Yehudah (Judah) Loew, the Maharal of Prague (1512-1609)

Moreinu Harav Loew was born on the night of Pesach, 1512, to a distinguished family of rabbis who traced their ancestry to King David. The youngest of four brothers, he married Pearl when he was 32. That union led to six girls and one boy named Bezalel, which was also the name of his grandfather (Guess the name of the grandfather's American descendant).

In 1552 he was elected the rabbi of Nikolsburg in Moravia, where he remained for 20 years until he moved to Prague in 1573, where he opened a "Yeshivah", or Jewish school of theology. Among his students were the famous Rabbi Lipman Heller, whose commentary on the Mishnah, Tosefot Yomtov is a masterpiece of erudition.

After a six year absence from Prague, during which he served as rabbi of Posen, the Maharal returned to Prague as chief rabbi (a position unknown in this country). A prolific (from proles, the Latin for children) writer, he published Tiferet Yisrael, a commentary on the Torah, and Netivot Olam, a book on ethics. He also wrote Be'er Hagolah, a commentary on rabbinic proverbs, and Netzach Ysrael, which deals with redemption. Further, he wrote Or Chadash, concerning the Book of Esther, Ner Mitzvah on Chanukah, and a number of additional books dealing with religious and other topics.

Rabbi Loew was said to have created a GOLEM. A GOLEM is a monster created by humans. The Czech word for GOLEM is Roboto, from which we derive the word robot. The best known GOLEM story in English is the story of Dr. Frankenstein, written by Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin (daughter of the novelist Mary Wollstonecraft), when she and her husband Percy Shelley visited Switzerland in the company of Lord Byron in 1816.

The legends concerning the GOLEM of Prague are many. The story was even made into a German movie in 1920.

Rabbi Yehuda Loew's father, Bezalel Loeb, had four sons. One of his sons was Sinai Loew. He in turn had a descendant, Josefina Loew, who became the grandmother of Ida Loew. She married Fritz Kohn, a native of Moravia. The Kohns immigrated to Boston, Massachusetts in 1905. Before coming to the United States they changed their name to Kerry and converted to Catholicism. Their son, Richard Kerry, then became the father of Senator John Kerry, the current Democratic candidate for the Presidency of the United States.
