4. an electron tube.
5. (a) an underground tunnel for an electric railroad; (b) [Colloq.] the electric railroad itself.
6. a telescope. [Archaic.]
7. in botany, the lower, united part of a gamopetalous corolla or a gamosepalous calyx.
8. in electricity, a tubular space bounded by lines of force or induction: also tube of force, tube of induction.
bronchial tubes; see under bronchial.
capillary tubes; see under capillary.
electron tube; see under electron.
Eustachian tube; see under Eustachian.
Malpighian tube; see under Malpighian.
pneumatic tube; a tube that uses compressed air for carrying packets, letters, etc. in a box fitted to the tube and containing a compartment for receiving whatever is to be carried.
safety tube; in anatomy, a small part of the upper termination of the Eustachian tube: it is partly open, thus allowing a recoil of air from the tympanum when the membrane of the drum is driven inward suddenly; pressure in the tympanic cavity is thus equalized from the pharynx.
screen-grid tube; a vacuum tube using a fine wire mesh grid or screen to reduce to a minimum the effective capacity between the electrodes.
vacuum tube; see following vacuum.
tūbe, v.t.; tubed, pt., pp.; tubing, ppr. 1. to furnish with, place in, or pass through a tube or tubes.
2. to make tubular.
tūbe ċor′ăl, same as tubipore.
tūbe foot, a locomotive process or ambulacral sucker of an echinoderm.
tūbe′fȯrm, a. same as tubiform.
tūbe′-nōṣed (nōzd), a. having tubiform nostrils, as certain birds.
tūbe plāte, same as tube sheet.
tū′bēr, n. [L., lit., a swelling or knob on plants.]
1. in botany, a fleshy, rounded part of a subterranean stem, as the potato or arrowroot: new plants develop from the buds, or eyes, that grow in the axils of the minute scale leaves of a tuber.
2. [T–] a genus of fungi including the truffles.
3. in anatomy, a tubercle.
Tū·bē·rā′cē·ae, n.pl. [LL., from L. tuber, a tuber, and -aceæ.] a family of fungi analogous among the sporidiferous kind with the hypogeal fungi among the sporiferous. All the genera, with a single exception, are strictly subterranean. The order includes the genus Tuber, the common truffles, and Rhizopogon, the white truffles.
tū·bē·rā′ceous, a. pertaining or belonging to the order Tuberaceæ.
tū′bēr·ċle (-kl), n. [Fr., from L. tuberculum, double dim. of tuber, a swelling.]
1. a nodule or small prominence, especially a solid elevation of the skin larger in size than a papula.
2. in anatomy, a rough, rounded prominence on a bone.
3. any abnormal hard nodule; especially, the typical nodular lesion produced by the bacillus of tuberculosis, and consisting of a translucent mass, gray in color, made up of small spheric cells, which contain giant cells, and are surrounded by a layer of spindle-shaped connective tissue cells known as epithelioid cells.
4. in botany, a little knob or rough point on the fronds of some lichens; also, a small tuber or tuberlike root growth.
5. in the Echinidæ, a small eminence of the body wall which is immediately connected with the spines.
Darwinian tubercle; see under Darwinian.
tū′bēr·ċle bȧ·cil′lus, the bacillus causing tuberculosis.
tū′bēr·ċled (-kld), a. having tubercles; affected with tubercles; as, a tubercled lung.
tū·bēr′ċū·lăr, a. [L. tuberculum, tubercle.]
1. shaped like a tubercle; having the form and appearance of a tubercle.
2. full of tubercles; tuberculate.
3. in medicine, affected with or having tuberculosis; tuberculous.
tū·bēr′ċū·lăr, n. a tuberculous person.
Tū·bēr″ċū·lā·ri·ā′cē·ae, n.pl. [L. tuberculum, a tubercle, and -aceæ.] a large family of fungi, having the conidia borne laterally or terminally on hyphae. Growths of this class cause many plant diseases.
tū·bēr″ċū·lăr·ī·zā′tion, n. infection with tuberculosis.
tū·bēr′ċū·lăr·īze, v.t.; tubercularized, pt., pp.; tubercularizing, ppr. to infect with tuberculosis.
tū·bēr′ċū·lāte, a. [LL. tuberculatus, from L. tuberculum, a tubercle.]
1. tubercular.
2. tuberculated.
tū·bēr′ċū·lā·ted, a. characterized by, shaped like, or having a tubercle or tubercles.
tū·bēr·ċū·lā′tion, n. the development of tubercles.
tū·bēr′ċū·lin, n. [tuberculum and -in.] a sterile liquid preparation made from the growth products or extracts of a tubercle bacillus culture and injected into the skin as a test for the presence of tuberculosis.
tū·bēr′ċū·line, n. tuberculin.
tū·bēr″ċū·li·zā′tion, n. the formation of tubercles; the condition of becoming tubercled.
tū·bēr′ċū·lō-, [from L. tuberculum.] a combining form meaning (a) tuberculous; (b) tubercle bacillus; (c) tuberculosis: also, before a vowel, tubercul-.
tū·bēr″ċū·lō·cī′din, n. an albumose derived from tuberculin by treating it with platinum chloride. It is used like tuberculin but is said to be free from the impurities of the latter.
tū·bēr′ċū·loid, a. [tuberculum and -oid.] like a tubercle.
tū·bēr′ċū·lōse, a. tubercular.
tū·bēr′ċū·lōsed (-lōst), a. having tuberculosis.
tū·bēr·ċū·lō′sis, n. [L. tuberculum, tubercle.] an infectious disease caused by the tubercle bacillus and characterized by the formation of tubercles in various tissues of the body; especially, tuberculosis of the lungs; pulmonary phthisis; consumption. To a lesser extent the spleen, kidneys, lymph glands, liver, intestines, and brain may become involved. The disease is attended by symptoms due to the destruction it produces and varying with the location of the infection. When not strictly localized, the general symptoms of septic infection are present, such as hectic fever, increasing emaciation, and night-sweats.
tū·bēr′ċū·lous, a. 1. tubercular.
2. having tuberculosis.
tū·bēr′ċū·lum, n. [L., tubercle.] a tubercle.
tū·bēr·if′ēr·ous, a. [L. tuber, tuberis, a tuber, and -ferous.] producing or bearing tubers.
tū′bēr·in, n. in physiological chemistry, a proteide typical of the potato tuber.
tū′bēr·ŏn, n. a shark. [Obs.]
tūbe·rōṣe, n. [an alteration of LL. tuberosa, from L. tuberosus, knobby.] a plant with a tuberous root, short, grasslike leaves, and a liliaceous flower, the Polianthes tuberosa.

TUBEROSE (Polianthes tuberosa) tū′bēr·ōse, a. tuberous.

tū·bēr·os′i·ty, n.; pl. tū·bēr·os′i·ties, 1. the state or quality of being tuberous.
2. a swelling or prominence; specifically, in anatomy, a projection or elevation on a bone, having a rough uneven surface, to which muscles and ligaments are attached.
tū′bēr·ous, a. [L. tuberosus.]
1. covered with knobby or wartlike lumps or prominences; knobbed.
2. in botany, consisting of or containing tubers; also, resembling a tuber.
tū′bēr·ous·ness, n. the quality of being tuberous; tuberosity.

tū'bĕr·ous rọọt, a tuberlike root without buds or scale leaves, as of the dahlia.
tūbe sheet, an iron plate or sheet in which are fastened the ends of boiler tubes.
tūbe spin'nĕr, a tube weaver.
tūbe wēav'ĕr, any spider of the Tubicolæ or Tubitelæ.
tūbe well, an apparatus consisting of a cylindrical iron tube, which is driven into the earth to a stratum containing water, and which serves as a temporary well.
tūbe'wŏrm, n. a tube-constructing annelid.
tub'fish, n.; pl. tub'fish, tub'fish·eṣ, the sapphirine gurnard, Trigla hirundo.
tub'fụl, n. a quantity sufficient to fill a tub; as much as a tub will hold.
tū'bi-, [from L. tubus, tube.] a combining form meaning of or pertaining to a tube.
Tū·biç'ō·lae, n.pl. [tubi-, and L. colere, to inhabit.]
1. a family of spiders that enclose themselves in tubular webs: it includes two genera, Dysdera and Segestria.
2. an order of annelids comprising those which live in calcareous tubes composed of secretions from the animal itself, as the Serpulidæ; in tubes composed of sand and fragments of shell connected by a glutinous secretion, as the Terebellidæ; in tubes composed of granules of sand and mud, as the Sabellidæ; or in membranous tubes, as the families which include the less known genera Pectinaria, Phoronis, etc.
tū·biç'ō·lăr, a. same as tubicolous.
tū·biç'ō·lous, a. in zoology, inhabiting, secreting, or having a tube.
tū'bi·çorn, n. [tubi-, and L. cornu, horn.] one of a family of hollow-horned ruminants; an animal having horns composed of a horny axis enclosed in a horny sheath.
tū·bi·çor'nous, a. hollow-horned.
tū·bi·fā'cient (-shent), a. [tubi-, and L. faciens (-entis), ppr. of facere, to make.] tube-building, as an annelid.
tū·bi·flō'rous, a. [tubi-, and L. flos, floris, a flower.] bearing tubular flowers.
tū'bi·fọrm, a. having the form of a tube; tubular.
tū·bi·liñ'gŭal, a. having a cylindrical or tubular tongue.
Tū·bi·nā'rēṣ, n.pl. [tubi-, and L. nares, nostrils.] a large family of sea birds, characterized by tubular nostrils, including the petrels, albatrosses, etc.
tū·bi·năr'i·ăl, a. 1. of or belonging to the Tubinares.
2. having tubular nostrils.
tū·bi·nā'rine, a. tubinarial.
tūb'ing, n. 1. the process of making tubes.
2. a series or system of tubes.
3. tubes collectively.
4. material in the form of a tube.
5. a piece of a tube.
Tü'bing·en sçhọọl, a school of theology, founded at Tübingen, Germany, in 1826, which attempted to apply a Hegelian philosophy of history to an explanation of the evolution of Christianity.
tū·bip'ă·rous, a. [tubi-, and L. parere, to produce.] forming tubular structures; as, a tubiparous gland.
Tū·bip'ō·rà, n. [tubi-, and L. porus, a pore.] the organ-pipe corals, a genus of actinozoans, or corals, order Alcyonaria, including those which are provided with internal ovaries and eight pinnated tentacula, contained in elongated cylindrical cells, which are calcareous or coriaceous and attached by the base.
tū'bi·pōre, n. [tubi-, and L. porus, pore.] one of a genus of coral zoophytes; an organ-pipe coral.
tub'măn, n.; pl. tub'men, in English law, formerly, a barrister who had a preaudience in the Exchequer division of the High Court: he stood beside the tub used as a measure in excise cases.

[ME. un-, on-; AS. un-, on-, an-, ond-, and-, back.] a prefix meaning back and generally added to verbs to express a reversal of the action denoted by the verb, as in *un*arm, *un*do, *un*lock, or to nouns to form verbs indicating a release from the state expressed by the noun, as in *un*bosom. Sometimes it has a mere intensive force, as in *un*loosen.

vī'tà·min, n. [L. vita, life, and amine.] any of a number of unrelated, complex organic substances found variously in most foods and essential, in small amounts, for the normal functioning of the body.
vitamin A, a fat-soluble aliphatic alcohol, $C_{20}H_{29}OH$, found in fish-liver oil, egg yolk, butter, etc., and (as carotene) in carrots and other vegetables: a deficiency of this vitamin results in night blindness and degeneration of epithelial tissue: it occurs in two forms, vitamin A_1 and vitamin A_2.
vitamin B (complex), a group of unrelated water-soluble substances including: (a) vitamin B_1 (see thiamine); (b) vitamin B_2 (see riboflavin); (c) vitamin B_6 (see pyridoxine); (d) nicotinic acid; (e) pantothenic acid; (f) biotin: also called vitamin H; (g) inositol; (h) para-aminobenzoic acid; (i) choline; (j) folic acid.
vitamin C, an organic compound, $C_6H_8O_6$, occurring in citrus fruits, tomatoes, and various vegetables: a deficiency of this vitamin tends to produce scurvy: also called ascorbic acid, cevitamic acid.
vitamin D, any of several related vitamins occurring in fish-liver oils, milk, egg yolks etc.: a deficiency of this vitamin tends to produce rickets; specifically, (a) vitamin D_1, a mixture of calciferol with another sterol prepared by the ultraviolet irradiation of ergosterol; (b) vitamin D_2 (see calciferol); (c) vitamin D_3, a substance similar to vitamin D_2, found chiefly in fish-liver oils.
vitamin E, a substance consisting of a mixture of tocopherols, believed to restore fertility to sterile mammals: formerly called vitamin X: see tocopherol.
vitamin G, vitamin B_2 (see riboflavin). vitamin H, see biotin.
vitamin K, a vitamin occurring in certain green vegetables, fish meal, hempseed, etc. and used to promote blood clotting, and thus prevent hemorrhage, by aiding in the synthesis of prothrombin by the liver: the two varieties are vitamin K_1, found chiefly in alfalfa leaves, and vitamin K_2, found chiefly in fish meal.
vitamin P, a mixture of flavones occurring especially in citrus juice and paprika: a deficiency of this vitamin results in the increased permeability of capillary walls and, hence, greater susceptibility to hemorrhage: also called citrin.
vitamin X, a former name for vitamin E.

vī'tà·mine, n. a vitamin. [Rare.]

vī·tà·min'iç, a. of vitamins.

vī′tȧ·sc̣ope, n. [L. vita, life, and Gr. skopein, to view.] an early type of motion-picture projector.

vol·tā′iç, a. [from Alessandro Volta and -ic.]
1. (a) designating or of electricity produced by chemical action; (b) used in producing electricity by chemical action.
2. designating or of electricity that moves in a current, as distinguished from static electricity.
3. [V–] of or relating to Alessandro Volta. voltaic battery; in electricity, (a) a battery composed of voltaic cells; (b) a voltaic cell.
voltaic cell; in electricity, a device for producing an electric current by the action of two plates of different metals in an electrolyte.
voltaic couple; two dissimilar metallic plates acting in an electrolyte to produce an electric current.
voltaic pile; a column formed by successive pairs of dissimilar metallic disks, as silver and zinc, with moistened cloth between every two contiguous pairs; by extension, any battery.

Vol·tāir′ē·ăn, a. and n. Voltairian.

Vol·tāir′i·ăn, a. of, like, or characteristic of Voltaire.

Vol·tāir′i·ăn, n. an advocate of the principles of Voltaire.

Vol·tāir′işm, n. the principles or philosophy of Voltaire.

vol′tà·işm, n. voltaic electricity or the branch of electrical science dealing with this.

vol′tà·īte, n. [after A. Volta, It. physicist.] a resinous, dull-green to brown or black isometric mineral, occurring in octahedrons, cubes, and other forms. It is a hydrous sulfate of iron.

vol·tam′e·tēr, n. an instrument for measuring the amount of electricity passing through a conductor by the amount of electrolysis produced.

vol·tà·met′riç, a. relating to or involving the use of the voltameter.

vōlt′am′mē·tēr, n. an instrument for measuring voltage and amperage; a wattmeter.

vōlt′-am′pęre, n. a unit of electrical measurement equal to the product of one volt and one ampere: in a direct current it is equal to one watt.

vol′tà·plast, n. [volta, and Gr. plastos, formed, molded.] a kind of voltaic battery used in electrotyping.

vol′tà·tȳpe, n. an electrotype. [Rare.]

vōlt box, in electricity, (a) a divided wire placed across the terminals of a voltmeter to be tested; (b) a resistance divided into such sections that any suitable fractional drop in potential in the entire resistance can be readily measured by a potentiometer.

vōlt′-çöu·lomb′ (-lom′) n. a joule.

vōlte′-făce′ (or vol′te-fäs), n. [Fr.] 1. a complete reversal of opinion, attitude, etc.
A volte-face worthy of a politician.
—W. Besant.
2. a turn so as to face the opposite way; about-face.

vōl′ti, v. imper. [It., from voltare, to turn.] in music, turn (the page): a direction to the performer.

vọl·ti·gēur′ (-zhēr′), n. [Fr., from voltiger, to vault.]

2. formerly, in the French army, a member of a select company of skirmishers attached to every regiment of French infantry.

vōlt′mē″tēr, n. any instrument used to measure an electromotive force, or a difference in electrical potential, by volts.

voltz′ine, n. [named after P. L. Voltz, Fr. mining engineer.] a red, yellowish, or brownish, opaque or subtranslucent oxysulfide of zinc. It occurs in the form of small hemispheres, divisible into thin layers.

voltz'īte, n. same as voltzine.
vō·lū'bi·lāte, a. [L. volubilis, turning, spinning.] in botany, voluble. [Obs.]
vol'ū·bile, a. in botany, voluble. [Obs.]
vol·ū·bil'i·ty, n. voluble state or character.
vol'ū·ble, a. [Fr., from L. volubilis, easily turned about, from volutus, pp. of volvere, to roll, turn about or round.]
1. formed so as to roll with ease on an axis; rotating; as, voluble particles of matter. [Rare.]
2. speaking with ease or fluency; fluent; talkative; glib; garrulous.
3. in botany, twisting: applied to stems which twist or twine round other bodies, as that of the hop.
4. unstable; inconstant; changeable. [Rare.]
vol'ū·ble·ness, n. the quality of being voluble.
vol'ū·bly, adv. in a voluble manner; as, he talked volubly at times.
vol'ū·çrīne, a. [from L. volucris, a bird.] pertaining to or resembling birds.
vol'ūme, n. [Fr., from L. volumen, a roll, scroll, hence a book written on a parchment, roll, from volutus, pp. of volvere, to roll.]
1. originally, a roll of parchment, a scroll, etc.
2. (a) a collection of written, typewritten, or printed sheets bound together; a book; (b) one of the books in a set or a complete work.
3. the amount of space occupied in three dimensions; cubic contents or cubic magnitude.
4. a quantity, bulk, mass, or amount.
5. a large quantity; bulk, amount, etc.
6. the quantity, strength, or loudness of sound.
7. in music, fullness of tone.
specific volume; the result obtained by dividing the molecular weight of a compound body by the specific gravity.
to speak or tell volumes; to be very expressive or significant.
Syn.—size, body, bulk, dimensions, book, work, tome, capacity, magnitude, compass, quantity.
vol'ūmed, a. 1. having the form of a volume or roll; of a rounded form; as, volumed mist.
2. possessing volume; massive; large.
3. consisting of (a specified kind or number of) volumes: used in hyphenated compounds; as, a three-volumed book.
vol"ū·mē·nom'e·tēr, n. [L. volumen (-inis), volume, and meter.] an instrument for measuring the volume of a solid body by the quantity of a liquid or of air which it displaces, and, hence, also for determining its specific gravity.
vol"ū·mē·nom'e·try, n. the act, skill, or practice of using a volumenometer.
vō·lū'mē·sçōpe, n. [L. volumen (-inis), volume, and Gr. skopein, to view.] a glass tube with a graduated scale for showing the changes of volume of various compounds resulting from chemical action.
vō·lū'mē·tēr, n. [L. volumen, volume, and -meter.] an instrument used to determine the volumes of gases or liquids directly, and of solids by the amount of liquid they displace.
vol·ū·met'riç, vol·ū·met'ri·çăl, a. relating to the measurement of volumes.
volumetric analysis; the quantitative analysis of a chemical solution by determining the amount of reagent necessary to effect a reaction in a known volume of the solution.
vol·ū·met'ri·çăl·ly, adv. according to volumetric analysis.
vō·lū'me·try, n. 1. the measurement of volumes.
2. volumetric analysis.
vō·lū·mi·năl, a. pertaining to volume.
vō·lū·mi·nos'i·ty, n. the state or quality of being voluminous; prolixity; copiousness.
vō·lū'mi·nous, a. [LL. voluminosus, full of rolls or folds, from volumen (-inis), roll, volume.]
1. consisting of many coils, windings, or folds. [Rare or Archaic.]
2. writing, producing, consisting of, or forming such a mass of material as to fill volumes.
3. of great magnitude; bulky; spreading; wide.
vō·lū'mi·nous·ly, adv. in a voluminous manner; copiously.
vō·lū'mi·nous·ness, n. the state of being voluminous. vol'ū·mist, n. one who writes a volume; an author. [Rare.]
vol'un·tăr·i·ly, adv. in a voluntary manner; of one's own free will.
vol'un·tăr·i·ness, n. the quality or state of being voluntary.
vol'un·tà·rişm, n. in philosophy, any theory which holds that reality is ultimately of the nature of will or that the will is the primary factor in experience.
vol"un·tà·ris'tiç, a. of, having the nature of, or adhering to voluntarism.
vol'un·tăr·y, a. [Fr. volontaire; L. voluntarius, voluntary, from voluntas, free will, from voluns, var. of volens (-entis), ppr. of velle, to be willing, to will.]
1. brought about by one's own free choice; given or done of one's own free will; freely chosen or undertaken.
2. acting in a specified capacity willingly or of one's own accord.
3. intentional; not accidental; as, voluntary manslaughter.
4. controlled by the will; as, voluntary muscles.

vō'mēr, n. [L., a plowshare.] in anatomy, a thin, flat bone forming part of the nasal septum separating the nasal passages.
vō'mēr·ine, a. in anatomy, of or relating to the vomer.
vom'i·çà, n. [L., ulcer, abscess, from vomere, to vomit.]
1. a pus-filled cavity in some organ, especially the lungs.
2. the pus in such a cavity.
3. the coughing up of such pus in profuse quantities.
vom'i·çēne, n. same as brucine.
vom'iç nut, same as nux vomica.
vom'it, n. [L. vomitus, a discharging, vomiting, from vomitus, pp. of vomere, to discharge, vomit.]
1. the act or process of ejecting the contents of the stomach through the mouth.
2. matter ejected in this way.
3. a drug which causes vomiting; an emetic.
vom'it, v.i.; vomited, pt., pp.; vomiting, ppr. 1. to eject the contents of the stomach through the mouth; to throw up.
2. to be thrown up or out with force or violence; to rush out.
vom'it, v.t. 1. to throw up or eject from the stomach; to discharge from the stomach through the mouth: often followed by up or out.
The fish vomited out Jonah upon the dry land. —Jonah ii. 10.

2. to discharge or throw out with force or in copious quantities; to belch forth; to disgorge; as, volcanoes vomit flames, ashes, stones, and liquid lava.

vom'it·ing, n. 1. the act of ejecting the contents of the stomach through the mouth; as, vomiting is essentially an inverted action of the stomach and esophagus.
2. the act of throwing out substances with violence from a deep hollow, as a volcano, etc.

vom'it·ing, a. causing to vomit.

vom'it·ing cen'tẽr, the nerve center in the medulla oblongata, the stimulation of which causes vomiting.

vom'it·ing gas, same as chloropicrin.

vō·mi'tion, n. the act or power of vomiting.

vom'i·tive, a. [Fr. vomitif.] of or causing vomiting; emetic.

vom'i·tive, n. an emetic.

vom'it nut, same as nux vomica.

vom'i·tō, n. [Sp.] 1. yellow fever.
2. the black vomit of yellow fever.

vom'i·tō·ry, a. [L. vomitorius.] vomitive; emetic.

vom'i·tō·ry, n.; pl. vom'i·tō·ries, [L. vomitorius.]
1. an emetic.
2. any opening, funnel, etc. through which matter is to be discharged.
3. in Roman amphitheaters, etc., any of the entrances leading to the tiers of seats.

vom"i·tū·ri'tion, n. [as if from a Latin verb vomiturire, to desire to vomit.] repeated but ineffectual attempts to vomit; retching; also, the vomiting of but little matter or vomiting with little effort.

vō·rā'cious, a. [L. vorax, voracis, greedy to devour, from vorare, to devour.]
1. greedy in eating; devouring or eager to devour large quantities of food; ravenous; gluttonous.
2. very greedy or eager in some desire or pursuit; insatiable; as, a voracious reader.

vō·rā'cious·ly, adv. in a voracious manner; ravenously.

vō·rā'cious·ness, n. the quality or state of being voracious; eagerness to devour; rapaciousness; as, the voraciousness of a glutton.

vō·rac'i·ty, n. [Fr. voracité, from L. voracitas (-tatis), hungriness, from vorax, voracis, greedy to devour, voracious.] the quality or state of being voracious; ravenousness; voraciousness.

vō·raġ'i·nous, a. [LL. voraginosus, from L. vorago, chasm, gulf.] full of gulfs; of or pertaining to a gulf or whirlpool; hence, devouring; swallowing. [Rare.]

vō·rā'gō, n. [L.] a gulf; an abyss; as, the voragos of subterranean cellars, wells, and dungeons.

-vō·rous, [from L. vorare, to devour.] a combining form meaning feeding on, eating, as in carnivorous.

Vōr'spiēl (fōr'shpēl), n. [G.] a prelude or overture.

Vōr'stel"lụng (fōr'shtel-), n.; pl. vōr'stel"lụng·en, [G.] in German philosophy, the ability to think in images or pictures; in the philosophy of Kant, any intellectual depiction of a proposition.

vọr'tex, n.; pl. vọr'tex·es, vọr'ti·cēs, [L. vortex, vertex, from vertere, to turn, whirl.]
1. a whirling mass of water forming a vacuum at its center, into which anything caught in the motion is drawn; a whirlpool.
2. a whirl or powerful eddy of air; a whirlwind.
3. any activity, situation, or state of affairs that resembles a whirl or eddy in its rush, absorbing effect, irresistible and catastrophic power, etc.
4. in Cartesian philosophy, a collection of particles of matter forming an ether or fluid endowed with a rapid rotary motion around an axis. By means of these vortices, Descartes attempted to account for the formation of the universe.
5. [V–] in zoology, a genus typical of the Vorticidæ, a family of turbellarians.
vortex of the heart; a whorled arrangement of muscular fibers in the heart.

vọr'tex at'ŏm, in chemistry, elementary matter in constant vortical motion arranged in hypothetical rings.

vọr'tex fil'à·ment, in physics, the fluid in a hypothetical tube represented by vortex lines drawn through an infinitely small closed curve in a rotating liquid.

vọr'tex ring, in physics, a vortical molecular filament or column returning into itself so as to form a ring composed of a number of small rotating circles placed side by side, like beads on a string.

vọr'tex sheet, in physics, an imaginary layer of fluid of infinite thinness on the surface of a series of vortex filaments rotating side by side.

vọr'tex tūbe, in physics, an imaginary tubular surface formed by drawing vortex lines through all points of a closed curve.

vọr'tex wheel (hwēl), a kind of water turbine.

vọr'ti·çăl, a. 1. of, characteristic of, or like a vortex.
2. moving in a vortex; whirling.

vọr'ti·çăl·ly, adv. in a vortical manner.

vọr'ti·cel, n. a vorticella.

Vọr·ti·cel'là, n. [Mod. L., dim. of L. vortex (-icis), a whirl, eddy.]
1. a genus of one-celled animals living in water, with a bell-shaped body on a thin stem by which they attach themselves to other objects.
2. [v–] pl. vọr·ti·cel'lae, any animal of this genus.

Vọr·ti·cel'li·dae, n.pl. a family of infusorian animalcules having for its type the genus Vorticella.

vọr'ti·çōse, a. [L. vortex (-icis), a vortex.] whirling; vortical.

vọr·tiç'ū·lăr, a. vorticose.

vọr·tiġ'i·nous, a. [L. vertiginosus, from vertigo (-inis) a whirling round, giddiness.]
1. whirling: said of motion.
2. moving in or like a vortex.

vōt'à·ble, a. that can be submitted to a vote; subject to a vote: also spelled voteable.

vō'tà·ress, n. a girl or woman votary: also spelled votress.

vō'tà·rist, n. a votary.

vō'tà·ry, a. [L. votus, pp. of vovere, to vow.]
1. consecrated by a vow or promise.
2. of, or having the nature of, a vow.

vō'tà·ry, n.; pl. vō'tà·ries, 1. a person bound by a vow or promise, especially one bound to religious vows, as a monk or nun.
2. a person devoted to a particular religion or a certain form of religious worship.
3. a devoted or ardent supporter, as of a cause, ideal, etc.
4. a person who is devoted to any game, study, pursuit, etc.

vōte, n. [L. votum, a wish; originally a vow, from volum, neut. of volus, pp. of vovere, to vow.]
1. a decision by one or more persons on a proposal, resolution, bill, etc., or a choice between candidates for office, expressed by written ballot, voice, show of hands, etc.
2. (a) the expression or indication of such a decision or choice; (b) the ticket, ballot, voice, or any other means by which it is expressed.
3. the right to exercise such a decision or choice, as in a meeting, election, etc.; suffrage.

xan·thō′mȧ, n. a disease attended with the formation of yellow neoplastic growths upon the skin, especially that of the eyelids The growths consist of flat patches or nodules, which are slightly raised above the surface, and vary in size from that of a pin's head to that of a bean.

xan·thom′ȧ·tous, a. of or pertaining to xanthoma.

xan·thō·mel′ȧ·nous, a. [xantho-, and Gr. melas, melanos, black.] pertaining to races of men with an olive, brown, or yellow complexion and black hair.

xan′thō·phāne, n. [xantho-, and Gr. phainesthai, to be seen, appear.] a yellow pigment of the retina.

xan′thō·phyll, xan′thō·phyl, n. [xantho- and -phyll.] a yellow crystalline pigment, $C_{40}H_{56}O_2$, found in plants: it is related to carotene and is the basis of the yellow seen in autumn leaves.

xan·thō·prō′tē·iç, a. designating an acid formed when protein is acted upon by hot nitric acid. It is of a yellow color.

xan·thō·prō′tē·in, n. a yellow pigment produced by heating proteins with nitric acid.

xan·thō·prō·tē·in′iç, a. same as xanthoproteic.

xan·thop′sin, n. [xantho-, and Gr. opsis, vision.] visual yellow.

xan·thop·sy·drā′ci·ȧ, n. [xantho-, and Gr. psydrax, a blister.] the occurrence on the skin of small yellow pustules.

xan·thō·rham′nine (-ram′), n. [xantho-, and Gr. rhamnos, buckthorn.] a yellow coloring in the ripe fruit of certain species of Rhamnus, as the Avignon berries.

Xan·thōr·rhī′zȧ (-rī′), n. same as Xanthorrhoea.

Xan·thōr·rhoe′ȧ, n. [xantho-, and Gr. rhein, to flow, from its yellow resinous exudation.] a genus of trees, family Liliaceæ. The species are called grass trees, and are found in Australia. They have thick trunks like those of palms, long wiry grasslike leaves, and long dense flower spikes.

xan·thō′sis, n. [Gr. xanthos, yellow.] in medicine, a yellow discoloration often occurring in cancerous tumors.

xan·thō·spēr′mous, a. [xantho-, and Gr. sperma, seed.] in botany, having yellow seeds.

xan′thous, a. [Gr. xanthos, yellow.] yellow.

Xan·thox·yl′ē·ae, n.pl. same as Rutaceæ.

xan·thox′y·lin, n. 1. a crystallizable compound, $C_{10}H_{12}O_4$, from Xanthoxylum piperitum, or Japanese pepper.

2. a concentration prepared from the bark of Xanthoxylum fraxineum.

Xan·thox′y·lum, n. [xantho-, and Gr. xylon, wood.] a genus of rutaceous plants, the species of which are trees or shrubs, with the petioles, leaves, and branches usually furnished with prickles.

xan·thū′ri·ȧ, n. same as xanthinuria.

X çhrō′mō·sōme (eks), a sex chromosome.

Xe, in chemistry, xenon.

xē′beç (zē′), n. [altered from earlier chebec, from Fr. chébec; Sp. jabeque, xebec, from Turk. sumbekí, a sort of ship.] a small three-masted vessel, formerly much used by corsairs in the Mediterranean: it has several square sails, as well as lateen sails, and an overhanging bow and stern.

xē·nod′ō·çhy (zē-), n. [Gr. xenodochia; xenos, guest, stranger, and dechesthai, to receive.]

1. reception of strangers; hospitality.
2. same as xenodocheum.

xē·nog′ȧ·mous (zē-), a. of or having to do with xenogamy.

xē·nog′ȧ·my, n. [Gr. xenos, strange, and gamos, marriage.] in botany, cross-fertilization.

xen·ō·ġen′e·sis (zen-), n. [Mod. L.; see xeno- and -genesis.]

1. spontaneous generation; abiogenesis.
2. alternation of generations; metagenesis.
3. the supposed production of an individual completely different from either of its parents.

xen″ō·ġē·net′iç, a. of or pertaining to xenogenesis.

xen·ō·ġen′iç, a. xenogenetic.

xē·noġ′ē·nous (zē-), a. caused by a foreign body or originating outside of the organism.

xē·noġ′ē·ny, n. same as xenogenesis.

xen′ō·līte (zen′), n. [from Gr. xenos, stranger, and lithos, stone: so called because unrelated to the stones where it was found.] a variety of fibrolite with a high specific gravity.

xen′ō·lith, n. [zeno- and -lith.] a rock fragment embedded in the mass of another rock.

xen·ō·mā′ni·ȧ, n. [Gr. xenos, strange, and mania, madness, enthusiasm.] a mania for foreign institutions, customs, etc. [Rare.]

Xen′ō·mī (zen′), n.pl. [Gr. xenos, strange, and ōmos, shoulder.] an order of fishes of which the Alaskan blackfish, Dallia pectoralis, is the most important species.

xen·ō·mor′phiç, a. [xeno- and morphic.] having a form not characteristic of its kind, but determined by the pressure of surrounding constituents: said of the granular constituents of crystalline rock.

xē′non (zē′), n. [Gr., neut. of xenos, strange.] a heavy, colorless, inert, gaseous chemical element present in the air in minute quantities; symbols, Xe, X; atomic weight, 131.3; atomic number, 54.

xen·ō·phō′bi·ȧ (zen-), n. [Mod. L.; see xeno- and -phobia.] fear or hatred of strangers or foreigners.

xē·nop·tē·ryġ′i·ăn (zē-), a. pertaining to the Xenopterygii.

xē·nop·tē·ryġ′i·ăn, n. one of the Xenopterygii.

Xē·nop·tē·ryġ′i·ī, n.pl. [Gr. xenos, strange, and pteryx, pterygos, a wing.] a suborder of small, scaleless, soft-rayed fishes inhabiting warm seas.

xen′ō·tīme (zen′-), n. a native phosphate of yttrium, having a yellowish-brown color.

xē·nū′rine (zē-), n. a kabassou.

xē·nū′rine, a. pertaining to Xenurus, a genus of armadillos, the kabassous.

xen′yl (zen′), n. [Gr. xenos, strange, and -yl.] the univalent radical, $C_6H_5C_6H_4$-, of xenylic compounds.

xē·nyl′iç (zē-), a. pertaining to or obtained from certain compounds of diphenyl.

xer′ȧ·fin (zer′), n. [Port. xerafim, from Ar. ashrafī, from sharīf, noble.] a silver coin formerly issued in India by the Portuguese. It was worth about 360 reis. [Obs.]

xē·ran′sis (zē-), n. [Gr. xēros, dry.] a dried-up or desiccated condition.

xē·ran′tiç, a. dried up; desiccated.

xē·rā′şi·ȧ (-zhi-), n. [Gr. xērasia, dryness, from xēros, dry.] in pathology, a disease of the hair, in which it becomes dry and ceases to grow.

xer′es (zer′), n. [Sp.] sherry: so called from the district of Spain, where it is produced.

xe·riff′ (she-rēf′), n. a sherif.

xē′rō- (zē′), [from Gr. xēros, dry.] a combining form meaning dry, as in *xero*phyte: also, before a vowel, xer-.

xē·rō·dēr′mȧ, xē·rō·dēr′mi·ȧ, n. [xero-, and Gr. derma, skin.] same as ichthyosis.

xē·roġ′rȧ·phy, n. [xero-, and -graphy.] a process for copying printed material, pictures, etc., in which the latent image of the original material is transferred by the action of light to an electrically charged surface to which the image attracts oppositely charged dry ink particles, which are then fused in place on the copy paper, reproducing the original image.

xē·rō′mȧ, n. [Gr. xēros, dry.] xerophthalmia.

xē·rom′y·rum, n. [xero-, and Gr. muron, ointment.] a dry ointment.

xē′rō·nāte, n. a salt of xeronic acid.

xē·ron′iç, a. [xero- and citra*conic.*] designating an acid, $C_6H_{12}O_4$, obtained from citraconic acid.

xē·rō·phā′ġi·ȧ, n. the eating of dry food; xerophagy.

xē·roph′ȧ·ġy, n. [xero-, and Gr. phagein, to eat.] the Christian rule of fasting; the act or habit of living on dry food or a meager diet: now observed chiefly in the Orthodox Eastern Church, particularly during Lent.

xē′rō·phil, n. a xerophyte.

xē·roph′i·lous, a. [xero- and -philous.] capable of or adapted to thriving in dry, hot climates, as certain plants or animals.

xē·roph·thal′mi·ȧ, n. [xero-, and Gr. ophthalmia, a disease of the eyes, from ophthalmos, the eye.] a form of conjunctivitis characterized by an abnormally dry and lusterless condition of the eyeball and caused by a deficiency of vitamin A.

xē·roph·thal′my, n. same as xerophthalmia.

xē′rō·phȳte, n. [xero- and -phyte.] a xerophilous plant.

xē·rō·phyt′iç, a. of, or having the nature of, a xerophyte; xerophilous.

xē·rō′sis, n. [Gr., from xēros, dry] abnormal dryness, as of the eye or skin; xeransis.

xē·rō·stō′mi·ȧ, n. [xero-, and Gr. stoma, mouth.] dryness of the mouth from lack of the normal secretion.

xē′rō·tēş, n. [Gr. xērotēs, dryness.] in medicine, a dry habit or disposition of the body.

xē·rot′iç, a. [Gr. xērotēs, dryness, and -ic.] characterized by xerosis; dry.

xē·rō·trip′sis, n. dry friction.

xi (zī, sī, or Gr. ksē), [Gr.] the fourteenth letter of the Greek alphabet, corresponding to English X, x.

-xion, (c)tion: British spelling, as in conne*xion* (connection).

xiph-, xiph′i-, xiph′ō-, (zif′), [from Gr. xiphos, a sword.] combining forms meaning swordlike.

Xiph′i·ȧs, n. [LL., from Gr. xiphos, a sword.]
1. the genus of fishes to which Xyphias gladius, or the common swordfish, belongs.
2. in astronomy, Dorado, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.
3. [x–] a sword-shaped comet. [Obs.]

xiph′i·oid, a. pertaining to the swordfish family.

xiph·i·plas′trăl, a. pertaining to the xiphiplastron.

xiph·i·plas′tron, n.; pl. xiph·i·plas′trȧ, the fourth lateral plate in the plastron of a turtle.

xiph·i·stĕr′năl, a. pertaining to the xiphisternum.

xiph·i·stĕr′num, n.; pl. xiph·i·stĕr′nȧ, [xiphi-, and Gr. sternon, a breastbone.]
1. in comparative anatomy, the inferior or posterior segment of the sternum; in man, the xiphoid process.
2. the xiphiplastron.

Xiph·i·sū′rȧ, Xiph·i·ū′rȧ, n.pl. same as Xiphosura.

xiph·i·sū′răn, a. same as xiphosuran.

xiph·i·sū′răn, n. same as xiphosuran.

Xiph′i·us, n. same as Ziphius.

Xiph′ō·don, n. [xiph-, and Gr. odous, odontos, a tooth.] a genus of fossil, small, two-toed artiodactyls.

xiph·ō·don′tid, n. a fossil mammal of the genus Xiphodon.

xiph·ō·dyn′i·ȧ, n. [xipho-, and Gr. odynē, pain.] pain in the xiphoid process.

xiph′oid, a. [Gr. xiphoeides, sword-shaped, from xiphos, sword, and eidos, a form.]
1. shaped like or resembling a sword; ensiform.
2. designating or of a cartilaginous process at the lower end of the sternum, or breastbone. xiphoid cartilage; same as xiphoid process.

xiph′oid, n. the xiphoid process.

xiph·oid′i·ăn, a. xiphoid.

xiph·ō·phyl′lous, a. [xipho-, and Gr. phyllon, a leaf.] in botany, having ensiform leaves.

xiph·ō·stĕr′num, n. same as xiphisternum.

Xiph·ō·sū′rȧ, n.pl. [from Gr. xiphos, a sword, and oura, a tail.] an order of primitive arachnids made up of the king crabs.

xiph·ō·sū′răn, a. designating or of the Xiphosura.

xiph·ō·sū′răn, n. any member of the Xiphosura.

xiph′ō·sūre, n. a xiphosuran.

xiph·ō·sū′rous, a. same as xiphosuran.

Xi·phū′rȧ (zī-), n.pl. same as xiphosura.

xi·phū′rous, a. same as xiphosuran.

Xmas (kris′măs; popularly eks′măs), n. [see X (sense 5)], Christmas.

xō′ȧ·non (zō′), n.; pl. xō′ȧ·nȧ, [Gr., an image of wood, statue, from xeein, to carve.] in ancient Greece, a rude primitive statue, usually of wood and resembling the block it was cut from.

X pär′ti·çle, a mesotron.

X rāy, [so called by the discoverer because of its unknown character.]
1. a non-luminous electromagnetic ray or radiation of extremely short wave length, generally less than 2 angstroms, produced by the bombardment of a substance (usually one of the heavy metals) by a stream of electrons moving at great velocity, as in a vacuum tube. X rays are capable of penetrating opaque or solid substances, ionizing gases and tissues through which they pass, and affecting photographic plates and fluorescent screens. They are widely used in medicine for study, diagnosis, and treatment of certain organic disorders, especially of internal structures of the body.
2. a photograph made by means of X rays.

X′-rāy, v.t. to examine, treat, or photograph with X rays.

X′-rāy, a. of, by, or having to do with X rays.

xyl- (zil-), same as xylo-.

xȳ′lan (zī′), n. [from Gr. xylon, wood; and -an.] a yellow, gummy pentosan that is found in woody tissues and yields xylose upon hydrolysis.

xȳ·lan′thrax, n. [xyl-, and Gr. anthrax, coal.] woodcoal; charcoal. [Obs.]

xȳ′lāte, n. a salt or ester of xylic acid.

Xȳ·leb′ō·rus, n. [Gr. xylēboros, eating wood; xylon, wood, and boros, eating.] a genus of small beetles which bore into oak and other timber.

xȳ′lem, n. [G., from Gr. xylon, wood.] the woody tissue of a plant; especially, in higher forms, the part of the vascular bundle, consisting of tracheal tissue, parenchyma, etc., that gives firmness and conducts moisture.

xȳ′lēne, n. [xyl- and -ene.] any of three isomeric, colorless hydrocarbons, $C_6H_4(CH_3)_2$, having the characteristics of benzene and derived from coal tar and wood tar: used as solvents, antiseptics, etc.

xȳ′lē·nōl, n. any one of six white crystalline salts, C_8H_9OH, phenol derivatives of xylene.

xȳ·let′iç, a. designating an acid derived from xylenol by the action of sodium and carbon dioxide.

xȳ′liç, a. pertaining to or obtained from xylene; as, xylic acid.

xȳ′liç ac′id, any of six isomeric crystalline acids, $C_6H_3(CH_3)_2COOH$, carboxyl derivatives of xylene.

xȳ·lid′iç, a. pertaining to or obtained from xylic acid.
xylidic acid; a compound, $C_8H_8O_4$, obtained when xylic acid is oxidized.

xȳ′li·din, n. xylidine.

xȳ′li·dïne, n. [from *xyl*ene and *-id*e and -ine.]
1. any of the isomeric compounds having the formula $C_6H_3(CH_3)_2NH_2$, resembling aniline and derived from xylene.
2. a mixture of these isomeric compounds, used in making certain dyes.

xȳ·lin′id, n. [Gr. xylinos, of wood, wooden, from xylon, wood, and -id.] any moth of the family Xylinidæ, named from the genus Xylina. The larva of Xylina cinerea infests various trees in the United States.

xȳ′lō-, [from Gr. xylon, wood.] a combining form meaning wood, as in *xylo*graph: also, before a vowel, xyl-.

xȳ·lō·bal′sȧ·mum, n. [xylo-, and Gr. balsamon, balsam.] the wood of the oriental balsam tree; also, the balsam obtained from this wood.

xȳ′lō·çärp, n. [xylo-, and Gr. karpos, fruit.] a hard woody fruit.

xȳ·lō·çär′pous, a. [xylo-, and Gr. karpos, fruit.] having fruit which becomes hard or woody.

Xȳ·loç′ō·pȧ, n. [xylo-, and Gr. koptein, to cut.] the carpenter bees; a genus of hymenopterous insects with sharp-pointed mandibles which bore holes in wood.

xȳ′lō·ġen, n. same as xylem.

xȳ′lō·ġrȧph, n. [xylo- and -graph.] an engraving on wood or an impression from such an engraving; a xylographic impression.

xȳ·log′rȧ·phĕr, n. one who engraves on wood.

xȳ·lō·graph′iç, xȳ·lō·graph′i·çăl, a. relating to or made by xylography.

xȳ·log′rȧ·phy, n. 1. wood engraving; the art of cutting figures or designs in wood or of taking printed impressions from such designs.
2. a process of decorative painting on wood.

xȳ′loid (zī′), a. of or like wood; ligneous.

xȳ·loid′ine, n. a white explosive substance, $C_6H_9NO_7$, prepared from starch by the action of nitric acid.

xȳ′lol, xȳ′lōle (zī′), n. same as xylene.

xȳ·lol′ō·ġy (zī-), n. a study of or treatise on the structure of wood.

xȳ·lō′mȧ (zī-), n.; pl. xȳ·lom′ȧ·tȧ, a woody tumor on a tree or plant.

xȳ′lŏn·īte (zī′), n. same as celluloid.

Xȳ·loph′ȧ·ġȧ (zī-) n.pl. [xylo-, and Gr. phagein, to eat.] a group of coleopterous insects identified by their habit of excavating wood. They resemble the weevils, but are distinguished from them by the absence of a proboscis.

xȳ·loph′ȧ·ġăn, n. an insect of the group or genus Xylophaga.

Xȳ·lō·phaġ′i·dae, n.pl. a family of Diptera or flies, having jointed antennae and a long ovipositor. The larva is cylindrical, with a scaly plate on the tail and the head ending in an acute point. They are very destructive to wood.

xȳ·loph′ȧ·gous, a. [xylo-, and Gr. phagein, to eat.] eating or boring into wood, as the larvae of certain insects.

Xȳ·loph′ȧ·gus, n. the typical genus of the family Xylophagidæ.

xȳ·loph′i·lous, a. [xylo-, and Gr. philein, to love.] growing or feeding on wood; also, living in wood.

xȳ′lō·phōne (zī′), n. [xylo-, and Gr. phōnē, voice.]
1. a musical percussion instrument consisting of a series of wooden bars graduated in length so as to sound the notes of the scale when struck with small wooden hammers.
2. an instrument for ascertaining the vibrative properties of different woods.

XYLOPHONE

xȳ·loph′ō·nist (or zī′lō-fō-nist), n. a person who plays the xylophone.

Xȳ·lō′pi·ȧ (zī-), n. from Gr. xylon, wood, and pikros, bitter.] a genus of trees and shrubs of the family Anonaceæ, chiefly native to South America.

xȳ″lō·pȳ·rog′rȧ·phy (zī″), n. [xylo-, Gr. pyr, pyros, fire, and -graphy.] the art or process of producing a picture on wood by burning it with a hot instrument of iron, platinum, or the like: formerly called poker painting.

xȳ·lō·quī′nōne, n. any of three quinone compounds, $C_6H_4O_2$, obtained by oxidizing xylene.

xȳ′lōse, n. [from xylan and -ose.] a colorless, crystalline pentose, $C_5H_{10}O_5$, formed by the hydrolysis of xylan.

xȳ′lō·tīle, n. [xylo-, and Gr. tilos, down.] a hydrous iron magnesium silicate, derived from asbestos.

xȳ·lot′ō·mous, a. [xylo-, and Gr. tomos, from temnein, to cut.] that can bore into or cut wood: said of certain insects.

xȳ·lot′ō·my, n. the preparing of sections of wood for microscopic examination.

xȳ′lyl, n. a univalent radical of xylene.

xȳ′lyl·ēne, n. a bivalent radical of xylene.

Xyr·i·dā′cē·ae (zir-), n.pl. a family of cotyledonous rushlike or sedgelike herbs, found in the tropics of both hemispheres: there are two genera, Xyris and Abolboda.

xyr·i·dā′ceous, a. pertaining or belonging to the Xyridaceæ.

Xȳ′ris (zī′), n. [Gr. xyris, kind of iris, from xyron, razor, from xyein, to scrape.] the typical genus of the Xyridaceæ, sedgelike plants, with narrow, radical leaves, and scapes bearing heads of yellow, fugacious flowers, chiefly found in tropical America, a few occurring in the hotter parts of the Eastern Hemisphere.

xyst (zist), n. [L. xystus; Gr. xystos, from xyein, to scrape, from its smooth and polished floor.] in Greek and Roman architecture, a long, covered portico or open court in which athletes performed their exercises: also xystus, xystos.

xys′tĕr, n. [Gr. xystēr, from xyein, to scrape.] a surgical instrument for scraping bones.

Y, y (wī), n.; pl. Y's, y's, Ys, ys (wīz), 1. the twenty-fifth letter of the English alphabet: from the Greek upsilon.
2. the sound of Y or y.
3. a type or impression for Y or y.
4. a symbol for the twenty-fifth in a sequence or group (or the twenty-fourth if J is omitted, or the twenty-second if V and W are also omitted).

Y, y (wī), a. 1. of Y or y.
2. twenty-fifth (or twenty-fourth if J is omitted, or twenty-second if V and W are also omitted) in a sequence or group.

Y (wī), n. 1. an object shaped like Y, as a branched piece of piping, a forked support for a telescope, etc.
2. a medieval Roman numeral for 150: with a superior bar (Ȳ), 150,000.
3. in chemistry, the symbol for yttrium.

Y (wī), a. shaped like Y.
Y cartilage; a cartilage in the acetabulum, shaped like the letter Y, joining the ilium, ischium, and pubes.
Y connector; in electricity, a connector resembling the letter Y in shape, for joining a conductor to two branch wires.
Y current; in electricity, the current between any wire of a three-phase system and the neutral point.
Y gun; a naval gun for firing depth bombs: it has two arms forming a Y, each holding a charge.
Y level; a form of level used in surveying, mounted in two Y-shaped holders.
Y ligament; in anatomy, the iliofemoral ligament.
Y potential; in electricity, the difference in potential between a terminal and the neutral point of an armature wound in three phases.

y, in mathematics, (a) the second of a set of unknown quantities, x usually being the first; (b) an ordinate.

y- (i), [ME. y-, i-; AS. ge-, perfective prefix; basic sense "together."] an obsolete or archaic prefix formerly used regularly with the past participles of verbs: its use, as a poetic archaism, survived until the end of the sixteenth century, as in *y*clept.

zō'ō·blast, n. an animal cell.

zō·ō·çhem'iç·ăl, a. of or relating to zoochemistry.

zō·ō·çhem'is·try, n. [zoo- and chemistry.] the chemistry of the solids and fluids in the animal body.

zō'ō·çhem·y, n. zoochemistry.

zō"ō·çhlō·rel'lȧ, n.; pl. zō"ō·çhlō·rel'lae, [zoo-, Gr. chlōros, green, and dim. -ella.] one of the granular green particles found in the bodies of certain polyps and infusorians.

zō'ō·cyst, n. [zoo-, and Gr. kystis, the bladder.] a cyst which certain protophytes and protozoans form preparatory to spore formation.

zō·ō·cyst'iç, a. pertaining to a zoocyst.

zō·ō·cyt'i·ăl, a. relating to a zoocytium.

zō·ō·cyt'i·um, n.; pl. zō·ō·cyt'i·ȧ, [zoo-, and Gr. kytos, a cavity.] the gelatinous matrix excreted and inhabited by various colonial Infusoria.

zō·ō·den'dri·ăl, a. pertaining to a zoodendrium.

zō·ō·den'dri·um, n.; pl. zō·ō·den'dri·ȧ, [zoo-, and Gr. dendron, a tree.] the treelike colony stock of certain infusorians.

zō"ō·dȳ·nam'iç, a. relating to zoodynamics.

zō"ō·dȳ·nam'içs, n. animal physiology.

zō·oe'ci·ăl (-shi-), a. pertaining to a zooecium.

zō·oe'ci·um, n.; pl. zō·oe'ci·ȧ, [zoo-, and Gr. oikia, house.] one of the cells or chambers inhabited by the polypide of a polyzoan.

zō"ō·ē·ryth'rin, n. [zoo-, and Gr. erythros, red.] a red pigment found in the feathers of certain birds.

zō·ō·ful'vin, n. [zoo-, and L. fulvus, yellow.] a yellow coloring matter found in the feathers of the touracos.

zō'ō·gȧ·mēte", n. [zoo-, and Gr. gametē, a wife.] a motile gamete; a planogamete.

zō·og'ȧ·mous, a. relating to zoogamy.

zō·og'ȧ·my, n. [zoo-, and Gr. gamos, marriage.] gamogenesis.

zō'ō·ġene, a. [zoo-, and Gr. -gēnēs, producing, due to or proceeding from animal life. [Rare.]

zō·ō·ġen'iç, a. relating to zoogeny.

zō·oġ'e·nous, a. acquired from animals.

zō·oġ'e·ny, zō·ō·ġen'e·sis, n. [zoo-, and Gr. -geneia, production.] the production or generation of animals.

zō"ō·ġē·ogʻrȧ·phēr, n. a student of or expert in zoogeography.

zō·ō·ġē·ō·graph'iç, zō·ō·ġē·ō·graph'i·çăl, a. relating to zoogeography.

zō″ō·ġē·og'rȧ·phy, n. [zoo- and geography.] the science dealing with the geographical distribution of animals; specifically, the study of the relationship between specific animal forms and the regions in which they live.

zō·ō·gloe'ȧ, n. [zoo-, and Gr. gloios, any glutinous substance.] a colony of bacteria embedded in a jellylike matrix as the result of the swelling of the cell walls through the absorption of water.

zō·ō·gloe'iç, a. pertaining to or characterized by the presence of zoogloea.

zō·ō·gloe'oid, a. resembling a zoogloea.

zō″ō·gō·nid'i·um, n.; pl. zō″ō·gō·nid'i·ȧ, a motile or locomotive gonidium.

zō·og'ō·ny, n. same as zoogeny.

zō'ō·gräft, n. a graft of tissue from one animal to another; a zooplastic graft.

zō·og'rȧ·phēr, n. a zoographist.

zō·ō·graph'iç, zō·ō·graph'i·çăl, a. pertaining to zoography.

zō·og'rȧ·phist, n. a student of or expert in zoography.

zō·og'rȧ·phy, n. [zoo- and -graphy.] the branch of zoology concerned with the description of animals, their forms and habits; descriptive zoology.

zō'oid, a. [zo- and -oid.] in biology, having an animal form or characteristics; like an animal.

zō'oid, n. in biology, (a) an independent animal organism produced by other than sexual methods, as by fission, gemination, etc.; (b) any of the distinct individuals or members of a colonial or compound organism, as the coral; (c) any organic body or cell having independent locomotion.

zō·oi'dăl, a. same as zooid.

zo͝oks, interj. same as gadzooks.

zō·ol'ȧ·tēr, n. one who worships animals.

zō·ol'ȧ·trous, a. pertaining to zoolatry.

zō·ol'ȧ·try, n. [zoo-, and Gr. latreia, worship.] the worship of animals.

zō'ō·līte, n. a fossil animal substance.

zō'ō·lith, n. same as zoolite.

zō·ō·lith'iç, a. zoolitic.

zō·ō·lit'iç, a. pertaining to or resembling a zoolite.

zō·ol'ō·ġēr, n. a zoologist. [Rare.]

zō·ō·loġ'iç, a. zoological.

zō″ō·psȳ·çhō·loġ'iç·ăl (-sī-), a. pertaining to zoopsychology.

zō″ō·psȳ·chol'ō·ġy, n. the psychology of animals other than man.

zō·ō·sçop'iç, a. pertaining to zooscopy.

zō·os'çō·py, n. zoopsia.

zō'ō·spērm, n. [zoo-, and Gr. sperma, seed.]
1. same as spermatozoon.
2. a zoospore (sense 1).

zo″ō·spēr·mat'iç, a. of or having to do with a zoosperm.

zō·ō·spēr'mi·um, n.; pl. zō·ō·spēr'mi·ȧ, a spermatozoon.

zō'ō·spō·rangę, n. a zoosporangium.

zō″ō·spō·ran'ġi·ăl, a. of or having to do with a zoosporangium.

zō″ō·spō·ran'ġi·um, n.; pl. zō″ō·spō·ran'ġi·ȧ, a sporangium producing zoospores.

zō'ō·spōre, n. 1. an asexual spore, especially of certain fungi or algae, capable of independent motion usually by means of cilia.
2. a motile flagellate or amoeboid cell or body in certain protozoa.

ZOOSPORES

zō·ō·spō'riç, a. of, pertaining to, or resembling a zoospore.

zō″ō·spō·rif'ēr·ous, a. producing zoospores.

zō·os'pō·rous, a. same as zoosporic.

zō'ō·tax·y, n. [zoo-, and Gr. taxis, arrangement.] zoological classification.

zō·ō·teçh'niç, a. relating to zootechny.

zō·ō·teçh'niçs, n. zootechny.

zō'ō·teçh·ny, n. [zoo-, and Gr. technē, art, skill.] the branch of science dealing with the breeding and domestication of animals.

zō·ō·thē'çiăl (-shăl), a. pertaining to a zoothecium.

zō·ō·thē'ci·um (-shi-), n.; pl. zō·ō·thē'ci·ȧ, [zoo-, and Gr. thēkion, dim. of thēkē, a box, chest.] a zoocytium.

zō'ō·thē·işm, n. the ascribing of divine attributes to animals.

zō'ō·thē·ist, n. a believer in zootheism.

zō″ō·thē·is'tiç, a. pertaining to zootheism.

zō·ō·ther'ȧ·py, n. animal therapeutics.

zō'ō·thōme, n. [zoo-, and Gr. thōmos, a heap.] a zooid colony of a compound polyp.

zō·ot'iç, a. containing the remains of organic life: said of soil, rock, etc. [Rare.]

Zō·ot'ō·çȧ, n.pl. [Gr. zōotokos, viviparous, from zōion, an animal, and tiktein, to bear, produce.] the Viviparа.

zō·ō·tom'iç, zō·ō·tom'iç·ăl, a. of or having to do with zootomy.

zō·ō·tom'iç·ăl·ly, adv. according to zootomy.

zō·ot'ō·mist, n. one who dissects animals.

zō·ot'ō·my, n. [zoo-, and Gr. temnein, to cut.] the dissection or anatomy of animals, especially those other than man.

zō·ō·troph'iç, a. [zoo-, Gr. trophē, food, from trephein, to feed, support, and -ic.] of or relating to the nourishment of animals.

zoot sūit, a former exaggerated style of man's suit with baggy trousers narrowing at the cuffs and a long, draped coat.

zwit'tēr·ī·ŏn (tsvit'), n. same as zwitter ion.

zwit'tēr ī'ŏn, in physical chemistry, an ion carrying both a positive and a negative charge, as in certain protein molecules.

zwit·tēr·ī·on'iç, a. of or having to do with a zwitter ion.

zȳg-, see zygo-.

Zȳ·gad'ē·nus, n. [Gr. zygon, a yoke, and adēn, a gland.] a genus of liliaceous perennial herbs, native to North America and Asia, having linear leaves and greenish-white flowers. The root of Zygadenus venenosus has poisonous properties.

zȳ·ġae'nid, n. [from Gr. zygaina, the hammerheaded shark.] a moth of the family Zygænidæ, as the wood nymph.

Zȳ·ġae'ni·dae, n.pl. a family of moths having pectinate antennae and narrow wings rounded at the tip, found in Europe and America.

zȳ'ġăl, a. [Gr. zygon, a yoke.] shaped like a yoke; in anatomy, designating a fissure that consists of two portions united by a third portion.

zȳ·gan'trum, n.; pl. zȳ·gan'trȧ, [Gr. zygon, a yoke, and antron, a cave.] a hollow in the vertebrae of snakes and some lizards, by which an additional articulation is provided with the next vertebra.

zyg"ap·ō·phys'ē·ăl, zyg"ap·ō·phys'ĭ·ăl, a. pertaining to the zygapophysis.

zyg·ȧ·poph'y·sis, n.; pl. zyg·ȧ·poph'y·sēs, [Gr. zygon, a yoke, and apophysis.] any of the processes of the neural arch of a vertebra by which it articulates with the adjoining vertebrae.

zyġ'i·ŏn, n. [Gr. zygon, a yoke.] a craniometric point at either end of the bregmatic diameter.

Zyg·nē'mȧ, n [zyg-, and Gr. nēma, a thread.] a genus of fresh-water algae typical of the family Zygnemaceæ.

Zyg·nē·mā'cē·ae, n.pl. a family of fresh-water algae, the pond scums, with tubular cells united into jointed threads, which are at first distinct, and then brought into conjunction by the aid of transverse tubelets, which discharge a bright-green coloring matter.

zyg·nē·mā'ceous, a. pertaining to the Zygnemaceæ.

zȳ'gō-, [from Gr. zygon, a yoke.] a combining form meaning yoke, articulation, pair, as in zygodactyl: also, before a vowel, zyg-.

zȳ'gō·brañȼh, n. any member of the Zygobranchiata.

zȳ'gō·brañȼh, a. same as zygobranchiate.

Zȳ'gō·brañ·ȼhi·ā'tȧ, Zȳ·gō·brañ'ȼhi·ȧ, n.pl. [zygo-, and Gr. branchia, gills.] a group of marine gastropods including the keyhole limpets and sea-ears.

zȳ·gō·brañ'ȼhi·āte, a. pertaining to the Zygobranchiata.

zȳ·gō·brañ'ȼhi·āte, n. any of the Zygobranchiata.

zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyl, zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyle, a. 1. of or belonging to the Zygodactylæ, a group of nonpasserine birds including the parrots, woodpeckers, etc.
2. having the toes arranged in two opposed pairs, two in front and two behind; as, a zygodactyl foot.

zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyl, zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyle, n. a zygodactyl bird.

Zȳ·gō·daȼ'ty·lae, n.pl. [zygo-, and Gr. daktylos, a finger or toe.] same as Scansores: also written Zygodactyli.

zȳ"gō·daȼ·tyl'iç, zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyl·ous, a. same as Zygodactyl.

zȳ·gō·daȼ'tyl·işm, n. the quality or condition of being zygodactyl.

zȳ'gō·dont, a. having molar teeth with tubercles that are disposed in pairs.

zȳ·gō'mȧ, n.; pl. zȳ·gō'mȧ·tȧ, [Gr. zygōma, from zygoun, to yoke, from zygon, a yoke.]
1. the zygomatic arch.
2. the zygomatic bone.
3. the zygomatic process.

zȳ·gō·mat'ic, a. [from Mod. L. zygoma, and -ic.]
1. designating or of a bony arch on either side of the face just below the eye, consisting of the zygomatic bone and process.
2. designating either of a pair of quadrangular bones of the zygomatic arch forming the prominence of each cheek.
3. designating a process of the temporal bone forming part of the zygomatic arch.
zygomatic muscles; two muscles of the face that rise from the zygomatic bone and are inserted into the corner of the mouth.
zygomatic suture; the suture joining the zygomatic processes of the temporal and cheekbones.

zȳ·gō·mat'i·gō-, [from Gr. zygon, a yoke.] a combining form used in anatomy to mean connection with or relation to the zygoma.

zȳ·gō·mat"i·ȼō·ąu·riȼ'ū·lăr, a. pertaining to the zygoma and the auricle.

zȳ·gō·mat"i·ȼō·fā'ȼiăl, a. relating to the zygoma and the face.

zȳ·gō·mat"i·ȼō·tem'pō·răl, a. relating to the zygoma and the temporal bone.

zȳ·gō·mat'i·ȼus, n.; pl. zȳ·gō·mat'i·cī, a zygomatic muscle.

zȳ·gō·max·il·lā'rē, n. [L.] a craniometric point at the lower end of the zygomatic suture.

zȳ·gō·max'il·lăr·y, a. pertaining to the lower end of the zygomatic suture.

zȳ·gō·mor'phiç, a. [zygo- and -morphic.] in biology, bilaterally symmetrical; that can be divided in two identical halves by a single plane passing through the axis: said of organisms, organs, or parts.

zȳ·gō·mor'phiśm, n. the quality or condition of being zygomorphic.

zȳ·gō·mor'phous, a. zygomorphic.

zȳ·gō·mȳ'cēte, n. one of the Zygomycetes.

Zȳ"gō·mȳ·cē'tēş, n.pl. [Gr. zygon, a yoke, and mykēs (-ētēs), a mushroom.] a group of fungi including those in which reproduction takes place by conjugation. It includes the Entomophthoreæ, Mucorini, and others.

zȳ"gō·mȳ·cē'tous, a. pertaining to the Zygomyceles.

zȳ'gon, n. [Gr. zygon, a yoke.] in anatomy, the bar or stem connecting the two branches of a zygal fissure.

zȳ'gō·neūre, n. [zygo-, and Gr. neuron, a nerve.] a nerve cell connected with other nerve cells.

Zȳ"gō·phyl·lā'cē·ae, n.pl. [zygo-, and Gr. phyllon, leaf.] the bean caper family of herbs and shrubs.

zȳ"gō·phyl·lā'ceous, a. designating or of a number of herbs and shrubs of the caltrop or bean caper family, having jointed branches, stipulate leaves, and axillary flowers.

Zȳ·gō·phyl'lē·ae, n.pl. same as Zygophyllaceæ.

Zȳ·gō·phyl'lum, n. [zygo-, and Gr. phyllon, a leaf.] the typical genus of the family Zygophyllaceæ; the bean caper of the East is Zygophyllum fabago.

zȳ'gō·phȳte, n. [zygo- and -phyte.] a plant that reproduces by means of zygospores.

zȳ'gōse, a. of or pertaining to zygosis.

zȳ·gō'sis, n. [Mod. L.; Gr. zygosis, a joining, balancing, from zygoun, to yoke, from zygon, a yoke.] in biology, conjugation; union of cells or gametes.

zȳ'gō·spērm, n. [zygo- and sperm.] same as zygospore.

zȳ'gō·sphēne, n. [zygo-, and Gr. sphēn, wedge.] a conical process on the front of the vertebrae of most snakes and some lizards, which fits into the zygantrum of that next in front.

zȳ'gō·spō·rangę", n. same as zygosporangium.

zȳ"gō·spō·ran'ġi·um, n.; pl. zȳ"gō·spō·ran'ġi·ȧ, in botany, a sporangium producing zygospores.

zȳ'gō·spōre, n. [zygo- and spore.] a spore formed by conjugation of two similar gametes.

zȳ'gōte, n. [Gr. zygōtos, yoked, from zygon, a yoke.] any cell formed by the union of two gametes.

zȳ·gō·zō'ō·spōre, n. [zygo- and zoospore.] in botany, a motile zygospore.

zym-, same as zymo-.

zȳ'māse, n. [Fr. zymase.] an enzyme, present in yeast, which causes fermentation by breaking down glucose and some other carbohydrates into alcohol and carbon dioxide or into lactic acid.

zȳme, n. [Gr. zymē, a leaven.] 1. a ferment or enzyme.
2. the principal regarded as the specific cause of a zymotic disease.

zȳ'miç, a. in old chemistry, pertaining to fermentation.

zȳ'min, n. 1. same as zyme.
2. a pancreatic extract prepared for therapeutic use.

zym'īte, n. [Gr. zymē, leaven.] a priest who uses leavened bread in the Eucharist; also, one who receives such a Eucharist.

zȳ'mō-, [from Gr. zymē, a leaven.] a combining form meaning fermentation, as in zymology: also, before a vowel, zym-.

zȳ'mō·ġen, n. [Fr. zymogène.]
1. a substance capable of becoming an enzyme.
2. any bacteria capable of producing an enzyme.

zȳ′mō·ġēne, n. a zymogen.

zȳ·mō·ġen′e·sis, n. [Mod. L.] the process by which a zymogen becomes an enzyme.

zȳ·mō·ġen′iç, zȳ·moġ′ē·nous, a. 1. of or having to do with a zymogen.
2. that can produce a ferment.
zymogenic organism; a yeast or other microorganism which causes fermentation.

zȳ′moid, n. any poison derived from a decaying tissue.

zȳ′moid, a. of, pertaining to, or resembling a zyme, or ferment.

zȳ·mō·loġ′iç, zȳ·mō·loġ′iç·ăl, a. pertaining to or having to do with zymology.

zȳ·mol′ō·ġist, n. a person skilled in zymology.

zȳ·mol′ō·ġy, n. 1. the science dealing with fermentation.
2. pl. zȳ·mol′ō·ġieṣ, a treatise on fermentation.

zȳ·mol′y·sis, n. 1. the fermentative action of enzymes.
2. fermentation or other changes resulting from this.

zȳ·mō·lyt′iç, a. pertaining to or having to do with zymolysis.

zȳ′mōme, n. [Gr. zymōma, a fermented mass, from zymē, leaven.] in old chemistry, that part of gluten which is insoluble in alcohol.

zȳ·mom′e·tẽr, zȳ·mō·sim′e·tẽr, n. an instrument for measuring the degree of fermentation.

zȳ′mō·phȳte, n. [zymo-, and Gr. phyton, a plant.] a bacterium that causes fermentation.

zȳ·mō·plas′tiç, a. ferment-forming.

zȳ′mō·sc̣ōpe, n. an instrument for testing the fermenting power of yeast by bringing it in contact with sugar-water and observing the quantity of carbonic anhydride evolved.

zȳ′mōse, n. a ferment produced by various yeast plants. It is found in the intestinal juice. Also called invertin.

zȳ·mō′sis, n. [Gr. zymōsis, fermentation, from zymē, a leaven.]
1. fermentation.
2. a process like fermentation by which infectious diseases were formerly believed to be developed.
3. any zymotic disease. [Rare.]

zȳ·mō·teç̣h′niç, a. pertaining to zymotechnics.

zȳ·mō·teç̣h′niç̣s, n. [zymo-, and Gr. technē, art, skill.] the technology of ferments.

zȳ·mot′iç, a. [Gr. zymōtikos, causing to ferment, from zymoun, to ferment, from zymē, ferment.]
1. of, causing, or caused by or as by fermentation.
2. designating or of any infectious disease, as smallpox, formerly believed to be caused by a fermentative process.

zȳ·mot′iç·ăl·ly, adv. in a zymotic manner.

zȳ′mūr·ġy, n. [zymo-, and Gr. ergon, work.] the chemistry of fermentation, as applied to wine making, brewing, etc.

zȳ′thum, n. [L., from Gr. zythos, beer.] a malt beverage brewed by the ancient Egyptians.
