PREFACE TO THE FOURTH EDITION

In this completely revised and reset edition numerous corrections and additions have been made to bring the book up to date. Thanks are due to the many correspondents who have pointed out errors or suggested improvements. Especially must I express my gratitude to Dr Scholes, Dr Honeyman, and Mr J. M. Wyllie for the valuable assistance given for musical terms, chemical terms, and many technical terms. The officials of the Clarendon Press too, past and present, have throughout been most helpful.

In this edition the system of pronunciation devised for the Pocket Oxford Dictionary has been adopted, the senses have been usually numbered, the general abbreviations have been collected into an appendix, and the swung dash has been freely employed.

Swung dash (~).

To save space the 'swung dash' or 'tilde' is very frequently used in the body of the article or the list of derivatives. It represents either the complete word at the beginning of the article or the uninflected part of that word often marked by a vertical line. As, for example, in the article repeat, ~ stands for repeat (or repeat), ~ed for repeated, ~edLY[2] for repeatedLY[2], ~ing for repeating, ~ER[1] for repeatER[1]; and in the article reverber|ate we have ~ating, ~ate, ~ATORY, ~ATION, ~ATIVE, ~ANT representing reverberating, reverberate, reverberatORY, reverberATION, reverberATIVE, reverberANT.

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

The publication of the Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary in November 1933 makes important additions to the material which it is the aim of this book, as a dictionary of the living language, to present. Mr H. W. Fowler entrusted me with the preparation of this edition in February 1933, and until his death on the 26th December of that year I had the privilege of his guidance.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

WHEN we began, more than twenty years ago, the work that took shape as The Concise Oxford Dictionary, we were plunging into the sea of lexicography without having been first taught to swim. But lexicography for us was fortunately of the minor or dependent kind; and, fortunately also, the time was one at which the major or firsthand kind was reaching greater excellence than ever before, and the Oxford English Dictionary, four-fifths completed, already provided popularizers with unlimited material.

The object we set before us, hinted at by the word current on our title-page, was to present as vivid a picture as the small dictionary could be made to give of the English that was being spoken and written at the time. The vividness was to be secured by allotting space to words more nearly in proportion to the frequency and variety of their use, and consequently to their practical value, than had been the custom; and further by an unprecedented abundance of illustrative quotation; define, and your reader gets a silhouette; illustrate, and he has it 'in the round'. That at least was our belief; and we hailed as confirmation of it one or two letters from persons unknown congratulating us on having 'produced a live dictionary', or 'treating English at last as a living language'.

A living language, however, does not remain unchanged through twenty years and a great war; our picture has needed, and received, a good deal of retouching before being again exhibited in public.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A DICTIONARY-MAKER, unless he is a monster of omniscience, must deal with a great many matters of which he has no firsthand knowledge. That he has been guilty of errors and omissions in some of these he will learn soon after publication, sometimes with gratitude to his enlightener, sometimes otherwise. The first letter we received after C.O.D. appeared was a demand for repayment of the book's cost, on the ground that it failed to give gal(l)iot, to settle the spelling of which it had been bought. Even for that announcement of an omission I am now grateful, as affording a good illustration of the less friendly form of correction, and reminding me to assure the public that to one revising for a new edition no correction is (ultimately) unwelcome; all is grist that comes to his mill. At the other end of the scale is the friend, known to me only by correspondence, who for years sent me fortnightly packets of foolscap devoted to perfecting a still contingent second edition—all this for love of the language not as a philological playground, but as the medium of exchange and bond of union among the English-speakers of the world. Castigavit et emendavit Byron F. Caws might have stood with justice at the foot of our title-page.

Other helpers have been many, some with systematic lists, others with a few isolated but valuable points; to all those in the list below I would fain offer—what some of them are no longer living to receive—my heartiest thanks:

Leslie J. Berlin Esq.; Major B. F. Caws; Dr R. W. Chapman; Mr S. K. N. Chaudhuri; *Sir Arthur Church K.C.V.O.; Rev. G. P. Ford; H. Gilbert-Carter Esq.; *Prof. Marcus Hartog; the Very Reverend Dr J. PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

THE steady advance towards completion of the great Oxford English Dictionary has made it possible for the Delegates of the Clarendon Press to authorize the preparation and issue of this book, which in its own province and on its own scale uses the materials and follows the methods by which the Oxford editors have revolutionized lexicography. The book is designed as a dictionary, and not as an encyclopaedia; that is, the uses of words and phrases as such are its subject matter, and it is concerned with giving information about the things for which those words and phrases stand only so far as correct use of the words depends upon knowledge of the things. The degree of this dependence varies greatly with the kind of word treated, the difference between cyclopaedic and dictionary treatment varies with it, and the line of distinction is accordingly a fluctuating and dubious one. It is to the endeavour to discern and keep to this line that we attribute whatever peculiarities we are conscious of in this dictionary as compared with others of the same size. One of these peculiarities is the large amount of space given to the common words that no one goes through the day without using scores or hundreds of times, often disposed of in a line or two on the ground that they are plain and simple and that every one knows all about them by the light of nature, but in fact entangled with other words in so many alliances and antipathies during their perpetual knocking about the world that the idiomatic use of them is far from easy; chief among such words are the prepositions, the conjunctions, the pronouns, and such 'simple' nouns and verbs as hand and way, go and put. Another peculiarity is the use, copious for so small a dictionary, of illustrative sentences as a necessary supplement to definition when a word has different senses between which the distinction is fine, or when a definition is obscure and unconvincing until exemplified; these sentences often are, but still more often are not, quotations from standard authors; they are meant to establish the sense of the definition by appeal not to external authority, but to the reader's own consciousness, and therefore their source, even when authoritative, is not named. A third and a fourth peculiarity are the direct results of the preceding ones; if common words are to be treated at length, and their uses to be copiously illustrated, space must be saved both by the curtest possible treatment of all that are either uncommon or fitter for the encyclopaedia than the dictionary, and by the severest economy of expression—amounting to the adoption of telegraphese—that readers can be expected to put up with.

In attaching this great importance to illustration, by the need of which the relative length of articles, and our manner of expressing ourselves on every page, are governed, we are merely acting, with the exaggeration imposed on us by our limited space, upon the principles of the O.E.D. That may be said to be the first dictionary for which the ideal procedure has been possible, that is, the approaching of each article with an open mind and a collection of examples large enough to be exhaustive, and the extraction from these of classified senses—the first dictionary, to put it another way, in which quotations have served not merely to adorn or convince, but as the indispensable raw material. This procedure—first the collection of sentences from all possible sources as raw material, and then the independent classification—we have often followed even in that part of our book (A–R) in which the O.E.D., with senses already classified and definitions provided, was before us, treating its articles rather as quarries to be drawn upon than as structures to be reproduced in little; and in the later part (S–Z), where we had no longer the O.E.D. to depend upon, it has been our practice still more often; for many of the more difficult (i.e. especially the common and 'simple') words, we have collected the quotations given in the best modern dictionaries (the Imperial, the Century, the Standard, Cassell's Encyclopaedic, Webster, etc.), added to these what we could get either from other external sources or from our own heads, and then framed our articles, often without reference to the arrangement that we found in any of our authorities. Proceeding in this manner, it was almost inevitable that we should be very much alive to the inadequacy of mere definition and the need of constant illustration. That our examples have some general tendency to the colloquial, and include many usages for which room has not been found in dictionaries many times as large as this, is in harmony with our design of on the one hand restricting ourselves for the most part to current English, and on the other hand omitting nothing to which that description may fairly be applied.

VOCABULARY

The words, or senses of words, given are meant to be such only as are current; 'current', however, is an elastic term; we might, but we do not, stretch it to include all words and senses used by Shakspere or in the Bible, on the ground that the whole of Shakspere and the whole of the Bible are still commonly read; thus the archaic senses of addition (title), buxom (pliant), owe (own), sad (serious), sort (suit), and the archaic words shend (scold), wood (mad), familiar as they are to readers of Elizabethan literature, are not given. We do stretch it to include many words and senses that are fossilized, having in themselves no life or capacity for further development, but kept extant by being enshrined in perhaps a single proverb or phrase that is still in use; of this sort are coil (confusion), preserved by 'shuffled off this mortal coil', and scotch (wound), preserved by 'we have scotched the snake, not killed it'.

Again, of the many thousands of old or new scientific and technical terms that have a limited currency some are carried by accident into the main stream of the language and become known temporarily or permanently, vaguely or precisely, to all ordinarily well-informed members of the modern newspaper-reading public. For the purposes of a dictionary that is not to be bulky and yet is to give a fuller treatment than is usual in dictionaries of its size to the undoubtedly current words forming the staple of the language, selection among these intruders is a difficult but very necessary task. The most that can be hoped for is that every one conversant with any special vocabulary may consider us, though sadly deficient on his subject, fairly copious on others; the meaning of many learned words that have been omitted as having no pretence to general currency may easily be gathered by reference first to the stem, which is often the subject of an article, or to another word of which the stem is clearly the same, and secondly to the suffix.

In another class of words and senses the test of currency has led us to diverge in the opposite direction from the practice usual in dictionaries of this size; if we give fewer scientific and technical terms, we admit colloquial, facetious, slang, and vulgar expressions with freedom, merely attaching a cautionary label; when a well-established usage of this kind is omitted, it is not because we consider it beneath the dignity of lexicography to record it, but because, not being recorded in the dictionaries from which our word-list is necessarily compiled, it has escaped our notice; we have not, however, consulted slang dictionaries nor made any attempt at completeness in this respect.

SPELLING

The spelling adopted is for the most part, but not invariably, that of the O.E.D. For instance, the verbs that contain the suffix -ize (which see), and their derivatives in -ization etc., are all given without the alternative forms in -ise etc., although these are still the commoner in British (as opposed to American) printing; but such generally established spellings as judgment, rhyme, axe, have not been excluded in favour of the judgement, rime, ax, preferred by the O.E.D., but are retained at least as alternatives having the right to exist. In dealing with verbs such as level, rivet, bias, whose parts and derivatives are variously spelt, the final consonant being often doubled with no phonetic or other significance, we have as far as possible fallen in with the present tendency, which is to drop the useless letter, but stopped short of recognizing forms that at present strike every reader as Americanisms; thus we write riveted, riveter, but not traveling, traveler. On another point of varying usage—the insertion of a mute e in derivatives in -able, -age, -ish, etc., to indicate the 'long' sound of the stem vowel (likable or likeable, milage or mileage, latish or lateish)—we have thought ourselves justified in taking a bolder line, and have consistently omitted the -e-; it is against all analogy (or why not smileing, Romeish, doteage, tideal, indescribeable, desireable, exciteable?), it is used chiefly in words not familiar or important enough to have their form respected as established, it obscures the different and more valuable use by which a soft g or c is indicated as in manageable and serviceable, and it tempts bad spellers to such monstrosities as unpalateable, loveable, and moveable. In words of the type ardour, colour, favour, where the O.E.D. recognizes both -our and -or, we have excluded the latter as being (except in particular words like horror and torpor, in which it is usually the only form) entirely non-British. Words in which -y- has intruded itself without completely dispossessing a more correct -i-, as sylvan, tyro, tyre, we have given with the -i- form either alone or placed first.

ORDER OF SENSES

From the order in which the senses of a word are here given no inference must be drawn as to their historical or other relations, the arrangement being freely varied according to the requirements or possibilities of the particular word. Sense-development cannot always be convincingly presented without abundant quotation from authorities, and the historical order is further precluded by the uniform omission of obsolete senses. Occasionally, when a rare but still current sense throws light on the commoner senses that follow or forms the connecting link with the etymology, it has been placed at the beginning; but more commonly the order adopted has been that of logical connexion or of comparative familiarity or importance.

DERIVATIVES

Hence introduces one or more of the direct derivatives of the word treated; whence introduces such derivatives under a particular sense to which they are restricted; so introduces words derived from another language; hence or cogn., whence or cogn., introduce groups of partly English and partly foreign derivation. The suffixes of such derivatives are commonly printed in small capitals, and are thus referred to the suffix article in its alphabetical place. The numbers enclosed in brackets indicate subdivisions of the suffix article, and are often used to distinguish among the possible senses of the derivative word those in which it is chiefly current.

ETYMOLOGY

Etymology is given in square brackets at the end of each article.

Words of Teutonic origin are illustrated by all or some of the forms found in cognate languages. With words that have passed through several languages on their way to English, the forms taken in successive languages are recorded in full, with the following exceptions. (1) When OF or the like at the beginning of the etymology is not followed by the old French form written in full, it is because the latter is identical in spelling with the English or differs from it only in some unimportant detail specified in brackets. (2) The Latin form of a Greek word is usually omitted, and is to be inferred according to the rules of transliteration given below. Thus (under pleonasm) 'f. L f. Gk pleonasmos' is to be read 'f. L pleonasmus f. Gk pleonasmos'. A similar omission of a word in any other language implies absolute identity of form.

Greek words are written with the corresponding English letters (φ, χ, ψ, ῥ, ῤῥ, = ph, kh, ps, rh, rrh, and ᾳ, ῃ, ῳ, = āi, ēi, ōi), and not according to the Latin transliteration, the rules for which are as follows; Greek k = Latin c; ai = ae; ou = u; u (exc. in diphthongs) = y; ei = i or e; oi = oe (but in nom. pl. = i); g (before g or k) = n; also, -ŏs (nom. masc.), -ŏn, = -us, -um; -ēs, -ē, (1st decl. nom.) = -a; -ōn (nom.) = -o; -ŏs (genit.) = -is; -a (accus. sing. masc. or fem.) = -em.

French nouns of Latin origin are with few exceptions derived from the Latin accusative; but the Latin nominative is here given except when (e.g. in words in -atio) a change of stress is involved.

Greek η (ē) and ω (ō), and the e of Latin infinitives of 2nd conj. (-ēre, -ēri), are regularly marked long. The accented letters (á, ǽ, etc.) in forms quoted from Old English or other Teutonic languages are long.

F, G, etc., must not be taken to imply that the word to which they are prefixed is current, or is so spelt, in the modern language; nor does it follow from a word's being given as OF that it is obsolete.

The etymology often contains references in small capitals to words and suffixes.

The first element of a Latin or other compound word is often referred to a prefix article, and the remainder treated separately within brackets; meanings given within the bracket belong to the simple word, those of the compound being added if necessary outside it. Thus convene is [f. F convenir f. L CON(venire vent- come) assemble, agree, fit]. The stem vent- and the senses agree, fit, are here added for the purposes of convention and convenience, which are referred to convene. The first element of a Greek compound similarly treated is sometimes written according to the current (Latin) transliteration, to facilitate reference to the prefix article;

Greek kakoepeia, under cacoepy, accordingly appears as CACO(epeia). Certain similar devices for saving needless repetition will, it is believed, explain themselves.

The etymology of all words from A to R was drawn in the first instance from the O.E.D., but was occasionally modified after reference to Prof. Skeat's Etymological Dictionary (Clarendon Press, 4th edition, 1910). From S to Z Prof. Skeat's work has been our main authority, the Century and other dictionaries being consulted for the words that he omits.

REFERENCE BY SMALL CAPITALS

The use of small capitals for etymological purposes is explained above.

In the same way reference is made:

(1) from the word treated to another word for the purpose of contrast, distinction, correlation, or the like. Of this kind are the references from slander to libel and scandal, from creationism to evolution and vice versa, and from tenon to mortise and vice versa;

(2) from any member of a group to the word under which the group is collected or further explained. Ruby (print.) is in this way referred to type; order (nat. hist.) to class[1]; and the iron[1], golden, and silver ages to brazen[1];

(3) from one or more words of a proverb or the like to that under which alone the proverb is explained. Play[1] and drake[2] contain such references to duck[1], flesh to fish[1];

(4) from a compound of the word treated to its other component for explanation. The sign (=) prefixed to such a reference indicates that the simple word treated is itself used in the sense of the compound. Thus, under pie[1], sea-pie is merely referred (SEA-~) to sea, but magpie, besides being referred to the article magpie, is recorded (=MAGPIE) as one of the senses of pie.

PRONUNCIATION

Phonetic respelling is placed in round brackets immediately after such words as require it, and the symbols in the PHONETIC SCHEME are primarily intended for this purpose. But respelling is often saved by employing the same symbols in the black type of the actual word; bănĭsh, for instance, has no respelling, and dĭspōse has only (-z).

Vowel symbols given in the Scheme with ‒, ◡, —, or ◠, are also used without these marks to denote a vague indeterminate sound, which is almost identical for all vowels and (except in studied elocution) has no clear relation to the corresponding vowel marked ¯ etc. (e.g., the a in about is like the o in reason, proceed, and is not like ā or ă). When so used in brackets, the indeterminates are printed in italics, thus: ago (*a*gō), proceed (prosēd), particular (*parti*kūl*ar*). Used in the actual word, they are recognized by the absence of the marks ‒, ◡, etc.; thus in săcrament, cŏmmon, bĕggarlў, all the unmarked vowels (a, e; o; ar) are indeterminate. This does not apply to the last six symbols in the Scheme, which never have marks over them and are always distinct.

Indeterminate endings in -n, -m, -l or -le, when they require respelling, are also represented thus: poison (-zn), fūsion (-zhn), tĕnsion (-shn), ōcean (-shn), lĭsten (-sn), bosom (bo͝ozm), hŭstle (-sl), offĭcial (-shl), weasel (-zl), the vowel sound being that similarly indicated by the actual spelling of spasm, prism, etc.

PHONETIC SCHEME

Consonants: b; ch (ch*in*); d; dh (dh*e* = the); g (*g*o); h; j; k; l; m; n; ng (*si*ng); ngg (*fi*n*g*er); p; r; s (s*i*p); sh (sh*i*p); t; th (th*i*n); v; w; y; z; zh (*vi*zh*n* = vision).

Vowels: ā ē ī ō ū o͞o (mate mete mite mote mute moot)
ă ĕ ĭ ŏ ŭ o͝o (rack reck rick rock ruck rook) ār ēr ĭr ōr ūr (mare mere mire more mure) âr êr ôr (part pert port) ah aw oi oor ow owr (bah bawl boil boor brow bower)

Vowels marked ◡ may be pronounced either way, e.g. pătriot (pā- or pă-). In all vowel symbols with r (ār, âr, etc.), the r, besides influencing the vowel sound, has its consonantal value when followed by a vowel in the next syllable of the word or in the following word (in fearing but not in fearful, in far away but not in far gone).

ACCENT

The main accent is shown by the mark ′, usually placed at the end of the stressed syllable; but, division into syllables being arbitrary in English, positions for the accent that would disguise the pronunciation are avoided; thus stârr′ў but că′rrў, wo͝oll′en but co͝o͝l′lў, lōc′al but vĕlŏ′cĭtў, ōv′er but co′ver (kŭ-), mŭdd′ў but mŭd′dle. The placing of two accents on a word means either (a) that the two marked syllables are equally stressed, as in tit′bit′, or (b) that among good speakers the one accentuation has as many adherents as the other, or (c) that the stress varies according to position in the sentence as explained in the dictionary article -ED[3]. In the thousands of compounds given under their first elements among the alphabetically arranged combinations, accent is thus shown: if there is no hyphen separating the parts, the accent is always given (back′bone, backslide′); if there is a hyphen, the regular usage is for the first of the compounded words to be stressed, and the accent is then usually omitted (so oak-apple); if the stress falls, contrary to this rule, on the second component, it is marked (head-on′ adv.); if the stress is variable, each part has an accent (high-strung′).

PRONUNCIATION WITHOUT RESPELLING

All the further information necessary for the pronunciation of any word or part of a word that is not respelt is contained in the following six paragraphs; the assumptions made in these hold unless the contrary is shown in brackets.

1. Any letter or combination in the Phonetic Scheme has the value there shown; e.g., aw as in awl, not as in awake (awāk′); and ginger, linger, would be required to rhyme with singer unless ginger were followed by (-j-), and linger by (-ngg-).

2. The following additional symbols are used in the black type:

ė = ĭ (nāk′ėd, rėlў′, cŏll′ėge, prĭv′ėt)
e͡r, u͡r, = ėr (be͡rth, bu͡rn) ў, y̆, = ī, ĭ (ĭmplў′, sŭnn′y̆).

3. Final e unmarked is not indeterminate, but mute (sāne, ĭndūc′tĭve; cf. rĕ′cĭpė, dĭlėttăn′tė).

4. A doubled consonant is pronounced as single (sĭll′ў, măn′ĭsh, bŭtt′er), not as in cōōl′ly (-l-lĭ) or plain′nėss (-n-n-).

5. The following combinations and letters have the values shown:

Vowels.

ae = ē (aegis)
ai = ā (pain)
air = ār (fair)
au = aw (maul)
ay = ā (say)
ea, ee, = ē (mean, meet) ear, eer, = ēr (fear, beer) eu, ew, = ū (feud, few) ie = ē (thief)
ier = ēr (pier)
oa = ō (boat)
ou = ow (bound) oy = oi (coy)

Consonants.

c is 'hard' and = k (cob, cry, talc), but c before e, i, y, is 'soft' and = s (ice, icy, city)
dg = j (judgement)
g before e, i, y, is 'soft' and = j (age, gin, orgy)
n before k, 'hard' c, q, x, = ng (zinc, uncle, tank, banquet, minx)
ph = f (photo)
qu = kw (quit)
tch = ch (batch)
x = ks (fox)

6. The following terminations have the values shown:

-age = -ĭj (garbage)
-ate = -ĭt or -at (mandate)
-ey = -ī (donkey)
-ous = -us (furious)
-sm = -zm (atheism, spasm)
-tion = -shon (salvation)
-ture = -ch*er* as well as -tūr, esp. in common words.

INFLEXION

The rules assumed, exceptions to which are noted in a bracket placed after a word's grammatical description, are given below. The term 'sibilants' stands for words ending in -s, -x, -z, -sh or soft -ch, '-o wds' for all that end in -o, '-e wds' for all that end in mute -e, and '-y wds' for all that end in -y not preceded by a vowel (e.g. deny, puppy, but not bray, donkey).

1. Plural of nouns. Sibilants add -es (boxes, porches); -y wds change -y into -ies (puppies); the plural of -o wds is usually stated thus, photo n. (pl. ~s), potato n. (pl. ~es); other nouns add -s (books).

2. Possessive of nouns. Singular nouns take apostrophe, s (man's, James's); plurals, if they do not end in s, form the possessive by the same rule (men's, geese's), but, if they end in s, take an apostrophe only (boys').

3. Comparative and superlative of adjectives and adverbs. In monosyllables and some disyllables (e.g. those in -y) add -er and -est (bolder), -e wds dropping the -e (bravest), and disyllables in -y having -ier and -iest (happier, luckiest); in other cases prefix more and most (more beautiful, most splendid). Monosyllables double a final single consonant (except x) if preceded by a single vowel (grimmer). This may be stated in the dictionary.

4. Third person singular present of verbs. Sibilants and -o wds add -es (pushes, goes); -y wds change -y into -ies (cries); other verbs add -s (sings).

5. Past and p.p. of verbs. -e wds add -d (moved); -y wds change -y into -ied (relied); other verbs add -ed (trusted, vetoed); if the final consonant is doubled, it is stated in the dictionary, thus: glut v.t. (-tt-), revel v.i. & t. (-ll-).

6. Participle of verbs. All verbs add -ing (fishing), -e wds dropping the -e (dancing); monosyllables double a final single consonant (except x) if preceded by a single vowel (grabbing).

7. Archaic 2nd and 3rd singular of verbs. The forms in -(e)st and -(e)th, being archaic, need only be mentioned, without rules; -(e)st is 2nd sing. present and past, -(e)th is 3rd sing. present; examples are playest, dost, hear'st, madest, wouldst, saith, goeth.

* = (orig. or chiefly) U.S.
|| = not U.S.

NOTE. The addition of etc. to the completion of an abbreviation means that it may be used not only for the exact form given, but for connected words or phrases; e.g. bot./any etc. means botany, botanical, botanically, in botany; adv./erb etc. means adverb, adverbial, adverbially; transl./ation etc. means translated as well as translation. Abbreviations given in the list with initial capital have always the capital in use; but those given with initial small letter have either form according to circumstances.

A, letter (pl. As, A's, Aes). (Mus.) note, & the corresponding scale. (In argument) first imaginary person or case. (Alg.) first known quantity. (Naut.) A1 (ā wŭn), first-class ship in Lloyd's register; excellent, best, (colloq.; A1 POPULATION). (Naut.) Æ, third-class ship at Lloyd's.

a[1], an, (a, an; emphatic, ā, ăn), adj. (sometimes called indefinite article. Before all consonants except silent h, use a; a history, a historian, though some still write an before h in unaccented syllable, but an hour: before all vowels except eu, ū, use an; an ūlcer, but a ūnit, a eulogy; also a one. Placed after many, such, what, or any adj. preceded by how, so, as, too. Used with apparent plurals of number, a dozen men = a dozen of men; also with pl. adjj. few, good many, great many). (Unemphatic substitute for) one, some, any; one like (a Daniel); (after all of, many of, etc.) the same (all of a size); (distrib.) each (£40 a year, where a is orig. = foll.). [weakening of OE ān ONE] a[2], prep. On, to, towards, into, in. Mostly now written as pref., or oftener omitted than expressed, or confused w. A[1]. On: abed, afoot. To: ashore. Towards: aback, afar, aside. Into: apart, asunder. In: now-a-days, twice a day; w. vbl nouns, passively, a-building, actively, was (a-) fighting, and esp. w. go, set, as he went a begging, they set the bells a ringing. [weakening of OE prep. an, ON]

ate. See EAT.

-ate[1], suf. forming nn. orig. f. L -atus (gen. -ūs) in nouns of state from p.p. stems or nouns, or f. L -atus, -ata, -atum (see -ATE[2]), which in OF became -é (-ée), but in learned words, & later in many reformed words, -at, as prélat, primat, magistrat. E having adopted -at afterwards added -e to mark quantity of a, & later words took -ate at once. E also formed wds either directly on L as curate or by anal. as aldermanate. Most nn. in -ate are (1) nn. of office, as marquisate, syndicate, (2) participial nn., as legate one deputed, precipitate what is thrown down, (3) chem. terms denoting salts formed by action of an acid on a base, as nitrate, sulphate.

-ate[2], suf. forming adjj. (1) chiefly (thr. F) f. L p.p. in -atus (1st conjug.), which (cf. prec.) became successively -at, -ate, as desolate. Many such adjj. formed causative vbs (see foll.) & served as p.p. to them, till later the native -ed was added; -ated also appears without intervention of vb, as annulated, and as alternative form to -ate; (2) L participial adjj. were also formed on nn., as caudatus tailed, & on adjj. as candidatus white-robed; these were largely adopted in E, & others formed on anal. Many nouns in -ATE[1] were orig. adjj. In cordate, ovate, etc., the sense is 'shaped like'.

-ate[3], suf. forming vbs to correspond to adjj. in -ATE[2], and subsequently to repr. the corresp. L vb in -are (p.p. -atus), as separate, aggravate. As these vbs usu. have F equivalents in -er, -ate was further used to form vbs on model of F vbs in -er, as isolate (F isoler). -ate was also used to form vbs that L might have formed, but did not, on nouns, as felicitate (L felicitas -atis), & even vbs on nouns not of L orig., as camphorate.

atelier (see Ap.), n. Workshop, studio. [F]

-ā′tion, suf. (=-at- of L 1st conj. p.p. stems + -ION) forming abstract nouns on L 1st conj. vbs as agitation, Gk vbs in -izŏ (L -izare -IZE) as organization, F vbs in -er as filtration, & rarely E vbs as starvation, the last on false anal. f. vexation etc., formed on L vexare, not on E vex. The great preponderance of -ation over -ition etc. is due to F adoption of the -er vb (=L 1st conj.) as the type for all new vbs. Wds taken f. OF have often -ison, -SON, (orison, reason) instead of -ation. Most wds have vb in -ate corresp. (creation), many a shortened vb f. L 1st conj. (plantation, plant, not plantate; modify, not modificate), a few no vb (duration). Meanings: (1) vbl action; (2) instance of this; (3) resulting state; (4) concrete result (plantation).

-ative, adj. suf. =-at- + -IVE (cf. -ATIC); most exx. are f. vbs in -ate as demonstrative, or L 1st conj. as affirmative, some f. nouns in -TY (L st. -tat-) as authoritative, & some on E vbs as talkative.
