass tourism. The island is laden with history and sights, from its castles and enchanted gardens to caves and spectacular mountains. The eastern and southern coasts still sport some of the cleanest, most beautiful beaches in the Mediterranean, and the city of Palma is more attractive, culturally alive and fun than ever.

Mural, Valldemossa

1 La Seu: Mallorca Cathedral

Looming over Palma Bay, the Gothic cathedral's immensity is beautifully counterpoised by its soft golden colour and delicate filigree-like carvings. Among treasures within are the tombs of Mallorca's first kings (see pp8–9).

2 Castell de Bellver

Standing sentinel on a hilltop, the castle of Bellver is immaculately preserved. Its walls have imprisoned queens and scholars, and they now contain an intriguing museum that evokes the island's past (see pp12–13).

3 Fundació Pilar i Joan Miró

The genius and visionary power of the consummate Catalan artist are concentrated here. Not only can you experience the full range of Joan Miró's work, but you can also immerse yourself in the atmosphere of his studio (see pp14–15).

4 La Granja

A mountain estate of gracious architecture and bucolic surrounds. Yet this peaceful haven is also home to a horrific collection of torture devices used by the dreaded Inquisition (see pp16–17).

5 Valldemossa

Arguably Mallorca's most beautiful town, Valldemossa is where Polish pianist Frédéric Chopin and his lover, French writer George Sand, spent a miserable but creative winter in 1838–9 (see pp18–21).

6 Jardins d'Alfàbia

Created by an Arab wali (viceroy) 1,000 years ago, these gardens include parterres, arbours and dells surrounding an all but derelict house. A great place for exploring and relaxing (see pp24–5).

7 Monestir de Nostra Senyora de Lluc

Mallorca's most ancient holy site is the spiritual epicentre of island life. The monastery houses a sacred statue of the Virgin and Child, and a small museum (see pp26–7).

8 Península de Formentor

A dramatic extension of the Serra de Tramuntana mountain range, and the site of Mallorca's very first luxury resort, where kings, presidents and movie stars have come to play (see pp28–9).

10 Coves del Drac

The island is peppered with fantastic caves, and these are the biggest and best. Spectacularly lit, the chambers echo with lilting classical music, played live from boats on one of the world's largest underground lakes (see pp32–3).

9 Alcúdia

Home to the island's only remaining medieval walled city. It was built on the site of a Roman outpost, the theatre and ruins of which can still be seen (see pp30–31).

La Seu: Mallorca Cathedral

The 14th-century cathedral is an imposing pile, with its Gothic buttresses, finials and bosses softly glowing in the sun. Legend has it that King Jaume I ordered it built in 1230, though in fact he merely modified an existing mosque. Work began in 1306 and has continued to this day. The western façade was rebuilt after an earthquake in 1851. Controversial touches were added in the 20th century by Antonio Gaudí.

The cathedral at night

The cathedral, as well as being the most important sight in Mallorca, is also a place of great religious importance, and tourist visits are not permitted during the celebration of mass (see below).

Parlament, C/Conquistador, 11 (971 726026), is a Palma institution specializing in rice dishes, shellfish and stuffed asparagus.

2 Portal del Mirador

The seaward, Gothic façade is the most spectacular side. Rows of ornate buttresses surround an elaborate door, which was formerly called the Door of the Apostles but is now known as the Mirador (vantage point).

3 Portal Major

Although it is Gothic in overall style, the main door (above) is mainly the product of Renaissance workmanship. A figure of Mary is surrounded by objects pertaining to her immaculate nature.

1 Exterior

Looking up from the old wall on the seafront, La Seu seems to have more in common with a craggy Mallorcan mountain than it does with any other European cathedral. It represents the might of the island's Christian conquerors.

La Seu, viewed from the west

4 Capelle del Santíssim

Designed by the renowned contemporary Mallorcan artist Miquel Barceló, the Chapel of the Most Holy boasts a large ceramic mural and fine stained-glass windows. The mural is loosely based on the miracle of the Feeding of the Five Thousand, with its remarkable, organic images of teeming fish and stacks of rustic loaves.

5 Bell Tower
This bell (left) is set within a three-storey-high tower surmounted with a "crown of lace" – a perforated parapet with small pinnacles. The structure is probably of Islamic origin.

7 Nave Columns
La Seu is one of Europe's tallest Gothic structures, and the sense of space in the interior is enhanced by graceful, elongated pillars that seem almost to melt away in the upper reaches of the nave (above).

8 Rose Windows
A vibrant rose window (below) at the end of the nave is the main one of seven (a few are blocked up). Some say that the 20th-century "restoration" of the window's colour was too strong.

9 Chapels
In all, there are 20 chapels, though some are now part of the chancel, with their altarpieces displayed in the museum. The tombs of Jaume II (below) and Jaume III are in the Trinity Chapel.

10 Museum
The collection includes some of La Seu's earliest altar panels, a polychrome wood sarcophagus, ornate reliquaries and furniture. Most mind-boggling are the pair of 18th-century Baroque-style candelabra, each as tall as a person.

Cathedral Plan

6 Gaudí Modifications
In 1904–14, the great Modernista architect set about improving La Seu's interior, removing mediocre altars and changing the lighting effects. The controversial baldachin (below) is actually only a mock-up – he never finished the final canopy.

Orientation

During the week, visitors must enter the cathedral through the museum on the north side (as it is a touristic, rather than a religious, visit). However, before taking in the interior of La Seu, walk around to the south side, facing the sea, in order to get a better feel for the awe-inspiring scale of the edifice.

TOP 10 Palau de l'Almudaina1 Function of the Palace

Standing directly opposite La Seu, in an equally prominent position that actually obscures the cathedral's main façade from all but close-up view, this ancient palace adds a lighter, more graceful note to Palma's assemblage of civic buildings. Today, the palace is used for legislative and military headquarters, royal apartments and a museum.

2 Building Style

An amalgam of Gothic and Moorish styles, the palace has a unique charm. Square, medieval towers have been topped with dainty Moorish-inspired crenellations. Refined windows and open, airy arcades also tell of an abiding Islamic influence.

3 Central Courtyard

Known variously as the Patio de Armas, the Patio de Honor and the Patio del Castillo, this central courtyard also evokes a Moorish feel, with its elegantly looping arches and central stand of palm trees. A fountain incorporates an Islamic lion from the 10th century.

4 Hall of Councils

The largest room on the ground floor takes its name, Salón de Consejos, from a meeting of ministers called here in 1983 by Juan Carlos I. There are 16th- and 17th-century Flemish tapestries, coats-of-arms and furniture.

5 Officers' Mess

The walls of this room are graced with beautiful 17th-century Flemish tapestries and genre paintings, some by a talented contemporary of Rubens.

6 Terrace and Banyes Àrabs

Step onto the terrace for panoramic views. Then, back inside, peer into the remains of the Arab Baths. By means of mirrors, you can examine the three separate vaulted chambers below – one for hot, one for tepid and one for cold water.

7 Queen's Office

Taking the Royal Staircase to the upper floor, you encounter the Queen's Office, which contains fine antiques, tapestries and paintings.

8 King's Rooms

In these rooms you will find huge 17th-century Flemish tapestries, bronze statuary, Neoclassical paintings as well as some spectacular Empire furniture adorned with glittering ormolu fittings.

9 Gothic Hall

This remarkable room, noted for its huge pointed arches, is used for official receptions. Don't miss the fine 16th-century Flemish tapestry on the back wall, depicting the Siege of Carthage.

10 Chapel of St Anne

The chapel's delicately coloured altarpiece, created in Barcelona in 1358, is a visual sonnet in sky blue and gold.

Stone arch entrance of a traditional house

Mallorca's Unique Architectural Heritage

Pointed stone arch, Gothic Hall, Palau de l'Almudaina

Stone is the keynote material in Mallorcan buildings of all kinds, whether in the form of natural boulders or carved segments. How those stones have been used has been a defining feature of the many cultures that have held sway on the island over the millennia. The Greeks, Phoenicians, Romans and Byzantines all left their traces and influences behind, however little may be in evidence. But what we mostly see today of pre-Christian traditions (especially in place names – most notably, any word with “al-”) can be traced directly back to the Roman-influenced culture of the Islamic lords, who ruled the island during the 10th–13th centuries. In the ensuing centuries, something of that exotic style has been repeatedly renewed in Mallorcan building techniques and tastes, moulded into the Gothic, Renaissance, Baroque, Neoclassical, Modernista and even the most contemporary architectural styles.

TOP 10 Castell de Bellver

This castle near Palma was a grand 14th-century royal fortress, royal summer residence and later royal prison. Surrounded for miles by fragrant pine woods, which are alive with whirring cicadas in the heat of summer, it also has stunning views over Palma Bay (Bellver means "lovely view" in Catalan). Looking up at this citadel, so perfectly preserved, it's hard to believe that it has been standing for 700 years. It is among the world's most striking castles.

Avoid visiting the castle on a Sunday, when its excellent museum will be shut.

You can get to the Bellver hill by car or taxi, or take city bus 46 to Plaça Gomila and climb through the woods above Carrer de Bellver. Bus 50 stops at the castle.

Go to the top for a 360-degree panorama, including the foothills and sea to the west and the mountains to the north. The perfume of the pine forests creates a heady mix with the maritime breezes.

2 Circular Design

The elegant round shape is unique among Spanish castles and a premier example of 14th-century military architecture (below). The circular structure also aided in the collection of rainwater into the central cistern.

Elegant stonework within the circular castle

3 Defence Towers

There are three horseshoe-shaped towers and four smaller protuberances used for guard posts. Their windows are tiny so that archers could not be targeted by attackers on the ground.

4 Keep Tower
The free-standing castle keep, called the Torre de Homenaje (left), is almost twice as high as the castle itself, connected to its roof by a small bridge supported by a slim, pointed Gothic archway. It is open to visitors by arrangement (971 730657).

Key to Castle Plan

- Ground floor

5 Central Courtyard

The beautiful, two-tiered central courtyard (left) has 21 Catalan Romanesque arches on the lower tier, which contrast with the 42 octagonal columns supporting 21 Gothic arches on the upper tier. Classical statues, such as those of Venus and Nero, grace the lower walkway.

6 Prison
Right up until 1915, the lower reaches of the castle were used as a prison, dubbed La Olla ("the kettle"). Jaume III's widow and sons (see p35) were imprisoned here for most of their lives.

Museum Entrance and Chapel
From the central courtyard you enter Palma's Museu de Mallorca, in which sculptures (right) and other artifacts trace the city's history through Talaïotic, Roman, Arab and Spanish periods. The former Chapel of St Mark is now bare vaulted rooms.

8 Museum: Ancient Artifacts

The first three rooms contain impressive Roman statuary (right), a perfectly preserved column of rare cippolino marble, carved seals, marble inscriptions, lamps and 1st-century pots.

9 Museum: Arab Artifacts
Surprisingly few remnants here beyond some pots, both painted and blue-glazed, a stone lion, terracotta lamps and sgraffito ware (pottery with etched designs).

10 Museum: Spanish Artifacts
A great range of styles and eras is presented, from medieval arms and a stone font with angels, dated 1591, to later works including 17th-century Mallorcan turquoise-glazed ceramics, Chinese porcelain, and items from the Belle Époque and Fascist eras.

TOP 10 Fundació Pilar i Joan Miró

The artist Joan Miró lived and worked on Cala Major from 1956 until his death in 1983. His wife converted the house and former studio into an art centre. This modern edifice, nicknamed the "Alabaster Fortress" by the Spanish press, is the work of Rafael Moneo, a leading Spanish architect. It houses changing exhibitions from the museum's extensive collection, which includes many of Miró's paintings, drawings and sculptures as well as works by international artists.

1 You can take the bus (EMT no. 3 and 6), taxi or drive to get to the Fundació, on a hill to the west of Palma.

An enlightening film on Miró is shown during the day (in Spanish); sometimes it is in English.

2 The café is excellent, with made-to-order sandwiches, pa amb oli (see p78) and olives, fresh orange juice and more. It's also air-conditioned and features a wonderful mural by Miró (see entry 9).

Works in the Fundació's garden

1 Building Design Composed of concrete made to look like travertine marble, the starkly modern building (above) is softened by reflecting pools, cool planes, ramps and staircases. Its high, narrow windows afford surprising views from the hilltop site. Most originally, huge marble panels are used as translucent walls, softly lighting the trapezoidal exhibition spaces.

2 Sculptures Upon entering, you're greeted by three whimsical bronzes and a very much larger monumental piece, which are all vaguely anthropomorphic (left). Downstairs, the giant Woman and Bird was executed by Miró with ceramist Llorenç Artigast.

3 Son Boter This 18th-century estate was Miró's second studio. It is now used for courses and workshops given by international artists.

4 Works on Paper

Several works on paper are displayed (above), most exhibiting the signature primary colours and splashes for which the artist is known.

5 Mural del Sol

Usually on display is a five-panel sketch on paper, the study for a mural in the UNESCO building in Paris, co-created with Llorenç Artigast in 1955–8. The work won the Guggenheim award.

Plan of the Fundació

6 Works on Canvas

Many of these works from the 1960s and 1970s are mixed media – oil, acrylic, chalk and pastel. Some may have been inspired by Japanese Zen action painting. Some are blue – for Miró the most universal and optimistic colour – while others are in black and white.

7 Temporary Exhibitions

The temporary exhibition spaces feature the works of international artists such as Louise Bourgeois, Adolf Gottlieb and Joan Fontcuberta.

Miró's Style

One of the best-known artists of the 20th century, Miró (1893–1983) was a Catalan through and through. Initially influenced by Fauvism, and later by Dadaism and Surrealism, he developed his own unique style, marked by lyricism and lively colouring. After arriving in Mallorca he became interested in graphics, ceramics and sculpture, scoring significant successes in every art form. The embodiment of a uniquely Catalan way of seeing the world, he became one of the great exponents of Abstract Expressionism.

8 Garden

In the garden, groups of rocks resembling water lilies “float” in a pool, while in other niches works by modern and avant-garde artists can be found.

9 Murals

Above one of the garden pools, a black rectangle encloses a ceramic mural by Miró, with shapes gyrating in space. Taking up a whole wall in the café is a mural of the sun and other celestial bodies.

10 Studio

Miró's studio (above) looks like the artist just stepped outside for a break from work in progress. Objects that inspired Miró are all around: Hopi kachina dolls, Mexican terracottas, a bat skeleton and various everyday items.

TOP 10 La Granja

This posseïció (country estate) is on a site known since Roman times for its natural spring. In 1239, the Count Nuño Sanz donated the estate to Cistercian monks; since 1447 it has been a private house. Visitors come today mainly to see rural Mallorcan traditions, such as demonstrations of lace-making, embroidery and spinning, and tastings of cheese, wine, sausages, doughnuts and fig cake.

The house and grounds

- 🕒 The easiest way to get to La Granja is by car or tour bus.

Handicraft shows and horse and falconry displays take place from February to October on Wednesdays and Fridays from 3:30–5pm. Otherwise, visit in the morning to avoid the crowds.

- 🍽️ The Granja Restaurant serves lunch all day, featuring sopes mallorquines (Mallorcan soup), and there's a snack bar/cafeteria. You can go for picnics within the grounds.

1 Gardens

The cultivated areas are very rich, including a walled rock garden, moss-covered rock formations, botanical gardens, a pond with a water-jet fountain and a magnificent 1,000-year-old yew tree. You can still see some of the water canal that was used for irrigation.

2 Family Apartments

These rooms evoke the genteel country lifestyle of the house's former inhabitants. Of particular note are the curtains in the main room (below) made of roba de llenguës; the study with its curious old medical instruments; and the antique toys in the games room.

Fountain in the gardens

3 Dining Room

The main attraction here is the cleverly constructed dining room table that doubles as a billiard table. By turning the side crank, the height can be adjusted for both purposes. The crockery and glassware, from various eras, are original to the house, and the tile floor is also original.

4 Loggia

The loveliest architectural feature of the house evokes Florentine tenets of beauty and grace with considerable success. Providing a welcome breezeway on hot summer days and charming vistas at any time of the year, this porch-like gallery (above), unusual in Mallorca, is a place to pause.

Plan of Grounds

5 Workrooms

The labyrinth of rooms downstairs comprises the earthy heart of the home. The estate was self-sufficient with its own oil-mill, tinsmith, winepress, distilleries (for liqueurs and cosmetics), woodworking shop, embroiderer and more.

6 Cellars

Cheeses were manufactured in the cellars, using the milk of cows, sheep and goats. Dough was kneaded using a stone mill, to make all types of pasta, for soups and other dishes. Dairy products, oil, wine and grain were all stored here.

7 "Torture Chamber"

A room displays the typical implements – including iron body cages and a rack – used against Jews, other non-Christians and suspected heretics and witches during the Spanish Inquisition of the 15th–17th centuries. Vicious-looking chastity belts are also on display.

8 Chapel

The altarpiece, with its lovely festooned arch, is Baroque; the altar itself a pretty Gothic creation; and the two kneeling, silver-winged plaster angels (above), rather kitsch 19th-century efforts. Note the well-worn original tile floor.

10 Shows

Handcraft shows (above) and horse and falconry displays are staged on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Traditional Music and Dancing

Fashioned from wood and animal skins, Mallorcan instruments include the xeremia (bagpipe), fabiol (flute), tamborino and guitarro. Typical famous dances are the Bolero (18th century), La Jota (from eastern Mallorca), the Fandango (a line dance), Copeo and Mateixa (both also from the east). Many dances are improvised, accompanied only by percussion instruments; a more organized ensemble will perform on formal occasions.

9 Forecourt

The majestic space in front of the mansion contains four large plane trees that are about 150 years old. Here you can relax in their shade, watching craftsmen at work and sampling regional wines, liqueurs, juices, jams, sobrassadas (sausages), cheeses, figs, breads and bunyolas (potato flour buns).

TOP 10 Valldemossa

This small, picturesque town in the mountains is arguably where Mallorcan tourism began one cold winter in 1838, when the composer Frédéric Chopin and his lover, the female writer George Sand, rented some rooms at the former monastery here. Shunned by locals, the couple had a miserable time, as portrayed in Sand's book, A Winter in Majorca. However, Mallorcans today are proud of their Chopin-Sand connection, and the book is sold in every tourist shop.

Palace of King Sanç

5 The best views of the town, with its beautiful green-tiled bell tower, are those as you approach from the north.

If you arrive by car, park in one of the municipal car parks with automatic meters, then explore the town on foot.

4 Monastery: Pharmacy

Laden with tinctures and elixirs, a deconsecrated chapel recreates the estate's original pharmacy. George Sand (portrait above) bought marshmallow here in an attempt to cure Chopin's tuberculosis.

1 Former Monastery Complex

The town's top attraction is the former monastery where Chopin and Sand stayed, which also incorporates a palace and an excellent municipal museum (see pp20–21). Given to the Carthusian Order in 1399, the estate was a monastery until 1835, when all religious orders were ousted from the island. It was bought by a French banker who rented the rooms to Chopin.

2 Monastery: Church

The Neoclassical church has a cupola decorated with frescoes by Fray Bayeu, the brother-in-law of Francisco de Goya. It is distinguished by barrel vaulting and gilt-edged stucco work.

The town viewed from the north

3 Monastery: Cloisters

From the church, you can enter the atmospheric cloisters (above), known as the Myrtle Court. Around them are six chapels and ten spacious monks' cells.

6 Monastery: Cells 2 and 4

Said to be the rooms that Chopin and Sand rented (left), they are full of memorabilia, including Chopin's piano, Sand's manuscripts, busts (below) and portraits.

5 Monastery: Prior's Cell

The head monk had a private oratory, magnificent library, elegant audience chamber, bedroom, dining room, Ave Maria (praying alcove) and, of course, a sumptuous garden.

7 Monastery: Palace

The core of the monastery was originally the site of the palace built by Jaume II for his son Sanç. The rooms are regally decorated – an especially beautiful piece is the 12th-century woodcarving of the Madonna and Child.

8 Old Town

The old town (below) spills down a hillside, surrounded by farming terraces and marjades (stone walls) created 1,000 years ago by the Moors. The name "Valldemossa" derives from that of the original Moorish landowner, Muza.

10 Birthplace of Santa Catalina Thomàs

Mallorca's only saint, Catalina Thomàs (known affectionately as the "Beatata" for both her saintliness and diminutive stature), was born in 1533 at a house on C/Rectoria, 5. The house was converted into an oratory in 1792 and features saintly scenes (above left) and a statue of the "Beatata" holding a bird.

9 Church of Sant Bartomeu

Near the bottom of the old town, a rustic, Baroque-style church is dedicated to one of the patron saints of the town. It was built in 1245, shortly after Jaume I conquered Mallorca, and extended in the early 18th century. The bell tower and façade date from 1863.

For highlights of the Museu Municipal de Valldemossa, which is set within the former monastery, see following pages

1 Guasp Printworks
On the ground floor of the museum you'll find a 17th-century hand press and one of Europe's finest collections of 1,584 intricate boxwood engravings. On the walls are prints executed on the press, which is still in working order.

Printing press

Among the outstanding Mallorcan artists shown here are Joan Fuster, Bartomeu Ferrà and Antoni Ribas.

4 Catalan and Spanish Painters of the Tramuntana

Works by Sebastià Junyer, and the more Impressionistic Eliseo Meifrén are displayed.

2 Archduke Luis Salvador of Hapsburg-Lorena and Bourbon

Also on the ground floor is a room dedicated to an indefatigable chronicler of Mediterranean life, whose passion was Mallorcan culture. His nine volumes on the Balearics are the most exhaustive study ever made of the archipelago.

3 Mallorcan Painters of the Tramuntana

Mallorca's mountainous Tramuntana region has long attracted landscape painters.

Painting by the Mallorcan artist Joan Fuster

5 International Painters of the Tramuntana

These include contemporary Italian master Aligi Sassu, whose works owe much to Futurism, Surrealism and Expressionism.

6 Contemporary Art: Juli Ramis

The contemporary collection was conceived as a spotlight on Juli Ramis (1909–90), one of the most important Mallorcan painters of the 20th century.

Works include his signature Dama Blava and those of his Paris contemporaries, showing a cross-fertilization of influences.

7 Miró
Of note is El Vol de l'Alosa (Flight of the Swallows) – Miró's whimsical illustrations for the works of Mallorcan poets.

8 Picasso

Sadly, Picasso's masterful reworking of El Greco's great painting The Burial of Count Orgaz has been removed from the collection. However, there are still several paintings of bulls and bullfighters as well as some fine book illustrations.

9 Tàpies

Also in the last room are a few works by another great Catalan painter, Antoni Tàpies. Master of an elegant Abstract Expressionism all his own, his work has little in common with the more Surrealistic images of his compatriots Miró and Dalí, being more understated, poetic and monumental.

10 Other 20th-Century Artists

Finally, there are some small but significant engravings and lithographs by modern international artists, including German Surrealist Max Ernst, Italian Futurist Robert Matta, French Dadaist André Masson and the English masters Henry Moore and Francis Bacon.

From Mass Tourism to Culture and Ecology

Preserved lamp and mural, Valldemossa

Most fittingly, since Mallorcan tourism got its shaky start here in the early 19th century, it is also in Valldemossa that it is being taken to a new level in the 21st century. Movie stars Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta Jones own a big estate and founded the Costa Nord de Valldemossa (it is now run by the Balearic government). This multifaceted organization promotes both cultural and ecological tourism on an island that, to many, went too far in catering to cheap sun-sand-surf packages in the past. All over the island is an ever-increasing number of nature parks, museums and wonderful inland hotels at all price levels.

10 Jardins d'Alfàbia

A legacy of the Moorish talent for landscaping and irrigation, the Jardins d'Alfàbia were probably designed by Benhabet, a 13th-century Muslim governor of Inca. The pleasures of the gardens are made possible by a spring that always flows, even in the driest of summers in this very arid land. As well as providing a fabulous oasis for visitors, Alfàbia is also a working farm.

1 Entrance and Gatehouse Façade

A broad ramp leads past a moss-covered fountain to a Baroque façade, which is set off with palm trees, scrolling arabesque curves and a pair of windows (above) called ojo de buey (ox-eye).

Terraced Cascade

To the left of the gatehouse façade is a stepped, terraced cascade (right). Watercourses, called alfagras (little irrigation channels), serve both a practical and a decorative purpose here and in other Moorish-style gardens.

Paved walkway with water jets

3 Queen's Bath

An open-ended cistern frames a mirror-like pool, called the "queen's bath," which is the source of all the water in the gardens. Beyond it is an indescribably lush garden scene.

4 Pergola and Walkway

From an eight-sided pergola, a paved walkway is lined with ancient amphorae shooting out jets of water. Between column pairs four and five, don't miss greeting the black Mallorcan pig.

5 English-Style Gardens

These were created in the 19th century and feature bougainvillea, vines, box hedges, scarlet dahlias and a lily pond. Farm products are sold at a snack bar.

6 Trees

An extraordinary range of trees flourishes in the gardens, including white fir, maple, cedar of Lebanon, Monterey cypress, poplar, date palm, holm oak, carob, lemon, magnolia, walnut, eucalyptus and acacia.

Plan of the Gardens and Buildings

7 Groves

These magical areas are given over to dense plantings in which you can lose yourself, with the refreshing sound of running water always playing in your ears. Hidden pools and ancient walls are among the discoveries to be made.

8 Hacienda

After exploring the gardens, make your way up the hill to the wisteria-covered, L-shaped hacienda with Doric columns. Inside, traditional llengues (flame) fabrics, old prints, instruments (above) and a guitar-shaped grandfather clock are among the exhibits.

9 Flemish Armchair

Also in the hacienda is one of the oldest and oddest pieces of furniture on the island (left). This 15th-century oak chair has been known, among other things, as the Moorish King's Chair, but the imagery on it has now been identified as the story of Tristan and Isolde. See if you can spot the king's head.

Courtyard

The courtyard (right) features a huge, 100-year-old plane tree and a moss-covered fountain. From here, you can visit some of the other rooms, then exit through a pair of vast, bronze-covered hobnailed doors, which were originally those of the Palace of the Inquisition in Palma.

TOP 10 Monestir de Nostra Senyora de Lluc

The monastery at Lluc is the spiritual centre of Mallorca and has been a place of pilgrimage for over 800 years. The main point of interest is the little statue of the Virgin (La Moreneta), which, so the story goes, was found by an Arab shepherd boy who had converted to Christianity. The image was initially moved to the church but it kept returning to the same spot, so a chapel was built to house it. Each year, thousands of pilgrims come to pay homage.

La Moreneta ("the Little Dark One")

After you've visited the monastery, explore some of the natural areas and caves nearby, some of which are prehistoric burial sites.

Head for Sa Fonda, in the erstwhile monks' grand dining room, which offers Mallorcan fare (closed in July). Otherwise, try the Café Sa Plaça for snacks, or the Restaurant Ca S'Amitger, Plaça Peregrins, 6, where you'll find tortilla espanyola, fish, roast lamb, mountain goat and rice brut, a Mallorcan country dish.

1 The Complex

The complex is rather plain but set amid fragrant forests of pine and holm oak, and laid out around courtyards. There's a good hostel, choir school, several eateries, camp sites, picnic facilities and a huge covered area for outdoor celebrations and services.

Courtyard within the complex

2 Basilica Entrance

Facing an inner courtyard, the church's façade is an appealing Baroque confection that relieves the plainness of the surrounding structures. The pompous bronze statue that dominates is that of a bishop who had a hand in sprucing the place up in the early 1900s.

3 Basilica Interior

The church (left) was deemed a Minor Basilica by the Pope – its embellishments are probably the reason. Every spare inch seems to have been laden with beaten gold. The columns are dark red Jasper, crystal chandeliers light the way, and the altarpiece is alive with golden curves and gesticulating figures.

4 La Moreneta

In a special chapel stands the object of pilgrimage, La Moreneta ("the Little Dark One") – or, to be more precise, a 15th-century, possibly Flemish, version of her. Unfortunately, the 1960s light fixtures in the chapel detract from the atmosphere.

5 Els Blauets

The boys' choir, Els Blauets (The Blues), was established in 1531, named after their blue cassocks. Pilgrims and tourists queue up at 11am to hear the daily concerts.

6 Museu de Lluc

A broad collection of Mallorcana includes prehistoric and ancient artifacts, coins, religious treasures, vestments, sculptures, ceramics and paintings, as well as model Mallorcan rooms from the 17th century.

8 Museum: Majolica

In the 15th century, Italy imported large amounts of tin-glazed pottery from Spain by way of the trade route through Mallorca, hence the term "majolica" from the medieval name of the island. Until the early 20th century, this type of pottery was also produced in Mallorca. Various examples are displayed.

7 Museum: Religious Artifacts

Pieces on display include a fabulous gilded Byzantine trikerion (three-part sacred utensil) from 1390, a 15th-century wooden tabernacle, a graceful 15th-century Flemish Virgin and Child (left), a gold filigree reliquary for a Piece of the True Cross and several devotional paintings.

9 Els Porxets

The gallery of the old pilgrim's hospice is a picturesque arcaded corridor, with stables on the ground floor and bedrooms off the passageway on the upper level. Declared a Historical Artistic Monument, it has been carefully restored.

10 El Camí dels Misteris del Rosari

"The Way of the Mysteries of the Rosary" is a pilgrim's route leading up the rocky hillside behind the complex, where a crucifix awaits. The broad path (right) is punctuated by bronze sculptures framed in stone.

TOP 10 Península de Formentor

The final jutting spur of the Serra de Tramuntana has stunning views, sandy beaches and the island's original luxury resort. With weird rock formations and jagged edges pointing up at 45 degrees, its mountains rise to over 400 m (1,300 ft). The drive from Port de Pollença has dramatic scenery and is famously scary for its steep bends.

2 Main Miradors
Of the main miradors (viewpoints), Mirador de Mal Pas (above) is closest to the road. From here you can walk along a wall with dizzying panoramas of the rocks and sea below. You can also see the islet of Es Colomer.

Watchtower ruins

1 To avoid the heaviest traffic, visit early or late in the day. If you take the road up to the Watchtower, park at the turnout just after the first bunkers, slightly down from the top. That way you'll avoid the parking snarls at the top.

2 The Lighthouse snack bar has pizzas, sandwiches, olives and drinks of all kinds. Sit on the broad terrace for incredible views.

For something more refined, as well as far more expensive, head for the Hotel Formentor's beach restaurant on your way back.

1 Peninsula Road
The famous road (above) is narrow but well maintained, forking off to the Hotel Formentor in one direction and across to the cape in the other. Side-roads along the way – sometimes much rougher – wind up to the Watchtower and give access to the beach, as well as makeshift car parks for Cala Figuera.

3 Watchtower
The Talaia d'Albercutx (below) has an amazing view over the Peninsula and bays of Pollença and Alcúdia. But the road to it is very bad, without guardrails, so hire a four-wheel drive if you can. For a further adrenalin rush, you have to hike up the last bit and climb the tower itself.

4 Beach

In a long, sheltered cove with fine sand and clear turquoise water (above), Platja de Formentor is served both by road and a regular ferry from the Port de Pollença. Eating spots and tiki shades abound. Expect crowds of families at weekends.

5 Hotel Barceló Formentor

The posh resort (right) opened in 1929 and has been pampering the rich and famous ever since (see p141). Part of the Platja de Formentor is reserved for hotel guests only.

6 Casas Velles

An old Mallorcan house is preserved in the grounds of the Hotel Formentor. There's a characteristic courtyard with an old stone well, a one-room house and a chapel with a melodramatic, life-size crucifix.

7 Mountain Tunnel

The road continues through pine woods and past more miradors on its way to En Fumat mountain. It then tunnels through the raw rock of the mountain. For those who need more thrills, there's a steep staircase up the cliff above the tunnel's western mouth.

8 Cap de Formentor

The terrain becomes rockier towards the end of the peninsula, and soon you have a plunging view down to Cala Figuera, Mallorca's most inaccessible beach, where a few boats have anchored. It's a harrowing drive out to the end, but you're rewarded with breathtaking views (right).

9 Lighthouse

Around the last curve, you come upon the silver-domed lighthouse (left), set on a dramatic promontory with views over the sea. On a good day, you can see all the way to Menorca.

10 Flora and Fauna

The peninsula is all wild: pine trees mostly, with scrub and clump grasses, oregano, cactus and wild palmetto everywhere. On a hot summer's day, with cicadas buzzing, you'll see wild goats, lizards and birds.

TOP 10 Alcúdia

At the base of a peninsula, this delightful walled town was originally a Phoenician settlement and the capital of the island under the Romans. It was later destroyed by the Vandals, then rebuilt by the Moors, and prospered as a trading centre well into the 19th century. Extensively restored, the town contains many historical sites of interest.

Grand Café, port area

1 City Walls
The walls were added after the Spanish conquest in the 14th century, with a second ring added in the 17th to further defend the town. By the 19th century they had begun to show the decrepitude of age and the vagaries of town and industrial expansion, but they have now been restored almost to their original state. They are pierced with gates and incorporate 26 towers in all.

2 Historic Centre
While modern Alcúdia extends beyond the city walls and has a commercial port town attached to it (see p41), most of the sights of historic interest are located within or near the walls. These include churches, mansions, a museum and some of the island's most significant Roman ruins.

Port d'Alcúdia

Main gateway through city walls

3 Arab Quarter
The narrow streets of the old town (below) are resonant of what life must have been like under Arab rule, long after Roman orderliness had been buried. No one knows quite where the old souk (market) was, but it's easy to imagine artisan's shops, with their wares spilling out onto the dusty streets.

4 Ajuntament

The handsome Mediterranean-Revival-style edifice was given its present look in 1929. Above the balcony is a grand tower with clock, belfry and weathervane, its pitched roofs gaily tiled in red and green stripes (right).

5 Ca'n Torró Library

Opened in 1990, the library is housed in a prime example of aristocratic architecture in the 14th century. It hosts concerts and expositions.

6 Sant Jaume Church

The 14th-century church collapsed in the winter of 1870 but was recently rebuilt. The rose window is lovely, and the inner recesses feature amazing gold altars (above).

7 Museu Monogràfic

Just one large room, but full of great finds, especially Roman artifacts and ceramics. Particularly intriguing are the beautiful bone pins and other implements for a Roman lady's toilette.

8 Pollentia Ruins

The Roman city (left) reached its peak in the 1st and 2nd centuries AD. You can see the foundations of what may have been the forum, and insulae (apartments). A few broken pillars have been propped up, but many of the stones have been removed over the centuries.

9 Teatre Romà

The island's only intact Roman theatre is also the smallest surviving one in Spain. Even so, it would have held about 2,000 people, and today is sometimes the venue for special concerts.

10 Oratori de Sant Ana

The tiny medieval chapel (right), on the main road to Port d'Alcúdia, was built in the 13th century and features a stone carving of a very stocky Virgin and Child supported by an angel.

TOP 10 Coves del Drac

Known since ancient times, these limestone caves were mapped out by French geologist Edouard Martel in 1896. They are now one of Mallorca's top attractions. Hundreds of people at a time make their way along the cavernous path, where artfully lit rock formations and lakes conjure up marvellous imagery. The name "Drac" means "dragon", probably in reference to the mythical creature's role as the fierce guardian of secret treasure.

Colourful rock formations

2 Four Chambers

Visitors descend to the caves through the Luis Armand Chamber, part of the Frenchman's Cave, which was discovered by Martel. The three other main caverns are called Black Cave, White Cave and Luis Salvador's Cave. The path is smooth and even, and no guide speaks, so that visitors have the opportunity to contemplate the scale and beauty of the place in peace.

1 Garden

As most visitors have to wait before their tour begins, the proprietors have thoughtfully created a beautiful garden by the entrance. Mediterranean trees and plants, such as olives, figs, violets and hibiscus provide the setting for striking displays of limestone – one piece even evokes the shape of a dragon. Gorgeous peacocks roam around.

The subterranean Lake Martel

3 Formations

Thousands of stalactites (those hanging from above), stalagmites (those below), and columns (where the two meet) range from the finest needles to ponderous, monumental massifs (left). There are also deep ravines, at the bottom of which you can see crystalline, impossibly aquamarine and turquoise pools.

4 Lighting

The cave illuminations are the work of engineer Carlos Buigas. Crevices, chasms, planes and spaces are highlighted to maximize the effects of chiaroscuro and depth (right).

7 Performances

Seated in an amphitheatre, in near pitch-darkness, the audience is regaled with a touching display at the end of the tour. Hypnotic lighting effects are accompanied by live music from a small chamber ensemble, floating by on a rowboat. Highlights include Albinoni's Adagio, Pachelbel's Canon and serene works by Bach, Handel, Chopin, Boccherini and others.

5 Fanciful Figures

Formations dubbed the "Inquisition Chamber" or "Ariadne's Labyrinth" were so named in the Middle Ages; the "Buddha" and "Flag" speak of more modern imaginations.

6 Subterranean Lakes

Of the several subterranean lakes here, Lake Martel is one of the world's largest, at 177 m (580 ft) long, with an average width of 30 m (98 ft). Its calm waters reflect the lighting effects of the performances (entry 7).

8 Boat Ride

As a delightful climax to the performance, visitors are offered boat rides (left) on the lake – eight to a boat – steered by skilled gondoliers who employ an elegant figure-eight rowing style.

9 Exit

Visitors exit by foot past the Lake of the Grand Duchess of Tuscany and Chamber of the Columns to the Vestibule, which is a funnel-like tunnel leading back up to the surface.

10 Acuario de Mallorca

A short walk from the caves brings you to a surprisingly good aquarium. The lower floor has scores of exotic species; the upper floor is devoted to denizens of the Mediterranean.

The Caves in Ancient Times

Large numbers of Talaiotic, Punic, Roman, Arab and Almoravid artifacts were discovered in the caves during archeological excavations in 1951. The finds are held in various museums around the island for safekeeping, but ruins of a Cyclopean corridor, indicating a prehistoric settlement, can still be seen at one point of Luis Salvador's Cave.

TOP 10 Moments in History

1 Prehistory

Neolithic pastoral societies have formed by at least 4000 BC. They live in the island's caves and keep domesticated animals. As bronze-working is introduced around 1400 BC, the Talayot period begins (see Ses Païsses and Capocorb Vell, p55).

2 Carthaginian Conquest

Various peoples, including the Greeks, use the island as a trading post. However, the absence of metal ores deters further colonization until the Carthaginian Empire spreads to this part of the Mediterranean in the 7th century BC.

3 Roman Conquest

In the third century BC, Carthage comes into conflict with the expanding Roman Empire. Rome is victorious in 146 BC and establishes order for the next 500 years. Roads and towns are built and, in AD 404, Mallorca and its neighbouring islands are established as the province of Balearica.

4 Vandal Invasion

No sooner is the new province officially recognized, however, than the Vandals sweep across the Balearics in about AD 425, swiftly ending Roman rule. So destructive is their takeover that few traces of the Romans are left.

5 Byzantine Conquest

In 533, the Byzantines defeat the Vandals and bring the Balearics under their rule, restoring prosperity and also an orthodox form of Christianity. From faraway Constantinople, Emperor Justinian rules the islands as part of the province of Sardinia. They enjoy this Byzantine connection until the end of the 7th century, then become more or less independent, with close ties to Catalonia.

6 Moorish Conquest

In 902, the Moors occupy the islands and turn them into a fiefdom of the Emirate of Córdoba. Through a succession of dynastic changes, they hold on for the next 327 years and forcibly convert all the inhabitants to Islam.

7 The Reconquista

In 1229, King Jaume I of Aragón rises to oppose the Balearic Moors. His forces first land on the western coast of the island at Santa Ponça, from where he marches eastwards to lay siege to Medina Mayurqa (the Moorish name for Palma). The city falls to him on 31 December, after three months.

So-called Roman bridge, Pollença

The 1479 marriage that unified Spain

8 The Kingdom of Mallorca

Despite Jaume's liberal treatment of islanders, and his laws embodied in the Carta de Població, the territory descends into turmoil after his death, due to rivalry between his sons. Eventually, his son Jaume II is restored and succeeded by his son Sanç and Sanç's nephew Jaume III.

9 Unification with Spain

In 1344 the islands are once again thrown into chaos when united with Aragón by Pedro IV. Jaume III is killed during a feeble attempt to retake his kingdom. In 1479, with the marriage of Fernando V of Aragón and Isabella I of Castile, Aragón is in turn absorbed into a new Spanish superstate. The islands become an outpost of little importance, ushering in centuries of decline.

10 Since 1945

6 Pedro, Son of Jaume I

Jaume I's violent son Pedro and grandson Alfonso III tried to take Mallorca away from the rightful heir, Jaume II.

7 Jaume II

The rightful heir to Jaume I. He and his descendants carried on Jaume I's legacy until Mallorca was rejoined to the kingdom of Aragón.

8 Ramon Llull

Great 13th-century mystic, poet and scholar who had a profound influence on Mallorcan spiritual life.

9 Robert Graves

The 20th-century English writer, scholar and poet put Mallorca on the international literary map (see p96).

10 Adán Diehl

The Argentinean poet and visionary built the Grand Hotel Formentor in 1929 (see p29), marking out Mallorca as an upper-crust tourist destination.

Marked by a lonely lighthouse, this undeveloped area is officially a military zone, but as long as it's not closed or guarded, you can walk out for a view of the entire bay. Nearby Portals Vells is another tranquil area, while Platja El Mago is a nudist beach. Map B5

2 Illa Dragonera

The spot that precipitated the current conservation movement on the island is a great place to hike, take a picnic or just visit for the sake of the cruise. In season, you can get a ferry at either Sant Elm or Port d'Andratx. Map A4

3 Mirador de Ricardo Roca

A chapel-like structure at this lookout point has "Todo por la patria" ("All for the Fatherland") over its door – a remnant from Fascist times – with "patria" blotched out some time ago by a liberal-thinking member of the new Spain. From here and a nearby café you'll find dizzying views down to the sea far below. Map B3

4 Barranc de Biniaraix

Two pretty villages lie in a gorge opposite the towering presence of Puig Major, Mallorca's highest mountain. So evocative is the silence of the gorge – broken only by sheep's bells and the bleating of goats – that it has been sold as a record. Map C2

5 Gorg Blau

Created by seasonal torrents over millions of years, the ravine near Sóller and Puig Major is up to 400 m (1,312 ft) deep but only 30 m (98 ft) wide, with some sections never seeing daylight. Do not hike between the cliffs in winter (see also p103). Map D2

6 Torrent de Pareis

great sights of the island. The scale of the scene, with its delicate formations and colours, is amazing, and the sense of solitude undisturbed, even by the usual crowds you will encounter here. The tunnel-like path from Cala Calobra was carved out in 1950. 🗺 Map D2

7 Península de Formentor

This jagged spur of the great Serra de Tramuntana range has been saved from overdevelopment mostly due to the fact that a large luxury hotel was built here in the 1920s. The drive out to the lighthouse is unforgettable (see pp28–9). 🗺 Map F1

8 Parc Natural de S'Albufera

Pliny wrote of night herons, probably from S'Albufera, being sent to Rome as a gastronomic delicacy. The wetlands were drained for agriculture in the 19th century. What land was left has now been restored and turned into a nature reserve – the Mediterranean's largest wetlands. 🗺 Map F2

9 Cap de Capdepera

The island's easternmost point is a great place to hike around, though the terrain generally necessitates little more than easy strolling. You can go out to the lighthouse on its cape of sheer rock, or check out the pristine coves that lie lined up to the north and south, including Cala Agulla, Son Moll, Sa Pedrusca and Sa Font de sa Cala. 🗺 Map H3

10 Parc Natural de Mondragó

One of the newer preserves established on the island, this one is part nature, part heritage site. It incorporates a full range of island terrains, from wooded hills to sandy dunes, as well as an assortment of rural structures. Come here for hiking, bird-watching, picnicking, swimming or simply getting a feel for old Mallorca (see p114). 🗺 Map F6

TOP 10 Wildlife and Plants

1 Birds of Prey

The island's dashing Eleanora's falcons constitute an important part of the world's population – you can see them around the Formentor lighthouse (see p29). The peregrine falcon, too, breeds in these parts, and you can spot black vultures, red kite, eagles, Montagu's harrier and long-eared owl.

Wild goat

swifts, swallows, the brilliantly coloured European bee-eater and the inimitable nightingale.

4 Mammals

You should see plenty of wild mountain goats in the more remote areas of Mallorca – and they'll certainly spy you. Rabbits, hares, hedgehogs, civet cats, ferrets, weasels and

2 Marine Birds

Birdwatchers come from all over Europe to see rare migrants, especially at the S'Albufera wetlands (see p37), including marsh harriers, herons, egrets, stilts, bitterns and flamingos. Seagulls (including the rare Audouin's gull), sandpipers, cormorants, ducks, ospreys and terns live along the rocky coasts.

other small creatures may take longer to spot. The Mallorcan donkey is also an increasingly rare occurrence – having been cross-bred with its Algerian cousin, there are a mere handful of registered members of the unalloyed species that exist at present.

Bee-eater

3 Songbirds

Species breeding here, or stopping for a visit in the spring or summer, include stonechats, warblers, the stripy hoopoe, partridges, buntings, finches, larks, curlews, thrushes, martins, ravens, shrikes, turtle doves, pipits,

5 Reptiles and Amphibians

Frogs, salamanders, geckos, snakes and lizards abound on the island. But perhaps the most interesting creatures are the endangered ferreret, a type of frog found only in the ravines of the Serra de Tramuntana, and the Lilford's lizard. Hunted to extinction by their natural enemies on the main island, the latter still thrive on the smaller islets off shore, especially Cabrera. Another endangered species is the caretta turtle, which lives in the waters around Sa Dragonera and Cabrera.

6 Insects

In the warmer seasons, you'll see plenty of colourful butterflies in the wooded areas of the island, as well as bees, mayflies and mean-looking hornets. In hot weather, especially among cedars, you'll be treated to the song of the cicadas, keening away at full volume, a wonderful reminder that you're in the Mediterranean. But flies and mosquitoes might take some dealing with.

Orange groves, Serra de Tramuntana

7 Wildflowers

The island is home to over 1,300 varieties of flowering plants, of which 40 are uniquely Mallorcan. These include the Balearic cyclamen, giant orchids and the delicate bee orchid. Spring and early summer are the time to see them in all their colourful bounty, but autumn also can be good. Look out especially for the asphodel with its tall spikes and clusters of pink flowers, Illa de Cabrera's rare dragon arum with its exotically hairy look, the rock rose in the Serra de Tramuntana and the Balearic peonies.

8 Herbs and Shrubs

These include the hair-like wild grass (Ampelodesma mauritanica) used for fodder, thatching and rope; the Balearics' only native palm, the dwarf fan palm; giant yucca and aloe; palmetto, used for basketry; aromatic wild rosemary; wild broom; a native variety of St John's wort; and the giant fennel.

Wildflowers in spring

9 Trees

The mountain areas are characterized by pines, cedars and evergreen holm oaks, while palms, cypress and yews have been planted on the island since time immemorial. Olives can reach great age (more than 1,000 years) and gargantuan size. They can also take on disturbingly anthropomorphic forms – the 19th-century writer George Sand, in her book A Winter in Majorca (see p18), tells of having to remind herself “that they are only trees”; when walking past them at dusk.

10 Cultivated Plants

Some of the flowering plants you see around the island are actually cultivated for decorative purposes: for example, the oleander, purple morning glory, agapanthus, bougainvillea, Bignonia jasminoides (commonly called the trumpet vine, with both orange and pink blooms – used as cover for pergolas), geranium and wisteria. Grapes and olives have been a feature of the Mallorcan landscape since Roman times.

A pleasant resort made up of coves with turquoise water, sandy beaches and large, flat rocks on which to bask. Families flock here, and it's good for snorkelling. Nearby Peguera has the nightlife (see p42). Map B4

Port de Sóller

2 Port d'Andratx
One of the choicest resort ports on the island, frequented by the Spanish king and other stellar visitors. Most of the restaurants and shops are on the south side of the port, with a posh sailing club on the north. The water is azure and lapis, with touches of emerald, but the only beach is tiny. Map A4

More a cove than a port, the beach here is rocky, the houses are made of rock, and rocky villas are dotted on the hill. Getting here involves a hair-raising series of hairpin bends down a cliff face that's subject to

4 Cala Deià
A narrow winding road from Deià (see p96) leads to a picturesque cove surrounded by steep cliffs. The beach is shingle, and the water is very clear. Getting down to the car park is the usual routine of narrow switchbacks. Map C2

5 Port de Sóller
The lovely bay offers calm waters for swimming, and a pedestrian walk lines the beaches. The resort hotels and nightlife venues cater to both young and old. Don't miss a ride on the antique tram that scoots to and from downtown Sóller (see also p96). Map C2

6 Port de Pollença
The family-friendly resort situated 6 km (4 miles) to the east of Pollença town, beside a pleasant bay, is an attractive place with a long, sandy beach. Many retired foreigners have made the town their home (see also p104). Map E1

7 Port d'Alcúdia
Big and a bit brash, this resort town has it all, including what most visitors might prefer to do without – terrible fast food joints and too many fluorescent lights creating a ghostly pallor along the promenade by night. Still, the beaches are good, some of the restaurants excellent and the nightlife non-stop (see also p105). Map F2

8 Cala Rajada
Ideal for watersports of all kinds, but the town itself feels a little cramped and overused, though it is still a fully operational fishing port. Fine coves and beaches nearby include popular Cala Guyá, Cala Mezquida and Cala Torta, which allows nudists (see also p116). Map H3

9 Platja de Canyamel
If a tranquil resort is what you're after, this might be the place to come. Even in high season, it remains a quiet, family-oriented place – just a long, curving sandy beach backed by pine forests, with a few tasteful hotels here and there. Map H3

10 Portopetro
Although on the verge of being swallowed whole by Cala d'Or (see also p116), this little fishing village has so far managed to retain its original flavour – possibly because there is no beach, and only one hotel in town. Charming to walk around and admire the slopes dotted by villas, or maybe just use as your base to visit the entire area. Map F6

2 Peguera
 A sprawling hotch-potch of modern structures and tourist attractions on a bay ringed by sandy beaches and pleasant pine forests. This is where Jaime I, the Conqueror, first came ashore with his army to retake the island from the Moors; now the only interlopers are the yachting enthusiasts in the ultramodern marina. ☉ Map B4

3 Camp de Mar

Platja de Formentor

4 Cala Tuent
 On the wild northern coast, where the opalescent hues of massive cliffs and sea meet, this is probably the area's quietest beach, since it's bypassed by most of the crowds who come to see the nearby Torrent de Pareis (see pp36 & 103). ☉ Map D2

5 Cala Sant Vicenç
 The area consists of three coves – Cala Sant Vicenç, Cala Barques and Cala Molins – with an appealing aura of intimacy. The first two have tiny but perfect beaches, gorgeous water and views. The third is down a hill, with a broader beach and more of a singles atmosphere (see p104). ☉ Map E1

Cala Millor

6 Platja de Formentor
Daytrippers from Port de Pollença love to come here, either by car or ferry, to partake of the same pristine sands and pure waters as the guests of the grand Hotel Formentor. The unspoiled views here are among the very best on the island (see also p29). Map F1

7 Cala Millor
One of the most popular resorts on the east coast of Mallorca. The first hotels began to appear here as early as the 1930s, but the real tourist invasion did not start until the 1980s. Similar to neighbouring Cala Bona and Sa Coma, Cala Millor has many beautiful beaches; the main one is 1.8 km (1 mile) long and is quite magnificent. There are bars, restaurants and clubs aplenty, all over-crowded in summer. To see what this coast used to be like, walk to the headland at Punta de n'Amer nature reserve. Map G4

8 Cala d'Or
Actually a collection of eight coves, which, taken together, comprise the most upmarket enclave on the southeastern coast. Though sprawling, the developments are characterized by attractive low-rise, white structures abundantly swathed in greenery (see p116).

Map F5

9 Colònia de Sant Jordi

The town has a handful of modest hotels, a few restaurants, a pretty beach and an interesting harbour. Many people come here with the sole purpose of catching a boat to nearby Cabrera (see p115), which, according to Pliny, was the birthplace of the famous Carthaginian leader, Hannibal. The town's other main attraction is the nearby salt lake, from which huge quantities of salt were once extracted – the main source of the town's wealth.

Map E6

10 Es Trenc
This splendid beach is everyone's favourite, and weekends will find it very crowded with sun-worshippers from Palma. The rest of the week, it's the domain of nudists, nature-lovers, and neo-hippies. It remains the island's last natural beach, interrupted only by the complex of vacation homes at Ses Covetes (see p116). Map E6

6 Cova Blava (Blue Grotto) This pretty little waterside cave is incorporated as part of the return trip to the island of Cabrera (see p115). Like its famous forerunner on the Isle of Capri in Italy, this Blue Grotto offers the amazing spectacle of the outside light being filtered up through the aquamarine waters, creating a ravishing luminosity that seems at once spectral, gem-like, and visually delicious. You can swim here, too. Map H6

7 Coves del Drac Take a quiet walk through an underground fairyland. The visit incorporates a concert on the large underground lake, with captivating lights reflected in the mirror-like waters. Then take a boat to the other side and continue your exploration (see pp32–3). Map G4

8 Coves d'es Hams The lighting in these caverns is more carnival-like than the others, and there's also a subterranean lake, with boat rides and a light and music show as part of your tour. Guides will give enough information to delight a speleologist, and the peculiar cave-dwelling crustaceans will be pointed out (see p113). Map G4

9 Coves d'Artà These caves have inspired many over the centuries, especially since they were studied in the 19th century. In summer, you can take a boat cruise to them from Cala Rajada and Font de Sa Cala – the seaside exit is very dramatic (see p113). Map H3

10 Cala Figuera, Cap de Formentor Cutting a chunk out towards the very end of dramatic Península de Formentor, this cove lies at the bottom of a precipitous ravine. It's accessible either on foot – you park up above, just off the road that winds out to the lighthouse – or by boat. Once there, the views of the surrounding cliffs are awesome, and the beach and water make it one of the island's most inviting swimming spots (see p29). Map F1

1 Snorkelling and Diving

Virtually all the tranquil coves around the island are ideal for snorkelling, with plenty of rocks and hidden recesses to explore. A favourite is the cove down from Estellencs (see p50). abound along the entire length of the Serra de Tramuntana, from Sóller in the west to the end of the Península de Formentor in the east. Tourist offices and parks offer published guidelines for tackling the island's wilds.

2 Other Watersports

Paragliding and jet-skiing are popular. Though windsurfing is also popular around the whole island, it is really best only on the eastern and southern coasts, where the waters tend to be calmer, and within the protected bay of the Port de Sóller (see

4 Cycling

You'll see groups of avid cyclists, decked out in their colourful threads, all over the island, from the twistiest mountain roads to the narrowest stone-walled lanes of Es Pla. Given the challenges most people experience when driving in Mallorca, it takes a bit of nerve to negotiate the same roads on two wheels. But you can easily rent bikes of all types in most towns, and the landscape is certainly conducive to cycling.

5 Golf

This is a sport that has taken Mallorca by storm. Courses are prevalent near the big resorts, though some of the finer hotels have their own and many more have putting greens. There are some 18 major golf courses scattered all around the island.

6 Boating

You can hire sail boats or motor boats for yourself, or sign on for a full-day or sunset cruise, many of which also feature water-skiing and other activities, and buffet lunches. They are the only way to explore some of the island's more inaccessible – and therefore virtually private – coves.

7 Fishing

As with other water activities, there are a number of boats that will take you out fishing for the day, particularly from the small port towns that still fish the seas commercially, including Portocolom (see p116). The bays of Pollença and Alcúdia (see pp104–5) are also popular for fishing.

8 Bird-Watching

Nature reserves are best for bird sightings, especially those on the north-eastern coast, S'Albufera and the Península de Formentor (see pp36–7). Spring and autumn are optimal times to visit, when migratory birds use Mallorca as a staging post between Europe and Africa. The isolated islands of Sa Dragonera and Cabrera (see p115) are also excellent.

9 The Bullfight

There are five bullrings: in Palma, Muro, Alcúdia, Inca and Fulanito, though historically the bullfighting tradition has not been so important to Mallorcans (or to Catalans generally) as in other parts of Spain. In season, between March and October, there are eight or nine bullfights. The killing, albeit executed according to strictly ceremonious guidelines, can be bloody and pathetic, so be warned.

10 Fútbol

There are two football (soccer) teams in Mallorca: Real Mallorca and Atlético Baleares, both of whom play in Palma during the season, which runs from early September to April. Real Mallorca has enjoyed considerable success in recent years, and, in any case, attending a match can be a fun, high-spirited, and good-humoured way to see the locals participating in the game they love the best.

7 Old Road to Sóller (Drive)
The drive over the Coll de Sóller, with its 57 hairpin bends, is the most terrifying in Mallorca. But it's worth it to see what life used to be like before the tunnel opened. Map C3 • About 45 minutes

Mirador de ses Animes

8 Sa Calobra (Drive)
Driving anywhere around Puig Major affords great views and challenges your driving skills. This purpose-made road – which translates as “The Snake” – has earned its name, with 270-degree loops and other harrowing features. It leads to a tiny settlement, where you can explore the dazzling beauties of the box canyon created over aeons by surging torrents (see p106). Map D2 • About 30 minutes

9 Pollença to Puig de Maria (Walk)
You'll find the signpost to Puig de Maria at Km 52 on the main road from Palma to Pollença. A sanctuary, set on an isolated hill that dominates the bays of Pollença and Alcúdia, offers stirring views of the Península de Formentor. Map E1-2 • 90 minutes to top

The highest mountain that can actually be climbed on the island. 1,367 m (4,484 ft)

TOP 10 Villages

1 Estellencs
 Though it is a pretty terraced town in a magnificent mountain setting, its old houses of grey-brown stone – left unplastered and unadorned – were essentially built for defence. Even the 15th-century church belfry was used as a place of refuge, as were most towers on the island (see also p98). Map B3

Fornalutx

2 Deià
 Spilling down a steep hillside, Deià's earth-tone houses are, to many, the finest on the island. English poet and writer Robert Graves and his artistic friends certainly thought so, bringing international fame to this really rather modest town. Today, the tiny artists' retreat has been bought up by the wealthy, though it still retains its humble appearance (see also p96). Map C2

3 Fornalutx
 Often voted Mallorca's loveliest town – if not all of Spain's – this enchanting mountain village was founded by the Moors in the 12th century. The tiny town square is a friendly gathering place, but it is the heady views people remember – up to the island's highest mountain and down into a verdant chasm below (see also p97). Map D2

4 Orient
 Again, it is the mountain setting that dazzles: this tiny, remote hamlet of some 40 houses has some of the finest views the island has to offer. It's also an excellent base for hikers or anyone who just wants to breathe the exhilarating air (see also p98). Map D3

5 Alaró
 At one end of a very scenic mountain road, under the shadow of the commanding Castell d'Alaró, this pleasant village dates from at least the time of the Moors. If you want to climb up to the castle, drive up to Es Verger restaurant and proceed on foot: the ascent takes about 45 minutes and the view is marvellous (see p97). Map D3

6 Binissalem

The town is probably second only to Palma in the number and splendour of its mansions, dating from the 18th century, when it became the centre of a booming wine business. All that ended at the end of the 19th century, when phylloxera wiped out the vines, but wineries are making a comeback these days, producing good reds (see p121). Map D3

7 Santa Maria del Camí

A way station for weary travellers through the centuries, the village has a charming Baroque belfry, the Convent dels Mínims and a quaintly traditional Mallorcan textile factory (see p124). Map D3

8 Algaida

Most people pass through the outskirts of this small town on their way to Puig de Randa, but it's worth stopping for some good restaurants, where the people of Palma dine at weekends (see p125). The Gordiola Glassworks (see p123) are also nearby. Map D4

9 Santanyi

Founded in 1300 by Jaume II, Santanyi was given a protective wall due to its proximity to the coast. Only part of that wall remains but it gives the place a certain character. For this reason, the town has attracted a large number of foreign dwellers, who have turned it into a rather cosmopolitan, well-kept place compared with nearby towns. Check out the art galleries on the main square (see also p117). Map F6

10 Capdepera

The extremely large and well-preserved medieval fortress that dominates the ridge above the town is the main reason to come to Capdepera. With its crenellated walls draped over the rolling hilltop, it is certainly a noble sight and one of Mallorca's finest castles. Some sort of fort has been here since at least Roman times, and more or less continuously used throughout centuries of international squabbles and pirate raids (see also pp57 & 113). Map H3

TOP 10 Festivals

1 Revetlla de Sant Antoni Abat

One of Mallorca's most unusual festivals, in honour of St Anthony, the patron saint of pets. For two days in January in Sa Pobla, pets are led through the town to be blessed outside the church. Elsewhere, dancers drive out costumed devils, to ensure harmony during the coming year, and everyone circles bonfires and eats spicy pastries filled with spinach and marsh eels. 📅 17 Jan • Palma, Sa Pobla, Muro and elsewhere

Festa de Sant Jaume

street concerts and beach parties in one of the island's most colourful and exuberant festivals. 📅 last fortnight in January • Palma de Mallorca

5 Festa de Nostra Senyora de la Victòria

Port de Sóller is the venue for a mock battle between Christians and Moors, in commemoration of a skirmish in which Arabic corsairs were routed in 1561. Expect lots of rowdy, boozy fun, brandishing of swords and the firing of antique guns. 📅 Around 9 May • Port de Sóller

2 Maundy Thursday

Setmana Santa (Holy Week) in the capital city is observed by a solemn procession of some 5,000 people parading an icon of the crucified Christ through the streets. 📅 Mar or Apr • Palma

3 Good Friday

Many Mallorcan towns have processions during Holy Week. The Calvari steps in Pollença are the scene of a moving re-enactment, the Davallament (the Lowering) each Good Friday, when in total silence a figure of Christ is removed from a cross and carried down the steps by torchlight. 📅 Mar or Apr • Pollença & elsewhere

4 Festes de Sant Sebastià

Mallorca's capital city honours its patron saint with fireworks, dragons, processions,

6 Corpus Christi

Participants dress up as eagles and perform the Ball dels Àguiles ("Dance of the Eagles") in Pollença's town square. What exactly this has to do with the miracle of Transubstantiation during Holy Communion is not really explained, thus scholars suspect the celebration's origins are pre-Christian. 📅 Jun • Pollença

7 Día de Mare de Déu del Carme

This celebration of the patron saint of seafarers and fishermen takes place in various coastal settlements. Boats are blessed, torches are lit (as at Port de Sóller), and sailors carry effigies of the Virgin. 📅 15-16 Jul • Palma, Port de Sóller, Colònia de Sant Pere, Portocolom, Cala Rajada & other ports

Christians fighting Moors, Port de Sóller

8 Festa de Sant Jaume
 St James is celebrated with the usual summer highjinks, including folk dancing, fireworks and parades, featuring an icon of the saint and various religious symbols.
 ☉ Week leading up to 25 Jul • Alcúdia

9 Mare de Déu dels Àngels
 Another, even longer, battle between the Christians and the Moors, this time in Pollença. The town spends a whole year preparing for the event, in which hundreds of youths dress up.
 ☉ 2 Aug • Pollença

10 Festa de l'Àngel
 Villages across Mallorca celebrate the Feast Day of the Angel with a pilgrimage to their local shrine. The biggest event takes place in Palma's Castell de Bellver (see pp12–13) but the pilgrimage from Alaró (see p50) to its castle is also very colourful. ☉ Sunday after Easter

Revetlla de Sant Antoni Abat

Top 10 Figures in Religious History

1 Lluç
 Legend recounts that over 700 years ago, an Arab boy named Lluç, recently converted to Christianity, discovered the effigy of the Madonna at Lluç (see pp26–7).

2 Ramon Llull
 The 13th-century mystic founded several religious observances on the island.

3 Knights Templar
 A rich and powerful brotherhood of Christian military monks (see p90).

4 Inquisition Judges
 The hated Inquisition was introduced to the island in 1484 and led to the burning alive of at least 85 people between 1484 and 1512.

5 Xuetes
 The name given to the Jews who were coerced by the Inquisition into converting to Catholicism.

6 Junípero Serra
 Important 18th-century missionary, born in the town of Petra (see p122).

7 Santa Catalina
 The island's only home-grown saint, Santa Catalina Thomàs was born in the 1500s in Valldemossa (see pp18–19).

8 Cardinal Despuig
 The 18th-century cardinal developed the more opulent side of church life on the island (see p95).

9 Bishop Campins
 The driving force behind the renewal of the monastery at Lluç as a pilgrimage site.

10 Gaudí
 Highly devout, the architect was responsible for the restoration of Mallorca Cathedral and other holy sites.

TOP 10 Ancient Places*1 La Seu, Palma

The Romans had some sort of major building on the site of Mallorca's Cathedral, and it was graced with an important mosque under the Moors. The existing edifice shows the stylistic influences of both those and other cultures (see pp8–9).

2 Palau de l'Almudaina, Palma

Many Moorish elements can still be appreciated in the old, rambling palace (see pp10–11).

3 Banyes Àrabs, Palma These private baths probably belonged to a wealthy Moorish resident and, together with their gardens, have incredibly come down to us virtually intact.

Banyes Àrabs

However, closer examination reveals elements from even earlier sources. The columns, each one different, were doubtlessly taken from an ancient Roman building (see p87).

4 Jardins d'Alfàbia Although later Renaissance and Baroque touches are evident in the gardens and house, the underlying Arabic styling predominates. The many watercourses are a distinctly Moorish touch, as well as the little oasis-like groves of trees encircling pools, where you can sit and enjoy the fresh air and the music of gurgling rivulets (see pp24–5).

5 Castell d'Alaró This lofty castle was originally used by the Moors as a stronghold. It proved to be virtually impregnable – conquered only after extremely long sieges, with its unfortunate defenders eventually being starved out. The Christians refurbished the old structure and continued to use it for centuries (see p97).

6 Castell del Rei The Moors chose another picturesque spot for their "Castle of the King." The battered ruins we see today, high above the sea on a barren crag, are the remains of medieval embellishments made by Jaume I. It was not effective against pirates, who simply landed at nearby Cala Sant Vicenç, but it was the last stronghold to surrender to Aragonese invasions in the 14th century (see p106).

7 Pollentia
The Moorish town of Alcúdia is built over an ancient Roman settlement called Pollentia. Little more than a few original Roman columns and foundations remain in situ – after being burned by Vandals in AD 440, the antique structures were dismantled to help create the new town (see pp30–31).

8 Ses Païsses
These Bronze Age remains form one of Mallorca's most impressive prehistoric sites. The defensive wall, composed of huge square blocks, is an example of the Mediterranean Cyclopean style – so-named by later cultures who believed that only a giant like the Cyclops could have built such a structure (see p113).

9 Ses Covetes
Midway along the beach at Es Trénc is the site of what were probably ancient Roman burial grounds, where ashes of the dead were placed in small niches. It is called a columbarium (dovecote) because it resembles a pigeon house, with small openings lined up in rows (see p116).

Capocorb Vell

10 Capocorb Vell
These well-preserved megalithic ruins, from the Talaiotic culture that dominated the island some 3,000 years ago, are similar to those found at Ses Païsses. The word "Talayot" refers to the towers at such sites, which were two or three storeys high. The central round towers are the oldest elements here; around them is an encircling wall and square towers to complete the defensive complex (see p115).

Pollentia

Left Castell de Bellver Right Talaia d'Albercutx

TOP 10 Castles and Towers

1 Castell de Bellver
One of just a handful of round castles in the world, and impeccably preserved, this building conjures up images of damsels in distress and bold knights galloping to the rescue. In fact, its history is more prosaic – it was a prison for enemies of the crown for hundreds of years (see pp12–13).

2 Dragonera Island Tower
The ancient watchtower on one of Mallorca's most picturesque island nature reserves may date as far back as Roman times. It may not be much to look at these days, but it's fun just to hike around the unspoiled island and imagine what it must have been like during a raid, with corsairs storming the place and signal fires warning the rest of the island (see p98).

Torre Verger at the Mirador de ses Animes

3 Torre Verger
At the Mirador de ses Animes, a watchtower, built in 1579, provides what must be among the finest views of the entire western coastline. You can climb up into the stone structure and stand on the topmost level, just as watchmen must have done in the dark centuries when Mallorca was subject to almost incessant attack by North African brigands (see also p98).

4 Castell d'Alaró
This remote castle was attacked several times over the centuries, each time proving its defences against everything except prolonged siege. Alfonso III finally took it in 1285. The two leaders of the patriots were burned alive by the king, who, in turn, was excommunicated by the pope (see also pp54 & 97).

5 Castell del Rei
With Moorish origins and Christian additions, this castle never served its defensive purpose well, as raiders simply avoided it. It was demoted to merely a watchtower, and, in the early 18th century, abandoned altogether. Today, its ruins are a panoramic destination for hikers (see also pp54 & 106).

6 Talaia d'Albercutx
At the highest point on the Península de Formentor is a tower that is wondrous for having been built at all in such a precipitous place. At this height, the wind howls, and the views are like those from a helicopter. The road to it is perilous, too (see p28).

7 Sant Joan Baptista Belfry

Located in the town of Muro, this beautiful bell tower seems almost Arabic, so slender is the arch that joins it to the imposing church. However, it sports other elements that recall Gothic and Renaissance styles, including stone carvings, a decorative door and coffer. The square in which it is situated is one of the island's prettiest (see p121).

8 Castell de Capdepera

Another wonderful Mallorcan fortress that epitomizes the fairytale castle. The approach is a pleasure in itself, as you pass fragrant plants and rocky outcrops, and the views are memorable. It was built by King Sanç in the 14th century (see p113).

9 Castell de Santueri

One of several castles with the same name, this is about 6 km (4 miles) southeast of Felanitx. It was built in the 14th century right into the cliffs on the site of a ruined Arab fortress. The view takes in everything from Cabrera to the Cap de Formentor. You can drive here or walk, ideally from the equally imposing, nearby Santuari de Sant Salvador (see p61).

Santuari de Sant Salvador

10 Castell de Cabrera

The 14th-century castle on the island of Cabrera, off Mallorca's south coast, has a chequered history, subsequent to its original purpose as a defence measure for the southern reaches of the main island. At various times it has been a pirates' den; a crowded, deadly prison for 9,000

French soldiers in the 19th century; and an outpost for Franco's Fascist forces in the 20th century. Now the island it oversees is a National Park, and a climb up to the crumbling old fortress will be rewarded with some stupendous views (see also p115).

TOP 10 Churches

1 La Seu, Palma
Mallorca's grandest church is also one of the greatest Gothic churches anywhere. Flamboyant spires with stone flames give it a prickly look. The vast space and riches inside are also unforgettable (see pp8–9).

Interior, Santa Eulalia

most notably when struck by lightning in 1580. Consequently, the façade you see today is a Baroque creation, though presumably no less massive than the Gothic original. The beautiful cloisters are the star turn, and, in fact, you must enter the church by going through them first (see p88).

2 Església de Santa Eulàlia, Palma
Built just after the Christians reclaimed the Balearics in the 13th century, this church has a rare Gothic homogeneity, despite some later medieval touches and 19th-century additions (see p90).

3 Basílica de Sant Francesc, Palma
Built in 1281 on a site where the Moors made soap, this church has suffered its share of woes,

Basílica of Sant Francesc

4 Portals Vells Cave Church
One of the caves along the rocky headland of Portals Vells (see p44) has been turned into a church, Cova de la Mare de Déu – according to legend, by shipwrecked Genoese sailors who were grateful for their survival. The holy water stoup and altar have been carved out of solid rock, although the effigy of the Virgin that was once placed here is now in a seafront church at Portals Nous.

5 Nostra Senyora dels Àngels, Pollença
Features include a vibrant rose window with elaborate arabesque stone tracery outside and an intriguing sculpture, located in a side chapel, of St Sebastian, nonchalantly resting on the arrows that pierce his body. Note the floor tiles with rooster heads, the symbol of the town of Pollença (see p103).

Nostra Senyora dels Àngels, Pollença

8 Nostra Senyora dels Àngels, Sineu

Mallorca's grandest parish church, at the highest point of a town that was declared the official centre of the island by King Sanç, can be visited only on market day, Wednesday. It has a small archaeological museum. Map E3

9 Sant Bernat, Petra

Petra was the birthplace of Fray Junípero Serra, who established missions all over California in the 1700s and early 1800s. The town's stocky church commemorates the man (see p122).

10 Oratori de Montesió, Porreres

Part of a former monastery, this 14th-century hilltop church overlooks the small agricultural village of Porreres. It has a five-sided cloister, an unusual arcaded façade with elegant Gothic lines, and great views out to sea. The setting is a wonderful venue for special concerts sponsored by the town, featuring internationally known talents. Map E4

6 Santuari de la Victòria

The fortress church was built on a rocky headland near Alcúdia in the 1600s to house an early statue of the Virgin. Despite these measures, the figure was stolen twice by pirates. The views are sweeping, and it's also a starting point for great hikes over the promontory (see p106).

7 Nostra Senyora de la Esperança, Capdepera

The story goes that once, when a band of loutish brigands were preparing to attack the town of Capdepera, the townspeople implored the Madonna to help them. A thick fog promptly settled in, confounding the pirates. Since then, the town's statue has been known as Sa Esperança ("the bringer of hope"). It is housed in a quaint Gothic chapel within the famous castle at Capdepera (see p113).

TOP 10 Monasteries

1 Carthusian Monastery, Valldemossa

Set in one of the most appealing towns on the island, this former royal residence and monastery has a rich history. Most captivating of all to the myriad visitors who come here is the poignant story of the winter visit of composer Frédéric

Chopin, dying of tuberculosis, and his lover George Sand, along with her two children – all of whom left copious records of their experiences (see pp18–19).

2 Ermita de Sant Llorenç

At Cala Tuent on the wild northern coast (see p103) is a small 13th-century hermitage perched high above the coast. It was remote then and remains relatively so today. Map D2

3 Nostra Senyora de Lluc

Not so much an active monastery today as a place of pilgrimage that also draws tourists and nature-lovers. This is Mallorca's holiest spot, high in the mountains, and has been a sacred zone since time immemorial. The complex has an attractive church, with a special chapel to house the venerated image, and there are also pilgrim paths to climb and nature trails to explore (see pp26–7 & 146).

Ermita de Betlé

4 Ermita de Nostra Senyora del Puig

Just to the south of Pollença, this serene place with marvellous views houses one of the oldest Gothic images of the Virgin on the island. The unassuming stone complex, dating mostly to the 18th century, comprises a courtyard, a chapel, fortified walls, a refectory and cells. You can rent a room here (see pp104 & 146).

5 Ermita de Betlem

Up in the hills northwest of Artà (see p116), this monastery has a lovely vantage point, 400 m (1,312 ft) above the sea. It dates from 1804, when a group of hermits decided to rebuild the church that had been destroyed years before by pirates. The church is tiny and crudely frescoed, but it's worth the hike. Bring a picnic. Map G3

Ermita de Sant Miquel

6 Santuari de Sant Salvador

Pilgrims and other visitors can stay overnight at this former monastery, which has a truly spectacular setting, right at the top of the Serres de Llevant. You can't miss it: the site's huge stone cross and statue of Christ can be seen for miles around (see pp114 & 146).

7 Ermita de Nostra Senyora de Bonany

This monastery is on top of Puig de Bonany. A stone cross was erected here in 1749 for Junípero Serra (see p122), before he left on a mission to California. The sanctuary was built in the 17th century as an act of thanksgiving for a good harvest – bon any or “good year”. The modern church dates from 1925 and is entered via an imposing gate decorated with ceramic portraits of St Paul and St Anthony. The forecourt has panoramic views. Map F4

8 Ermita de Sant Miquel

Just east of Montuiri (see p123) is a small monastery with views over the fertile fields of Es Pla. Facilities include a café-restaurant and nicely restored monks' cells where, for a nominal amount, you can stay so long as you don't mind sharing a bathroom. Map E4

9 Santuari de Nostra Senyora de Cura

Ramon Lull (see p35) founded this hermitage at the top of the Puig de Randa table mountain in the 13th century, and it was here that he trained missionaries bound for Africa and Asia. Nothing remains of the original building, but Lull's legacy has ensured that the site is an important place for many Catholics. The monastery houses a library and study centre, and visitors can stay overnight in simple rooms. There are other hermitages lower down the hill (see next entry). Map E4

10 Santuari de Nostra Senyora de Gràcia

The lowest hermitage site on Puig de Randa (see previous entry) is set on a ledge in a cliff above a sheer 200-m (656-ft) drop and has beguiling views out over the plain. It was founded in 1497 and appears, along with nesting birds, to be sheltered by the huge rock that overhangs it. Map E4

1 Museu Diocesà, Palma

Housed in the former Episcopal Palace, this treasure trove contains archaeological artifacts, ceramics, coins, books and paintings spanning the 13th to 16th centuries. Highlights include the jasper sarcophagus of Jaume II, an Arab tombstone and a painting of St George and the Dragon with a background impression of what 15th-century Palma might have looked like (see p87).

Museu d'Art Espanyol Contemporani

2 Museu de Mallorca, Palma

The palace that houses this terrific museum dates from 1634. The collections present a full and well-documented range of Mallorcan artifacts, from the prehistoric up to fine examples of Modernista furniture. The Talayot figures – small bronze warriors – and recreations of Neolithic dwellings are other highlights (see p88).

Panel, Museu de Mallorca

3 Museu d'Art Espanyol Contemporani, Palma

One of the finer legacies left by Mallorcan Joan March, who became the world's third-richest man during the Franco era, in what many say was a dubious rags-to-riches rise. The renovated museum aims to spotlight the contributions of Spanish artists to the global art scene, so you'll find works by Picasso, Miró, Dalí and Gris, and also Mallorca's greatest modern painter, Miquel Barceló (see p90).

4 Fundació Pilar i Joan Miró, Palma

Miró's Mallorcan roots go deep – both his mother and his wife were Mallorcan-born, and the great artist spent the last years of his life on the island. So it is entirely fitting that the place he worked in that final period should have been turned into a museum devoted to him (see pp14–15).

5 Museu Municipal de Valldemossa

The range of objects on display is vast and eclectic, such as the history of printing in Mallorca, the work of an Austrian archduke, paintings inspired by the mountains of the Tramuntana, and important works by modern masters (see pp20–21).

6 Museu de Lluc

An interesting hotchpotch of prehistoric artifacts, Roman finds, ceramics (including some lovely majolica), religious pieces, and an exhaustive array of works by 20th-century Valldemossan artist Josep Coll Bardolet, who liked mountain scenery (see p27).

9 Museu Etnològic, Muro

Fascinating glimpses into Mallorca's past include a recreated traditional kitchen pharmacy. There is a fine collection of siurells (Mallorcan clay whistles) featuring men on horseback. The Felanitx pottery bears the characteristic floral decoration. ☎ C/Major, 15 • Map E3 • Closed Mon • Adm

8 Museu Monogràfic, Alcúdia

This small but beautifully designed museum houses all the finds from ancient Roman Pollentia, such as cult figures, weights and measures, surgical instruments, needles, games, jewellery and gladiatorial gear (see p31).

Museums tend to open around 10am, close at 1pm for a few hours, then reopen from around 5–7pm. They usually close on Mondays.

1 Parc de la Mar, Palma
With its artificial lake, section of city walls and great views, this is a lovely place to stroll at any time. At night, the sparkling city lights and warm glow of the nearby cathedral and palaces add a magical quality (see pp48 & 90).

2 S'Hort del Rei, Palma
Gentle jets of water and bowl-shaped fountains characterize this lovely Arab-influenced garden. As the name suggests, it was once the king's private garden. Today, it is open to all, and the home of some eccentric modern sculpture. ☉ Map K4

3 Banyes Àrabs Gardens, Palma
To the Moors, who came from an arid land where the oasis was the symbol of life, water was the very essence of a garden. The cloistered gardens at the Banyes Àrabs baths (see p87) evoke that ideal – it was here that the wealthy owner would relax after his bath, and breathe in the fragrant air.

5 Son Marroig
The famous Archduke Salvador (see p20) had many homes on Mallorca, but Son Marroig was his favourite. The gardens, terraced in the ancient Arabic fashion, are deliberately left a bit wild, in keeping with the slightly rough look of the natural flora. All this vibrant nature neatly contrasts with the high Renaissance refinement of the architecture, especially the gazebo that offers coastal views of such exquisite perfection (see p95).

6 Jardí Botànic

Naturally, in all those centuries the lucky owners (Mallorca's most illustrious families among them) have added their own touches, resulting in Renaissance and Baroque elements in the landscape design and building features (see pp24–5).

8 Raixa

Squarely of the late Italian Baroque or early Rococo style of the 1700s, Raixa gardens belonged to a wealthy cardinal, who liberally indulged his taste for collecting Classical statuary. However, only a fraction of his collection remains in the gardens; the rest now adorns the Castell de Bellver in Palma (see pp12–13). 📍 Map C3

8 Caves

Young adventurers will love the thrill of exploring Mallorca's caves, especially the Coves d'Artà, which exit onto the open sea (see pp44–5 & 113). At the Coves del Drac, the pitch darkness at a certain moment will excite your children, though the very young might be frustrated at having to walk in silence for so long (see pp32–3).

9 Aqualandia

This small but lively park is situated away from the coast in the El Pla region (see pp120–25). Aqualandia has many attractions, including a water park with slides, a crazy golf course, and a wax museum. 📍 Crta. Palma-Inca Km 25, Binissalem • 971 551228 • May–Sep: 10am–6pm • Adm

Built on what was once a seasonal river bed, this long promenade doesn't hold a candle to Barcelona's famous Ramblas, but is lined with flower stalls and definitely worth a ramble. ☎ Map L1–M2

2 Avinguda Jaume III, Palma

This elegant, arcaded avenue is one of Palma's main streets for chic boutiques, including Cartier and Loewe and good local shops such as Persepolis for antiques (see p91). Worth a stroll even if you don't want to buy. ☎ Map J–K2

3 Casal Balaguer, Palma

5 Tejidos Artesania, Santa Maria del Camí

Wherever you go all over the island, you'll see the festive robes de llengües (tongue of flame cloth) they make here, in every possible colour and design. To watch it being made at this out-of-the-way spot is worth the trip in itself, plus you can buy bolts of fabric and ready-made items (see p124).

6 Inca

Though Inca is a dull town, it is the island's centre for the production of leather goods.

Countless outlets offer buttery leather jackets, supple handbags, trendy shoes and a host of other stylish items (see p124).

country market is like. You will find the freshest produce – strawberries and potatoes are specialities here – and have the chance to sample the local spicy tapas (see also p121).

8 Sineu Market

Sineu is one of the most interesting towns of Mallorca's central plain (Es Pla), and its Wednesday market is one of the biggest agricultural fairs in Mallorca, where local produce and livestock are traded. Pearls, leather and lace are among the goods on offer.  Map E3

9 Manacor Pearls

The unprepossessing town of Manacor is notable for its manufactured goods, with pride of place going to its world-famous artificial pearls. The standards of fabrication are exacting, as a free tour of the factory will reveal, and the shimmering colours and variety of shapes indistinguishable from true pearls (see also pp122 & 124).

10 Gordiola Glassworks

Despite the rather kitsch building it's housed in, this place is worth a prolonged visit. Watch the glassblowers engaged in their dangerous art, spend an hour in the museum upstairs, and at least another hour browsing through the vast warehouse shops with their prodigious output of beautiful glassware (see p123).

Top 10 Markets

- 1 Palma Daily Markets
Passeig de la Rambla for flowers (see entry 4), Plaça Mayor, Mercado del Olivar, Mercado de Santa Catalina, Mercado de Pere Garau and Mercat de Llevant for produce.

The bar at Abraxas

1 Abraxas, Palma
One of Palma's top clubs and located along the waterfront, this huge place specializes in loud house music. As with nightlife venues all over Spain, the action doesn't get going until about 1am – so don't arrive early and be considered hopelessly naïve or desperate! It's a mixed crowd at all times, though there are regular gay-themed nights in season. ☎ Avda. Gabriel Roca, 42 • 971 455908 • www.abraxasmallorca.com • Adm

2 Tito's, Palma
Palma's other huge nightlife venue is popular with a younger crowd, from teens to 20-somethings. The décor is all very modern, with lots of stainless steel in evidence, and the light show and sound system are, of course, up-to-the-minute, the music ranging from house to top-40. Sunday night is Gay

3 Sa Posada de Bellver, Palma

Located just above Plaça Gomila, this idiosyncratic, friendly little place will remind you of a gypsy encampment. Expect live ethnic music most nights, and an eclectic range of non-Spanish foods – Middle Eastern finger foods and other exotic treats. It isn't remote, but it feels that way. ☎ C/Bellver, 7 • 971 730739

4 Gran Casino Mallorca, Urbanización Sol de Mallorca, Magaluf

This Las Vegas-style casino and nightclub is more than just a glitzy gambling destination, there is an excellent restaurant and in summer they offer a programme of concerts from classical to jazz. Smart dress (see p101).

Chivas

5 Barracuda, Port d'Andratx

Keep an eye out for this club's posters all around the port – they're particularly original and collectible, the work of Jorge Bascones. The vivacious young woman who runs the spacious place is very talented at dreaming up new theme nights that manage to appeal to just about everyone in town – at least to all those who enjoy bopping the night away (see p101).

7 BCM Planet Dance, Magaluf

The biggest dance club on the island regularly hosts such star DJs as Judge Jules and Tim Westwood. The cavernous internal space is put to good use with some incredible laser shows, and there are also 16 canons, which fire anything from foam to confetti into the lively crowds.

☎ Avda. S'Olivera • 971 711856 • Adm

7 Chivas, Port de Pollença

After you've revved up at Port de Pollença's pubs, then strolled around the promenades and central square to check out the endless stream of attractive young people, this is the place to make for next. Nothing unusual about it, but it's the disco of choice for the 20-something cognoscenti – at least for the moment – who come here to dance till dawn, go back to the hotel for 40 winks, then hit the beach (see p109).

8 Menta, Port d'Alcúdia

This is a well-run club with an exciting range of rooms and areas for full-on partying, having a quiet drink with friends, or even taking a nighttime dip in a pool fit for an emperor. It's a beautiful and inviting place, run with an unerring sense of style and good taste – it's glitzy, of course, but never tacky. The location is a bit off the beaten track, but it's worth whatever it takes to get there (see p109).

9 Es Carreró, Portocristo

This little street, quiet and unassuming by day, turns into the hub of the resort at night. Innumerable tiny music-drinks-dance venues open up, and the young, beautiful, and restless turn out in droves to partake of the varied pleasures – all of them decked out in their best mylar and polyester finery. It's a stirring sight, and the air positively vibrates with all the pumping beats that emanate from every doorway (see p119).

10 Opio Bar, Palma

Popular with Palma's jet set visitors, the Opio Bar is in the Hotel Puro, one of a few boutique hotels that have made the Mallorcan capital chic again. The decor is minimalist white with dashes of red and the sounds played by the resident DJ are laid-back cool. ☎ Hotel Puro, C/Monte Negro, 12 • 971 425450 • 8pm–2am

TOP 10 Culinary Highlights

1 Pa amb Oli

This is the favourite Mallorcan (and greater Catalan) snack – a regional version of the more internationally known bruschetta. The basic item is sliced baguette rubbed with garlic then smeared with fresh tomato, drizzled with olive oil and sprinkled with salt. To this basic recipe, you can add whatever you please – usually ham and/or cheese. The vibrant flavour is utterly irresistible.

Seafood paella

2 Frit Mallorquí and Llom amb Col

Frit is cheap peasant food at its heaviest, consisting of fried offal of the famous black Mallorcan pig, cooked in oil with potatoes and onions. You'll find it at its savoury best in some of the more traditional market towns of Es Pla. Llom amb col, pork wrapped in cabbage, is equally traditional and substantial.

3 Tumbet

The vegetables that go to make up this stew can vary widely, depending on the season, but classically comprise a selection from among the following: aubergine (eggplant), bell peppers, courgettes (zucchini), onions, cabbage and potatoes. Seasoning consists mainly of garlic.

4 Sopes Mallorquinas

By far the best of Mallorca's sopes (soups) is fish soup, a hearty stew of shellfish and white fish in a broth flavoured with garlic and saffron. It may also contain rice or pasta for added body. Other soups common on the island are concoctions of vegetables and mixed meats, often seasoned with garlic.

5 Arròs

Arròs (rice) dishes include: the familiar paella Valenciana, saffron rice with a mixture of seafood, fish, chicken and sausage; arròs brut, rice with offal; and arròs negre, rice with seafood cooked using squid ink.

6 Pork Sausages

Mallorca's most prized sausage, sobrassada, comes from the island's famous small black

Cheeses and sausages, Pollença market

Baked fish in rock salt

pigs. It's tender, flavourful and tinged red from spices, and you'll find various versions of it, including a sobrassada pâté for spreading on toast.

7 Sea Bass Baked in Rock Salt

The Mallorcan version of this classic is the pièce de résistance wherever it is served. The salt pack keeps the moisture and flavour safely inside, and when it is cracked open you find the most delicate, succulent fish, with just a hint of saltiness to add piquancy.

8 Ensaimades

These unbelievably light and flaky spiral pastries are the pride of the island. They can be dusted with icing sugar or filled with candied fruits or jam.

9 Vi de la Casa

Mallorca is now enjoying a decided upswing in its wine production, and you can generally depend on the house wines to be very good. The reds are considered the island's best at the moment, being robust and aromatic, though some whites attain a lively fruitiness.

10 Canya

Canya is the term to use in a bar when you want them to pull you a draught beer; for a large one ask for a jerra. Cervesa (beer) tends to be of the pilsner type, though in Palma you can find a local variety that is black, fizzy and bitter.

Top 10 Tapas Types

1 Pickled and Cured

The easiest finger-nibbles: olives (sometimes very salty), miniature pickles and possibly pearl onions. A cured favourite is salted cod.

2 Marinated

All manner of seafood, including anchovies, sardines and shellfish, steeped in pale green olive oil.

3 Smoked

You'll find sliced smoked ham everywhere, along with the local sausage, sobrassada.

4 With Mayonnaise

A big favourite is patatas bravas, fried potato cubes with mayonnaise and spicy red sauce. Another is aïoli, a pungent, but delicious, mix of garlic and mayonnaise.

5 On Bread

The signature bread snack is a crust of baguette with olive oil and maybe other toppings (see pa amb oli opposite).

6 Egg-Based

Truita espanyol is a potato, egg and onion pie, served by the slice. Omelettes, possibly with prawns, are also common.

7 Fried

Calamari rings are most popular, but you'll also see fish and chicken croquettes.

8 Grilled or Roasted

From snails roasted with garlic to grilled baby squid, octopus, aubergine, kebabs and sweet bell peppers.

9 Stewed or Steamed

As well as tumbet (see opposite), steamed shellfish, broad green beans and artichokes shouldn't be missed.

10 Pâté

Another signature island dish is pork liver pâté.

TOP 10 Cafés and Bars

Abaco

1 Abaco, Palma

Many can hardly believe their eyes when they first find this gorgeous place, set in the courtyard of a period townhouse. Candlelit, full of fresh flowers and fruit, and with the delightful touch of tropical birds in the magical garden, it is surely the best place in the world to have a drink (see p92). Outside of town, the same people run Abacanto, where they've done a similar thing to an entire mansion.

2 Grand Café Cappuccino, Palma

An elegant 18th-century palace set around a palm-filled patio houses this charming café. The dining areas have been smartly refurbished but do not have the appeal of the romantic courtyard with its pretty stone fountain. Drinks, snacks and full meals are served here. ### 6 Gran Café 1919, Port de Pollença

An ideal corner location on an elegant promenade has been claimed by this old-fashioned café (similar to one in Port d'Alcúdia, see p107). The staff are done up in black ties, and the décor evokes Belle Époque style with a frothy dash of Catalan Modernista. ☎ Anglada Camarassa & Passeig Voramar • Map E1

7 Mestizo Café, Port d'Alcúdia

Resembling something from the American Southwest, with warm adobe colours and desert decor, this place is a block off the beach and popular for cocktails, coffee and cakes. Internet access is also available. Open evenings only. ☎ C/Coral • Map F2

8 Sa Pedra, Porto Cristo

Head here if you want to gaze out on Porto Cristo's inlet and picturesque palisades while lingering over a drink or fancy ice cream and soaking up the laid-back atmosphere of the town. It's also an ideal listening post for the musical entertainment at the nearby park (see p117).

9 Café Sa Plaça, Santanyi

The whole town of Santanyi is architecturally interesting, especially the central square, and this is the ideal spot from which to take it in. The town is surprisingly sophisticated, due to the huge influx of international residents, the majority of whom have brought a lot of money with them. Still, local customs and atmosphere have not been lost, and this café offers a nice mix of contemporary pizzazz and rural relaxation (see p117).

10 Café Sa Plaça, Sineu

At this café-restaurant in the town's central square, you can take in a view of the magnificent church of Santa Maria as you enjoy your meal. On Wednesdays you can also watch the spectacle of the vibrant local market. This café is the place to sample a time-honoured orxata, a sweet, creamy soft drink made from tiger nuts (see p124).

Palma

IN 1983, PALMA BECAME the capital of the newly created Autonomous Community of the Balearic Islands and transformed itself from a provincial town into a metropolis. Today, it has over 300,000 inhabitants and captivates all visitors as it once captivated Jaume I, who, after conquering it in 1229 described it as the “loveliest town that I have ever seen”. It is pleasant to stroll along the clean, attractive streets past renovated historic buildings. The town and harbour are full of life, with bars and restaurants busy with locals and tourists alike.

1 Cathedral

Dominating the entire port, Mallorca Cathedral (known as La Seu) is a glowing man-made mountain of sandstone. The second largest Gothic cathedral in the world, it is also the symbol of the city and the island's most visited building (see pp8–9).

📍 Map L5–M5

2 Palau de l'Almudaina

Having been a royal palace for over 1,000 years, this building's style speaks of its long, fractious history with an uneasy blending of Islamic and Gothic elements (see pp10–11). 📍 Map L4

3 Museu Diocesà

Situated just behind the cathedral, the 17th-century Palau Episcopal houses a little diocese museum. On display are some fascinating items from various churches around Mallorca, as well as a selection of majolica tiles. Particularly noteworthy are: a picture of St George slaying the dragon in front of Palma's city gate, painted in 1468–70 by Pere Nisart; Bishop Galiana's panel depicting the life of St Paul (who is portrayed holding a sword); the Gothic pulpit in a

4 Banyes Àrabs

This 10th-century brick hammam (bath house) is one of the few architectural reminders of a Moorish presence on Mallorca. A small horseshoe-arched chamber, with a dome supported by irregular columns and what would once have been under-floor heating, has survived in its original form. This would have been the tepidarium, the luke-warm room; there would have also been a hot room and a cold plunge. Apart from this, there's not much to see, but the pleasant garden has tables and chairs.

5 Museu de Mallorca

It's worth the entrance fee just to see the building, a 17th-century palace built on the foundations of one of Mallorca's earliest Arab houses. The museum contains some fascinating exhibits, providing a quick overview of Mallorca from prehistory to the 20th century. There are some powerful recreations of Neolithic and Bronze Age tombs and dwellings, and several treasures from Roman times. Some gorgeous examples of Modernista furniture are on the top floor – in particular a console with a daringly asymmetrical design (see also p62).

6 Basilica de Sant Francesc

During the Middle Ages, this was Palma's most fashionable church, and to be buried here was a major status symbol. Aristocratic families competed with each other by building ever more ostentatious sarcophagi in which to place their dead. The dark interior contains many fine works of art. Next to a 17th-century statue of the Madonna is the carved figure of the famous medieval mystic Ramon Llull, who is buried in the church. Standing in front of the basilica is a statue of Junipero Serra, a Franciscan monk and native of Mallorca, who was sent to California in 1768 and founded Los Angeles and San Francisco (see also p58).

7 Plaça Weyler

Several interesting examples of Palma's Modernista output are found in this square. The Gran Hotel was Palma's first luxury hotel when it opened in 1903. Designed by Catalan architect Lluís Domènech i Montaner, it was the building that began the craze for Modernista in the city and is now an excellent free art gallery, CaixaForum, with a

The Highest-End Tourism

Although cheap package tourism dominates much of Palma, plenty of upper-crust visitors make Palma Bay their summer destination. The choicest spot is Port Portals, where King Juan Carlos I and Queen Sofia often berth at the swishest yacht club of them all. Be aware that prices reflect the world-class jetsetter status of the well-heeled habitués.

8 Casa Solleric and Passeig des Born

A fine Italianate edifice, Casa Solleric was built for a family of olive oil merchants in 1763 and converted into a modern art gallery in 1995. It stands at the top of the gracious Passeig des Born, which was created in the 19th century on a dried-up riverbed. This is Palma's main promenade, similar to Barcelona's famous Ramblas and the venue of large-scale cultural events. Set among its plane trees are flowerbeds and seats. 📍 Map K-L3 • Casa Solleric 10am–2pm & 5–9pm Tue–Sat, 10am–1:30pm Sun • Free

A Walk Around Old Palma

Mid-Morning

This circular walk takes two to four hours and starts in Plaça Joan Carles I, just at the top of the Passeig des Born. From here, walk east on La Unió to Plaça Weyler, where you can buy pastries at the Forn des Teatre and see the exhibitions in the Gran Hotel.

Climb the steps to the right of the Teatre Principal until you get to Plaça Major. In this beautiful arcaded square, you'll see street artists and performers, and you can stop for a drink in one of the cafés.

Come out of the Plaça along Carrer Sant Miquel. Stop at the Museu Fundación Juan March (see p90) and the charming Església de Sant Miquel.

Now double back through Plaça Major to view the façades of L'Aquila and Can Rei (p90). Go down Carrer Argenteria to visit the Església de Santa Eulàlia (p90), and then Carrer Morey to take in Ca N'Oleza (p90).

Late Morning

Continue on Carrer Miramar, past glorious Palacio Ca Sa Galesa hotel (p140), to exit at the broad seawall, where you can look up at the Cathedral (pp8–9).

Visit the cathedral and Palau de l'Almudaina (pp10–11), then go down to the S'Hort del Rei gardens (p64). Finally, stroll up the Born and have a snack at Bar Bosch (p92) on the square where you started, or head to a restaurant for a more substantial lunch (p93).

Southwest Coast

IF, AS SOME SAY, the island's shape suggests a billy-goat facing west, the southwestern coastline makes up his long face while he sniffs the flower petal of Illa Dragonera. In winter, the mountains of this region act as a buffer, shielding the central plain from the fierce tramuntana wind and absorbing most of the island's rain and snow; in summer, they provide a cool retreat, mostly for well-heeled residents and visitors, from the heat of Palma and the south.

📍 Map B3

2 Raixa

In the 18th century, Mallorcan country homes became a symbol of prestige, and this one, built by Cardinal Antonio Despuig, is one of the finest examples. The Cardinal was an antiquarian and so adorned his Italianate estate with Classical statuary to complement the grand Neoclassical staircase. The parterres are laid out in the Italian taste of the day, with Classical touches such as fountains and a belvedere, and picturesque medieval references.

3 Valldemossa

It was in Valldemossa, Mallorca's highest and one of its prettiest towns, that lovers Frédéric Chopin and George Sand spent one dramatic winter in the early 19th century. The result was Sand's infamous book A Winter in Majorca, both a scathing indictment of the island's people and their ways and a poetic rhapsody in praise of the natural beauties of the place (see pp18–21 & also p63 for the museum). 📍 Map C3

4 Jardins d'Alfàbia

This oasis of heavenly peace high in the mountains was designed by Arab landscape architects 1,000 years ago as an image of Paradise.

The gardens have been reworked over the centuries, mostly with Gothic and Italian Renaissance touches, but the medley of fountains, terraces and groves is still essentially Arabic (see pp24–5). 📍 Map C3

5 Son Marroig

Perched high above the sea, with its famous Neoclassical gazebo imported from Italy, this L-shaped mansion was fashioned by Archduke Salvador (see pp20 & 64). Much admired in Mallorca, the archduke is remembered here with a museum devoted to his life and collections. In the gardens, you can sit in the white Carrara marble rotunda and gaze at the Na Foradada ("pierced rock") Peninsula, jutting out to sea with an 18-m (59-ft) hole at its centre.

6 Deià Set in a dramatic ravine that plunges down to the sea, Deià is mostly associated with the English novelist and poet Robert Graves. Settling in the small town in 1929, Graves lived and worked here for the next 56 years, making the place popular with other artists including Picasso and the writer Anaïs Nin. Towering over the town is the modest 18th-century church of Sant Joan Baptista. The adjacent building houses the parish museum; there is also a museum founded by the American archaeologist William Waldren, displaying the prehistory of Mallorca. Hotel La Residencia has attracted many famous guests including Princess Diana and Sir Bob Geldof.  Map C2

The French Connection

Before the Sóller Tunnel opened in 1997, the mountain-ringed Sóller Valley was almost cut off from the rest of the island. Thus, the northerly reaches of the island carried out more commerce with France than with Palma. In the 19th century, Sóller enjoyed a brisk orange trade with France, and has never lost its special relationship with the French.

Modernista Banco de Sóller and the Neo-Gothic church of Sant Bartomeu, both the work of a disciple of Antoni Gaudí. Few visitors do more than sit in Plaça Constitució soaking up the atmosphere and sampling tapas, pastries, ice cream and fresh orange juice. The town's vintage electric train provides a superb ride through the mountains to Palma.  Map C2

8 Port de Sóller This small resort, set around an excellent natural harbour, has vibrant festivals (see p52) and the only beach of any size along the northwestern coast. An atmosphere of low-key chic and family fun prevails. It's the starting point for boat trips along the coast and a good base for walks – a short climb brings you to the Cap Gros lighthouse with its panoramic views (see also p40).  Map C2

9 Fornalutx

This quaint stone village is supremely situated, enjoying a splendid view of towering Puig Major (see p106) – Mallorca's highest peak – and of the vast ravine that sweeps down into the valley of orange groves. Silence reigns, except for the lazy sound of goat and sheep bells. The town seems to clutch at its essentially perpendicular setting, with accommodation and dining options making the most of the panorama. You can get here by car, but a better choice is the fragrant hike up from Sóller, passing through the even tinier Biniaraix (see p98). Map D2

10 Castell d'Alaró

The original castle was built a thousand years ago by the Moors and then refurbished following the "reconquest" by Jaume I in the 13th century. It's little more than rubble now, but the lofty position certainly seems unconquerable enough. At the bottom of the trail is an excellent restaurant; from here you can follow well-beaten paths and dry-stone tracks along the cliff-face (see also pp54 & 56). Map D3

A Tour of Dramatic Promontories

Morning

This drive takes a full day, setting out at 10am or so.

Start at Andratx (see p98) and take the coast road, MA-10, north. At the point where the road encounters the coastline, you will find the Mirador de Ricardo Roca viewpoint and the Es Grau café (see p80). At Estellencs (p98), you can also stop for shopping and refreshment.

As the road leaves the town and climbs, there's a stopping point to the left where you can look back at the view. Next stop is the magnificent Mirador de ses Ànimes (p98).

At Banyalbufar (p98), note the remarkable terraced hillsides. A little way on, you'll see signs for La Granja (pp16–17). Head there for lunch and a good look around the mansion and grounds.

Afternoon

After lunch, there's more historic sightseeing at Valldemossa (pp18–21), where you can check out the former monastery, museum and old town.

Carrying on north, pop into Son Marroig (p95) and then wind around into fantastic Deià, where you can stop for a stroll.

Continuing on, don't blink or you'll miss Mallorca's smallest village, Lluc-Alcari; and finally, head for the main square in Sóller, to have a drink at one of the pleasant cafés, then take the quaint tram down to the Port de Sóller for dinner and the rich nightlife.

North Coast

AS DIFFERENT EUROPEAN NATIONALITIES have laid holiday claim to various parts of the island, this northernmost corner has developed a certain English-Scottish-Irish character. (That's not to say you won't encounter German, French, Scandinavian, Dutch and Italian visitors, too.) It's a mountainous area, and where those jagged cliffs meet the sea you'll find some of Mallorca's loveliest coves and bays. Add ancient sites and flamboyant festivals to the mix, and it's obvious why many people take pleasure in exploring this region.

cultures, combine to create a peaceful, inviting atmosphere for believers and non-believers alike. You can stay in the monastery's comfortable rooms, and explore the ancient mysteries of the surrounding area (see also pp26–7).

📍 Map D2

1 Gorg Blau
 Heading out of Sóller, on the way to Lluc, the C710 is perhaps the most dramatic drive of all, traversing tunnels and gorges on its way between Puig Major and Puig Massanella. This beautiful but bleak ravine has been known since ancient times, as evidenced by the Talayot pillar that has been left as a silent sentinel. Several reservoirs have been created nearby (see also p36). 📍 Map D2

2 Cala Tuent
 A side turn off the road to Sa Calobra leads its winding way down to Cala Tuent, a small cove with a beach and a 13th-century church, Ermita de Sant Llorenç. Cala Tuent is probably the quietest beach on the northern coast, and there's a nice café-restaurant on the far side of the cove. Swimming here is safe as long as you don't venture out too far (see also p42). 📍 Map D2

4 Pollença
 Founded by the Romans in the foothills of the Serra de Tramuntana, Pollença still has much of its old-world charm with narrow, twisting streets, some good restaurants and a lively Sunday market. There's a great municipal museum, too (see p63), while the pride of the town is the beautiful Way of the Cross, leading to a chapel that houses a Gothic statue of Christ. Climbing the seemingly endless set of steps (365 in all), you pass the Stations of the Cross. The statue is carried around town on Good Friday, in a moving torchlight procession. 📍 Map E1

Cala Sant Vicenç

5 Ermita de Nostra Senyora del Puig

As with all of Mallorca's religious retreats, it's the serenity of ageless isolation that rewards. Though located only a one-hour walk from atmospheric Pollençà, it feels like you're a world away from modern life, on this modest bump of a hill, barely 300 m (984 ft) high. Over the centuries, the typically tawny-hued stone complex has been home to both nuns and monks, but now, although still Church property, only overnight guests use the cubicles (see p146). A well-laid dry-stone path leads the way, the air redolent with wild herbs and the pungent smell of rural life, the arid landscape broken up with olive, carob and fig trees, and dashes of oleander and wildflowers (see also p60). ☉ Map E2

6 Cala Sant Vicenç

The resort has possibly the clearest, most beautiful blue waters of any truly sandy beach on the island yet is rarely overcrowded. There are actually three calas (coves) – Cala Sant Vicenç, Cala Barques and Cala Molins – separated by rocky outcroppings. Cala Molins is accessed down a steep hill from the main part of the resort

Mallorca's Heights

The Serra de Tramuntana runs for 88 km (55 miles) from Andratx to Pollençà. Its highest peaks, between Sóller and Lluc, are Puig Major (1,447 m/4,747 ft) and Puig Massanella (1,367 m/ 4,485 ft). Explore the mountains on foot if you can, so as to smell wild rosemary, listen to sheep bells, breathe in pure air and marvel at pine trees growing out of red rocks.

and has the most laid-back character, as well as a broader beach than the others (see also p42). ☉ Map E1

7 Port de Pollençà

The port is a major resort (see p41), with beautiful restaurants, unique shops, a lovely pedestrian-only zone right along the water and loads of nightlife. It is a favourite with families year-round, while older visitors flock in winter. A large community of foreign residents, mostly retired British, have made it their permanent home. ☉ Map E1

Península de Formentor

8 Península de Formentor

Mallorca's wildest part is full of vivid vistas and precipitous plunges, where driving or hiking are exhilarating and unforgettable experiences. It is also home to Mallorca's most venerable hotel, where movie stars have hobnobbed, and where crowned heads and diplomats have decided the fate of nations (see pp28–9). ☉ Map F1

9 Alcúdia and Port d'Alcúdia

This two-part municipality consists of Mallorca's most striking medieval town (see pp30–31) uneasily conjoined with one of its brashest tourist ports (see p41). The area around the fishing harbour is the most attractive, with the broad promenade of Passeig Marítim facing a row of fish restaurants. ☉ Map F2

10 Parc Natural de S'Albufera

The wetland south of Port d'Alcúdia was once a swamp, most of which was drained in the 1860s. The remaining marshes, overgrown with reeds, can be explored via marked trails. A major conservation project, this is an excellent place for bird-watching (see also p37). ☉ Map F2

A Stroll Around Historic Pollença

Mid-Morning

Beginning at about 10am on any day but Monday, this walk around Pollença (see p103) should take three to four hours.

Start on the southern side of town, with a visit to the Museu Municipal de Pollença (p63) and the beautiful building that houses it – the convent, church and cloister of Sant Domingo, now entirely given over to civic cultural purposes. (It is closed on Mondays.)

Walk north a couple of blocks and pop into Antik I Art a wonderful antiques shop. From here, continue up to the Plaça Mayor and admire the Modernista architecture of the Hotel Juma and the marvellous rose window tracery of the Nostra Senyora dels Àngels parish church (see p58).

Early Afternoon

Now walk up the left side of the church until you get to Aquamarina (p107) with its unusual handcrafted jewellery, and then stop off at the Café del Calvari (p107) for refreshment before striding up the famous cypress-lined Calvari steps.

Finally, head down Les Creus and Gruat streets to the picturesque Pont Romà, a bridge thought by some to be from ancient Roman times, but probably dating from the Middle Ages.

After your tour, have lunch at either the interesting La Tetera (p108) or the famous La Fonda (p83).

TOP 10 Best of the Rest

1 Puig Major

Jutting skyward like a stony crown, this majestic mountain is flanked on one side by the Sóller Valley, with its picturesque villages, and on the other by Lluc and the tranquil valley of Aubarca (see also box on p104). Map D2

2 Mirador de Ses Barques

Located at the top of the road that leads down to Sa Calobra (entry 3), this marvellous viewpoint overlooks the skein of road loops and, beyond all of the rocky outcroppings, the sea. Stop for refreshment at the restaurant here. Map D2

3 Sa Calobra

A rapturously beautiful bay, which explains why the tourist buses pour in by the dozen every day. The journey via the steep, winding road is also memorable (see p49). An easier approach is by boat from Port de Sóller, passing isolated bays and with great views of Puig Major. Map D2

4 Torrent de Pareis

Walk through a tunnel from Sa Calobra to reach the Torrent de Pareis, which begins in the mountains at the confluence of the torrents of Lluc and Gorg. This canyon is the second largest in the Mediterranean, and the point at which it exits into the sea is spectacular. However, hiking in the canyon can be dangerous, especially after rain (see p36). Castell de Capdepera

1 Capdepera You can glimpse this castle from miles away, its rickrack form sprawling appealingly around the crest of its sizeable hill. A citadel of some sort has existed here since Roman times, guarding the sea approach, but the present crenellated classic dates back to King Sanç in the 14th century. You can drive up, if you're lucky enough to find the right street in the tightly knit little town below, but the walk up from pleasant Plaça de l'Orient is far more fun. Within the walls is a curious little Gothic church, from the flat roof of which you can take in more spectacular vistas. Map H3

2 Ses Païsses A link with the Mallorcans of some 3,000 years ago, these Bronze Age ruins of a Talayot village include a massive Cyclopean portal (see p55) formed from three stone slabs weighing up to eight tons each. Inside are several rooms and a watchtower; and the settlement is surrounded by a drystone wall. 3 Coves d'Artà During the Christian Conquest, Jaume I found 2,000 Arabs hiding with their cattle in this unusual network of caves. However, it was not until 1876, when geologist

Edouard Martel entered the grottoes, 46 m (151 ft) above the sea at Cap Vermell, that they were studied. Cala Figuera

Containing Mass Tourism

Mass tourism is now confined to parts of the island where it encroached in the 1960s, primarily Cala Millor and some of the Cales de Mallorca. Other areas, most notably the prototype Cala d'Or, have been developed in a more sensitive way, favouring Spanish architectural styles – a pleasant mix of Andalusian and Balearic, with a hint of North African.

8 Cala Figuera

This tiny old fishing hamlet is an underdeveloped gem. It probably owes its survival to the simple fact that it has no beach, the closest one being 4 km (2 miles) away at Cala Santanyi. What it does have is pleasant low-rise structures and an array of eateries and people-watching cafés. The fishing harbour is part of a fjord-like bay. 📍 Map F6

Santuari de Sant Salvador

Talaiotic ruins, Capocorb Vell

9 Capocorb Vell
 This Talayot settlement was probably established around 1000 BC. Originally, it consisted of five stone structures (talaiots) and 28 smaller dwellings. The amazing Cyclopean walls, reaching 4 m (13 ft) in places, would have served as protection, but little more is known about the function of the rooms or the lives of the ancient inhabitants. Be sure to have a drink at the visitors' bar, which is like something out of The Flintstones. 📍 Ctra. MA-6014 Lluçmajor-Cap Blanc, km 23 • Map D5 • 10am-4:30pm daily exc Thu • Adm

10 Illa de Cabrera
 Cabrera ("Goat Island") lies 18 km (11 miles) off the mainland. A rocky, bare place and virtually uninhabited, it nevertheless has a rich history. It served as a prison camp during the Napoleonic War and was used as a base by Barbary pirates. Boat trips leave from Colònia de Sant Jordi and take a day – highlights include a 14th-century castle on the island (see p57) and Cova Blava (see p45). Keep an eye out for the rare Lilford's lizard, identifiable by its dog-like face. 📍 Park information office: Plaça Espanya, Palma • 971 725010; Boat excursions: C/Explanada del Port, Colònia de Sant Jordi • Map H6 • 971 649034 • Excursions daily at 9:30am • Adm

Five Seaside Beauties

Morning

This itinerary, incorporating driving and walking, will take a full day.

Set out in the morning at lovely Porto Cristo (see p116), with its terrace café-restaurants overlooking the port's palisades. Pop into

Autèntic Mallorca (p117) and be sure to buy some Mallorcan chocolate and other local products.

Bypassing the infamously overdeveloped Cales de Mallorca, Portocolom (p116) is next, perhaps the most unspoiled and seductively beautiful fishing village left on the island. Be sure to check out the painted façades of the old town, and walk up to the colourful Bar Els Tamarells (p119) for a drink and to admire the sleepy central square.

Afternoon

Make your way down to Portopetro, a minuscule port that's lost none of its authenticity. Have lunch at El Campo (p118) just out of town on the road to Alqueria Blanca.

Cala Figuera is further south. Stroll around its woods-encircled harbour and browse around the gift shops.

On the western side of the Cap de ses Salines, you'll find Colònia de Sant Jordi, a rangy beach town with a bright, relaxing port. Stop here to have a wonderful fresh fish dinner at Port Blau (p118), and maybe spend the night at the quaint Hostal Playa (p144).

TOP 10 Best of the Rest

1 Artà
Ancient, prosperous town noted for its basketry. Map G3

2 Cala Rajada
This fishing port on Mallorca's eastern tip, surrounded by fine beaches and pretty coves, is a crowded resort in summer (see p41). Map H3

3 Castell de Santueri
Artà's crowning glory is its hilltop fortress, the view from which is one of Mallorca's most characteristic sights: a jumble of tiles in every shade of brown.

4 Porto Cristo
A family resort at the end of a sheltered inlet. The nearby Coves del Drac (see pp32–3) and aquarium (see p33) are popular with day-trippers. Map G4

5 Felanitx
The town is at the centre of a wine-producing area and also known for its floral-decorated pottery and its capers, or "green pearls", which you can buy at the Sunday market. Map F5

6 Portocolom
This attractive fishing village was named in honour of Christopher Columbus, who is said (without much evidence) to have been born here. It has found a new lease of life as a resort favoured by Spanish visitors. Map G5

Church interior, Artà

7 Cala d'Or
Not just one cove, but many, with their respective beaches and pueblo-style villas, make up this garden-green, stylish zone. Each former humble fishing dock has metamorphosed into a classy marina catering for a discerning set of international clientele. Map F5

8 Santanyi
This is the café centre for all the foreigners who own villas nearby, but it's still very Spanish. Buildings are made from the same golden sandstone used in Palma's cathedral. The streets near the church are the focus of a lively Wednesday market. Map F6

9 Campos
A famous painting by 17th-century Sevillian artist Murillo hangs in the parish church of this dusty agricultural town. Next door is a museum with a collection of offertory bowls. Map E5

10 Ses Covetes
These days there's no trace of the "small caves", presumed ancient Roman burial niches, that inspired the name. Located at the northern end of Es Trenc (see p43), the island's finest, longest, totally undeveloped, clothing-optional beach, this place resembles more of a dusty shanty-town than anything else. ## TOP 10 Nightclubs and Bars

1 Café Parisien, Artà

A wonderfully rustic place, with an open fireplace, two dogs and an affable proprietor. There are drinks (including drinking chocolates), pastries, tapas and daily specials. ☎ C/Ciutat, 18 • 971 835440

2 Physical, Cala Ratjada

The port attracts a young, active crowd for whom this is the numero uno club in town, leading the way with techno, hip-hop and black music. ☎ C/Coconar, 17 • www.grupo-physical.com

3 Twist, Porto Cristo

A hip place done up in primary colours, with tiny halogen lights above a granite bar and an assemblage by Basque artist S'Anto Iñorrieta. ☎ Es Riuet • 971 820173

4 Es Carreró, Porto Cristo

This entire street, just a block from the Marina, is loaded with tiny dives that are thronged from midnight to 6am. Glitzy-dressed young people come out to party in Makoki's, Saltre Pub, Pub Limite, Wall Street, Séstil, Es Bidò and more (see p73).

5 Bar Els Tamarells, Portocolom

Look for the drunk-looking seahorse sign. Inside, it's loud and packed with young Spaniards and Mallorcans. The main room has a big TV, bar and tables, while the terrace has views of the entire port. There is also a quieter room with table football. ☎ C/Mar, 21 • 971 825384

6 Café La Playa Chill Out, Porto Colom

A cool and relaxing terrace-bar by the beach with, as the name suggests, a chilled-out vibe. International DJs play Nu Jazz. ☎ Porto Colom beach

7 Bolero Disco, Cala Ratjada

A glamorously appointed discotheque in the heart of Cala Ratjada. DJs play pop and dance music, and there's live music most nights, as well. ☎ C/Leonor Servera, 36 • www.bolero-angels.com

8 Port Pub, Port de Cala d'Or

The evocative decor mixes US license plates and nautical objects. The annex below is the El Faro wine bar, and all of it is part of a white stucco complex of trendy shops and restaurants. ☎ Avda. Cala Llonga, Port Petit • 971 659006

9 Noah's Café, Cala Ratjada

On the harbour, with amazing views, Noah's serves healthy food from early morning, and excellent cocktails until late at night. A relaxed atmosphere and great music. ☎ Avda. América, 1-2 • 971 818125 • www.cafenoahs.com

10 Disco Mond-Bar, Cala Figuera

A very popular spot with a huge terrace, Miró-esque decorations and a good-sized dance floor. Music tends towards hits of the day, with occasional live acts. ☎ C/Pintor Bernareggi

YOU HAVEN'T REALLY SEEN MALLORCA until you've wended your way over Es Pla (The Plain). People argue whether the mountains or coast represents the real Mallorca, but the true heart of the island is surely to be found in the villages here, which make few concessions to tourism. This is where food is grown and where most of the island's leatherworkers, potters and the manufacturers of traditional robes de llengües (cloth of flame) and the prized artificial pearls are based.

1 Binissalem

Don't be put off by its brutal appearance from the highway. Hidden behind the commercial tackiness, the historic centre dates back to the ancient Romans, and is now dominated by centuries-old stone mansions very much worth a stroll around. The town's wealth arose from its pre-eminence as the island's wine producer, starting 500 years ago. In recent years, after a century or so of decline, its reputation has again been on the rise, as evidenced by the important winery outlets along the main road (see pp51 & 124). Map D3

its wine cellars converted into restaurants. Map E3

4 Sa Pobla

Perhaps the most impressive thing about this agricultural town is its cemetery, which has unusually beautiful monuments. The main square and mansion of Can Planes, which houses the Museu de la Jugueta (see p68), are also attractive, and the town is noted for its Sunday market and January festival (see p52). Otherwise, the place is fairly low key. Map E2

5 Muro

A pleasant, sleepy town full of old mansions and dominated by the church of Sant Joan Baptista. The adjacent belfry has wonderful views (see p57). The Museu Etnològic (see p63) houses furniture, costumes, tools and instruments. Map E3

2 Lloseta

Traditionally part of the leather-crafting enterprises in the area, this town is situated on a sloping foothill. It has a pleasant, tree-lined approach, a charming central square and several good restaurants. Map D3

Inca, one of the last stops on the train journey from Palma, is a modern industrial place, but visitors come for the cheap

6 Petra This small town is the birthplace of Junipero Serra. Aged 54, the pioneering Franciscan monk travelled to America and Mexico and after many arduous journeys on foot, founded missions in California. The old houses lining the labyrinth of narrow alleys have changed little since Serra's time here. The town makes the most of its famous son, and all places associated with Serra are well marked. These include a humble building in Carrer Barracar Alt where Serra was born. Next to this is a small museum, opened in 1955, devoted to his life and work, which includes wooden models of the nine American

Mallorca's Windmills

Mallorca is famous for its hundreds of windmills, especially in the region of Es Pla. These ingenious devices have been used in the Mediterranean since at least the 7th century. Now replaced by motorized pumps, most stone windmills have fallen into disrepair and decrepitude. However, in the zone between Palma, Algaida and Lluçmajor, ecology-minded farmers have installed modern metal windmills.

missions established by Serra. At the end of the street in which the Serra family house stands is the 17th-century monastery of Sant Bernat. A series of Majolica panels down a side street next to the monastery are a gift from grateful Californians and pay tribute to the monk. 🗺 Map F4

7 Manacor Mallorca's second city is famous for artificial pearl factories, of which Perlas Majóricas (see p124) is the best-known, producing 50 million a year. The method, involving fish scales, repeated baking and polishing, can be witnessed on the free tour. Also look inside the Església de Nostra Senyora dels Dolors to find a figure of Christ with scraggly hair and a skirt, and pilgrims lining up to kiss his bloodstained feet. 🗺 Map F4

8 Els Calderers

This country house chronicles 200 years of the life of Mallorca's gentry in a more modest version of Sa Granja (see pp16–17). Demonstrations of traditional methods are part of the tour, and you can see historic breeds of Mallorcan farm animals. 🕒 Follow signs from MA-15 • Map E4 • 10am–5pm daily • Adm

9 Montuïri

Built on a hill, the town of Montuïri is famous for its agricultural produce. Nineteen of the original 24 windmills still stand as testimony to the town's former glory, striking in the landscape. The Ermita de Sant Miquel (see p61) is nearby, offering good views. 🗺 Map E4

10 Gordiola Glassworks

The glassworks were founded in 1719, but the present castle-like, Neo-Gothic building dates from the 1960s. The place offers a unique opportunity to watch glass-blowers at work, and its world-class museum of glass (see p63) also fires enthusiasm for the substance. You can buy everything from cheap bibelots to chandeliers fit for a castle. 🕒 Ctra. Palma-Manacor, Km 19, Algaida • Map D4 • 971 665046 • 9am–7pm Mon–Sat, 9am–1:30pm Sun • www.gordiola.com • Free

A Day's Drive Through Es Pla

Morning

📍 Begin in the north, at Sa Pobla (see p121), where you should be sure to visit the cemetery and Museu de la Jugueta (see p68). Proceed south to Muro (p121) for a look at the handsome Sant Joan Baptista church, Muro's famous bull ring and the Museu Etnològic (p63).

📍 Drive through pretty Santa Margalida, then Maria de la Salut, and on to medieval Sineu, at the geographic centre of the island, where you can stroll and have a drink at Café Sa Plaça café (see p124).

📍 By now, it should be about lunchtime, so continue on to Petra to have a wonderfully elegant meal at Sa Plaça (see p125), and to check out the hometown of Fray Junípero Serra.

Afternoon

📍 After lunch, make your way on through Sant Joan and then to appealing Montuïri, with its signature windmills. Next, cut down to Porreres and take the road from there to Lluçmajor. Be sure to stop off along the way for a walk around the quaintly picturesque grounds of the Finca Son Sama.

📍 The last leg of the journey is to head back north to Algaida, being sure to pop into Raiüms for a look at its timeless charm.

📍 Finally, just to the west of Algaida, take a prolonged tour of the Gordiola Glassworks, with its superb museum and shop.

Take care when driving on the narrow roads in this region. Signs from town to town are abundant, but there are few other markers

TOP 10 Planning Your Trip

1 Climate

Mallorca has mild, humid winters, and hot, dry summers. Expect daytime temperatures in winter to be above 12°C (53°F), and in summer not to fall below 30°C (86°F).

2 When to Go

Summer is high season in Mallorca. Autumn is thus a better time to visit, when the weather is still great, the water at its warmest and prices lower. Hiking and cycling are best in April. Nature lovers should come in spring or autumn, when birds are on the move and wildflowers are blooming.

3 Visas and Red Tape

EU citizens can enter Spain with just their valid ID card. Britons, Americans, Australians, New Zealanders and Canadians need only a valid passport for automatic permission to stay 90 days. Other nationalities should check with their consulate. Most hotels will request your ID card or passport.

4 Spanish Embassies and Consulates

Spanish embassies or consulates in your home country can provide information about visiting, studying, working and retiring in Spain.

5 Spanish National Tourist Offices

This service will load you up with maps, pamphlets and brochures upon request. Contact them in your home country or, better still, pay them a visit if possible.

6 Mallorcan Tourist Offices

The tourist offices in Palma and across Mallorca are staffed by multilingual people who have a good knowledge of the island.

7 Internet Information

Mallorcans are not heavy users of the Internet, but there are some good multilingual web guides, as listed in the Directory.

8 Languages

The local language is Mallorquí, a dialect of Catalan, but Castilian (Spanish) is also spoken everywhere. Signs can be a confusing mixture of both. Many islanders who work in the tourist industry can also speak German and English, and often French, Italian and more.

9 Insurance

It is a good idea to take out private medical insurance, even if your country has reciprocal medical arrangements with Spain. Then, should you require treatment while on holiday, you will simply pay for the care, keep the receipts, and be reimbursed according to the terms of your policy. General travel insurance to cover flight cancellation and theft is also strongly recommended.

10 What to Take

Casual dress is generally acceptable, so bring lightweight, loose-fitting linens or cottons. A hat may also be useful, and don't forget your favourite sunscreen and other pharmaceutical items. At least one dressy outfit is a good idea if you plan to visit an upmarket restaurant or club.

TOP 10 Getting to Mallorca

1 By Air from the Mainland

Scheduled flights and charters connect with all major Spanish and European cities. Visitors from the US will have to make the connection somewhere in Europe. Mallorca's airport is located 11 km (6 miles) southeast of Palma, with taxis and buses transporting visitors to the city and resorts.

2 By Air from Ibiza and Menorca

There are daily flights from Ibiza and Menorca to Palma with Air Nostrum (part of Iberia) and other carriers. Last-minute places are available, but book ahead in high season.

3 Charters

Cheap charter flights are readily available (as are flights from the "no frills" airlines), but dates and times are fixed, and any refund unlikely. Spanair fly from Spanish cities – their one-way tickets are fairly priced.

4 Packages

Many travel agents offer packages including full- or half-board lodgings as well as flight and transfers, usually to the crowded, mass-market resorts.

5 By Ferry from the Mainland

Ferries and jetfoils run from Barcelona and Valencia (via Ibiza). The best bet is Trasmediterránea's jetfoil (a catamaran) that in season does the trip twice a day in 3–4 hours (the other ferries will take up to 10 hours). The ride is generally comfortable and offers great previews of the mountainous western coast as you circle around the island to berth at the port of Palma. Buying a return ticket saves money.

6 By Ferry from Ibiza and Menorca

Trasmediterránea runs a regular ferry service from Ibiza and Menorca to Palma. Baleària runs a Dénia–Ibiza–Palma service with no stop in Menorca. Cape Balear de Cruceiros offers a passenger-only service to and from Cala Rajada, while Iscomar serves Port d'Alcúdia.

7 Bringing a Car

Fast ferries can be taken from Barcelona and Valencia. Inter-island ferries also carry cars, but some must be booked in advance in summer. (Hire cars cannot be transferred between islands.)

8 Cruises

Many cruise ships stop at Mallorca as part of a typical 10- or 15-day tour of Mediterranean ports. Cruise passengers rarely have enough time for any more than Palma's top sights and shops.

9 Private Boat

Marinas are dotted around the Mallorcan coastline, with no spot more desirable than Port Portals near Portals Nous (see p44), where members of the Spanish royal family usually moor their yachts. Port d'Andratx (see p40) is also well thought of, but there are many cheaper options.

10 Private Plane

Except for the odd private landing strip, all planes have to land at Palma airport. Balloon trips are an entertaining option on the east coast (see directory).

TOP 10 Getting Around Mallorca

1 Buses

Mallorca has an extensive network of buses. The central station is at Plaça Espanya in Palma; get a general timetable from any tourist agency. Palma also has a good urban bus system (EMT). Buy tickets on board.

2 Trains and Trams

There are two railway lines on the island: one from Palma to Sóller, the other Palma to Inca, Sa Pobla and Manacor. They have separate stations in Palma's Plaça Espanya. The delightful Sóller train offers special tourist trips in the morning, for an extra cost, between April and October. The more utilitarian Inca train stops everywhere. An attractive tram runs from Sóller to Port de Sóller (see p68).

3 Driving

Driving here can be fun, so long as you're in no hurry. The Palma-Sóller and Palma-Inca roads are the only major highways. Other roads, though narrow and twisting, are in good repair for the most part, though you will need nerves of steel in some areas (see p132). Driving is the only way to see some of the sights and to fit a lot into one trip (see pp48-9).

4 Motorbikes

This is a popular option as most of the Mallorcan roads are ideally suited for scooting around on a two-wheeler. Motorbikes and scooters can be rented in most towns.

5 Hiring a Vehicle

Car hire is quite cheap. Most big agencies are represented at Palma airport, or you can contact some directly to make comparisons. You'll need to be 21 or over, with a driver's licence and a credit card. Smaller cars are better for the narrow lanes.

6 Boats

Taking a boat is the only way to see some of Mallorca's most beautiful coves and cliffs that are inaccessible by road.

7 Taxis

Getting around by taxi – at least within the city of Palma – is quite a reasonable proposition. Fares are moderate, and there are enough taxis in circulation to give you a good chance of flagging one down at any time of day or night. A taxi ride across the whole island will cost from €90.

8 Cycling

Cycling along country lanes and mountain roads is an excellent mode of transport. Tandems and all sorts of other pedalling options are available for hire (see p46).

9 Gentle Walks

Some of the bigger port towns offer lovely promenades right along the water's edge. One of the best is the pedestrian-only Passeig Anglada Camarassa-Vorammar in Port de Pollença. Port de Sóller also has a broad path that loops around much of its beautiful bay.

10 Long-Distance Walks

Much of Mallorca is rough territory and perfect for hiking. Easy slopes with lots of vegetation can be found all over the island, but if you want real challenges, there are several rugged mountain trails, many of which are sign-posted from town to town (see pp46 & 48-9).

TOP 10 Health and Security

1 Emergency Numbers

You can dial the free number 112 in any type of emergency; they speak English and will alert the appropriate service. There are also free direct numbers for the fire brigade, ambulance service, national police, Guàrdia Civil or the local police (see box). Be ready to give precise information about what is needed and where you are.

2 Accidents

An alternative source of help if you have an accident of any sort is the Creu Roja (Red Cross), who will send an ambulance and paramedics.

3 Health Issues

No inoculations are required or advised prior to your visit. Sunburn and heatstroke are the main sources of discomfort for visitors – use sunscreen, wear a hat and drink plenty of bottled water. Some people experience a minor stomach upset, which is more likely to be from exposure to different bacteria in the food and water than real food poisoning (see p132).

4 Prescriptions

Bring any prescription medicines you might require, packed in your carry-on bag, not checked luggage. This is because Spanish pharmaceuticals may differ from those in your home country in name, dosage and form.

5 Farmacias

Pharmacists are well trained and a good source of advice for minor complaints. Some speak very good English and might be able to sell you medicines that would normally be available only by prescription in your home country. In Palma, many pharmacies (farmacias) are open 24 hours.

6 Multilingual Doctors

If you are seriously ill and need a doctor who speaks your language, ask your local consulate, hotel, pharmacy or tourist office for contacts. If you need someone who works under the EU health plan, make sure that the doctor is part of the Spanish healthcare system; otherwise, be prepared to pay on the spot and be reimbursed later by your insurance company.

7 Medical Treatment

To claim back medical costs, EU citizens should obtain a European Health Insurance Card prior to travelling. Not everything is covered by the card, so additional health insurance is advised.

8 Disabled Travellers

Mallorca is not well equipped for disabled visitors. However, the law requires that all new public buildings have disabled access – the newest hotels are your best bet (see p135).

9 Petty Crime

In any crowded area, there are bound to be pickpockets about. Often working in pairs, they create distractions – sometimes very elaborate ploys – then fleece the unwary. The best solution is not to carry valuables in purses, bum bags or outside pockets, and not to leave your bags unattended for an instant.

10 Serious Crime

Long gone are the centuries when Mallorca was rife with rampaging brigands and banditos. Serious crime is virtually unheard of on this pleasure-loving isle. However, avoid wandering through deserted, unlit alleys at night, especially in the seedier parts of Palma, which – as anywhere in the world – are the territory of muggers.

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Tap Water

Water is a problem on the island, which, having no rivers at all and entire seasons without any rain, suffers from quasi-drought conditions most of the time. You'll see huge tank trucks transporting drinking water all around the island, but in general it's better to drink only bottled water, since much of the potable water sits in cisterns for quite a long time.

2 Rancid Food

In the heat of summer, check the freshness of what you consume. Tapas dishes that look as if they have been around a day too long, anything with mayonnaise that's been sitting out of the fridge, and shellfish served in less than fastidiously hygienic establishments – all are probably best refused.

3 Bad Manners

Dress respectfully when you visit Mallorca's churches, and don't visit at all during services unless you genuinely want to join in. Nudism is legal on all beaches but check with hotel staff as to which are the ones where this practice is more common.

4 Fakes and Forgeries

In the land of Miró, Dalí, Picasso and other greats, it's wise to be wary of supposed "originals" by any of these masters.

Copies, prints, forgeries and outright fakes do a brisk business. To avoid them, check your dealer's credentials and ask for certificates of authentication and guarantees.

5 "Mystery" Tours

Especially in the heavily touristed zones, you might be offered a tour that, on the face of it, looks like something for nothing. It might be a daytrip to an interesting sight at a cut-rate price, or an offer of cash or a lavish meal just for going to inspect a new condo project. These are not promotional bargains in the usual sense, but hard sales ploys that should be avoided.

6 Beach Snacks

Most of the snack bars you find along the popular beaches are overpriced and low quality, with a few exceptions. Just use them for a drink and simple snack, such as a pa amb oli. For real meals, head to our recommended eateries.

7 Flower Girls

These gypsy women appear friendly enough when they hand you a flower or a sprig of "lucky" rosemary. If you accept, however, they suddenly transform into indignant creatures demanding a lot of money for their cheery "gift." Do your best to dodge them and their little scam.

8 Peddlers

Most pavement peddlers will do little more than call out a word or two about their merchandise. But as soon as you show an interest, you may be in for a lot of pressure to buy. Make it clear that you'll decide what, if anything, you're going to buy. Check all merchandise, especially clothing, for defects, then offer half of the asking price.

9 Trileros

You'll see this age-old gambling trick in busy pedestrian areas. The main man shuffles three cups, showing you how easy it is to follow the one that covers the hidden object. Usually, there is an accomplice among the onlookers who makes it appear very easy to win. The con is exposed when gullible tourists try their luck and quickly begin losing.

10 Hair-Raising Roads

If Grand Prix-style driving is not to your liking, it's best to keep driving to a minimum along Mallorca's most challenging mountain roads – especially if any of your passengers suffers from carsickness or panic attacks. Though most roads are well-maintained, they can be exceedingly narrow, subject to hairpin bends around yawning chasms. The state of roads is noted throughout this book.

Left Kiosk Centre Bank logo Right Racks of newspapers

TOP 10 Banking and Communications

1 Exchange

Since the euro became the currency of Spain and many other realms, life is much easier for most visitors. Admittedly, the changeover from pesetas to euros resulted in some price inflation, but, for the most part, it's easier to tell how much you're spending.

2 Traveller's Cheques

Traveller's cheques are a useful safety precaution but they are rarely accepted in hotels or shops and changing them will incur a commission fee.

3 ATMs

For proper cash, ATMs are the very best option: readily available and reliable. Spanish banks do not charge transaction fees, though your own bank is likely to charge a fee for using a non-branch machine. A good procedure is to get the maximum each time (usually €300), in which case the fee will probably be only about 4% on your money drawn out. But keep your cash hidden.

4 Credit Cards

Credit cards can be used for most transactions but could be a problem for some budget hotels, cheap restaurants, art galleries and small places in remote outposts. Be aware that your own bank may charge you a 2% conversion fee for every card purchase you make – a sum that can add up shockingly.

5 Wiring Money

Only as a last resort. You can have your bank send money to a bank on the island, but expect it to take an indeterminate number of days, and for high charges to be levied.

6 Mail

Post offices (correus) are open only in the morning, except for the main post office in Palma. You can also get stamps (segells) for letters and postcards at tobacco shops and newspaper stands. Spanish mail is usually reliable, but inevitably sometimes even priority mail fails to reach its destination.

7 Phones

Phones provided in hotel rooms are convenient but expensive. Most public phone booths accept credit cards, phonecards and coins, and can be used for local and international calls. Mobile phones work well almost everywhere, but check with your provider before leaving your home country.

8 Internet

Most hotels have Internet facilities, and there are many cafés and bars in the larger towns (see p81) that offer the service, as well as a few specific Internet points in Palma (see p92).

9 Newspapers and Magazines

In hotels and kiosks in larger towns you'll find a good selection of the international editions of major North American and European newspapers and the English-language Mallorca Daily Bulletin, which is published every day except Monday. It publicises what's on and lists the island's markets.

10 TV and Radio

The upper-tier hotels all offer satellite TV, with many German channels and some in English, French or Italian. There are several German-language radio stations, and the BBC World Service is on FM 95.8. Stations in Spanish, Catalan and Mallorquí feature a broad mix of Spanish and international pop music.

TOP 10 Tips for Families

1 Visitor and Expat Demographics

Mallorca is exceptionally well geared to families and also has a number of thriving expat communities. The majority of visitors are German, as evidenced by the German-language signs, radio stations and satellite channels. Colònia de Sant Jordi is virtually a German enclave, while Portocolom has a greater concentration of Britons. Other corners of the island (such as Port de Pollença) have a thorough mix of nationalities.

2 Accommodation

Unless they specify "adults only," most places in Mallorca truly welcome families. Hotels often let you include any number of children up to a certain age – sometimes as old as the teens – at no extra charge, except perhaps a nominal fee for the extra bed or two. The best option for most families is a self-catering apartment.

3 Hotel Programmes

Larger hotels and resorts may have a programme of activities for guests of every age. These may run from water aerobics, water polo or other exercise regimes, to crafts classes for adults and organized games for pre-schoolers. Most such activities are scheduled on a weekly basis, with a monthly calendar posted in some conspicuous spot in the hotel lobby.

4 Babysitting

Many hotels offer babysitting services, especially those that cater primarily or exclusively to package tourists. The cost of the service is usually included in the package. There may also be a supervised play area for kids aged 4–8 or so.

5 Family Meals

Most restaurants are happy to cater for children. Some offer a separate menu to please a child's palate, and many will prepare special foods for infants, so that you don't have to depend on commercial brands all the time.

6 Merchandise for Children

There are shops galore focusing on kids' needs and wants – toys, beach gear, clothes and gadgets. International brands of nappies and babyfood are widely available. Most of the merchandise is cheap enough for you not to fret about leaving it behind in preference to lugging it back home.

7 Fun Cultural and Ecological Sights

Many of Mallorca's theme parks and museums have exhibits and activities designed entirely with children in mind. Nature parks are of interest to many children, and Mallorca's caves are very likely to be a big hit with your youngsters (see pp68–9).

8 Beaches and Water-parks

Besides the obvious family attractions of building sandcastles and splashing around in the sea, Mallorca also has some great commercial water-parks. The whole family can participate at these, with your children burning up a full-day's worth of energy. Outdoor zoos and aquariums are incorporated into some (see pp68–9).

9 Attractions for Your Teenagers

In addition to the family-oriented theme parks, there's plenty of high-energy action for your teenage children, such as windsurfing, snorkelling, boating and hiking (see pp46–9).

10 Nightlife

In terms of nightlife, you will have to exercise parental judgement about any ground rules and curfews for teenage children in your party. Obviously, some of the brasher resorts are the domain of older teenagers and young adults who travel in groups without families, seeking only the beach and nightlife. Some of the nightclubs cater mainly to the younger crowd, while others have a more diverse mix of ages (see pp72–3).

TOP 10 Tips for Disabled Travellers

1 Access at the Airport

Historically lagging in providing for people with mobility problems, Mallorca has finally begun to catch up in recent years. At Palma airport you can find adequate facilities if you have a disability – as long as you notify your travel agent and/or your airline of your needs well in advance, and then reconfirm a week or so before departure.

2 Hotel Access

The older hotels – often refurbished medieval structures – rarely have facilities for the disabled. The best bet is to book into the newest hotel you can find, where elevators should be big enough and bathroom sizes etc will comply with EU laws. But double-check the details before booking.

3 Wheelchair-Friendly Buses

All buses in Palma are now able to handle wheelchair-bound travellers, including those going to and from the airport. Contact the municipal transport authority, EMT, for more information.

4 Cars and Taxis

Specially-equipped vehicles are rare, but taxi drivers do their best to help disabled passengers. Mallorca Taxis (www.mallorcataxi.com) have cars adapted for wheelchairs, called Eurotaxi.

5 Trains

Mallorca's trains are old and in no way accommodating to independent wheelchair users. The only way to use them is to board with assistance and stow your wheelchair for the duration of the journey.

6 Restaurants

Many restaurants present the problems of lots of steps and levels. Then again, staff are usually very willing to help, so you can generally manage to dine at any restaurant of your choice.

7 Public Buildings

Public buildings in Palma and other cities are being brought up to speed with EU regulations on accessibility. Many museums, for example, are being completely remodelled to allow for ramps and large elevators. Still, there are just as many sights that, due to their age and decrepitude, remain off-limits to those with limited mobility.

8 Public Conveniences

Again, in museums and other public buildings, toilet facilities are being remodelled to allow for wheelchair access. But most other public toilets have tiny cubicles.

9 Resources in Spain

The Spanish National Tourist Office (see p128) can give you the latest news on disabled facilities. The national organization for the visually impaired, ONCE, can provide Braille maps and arrange aspects of your trip through its travel agency, Viajes 2000.

10 Other Resources

Several good English-language websites promote independent travel by providing information, practical tips and encouragement. Some will even help you plan the details of your trip.

TOP 10 Budget Tips

1 Off-Season Bargains

Coming out of season is by far the best way to make your holiday money go further in Mallorca. Prices plummet as the throngs of July and August become only a faint memory in the minds of hoteliers and restaurateurs. Low-season prices for everything can delight the budget-minded traveller, plus you have the luxury of being one of only a few, rather than one of uncountable thousands.

2 Package Deals

If you choose the location carefully, an all-inclusive package can mean excellent value. Make sure that transfers, taxes and other extras are also covered.

3 Self-Catering

If you can book far in advance, you should be able to secure one of the cheaper self-catering apartments in a pretty seaside town with good facilities (see p147). Rural tourism is becoming increasingly popular and renting a country home (casa rural) or apartment can be surprisingly inexpensive.

4 Camping

There are no official camp sites in Mallorca and camping rough is prohibited in urban areas and in zones prohibited for military or other reasons. You are allowed to camp rough elsewhere, but try to obtain permission from the landowner first.

5 Picnicking

Given the wealth of natural beauty on the island, much of it now given over to reserves, picnicking is a great proposal generally. There are also plenty of grocery stores out of which you can construct a memorable pastoral repast on the cheap.

6 Partying on a Budget

Not all pubs and clubs are pricey. Some of the best, in fact, do not impose a cover charge or minimum fee. And most pubs are so busy that no one will notice you nursing your brew all night.

7 IVA Sales Tax

Non-EU residents can reclaim IVA (VAT) on single items worth over €90 bought in shops with a "Tax-free shopping" sign, within 6 months of purchase. Pay the full price and ask for a tax-free cheque, which must be stamped when you leave Spain. The refund can be made on your credit card.

8 Make Lunch the Main Meal

The daily lunch menu in most restaurants can save you a lot of money – as much as 75% of the à la carte cost (see menú del día, opposite). Portions are often generous, too, so you can make this your major meal of the day. It's also a great way to savour the cuisine of some of the top restaurants without forking out their top prices.

9 Laundromats

Unfortunately, regular laundries and tintoreñas (dry-cleaners) are quite expensive, and hotel services even more exorbitant. However, some hotels offer clients the use of their washers for a nominal fee. A few lavanderías automáticas can be found in Palma, but don't bother looking anywhere else.

10 Reduced Admissions

Coupons for reduced group admissions to various attractions can help a lot when you've got a whole family to pay for. You'll find them in magazines, weekly papers, fliers and brochures. They are also handed out on the street, and tourist offices often have stacks of them.

TOP 10 Drinking and Eating Tips

1 Eating Out

Both lunch and dinner hours tend to be late. Lunchtime is certainly no earlier than 1:30pm, and even 2:30pm is perfectly normal. Dinnertime can be no earlier than 8:30pm, and sitting down at 11pm is not unheard of. A reservation is never a bad idea, but don't worry about dressing up.

2 Breakfast

Throughout most of the Mediterranean, breakfast is little more than a wolfed-down coffee and pasta (pastry). As a visitor, however, you are free to linger and add other foods to the meal. Foreign-run venues may offer a full English or American breakfast, and many hotels cater to international taste with a full buffet.

3 Tapas and Raciones

Tapas are a Spanish institution. What began in ages past as a free slice of ham laid across a drink has turned into small portions of anything you can think of, some of it very creative. Locals eat them as appetizers before heading off to dinner, but a few well-chosen tapas can easily make a full meal (see p79). Raciones are normal-sized portions for sharing.

4 Menú del Día

Many places offer a menú del día (daily menu) at lunchtime, which is usually cheaper than à la carte prices. You get a limited choice of a first course (typically soup or salad) and second course (fish or meat, with sides) and dessert, with water and wine included. Coffee is usually extra, or offered in place of dessert.

5 Meats

Pork in all its guises is the central meat in the Mallorcan diet, with roast suckling pig considered the crowning glory. Duck, rabbit, quail and other game are more common than beef and veal. Goat and lamb feature on many Mallorcan menus.

6 Seafood

The waters around the island were fished out long ago, so fishermen go further afield to haul in the Mediterranean bounty. A local favourite is rape (monkfish), as well as lobsters, crayfish, prawns and mussels.

7 Side Dishes and Desserts

Favourite side dishes include asparagus, both green and white, and mushrooms sautéed with garlic, as well as whatever vegetables may be at their seasonal best. Fresh fruit is always an option for dessert, along with almond cake and almond ice cream, but one of the most characteristic is crema catalana, a kind of crème brûlée or custard with a crispy, caramelized sugar topping.

8 Drinks

Wine and beer are the top choices, usually accompanied by a small bottle of mineral water, either still or sparkling. Note that the sparkling is very fizzy indeed and tends to be salty. Sangria is prevalent on the island, and Cava (sparkling white wine) is delicious and inexpensive. A good aperitif choice is fino or manzanilla (sherry), or a host of mixed drinks, often involving local white rum or gin. Finally, coffee can be either café sol (espresso) or cortado ("cut" with either cold or hot milk). Ask for it descafeinat if you don't want the jolt.

9 Vegetarian and Vegan Options

Tumbet, a local vegetable stew, features on many traditional menus, but even the vegetable soups are usually enhanced with a bit of pork. One good recourse would be to have the chef compose a salad for you, leaving out the non-vegetarian ingredients. Or head for one of the fine vegetarian restaurants (see p93).

10 Tipping

Tipping is not the absolute necessity here that it is in some countries. Nevertheless, it is customary to leave about 10% of the total bill, or at least to round the figure up – assuming you found the service satisfactory.

If squiggly squid and other local favourites are not to your liking, you'll find sufficient international eateries to turn to

TOP 10 Shopping Tips

1 Factory Outlets

Several of these bargain-hunters' dreams are sprinkled around the island, mostly in the Central Plain. Prominent on the list are Inca for leather goods, Santa Maria del Camí for traditional textiles and Manacor for artificial pearls (see p124 for all of the above). Gordiola, near Algaida, is good for glassware (see p123).

2 Markets

Traditional markets abound on Mallorca. Every day of the week, you'll find at least a couple of them going on somewhere. In Palma, there's also a flea market, Rastrillo, every Saturday morning, 8am–2pm, on Avenida Gabriel Alomar i Villalonga. For Mallorca's best markets, see p71.

3 Haggling

Bargaining, especially if you buy more than one of something, is perfectly acceptable if you are buying in local markets. In fact, most market stall holders will automatically round your final bill down without your even asking for a deal. So feel free to practise your negotiating skills to the fullest.

4 Sales Tax

An 18% IVA is automatically included in the price of most goods, and 8% on services, but establish in advance if it is included when you are buying a more expensive item, as it may make quite a difference.

5 Hours and Holidays

In general, shops and other public institutions keep old-fashioned Mediterranean hours: they close for several hours for lunch and a siesta. Expect most places to be open 9am–1:30pm, 4–7pm Monday to Friday, though there will be plenty of variation, such as closing at 2pm and opening up again at 5pm for three hours. On Saturdays, most smaller shops are open morning only. Chain stores, tourist places and department stores will stay open all day and late into the evening. Public and religious holidays occur throughout the year and number about 15.

6 Sales

Price reductions are commonplace throughout the year, the biggest being in January and July. End-of-season sales are indicated by "rebaixes" signs in shop windows.

7 Crafts

Olive-wood carving, lace-making, embroidery, weaving, basketry, pottery and glass-blowing are all going strong on the island. There are many direct outlets and stores that carry a range of crafts; the best of them are represented in the Around the Island listings in this guide.

8 Peddlers

Inevitably, you'll see blankets laid out on the pavements with all sorts of merchandise: clothing, African sculpture, hippie accessories ... whatever sells. Each town has its own area where such entrepreneurs display their wares, much of it at ridiculously low prices compared to the shops. But caveat emptor – check the goods carefully and look out for signs of shoddiness! All may not be what it first appears.

9 Foreign Books

Palma has several bookshops that carry literature of all sorts in foreign languages – we've listed one that specializes in secondhand books and has loads of great holiday reads (see p91). Travel books about Mallorca in all languages are readily available just about everywhere, and booklets about specific sights are usually for sale in gifts shops.

10 Shipping and Customs

Most reputable shops will gladly see to shipping your purchases home – for a fee, of course. But you can do it yourself via the Spanish postal service or an international courier such as DHL or UPS. You will have to check if the merchandise you intend sending back incurs import duty in your home country.

TOP 10 Accommodation Tips

1 Area Options

This really rather small island offers a tremendous range of climates and terrains, from sophisticated city life to nearly alpine mountains, and from lush subtropical beaches to remote and wild plains. If you have the time, sample the diversity.

2 Determining Needs

It's worth thinking about what you require of your accommodation. A conventional hotel room with private bath and balcony, possibly with meals included in the price? Or would a self-catering apartment be more suitable, especially if you are travelling in a group or with family? Do you plan to stay in one area or do you want to see many of the island's sights? If the latter, you may want to consider renting a car.

3 Choosing the Best Location

Where do you want to base your stay? In one of the bustling areas, a smaller village or a remote location? Such options exist by the sea, up in the mountains or on private fincas (ranches), either working farms or those that have been transformed into resorts.

4 Price

The cost of accommodation varies widely. You don't have to spend a great deal to find your desired location, but if you want to add luxuries and superb cuisine to your locale, there are far more costly choices too.

5 Making a Reservation

If you plan to visit in the warm months or during holidays, make reservations as far in advance as possible. The good-value accommodation fills up quickly, and even high-end gems can be booked solid in July and August. Confirm exact dates and type of accommodation with hotel management via email or fax.

6 Finding a Hotel on the Spot

Unless you want to spend hours casting about for a room, and possibly not finding anything in your price-range, this is not recommended, except in low season. Even then, bear in mind that many establishments close in winter. Also remember that there are no official tourist agencies that handle reservations, so your search may involve lots of footwork.

7 Tipping

As elsewhere in Europe, tipping is not absolutely necessary. Workers are paid living wages and should not depend on tips. However, a few coins for services rendered by the hotel staff are never amiss. You can tip porters and bell-boys on the spot, and leave something for the maid in your room – or a general tip for all staff at the check-out desk.

8 Hidden Extras

A tax of 8% may or may not be included in the quoted price of your room; it is always best to ask or you could end up paying more than you expected. Parking, phone use and breakfast may or may not be charged as extra; determine what you are liable for in advance.

9 Travelling with Children

Mallorca is well set up for family travel. With very few exceptions, children are more than welcome at hotels and resorts, and those under certain ages may even stay free. Many hotels have a full schedule of special events and activities for kids, often at no extra charge. (See also p134.)

10 Language

With many decades of international tourism behind them, most Mallorcans are by now polyglots, and are likely to manage very well in English as well as other languages. However, it's a good idea to learn a little of the local lingo, Mallorquí (a dialect of Catalan) and Spanish, at least for getting around and pleasantries.

TOP 10 Agroturismo (Farmhouses)

1 Son Esteve, Andratx

Dating back to 903, this picturesque structure was built by the Moors. Service is attentive, the rooms are comfortable and there is a lovely pool – all just minutes from the old town and port. A lavish breakfast with homemade yogurt and jams is included. Map B4 • Camí Ca's Vidals, 42 • 655 572630 • www.sonesteve.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

2 Sa Pedrissa, Deià

Surrounded by ancient olive trees and blessed with fabulous sea views, this 16th-century country estate has been restored to the standards of the best hotels, without losing its historic appeal. Dine on local cuisine in the beautiful converted olive press room. Map C2 • Ctra. Valldemossa-Deià, km 64.5 • 971 639111 • www.sapedrissa.com • Limited dis acc • €€€€€

3 Ca's Curial, Sóller

You get a lot of space and luxury for the price. There's a rustic feel and antiques but also every modern amenity, all set in a fragrant orange grove just a few minutes from central Sóller. The views of the jagged, pine-covered mountains are stunning, as you sit around the pool on the shaded terrace. Map C2 • C/La Villalonga, 23 • 971 633332 • www.cascurial.com • Limited dis acc • €€€€

4 Ca'n Moragues, Artá

A small and exclusive hotel set in a refurbished 18th-century manor house in the heart of Artá. Every comfort has been seen to in the unique combination of antique and modern furnishings. Map G3 • C/Pou Nou, 12 • 971 829509 • www.canmoragues.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

5 Son Gener, Son Severa

Exquisite 18th-century country estate with charm and personalized service. The cooking is top-notch, and all of the sleek rooms are junior suites. There's a patio, pool, terraces and spa. Map G3 • Ctra. Vieja Son Servera-Artá, km 3 • 971 183612 • www.songener.com • Closed Dec–mid-Jan • Limited dis acc • €€€€€

6 Mayolet, Manacor

Attached to the Reserva Rotana, whose pool it shares, this old farmer's stone house has been updated for every comfort. The rooms are large and rustic, and like a home-from-home. Map F4 • Camí de S'Arall, km 3 • 971 845685 • www.mayolet.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

7 Sa Carrotja, Ses Salines

The 17th-century farmhouse has been modernized without losing any of its country charms, a place where you can sample local cuisine made from the proprietor's own organic produce. A quiet, refined choice, but not really suitable for children. Map E6 • Sa Carrotja, 7 • 971 649053 • www.sacarrotja.com • No dis acc • €€€

8 Ses Rotes Velles, Campos-Colònia Sant Jordi

Immaculate lawns set off beautiful flower gardens, a vibrant counterpoint to the rich ochre of the bungalows. The food is some of the island's best. Ctra. Campos-Colònia Sant Jordi, km 8.7 • 971 656159 • www.agroturismosesrotesvelles.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

9 Raïms, Algaida

The self catering apartments are modern, but this country house has kept its old wine cellars and stone floors. A sense of timelessness settles over everything as you laze by the pool. Map D4 • C/Ribera, 24 • 971 665 157 • www.finca-raïms.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

10 Sa Torre, Santa Eugènia

The 13th-century estate is surrounded by wheat fields, close to the island's agricultural centre. The old wine cellar has been converted into an inviting restaurant. All rooms are spacious apartments. Map D3 • C/Alqueries, 70 • 971 144011 • www.sa-torre.com • Limited dis acc • €€€

TOP 10 Monasteries, Refuges and Hostels

1 Refugi Can Boi, Deià

This comfortable refuge offers 32 beds, hot water and food. Towels and bed linen can be rented on site. Reservations must be made a minimum of five days in advance. A number of walks can be taken from the refuge.

📍 Map C2 • C/des Clot, 5 • 971 173731 • www.conselldemallorca.cat • No dis acc • No credit cards • No air con • €

2 Castell d'Alaró

The hostel is a 45-minute walk from the scenic castle (see p97). There are double and triple rooms, a communal room and snack bar, but facilities are otherwise modest: come prepared with whatever you might require. 📍 Map D3 • Puig d'Alaró • 971 182112 • No dis acc • No credit cards • No en-suite • No air con • €

3 Refugio Tossals Verds, Lloseta

It's a one hour walk from the Clot d'Almendra to this place, which gives access to the highest summits of the range. The house, an old mountain construction, has been modernized with an en-suite double room and two rooms with bunks for 8 and 12 people. There is heating, and guests can cook their own meals or eat at the restaurant. 📍 Map D3 • Finca Tossals Verds • 971 173731 • No dis acc • Not all en-suite • No air con • €

4 Santuari de Lluc

In this most famous of Mallorca's retreats (see pp26–7), you'll find considerable comfort and every sort of facility, including outside tables, barbecue areas, bars and restaurants, and camping possibilities. The accommodation is closer to hotel-style than most such retreats on the island.

📍 Map D2 • 971 517096 • www.lluc.net • Limited dis acc • No air con • €

5 Santuari del Puig de Maria, Pollença

High on the Puig de Maria. There's a kitchen with a coal fire, and a dining room with a fireplace and restaurant. Bathrooms are communal, and only one of the showers has hot water (see p60). 📍 Map E1 • 971 184132 • No dis acc • No credit cards • No en-suite • No air con • €

6 Santuari de Cura, Randa

Set in verdant, peaceful gardens on the peak of the Puig de Randa, this historic sanctuary offers lovely views of the island. It has been beautifully restored, and the rooms are comfortable and well equipped. 📍 Map E4 • Randa, 07629 • 971 120260 • No credit cards • No air con • €€

7 Ermita de Bonany, Petra

Set in a Special Interest Nature Area. The five rooms share communal showers, a kitchen, dining room and outside barbecue areas (bring your own BBQ) with picnic tables.

📍 Map F4 • Puig de Bonany • 971 826568 • No dis acc • No en-suite • No air con • €

8 Santuari de Montis-Sion, Porreres

The very simple amenities here are reminiscent of the asceticism of yesteryear. The 16th-century lecture hall is preserved, as are four Gothic pillars on the path that ascends from the village to the summit. Great views of the entire Central Plain. 📍 Map E4 • Oratori de Montis-Sion • 971 647185 • No dis acc • No credit cards • No air con • €

9 Santuari de Sant Salvador, Felanitx

Modest accommodations and amenities include hot water, a kitchen, dining room, barbecue areas, picnic tables, and a bar and restaurant (see p61). 📍 Map F5 • Pl. Santa Margarita, 6 • 971 827282 • No dis acc • No credit cards • No air con • €

10 Youth Hostels

There are two official hostels in barracks-like buildings. Book in advance, as they get full quickly. 📍 Albergue Platja de Palma, C/Costa Brava, 13, outside Palma (closed Nov–Feb) • Albergue de la Victòria, Ctra. Cap Pinar, km 4.9, north of Alcúdia • 902 111188 (for both) • €

3 Ca's Curial, Sóller

This agroturismo/finca (farmhouse/ranch) in the heart of the beautiful Sóller Valley, has two rental properties with all facilities, one that sleeps six, one for eight. A pool, patios and terraces are reserved for guests' use. The area is excellent for walking.

📍 Map C2 • C/La Villalonga, 23, Sóller • 971 633332 • www.cascurial.com

Limited dis acc • €€€€

4 Hotel Marina, Port de Sóller

On a palm-lined, pedestrianized area, this simple apartment-hotel enjoys great views, and a superb beach is just outside the front door. The decor features terracotta tile floors, and every room has good-sized balconies.

📍 Map C2 • Paseo La Playa, Platja d'En Repic • 971 634182 • www.hotelmarinasoller.com

• Limited dis acc • €€

5 Hotel Generoso, Port de Sóller

Right on the beach by the picturesque Sóller tramline, with views of the port and mountains from the upper floors. Rooms are small and simple, but have balconies and often marble floors and walls. There's a pool, solarium, bar and restaurant.

📍 Map C2 • Calle Marina, 4 • 971 631450 • www.hotelgeneroso.com

• Limited dis acc • €€

6 Finca Ca'n Sagra, Pollença

Large mountain chalet with 1,000-year-old olive trees, a pool, vast terraces and breathtaking views. You get an American-style kitchen, a pool house with bathroom, barbecue, central heating, golf and shops nearby, and the whole place is furnished with genuine antiques.

📍 Map E1 • 639 441672 • www.als-mallorca.com

• Limited dis acc • Not all with air con • €€€€€ (min one-week stay)
