Foreword

Never in the history of the USA has the influence of its intelligence system on home and foreign policy been as great as it is today. For, as tools of the monopoly groups that rule in North America, the various intelligence services of the USA play a special part in the global strategy of that state.

North American imperialism takes upon itself the right as the world's policeman, so to speak, to intervene against every democratic, progressive and non-capitalist development all over the world. The Socialist states, as history shows, know how to effectively defend themselves against such intervention. The global strategy of the USA, however, has effects in the emergent national states and, to an increasing degree, in those states which have been chained by their governments to the USA through agreements. The most recent past provides all nations with massive evidence from four continents for the anti-national subversive activities and illegal preparations for war of the US intelligence services. These send out their spies and subversive agents, conspire with neo and pro-fascist cohorts, prepare putsches and armed intervention, and stimulate ideological subversion.

The President of the USA has, as a matter of principle, a personal authoritative influence on all intelligence affairs. It is all the more necessary to emphasize this because the US President is not only the Supreme Commander of the American armed forces, but is also prepared, on behalf of the state monopoly interest groups whose puppet he is, to openly place ever more military resources in the service of the USA's aggressive global strategy. In every case, though, intelligence actions prepare the direct military operations.

Very often, the large-scale intelligence subversion is intended to support the military operations of the US armed forces and to increase the anti-national effect aimed at.

In re-forming the intelligence system, which is directly subordinated to the President and optimally freed from even formal parliamentary control, the ruling circles of the USA have, in recent years, proceeded from a concept of subversion which must be seen in conjunction with the extremely precisely defined imperialist global strategy. It was under this aspect that the President of the USA said as early as 1962: "In the measure that military weapons become more murderous—and an increasing number of countries have such weapons at their disposal—subversionist war, guerilla warfare and other forms of fighting acquire ever greater significance. In the measure that thermonuclear weapons become mightier and one has less and less opportunity of using them, subversionist war plays an increasingly more significant role." With this statement psychological warfare and all the dirty methods of subversion were publicly raised to state policy for the USA.

This is worth noting, above all, because

- the intelligence service in the USA is the largest and most influential in the imperialist world;
- following a NATO Council decree of December 1956 the intelligence service of the USA is the directive body for all intelligence services of the NATO Pact countries and similar agreements are in force for all other military vassals of the USA;
- the intelligence service of the USA has always been the domain of the fanatical enemies of democracy and a stronghold of the anti-communists.

The various branches of the US intelligence services are financed from the state budget to the enormous sum of more than 3,000 million Dollars annually.

A general survey of the American intelligence system shows the following: It has at its disposal at least 50,000 specially-selected full-time officials who guide the activities of tens of thousands of agents of various nationalities. In terms of personnel the civil and the military branches of the intelligence system are more or less balanced although, however, the civil branches receive higher budgets.

On the other hand, though, the military branches can use the whole of the military apparatus for their purposes. A well-founded estimate of the share of the various American intelligence branches in the personnel establishment of the intelligence system as a whole in 1968 is shown in the following table:

		Personnel
CIVIL Intelligence Branches
Total		50 %
of which CIA		36 %
FBI		10 %
others		4 %
MILITARY Intelligence Branches
Total		50 %
of which NSA		27 %
G-2 services		12 %
A-2 services		9 %
Defense Intelligence Agency in Pentagon		2 %

By far the largest and most influential of the American intelligence branches is the Central Intelligence Agency which is directly subordinated to the Executive Office of the President of the USA, and whose director holds a key position in the mechanism of the North American power system. The CIA was created as a child of the cold war in 1947. Since then it has been unmasked hundreds of times the world over as leading centre of imperialist espionage activities and as the coordinating centre for coups d'etat against lawful governments as well as for counter-revolutionary attacks. Up till now eight different Directors have followed each other at the head of the CIA. The military character of the CIA is underlined by the US President's selection of these Directors. Among them there have been three Admirals of the US Navy, one General of the US Army, one General of the US Air Force, one diplomat, a former chairman of the American Atomic Energy Commission—the nuclear arms centre—and a leading intelligence officer. At the time of compilation of this book the present CIA Director, Richard M. Helms, has been in the pay of the US intelligence service for more than twenty-five years and has been in the leading staff of the CIA without a break ever since this dangerous "intelligence trust" has been in existence.

The CIA

- is placed superior to all US intelligence services in, or working in, foreign countries;
- is almost unlimited in its spheres of competence and has, directly or indirectly, permeated the most important branches and processes of state-monopoly capitalism in the USA.

From 1947 until March 1967, that is, in twenty years, US Senators and Congressmen have demanded a strict parliamentary control over the CIA no less than 152 times. To no avail. Public opinion in the USA already fears that the CIA has become the "invisible government". This becomes particularly clear when one analyses to which alarming measure the CIA and the Department of State, the Foreign Office of the USA, have become integrated in terms of personnel. Even the "New York Times" of April 27th, 1966 estimated that 2.200 CIA agents are active in the diplomatic service of the USA "under official cover abroad".

- This present reference work shows how and where
- the Department of State and the US Foreign Service and its agencies, such as
 - the US Information Agency
 - the Agency for International Development
 - the US Arms Control and Disarmament Agency
 - the Peace Corps
 - the US Education Exchange, and
 - the US Mission to the UNO are used by the CIA for intelligence purposes or which have, with official sanction, been infiltrated.

Among the other intelligence branches in the civil sphere of the USA, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which is subordinate to the Department of Justice, deserves special mention. The FBI also places cadres at the disposal of the foreign intelligence services. Within the USA this institution, as Federal police force, devotes itself to the persecution of peace partisans, Communists and other progressive forces, as well as so-called counter-espionage.

For years the FBI has carried on espionage in the American governmental offices abroad, particularly in the Central and South American states. In addition, the Departments of Commerce, Agriculture and Finance, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Treasury, the Customs Authority and the Coast Guards all have their own, larger or smaller, intelligence divisions. The relatively small Secret Service is responsible for the protection of the US President and the fight against counterfeit currency.

In the middle of 1968 more than one million officers and other ranks of the US armed forces were on foreign service in various countries of Western, Northern and Southern Europe, Asia, Africa as well of Central and South America. Together with these troops, commands of the military intelligence services have, of course, also moved into the countries in which the troops are stationed and have taken up activities against the national interests of these states. At present no less than 42 states are tied to the USA through bi-lateral and multi-lateral military agreements and pacts. To round off the picture of the present extent of the American military intelligence services here are a few figures.

The G-2 branch and the Military Intelligence Service of the US Army have a full-time personnel establishment of more than 5,000 men of which, according to the Washington journal "Army" of May 1967, 1,100 are active in the US Army of aggression in South Vietnam alone. The Department of Defense, the Pentagon, has military attachés in 71 US Embassies and Legations. Over and above this the whole apparatus of the Department of State has been clearly militarised in recent years. Various military intelligence experts have left the armed forces for the US Foreign Service or have been officially transferred to it. Hundreds of US officers suddenly appeared as "advisers" in the Agency for International Development. And then the Defense Intelligence Agency, founded in 1961 by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, started to implant experts with long-standing records of military intelligence work in its overseas branches. From 1968, since the old-standing White House intelligence adviser, Clark M. Clifford, has been US Secretary of Defense, this process has been speeded up.

Within the military intelligence services, which as a matter of principle work closely together with the CIA, there is a functional structure according to the branches of the armed forces on the one side and to offensive general staff reconnaissance and espionage with a cover of secrecy over the units on the other.

The offensive reconnaissance, often in the form of espionage is the affair of the so-called G-2 branch of the US Army and the US Marine Corps, and the A-2 branch of the US Air Force and the US Navy. The National Security Agency at Fort George Mead acts as coding, decoding, monitoring and direction finding centre for all branches of the US armed forces. Alone in those countries bordering on the Socialist states it maintains 2,000 stationary, flying and floating radio listening posts.

The rulers of the USA are, of course, extremely interested in keeping the mantle of secrecy over their intelligence network. This mantle has been torn aside in not a few cases in recent months. The CIA answered by tightening up their secrecy directives and also by improving their cloak and dagger rules. The "invisible government" shall have neither names nor faces.

For this reason the time appeared to have come to demask a first representative selection of leading officials and officers, collaborators and agents of the US intelligence services who are operating on five continents.

The result is this "WHO'S WHO IN CIA" whereby CIA could be used as an appropriate synonym for the whole of the US intelligence system. As many of the officers and agents of the Office of Strategic Services, founded as a special foreign intelligence service in 1942, are today on the pay-rolls of the CIA and Department of State, it seemed advisable to include the one-time leading figures of that organization. This was done not only because two CIA Directors, including the present Director, started their intelligence careers in the OSS and took many of their accomplices into the CIA, but also in the knowledge that imperialist intelligence services usually "buy-up" the recipients of their pay, and also those who have fallen into their clutches till the end of their lives.

The user of "WHO'S WHO IN CIA" will also see to which appalling extent the economic, educational and public opinion manipulation spheres in the USA have been infiltrated by the intelligence services.

We know, it is true, that the extensive intelligence machinery of imperialist USA was not, is not, and never will be, in a position to turn back the wheel of history. The destinies of the nations cannot be fixed in the offices of the CIA. The US intelligence services, though, plan and organize dangerous actions at every hour. For this reason the people of all nations are warned of the organizers of the CIA machinations.

In this sense further reference works can follow.

Dear Dr. Mader:

Thank you for your letter of December 30, 1966, which I am sorry not to have answered sooner.

It was kind of you to take the trouble to suggest additional readings on the CIA.

Notes for the user

The biographical details have been selected with a view to giving the highest degree of appropriate information in handy book form.

The people named in this first edition are, with very few exceptions, people born in the USA or naturalized citizens of that state.

Where necessary, the date of birth is followed by the country of birth. Where no further reference to the granting of US citizenship follows, these people are the children of US citizens abroad at the time.

With regard to the language reference it taken for granted that all the people listed speak English. This language has, therefore, not been specially noted.

As the majority of people listed in this book have attended institutes of higher education or universities only courses of study outside the USA been specially mentioned.

It seemed important to give as detailed a survey as possible of the service relationships in the armed forces of the USA with the object of providing an optimum of information on service in various branches of the armed forces and also in leading military bodies; on the length of military service, the attendance at special military schools and also military qualifications. Indication of military rank has been limited to the highest in each case.

The places of operation are listed in chronological order. As a general rule the place of operation last mentioned is that at the beginning of 1968.

The title indicated in brackets following a town or country gives the last function exercised in the US diplomatic representation (Embassy, Legation, Consulate) situated there.
