Preface

To know the origin of words is to know the cultural history of mankind.

In infinite humility I bend the knee and bow before the Eternal Who gives power to the faint, and to him who has no might increases strength.

Blessed be the Eternal Who granted me life and sustenance and permitted me to write and complete this etymological dictionary, whose first volume is just leaving the press.

This dictionary is a modest tribute of my devotion to Canada, the country whose citizen I am proud to be, the country in which the spirit of the Bible has dominion from Sea to Sea, the country in which the Human Rights are a happy, living reality, a reality called upon to serve as a shining example to mankind.

On this occasion I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks to the Canada Council, whose grant made it possible for me to have the manuscript of my dictionary typed in order to prepare it for the press. The generosity of this noble institution will continue to serve for me as a precious stimulus for further scientific work.

Between 1931 and 1944, I was Rabbi of the Jewish Congregation in Nové Zámky (Czechoslovakia), whence I was deported by the Nazis to Auschwitz and, from there, to the concentration camp Allach-Dachau. After the liberation from the latter place by American troops in 1945, I returned home to find only the ruins of what had once been the flourishing Jewish community of Nové Zámky. There I learned that my Father, my wife, my only child Joseph and two of my three sisters had suffered martyrdom in Auschwitz. Of my family, my sister Mrs. Paul Horvath (née Elizabeth Klein) and her husband have survived.

After my return I decided to write an etymological dictionary of the English language, the language which I had loved and admired since my early childhood.

This project materialized in Toronto where I settled together with my sister Elizabeth and her husband, and where my friends established the congregation Beth Yitshak, which was named after my Father of blessed memory, and chose me for their rabbi.

It was before all my sister who through her selfless love and infinite dedication, with which she has taken care of me, made it possible for me to devote my time to my congregation and to writing this dictionary.

On this occasion I would like to extend my affectionate feelings to two of my closest and dearest friends in Toronto, whom I love both as if they were brothers to me in the literal sense of this term: Mr. Arthur Minden, Q.C., whose friendship and love I treasure as one of the greatest gifts bestowed upon me by Providence and whose zeal and encouragement have been an important factor in my writing and completing this dictionary, and Mr. Leo Bermann, whose sincere brotherly affection and friendly devotion have always been and continue to be a gratifying source of spiritual joy to me, and who had a decisive role in the history of the publication of my dictionary.

My abiding gratitude is extended to Mr. Marsh Jeanneret, president of the Toronto University Press, and to Miss F. Halpenny, its editor, for their helpfulness and encouragement, which were important factors on the way leading to the publication of my work.

My grateful acknowledgements are also due to the whole staff of the University of Toronto Library for the facilities extended to me in the use of its books.

May this dictionary, which plastically shows the affinity and interrelationship of the nations of the world in the way in which their languages developed, contribute to bringing them nearer to one another in the sincere pursuit of peace on earth — which was one of my cardinal aims in writing this dictionary.

Toronto, October, 1965

Introduction

Since my youth I have devoted myself to philology, with special regard to etymology.

The reasons inducing me to write 'A Comprehensive Etymological Dictionary of the English Language' may be summed up as follows:

It is a well-known fact that in the course of the last sixty years philology has attained a high degree of development. It is so much the more to be regretted that modern lexicography has remained far behind the achievements of philology. As a rule, even the most authoritative English etymological dictionaries give such etymologies as reflect the level reached by philology about half a century ago. In most cases etymologies given up by serious science long ago are still wandering out of one dictionary into another and continue living with tenacity, apparently ignoring the truths established in the field of philology in the course of the latter decades.

One example may suffice to prove this. Despite the fact that Tocharian (this language extinct long ago but newly discovered at the end of the Nineteenth Century) occupies a very important place among the Indo-European languages, Tocharian references appear only quite exceptionally in the etymological dictionaries of the English language. This is so much the more striking, because Tocharian may help us understand the development of many a word in the different Indo-European languages, inasmuch as the words of the Tocharian language often represent the transitory form — 'the missing link' — between the Old Indian and the other Indo-European languages. In this dictionary Tocharian words are regularly referred to together with the other Indo-European equivalents.

English belonging to the great family of the Indo-European languages, it is quite evident that in tracing any word to its source, an etymological dictionary must take into consideration all the important cognates of this word in the other Indo-European languages. If we want to understand the history of an English word, we must compare this word with as many correspondences as possible.

Most etymological dictionaries do not pay enough attention to this circumstance and therefore cite equivalents from the kindred languages quite at random, often enumerating the less important ones but omitting such as had a decisive influence upon the form of the word treated or upon the development of its meaning. This dictionary tries to be a dependable guide to the reader in this respect too, by giving him all the necessary information about the origin, formation and sense development of any word that might interest him.

The scientific value of most etymological dictionaries is much impaired by the circumstance that their authors are not familiar with the structure of the Semitic languages, a fact thrown into relief by the inconsistencies of the transliteration of Hebrew, Aramaic and Arabic words, on the one hand, and by the lack of any etymological analysis of these words, on the other. In this dictionary the words of Semitic origin — about 750 in number — are fully analyzed: they are traced to their etyma, the cognates are given, the stem is distinguished from the prefixes and suffixes added to it, etc. In brief: the words of Semitic origin are treated exactly as the Indo-European words. This is why my dictionary may also serve as a preliminary work for an etymological dictionary of the Semitic languages themselves.

In all etymological dictionaries we frequently come across such words as are declared to be 'of unknown origin', even in cases when the etymology of such words can be established beyond any doubt. In many other cases the etymology is not given either, but the origin of the respective word is referred to by such vague terms as 'of uncertain etymology', or 'probably of Oriental origin', etc., whereas their provenance is very well known. My dictionary contains the etymology of several hundred such words.

This dictionary gives also the etymologies of personal names and mythological names.

Some other features of this dictionary:

What the elements are to chemistry, what the sounds are to music, are words to language. However, words are not only the elements of a language but also of the history of the people speaking it. They are important milestones along the way leading to the majestic Palace of Human Knowledge.

One of the basic features of this dictionary is that — in contradistinction to other etymological dictionaries — its aim is not only to give the history of words, but to give also History in words. This dictionary is the first attempt to give the history of human civilization and culture condensed in the etymological data of words. We not only speak but think and even dream in words. Language is a mirror in which the whole spiritual development of mankind reflects itself. Therefore, in tracing words to their origin, we are tracing simultaneously civilization and culture to their real roots.

Another important aim that I set to myself in composing this dictionary was to mirror in it the history of the humanities and sciences. Since the history of a word is at the same time the history of the thing denoted or the idea expressed by that word it is obvious that by giving the history of the technical terms of any branch of science we also give the history of that branch of science itself. In consideration of this fact one of the goals of an etymological dictionary should be to deal with the history of scientific technical terms in a manner that would enable the reader to reconstruct through them the history of the various branches of the humanities and sciences. This dictionary represents the first attempt to live up to this goal. E.g. in order to know the important phases of the development of medicine one will only have to look up the medical terms occurring in this dictionary.

For the illustration of this fact I am quoting here a few entries from this dictionary dealing with medical terms:

abiotrophy, n., loss of vitality (med.) — Coined by the English neurologist Sir William Richard Gowers (1845-1915) fr. Gk. ἀβίος, 'without life', and -τροφή, fr. τροφή, 'nourishment'. See abio- and -trophy.

Derivative: abiotroph-ic, adj.

accoucheur, n., a man who acts as midwife. — F., fr. accoucher, 'to go to childbed'; first used by Jules Clément in the second half of the 17th cent. See accouchement.

Achilles' tendon. — So called from the myth of Achilles being held by the heel when his mother Thetis dipped him into the river Styx to render him invulnerable; first used by the Dutch anatomist Verheyden in 1693 when dissecting his own amputated leg. See Achilles and tendon.

acrodynia, n., disease characterized by pain in the hands and feet (med.) — Medical L., coined by Char-don in 1828, and lit. meaning 'pain in the extremities', fr. acro- and Gk. ἄδύνη, 'pain'. See -odynia.

actinomycosis, n., an inflammatory disease caused by the actinomycetes (med.) — Coined by the German pathologist Otto Bollinger (1843-1909) in 1877 fr. Actinomyces and suff. -osis.

agoraphobia, n., morbid fear of being in open spaces (med.) — Coined by Westphal in 1871, who first described this morbid condition. The word lit. means 'fear of a public place'. See agora and -phobia.

albuminuria, n., the presence of albumen in the urine (med.) — Medical L., fr. F. albuminurie, a hybrid coined by the French physician Martin Solon (1795-1856) in 1838 fr. L. albūmen, 'white of the egg', and Gk. οὐρον, 'urine'. See albumen, urine and -ia.

allopathy, n., treatment of disease by remedies that produce effects opposite to those caused by the disease. — G. Allopathie, coined by the German physician Samuel Hahnemann (1755-1843) fr. Gk.

ἄλλος, 'other', and -πάθεια, fr. πάθος, 'suffering'. See allo- and -pathy and cp. enantiopathy, homeo-pathy.

Derivatives: allopath-ic, adj., allopath-ic-ally, adv., allopath-et-ic, adj., allo-path-et-ical-ly, adv., allo-path-ist, n.

anaphylaxis, n., exaggerated susceptibility, especially to protein (med. and biol.) — Coined by the French physiologist Charles Richet (1850-1935) in 1893 on analogy of prophylaxis (q.v.) Anaphylaxis accordingly means the opposite of what is expressed by prophylaxis; it is formed fr. ana- and Gk. φύλαξις, 'a watching, guarding'. See phylaxis.

anarthria, n., inability to articulate words (med.) — Medical L., coined by the French neurologist Pierre Marie (1853-1940) fr. Gk. ἀναρθρος, 'without joints' (see anarthrous). For the ending see suff. -ia.

antitoxin, n., a substance neutralizing poisonous substances (immunology). — Coined by the German bacteriologist Emil von Behring (1854-1917) in 1890 fr. anti- and toxin. Cp. autotoxin.

aperient, adj., laxative. — L. aperiēns, gen. -entis, pres. part. of aperire, 'to uncover, open', which stands for **ap-werire* and is rel. to operire (for **op-werire*), 'to cover, close', and cogn. with OI. apa-vrḥōti, 'uncovers, opens', api-vrḥōti, 'closes, covers', fr. I.-E. base **wer-*, 'to enclose, cover'. See weir and cp. words there referred to. The word aperient was used by Bacon in 1626.

Derivative: aperient, n., a laxative drug.

aphemia, n., a kind of aphasia (med.) — Medical L., coined by the French surgeon and anthropologist Paul Broca (1824-80) in 1860 fr. priv. pref. a- and Gk. φῆμη, 'voice', which is rel. to φάναι, 'to say, speak'. See fame and -ia and cp. aphasia.

aspirin, n. (pharm.) — A hybrid coined by H. Dreser in Pflüger's Archiv in 1899. The acetylo-salicylic acid occurs in the flowers of the plant Spiraea ulmaria. In order to distinguish from this natural product the same substance gained chemically, the word aspirin was formed by Dreser from priv. pref. a-, the above mentioned plant Spiraea, and chem. suff. -in. Hence aspirin prop. means 'acetylo-salicylic acid which is gained not from the Spiraea ulmaria (but in a chemical way)'.
astigmatism, n., defect of the eye that prevents the rays of light from converging to a point on the retina (med. and optics). — Coined by the English mathematician and philosopher William Whewell (1794-1866) in 1819 fr. priv. pref. a- and Gk. στίγμα, gen. στίγματος, 'a prick, puncture, mark'. See stigmatic and -ism.

athetosis, n., affection of the nervous system marked by involuntary movements of the fingers and toes (med.) — Medical L., coined by the American nerve specialist William Alexander Hammond (1828-1900) in 1871 fr. Gk. ἄθετος, 'not fixed', and suff. -osis. See prec. word.

aureomycin, n., an antibiotic drug resembling penicillin (med.) — A hybrid coined fr. L. aureus, 'golden' (so called from its color), Gk. μύκης, 'fungus', and chem. suff. -in; see aureate and myco-. The correct form would be chrysomycin, in which both elements are of Greek origin (see chryso- and cp. Aureo-basidium).

batophobia, n., a morbid fear of being at great heights or passing near high objects (med.) — Medical L., compounded of Gk. βατός, 'passable', verbal adj. of βαίνειν, 'to go', and -φοβία, fr. φόβος, 'fear'. See base, n. and phobia. The association of Gk βατός with height is due to a connection of this word with the second element in acrobat. (Acrobats are used to display their art in the height.) A more adequate name for this condition is hypsophobia.

bronchiole, n., a minute bronchial tube (anat.) — Medical L. bronchiola, a diminutive coined by E. Schultz fr. L. bronchia (pl.), 'the bronchial tubes'; see bronchia. Cp. Joseph Hyrtl, Onomatologia anatomica, p. 557.

Derivative: bronchiol-ar, adj.

bronchitis, n., inflammation of the bronchial tubes (med.) — Medical L., coined by Charles Bedham in 1808 fr. bronchus and suff. -itis; introduced into medicine by P. Frank in his Interpretationes Clinicae in 1812.

Caesarean section, Caesarean operation. — So called from the belief that Julius Caesar was thus delivered. This belief is refuted by the fact that the mother of J. Caesar was still alive at the time of the Gallic wars, whereas, on the other hand, we know that in antiquity this operation was never performed on the living mother.

calciophylaxis, n., increased sensitivity to calcium (med.) — A Medical L. hybrid coined by Dr. Hans Selye (born in 1907), professor of the University of Montreal, fr. calcium, a word of Latin origin, and Gk. φύλαξις, 'a watching, guarding'. See phylaxis.

chloromycetin, n., an antibiotic drug of the penicillin-streptomycin family discovered by Dr. Paul R. Burkholder of Yale University (med.) — Coined fr. chloro-, Gk. μύκης, gen. μύκητος, 'fungus' (see myceto-), and chem. suff. -in.

cirrhosis, n., a disease of the liver (med.) — Medical L., coined by the French physician René-Théophile-Hyacinthe Laënnec (1781-1826) fr. Gk. κίρρος, 'tawny', which is of uncertain origin; so called in allusion to the yellowish color of the diseased liver. For the ending see suff. -osis.

cynanthropy, n., insanity in which the patient believes himself to be a dog (med.) — Formed with suff. -y (representing Gk. -ίξ), fr. Gk. κυνάνθρωπος, 'of a dog-man', which is compounded of κύων, gen. κυνός, 'a dog', and ἄνθρωπος, 'man'. See cyno- and anthropo-. The name cynanthropy prop. derives fr. Gk. νόσος κυνάνθρωπος, lit. 'dog-man's disease', a name given to this mania by Galen (see Galen, 19, 719).

The examples have been taken from among the medical terms beginning with the letter A, B or C, hence such as are contained in the present (i.e. I) volume of this dictionary.

Similarly, in dealing with the technical terms of the other branches of science in this dictionary, one of my chief aims was to show the historic development of science in general and of its various branches in particular, with special regard to biology, zoology, botany, mineralogy, geography, geology, history, astronomy, physics, chemistry, mathematics, grammar, philology. The entries treating these branches of science in this dictionary, virtually contain the most important phases of their history.

HYBRID WORDS

Scientists are rarely also linguists. This is why many scientific terms are inexactly coined and often erroneous and misleading in sense. Many of these terms are hybrids, i.e. words made up of elements from different languages. In this dictionary hybrids are not only referred to as such, but—quite frequently—a new, correctly formed word is suggested instead of the one used hitherto.

For an example see the entry aureomycin on preceding page.

LOAN TRANSLATIONS

Loan translations are important guideposts on the road on which civilization and culture traveled in the course of centuries from nation to nation. Through them we learn e.g. that the chief elements of the science of grammar developed in ancient Greece and reached Western Europe through the medium of the Romans. (The overwhelming majority of grammatical terms in the modern languages are loan translations of, or derive directly from, Latin words, which themselves are loan translations of Greek words. Cp. e.g. the words subject, verb, adverb, nominative, accusative, genitive, dative in this dictionary.)

In like manner, loan translations are of great importance for the reconstruction of the history of all the other branches of science as well. This is why, in this dictionary, special attention was paid to loan translations and their way was traced from language to language.

Transliteration of Semitic Words

The transliteration for Semitic words contained in the etymologies of this dictionary is such that it renders exactly every consonant, vowel and diacritical sign. It happens for the first time that the Hebrew and Aramaic words quoted in an etymological dictionary are transliterated according to a system which makes it possible to retransliterate these words into their original characters, including all the phonetic signs particular to Hebrew and Aramaic. (See the following Rules for Transliteration.)

As a rule, in this dictionary the accent in Semitic words (with the exception of the Akkadian, for which the laws of accentuation are not known), is indicated by the usual accent mark ' placed over the vowel of the accented syllable.

THE RULES FOR THE TRANSLITERATION OF HEBREW AND ARAMAIC EMPLOYED IN THIS DICTIONARY

Form of the Letter	Its Name	Its Transliteration	Its Sounds
א	áleph	Not rendered at the beginning or the end of a word; otherwise marked by '.	Orig. the glottal stop. Now silent in the middle of words if it has no vowel; otherwise it is pronounced according to the accompanying vowel sign.
ב	bēth	b	b
בּ	bhēth	bh	bh, v
ג	gimél	g	Pronounced like g in get .
גּ	ghimél	gh	Orig. pronounced— with a slight aspiration of the sound— like gh; now pronounced like g in get .
ד	dáleth	d	d
דּ	dháleth	dh	Orig. pronounced like th in this ; now pronounced d
ה	hē	h	h
ו	wāw or vau	w	w
ז	záyin	z	z
ח	chēth	h	Pronounced like ch in Scot. loch

Form of the Letter	Its Name	Its Transliteration	Its Sounds
ט	ṭēth	ṭ	An emphatic t
י	yōdh	y	y
כ; at the end of a word	kaph	k	k
כ; at the end of a word	khaph	kh	kh
ל	lāmedh	l	l
מ; at the end of a word	mēm	m	m
נ; at the end of a word	nūn	n	n
ס	sāmekh	s	s
ע	‘áyin	‘	A strong guttural sound; now usually treated in the pronunciation like an aleph
פ; at the end of a word	pē	p	p
פ; at the end of a word	phē	ph	f
צ; at the end of a word	tzādhē or ṣādhē	tz	tz ; occasionally pronounced like an emphatic s ( - ṣ)
ק	kōph	q	an emphatic k
ר	rēsh	r	r
ש	shīn	sh	sh
ש	śīn	ś	s
ת	tāw or tāv	t	t
ת	thāw or thāv	th	Orig. pronounced like th in thing ; now pronounced like t (by the Ashkenazic Jews like s ).

VOWEL SIGNS USED WITH HEBREW CHARACTERS

Vowel Sign		Transliteration	Sound
Form	Name
A) Long Vowels
ָ	qāmátz gādhōl	ā	like a in far
ֵ	tzērē	ē	like ai in rain
ִ	hīrīq gādhōl	i	like i in machine
ֹ	hōlām	ō	like o in fork
ֻ	shūrūq	ū	like u in true
B) Short Vowels
ַ	pattāh	a	like a in far
ֶ	sēghōl	e	like e in them
ִ	hīrīq qātān	i	like i in pin
ֹ	qāmátz qātān	o	like o in gone
ֻ	qubbūtz	u	like u in put
C) Half Vowels
ְ	schwā (nā‘)	ē	like e in agent
ֱ	hātāph pattāh	a	like a very short pattāh
ֲ	hātāph sēghōl	e	like a very short sēghōl
ֳ	hātāph qāmátz	o	like a very short qāmátz qātān

A point in the middle of a consonant, called dāghēsh hāzāq (daghesh forte, ‘strong daghesh’), strengthens (i.e. doubles) the consonant. It is marked by the doubling of the respective consonant.

The sign dāghēsh qal (daghesh lene = ‘light daghesh’), which is formally identical with the sign of the dāghēsh hāzāq, is used with the letters ט, פ, כ, ד, ג, ב, to indicate their original hard pronunciation. In this Dictionary ט, פ, כ, ד, ג, ב, are transliterated b, g, d, k, p, t, whereas ט, פ, כ, ד, ג, ב, are rendered by bh, gh, dh, kh, ph, th.

ORTHOGRAPHIC SIGNS

◌̣ hāmza<sup>h</sup>

◌◌ tashdīd. It marks the doubling of a consonant. It is disregarded in the case of a ى after an i. The assimilation of the ى (in the def. art. الل) to the so called solar letters is not taken into consideration (as e.g. in aldea, Aldebaran, Altair), unless this assimilation appears as ʿ in the European (in most cases Spanish or Portuguese) loan word itself (as in arrope, calaya).

The asterisk (*) indicates a hypothetical form.

The mark called macron (ˉ) is placed over a vowel to show that it is long.

The mark called breve (˘) is placed over a vowel to show that it is short.

In this dictionary the quantity of vowels (esp. in Greek and Latin words) is indicated only when they are long. The brevity of vowels is indicated only in some special cases (e.g. in Latin pendēre, 'to cause to hang', in contradistinction to pendere, 'to hang' (see pendant). Hence when there is no mark over a vowel it is to be assumed that it is short.

The mark ' after a consonant in the Slavonic languages indicates palatalization.

The mark - after a syllable or a group of syllables (as in ant-, anti-) indicates that this syllable or group of syllables is a prefix.

The mark - before a syllable or a group of syllables (as in -ate, -ation) indicates that this syllable or group of syllables is a suffix.

a, indef. article. — Form of an before a consonant.
a, prep. meaning 'of', as in a clock = of the clock. — ME., fr. OE. of, 'from, off, of'. See of.
a, prep. meaning 'on'. — OE. an, on, 'on'. See on.
à, prep. meaning 'to, at, in'. — F., fr. L. ad, 'to, toward'. See ad- and cp. a-, pref. corresponding to L. ad-. Cp. also à la.
a-, pref. meaning 'of', as in akin. — ME. a-, fr. OE. of. See a, prep. meaning 'of'.
a-, pref. meaning 'on'; used to form adverbs from nouns as in abroad, ashore. — Fr. OE. an, on. See a, prep. meaning 'on'.
a-, intensive pref. — OE. ā-, rel. to OS., OFris. ur-, or-, Du. oor-, OHG., MHG. ur- (unstressed: OHG. ir-, ar-, MHG., G. -er), Goth. us-. The orig. meaning of these prefixes was 'out, away'. Cp. the pref. in oakum, ordeal.
a-, pref. meaning 'away from, from' (occurring only before v), as in avert. — L. ā-, fr. ā, short form of ab, 'away from, from'; rel. to Oscan aa-, Umbr. aha-, 'away from, from'. See ab-.
a-, pref. corresponding to L. ad-, fr. ad, 'to, toward', either directly or through the medium of OF. a- or F. à. Cp. the pref. in abandon, acknowledge, ascend, ascribe, and see ad-. Cp. also à.
a-, priv. pref. meaning 'not, less, without'. — Gk. ἀ-, used before a consonant, the form before a vowel being ἀν-. See an- and cp. the priv. prefixes in- and un-.
aam, n., a Dutch and German liquid measure. — Du., fr. L. ama (more exactly hama), 'bucket', fr. Gk. ἄμη (prop. ἄμηρ), 'bucket', which is rel. to ἀμαῖσθαί, 'to draw, gather', ἀμνίον, 'a bowl in which the blood of victims was caught'. See amion.

accursed, accurst, adj., cursed. — Prop. pp. of obsol. accurse, fr. ME. acursien, which is formed fr. intensive pref. a- and cursien, fr. OE. cur-sian, 'to curse'. See curse, v., and -ed, resp. pp. suff. -t. Derivatives: accursed-ly, adv., accursed-ness, n.

accusation, n. — F., fr. L. accūsātiōnem, acc. of accūsātiō, fr. accūsātus, pp. of accūsāre. See accuse and -ation.

accusative, adj. and n. — L. (casus) accūsātivus, fr. Gk. αἰτιῶτικῆ (πτῶσις), 'accusative (case)', lit. '(case) expressing cause', fr. αἰτία, 'cause'. Since αἰτία means not only 'cause', but also 'accusation', αἰτιῶτικῆ πτῶσις was misinterpreted as 'case expressing accusation', and was rendered accordingly in Latin by (casus) accūsātivus, fr. accūsātivus, 'pertaining to an accusation', fr. accūsātus, pp. of accūsāre, 'to call to account, accuse'. See next word and -ative. The correct Latin translation would have been casus causātivus. For a mistranslation of another Greek case name cp. genitive. Derivatives: accusativ-al, adj., accusative-ly, adv.

accuse, tr. v. — ME. acusen, fr. OF. acuser (F. accuser), fr. L. accūsāre, 'to accuse', fr. ad- and causa, 'cause, lawsuit', which stands for **caud-tā-*, and is rel. to cūdere, 'to strike, beat'. See cause and cp. excuse, recusant, recuse. The change of Latin au (in causa) to ū (in accūsāre) is due to the Latin phonetic law, according to which in the unaccented radical syllable of the second element of compounds, au becomes ū. Cp. conclude, exclude, occlude. Derivatives: accus-ed, adj. and n., accus-er, n., accus-ing-ly, adv.

accustom, tr. v. — OF. acostumer (F. accoutumer), fr. a, 'to', and costume (F. coutume). See à and custom. Derivatives: accustom-ed, adj., accustom-ed-ly, adv., accustom-ed-ness, n.

aceology, n., therapeutics. — Lit. 'the science of curing', fr. Gk. ἄκος, gen. ἄκειος, 'remedy', and -λογία, fr. -λόγος, 'one who speaks (in a certain manner); one who deals (with a certain topic)'. Gk. ἄκος prob. stands for **yakas* and is cogn. with OIr. hicc, 'cure, payment', icaim, 'I heal, cure'. For the second element see -logy. Cp. acology and the second element in Androsace.

-aceous, suff. meaning 'belonging to, of the nature of'. — L. -āceus, enlarged fr. adj. suff. -āx, gen. -ācis. This suff. corresponds either to L. -ācea (neut. pl. of -āceus), in which case it means 'pertaining to such and such an order of animals', or to L. -āceae (fem. pl. of -āceus), in which case its meaning is 'pertaining to such and such a family of plants'. See -ous and cp. -acea, -aceae.

acephalous, adj., headless. — L. acephalus, fr. Gk. ἀκέφαλος, 'headless', fr. ἀ- (see priv. pref. a-) and κεφαλή, 'head'. See cephalic. For E. -ous, as equivalent to Gk. -ος, L. -us, see -ous.

Acer, n., the maple tree. — L., cogn. with Gk. ἄκαστος (for **ākαστος*), 'maple tree', OHG., MHG. āhorn, G. Ahorn, of s.m.

Aceraceae or Acerinae, n. pl., a family of plants (order Sapindales). — ModL., formed fr. Acer with suff. -aceae, resp. -inae.

Acerates, n., a genus of plants of the milkweed family (bot.) — ModL. lit. 'hornless', fr. priv. pref. a- and Gk. κέρας, gen. κέρατος, 'horn' (see cerato-); so called because its hoods have no crest or horn.

Aceratherium, n., lit. 'hornless animal', a name given by Kaup to some mammiferous fossils resembling the rhinoceros, but differing from it in being hornless. — ModL., formed fr. priv.

pref. a-, Gk. κέρας, gen. κέρατος, 'horn', and θηρίον, 'animal'. See cerato- and therio- and cp. prec. word.

acerb, adj., sour, sharp, bitter. — L. acerbus, 'harsh to the taste, sharp, bitter, sour', fr. ācer, 'sharp'; see acrid. For the formation cp. superbus, 'haughty, proud, excellent', fr. super, 'above, over' (see superb).

Derivatives: acerbate (q.v.), acerb-ic, adj., acerbity (q.v.)

acerbate, tr. v., to sour, embitter; to aggravate; adj., sour, embittered. — L. acerbatus, pp. of acerbāre, 'to make bitter; to aggravate', fr. acerbus. See acerb and verbal suff. -ate and cp. exacerbate.

acerbity, n. — F. acéribité, fr. L. acerbitātem, acc. of acerbitās, 'harshness, sharpness', fr. acerbus, 'harsh, sharp', See acerb and -ity.

Derivatives: Adam-ic, Adam-ic-al, adjs., Adam-ic-al-ly, adv., Adam-ite, n., Adam-it-ism, n., Adam-it-ic, Adam-it-ic-al, adjs.

adamant, n., a very hard stone; adj., very hard, unyielding. — ME., 'diamond, magnet', fr. OF. adamant, oblique case, fr. L. adamantem, acc. of adamās (whence the OF. nom. adamas), fr. Gk. ἀδάμας, 'adamant, the hardest metal, diamond', lit. 'unconquerable', fr. ἀ- (see priv. pref. a-) and the verb δαμάω, 'to tame'. See tame and cp. diamond; cp. also the second element in Hippodamia. The sense of 'load stone, magnet', arose from a confusion with L. adamāre, 'to love passionately'.

adamantean, adj., hard as adamant. — Formed with suff. -an fr. L. adamantēus, fr. adamās. See prec. word.

adamantine, adj., 1) made of adamant; 2) like adamant; very hard. — L. adamantinus, fr. Gk. ἀδαμάντινος, fr. ἀδάμας. See adamant and adj. suff. -ine.

adamite, n., a hydrous zinc arsenate (mineral) — Named after the mineralogist M. Adam. For the ending see subst. suff. -ite.

Adam's apple, the thyroid cartilage. — A name due to the inexact translation of Heb. tappūah hāādām, lit. 'man's projection (in the neck)', fr. tappūah, 'anything swollen or protruding; apple', from the base of tāphāh, 'it swelled'. The rendering of this Hebrew term by 'Adam's apple' is due to two popular beliefs: 1) that the forbidden fruit eaten by Adam was an apple; 2) that a piece of this apple stuck in Adam's throat.

adangle, adj., dangling. — Coined by Robert Browning (1812-89) fr. pref. a-, 'on', and dangle.

adapt, tr. v. — F. adapter, fr. L. adaptāre, 'to fit, adjust, adapt', fr. ad- and aptāre, 'to fit', fr. aptus, 'fit'. See apt and cp. adept.

Derivatives: adapt-able, adj., adapt-abil-ity, n., adaptation (q.v.), adapt-ed, adj., adapt-ed-ness, n., adapt-er, adapt-or, n.

adaptation, n. — F., fr. ML. adaptātiōnem, acc. of adaptātiō, fr. L. adaptātus, pp. of adaptāre. See adapt and -ation.

Derivatives: adaptation-al, adj., adaptation-ally, adv.

Adar, n., name of the twelfth Jewish month. — Heb. Ādhār, fr. Akkad. Adaru, Adaru, lit. 'the dark or clouded month', fr. Akkad. adāru. 'to be dark'; see Frd. Delitzsch, Prolegomena, p. 138. According to Haupt in ZDMG., 64, 705, Adaru is rel. to Akkad. iddar, 'threshing floor', and prop. means 'month of the threshing floor'. Cp. Veadar.

adati, n., a kind of fine cloth exported from Bengal. — Prob. fr. Hind. adhā, 'half', and lit. meaning 'of half width'. See Yule-Burnell, Hobson-Jobson, p. 4.

add, tr. and intr. v. — L. addere, 'to put to, lay on, give in addition to, add', fr. ad- and -dere, fr. dare, 'to give'. See date, 'point of time', and cp. addendum, additament, addition.

Derivatives: add-ed, adj., adder (q.v.), add-ible, adj.

addax, n., a North African and Arabian antelope with long spiral horns. — L., according to Pliny II, 124, a word of African origin.

addendum, n., something added. — L. neut. of addendus, 'that which is to be added', gerundive of addere, 'to add'. See add and cp. reddendum. For other Latin gerundives used in English cp. agenda and words there referred to.

adder, n., one who or that which adds. — Formed with agential suff. -er fr. add (q.v.)

adder, n., a snake. — ME. naddre, addre, fr. OE. nādre, 'adder, snake', rel. to OS. nādra, ON. nādra, MDu. nādre, Du. adder, OHG. nātara, MHG. nāter, G. Natter, Goth. nadrs, and cogn. with L. natrix, 'water snake' OIr. nathir, W. neidr, OCo. nader, 'adder'. All these words prob. derive fr. I.-E. base *(s)nē-, 'to wind, twist', whence also Gk. νήν, L. nēre, 'to spin'. See needle and cp. matrix. The loss of the initial n in E. adder is due to a misdivision of ME. a naddre into an addre. For similar misdivisions cp. ritch-bone, apron, auger, ekename, eyas, ouch, umble pie, umpire.

addict, tr. v. — L. addictus, pp. of addicere, 'to award, assign, devote', fr. ad- and dicere, 'to say'. See diction.

Derivatives: addict, n., addict-ed, adj., addict-ed-ness, n.

Ailurus, n., the genus consisting of the panda (zool.) — ModL., fr. Gk. αἴλουρος, 'cat', which is of uncertain origin; its derivation fr. Gk. αἰόλος, 'quick moving, rapid', and οὐρά, 'tail', is folk etymology. Cp. aeluro-.

aim, intr. and tr. v. — ME. aimen, eimen, fr. OF. aesmer, which is formed fr. a, 'to' (see à), and esmer, fr. L. aestimāre, 'to estimate'. See esteem. Derivatives: aim, n., aim-less, adj., aim-lessly, adv.

air, n., atmosphere. — ME. aire, fr. OF. (= F.) air, fr. L. āēr (whence also Rum. aer, OProvenç., Catal., Sp. aire, Port. air, 'air'), which derives fr. Gk. ἀήρ, gen. ἠέρος, Att. gen. ἀέρος, 'air' (from the Att. acc. ἀέρα is borrowed It. aria, 'air'). Gk. ἀήρ (cp. the parallel forms Aeol. αἰῆρ, Dor. ἀβήρ) and the rel. αἰρή, 'air in motion, breeze', are of uncertain origin. They are possibly rel. to ἀείρειν, 'to lift up, raise', and lit. mean 'that which rises'. See aorta, and cp. aerate, aerial, aero-, the first element in aerostat, and the second element in malaria. Derivatives: air, v., air-able, adj., air-er, n., air-ing, n., air-less, adj., air-y, adj., air-i-ly, adv., air-i-ness, n.

air, n., melody, tune. — F., fr. It. aria, of s.m., fr. L. āērea, fem. of the adjective āēreus, 'pertaining to the air', fr. āēr, 'air'. See prec. word and cp. aria.

airplane, n. — Compounded of air and plane. See aeroplane.

aisle, n. — ME. ile, ele, fr. OF. ele (F. aile), 'wing', fr. L. āla, of s.m., which stands for **ag-*

lā and is rel. to axilla, 'armpit', and cogn. with OI. ákṣah, 'collarbone', Avestic ashayā (dual gen.), 'of both shoulders', Arm. anut (for **as-nut*), 'armhole', OHG. ahsala, MHG. ahsel, G. Achsel, ON. öxl, OS. ahsla, OE. eaxl, 'shoulder'. All these words are formed fr. I.-E. base **ag-*, 'to move, drive', with reference to the arms moved from the shoulders. See agent, adj., and cp. aileron, ailette, alar, alate, aliform, aliped, alula, axil, axilla, axillar, axle, oxtar, and the second element in bezel.

Derivative: aisl-ed, adj.

aitch, also ache, n., name of the letter h in English. — ME. ache, fr. OF. (= F.) ache, which is of uncertain origin. It possibly derives—together with It. acca and Port. agá, of s.m.—from a form **hakka*, which would stand for orig. ha-ka (for h-k, i.e. h and k (as the consonant following h in the alphabet). The derivation of the French name of the letter h fr. F. hache, 'ax' (in allusion to the form of the small h which resembles an ax) is contradicted by the fact that whereas the letter h is called acca in It. and agá in Port., the It., resp. Port. name for the ax is accia, resp. facha.

aitchbone, n. — Fr. ME. anache bone, fr. OF. nache, pl., 'rump', fr. VL. **natica*, fr. L. natis, which is cogn. with Gk. νάτος, νῶτον, 'back'; see nates. The loss of the initial n is due to a misdivision of a nache bone into an ache bone. Cp. adder, apron, auger, ekename, ouch, umble pie, umpire.

ajar, adv., on the turn, slightly opened. — ME. on char, 'on the turn', fr. a-, 'on', and ME. chearr, char, 'a turn', fr. OE. cierr, cyrr. See char, 'a turn of work', and cp. words there referred to.

ajar, adv., out of harmony. — Compounded of a- 'on' and jar, 'creak'.

Ajax, n., in the Iliad, the name of two Greek heroes of the Trojan war: Ajax the Greater, son of Telamon, and Ajax the Less, son of Oileus. — L. Āiāx, fr. Gk. Αἴαξ. The name Αἴαξ prob. denoted orig. an earth god and derives fr. Gk. αἶα, 'earth'. See Kretschmer in Glotta 15, 1927, and Frisk, GEW. I, p. 30.

-al, suff. forming adjectives, as in royal, or substantives of adjectival origin, as in rival. — Either fr. F. -al, -el, or directly fr. L. adj. suff. -ālis. In many cases the suff. -ālis was used already in Latin both adjectivally and substantivally (cp. L. rivālis, 'pertaining to a brook; one who uses the same brook; neighbor; competitor, rival', and see rival). Cp. the suffixes -ial and -ar.

-al, suff. forming verbal nouns, as arrival, avowal. — L. -ālia, neut. pl. of -ālis, but in Vulgar Latin mistaken for the fem. sing. suff.; formed either directly from Latin or through the medium of OF., F. -aille (as in OF. arrivaille, etc.).

-al, chem. suff. denoting aldehyde as in bromal, chloral. — F., from the first syllable of aldehyde.

ala, n., a wing or anything similar to a wing (anat.) — L. See aisle and cp. alar.

à la, short for à la mode, 'in the fashion or style of', as à la française, 'in the French fashion or style'. — See à and ille.

alabamine, n., name of a chemical element discovered in 1931 by the American chemist Fred Allison (1882- ) and his collaborators and named by them after the Alabama Polytechnic Institute; now called astatine. For the ending see chem. suff. -ine.

alabandite, n., manganese sulfide (mineral.) — Named after Alabanda in Asia Minor. For the ending see subst. suff. -ite.

alabarch, n., title of the chief official of the Jews of Alexandria during the Grecian period. — Gk. ἀλαβάρχης, which lit. means 'ink ruler', and origin. denoted an official in charge of the 'written' notes or records. — Gk. ἀλαβάρχης, is compounded of ἄλβα, 'ink' (Hesychius), and ἀρχός, 'leader, chief, ruler' (see -arch). The parallel form ἀραβάρχης is secondary and due to assimilation — Most dictionaries either do not deal with the etymology of the word alabarch at all, or content themselves with the stereotypic remark: 'origin unknown'. — In the Addenda et Corrigenda to Liddell and Scott's Greek-English Lexicon, new (ninth) ed. (reprinted 1951), p. 2053a s.v. Ἀραβάρχης, the word Ἀλαβάρχης is explained as dissimilated fr. Ἀραβάρχης, 'ruler of the Arabs, emir'. — The fact is, however, that we must distinguish between Ἀραβάρχης in the sense of 'Ruler of the Arabs', and ἀραβάρχης, the assimilated form of ἀλαβάρχης, title of the chief magistrate of the Jewish population in Alexandria, a name which has nothing to do with the Arabs.

alabaster, n., a translucent whitish kind of gypsum. — OF. alabastré (whence F. albâtre), fr. L. alabaster, fr. Gk. ἀλάβαστρος, ἀλάβαστρον, fr. earlier ἀλάβαστος, fr. Egypt **a-la-baste*, 'vessel of the goddess Ebaste (= Bubaste). See Frisk, GEW., p. 62 s.v. ἀλάβαστος. Cp. alley 'choice marble'.

Derivatives: alabaster, alabastrian, alabastrine, adjs.

alack, interj. — Prob. formed fr. ME. a, 'ah', and lak, 'loss, failure'. See ah and lack and cp. lackaday.

alacran, n., scorpion. — Sp. fr. Arab. al-‘aqrab, 'the scorpion' fr. al-, 'the', and ‘aqrab, 'scorpion', which is rel. to Heb. ‘aqrābh, Aram. ‘aqrabā, Syr. ‘eqqarbā, Ethiop. ‘aqrab, ‘arqab, Akkad. aqrabu, 'scorpion'.

alacrity, n., eager readiness. — L. alacritās, gen. -ātis, 'cheerfulness', fr. alacer, fem. alacris, neut. alacre, 'cheerful', which stands for **ala-tlis* and is cogn. with Goth. aljan, 'zeal', OE. ellen, OHG. ellian, ellen, of s.m. anadabata, n., a Roman gladiator whose helmet had no opening for the eyes. — L., a word of Gaulish origin. The first element of this word means 'blind', and is cogn. with OI. andhāh, Avestic anda, of s.m. The second element is of the same origin and meaning as L. battuere, 'to beat, strike'. See batter, 'to beat', and cp. words there referred to.

Andalusia, n., a former province of southern Spain. — Andalusia (= Sp. Andalucía), fr. Arab. Ándalus, a name denoting the whole peninsula, fr. Late L. **Vandalicia*, prop. 'the country occupied by the Vandals'. See Vandal.

andalusite, n., a hard silicate of aluminum (Al<sub>2</sub>SiO<sub>5</sub>) (mineral.) — Formed with subst. suff. -ite fr. Andalusia (see prec. word); so called because it was first found in Andalusia.

andante, adj., moderately slow; adv., in andante tempo; n., an andante movement (musical direction). — It., pres. part. of andare, 'to go', rel. to Sp. and Port. andar, 'to go'; fr. VL. ambītāre, 'to go round', fr. L. ambītus, pp. of ambīre, 'to go round'. See ambier.

andantino, adj., somewhat quicker (sometimes, slower) than andante; adv., in andantino tempo; n., an andantino movement (musical direction). — It., dimin. of andante.

andesine, n., a mineral of the group of feldspars. — Coined by the German geologist Wilhelm Hermann Abich (1806-86) from the name of the Andes Mountains. For the ending see chem. suff. -ine.

andesite, n., name of a family of rocks (petrogr.) — Coined by the German geologist Baron Christian Leopold von Buch (1774-1853) from the name of the Andes Mountains. For the ending see subst. suff. -ite.

Derivative: andesit-ic, adj.

andiron, n., either of a pair of metal supports for logs in a fireplace. — ME. anderne, aundirne, aundiren, fr. OF. andier (F. landier), fr. Gaul. **andera-*, 'a young bull' (cp. Ir. ainder, 'a young woman', W. anner, 'heifer'); so called because andirons were frequently adorned with the heads of animals. Andiron was influenced in form by, but is not related to, iran. Cp. gridiron.

andouille, n., a kind of sausage. — F., fr. VL. **inductile*, neut. of the adjective **inductilis*, used as a noun, fr. L. inductus, pp. of indūcere, 'to introduce'; see induce. Andouille must have denoted originally the filling that was 'introduced' into the sausage.

Andrew, masc. PN. — OF. Andreu, Andrieu (F. André), fr. L. Andreās, fr. Gk. Ἀνδρέας, which is rel. to ἀνδρεῖος, 'manly', fr. ἀνήρ, gen. ἀνδρός, 'man'. See andro- and cp. dandy.

Derivatives: auscultation (q.v.), auscult-at-ive, adj., auscultat-or, n., auscultat-ory, adj.

auscultation, n., a listening to the sounds in the human body. — L. auscultātiō, gen. -ōnis, fr. auscultātus, pp. of auscultāre, 'to hear with attention, listen to'. L. auscultāre was prob. formed with metathesis fr. **aus-clutāre*, fr. **aus-clutos*, 'heard with one's (own) ears', fr. **aus-is* (whence auris), 'ear', and **clutos*, 'heard' (cp. in-clutus, 'celebrated, famous'). See auricle and loud. Accordingly auscultāre lit. means 'to hear with one's (own) ears'. Cp. Gk. ὠτακουστέιν, 'to hearken, listen to', fr. ὠτακουστής, 'hearkener, listener', which is compounded of ὠς, gen. ὠτός, 'ear', and ἀκούειν, 'to hear', hence is analogous to L. aus-cultāre both in sense and form. Cp. scout, 'spy'.

auslaut, n., final sound. — G. Auslaut, fr. aus, 'out of', and Laut, 'sound, tone', G. aus derives fr. MHG. ūz, fr. OHG. ūz, which is rel. to Goth., ON., OE. ūt; see out. G. Laut, 'sound, tone', comes fr. laut, 'loud'. See loud and cp. ablaut, anlaut, inflaut, umlaut.

Ausonia, n., a poetic name for Italy. — L. Ausonia, fr. Ausonēs (Gk. Αὔσονες), 'the Ausonians', ancient inhabitants of Middle and Lower Italy; of Illyrian origin.

'bird seer', fr. avis, 'bird', and the stem of specere, spicere, 'to see, look at, watch'. For the first element see aviary and cp. auscultation, for the second see species and cp. spy.

auspicious, adj. of good omen, favorable. — Formed with suff. -ous fr. L. auspicium. See prec. word. Derivatives: auspicious-ly, adv., auspicious-ness, n.

Auster, n., the south wind. — L., of uncertain origin. It is perh. cogn. with ON. austr, n., 'east'; adv., 'eastward', OHG. ōstar, 'to the east' (whence ōstar-rīhi. G. Österreich, 'Austria'), Lett. **austrs*, 'eastern' in āustrums, 'east', OSlav. ustrū, 'pertaining to summer', Avestic ushas-tara, 'eastern', and with OHG. ōstan, OE. ēast, 'east'; see aurora and cp. austral; cp. also east. However, on the basis of this etymology, it is difficult to explain why L. auster denotes the 'south wind' (and not the 'east wind'). See Walde-Hofmann, LEW., I, p. 87, where also an attempt is made to explain the meaning of L. auster.

austere, adj., stern, severe; very simple. — OF. austere (F. austère), fr. L. austērus, 'dry, harsh, sour, tart', fr. Gk. ἀσθηρός, 'harsh, rough, bitter', fr. αἰεῖν, 'to dry', fr. αἰός, 'dry'. See auantic.

Plautus, Poenulus, 994, 998, 1001, and see Walde-Hofmann, LEW., I, pp. 80-81. — The identity of the Semitic bases ḥ-w-h (ḥ-w-) and ḥ-y-h is illustrated in Gen. 3:20, 'And the man called his wife's name Eve (Ḥawwāh), because she was the mother of all living (ḥāy)'. See Eve. For sense development see Heb. yēhī ādhōnt hammēlekḥ Dāwīd ḥ'ōlām: 'Let my lord king David live for ever!' (1 Kings 1:31; cp. Dan. 2:4 and passim), E. 'Long live the King!', F. 'Vive le roi', etc., all used as formulas of greeting. (The origin of L. avē being thus established, we shall be able to find the exact meaning of the words with which the gladiators greeted the emperor: 'Avē, Imperātor, moritūri tē salūtant' (see Suetonius, Claudius 21). The usual rendering is: 'Hail, Emperor, who are about to die salute you'. In fact, however, the Latin words express a perfect antithesis. According to my opinion, their original meaning was: 'Live, Emperor! They who are about to die salute you.')

avellan, avellane, adj., pertaining to, or resembling, a filbert or hazel. — Fr. L. avellāna, 'filbert', shortened from nux avellāna, lit. 'nut of Avella', fr. Avella, Abella, name of a town in Campania, abounding in nuts. See apple.

barysilite, n., a lead silicate. — Coined fr. bary-, silicate and subst. suff. -ite.
baryta, n., barium monoxide (chem.) — From next word.
barytes, n., native barium sulfate, BaSO<sub>4</sub>; heavy spar (mineral.) — Coined by the Swedish chemist Karl Wilhelm Scheele (1742-86) fr. Gk. βαρύς, 'heavy', which is rel. to βαρός, 'weight'. See baro- and cp. barium, barite.
barythymia, n., melancholia (med.) — Medical L., compounded of bary- and θύμός, 'spirit, mind, soul'. See thio- and -ia and cp. thyme. Cp. also the second element in lipothymia, parathymia.
barytic, adj., pertaining to baryta. — Formed fr. baryta with suff. -ic.
barytone, n. — See baritone.
basal, adj., relating to the base; basic. — Formed with adj. suff. -al fr. base, n.
Derivative: basal-ly, adv.
basalt, n. — L. basaltēs, explained by most lexicographers as a word of African origin. (This explanation is based on Pliny, Historia 36, 58.) In Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, s.v. basanitēs, several editions are quoted, in which basaltēs stands for basanitēs. We may, therefore, assume that the original form is basanitēs, which was later shortened into basaltēs. L. basanitēs (lapis) comes fr. Gk. βασανίτης (λίθος). I tentatively suggest that βασανίτης derives fr. Βασάν, 'Bashan' (Βασάν is the transliteration of Heb. Bāshān in the LXX), to which the suff. -ίτης was added (see subst. suff. -ite). Accordingly, βασανίτης λίθος lit. means 'stone of Bashan'. This etymology is supported by the fact that Bashan, this well-known region east of the Jordan, first mentioned in the Bible as the Kingdom of Og, is especially rich in basalt. Cp. basanitē.

basan, n., tanned sheepskin. — F. basane, fr. OProvenç. basana, fr. Sp. badana, fr. Arab. biṭānaḥ, lit. 'lining', fr. bāṭana, 'he hid, covered', fr. baṭn, 'belly, interior'. See wad, 'soft material'.
basanite, n., touchstone. — L. basanitēs (lapis), fr. Gk. βασανός or βασανίτης (λίθος), 'touchstone'. See basalt.
basaree, n., a Hindu flageolet (music). — Hind. basree, fr. OI. vaśśāḥ, 'bamboo', which is cogn. with Mlr. feice, Ir. feige (for **vankiā*), 'lintel, rafter'; L. vacerra, 'log, stock, post', however, is not cognate.
bascule, n., an apparatus based on the principle of the seesaw. — F., 'seesaw', from orig. basse cule, altered from earlier bacule under the influence of basse, fem. of bas, 'low'. Bacule is composed of the imper. of battre, 'to strike', and cul, 'posterior'. See batter, 'to beat', and culet.
base, n., bottom; foundation, pedestal. — F., fr. L. basis, fr. Gk. βάσις, 'a stepping, step, pedestal, foot, base', from the stem of βαίνω, 'I go', which prob. stands for **βάνιω*, fr. **βάνιω*, fr. I.-E. base **g<sup>w</sup>em-*, 'to go; to come', whence also L. veniō (prob. for **g<sup>w</sup>niō*), 'I come', Goth. qiman, OE. cuman, 'to come'. See come and cp. venue, 'arrival'. Cp. also basis, abasia, acrobat, aerobatics, amphisbaena, Anabaena, anabas, anabasis, -bates, bathmism, batophobia, bema, catabasis, diabase, adiabatic, diabetes, ecbatic, gynobase, hyperbaton, metabasis, Odobenus, Oribatidae, parabasis, presby-, stereobate, stylobate. As a term of chemistry base was introduced by the French chemist Guillaume-François Rouelle (1703-70) in 1754.
Derivatives: base, tr. v., to form a base for; intr. v., to be based (on or upon something); base-ment, n.
base, adj. — ME. bas, fr. OF (= F.) bas, 'low', fr. Late L. bassus, 'thick fat, stumpy' (in classical L. occurring only as a cognomen); of uncertain origin. Cp. abase, bass (music), basset, basso, basoon, debase.
Derivatives: base-ly, adv., base-ness, n.
bash, tr. v., to strike violently. — Of imitative origin. Cp. Swed. bas, Dan. baske, 'to strike'.
bashaw, n. — A variant of pasha (q.v.)
bashful, adj. — Aphetic for abash-ful. See abash and -ful.
Derivatives: bashful-ly, adv., bashful-ness, n.
bashi-bazouk, n., a Turkish irregular soldier. — Turk. bāshi-bōzuq, lit. '(one whose) head is turned'. Cp. the first element in bashlyk and the second element in himbashsee.
bashlyk, also bashlik, n., hood covering the ears. — Turk. bashlyq, 'any kind of headgear'.
basic, adj. — Formed with suff. -ic fr. base, n. Cp. the second element in monobasic, di-basic.
Derivative: basic-al-ly, adv.
basidium, n., a form of sporophore characteristic of the fungi of the class Basidiomycetes (bot.) —

ModL., fr. Gk. βάσις, 'base'. See base, n., and cp. Aureobasidium.

basil, n., any of a group of aromatic plants of the mint family. — OF. basile (whence F. basilic), fr. Late L. basilicum, fr., Gk. βασιλικόν (scil. φυτόν), 'basil', neut. of the adjective βασιλικός, 'royal'. See basilica.

basil, n. — Corruption of basan.

Basil, masc. PN. — L. Basilius, fr. Gk. Βασίλειος, lit. 'kingly, royal', fr. βασιλεύς, 'king'. See basilica and cp. basil, the plant.

basilar, adj., pertaining to the base; basal, basic, fundamental. — ModL., irregularly formed fr. L. basis, fr. Gk. βάσις, 'a stepping, step, pedestal, foot, base'. See base, 'foundation', and adj. suff. -ar.

Derivative: basilar-y, adj.

basilic, royal. — F. basilique, fr. Gk. βασιλικός. See next word.

basilica, n. — L., 'a public hall with double colonnades', fr. Gk. βασιλική (scil. στοά), lit. 'royal colonnade', fem. of βασιλικός, 'kingly, royal', fr. βασιλεύς, 'king', which is of uncertain origin. It is possibly a loan word from a language of Asia Minor; cp. Lydian βάττος, 'king'. Cp. basil, the plant, basilisk.

basilic vein (anat.) — ML. vena basilica, fr. Arab. al-bāsillā, fr. al-, 'the', and bāsillā, a word of uncertain origin, which was confused by the translators of Avicenna with Gk. βασιλικός, 'royal' (see prec. word). The term vena basilica appears for the first time in a translation of Avicenna by Gerardus Cremonensis. See Joseph Hyrtl, Das Arabische und Hebräische in der Anatomie, Wien, 1879, pp. 74-77.

basilisk, n., a mythical serpent, cockatrice; a Central American lizard. — L. basiliscus, fr. Gk. βασιλισκος, 'princelet, chieftain, basilisk', dimin. of βασιλεύς, 'king'; so called after Pliny, Naturalis Historia, 8, 33, from ist 'crown', i.e. a white spot on its head. See basilica and cp. the second element in aspic, 'asp'.

basin, n. — ME., fr. OF. basin, bassin (F. bassin), fr. VL. **baccinum*, fr. bacchimon (cited by Gregory of Tours as a vulgar word), fr. **bacca*, 'a water vessel' (whence F. bac, 'vat'). See back, 'vat', and cp. next word.

basinet, n., a light steel helmet, later made with a visor. — ME., fr. OF. basinet, bassin (F. basinet), dimin. of basin, bassin (F. bassin), 'basin'. See prec. word and -et, and cp. bassin.

basis, n. — L., fr. Gk. βάσις. See base, n.

bask, intr. and tr. v. — ME. hasken, fr. ON. baðask, a reflexive verb lit. meaning 'to bathe oneself', fr. baða, 'to bathe' (see bathe), and reflex. suff. -sk.

basket, n. — ME., fr. L. bascauda, 'a martial vessel', referred to by the Roman poet Martial as an OBrit. word; cogn. with L. fascis, 'bundle, fagot'; see fascis. The orig. meaning of bascauda was prob. 'wicker basket'.

bason, n. — A variant of basin.

Basque, n. and adj. — F., fr. Sp. vasco, adj., fr. vascón, n., fr. L. Vascōnēs, name of the ancient inhabitants of the Pyrenees. According to Wilhelm von Humboldt, the name Vascōnēs orig. meant 'Foresters'. Cp. Gascon.

bas-relief, n., low relief. — F., fr. bas, 'low', and relief, 'raised work', fr. relever, 'to raise'. F. bas-relief is a loan translation of It. bassorilievo. See bass, adj., and relief and cp. basso-rilievo.

bass, n., any of various perchlike fishes. — Alteration of barse.

bass, adj. and n. (mus.) — It. basso, fr. Late L. bassus, 'low'. See base, adj., and cp. bassoon and the second element in contrabass.

bassanite, n., an anhydrous calcium sulfate (mineral.) — Named after F. Bassani, professor of geology in Naples. For the ending see subst. suff. -ite.

bassarid, n., a maenad (Greek mythol.) — Gk. βασσαρίς, gen. -ιδός, fr. βασσάρῃ, 'fox', a word of unknown etymology; so called because their dresses were made of foxskins.

basset, n., a variety of small hound. — F., formed with dimin. suff. -et fr. bas, 'low'. See base, adj.

bassetite, n., a phosphate of calcium and uranium (mineral.) — Named after the Basset mines in Cornwall.

bassinet, n., cradle. — Usually derived fr. F. bassin, 'a little basin', dim. of bassin, fr. OF. basin (see basin). This derivation, however, does not account for the sense of the English word. According to my opinion, E. bassinet is a blend of F. bercelonnette, 'a little cradle' (a collateral form of bercelonnette, fr. bercer, 'to rock'), and F. bassin, 'a little basin'.

basso, n., a bass voice. — It. See bass (mus.).

bassoon, n., a woodwind instrument. — F. basson, fr. It. bassone, fr. basso. See bass (mus.) and -oon.

bassoonist, n., player of a bassoon. — A hybrid coined fr. bassoon and suff. -ist.

basso-rilievo, n., bas-relief. — It. See bas-relief and rilievo and cp. cavo-relievo.

bast, n., the inner bark of the linden tree. — ME., fr. OE. hæst, rel. to ON., OS., MDu., OHG., MHG., G., **bast*, OHG. bestēn, 'to sew with bast', and prob. cogn. with L. fascis, 'bundle', see fascis. OE. hæst, etc., orig. meant 'that which serves for binding'. OF. bastir (whence F. bâtir, 'to build', is a loan word fr. Frankish **bastjan*, and orig. meant 'to sew or bind with bast'. Cp. baste, 'to sew loosely'. Cp. also bastille, bastion, and the second element in bundobust. For sense development cp. G. Wand, 'wall', which is rel. to wenden, 'to turn, twist' (see wand).

bastard, n., an illegitimate child. — OF. (F. bâtard), identical in meaning with filis de bast, 'acknowledged son of a nobleman, born out of wedlock', prop. 'son of concubinage', fr. bast, 'concubinage', which prob. derives fr. Teut. **banstī*, 'barn' (cp. Goth. bansts of s.m.); accordingly, OF. bastard lit. meant 'child born in a barn'. See Bloch-Wartburg, DELF., p. 60 s.v. bâtard.

Derivatives: bastard, adj., and the hybrids bastard-ize, tr. v., bastard-ization, n.

baste, tr. v., to soak, moisten. — Orig. pp. of a verb formed fr. OF. basser, 'to soak'; of uncertain origin.

Cain, n., in the Bible, the oldest son of Adam and Eve. — L., fr. Gk. Κάιν, fr. Heb. Qāyīn, lit. 'created, creature', from stem q-y-n, 'to form, fashion', whence also qāyīn, 'weapon', lit. 'that which is formed by the craftsman'. The same base appears in Aram. qēnā'ā, Syr. qēnāyā, 'worker in metal', and in Arab. qayn, 'craftsman, worker in steel or another metal, smith'. These words are rel. to Heb. qāndāh, 'he created, formed made' (for this meaning see Gen. 14: 19 and 22, Deut. 32:6, Ps. 139:13, Prov. 8:22), whence developed the meanings 'he got, acquired; he bought'. This relationship between the name Qāyīn and the verb qāndāh accounts best for the fact that in Gen. 4:1 Eve explains the name Qāyīn with the word qānīthī. This word is usually translated, 'I have gotten', but it is more probable that its sense here is 'I have formed', 'I have made'. See U. Cassuto, A Commentary on the Book of Genesis, Part One, From Adam to Noah, The Hebrew University, Jerusalem, 1961, pp. 196-202. Cp. Elkanah, kinah.

caisson, n., box, chest. — F., fr. It. cassone, which is formed with the augment. suff. -one fr. cassa, fr. L. capsa, 'chest, box, receptacle'. See case, 'chest', and -oon and cp. capsule. Derivative: caisson-ed, adj.

caitiff, n., a mean person, a coward; adj., mean, cowardly. — ME: caitif, 'captive, miserable', fr. ONF. caitif, which corresponds to OF. chaitif, 'captive; wretched' (whence F. chétif, 'weak, sickly; miserable, wretched'), fr. L. captivus, 'prisoner' (see captive). Caitiff represents the early borrowing, its doublet captive is a later scholarly form; both came into English through the medium of French.

caja, n., a cashier's office. — Sp., 'box, chest, cashier's office, fr. L. capsa, 'box, chest', fr. capere, 'to catch, seize, take, receive, hold'. See case, 'box', and cp. cash, 'ready money'. Cp. also cajeta.

cajapat, cajeput, n. — Variants of cajuput.

cajeta, n., a small chest. — Sp., dimin. of caja, 'box, chest'. See caja.

cajole, tr. and intr. v. — F. cajoler. The word orig. meant 'to chatter like a jay in a cage' and is an alteration of gaioler (a word used in the 16th cent.), fr. Picard gaiole, 'cage', fr. Late L. caveola, 'cage', dimin. of L. cavea, 'cage'; see cage. The change of gaioler to cajoler is due to the influence of F. cage.

Derivatives: cajale, n., cajole-ment, n., cajol-er, n., cajol-er-y, n., cajal-ing, adj., cajol-ing-ly, adv. Cajun, n., a native of Louisiana, supposed to be of Acadian French descent. — Corruption of Acadian.

cajuput, n., an East Indian tree. — Malay kāyupūth, lit., 'white tree', fr. kāyu, 'tree', and pūth, 'white'.

Catasetum, n., a genus of orchids (bot.) — A ModL., hybrid coined fr. cata- and L. saetum, 'bristle'; see seta. The correct form would be Catachaetum (fr. cata- and Gk. χαίτη, 'long flowing hair'), in which both elements are of Greek origin (see chaeto-).

catastasis, n., the part of a drama, in which the action is at its height. — Gk. κατάστασις, 'settlement, appointment, state, condition', fr. καθίσταναι, 'to set down, set in order', fr. κατά (see cata-) and ιστάναι, 'to place'. See state. catastroph, n. — L. catastroph, fr. Gk. καταστροφή, 'overturning, overthrowing', fr. καταστρέφειν, 'to upset, overturn, overthrow', lit. 'to turn down', fr. κατά (see cata-) and στρέφειν, 'to turn'. See strophe.

Derivatives: catastroph-ic, catastroph-ic-al, adjs., catastroph-ic-al-ly, adv., catastroph-ism, n., catastroph-ist, n.

catatonia, n., a severe form of dementia praecox (med.) — Medical L., fr. Gk. κατάτονος, 'a stretching down; depression', fr. κατατείνειν, 'to stretch down', fr. κατά (see cata-) and τείνειν, 'to stretch', which is cogn. with L. tenuis, 'thin, slight', tendere, 'to stretch'. See tend, 'to move in a certain direction', and cp. words there referred to. For the ending see suff. -ia.

Catawba, n., a kind of grape and wine. — Named after the Catawba River in the Carolinas.

catch, tr. and intr. v. — ME. cacchen, fr. ONF. cachier, corresponding to OF. chacier, F. chasser, 'to hunt', fr. VL. **captiāre*, fr. L. captiāre, 'to strive to seize', freq. of L. capere (pp. captus), 'to catch, seize, hold'. See captive and cp. chase, which is a doublet of catch. cp. also ketch, 'a kind of small vessel'.

Derivatives: catch, n., catch-er, n., catch-ing, adj., catch-ing-ly, adv., catch-ing-ness, n., catch-ment, n., catch-y, adj.

chrome, n., 1) chromium; 2) chrome steel. — F., coined by the French chemist Nicolas-Louis Vauquelin (1763-1829) in 1797 fr. Gk. χρῶμα, gen. χρώματος, 'surface of the body, skin, color of the skin, color', which is rel. to χρoιά, of s.m., χρῶς, gen. χρωτός, of s.m., χρῶζειν, 'to touch the surface of a body, to tinge, to color', fr. I.-E. base **ghrōu-*, **ghrō-*, 'to rub, smear, tinge', which is rel. to base **gher-*, 'to rub', whence Gk. χρίειν, 'to rub, anoint', χρίσμα, 'an unguent'. See chrisim and cp. -chroia, chroma, chromatic, and the second element in heliochrome, homochromous, metachromatism, metachrosis, monochroic, monochrome, parachroma. Derivative: chrome, tr. and intr. v.

chromic, adj., pertaining to chromium. — Formed fr. chromium with suff. -ic.

Derivative: chromic-ize, tr. v.

chromism, n., abnormal coloration. — Irregularly formed fr. Gk. χρῶμα, 'color', with suff. -ism.

The correct form is chromatism (q.v.)

chromite, n., oxide of iron and chromium,  $FeCr_2O_4$  (mineral.) — Formed fr. chromium with subst. suff. -ite.

Derivative: chromit-ite, n.

chromium, n., name of a metallic element (chem.) — ModL., coined by the French chemist Count Antoine-François de Fourcroy (1755-1809) and the French mineralogist René-Just Haüy (1743-1822) fr. Gk. χρῶμα, 'color'; see chrome and -ium. The element was so called by them because of its colored compounds.

Derivatives: chrom-ic, adj., chromite, n. (q.v.) chromo-, before a vowel chrom-, combining form denoting color or pigment. — Fr. Gk. χρῶμα, 'color'. See chromato-.

chromogen, n., the coloring matter of a plant. — Compounded of chromo- and -gen.

chromolithograph, n., colored picture printed from stones. — Compounded of chromo- and lithograph.

chromolithography, n., lithographing in colors. — See prec. word and -y (representing Gk. -ία). Derivative: chromolitho-graph-ic, adj.

chromophyll, n., pigment occurring in leaves (biochem.) — Compounded of chromo- and Gk. φύλλον, 'leaf'. See phyllo-.

chromosome, n., a minute body occurring in definite number in the cells of a given animal species (biol.) — Coined by the German anatomist Wilhelm von Waldeyer-Hartz (1836-1921) in 1888 fr. Gk. χρῶμα, 'color', and σῶμα, 'body'. See chromo- and -some, combining form denoting the body.

chromosphere, n., envelope of gas around the sun (astron.) — Compounded of chromo- and sphere. Derivative: chromospher-ic, adj.

chromotype, n., a photograph in colors. — Compounded of chromo- and type.

chromotography, n., printing in colors. — Compounded of chromo- and typography.

chromotypy, n., the same as chromotography. — See chromotype and -y (representing Gk. -ία).

chromous, adj., pertaining to chromium (chem.) — See chromium and -ous.

chron-, form of chrono- before a vowel.

chronaxy, chronaxie, n., the shortest time required to cause the excitation of a nerve cell by an electric current (physiol.) — F. chronaxie, coined by the French physiologist Louis Lapicque (1866-1952) in 1909 fr. Gk. χρῶνος, 'time', and ἀξία, 'worth, value', which is rel. to ἄξιος, 'worthy'. See chrono- and axiom.

chronic, adj., 1) lasting a long time; 2) habitual. — F. chronique, fr. L. chronicus, fr. Gk. χροικός, 'pertaining to time', fr. χρόνος, 'time', which prob. stands for **ghr-on-os* and derives fr. I.-E. base **gher-*, 'to seize, take, hold, close, envelop', whence also Gk. χέρ, 'hand'; see chiro-. Time is regarded as 'that which embraces all things'. See Hofmann, EWG., p. 424 s.v. χρόνος. Cp. chronicle, crony, and the second element in isochronous, anachronism, metachronism, parachronism.

Derivatives: chronic-al-ly, adv., chronic-i-ty, n., chronicle (q.v.), chron-ist, n.

chronicle, n. — ME. cronicle, fr. cronique, cronike, fr. OF. cronique (F. chronique), fr. L. chronica, neut. pl. mistaken for a fem. sing., fr. Gk. τὰ χρονικά, neut. pl. of χρονικός, 'pertaining to time', fr. χρόνος, 'time'. See prec. word.

comedy, n. — F. comédie, fr. L. cōmoedia, fr. Gk. κωμῳδία, 'comedy', fr. κωμῳδός, 'comic actor' (orig. 'singer in the κῶμος or comic chorus'), contraction of κωμοαοιδός, which is compounded of κῶμος, 'revel, carousal, merry-making, comic chorus', and αοιδός, 'singer'. The first element is of uncertain origin; it is perh. rel. to Gk. κῶμη, 'village'. See home and cp. comic, Comus, encomium, afikoman. The second element is rel. to Gk. αείδειν, 'to sing', αοιδή, φῶδή, 'song'; see ode and words there referred to and cp. esp. tragedy.

comely, adj. — ME. cumelich, cumlich, comeliche, comlich, fr. OE. cymlic, formed with suff. -lic (see like, adj.), fr. cyme, 'fine, beautiful, splendid', orig. 'frail, delicate, tender', which is rel. to ME. kime, 'weak, delicate', OHG. chūmo, kūmō, MHG. kūme, 'with difficulty', OHG. chūmīg, kūmīg, 'weak, delicate', G. kaum, 'hardly, scarcely'. The original meaning of ME. kīme and OHG. chūmīg was 'amentable, pitiable'; cp. OHG. chūma, 'sorrow', OHG. chūmōn, 'to mourn', OS. kūmian, 'to lament, deplore'. All these words are derivatives of the I.-E. imitative base **gou-*, **gow-*, 'to shout, cry' whence also OE. ciegan (for orig. **kaujan*), 'to call', cȳta, 'kite', OI. gavatē, 'sounds, resounds', Gk. γοῶν, 'to wail, groan, weep', MLG. kūten, 'to chatter, babble, prate', Lith. gaudziū, gaūsti, 'to howl', gāudas, 'lamentation', OSlav. govoritī, 'to make a noise', Russ. govoritī, Serb. and Croatiangovoritī, Czech hovoriti, Slovak hovoritī, 'to speak', OIr. guth, 'voice'. Cp. kite. The word comely was influenced in meaning by an association with come.

Derivatives: comeli-ly, adv., comeli-ness, n. comestible, adj., eatable. — F., formed with suff. -ible fr. L. comestus, a collateral form of comēsus, pp. of comedere, 'to eat up, consume', fr. com- and edere, 'to eat'. See edible and cp. comedo.

comet, n. — L. comētēs, fr. Gk. κομήτης (scil. ἀστῆρ), 'comet', lit. 'a long-haired (star)', fr. κομῶν, 'to wear long hair', fr. κῶμη, 'hair'. See coma, 'a tuft of hairs'.

concert, n. — F., fr. It. concerto. Most lexicographers derive this word fr. L. concertāre, 'to dispute, contend'. This etymology cannot be accepted because of the great discrepancy in meaning. The origin of It. concerto and concertare must be sought in another Latin word. It. concertare prob. comes fr. L. concertāre, 'to sing together' (whence concertus, 'symphony, harmony, harmonious music, concert'), fr. con- and cantāre, 'to sing'. See cant, 'slang of beggars', and cp. concert. For the change of Latin ā (in cantāre) to ē (in con-cēntāre) see accent. For the change of -nt- to -rt-, which is due to dissimilation, cp. L. carmen, 'song', dissimilated fr. **carmen* (fr. canere, 'to sing'), and germen, 'bud, sprout', dissimilated fr. **gen-men* (see charm and germ).

congregate, adj., assembled. — L. congregātus, 'flocking together', pp. of congregāre, 'to flock together', fr. con- and gregāre, 'to gather into a flock', from grex, gen. gregis, 'flock'. See gregarious and adj. suff. -ate.

congregate, tr. and intr. v., to gather into a crowd; to assemble. — L. congregātus, pp. of congregāre. See prec. word.

congregation, n. — F. congrégation, fr. L. congregātiōnem, acc. of congregātiō, fr. congregātus, pp. of congregāre. See congregate, adj., and -ation. Derivatives: congregational, adj., congregationalism, n., congregationalist, n.

congress, n. — L. congressus, 'a coming together, a friendly meeting', fr. congressus, pp. of congrēdi, 'to come or go together', fr. con- and gradī, pp. gressus, 'to step, walk, go'. See grade, 'step', and cp. gradus and retrograde. The change of Latin ā (in gradī) to ē (in congrēssus) is due to the Latin linguistic law according to which, in the second element of compounds, ā in a closed radical syllable regularly became ē. See accent and cp. words there referred to. (The pp. of gradī should be **grassus*. The form gressus is due to the influence of the past participles of the compounds: con-gressus, prō-gressus, etc.) Derivatives: congresser, n., congression (q.v.), congressive, adj.

congressional, adj., 1) pertaining to a congress; 2) (cap.) pertaining to Congress. — Formed with adj. suff. -al fr.
