crayon, n., a stick of colored chalk. — F., 'pencil', orig. 'a chalk pencil', derived fr. cræie, 'chalk', fr. L. crēta, lit. 'sifted earth', fr. (terra) crēta, fem. pp. of cernere, 'to sift' (see certain). The usual derivation of Latin crēta, 'chalk', from Crēta, the Latin name of the isle of Crete, is erroneous. Any Latin derivative of the island name Crēta must needs have a Latin suff. If crēta, 'chalk', were really a derivative of the island name Crēta, its form should be crētica or crētēnsis, etc. (for terra Crētica or Crētēnsis, lit. 'earth of Crete'). Confusion with the isle of Crete is prob. due to the fact that Cimolus (Gk. Κίμωλος), one of the islands of the Cretan Sea, was famous for the chalk produced there (see cimolite). For the sense development of L. crēta, 'chalk', lit. 'sifted earth', cp. OSlav. mělŭ, 'lime', and Russ. mělŭ, 'chalk', fr. OSlav. měljo, młēti, 'to grind'. Cp. It. creta, OProvenç., Catal., Sp., Port. greda, MLG. krīte, MDu. (= Du.) krijt, OS. krīda, MHG. krīde (G. Kreide), Bret. creiz, etc., which all derive fr. L. crēta. The word crayon was introduced into English by the English diarist John Evelyn (1620-1706).

crayon, tr. v., to draw with a crayon. — F. crayonner, 'to draw with a pencil', fr. crayon, 'pencil'. See crayon, n.

crayonist, n. — F. crayonniste, 'one who draws with a pencil', a hybrid coined fr. F. crayon (see crayon, n., 1), and suff. -iste (fr. Gk. -ιστής, see -ist).

craze, tr. and intr. v. — ME. crasen, 'to break, crack', of Scand. origin. Cp. Swed. krasa, 'to crackle'. F. écraser (fr. earlier acraser), is from the same source. Swed. krasa is of imitative origin and related to E. crash and crack (qq.v.) Derivatives: craze, n., craz-ed, adj., crazy (q.v.) crazy, adj. — Formed fr. craze with suff. -y (corresponding to OE. -ig).

It was in this gymnasium that Antisthenes taught, whence his disciples were called κυνικοί, lit. 'of Cynosarges'. (For sense development cp. stoic and academician, which are also formed from place-names.) The usual derivation of Gk. κυνικός, 'a cynic', fr. κύων, gen. κυνός, 'dog', and the explanation that κυνικός orig. denoted a 'dog-like' philosopher, is erroneous. The only connection between a cynic and a dog is given by the quite incidental fact that the first element in the name Κυνόσαργες comes fr. κύων, gen. κυνός, 'dog' (see cyno-).

Derivatives: cynic, cynic-al, adjs., cynic-al-ly, adv., cynic-ism, n., cynic-ist, n.

Danaüs, n., a king of Argos, who commanded his fifty daughters, the Danaides, to murder their husbands on the wedding night (Greek mythol.) — L. Danaus, fr. Gk. Δανάος (whence the pl. Δαναοί, 'the Danaäns', i.e. 'descendants or subjects of Danaüs', whence 'the Greeks', in general), which prob. derives fr. Heb.-Phoen. Dān, and lit. means 'one who judges'; see Dan, PN., and cp. Danaë, Danaides. This etymol. is corroborated by the fact that the myth of Belus and the Danaides "records the early arrival in Greece of Helladic colonists from Palestine" (quoted from Robert Graves, 'The Greek Myths', I, p. 203, Penguin Books). For other Greek mythological names of Hebrew origin cp. Cadmus, Niobe. — According to Kretschmer, Glotta 24, 15 ff., the Danaäns are identical with the men of Tanaus, king of the Scythians, who allegedly came to Argos in the 15th cent. B.C.E. and became blended with the Greeks. Kretschmer also assumes that there is a relationship between Tanaus and the river names Tanaïs and L. Dānubius (whence F. and E. Danube), and Dānu-, name of an Indo-Iranian people. See Frisk, GEW., I, p. 347 s.v. Δανάος and cp. Albert Carnoy, Dictionnaire étymologique de la mythologie gréco-romaine, p. 42 s.v. **Danaos*. — Cp. Danaë, Danaides.

delay, tr. and intr. v., to defer, postpone. — ME. delaïen, fr. OF. delaier, fr. de- and laier, 'to let, leave'. Originally the verb laier occurred only in those forms of the present, in which the radical was stressed, and in the future. These forms prob. derive from the respective forms of OF. laissier, 'to let, leave', and were influenced in their conjugation by that of faire, 'to do'. (See Bloch-Wartburg, DELF., p. 176 s.v. dēlai.) OF. laissier (whence F. laisser) derives fr. L. laxāre, 'to unloose, relax', fr. laxus, 'loose'. See lax and cp. relay.

Derivatives: delay, n., delay-age, n., delay-er, n., delay-ing-ly, adv.

del credere, a phrase expressing the obligation of an agent who guarantees the solvency of a buyer (law). — It., lit. 'of trust'. Del is contracted from the prep. de, 'of' (fr. L. dē), and the def. art. il (fr. L. illum, acc. of ille, 'that one'). See de- and ille. It. credere derives fr. L. crēdere, 'to believe'. See creed.

dele, v., typographic direction to blot out a letter, a word, etc. — L. dēlē, imper. sing. of dēlēre, 'to destroy; wipe out, blot out, efface'. See delete.

delectable, adj., delightful. — OF. (F. délectable), fr. L. dēlectābilis, 'delightful', fr. dēlectāre, 'to delight'. See next word and -able.

Derivatives: delectabil-ity, n., delectable-ness, n., delectabl-y, adv.

delectation, n., delight, enjoyment. — OF. delectation (F. délectation), fr. L. dēlectātiōnem, acc. of dēlectātiō, 'a delighting, pleasure, amusement', fr. dēlectātus, pp. of dēlectāre, 'to delight, charm, amuse', freq. of dēlicere, 'to entice', fr. de- and lacere, 'to entice', which is cogn. with laqueus, 'noose snare'. See lace, n., and cp. words there referred to.

delectus, n., a collection of passages for translation. — L. dēlectus, 'choice, selection', fr. dēlectus, pp. of dēligere, 'to pick out, choose, select', fr. de- and legere, 'to choose; to read'. See lecture.

delegate, n. — L. dēlēgātus, pp. of dēlēgāre, 'to send, assign, delegate, transfer', fr. de- and lēgāre, 'to send with a commission, appoint as a deputy'. See legate.

delegate, adj., delegated. — L. dēlēgātus, pp. of dēlēgāre. See delegate, n.

delegation, n. — L. dēlēgātiō, gen. -ōnis, 'assignment, delegation', fr. dēlēgātus, pp. of dēlēgāre. See delegate, n., and -ion.

delete, tr. v., to erase. — L. dēlētus, pp. of dēlēre, 'to efface, abolish, obliterate, destroy', which is prob. a back formation from dē-lēvi (misinterpreted as dēlē-vī), perf. of dē-linere, 'to besmear', fr. de- and linere, 'to daub, smear' (applied esp. to the wax on the writing table). Accordingly the orig. meaning of dēlēre prob. was 'to wipe out'. See liniment and cp. slime. Cp. also dele, delible.

Gk. δὴλητήριος, 'noxious', fr. δὴλητήρ, 'destroyer', fr. δὴλεῖσθαι, 'to hurt, damage', which is cogn. with Toch. A tālo, B tallāwo, 'miserable, wretched', Lett. delīt, 'to wear out, worry, harass'. These words prob. meant orig. 'to cut, split', whence 'to hurt by cutting', and derive fr. I.-E. base **del-*, **dol-*, 'to split, cut, carve', whence also L. dolāre 'to hew with an ax'. See dole, 'grief', and words there referred to. For the ending see suff. -ous. The word deleterious was introduced into English by the physician Sir Thomas Browne (1605-82).

demean, tr. v., to conduct (oneself). — ME. demeinen, demenen, fr. OF. demener, 'to guide, conduct' (whence F. se démener, 'to struggle'), fr. de- and mener, 'to lead', fr. VL. mināre, 'to drive (cattle)', prop. 'to drive by threatening' (whence also It. menare, 'to lead'), fr. L. mināri, 'to threaten' (whence Rum. mână, 'to threaten'). See minatory and cp. menace, promenade.
demean, tr. v., to debase. — Formed fr. de- and mean, 'low'.
demeanor, demeanour, n. — Formed fr. ME. demeanure, 'behavior', with change of suff. due to the influence of nouns ending in -or, -our. See demean, 'to behave', and -or (representing OF. -our, -or).
dement, tr. v., to cause to become mad. — L. dēmentāre, 'to drive mad, craze', fr. dēmēns, gen. dēmētis, 'mad, raving, crazy', lit. 'out of one's mind', fr. de- and mēns, gen. mentis, 'mind'. See mental, 'pertaining to the mind', and cp.  dementia.
 Derivatives: dement-ed, adj., dement-ed-ly, adv.
démenti, n., an official denial. — F., prop. pp. of démentir, 'to give the lie to, contradict', used as a noun, fr. dé- (see de-) and mentir (fr. L. mentīri), 'to lie'. See mendacious.
dementia, n., a form of insanity. — L. dēmēntia, 'insanity, madness', lit. 'a being out of one's mind', fr. dēmēns, gen. -entis, 'mad, raving, crazy'. See dement.
demerit, n., want of merit, ill desert. — OF. demerite (F. démérite), 'blame, demerit', fr. VL. dēmeritum, 'fault', fr. pref. dē-, taken in a privative sense (see de-), and meritum, 'desert, reward, merit'; see merit. In contradistinction to VL. dēmeritum, 'fault', classical L. dēmeritum means 'merit, desert'. This contrast of meaning finds its explanation in the fact that classical L. dēmeritum prop. is the neut. pp. of dēmerēre, dēmerēri, 'to merit, deserve', in which the pref. dē has intensive force; cp. next word.
demerit, tr. v., to merit, deserve (archaic). — F. démériter, 'to deserve ill', fr. démérite. See prec. word.
demersal, adj., sunk to the bottom (said of the eggs of fish). — Formed with adj. suff. -al from the obsolete verb demerse, 'to immerse', fr. L. dēmersus, pp. of dēmergere, 'to submerge', fr. de- and mergere, 'to plunge, immerse'. See merge.

demesne, n., 1) possession (of land) as one's own (law); 2) an estate kept by the owner for his own use. — ME. demein, fr. AF. demeine, demesne (with silent s), fr. OF. demaine, demeine (whence also F. domaine, 'domain, estate'), fr. L. dominicus, 'pertaining to the lord', fr. dominus, 'lord, master'. See domain. The s in demesne is prob. due to an erroneous association of this word with OF. maisniee, mesnee, 'household', fr. VL. **mānsionāta*, fr. L. mānsiō, gen. -ōnis, 'habitation' (see mansion).

Demeter, n., the goddess of agriculture in Greek mythology. — Gk. Δημήτηρ, Dor. Gk. Δῆμᾶτηρ, lit. 'earth-mother', fr. δᾶ, Doric equivalent of Gk. γῆ, 'earth', and μᾶτηρ, Doric equivalent of Gk. μήτηρ, 'mother'. See geo- and mother and cp. next word.

demi-, pref. meaning 'half'. — F. demi, 'half', fr. VL. dīmedius, a blend of L. medius, 'middle', and dīmidius, 'half'. This latter is a back formation fr. dīmidiatūs, 'halved', pp. of dīmidiare, 'to halve', fr. dis-, dī-, and medius, 'middle'. OProvenç. demeg, 'half', also derives fr. VL. dīmedius. ellagic, adj., rel. to the acid C<sub>14</sub>H<sub>6</sub>O<sub>8</sub> (chem.) — F. ellagique, coined by the French chemist Henri Braconnot (1781-1855) fr. ellag, anagram of galle, 'gallnut' (see gall, 'gallnut'), and -ique: so called by him because it was first obtained from oak galls.

Ellen, fem. PN. — An earlier form of Helen.

ellipse, n., one of the three conic sections (geom.) — Back formation fr. L. ellipsēs, pl. of ellipsis, 'want, defect, omission, ellipse', fr. Gk. ἔλλειψις,

'a falling short, defect', fr. ἔλλειπειν, 'to fall short of, fail, omit', fr. ἐν (see en-) and λείπειν, 'to leave, forsake, be behind', which is cogn. with L. linquere, 'to leave'; see relinquish and cp. eclipse. The Pythagoreans used the word ἔλλειψις if the base of a figure, that was to be constructed so that it should be equal in area to a given figure of different shape, fell short of the base of the original figure. Apollonius of Perga, 'the Great Geometer', who lived in the 3rd cent. B.C.E., applied the term ἔλλειψις for the first time to denote the ellipse (in his Conica, I 13), in reference to the circumstance that the square on the ordinate is equal to a rectangle whose height is equal to the abscissa, applied to the parameter, but falling short of it; see parabola and cp. hyperbola.

ellipsis, n., omission of one or more words (gram.) — L., fr. Gk. ἔλλειψις, 'a falling short, defect'. See prec. word.

ellipsoid, n., a solid figure, all plane sections of which are ellipses or circles; adj., pertaining to, or resembling, an ellipsoid (geom.) — Lit. 'ellipse-shaped'. See ellipse and -oid and cp. ellipsoid.

Gk. ἐπιφυσις, 'outgrowth, excrescence; epiphysis', fr. ἐπιφύσσειν, 'to grow on', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and φύσσειν, 'to grow', pass. of φύω, 'to bring forth, produce, make to grow'. See physio- and cp. apophysis, diaphysis.

epiphyte, n., any non-parasitic plant growing on another plant (bot.) — Lit. 'growing on a plant', fr. epi- and -phyte. Cp. prec. word.

epiphytic, adj., of the nature of an epiphyte (bot.) — See prec. word and -ic.

epiploitis, n., inflammation of the epiploon (med.) — Medical L., formed fr. next word with suff. -itis.

epiploon, n., the great omentum (anat.) — Medical L., fr. Gk. ἐπίπλοον, 'omentum', which stands for *ἐπί-πλοφον. For the prefix see epi-. Gk. -πλοφον in *ἐπί-πλοφον derives fr. I.-E. base *pel-, 'skin', whence also Gk. πέλας, 'sole of foot or shoe', L. pellis, 'hide, skin', OE. filmen, 'membrane'. See fell, 'hide', and cp. words there referred to. The explanation of Galen and Oribasius that ἐπίπλοον derives fr. ἐπιπλεῖν, 'to swim or sail against' (quoted by Joseph Hyrtl, Onomatologia Anatomica, p. 204), and that the omentum is so called because it seems 'to swim over the intestines', is folk etymology. episcopacy, n., church government by bishops. — Formed with suff. -acy fr. Eccles. L. episcopus. See next word.

episcopal, adj., pertaining to, or governed by, bishops. — Eccles. L. episcopālis, 'episcopal', fr. L. episcopus, 'an overseer', in Eccles. L., 'bishop'. See bishop.

Derivative: episcopal-ly, adv.

episcopalian, adj., pertaining to bishops or to episcopacy. — See prec. word and -ian.

Derivative: episcopalian-ism, n.

episcopalism, n., the doctrine that authority resides in a body of bishops and not in any individual. — Formed with suff. -ism fr. Eccles. L. episcopālis. See episcopal.

episcopate, n., 1) the office or dignity of a bishop; 2) the whole body of bishops. — Eccles. L. episcopātus, 'dignity of a bishop', fr. episcopus, 'bishop'. See episcopal and subst. suff. -ate.

episio-, combining form denoting 'relation to the vulva'. — Fr. Gk. ἐπίσιον, ἐπίσιον, 'public region', which is of unknown origin.

episiotomy, n., the cutting of the tissues of the pudenda (obstetrics). — Coined by Braun in 1857 fr. episio- and Gk. -τομή, 'a cutting of', fr. τομή, 'a cutting'. See -omy.

episode, n. — Gk. ἐπεισόδιον, 'addition, episode', prop. neut. of the adjective ἐπεισόδιος, 'coming in besides, adventitious', fr. ἐπί, 'at, on, in addition to' (see epi-), εἰς, ἐς (for *ἐνς, 'into', rel. to ἐν, 'in'; see 2nd en-) and ὁδός, 'way' (see odograph).

Derivatives: episod-ic, episod-ic-al, adjs., episod-ic-al-ly, adv.

epispastic, adj., causing blistering of the skin (med.) — Gk. ἐπισπαστικός, 'drawing in', fr. ἐπίσπαστος, 'drawn in', verbal adj. of ἐπισπᾶν, 'to draw in', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and σπᾶν, 'to draw'. See spasm and cp. spastic.

Derivative: epispastic, n., an epispastic agent. epistaxis, n., bleeding of the nose (med.) — Medical L., lit. 'dropping', fr. Gk. ἐπιστάζειν, 'to let fall in drops upon', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and στάζειν, 'to drop'. See stacte.

epistemic, adj., pertaining to knowledge. — Formed with suff. -ic fr. Gk. ἐπιστήμη, 'knowledge, understanding', fr. ἐπίσταμαι, 'I understand, know', lit. 'I stand upon', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and ἵσταμαι, 'I stand'. See state. For sense development cp. E. understand.

epistemology, n., the theory of knowledge. — Coined by the Scottish philosopher James Frederick Ferrier (1808-64) in his Institutes of Metaphysics (1854), fr. Gk. ἐπιστήμη, 'knowledge, understanding', and -λογία, fr. -λόγος, 'one who speaks (in a certain manner); one who deals (with a certain topic)'. See epistemic and -logy.

Derivatives: epistemolog-ic-al, adj., epistemolog-ic-al-ly, adv., epistemolog-ist, n.

episternum, n., the interclavicle (zool.) — ModL., lit. '(bone) upon the chest', formed fr. epi- and sternum.

epistle, n., letter. — OF. epistle, epistre (F. épître), fr. L. epistola, fr. Gk. ἐπιστολή, 'a letter', lit. 'something sent, message', fr. ἐπιστέλλω, 'to send to; to order, command', fr. ἐπί, 'upon, to' (see epi-), and στέλλω, 'to set in order, arrange, equip, make ready, send out'. See stall and cp. stela. For the sense development of Gk. ἐπιστολή, 'something sent, letter', cp. Akkad. shipru, shipir, 'message, letter, document', fr. shapāru, 'to send'.

epistler, n., epistoler. — Formed fr. epistle with agential suff. -er.

epistolary, adj., pertaining to epistles. — F. épistolaire, fr. L. epistolāris, 'epistolary', fr. epistola. See epistle and adj. suff. -ary.

epistoler, n., the priest who reads the Epistle at the Eucharistic service (eccles.) — F. épistolier, fr. L. epistolāris, 'one celebrated for his letters', fr. epistola, 'letter'. See epistle and agential suff. -er.

epistrophe, n., repetition of the same word at the end of successive clauses or sentences (rhet.) — Late L., fr. Gk. ἐπιστροφή, 'a turning about', fr. ἐπιστρέφω, 'to turn about', fr. ἐπί, 'upon, to' (see epi-), and στρέφω, 'to turn'. See strophe and cp. apostrophe and words there referred to.

epistropheus, n., name of the second vertebra (anat.) — Gk. ἐπιστροφεύς, 'that which causes to turn', fr. ἐπιστρέφω, 'to cause to turn, to turn about'. See epistrophe. The name is inexact, because it is the first cervical vertebra that turns about the alveolar process of the second vertebra, and indeed, originally epistropheus was the name of the first vertebra. See Joseph Hyrtl, Onomatologia anatomica, pp. 59-61.

Derivative: epistrophe-al, adj.

epistyle, n., an architrave (archit.) — L. epistylum, fr. Gk. ἐπιστύλιον, fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and στύλος, 'pillar, column'. See style, 'gnomon', and cp. words there referred to. Cp. also next word.

epitaph, n., inscription of a tomb. — L. epitaphium, fr. Gk. ἐπιτάφιον, 'a funeral oration', prop. neut. of the adj. ἐπιτάφιος, 'over a tomb', used as a noun, fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and τάφος, 'tomb'. See cenotaph.

Derivatives: epitaph, tr. and intr. v., epitaph-er, n., epitaph-ic, adj., epitaph-ist, n.

epitasis, n., that part of the play in which the main action is developed, leading to the catastrophe. — ModL., fr. Gk. ἐπίτασις, 'a stretching upon or over', fr. ἐπιτείνειν, 'to stretch upon or over', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and τείνειν, 'to stretch'. See tasimeter and cp. eetasis and words there referred to.

epithalamium, n., a bridal song. — L., fr. Gk. ἐπιθάλμιον, 'a bridal song', fr. ἐπί, 'at' (see epi-), and θάλαμος, 'bridal chamber'. See thalamus. Derivatives: epithalami-al, epithalam-ic, adjs.

epithelio-, before a vowel epitheli-, combining form, meaning 'pertaining to the epithelium'. — See next word.

epithelium, n., cellular tissue forming the outer layer of the mucous membrane in animals (anat.) — Medical L., coined by the Dutch anatomist Fredrik Ruysch (1638-1731). The word lit. means 'that which is above the nipple', fr. epi- and Gk. θηλή, 'nipple'. See thely- and cp. words there referred to.

Derivatives: epitheli-al, adj., epithel-ize, tr. v., epithel-iz-ation, n., epithel-oid, adj.

epithet, n., a descriptive name for a person or thing. — L. epitheton, fr. Gk. ἐπίθετον, 'something added', neut. verbal adj. of ἐπιτιθέναι, 'to add something to', fr. ἐπί, 'on, to' (see epi-), and τιθέναι, 'to put, place'. See theme and cp. words there referred to.

epithetic, epithetical, adj., 1) pertaining to an epithet; 2) full of epithets. — Gk. ἐπιθετικός, 'added', fr. ἐπίθετος, verbal adj. of ἐπιτιθέναι. See prec. word and -ic, resp. also -al. Derivative: epithetic-al-ly, adv.

epitomator, n., an epitomist. — ML., fr. L. epitōmātus, pp. of epitōmare, 'to abridge, epitomize', fr. epitōmē. See next word and -ator. Derivative: epitomator-y, adj.

epitome, n., a summary. — L. epitōmē, 'abridgment', fr. Gk. ἐπιτομή, 'abridgment', lit. 'a cutting into', fr. ἐπιτέμνειν, 'to make incisions into, cut into, cut short, abridge', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and τέμνειν, 'to cut'. See to me.

Derivatives: epitōm-ist, n., epitōm-ize, tr. v.

epitrite, n., a foot consisting of three long syllables and one short (pros.) — L. epitritus, fr. Gk. ἐπίτριτος, 'containing an integer and one third; in the ratio of four to three ( $1\frac{1}{3} = \frac{4}{3} = 4:3$ )'; formed fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and τρίτος, 'third'. See trito-.

epitrochlea, n., the medial condyle of the humerus (anat.) — ModL., fr. F. épitrochlée, a name formed erroneously by the French anatomist and surgeon François Chaussier (1746-1828), fr. epi- and trochlea. In this name the meaning of Gk. ἐπί, 'on', is confused with that of παρά, 'beside'. The same confusion of the meanings of Gk. ἐπί and παρά led to Chaussier's coining the word epicandyle (q.v.)

epizeuxis, n., repetition of a word or words for the sake of emphasis (rhet.) — Late L., fr. Gk. ἐπιζευξις, lit. 'a joining or fastening together', fr. ἐπιζευγνύμαι, 'to join to', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and ζευγνύμαι, 'to joke, join'. See zygo- and cp. zeuxite.

epizoon, n., an external parasite (zool.) — ModL., formed fr. epi- and ζῷον, 'animal'. See zoo-. epizootic, adj., 1) parasitic on other animals; 2) (of diseases) prevalent temporarily among animals (corresponding to epidemic diseases in man). — See prec. word and cp. enzootic.

epoch, n. — Late L. epocha, fr. Gk. ἐποχή, 'check, cessation, stoppage, pause; epoch of a star; fixed point in time, epoch', fr. ἐπέχειν, 'to keep back, withhold, stop, pause', fr. ἐπί (see epi-) and ἔχειν, 'to hold, have, possess'. See hectic and cp. apocha.

Essene, n., a member of an ancient Jewish sect of ascetics, first appearing in history in the 2nd century B.C.E. — L. Essēni (pl.), 'the Essenes', fr. Gk. Ἐσσηνοί. Most scholars derive this word from Heb. tzēnū'im, 'the modest ones', or from Heb. hāshā'im, 'the silent ones'. It is more probable, however, that Gk. Ἐσσηνοί derives fr. Syr. hāsēn, pl. absolute state of hāsē, 'pious'; cp. the pl. emphatic state hasayyā, whence the parallel Greek form Ἐσσαῖοι. This etymology gains in probability by the fact that Philo (in Quod omnis probus liber sit, § 13) identifies the Essenes with the 'Pious' (τῶν Ἐσσαιῶν ἢ οἴσιων = 'of the Essenes or the Pious').

Derivatives: Essen-ian, adj., Essen-ian-ism, n., Essen-ic, Essen-ic-al, adjs., Essen-ism, n., Essen-ize, tr. v.

farrier, n., 1) one who shoes horses; a blacksmith; 2) (archaic) a veterinary surgeon. — ME. ferrouer, fr. OF. ferrier, fr. L. ferrārius, 'blacksmith', fr. ferrum, 'iron', fr. **fersom*, a word of Sem. origin. Cp. Heb.-Phoen. barzēl, Syr. parzēlā, Akkad. parzillu, 'iron'. According to my opinion, the loss of the Sem. ending -el, resp. -illu is prob. due to its having been mistaken for the Latin dimin. suff. -ellus, -illus and consequently dropped. It is very probable that the Etruscans who coming from Asia Minor settled in Etruria, served as mediators, a supposition rendered probable by the circumstance that in Europe, iron appears for the first time in Etruria. Cp. ferro-. Cp. also brass, brazen. Derivatives: farrier, intr. v., farrier-y, n.

farrow, n., a litter of pigs. — OE. fearh, 'young pig', rel. to OHG. farh, farah, 'pig', farhili(n), MHG. verhelin, G. Ferkel, 'little pig', and cognate with L. porcus, 'pig'. See pork and cp. the second element in aardvark.

fascinate, tr. v., to attract, charm. — L. fascinātus, pp. of fascināre, 'to enchant, bewitch, charm', fr. fascinum, 'charm, witchcraft', which was prob. borrowed fr. Gk. βάσκανος, 'sorcerer', but was later formally associated with L. fāri, 'to speak', or with L. fascis, 'bundle'. Gk. βάσκανος (whence βασκαίνειν, 'to bewitch'), prob. derives from a Northern—possibly Thracian—equivalent of Gk. φάσκειν, 'to say', fr. I.-E. **bh<sup>h</sup>-skō-*, pres. tense enlargement of base **bhā-*, 'to speak', whence Gk. φημί, 'I say', φήμη, 'a voice, report', L. fāma, 'report, rumor, tradition, reputation', fāri, 'to speak'. See fame and verbal suff. -ate. L. fascinum is not related to L. fascis, 'bundle'. See Walde-Hofmann, LEW., I, 459, and Frisk, GEW., I, 223-224. For the sense development of Gk. βάσκανος, 'sorcerer', βασκαίνειν, 'to bewitch', from a base meaning 'to speak', cp. G. besprechen, 'to speak of; to charm', fr. sprechen, 'to speak'.

See fact and cp. -ficate, -fy. The suff. -fic is connected with the primary word by the thematic vowel -i- (cp. e.g. aur-i-fic, color-i-fic).

-ficate, verbal suff. meaning 'to make, cause'. — L. -ficātus, pp. suff. of verbs in -ficāre. See -fic and verbal suff. -ate and cp. -fy.

-fication, subst. suff. denoting a making or causing. — F. -fication, fr. L. -ficātiōnem, acc. of -ficātio, fr. -ficātus. See -ficate and -ion.

ficelle, adj., string-colored. — F., 'string, thread, cord', fr. VL. **filicella*, a double dimin. derived fr. L. filum, 'thread'. See file, 'collection of papers'.

fichu, n., a kind of small triangular garment worn by women round the neck. — F., 'neckerchief', popular pp. of ficher, 'to fix' (influenced in form by a coarser synonym), fr. VL. **figi-cāre*, a derivative of L. figere, 'to fix'. See fix.

fickle, adj. — ME. fikel, fr. OE. ficol, 'deceitful', rel. to OE. be-fician, 'to deceive', OE. fācen, OS. fēkan, OHG. feihhan, 'deceit, fraud, treachery', OE. fāh, 'hostile', OHG. fēhan, 'to hate', fr. I.-E. base **peig-*, 'evil-minded, treacherous, hostile', whence also L. piget, 'it irks, troubles, displeases', piger, 'reluctant, averse, lazy'. Cp. the collateral base **peik-*, whose derivatives see under feud, 'enmity', fey and foe.

Derivatives: fickle-ness, n., fickl-y, adv. (rare). ficoid, adj., resembling a fig. — A hybrid coined fr. L. ficus, 'fig', and Gk. -οειδής, 'like', fr. εἶδος, 'form, shape'. See Ficus and -oid.

ficlike, adj., capable of being molded, plastic. — L. fictilis, 'made of clay, earthen', fr. fictus, pp. of ingere, 'to form, shape, invent'. See next word and -ile.

fiction, n. — F., fr. L. fictiōnem, acc. of fictiō, 'a forming, shaping', fr. fictus, pp. of ingere, 'to form, shape'. The original meaning of this verb was 'to knead'. It derives fr. I.-E. base **dheigh-*, **dhoigh-*, **dhigh-*, 'to knead, form out of clay, form, shape', whence also OE. dāg, 'dough'; see dough and -ion. For the change of the concrete meaning to the abstract cp. L. comprehendere, 'to seize, grasp; to comprehend, understand' (see comprehend).

Derivatives: fictionist (q.v.), fiction-al, adj., fiction-al-ly, adv.

fictionist, n., a writer of fiction. — A hybrid formed fr. fiction with -ist, a suff. of Greek origin.

Derivative: fictionist-ic, adj.

fictitious, adj., 1) imaginary; 2) false. — L. ficitiōsus, 'counterfeit, feigned, not genuine', fr. fictus, pp. of ingere. See fiction and -itious.

Derivatives: fictitious-ly, adv., fictitious-ness, n. fictive, adj., imaginary; feigned. — F. fictif (fem. fictive), fr. L. fictus, pp. of ingere. See fiction and -ive.
