Remarkable Nonsense about the Holocaust

'I saw millions of people go directly to the gas chambers ...'

"... The Review's decision also disturbed 83-year-old George Preston, a Holocaust survivor who lost his family during World War II and was instrumental in getting the Holocaust Monument erected in Wilmington. He said he would be willing to talk to [University of Delaware] students about his experiences. He said it is "pathetic" that survivors have to defend and justify themselves because of historical revisionists.

"I was there. I saw millions of people go directly to the gas chambers and never come back," Preston said. "I'm a witness. I have a number on my left arm to remind me."
