RIENS PER DISCENT. Nothing by descent. The plea of an heir, where he is sued for his ancestor's debt, and has no land from him by descent, or assets in his hands. Cro. Car. 151; 1 Tidd, Pr. 645; 2 Tidd, Pr. 937.

RIER COUNTY. In old English law. After-county; i. e., after the end of the county court. A time and place appointed by the sheriff for the receipt of the king's money after the end of his county, or county court. Cowell.

RIFFLARE. To take away anything by force.

RIFLETUM. A coppice or thicket. Cowell.

RIGA. In old European law. A species of service and tribute rendered to their lords by agricultural tenants. Supposed by Spelman to be derived from the name of a certain portion of land, called, in England, a "rig" or "ridge," an elevated piece of ground, formed out of several furrows. Burrill.

RIGGING THE MARKET. A term of the stock-exchange, denoting the practice of inflating the price of given stocks, or enhancing their quoted value, by a system of pretended purchases, designed to give the air of an unusual demand for such stocks. See L. R. 13 Eq. 447.

RIGHT. As a noun, and taken in an abstract sense, the term means justice, ethical correctness, or consonance with the rules of law or the principles of morals. In this signification it answers to one meaning of the Latin "jus," and serves to indicate law in the abstract, considered as the foundation of all rights, or the complex of underlying moral principles which impart the character of justice to all positive law, or give it an ethical content.

As a noun, and taken in a concrete sense, a right signifies a power, privilege, faculty, or demand, inherent in one person and incident upon another. "Rights" are defined generally as "powers of free action." And the primal rights pertaining to men are undoubtedly enjoyed by human beings purely as such, being grounded in personality, and existing antecedently to their recognition by positive law. But leaving the abstract moral sphere, and giving to the term a juristic content, a "right" is well defined as "a capacity residing in one man of controlling, with the assent and assistance of the state, the actions of others." Holl. Jur. 69.

The noun substantive "a right" signifies that which jurists denominate a "faculty;" that which resides in a determinate person, by virtue of a given law, and which avails against a person (or answers to a duty lying on a person) other than the person in whom it resides. And the noun substantive "rights" is the plural of the noun substantive "a right." But the expression "right," when it is used as an adjective, is equivalent to the adjective "just," as the adverb "rightly" is equivalent to the adverb "justly." And, when used as the abstract name corresponding to the adjective "right," the noun substantive "right" is synonymous with the noun substantive "justice." Aust. Jur. § 264, note.

In a narrower signification, the word denotes an interest or title in an object of property; a just and legal claim to hold, use, or enjoy it, or to convey or donate it, as he may please. See Co. Litt. 345a.

The term "right," in civil society, is defined to mean that which a man is entitled to have, or to do, or to receive from others within the limits prescribed by law. Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 40, 29 Am. Rep. 356.

That which one person ought to have or receive from another, it being withheld from him, or not in his possession. In this sense, "right" has the force of "claim," and is properly expressed by the Latin "jus." Lord Coke considers this to be the proper signification of the word, especially in writs and pleadings, where an estate is turned to a right; as by discontinuance, disseisin, etc. Co. Litt. 345a.

Classification

Rights may be described as perfect or imperfect, according as their action or scope is clear, settled, and determinate, or is vague and unfixed.

Rights are either in personam or in rem. A right in personam is one which imposes an obligation on a definite person. A right in rem is one which imposes an obligation on persons generally; i. e., either on all the world or on all the world except certain determinate persons. Thus, if I am entitled to exclude all persons from a given piece of land, I have a right in rem in respect of that land; and, if there are one or more persons, A., B., and C., whom I am not entitled to exclude from it, my right is still a right in rem. Sweet.

Rights may also be described as either primary or secondary. Primary rights are those which can be created without reference to rights already existing. Secondary rights can only arise for the purpose of protecting or enforcing primary rights. They are either preventive (protective) or remedial (reparative,) Sweet.

Preventive or protective secondary rights exist in order to prevent the infringement or loss of primary rights. They are judicial when they require the assistance of a court of law for their enforcement, and extrajudicial when they are capable of being exercised by the party himself. Remedial or reparative secondary rights are also either judicial or extrajudicial. They may further be divided into (1) rights of restitution or restoration, which entitle the person injured to be replaced in his original position; (2) rights of enforcement, which entitle the person injured to the performance of an act by the person bound; and (3) rights of satisfaction or compensation. Id.

With respect to the ownership of external objects of property, rights may be classed as absolute and qualified. An absolute right gives to the person in whom it inheres the uncontrolled dominion over the object at all times and for all purposes. A qualified right gives the possessor a right to the object for certain purposes or under certain circumstances only. Such is the right of a bailee to recover the article bailed when it has been unlawfully taken from him by a stranger.

Rights are also either legal or equitable. The former is the case where the person seeking to enforce the right for his own benefit has the legal title and a remedy at law. The latter are such as are enforceable only in equity; as, at the suit of cestui que trust.

In Constitutional Law

There is also a classification of rights, with respect to the constitution of civil society. Thus, according to Blackstone, "the rights of persons, considered in their natural capacities, are of two sorts,—absolute and relative; absolute, which are such as appertain and belong to particular men, merely as individuals or single persons; relative, which are incident to them as members of society, and standing in various relations to each other." 1 Bl. Comm. 123. And see In re Jacobs, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 374; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 37, 29 Am. Rep. 356; Johnson v. Johnson, 32 Ala. 637; People v. Berberich, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 224.

Rights are also classified in constitutional law as natural, civil, and political, to which there is sometimes added the class of "personal rights."

Natural rights are those which grow out of the nature of man and depend upon personality, as distinguished from such as are created by law and depend upon civilized society; or they are those which are plainly assured by natural law (Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 519, 44 Am. Dec. 217); or those which, by fair deduction from the present physical, moral, social, and religious characteristics of man, he must be invested with, and which he ought to have realized for him in a jural society, in order to fulfill the ends to which his nature calls him. 1 Woolsey, Polit. Science, p. 26. Such are the rights of life, liberty, privacy, and good reputation. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 523.

Civil rights are such as belong to every citizen of the state or country, or, in a wider sense, to all its inhabitants, and are not connected with the organization or administration of government. They include the rights of property, marriage, protection by the laws, freedom of contract, trial by jury, etc. See Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N. W. 681. Or, as otherwise defined, civil rights are rights appertaining to a person in virtue of his citizenship in a state or community. Rights capable of being enforced or redressed in a civil action. Also a term applied to certain rights secured to citizens of the United States by the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments to the constitution, and by various acts of congress made in pursuance thereof. Iowa v. Railroad Co. (C. C.) 37 Fed. 498, 3 L. R. A. 554; State v. Powers, 51 N. J. Law, 432, 17 Atl. 969; Bowles v. Habermann, 95 N. Y. 247; People v. Washington, 36 Cal. 658; Fletcher v. Tuttle, 151 Ill. 41, 37 N. E. 683, 25 L. R. A. 143, 42 Am. St. Rep. 220; Hronek v. People, 134 Ill. 139, 24 N. E. 861, 8 L. R. A. 837, 23 Am. St. Rep. 652; Byers v. Sun Savings Bank, 41 Okl. 728, 139 P. 948, 52 L. R. A. (N. S.) 320, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 222; Grasser v. Jones, 102 Or. 214, 201 P. 1069, 1070, 18 A. L. R. 529; Simpson v. Geary (D. C.) 204 F. 507, 511; Grooms v. Thomas, 93 Okl. 87, 219 P. 700, 701; U. S. v. 24 Live Silver Black Foxes (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 933, 934.

Political rights consist in the power to participate, directly or indirectly, in the establishment or administration of government, such as the right of citizenship, that of suffrage, the right to hold public office, and the right of petition. See Black Const. Law (3d Ed.) 524; Winnett v. Adams, 71 Neb. 817, 99 N. W. 681; Haupt v. Schmidt, 70 Ind. App. 260, 122 N. E. 343, 344.

Personal rights is a term of rather vague import, but generally it may be said to mean the right of personal security, comprising those of life, limb, body, health, reputation, and the right of personal liberty.

As an Adjective

The term "right" means just, morally correct, consonant with ethical principles or rules of positive law. It is the opposite of wrong, unjust, illegal.

"Right" is used in law, as well as in ethics, as opposed to "wrong." Thus, a person may acquire a title by wrong.

In Old English Law

The term denoted an accusation or charge of crime. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 66 F. See, also, Droit; Jus; Recht.

By the old writers, "right of action" is commonly used to denote that a person has lost a right of entry, and has nothing but a right of action left. Co. Litt. 363b.

RIGHT OF DISCUSSION. In Scotch law. The right which the cautioner (surety) has to insist that the creditor shall do his best to compel the performance of the contract by the principal debtor, before he shall be called upon. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF DIVISION. In Scotch law. The right which each of several cautioners (sureties) has to refuse to answer for more than his own share of the debt. To entitle the cautioner to this right the other cautioners must be solvent, and there must be no words in the bond to exclude it. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF ENTRY. A right of entry is the right of taking or resuming possession of land by entering on it in a peaceable manner.

RIGHT OF HABITATION. In Louisiana. The right to occupy another man's house as a dwelling, without paying rent or other compensation. Civ. Code La. art. 627.

RIGHT OF POSSESSION. The right to possession which may reside in one man, while another has the actual possession, being the right to enter and turn out such actual occupant; e. g., the right of a disseisee. An apparent right of possession is one which may be defeated by a better; an actual right of possession, one which will stand the test against all opponents. 2 Bl. Comm. 196; Cahill v. Pine Creek Oil Co., 38 Okl. 568, 134 P. 64, 65.

RIGHT OF PROPERTY. The mere right of property in land; the abstract right which remains to the owner after he has lost the right of possession, and to recover which the writ of right was given. United with possession, and the right of possession, this right constitutes a complete title to lands, tenements, and hereditaments. 2 Bl. Comm. 197.

RIGHT OF REDEMPTION. The right to disincumber property or to free it from a claim or lien; specifically, the right (granted by statute only) to free property from the incumbrance of a foreclosure or other judicial sale, or to recover the title passing thereby, by paying what is due, with interest, costs, etc. Not to be confounded with the "equity of redemption," which exists independently of statute but must be exercised before sale. See Mayer v. Farmers' Bank, 44 Iowa, 216; Millett v. Mullen, 95 Me. 400, 49 A. 871; Case v. Spelter Co., 62 Kan. 69, 61 P. 406; Banking Corp. of Montana v. Hein, 52 Mont. 238, 156 P. 1085, 1086; Wissmath Packing Co. v. Mississippi River Power Co., 179 Iowa, 1309, 162 N. W. 846, 850, L. R. A. 1917F, 790; Brown v. Timmons, 79 Mont. 246, 256 P. 176, 178, 57 A. L. R. 1122; Western Land & Cattle Co. v. National Bank of Arizona at Phoenix, 28 Ariz. 270, 236 P. 725, 726.

RIGHT OF RELIEF. In Scotch law. The right of a cautioner (surety) to demand reimbursement from the principal debtor when he has been compelled to pay the debt. 1 Bell, Comm. 347.

RIGHT OF REPRESENTATION AND PERFORMANCE. By the acts 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 15, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, the author of a play, opera, or musical composition, or his assignee, has the sole right of representing or causing it to be represented in public at any place in the British dominions during the same period as the copyright in the work exists. The right is distinct from the copyright, and requires to be separately registered. Sweet.

RIGHT OF SEARCH. In international law. The right of one vessel, on the high seas, to stop a vessel of another nationality and examine her papers and (in some cases) her cargo. Thus, in time of war, a vessel of either belligerent has the right to search a neutral ship, encountered at sea, to ascertain whether the latter is carrying contraband goods.

RIGHT OF WAY. The right of passage or of way is a servitude imposed by law or by convention, and by virtue of which one has a right to pass on foot, or horseback, or in a vehicle, to drive beasts of burden or carts, through the estate of another. When this servitude results from the law, the exercise of it is confined to the wants of the person who has it. When it is the result of a contract, its extent and the mode of using it is regulated by the contract. Civ. Code La. art. 722.

"Right of way," in its strict meaning, is the right of passage over another man's ground; and in its legal and generally accepted meaning, in reference to a railway, it is a mere easement in the lands of others, obtained by lawful condemnation to public use or by purchase. It would be using the term in an unusual sense, by applying it to an absolute purchase of the fee-simple of lands to be used for a railway or any other kind of a way. Williams v. Western Union Ry. Co., 50 Wis. 76, 5 N. W. 482. And see Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 P. 879; Johnson v. Lewis, 47 Ark. 66, 2 S. W. 329; Bodfish v. Bodfish, 105 Mass. 317; New Mexico v. United States Trust Co., 19 S. Ct. 128, 172 U. S. 171, 43 L. Ed. 407; Stuyvesant v. Woodruff, 21 N. J. Law, 136, 57 Am. Dec. 156.

"Right of way" has a twofold significance, being sometimes used to mean the mere intangible right to cross, a right of crossing, a right of way, and often used to otherwise indicate that strip of land which a railroad appropriates to its own use, and upon which it builds its roadbed. Marion, B. & E. Traction Co. v. Simmons, 180 Ind. 289, 102 N. E. 132; Knox v. Louisiana Ry. & Nav. Co., 157 La. 602, 102 So. 685, 687; Atlanta, B. & A. Ry. Co. v. Coffee County, 152 Ga. 432, 110 S. E. 214, 215; Wilson v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co., 176 Cal. 248, 168 P. 123, 130; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Box Butte County, 99 Neb. 208, 155 N. W. 881, 884, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 1037; Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Brogan, 52 Mont. 461, 158 P. 820, 821; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Taylor, 164 Ky. 150, 175 S. W. 26, 28.

The "right of way" is a space of conventional width for one or more railroad tracks, while a "railroad yard" might be extended indefinitely. City of New York v. New York & H. R. Co. (Sup.) 169 N. Y. S. 12, 14.

RIGHT PATENT. An obsolete writ, which was brought for lands and tenements, and not for an advowson, or common, and lay only for an estate in fee-simple, and not for him who had a lesser estate; as tenant in tail, tenant in frank marriage, or tenant for life. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 1.

RIGHT TO BEGIN. On the hearing or trial of a cause, or the argument of a demurrer, petition, etc., the right to begin is the right of first addressing the court or jury. The right to begin is frequently of importance, as the counsel who begins has also the right of replying or having the last word after the counsel on the opposite side has addressed the court or jury. Sweet.

RIGHT TO REDEEM. The term "right of redemption," or "right to redeem," is familiarly used to describe the estate of the debtor when under mortgage, to be sold at auction, in contradistinction to an absolute estate, to be set off by appraisal. It would be more consonant to the legal character of this interest to call it the "debtor's estate subject to mortgage." White v. Whitney, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 86.

RIGHT, WRIT OF. A procedure for the recovery of real property after not more than sixty years' adverse possession; the highest writ in the law, sometimes called, to distinguish it from others of the droitual class, the "writ of right proper." Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27. 3 Steph. Comm. 392.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS. Rights which concern and are annexed to the persons of men. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS OF THINGS. Such as a man may acquire over external objects, or things unconnected with his person. 1 Bl. Comm. 122.

RIGHTS, PETITION OF. See Petition.

RIGOR JURIS. Lat. Strictness of law. Latch, 150. Distinguished from gratia curiæ, favor of the court.

RIGOR MORTIS. In medical jurisprudence: Cadaveric rigidity; a rigidity or stiffening of the muscular tissue and joints of the body, which sets in at a greater or less interval after death, but usually within a few hours, and which is one of the recognized tests of death.

RING. A clique; an exclusive combination of persons for illegitimate or selfish purposes; as to control elections or political affairs, distribute offices, obtain contracts, control the market or the stock-exchange, etc. Schomberg v. Walker, 132 Cal. 224, 64 Pac. 290.

RING-DROPPING. A trick variously practiced. One mode is as follows, the circumstances being taken from 2 East, P. C. 678: The prisoner, with accomplices, being with their victim, pretend to find a ring wrapped in paper, appearing to be a jeweler's receipt for a "rich, brilliant diamond ring." They offer to leave the ring with the victim if he will deposit some money and his watch as a security. He lays down his watch and money, is beckoned out of the room by one of the confederates, while the others take away his watch, etc. This is a larceny.

In Criminal Law

A phrase applied in England to a trick frequently practised in committing larcenies. It is difficult to define it; it will be sufficiently exemplified by the following cases. The prisoner, with some accomplices, being in company with the prosecutor, pretended to find a valuable ring wrapped up in a paper, appearing to be a jeweller's receipt for "a rich brilliant diamond ring." They offered to leave the ring with the prosecutor if he would deposit some money and his watch as a security. The prosecutor, having accordingly laid down his watch and money on a table, was beckoned out of the room by one of the confederates, while the others took away his watch and money. This was held to amount to a larceny; 1 Leach 273. In another case, under similar circumstances, the prisoner procured from the prosecutor twenty guineas, promising to return them the next morning, and leaving the false jewel with him. This was also held to be larceny; 1 Leach 314; 2 East, Pl. Cr. 679.

RINGING UP. A custom among commission merchants and brokers (not unlike the clearing-house system) by which they exchange contracts for sale against contracts for purchase, or reciprocally cancel such contracts, adjust differences of price between themselves, and surrender margins. See Ward v. Vosburgh (C. C.) 31 F. 12; Williar v. Irwin, 30 Fed. Cas. 38; Pardridge v. Cutler, 68 Ill. App. 573; Samuels v. Oliver, 130 Ill. 73, 22 N. E. 499; U. S. v. New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, 263 U. S. 611, 44 S. Ct. 225, 226, 68 L. Ed. 475.

RINGS, GIVING. In English practice. A custom observed by sergeants at law, on being called to that degree or order. The rings are given to the judges, and bear certain mottoes, selected by the serjeant about to take the degree. Brown.

RIOT. In criminal law. A tumultuous disturbance of the peace by three persons or more, assembling together of their own authority, with an intent mutually to assist each other against any who shall oppose them, in the execution of some enterprise of a private nature, and afterwards actually executing the same in a violent and turbulent manner, to the terror of the people, whether the act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful. Hawk, P. C. c. 65, § 1. And see State v. Stalcup, 23 N. C. 30, 35 Am. Dec. 732; Dixon v. State, 105 Ga. 787, 31 S. E. 750; State v. Brazil, Rice (S. C.) 260; Marshall v. Buffalo, 50 App. Div. 149, 64 N. Y. S. 411; Aron v. Wausau, 98 Wis. 592, 74 N. W. 354, 40 L. R. A. 733; Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Schwenk, 95 Pa. 96, 40 Am. Rep. 629; Casteel v. State, 13 Okl. Cr. 19, 161 P. 330; Koska v. Kansas City, 123 Kan. 362, 255 P. 57, 58; See Taylor v. State, 8 Ga. App. 241, 68 S. E. 945; Lewis v. State, 2 Ga. App. 659, 58 S. E. 1070; Walker v. State, 17 Ga. App. 525, 87 S. E. 711; Perkins v. State, 35 Okl. Cr. 279, 250 P. 544, 546, 49 A. L. R. 1129; Kirshenbaum v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., 107 Neb. 368, 186 N. W. 325, 326.

When three or more persons together, and in a violent or tumultuous manner, assemble together to do an unlawful act, or together do a lawful act in an unlawful, violent, or tumultuous manner, to the disturbance of others, they are guilty of a riot. Rev. Code Iowa 1880, § 4067 (Code 1931, § 13340).

Any use of force or violence, disturbing the public peace, or any threat to use such force or violence, if accompanied by immediate power of execution, by two or more persons acting together, and without authority of law, is a riot. Pen. Code Cal. § 404.

RIOT ACT. A celebrated English statute, which provides that, if any twelve persons or more are unlawfully assembled and disturbing the peace, any sheriff, under-sheriff, justice of the peace, or mayor may, by proclamation, command them to disperse, (which is familiarly called "reading the riot act,") and that if they refuse to obey, and remain together for the space of one hour after such proclamation, they are all guilty of felony. The act is 1 Geo. I, St. 2, c. 5.

RIOTOSE. L. Lat. Riotously. A formal and essential word in old indictments for riots. 2 Strange, 834.

RIOTOUS ASSEMBLY. In English criminal law. The unlawful assembling of twelve persons or more, to the disturbance of the peace, and not dispersing upon proclamation. 4 Bl. Comm. 142; 4 Steph. Comm. 273. And see Madisonville v. Bishop, 113 Ky. 106, 67 S. W. 269, 57 L. R. A. 130; Blakeman v. City of Wichita, 93 Kan. 444, 144 P. 816, L. R. A. 1915C, 578, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 188.

RIOTOUSLY. A technical word, properly used in indictments for riot. It of itself implies force and violence. 2 Chit. Crim. Law, 489.

RIPA. Lat. The banks of a river, or the place beyond which the waters do not in their natural course overflow.

RIPARIA. A medieval Latin word, which Lord Coke takes to mean water running between two banks; in other places it is rendered "bank."

RIPARIAN. Belonging or relating to the bank of a river; of or on the bank. Land lying beyond the natural watershed of a stream is not "riparian." Bathgate v. Irvine, 126 Cal. 135, 58 P. 442, 77 Am. St. Rep. 158. The term is sometimes used as relating to the shore of the sea or other tidal water, or of a lake or other considerable body of water not having the character of a water-course. But this is not accurate. The proper word to be employed in such connections is "littoral." See Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.) 521, note. Rome Ry. & Light Co. v. Loeb, 141 Ga. 202, 80 S. E. 785, 787, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1023; Herminghaus v. Southern California Edison Co., 120 Okl. 301, 252 P. 607, 611; Matagorda Canal Co. v. Markham Irr. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 154 S. Shasta Power Corporation*, 202 Cal. 56, 259 P. 444, 448, 56 A. L. R. 264.

RIPARIAN WATER. Water which is below the highest line of normal flow of the river, or stream, as distinguished from flood water. Parker v. El Paso County Water Improvement Dist. No. 1, 297 S. W. 737, 743, 116 Tex. 631; Humphreys-Mexia Co. v. Arseneaux,

Riparum usus publicus est jure gentium, sicut ipsius fluminis. The use of river-banks is by the law of nations public, like that of the stream itself. Dig. 1, 8, 5, pr.; Fleta, 1, 3, c. 1, § 5.

RIPE. A suit is said to be "ripe for judgment" when it is so far advanced, by verdict, default, confession, the determination of all pending motions, or other disposition of preliminary or disputed matters, that nothing remains for the court but to render the appropriate judgment. See Hosmer v. Hoitt, 161 Mass. 173, 36 N. E. 835; Lynn Gas & Electric Co. v. Creditors' Nat. Clearing House, 237 Mass. 505, 130 N. E. 111, 112.

RIPTOWELL, or REAPTOWEL. A gratuity or reward given to tenants after they had reaped their lord's corn, or done other customary duties. Cowell.

RIPUARIAN LAW. An ancient code of laws by which the Ripuarii, a tribe of Franks who occupied the country upon the Rhine, the Meuse, and the Scheldt, were governed. They were first reduced to writing by Theodoric, king of Austrasia, and completed by Dagobert. Spelman.

RIPUARIAN PROPRIETORS. Owners of lands bounded by a river or watercourse.

RISCUS. L. Lat. In the civil law. A chest for the keeping of clothing. Calvin.

RISING OF COURT. Properly the final adjournment of the court for the term, though the term is also sometimes used to express the cessation of judicial business for the day or for a recess; it is the opposite of "sitting" or "session." See Staté v. Weaver, 11 Neb. 163, 8 N. W. 385.

RISK. In insurance law; the danger or hazard of a loss of the property insured; the casualty contemplated in a contract of insurance; the degree of hazard; and, colloquially, the specific house, factory, ship, etc., covered by the policy. People ex rel. Daily Credit Service Corporation v. May, 147 N. Y. S. 487, 489, 162 App. Div. 215.

Obvious Risk

See Obvious.

Risks of Navigation

It is held that this term is not the equivalent of "perils of navigation," but is of more comprehensive import than the latter. Pitcher v. Hennessey, 48 N. Y. 419.

RISTOURNE. Fr. In insurance law; the dissolution of a policy or contract of insurance for any cause. Emerig. Traité des Assur. c. 16.

RITE. Lat. Duly and formally; legally; properly; technically.

RIVAGE.

In French Law

The shore, as of the sea.

In English Law

A toll anciently paid to the crown for the passage of boats or vessels on certain rivers. Cowell.

RIVEARE. To have the liberty of a river for fishing and fowling. Cowell.

RIVER. A natural stream of water, of greater volume than a creek or rivulet, flowing in a more or less permanent bed or channel, between defined banks or walls, with a current which may either be continuous in one direction or affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. See Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 391, 14 L. Ed. 189; Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. 513, 16 L. Ed. 556; The Garden City (D. C.) 26 F. 772; Berlin Mills Co. v. Wentworth's Location, 60 N. H. 156; Dudden v. Guardians of Clutton Union, 1 Hurl. & N. 627; Chamberlain v. Hemingway, 63 Conn. 1, 27 A. 239, 22 L. R. A. 45, 38 Am. St. Rep. 330; State v. Richardson, 140 La. 329, 72 So. 984, 987; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S. W. 458, 467.

Rivers are public or private; and of public rivers some are navigable and others not. The common-law distinction is that navigable rivers are those only wherein the tide ebbs and flows. But, in familiar usage, any river is navigable which affords passage to ships and vessels, irrespective of its being affected by the tide.

Public River

A river where there is a common navigation exercised; otherwise called a "navigable river." 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 111, § 106.

RIXA. Lat. In the civil law. A quarrel; a strife of words. Calvin.

RIXATRIX. In old English law. A scold; a scolding or quarrelsome woman. 4 Bl. Comm. 168.

ROAD. A highway; an open way or public passage; a line of travel or communication extending from one town or place to another; a strip of land appropriated and used for purposes of travel and communication between different places. See Stokes v. Scott County, 10 Iowa, 175; Com. v. Gammons, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 202; Hutson v. New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 312; Stedman v. Southbridge, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 164; Horner v. State, 49 Md. 283; Northwestern Tel. Exch. Co. v. Minneapolis, 81 Minn. 140, 86 N. W. 69, 53 L. R. A. 175; Hart v. Town of Red Cedar, 63 Wis. 634, 24 N. W. 410; City of Mobile v. Harker, 204 Ala. 26, 85 So. 425, 427; Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Headley Good Roads Co. (D. C.) 283 F. 236, 237; Smith v. Clemmons, 216 Ala. 52, 112 So. 442, 443; Shannon v. Martin, 164 Ga. 872, 139 S. E. 671, 672, 54 A. L. R. 1246; San Francisco

In Maritime Law

An open passage of the sea that receives its denomination commonly from some part adjacent, which, though it lie out at sea, yet, in respect of the situation of the land adjacent, and the depth and wideness of the place, is a safe place for the common riding or anchoring of ships; as Dover road, Kirkley road, etc. Hale de Jure Mar. pt. 2, c. 2; The Cuzco (D. C.) 225 F. 169, 176.

In General

—Law of the road. See Law.

—Private road. This term has various meanings: (1) A road, the soil of which belongs to the owner of the land which it traverses, but which is burdened with a right of way. Morgan v. Livingston, 6 Mart. O. S. (La.) 231. (2) A neighborhood way, not commonly used by others than the people of the neighborhood, though it may be used by any one having occasion. State v. Mobley, 1 McMul. (S. C.) 44. (3) A road intended for the use of one or more private individuals, and not wanted nor intended for general public use, which may be opened across the lands of other persons by statutory authority in some states. Witham v. Osburn, 4 Or. 318, 18 Am. Rep. 287; Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 252, 91 Am. Dec. 577; Madera County v. Raymond Granite Co., 139 Cal. 128, 72 P. 915. (4) A road which is only open for the benefit of certain individuals to go from and to their homes for the service of their lands and for the use of some estates exclusively. Civ. Code La. art. 706.

—Public road. A highway; a road or way established and adopted (or accepted as a dedication) by the proper authorities for the use of the general public, and over which every person has a right to pass and to use it for all purposes of travel or transportation to which it is adapted and devoted. Cincinnati R. Co. v. Com., 80 Ky. 138; Shelby County v. Castetter, 7 Ind. App. 309, 33 N. E. 986; Abbott v. Duluth (C. C.) 104 F. 837; Heninger v. Peery, 102 Va. 896, 47 S. E. 1013; Rankin v. Noel (Tex. —Road districts. Public or quasi municipal corporations organized or authorized by statutory authority in many of the states for the special purpose of establishing, maintaining, and caring for public roads and highways within their limits, sometimes invested with powers of local taxation, and generally having elective officers styled "overseers" or "commissioners" of roads. See Farmer v. Myles, 106 La. 333, 30 So. 858; San Bernardino County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 137 Cal. 659, 70 P. 782; Madden v. Lancaster County, 65 F. 191, 12 C. C. A. 566.

—Road tax. A tax for the maintenance and repair of the public roads within the particular jurisdiction, levied either in money or in the form of so many days' labor on the public roads exacted of all the inhabitants of the district. See Lewin v. State, 77 Ala. 46.

ROADSTEAD. In maritime law. A known general station for ships, notoriously used as such, and distinguished by the name; and not any spot where an anchor will find bottom and fix itself. 1 C. Rob. Adm. 232.

ROBBATOR. In old English law. A robber. Robbatores et burglatores, robbers and burglars. Bract. fol. 115b.

ROBBER. One who commits a robbery. The term is not in law synonymous with "thief," but applies only to one who steals with force or open violence. See De Rothschild v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 7 Exch. 742; The Manitoba (D. C.) 104 F. 151.

ROBBERY. Robbery is the felonious taking of personal property in the possession of another, from his person or immediate presence, and against his will, accomplished by means of force or fear. Pen. Code Cal. § 211; 1 Hawk. P. C. 25; 4 Bl. Comm. 243; United States v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 15,494; Seymour v. State, 15 Ind. 288; McDaniel v. State, 16 Ga. App. 110, 84 S. E. 730, 732; Johnson v. State, 24 Okl. Cr. 326, 218 P. 179, 181; Armstrong

v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 217, 227 S. W. 162, 163; Robards v. State, 37 Okl. Cr. 371, 259 P. 166, 168.

Robbery is the wrongful, fraudulent, and violent taking of money, goods, or chattels, from the person of another by force or intimidation, without the consent of the owner. Code Ga. 1882, § 4389 (Pen. Code 1910, § 14S).

Robbery is where a person, either with violence or with threats of injury, and putting the person robbed in fear, takes and carries away a thing which is on the body, or in the immediate presence of the person from whom it is taken, under such circumstances that, in the absence of violence or threats, the act committed would be a theft. Steph. Crim. Dig. 208; 2 Russ. Crimes, 78. And see, further, State v. Osborne, 116 Iowa, 479, 89 N. W. 1077; In re Coffey, 123 Cal. 522, 53 P. 448; Matthews v. State, 4 Ohio St. 540; Benson v. E. 385; Thomas v. State, 91 Ala. 34, 9 So. 81; Hickey v. State, 23 Ind. 22.

Highway Robbery

In criminal law. The crime of robbery committed upon or near a public highway. State v. Brown, 113 N. C. 645, 18 S. E. 51; Anderson v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 77 Cal. App. 641, 247 P. 507, 510. The felonious and forcible taking of property from the person of another on a highway. State v. Holt, 192 N. C. 490, 135 S. E. 324, 325. "Highway robbery" differs from robbery in general only in the place where it is committed. Robbery by holdup originally applied to the stopping and robbery of traveling parties, but the term has acquired a broader meaning. It has come to be applied to robbery in general, by the use of force or putting in fear. Duluth St. Ry. Co. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 136 Minn. 299, 161 N. W. 595, 596, L. R. A. 1917D, 684. In England, by St. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1, this was made felony without benefit of clergy, while robbery committed elsewhere was less severely punished. The distinction was abolished by St. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9, and in this country it has never prevailed generally.

ROBE. Fr. A word anciently used by sailors for the cargo of a ship. The Italian "roba" had the same meaning.

ROBERDSMEN. In old English law. Persons who, in the reign of Richard I., committed great outrages on the borders of England and Scotland. Said to have been the followers of Robert Hood, or Robin Hood. 4 Bl. Comm. 246.

ROD. A lineal measure of sixteen feet and a half, otherwise called a "perch."

ROD KNIGHTS. In feudal law. Certain servitors who held their land by serving their lords on horseback. Cowell.

ROGARE. Lat. In Roman law. To ask or solicit. Rogare legem, to ask for the adoption of a law, i. e., to propose it for enactment, to bring in a bill. In a derivative sense, to vote for a law so proposed; to adopt or enact it.

ROGATIO. Lat. In Roman law. An asking for a law; a proposal of a law for adoption or passage. Derivatively, a law passed by such a form.

ROGATIO TESTIUM, in making a nuncupative will, is where the testator formally calls upon the persons present to bear witness that he has declared his will. Williams' Ex'rs, 116; Browne, Prob. Pr. 59.

ROGATION WEEK. In English ecclesiastical law. The second week before Whitsunday, thus called from three fasts observed therein, the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, called "Rogation days," because of the extraordinary prayers then made for the fruits of the earth, or as a preparation for the devotion of Holy Thursday. Wharton.

Rogationes, questiones, et positiones debent esse simplices. Hob. 143. Demands, questions, and claims ought to be simple.

ROGATOR. Lat. In Roman law. The proposer of a law or rogation.

ROGATORY LETTERS. A commission from one judge to another requesting him to examine a witness. See Letter.

ROGO. Lat. In Roman law. I ask; I request. A precatory expression often used in wills. Dig. 30, 103, 13, 14.

ROGUE. In English criminal law. An idle and disorderly person; a trickster; a wandering beggar; a vagrant or vagabond. 4 Bl. Comm. 169.

ROLE D'ÉQUIPAGE. In French mercantile law. The list of a ship's crew; a muster roll.

ROLL, n. A schedule of parchment which may be turned up with the hand in the form of a pipe or tube. Jacob.

A schedule or sheet of parchment on which legal proceedings are entered. Thus, in English practice, the roll of parchment on which the issue is entered is termed the "issue roll." So the rolls of a manor, wherein the names, rents, and services of the tenants are copied and enrolled, are termed the "court rolls." There are also various other rolls; as those which contain the records of the court of chancery, those which contain the registers of the proceedings of old parliaments, called "rolls of parliament," etc. Brown.

In English practice, there were formerly a great variety of these rolls, appropriated to the different proceedings; such as the warrant of attorney roll, the process roll, the recognizance roll, the imparlance roll, the plea roll, the issue roll, the judgment roll, the scire facias roll, and the roll of proceedings on writs of error. 2 Tidd. Pr. 729, 730.

In modern practice, the term is sometimes used to denote a record of the proceedings of a court or public office. Thus, the "judgment roll" is the file of records comprising the pleadings in a case, and all the other proceedings up to the judgment, arranged in order. In this sense the use of the word has survived its appropriateness; for such records are no longer prepared in the form of a roll.

Assessment Roll

In taxation, the list or roll of taxable persons and property, completed, verified, and deposited by the assessors. Bank v. Genoa, 28 Misc. 71, 59 N. Y. S. 829; Adams v. Brennan, 72 Miss. 894, 18 So. 482.

Judgment Roll

See Master.

Oblate Rolls

See that title.

Rolls of Parliament

The manuscript registers of the proceedings of old parliaments; in these rolls are likewise a great many decisions of difficult points of law, which were frequently, in former times, referred to the determination of this supreme court by the judges of both benches, etc.

Rolls of the Exchequer

There are several in this court relating to the revenue of the country.

Rolls of the Temple

In English law. In each of the two Temples is a roll called the "calves-head roll," wherein every bencher, barrister, and student is taxed yearly; also meals to the cook and other officers of the houses, in consideration of a dinner of calves-head, provided in Easter term. Orig. Jur. 199.

Rolls Office of the Chancery

In English law. An office in Chancery Lane, London, which contains rolls and records of the high court of chancery, the master whereof is the second person in the chancery, etc. The rolls court was there held, the master of the rolls sitting as judge; and that judge still sits there as a judge of the chancery division of the high court of justice. Wharton.

Tax Roll

A schedule or list of the persons and property subject to the payment of a particular tax, with the amounts severally due, prepared and authenticated in proper form to warrant the collecting officers to proceed with the enforcement of the tax. Babcock v. Beaver

Creek Tp., 64 Mich. 601, 31 N. W. 423; Smith v. Scully, 66 Kan. 139, 71 P. 249.

ROLL, v. To rob. Lasecki v. State, 190 Wis. 274, 208 N. W. 868, 869.

ROLLING. En route; on way to destination; in transit. Sales of goods are often made "rolling" f. o. b. a designated place. Vaccaro Bros. & Co. v. Farris, 92 W. Va. 655, 115 S. E. 830, 831.

ROLLING STOCK. The portable or movable apparatus and machinery of a railroad, particularly such as moves on the road, viz., engines, cars, tenders, coaches, and trucks. See Beardsley v. Ontario Bank, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 635; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill. 448; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 14 S. Ct. 1114, 38 L. Ed. 1031; *Great Northern Ry. Co. v. ROLLING STOCK PROTECTION ACT. The act of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 50, passed to protect the rolling stock of railways from distress or sale in certain cases.

ROMA PEDITÆ. Lat. Pilgrims that traveled to Rome on foot.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHARITIES ACT. The statute 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, providing a method for enjoying estates given upon trust for Roman Catholics, but invalidated by reason of certain of the trusts being superstitious or otherwise illegal. 3 Steph. Comm. 76.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The juristic personality of the Roman Catholic Church, with the right to sue and to take and hold property has been recognized by all systems of European law from the fourth century. It was formally recognized between Spain and the Papacy and by Spanish laws from the beginning of the settlements in the Indies, also by our treaty with Spain in 1898, whereby its property rights were solemnly safeguarded; Municipality of Ponce v. Roman Catholic Church in Porto Rico, 210 U. S. 296, 28 S. Ct. 737, 52 L. Ed. 1068. To the same effect as to the Philippines; Santos v. Roman Catholic Church, 212 U. S. 463, 29 S. Ct. 338, 53 L. Ed. 599.

ROMAN LAW. This term, in a general sense, comprehends all the laws which prevailed among the Romans, without regard to the time of their origin, including the collections of Justinian.

In a more restricted sense, the Germans understand by this term merely the law of Justinian, as adopted by them. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 18.

In England and America, it appears to be customary to use the phrase, indifferently with "the civil law," to designate the whole system of Roman jurisprudence, including the Corpus Juris Civilis; or, if any distinction is drawn, the expression "civil law" denotes the system of jurisprudence obtaining in those countries of continental Europe which have derived their juridical notions and principles from the Justinian collection, while "Roman law" is reserved as the proper appellation of the body of law developed under the government of Rome from the earliest times to the fall of the empire.

ROME-SCOT, or ROME-PENNY. Peterpence, (q. v.) Cowell.

ROMNEY MARSH. A tract of land in the county of Kent, England, containing twenty-four thousand acres, governed by certain ancient and equitable laws of sewers, composed by Henry de Bathe, a venerable judge in the reign of King Henry III.; from which laws all commissioners of sewers in England may receive light and direction. 3 Bl. Comm. 73, note t; 4 Inst. 276.

ROOD OF LAND. The fourth part of an acre in square measure, or one thousand two hundred and ten square yards.

ROOT OF DESCENT. The same as "stock of descent."

ROOT OF TITLE. The document with which an abstract of title properly commences is called the "root" of the title. Sweet.

ROS. A kind of rushes, which some tenants were obliged by their tenure to furnish their lords withal. Cowell.

ROSLAND. Healthy ground, or ground full of ling; also watery and moorish land. 1 Inst. 5.

ROSTER. A list of persons who are to perform certain legal duties when called upon in their turn. In military affairs it is a table or plan by which the duty of officers is regulated. See Matthews v. Bowman, 25 Me. 167.

ROTA. L. Lat. Succession; rotation. "Rota of presentations;" "rota of the terms." 2 W. Bl. 772, 773.

A roll or list, as of schoolboys, soldiers, jurors, or the like. Cent. Dict.

In the Roman Catholic Church, an ecclesiastical court, called also "Rota Romana," consisting of 12 "auditors." Webster, Dict. One of its members must be a German, one a Frenchman, two Spaniards, and eight Italians. Encyc. Brit. It has its seat at the papal court, and is divided into two colleges or senates, having jurisdiction of appeals and of all matters beneficiary and patrimonial. There is no appeal from its decisions except to the Pope. Cent. Dict.

Also, a celebrated court at Genoa about the sixteenth century, or before, whose decisions in maritime matters form the first part of Straccha de Merc. See Ingersoll's Roccus.

ROTA. Span. In Spanish law. Obliterated. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 2.

ROTHER-BEASTS. A term which includes oxen, cows, steers, heifers, and such like horned animals. Cowell.

ROTTEN BOROUGHES. Small boroughs in England, which prior to the reform act, 1832, returned one or more members to parliament.

ROTTEN CLAUSE. A clause sometimes inserted in policies of marine insurance to the effect that "if, on a regular survey, the ship shall be declared unseaworthy by reason of being rotten or unsound," the insurers shall be discharged. 1 Phil. Ins. § 849. See Steinmetz v. United States Ins. Co., 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 296.

ROTULUS WINTONIÆ. The roll of Winton. An exact survey of all England, made by Alfred, not unlike that of Domesday; and it was so called because it was kept at Winchester, among other records of the kingdom; but this roll time has destroyed. Ingulph. Hist. 516.

ROTURE. Fr. In old French and Canadian law. A free tenure without the privilege of nobility; the tenure of a free commoner.

ROTURIER. Fr. In old French and Canadian law. A free tenant of land on services exigible either in money or in kind. Steph. Lect. 229. A free commoner; one who held of a superior, but could have no inferior below him.

ROUND-ROBIN. A circle divided from the center, like Arthur's round table, whence its supposed origin. In each compartment is a signature, so that the entire circle, when filled, exhibits a list, without priority being given to any name. A common form of round-robin is simply to write the names in a circular form. Wharton.

ROUP. In Scotch law. A sale by auction. Bell.

ROUT. A rout is an unlawful assembly which has made a motion towards the execution of the common purpose of the persons assembled. It is, therefore, between an unlawful assembly and a riot. Steph. Crim. Dig. 41.

Whenever two or more persons assembled and acting together, make any attempt or advance toward the commission of an act which would be a riot if actually committed, such assembly is a rout. Pen. Code Cal. § 406. And see People v. Judson, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 23; Follis v. State, 37 Tex. Cr. R. 535, 40 S. W. 277.

ROUTE. Fr. In French insurance law. The way that is taken to make the voyage insured. The direction of the voyage assured.

ROUTOUSLY. In pleading. A technical word in indictments, generally coupled with the word "riotously." 2 Chit. Crim. Law, 488.

ROY. L. Fr. The king.

Roy est l'original de tous franchises. Kellw. 138. The king is the origin of all franchises.

Roy n'est lie per ascun statute si il ne soit expressment nosme. The king is not bound by any statute, unless expressly named. Jenk. Cent. 307; Broom, Max. 72.

Roy poet dispenser ove malum prohibitum, mais non malum per se. Jenk. Cent. 307. The king can grant a dispensation for a malum prohibitum, but not for a malum per se.

ROYAL. Of or pertaining to or proceeding from the king or sovereign in a monarchical government.

ROYAL ASSENT. The royal assent is the last form through which a bill goes previously to becoming an act of parliament. It is, in the words of Lord Hale, "the complement and perfection of a law." The royal assent is given either by the queen in person or by royal commission by the queen herself, signed with her own hand. It is rarely given in person, except when at the end of the session the queen attends to prorogue parliament, if she should do so. Brown.

ROYAL COURTS OF JUSTICE. Under the statute 42 & 43 Vict. c. 78, § 28, this is the name given to the buildings, together with all additions thereto, erected under the courts of justice building act, 1865, (28 & 29 Vict. c. 48,) and courts of justice concentration (site) act, 1865, (28 & 29 Vict. c. 49.) Brown.

ROYAL FISH. See Fish.

ROYAL GRANTS. Conveyances of record in England. They are of two kinds: (1) Letters patent; and (2) letters close, or writs close. 1 Steph. Comm. 615-618.

ROYAL HONORS. In the language of diplomacy, this term designates the privilege enjoyed by every empire or kingdom in Europe, by the pope, the grand duchies of Germany, and the Germanic and Swiss confederations, to precedence over all others who do not enjoy the same rank, with the exclusive right of sending to other states public ministers of the first rank, as ambassadors, together with other distinctive titles and ceremonies. Wheat. Int. Law, pt. 2, c. 3, § 2.

ROYAL MINES. Mines of silver and gold belonged to the king of England, as part of his prerogative of coinage, to furnish him with material. 1 Bl. Comm. 294.

ROYAL PREROGATIVE. Those rights and capacities which the king enjoys alone in contradistinction to others and not to those which he enjoys in common with any of his subjects. It is that special pre-eminence which the sovereign has over all other persons, and out of the course of the common law by right of regal dignity. In Great Britain the royal prerogative includes the right of sending and receiving ambassadors, of making treaties, and (theoretically) of making war and concluding peace, of summoning Parliament, and refusing assent to a bill, with many other political, judicial, ecclesiastical privileges. Ætna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 307, 309.

ROYAL TITLES ACT, 1901. The title of the sovereign is "By the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

ROYALTIES. Regalities; royal property.

ROYALTY. A payment reserved by the grantor of a patent, lease of a mine, or similar right, and payable proportionately to the use made of the right by the grantee. See Raynolds v. Hanna (C. C.) 55 F. 800; Hubenthal v. Kennedy, 76 Iowa, 707, 39 N. W. 694; Western Union Tel. Co. v. American Bell Tel. Co., 125 F. 342, 60 C. C. A. 220; Hill v. Roberts (Tex. Civ. App.) 284 S. W. 246, 249; Volk v. Volk Mfg. Co., 101 Conn. 594, 126 A. 847, 849; Robinson v. Jones, 119 Kan. 609, 240 P. 957, 959; Aldridge v. Houston Oil Co., 116 Okl. 281, 244 P. 782, 784; In re Elsner's Will, 210 App. Div. 575, 206 N. Y. S. 765, 766; Payne v. U. S., 269 F. 871, 873, 50 App. D. C. 219; Curlee v. Anderson & Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 622, 624; Hinerman v. Baldwin, 67 Mont. 417, 215 P. 1103, 1107; Bellport v. Harrison, 123 Kan. 310, 255 P. 52, 53.

Royalty also sometimes means a payment which is made to an author or composer by an assignee or licensee in respect of each copy of his work which is sold, or to an inventor in respect of each article sold under the patent. Sweet.

RUBRIC. Directions printed in books of law and in prayer-books, so termed because they were originally distinguished by red ink.

RUBRIC OF A STATUTE. Its title, which was anciently printed in red letters. It serves to show the object of the legislature, and thence affords the means of interpreting the body of the act; hence the phrase, of an argument, "a rubro ad nigrum." Wharton.

RUDENESS. Roughness; incivility; violence. Touching another with rudeness may constitute a battery.

RUINA. Lat. In the civil law. Ruin, the falling of a house. Dig. 47, 9.

RULE, v. This verb has two significations: (1) to command or require by a rule of court; as, to rule the sheriff to return the writ, to rule the defendant to plead. (2) To settle or decide a point of law arising upon a trial at nisi prius; and, when it is said of a judge presiding at such a trial that he "ruled" so and so, it is meant that he laid down, settled, or decided such and such to be the law.

RULE, n. An established standard, guide, or regulation; a principle or regulation set up by authority, prescribing or directing action or forbearance; as, the rules of a legislative body, of a company, court, public office, of the law, of ethics. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State, 73 Fla. 609, 74 So. 595, 601.

A regulation made by a court of justice or public office with reference to the conduct of business therein.

An order made by a court, at the instance of one of the parties to a suit, commanding a ministerial officer, or the opposite party, to do some act, or to show cause why some act should not be done. It is usually upon some interlocutory matter, and has not the force or solemnity of a decree or judgment.

"Rule" sometimes means a rule of law. Thus, we speak of the rule against perpetuities; the rule in Shelley's Case, etc.

Cross-Rules

These were rules where each of the opposite litigants obtained a rule nisi, as the plaintiff to increase the damages, and the defendant to enter a nonsuit. Wharton.

General Rules

General or standing orders of a court, in relation to practice, etc.

Rule Absolute

One which commands the subject-matter of the rule to be forthwith enforced. It is usual, when the party has failed to show sufficient cause against a rule nisi, to "make the rule absolute," i. e., imperative and final.

Rule-Day

In practice. The day on which a rule is returnable, or on which the act or duty enjoined by a rule is to be performed. See Cook v. Cook, 18 Fla. 637.

Rule Discharged

A term indicating that the court has refused to take the action sought by the rule, or has decided that the cause shown against the rule is deemed sufficient.

Rule in Shelley's Case

A celebrated rule in English law, propounded in Lord Coke's reports in the following form: That whenever a man, by any gift or conveyance, takes an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs in fee or in tail, the word "heirs" is a word of limitation and not of purchase. In other words, it is to be understood as expressing the quantity of estate which the party is to take, and not as conferring any distinct estate on the persons who may become his representatives. 1 Coke, 104a; 1 Steph. Comm. 308. See Zabriskie v. Wood, 23 N. J. Eq. 544; Duffy v. Jarvis (C. C.) 84 F. 733; Hampton v. Rafter, 30 Miss. 203; Hancock v. Butler, 21 Tex. 807; Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wend. 511, 20 Am. Dec. 716; Smith v. Smith, 24 S. C. 314.

Rule Nisi

A rule which will become imperative and final unless cause be shown against it. This rule commands the party to show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced.

Rule of 1756

A rule of international law, first practically established in 1756, by which neutrals, in time of war, are prohibited from carrying on with a belligerent power a trade which is not open to them in time of peace. 1 Kent. Comm. 82.

Rule of Course

There are some rules which the courts authorize their officers to grant as a matter of course, without formal application being made to a judge in open court, and these are technically termed, in English practice, "side-bar rules," because formerly they were moved for by the attorneys at the side bar in court. They are now generally termed "rules of course." Brown.

Rules of Court

The rules for regulating the practice of the different courts, which the judges are empowered to frame and put in force as occasion may require, are termed "rules of court." Brown. See Goodlett v. Charles, 14 Rich. Law (S. C.) 49.

Rule of Law

A legal principle, of general application, sanctioned by the recognition of authorities, and usually expressed in the form of a maxim or logical proposition. Called a "rule," because in doubtful or unforeseen cases it is a guide or norm for their decision. Toullier, tit. prel. no. 17.

Rules of Practice

Certain orders made by the courts for the purpose of regulating the practice in actions and other proceedings before them.

Rules of Procedure

Rules made by a legislative body concerning the mode and manner of conducting its business, and for the purpose of making an orderly and proper disposition of the matters before it, such as rules prescribing what committees shall be appointed, on what subjects they shall act, what shall be the daily order in which business shall be taken up, and in what order certain motions shall be received and acted on. Heiskell v. Baltimore, 65 Md. 125, 4 A. 116, 57 Am. Rep. 308; Heyker v. McLaughlin, 106 Ky. 509, 50 S. W. 859.

Rule of Property

A settled rule or principle, resting usually on precedents or a course of decisions, regulating the ownership or devolution of property. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Adams, 81 Miss. 90, 32 So. 937; Edwards v. Davenport (C. C.) 20 F. 763; Brekke v. Crew, 43 S. D. 106, 178 N. W. 146, 154.

Rule of the Road

The popular English name for the regulations governing the navigation of vessels in public waters, with a view to preventing collisions. Sweet.

Rule to Plead

A rule of court, taken by a plaintiff as of course, requiring the defendant to plead within a given time, on pain of having judgment taken against him by default.

Rule to Show Cause

A rule commanding the party to appear and show cause why he should not be compelled to do the act required, or why the object of the rule should not be enforced; a rule nisi, (q. v.).

Special Rule

Rules granted without any motion in court, or when the motion is only assumed to have been made, and is not actually made, are called "common" rules; while the rules granted upon motion actually made to the court in term, or upon a judge's order in vacation, are termed "special" rules. Brown. The term may also be understood as opposed to "general" rule; in which case it means a particular direction, in a matter of practice, made for the purposes of a particular case.

RULES. In American practice. This term is sometimes used, by metonymy, to denote a time or season in the judicial year when motions may be made and rules taken, as special terms or argument-days, or even the vacations, as distinguished from the regular terms of the courts for the trial of causes; and, by a further extension of its meaning, it may denote proceedings in an action taken out of court. Thus, "an irregularity committed at rules may be corrected at the next term of the court." Southall's Adm'r v. Exchange Bank, 12 Grat. (Va.) 312.

RULES OF A PRISON. Certain limits without the walls, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving sufficient security to the marshal not to escape.

RULES OF THE KING'S BENCH PRISON. In English practice. Certain limits beyond the walls of the prison, within which all prisoners in custody in civil actions were allowed to live, upon giving security by bond, with two sufficient sureties, to the marshal, not to escape, and paying him a certain percentage on the amount of the debts for which they were detained. Holthouse.

RUMOR. Flying or popular report; a current story passing from one person to another without any known authority for the truth of it. Webster. It is not generally admissible in evidence. State v. Culler, 82 Mo. 626; Smith v. Moore, 74 Vt. 81, 52 A. 320; Gaffney v. Royal Neighbors of America, 31 Idaho, 549, 174 P. 1014, 1017; State v. Vettere, 76 Mont. 574, 248 P. 179, 183.

RUN, v. To have currency or legal validity in a prescribed territory; as, the writ runs throughout the county.

To have applicability or legal effect during a prescribed period of time; as, the statute of limitations has run against the claim.

To follow or accompany; to be attached to another thing in pursuing a prescribed course or direction; as, the covenant runs with the land.

RUN, n. In American law. A water-course of small size. Webb v. Bedford, 2 Bibb. (Ky.) 354.

To conduct, manage, carry on. State v. Kamuda, 98 Vt. 466, 129 A. 306, 308.

—Running loose. As applied to an engine. Running forward without cars attached to it. Testerman v. Hines, 88 W. Va. 547, 107 S. E. 201.

RUNCARIA. In old records. Land full of brambles and briars. 1 Inst. 5a.

RUNCINUS. In old English law. A load-horse; a sumpter-horse or cart-horse.

RUNDLET, or RUNLET. A measure of wine, oil, etc., containing eighteen gallons and a half. Cowell.

RUNNING ACCOUNT. An open unsettled account, as distinguished from a stated and liquidated account. "Running accounts mean mutual accounts and reciprocal demands between the parties, which accounts and demands remain open and unsettled." Brackenridge v. Baltzell, 1 Ind. 335; Leonard v. U. S., 18 Ct. Cl. 385; Picker v. Fitzelle, 28 App. Div. 519, 51 N. Y. S. 205; Spencer v. Sowers, 118 Kan. 259, 234 P. 972, 973, 39 A. L. R. 365; Badger Lumber Co. v. W. F. Lyons Ice & Power Co., 174 Mo. App. 414, 160 S. W. 49, 52; Hollingsworth v. Allen, 176 N. C. 629, 97 S. E. 625.

RUNNING AT LARGE. This term is applied to wandering or straying animals. Dixon v. Lewis, 94 Conn. 548, 109 A. 809, 810; Uebele v. State, 21 Ohio App. 459, 153 N. E. 215, 216; Finley v. Barker, 219 Mich. 442, 189 N. W. 197, 200; Lackey v. Peterson, 161 Minn. 315, 201 N. W. 428, 429; Village of Koshkonong v. Boak, 173 Mo. App. 310, 158 S. W. 874, 876; Fraser v. Hawkins, 137 Ark. 214, 208 S. W. 296, 297.

Sundays and holidays. Brown v. Johnson, 10 Mees. & W. 334; Crowell v. Barreda, 16 Gray (Mass.) 472; Davis v. Pendergast, 7 Fed. Cas. 162.

RUNNING LEASE. Where a lease provided that the tenancy should not be confined to any portion of the land granted, but allowed the tenant the use of all the land he could clear, it was called in the old books a "running lease," as distinguished from one confined to a particular division, circumscribed by metes and bounds, within a larger tract. Cowan v. Hatcher (Tenn. Ch. App.) 59 S. W. 691.

RUNNING OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A metaphorical expression, by which is meant that the time mentioned in the statute of limitations is considered as passing. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 861.

RUNNING POLICY. A running policy is one which contemplates successive insurances, and which provides that the object of the policy may be from time to time defined, especially as to the subjects of insurance, by additional statements or indorsements. Civ. Code Cal. § 2597. And see Corporation of London Assurance v. Paterson, 106 Ga. 538, 32 S. E. 650.

RUNNING WITH THE LAND. A covenant is said to run with the land when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that land. Brown.

RUNNING WITH THE REVERSION. A covenant is said to "run with the reversion" when either the liability to perform it or the right to take advantage of it passes to the assignee of that reversion. Brown.

RUNRIG LANDS. Lands in Scotland where the ridges of a field belong alternatively to different proprietors. Anciently this kind of possession was advantageous in giving a united interest to tenants to resist inroads. By the act of 1695, c. 23, a division of these lands was authorized, with the exception of lands belonging to corporations. Wharton.

RUPEE. A silver coin of India, rated at 2s. for the current, and 2s. 3d. for the Bombay, rupee.

RUPTUM. Lat. In the civil law. Broken. A term applied to a will. Inst. 2, 17, 3.

RURAL DEANERY. The circuit of an archdeacon's and rural dean's jurisdictions. Every rural deanery is divided into parishes. See 1 Steph. Comm. 117.

RURAL DEANS. In English ecclesiastical law. Very ancient officers of the church, almost grown out of use, until about the middle of the present century, about which time they were generally revived, whose deaneries are as an ecclesiastical division of the diocese or archdeaconry. They are deputies of the bishop, planted all round his diocese, to inspect the conduct of the parochial clergy, to inquire into and report dilapidations, and to examine candidates for confirmation, armed in minuter matters with an inferior degree of judicial and coercive authority. Wharton.

RURAL SERVITUDE. In the civil law. A servitude annexed to a rural estate, (prædium rusticum.)

RUSE DE GUERRE. Fr. A trick in war; a stratagem.

RUSTICI. Lat.

In Feudal Law

Natives of a conquered country.

In Old English Law

Inferior country tenants, churls, or chorls, who held cottages and lands by the services of plowing, and other labors of agriculture, for the lord. Cowell.

RUSTICUM FORUM. Lat. A rude, unlearned, or unlettered tribunal; a term sometimes applied to arbitrators selected by the parties to settle a dispute. See Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 339; Dickinson v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., 7 W. Va. 429.

RUSTICUM JUDICIUM. Lat. In maritime law. A rough or rude judgment or decision. A judgment in admiralty dividing the damages caused by a collision between the two ships. 3 Kent, Comm. 231; Story, Bailm. § 608a. See The Victory, 68 F. 400, 15 C. C. A. 490.

RUTA. Lat. In the civil law. Things extracted from land; as sand, chalk, coal, and such other matters.

RUTA ET CÆSA. In the civil law. Things dug, (as sand and lime,) and things cut, (as wood, coal, etc.) Dig. 19, 1, 17, 6. Words used in conveyancing.

RYOT. In India. A peasant, subject, or tenant of house or land. Wharton.

RYOT-TENURE. A system of land-tenure, where the government takes the place of land-owners and collects the rent by means of tax gatherers. The farming is done by poor peasants, (ryots,) who find the capital, so far as there is any, and also do the work. The system exists in Turkey, Egypt, Persia, and other Eastern countries, and in a modified form in British India. After slavery, it is accounted the worst of all systems, because the government can fix the rent at what it pleases, and it is difficult to distinguish between rent and taxes.

S. As an abbreviation, this letter stands for "section," "statute," and various other words of which it is the initial.

S. B. An abbreviation for "senate bill."

S. C. An abbreviation for "same case." Inserted between two citations, it indicates that the same case is reported in both places. It is also an abbreviation for "supreme court," and for "select cases;" also for "South Carolina."

S. D. An abbreviation for "southern district." S/D B/L. The abbreviation "S/D B/L" in a contract of sale means sight draft—bill of lading attached. Attalla Oil & Fertilizer Co. v. Goddard, 207 Ala. 287, 92 So. 794, 796.

S. F. S. An abbreviation in the civil law for "sine fraude sua," (without fraud on his part.) Calvin.

S. L. An abbreviation for "session [or statute] laws."

S. P. An abbreviation of "sine prole," without issue. Also an abbreviation of "same principle," or "same point," indicating, when inserted between two citations, that the second involves the same doctrine as the first.

S. S. A collar formerly worn on state occasions by the Lord Chief Justice of England, and of the Common Pleas and the Lord Chief Baron—now only by the first named of these (q. v.).

S. V. An abbreviation for "sub voce," under the word; used in references to dictionaries, and other works arranged alphabetically.

SABBATH. One of the names of the first day of the week; more properly called "Sunday;" (q. v.) See State v. Drake, 64 N. C. 591; Gunn v. State, 89 Ga. 341, 15 S. E. 458; State v. Reade, 98 N. J. Law 596, 121 A. 288.

SABBATH-BREAKING. The offense of violating the laws prescribed for the observance of Sunday. State v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 15 W. Va. 381, 36 Am. Rep. 803; State v. Popp, 45 Md. 433.

SABBATUM. L. Lat. The Sabbath; also peace. Domesday.

SABBULONARIUM. A gravel pit, or liberty to dig gravel and sand; money paid for the same. Cowell.

SABINIANS. A school or sect of Roman jurists, under the early empire, founded by Ateius Capito, who was succeeded by M. Sabinus, from whom the name.

SABLE. The heraldic term for black. It is called "Saturn," by those who blazon by planets, and "diamond," by those who use the names of jewels. Engravers commonly represent it by numerous perpendicular and horizontal lines, crossing each other. Wharton.

SABOTAGE. A method used by labor revolutionists to force employers to accede to demands made on them. It consists in a willful obstruction and interference with the normal processes of industry. It aims at inconveniencing and tying up all production, but stops short of actual destruction or of endangering human life directly. The original act of sabotage is said to have been the slipping of a wooden shoe, or sabot, of a workman into a loom, in the early days of the introduction of machinery, to impede production. State v. McLennen, 116 Wash. 612, 200 P. 319, 320; State v. Moilen, 140 Minn. 112, 167 N. W. 345, 347, 1 A. L. R. 331; State v. Tonn, 195 Iowa, 94, 191 N. W. 530, 538.

SABURRA. L. Lat. In old maritime law. Ballast.

SAC. In old English law. A liberty of holding pleas; the jurisdiction of a manor court; the privilege claimed by a lord of trying actions of trespass between his tenants, in his manor court, and imposing fines and amerancements in the same.

SACABURTH, SACABERE, SAKABERE. In old English law. He that is robbed, or by theft deprived of his money or goods, and puts in surety to prosecute the felon with fresh suit. Bract. fol. 154b.

SACCABOR. In old English law. The person from whom a thing had been stolen, and by whom the thief was freshly pursued. Bract. fol. 154b. See Sacaburth.

SACCULARII. Lat. In Roman law. Cut-purses. 4 Steph. Comm. 125.

SACCUS CUM BROCHIA. L. Lat. In old English law. A service or tenure of finding a sack and a broach (pitcher) to the sovereign for the use of the army. Bract. l. 2, c. 16.

SACQUIER. In maritime law. The name of an ancient officer, whose business was to load and unload vessels laden with salt, corn, or fish, to prevent the ship's crew defrauding the merchant by false tale, or cheating him of his merchandise otherwise. Laws Oleron, art. 11; 1 Pet. Adm. Append. 25.

SACRA. Lat. In Roman law. The right to participate in the sacred rites of the city. Butl. Hor. Jur. 27.

SACRAMENTALES. L. Lat. In feudal law. Compurgators; persons who came to purge a defendant by their oath that they believed him innocent.

SACRAMENTI ACTIO. Lat. In the older practice of the Roman law, this was one of the forms of legis actio, consisting in the deposit of a stake or juridical wager. See Sacramentum.

SACRAMENTUM. Lat.

In Roman Law

An oath, as being a very sacred thing; more particularly, the oath taken by soldiers to be true to their general and their country. Ainsw. Lex.

In one of the formal methods of beginning an action at law (legis actiones) known to the early Roman jurisprudence, the sacramentum was a sum of money deposited in court by each of the litigating parties, as a kind of wager or forfeit, to abide the result of the suit. The successful party received back his stake; the losing party forfeited his, and it was paid into the public treasury, to be expended for sacred objects, (in sacris rebus), whence the name. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 203.

In Common Law

An oath. Cowell.

SACRAMENTUM DECISIONIS. The voluntary or decisive oath of the civil law, where one of the parties to a suit, not being able to prove his case, offers to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary, who is bound to accept or make the same offer on his part, or the whole is considered as confessed by him. 3 Bl. Comm. 342.

SACRAMENTUM FIDELITATIS. In old English law. The oath of fealty. Reg. Orig. 303.

Sacramentum habet in se tres comites,—veritatem, justitiam, et iudicium; veritas habenda est in iurato; justitia et iudicium in iudice. An oath has in it three component parts,—truth, justice, and judgment; truth in the party swearing; justice and judgment in the judge administering the oath. 3 Inst. 160.

Sacramentum si fatuum fuerit, licet falsum, tamen non committit perjurium. 2 Inst. 167. A foolish oath, though false, makes not perjury.

SACRILEGE.

In English Criminal Law

Larceny from a church. 4 Steph. Comm. 164. The crime of breaking a church or chapel, and stealing therein. 1 Russ. Crimes, 843.

In Old English Law

The desecration of anything considered holy; the alienation to lay-men or to profane or common purposes of what was given to religious persons and to pious uses. Cowell.

SACRILEGIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The stealing of sacred things, or things dedicated to sacred uses; the taking of things out of a holy place. Calvin.

SACRILEGUS. Lat. In the civil and common law. A sacrilegious person; one guilty of sacrilege.

Sacrilegus omnium prædonum cupiditatem et scelera superat. 4 Coke, 106. A sacrilegious person transcends the cupidity and wickedness of all other robbers.

SACRISTAN. A sexton, anciently called "sager-son," or "sagiston;" the keeper of things belonging to divine worship.

SADBERGE. A denomination of part of the county palatine of Durham. Wharton.

SADISM. That state of sexual perversion in man in which the sexual inclination manifests itself by the desire to beat, to maltreat, humiliate and even to kill the person for whom the passion is conceived. 3 Witth. & Beck, Med. Jur. 739.

SÆMEND. In old English law. An umpire, or arbitrator.

Sæpe constitutum est, res inter alios iudicatas aliis non præjudicare. It has often been settled that matters adjudged between others ought not to prejudice those who were not parties. Dig. 42, 1, 63.

Sæpe viatorem nova, non vetus, orbita fallit. 4 Inst. 34. A new road, not an old one, often deceives the traveler.

Sæpenumero ubi proprietas verborum attenditur, sensus veritatis amittitur. Oftentimes where the propriety of words is attended to, the true sense is lost. Branch, Princ.; 7 Coke, 27.

SÆVITIA. Lat. In the law of divorce. Cruelty; anything which tends to bodily harm, and in that manner renders cohabitation unsafe. 1 Hagg. Const. 458.

SAFE. A metal receptacle for the preservation of valuables.

SAFE-CONDUCT. A guaranty or security granted by the king under the great seal to a stranger, for his safe coming into and passing out of the kingdom. Cowell.

One of the papers usually carried by vessels in time of war, and necessary to the safety of neutral merchantmen. It is in the nature of a license to the vessel to proceed on a designated voyage, and commonly contains the name of the master, the name, description, and nationality of the ship, the voyage intended, and other matters.

A distinction is sometimes made between a passport, conferring a general permission to travel in the territory belonging to, or occupied by, the belligerent, and a safe-conduct, conferring permission upon an enemy subject or others to proceed to a particular place for a defined object. II Opp. § 218.

SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY. A company, which maintains vaults for the deposit and safe-keeping of valuables in which compartments or boxes are rented to customers who have exclusive access thereto, subject to the oversight and under the rules and regulations of the company.

SAFE LIMIT OF SPEED. As regards limitation on speed of automobiles at crossings, a "safe limit" of speed is the limit at which one may discern the approaching train and stop before he is in the danger zone. Horton v. New York Cent. R. Co., 205 App. Div. 763, 200 N. Y. S. 365, 366.

SAFE LOADING PLACE. A place where a vessel can be rendered safe for loading by reasonable measures of precaution. 14 Q. B. D. 105; 54 L. J. Q. B. 121.

SAFE PLACE TO WORK. In the law of master and servant a "safe place to work," is a place in which the master has eliminated all danger which the exercise of reasonable care by the master would remove or guard against. Melody v. Des Moines Union Ry. Co., 161 Iowa, 695, 141 N. W. 438, 439; Blick v. Olds Motor Works, 175 Mich. 640, 141 N. W. 680, 683, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 883.

SAFE-PLEDGE. A surety given that a man shall appear upon a certain day. Bract. l. 4, c. 1.

SAFEGUARD. In old English law. A special privilege or license, in the form of a writ, under the great seal, granted to strangers seeking their right by course of law within the king's dominions, and apprehending violence or injury to their persons or property from others. Reg. Orig. 26.

A notification by a belligerent commander that buildings or other property upon which the notification is posted up are exempt from interference on the part of his troops. Holland, Laws and Customs of War 44.

The term is likewise used to describe a guard of soldiers who are detailed to accompany enemy subjects or to protect certain enemy property. II Opp. § 219.

SAFETY APPLIANCE ACT. The act of Congress of March 2, 1893 (45 USCA §§ 1-7), provides that after January 1, 1898, it shall be unlawful for common carriers in interstate commerce by railroad to use locomotive engines not equipped with power driving-wheel brakes and appliances for operating the train brake system, or to run a train that has not a sufficient number of cars in it so equipped that the engineer on the locomotive can control its speed without requiring hand brakes; and to haul or use on its line any car in interstate traffic "not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars."

SAGAMAN. A tale-teller; a secret accuser.

SAGES DE LA LEY. L. Fr. Sages of the law; persons learned in the law. A term applied to the chancellor and justices of the king's bench.

SAGIBARO. In old European law. A judge or justice; literally, a man of causes, or having charge or supervision of causes. One who administered justice and decided causes in the mallum, or public assembly. Spelman.

SAID. Before mentioned. This word is constantly used in contracts, pleadings, and other legal papers, with the same force as "aforesaid." See Shattuck v. Balcom, 170 Mass. 245, 49 N. E. 87; Cubine v. State, 44 Tex. Cr. R. 596, 73 S. W. 396; Hinrichsen v. Hinrichsen, 172 Ill. 462, 50 N. E. 135; Wilkinson v. State, 10 Ind. 373; Murry v. State, 150 Ark. 461, 234 S. W. 485, 486; Greeley Nat. Bank v. Wolf (C. C. A.) 4 F.(2d) 67, 69.

SAIGA. In old European law. A German coin of the value of a penny, or of three pence.

SAIL. In insurance law. To put to sea; to begin a voyage. To get ship under way in complete readiness for voyage, with purpose of proceeding without further delay. Northland Nav. Co. v. American Merchant Marine Ins. Co. of New York, 214 App. Div. 571, 212 N. Y. S. 541, 544. The least locomotion, with readiness of equipment and clearance, satisfies a warranty to sail. Pittegrew v. Pringle, 3 Barn. & Adol. 514.

SAILING. When a vessel quits her moorings, in complete readiness for sea, and it is the actual and real intention of the master to proceed on the voyage, and she is afterwards stopped by head winds and comes to anchor, still intending to proceed as soon as wind and weather will permit, this is a sailing on the voyage within the terms of a policy of insurance. Bowen v. Hope Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 278, 32 Am. Dec. 213.

SAILING INSTRUCTIONS. Written or printed directions, delivered by the commanding officer of a convoy to the several masters of the ships under his care, by which they are enabled to understand and answer his signals, to know the place of rendezvous appointed for the fleet in case of dispersion by storm, by an enemy, or otherwise. Without sailing instructions no vessel can have the protection and benefit of convoy. Marsh. Ins. 368.

SAILORS. Seamen; mariners.

SAINT MARTIN LE GRAND, COURT OF. An ancient court in London, of local importance, formerly held in the church from which it took its name.

SAINT SIMONISM. An elaborate form of non-communistic socialism. It is a scheme which does not contemplate an equal, but an unequal, division of the produce. It does not propose that all should be occupied alike, but differently, according to their vocation or capacity; the function of each being assigned, like grades in a regiment, by the choice of the directing authority, and the remuneration being by salary, proportioned to the importance, in the eyes of that authority, of the function itself, and the merits of the person who fulfills it. 1 Mill, Pol. Econ. 258.

SAIO. In Gothic law. The ministerial officer of a court or magistrate, who brought parties into court and executed the orders of his superior. Spelman.

SAISIE. Fr. In French law. A judicial seizure or sequestration of property, of which there are several varieties. See infra.

SAISIE-ARRÊT. An attachment of property in the possession of a third person.

SAISIE-EXÉCUTION. A writ resembling that of feri facias; defined as that species of execution by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) his debtor's movable property liable to seizure, in order to have it sold, so that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Dict.

SAISIE-FORAINÉ. A permission given by the proper judicial officer to authorize a creditor to seize the property of his debtor in the district which the former inhabits. Dalloz, Dict. It has the effect of an attachment of property, which is applied to the payment of the debt due.

SAISIE-GAGERIE. A conservatory act of execution, by which the owner or principal lessor of a house or farm causes the furniture of the house or farm leased, and on which he has a lien, to be seized; similar to the distress of the common law. Dalloz, Dict.

SAISIE-IMMOBILIÈRE. The proceeding by which a creditor places under the hand of justice (custody of the law) the immovable property of his debtor, in order that the same may be sold, and that he may obtain payment of his debt out of the proceeds. Dalloz, Dict.

SAKE. In old English law. A lord's right of amercing his tenants in his court. Keilw. 145.

Acquittance of suit at county courts and hundred courts. Fleta, l. 1, c. 47, § 7.

SALABLE. "Merchantable," fit for sale in usual course of trade, at usual selling prices. Foote v. Wilson, 104 Kan. 191, 178 P. 430; Stevens Tank & Tower Co. v. Berlin Mills Co., 112 Me. 336, 92 A. 180, 181.

SALADINE TENTH. A tax imposed in England and France, in 1188, by Pope Innocent III., to raise a fund for the crusade undertaken by Richard I. of England and Philip Augustus of France, against Saladin, sultan of Egypt, then going to besiege Jerusalem. By this tax every person who did not enter himself a crusader was obliged to pay a tenth of his yearly revenue and of the value of all his movables, except his wearing apparel, books, and arms. The Carthusians, Bernardines, and some other religious persons were exempt. Gibbon remarks that when the necessity for this tax no longer existed, the church still clung to it as too lucrative to be abandoned, and thus arose the tithing of ecclesiastical benefices for the pope or other sovereigns. Enc. Lond.

SALARIIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An allowance of provisions. A stipend, wages, or compensation for services. An annual allowance or compensation. Calvin.

SALARY. A reward or recompense for services performed.

In a more limited sense salary is a fixed periodical compensation paid for services rendered; a stated compensation, amounting to so much by the year, month, or other fixed period, to be paid to public officers and persons in some private employments, for the performance of official duties or the rendering of services of a particular kind, more or less definitely described, involving professional knowledge or skill, or at least employment above the grade of menial or mechanical labor. See State v. Speed, 183 Mo. 186, 81 S. W. 1260; Dane v. Smith, 54 Ala. 50; Fidelity Ins. Co. v. Shenandoah Iron Co. (C. C.) 42 F. 376; Cowdin v. Huff, 10 Ind. 85; In re Chancellor, 1 Bland (Md.) 596; Houser v. Umatilla County, 30 Or. 486, 49 P. 887; Thompson v. Phillips, 12 Ohio St. 617; Benedict v. U. S., 176 U. S. 357, 20 S. Ct. 458, 44 L. Ed. 503; People v. Myers (Sup.) 11 N. Y. S. 217; People v. Lay, 193 Mich. 476, 160 N. W. 467, 471; Roberts v. Frank Carithers & Bros., 180 Ky. 315, 202 S. W. 659, 661; Merriam v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 282 F. 851, 855.

The word "salary," is synonymous with "wages," except that "salary" is sometimes understood to relate to compensation for official or other services, as distinguished from "wages," which is the compensation for labor. Walsh v. City of Bridgeport, 88 Conn. 528, 91 A. 969, 972, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 318.

SALE. A contract between two parties, called, respectively, the "seller" (or vendor) and the "buyer," (or purchaser,) by which the former, in consideration of the payment or promise of payment of a certain price in money, transfers to the latter the title and the possession of property. See Pard. Droit Commer. § 6; 2 Kent, Comm. 363; Poth. Cont. Sale, § 1, and see Butler v. Thomson, 92 U. S. 414, 23 L. Ed. 684; Ward v. State, 45 Ark. 353; Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 544, 12 L. Ed. 1170; White v. Treat (C. C.) 100 F. 291; Iowa v. McFarland, 110 U. S.

471, 4 S. Ct. 210, 28 L. Ed. 198; Goodwin v. Kerr, 80 Mo. 281; State v. Wentworth, 35 N. H. 443; Com. v. Packard, 5 Gray (Mass.) 103; Clemens v. Davis, 7 Pa. 264; Tompkins v. Hunter, 149 N. Y. 117, 43 N. E. 532; In re Grand Union Co. (C. C. A.) 219 F. 353, 356; Snyder v. Stanley, 77 Ind. App. 253, 133 N. E. 512, 514; Burke v. Boulder Milling & Elevator Co., 77 Colo. 230, 235 P. 574, 575.

A contract whereby property is transferred from one person to another for a consideration of value, implying the passing of the general and absolute title, as distinguished from a special interest falling short of complete ownership. Arnold v. North American Chemical Co., 232 Mass. 196, 122 N. E. 283, 284; Faulkner v. Town of South Boston, 141 Va. 517, 127 S. E. 380, 381.

The contract of sale is an agreement by which one gives a thing for a price in current money, and the other gives the price in order to have the thing itself. Three circumstances concur to the perfection of the contract, to-wit, the thing sold, the price, and the consent. Civ. Code La. art. 2439.

A transmutation of property from one man to another in consideration of some price or recompense in value. 2 Bl. Comm. 446.

The transfer of property for a fixed price in money or its equivalent. U. S. v. Benedict (C. C. A.) 280 F. 76, 80.

"Sale" consists of two separate and distinct elements: First, contract of sale which is completed when offer is made and accepted and, second, delivery of property which may precede, be accompanied by, or follow, payment of price as may have been agreed on between parties. Inland Refining Co. v. Langworthy, 112 Okl. 280, 240 P. 627, 629.

"Sale," as applied to relation between landowner and real estate broker working to secure purchaser of land, means procuring purchaser able, ready and willing to buy on terms fixed by seller. Resky v. Meyer, 98 N. J. Law, 168, 119 A. 97, 98; Walker v. Russell, 240 Mass. 386, 134 N. E. 388, 390; T. W. Sandford & Co. v. Waring, 201 Ky. 169, 256 S. W. 9, 10; Humphries v. Smith, 5 Ga. App. 340 (1), 63 S. E. 248.

Synonyms

The contract of "sale" is distinguished from "barter" (which applies only to goods) and "exchange," (which is used of both land and goods,) in that both the latter terms denote a commutation of property for property; i. e., the price or consideration is always paid in money if the transaction is a sale, but, if it is a barter or exchange, it is paid in specific property susceptible of valuation. (Westfall v. Ellis, 141 Minn. 377, 170 N. W. 339, 341; J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Loomis, 31 N. D. 27, 153 N. W. 479, 481.) "Sale" differs from "gift" in that the latter transaction involves no return or recompense for the thing transferred. But an onerous gift sometimes approaches the nature of a sale, at least where the charge it imposes is a payment of money. "Sale" is also to be discriminated from "bailment;" and the difference is to be found in the fact that the contract of bailment always contemplates the return to the bailor of the specific article delivered, either in its original form or in a modified or altered form, or the return of an article which, though not identical, is of the same class, and is equivalent. But sale never involves the return of the article itself, but only a consideration in money. This contract differs also from "accord and satisfaction;" because in the latter the object of transferring the property is to compromise and settle a claim, while the object of a sale is the price given.

The cardinal difference between the relation of seller and buyer and that of principal and factor is that in a "sale" title passes to the buyer, while in a "consignment" by principal to factor title remains in principal, and only possession passes to factor. McGaw v. Hanway, 120 Md. 197, 87 A. 666, 667, Ann-Cas. 1915A, 601, and a "sale" is distinguished from a mortgage, in that the former is a transfer of the absolute property in the goods for a price, whereas a mortgage is at most a conditional sale of property as security for the payment of a debt or performance of some other obligation, subject to the condition that on performance title shall revert in the mortgagor. Waldrep v. Exchange State Bank of Keifer, 81 Okl. 162, 197 P. 509, 511, 14 A. L. R. 747.

In General

—Absolute and conditional sales. An absolute sale is one where the property in chattels passes to the buyer upon the completion of the bargain. Truax v. Parvis, 7 Houst. (Del.) 330, 32 A. 227. A conditional sale is one in which the transfer of title is made to depend on the performance of a condition, usually the payment of the price; it is a purchase for a price paid or to be paid, to become absolute on a particular event, or a purchase accompanied by an agreement to resell upon particular terms. Poindexter v. McCannon, 16 N. C. 373, 18 Am. Dec. 591; Crimp v. McCormick Const. Co., 18 C. C. A. 595, 72 F. 366; Churchill v. Demeritt, 71 N. H. 110, 51 A. 254; Van Allen v. Francis, 123 Cal. 474, 56 P. 339; Schneider v. Daniel, 191 Ind. 59, 131 N. E. 816, 817, 17 A. L. R. 1410; Adler, Salzman & Adler v. Ammerman Furniture Co., 100 Conn. 223, 123 A. 268, 270; City of Boscobel v. Muscoda Mfg. Co., 175 Wis. 62, 183 N. W. 963, 965. Conditional sales are distinguishable from mortgages in that a mortgage assumes the continued existence of a debt and is given as security therefor. Turner v. Kerr, 44 Mo. 429; Crane v. Bonnell, 2 N. J. Eq. 264; Weathersly v. Weathersly, 40 Miss. 462, 90 Am. Dec. 344; Hopper v. Smyser, 90 Md. 363, 45 A. 206; Monagas v. Albertucci Y Alvarez, 235 U. S. 81, 35 S. Ct. 95, 96, 97, 59 L. Ed. 139; McKean v. McLeod, 81 Okl. 77, 196 P. 935; Lamborn v. Denison State Bank, 115 Kan. 415, 223 P. 293, 294.

—Bill of sale. See Bill.

—Cash sale. A transaction whereby payment is to be in full on receipt of the goods. Bernzweig v. Hyman Levin Co. (Sup.) 172 N. Y. S. 437, 438. A sale where title is not to pass until the price is paid, or where title has passed, but possession is not to be delivered until payment is made. E. L. Welch Co. v. Lahart Elevator Co., 122 Minn. 432, 142 N. W. 828, 830.

—Exclusive sale. A contract giving a broker "exclusive sale" of property is more than exclusive agency, and is defined as an agreement by the owner that he will not sell the property during the life of the contract to any purchaser not procured by the broker in question. Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723, 724, 24 A. L. R. 1530, but see contra Roberts v. Harrington, 168 Wis. 217, 169 N. W. 603, 10 A. L. R. 810.

—Executed and executory sales. An executed sale is one which is final and complete in all its particulars and details, nothing remaining to be done by either party to effect an absolute transfer of the subject-matter of the sale. An executory sale is one which has been definitely agreed on as to terms and conditions, but which has not yet been carried into full effect in respect to some of its terms or details, as where it remains to determine the price, quantity, or identity of the thing sold, or to pay installments of purchase-money, or to effect a delivery. See McFadden v. Henderson, 128 Ala. 221, 29 So. 640; Fogel v. Brubaker, 122 Pa. 7, 15 A. 692; Smith v. Barron County Sup'rs, 44 Wis. 691.

—Forced sale. A sale made without the consent or concurrence of the owner of the property, but by virtue of judicial process, such as a writ of execution or an order under a decree of foreclosure.

—Fraudulent sale. One made for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the owner of the property, by covering up or removing from their reach and converting into cash property which would be subject to the satisfaction of their claims.

—Judicial sale. One made under the process of a court having competent authority to order it, by an officer duly appointed and commissioned to sell, as distinguished from a sale by an owner in virtue of his right of property. Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 547, 12 L. Ed. 1170; Terry v. Cole, 80 Va. 701; Black v. Caldwell (C. C.) 83 F. 880; Woodward v. Dillworth, 75 F. 415, 21 C. C. A. 417; Union Trading Co. v. Drach, 58 Colo. 550, 146 P. 767, 770; Chapman v. Guaranty State Bank (Tex. Com. App.) 267 S. W. 690, 693.

—Memorandum sale. That form of conditional sale in which the goods are placed in the possession of the vendee subject to his approval, the title remaining in the seller until they are either accepted or rejected by the vendee.

—Private sale. One negotiated and concluded privately between buyer and seller, and not made by advertisement and public outcry or auction. See Barcello v. Hapgood, 118 N. C. 712, 24 S. E. 124.

—Public sale. A sale made in pursuance of a notice, by auction or public outcry. Robins v. Bellas, 4 Watts (Pa.) 258; Union & Mercantile Trust Co. v. Harnwell, 158 Ark. 295, 250 S. W. 321, 323.

—Sale and return. A species of contract by which the seller (usually a manufacturer or wholesaler) delivers a quantity of goods to the buyer, on the understanding that, if the latter should desire to retain or use or resell any portion of such goods, he will consider such part as having been sold to him, and will pay their price, and the balance he will return to the seller, or hold them, as bailee, subject to his order. Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 14 S. Ct. 99, 37 L. Ed. 1093; Haskins v. Dern, 19 Utah, 89, 56 Pac. 953; Hickman v. Shimp, 109 Pa. 16; G. A. Soden & Co. v. T. J. Wilkinson & Son, 135 Miss. 665, 100 So. 182, 184. Under "contract of sale and return" title vests immediately in buyer, who has privilege of rescinding sale, and until privilege is exercised title remains in him. Rio Grande Oil Co. v. Miller Rubber Co. of New York, 31 Ariz. 84, 250 P. 564.

—Sale by sample. A sales contract in which it is the understanding of both parties that the goods exhibited constitute the standard with which the goods not exhibited correspond and to which deliveries should conform. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Narzisenfeld (C. C. A.) 3 F.(2d) 567, 571; Levine v. Hochman, 217 Mo. App. 76, 273 S. W. 204, 207; M. C. Kiser Co. v. Branan, 31 Ga. App. 241, 120 S. E. 427, 429.

—Sale in gross. A sale by the tract, without regard to quantity; it is in that sense a contract of hazard. Yost v. Mallicote, 77 Va. 616; Miller v. Moore, 45 Cal. App. 283, 187 P. 763, 764; Cox v. Collins, 205 Ala. 491, 88 So. 440, 441.

—Sale-note. A memorandum of the subject and terms of a sale, given by a broker or factor to the seller, who bailed him the goods for that purpose, and to the buyer, who dealt with him. Also called "bought and sold notes."

—Sale on approval. A species of conditional sale, which is to become absolute only in case the buyer, on trial, approves or is satisfied with the article sold. The approval, however, need not be express; it may be inferred from his keeping the goods beyond a reasonable time. Benj. Sales, § 911; Warren v. Russell, 143 Ark. 516, 220 S. W. 831.

—Sale on credit. A sale of property accompanied by delivery of possession, but where payment of the price is deferred to a future day. In re Heinze's Estate, 224 N. Y. 1, 120 N. E. 63, 64.

—Sale per aversionem. In the civil law, a sale where the goods are taken in bulk, or not by weight or measure, and for a single price, or where a piece of land is sold for a gross sum, to be paid for the whole premises, and not at a fixed price by the acre or foot. Winston v. Browning, 61 Ala. 83; State v. Buck, 46 La. Ann. 656, 15 So. 531.

—Sale with all faults. On what is called a "sale with all faults," unless the seller fraudulently and inconsistently represents the article sold to be faultless, or contrives to conceal any fault from the purchaser, the latter must take the article for better or worse. 3 Camp. 154; Brown.

—Sale with right of redemption. A sale in which vendor reserves right to take back property by returning price paid. Glover v. Abney, 160 La. 175, 106 So. 735, 739.

—Sheriff's sale. A sale of property, conducted by a sheriff, or sheriff's deputy, in virtue of his authority as an officer holding process. Anderson, L. Dict.; Batchelder v. Carter, 2 Vt. 172, 19 Am. Déc. 707.

—Tax-sale. A sale of land for unpaid taxes; a sale of property, by authority of law, for the collection of a tax assessed upon it, or upon its owner, which remains unpaid.

—Voluntary sale. One made freely, without constraint, by the owner of the thing sold. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 974.

SALET. In old English law. A headpiece; a steel cap or morion. Cowell.

SALFORD HUNDRED COURT OF RECORD. An inferior and local court of record having jurisdiction in personal actions where the debt or damage sought to be recovered does not exceed £50, if the cause of action arise within the hundred of Salford. St. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 130; 2 Exch. Div. 346.

SALIC LAW. A body of law framed by the Salian Franks, after their settlement in Gaul under their king Pharamond, about the beginning of the fifth century. It is the most ancient of the barbarian codes, and is considered one of the most important compilations of law in use among the feudal nations of Europe. See Lex Salica.

In French Jurisprudence

The name is frequently applied to that fundamental law of France which excluded females from succession to the crown. Supposed to have been derived from the sixty-second title of the Salic Law, "De Alode." Brande.

SALINE LAND. Land having salt deposits. To fourteen states congress has granted all the salt springs within them; to twelve, a limited grant of them was made. Eighteen states have received no such grant; Montello Salt Co. v. Utah, 221 U. S. 452, 31 S. Ct. 706, 55 L. Ed. 810, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 633.

SALMANNUS. A sale-man, found in the Salic Law in the fifth century, who was a third person called in to complete the transfer of property. 12 Harv. L. Rev. 445, Law in Science, etc., by O. W. Holmes, Jr.

SALOON. A place of refreshment. Kitson v. Mayor of Ann Arbor, 26 Mich. 325. An apartment for a specified public use. Clinton v. Grusendorf, 80 Iowa 117, 45 N. W. 408; Ex parte Livingstone, 20 Nev. 282, 21 P. 322. In common parlance, a place where intoxicating liquors are sold and consumed. Gibbs v. Arras Bros., 222 N. Y. 332, 118 N. E. 857, 858, L. R. A. 1918F, 826, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 1141; People v. De Geovanni, 326 Ill. 230, 157 N. E. 195, 197; Standard Brewing Co. v. Weil, 129 Md. 487, 99 A. 661, 662, L. R. A. 1917C, 929, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 1143; Proprietors' Realty Co. v. Wohltmann, 95 N. J. Law, 303, 112 A. 410, 411.

SALOON-KEEPER. This expression has a definite meaning, namely, a retailer of cigars, liquors, etc. Cahill v. Campbell, 105 Mass. 40.

SALT DUTY IN LONDON. A custom in the city of London called "granage," formerly payable to the lord mayor, etc., for salt brought to the port of London, being the twentieth part. Wharton.

SALT SILVER. One penny paid at the feast day of St. Martin, by the tenants of some manors, as a commutation for the service of carrying their lord's salt from market to his larder. Paroch. Antiq. 496.

SALUS. Lat. Health; prosperity; safety.

Salus populi suprema lex. The welfare of the people is the supreme law. Bac. Max. reg. 12; Broom, Max. 1-10; Montesq. Esprit des Lois, lib. 26, c. 23; 13 Coke, 139.

Salus reipublicæ suprema lex. The welfare of the state is the supreme law. Inhabitants of Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71; Cochituate Bank v. Colt, 1 Gray (Mass.) 386; Broom, Max. 366.

Salus ubi multi consilarii. 4 Inst. 1. Where there are many counselors, there is safety.

SALUTE. A gold coin stamped by Henry V. in France, after his conquests there, whereon the arms of England and France were stamped quarterly. Cowell.

In the army and navy an honor paid to a distinguished personage, when troops or squadrons meet, when officers are buried, or to celebrate an event or show respect to a flag and on many other ceremonial occasions. Cent. Dict.

SALVA GARDIA. L. Lat. Safeguard. Reg. Orig. 26.

SALVAGE. In maritime law. A compensation allowed to persons by whose assistance a ship or its cargo has been saved, in whole or in part, from impending danger, or recovered from actual loss, in cases of shipwreck, derelict, or recapture. 3 Kent, Comm. 245. Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U. S. 625, 7 S. Ct. 336, 30 L. Ed. 501; The Rita, 62 F. 763, 10 C. C. A. 629; The Lyman M. Law (D. C.) 122 F. 822; The Blackwall, 10 Wall. 11, 19 L. Ed. 870; The Spokane (D. C.) 67 F. 256; J. M. Guffey Petroleum Co. v. Borison (C. C. A.) 211 F. 594, 601.

The reward allowed for service to marine property, at risk or in distress, rendered by one under no legal obligation to do so, resulting in benefit to the property, if saved. The Pleasure Bay (D. C.) 226 F. 55.

In the older books of the law, (and sometimes in modern writings,) the term is also used to denote the goods or property saved.

Equitable Salvage.

By analogy, the term "salvage" is sometimes also used in cases which have nothing to do with maritime perils, but in which property has been preserved from loss by the last of several advances by different persons. In such a case, the person making the last advance is frequently entitled to priority over the others, on the ground that, without his advance, the property would have been lost altogether. This right, which is sometimes called that of "equitable salvage," and is in the nature of a lien, is chiefly of importance with reference to payments made to prevent leases or policies of insurance from being forfeited, or to prevent mines and similar undertakings from being stopped or injured. See 1 Fish. Mortg. 149; 3 Ch. Div. 411; L. R. 14 Eq. 4; 7 Ch. Div. 825.

Salvage Charges

This term includes all the expenses and costs incurred in the work of saving and preserving the property which was in danger. The salvage charges ultimately fall upon the insurers.

Salvage Loss.

See loss.

Salvage Service

A service voluntarily rendered to a vessel in need of assistance, to relieve her from some distress or danger either present or to be reasonably apprehended. The Lowther Castle (D. C.) 195 F. 604; The Neshaminy (C. C. A.) 228 F. 285, 288; The Kennebec (C. C. A.) 231 F. 423, 425.

SALVIAN INTERDICT. See Interdictum Salvianum.

SALVO. Lat. Saving; excepting; without prejudice to. Salvo me et hæredibus meis, except me and my heirs. Salvo jure cujuslibet, without prejudice to the rights of any one.

bet, without prejudice to the rights of any one.

SALVOR. A person who, without any particular relation to a ship in distress, proffers useful service, and gives it as a volunteer adventurer, without any pre-existing covenant that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of that ship. The Clara, 23 Wall. 16, 23 L. Ed. 150; The Dumper, 129 F. 99, 63 C. C. A. 600; Central Stockyard Co. v. Mears, 89 App. Div. 452, 85 N. Y. S. 795.

SALVUS PLEGIUS. L. Lat. A safe pledge; called, also, "certus plegius," a sure pledge. Bract. fol. 160b.

SAME. The word "same" does not always mean "identical," not different or other. It frequently means of the kind or species, not the specific thing. Crapo v. Brown, 40 Iowa, 487, 493.

SAME OFFENSE. "Same offense," which may be set forth in different forms or degrees under different counts of same indictment under Code 1921, § 2558 (St. 1931, § 2886) means not same class or kind of offense, eo nomine, but offense committed by same act, transaction, or omission. Wear v. State, 30 Okl. Cr. 118, 235 P. 271, 272. The term "same offense," within Code, § 5340 (St. 1931, § 13808), relating to former jeopardy, does not signify the same offense eo nomine, but the same criminal act, transaction, or omission. State v. Shaver, 197 Iowa, 1028, 198 N. W. 329, 336.

SAMPLE. A specimen; a small quantity of any commodity, presented for inspection or examination as evidence of the quality of the whole; as a sample of cloth or of wheat.

SAMPLE, SALE BY. A sale at which only a sample of the goods sold is exhibited to the buyer. See "Sale."

SANÆ MENTIS. Lat. In old English law. Of sound mind. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 7, § 1.

SANCTIO. Lat. In the civil law. That part of a law by which a penalty was ordained against those who should violate it. Inst. 2, 1, 10.

SANCTION. In the original sense of the word, a "sanction" is a penalty or punishment provided as a means of enforcing obedience to a law. In jurisprudence, a law is said to have a sanction when there is a state which will intervene if it is disobeyed or disregarded. Therefore international law has no legal sanction. Sweet.

In a more general sense, a "sanction" has been defined as a conditional evil annexed to a law to produce obedience to that law; and, in a still wider sense, a "sanction" means simply an authorization of anything. Occasionally, "sanction" is used (e. g., in Roman law) to denote a statute, the part (penal clause) being used to denote the whole. Brown.

The vindicatory part of a law, or that part which ordains or denounces a penalty for its violation. 1 Bl. Comm. 56.

SANCTUARY. In old English law. A consecrated place which had certain privileges annexed to it, and to which offenders were accustomed to resort for refuge, because they could not be arrested there, nor the laws be executed.

SAND-GAVEL. In old English law. A payment due to the lord of the manor of Rodley, in the county of Gloucester, for liberty granted to the tenants to dig sand for their common use. Cowell.

SANE. Of natural and normal mental condition; healthy in mind.

SANE MEMORY. Sound mind, memory, and understanding. This is one of the essential elements in the capacity of contracting; and the absence of it in lunatics and idiots, and its immaturity in infants, is the cause of their respective incapacities or partial incapacities to bind themselves. The like circumstance is their ground of exemption in cases of crime. Brown.

SANG, or SANC. In old French. Blood.

SANGUINE, or MURREY. An heraldic term for "blood-color," called, in the arms of princes, "dragon's tail," and, in those of lords, "sardonyx." It is a tincture of very infrequent occurrence, and not recognized by some writers. In engraving, it is denoted by numerous lines in saltire. Wharton.

SANGUINEM EMERE. Lat. In feudal law. A redemption by villeins, of their blood or tenure, in order to become freemen.

Sanguinis conjunctio benevolentia devincit homines et caritate. A tie of blood overcomes men through benevolence and family affection. Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1, 13, 9 Am. Dec. 256.

SANGUIS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Blood; consanguinity.

The right or power which the chief lord of the fee had to judge and determine cases where blood was shed. Mon. Aug. t. i. 1021.

SANIS. A kind of punishment among the Greeks; inflicted by binding the malefactor fast to a piece of wood. Enc. Lond.

SANITARIUM. Health station or retreat; boarding-house, or other place where patients are kept and where medical and surgical treatment is given. City of Atlanta v. Blackman Health Resort, 153 Ga. 499, 113 S. E. 545, 548.

SANITARY. That which pertains to health, with especial reference to cleanliness and freedom from infective and deleterious influences. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore v. Bloecher & Schaff, 149 Md. 648, 132 A. 160, 162.

SANITARY AUTHORITIES. In English law. Bodies having jurisdiction over their respective districts in regard to sewerage, drainage, scavenging, the supply of water, the prevention of nuisances and offensive trades, etc., all of which come under the head of "sanitary matters" in the special sense of the word. Sanitary authorities also have jurisdiction in matters coming under the head of "local government." Sweet.

SANITATION. Devising and applying of measures for preserving and promoting public health; removal or neutralization of elements injurious to health; practical application of sanitary science. Smith v. State, 160 Ga. 857, 129 S. E. 542, 544.

SANITY. Sound understanding; the normal condition of the human mind; the reverse of insanity, (q. v.) Rust v. Reid, 124 Va. 1, 97 S. E. 324, 331.

SANS CEO QUE. L. Fr. Without this. See Absque Hoc.

SANS FRAIS. Fr. Without expense. See Retour Sans Prot  t.

SANS IMPEACHMENT DE WAST. L. Fr. Without impeachment of waste. Litt. § 152. See Absque Impetitione Vasti.

SANS JOUR. Fr. Without day; sine die.

SANS NOMBRE. Fr. A term used in relation to the right of putting animals on a common. The term "common sans nombre" does not mean that the beasts are to be innumerable, but only indefinite; not certain. Willes, 227.

SANS RECOURS. Fr. Without recourse. See Indorsement.

Sapiens incipit a fine, et quod primum est in intentione, ultimum est in executione. A wise man begins with the last, and what is first in intention is last in execution. 10 Coke, 25.

Sapiens omnia agit cum consilio. A wise man does everything advisedly. 4 Inst. 4.

Sapientia legis nummario pretio non est aestimanda. The wisdom of the law cannot be valued by money. Jenk. Cent. 168.

Sapientis judicis est cogitare tantum sibi esse permisum, quantum commissum et creditum. It is the part of a wise judge to think that a thing is permitted to him, only so far as it is committed and intrusted to him. 4 Inst. 163. That is, he should keep his jurisdiction within the limits of his commission.

SARCULATURA. L. Lat. In old records. Weeding corn. A tenant's service of weeding for the lord. Cowell.

SART. In old English law. A piece of woodland, turned into arable. Cowell.

SARUM. In old records. The city of Salisbury in England. Spelman.

SASINE. In Scotch law. The symbolical delivery of land, answering to the livery of seisin of the old English law. 4 Kent, Comm. 459.

SASSE. In old English law. A kind of wear with flood-gates, most commonly in cut rivers, for the shutting up and letting out of water, as occasion required, for the more ready passing of boats and barges to and fro; a lock; a turnpike; a sluice. Cowell.

SASSONS. The corruption of Saxons. A name of contempt formerly given to the English, while they affected to be called "Angles;" they are still so called by the Welsh.

SATISDARE. Lat. In the civil law. To guaranty the obligation of a principal.

SATISDATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Security given by a party to an action, as by a defendant, to pay what might be adjudged against him. Inst. 4, 11; 3 Bl. Comm. 291.

SATISFACTION. The discharge of an obligation by paying a party what is due to him, (as on a mortgage, lien, or contract,) or what is awarded to him, by the judgment of a court or otherwise. Thus, a judgment is satisfied by the payment of the amount due to the party who has recovered such judgment, or by his levying the amount. See Miller v. Beck, 108 Iowa, 575, 79 N. W. 344; Rivers v. Blom, 163 Mo. 442, 63 S. W. 812; Mazyck v. Coil, 3 Rich. Law (S. C.) 236; Green v. Green, 49 Ind. 423; Bryant v. Fairfield, 51 Me. 152; Armour Bros. Banking Co. v. Addington, 1 Ind. T. 304, 37 S. W. 100.

In Practice

An entry made on the record, by which a party in whose favor a judgment was rendered declares that he has been satisfied and paid.

In Equity

The doctrine of satisfaction in equity is somewhat analogous to performance in equity, but differs from it in this respect: that satisfaction is always something given either in whole or in part as a substitute or equivalent for something else, and not (as in performance) something that may be construed as the identical thing covenanted to be done. Brown.

The execution of an agreement of accord. J. F. Morgan Paving Co. v. Carroll, 211 Ala. 121, 99 So. 640, 641; In re Trexler Co. of America, 15 Del. Ch. 76, 132 A. 144, 145. See Accord and Satisfaction.

SATISFACTION, CONTRACTS TO. A class of contracts in which one party agrees to perform his promise to the satisfaction of the other. A contract for construction work "to the entire satisfaction of the owners" imports that the construction be to the satisfaction of a reasonable man and not to the personal satisfaction of owners. MacDonald v. Kavanaugh, 259 Mass. 439, 156 N. E. 740, 743; Erikson v. Ward, 266 Ill. 259, 107 N. E. 593, 594, Ann. Cas. 1916B, 497; Waite v. C. E. Shoemaker & Co., 50 Mont. 264, 146 P. 736, 742.

SATISFACTION PIECE. In practice. A memorandum in writing, entitled in a cause, stating that satisfaction is acknowledged between the parties, plaintiff and defendant. Upon this being duly acknowledged and filed in the office where the record of the judgment is, the judgment becomes satisfied, and the defendant discharged from it. 1 Archb. Pr. 722.

Satisfaction should be made to that fund which has sustained the loss. 4 Bouv. Inst. no. 3731.

SATISFACTORY. Where a contract provides that it is to be performed in a manner "satisfactory" to one of the parties, the provision must be construed as meaning that the performance must be such that the party, as a reasonable person, should be satisfied with it. Hoff v. L. Gould & Co., 198 Ill. App. 499, 501; Bruner v. Hegyi, 42 Cal. App. 97, 183 P. 369.

SATISFACTORY EVIDENCE. See Evidence.

SATISFIED TERM. A term of years in land is thus called when the purpose for which it was created has been satisfied or executed before the expiration of the set period.

SATISFIED TERMS ACT. The statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, passed to abolish satisfied outstanding terms of years in land. By this act, terms which shall henceforth become attendant upon the inheritance, either by express declaration or construction of law, are to cease and determine. This, in effect, abolishes outstanding terms. 1 Steph. Comm. 380-382; Williams, Real Prop. pt. 4, c. 1.

SATISFY, in technical use, generally means to comply actually and fully with a demand; to extinguish, by payment or performance.

To convince, as to satisfy a jury. State v. Childs, 3 N. J. Misc. 3, 126 A. 678, 679; Meyrovitz v. Levy, 184 Ala. 293, 63 So. 963, 965; Lawrence v. Goodwill, 44 Cal. App. 440, 186 P. 781, 785.

Satius est petere fontes quam sectari rivulos. Lofft, 606. It is better to seek the source than to follow the streamlets.

SATURDAY'S STOP. In old English law. A space of time from even-song on Saturday till sun-rising on Monday, in which it was not lawful to take salmon in Scotland and the northern parts of England. Cowell.

SAUNKEFIN. L. Fr. End of blood; failure of the direct line in successions. Spelman; Cowell.

SAUVAGINE. L. Fr. Wild animals.

SAUVEMENT. L. Fr. Safely. Sauvement gardes, safely kept. Britt. c. 87.

SAVE. To except, reserve, or exempt; as where a statute "saves" vested rights. To toll, or suspend the running or operation of; as to "save" the statute of limitations.

SAVER DEFAULT. L. Fr. In old English practice. To excuse a default. Termes de la Ley.

SAVING CLAUSE. A saving clause in a statute is an exception of a special thing out of the general things mentioned in the statute; it is ordinarily a restriction in a repealing act, which is intended to save rights, pending proceedings, penalties, etc., from the annihilation which would result from an unrestricted repeal. State v. St. Louis, 174 Mo. 125, 73 S. W. 623, 61 L. R. A. 593; Clark Thread Co. v. Kearney Tp., 55 N. J. Law, 50, 25 A. 327.

SAVING THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. A creditor is said to "save the statute of limitations" when he saves or preserves his debt from being barred by the operation of the statute. Thus, in the case of a simple contract debt, if a creditor commence an action for its recovery within six years from the time when the cause of action accrued, he will be in time to save the statute. Brown.

SAVINGS BANK. See Bank.

SAVOUR. To partake the nature of; to bear affinity to.

SAVOY. One of the old privileged places, or sanctuaries. 4 Steph. Comm. 227n.

SAW LOG. A log of convenient length and otherwise suitable for being manufactured into lumber. Ladnier v. Ingram Day Lumber Co., 135 Miss. 632, 100 So. 369, 370.

SAXON LAGE. The laws of the West Saxons. Cowell.

SAY ABOUT. This phrase, like "more or less," is frequently introduced into conveyances or contracts of sale, to indicate that the quantity of the subject-matter is uncertain, and is only estimated, and to guard the vendor against the implication of having warranted the quantity.

SAYER. In Hindu law. Variable imposts distinct from land, rents, or revenues; consisting of customs, tolls, licenses, duties on goods; also taxes on houses, shops, bazaars, etc. Wharton.

SC. An abbreviation for "scilicet," that is to say.

SCAB. A working man who works for lower wages than or under conditions contrary to those prescribed by a trade union; also one who takes the place of a workingman on a strike. Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Toohey, 114 Misc. 185, 186 N. Y. S. 95, 99; Illinois Malleable Iron Co. v. Michalek, 279 Ill. 221, 116 N. E. 714, 717; U. S. v. Taliaferro (D. C.) 290 F. 214, 218.

SCABINI. In old European law. The judges or assessors of the judges in the court held by the count. Assistants or associates of the count; officers under the count. The permanent selected judges of the Franks. Judges among the Germans, Franks, and Lombards, who were held in peculiar esteem. Spelman.

SCACCARIUM. A chequered cloth resembling a chess-board which covered the table in the exchequer, and on which, when certain of the king's accounts were made up, the sums were marked and scored with counters. Hence the court of exchequer, or curia scaccarii, derived its name. 3 Bl. Comm. 44.

SCALAM. At the scale; the old way of paying money into the exchequer. Cowell.

SCALE. In early American law. To adjust, graduate, or value according to a scale. Walden v. Payne, 2 Wash. (Va.) 5, 6.

SCALE TOLERANCE. Nominal variation between different scales in respect of the mass or "weight" of the same goods. Smith v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 202 Iowa, 292, 209 N. W. 465, 466.

SCALER. An expert employed to determine the number of board feet and the percentage of unsound timber in logs. Connecticut Valley Lumber Co. v. Stone (C. C. A.) 212 F. 713, 715.

SCALING LAWS. A term used to signify statutes establishing the process of adjusting the difference in value between depreciated paper money and specie. Such statutes were rendered necessary by the depreciation of paper money necessarily following the establishment of American independence. And, more recently, to discharge those debts which were made payable in Confederate money. The statutes are now obsolete.

SCALPINGS. See Wheat Scalpings.

SCAMNUM CADUCUM. In old records, the cucking-stool, (q. v.) Cowell.

SCANDAL. Defamatory reports or rumors; aspersion or slanderous talk, uttered recklessly or maliciously.

In Pleading

"Scandal consists in the allegation of anything which is unbecoming the dignity of the court to hear, or is contrary to good manners, or which charges some person with a crime not necessary to be shown in the cause; to which may be added that any unnecessary allegation, bearing cruelly upon the moral character of an individual, is also scandalous."

Daniell, Ch. Pr. 290. And see McNulty v. Wiesen (D. C.) 130 F. 1013; Kelley v. Boettcher, 85 F. 58, 29 C. C. A. 14; Burden v. Burden (C. C.) 124 F. 255; Chew v. Eagan, 87 N. J. Eq. 80, 99 A. 611; Huffman v. State, 183 Ind. 698, 109 N. E. 401, 402.

SCANDALOUS MATTER. In equity pleading. See Scandal.

SCANDALUM MAGNATUM. In English law. Scandal or slander of great men or nobles. Words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm, for which an action lies, though it is now rarely resorted to. 3 Bl. Comm. 123; 3 Steph. Comm. 473. This offense has not existed in America since the formation of the United States. State v. Shepherd, 177 Mo. 205, 76 S. W. 79, 99 Am. St. Rep. 624.

SCAPELLARE. In old European law. To chop; to chip or haggle. Spelman.

SCAPHA. Lat. In Roman law. A boat; a lighter. A ship's boat.

SCAVALGE, SCHEVAGE, SCHEWAGE, or SHEWAGE. A kind of toll or custom, exacted by mayors, sheriffs, etc., of merchant strangers, for wares showed or offered for sale within their liberties. Prohibited by 19 Hen. VII. c. 7. Cowell.

SCAVIDUS. The officer who collected the scavage money. Cowell.

SCEATTA. A Saxon coin of less denomination than a shilling. Spelman.

SCEPPA SALIS. An ancient measure of salt, the quantity of which is now not known. Wharton.

SCHAR-PENNY, SCHARN-PENNY, or SCHORN-PENNY. A small duty or compensation. Cowell.

SCHEDULE. A sheet of paper or parchment annexed to a statute, deed, answer in equity, deposition, or other instrument, exhibiting in detail the matters mentioned or referred to in the principal document.

A list or inventory; the paper containing an inventory.

In Practice

When an indictment is returned from an inferior court in obedience to a writ of certiorari, the statement of the previous proceedings sent with it is termed the "schedule." 1 Saund. 309a, n. 2.

In Constitutional Law

A schedule is a statement annexed to a constitution newly adopted by a state, in which are described at length the particulars in which it differs from the former constitution, or which contains provisions for the adjustment of matters affected by the change from the old to the new constitution.

SCHEME. In English law, a scheme is a document containing provisions for regulating the management or distribution of property, or for making an arrangement between persons having conflicting rights. Thus, in the practice of the chancery division, where the execution of a charitable trust in the manner directed by the founder is difficult or impracticable, or requires supervision, a scheme for the management of the charity will be settled by the court. Tud. Char. Trusts, 257; Hunt, Eq. 248; Daniell, Ch. Pr. 1765.

SCHETES. Usury. Cowell.

SCHIREMAN. In Saxon law. An officer having the civil government of a shire, or county; an earl. 1 Bl. Comm. 398.

SCHIRRENS-GELD. In Saxon law. A tax paid to sheriffs for keeping the shire or county court. Cowell.

SCHISM. In ecclesiastical law. A division or separation in a church or denomination of Christians, occasioned by a diversity of faith, creed, or religious opinions. Nelson v. Benson, 69 Ill. 29; McKinney v. Griggs, 5 Bush (Ky.) 407, 96 Am. Dec. 360; Lindstrom v. Tell, 131 Minn. 203, 154 N. W. 969, 971.

SCHISM-BILL. In English law. The name of an act passed in the reign of Queen Anne, which restrained Protestant dissenters from educating their own children, and forbade all tutors and schoolmasters to be present at any conventicle or dissenting place of worship. The queen died on the day when this act was to have taken effect, (August 1, 1714,) and it was repealed in the fifth year of Geo. I. Wharton.

SCHOOL. An institution of learning of a lower grade, below a college or a university. A place of primary instruction. The term generally refers to the common or public schools, maintained at the expense of the public. See American Asylum v. Phoenix Bank, 4 Conn. 177, 10 Am. Dec. 112; In re Sanders, 53 Kan. 191, 36 P. 348, 23 L. R. A. 603; Com. v. Banks, 198 Pa. 397, 48 A. 277; Litchman v. Shannon, 90 Wash. 186, 155 P. 783, 784; Alexander v. Phillips, 31 Ariz. 503, 254 P. 1056, 1058, 52 A. L. R. 244.

Common Schools

Schools maintained at the public expense and administered by a bureau of the state, district, or municipal government, for the gratuitous education of the children of all citizens without distinction. Jenkins v. Andover, 103 Mass. 98; People v. Board of Education, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 410; Le Coulteux v. Buffalo, 33 N. Y. 337; Roach v. Board of Directors, 7 Mo. App. 567; State v. Preston, 79 Wash. 286, 140 P. 350, 351; Special School District No. 65, of Logan County, v. Bangs, 144 Ark. 34, 221 S. W. 1060; Board of Edu- cation of City of Sapulpa v. Corey, 63 Okl. 178, 163 P. 949, 953; State v. O'Dell, 187 Ind. 84, 118 N. E. 529, 530.

District School

A common or public school for the education at public expense of the children residing within a given district; a public school maintained by a "school district." See infra.

Grade School

A school in which the pupils are classified according to progress and taught by different teachers so that a rural school under one teacher is not included within the exception, although various pupils in various stages of progress are classified. Board of County Com'rs of Laramie County v. State, 24 Wyo. 364, 158 P. 801, 804.

High School

A school in which higher branches of learning are taught than in the common schools. 123 Mass. 306; Thurman-Watts v. Board of Education of City of Coffeyville, 115 Kan. 328, 222 P. 123, 125. A school in which such instruction is given as will prepare the students to enter a college or university. Attorney General v. Butler, 123 Mass. 306; State v. School Dist., 31 Neb. 552, 48 N. W. 393; Whitlock v. State, 30 Neb. 815, 47 N. W. 284.

Normal School

A training school for teachers; one in which instruction is given in the theory and practice of teaching; particularly, in the system of schools generally established throughout the United States, a school for the training and instruction of those who are already teachers in the public schools or those who desire and expect to become such. See Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 616; Board of Regents v. Painter, 102 Mo. 464, 14 S. W. 938, 10 L. R. A. 493.

Private School

One maintained by private individuals or corporations, not at public expense, and open only to pupils selected and admitted by the proprietors or governors, or to pupils of a certain class or possessing certain qualifications, (racial, religious, or otherwise,) and generally supported, in part at least, by tuition fees or charges. See Quigley v. State, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 638.

Public Schools.

Schools established under the laws of the state (and usually regulated in matters of detail by the local authorities), in the various districts, counties, or towns, maintained at the public expense by taxation, and open with or without charge to the children of all the residents of the town or other district. Jenkins v. Andover, 103 Mass. 97; St. Joseph's Church v. Assessors of Taxes, 12 R. I. 19, 34 Am. Rep. 597; Merrick v. Amherst, 12

Allen (Mass.) 508; Litchman v. Shannon, 90 Wash. 186, 155 P. 783, 784; Moran v. Board of Com'rs of Chowan County, 168 N. C. 289, 84 S. E. 402, 403. A public school is one belonging to the public and established and conducted under public authority; not one owned and conducted by private parties, though it may be open to the public generally and though tuition may be free. Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 229.

School Board

A board of municipal officers charged with the administration of the affairs of the public schools. They are commonly organized under the general laws of the state, and fall within the class of quasi corporations, sometimes coterminous with a county or borough, but not necessarily so. The members of the school board are sometimes termed "school directors," or the official style may be "the board of school directors." The circuit of their territorial jurisdiction is called a "school district," and each school district is usually a separate taxing district for school purposes.

School Directors

See School Board.

School District

A public and quasi municipal corporation, organized by legislative authority or direction, comprising a defined territory, for the erection, maintenance, government, and support of the public schools within its territory in accordance with and in subordination to the general school laws of the state, invested, for these purposes only, with powers of local self-government and generally of local taxation, and administered by a board of officers, usually elected by the voters of the district, who are variously styled "school directors," or "trustees," "commissioners," or "supervisors" of schools. See Hamilton v. San Diego County, 108 Cal. 273, 41 P. 305; Landis v. Ashworth, 57 N. J. Law, 509, 31 A. 1017; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Oswego Tp., 59 F. 64, 7 C. C. A. 669; Board of Education v. Sinton, 41 Ohio St. 511; Commonwealth v. Wilkins, Thomas & Barney, 75 Pa. Super. Ct. 305; Hoffsommer v. Hayes, 92 Okl. 32, 217 P. 477, 479; Independent School Dist. of Alexandria v. Independent School Dist. No. 2, Wayne Tp., Hanson County, 35 S. D. 474, 152 N. W. 706, 707; Spencer v. School Dist. No. 1, 121 Or. 511, 254 P. 357, 359; Gallishaw v. Jackson, 99 S. C. 342, 83 S. E. 454, 456; Hemler v. Richland Parish School Board, 142 La. 133, 76 So. 585, 586; State Nat. Bank of Artesia v. Clayton, 22 N. M. 630, 167 P. 20; Wood v. Calaveras County, 164 Cal. 398, 129 P. 283, 285; Duff v. School Dist. of Perry Tp., 281 Pa. 87, 126 A. 202.

Consolidated School District

A common school district where two or more existing schools have consolidated into one single district. Trustees of Walton School v. Board of Sup'rs of Covington County, 115 Miss. 117, 75 So. 833, 834; Jackson v. Joint Consol. School Dist. No. 1, 255 P. 87, 123 Kan. 325; Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 110.

School Lands

See Land.

School-Master

One employed in teaching a school.

SCHOUT. In Dutch law. An officer of a court whose functions somewhat resemble those of a sheriff.

SCI. FA. An abbreviation for "scire facias," (q. v.)

SCIENDUM. Lat. In English law. The name given to a clause inserted in the record by which it is made "known that the justice here in court, in this same term, delivered a writ thereupon to the deputy-sheriff of the county aforesaid, to be executed in due form of law." Lee, Dict. "Record."

SCIENDUM EST. Lat. It is to be known; be it remarked. In the books of the civil law, this phrase is often found at the beginning of a chapter or paragraph, by way of introduction to some explanation, or directing attention to some particular rule.

SCIENTER. Lat. Knowingly. The term is used in pleading to signify an allegation (or that part of the declaration or indictment which contains it) setting out the defendant's previous knowledge of the cause which led to the injury complained of, or rather his previous knowledge of a state of facts which it was his duty to guard against, and his omission to do which has led to the injury complained of. The insertion of such an allegation is called "laying the action (or indictment) with a scienter." And the term is frequently used to signify the defendant's guilty knowledge. People v. Gould, 237 Mich. 156, 211 N. W. 346, 348; Shriver v. Union Stockyards Nat. Bank, 117 Kan. 638, 232 P. 1062, 1067; Neilson v. Masters, 72 Or. 463, 143 P. 1132, 1134; Morrow v. Franklin, 289 Mo. 549, 233 S. W. 224, 227; Horton v. Tyree, 104 W. Va. 238, 139 S. E. 737, 738.

Scienti et volenti non fit injuria. Bract. fol. 20. An injury is not done to one who knows and wills it.

Scientia scolorum est mixta ignorantia. 8 Coke, 159. The knowledge of smatterers is diluted ignorance.

Scientia utrimque par pares contrahentes facit. Equal knowledge on both sides makes contracting parties equal. 3 Burrows, 1905. An insured need not mention what the underwriter knows, or what he ought to know. Broom, Max. 772.

SCILICET. Lat. To-wit; that is to say. A word used in pleadings and other instruments, as introductory to a more particular statement of matters previously mentioned in general terms. Hob. 171, 172.

SCINTILLA. Lat. A spark; a remaining particle; the least particle.

SCINTILLA JURIS. In real property law. A spark of right or interest. By this figurative expression was denoted the small particle of interest which, by a fiction of law, was supposed to remain in a feoffee to uses, sufficient to support contingent uses afterwards coming into existence, and thereby enable the statute of uses (27 Hen. VIII. c. 10) to execute them. See 2 Washb. Real Prop. 125; 4 Kent, Comm. 238.

SCINTILLA OF EVIDENCE. A spark, glimmer, or faint show of evidence. A metaphorical expression to describe a very insignificant or trifling item or particle of evidence; used in the statement of the common-law rule that if there is any evidence at all in a case, even a mere scintilla, tending to support a material issue, the case cannot be taken from the jury, but must be left to their decision. See Offutt v. World's Columbian Exposition, 175 Ill. 472, 51 N. E. 651. Courts differ as to what constitutes a "scintilla," and some courts do not accept the rule. Dutton v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 104 S. C. 16, 88 S. E. 263, 267; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Johnson's Adm'x, 161 Ky. 824, 171 S. W. 847, 852; Ford v. Papecke, 26 Ohio App. 225, 158 N. E. 558; Cleveland-Akron Bag Co. v. Jaite, 112 Ohio St. 506, 148 N. E. 82, 84; Sobolovitz v. Lubric Oil Co., 107 Ohio St. 204, 140 N. E. 634, 635.

Scire debes cum quo contrahis. You ought to know with whom you deal. 11 Mees. & W. 405, 632; 13 Mees. & W. 171.

Scire et scire debere æquiparantur in jure. To know a thing, and to be bound to know it, are regarded in law as equivalent. Tray. Leg. Max. 551.

SCIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, founded upon some record, and requiring the person against whom it is brought to show cause why the party bringing it should not have advantage of such record, or (in the case of a scire facias to repeal letters patent) why the record should not be annulled and vacated. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 86; Pub. St. Mass. p. 1295.

The most common application of this writ is as a process to revive a judgment, after the lapse of a certain time, or on a change of parties, or otherwise to have execution of the judgment, in which cases it is merely a continuation of the original action. It is used more rarely as a mode of proceeding against special bail on their recognizance, and as a means of repealing letters patent, in which cases it is an original proceeding. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 86. And see Knapp v. Thomas, 39 Ohio St. 383, 48 Am. Rep. 462; Walker v. Wells, 17 Ga. 551, 63 Am. Dec. 252; Chestnut v. Chestnut, 77 Ill. 349; Lyon v. Ford, 20 D. C. 535; State Treasurer v. Foster, 7 Vt. 53; Lafayette County v. Wonderly, 92 F. 314, 34 C. C. A. 360; Hadaway v. Hynson, 89 Md. 305, 43 A. 806; Shea v. Starr, 76 N. H. 538, 85 A. 788, 789; Carney v. Carney, 138 Tenn. 647, 200 S. W. 517, 519; State v. Smith, 98 W. Va. 621, 127 S. E. 495, 496; Parker v. Brattan, 120 Md. 428, 87 A. 756, 757; State v. Andrews, 131 Tenn. 554, 175 S. W. 563, 569; U. S. v. Ewing (D. C.) 19 F.(2d) 378, 379; American Ry. Express Co. v. F. S. Royster Guano Co., 141 Va. 602, 126 S. E. 678, 679.

SCIRE FACIAS AD AUDIENDUM ERRORES. The name of a writ which is sued out after the plaintiff in error has assigned his errors. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 20.

SCIRE FACIAS AD DISPROBANDUM DEBITUM. The name of a writ in use in Pennsylvania, which lies by a defendant in foreign attachment against the plaintiff, in order to enable him, within a year and a day next ensuing the time of payment to the plaintiff in the attachment, to disprove or avoid the debt recovered against him. Bouvier.

SCIRE FACIAS AD REHABENDAM TERRAM. A scire facias ad rehabendam terram lies to enable a judgment debtor to recover back his lands taken under an elegit when the judgment creditor has satisfied or been paid the amount of his judgment. Chit. 692; Fost. on Sci. Fa. 58.

SCIRE FACIAS FOR THE CROWN. In English law. The summary proceeding by extent is only resorted to when a crown debtor is insolvent, or there is good ground for supposing that the debt may be lost by delay. In ordinary cases where a debt or duty appears by record to be owing to the crown, the process for the crown is a writ of sci. fa. quare executionem non; but should the defendant become insolvent pending this writ, the crown may abandon the proceeding and resort to an extent. Wharton.

SCIRE FACIAS QUARE RESTITUTIONEM NON. This writ lies where execution on a judgment has been levied, but the money has not been paid over to the plaintiff, and the judgment is afterwards reversed in error or on appeal; in such a case a scire facias is necessary before a writ of restitution can issue. Chit. 582; Fost. on Sci. Fa. 64.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MORTGAGE. A writ of scire facias issued upon the default of a mortgagor to make payments or observe conditions, requiring him to show cause why the mortgage should not be foreclosed, and the mortgaged property taken and sold in execution.

SCIRE FACIAS SUR MUNICIPAL CLAIM. A writ of scire facias, authorized to be issued in Pennsylvania, as a means of enforcing payment of a municipal claim (q. v.) out of the real estate upon which such claim is a lien.

SCIRE FECI. Lat. In practice. The name given to the sheriff's return to a writ of scire facias that he has caused notice to be given to the party or parties against whom the writ was issued. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 98, 99.

SCIRE FIERI INQUIRY. In English law. The name of a writ formerly used to recover the amount of a judgment from an executor.

Scire leges non hoc est verba earum tenere, sed vim ac potestatem. To know the laws is not to observe their mere words, but their force and power; [that is, the essential meaning in which their efficacy resides.] Dig. 1, 3, 17; 1 Kent, Comm. 462.

Scire propter est rem ratione et per causam cognoscere. To know properly is to know a thing in its reason, and by its cause. We are truly said to know anything, where we know the true cause thereof. Co. Litt. 183b.

SCIREWYTE. In old English law. A tax or prestation paid to the sheriff for holding the assizes or county courts. Cowell.

SCISSIO. Lat. In old English law. A cutting. Scissio auricularum, cropping of the ears. An old punishment. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38, § 10.

SCITE, or SITE. The sitting or standing on any place; the seat or situation of a capital messuage, or the ground whereon it stands. Jacob.

SCOLD. A troublesome and angry woman, who, by brawling and wrangling among her neighbors, breaks the public peace, increases discord, and becomes a public nuisance to the neighborhood. 4 Steph. Comm. 276.

Common Scold

One who, by the practice of frequent scolding, disturbs the neighborhood. Bish. Crim. Law, § 147. A quarrelsome, brawling, vituperative person. U. S. v. Royall, 27 Fed. Cas. 907; Com. v. Mohn, 52 Pa. 243, 91 Am. Dec. 153; Baker v. State, 53 N. J. Law, 45, 20 A. 858.

SCORN, v. To hold in extreme contempt, to reject as unworthy of regard; to despise, to contemn, to disdain. U. S. v. Ault (D. C.) 263 F. 800, 810; U. S. v. Strong (D. C.) 263 F. 789, 796.

SCOT. In old English law. A tax, or tribute; one's share of a contribution.

SCOT AND LOT. In English law. The name of a customary contribution, laid upon all subjects according to their ability. Brown.

SCOT AND LOT VOTERS. In English law. Voters in certain boroughs entitled to the franchise in virtue of their paying this contribution. 2 Steph. Comm. 360.

SCOTCH MARRIAGES. See Gretna Green.

SCOTCH PEERS. Peers of the kingdom of Scotland; of these sixteen are elected to parliament by the rest and represent the whole body. They are elected for one parliament only.

SCOTS. In English law. Assessments by commissioners of sewers.

SCOTTARE. To pay scot, tax, or customary dues. Cowell.

SCOUNDREL. An approbious epithet, implying rascality, villainy, or a want of honor or integrity. In slander, this word is not actionable per se. 2 Bouv. Inst. 2250.

SCRAMBLING POSSESSION. See Possession.

SCRAWL. A word used in some of the United States for scrawl or scroll. "The word 'seal,' written in a scrawl attached to the name of an obligor, makes the instrument a specialty." Comerford v. Cobb, 2 Fla. 418.

SCRIBA. Lat. A scribe; a secretary. Scriba regis, a king's secretary; a chancellor. Spelman.

Scrivere est agere. To write is to act. Treasonable words set down in writing amount to overt acts of treason. 2 Rolle, 89; 4 Bl. Comm. 80; Broom, Max. 312, 967.

SCRIP. Certificates of ownership, either absolute or conditional, of shares in a public company, corporate profits, etc. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1295.

A scrip certificate (or shortly "scrip") is an acknowledgment by the projectors of a company or the issuers of a loan that the person named therein (or more commonly the holder for the time being of the certificate) is entitled to a certain specified number of shares, debentures, bonds, etc. It is usually given in exchange for the letter of allotment, and in its turn is given up for the shares, debentures, or bonds which it represents. Lindl. Partn. 127; Sweet.

The term has also been applied in the United States to warrants or other like orders drawn on a municipal treasury (Alma v. Guaranty Sav. Bank, 60 F. 207, 8 C. C. A.

564.) to certificates showing the holder to be entitled to a certain portion or allotment of public or state lands, (Wait v. State Land Office Com'r, 87 Mich. 353, 49 N. W. 600.) and to the fractional paper currency issued by the United States during the period of the Civil War.

SCRIP DIVIDEND. See Dividend.

SCRIPT. Where instruments are executed in part and counterpart, the original or principal is so called.

In English Probate Practice

A will, codicil, draft of will or codicil, or written instructions for the same. If the will is destroyed, a copy or any paper embodying its contents becomes a script, even though not made under the direction of the testator. Browne, Prob. Pr. 280.

Scriptæ obligationes scriptis tolluntur, et nudi consensus obligatio contrario consensu dissolvitur. Written obligations are superseded by writings, and an obligation of naked assent is dissolved by assent to the contrary.

SCRIPTORIUM. In old records. A place in monasteries, where writing was done. Spelman.

SCRIPTUM. Lat. A writing; something written. Fleta, l. 2, c. 60, § 25.

SCRIPTUM INDENTATUM. A writing indented; an indenture or deed.

SCRIPTUM OBLIGATORIUM. A writing obligatory. The technical name of a bond in old pleadings. Any writing under seal.

SCRIVENER. A writer; scribe; conveyancer. One whose occupation is to draw contracts, write deeds and mortgages, and prepare other species of written instruments.

Also an agent to whom property is intrusted by others for the purpose of lending it out at an interest payable to his principal, and for a commission or bonus for himself, whereby he gains his livelihood.

Money Scrivener

A money broker. The name was also formerly applied in England to a person (generally an attorney or solicitor) whose business was to find investments for the money of his clients, and see to perfecting the securities, and who was often intrusted with the custody of the securities and the collection of the interest and principal. See Williams v. Walker, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 325.

SCROLL. A mark intended to supply the place of a seal, made with a pen or other instrument of writing.

A paper or parchment containing some writing, and rolled up so as to conceal it.

SCROOP'S INN. An obsolete law society, also called "Serjeants' Place," opposite to St. Andrew's Church, Holborn, London.

SCRUET-ROLL. In old practice. A species of roll or record, on which the bail on habeas corpus was entered.

SCRUTATOR. Lat. In old English law. A searcher or bailiff of a river; a water-bailiff, whose business was to look to the king's rights, as to his wrecks, his flotsam, jetsam, water-strays, royal fishes. Hale, de Jure Mar. par. 1, c. 5.

SCUTE. A French coin of gold, coined A. D. 1427, of the value of 3s. 4d.

SCUTELLA. A scuttle; anything of a flat or broad shape like a shield. Cowell.

SCUTELLA ELEEMOSYNARIA. An alms-basket.

SCUTIFER. In old records. Esquire; the same as "armiger." Spelman.

SCUTUM ARMORUM. A shield or coat of arms. Cowell.

SCYRA, In old English law. Shire; county; the inhabitants of a county.

SCYREGEMOTE. In Saxon law. The meeting or court of the shire. This was the most important court in the Saxon polity, having jurisdiction of both ecclesiastical and secular causes. Its meetings were held twice in the year. Its Latin name was "curia comitatis."

SE DEFENDENDO. Lat. In defending himself; in self-defense. Homicide committed se defendendo is excusable.

SEA. The ocean; the great mass of water which surrounds the land. U. S. v. Rodgers, 150 U. S. 249, 14 S. Ct. 109, 37 L. Ed. 1071; De Lovio v. Boit, 7 Fed. Cas. 428; Cole v. White, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 516; Snowdon v. Guion, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 143. In marine insurance "sea" includes not only the high seas but the bays, inlets, and rivers as high up as the tide ebbs and flows. Mannheim Ins. Co. v. Charles Clarke & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 291, 293.

Beyond Sea

In England, this phrase means beyond the limits of the British Isles; in America, outside the limits of the United States or of the particular state, as the case may be.

High Seas

The ocean; public waters. According to the English doctrine, the high sea begins at the distance of three miles from the coast of any country; according to the American view, at low-water mark, except in the case of small harbors and roadsteads inclosed within the fauces terræ. Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 453, 11 S. Ct. 897, 35 L. Ed. 581; U. S. v. Grush, 26 Fed. Cas. 50; U. S. v. Rodgers, 150 U. S. 249, 14 S. Ct. 109, 37 L. Ed. 1071; Ex parte Byers (D. C.) 32 F. 405. The open ocean outside of the fauces terræ, as distinguished from arms of the sea; the waters of the ocean without the boundary of any county. Any waters on the sea-coast which are without the boundaries of low-water mark.

Main Sea

The open, uninclosed ocean; or that portion of the sea which is without the fauces terræ on the sea-coast, in contradistinction to that which is surrounded or inclosed between narrow headlands or promontories. People v. Richmond County, 73 N. Y. 396; U. S. v. Grush, 26 Fed. Cas. 48; U. S. v. Rodgers, 150 U. S. 249, 14 S. Ct. 109, 37 L. Ed. 1071; Baker v. Hoag, 7 N. Y. 561, 59 Am. Dec. 431; 2 East, P. C. c. 17, § 10; The Cuzco (D. C.) 225 F. 169, 176.

Sea-Batteries

Assaults by masters in the merchant service upon seamen at sea.

Sea-Bed

All that portion of land under the sea that lies beyond the sea-shore.

Sea-Brief

See Sea-Letter.

Sea-Greens

In the Scotch law. Grounds overflowed by the sea in spring tides. Bell.

Sea-Laws

Laws relating to the sea, as the laws of Oleron, etc.

Sea-Letter

A species of manifest, containing a description of the ship's cargo, with the port from which it comes and the port of destination.

This is one of the documents necessary to be carried by all neutral vessels, in the merchant service, in time of war, as an evidence of their nationality. 4 Kent, Comm. 157. See Sleght v. Hartshorne, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 540.

Sea-Reeve

An officer in maritime towns and places who took care of the maritime rights of the lord of the manor, and watched the shore, and collected wrecks for the lord. Tomlins.

Sea Rovers

Pirates and robbers at sea.

Sea-shore

The margin of the sea in its usual and ordinary state. When the tide is out, low-water mark is the margin of the sea; and, when the sea is full, the margin is high-water mark. The sea-shore is therefore all the ground between the ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark. It cannot be considered as including any ground always covered by the sea, for then it would have no definite limit on the sea-board. Neither can it include any part of the upland, for the same reason. Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 439, 4 Am. Dec. 155; Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 424; People of Porto Rico v. Fortuna Estates (C. C. A.) 279 F. 500, 505; Bay City Land Co. v. Craig, 72 Or. 31, 143 P. 911, 912; Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of New York, 271 U. S. 65, 46 S. Ct. 357, 362, 70 L. Ed. 838; Buras v. Salinovich, 154 La. 495, 97 So. 748, 750. That space of land over which the waters of the sea are spread in the highest water during the winter season. Civ. Code La. art. 442.

Seaworthy, Seaworthiness

See those titles.

SEAL. An impression upon wax, wafer, or some other tenacious substance capable of being impressed. Allen v. Sullivan R. Co., 32 N. H. 449; Solon v. Williamsburgh Sav. Bank, 114 N. Y. 132, 21 N. E. 168; Alt v. Stoker, 127 Mo. 471, 30 S. W. 132; Bradford v. Randall, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 497; Osborn v. Kistler, 35 Ohio St. 102; Hopewell Tp. v. Amwell Tp., 6 N. J. Law, 175; Jones v. Logwood, 1 Wash. (Va.) 43.

A seal is a particular sign, made to attest in the most formal manner, the execution of an instrument. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1930.

Merlin defines a seal to be a plate of metal with a flat surface, on which is engraved the arms of a prince or nation, or private individual, or other device, with which an impression may be made on wax or other substance on paper or parchment in order to authenticate them. The impression thus made is also called a "seal." Repert. mot "Seau."

Common Seal

A seal adopted and used by a corporation for authenticating its corporate acts and executing legal instruments,

Corporate Seal

The official or common seal of an incorporated company or association.

Great Seal

In English law. A seal by virtue of which a great part of the royal authority is exercised. The office of the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, is created by the delivery of the great seal into his custody. There is one great seal for all public acts of state which concern the United Kingdom. Mozley & Whitley. In American law, the United States and also each of the states has and uses a seal, always carefully described by law, and sometimes officially called the "great" seal, though in some instances known simply as "the seal of the United States," or "the seal of the state."

Private Seal

The seal (however made) of a private person or corporation, as distinguished from a seal employed by a state or government or any of its bureaus or departments.

Privy Seal

In English law. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent, preparatory to their passing under the great seal. 2 Bl. Comm. 347.

Public Seal

A seal belonging to and used by one of the bureaus or departments of government, for authenticating or attesting documents, process, or records. An impression made of some device, by means of a piece of metal or other hard substance, kept and used by public authority. Kirksey v. Bates, 7 Port. (Ala.) 534, 31 Am. Dec. 722.

Quarter Seal

In Scotch law. A seal kept by the director of the chancery; in shape and impression the fourth part of the great seal, and called in statutes the "testimonial" of the great seal. Bell.

Seal Days

In English practice. Motion days in the court of chancery, so called because every motion had to be stamped with the seal, which did not lie in court in the ordinary sittings out of term. Wharton.

Seal Office

In English practice. An office for the sealing of judicial writs.

Seal-paper

In English law. A document issued by the lord chancellor, previously to the commencement of the sittings, detailing the business to be done for each day in his court, and in the courts of the lords justices and vice-chancellors. The master of the rolls in like manner issued a seal-paper in respect of the business to be heard before him. Smith, Ch. Pr. 9.

SEALED. Authenticated by a seal; executed by the affixing of a seal. Also fastened up in any manner so as to be closed against inspection of the contents.

SEALED AND DELIVERED. These words, followed by the signatures of the witnesses, constitute the usual formula for the attestation of conveyances.

SEALED INSTRUMENT. An instrument of writing to which the party to be bound has affixed, not only his name, but also his seal, or (in those jurisdictions where it is allowed) a scroll, (q. v.)

SEALED VERDICT. When the jury have agreed upon a verdict, if the court is not in session at the time, they are permitted (usually) to put their written finding in a sealed envelope, and then separate. This verdict they return when the court again convenes. The verdict thus returned has the same effect, and must be treated in the same manner, as if returned in open court before any separation of the jury had taken place. The process is called "sealing a verdict." Sutliff v. Gilbert, 8 Ohio, 408; Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 89.

SEALING. By seals, in matters of succession, is understood the placing, by the proper officer, of seals on the effects of a succession for the purpose of preserving them, and for the interest of third persons. The seals are affixed by order of the judge having jurisdiction. Civ. Code La. art. 1075.

SEALING UP. Where a party to an action has been ordered to produce a document part of which is either irrelevant to the matters in question or is privileged from production, he may, by leave of the court, seal up that part, if he makes an affidavit stating that it is irrelevant or privileged. Daniell, Ch. Pr. 1681. The sealing up is generally done by fastening pieces of paper over the part with gum or wafers. Sweet.

SEALS. In Louisiana. Seals are placed upon the effects of a deceased person, in certain cases, by a public officer, as a method of taking official custody of the succession. See Sealing.

SEAMEN. Sailors; mariners; persons whose business is navigating ships, or who are connected with the ship as such and in some capacity assist in its conduct, maintenance or service. Commonly exclusive of the officers of a ship. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Schmidt (C. C. A.) 214 F. 513, 519; The Owego (D. C.) 292 F. 505, 507; The Buena Ventura (D. C.) 243 F. 797, 800; The Herdis (D. C.) 22 F.(2d) 304, 306; Kuhlman v. W. & A. Fletcher Co. (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 465, 468; The ZR-3 (D. C.) 18 F.(2d) 122, 123; Ex parte Kogi Saito (D. C.) 18 F.(2d) 116, 118; The J. P. Schuh (D. C.) 223 F. 455, 458; De Gaetano v. Merritt & Chapman Derrick & Wrecking Co., 203 App. Div. 259, 196 N. Y. S. 573, 574; The Hurricane (D. C.) 2 F.(2d) 70, 72; City of Los Angeles v. United Dredging Co. (C. C. A.) 14 F.(2d) 364, 366; The Lillian (D. C.) 16 F.(2d) 146, 148.

SEANCE. In French law. A session; as of some public body.

SEARCH.

In International Law

The right of search is the right on the part of ships of war to visit and search merchant vessels during war, in order to ascertain whether the ship or cargo is liable to seizure. Resistance to visitation and search by a neutral vessel makes the vessel and cargo liable to confiscation. Numerous treaties regulate the manner in which the right of search must be exercised. Man. Int. Law, 433; Sweet.

In Criminal Law

An examination of a man's house or other buildings or premises, or of his person, with a view to the discovery of contraband or illicit or stolen property, or some evidence of guilt to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action for some crime or offense with which he is charged.

In Practice

An examination of the official books and dockets, made in the process of investigating a title to land, for the purpose of discovering if there are any mortgages, judgments, tax liens, or other incumbrances upon it.

In General

—Unreasonable search and seizure. At common law, a search which is unreasonably oppressive in its general invasion of the liberty of the citizen. McClannan v. Chaplain, 136 Va. 1, 116 S. E. 495, 498. An examination or inspection, without authority of law, of one's premises or person with a view to the discovery of stolen contraband or illicit property or for some evidence of guilt to be used in prosecution for crime. Graham v. State, 31 Okl. Cr. 125, 237 P. 462, 464. One which is not lawful. State v. District Court of Fourth Judicial Dist. in and for Missoula County, 70 Mont. 191, 224 P. 862, 864; Chapin v. State, 107 Tex. Cr. R. 477, 296 S. W. 1095, 1097; United States v. Snyder (D. C.) 278 F. 650, 658; State v. Pachesa, 102 W. Va. 607, 135 S. E. 908, 909; Hays v. State, 38 Okl. Cr. 331, 261 P. 232, 234. "Search" as used in Const. art. 1, § 9, prohibiting unreasonable search, implies invasion and quest, which in turn implies some sort of force, actual or constructive, much or little. State v. Hilton, 119 Or. 441, 249 P. 1103, 1104.

SEARCH-WARRANT. A search-warrant is an order in writing, issued by a justice or other magistrate, in the name of the state, directed to a sheriff, constable, or other officer, commanding him to search a specified house, shop, or other premises, for personal property alleged to have been stolen, or for unlawful goods, and to bring the same, when found, before the magistrate, and usually also the body of the person occupying the premises, to be dealt with according to law. Pen. Code Cal. § 1523; Code Ala. 1886, § 4727 (Code 1923, § 5471); Rev. Code Iowa 1880, § 4629 (Code 1931, § 13418).

SEARCHER. In English law. An officer of the customs, whose duty it is to examine and search all ships outward bound, to ascertain whether they have any prohibited or uncustomed goods on board. Wharton. Jacob.

SEATED LAND. See Land.

SEAWAN. The name used by the Algonquin Indians for the shell beads (or wampum) which passed among the Indians as money. Webster.

SEAWORTHINESS. In marine insurance. A warranty of seaworthiness means that the vessel is competent to resist the ordinary attacks of wind and weather, and is competently equipped and manned for the voyage, with a sufficient crew, and with sufficient means to sustain them, and with a captain of general good character and nautical skill. 3 Kent, Comm. 287.

A warranty of seaworthiness extends not only to the condition of the structure of the ship itself, but requires that it be properly laden, and provided with a competent master, a sufficient number of competent officers and seamen, and the requisite appurtenances and equipments, such as ballast, cables and anchors, cordage and sails, food, water, fuel, and lights, and other necessary or proper stores and implements for the voyage. Civil Code Cal. § 2684.

Seaworthiness implies, not alone that the vessel be staunch and sound, but that she be properly manned. The Rolph (D. C.) 293 F. 269, 272.

The term "seaworthy" is somewhat equivocal. In its more literal sense, it signifies capable of navigating the sea; but, more exactly, it implies a condition to be and remain in safety, in the condition she is in, whether at sea, in port, or on a railway, stripped and under repairs. If, when the policy attaches, she is in a suitable place, and capable, when repaired and equipped, of navigating the sea, she is seaworthy. But where a vessel is warranted seaworthy for a specified voyage, the place and usual length being given, something more is implied than mere physical strength and capacity; she must be suitably officered and manned, supplied with provisions and water, and furnished with charts and instruments, and, especially in time of war, with documents necessary to her security against hostile capture. The term "seaworthy," as used in the law and practice of insurance, does not mean, as the term would seem to imply, capable of going to sea or of being navigated on the sea; it imports something very different, and much more, viz., that she is sound, staunch, and strong, in all respects, and equipped, furnished, and provided with officers and men, provisions and documents, for a certain service. In a policy for a definite voyage, the term "seaworthy" means "sufficient for such a vessel and voyage." Capen v. Washington Ins. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 517, 536; American Merchant Marine Ins. Co. v. Margaret M. Ford Corporation (C. C. A.) 269 F. 768, 769; Henry Gillens Sons Lighterage v. Fernald (C. C. A.) 294 F. 520, 522; The Addison E. Bullard (C. C. A.) 287 F. 674, 677; The Benjamin Noble (C. C. A.) 244 F. 95, 97; Jay Wai Nam v. Anglo-American Oil Co. (C. C. A.) 202 F. 822, 825; The Sagamore (C. C. A.) 300 F. 701, 703; Kaufer Co. v. Luckenbach S. S. Co. (D. C.) 294 F. 978, 979; The Jeanie (C. C. A.) 236 F. 463, 468; The City of Dunkirk (D. C.) 10 F.(2d) 609, 611; Cary v. Home Ins. Co., 235 N. Y. 296, 139 N. E. 274, 275; Schirm v. Dene Steam Shipping Co. (D. C.) 222 F. 587, 589; The Jungshoved (D. C.) 272 F. 122, 124; The Sagamore (C. C. A.) 300 F. 701, 704; Hamilton v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 268 F. 15, 21; The Benjamin Noble (D. C.) 222 F. 382, 389; Adams v. Bortz (C. C. A.) 279 F. 521, 523; City Motor Trucking Co. v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., 116 Or. 102, 239 P. 812, 813; Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Watson (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 832, 833; The Newport (C. C. A.) 7 F.(2d) 452, 453.

SEAWORTHY. This adjective, applied to a vessel, signifies that she is properly constructed, prepared, manned, equipped, and provided, for the voyage intended. See Seaworthiness.

SEBASTOMANIA. See Insanity.

SECK. A want of remedy by distress. Litt. § 218. See Rent. Want of present fruit or profit, as in the case of the reversion without rent or other service, except fealty. Co. Litt. 151b, n. 5.

SECOND. This term, as used in law, may denote either sequence in point of time or inferiority or postponement in respect to rank, lien, order, or privilege.

As to second "Cousin," "Deliverance," "Distress," "Lien," "Mortgage," and "Surcharge," see those titles. As to "Secondhand Evidence," see Evidence. As to "Second of Exchange," see First.

SECONDARY, adj. Of a subsequent, subordinate, or inferior kind or class; generally opposed to "primary."

As to secondary "Conveyances," "Easement," "Evidence," "Franchise," "Meaning," "Use," and "Vein," see those titles.

SECONDARY, n. In English practice. An officer of the courts of king's bench and common pleas; so called because he was second or next to the chief officer. In the king's bench he was called "Master of the King's Bench Office," and was a deputy of the prothonotary or chief clerk. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 11, 12. By St. 7 Wm. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 30, the office of secondary was abolished.

An officer who is next to the chief officer. Also an officer of the corporation of London, before whom inquiries to assess damages are held, as before sheriffs in counties. Wharton.

SECONDS. In criminal law. Those persons who assist, direct, and support others engaged in fighting a duel.

SECRET. Concealed; hidden; not made public; particularly, in law, kept from the knowledge or notice of persons liable to be affected by the act, transaction, deed, or other thing spoken of.

Webster defines "secrete" as "to deposit in a place of hiding, to hide, to conceal"; and defines the adjective "secret" as "hidden, concealed"; and the noun as "something studiously concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not revealed." The Century Dictionary defines the verb "secrete" as "to make or keep secret, hide, conceal, remove from observation, or the knowledge of others"; and defines the adjective "secret" as "set or kept apart, hidden, concealed"; and the noun as "something studiously hidden or concealed, a thing kept from general knowledge, what is not or should not be revealed." Ferrell v. State, 68 Tex. Cr. R. 487, 152 S. W. 901, 903; DarNeal v. State, 14 Okl. Cr. 540, 174 P. 290, 292, 1 A. L. R. 638; Kaunagraph Co. v. Stampagraph Co., 235 N. Y. 1, 138 N. E. 485, 487.

As to secret "Committee," "Equity," "Lien," "Partnership," and "Trust," see those titles.

SECRET SERVICE. A branch of government service concerned with the detection of counterfeiting and other offenses, civil or political, committed or threatened by persons who operate in secrecy. It is under the charge of the treasury department. Its rules and regulations, promulgated by the department, are laws within R. S. U. S. § 753 (28 USCA § 453), authorizing the issuance by a federal court of the writ of habeas corpus in case of a prisoner in custody for an act done in pursuance of a law of the United States; U. S. v. Fuellhart (C. C.) 106 F. 911.

SECRETARY. The secretary of a corporation or association is an officer charged with the direction and management of that part of the business of the company which is concerned with keeping the records, the official correspondence, with giving and receiving notices, countersigning documents, etc.

The name "secretary" is also given to several of the heads of executive departments in the government of the United States; as the "Secretary of War," "Secretary of the Interior," etc. It is also the style of some of the members of the English cabinet; as the "Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs." There are also secretaries of embassies and legations.

SECRETARY OF DECREES AND INJUNCTIONS. An officer of the English court of chancery. The office was abolished by St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, § 23.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY. A diplomatic officer appointed as secretary or assistant to an ambassador or minister plenipotentiary.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION. An officer employed to attend a foreign mission and to perform certain duties as clerk.

SECRETARY OF STATE. In American law. This is the title of the chief of the executive bureau of the United States called the "Department of State." He is a member of the cabinet, and is charged with the general administration of the international and diplomatic affairs of the government. In many of the state governments there is an executive officer bearing the same title and exercising important functions. In English law. The secretaries of state are cabinet ministers attending the sovereign for the receipt and dispatch of letters, grants, petitions, and many of the most important affairs of the kingdom, both foreign and domestic. There are five principal secretaries,—one for the home department, another for foreign affairs, a third for the colonies, a fourth for war, and a fifth for India. Wharton.

SECRETE. To conceal or hide away. Particularly, to put property out of the reach of creditors, either by corporally hiding it, or putting the title in another's name, or otherwise hindering creditors from levying on it or attaching it. Pearre v. Hawkins, 62 Tex. 437; Guile v. McNanny, 14 Minn. 522 (Gil. 391) 100 Am. Dec. 244; Sturz v. Fischer, 15 Misc. 410, 36 N. Y. S. 894.

SECRETS OF STATE. The production in court of documents containing secrets of state will not be compelled if it would be injurious to the public interest and if the officer in custody of them claims the privilege; Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838, per Pollock, C. B.; this is said to include confidential communications made by servants of the Crown to each other; 21 Q. B. D. 512; the question of their production is to be decided by the head of the department having custody of them and not by the court; 5 H. & N. 838; [1900] 1 Ch. 347; 13 Low. Can. 33 (where the cases were fully considered); Appeal of Hartmanft, 85 Pa. 433, 27 Am. Rep. 667 (in which Agnew, C. J., vigorously dissented), where a ruling in the trial of Aaron Burr was cited as a precedent. That it is for the judge to pass on the question, see Wigm. Evid. § 2376. In 21 Q. B. D. 515, Field, J., said that if he were sitting, he should consider himself entitled to examine the documents privately, and ascertain the real motive of the refusal to produce.

SECT. "A religious sect is a body or number of persons united in tenets, but constituting a distinct organization or party, by holding sentiments or doctrines different from those of other sects or people." State v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 385; Evans v. Selma Union High School Dist. of Fresno County, 193 Cal. 54, 222 P. 801, 802, 31 A. L. R. 1121; Collins v. Kephart, 271 Pa. 428, 117 A. 440, 442; Bennett v. City of La Grange, 153 Ga. 428, 112 S. E. 482, 485, 22 A. L. R. 1312; State v. Frazier, 102 Wash. 369, 173 P. 35, 38, L. R. A. 1918F, 1056; Knowlton v. Baumhover, 182 Iowa, 691, 166 N. W. 202, 207, 5 A. L. R. 841.

SECTA. In old English law. Suit; attendance at court; the plaintiff's suit or following, i. e., the witnesses whom he was required, in the ancient practice, to bring with him and produce in court, for the purpose of confirming his claim, before the defendant was put to the necessity of answering the declaration. See 3 Bl. Comm. 295, 344; Bract. fol. 214a. A survival from this proceeding is seen in the formula still used at the end of declarations, "and therefore he brings his suit," (et inde producit sectam.)

This word, in its secondary meaning, signifies suit in the courts; lawsuit.

SECTA AD CURIAM. A writ that lay against him who refused to perform his suit either to the county court or the court-baron. Cowell.

SECTA AD FURNUM. In old English law. Suit due to a man's public oven or bake-house. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA AD JUSTICIAM FACIENDAM. In old English law. A service which a man is bound to perform by his fee.

SECTA AD MOLENDINUM. A writ which lay for the owner of a mill against the inhabitants of a place where such mill is situated, for not doing suit to the plaintiff's mill; that is, for not having their corn ground at it. Brown.

SECTA AD TORRALE. In old English law. Suit due to a man's kiln or malthouse. 3 Bl. Comm. 235.

SECTA CURIÆ. In old English law. Suit of court; attendance at court. The service, incumbent upon feudal tenants, of attending the lord at his court, both to form a jury when required, and also to answer for their own actions when complained of.

Secta est pugna civilis; sicut actores armantur actionibus, et, quasi, gladiis accinguntur, ita rei muniuntur exceptionibus, et defenduntur, quasi, clypeis. Hob. 20. A suit is a civil warfare; for as the plaintiffs are armed with actions, and, as it were, girded with swords, so the defendants are fortified with pleas, and are defended, as it were, by shields.

SECTA FACIENDA PER ILLAM QUÆ HABET ENICIAM PARTEM. A writ to compel the heir, who has the elder's part of the co-heirs, to perform suit and services for all the coparceners. Reg. Orig. 177.

Secta quæ scripto nititur a scripto variari non debet. Jenk. Cent. 65. A suit which is based upon a writing ought not to vary from the writing.

SECTA REGALIS. A suit so called by which all persons were bound twice in the year to attend in the sheriff's tourn, in order that they might be informed of things relating to the public peace. It was so called because the sheriff's tourn was the king's leet, and it was held in order that the people might be bound by oath to bear true allegiance to the king. Cowell.

SECTA UNICA TANTUM FACIENDA PRO PLURIBUS HÆREDITATIBUS. A writ for an heir who was distrained by the lord to do more suits than one, that he should be allowed to do one suit only in respect of the land of divers heirs descended to him. Cowell.

SECTATORES. Suitors of court who, among the Saxons, gave their judgment or verdict in civil suits upon the matter of fact and law. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 22.

SECTION. In text-books, codes, statutes, and other juridical writings, the smallest distinct and numbered subdivisions are commonly called "sections," sometimes "articles," and occasionally "paragraphs." Graves v. Scales, 172 N. C. 915, 90 S. E. 439; Ex parte Pea River Power Co., 207 Ala. 6, 91 So. 920.

SECTION OF LAND. In American land law. A division or parcel of land, on the government survey, comprising one square mile or 640 acres. Each "township" (six miles square) is divided by straight lines into thirty-six sections, and these are again divided into half-sections and quarter-sections. Rural Independent School Dist. of Eden, Clear Lake Tp., Cerro Gordo County, v. Ventura Consol. Independent School Dist., 185 Iowa, 968, 171 N. W. 576; South Florida Farms Co. v. Goodno, 84 Fla. 532, 94 So. 672, 675.

The general and proper acceptance of the terms "section," "half," and "quarter section," as well as their construction by the general land department, denotes the land in the sectional and subdivisive lines, and not the exact quantity which a perfect admeasurement of an unobstructed surface would declare. Brown v. Hardin, 21 Ark. 327.

SECTIS NON FACIENDIS. A writ which lay for a dowress, or one in wardship, to be free from suit of court. Cowell.

SECTORES. Lat. In Roman law. Purchasers at auction, or public sales.

SECULAR. Not spiritual; not ecclesiastical; relating to affairs of the present world. State v. Smith, 19 Okl. Cr. 184, 198 P. 879, 881.

SECULAR BUSINESS. As used in Sunday laws, this term includes all forms of activity in the business affairs of life, the prosecution of a trade or employment, and commercial dealings, such as the making of promissory notes, lending money, and the like. See Lovejoy v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 333, 46 Am. Dec. 157; Finn v. Donahue, 35 Conn. 217; Allen v.

Deming, 14 N. H. 139, 40 Am. Dec. 179; Smith v. Foster, 41 N. H. 221.

SECULAR CLERGY. In ecclesiastical law, this term is applied to the parochial clergy, who perform their ministry in seculo (in the world), and who are thus distinguished from the monastic or "regular" clergy. Steph. Comm. 681, note.

SECUNDUM. Lat. In the civil and common law. According to. Occurring in many phrases of familiar use, as follows:

SECUNDUM ÆQUUM ET BONUM. According to what is just and right.

SECUNDUM ALLEGATA ET PROBATA. According to what is alleged and proved; according to the allegations and proofs. 15 East, 81; Cloutman v. Tunison, 1 Summ. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 2,907.

SECUNDUM ARTEM. According to the art, trade, business, or science.

SECUNDUM BONOS MORES. According to good usages; according to established custom; regularly; orderly.

SECUNDUM CONSUETUDINEM MANERII. According to the custom of the manor.

SECUNDUM FORMAM CHARTÆ. According to the form of the charter, (deed.)

SECUNDUM FORMAM DONI. According to the form of the gift or grant. See Formedon.

SECUNDUM FORMAM STATUTI. According to the form of the statute.

SECUNDUM LEGEM COMMUNEM. According to the common law.

Secundum naturam est commoda cujusque rei eum sequi, quem sequuntur incommoda. It is according to nature that the advantages of anything should attach to him to whom the disadvantages attach. Dig. 50, 17, 10.

SECUNDUM NORMAM LEGIS. According to the rule of law; by the intendment and rule of law.

SECUNDUM REGULAM. According to the rule; by rule.

SECUNDUM SUBJECTAM MATERIAM. According to the subject-matter. 1 Bl. Comm. 229. All agreements must be construed secundum subjectam materiam if the matter will bear it. 2 Mod. 80, arg.

SECURE. To give security; to assure of payment, performance, or indemnity; to guaranty or make certain the payment of a debt or discharge of an obligation. One "secures" his creditor by giving him a lien, mortgage, pledge, or other security, to be used in case the debtor fails to make payment. See Pennell v. Rhodes, 9 Q. B. 114; Ex parte Reynolds, 52 Ark. 330, 12 S. W. 570; Foot v. Webb, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 52.

SECURED CREDITOR. A creditor who holds some special pecuniary assurance of payment of his debt, such as a mortgage or lien. In re Shatz (D. C.) 251 F. 351, 354; Oilfields Syndicate v. American Improvement Co. (C. C. A.) 260 F. 905, 910; Young v. Gordon (C. C. A.) 219 F. 168, 170; In re Thompson (D. C.) 208 F. 207, 208; Baker Lumber Co. v. A. A. Clark Co., 53 Utah, 336, 178 P. 764, 768.

SECURITAS.

In Old English Law

Security; surety.

In the Civil Law

An acquittance or release. Spelman; Calvin.

SECURITATEM INVENIENDI. An ancient writ, lying for the sovereign, against any of his subjects, to stay them from going out of the kingdom to foreign parts; the ground whereof is that every man is bound to serve and defend the commonwealth as the crown shall think fit. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 115.

SECURITATIS PACIS. In old English law. Security of the peace. A writ that lay for one who was threatened with death or bodily harm by another, against him who so threatened. Reg. Orig. 88.

SECURITY. Protection; assurance; indemnification. The term is usually applied to an obligation, pledge, mortgage, deposit, lien, etc., given by a debtor in order to make sure the payment or performance of his debt, by furnishing the creditor with a resource to be used in case of failure in the principal obligation. The name is also sometimes given to one who becomes surety or guarantor for another. See First Nat. Bank v. Hollinsworth, 78 Iowa, 575, 43 N. W. 536, 6 L. R. A. 92; Storm v. Waddell, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 507; Goggins v. Jones, 115 Ga. 596, 41 S. E. 995; Jennings v. Davis, 31 Conn. 139; Mace v. Buchanan (Tenn. Ch.) 52 S. W. 507; Boston R. Holding Co. v. Commonwealth, 215 Mass. 493, 102 N. E. 650, 651, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 621; Chew v. District of Columbia, 42 App. D. C. 410, 412; Groby v. State, 109 Ohio St. 543, 143 N. E. 126, 127; Jarrard v. McCarthy, 95 Kan. 719, 149 P. 696; Fox v. Harris, 141 Md. 495, 119 A. 256, 259, 26 A. L. R. 806; Sardo v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 100 N. J. Eq. 232, 134 A. 774, 775; Reagan v. District of Columbia, 41 App. D. C. 409, 412; Peaslee v. Rounds, 77 N. H. 544, 94 A. 263, 265; Bissinger & Co. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 83 Or. 288, 163 P. 592, 593.

Personal Security

(1) A person's legal and uninterrupted enjoyment of his life, his limbs, his body, his health, and his reputation. 1 Bl. Comm. 129. Sanderson v. Hunt, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 626, 76 S. W. 179. (2) Evidences of debt which bind the person of the debtor, not real property, are distinguished from such as are liens on land by the name of "personal securities." Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 131, 19 S. Ct. 360, 43 L. Ed. 640.

Public Securities

Bonds, notes, certificates of indebtedness, and other negotiable or transferable instruments evidencing the public debt of a state or government.

Real Security

The security of mortgages or other liens or incumbrances upon land. See Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 131, 19 S. Ct. 360, 43 L. Ed. 640.

Security for Costs

See Costs.

Security for Good Behavior

A bond or recognizance which the magistrate exacts from a defendant brought before him on a charge of disorderly conduct or threatening violence, conditioned upon his being of good behavior, or keeping the peace, for a prescribed period, towards all people in general and the complainant in particular.

Securius expediuntur negotia commissa pluribus, et plus vident oculi quam oculus. 4 Coke, 46a. Matters intrusted to several are more securely dispatched, and eyes see more than eye, [i. e., "two heads are better than one."]

SECUS. Lat. Otherwise; to the contrary. This word is used in the books to indicate the converse of a foregoing proposition, or the rule applicable to a different state of facts, or an exception to a rule before stated.

SED NON ALLOCATUR. Lat. But it is not allowed. A phrase used in the old reports, to signify that the court disagreed with the arguments of counsel.

SED PER CURIAM. Lat. But by the court —. This phrase is used in the reports to introduce a statement made by the court, on the argument, at variance with the propositions advanced by counsel, or the opinion of the whole court, where that is different from the opinion of a single judge immediately before quoted.

SED QUÆRE. Lat. But inquire; examine this further. A remark indicating, briefly, that the particular statement or rule laid down is doubted or challenged in respect to its correctness.

SED VIDE. Lat. But see. This remark, followed by a citation, directs the reader's attention to an authority or a statement which conflicts with or contradicts the statement or principle laid down.

SEDATO ANIMO. Lat. With settled purpose. 5 Mod. 291.

SEDE PLENA. Lat. The see being filled. A phrase used when a bishop's see is not vacant.

SEDENTE CURIA. Lat. The court sitting; during the sitting of the court.

SEDERUNT, ACTS OF. In Scotch law. Certain ancient ordinances of the court of session, conferring upon the courts power to establish general rules of practice. Bell.

SEDES. Lat. A see; the dignity of a bishop. 3 Steph. Comm. 65.

SEdge FLAT, like "sea-shore," imports a tract of land below high-water mark. Church v. Meeker, 34 Conn. 421.

SEDITION. An insurrectionary movement tending towards treason, but wanting an overt act; attempts made by meetings or speeches, or by publications, to disturb the tranquillity of the state. Arizona Pub. Co. v. Harris, 20 Ariz. 446, 181 P. 373, 375.

The distinction between "sedition" and "treason" consists in this: that though the ultimate object of sedition is a violation of the public peace, or at least such a course of measures as evidently engenders it, yet it does not aim at direct and open violence, against the laws or the subversion of the constitution. Alis. Crim. Law, 580.

In Scotch Law

The raising commotions or disturbances in the state. It is a revolt against legitimate authority. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 14.

In English Law

Sedition is the offense of publishing, verbally or otherwise, any words or document with the intention of exciting disaffection, hatred, or contempt against the sovereign, or the government and constitution of the kingdom, or either house of parliament, or the administration of justice, or of exciting his majesty's subjects to attempt, otherwise than by lawful means, the alteration of any matter in church or state, or of exciting feelings of ill will and hostility between different classes of his majesty's subjects. Sweet. And see State v. Shepherd, 177 Mo. 205, 76 S. W. 79, 99 Am. St. Rep. 624.

SEDITIONOUS LIBEL. See Libel.

SEDUCE. To entice a woman to the commission of fornication or adultery, by persuasion, solicitation, promises, bribes, or otherwise; to corrupt; to debauch.

The word "seduce," when used with reference to the conduct of a man towards a woman, has a precise and determinate signification, and "ex vi termin" implies the commission of fornication. An information for the crime of seduction need not charge the offense in any other words. State v. Bierce, 27 Conn. 319.

SEDUCING TO LEAVE SERVICE. An injury for which a master may have an action on the case.

SEDUCTION. The act of a man in enticing a woman to commit unlawful sexual intercourse with him, by means of persuasion, solicitation, promises, bribes, or other means without the employment of force.

In order to constitute seduction, the defendant must use insinuating arts to overcome the opposition of the seduced, and must by his wiles and persuasions, without force, debauch her. This is the ordinary meaning and acceptance of the word "seduce." Hogan v. Cregan, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 150.

SEE. The circuit of a bishop's jurisdiction; or his office or dignity, as being bishop of a given diocese.

SEEN. This word, when written by the drawee on a bill of exchange, amounts to an acceptance by the law merchant. Spear v. Pratt, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 582, 38 Am. Dec. 600; Barnet v. Smith, 30 N. H. 256, 64 Am. Dec. 290; Peterson v. Hubbard, 28 Mich. 197.

SEIGNIOR, in its general signification, means "lord," but in law it is particularly applied to the lord of a fee or of a manor; and the fee, dominions, or manor of a seignior is thence termed a "seignior," i. e., a lordship. He who is a lord, but of no manor, and therefore unable to keep a court, is termed a "seignior in gross." Kitch. 206; Cowell.

SEIGNIORAGE. A royalty or prerogative of the sovereign, whereby an allowance of gold and silver, brought in the mass to be exchanged for coin, is claimed. Cowell. Mintage; the charge for coining bullion into money at the mint.

SEIGNIORESS. A female superior.

SEIGNIORY. In English law. A lordship; a manor. The rights of a lord, as such, in lands. Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 114 Misc. Rep. 590, 187 N. Y. S. 216, 231.

SEISED IN DEMESNE AS OF FEE. This is the strict technical expression used to describe the ownership in "an estate in fee-simple in possession in a corporeal hereditament." The word "seised" is used to express the "seisin" or owner's possession of a freehold property; the phrase "in demesne," or "in his demesne," (in dominico suo) signifies that he is seised as owner of the land itself, and not merely of the seignior or services; and the concluding words, "as of fee," import that he is seised of an estate of inheritance in fee-simple. Where the subject is incorporeal, or the estate expectant on a precedent freehold, the words "in his demesne" are omitted. (Co. Litt. 17a; Fleta, l. 5, c. 5, § 18; Bract. l. 4, tr. 5, c. 2, § 2.) Brown.

SEISI. In old English law. Seised; possessed.

SEISIN. The completion of the feudal investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into the feud, and performed the rights of homage and fealty. Stearns, Real Act. 2.

Possession with an intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest. Towle v. Ayer, 8 N. H. 58; Ferguson v. Wittsell, 5 Rich. Law (S. C.) 280, 57 Am. Dec. 744; McNitt v. Turner, 16 Wall. 361, 21 L. Ed. 341; Deshong v. Deshong, 186 Pa. 227, 40 A. 402, 65 Am. St. Rep. 855.

Upon the introduction of the feudal law into England, the word "seisin" was applied only to the possession of an estate of freehold, in contradistinction to that precarious kind of possession by which tenants in villeinage held their lands, which was considered to be the possession of those in whom the freehold continued. The word still retains its original signification, being applied exclusively to the possession of land of a freehold tenure, it being inaccurate to use the word as expressive of the possession of leaseholds or terms of years, or even of copyholds. Brown.

Under our law, the word "seisin" has no accurately defined technical meaning. At common law, it imported a feudal investiture of title by actual possession. With us it has the force of possession under some legal title or right to hold. This possession, so far as possession alone is involved, may be shown by parol; but, if it is intended to show possession under a legal title, then the title must be shown by proper conveyance for that purpose. Ford v. Garner, 49 Ala. 603.

Every person in whom a seisin is required by any of the provisions of this chapter shall be deemed to have been seised, if he may have had any right, title, or interest in the inheritance. Code N. C. 1883, § 1281, rule 12 (Code 1931, § 1654, rule 12).

Actual Seisin

Actual seisin means possession of the freehold by the pedis positio of one's self or one's tenant or agent, or by construction of law, as in the case of a state grant or a conveyance under the statutes of uses, or (probably) of grant or devise where there is no actual adverse possession; it means actual possession as distinguished from constructive possession or possession in law. Carpenter v. Garrett, 75 Va. 129, 135; Carr v. Anderson, 6 App. Div. 6, 39 N. Y. S. 746.

Constructive Seisin

Seisin in law where there is no seisin in fact; as where the state issues a patent to a person who never takes any sort of possession of the lands granted, he has constructive seisin of all the land in his grant, though another person is at the time in actual possession. Garrett v. Ramsey, 26 W. Va. 351.

Covenant of Seisin

See Covenant.

Equitable Seisin

A seisin which is analogous to legal seisin; that is, seisin of an equitable estate in land. Thus a mortgagor is said to have equitable seisin of the land by receipt of the rents. Sweet.

Livery of Seisin

Delivery of possession; called, by the feudists, "investiture."

Primer Seisin

In English law. The right which the king had, when any of his tenants died seised of a knight's fee, to receive of the heir, provided he were of full age, one whole year's profits of the lands, if they were in immediate possession; and half a year's profits, if the lands were in reversion, expectant on an estate for life. 2 Bl. Comm. 66.

Quasi Seisin

A term applied to the possession which a copyholder has of the land to which he has been admitted. The freehold in copyhold lands being in the lord, the copyholder cannot have seisin of them in the proper sense of the word, but he has a customary or quasi seisin analogous to that of a freeholder. Williams, Seis. 126; Sweet.

Seisin in Deed

Actual possession of the freehold; the same as actual seisin or seisin in fact. Vanderheyden v. Crandall, 2 Denio (N. Y.) 21; Backus v. McCoy, 3 Ohio, 221, 17 Am. Dec. 585; Tate v. Jay, 31 Ark. 579.

Seisin in Fact

Possession with intent on the part of him who holds it to claim a freehold interest; the same as actual seisin. Seim v. O'Grady, 42 W. Va. 77, 24 S. E. 994; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23 P. 890, 20 Am. St. Rep. 795.

Seisin in Law

A right of immediate possession according to the nature of the estate. Martin v. Trail, 142 Mo. 85, 43 S. W. 655; Savage v. Savage, 19 Or. 112, 23 P. 890, 20 Am. St. Rep. 795. As the old doctrine of corporeal investiture is no longer in force, the delivery of a deed gives seisin in law. Watkins v. Nugen, 118 Ga. 372, 45 S. E. 262.

Seisin Ox

In Scotch law. A perquisite formerly due to the sheriff when he gave possession to an heir holding crown lands. It was long since converted into a payment in money, proportioned to the value of the estate. Bell.

SEISINA. L. Lat. Seisin.

Seisina facit stipitem. Seisin makes the stock. 2 Bl. Comm. 209; Broom, Max. 525, 528.

SEISINA HABENDA. A writ for delivery of seisin to the lord, of lands and tenements, after the sovereign, in right of his prerogative, had had the year, day, and waste on a felony committed, etc. Reg. Orig. 165.

SEIZIN. See Seisin.

SEIZING OF HERIOTS. Taking the best beast, etc., where an heriot is due, on the death of the tenant. 2 Bl. Comm. 422.

SEIZURE.

In Practice

The act performed by an officer of the law, under the authority and exigence of a writ, in taking into the custody of the law the property, real or personal, of a person against whom the judgment of a competent court has passed, condemning him to pay a certain sum of money, in order that such property may be sold, by authority and due course of law, to satisfy the judgment. Or the act of taking possession of goods in consequence of a violation of public law. See Carey v. Insurance Co., 84 Wis. 80, 54 N. W. 18, 20 L. R. A. 267, 36 Am. St. Rep. 907; Goubeau v. Railroad Co., 6 Rob. (La.) 348; Fluker v. Bullard, 2 La. Ann. 338; Pelham v. Rose, 9 Wall. 106, 19 L. Ed. 602; The Josefa Segunda, 10 Wheat. 326, 6 L. Ed. 329.

Seizure, even though hostile, is not necessarily capture, though such is its usual and probable result. The ultimate act or adjudication of the state, by which the seizure has been made, assigns the proper and conclusive quality and denomination to the original proceeding. A condemnation asserts a capture ab initio; an award of restitution pronounces upon the act as having been not a valid act of capture, but an act of temporary seizure only. Appleton v. Crowninshield, 3 Mass. 443.

In the Law of Copyholds

Seizure is where the lord of copyhold lands takes possession of them in default of a tenant. It is either seizure quousque or absolute seizure.

SEIZURE QUOUSQUE. Where the heir on the death of his ancestor postpones claiming admittance from the lord, the lord may, after a reasonable time, and after due proclamation at three successive courts, seize the tenement into his hands quousque, i. e. until an heir appears and claims admittance; Jenks, Mod. Land L. 208.

SELDA. A shop, shed, or stall in a market; a wood of sallows or willows; also a sawpit. Co. Litt. 4.

SELECT COUNCIL. The name given, in some states, to the upper house or branch of the council of a city.

SELECTI JUDICES. Lat. In Roman law. Judges who were selected very much like our juries. They were returned by the prætor, drawn by lot, subject to be challenged, and sworn. 3 Bl. Comm. 366.

SELECTMEN. The name of certain municipal officers, in the New England states, elected by the towns to transact their general public business, and possessing certain executive powers. See Felch v. Weare, 69 N. H. 617, 45 A. 591.

SELF-DEFENSE. In criminal law. The protection of one's person or property against some injury attempted by another. The right of such protection. An excuse for the use of force in resisting an attack on the person, and especially for killing an assailant. See Whart. Crim. Law, §§ 1019, 1026.

SELF-EXECUTING. In constitutional law. Immediately effective without the necessity of ancillary legislation. Ladd & Tilton Bank v. Frawley, 98 Or. 241, 193 P. 916, 919; State ex inf. Barker v. Duncan, 265 Mo. 26, 175 S. W. 940, 944, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1; State v. Harris, 74 Or. 573, 144 P. 109, 111, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1156; Village of Perrysburg v. Ridgway, 108 Ohio St. 245, 140 N. E. 595, 597; Becker v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 128 S. C. 131, 121 S. E. 476, 478; State v. Deck, 106 Kan. 518, 188 P. 238, 240; Chester v. Hall, 55 Cal. App. 611, 204 P. 237, 239; Fehr v. Black Petroleum Corporation, 103 Okl. 241, 229 P. 1048, 1051; Craft v. Baker, 194 Ky. 205, 238 S. W. 389, 391; Thorne v. City of Clarksburg, 88 W. Va. 251, 106 S. E. 644, 646; People v. Bradley, 66 Colo. 186, 179 P. 871; Cleary v. Kincaid, 23 Idaho, 789, 131 P. 1117, 1118; Stange v. City of Cleveland, 94 Ohio St. 377, 114 N. E. 261, 262.

SELF-MURDER, SELF-DESTRUCTION, or SELF-SLAUGHTER. See Felo de Se; Suicide.

SELION OF LAND. In old English law. A ridge of ground rising between two furrows, containing no certain quantity, but sometimes more and sometimes less. Termes de la Ley.

SELL. To dispose of by sale, (q. v.).

SELLER. One who sells anything; the party who transfers property in the contract of sale. The correlative is "buyer," or "purchaser." Though these terms are not inapplicable to the persons concerned in a transfer of real estate, it is more customary to use "vendor" and "purchaser," or "vendee" in that case.

SELLETTE (Fr.). A kind of wooden seat set up in criminal courts in France, on which they placed the accused to undergo his last interrogatory when the conclusions of the counsel for the prosecution went against him with regard to capital punishment or at least penal corporal punishment. It implied moral degradation and was therefore limited to persons accused of crimes entailing corporal punishment. See Ord. Cr. de 1670, Titre IV, art. 21. Abolished by Edict of May 1, 1788. Called a "stool of repentance."

SELLING PUBLIC OFFICES. Buying or selling any office in the gift of the crown, or making any negotiation relating thereto, was deemed a misdemeanor under stats. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, and 49 Geo. III. c. 126. 2 Steph. Com., 11th ed. 631.

SEMAYNE'S CASE. This case decided, in 1604, that "every man's house [meaning his dwelling-house only] is his castle," and that an officer executing civil process may not break open outer doors in general, but only inner doors, but that (after request made) he may break open even outer doors to find goods of another wrongfully in the house. Brown. It is reported in 5 Coke, 91.

SEMBLE. L. Fr. It seems; it would appear. This expression is often used in the reports to preface a statement by the court upon a point of law which is not directly decided, when such statement is intended as an intimation of what the decision would be if the point were necessary to be passed upon. It is also used to introduce a suggestion by the reporter, or his understanding of the point decided when it is not free from obscurity.

Semel civis semper civis. Once a citizen always a citizen. Tray. Lat. Max. 555.

Semel malus semper præsumitur esse malus in eodem genere. Whoever is once bad is presumed to be so always in the same kind of affairs. Cro. Car. 317.

SEMESTRIA. Lat. In the civil law. The collected decisions of the emperors in their councils.

SEMI-MATRIMONIUM. Lat. In Roman law. Half-marriage. Concubinage was so called. Tayl. Civil Law, 273.

SEMI-PLENA PROBATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Half-full proof; half-proof. 3 Bl. Comm. 370. See Half-Proof.

SEMINARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A nursery of trees. Dig. 7, 1, 9, 6.

SEMINARY. A place of education. Any school, academy, college, or university in which young persons are instructed in the several branches of learning which may qualify them for their future employments. Webster.

The word is said to have acquired no fixed and definite legal meaning. See Chegaray v. New York, 13 N. Y. 229; Maddox v. Adair (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 811; Miami County

v. Wilgus, 42 Kan. 457, 22 P. 615; Warde v. Manchester, 56 N. H. 509, 22 Am. Rep. 504.

SEMNAUFRAGIUM. Lat. In maritime law. Half-shipwreck, as where goods are cast overboard in a storm; also where a ship has been so much damaged that her repair costs more than her worth. Wharton.

SEMITA. In old English law. A path. Fleta, l. 2, c. 52, § 20.

SEMPER. Lat. Always. A word which introduces several Latin maxims, of which some are also used without this prefix.

Semper in dubiis benigniora præferenda sunt. In doubtful cases, the more favorable constructions are always to be preferred. Dig. 50, 17, 56.

Semper in dubiis id agendum est, ut quam tutissimo loco res sit bona fide contracta, nisi quum aperte contra leges scriptum est. In doubtful cases, such a course should always be taken that a thing contracted bona fide should be in the safest condition, unless when it has been openly made against law. Dig. 34, 5, 21.

Semper in obscuris, quod minimum est sequimur. In obscure constructions we always apply that which is the least obscure. Dig. 50, 17, 9; Broom, Max. 687*n*.

Semper in stipulationibus, et in ceteris contractibus, id sequimur quod actum est. In stipulations and in other contracts we follow that which was done, [we are governed by the actual state of the facts.] Dig. 50, 17, 34.

Semper ita fiat relatio ut valeat dispositio. Reference [of a disposition in a will] should always be so made that the disposition may have effect. 6 Coke, 76*b*.

Semper necessitas probandi incumbit ei qui agit. The claimant is always bound to prove, [the burden of proof lies on the actor.]

SEMPER PARATUS. Lat. Always ready. The name of a plea by which the defendant alleges that he has always been ready to perform what is demanded of him. 3 Bl. Comm. 303.

Semper præsumitur pro legitimatione puerorum. The presumption always is in favor of the legitimacy of children. 5 Coke, 98*b*; Co. Litt. 126*a*.

Semper præsumitur pro matrimonio. The presumption is always in favor of the validity of a marriage.

Semper præsumitur pro negante. The presumption is always in favor of the one who denies. See 10 Clark & F. 534; 3 El. & Bl. 723.

Semper præsumitur pro sententia. The presumption always is in favor of a sentence. 3 Bulst. 42; Branch, Princ.

Semper qui non prohibet pro se intervenire, mandare creditur. He who does not prohibit the intervention of another in his behalf is supposed to authorize it. 2 Kent, Comm. 616; Dig. 14, 6, 16; Id. 46, 3, 12, 4.

Semper sexus masculinus etiam femininum sexum continet. The masculine sex always includes the feminine. Dig. 32, 62.

Semper specialia generalibus insunt. Specials are always included in generals. Dig. 50, 17, 147.

SEN. This is said to be an ancient word, which signified "justice." Co. Litt. 61*a*.

SENAGE. Money paid for synodals.

In American Law

The name of the upper chamber, or less numerous branch, of the congress of the United States. Also the style of a similar body in the legislatures of several of the states.

In Roman Law

The great administrative council of the Roman commonwealth.

SENATOR.

In Roman Law

A member of the senatus.

In Old English Law

A member of the royal council; a king's councillor.

In American Law

One who is a member of a senate, either of the United States or of a state.

Senatores sunt partes corporis regis. Senators are part of the body of the king. Staundef. 72, E.; 4 Inst. 53, in marg.

SENATORS OF THE COLLEGE OF JUSTICE. The judges of the court of session in Scotland are called "Senators of the College of Justice."

SENATUS. Lat. In Roman law. The senate; the great national council of the Roman people.

The place where the senate met. Calvin.

SENATUS CONSULTUM. In Roman law. A decision or decree of the Roman senate, having the force of law, made without the concurrence of the people. These enactments began to take the place of laws enacted by popular vote, when the commons had grown so great in number that they could no longer be assembled for legislative purposes. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 33; Hunter Rom. Law, xvii; Inst. 1, 2, 5.

SENATUS CONSULTUM MARCIANUM. A decree of the senate, in relation to the celebration of the Bacchanalian mysteries, enacted in the consulate of Q. Marcius and S. Postumus.

SENATUS CONSULTUM ORFICIANUM. An enactment of the senate (Orficius being one of the consuls and Marcus Antoninus emperor) or admitting both sons and daughters to the succession of a mother dying intestate. Inst. 3, 4, pr.

SENATUS CONSULTUM PEGASIANUM. The Pegasian decree of the senate. A decree enacted in the consulship of Pegasus and Pudio, in the reign of Vespasian, by which an heir, who was requested to restore an inheritance, was allowed to retain one-fourth of it for himself. Inst. 2, 23, 5.

SENATUS CONSULTUM TREBELLIANUM. A decree of the senate (named from Trebellius, in whose consulate it was enacted) by which it was provided that, if an inheritance was restored under a trust, all actions which, by the civil law, might be brought by or against the heir should be given to and against him to whom the inheritance was restored. Inst. 2, 23, 4; Dig. 36, 1.

SENATUS CONSULTUM ULTIMÆ NESSITATIS. A decree of the senate of the last necessity. The name given to the decree which usually preceded the nomination of a dictator. 1 Bl. Comm. 136.

SENATUS CONSULTUM VELLEIANUM. The Velleian decree of the senate. A decree enacted in the consulship of Velleius, by which married women were prohibited from making contracts. Story, Conf. Laws, § 425.

SENATUS DECRETA. Lat. In the civil law. Decisions of the senate. Private acts concerning particular persons merely.

SENDA. In Spanish law. A path; the right of a path. The right of foot or horse path. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 6, § 1.

SENECTUS. Lat. Old age. In the Roman law, the period of senectus, which relieved one from the charge of public office, was officially reckoned as beginning with the completion of the seventieth year. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 138.

SENESCALLUS. In old English law. A seneschal; a steward; the steward of a manor. Fleta, l. 2, c. 72.

SENESCHAL. In old European law. A title of office and dignity, derived from the middle ages, answering to that of steward or high steward in England. Seneschals were originally the lieutenants of the dukes and other great feudatories of the kingdom, and sometimes had the dispensing of justice and high military commands.

SENESchALLO ET MARESHALLO QUOD NON TENEA PLACITA DE LIBERO TENEMENTO. A writ addressed to the steward and marshal of England, inhibiting them to take cognizance of an action in their court that concerns freehold. Reg. Orig. 185. Abolished.

SENEUCIA. In old records. Widowhood. Cowell.

SENILE DEMENTIA. That peculiar decay of the mental faculties which occurs in extreme old age, and in many cases much earlier, whereby the person is reduced to second childhood, and becomes sometimes wholly incompetent to enter into any binding contract, or even to execute a will. It is the recurrence of second childhood by mere decay. In re Moyer's Will, 97 Misc. 512, 163 N. Y. S. 296, 301; In re Koll's Estate, 200 Iowa, 1122, 206 N. W. 40, 43; Smith v. Smith, 205 Ill. App. 116, 117; Byrne v. Fulkerson, 254 Mo. 97, 162 S. W. 171, 178; Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Waller, 240 Pa. 575, 88 A. 13, 15; In re Gedney's Will (Sur.) 142 N. Y. S. 157, 175; 1 Redf. Wills, 63. See Insanity.

SENILITY. Incapacity to contract arising from the impairment of the intellectual faculties by old age.

SENIOR. Lord; a lord. Also the elder. An addition to the name of the elder of two persons in the same family having the same name.

SENIOR COUNSEL. Of two or more counsel retained on the same side of a cause, he is the "senior" who is the elder, or more important in rank or estimation, or who is charged with the more difficult or important parts of the management of the case.

SENIOR JUDGE. Of several judges composing a court, the "senior" judge is the one who holds the oldest commission, or who has served the longest time under his present commission.

SENIORES. In old English law. Seniors; ancients; elders. A term applied to the great men of the realm. Spelman.

SENIORIO. In Spanish law. Dominion or property.

SENSUS. Lat. Sense, meaning, signification. Malo sensu, in an evil or derogatory sense. Mitiori sensu, in a milder, less severe, or less stringent sense. Sensu honesto, in an honest sense; to interpret words sensu honesto is to take them so as not to impute impropriety to the persons concerned.

Sensus verborum est anima legis. 5 Coke, 2. The meaning of the words is the spirit of the law.

Sensus verborum est duplex,—mitis et asper; et verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiori sensu. 4 Coke, 13. The meaning of words is twofold,—mild and harsh; and words are always to be received in their milder sense.

Sensus verborum ex causa dicendi accipiendus est; et sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam. The sense of words is to be taken from the occasion of speaking them; and discourses are always to be interpreted according to the subject-matter. 4 Coke, 13*b*. See 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

SENTENCE. The judgment formally pronounced by the court or judge upon the defendant after his conviction in a criminal prosecution, awarding the punishment to be inflicted. The word is properly confined to this meaning. In civil cases, the terms "judgment," "decision," "award," "finding," etc., are used. See Featherstone v. People, 194 Ill. 325, 62 N. E. 684; State v. Barnes, 24 Fla. 153, 4 So. 560; Pennington v. State, 11 Tex. App. 281; Com. v. Bishoff, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 503; People v. Adams, 95 Mich. 541, 55 N. W. 461; Bugbee v. Boyce, 68 Vt. 311, 35 A. 330; Rutland v. State, 14 Ga. App. 746, 82 S. E. 293, 295; People v. Jenkins, 322 Ill. 33, 152 N. E. 549, 551; People v. Murphy, 257 Ill. 564, 100 N. E. 980, 981; Stewart v. Stewart, 93 N. J. Eq. 1, 114 A. 851, 852; Corruncker v. State, 19 Ala. App. 500, 98 So. 363, 364; Ex parte Fisher, 95 W. Va. 397, 121 S. E. 287, 288; Thompkins v. State, 87 Tex. Cr. R. 592, 222 S. W. 1103; Cherry v. Cherry, 253 Mass. 172, 148 N. E. 570, 572; Noel v. State, 17 Okl. Cr. 308, 188 P. 688, 690; Archer v. Snook (D. C.) 10 F.(2d) 567, 569; Hart v. Norman, 92 Misc. 185, 155 N. Y. S. 238, 240; In re Hall, 100 Vt. 197, 136 A. 24, 26.

Ecclesiastical

In ecclesiastical procedure, "sentence" is analogous to "judgment" (q. v.) in an ordinary action. A definite sentence is one which puts an end to the suit, and regards the principal matter in question. An interlocutory sentence determines only some incidental matter in the proceedings. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1260.

In General

—Cumulative sentences. Separate sentences (each additional to the others) imposed upon a defendant who has been convicted upon an indictment containing several counts, each of such counts charging a distinct offense, or who is under conviction at the same time for several distinct offenses; one of such sentences being made to begin at the expiration of another. Carter v. McLaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 22 S. Ct. 181, 46 L. Ed. 236; State v. Hamby, 126 N. C. 1066, 35 S. E. 614; Brandon v. Mackey, 122 Kan. 207, 251 P. 176, 177.

—Final sentence. One which puts an end to a case. Distinguished from interlocutory.

—Indeterminate sentence. A form of sentence to imprisonment upon conviction of crime, now authorized by statute in several states, which, instead of fixing rigidly the duration of the imprisonment, declares that it shall be for a period "not less than" so many years "nor more than" so many years, or not less than the minimum period prescribed by statute as the punishment for the particular offense nor more than the maximum period, the exact length of the term being afterwards fixed, within the limits assigned by the court or the statute, by an executive authority, (the governor, board of pardons, etc.) on consideration of the previous record of the convict, his behavior while in prison or while out on parole, the apparent prospect of reformation and other such considerations.

—Interlocutory sentence. In the civil law. A sentence on some indirect question arising from the principal cause. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, ch. 9, no. 40.

—Sentence of death recorded. In English practice. The recording of a sentence of death, not actually pronounced, on the understanding that it will not be executed. Such a record has the same effect as if the judgment had been pronounced and the offender reprieved by the court. Mozley & Whitley. The practice is now disused.

—Simple sentence. (in rhetoric). See Simple.

—Suspension of sentence. This term may mean either a withholding or postponing the sentencing of a prisoner after the conviction, or a postponing of the execution of the sentence after it has been pronounced. In the latter case, it may, for reasons addressing themselves to the discretion of the court, be indefinite as to time, or during the good behavior of the prisoner. See People v. Webster, 14 Misc. 617, 36 N. Y. S. 745; In re Buchanan, 146 N. Y. 264, 40 N. E. 883.

SENTENTIA. Lat. In the civil law. (1) Sense; import; as distinguished from mere words. (2) The deliberate expression of one's will or intention. (3) The sentence of a judge or court.

Sententia a non iudice lata nemini debet nocere. A sentence pronounced by one who is not a judge should not harm any one. Fleta, 1. 6, c. 6, § 7.

Sententia contra matrimonium numquam transit in rem iudicatam. 7 Coke, 43. A sentence against marriage never becomes a matter finally adjudged, i. e., res iudicata.

Sententia facit jus, et legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet. Ellesm. Post. N. 55. Judgment creates right, and the interpretation of the law has the force of law.

Sententia facit jus, et res iudicata pro veritate accipitur. Ellesm. Post. N. 55. Judgment creates right, and what is adjudicated is taken for truth.

Sententia interlocutoria revocari potest, definitiva non potest. Bac. Max. 20. An interlocutory judgment may be recalled, but not a final.

Sententia non fertur de rebus non liquidis. Sentence is not given upon matters that are not clear. Jenk. Cent. p. 7, case 9.

SEPARABLE CONTROVERSY. In the acts of congress relating to the removal of causes from state courts to federal courts, this phrase means a separate and distinct cause of action existing in the suit, on which a separate and distinct suit might properly have been brought and complete relief afforded as to such cause of action; or the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that, in one of the parts, a controversy will be presented, wholly between citizens of different states, which can be fully determined without the presence of any of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun. Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U. S. 191, 1 S. Ct. 171, 27 L. Ed. 131; Gudger v. Western N. C. R. Co. (C. C.) 21 F. 81; Security Co. v. Pratt (C. C.) 64 F. 405; Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. North Carolina R. Co. (C. C.) 123 F. 629; Crisp v. Champion Fibre Co., 193 N. C. 77, 136 S. E. 238, 240; City of Winfield v. Wichita Natural Gas Co. (C. C. A.) 267 F. 47, 50; Beal v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. (D. C.) 298 F. 180, 181; Keenan v. Gladys Belle Oil Co. (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 418, 420; Steed v. Henry, 120 Ark. 583, 180 S. W. 508, 509; Harrison v. Harrison (D. C.) 5 F.(2d) 1001, 1003; Mace v. Mayfield (D. C.) 10 F.(2d) 231, 232.

SEPARALITER. Lat. Separately. Used in indictments to indicate that two or more defendants were charged separately, and not jointly, with the commission of the offense in question. State v. Edwards, 60 Mo. 490.

SEPARATE. Individual; distinct; particular; disconnected. Generally used in law as opposed to "joint," though the more usual antithesis of the latter term is "several." Either of these words implies division, distribution, disconnection, or aloofness. See Merrill v. Pepperdine, 9 Ind. App. 416, 36 N. E. 921; Larzelere v. Starkweather, 38 Mich. 104.

SEPARATE ACTION. As opposed to a joint action, this term signifies an action brought for himself alone by each of several complainants who are all concerned in the same transaction, but cannot legally join in the suit.

SEPARATE DEMISE IN EJECTMENT. A demise in a declaration in ejectment used to be termed a "separate demise" when made by the lessor separately or individually, as distinguished from a demise made jointly by two or more persons, which was termed a "joint demise." No such demise, either separate or joint, is now necessary in this action. Brown.

SEPARATE ESTATE. The individual property of one of two persons who stand in a social or business relation, as distinguished from that which they own jointly or are jointly interested in. Thus, "separate estate," within the meaning of the bankrupt law, is that in which each partner is separately interested at the time of the bankruptcy. The term can only be applied to such property as belonged to one or more of the partners, to the exclusion of the rest. In re Lowe, 11 Nat.

Bankr. Rep. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 8,564. The separate estate of a married woman is that which belongs to her, and over which her husband has no right in equity. It may consist of lands or chattels. Williams v. King, 29 Fed. Cas. 1,369.

SEPARATE MAINTENANCE. An allowance made to a woman by her husband on their agreement to live separately. This must not be confused with "alimony," which is judicially awarded upon granting a divorce. See Mitchell v. Mitchell, 31 Colo. 209, 72 P. 1054.

SEPARATE TRIAL. The separate and individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime.

As to separate "Acknowledgment," "Covenant," and "Examination," see those titles.

SEPARATIM. Lat. In old conveyancing. Severally. A word which made a several covenant. 5 Coke, 23a.

SEPARATION. In matrimonial law. A cessation of cohabitation of husband and wife by mutual agreement, or, in the case of "judicial separation," under the decree of a court. See Butler v. Washington, 45 La. Ann. 279, 12 So. 356, 19 L. R. A. 814; Weld v. Weld, 24 Minn. 330, 7 N. W. 267; Hereford v. People, 197 Ill. 222, 64 N. E. 310; Lee v. Lee, 182 N. C. 61, 108 S. E. 352, 353; Cook v. Cook, 164 N. C. 272, 80 S. E. 178, 179, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1034; Howdershell v. Howdershell, 50 Cal. App. 374, 195 P. 732, 733.

—Separation a mensa et thoro. A partial dissolution of the marriage relation.

—Separation order. In England, where a husband is convicted of an aggravated assault upon his wife, the court or magistrate may order that the wife shall be no longer bound to cohabit with him. Such an order has the same effect as a judicial decree of separation on the ground of cruelty. It may also provide for the payment of a weekly sum by the husband to the wife and for the custody of the children. Sweet.

SEPARATION OF PATRIMONY. In Louisiana probate law. The creditors of the succession may demand, in every case and against every creditor of the heir, a separation of the property of the succession from that of the heir. This is what is called the "separation of patrimony." The object of a separation of patrimony is to prevent property out of which a particular class of creditors have a right to be paid from being confounded with other property, and by that means made liable to the debts of another class of creditors. Civ. Code La. art. 1444.

SEPARATISTS. Seceders from the Church of England. They, like Quakers, solemnly affirm, instead of taking the usual oath, before they give evidence.

SEPEs. Lat. In old English law. A hedge or inclosure. The inclosure of a trench or canal. Dig. 43, 21, 4.

SEPTENNIAL ACT. In English law. The statute 1 Geo. I. St. 2, c. 38. The act by which a parliament has continuance for seven years, and no longer, unless sooner dissolved; as it always has, in fact, been since the passing of the act. Wharton.

SEPTUAGESIMA. In ecclesiastical law. The third Sunday before Quadragesima Sunday, being about the seventieth day before Easter.

SEPTUM, Lat.

In Roman Law

An inclosure; an inclosed place where the people voted; otherwise called "ovile."

In Old English Law

An inclosure or close. Cowell.

SEPTUNX. Lat. In Roman law. A division of the as, containing seven uncia, or duodecimal parts; the proportion of seven-twelfths. Tayl. Civil Law, 492.

SEPULCHRE. A grave or tomb. The place of interment of a dead human body. The violation of sepulchres is a misdemeanor at common law.

SEPULTURA. Lat. An offering to the priest for the burial of a dead body.

Sequamur vestigia patrum nostrorum. Jenk. Cent. Let us follow the footsteps of our fathers.

SEQUATUR SUB SUO PERICULO. In old English practice. A writ which issued where a sheriff had returned nihil, upon a summons ad warrantizandum, and after an alias and pluries had been issued. So called because the tenant lost his lands without any recovery in value, unless upon that writ he brought the vouchee into court. Rosc. Real Act. 268; Cowell.

SEQUELA. L. Lat. In old English law. Suit; process or prosecution. Sequela causæ, the process of a cause. Cowell.

SEQUELA CURIÆ. Suit of court. Cowell.

SEQUELA VILLANORUM. The family retinue and appurtenances to the goods and chattels of villeins, which were at the absolute disposal of the lord. Par. Antiq. 216.

SEQUELS. Small allowances of meal, or manufactured victual, made to the servants at a mill where corn was ground, by tenure, in Scotland. Wharton.

In the Civil Law

To renounce or disclaim, etc. As when a widow came into court and disclaimed having anything to do with her deceased husband's estate, she was said to sequester. The word more commonly signifies the act of taking in execution under a writ of sequestration. Brown.

To deposit a thing which is the subject of a controversy in the hands of a third person, to hold for the contending parties.

To take a thing which is the subject of a controversy out of the possession of the contending parties, and deposit it in the hands of a third person. Calvin.

In Equity Practice

To take possession of the property of a defendant, and hold it in the custody of the court, until he purges himself of a contempt.

In English Ecclesiastical Practice

To gather and take care of the fruits and profits of a vacant benefice, for the benefit of the next incumbent.

In International Law

To confiscate; to appropriate private property to public use; to seize the property of the private citizens of a hostile power, as when a belligerent nation sequesters debts due from its own subjects to the enemy. See 1 Kent, Comm. 62.

SEQUESTER, n. Lat. In the civil law. A person with whom two or more contending parties deposited the subject-matter of the controversy.

SEQUESTRARI FACIAS. In English ecclesiastical practice. A process in the nature of a levari facias, commanding the bishop to enter into the rectory and parish church, and to take and sequester the same, and hold them until, of the rents, tithes, and profits thereof, and of the other ecclesiastical goods of a defendant, he have levied the plaintiff's debt. 3 Bl. Comm. 418; 2 Archb. Pr. 1284.

SEQUESTRATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The separating or setting aside of a thing in controversy, from the possession of both parties that contend for it. It is two-fold,—voluntary, done by consent of all parties; and necessary, when a judge orders it. Brown.

SEQUESTRATION.

In Equity Practice

A writ authorizing the taking into the custody of the law of the real and personal estate (or rents, issues, and profits) of a defendant who is in contempt, and holding the same until he shall comply. It is sometimes directed to the sheriff, but more commonly to four commissioners nominated by the complainant. 3 Bl. Comm. 444; Ryan v. Kingsbery, 88 Ga. 361, 14 S. E. 596.

In Louisiana

A mandate of the court, ordering the sheriff, in certain cases, to take in his possession, and to keep, a thing of which another person has the possession, until after the decision of a suit, in order that it be delivered to him who shall be adjudged entitled to have the property or possession of that thing. This is what is properly called a "judicial sequestration." Code Prac. La. art. 269; American Nat. Bank v. Childs, 49 La. Ann. 1359, 22 So. 384.

In Contracts

A species of deposit which two or more persons, engaged in litigation about anything, make of the thing in contest with an indifferent person who binds himself to restore it, when the issue is decided, to the party to whom it is adjudged to belong. Civ. Code La. art. 2973.

In English Ecclesiastical Law

The act of the ordinary in disposing of the goods and chattels of one deceased, whose estate no one will meddle with. Cowell. Or, in other words, the taking possession of the property of a deceased person, where there is no one to claim it.

Also, where a benefice becomes vacant, a sequestration is usually granted by the bishop to the church-wardens, who manage all the profits and expenses of the benefice, plow and sow the glebe, receive tithes, and provide for the necessary cure of souls. Sweet.

In International Law

The seizure of the property of an individual, and the appropriation of it to the use of the government.

Mayor's Court

In the mayor's court of London, "a sequestration is an attachment of the property of a person in a warehouse or other place belonging to and abandoned by him. It has the same object as the ordinary attachment, viz., to compel the appearance of the defendant to an action," and, in default, to satisfy the plaintiff's debt by appraisal and execution.

In General

—Judicial sequestration. In Louisiana, a mandate ordering the sheriff in certain cases to take into his possession and to keep a thing of which another person has the possession until after the decision of a suit in order that it may be delivered to him who shall be adjudged to have the property or possession of it. Baldwin v. Black, 119 U. S. 643, 7 S. Ct. 326, 30 L. Ed. 530.

SEQUESTRATOR. One to whom a sequestration is made. One appointed or chosen to perform a sequestration, or execute a writ of sequestration.

SEQUESTRO HABENDO. In English ecclesiastical law. A judicial writ for the discharging a sequestration of the profits of a church benefice, granted by the bishop at the sovereign's command, thereby to compel the parson to appear at the suit of another. Upon his appearance, the parson may have this writ for the release of the sequestration. Reg. Jud. 36.

Sequi debet potentia justitiam non præcedere. 2 Inst. 454. Power should follow justice, not precede it.

SERF. In the feudal polity, the serfs were a class of persons whose social condition was servile, and who were bound to labor and onerous duties at the will of their lords. They differed from slaves only in that they were bound to their native soil, instead of being the absolute property of a master.

SERGEANT. In military law. A non-commissioned officer, of whom there are several in each company of infantry, troop of cavalry, etc. The term is also used in the organization of a municipal police force.

—Sergeant at arms. See Serjeant.

—Sergeant at law. See Serjeant.

—Town sergeant. In several states, an officer having the powers and duties of a chief constable or head of the police department of a town or village.

SERIATIM. Lat. Severally; separately; individually; one by one.

SERIOUS. Important; weighty; momentous, grave, great, as in the phrases "serious bodily harm," "serious personal injury," etc. Lawlor v. People, 74 Ill. 231; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 230, 20 L. Ed. 617; Schas v. Equitable Life Assur. Society of United States, 170 N. C. 420, 87 S. E. 222, 223, Ann. Cas. 1918A, 679; Ward v. State, 70 Tex. Cr. R. 393, 159 S. W. 272, 282; McKee v. State, 93 Tex. Cr. R. 217, 246 S. W. 1035, 1036.

SERIOUS AND WILFUL MISCONDUCT. In Workmen's Compensation Law. The intentional doing of something with the knowledge that it is likely to result in a serious injury, or with a wanton and reckless disregard of its probable consequences. In re Burns, 218 Mass. 8, 105 N. E. 601, 602, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 787; Randolph's Case, 247 Mass. 245, 141 N. E. 865, 866; In re Harbroe, 223 Mass. 139, 111 N. E. 709, L. R. A. 1916D, 933; Diestelhorst v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 32 Cal. App. 771, 164 P. 44, 47; Riley v. Standard Acc. Ins. Co., 227 Mass. 55, 116 N. E. 259, 260; McAdoo v. Industrial Accident Commission, 40 Cal. App. 570, 181 P. 400, 401.

SERIOUS ILLNESS. In life insurance. An illness that permanently or materially impairs, or is likely to permanently or materially impair, the health of the applicant. Not every illness is serious. An illness may be alarming at the time, or thought to be serious by the one afflicted, and yet not be serious in the sense of that term as used in insurance contracts. An illness that is temporary in its duration, and entirely passes away, and is not attended, nor likely to be attended, by a permanent or material impairment of the health or constitution, is not a serious illness. It is not sufficient that the illness was thought serious at the time it occurred, or that it might have resulted in permanently impairing the health. Continental Casualty Co. v. Owen, 38 Okl. 107, 131 P. 1084, 1087; Schas v. Equitable Life Assur. Society of United States, 170 N. C. 420, 87 S. E. 222, 223, Ann. Cas. 1918A, 679; Fishbeck v. New York Life Ins. Co., 179 Wis. 369, 192 N. W. 170, 175; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks (Tex. Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 616, 622.

SERJEANT. The same word etymologically with "sergeant," but the latter spelling is more commonly employed in the designation of military and police officers, (see Sergeant), while the former is preferred when the term is used to describe certain grades of legal practitioners and certain officers of legislative bodies. See infra.

Common Serjeant

A judicial officer attached to the corporation of the city of London, who assists the recorder in disposing of the criminal business at the Old Bailey sessions, or central criminal court. Brown.

Serjeant at Arms

An executive officer appointed by, and attending on, a legislative body, whose principal duties are to execute its warrants, preserve order, and arrest offenders.

Serjeant at Law

A barrister of the common-law courts of high standing, and of much the same rank as a doctor of law is in the ecclesiastical courts. These serjeants seem to have derived their title from the old knights templar, (among whom there existed a peculiar class under the denomination of "frères sergens," or "fratres servientes,") and to have continued as a separate fraternity from a very early period in the history of the legal profession. The barristers who first assumed the old monastic title were those who practiced in the court of common pleas, and until a recent period (the 25th of April, 1834, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 54) the serjeants at law always had the exclusive privilege of practice in that court. Every judge of a common-law court, previous to his elevation to the bench, used to be created a serjeant at law; but since the judicature act this is no longer necessary. Brown.

Serjeant of the Mace

In English law. An officer who attends the lord mayor of London, and the chief magistrates of other corporate towns. Holthouse.

Serjeants' Inn

The inn to which the serjeants at law belonged, near Chancery lane; formerly called "Faryndon Inn."

Serjeantia idem est quod servitium. Co. Litt. 105. Serjeanty is the same as service.

SERJEANTY. A species of tenure by knight service, which was due to the king only, and was distinguished into grand and petit serjeanty. The tenant holding by grand serjeanty was bound, instead of attending the king generally in his wars, to do some honorary service to the king in person, as to carry his banner or sword, or to be his butler, champion, or other officer at his coronation. Petit serjeanty differed from grand serjeanty, in that the service rendered to the king was not of a personal nature, but consisted in rendering him annually some small implement of war, as a bow, sword, arrow, lance, or the like. Cowell; Brown.

Sermo index animi. 5 Coke, 118. Speech is an index of the mind.

Sermo relatus ad personam intelligi debet de conditione personæ. Language which is referred to a person ought to be understood of the condition of the person. 4 Coke, 16.

Sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam, et conditionem personarum. 4 Coke, 14. Language is always to be understood according to its subject-matter, and the condition of the persons.

SERPENT-VENOM REACTION. A test for insanity by means of the breaking up of the red corpuscles of the blood of the suspected person on the injection of the venom of cobras or other serpents; recently employed in judicial proceedings in some European countries and in Japan.

SERRATED. Notched on the edge; cut in notches like the teeth of a saw. This was anciently the method of trimming the top or edge of a deed of indenture. See Indent, v.

SERVAGE, in feudal law, was where a tenant, besides payment of a certain rent, found one or more workmen for his lord's service. Tomlins.

Servanda est consuetudo loci ubi causa agitur. The custom of the place where the action is brought is to be observed. Decouche v. Savelier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190, 219, 8 Am. Dec. 478.

SERVANT. A person in the employ of another and subject to his control as to what work shall be done and the means by which it shall be accomplished. Marsh v. Beraldi; 260 Mass. 225, 157 N. E. 347, 349; Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. McLaughlin, 200 Ala. 204, 75 So. 962, 963; Lawhon v. St. Joseph Veterinary Laboratories (Mo. Sup.) 252 S. W. 44; Industrial Commission of Colorado v. Bonfils, 241 P. 735, 736, 78 Colo. 306; Tucker v. Cooper, 172 Cal. 663, 158 P. 181, 182; Borah v. Zoellner Motor Car Co. (Mo. App.) 257 S. W. 145, 147; Burt v. Davis-Wood Lumber Co., 157 La. 111, 102 So. 87; Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. Murrell, 180 Ky. 52, 201 S. W. 462, L. R. A. 1918D, 357; Wells v. W. G. Duncan Coal Co., 157 Ky. 196, 162 S. W. 821, 822; Western Indemnity Co. v. Pillsbury, 172 Cal. 807, 159 P. 721, 723; Barton v. Studebaker Corporation of America, 46 Cal. App. 707, 189 P. 1025, 1026; Montain v. City of Fargo, 38 N. D. 432, 166 N. W. 416, L. R. A. 1918C, 600, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 826; Jarvis v. Wallace, 139 Va. 171, 123 S. E. 374, 375. The term is often given special meanings by statutes and like other words is greatly influenced by context in wills and other documents. Mozley & Whitley; Flesh v. Lindsay, 115 Mo. 1, 21 S. W. 907, 37 Am. St. Rep. 374; Murray v. Dwight, 161 N. Y. 301, 55 N. E. 901, 48 L. R. A. 673; Ginter v. Shelton, 102 Va. 185, 45 S. E. 892; Powers v. Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital, 109 Fed. 294, 47 C. C. A. 122, 65 L. R. A. 372; Campfield v. Lang (C. C.) 25 F. 131; Frank v. Herold, 63 N. J. Eq. 443, 52 A. 152; Morgan v. Bowman, 22 Mo. 548; Gravatt v. State, 25 Ohio St. 167; Hand v. Cole, 88 Tenn. 400, 12 S. W. 922, 7 L. R. A. 96; In re Thompson's Estate, 213 N. Y. S. 426, 429, 126 Misc. Rep. 91.

SERVE. In Scotch practice. To render a verdict or decision in favor of a person claiming to be an heir; to declare the fact of his heirship judicially. A jury are said to serve a claimant heir, when they find him to be heir, upon the evidence submitted to them. Bell.

As to serving papers, etc., see Service of Process.

SERVI.

In Old European Law

Lat. Slaves; persons over whom their masters had absolute dominion.

In Old English Law

Bondmen; servile tenants. Cowell.

SERVI REDEMPTIONE. Criminal slaves in the time of Henry I. 1 Kemble, Sax. 197, (1849).

SERVICE.

In Contracts

The being employed to serve another; duty or labor to be rendered by one person to another, the former being bound to submit his will to the direction and control of the latter. Cameron v. State Theater Co., 256 Mass. 466, 152 N. E. 880, 881; Ludwig v. Pacific Fire Ins. Co. of New York, 204 N. Y. S. 465, 466, 123 Misc. 189. The act of serving; the labor performed or the duties required. State ex rel. King v. Board of Trustees of Firemen's Pension Fund of Kansas City, 192 Mo. App. 583, 184 S. W. 929, 930.

"Service" and "employment" generally imply that the employer, or person to whom the service is due, both selects and compensates the employee, or person rendering the service. Ledvinka v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 139 Md. 434, 115 A. 596, 597, 19 A. L. R. 167.

The term is used also for employment in one of the offices, departments, or agencies of the government; as in the phrases "civil service," "public service," "military service," etc. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County, 63 Colo. 159, 165 P. 260, 263; Miller v. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n, 138 Ark. 442, 212 S. W. 310, 311, 7 A. L. R. 378.

In Domestic Relations

The "services" of a wife, for the loss of which, occasioned by an injury to the wife, the husband may recover in an action against the tort-feasor, include whatever of aid, assistance, comfort, and society the wife would be expected to render to or bestow upon her husband in the circumstances in which they were situated. Thompson v. Aultman & Taylor Mach. Co., 96 Kan. 259, 150 P. 587, and in all the relations of domestic life, Little Rock Gas & Fuel Co. v. Coppedge, 116 Ark. 334, 172 S. W. 885, 889.

In Feudal Law

Service was the consideration which the feudal tenants were bound to render to the lord in recompense for the lands they held of him. The services, in respect of their quality, were either free or base services, and, in respect of their quantity and the time of exacting them, were either certain or uncertain. 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

In Practice

The exhibition or delivery of a writ, notice, injunction, etc., by an authorized person, to a person who is thereby officially notified of some action or proceeding in which he is concerned, and is thereby advised or warned of some action or step which he is commanded to take or to forbear. See Walker v. State, 52 Ala. 193; U. S. v. McMahon, 164 U. S. 81, 17 Sup. Ct. 28, 41 L. Ed. 357; Sanford v. Dick, 17 Conn. 213; Cross v. Barber, 16 R. I. 266, 15 A. 69; Saffold v. Fellows, 221 N. Y. S. 197, 219 App. Div. 865; Ryals v. Commissioners of Tattnall County, 12 Ga. App. 221, 77 S. E. 8, 9; Foreman v. Hilton Co. (C. C. A.) 280 F. 608, 611; In re Tengwall Co. (C. C. A.) 201 F. 82, 84; Martin v. Hawkins (Tex. Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 991.

In General

—Civil service. See that title.

—Constructive service of process. Any form of service other than actual personal service; notification of an action or of some proceeding therein, given to a person affected by sending it to him in the mails or causing it to be published in a newspaper.

—Personal service. Personal service of a writ or notice is made by delivering it to the person named, in person, Georgia Casualty Co. v. McClure (Tex. Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 644, 647, or handing him a copy and informing him of the nature and terms of the original. Leaving a copy at his place of abode is not personal service. Moyer v. Cook, 12 Wis. 336. But where a person named in a summons is of unsound mind, service upon the guardian of such person may be deemed "personal service." Pattison v. Grand Trust & Savings Co., 195 Ind. 313, 144 N. E. 26, 29. Some courts hold to the view that the mailing of a notice is not personal service, State ex rel. Schuhart, 296 Mo. 156, 246 S. W. 196, 200, but others, interpreting the term as it is found in statutes, take a contrary view, United States ex rel. Proctor Mfg. Co. v. Illinois Surety Co. (C. C. A.) 228 F. 304, 305; Hood v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n (Tex. Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 243, 245 (registered mail); Kramm v. Stockton Electric R. Co., 22 Cal. App. 737, 136 P. 523, 527 (express).

—Salvage service. See Salvage.

—Secular service. Worldly employment or service, as contrasted with spiritual or ecclesiastical.

—Service by publication. Service of a summons or other process upon an absent or non-resident defendant, by publishing the same as an advertisement in a designated newspaper, with such other efforts to give him actual notice as the particular statute may prescribe.

—Service of an heir. An old form of Scotch law, fixing the right and character of an heir to the estate of his ancestor. Bell.

—Service of process. The service of writs, summonses, rules, etc., signifies the delivering to or leaving them with the party to whom or with whom they ought to be delivered or left; and, when they are so delivered, they are then said to have been served. Usually a copy only is served and the original is shown. Brown.

—Special service. In Scotch law. That form of service by which the heir is served to the ancestor who was feudally vested in the lands. Bell.

—Substituted service. This term generally denotes any form of service of process other than personal service, such as service by mail or by publication in a newspaper; but it is sometimes employed to denote service of a writ or notice on some person other than the one directly concerned, for example, his attorney of record, who has authority to represent him or to accept service for him.

SERVICES FONCIERS. Fr. These are, in French law, the easements of English law. Brown.

SERVIDUMBRE. In Spanish law. A servitude. The right and use which one man has in the buildings and estates of another, to use them for the benefit of his own. Las Partidas, 3, 31, 1.

SERVIENS AD CLAVAM. Serjeant at mace. 2 Mod. 58.

SERVIENS AD LEGEM. In old English practice. Serjeant at law.

SERVIENS DOMINI REGIS. In old English law. King's serjeant; a public officer, who acted sometimes as the sheriff's deputy, and had also judicial powers. Bract. fols. 145b, 150b, 330, 358.

SERVIENS NARRATOR. A serjeant-at-law, q. v.

SERVIENT. Serving; subject to a service or servitude. A servient estate is one which is burdened with a servitude. Burdine v. Sewell, 92 Fla. 375, 109 So. 648, 652; Saratoga State Waters Corporation v. Pratt, 227 N. Y. 429, 125 N. E. 834, 838.

SERVIENT TENEMENT. An estate in respect of which a service is owing, as the dominant tenement is that to which the service is due.

SERVIENTIBUS. Certain writs touching servants and their masters violating the statutes made against their abuses. Reg. Orig. 189.

Servile est expilationis crimen; sola innocentia libera. 2 Inst. 573. The crime of theft is slavish; innocence alone is free.

Servitia personalia sequuntur personam. 2 Inst. 374. Personal services follow the person.

SERVITIIS ACQUIETANDIS. A judicial writ for a man distrained for services to one, when he owes and performs them to another, for the acquittal of such services. Reg. Jud. 27.

SERVITIUM. Lat. In feudal and old English law. The duty of obedience and performance which a tenant was bound to render to his lord, by reason of his fee. Spelman.

SERVITIUM FEODALE ET PRÆDIALE. A personal service, but due only by reason of lands which were held in fee. Bract. l. 2, c. 16.

SERVITIUM FORINSECUM. Forinsec, foreign, or extra service; a kind of service that was due to the king, over and above (foris) the service due to the lord.

Servitium, in lege Angliæ, regulariter accipitur pro servitio quod per tenentes dominis suis debetur ratione feodi sui. Co. Litt. 65. Service, by the law of England, means the service which is due from the tenants to the lords, by reason of their fee.

SERVITIUM INTRINSECUM. Intrinsic or ordinary service; the ordinary service due the chief lord, from tenants within the fee. Bract. fols. 36, 36b.

SERVITIUM LIBERUM. A service to be done by feudatory tenants, who were called "liberi homines," and distinguished from vassals, as was their service, for they were not bound to any of the base services of plowing the lord's land, etc., but were to find a man and horse, or go with the lord into the army, or to attend the court, etc. Cowell.

SERVITIUM MILITARE. Knight-service; military service. 2 Bl. Comm. 62.

SERVITIUM REGALE. Royal service, or the rights and prerogatives of manors which belong to the king as lord of the same, and which were generally reckoned to be six, viz.: Power of judicature, in matters of property; power of life and death, in felonies and murder; a right to waifs and strays; assessments; minting of money; and assise of bread, beer, weights, and measures. Cowell.

SERVITIUM SCUTI. Service of the shield; that is, knight-service.

SERVITIUM SOKÆ. Service of the plow; that is, socage.

SERVITOR. A serving-man; particularly applied to students at Oxford, upon the foundation, who are similar to sizars at Cambridge. Wharton.

SERVITORS OF BILLS. In old English practice. Servants or messengers of the marshal of the king's bench, sent out with bills or writs to summon persons to that court. Now more commonly called "tipstaves." Cowell.

SERVITUDE.

The Condition of being Bound to Service

The state of a person who is subjected, voluntarily or otherwise, to another person as his servant. Shilling v. State, 143 Miss. 709, 109 So. 737, 739.

—Involuntary servitude. See Involuntary.

—Penal servitude. In English criminal law, a punishment which consists in keeping the offender in confinement and compelling him to labor.

A Charge or Burden

A charge or burden resting upon one estate for the benefit or advantage of another; a species of incorporeal right derived from the civil law (see Servitus) and closely corresponding to the "easement" of the common law, except that "servitude" rather has relation to the burden or the estate burdened, while "easement" refers to the benefit or advantage or the estate to which it accrues. See Nellis v. Munson, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 576; Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198; Los Angeles Terminal Land Co. v. Muir, 136 Cal. 36, 68 P. 308; Laumier v. Francis, 23 Mo. 184; Ritger v. Parker, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 145, 54 Am. Dec. 744; Kieffer v. Imhoff, 26 Pa. 438.

The term "servitude," in its original and popular sense, signifies the duty of service, or rather the condition of one who is liable to the performance of services. The word, however, in its legal sense, is applied figuratively to things. When the freedom of ownership in land is fettered or restricted, by reason of some person, other than the owner thereof, having some right therein, the land is said to "serve" such person. The restricted condition of the ownership or the right which forms the subject-matter of the restriction is termed a "servitude," and the land so burdened with another's right is termed a "servient tenement," while the land belonging to the person enjoying the right is called the "dominant tenement." The word "servitude" may be said to have both a positive and a negative signification; in the former sense denoting the restrictive right belonging to the entitled party; in the latter, the restrictive duty entailed upon the proprietor or possessor of the servient land. Brown.

Classification

All servitudes which affect lands may be divided into two kinds,—personal and real. Personal servitudes are those attached to the person for whose benefit they are established, and terminate with his life. This kind of servitude is of three sorts,—usufruct, use, and habitation. Real servitudes, which are also called "predial" or "landed" servitudes, are those which the owner of an estate enjoys on a neighboring estate for the benefit of his own estate. They are called "predial" or "landed" servitudes because, being established for the benefit of an estate, they are rather due to the estate than to the owner personally. Civ. Code La. art. 646; Stephenson v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 181 S. W. 568, 572; Frost-Johnson Lumber Co. v. Salling's Heirs, 150 La. 756, 91 So. 207, 245; Tide-Water Pipe Co. v. Bell, 280 Pa. 104, 124 A. 351, 354, 40 A. L. R. 1516.

Real servitudes are divided, in the civil law, into rural and urban servitudes. Rural servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of a landed estate; such, for example, as a right of way over the servient tenement, or of access to a spring, a coal-mine, a sand-pit, or a wood that is upon it. Urban servitudes are such as are established for the benefit of one building over another. (But the buildings need not be in the city, as the name would apparently imply.) They are such as the right of support, or of view, or of drip or sewer, or the like. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 316, et seq.

Servitudes are also classed as positive and negative. A positive servitude is one which obliges the owner of the servient estate to permit or suffer something to be done on his property by another. A negative servitude is one which does not bind the servient proprietor to permit something to be done upon his property by another, but merely restrains him from making a certain use of his property which would impair the easement enjoyed by the dominant tenement. See Rowe v. Nally, 81 Md. 367, 32 A. 198.

SERVITUS. Lat. In the civil law. Slavery; bondage; the state of service. Defined as "an institution of the conventional law of nations, by which one person is subjected to the dominion of another, contrary to natural right." Inst. 1, 3, 2.

Also a service or servitude; an easement.

SERVITUS ACTUS. The servitude or right of walking, riding, or driving over another's ground. Inst. 2, 3, pr. A species of right of way.

SERVITUS ALTIUS NON TOLLENDI. The servitude of not building higher. A right attached to a house, by which its proprietor can prevent his neighbor from building his own house higher. Inst. 2, 3, 4.

SERVITUS AQUÆ DUCENDÆ. The servitude of leading water; the right of leading water to one's own premises through another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr.

SERVITUS AQUÆ EDUCENDÆ. The servitude of leading off water; the right of leading off the water from one's own onto another's ground. Dig. 8, 3, 29.

SERVITUS AQUÆ HAURIENDÆ. The servitude or right of draining water from another's spring or well. Inst. 2, 3, 2.

SERVITUS CLOACÆ MITTENDÆ. The servitude or right of having a sewer through the house or ground of one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 1, 7.

Servitus est constitutio jure gentium qua quis domino alieno contra naturam subjicitur. Slavery is an institution by the law of nations, by which a man is subjected to the dominion of another, contrary to nature. Inst. 1, 3, 2; Co. Litt. 116.

SERVITUS FUMI IMMITTENDI. The servitude or right of leading off smoke or vapor through the chimney or over the ground of one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 5, 8, 5-7.

SERVITUS ITINERIS. The servitude or privilege of walking, riding, and being carried over another's ground. Inst. 2, 3, pr. A species of right of way.

SERVITUS LUMINUM. The servitude of lights; the right of making or having windows or other openings in a wall belonging to another, or in a common wall, in order to obtain light for one's building. Dig. 8, 2, 4.

SERVITUS NE LUMINIBUS OFFICIATUR. A servitude not to hinder lights; the right of having one's lights or windows unobstructed or darkened by a neighbor's building, etc. Inst. 2, 3, 4.

SERVITUS NE PROSPECTUS OFFENDATUR. A servitude not to obstruct one's prospect, i. e., not to intercept the view from one's house. Dig. 8, 2, 15.

SERVITUS ONERIS FERENDI. The servitude of bearing weight; the right to let one's building rest upon the building, wall, or pillars of one's neighbor. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317.

SERVITUS PASCENDI. The servitude of pasturing; the right of pasturing one's cattle on another's ground; otherwise called "jus pascendi." Inst. 2, 3, 2.

SERVITUS PECORIS AD AQUAM ADPULSAM. A right of driving one's cattle on a neighbor's land to water.

SERVITUS PRÆDII RUSTICI. The servitude of a rural or country estate; a rural servitude. Inst. 2, 3, pr., and 3.

SERVITUS PRÆDII URBANI. The servitude of an urban or city estate; an urban servitude. Inst. 2, 3, 1.

SERVITUS PRÆDIORUM. A prædial servitude; a service, burden, or charge upon one estate for the benefit of another. Inst. 2, 3, 3.

SERVITUS PROJICIENDI. The servitude of projecting; the right of building a projection from one's house in the open space belonging to one's neighbor. Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS PROSPECTUS. A right of prospect. This may be either to give one a free prospect over his neighbor's land or to prevent a neighbor from having a prospect over one's own land. Dig. 8, 2, 15; Domat, 1, 1, 6.

SERVITUS STILLICIDIJ. The right of drip; the right of having the water drip from the eaves of one's house upon the house or ground of one's neighbor. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS TIGNI IMMITTENDI. The servitude of letting in a beam; the right of inserting beams in a neighbor's wall. Inst. 2, 3, 1, 4; Dig. 8, 2, 2.

SERVITUS VIÆ. The servitude or right of way; the right of walking, riding, and driving over another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr.

SERVUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. A slave; a bondman. Inst. 1, 3, pr.; Bract. fol. 4b.

SESS. In English law. A tax, rate, or assessment.

SESSIO. Lat. In old English law. A sitting; a session. Sessio parliamenti, the sitting of parliament. Cowell.

SESSION. The sitting of a court, Legislature, council, commission, etc., for the transaction of its proper business. Hence, the period of time, within any one day, during which such body is assembled in form, and engaged in the transaction of business, or, in a more extended sense, the whole space of time from its first assembling to its prorogation or adjournment sine die. Ralls v. Wyand, 40 Okl. 323, 138 P. 158, 162.

Synonyms

Strictly speaking, the word "session," as applied to a court of justice, is not synonymous with the word "term." The "session" of a court is the time during which it actually sits for the transaction of judicial business, and hence terminates each day with the rising of the court. A "term" of court is the period fixed by law, usually embracing many days or weeks, during which it shall be open for the transaction of judicial business and during which it may hold sessions from day to day. But this distinction is not always observed, many authorities using the two words interchangeably. See Lipari v. State, 19 Tex. App. 433; Stefani v. State, 124 Ind. 3, 24 N. E. 254; Mansfield v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 63 Conn. 579, 29 A. 137; Heim v. Brammer, 145 Ind. 605, 44 N. E. 638; Cresap v. Cresap, 54 W. Va. 581, 46 S. E. 582; U. S. v. Dietrich (C. C.) 126 F. 660; Wood Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 196, 244 S. W. 429, 431; Application of Moriarity, 44 Nev. 164, 191 P. 360, 361; Lewis County Pub. Co. v. Lewis County Court, 75 W. Va. 305, 83 S. E. 993, 995; Curry v. McCaffery, 47 Mont. 191, 131 P. 673, 675; Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; State v. City of Victoria, 97 Kan. 638, 156 P. 705, 708; Nation v. Savelly, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35.

In General

—Court of session. The supreme civil court of Scotland, instituted A. D. 1532, consisting of thirteen (formerly fifteen) judges, viz., the lord president, the lord justice clerk, and eleven ordinary lords.

—General sessions. A court of record, in England, held by two or more justices of the peace, for the execution of the authority given them by the commission of the peace and certain statutes. General sessions held at certain times in the four quarters of the year pursuant to St. 2 Hen. V. are properly called "quarter sessions," (q. v.) but intermediate general sessions may also be held. Sweet.

—Great session of Wales. A court which was abolished by St. 1 Wm. IV. c. 70. The proceedings now issue out of the courts at Westminster, and two of the judges of the superior courts hold the circuits in Wales and Cheshire, as in other English counties. Wharton.

—Joint session. In parliamentary practice, a meeting together and commingling of the two houses of a legislative body, sitting and acting together as one body, instead of separately in their respective houses. Snow v. Hudson, 56 Kan. 378, 43 P. 262.

—Petty sessions. In English law. A special or petty session is sometimes kept in corporations and counties at large by a few justices, for dispatching smaller business in the neighborhood between the times of the general sessions; as for licensing alehouses, passing the accounts of the parish officers, etc. Brown.

—Quarter sessions. See that title.

—Regular session. An ordinary, general, or stated session, (as of a legislative body,) as distinguished from a special or extra session.

—Session laws. The name commonly given to the body of laws enacted by a state Legislature at one of its annual or biennial sessions. So called to distinguish them from the "compiled laws" or "revised statutes" of the state.

—Session of the peace, in English law, is a sitting of justices of the peace for the exercise of their powers. There are four kinds,—petty, special, quarter, and general sessions.

—Sessional orders. Certain resolutions which are agreed to by both houses at the commencement of every session of the English parliament, and have relation to the business and convenience thereof; but they are not intended to continue in force beyond the session in which they are adopted. They are principally of use as directing the order of business. Brown.

—Sessions. A sitting of justices in court upon their commission, or by virtue of their appointment, and most commonly for the trial of criminal cases. The title of several courts in England and the United States, chiefly those of criminal jurisdiction. Burrill.

—Special sessions. In English law. A meeting of two or more justices of the peace held for a special purpose, (such as the licensing of alehouses,) either as required by statute or when specially convoked, which can only be convened after notice to all the other magistrates of the division, to give them an opportunity of attending. Stone, J. Pr. 52, 55.

SET. This word appears to be nearly synonymous with "lease." A lease of mines is frequently termed a "mining set." Brown.

SET ASIDE. To set aside a judgment, decree, award, or any proceedings is to cancel, annul, or revoke them at the instance of a party unjustly or irregularly affected by them. State v. Primm, 61 Mo. 171; Brandt v. Brandt, 40 Or. 477, 67 P. 508.

SET DOWN. To set down a cause for trial or hearing at a given term is to enter its title in the calendar, list, or docket of causes which are to be brought on at that term.

SET OF EXCHANGE. In mercantile law. Foreign bills are usually drawn in duplicate or triplicate, the several parts being called respectively "first of exchange," "second of exchange," etc., and these parts together constitute a "set of exchange." Any one of them being paid, the others become void.

SET-OFF. A counter-claim or cross-demand; a claim or demand which the defendant in an action sets off against the claim of the plaintiff, as being his due, whereby he may extinguish the plaintiff's demand, either in whole or in part, according to the amount of the set-off. See In re Globe Ins. Co., 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 627; Sherman v. Hale, 76 Iowa, 383, 41 N. W. 48; Naylor v. Smith, 63 N. J. Law, 596, 44 A. 649; Hurdle v. Haner, 50 N. C. 360; Wills v. Browning, 96 Ind. 149; Imperial Elevator Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 163 Minn. 481, 204 N. W. 531, 532, 42 A. L. R. 559; Southern Telephone Co. v. Banks, 108 Ark. 283, 158 S. W. 158, 160; First Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 41 Okl. 88, 137 P. 668, 670; Monongahela Tie & Lumber Co. v. Flannigan, 77 W. Va. 162, 87 S. E. 161, 162; King v. Davis, 190 N. C. 737, 130 S. E. 707, 710; Drovers' State Bank v. Elliott, 97 Kan. 64, 154 P. 255, 256; Ruby v. Baker, 106 Kan. 855, 190 P. 6, 7, 10 A. L. R. 1247; Mack v. Hugger Bros. Const. Co., 153 Tenn. 260, 283 S. W. 448, 449, 46 A. L. R. 389; Merry Realty Co. v. Shamokin & Hollis Real Estate Co., 186 App. Div. 538, 174 N. Y. S. 627, 630; Luther v. Mathis, 211 Ill. App. 596, 601; Emerson-Brantingham Co. v. Brennan, 35 N. D. 94, 159 N. W. 710, 713; Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. of America v. National Electric Signaling Co. (D. C.) 206 F. 295, 299; Terry Steam Turbine Co. v. B. F. Sturtevant Co. (D. C.) 204 F. 103, 104; Dameron v. Carpenter, 190 N. C. 595, 130 S. E. 328, 329; Dexter-Portland Cement Co. v. Acme Supply Co., 147 Va. 758, 133 S. E. 788, 790; Stern v. Sunset Road Oil Co., 47 Cal. App. 334, 190 P. 651, 655; Smith v. Hurt (Mo. App.) 203 S. W. 625; National Bank of Suffolk v. Winslow, 193 N. C. 470, 137 S. E. 320, 322; Wollan v. McKay, 24 Idaho, 691, 135 P. 832, 837.

Set-off is a defense which goes not to the justice of the plaintiff's demand, but sets up a demand against the plaintiff to counter-balance his in whole or in part. Code Ga. 1882, § 2899 (Civ. Code 1910, § 4339).

For the distinction between set-off and recoupment, see Recoupment.

"Set-off" differs from a "lien," inasmuch as the former belongs exclusively to the remedy, and is merely a right to insist, if the party think proper to do so, when sued by his creditor on a counter-demand, which can only be enforced through the medium of judicial proceedings; while the latter is, in effect, a substitute for a suit. 2 Op. Attys. Gen. 677.

SET OUT. In pleading. To recite or narrate facts or circumstances; to allege or aver; to describe or to incorporate; as, to set out a deed or contract. First Nat. Bank v. Engelbercht, 58 Neb. 639, 79 N. W. 556; U. S. v. Watkins, 28 Fed. Cas. 436; Powder Valley State Bank v. Hudelson, 74 Or. 191, 144 P. 494, 497.

SET UP. To bring forward or allege, as something relied upon or deemed sufficient; to propose or interpose, by way of defense, explanation, or justification; as, to set up the statute of limitations, i. e., offer and rely upon it as a defense to a claim.

SETI. As used in mining laws, lease. Brown.

SETTER. In Scotch law. The granter of a tack or lease. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

SETTLE. To adjust, ascertain, or liquidate; to pay. Parties are said to settle an account when they go over its items and ascertain and agree upon the balance due from one to the other. And, when the party indebted pays such balance, he is also said to settle it. Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 60, 15 P. 371; Jackson v. Ely, 57 Ohio St. 450, 49 N. E. 792; People v. Green, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 201; Lynch v. Nugent, 80 Iowa, 422, 46 N. W. 61; Jeff Davis County v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 291, 295; Gilna v. Barker, 78 Mont. 357, 254 P. 174, 177; National Surety Co. v. Johnson, 115 Or. 624, 239 P. 538, 540; M. Zimmerman Co. v. Goldberg, 69 Pa. Super. Ct. 254, 255; State Bank of Stratford v. Young, 159 Iowa, 375, 140 N. W. 376, 380.

The meaning of the word "settle" depends on the context in which it is used and upon the subject-matter and the circumstances surrounding its use. Williams v. Marine Bank of Norfolk, 132 Va. 379, 111 S. E. 94, 95; Setzer v. Moore, 202 Cal. 333, 260 P. 550, 552.

To settle property is to limit it, or the income of it, to several persons in succession, so that the person for the time being in the possession or enjoyment of it has no power to deprive the others of their right of future enjoyment. Sweet.

To settle a document is to make it right in form and in substance. Documents of difficulty or complexity, such as mining leases, settlements by will or deed, partnership agreements, etc., are generally settled by counsel. Id.

The term "settle" is also applied to paupers.

—Settle up. A term, colloquial rather than legal, which is applied to the final collection, adjustment, and distribution of the estate of a decedent, a bankrupt, or an insolvent corporation. It includes the processes of collecting the property, paying debts and charges, and turning over the balance to those entitled to receive it.

In an instrument executed in compliance with the statute of wills, appointing an executor to "settle up" all property, both personal and real, and making the granddaughters of testatrix each equal heirs with her own children, the words "settle up" are used in the sense of "divide up." Moon v. Stewart, 87 Ohio St. 349, 101 N. E. 344, 347, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 48, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 104.

—Settled estate. See Estate.

—Settling a bill of exceptions. When the bill of exceptions prepared for an appeal is not accepted as correct by the respondent, it is settled (i. e., adjusted and finally made conformable to the truth) by being taken before the judge who presided at the trial, and by him put into a form agreeing with his minutes and his recollection. See Railroad Co. v. Cone, 37 Kan. 567, 15 P. 499; In re Prout's Estate (Sur.) 11 N. Y. Supp. 160; State v. Ayers, 52 Mont. 62, 155 P. 276, 277; State v. Wilson, 43 Okl. 112, 141 P. 426, 428; Schaefer v. Whitson, 31 N. M. 96, 241 P. 31, 34; Bryant v. Mundorf, 189 Iowa, 882, 179 N. W. 125, 127; Green v. Commonwealth, 181 Ky. 253, 204 S. W. 82, 83.

—Setting day. The day on which transactions for the "account" are made up on the English stock-exchange. In consols they are monthly; in other investments, twice in the month.

—Settling interrogatories. The determination by the court of objections to interrogatories and cross-interrogatories prepared to be used in taking a deposition.

—Settling issues. In English practice. Arranging or determining the form of the issues in a cause. "Where, in any action, it appears to the judge that the statement of claim or defense or reply does not sufficiently disclose the issues of fact between the parties, he may direct the parties to prepare issues; and such issues shall, if the parties differ, be settled by the judge." Judicature Act 1875, schedule, art. 19.

SETTLEMENT.

In Conveyancing

A disposition of property by deed, usually through the medium of a trustee, by which its enjoyment is limited to several persons in succession, as a wife, children, or other relatives.

In Contracts

Adjustment or liquidation of mutual accounts; the act by which parties who have been dealing together arrange their accounts and strike a balance. Also full and final payment or discharge of an account. Wolf Hotel Co. v. Parker, 87 Ind. App. 333, 158 N. E. 294, 298; First Nat. Bank v. Pray, 86 Cal. App. 484, 260 P. 933, 937; Northwest Hay Ass'n v. Hanson, 135 Wash. 47, 236 P. 561, 562; Roniger v. McIntosh, 91 Kan. 368, 137 P. 792; Taylor v. Freedman, 103 N. J. Law, 403, 135 A. 867; Bauer v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 51 N. D. 1, 198 N. W. 546, 550; Michael v. Donohoe, 86 W. Va. 34, 102 S. E. 803, 805.

In Poor Laws

The term signifies a right acquired by a person, by continued residence for a given length of time in a town or district, to claim aid or relief under the poor-laws in case of his becoming a pauper. See Westfield v. Coventry, 71 Vt. 175, 44 A. 66; Jefferson v. Washington, 19 Me. 300; Jackson County v. Hillsdale County, 124 Mich. 17, 83 N. W. 408; In re Leslie, 166 Minn. 180, 207 N. W. 323, 324; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Petrowsky (C. C. A.) 250 F. 554, 560, certiorari denied 247 U. S. 508, 38 S. Ct. 427, 62 L. Ed. 1241.

In Probate Practice

The settlement of an estate consists in its administration by the executor or administrator carried so far that all debts and legacies have been paid and the individual shares of distributees in the corpus of the estate, or the residuary portion, as the case may be, definitely ascertained and determined, and accounts filed and passed, so that nothing remains but to make final distribution. See Calkins v. Smith, 41 Mich. 409, 1 N. W. 1048; Forbes v. Harrington, 171 Mass. 386, 50 N. E. 641; Appeal of Mathews, 72 Conn. 555, 45 A. 170; Pearce v. Pearce, 199 Ala. 491, 74 So. 952, 957.

In Public Transactions and Accounts

Administrative determination of the amount due. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., 240 U. S. 214, 36 S. Ct. 321, 323, 60 L. Ed. 609; U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. U. S., to Use of Smoot, 298 F. 365, 367, 54 App. D. C. 342; American Bonding Co. of Baltimore v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 233 F. 364, 367; Utah Const. Co. v. St. Louis Construction & Equipment Co. (D. C.) 254 F. 321, 330; U. S. v. Cash (C. C. A.) 293 F. 584, 585. Final settlement has the same meaning. United States v. Robinson (C. C. A.) 214 F. 38, 39; Illinois Surety Co. v. United States, 240 U. S. 214, 36 S. Ct. 321, 60 L. Ed. 609; American Bonding Co. of Baltimore v. United States (C. C. A.) 233 F. 364, 365; Arnold v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 280 F. 333, 341; Utah Const. Co. v. St. Louis Construction & Equipment Co. (D. C.) 254 F. 321, 330; United States v. Bailey (D. C.) 207 F. 782, 783; U. S. v. Arnold (D. C.) 268 F. 130, 136; Mandel v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 4 F.(2d) 629, 630; U. S. v. Columbus Circle Const. Corporation (D. C.) 284 F. 155, 156; United States v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (D. C.) 215 F. 241; Southern Surety Co. v. Western Pipe & Steel Co. of California (C. C. A.) 16 F.(2d) 456, 457; Antrim Lumber Co. v. Hannan (C. C. A.) 18 F.(2d) 548, 549; U. S. to Use of Stallings v. Starr (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 803, 806; Illinois Surety Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 215 F. 334, 336; United States v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co. (C. C. A.) 254 F. 958, 959; U. S. v. George F. Pawling & Co. (C. C. A.) 297 F. 65, 68.

In General

—Act of settlement. The statute 12 & 13 Wm. III. c. 2, by which the crown of England was limited to the house of Hanover, and some new provisions were added at the same time for the better securing the religion, laws, and liberties.

—Deed of settlement. A deed made for the purpose of settling property, i. e., arranging the mode and extent of the enjoyment thereof. The party who settles property is called the "settlor;" and usually his wife and children or his creditors or his near relations are the beneficiaries taking interests under the settlement. Brown.

—Equity of settlement. The equitable right of a wife, when her husband sues in equity for the reduction of her equitable estate to his own possession, to have the whole or a portion of such estate settled upon herself and her children. Also a similar right now recognized by the equity courts as directly to be asserted against the husband. Also called the "wife's equity."

—Final settlement. This term, as applied to the administration of an estate, is usually understood to have reference to the order of court approving the account which closes the business of the estate, and which finally discharges the executor or administrator from the duties of his trust. Roberts v. Spencer, 112 Ind. 85, 13 N. E. 129; Sims v. Waters, 65 Ala. 445.

—Strict settlement. This phrase was formerly used to denote a settlement whereby land was limited to a parent for life, and after his death to his first and other sons or children in tail, with trustees interposed to preserve contingent remainders. 1 Steph. Comm. 332, 333. In England, a settlement to the use of the settlor for life, and after his death to the use that his widow may receive a rent charge (or jointure), subject to these life interests, to trustees for a long term of years in trust to raise by mortgage on the term a sum of money for the portions for his younger children, and subject thereto to the use of his first and other sons successively and the heirs male of their bodies, with the ultimate remainder in default of issue to the settlor in fee simple.

—Voluntary settlement. A settlement of property upon a wife or other beneficiary, made gratuitously or without valuable consideration.

SETTLER. A person who, for the purpose of acquiring a pre-emption right, has gone upon the land in question, and is actually resident there. See Hume v. Gracy, 86 Tex. 671, 27 S. W. 584; Davis v. Young, 2 Dana (Ky.) 299; McIntyre v. Sherwood, 82 Cal. 139, 22 P. 937.

SETTLOR. The grantor or donor in a deed of settlement.

SEVER. To separate. When two joint defendants separate in the action, each pleading separately his own plea and relying upon a separate defense, they are said to sever.

SEVERABLE. Admitting of severance or separation, capable of being divided; separable; capable of being severed from other things to which it was joined, and yet maintaining a complete and independent existence. Huntington & Finke Co. v. Lake Erie Lumber & Supply Co., 109 Ohio St. 488, 143 N. E. 132, 135; Regent Waist Co. v. O. J. Morrison Department Store Co., 88 W. Va. 303, 106 S. E. 712, 714; Kahn v. Orenstein, 12 Del. Ch. 344, 114 A. 165, 167; State ex rel. Dolman v. Dickey, 288 Mo. 92, 231 S. W. 582, 585; Lawson v. Muse, 180 Mo. App. 35, 165 S. W. 396, 397.

SEVERAL. Separate; individual; independent; severable. In this sense the word is distinguished from "joint." Also exclusive; individual; appropriated. In this sense it is opposed to "common." Lawson v. Muse, 180 Mo. App. 35, 165 S. W. 396, 397; Dickson v. Yates, 194 Iowa, 910, 188 N. W. 948, 950, 27 A. L. R. 533; City of Momence v. Kirby, 315 Ill. 138, 146 N. E. 142; Townsend v. Roof, 210 Mo. App. 293, 237 S. W. 189, 190; L. L. Satler Lumber Co. v. Exler, 239 Pa. 135, 86 A. 793, 798.

SEVERAL ACTIONS. Where a separate and distinct action is brought against each of two or more persons who are all liable to the plaintiff in respect to the same subject-matter, the actions are said to be "several." If all the persons are joined as defendants in one and the same action, it is called a "joint" action.

SEVERAL INHERITANCE. An inheritance conveyed so as to descend to two persons severally, by moieties, etc.

SEVERAL ISSUES. This occurs where there is more than one issue involved in a case. 3 Steph. Comm. 560.

As to several "Counts," "Covenant," "Demise," "Fishery," "Tail," and "Tenancy," see those titles.

SEVERALLY. Distinctly, separately, apart from others. State Nat. Bk. v. Reilly, 124 Ill. 471, 14 N. E. 657. When applied to a number of persons the expression severally liable usually implies that each one is liable alone. Pruyn v. Black, 21 N. Y. 301.

SEVERALTY. A state of separation. An estate in severalty is one that is held by a person in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him, in point of interest, during his estate therein. 2 Bl. Comm. 179.

The term "severalty" is especially applied, in England, to the case of adjoining meadows undivided from each other, but belonging, either permanently or in what are called "shifting severalties," to separate owners, and held in severalty until the crops have been carried, when the whole is thrown open as pasture for the cattle of all the owners, and in some cases for the cattle of other persons as well; each owner is called a "severalty owner," and his rights of pasture are called "severalty rights," as opposed to the rights of persons not owners. Cooke, Incl. Acts, 47, 163*n*.

SEVERALTY, ESTATE IN. An estate which is held by the tenant in his own right only, without any other being joined or connected with him in point of interest during the continuance of his estate. 2 Bl. Com. 179.

SEVERANCE.

In Pleading

Separation; division. The separation by defendants in their pleas; the adoption, by several defendants, of separate pleas, instead of joining in the same plea. Steph. Pl. 257.

In Estates

The destruction of any one of the unities of a joint tenancy. It is so called because the estate is no longer a joint tenancy, but is severed.

The word "severance" is also used to signify the cutting of the crops, such as corn, grass, etc., or the separating of anything from the realty. Brown.

SEVERE. Within the meaning of a life insurance policy, severe illness means such an illness as has, or ordinarily does have, a permanent, detrimental effect upon the physical system. Boos v. Life Ins. Co., 64 N. Y. 236; Pickens v. Security Ben. Ass'n, 117 Kan. 475, 231 P. 1016, 1019, 40 A. L. R. 654.

SEWAGE SYSTEM. A system of sewers for the drainage of foul waters of a community. Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 119 Or. 1, 247 P. 319, 321.

SEWARD, or SEAWARD. One who guards the sea-coast; custos maris.

SEWER. A fresh-water trench or little river, encompassed with banks on both sides, to drain off surplus water into the sea. Cowell. Properly, a trench artificially made for the purpose of carrying water into the sea, (or a river or pond.) Crabb, Real Prop. § 113; Bennett v. New Bedford, 110 Mass. 433.

In its modern and more usual sense, an artificial (usually under-ground or covered) channel used for the drainage of two or more separate buildings. See Valparaiso v. Parker, 148 Ind. 379, 47 N. E. 330; Fuchs v. St. Louis, 167 Mo. 620, 67 S. W. 610, 57 L. R. A. 136; State Board of Health v. Jersey City, 55 N. J. Eq. 116, 35 A. 835; Aldrich v. Paine, 106 Iowa, 461, 76 N. W. 812.

In this sense the term is opposed to "drain," which is a channel used for carrying off the drainage of one building or set of buildings in one curtilage. Sweet. See, also, [1894] 1 Q. B. 233.

"Sewers" differ from "drains" only in that the former are in cities, and generally covered over, while the latter are in rural communities, and open. Pioneer Real Estate Co. v. City of Portland, 247 P. 319, 321, 119 Or. 1. See, also, Barton v. Drainage Dist. No. 30, 294 S. W. 418, 419, 174 Ark. 173.

Commissioners of Sewers

In English law. The court of commissioners of sewers is a temporary tribunal erected by virtue of a commission under the great seal. Its jurisdiction is to overlook the repairs of sea-banks and sea-walls, and the cleansing of public rivers, streams, ditches, and other conduits whereby any waters are carried off, and is confined to such county or particular district as the commission expressly names. Brown.

Public Sewer

One which serves the public and connects with and receives the discharges from district sewers. Rush v. Grandy, 66 Mont. 222, 213 P. 242, 243. See, also, Williams v. Hybsk-mann (Mo. App.) 247 S. W. 203, 206; Schwabe v. Moore, 187 Mo. App. 74, 172 S. W. 1157, 1159.

Sewer Outlet

As used in a statute, that portion of a sewer which serves no other purpose than to connect the sewer system with the point of discharge. Mogaard v. Robinson, 48 N. D. 859, 187 N. W. 142, 143.

Trunk Sewer

One which bears the same relation to a system of sewers that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches. Rush v. Grandy, 66 Mont. 222, 213 P. 242, 243.

SEX. The sum of the peculiarities of structure and function that distinguish a male from a female organism; the character of being male or female. Webster, Dict.

SEXAGESIMA SUNDAY. In ecclesiastical law. The second Sunday before Lent, being about the sixtieth day before Easter.

SEXHINDENI. In Saxon law. The middle thanes, valued at 600s.

SEXTANS. Lat. In Roman law. A subdivision of the as, containing two unciæ; the proportion of two-twelfths, or one-sixth. 2 Bl. Comm. 462, note.

SEXTARY. In old records. An ancient measure of liquids, and of dry commodities; a quarter or seam. Spelman.

SEXTERY LANDS. Lands given to a church or religious house for maintenance of a sexton or sacristan. Cowell.

SEXTON. An attendant or care-taker in a church building, usually with care of the attached burying ground.

SEXTUS DECRETALIUM. Lat. The sixth (book) of the decretals; the sext, or sixth decretal. So called because appended, in the body of the canon law, to the five books of the decretals of Gregory IX.; it consists of a collection of supplementary decretals, and was published A. D. 1298. Butl. Hor. Jur. 172; 1 Bl. Comm. 82.

SEXUAL DISEASES. Synonymous with venereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151 P. 710, 711.

SEXUAL INSTINCT, INVERSION AND PERVERSION OF. See Insanity; Pederasty; Sodomy.

SEXUAL INTERCOURSE. Carnal copulation of male and female, implying actual penetration of the organs of the latter. State v. Frazier, 54 Kan. 719, 39 P. 822; People v. Marino, 33 Cal. App. 448, 165 P. 564, 565; Williams v. State, 92 Fla. 125, 109 So. 305, 306.

SHACK. In English law. The straying and escaping of cattle out of the lands of their owners into other uninclosed land; an intercommoning of cattle. 2 H. Bl. 416.

It sometimes happens that a number of adjacent fields, though held in severalty, i. e., by separate owners, and cultivated separately, are, after the crop on each parcel has been carried in, thrown open as pasture to the cattle of all the owners. "Arable lands cultivated on this plan are called 'shack fields,' and the right of each owner of a part to feed cattle over the whole during the autumn and winter is known in law as 'common of shack,' a right which is distinct in its nature from common because of vicinage, though sometimes said to be nearly identical with it." Elton, Commons, 30; Sweet.

SHAFT. An opening in the ground or in structures. Franklin v. Webber, 93 Or. 151, 182 P. 819, 820.

SHALL. As used in statutes, contracts, or the like, this word is generally imperative or mandatory. State v. Meeker, 182 Ind. 240, 105 N. E. 906, 907; McDunn v. Roundy, 191 Iowa, 976, 181 N. W. 453, 454; Bay State St. Ry. Co. v. City of Woburn, 232 Mass. 201, 122 N.

E. 268; Ladies of the Maccabees v. Hand, 235 Mich. 459, 209 N. W. 581, 583; State ex rel. Stevens v. Wurdeman, 295 Mo. 566, 246 S. W. 189, 194; State v. Dilworth, 80 Mont. 102, 258 P. 246, 248; Eddy v. State Board of Embalmers, 40 Nev. 329, 163 P. 245, 246; People v. Allied Architects' Ass'n of Los Angeles, 201 Cal. 428, 257 P. 511, 514; People v. Gowasky, 244 N. Y. 451, 155 N. E. 737, 742, 58 A. L. R. 9; Davis v. Board of Education of Beaufort County, 186 N. C. 227, 119 S. E. 372, 374; State v. Klingler, 114 Ohio St. 212, 151 N. E. 47, 48; Ash v. Chas. F. Noble Oil & Gas Co., 96 Okl. 211, 223 P. 175, 179; Noecker v. Woods, 259 Pa. 160, 102 A. 507, 509; State v. Reeves, 112 S. C. 383, 99 S. E. 841, 842; Johnson v. Baker, 149 Tenn. 613, 259 S. W. 909, 910; Mitchell v. Hancock (Tex. Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694, 700; McLaren v. State, 82 Tex. Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811, 812; U. S. ex rel. Arcara v. Flynn (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 899, 900; U. S. v. Two Hundred and Sixty-Seven Twenty-Dollar Gold Pieces (D. C.) 255 F. 217, 218; Baer v. Gore, 79 W. Va. 50, 90 S. E. 530, 531, L. R. A. 1917B, 723. But it may be construed as merely permissive or directory, (as equivalent to "may,") to carry out the legislative intention and in cases where no right or benefit to any one depends on its being taken in the imperative sense, and where no public or private right is impaired by its interpretation in the other sense. See Wheeler v. Chicago, 24 Ill. 105, 76 Am. Dec. 736; People v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., 184 Ill. 597, 56 N. E. 953; Madison v. Daley (C. C.) 58 F. 753; Cake v. City of Los Angeles, 164 Cal. 705, 130 P. 723, 725; City of Colorado Springs v. Street, 81 Colo. 181, 254 P. 440, 441; Civil Township of Hudson v. Smith, 182 Ind. 260, 106 N. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. (Mo. Sup.) 253 S. W. 737, 739; Reed v. Wellman, 110 Neb. 166, 193 N. W. 261, 262; Sheldon v. Sheldon, 100 N. J. Eq. 24, 134 A. 904, 905; Munro v. State, 223 N. Y. 208, 119 N. E. 444, 445; State v. Barnell, 109 Ohio St. 246, 142 N. E. 611, 614; Commonwealth v. Powell, 249 Pa. 144, 94 A. 746, 747; Walker v. Hirsch Cooperage Co. (Tex. Com. App.) 236 S. W. 710, 712; Spaulding & Kimball v. Aetna Chemical Co., 98 Vt. 169, 126 A. 588, 589. Also, as against the government, it is to be construed as "may," unless a contrary intention is manifest. Cairo & Fulton R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 170, 24 L. Ed. 423.

Although the word usually denotes an obligation, it also implies an element of futurity. State v. Griffin, 85 N. J. Law, 613, 90 A. 259, 260; Cunningham v. Long, 125 Me. 494, 135 A. 198, 200; Hemsley v. McKim, 119 Md. 431, 87 A. 506, 511; Albright v. Van Voorhis (N. J. Ch.) 104 A. 27, 29.

SHAM. False;—said of a pleading. Germofert Mfg. Co. v. Castles, 97 S. C. 389, 81 S. E. 665, 666; Segerstrom v. Holland Piano Mfg. Co., 160 Minn. 95, 199 N. W. 897, 898. A sham pleading is therefore one good in form, but false in fact. Bollen v. Woodhams, 68 Colo. 322, 190 P. 427.

For sham "Answer," "Plea," and "Reply," see those titles.

SHANGHAI. To drug, intoxicate, or render insensible and ship as a sailor,—usually to secure advance money or a premium. Webster, Dict.

Under federal law, procuring or inducing, or attempting to do so, by force, or threats, or by representations which one knows or believes to be untrue, or while the person is intoxicated or under the influence of any drug, to go on board of any vessel, or agree to do so, to perform service or labor thereon, such vessel being engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, on the high seas or any navigable water of the United States, or knowingly to detain on board such vessel such person, so procured or induced, or knowingly aiding or abetting such things, is an offense. See 18 USCA § 144.

SHARE, v. To partake; enjoy with others; have a portion of. Cook v. Worthington, 116 Ark. 328, 173 S. W. 395, 396; People v. Sigers, 217 Mich. 578, 187 N. W. 373, 374.

SHARE, n. A portion of anything. A whole may be divided into shares which may or may not be equal. Hellings v. Wright, 29 Cal. App. 649, 156 P. 365, 367.

In the law of corporations and joint-stock companies, a definite portion of the capital of a company.

A share of corporate stock is the right which the shareholder has to participate according to the number of shares in the surplus profits of the corporation on a division and in the assets or capital stock remaining after payment of its debts on dissolution, and is created by the joint action of the corporation and the shareholder, and imports a contribution to the capital stock by the shareholder and acceptance thereof by the corporation. United States Radiator Corporation v. State, 208 N. Y. 144, 101 N. E. 783, 785, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 585. See, also, Hook v. Hoffman, 16 Ariz. 540, 147 P. 722, 725; Hayes v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 317 Mo. 1028, 298 S. W. 91, 97, 56 A. L. R. 1276; In re Sutherland (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 667, 670; Turner v. Cattleman's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Tex. Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831, 832.

—Share and share alike. In equal shares or proportions. Jenne v. Jenne, 271 Ill. 526, 111 N. E. 540, 543; Rogers v. Burress, 199 Ky. 766, 251 S. W. 980, 981. The words commonly indicate per capita division; Burton v. Cahill, 192 N. C. 505, 135 S. E. 332, 335; and they may be applied to a division between classes as well as to a division among individuals; Laisure v. Richards, 56 Ind. App. 301, 103 N. E. 679, 682; Tucker v. Nugent, 117 Me. 10, 102 A. 307, 310.

—Share-certificate. A share-certificate is an instrument under the seal of the company, certifying that the person therein named is entitled to a certain number of shares; it is prima facie evidence of his title thereto. Lindl. Partn. 150, 1187. See, also, Frank Gilbert Paper Co. v. Prankard, 204 App. Div. 83, 198 N. Y. S. 25, 28; Furr v. Chapman (Tex. Com. App.) 286 S. W. 171, 172.

SHARE-WARRANT. A share-warrant to bearer is a warrant or certificate under the seal of the company, stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to a certain number or amount of fully paid up shares or stock. Coupons for payment of dividends may be annexed to it. Delivery of the share-warrant operates as a transfer of the shares or stock. Sweet.

SHAREHOLDER. Strictly, a person who has agreed to become a member of a corporation or company, and with respect to whom all the required formalities have been gone through; e. g., signing of deed of settlement, registration, or the like. A shareholder by estoppel is a person who has acted and been treated as a shareholder, and consequently has the same liabilities as if he were an ordinary shareholder. Lindl. Partn. 130. See Beal v. Essex Sav. Bank, 67 Fed. 816, 15 C. C. A. 128; State v. Mitchell, 104 Tenn. 336, 58 S. W. 365; McCandless v. Haskins (D. C.) 20 F.(2d) 688, 691.

SHARP. A "sharp" clause in a mortgage or other security (or the whole instrument described as "sharp") is one which empowers the creditor to take prompt and summary action upon default in payment or breach of other conditions.

SHARPING CORN. A customary gift of corn, which, at every Christmas, the farmers in some parts of England give to their smith for sharpening their plow-irons, harrow-tines, etc. Blount.

SHASTER. In Hindu law. The instrument of government or instruction; any book of instructions, particularly containing Divine ordinances. Wharton.

SHAVE. Sometimes used to denote the act of obtaining the property of another by oppression and extortion. Also used in an innocent sense to denote the buying of existing notes and other securities for money, at a discount. Hence to charge a man with using money for shaving is not libelous per se. See Stone v. Cooper, 2 Denio (N. Y.) 301; Trentham v. Moore, 111 Tenn. 346, 76 S. W. 904; Bronson v. Wiman, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 428.

SHAW. In old English law. A wood. Co. Litt. 4b.

SHAWATORES. Soldiers. Cowell.

SHEADING. A riding, tithing, or division in the Isle of Man, where the whole island is divided into six sheadings, in each of which there is a coroner or chief constable appointed by a delivery of a rod at the Tiewald court or annual convention. King, Isle of Man, 7.

SHEEP. A term which ordinarily includes rams, ewes, and lambs. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Bell (Tex. Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 1097, 1101. But in the Stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 29, § 25, making it a felony to steal any "ram, ewe, sheep, or lamb," the word "sheep" should be used in indictments only when it is intended to refer to a wether more than a year old. Rex v. Birket, 4 Car. & P. 216.

SHEEP-HEAVES. Small plots of pasture, in England, often in the middle of the waste of a manor, of which the soil may or may not be in the lord, but the pasture is private property, and leased or sold as such. They principally occur in the northern counties, (Cooke, Incl. Acts, 44,) and seem to be corporeal hereditaments, (Elton, Commons, 35,) although they are sometimes classed with rights of common, but erroneously, the right being an exclusive right of pasture. Sweet.

SHEEP-SILVER. A service turned into money, which was paid in respect that anciently the tenants used to wash the lord's sheep. Wharton.

SHEEP-SKIN. A deed; so called from the parchment it was written on.

SHEEP-WALK. A right of sheep-walk is the same thing as a fold-course, (q. v.) Elton, Commons, 44.

SHEETING. In a technical sense, a form of pile driving, being the lining of timber to a caisson or cofferdam formed of sheet piles or piles with flanking between them. Mazzarisi v. Ward & Tully, 156 N. Y. S. 964, 170 App. Div. 868.

SHELL SHOCK. This denotes not a distinct type of nervous disorder, but a condition produced on certain organisms by sudden fear, or by highly exciting causes; it is a form of neurosis; it is not settled, general insanity, but a functional nervous disease, and not due to organic changes. People v. Gilberg, 240 P. 1000, 1002, 197 Cal. 306. See, also, Shock.

SHELLEY'S CASE, RULE IN. "When the ancestor, by any gift or conveyance, taketh an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs in fee or in tail, 'the heirs' are words of limitation of the estate, and not words of purchase." 1 Coke, 104; Walker v. Butner, 187 N. C. 535, 122 S. E. 301, 302; Winchell v. Winchell, 259 Ill. 471, 102 N. E. 823, 824; Stout v. Good, 245 Pa. 383, 91 A. 613, 615; Tyndale v. McLaughlin, 84 N. J. Eq. 652, 95 A. 117, 119; Jenkins v. Hogg, 139 Va. 682, 124 S. E. 392, 394; Gordon v. Cadwalader, 164 Cal. 509, 130 P. 18, 19; McHatton's Estate v. Peale's Estate (Tex. Civ. App.) 248 S. W. 103, 105.

Intimately connected with the quantity of estate which a tenant may hold in realty is the antique feudal doctrine generally known as the "Rule in Shelley's Case," which is reported by Lord Coke in 1 Coke, 93b (23 Eliz. in C. B.). This rule was not first laid down or established in that case, but was then simply admitted in argument as a well-founded and settled rule of law, and has always since been quoted as the "Rule in Shelley's Case." Wharton. The rule was adopted as a part of the common law of this country, and in many of the states still prevails. It has been abolished in most of them.

SHELTER. This term, in a statute relating to the provision of food, clothing, and shelter for one's children, means a home with proper environments, as well as protection from the weather. Hummel v. State, 73 Ind. App. 12, 126 N. E. 444, 446.

SHEREFFE. The body of the lordship of Caerdiff in South Wales, excluding the members of it. Powel, Hist. Wales, 123.

SHERIFF.

In American Law

The chief executive and administrative officer of a county, being chosen by popular election. His principal duties are in aid of the criminal courts and civil courts of record; such as serving process, summoning juries, executing judgments, holding judicial sales and the like. He is also the chief conservator of the peace within his territorial jurisdiction. See State v. Finn, 4 Mo. App. 352; Com. v. Martin, 9 Kulp (Pa.) 69; In re Executive Communication, 13 Fla. 687; Pearce v. Stephens, 18 App. Div. 101, 45 N. Y. Supp. 422; Denson v. Sledge, 13 N. C. 140; Hockett v. Alston, 110 F. 912, 49 C. C. A. 180; Harston v. Langston (Tex. Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 648, 650. When used in statutes, the term may include a deputy sheriff. Lanier v. Town of Greenville, 174 N. C. 311, 93 S. E. 850, 853.

In English Law

The principal officer in every county, who has the transacting of the public business of the county. He is an officer of great antiquity, and was also called the "shire-reeve," "reeve," or "bailiff." He is called in Latin "vice-comes," as being the deputy of the earl or comes, to whom anciently the custody of the shire was committed. The duties of the sheriff principally consist in executing writs, precepts, warrants from justices of the peace for the apprehension of offenders, etc. Brown.

In Scotch Law

The office of sheriff differs somewhat from the same office under the English law, being, from ancient times, an office of important judicial power, as well as ministerial. The sheriff exercises a jurisdiction of considerable extent, both of civil and criminal character, which is, in a proper sense, judicial, in addition, to powers resembling those of an English sheriff. Tomlins; Bell.

In General

—Deputy sheriff. See Deputy.

—High sheriff. One holding the office of sheriff, as distinguished from his deputies or assistants or under sheriffs.

—Pocket sheriff. In English law. A sheriff appointed by the sole authority of the crown, without the usual form of nomination by the judges in the exchequer. 1 Bl. Comm. 342; 3 Steph. Comm. 23.

SHERIFF CLERK. The clerk of the sheriff's court in Scotland.

SHERIFF DEPUTE. In Scotch law. The principal sheriff of a county, who is also a judge.

SHERIFF-GELD. A rent formerly paid by a sheriff, and it is prayed that the sheriff in his account may be discharged thereof. Rot. Parl. 50 Edw. III.

SHERIFF-TOOTH. In English law. A tenure by the service of providing entertainment for the sheriff at his county courts. An ancient tax on land in Derbyshire. A common tax formerly levied for the sheriff's diet. Cowell; Wharton.

SHERIFF'S COURT. The court held before the sheriff's deputy, that is, the under-sheriff, and wherein actions are brought for recovery of debts under £20. Writs of inquiry are also brought here to be executed. The sheriff's court for the county of Middlesex is that wherein damages are assessed in proper cases after trial at Westminster. Brown.

SHERIFF'S COURT IN LONDON. A tribunal having cognizance of personal actions under the London (city) Small Debts Act of 1852. See 3 Steph. Comm., 11th ed. 30, n., 301, 449, note (1); 3 Bla. Comm. 80, note (j).

SHERIFF'S JURY. In practice. A jury composed of no determinate number, but which may be more or less than twelve, summoned by the sheriff for the purposes of an inquisition or inquest of office. 3 Bl. Comm. 258.

SHERIFF'S OFFICERS. Bailiffs, who are either bailiffs of hundreds or bound-bailiffs.

SHERIFF'S SALE. See Sale.

SHERIFF'S TOURN. A court of record in England, formerly held twice every year, within a month after Easter and Michaelmas, before the sheriff, in different parts of the county. It was, indeed, only the turn or rotation of the sheriff to keep a court-leet in each respective hundred. This was the great court-leet of the county, as the county court is the court-baron; for out of this, for the ease of the sheriff, was taken the court-leet or view of frank-pledge. 4 Bl. Comm. 273. It was obsolete in Coke's time, but was not abolished till 1887. It had a limited criminal jurisdiction.

SHERIFFALTY, or SHRIEVALTY. The time of a man's being sheriff. Cowell. The term of a sheriff's office. Also, the office itself.

SHERIFFWICK. The jurisdiction of a sheriff. Called, in modern law, "bailiwick." The office of a sheriff.

SHERRERIE. A word used by the authorities of the Roman Church, to specify contemptuously the technical parts of the law, as administered by non-clerical lawyers. Wharton.

SHEWER. In the practice of the English high court, when a view by a jury is ordered, persons are named by the court to show the property to be viewed, and are hence called "shewers." There is usually a shewer on behalf of each party. Archb. Pr. 339, et seq.

SHEWING. In English law. To be quit of attachment in a court, in plaints shewed and not avowed. Obsolete.

SHIFT MARRIAGE. "When a man died having debts which his widow was unable to pay, she was obliged, if she contracted a second marriage, to leave her clothes in the hands of the creditors, and to go through the ceremony in her shift. Gradually, however, the ceremony was mitigated by the bridegroom lending her clothes for the occasion." Said by Lecky, Hist. of Eng. 18th Cent., IV. p. 23, to be a curious relic of a standard of commercial integrity which had long since passed away.

SHIFTING. Changing; varying; passing from one person to another by substitution.

SHIFTING CLAUSE. In a settlement, a clause by which some other mode of devolution is substituted for that primarily prescribed. Examples of shifting clauses are: The ordinary name and arms clause, and the clause of less frequent occurrence by which a settled estate is destined as the foundation of a second family, in the event of the elder branch becoming otherwise enriched. These shifting clauses take effect under the statute of uses. Sweet.

SHIFTING RISK. In insurance, a risk created by a contract of insurance on a stock of merchandise, or other similar property, which is kept for sale, or is subject to change in items by purchase and sale; the policy being conditioned to cover the goods in the stock at any and all times and not to be affected by changes in its composition. Farmers' etc., Ins. Ass'n v. Kryder, 5 Ind. App. 430, 31 N. E. 851, 51 Am. St. Rep. 284.

SHIFTING SEVERALTY. See Severalty.

SHIFTING STOCK OF MERCHANDISE. A stock of merchandise subject to change from time to time, in the course of trade by purchases, sales, or other transactions. Laderburg v. Miller (C. C. A.) 210 F. 614, 617.

SHIFTING THE BURDEN OF PROOF.

Transferring it from one party to the other, or from one side of the case to the other, when he upon whom it rested originally has made out a prima facie case or defense by evidence, of such a character that it then becomes incumbent upon the other to rebut it by contradictory or defensive evidence.

SHIFTING USE. See Use.

SHILLING. In English law. The name of an English coin, of the value of one-twentieth part of a pound. This denomination of money was also used in America, in colonial times, but was not everywhere of uniform value.

SHIN-PLASTER. Formerly, a jocose term for a bank-note greatly depreciated in value; also for paper money of a denomination less than a dollar. Webster, Dict. See Madison Ins. Co. v. Forsythe, 2 Ind. 483.

SHINNEY. A local name for a homemade whisky. State v. McClinton, 152 La. 632, 94 So. 141, 142.

SHIP, v. In maritime law. To engage to serve on board a vessel as a seaman.

To put on board a ship; to send by ship. Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 16 S. Ct. 488, 490, 40 L. Ed. 616. To place (goods) on board of a vessel for the purchaser or consignee, to be transported at his risk. Fisher v. Minot, 10 Gray (Mass.) 262; Krauter v. Menchacatorre, 202 App. Div. 200, 195 N. Y. S. 361, 363.

In a broader sense, to transport. Burton v. State, 135 Ark. 612, 206 S. W. 51, 52. To deliver to a common carrier for transportation. State v. Bayer, 93 Ohio St. 72, 112 N. E. 197, 198; Horner v. Daily, 77 Ind. App. 378, 133 N. E. 585, 587. To send away, to get rid of. Bird v. State, 131 Tenn. 518, 175 S. W. 554, 556, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 634.

SHIP, n. A vessel of any kind employed in navigation. In a more restricted and more technical sense, a three-masted vessel navigated with sails. U. S. v. Kelly, 4 Wash. C. C. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 15,516.

Nautical men apply the term "ship" to distinguish a vessel having three masts, each consisting of a lower mast, a topmast, and a topgallant mast, with their appropriate rigging. In familiar language, it is usually employed to distinguish any large vessel, however rigged. Tomlins. And see Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U. S. 625, 7 Sup. Ct. 336, 30 L. Ed. 501; U. S. v. Open Boat, 27 Fed. Cas. 347; Raft of Cypress Logs, 20 Fed. Cas. 170; Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 22 Sup. Ct. 195, 46 L. Ed. 264; King v. Greenway, 71 N. Y. 417; U. S. v. Dewey, 188 U. S. 254, 23 Sup. Ct. 415, 47 L. Ed. 463; Swan v. U. S., 19 Ct. Cl. 62; The St. Louis, 48 F. 312. See Wood v. Two Barges (C. C.) 46 F. 204, as to what is not a ship.

In law, the term has a very wide signification, dependent to a greater or less degree on the context. It may include steam-boats, sailing vessels, canal-boats, barges, and every structure adapted to be navigated from place to place for the transportation of merchandise or persons. Civ. Code Cal. § 960.

An agreement to construct an ocean going ship is performed by the construction of an ocean going barge suitable for a cargo carrying steamer, since the hull and spars constitute the ship. Bell v. First Nat. Bank of Rockport (Tex. Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1107.

Ex Ship

These words in a contract of sale are not restricted to any particular ship, and by the usage of merchants simply denote that the property in the goods shall pass to the buyer upon their leaving the ship's tackle, and that he shall be liable for all subsequent charges of landing. They do not constitute a condition of the contract but are inserted for the benefit of the seller. Harrison v. Fortlage, 161 U. S. 57, 16 S. Ct. 488, 40 L. Ed. 616.

General Ship

Where a ship is not chartered wholly to one person, but the owner offers her generally to carry the goods of all comers, or where, if chartered to one person, he offers her to several subfreighters for the conveyance of their goods, she is called a "general" ship, as opposed to a "chartered" one. Brown. One which is employed by the charterer or owner on a particular voyage, and is hired to a number of persons, unconnected with each other, to convey their respective goods to the place of destination. Alexander Eccles & Co. v. Strachan Shipping Co. (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 653, 655; Ward v. Green, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 173, 16 Am. Dec. 437.

Ship-Breaking

In Scotch law. The offense of breaking into a ship. Arkley, 461.

Ship-Broker

An agent for the transaction of business between ship-owners and charterers or those who ship cargoes. Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 444.

Ship-Chandlery

This is a term of extensive import, and includes everything necessary to furnish and equip a vessel, so as to render her seaworthy for the intended voyage. Not only stores, stoves, hardware, and crockery have been held to be within the term, but muskets and other arms also, the voyage being round Cape Horn to California, in the course of which voyage arms are sometimes carried for safety. Weaver v. The S. G. Owens, 1 Wall. Jr. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 17,310.

Ship-Channel

In rivers, harbors, etc., the channel in which the water is deep enough for vessels of large size, usually marked out in harbors by buoys. The Oliver (D. C.) 22 Fed. 848.

Ship-Damage

In the charter-parties with the English East India Company, these words occur. Their meaning is, damage from negligence, insufficiency, or bad stowage in the ship. Abb. Shipp. 204.

Ship-Master

The captain or master of a merchant ship, appointed and put in command by the owner, and having general control of the vessel and cargo, with power to bind the owner by his lawful acts and engagements in the management of the ship.

Ship-Money

In English law. An imposition formerly levied on port-towns and other places for fitting out ships; revived by Charles I., and abolished in the same reign. 17 Car. I. c. 14.

Ship's-Bill

The copy of the bill of lading retained by the master. It is not authoritative as to the terms of the contract of affreightment; the bill delivered to the shipper must control, if the two do not agree. The Thames, 14 Wall. 98, 20 L. Ed. 804.

Ship's Company

A term embracing all the officers of the ship, as well as the mariners or common seamen, but not a passenger. U. S. v. Libby, 26 Fed. Cas. 928; U. S. v. Winn, 28 Fed. Cas. 735.

Ship's Husband

In maritime law. A person appointed by the several part-owners of a ship, and usually one of their number, to manage the concerns of the ship for the common benefit. Generally understood to be the general agent of the owners in regard to all the affairs of the ship in the home port. Story, Ag. § 35; 3 Kent, Comm. 151; Webster v. The Andes, 18 Ohio, 187; Muldon v. Whitlock, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 307, 13 Am. Dec. 533; Gillespie v. Winberg, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 322; Mitchell v. Chambers, 43 Mich. 150, 5 N. W. 57, 38 Am. Rep. 167; 4 B. & Ad. 375; 1 Y. & C. 326; Gould v. Stanton, 16 Conn. 12. He cannot insure or bind the owners for premiums. Hewett v. Buck, 17 Me. 147, 35 Am. Dec. 243; 2 Maule & S. 485; Foster v. Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 85; 5 Burr. 2627.

Ship's Papers

The papers which must be carried by a vessel on a voyage, in order to furnish evidence of her national character, the nature and destination of the cargo, and of compliance with the navigation laws. The ship's papers are of two sorts: Those required by the law of a particular country; such as the certificate of registry, license, charter-party, bills of lading and of health, required by the law of England to be on board all British ships. Those required by the law of nations to be on board neutral ships, to vindicate their title to that character; these are the pass port, sea-brief, or sea-letter, proofs of property, the muster-roll or rôle d'équipage, the charter-party, the bills of lading and invoices, the log-book or ship's journal, and the bill of health. 1 Marsh. Ins. c. 9, § 6. See, also, Grace v. Browne (C. C. A.) 86 F. 155.

SHIPMENT. The delivery of the goods within the time required on some vessel, destined to the particular port, which the seller has reason to suppose will sail within a reasonable time. It does not mean a clearance of the vessel as well as putting the goods on board where there is nothing to indicate that the seller was expected to exercise any control over the clearance of the vessel or of her subsequent management. Ledon v. Havemeyer, 121 N. Y. 179, 24 N. E. 297, 8 L. R. A. 245. See L. R. 2 App. Cas. 455; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453, 5 Am. Dec. 63; Lamborn & Co. v. Log Cabin Products Co. (D. C.) 291 F. 435, 438.

The delivery of goods to a carrier and his issuance of a bill of lading therefor. Goldenberg v. Cutler, 189 App. Div. 489, 178 N. Y. S. 522, 523.

A "shipment" does not consist in loading alone, but consists in complete delivery of goods by the shipper to the carrier for transportation, and shipment is not made until the shipper has parted with all control over the goods and nothing remains to be done by him to complete delivery. National Importing & Trading Co. v. E. A. Bear & Co., 324 Ill. 346, 155 N. E. 343, 346.

The transportation of goods. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Carolina Portland Cement Co. (C. C. A.) 16 F.(2d) 760, 761.

Also, the property which is the subject of transportation. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Carolina Portland Cement Co. (C. C. A.) 16 F.(2d) 760, 761. An order. Young v. Flickinger, 75 Cal. App. 171, 242 P. 516, 517. A consignment of goods as delivered by the carrier. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kittanning Iron & Steel Mfg. Co., 263 Pa. 205, 106 A. 207, 208.

SHIPPER. A Dutch word, signifying the master of a ship. It is mentioned in some statutes, and is now generally called "skipper." Tomlins.

One who ships goods; one who puts goods on board of a vessel, for carriage to another place during her voyage and for delivery there, by charter-party or otherwise. One who signs a bill of lading as "shipper," unless the contrary appears, is presumably the consignor. New York Cent. R. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., 3 N. J. Misc. 1137, 131 A. 111, 114.

Under federal statutes, one is a "shipper" who, although a consignee, exercises such direct control over shipments of commodities consigned to him by another as enables him, by his own act, to procure for himself discriminations in respect to transportation service. U. S. v. Metropolitan Lum- ber Co. (D. C.) 254 F. 335, 346. Thus, a forwarder of freight, who sends in his own name all the freight he can over a carrier, which, in consideration of the business thus obtained, pays him a commission or salary calculated on the freight moneys received by the carrier from him, is a "shipper," and the payment in form of commission or salary or otherwise is a "rebate" or concession in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act Feb. 4, 1887, c. 104, § 6, 24 Stat. 380 (49 USCA § 6), and Elkins Act Feb. 19, 1903, c. 708, 32 Stat. 847, § 1, as amended by Act June 29, 1906, c. 3591, 34 Stat. 587, § 2 (49 USCA § 41). U. S. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (D. C.) 222 F. 685, 686.

SHIPPER'S ORDER. This term, as used in bills of lading, is well understood and means that the title remains in the shipper until he orders a delivery of the goods. B. W. McMahān & Co. v. State Nat. Bank of Shawnee (Tex. Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 403, 404; Bennett v. Dickinson, 106 Kan. 95, 186 P. 1005.

SHIPPING. Ships in general; ships or vessels of any kind intended for navigation. Relating to ships; as, shipping interests, shipping affairs, shipping business, shipping concerns. Putting on board a ship or vessel, or receiving on board a ship or vessel. Webster, Dict.; Worcester, Dict.

The "law of shipping" is a comprehensive term for all that part of the maritime law which relates to ships and the persons employed in or about them. It embraces such subjects as the building and equipment of vessels, their registration and nationality, their ownership and inspection, their employment, (including charter-parties, freight, demurrage, towage, and salvage,) and their sale, transfer, and mortgage; also, the employment, rights, powers, and duties of masters and mariners; and the law relating to ship-brokers, ship-agents, pilots, etc.

SHIPPING ARTICLES. A written agreement between the master of a vessel and the mariners, specifying the voyage or term for which the latter are shipped, and the rate of wages. See 46 USCA § 564.

SHIPPING COMMISSIONER. An officer of the United States, appointed by the several circuit courts, within their respective jurisdictions, for each port of entry (the same being also a port of ocean navigation), which, in the judgment of such court, may require the same; his duties being to supervise the engagement and discharge of seamen; to see that men engaged as seamen report on board at the proper time; to facilitate the apprenticing of persons to the marine service; and other similar duties, such as may be required by law. 46 USCA §§ 541-549.

SHIPWRECK. The demolition or shattering of a vessel, caused by her driving ashore or on rocks and shoals in the midseas, or by the violence of winds and waves in tempests. 2 Arn. Ins. p. 734.

"Shipwreck" within Revenue Act 1918, § 214a(6), 40 Stat. 1066, allowing deduction from gross income, does not mean complete loss; damage to ship surfaces, nor need such damage be caused by storms or other natural causes; wreck through collision, whether due to wrong or negligence of other vessel or of employee of wrecked ship, being sufficient. Shearer v. Anderson (C. C. A.) 16 F.(2d) 995, 993, 51 A. L. R. 534.

SHIRE. A Saxon word which signified a division; it was made up of an indefinite number of hundreds—later called a county (Comitatus). 1 Steph. Com. 76.

In English Law

A county. So called because every county or shire is divided and parted by certain metes and bounds from another. Co. Litt. 50a.

In General

—Knights of the shire. See Knight.

—Shire-clerk. He that keeps the county court.

—Shire-gemot, scire-gemote, scir-gemot. (From the Saxon scir or scyre, county, shire, and gemote, a court, an assembly.) Variants of scyregemote (q. v.). See, also, Shire-mote, infra.

—Shire-man, or scyre-man. Before the Conquest, the judge of the county, by whom trials for land, etc., were determined, Tomlins; Mozley & Whitley.

—Shire-mote. The assize of the shire, or the assembly of the people, was so called by the Saxons. It was nearly if not exactly, the same as the scyregemote, and in most respects corresponded with what were afterwards called the "county courts." Brown.

—Shire-reeve (spelled, also, Shire rieve, or Shire reve). In Saxon law. The reeve or bailiff of the shire. The viscount of the Anglo-Normans, and the sheriff of later times. Co. Litt. 168a.

SHOCK. In medical jurisprudence. A sudden and severe depression of the vital functions, particularly of the nerves and the circulation, due to the nervous exhaustion following trauma, surgical operation, or sudden and violent emotion, resulting (if not in death) in more or less prolonged prostration; it is spoken of as being either physical or psychical, according as it is caused by disturbance of the bodily powers and functions or of the mind. See Maynard v. Oregon R. Co., 43 Or. 63, 72 P. 590. See, also, Shell shock.

SHOOFAA. In Mohammedan law. Pre-emption, or a power of possessing property which has been sold, by paying a sum equal to that paid by the purchaser. Wharton.

SHOOT. To strike with something shot; to hit, wound, or kill, with a missile discharged from a weapon; and the missile meant in such cases is the arrow, bullet, or ball, intended to be discharged and to strike the object aimed at. A person cannot be said to have been shot who was not hit by bullet or ball, but only powder burned by the weapon discharged. State v. Manuel, 153 La. 7, 95 So. 263, 264. The term generally implies the use of firearms. Shumake v. State, 90 Fla. 133, 105 So. 314, 315.

SHOP. A building in which goods and merchandise are sold at retail, or where mechanics work, and sometimes keep their products for sale. See State v. Morgan, 98 N. C. 641, 3 S. E. 927; State v. O'Connell, 26 Ind. 267; State v. Sprague, 149 Mo. 409, 50 S. W. 901; Com. v. Riggs, 14 Gray (Mass.) 378, 77 Am. Dec. 333; Richards v. Ins. Co., 60 Mich. 426, 27 N. W. 586. There must be some structure of a more or less permanent character. 6 B. & S. 303.

The term is properly applied to a place of manufacture or repair, such as a roundhouse, Koecher v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 122 Minn. 458, 142 N. W. 874, 876, or a building used for repairing automobiles and for the sale of automobile parts, gas, and oil, State v. Garon, 161 La. 867, 109 So. 530, 532. But it is not strictly applicable to a garage, State v. Garon, 158 La. 1014, 105 So. 47, 48, nor to a restaurant, even though the restaurant also engages in the sale of cigars, Debenham v. Short (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1147.

Strictly, a shop is a place where goods are sold by retail, and a store a place where goods are deposited; but, in this country, shops for the sale of goods are frequently called "stores." Com. v. Annis, 15 Gray (Mass.) 197.

SHOP-BOOKS. Books of original entry kept by trademen, shop-keepers, mechanics, and the like, in which are entered their accounts and charges for goods sold, work done, etc., commonly called "account-books," or "books of account." The term does not include the stubs of a check book and entries thereon, McWhorter v. Tyson, 203 Ala. 509, 83 So. 330, 333, nor the book and entries of an express messenger, Rhoades v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. R., 227 Mass. 138, 116 N. E. 244, 245. As to their admissibility in evidence, see Shmargon v. Rosenstein, 192 App. Div. 143, 182 N. Y. S. 343, 344; Boyer v. Sweet, 4 Ill. (3 Scam.) 120; Linnell v. Sutherland, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 568; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 117; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 282; Chicago Lumbering Co. v. Hewitt, 12 C. C. A. 129, 64 F. 314, 22 U. S. App. 646.

SHOP RIGHT. A term sometimes used in patent law to designate an implied license to use the patent process expressed in the patent, without payment of royalty. North v. Atlas Brick Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 281 S. W. 608, 616.

SHOPA. In old records, a shop. Cowell.

SHOPKEEPER. Whether a person who buys and sells commodities as a business is a merchant or a shopkeeper depends on the extent, and not on the character, of his business; if his business is large he is a "merchant," and if it is small he is a "shopkeeper." White Mountain Fur Co. v. Town of Whitefield, 77 N. H. 340, 91 A. 870, 871.

SHORE. Land on the margin of the sea, a lake, or a river,—especially a large river, in which the water ebbs and flows. See Galveston v. Menard, 23 Tex. 349; Bell v. Gough, 23 N. J. Law, 683.

Strictly and technically, lands adjacent to the sea or other tidal waters; the lands adjoining navigable waters, where the tide flows and reflows, which at high tides are submerged, and at low tides are bare. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 14 S. Ct. 548, 38 L. Ed. 331; Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 400, 16 Am. Rep. 46; U. S. v. Pacheco, 2 Wall. 590, 17 L. Ed. 865; Harlan & Hollingsworth Co. v. Paschall, 5 Del. Ch. 463; Lacy v. Green, 84 Pa. 519; Axline v. Shaw, 35 Fla. 305, 17 So. 411, 28 L. R. A. 391. The "shore" is therefore the space bounded by the high and low water marks. La Porte v. Menacon, 220 Mich. 684, 190 N. W. 655, 656; Apalachicola Land & Development Co. v. McRae, 86 Fla. 393, 98 So. 505, 525; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Dalton v. Hazelet, 105 C. C. A. 99, 182 F. 562. And this is also true even though the lands may lie along nonnavigable bodies of water. Hunter v. Van Keuren, 130 Misc. 599, 224 N. Y. S. 153, 160. But where a grant is made of lands adjacent to a lake or stream unaffected by tides, the "shore" of such a lake or stream is the land adjacent to the water, and in the absence of banks or other highlands to mark the boundary, the only definite line is the water's edge. La Porte v. Menacon, 220 Mich. 684, 190 N. W. 655, 656.

Sea-shore is that space of land over which the waters of the sea spread in the highest water, during the winter season. Civ. Code La. art. 451.

Under the civil law the "shore line" boundary of lands adjoining navigable waters is the line marked by the highest tide. Dincans v. Keeran (Tex. Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 603, 604.

Generally, a grant whose boundaries extend to the shore, or along the shore of the sea, carries only to the high-water mark; but the word "shore," even in its application to tidal waters, is subject to construction by the terms of the deed and surrounding circumstances, and may mean the water's edge at low-water mark. Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of New York, 46 S. Ct. 357, 362, 271 U. S. 65, 70 L. Ed. 838.

When the sea-shore is referred to as a boundary, the meaning must be understood to be the margin of the sea in its usual and ordinary state; the ground between the ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark is the shore. Hence a deed of land bounded at or by the "shore" will convey the flats as appurtenant. Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 435, 4 Am. Dec. 155.

In connection with salvage, "shore" means the land on which the waters have deposited things which are the subject of salvage, whether below or above ordinary high-water mark. The Gulfport (D. C.) 243 F. 676, 680.

SHORE LANDS. Those lands lying between the lines of high and low water mark. State v. Sturtevant, 76 Wash. 158, 135 P. 1035, 1036.

Lands bordering on the shores of navigable lakes and rivers below the line of ordinary high water. Rem. & Bal. Code (Wash.) § 6641 (Rem. Rev. Stat. § 7833).

SHORT. Not long; of brief length; brief; not coming up to a measure, standard, requirement, or the like. Webster, Dict.

A term of common use in the stock and produce markets. To say that one is "short," in the vernacular of the exchanges, implies only that one has less of a commodity than may be necessary to meet demands and obligations. It does not imply that commodity cannot or will not be supplied upon demand. Thomas v. McShan, 99 Okl. 88, 225 P. 713, 714.

SHORT CAUSE. A cause which is not likely to occupy a great portion of the time of the court, and which may be entered on the list of "short causes," upon the application of one of the parties, and will then be heard more speedily than it would be in its regular order. This practice obtains in the English chancery and in some of the American states. The time allowed for the hearing varies in the different courts.

SHORT ENTRY. A custom of bankers of entering on the customer's pass-book the amount of notes deposited for collection, in such a manner that the amount is not carried to the latter's general balance until the notes are paid. See Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12; Blaine v. Bourne, II R. I. 121, 23 Am. Rep. 429.

SHORT LEASE. A term applied colloquially, but without much precision, to a lease for a short term, (as a month or a year,) as distinguished from one running for a long period.

SHORT NOTICE. In practice. Notice of less than the ordinary time; generally of half that time. 2 Tidd, Pr. 757. In English Practice, four days' notice of trial. Wharton, Law Dict. Notice of trial. 1 Cr. & M. 499.

SHORT SALE. A contract for sale of shares of stock which the seller does not own, or certificates for which are not within his control, so as to be available for delivery at the time when, under rules of the exchange, delivery must be made. Provost v. U. S., 269 U. S. 443, 46 S. Ct. 152, 153, 70 L. Ed. 352; Chandler v. Prince, 221 Mass. 495, 109 N. E. 374, 378. In a "short sale" the broker may make a delivery of bonds or stock, charging the price thereof to the customer, and the account is carried until the customer orders the broker to repurchase the bonds, and an adjustment is made between the broker and customer on the difference between the selling and purchasing price. Brown v. Carpenter, 182 App. Div. 650, 168 N. Y. S. 921, 923.

SHORT SUMMONS. A process, authorized in some of the states, to be issued against an absconding, fraudulent, or nonresident debtor, which is returnable within a less number of days than an ordinary writ of summons.

SHORTFORD. An old custom of the city of Exeter, similar to that of gavelet in London, which was a mode of foreclosing the right of a tenant by the chief lord of the fee, in cases of non-payment of rent. Cowell.

SHORTLY AFTER. In point of time, a relative term, meaning in a short or brief time or manner; soon; presently; quickly. Chittenden County Trust Co. v. Hurd, 93 Vt. 71, 106 A. 564, 565.

SHOT. A projectile, particularly a solid ball or bullet that is not intended to fit the bore of a piece; also such projectiles collectively. Green v. Commonwealth, 122 Va. 862, 94 S. E. 940, 941.

SHOTGUN. A smooth-bore gun, often double-barreled, and now almost universally breach-loading, designed for firing shots at short range and killing small game, especially birds. Henderson v. State, 75 Fla. 464, 78 So. 427, 428.

SHOULD. The past tense of shall, St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 45 Okl. 143, 144 P. 1075, 1080, ordinarily implying duty or obligation; Scarborough v. Walton, 36 Ga. App. 428, 136 S. E. 830; Kippenbrock v. Wabash R. Co., 270 Mo. 479, 194 S. W. 50, 51; although usually no more than an obligation of propriety or expediency, or a moral obligation, thereby distinguishing it from "ought," U. S. v. Stickrath (D. C.) 242 F. 151, 153. It is not normally synonymous with "may"; Williams v. Mt. Vernon Car Mfg. Co., 197 Ill. App. 271, 272; Elliott v. Maves, 196 Ill. App. 605, 606; and although often interchangeable with the word "would," Barnett v. Savannah Electric Co., 15 Ga. App. 270, 82 S. E. 910, 911, it does not ordinarily express certainty as "will" sometimes does, Hubbard v. Turner Department Store Co., 220 Mo. App. 95, 278 S. W. 1060, 1061.

SHOW, n. Something that one views or at which one looks and at the same time hears. Longwell v. Kansas City, 199 Mo. App. 480, 203 S. W. 657, 659.

SHOW, v. To make apparent or clear by evidence; to prove. Coyle v. Com., 104 Pa. 133. It may be equivalent to the words "reasonably satisfy," Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Cohill, 196 Ala. 278, 72 So. 126, but is not synonymous with "state"; Chapin v. State, 107 Tex. Cr. R. 477, 296 S. W. 1095, 1099; Chumbley v. Courtney, 181 Iowa, 482, 164 N. W. 945, 946.

Although the words "show" and "indicate" are sometimes interchangeable in popular use, they are not always so. To "show" is to make apparent or clear by evidence, to prove; while an "indication" may be merely a symptom; that which points to or gives direction to the mind. Coyle v. Com., 104

Pa. 133. "Show" means to point out, or make known by evidence. Commonwealth v. Delfino, 259 Pa. 272, 102 A. 949, 952.

—Show cause. To show cause against a rule nisi, an order, decree, execution, etc., is to appear as directed, and present to the court such reasons and considerations as one has to offer why it should not be confirmed, take effect, be executed, or as the case may be.

SHRIEVALTY. The office of sheriff; the period of that office.

SHRUB. A low, small plant, the branches of which grow directly from the earth without any supporting trunk, or stem. Clay v. Tel. Cable Co., 70 Miss. 406, 11 So. 658.

SHUT DOWN. To stop work;—usually said of a factory, etc. Webster, Dict. Thus, with-in the meaning of an insurance policy, a saw mill which has stopped running for the winter is shut down, though men are employed about the premises and the machinery has not been dismantled. McKenzie v. Ins. Co., 112 Cal. 548, 44 P. 922.

SHY. To start suddenly aside through fright or suspicion; said especially of horses. San Antonio Machine & Supply Co. v. McKinley (Tex. Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 340, 342.

SHYSTER. A trickish knave; one who carries on any business, especially a legal business, in a dishonest way. Gribble v. Press Co., 34 Minn. 343, 25 N. W. 710; Nolan v. Standard Pub. Co., 67 Mont. 212, 216 P. 571, 574. An unscrupulous practitioner who disgraces his profession by doing mean work, and resorts to sharp practice to do it. Bailey v. Kalamazoo Pub. Co., 40 Mich. 251.

Si a jure discedas, vagus eris, et erunt omnia omnibus incerta. If you depart from the law, you will go astray, and all things will be uncertain to everybody. Co. Litt. 227b.

SI ACTIO. Lat. The conclusion of a plea to an action when the defendant demands judgment, if the plaintiff ought to have his action, etc. Obsolete.

Si alicujus rei societas sit et finis negotio impositus est, finitur societas. If there is a partnership in any matter, and the business is ended, the partnership ceases. Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 438, 489.

Si aliquid ex solemnibus deficiat, cum æquitas poseit, subveniendum est. If any one of certain required forms be wanting, where equity requires, it will be aided. 1 Kent, Comm. 157. The want of some of a neutral vessel's papers is strong presumptive evidence against the ship's neutrality, yet the want of any one of them is not absolutely conclusive. Id.

SI ALIQUID SAPIT. Lat. If he knows anything; if he is not altogether devoid of reason.

Si assuetis mederi possis, nova non sunt tentanda. If you can be relieved by accustomed remedies, new ones should not be tried. 10 Coke, 142b. If an old wall can be repaired, a new one should not be made. Id.

SI CONSTET DE PERSONA. Lat. If it be certain who is the person meant.

SI CONTINGAT. Lat. If it happen. Words of condition in old conveyances. 10 Coke, 42a.

Si duo in testamento pugnantia reperientur, ultimum est ratum. If two conflicting provisions are found in a will, the last is observed. Lofft 251.

SI FECERIT TE SECURUM. Lat. If [he] make you secure. In practice. The initial and emphatic words of that description of original writ which directs the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court, without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gives the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. 3 Bl. Comm. 274.

Si ingratum dixeris, omnia dixeris. If you affirm that one is ungrateful, in that you include every charge. A Roman maxim. Tray. Lat. Max.

SI ITA EST. Lat. If it be so. Emphatic words in the old writ of mandamus to a judge, commanding him, if the fact alleged be truly stated, (si ita est), to affix his seal to a bill of exceptions. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 192, 8 L. Ed. 92.

Si judicas, cognosce. If you judge, understand.

Si meliores sunt quos ducit amor, plures sunt quos corrigit timor. If those are better who are led by love, those are the greater number who are corrected by fear. Co. Litt. 392.

Si non appareat quid actum est, erit consequens ut id sequamur quod in regione in qua actum est frequentatur. If it does not appear what was agreed upon, the consequence will be that we must follow that which is the usage of the place where the agreement was made. Dig. 50, 17, 34.

SI NON OMNES. Lat. In English practice. A writ of association of justices whereby, if all in commission cannot meet at the day assigned, it is allowed that two or more may proceed with the business. Cowell; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 111 C.

Si nulla sit conjectura quæ ducat alio, verba intelligenda sunt ex proprietate, non grammatica sed populari ex usu. If there be no inference which leads to a different result, words are to be understood according to their proper meaning, not in a grammatical, but in a popular and ordinary, sense. 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

SI PARET. Lat. If it appears. In Roman law. Words used in the formula by which the prætor appointed a judge, and instructed him how to decide the cause.

Si plures conditiones ascriptæ fuerunt donationi conjunctim, omnibus est parendum; et ad veritatem copulative requiritur quod utraque pars sit vera, si divisim, quilibet vel alteri eor-um satis est obtemperare; et in disjunctivis, sufficit alteram partem esse veram. If several conditions are conjunctively written in a gift, the whole of them must be complied with;
and with respect to their truth, it is necessary that every part be true, taken jointly;
if the conditions are separate, it is sufficient to comply with either one or other of them; and being disjunctive, that one or the other
be true. Co. Litt. 225.

Si plures sint fidejussores, quotquot erunt numero, singuli in solidum tenentur. If there are more sureties than one, how many soever they shall be, they shall each be held for the whole. Inst. 3, 20, 4.

SI PRIUS. Lat. In old practice. If before.
Formal words in the old writs for summoning juries. Fleta, l. 2, c. 65, § 12.

Si quid universitati debetur singulis non debetur, nec quod debet universitas singuli debent.
If anything be owing to an entire body [or to a corporation], it is not owing to the individual members; nor do the individuals owe that which is owing by the entire body. Dig.
3, 4, 7, 1; 1 Bla. Comm. 484; Lindl. Part.
*5.

Si quidem in nomine, cognomine, prænomine legatarii testator erraverit, cum de persona constat, nihilominus valet legatum. Although a testator may have mistaken the nomen, cognomen, or prænomen of a legatee, yet, if it be certain who is the person meant, the legacy is valid. Inst. 2, 20, 29; Broom, Max.
645; 2 Domat b. 2, 1, s. 6, §§ 10, 19.

SI QUIS. Lat. In the civil law. If any one.
Formal words in the prætorian edicts. The word "quis," though masculine in form was held to include women. Dig. 50, 16, 1.

Si quis cum totum petiisset partem petat, exceptio rei judicatæ vocet. If a party, when he should have sued for an entire claim, sues only for a part, the judgment is res judicata against another suit. 2 Mart. O. S. (La.) 83.

Si quis custos fraudem pupillo fecerit, a tutela removendus est. Jenk. Cent. 39. If a guardian do fraud to his ward, he shall be removed from his guardianship.

Si quis prægnantem uxorem reliquit, non vide-tur sine liberis decessisse. If a man dies, leaving his wife pregnant, he shall not be considered to have died without children. A rule of the civil law.

Si quis unum percusserit, cum alium percutere vellet, in felonia tenetur. 3 Inst. 51. If a man kill one, meaning to kill another, he is held guilty of felony.

SI RECOGNOSCAT. Lat. If he acknowledge. In old practice. A writ which lay for a creditor against his debtor for money numbered (pecunia numerata) or counted; that is, a specific sum of money, which the debtor had acknowledged in the county court, to owe him, as received in pecuniis numeratis.

Cowell.

Si suggestio non sit vera, literæ patentis vacuæ sunt. 10 Coke, 113. If the suggestion be not true, the letters patent are void.

SI TE FECERIT SECURUM. See Si Fecerit te Securum.

SIB. Sax. A relative or kinsman. Used in the Scotch tongue, but not now in English.

SIC. Lat. Thus; so; in such manner.

Sic enim debere quem meliorem agrum suum facere ne vicini deteriorem faciat. Every one ought so to improve his land as not to injure his neighbor's. 3 Kent, Comm. 441. A rule of the Roman law.

Sic interpretandum est ut verba accipiantur cum effectu. 3 Inst. 80. [A statute] is to be so interpreted that the words may be taken with effect.

SIC SUBSCRIBITUR. Lat. In Scotch practice. So it is subscribed. Formal words at the end of depositions, immediately preceding the signature. 1 How. State Tr. 1379.

Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. Use your own property in such a manner as not to injure that of another. 9 Coke, 59; 1 Bl.
Comm. 306; Broom, Max. 263, 365; Webb,
Poll. Torts 153; 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2379; 5
Exch. 797; 12 Q. B. 739; 4 A. & E. 384; 17
Mass. 334; 4 McCord (S. C.) 472. Various comments have been made on this maxim:
"Mere verbiage"; El. B. & E. 643. "No help to decision"; L. R. 2 Q. B. 247. "Utterly useless as a legal maxim"; 9 N. Y. 445. It is a mere begging of the question; it assumes the very point in controversy. 13 Lea 507.
See 2 Aust. Jurisp. 795, 829.

SICH. A little current of water, which is dry in summer; a water furrow or gutter.
Cowell.

SICIUS. A sort of money current among the ancient English, of the value of 2d.

SICK. Affected with disease, ill, indisposed.
State v. Douglas, 124 Kan. 482, 260 P. 655, 657. See Sickness.

SICKNESS. Disease; malady; any morbid condition of the body (including insanity) which, for the time being, hinders or prevents the organs from normally discharging their several functions. L. R. 8 Q. B. 295.
Any affection of the body which deprives it temporarily of the power to fulfill its usual functions, *Martin v. Waycross Coca-Cola
Bottling Co.*, 18 Ga. App. 226, 89 S. E. 495,
496, including injury, Doody v. Davie, 77

Cal. App. 310, 246 P. 339, 340; contra, Poole v. Imperial Mut. Life & Health Ins. Co., 188 N. C. 468, 125 S. E. 8. See, also, Beaudoin v. La Societe St. Jean Baptiste de Bienfaisance de Biddeford, 116 Me. 428, 102 A. 234, 235, L. R. A. 1918B, 641, limiting the term to those disabilities which are the natural results of disease arising from a pathological condition, and Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wiggins (C. C. A.) 15 F.(2d) 646, 648, defining sickness as a condition interfering with one's usual avocations.

Illness; an ailment of such a character as to affect the general soundness and health; not a mere temporary indisposition, which does not tend to undermine and weaken the constitution. National Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Bartlow, 60 Ind. App. 233, 110 N. E. 224, 225.

In construing a sickness indemnity policy, there may be said to be three degrees of sickness: First, when the patient is confined to his bed; second, when he is confined to the house, but not to his bed; and, third, when he is too sick to work, but not confined to the house. Rocci v. Massachusetts Acc. Co., 226 Mass. 545, 116 N. E. 477, 479.

SICUT ALIAS. Lat. As at another time, or heretofore. This was a second writ sent out when the first was not executed. Cowell.

SICUT ME DEUS ADJUVET. Lat. So help me God. Fleta, l. 1, c. 18, § 4.

Sicut natura nil facit per saltum, ita nec lex. Co. Litt. 238. In the same way as nature does nothing by a bound, so neither does the law.

SIDE. The margin, edge, verge, or border of a surface; any one of the bounding lines of the surface. Parkman v. Freeman, 121 Me. 341, 117 A. 301, 302.

"Side" may be used in a generic sense so as to include the "front," but it also has a specific meaning which distinguishes it from "front." The word "front" as applied to a house is always specific and speaking of the "side line" of a house as "fronting" toward the street is incorrect. Howland v. Andrus, 81 N. J. Eq. 175, 86 A. 391, 393. The front of a lot is that portion opposite the rear of the lot and facing on the street, and the side is that portion adjacent to the lot or lots on either side of it. Turney v. Shriver, 269 Ill. 164, 109 N. E. 708, 709.

The party or parties collectively to a lawsuit considered in relation to his or their opponents, i. e., the plaintiff side, or the defendant side. Carr v. Davis, 159 Minn. 485, 199 N. W. 237, 239.

A province or field of jurisdiction;—said of courts. Thus, the same court is sometimes said to have different sides. An admiralty court may have an "instance side," distinct from its powers as a prize court; the "crown side," (criminal jurisdiction) is to be distinguished from the "plea side," (civil jurisdiction;) the same court may have an "equity side" and a "law side."

SIDE-BAR RULES. In English practice. There are some rules which the courts authorize their officers to grant as a matter of course without formal application being made to them in open court, and these are technically termed "side-bar rules," because formerly they were moved for by the attorneys at the side bar in court; such, for instance, was the rule to plead, which was an order or command of the court requiring a defendant to plead within a specified number of days. Such also were the rules to reply, to rejoin, and many others, the granting of which depended upon settled rules of practice rather than upon the discretion of the courts, all of which have been rendered unnecessary by statutory changes. Brown, voc. "Rule."

SIDE-KICKER. A coined expression without any standing in lexicology, which the court, as a matter of common knowledge, can say is not an uncommon vernacular or colloquial expression which may with equal propriety express a social relationship between the parties to whom it is applied, or convey the idea that they are business partners or have business interests in common. Spoon v. Sheldon, 27 Cal. App. 765, 151 P. 150, 152.

SIDE LINES. In commercial usage, lines of goods sold or businesses followed in addition to one's principal articles or occupation. Merrimac Mfg. Co. v. Bibb, 124 Ark. 189, 186 S. W. 817, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 951. In mining law, the side lines of a mining claim are those which measure the extent of the claim on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface. They are not necessarily the side lines as laid down on the ground or on a map or plat; for if the claim, in its longer dimension, crosses the vein, instead of following it, the platted side lines will be treated in law as the end lines, and vice versa. See Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co., 122 U. S. 478, 7 S. Ct. 1356, 30 L. Ed. 1140; Del Monte Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 895, 43 L. Ed. 72.

SIDE REPORTS. A term sometimes applied to unofficial volumes or series of reports, as contrasted with those prepared by the official reporter of the court, or to collections of cases omitted from the official reports.

SIDESMEN. In ecclesiastical law. These were originally persons whom, in the ancient episcopal synods, the bishops were wont to summon out of each parish to give information of the disorders of the clergy and people, and to report heretics. In process of time they became standing officers, under the title of "synodsmen," "sidesmen," or "questmen." The whole of their duties seems now to have devolved by custom upon the churchwardens of a parish. 1 Burn, Ecc. Law, 399.

SIDEWALK. That part of a public street or highway designed for the use of pedestrians, City of Birmingham v. Shirley, 209 Ala. 305, 96 So. 214, 215, being exclusively reserved for them, and constructed somewhat differently than other portions of the street used by animals and vehicles generally, Central Life Assur. Soc. of the United States v. City of Des Moines, 185 Iowa, 573, 171 N. W. 31, 32. That part of the street of a municipality which has been set apart and used for pedestrians, as distinguished from that portion set apart and used for animals and vehicles. Graham v. Albert Lea, 48 Minn. 201, 50 N. W. 1108; McCormick v. Allegheny County, 263 Pa. 146, 106 A. 203, 204. A way for foot passengers, or a public way especially intended for pedestrians. Russo v. City of Pueblo, 63 Colo. 519, 168 P. 649, 650. A walk for foot passengers at the side of a street or road. See Kohlhof v. Chicago, 192 Ill. 249, 61 N. E. 446, 85 Am. St. Rep. 335; Challiss v. Parker, 11 Kan. 391; State v. Berdetta, 73 Ind. 185, 38 Am. Rep. 117; Pequignot v. Detroit (C. C.) 16 F. 212.

Generally the sidewalk is included with the gutters and roadway in the general term street. Bloomington v. Bay, 42 Ill. 503; In re Burmeister, 76 N. Y. 174; Warner v. Knox, 50 Wis. 429, 7 N. W. 372; Kokomo v. Mahan, 100 Ind. 242; Wiles v. Hoss, 114 Ind. 371, 16 N. E. 800. But in many cases of municipal ordinances and contracts the word street is held not to include sidewalks. Dyer v. Chase, 52 Cal. 440; Dickinson v. Worcester, 138 Mass. 555; Barry v. City of Cloverport, 175 Ky. 548, 194 S. W. 818, 819. See, also, James v. City of Newberg, 101 Or. 616, 201 P. 212.

SIEN. An obsolete form of the word "scion," meaning offspring or descendant. Co. Litt. 123a.

SIERVO. Span. In Spanish law. A slave. Las Partidas, pt. 4, tit. 21, l. 1.

SIETE PARTIDAS. Span. Seven parts. See Las Partidas.

SIGHT. When a bill of exchange is expressed to be payable "at sight," it means on presentment to the drawee. See Campbell v. French, 6 Term, 212. Bills are frequently drawn payable at sight or a certain number of days or months after sight.

After sight in a bill means after acceptance; in a note, after exhibition to the maker. Dan. Neg. Instr. § 619. A bill drawn payable a certain number of days after sight, acceptance waived, must be presented to fix the time at which the bill is to become due, and the term of the bill begins to run from the date of presentment. See 4 Montreal L. Rep. 249.

SIGHT DRAFTS OR BILLS. Those payable at sight.

SIGIL. In old English law, a seal, or a contracted or abbreviated signature used as a seal.

SIGILLUM. Lat. In old English law. A seal; originally and properly a seal impressed upon wax.

Sigillum est cera impressa, quia cera sine impressione non est sigillum. A seal is a piece of wax impressed, because wax without an impression is not a seal. 3 Inst. 169.

SIGLA. Lat. In Roman law. Marks or signs of abbreviation used in writing. Cod. 1, 17, 11, 13.

SIGN. To affix one's name to a writing or instrument, for the purpose of authenticating it, or to give it effect as one's act. McCall v. Textile Industrial Institute, 189 N. C. 775, 128 S. E. 349, 353. To attach a name or cause it to be attached to a writing by any of the known methods of impressing a name on paper. In re Covington Lumber Co. (D. C.) 225 F. 444, 446. To affix a signature to; to ratify by hand or seal; to subscribe in one's own handwriting. Webster, Dict.; Knox's Estate, 131 Pa. 230, 18 A. 1021, 6 L. R. A. 353, 17 Am. St. Rep. 798; In re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 359, L. R. A. 1917D, 629, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 227. See, also, Miner v. Larney, 87 N. J. Law, 40, 94 A. 26, 28.

To make any mark, as upon a document, in token of knowledge, approval, acceptance, or obligation. In re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 360, L. R. A. 1917D, 629, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 227; Barksdale v. Bullington, 194 Ala. 624, 69 So. 891, 893. See, also, Pugh v. Jackson, 154 Ky. 772, 159 S. W. 600; and In re Kimbel's Estate, 278 Pa. 435, 123 A. 405, 406, 31 A. L. R. 678, with which compare In re Brennan's Estate, 244 Pa. 574, 91 A. 220, 222. See Signature.

To "sign" is merely to write one's name on paper, or declare assent or attestation by some sign or mark, and does not, like "subscribe," require that one should write at the bottom of the instrument signed. See Sheehan v. Kearney, 82 Miss. 688, 21 So. 41, 35 L. R. A. 102; Robins v. Coryell, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 560; James v. Patten, 6 N. Y. 9, 55 Am. Dec. 376; In re Phelan's Estate, 82 N. J. Eq. 316, 87 A. 625, 626. But compare In re Manchester's Estate, 174 Cal. 417, 163 P. 358, 359, L. R. A. 1917D, 629, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 227.

The word "subscribed" is more restricted than the word "signature." The word "signature" in its origin involves merely a sign, the word "subscribed" involves a writing. The signing of a written instrument has a much broader and more extended meaning than attaching one's written signature to it implies. When a person attaches his name or causes it to be attached to a writing by any of the known methods of impressing his name upon paper with the intention of signing it he is regarded as having "signed" in writing. Hagen v. Gresby, 34 N. D. 349, 159 N. W. 3, 5, L. R. A. 1917B, 281.

—Signing judgment. In English practice. The signature or allowance of the proper officer of a court, obtained by the party entitled to judgment in an action, expressing generally that judgment is given in his favor, and which stands in the place of its actual delivery by the judges themselves. Steph. Pl. 110, 111; French v. Pease, 10 Kan. 54. In American practice. A signing of the judgment record itself, which is done by the proper officer, on the margin of the record, opposite the entry of the judgment. 1 Burrill, Pr. 268.

SIGN MANUAL. An autograph signature; specifically, the official signature of a sovereign, chief magistrate, or the like, to an official document, as letters patent, to give validity. Webster, Dict.; Wharton, Law Dict.

In English Law

The signature of the king to grants or letters patent, inscribed at the top. 2 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 347*. The sign manual is not good unless countersigned, etc.; 9 Mod. 54. There is this difference between what the sovereign does under the sign manual and what he or she does under the great seal, viz., that the former is done as a personal act of the sovereign; the latter as an act of state. Brown.

SIGNA. The plural of signum (q. v.).

SIGNAL. A means of communication, as between vessels at sea or between a vessel and the shore. The international code of signals for the use of all nations assigns arbitrary meanings to different arrangements of flags or displays of lights.

SIGNATORIUS ANNULUS. Lat. In the civil law. A signet-ring; a seal-ring. Dig. 50, 16, 74.

SIGNATORY. A term used in diplomacy to indicate a nation which is a party to a treaty.

SIGNATURE.

In Ecclesiastical Law

The name of a sort of rescript, without seal, containing the supplication, the signature of the pope or his delegate, and the grant of a pardon.

In Contracts

The act of writing one's name upon a deed, note, contract, or other instrument, either to identify or authenticate it, or to give it validity as one's own act. See A. T. Willett Co. v. Industrial Commission, 287 Ill. 487, 122 N. E. 864, 867.

The name of a person as written or set down by himself. Christman v. Salway, 103 Or. 666, 205 P. 541, 549; Mills v. Howland, 2 N. D. 30, 49 N. W. 413.

A sign, stamp, or mark impressed as by a seal, or the name of any person written in his own hand, signifying that the writing preceding it accords with his own wishes or intention. Pilcher v. Pilcher, 117 Va. 356, 84 S. E. 667, 670, L. R. A. 1915D, 902. See, also, 7 L. R. Pr. 590; 3 Nev. & P. 228; Jackson v. Van Dusen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 144, 4 Am. Dec. 330; In re Guilfoyle, 96 Cal. 598, 31 P. 553, 22 L. R. A. 370; Sign.

The "signature" to a deed may be made either by the grantor affixing his own signature, or by adopting one written for him, or by making his mark, or impressing some other sign or symbol on the paper by which the signature, though written by another for him, may be identified. Lee v. Parker, 171 N. C. 144, 88 S. E. 217, 221.

A printed, typewritten, or rubber-stamped name may constitute a valid signature. Wright v. Seat-

State*, 103 Ind. 96, 2 N. E. 299, 53 Am. Rep. 461; Robb v. Penna. Co., 186 Pa. 456, 40 Atl. 969, 65 Am. St. Rep. 868; Tabas v. Emergency Fleet Corporation (D. C.) 9 F.(2d) 648.

SIGNET. A seal commonly used for the sign manual of the sovereign. Wharton. In Scotland, a seal by which royal warrants connected with the administration of justice were formerly authenticated.

SIGNIFICATION. In French law. The notice given of a decree, sentence, or other judicial act.

SIGNIFICAVIT. In ecclesiastical law. When this word is used alone, it means the bishop's certificate to the court of chancery in order to obtain the writ of excommunication; but, where the words "writ of significavit" are used, the meaning is the same as "writ de excommunicato capiendo." Shelf. Mar. & Div. 502. Obsolete.

SIGNIFY. To make known by signs or words; express; communicate; announce; declare. State v. Klein, 94 Wash. 212, 162 P. 52, 53.

SIGNING JUDGMENT. See Sign.

SIGNUM. Lat.

In the Roman and Civil Law

A sign; a mark; a seal. The seal of an instrument. Calvin.

A species of proof. By "signa" were meant those species of indicia which come more immediately under the cognizance of the senses; such as stains of blood on the person of one accused of murder, indications of terror at being charged with the offense, and the like. Best, Pres. 13, note f.

In Saxon Law

The sign of a cross prefixed as a sign of assent and approbation to a charter or deed.

SILENCE. The state of a person who does not speak, or of one who refrains from speaking. In the law of estoppel, "silence" implies knowledge and an opportunity to act upon it. Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 581, 25 L. Ed. 420; Stewart v. Wyoming Cattle Ranch Co., 128 U. S. 383, 9 S. Ct. 101, 32 L. Ed. 439; Chicora Fertilizer Co. v. Dunan, 91 Md. 144, 46 A. 347, 50 L. R. A. 401.

Silence shows consent. 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 28, 35.

Silent leges inter arma. The power of law is suspended during war. Bacon; 4 Inst. 70.

SILENTIARIUS. In English law. One of the privy council; also an usher, who sees good rule and silence kept in court. Wharton.

SILK. Fine, soft thread produced by various species of caterpillars, etc. Lowder v. Union Transfer Co. of San Francisco, 79 Cal. App. 598, 250 P. 703, 704.

Under a statute referring to silk in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, any fabric which contains silk will not necessarily be included. See 28 L. J. C. P. 265; 33 L. J. Ex. 187.

SILK GOWN. Used especially of the gowns worn in England by king's counsel; hence, "to take silk" means to attain the rank of king's counsel. Mozley & Whitley.

SILVA. Lat. In the civil law. Wood; a wood.

SILVA CÆDUA.

In the Civil Law

That kind of wood which was kept for the purpose of being cut.

In English law

Under wood; coppice wood. 2 Inst. 642; Cowell. All small wood and under timber, and likewise timber when cut down, under twenty years' growth; titheable wood. 3 Salk. 347. See, also, Sylva Cædua.

SILVER. Coin made of silver; silver money; money (in general). Webster, Dict.; Cook v. State, 130 Ark. 90, 196 S. W. 922, 924.

SILVER SALT. A name applied commercially to anthraquinone sulphoacid, a coal tar product. Newport Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 115, 116.

SIMILAR. Nearly corresponding; resembling in many respects; somewhat like; having a general likeness. Scott v. State, 107 Ohio St. 475, 141 N. E. 19, 23; Greenbaum v. De Jong, 166 N. Y. S. 1042, 1044; People v. Standard Home Co., 59 Colo. 355, 148 P. 869; In re Bonsall's Estate, 288 Pa. 39, 135 A. 724, 725; Commonwealth v. Nance, 158 Ky. 444, 165 S. W. 423, 424; Commercial Nat. Bank of Checotah v. Phillips, 61 Okl. 179, 160 P. 920, 921; Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Brown, 92 Vt. 390, 104 A. 234, 236.

Also, sometimes, exactly like; identical; exactly corresponding (at least in all essential particulars). Fletcher v. Interstate Chemical Co., 94 N. J. Law, 332, 110 A. 709; Stowell v. Blanchard, 122 Me. 368, 119 A. 866, 868; Commercial Nat. Bank of Checotah v. Phillips, 61 Okl. 179, 160 P. 920, 921. Thus, a statutory provision in relation to "previous conviction of a similar offense" may mean conviction of an offense identical in kind. Com. v. Fontain, 127 Mass. 454.

SIMILAR DESCRIPTION. Such words as used in a tariff act import that the goods are similar in product and adapted to similar uses; not necessarily that they have been produced by similar methods of manufacture.

Greenleaf v. Goodrich, 1 Hask. 586, Fed. Cas. No. 5,778.

SIMILITER. Lat. In pleading. Likewise; the like. The name of the short formula used either at the end of pleadings or by itself, expressive of the acceptance of an issue of fact tendered by the opposite party; otherwise termed a "joinder in issue." Steph. Pl. 57, 237. See Solomons v. Chesley, 57 N. H. 163; 2 Saund. 319 b; Shaw v. Redmond, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 32. The plaintiff's reply, that, as the defendant has put himself upon the country, he, the plaintiff, does the like. It occurs only when the plea has the conclusion to the country, and its effect is to join the plaintiff in the issue thus tendered by the defendant. Co. Litt. 126 a.

Similitudo legalis est casuum diversorum inter se collatorum similis ratio; quod in uno similitum valet, valebit in altero. Dissimilium, dissimilis est ratio. Legal similarity is a similar reason which governs various cases when compared with each other; for what avails in one similar case will avail in the other. Of things dissimilar, the reason is dissimilar. Co. Litt. 191; Benj. Sales 379.

Simonia est voluntas sive desiderium emendi vel vendendi spiritalia vel spiritualibus adherentia. Contractus ex turpi causa et contra bonos mores. Hob. 167. Simony is the will or desire of buying or selling spiritualities, or things pertaining thereto. It is a contract founded on a bad cause, and against morality.

SIMONY. In English ecclesiastical law. The corrupt presentation of any one to an ecclesiastical benefice for money, gift, or reward. 2 Bl. Comm. 278. An unlawful contract for presenting a clergyman to a benefice. The buying or selling of ecclesiastical preferments or of things pertaining to the ecclesiastical order. Hob. 167. See State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 58 N. W. 728, 24 L. R. A. 68.

An unlawful agreement to receive a temporal reward for something holy or spiritual. Code 1, 3, 31; Ayliffe, Parerg. 496.

Giving or receiving any material advantage in return for spiritual promotion, whether such advantage be actually received or only stipulated for. Jenks, Mod. Land L. 220.

SIMPLA. Lat. In the civil law. The single value of a thing. Dig. 21, 2, 37, 2.

SIMPLE. Pure; unmixed; not compounded; not aggravated; not evidenced by sealed writing or record.

As to simple "Assault," "Average," "Battery," "Blockade," "Bond," "Confession," "Contract," "Contract Debt," "Deposit," "Imprisonment," "Interest," "Larceny," "Obligation," "Tool," "Trust," and "Warrantice," see those titles.

SIMPLE SENTENCE. In rhetoric, one in which only one principal statement is made, even though there be adverbial phrases modifying the predicate. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Tex. Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247, 251.

SIMPLEX. Lat. Simple; single; pure; unqualified.

Charta Simplex

A deed-poll or single deed. Jacob, Law Dict.

Simplex Beneficium

In ecclesiastical law. A minor dignity in a cathedral or collegiate church, or any other ecclesiastical benefice, as distinguished from a cure of souls. It may therefore be held with any parochial cure, without coming under the prohibitions against pluralities. Wharton.

Simplex Dictum

In old English practice. Simple averment; mere assertion without proof.

Simplex Justitiarius

Simplex Loquela

In old English practice. Simple speech; the mere declaration or plaint of a plaintiff.

Simplex Obligatio

A single obligation; a bond without a condition. 2 Bl. Comm. 340.

Simplex commendatio non obligat. Mere recommendation [of an article] does not bind, [the vendor of it.] Dig. 4, 3, 37; 2 Kent, Comm. 485; Broom, Max. 781; 4 Taunt. 488; 16 Q. B. 282, 283; Cro. Jac. 4; 2 Allen (Mass.) 214; 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 354; 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 95.

Simplex et pura donatio dici poterit, ubi nulla est adjecta conditio nec modus. A gift is said to be pure and simple when no condition or qualification is annexed. Bract. 1.

Simplicitas est legibus amica; et nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur. 4 Coke, 8. Simplicity is favorable to the laws; and too much subtlety in law is to be reprobated.

SIMPLICITER. Lat. Simply; without ceremony; in a summary manner.

Directly; immediately; as distinguished from inferentially or indirectly.

By itself; by its own force; per se.

SIMUL CUM. Lat. Together with. In actions of tort and in prosecutions, where several persons united in committing the act complained of, some of whom are known and others not, it is usual to allege in the declaration or indictment that the persons therein named did the injury in question, "together with (simul cum) other persons unknown." In cases of riots, it is usual to charge that A B, together with others unknown, did the act complained of. 2 Chitty, Cr. Law 488; 2 Salk. 593.

When a party sued with another pleads separately, the plea is generally entitled in the name of the person pleading, adding, "sued with —," naming the other party. When this occurred, it was, in the old phraseology, called pleading with a simul cum.

SIMUL ET SEMEL. Lat. Together and at one time.

SIMULATE. To assume the mere appearance of, without the reality; to assume the signs or indications of, falsely; to counterfeit; feign; imitate; pretend. Harryman v. Harryman, 93 Kan. 223, 144 P. 262, 265, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 369. To engage, usually with the cooperation or connivance of another person, in an act or series of acts, which are apparently transacted in good faith, and intended to be followed by their ordinary legal consequences, but which in reality conceal a fraudulent purpose of the party to gain thereby some advantage to which he is not entitled, or to injure, delay, or defraud others. See Cartwright v. Bamberger, 90 Ala. 405, 8 So. 264.

SIMULATED CONTRACT. One which, though clothed in concrete form, has no existence in fact. It may at any time and at the demand of any person in interest be declared a sham and may be ignored by creditors of the apparent vendor. Hibernia Bank & Trust Co. v. Louisiana Ave. Realty Co., 143 La. 962, 79 So. 554, 556.

SIMULATED FACT. In the law of evidence. A fabricated fact; an appearance given to things by human device, with a view to deceive and mislead. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 131.

SIMULATED JUDGMENT. One which is apparently rendered in good faith, upon an actual debt, and intended to be collected by the usual process of law, but which in reality is entered by the fraudulent contrivance of the parties, for the purpose of giving to one of them an advantage to which he is not entitled, or of defrauding or delaying third persons.

SIMULATED SALE. One which has all the appearance of an actual sale in good faith, intended to transfer the ownership of property for a consideration, but which in reality covers a collusive design of the parties to put the property beyond the reach of creditors, or proceeds from some other fraudulent purpose.

SIMULATIO LATENS. Lat. A species of feigned disease, in which disease is actually present, but where the symptoms are falsely aggravated, and greater sickness is pretended than really exists. Beck, Med. Jur. 3.

SIMULATION.

In the Civil Law

Misrepresentation or concealment of the truth; as where parties pretend to perform a transaction different from that in which they really are engaged. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 181.

In French Law

Collusion; a fraudulent arrangement between two or more persons to give a false or deceptive appearance to a transaction in which they engage.

SIMULTANEOUS. At the same time. State v. Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric Co., 103 Ohio St. 280, 133 N. E. 487, 488.

The word "simultaneous," as used in a patent claim, does not imply absolute synchronism from beginning to end, but has some elasticity. Events may be substantially or relatively simultaneous, although not absolutely so. Westinghouse Mach. Co. v. C. & G. Cooper Co. (C. C. A.) 245 F. 463, 468.

SINCE. This word's proper signification is "after," Keller v. Keller, 121 Kan. 520, 247 P. 433, 435, 49 A. L. R. 113, and in its apparent sense it includes the whole period between the event and the present time. Jones v. Bank, 79 Me. 195, 9 A. 22. "Since" a day named, does not necessarily include that day. Monroe v. Acworth, 41 N. H. 201.

SINDERESIS. "A natural power of the soul, set in the highest part thereof, moving and stirring it to good, and abhorring evil. And therefore sinderesis never sinneth nor erreth. And this sinderesis our Lord put in man, to the intent that the order of things should be observed. And therefore sinderesis is called by some men the 'law of reason,' for it ministereth the principles of the law of reason, the which be in every man by nature, in that he is a reasonable creature." Doct. & Stud. 39.

SINE. Lat. Without.

SINE ANIMO REVERTENDI. Without the intention of returning. 1 Kent, Comm. 78.

SINE ASSENSU CAPITULI. Without the consent of the chapter. In old English practice. A writ which lay where a dean, bishop, prebendary, abbot, prior, or master of a hospital aliened the lands holden in the right of his house, abbey, or priory, without the consent of the chapter; in which cases his successor might have this writ. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 194, I; Cowell.

SINE CONSIDERATIONE CURIÆ. Without the judgment of the court. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 47, § 13.

SINE DECRETO. Without authority of a judge. 2 Kames, Eq. 115.

SINE DIE. Without day; without assigning a day for a further meeting or hearing.

Hence, a final adjournment; final dismissal of a cause. Quod eat sine die, that he go without day; the old form of a judgment for the defendant, i. e., a judgment discharging the defendant from any further appearance in court.

SINE HOC QUOD. Without this, that. A technical phrase in old pleading, of the same import with the phrase "absque hoc quod."

SINE NUMERO. Without stint or limit. A term applied to common. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 19, § 8.

SINE PROLE. Without issue. Used in genealogical tables, and often abbreviated into "s. p."

SINE QUA NON. Without which not. That without which the thing cannot be. An indispensable requisite or condition.

Sine possessione usucapio procedere non potest. There can be no prescription without possession.

SINECURE. In ecclesiastical law. When a rector of a parish neither resides nor performs duty at his benefice, but has a vicar under him endowed and charged with the cure thereof, this is termed a "sinecure." Brown.

An ecclesiastical benefice without cure of souls.

In popular usage, the term denotes an office which yields a revenue to the incumbent, but makes little or no demand upon his time or attention.

SINGLE. Unitary; detached; individual; affecting only one person; containing only one part, article, condition, or covenant. Alone; abstracted from others. State v. Patch, 64 Mont. 565, 210 P. 748, 750. Unmarried. In re Rudman's Estate, 244 Pa. 248, 90 A. 566, 567. The term is applicable to a widow; Crum v. Brock, 136 Miss. 858, 101 So. 704, 705; 12 L. J. W. C. 74; and occasionally even to a married woman living apart from her husband; 12 Q. B. D. 681.

Sometimes, principal; dominating. Attorney General v. Marx, 203 Mich. 331, 168 N. W. 1005, 1006.

SINGLE CREDITOR. One having a lien only on a single fund;—distinguished from double creditor, who is one having a lien on two funds. Newby v. Fox, 90 Kan. 317, 133 P. 890, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 302.

SINGULAR. Each; as in the expression "all and singular." Also, individual. In grammar, the singular is used to express only one. In law, the singular frequently includes the plural. Under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21, §

4 words in acts of parliament importing the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa, unless the contrary is expressly provided. Whart. Lex.

As to singular "Successor," and "Title," see those titles.

Singuli in solidum tenentur. Each is bound for the whole. 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 242, 252.

SINKING FUND. See Fund.

SIPESSOCUA. In old English law. A franchise, liberty, or hundred.

SIST, v. In Scotch practice. To stay proceedings. Bell.

SIST, n. In Scotch practice. A stay or suspension of proceedings; an order for a stay of proceedings. Bell.

SISTER. A woman who has the same father and mother with another, or has one of them only. In the first case, she is called sister, simply; in the second, half-sister. Wood v. Mitchell, 61 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 48; People v. Elliff, 74 Colo. 81, 219 P. 224, 225. See, also, In re Benson's Estate, 99 Misc. Rep. 222, 163 N. Y. S. 670, 671. The word is the correlative of "brother."

SIT. To hold court; to do any act of a judicial nature. Russell v. Crook County Court, 75 Or. 168, 146 P. 806, 808; Faulkner v. Walker, 36 Ga. App. 636, 137 S. E. 909, 910. To hold a session, as of a court, grand jury, legislative body, etc. To be formally organized and proceeding with the transaction of business. See Allen v. State, 102 Ga. 619, 29 S. E. 470; Cock v. State, 8 Tex. App. 659; Boyd v. Kellog, 121 Md. 42, 88 A. 30, 31.

SITHCUNDMAM. In Saxon law. The high constable of a hundred.

SITIO GANADO MAYOR. (Sometimes written, also, sitio de ganado mayor.) Sp. In Spanish and Mexican land law, a tract of land in the form of a square, each side of which measures 5,000 varas; the distance from the center of each sitio to each of its sides should be measured directly to the cardinal points of the compass, and should be 2,500 varas. U. S. v. Cameron, 3 Ariz. 100, 21 P. 177. Equivalent to 4338.464 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 161 U. S. 219, 16 S. Ct. 544, 40 L. Ed. 673. A square league. U. S. v. Sutherland, 19 How. 363, 364, 15 L. Ed. 666; Corrigan v. State, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 171, 94 S. W. 95, 100.

—Sitio de ganado menor, or sheep ranch, is equivalent to 1928.133 acres. Ainsa v. U. S., 161 U. S. 219, 16 S. Ct. 544, 40 L. Ed. 673.

SITTINGS. In practice. The holding of a court, with full form, and before all the judges; as a sitting in banc. 3 Steph. Comm. 423.

The holding of a court of nisi prius by one or more of the judges of a superior court, instead of the ordinary nisi prius judge. 3 Steph. Comm. 422.

SITTINGS AFTER TERM. Sittings in banc after term were held by authority of the St. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 32. The courts were at liberty to transact business at their sittings as in term-time, but the custom was to dispose only of cases standing for argument or judgment. Wharton.

SITTINGS IN BANK, or BANC. The sessions of a court, with the full bench present, for the purpose of determining matters of law argued before them. The sittings which the respective superior courts of common law hold during every term for the purpose of hearing and determining the various matters of law argued before them. They are so called in contradistinction to the sittings at nisi prius, which are held for the purpose of trying issues of fact.

SITTINGS IN CAMERA. See Chambers.

SITUS. Lat. Situation; location. Smith v. Bank, 5 Pet. 524, 8 L. Ed. 212; Heston v. Finley, 118 Kan. 717, 236 P. 841, 843; Avery v. Interstate Grocery Co., 118 Okl. 268, 248 P. 340, 341, 52 A. L. R. 528. Site; position; the place where a thing is, considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. See Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393, 16 L. R. A. 729; Bullock v. Guilford, 59 Vt. 516, 9 A. 360; Fenton v. Edwards, 126 Cal. 43, 58 P. 320, 46 L. R. A. 832, 77 Am. St. Rep. 141.

Sive tota res evincatur, sive pars, habet regressum emptor in venditorem. The purchaser who has been evicted in whole or in part has an action against the vendor. Dig. 21, 2, 1; Broom, Max. 768.

SIX ACTS, THE. The acts passed in 1819, for the pacification of England, are so called. They, in effect, prohibited the training of persons to arms; authorized general searches and seizure of arms; prohibited meetings of more than fifty persons for the discussion of public grievances; repressed with heavy penalties and confiscations seditious and blasphemous libels; and checked pamphleteering by extending the newspaper stamp duty to political pamphlets. Brown.

SIX ARTICLES, LAWS OF. A celebrated act entitled "An act for abolishing diversity of opinion," (31 Hen. VIII. c. 14,) enforcing conformity under the severest penalties on six of the strongest points in the Roman Catholic religion: Transubstantiation, communion in one kind, the celibacy of the clergy, monastic vows, the sacrifice of the mass, and auricular confession. 4 Steph. Com. 183; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 378. Repealed by 1 Eliz. c. 1.

SIX CLERKS. In English practice. Officers of the court of chancery, who received and filed all bills, answers, replications, and other papers, signed office copies of pleadings, examined and signed dockets of decrees, etc., and had the care of all records in their office. Holthouse; 3 Bl. Comm. 443. They were abolished by St. 5 Vict. c. 5.

SIX-DAY LICENSE. In English law. A liquor license, containing a condition that the premises in respect of which the license is granted shall be closed during the whole of Sunday, granted under section 49 of the licensing act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94.)

SIXHINDI. Servants of the same nature as rod knights, (q. v.) Anc. Inst. Eng.

SKELETON BILL. One drawn, indorsed, or accepted in blank.

636, 260 S. W. 523, 525; State v. Roy, 158 La. 352, 104 So. 112, 113.

"Libel" and "slander" are both methods of defamation; the former being expressed by print, writing, pictures, or signs; the latter by oral expressions. Spence v. Johnson, 142 Ga. 267, 82 S. E. 646, 647, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1195.

SLANDER OF TITLE. This is a statement of something tending to cut down the extent of title to some estate vested in the plaintiff. Such statement, in order to be actionable, must be false and malicious; i. e., both untrue and done on purpose to injure the plaintiff. Damage must also have resulted from the statement. Brown. See Burkett v. Griffith, 90 Cal. 532, 27 P. 527, 13 L. R. A. 707, 25 Am. St. Rep. 151; Carbondale Inv. Co. v. Burdick, 67 Kan. 329, 72 P. 781; Butts v. Long, 94 Mo. App. 687, 68 S. W. 754; Fearon v. Fodera, 169 Cal. 370, 148 P. 200, 202, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 312; Kelly v. First State Bank, 145 Minn. 331, 177 N. W. 347, 9 A. L. R. 929.

SLANDERER. One who maliciously and without reason imputes a crime or fault to another of which he is innocent. See Slander.

SLANDEROUS PER SE. Words falsely spoken of another are slanderous per se only when they impute the commission of a crime involving moral turpitude, impute the existence of a loathsome and infectious disease, impute unfitness to perform the duties of an office or employment, prejudice in a profession or trade, or tend to disinherit him. Smallwood v. York, 163 Ky. 139, 173 S. W. 380, 381, L. R. A. 1915D, 578; Edwards X-Ray Co. v. Ritter Dental Mfg. Co., 210 N. Y. S. 299, 300, 124 Misc. Rep. 898.

SLAVE. A person who is wholly subject to the will of another; one who has no freedom of action, but whose person and services are wholly under the control of another. Webster; Anderson v. Salant, 38 R. I. 463, 96 A. 425, 428, L. R. A. 1916D, 651.

One who is under the power of a master, and who belongs to him; so that the master may sell and dispose of his person, of his industry, and of his labor, without his being able to do anything, have anything, or acquire anything, but what must belong to his master. Civ. Code La. 1838, art. 35.

SLAVE-TRADE. The traffic in slaves, or the buying and selling of slaves for profit.

SLAVERY. The condition of a slave; that civil relation in which one man has absolute power over the life, fortune, and liberty of another.

SLAY. This word, in an indictment, adds nothing to the force and effect of the word "kill," when used with reference to the taking of human life. It is particularly applicable to the taking of human life in battle; and, when it is not used in this sense, it is synonymous with "kill." State v. Thomas, 32 La. Ann. 351.

SLEDGE. A hurdle to draw traitors to execution. 1 Hale, P. C. 82.

SLEEPING PARTNER. A dormant partner; one whose name does not appear in the firm, and who takes no active part in the business, but who has an interest in the concern, and shares the profits, and thereby becomes a partner, either absolutely, or as respects third persons.

SLEEPING RENT. In English law. An expression frequently used in coal-mine leases and agreements for the same. It signifies a fixed or dead, i. e., certain, rent, as distinguished from a rent or royalty varying with the amount of coals gotten, and is payable although the mine should not be worked at all, but should be sleeping or dead, whence the name. Brown.

SLICE. An indeterminate part or portion. Read v. McKeague, 252 Mass. 162, 147 N. E. 585.

SLICK. "Smooth, with a slippery or greasy smoothness." McCall v. B. Nugent Bros. Dry Goods Co. (Mo. Sup.) 236 S. W. 324, 327.

SLIGHT. As to slight "Care," "Evidence," "Fault," and "Negligence," see those titles.

SLIP. In negotiations for a policy of insurance. In England, the agreement is in practice concluded between the parties by a memorandum called the "slip," containing the terms of the proposed insurance, and initialed by the underwriters. Sweet.

Also that part of a police court which is divided off from the other parts of the court, for the prisoner to stand in. It is frequently called the "dock." Brown.

The intermediate space between two wharves or docks; the opening or vacant space between two piers. See Thompson v. New York, 11 N. Y. 120; New York v. Scott, 1 Caines (N. Y.) 543.

A break or cleavage in the continuity of the slate structure of the roof of a mine. Edgren v. Scandia Coal Co., 171 Iowa, 459, 151 N. W. 519, 522.

SLIPPA. A stirrup. There is a tenure of land in Cambridgeshire by holding the sovereign's stirrup. Wharton.

SLOPE. A "slope," within the meaning of a mining statute, is a level or inclined way, passage, or opening used for the same purpose as a shaft. Roberts v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. (C. C. A.) 255 F. 469, 471.

SLOUGH. An arm of a river, flowing between islands and the main-land, and separating the islands from one another. Sloughs have not the breadth of the main river, nor does the main body of water of the stream flow through them. Dunlieth & D. Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55 Iowa, 565, 8 N. W. 443.

SLOUGH SILVER. A rent paid to the castle of Wigmore, in lieu of certain days' work in harvest, heretofore reserved to the lord from his tenants. Cowell.

SLUICeway. An artificial channel into which water is let by a sluice. Specifically, a trench constructed over the bed of a stream, so that logs or lumber can be floated down to a convenient place of delivery. Webster. See Anderson v. Munch, 29 Minn. 416, 13 N. W. 192.

SMAKA. In old records. A small, light vessel; a smack. Cowell.

SMALL DEBTS COURTS. The several county courts established by St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, for the purpose of bringing justice home to every man's door.

SMALL TITHES. All personal and mixed tithes, and also hops, flax, saffrons, potatoes, and sometimes, by custom, wood. Otherwise called "privy tithes." 2 Steph. Comm. 726.

SMART-MONEY. Vindictive or exemplary damages given by way of punishment and example, in cases of gross misconduct of defendant. See Brewer v. Jacobs (C. C.) 22 F. 224; Springer v. Somers Fuel Co., 196 Pa. 156, 46 A. 370; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 371, 14 L. Ed. 181; Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541, 5 P. 119, 49 Am. Rep. 366; Cotton v. Fisheries Products Co., 181 N. C. 151, 106 S. E. 487, 488.

SMELLER. Witness in liquor case who qualifies as "smeller" is one who is shown to know liquor by smell. Mathews v. State, 21 Ala. App. 181, 106 So. 390, 391.

SMELTING. A melting of ores in the presence of some re-agent which operates to separate the metallic element by combining with a non-metallic element. Lowrey v. Smelting & Aluminum Co. (C. C.) 68 F. 354.

SMOKE-FARTHINGS. In old English law. An annual rent paid to cathedral churches; another name for the pentecostals or customary oblations offered by the dispersed inhabitants within a diocese, when they made their processions to the mother cathedral church. Cowell.

SMOKE-SILVER. In English law. A sum paid to the ministers of divers parishes as a modus in lieu of tithe-wood. Blount.

SMUGGLING. The offense of importing prohibited articles, or of defrauding the revenue by the introduction of articles into consumption, without paying the duties chargeable upon them. It may be committed indifferently either upon the excise or customs revenue. Wharton.

The fraudulent taking into a country, or out of it, merchandise which is lawfully prohibited. (Quoted and approved by Brewer, J. in Dunbar v. U. S., 156 U. S. 185, 15 S. Cc. 325, 39 L. Ed. 390.)

"The bringing on shore, or carrying from the shore, goods and merchandise, for which the duty has not been paid, or of goods of which the importation or exportation is prohibited." 6 Bac. Abr. 258. So, in almost precisely the same words in 1 Hawk. Pl. Cr. 661; 1 Russ. Cr. 172; Gillespie v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 13 F.(2d) 736, 738.

SNOTTERING SILVER. A small duty which was paid by servile tenants in Wylegh to the abbot of Colchester. Cowell.

SO. This term is sometimes the equivalent of "hence," or "therefore," and it is thus understood whenever what follows is an illustration of, or conclusion from, what has gone before. Clem v. State, 33 Ind. 431.

In connection with time, it suggests a period of indefinite duration. Thus, an agreement to pay rent "within a week or so" after a specified date is sufficiently complied with by payment 13 days after the date fixed. Marshall v. Partyka, 98 Conn. 778, 120 A. 507, 508.

SO HELP YOU GOD. The formula at the end of a common oath.

SOAKAGE. The term "soakage," as used in the laws and regulations relating to withdrawal of liquors from bonded warehouses, means the spirits which in course of time in the warehouse had been absorbed by the staves of the barrel containing it. Bernheim Distilling Co. v. Mayes (D. C.) 268 F. 629, 630.

SOBER. Moderate in, or abstinent from, the use of intoxicating liquors. American Cigar Co. v. Fabacher, 156 La. 182, 100 So. 299, 300.

SOBRE. Span. Above; over; upon. Ruis v. Chambers, 15 Tex. 586, 592.

SOBRE-JUEZES. In Spanish law. Superior judges. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 4, l. 1.

SOBRINI and SOBRINÆ. Lat. In the civil law. The children of cousins german in general.

SOC, SOK, or SOKA. In Saxon law. Jurisdiction; a power or privilege to administer justice and execute the laws; also a shire, circuit, or territory. Cowell.

SOCA. A seigniorship or lordship, enfranchised by the king, with liberty of holding a court of his socmen or socagers; i. e., his tenants.

SOCAGE. Socage tenure, in England, is the holding of certain lands in consideration of certain inferior services of husbandry to be performed by the tenant to the lord of the fee. "Socage," in its most general and extensive signification, seems to denote a tenure by any certain and determinate service. And in this sense it is by the ancient writers constantly put in opposition to tenure by chivalry or knight-service, where the render was precarious and uncertain. Socage is of two sorts,—free socage, where the services are not only certain, but honorable; and villein socage, where the services, though certain, are of baser nature. Such as hold by the former tenure are also called in Glanvil and other authors by the name of "liberi sokemanni," or tenants in free socage. By the statute 12 Car. 2, c. 24, all the tenures by knight-service were, with one or two immaterial exceptions, converted into free and common socage. See Cowell; Bract. l. 2, c. 35; 2 Bl. Comm. 79; Fleta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 9; Litt. § 117; Glan. l. 3, c. 7.

SOCAGER. A tenant by socage.

Socagium idem est quod servitium socæ; et soca, idem est quod caruca. Co. Litt. 86. Socage is the same as service of the soc; and soc is the same thing as a plow.

SOCER. Lat. In the civil law. A wife's father; a father-in-law. Calvin.

SOCIAL CONTRACT, or COMPACT. In political philosophy, a term applied to the theory of the origin of society associated chiefly with the names of Hobbes, Locke and Rousseau, though it can be traced back to the Greek Sophists. Rousseau (Contrat Social) held that in the pre-social state man was unwarlike and timid. Laws resulted from the combination of men who agreed, for mutual protection, to surrender individual freedom of action. Government must therefore rest on the consent of the governed. Encycl. Br.

SOCIAL INSURANCE. "Social insurance" covers insurance referred to under the head: Unemployment, old age pensions, mothers' and orphans' pensions, sickness, etc. Smythe v. Home Life & Accident Ins. Co., 134 La. 368, 64 So. 142, 143.

SOCIAL SETTLEMENT. The term "social settlement," as applied to organizations engaged in charitable or philanthropic work, implies a fixed locality to be benefited by supplying moral, physical, and educational help to the poor and needy. In re Young Women's Christian Ass'n (Sup.) 141 N. Y. S. 260, 261.

SOCIALISM. Any theory or system of social organization which would abolish, entirely or in great part, the individual effort and competition on which modern society rests, and substitute for it co-operative action, would introduce a more perfect and equal distribution of the products of labor, and would make land and capital, as the instruments and means of production, the joint possession of the members of the community.

SOCIDA.In Civil Law

The name of a contract by which one man delivers to another, either for a small recompense or for a part of the profits, certain animals on condition that if any of them perish they shall be replaced by the bailee or he shall pay their value.

A contract of hiring, with the condition that the bailee takes upon him the risk of the loss of the thing hired. Wolff § 638.

SOCIEDAD. In Spanish law. Partnership. Schm. Civil Law, 153, 154.

SOCIEDAD ANONIMA. In Spanish and Mexican law. A business corporation. "By the corporate name, the shareholders' names are unknown to the world; and, so far as their connection with the corporation is concerned, their own names may be said to be anonymous, that is, nameless. Hence the derivation of the term 'anonymous' as applied to a body of persons associated together in the form of a company to transact any given business under a company name which does not disclose any of their own." Hall, Mex. Law, § 749.

SOCIETAS. Lat. In the civil law. Partnership; a partnership; the contract of partnership. Inst. 3, 26. A contract by which the goods or labor of two or more are united in a common stock, for the sake of sharing in the gain. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 13, no. 12.

SOCIETAS LEONINA. That kind of society or partnership by which the entire profits belong to some of the partners, in exclusion of the rest. So called in allusion to the fable of the lion, who, having entered into partnership with other animals for the purpose of hunting, appropriated all the prey to himself. Wharton.

SOCIETAS NAVALIS. A naval partnership; an association of vessels; a number of ships pursuing their voyage in company, for purposes of mutual protection.

SOCIÉTÉ. Fr. In French law. Partnership. See Commendam.

SOCIÉTÉ ANONYME. In French law originally a partnership conducted in the name of one of the members; the others were strictly secret partners. To creditors of the firm they came into no relation and under no liability. An association where the liability of all the partners is limited. It had in England until lately no other name than that of "chartered company," meaning thereby a joint-stock company whose shareholders, by a charter from the crown, or a special enactment of the legislature, stood exempted from any liability for the debts of the concern, beyond the amount of their subscriptions. 2 Mill, Pol. Econ. 485.

SOCIÉTÉ D'ACQUETS. A written contract between husband and wife to regard as community property only those things which are acquired during the marriage.

SOCIÉTÉ EN COMMANDITE. In Louisiana. A partnership formed by a contract by which one person or partnership agrees to furnish another person or partnership a certain amount, either in property or money, to be employed by the person or partnership to whom it is furnished, in his or their own name or firm, on condition of receiving a share in the profits, in the proportion determined by the contract, and of being liable to losses and expenses to the amount furnished and no more. Civ. Code La. art. 2839.

SOCIÉTÉ EN NOM COLLECTIF. A partnership in which all the members are jointly and severally liable.

SOCIÉTÉ EN PARTICIPATION. A joint adventure.

SOCIÉTÉ PAR ACTIONS. A joint stock company.

SOCIETY. An association or company of persons (generally unincorporated) united together by mutual consent, in order to deliberate, determine, and act jointly for some common purpose. In a wider sense, the community or public; the people in general. See New York County Medical Ass'n v. New York, 32 Misc. 116, 65 N. Y. S. 531; Josey v. Union L. & T. Co., 106 Ga. 608, 32 S. E. 628; Gilmer v. Stone, 120 U. S. 586, 7 S. Ct. 689, 30 L. Ed. 734.

Civil Society

Usually, a state, nation, or body politic. Rutherford, Inst. c. 1, 2.

Socii mei socius meus socius non est. The partner of my partner is not my partner. Dig. 50, 17, 47, 1.

SOCIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A partner.

SOCMAN. A socager.

Free Socmen

In old English law. Tenants in free socage. Glanv. lib. 3, c. 7; 2 Bl. Comm. 79.

SOCMANRY. Free tenure by socage.

SOCNA. A privilege, liberty, or franchise. Cowell.

SOCOME. A custom of grinding corn at the lord's mill. Cowell. Bond-socome is where the tenants are bound to it. Blount.

SODOMITE. One who has been guilty of sodomy.

SODOMY. A carnal copulation by human beings with each other against nature, or with a beast. See 2 Bish. Cr. Law § 1191; Whart. Cr. Law 579; Strum v. State, 168 Ark. 1012, 272 S. W. 359.

This term is often defined in statutes and judicial decisions as meaning "the crime against nature," the "crimen innotinatum," or as carnal copulation, against the order of nature, by man with man, or, in the same unnatural manner, with woman or with a beast. See Code Ga. 1882, § 4352 (Pen. Code 1910, § 373); Honselman v. People, 168 Ill. 172, 48 N. E. 304. But, strictly speaking, it should be used only as equivalent to "pederasty," that is, the sexual act as performed by a man upon the person of another man or a boy by penetration of the anus. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am. Dec. 331. The term might also, without any great violence to its original meaning, be so extended as to cover the same act when performed in the same manner by a man upon the person of a woman. Another possible method of unilateral sexual connection, by penetration of the mouth (penem in orem alii immittere, vel penem alii in orem recipere) is not properly called "sodomy," but "fellation." That this does not constitute sodomy within the meaning of a statute is held in Com. v. Poindexter (Ky.) 118 S. W. 943; Lewis v. State, 36 Tex. Cr. R. 37, 35 S. W. 372, 61 Am. St. Rep. 831; but a greater number of jurisdictions hold otherwise. See State v. Farris, 129 Iowa, 505, 178 N. W. 361, 362; Glover v. State, 179 Ind. 459, 101 N. E. 629, 630, L. R. A. (N. S.) 473; White v. State, 136 Ga. 158, 71 S. E. 135; State v. Start, 65 Or. 178, 132 P. 512, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 265. On the other hand bestiality is the carnal copulation of a human being with a brute, or animal of the sub-human orders of the opposite sex. It is not identical with sodomy, nor is it a form of sodomy, though the two terms are often confused in legal writings and sometimes in statutes. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am. Dec. 331. Buggery is a term rarely used in statutes, but apparently including both sodomy (in the widest sense) and bestiality as above defined. See Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 355, 71 Am. Dec. 331; Com. v. J., 21 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 625.

SOFT DRINK PARLOR. A place where soft drinks are sold and drunk on premises. People v. De Geovanni, 326 Ill. 230, 157 N. E. 195, 197.

SOIL. The surface, or surface-covering of the land, not including minerals beneath it or grass or plants growing upon it. But in a wider (and more usual) sense, the term is equivalent to "land," and includes all that is below, upon, or above the surface.

SOIT. Fr. Let it be; be it so. A term used in several Law-French phrases employed in English law, particularly as expressive of the will or assent of the sovereign in formal communications with parliament or with private suitors.

SOIT BAILE AUX COMMONS. Let it be delivered to the commons. The form of indorsement on a bill when sent to the house of commons. Dyer, 93a.

SOIT BAILE AUX SEIGNEURS. Let it be delivered to the lords. The form of indorsement on a bill in parliament when sent to the house of lords. Hob. 111a.

SOIT DROIT FAIT AL PARTIE. In English law. Let right be done to the party. A phrase written on a petition of right, and subscribed by the king.

SOIT FAIT COMME IL EST DESIRE. Let it be as it is desired. The royal assent to private acts of parliament.

SOJOURNING. This term means something more than "traveling," and applies to a temporary, as contradistinguished from a permanent, residence. Henry v. Ball, 1 Wheat. 5, 4 L. Ed. 21; In re Gahn's Will, 110 Misc. 96, 180 N. Y. S. 262, 266.

SOKE-REEVE. The lord's rent gatherer in the soca. Cowell.

SOKEMANRIES. Lands and tenements which were not held by knight-service, nor by grand serjeanty, nor by petit, but by simple services; being, as it were, lands enfranchised by the king or his predecessors from their ancient demesne. Their tenants were sokemans. Wharton.

SOKEMANS. In English law. Those who held their lands in socage. 2 Bl. Comm. 100.

Sola ac per se senectus donationem testamentum aut transactionem non vitiat. Old age does not alone and of itself vitiate a will or gift. Van Alst v. Hunter, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 148, 158.

SOLAR. In Spanish law. Land; the demesne, with a house, situate in a strong or fortified place. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit. 5, c. 3, § 2.

SOLAR DAY. That period of time which begins at sunrise and ends at sunset. Co. Litt. 135a.

SOLAR MONTH. A calendar month. See Month.

SOLARES. In Spanish law. Lots of ground. This term is frequently found in grants from the Spanish government of lands in America. 2 White, Recop. 474.

SOLARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. A rent paid for the ground, where a person built on the public land. A ground rent. Spelman; Calvin.

SOLATIUM. Compensation. Damages allowed for injury to the feelings.

SOLD. See "Sale."

SOLD NOTE. A note given by a broker, who has effected a sale of merchandise, to the buyer, stating the fact of sale, quantity, price, etc. Story, Ag. § 28; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 83.

SOLDIER. A military man; a private in the army.

The word "soldier" within Soldiers' Preference Act is said to be limited to enlisted men, including noncommissioned officers and those whose enlistment arises as result of Selective Service Act, and to those who exercise command of enlisted men, including commissioned and warrant officers. Stephens v. Civil Service Commission of New Jersey, 101 N. J. Law, 192, 127 A. 808, 809.

SOLE. Single; individual; separate; the opposite of joint; as a sole tenant. Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 415, 419.

Comprising only one person; the opposite of aggregate; as a sole corporation.

Unmarried; as a feme sole. See the nouns.

SOLE AND UNCONDITIONAL OWNER. See Owner.

SOLEMN. Formal; in regular form; with all the forms of a proceeding. As to solemn "Form," see Probate. As to solemn "Oath" and "War," see the nouns.

SOLEMN OCCASION. "Solemn occasion" within constitutional provision empowering the Legislature to require the opinion of the Justices on important questions of law means occasion when such questions of law are necessary to be determined by the body making the inquiry in the exercise of the power intrusted to it by the Constitution or laws. In re Opinion of the Justices, 217 Mass. 607, 105 N. E. 440, 441.

SOLEMNES LEGUM FORMULÆ. Lat. In the civil law. Solemn forms of laws; forms of forensic proceedings and of transacting legal acts. One of the sources of the unwritten law of Rome. Butl. Hor. Jur. 47.

SOLEMNITAS ATTACHIAMENTORUM. In old English practice. Solemnity or formality of attachments. The issuing of attachments in a certain formal and regular order. Bract. fols. 439, 440; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 480.

Solemnitates juri sunt observandæ. The solemnities of law are to be observed. Jenk. Cent. 13.

SOLEMNITY. A rite or ceremony; the formality established by law to render a contract, agreement, or other act valid.

SOLEMNIZE. To solemnize, spoken of a marriage, means no more than to enter into a marriage contract, with due publication, before third persons, for the purpose of giving it notoriety and certainty; which may be before any persons, relatives, friends, or strangers, competent to testify to the facts. See Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 410, 27 Am. Rep. 359; Pearson v. Howey, 11 N. J. Law, 19; Bowman v. Bowman, 24 Ill. App. 172.

SOLICIT. To ask for with earnestness, to make petition to, to endeavor to obtain, to awake or excite to action, to appeal to, or to invite. In re Winthrop, 135 Wash. 135, 237 P. 3, 4; Briody v. De Kimpe, 91 N. J. Law, 206, 102 A. 688, 689. The term implies personal petition and importunity addressed to a particular individual to do some particular thing. Golden & Co. v. Justice's Court of Woodland Tp., Yolo County, 23 Cal. App. 778, 140 P. 49, 58.

SOLICITATION. Asking; enticing; urgent request. Any action which the relation of the parties justifies in construing into a serious request. State v. Underwood, 79 Or. 338, 155 P. 194. Thus "solicitation of chastity" is the asking or urging a woman to surrender her chastity. State v. Render, 203 Iowa, 329, 210 N. W. 911; People v. Murray, 307 Ill. 349, 138 N. E. 649, 653. The word is also used in such phrases as "solicitation to larceny," to bribery, etc.

SOLICITOR. In English law. A legal practitioner in the court of chancery. The words "solicitor" and "attorney" are commonly used indiscriminately, although they are not precisely the same, an attorney being a practitioner in the courts of common law, a solicitor a practitioner in the courts of equity. Most attorneys take out a certificate to practice in the courts of chancery, and therefore become solicitors also, and, on the other hand, most, if not all, solicitors take out a certificate to practice in the courts of common law, and therefore become attorneys also. Brown.

SOLICITOR GENERAL. In English law. One of the principal law officers of the crown, associated in his duties with the attorney general, holding office by patent during the pleasure of the sovereign, and having a right of preaudience in the courts. 3 Bl. Comm. 27. In American law, an officer of the department of justice, next in rank and authority to the attorney general, whose principal assistant he is. His chief function is to represent the United States in all cases in the supreme court and the court of claims in which the government is interested or to which it is a party, and to discharge the duties of the attorney general in the absence or disability of that officer or when there is a vacancy in the office. Rev. St. U. S. §§ 347, 359 (5 USCA §§ 293, 309).

SOLICITOR OF THE SUPREME COURT. The solicitors before the supreme courts, in Scotland, are a body of solicitors entitled to practice in the court of session, etc. Their charter of incorporation bears date August 10, 1797.

SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY. An officer of the United States attached to the department of justice, having general charge of the law business appertaining to the treasury.

SOLICITOR TO THE SUITORS' FUND. An officer of the English court of chancery, who is appointed in certain cases guardian ad litem.

SOLIDARY. A term of civil-law origin, signifying that the right or interest spoken of is joint or common. A "solidary obligation" corresponds to a "joint and several" obligation in the common law; that is, one for which several debtors are bound in such wise that each is liable for the entire amount, and not merely for his proportionate share. But in the civil law the term also includes the case where there are several creditors, as against a common debtor, each of whom is entitled to receive the entire debt and give an acquittance for it.

SOLIDUM. Lat. In the civil law. A whole; an entire or undivided thing.

SOLIDUS LEGALIS. A coin equal to 13s. 4d. of the present standard. 4 Steph. Comm. 119*n*. Originally the "solidus" was a gold coin of the Byzantine Empire, but in medieval times the term was applied to several varieties of coins, or as descriptive of a money of account, and is supposed to be the root from which "shilling" is derived.

SOLINUM. In old English law. Two plowlands, and somewhat less than a half. Co. Litt. 5*a*.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT. In a general sense, the separate confinement of a prisoner, with only occasional access of any other person, and that only at the discretion of the jailer; in a stricter sense, the complete isolation of a prisoner from all human society, and his confinement in a cell so arranged that he has no direct intercourse with or sight of any human being, and no employment or instruction. See Medley, Petitioner, 134 U. S. 160, 10 S. Ct. 384, 33 L. Ed. 835.

Solo cedit quod solo implantatur. That which is planted in the soil belongs to the soil. The proprietor of the soil becomes also the proprietor of the seed, the plant, and the tree, as soon as these have taken root. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 275.

Solo cedit quod solo inædificatur. That which is built upon the soil belongs to the soil. The proprietor of the soil becomes also proprietor of the building erected upon it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 275.

SOLUM PROVINCIALE. Lat. In Roman law. The solum italicum (an extension of the old Ager Romanus) admitted full ownership, and of the application to it of usucapio; whereas the solum provinciale (an extension of the old Ager Publicus) admitted of a possessory title only, and of longi temporis possessio only. Justinian abolished all distinctions between the two, sinking the italicum to the level of the provinciale. Brown.

Solum rex hoc non facere potest, quod non potest injuste agere. 11 Coke, 72. This alone the king cannot do, he cannot act unjustly.

Solus Deus facit hæredem, non homo. Co. Litt. 5. God alone makes the heir, not man.

SOLUTIO. Lat. In civil law. Payment, satisfaction, or release; any species of discharge of an obligation accepted as satisfactory by the creditor. The term refers not so much to the counting out of money as to the substance of the obligation. Dig. 46, 3, 54; Id. 50, 16, 176.

SOLUTIO INDEBITI. In the civil law. Payment of what was not due. From the payment of what was not due arises an obligation quasi ex contractu. When one has erroneously given or performed something to or for another, for which he was in no wise bound, he may redemand it, as if he had only lent it. The term "solutio indebiti" is here used in a very wide sense, and includes also the case where one performed labor for another, or assumed to pay a debt for which he was not bound, or relinquished a right or released a debt, under the impression that he was legally bound to do so. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 500.

Solutio pretii emptionis loco habetur. The payment of the price [of a thing] is held to be in place of a purchase, [operates as a purchase.] Jenk. Cent. p. 56, case 2; 2 Kent. Comm. 387.

SOLUTIONE FEODI MILITIS PARLIAMENTI, or FEODI BURGENSIS PARLIAMENTI. Old writs whereby knights of the shire and burgesses might have recovered their wages or allowance if it had been refused. 35 Hen. VIII. c. 11.

SOLUTUS.

In the Civil Law

Loosed; freed from confinement; set at liberty. Dig. 50, 16, 48.

In Scotch Practice

Purged. A term used in old depositions.

SOLVABILITÉ. Fr. In French law. Ability to pay; solvency. Emerig. Traité des Assur. c. 8, § 15.

SOLVENCY. The state of a person who is able to pay all his debts out of present means; excess of assets over liabilities; also such attitude of a person's property as that it may be reached and subjected by process of law, without his consent, to the payment of such debts. Mitchell v. Bradstreet Co., 116 Mo. 226, 22 S. W. 358, 724, 20 L. R. A. 138, 38 Am. St. Rep. 592; Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 127. The opposite of insolvency (q. v.). Marsh v. Dunkel, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 169; Osborne v. Smith (C. C.) 18 F. 130; Larkin v. Hapgood, 56 Vt. 601; Sterrett v. Third Nat. Bank, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 26; Reid v. Lloyd, 52 Mo. App. 282; Evens & Howard Fire Brick Co. v. Gammon (Mo. App.) 204 S. W. 832, 834; Kennedy v. Burr, 171 P. 1022, 1024, 101 Wash. 61.

SOLVENDO. Lat. Paying. An apt word of reserving a rent in old conveyances. Co. Litt. 47*a*.

SOLVENDO ESSE. Lat. To be in a state of solvency; i. e., able to pay.

Solvendo esse nemo intelligitur nisi qui solvendum potest solvere. No one is considered to be solvent unless he can pay all that he owes. Dig. 50, 16, 114.

SOLVENDUM IN FUTURO. (Lat.) To be paid in the future. Used of an indebtedness which is said to be debitum in presenti (due now) and solvendum in futuro (payable in the future). An interest in an estate may be rested in presenti, though it be solvendum in futuro, enjoyable in the future.

SOLVENT. A solvent person is one who is able to pay all his just debts in full out of his own present means. See Dig. 50, 16, 114. And see Solvency.

For "solvent debt" and "solvent partner" see "Debt" and "Partner."

SOLVERE. Lat. To pay; to comply with one's engagement; to do what one has undertaken to do; to release one's self from obligation, as by payment of a debt. Calvin.

SOLVERE PCENAS. To pay the penalty.

SOLVIT. Lat. He paid; paid. 10 East, 206.

SOLVIT AD DIEM. He paid at the day. The technical name of the plea, in an action of debt on bond, that the defendant paid the money on the day mentioned in the condition. 1 Archb. N. P. 220, 221.

SOLVIT ANTE DIEM. A plea that the money was paid before the day appointed.

SOLVIT POST DIEM. He paid after the day. The plea in an action of debt on bond that the defendant paid the money after the day named for the payment, and before the commencement of the suit. 1 Archb. N. P. 222.

Solvitur adhuc societas etiam morte socii. A partnership is moreover dissolved by the death of a partner. Inst. 3, 26, 5; Dig. 17, 2.

Solvitur eo ligamine quo ligatur. In the same manner that a thing is bound it is unloosed. Livingston v. Lynch, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 582.

SOMERSETT'S CASE. A celebrated decision of the English king's bench, in 1771, (20 How. St. Tr. 1,) that slavery no longer existed in England in any form, and could not for the future exist on English soil, and that any person brought into England as a slave could not be thence removed except by the legal means applicable in the case of any free-born person.

SOMMATION. In French law. A demand served by a huissier, by which one party calls upon another to do or not to do a certain thing. This document has for its object to establish that upon a certain date the demand was made. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 574.

SOMNAMBULISM. Sleep-walking. Whether this condition is anything more than a co-operation of the voluntary muscles with the thoughts which occupy the mind during sleep is not settled by physiologists. Wharton.

SOMPNOUR. In ecclesiastical law, an officer of the ecclesiastical courts whose duty was to serve citations or process.

SON. An immediate male descendant; the correlative of "father." Technically a word of purchase, unless explained. Wetherill v. Lefferts, 254 Pa. 484, 98 A. 1074, 1076. Its meaning may be extended by construction to include more remote descendants, such as a grandchild, and also to include an illegitimate male child, though the presumption is against this. See Flora v. Anderson (C. C.) 67 F. 185; Lind v. Burke, 56 Neb. 785, 77 N. W. 444; Yarnall's Appeal, 70 Pa. 341; Jamison v. Hay, 46 Mo. 548; Phipps v. Mulgrave, 5 Term, 323.

SON. Fr. His. Her. See Civ. Code La. art. 3556.

—Son assault demesne. His own assault. A plea which occurs in the actions of trespass and trespass on the case, by which the defendant alleges that it was the plaintiff's own original assault that occasioned the trespass for which he has brought the action, and that what the defendant did was merely in his own defense. Steph. Pl. 186; Oliverius v. Wicks, 107 Neb. 821, 187 N. W. 73, 74; Cameron Compress Co. v. Kubecka (Tex. Civ. App.) 283 S. W. 285, 287.

SON-IN-LAW. The husband of one's daughter.

SONTAGE. A tax of forty shillings anciently laid upon every knight's fee. Cowell.

SONTICUS. Lat. In the civil law. Hurtful; injurious; hindering; excusing or justifying delay. Morbus sonticus is any illness of so serious a nature as to prevent a defendant from appearing in court and to give him a valid excuse. Calvin.

SOON. If there is no time specified for the performance of an act, or if it is specified that it is to be performed soon, the law implies that it is to be performed within a reasonable time. Sanford v. Shephard, 14 Kan. 232.

SOREHON, or SORN. An arbitrary exaction, formerly existing in Scotland and Ireland. Whenever a chieftain had a mind to revel, he came down among the tenants with his followers, by way of contempt called "Gilliwit-fitts," and lived on free quarters. Wharton; Bell.

SORNER. In Scotch law. A person who takes meat and drink from others by force or menaces, without paying for it. Bell.

SOROR. Lat. In the civil law. Sister; a sister. Inst. 3, 6, 1.

SORORICIDE. The killing or murder of a sister; one who murders his sister. This is not a technical term of the law.

SORS. Lat.

In The Civil Law

Lot; chance; fortune; hazard; a lot, made of wood, gold, or other material. Money borrowed, or put out at interest. A principal sum or fund, such as the capital of a partnership. Ainsworth; Calvin.

In Old English Law

A principal lent on interest, as distinguished from the interest itself.

A thing recovered in action, as distinguished from the costs of the action.

SORTITIO. Lat. In the civil law. A drawing of lots. Sortitio iudicum was the process of selecting a number of judges, for a criminal trial, by drawing lots.

SOUGH. In English law. A drain or water-course. The channels or water-courses used for draining mines are so termed; and those mines which are near to any given sough, and lie within the same level, and are benefited by it, are technically said to lie within the title of that sough. 5 Mees. & W. 228; Brown.

SOUL SCOT. A mortuary, or customary gift due ministers, in many parishes of England, on the death of parishioners. It was originally voluntary and intended as amends for ecclesiastical dues neglected to be paid in the life-time. 2 Bl. Comm. 425.

SOUND, v. To have reference or relation to; to aim at. An action is technically said to sound in damages where it is brought not for the specific recovery of a thing, but for damages only. Steph. Pl. 105.

SOUND, adj. Whole; in good condition; marketable. So used in warranties of chattels. See Brown v. Bigelow, 10 Allen (Mass.) 242; Hawkins v. Pemberton, 35 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 383; Woodbury v. Robbins, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 522. Free from disease. Raney & Hamon v. Hamilton & White (Tex. Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 229, 230. The term may also mean free from danger to the life, safety, and welfare. Kuhn v. Cincinnati Traction Co., 109 Ohio St. 263, 142 N. E. 370, 373.

—Sound and disposing mind and memory. Testamentary capacity. See In re Hudson's Estate, 131 Minn. 439, 155 N. W. 392, 395.

—Sound health. In insurance law the term "sound health," means that the applicant has no grave impairment or serious disease, and is free from any ailment that seriously affects the general soundness and healthfulness of the system. National Life & Accident Ins.

Co. of Nashville, Tenn., v. Martin, 35 Ga. App. 1, 131 S. E. 120, 121; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Chappell, 151 Tenn. 299, 269 S. W. 21, 24. The words imply a state of health unimpaired by any serious malady of which the person himself is conscious. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Franklin, 118 Va. 418, 87 S. E. 584, 588.

—Sound mind. The normal condition of the human mind,—that state in which its faculties of perception and judgment are ordinarily well developed, and not impaired by mania, insanity, or dementia. See Daly v. Daly, 183 Ill. 269, 55 N. E. 671; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N. Y. 102; Wilson v. Mitchell, 101 Pa. 495; Spratt v. Spratt, 76 Mich. 384, 43 N. W. 627; Whitney v. Twombly, 136 Mass. 147; Harrison v. Rowan, 11 Fed. Cas. 661; Yoe v. McCord, 74 Ill. 37; Rodney v. Burton, 4 Boyce (Del.) 171, 86 A. 826, 829. "Soundness of mind" in the law of wills means that testator must have been able to understand and carry in mind, in a general way, nature and situation of his property, his relations to those having claim to his remembrance, and nature of his act. Needham Trust Co. v. Cookson, 251 Mass. 160, 146 N. E. 268; In re Lawrence's Estate, 286 Pa. 58, 132 A. 786, 789; In re Bossom's Will, 195 App. Div. 339, 136 N. Y. S. 782, 786; Rose v. Rose (Mo. Sup.) 249 S. W. 605, 607.

SOUNDING IN DAMAGES. When an action is brought, not for the recovery of lands, goods, or sums of money, (as is the case in real or mixed actions or the personal action of debt or detinue,) but for damages only, as in covenant, trespass, etc., the action is said to be "sounding in damages." Steph. Pl. 116. See Collins v. Greene, 67 Ala. 211; Rosser v. Bunn, 66 Ala. 93.

SOUNDNESS. General health; freedom from any permanent disease. 1 Car. & M. 291. See "Sound."

SOURCES OF THE LAW. The origins from which particular positive laws derive their authority and coercive force. Such are constitutions, treaties, statutes, usages, and customs.

In another sense, the authoritative or reliable works, records, documents, edicts, etc., to which we are to look for an understanding of what constitutes the law. Such, for example, with reference to the Roman law, are the compilations of Justinian and the treatise of Gaius; and such, with reference to the common law, are especially the ancient reports and the works of such writers as Bracton, Littleton, Coke, "Fleta," and others.

SOUS SEING PRIVE. Fr. In French law. Under private signature; under the private signature of the parties. A contract or instrument thus signed is distinguished from an "authentic act," which is formally concluded before a notary or judge. Civil Code La. art. 2240.

SOUTH. L. Fr. Under. Bendloe, 33.

SOUTH SEA FUND. The produce of the taxes appropriated to pay the interest of such part of the English national debt as was advanced by the South Sea Company and its annuitants. The holders of South Sea annuities have been paid off, or have received other stock in lieu thereof. 2 Steph. Comm. 578.

SOVEREIGN. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler with limited power.

In English Law

A gold coin of Great Britain, of the value of a pound sterling.

SOVEREIGN PEOPLE. The political body, consisting of the entire number of citizens and qualified electors, who, in their collective capacity, possess the powers of sovereignty and exercise them through their chosen representatives. See Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 404, 15 L. Ed. 691.

SOVEREIGN POWER or SOVEREIGN PREROGATIVE. That power in a state to which none other is superior or equal, and which includes all the specific powers necessary to accomplish the legitimate ends and purposes of government. See Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 309; Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 17 N. W. 389, 46 Am. Rep. 637; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cushing (Mass.) 81; Ætna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 307, 309.

SOVEREIGN RIGHT. A right which the state alone, or some of its governmental agencies, can possess, and which it possesses in the character of a sovereign, for the common benefit, and to enable it to carry out its proper functions; distinguished from such "proprietary" rights as a state, like any private person, may have in property or demands which it owns. See St. Paul v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 387, 48 N. W. 17.

SOVEREIGN STATES. States whose subjects or citizens are in the habit of obedience to them, and which are not themselves subject to any other (or paramount) state in any respect. The state is said to be semi-sovereign only, and not sovereign, when in any respect or respects it is liable to be controlled (like certain of the states in India) by a paramount government, (e. g., by the British empire.) Brown. "In the intercourse of nations, certain states have a position of entire independence of others, and can perform all those acts which it is possible for any state to perform in this particular sphere. These same states have also entire power of self-government; that is, of independence upon all other states as far as their own territory and citizens not living abroad are concerned. No foreign power or law can have control except by convention. This power of independent action in external and internal relations constitutes complete sovereignty." Wools. Pol. Science, I, 204.

SOVEREIGNTY. The supreme, absolute, and uncontrollable power by which any independent state is governed; supreme political authority; paramount control of the constitution and frame of government and its administration; the self-sufficient source of political power, from which all specific political powers are derived; the international independence of a state, combined with the right and power of regulating its internal affairs without foreign dictation; also a political society, or state, which is sovereign and independent. See Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. 455, 1 L. Ed. 440; Union Bank v. Hill, 3 Cold. (Tenn.) 325; Moore v. Shaw, 17 Cal. 218, 79 Am. Dec. 123; State v. Dixon, 213 P. 227, 66 Mont. 76.

The power to do everything in a state without accountability,—to make laws, to execute and to apply them, to impose and collect taxes and levy contributions, to make war or peace, to form treaties of alliance or of commerce with foreign nations, and the like. Story, Const. § 207.

"Political sovereignty is the assertion of the self-determinate will of the organic people, and in this there is the manifestation of its freedom. It is in and through the determination of its sovereignty that the order of the nation is constituted and maintained." Mulford, Nation, p. 129.

"If a determinate human superior, not in a habit of obedience to a like superior, receive habitual obedience from the bulk of a given society, that determinate superior is sovereign in that society, and the society (including the superior) is a society political and independent." Aust. Jur.

SOVERTIE. In old Scotch law. Surety. Skene.

SOWLEGROVE. February; so called in South Wales. Cowell.

SOWMING AND ROWMING. In Scotch law. Terms used to express the form by which the number of cattle brought upon a common by those having a servitude of pasturage may be justly proportioned to the rights of the different persons possessed of the servitude. Bell.

SOWNE. In old English law. To be leviable. An old exchequer term applied to sheriff's returns. 4 Inst. 107; Cowell; Spelman.

SPADARIUS. Lat. A sword-bearer. Blount.

SPADONES. Lat. In the civil law. Impotent persons. Those who, on account of their temperament or some accident they have suffered, are unable to procreate. Inst. 1, 11, 9; Dig. 1, 7, 2, 1.

SPARSIM. Lat. Here and there; scattered; at intervals. For instance, trespass to realty by cutting timber sparsim (here and there) through a tract.

SPATÆ PLACITUM. In old English law. A court for the speedy execution of justice upon military delinquents. Cowell.

SPEAK. In practice. To argue. "The case was ordered to be spoke to again." 10 Mod. 107. See Impar lance; Speaking with Prosecutor.

SPEAKER. The official designation of the president or chairman of certain legislative bodies, particularly of the house of representatives in the congress of the United States, of one or both branches of several of the state legislatures, and of the two houses of the British parliament.

The term "speaker," as used in reference to either of the houses of parliament, signifies the functionary acting as chairman. In the commons his duties are to put questions, to preserve order, and to see that the privileges of the house are not infringed; and, in the event of the numbers being even on a division, he has the privilege of giving the casting vote. The speaker of the lords is the lord chancellor or the lord keeper of the great seal of England, or, if he be absent, the lords may choose their own speaker. The duties of the speaker of the lords are principally confined to putting questions, and the lord chancellor has no more to do with preserving order than any other peer. Brown.

SPEAKING DEMURRER. See Demurrer.

SPEAKING ORDER. See Order.

SPEAKING WITH PROSECUTOR. A method of compounding an offense, allowed in the English practice, where the court permits a defendant convicted of a misdemeanor to speak with the prosecutor before judgment is pronounced; if the prosecutor declares himself satisfied, the court may inflict a trivial punishment. 4 Steph. Comm. 261.

SPECIAL. Relating to or designating a species, kind, individual, thing, or sort; designed for a particular purpose; confined to a particular purpose, object, person, or class. Unusual, extraordinary. National Cash Register Co. v. Wall, 58 Mont. 60, 190 P. 135; Steele-Smith Dry Goods Co. v. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co., 15 Ala. App. 271, 73 So. 215; People ex rel. City of New York v. Devo, 158 App. Div. 319, 143 N. Y. S. 334, 335; State ex rel. and to use of Vaught v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 270 Mo. 251, 192 S. W. 990, 995.

As to special "Acceptance," "Administration," "Agent," "Allocatur," "Allowances," "Assessment," "Assumpsit," "Bail," "Ralliff," "Bastard," "Benefit," "Calendar," "Charge," "Constable," "Contract," "Count," "Covenant," "Custom," "Damage," "Demurrer," "Deposit," "Deputy," "Election," "Examiner," "Executor," "Finding," "Guaranty," "Guardian," "Impar lance," "Indorsement," "Indorsement of Writ," "Injunction," "Insurance," "Issue," "Jurisdiction," "Jury," "Law," "Legacy," "Letter of Credit," "License," "Lien," "Limitation," "Malice," "Master," "Meeting," "Mortgage," "Motion," "Non Est Factum," "Occupant," "Owner," "Partner," "Partnership," "Plea," "Pleader," "Pleading," "Power," "Privilege," "Proceeding," "Property," "Request," "Replication," "Restraint of Trade," "Retainer," "Rule," "Service," "Sessions," "Statute," "Stock," "Tail," "Term," "Terms," "Traverse," "Trust," "Verdict," and "Warranty," see those titles.

SPECIAL ACT. A private statute; an act which operates only upon particular persons or private concerns. 1 Bl. Comm. 86; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 454, 26 L. Ed. 405.

SPECIAL CASE. In English practice. When a trial at nisi prius appears to the judge to turn on a point of law, the jury may find a general verdict, subject to the opinion of the court above, upon what is termed a "special case" to be made; that is, upon a written statement of all the facts of the case drawn up for the opinion of the court in banc, by the counsel and attorneys on either side, under correction of the judge at nisi prius. The party for whom the general verdict is so given is in such case not entitled to judgment till the court in banc has decided on the special case; and, according to the result of that decision, the verdict is ultimately entered either for him or his adversary. Brown.

SPECIAL CLAIM. In English law. A claim not enumerated in the orders of April 22, 1850, which required the leave of the court of chancery to file it. Such claims are abolished.

SPECIAL COMMISSION. In English law. An extraordinary commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, issued by the crown to the judges when it is necessary that offenses should be immediately tried and punished. Wharton.

SPECIAL ERRORS. Special pleas in error are such as, instead of joining in error, allege some extraneous matter as a ground of defeating the writ of error, e. g., a release of errors, expiration of the time within which error might be brought, or the like. To these, the plaintiff in error may either reply or demur.

SPECIAL MATTER. Under a plea of the general issue, the defendant is allowed to give special matter in evidence, usually after notice to the plaintiff of the nature of such matter, thus sparing him the necessity of pleading it specially. 3 Bl. Comm. 306.

SPECIAL PAPER. A list kept in the English courts of common law, and now in the king's bench, common pleas, and exchequer divisions of the high court, in which list demurrers, special cases, etc., to be argued are set down. It is distinguished from the new trial paper, peremptory paper, crown paper, revenue paper, etc., according to the practice of the particular division. Wharton.

SPECIAL PLACE. In Negotiable Instruments. A bank, office, or any other place of business, house or residence, usually occupied by people for business, social, or other purposes, without reference to its location, whether within or without a city, town, or village as distinguished from the city, town or village. O'Connor v. Kirby Inv. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 554, 556; Maddock v. McDonald, 111 Or. 448, 227 P. 463, 464; Corbett v. Ulsaker Printing Co., 49 N. D. 103, 190 N. W. 75, 76, 24 A. L. R. 1047; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 731; Moore v. Knemeyer (Tex. Civ. App.) 271 S. W. 653, 654.

SPECIAL REGISTRATION. In election laws. Registration for particular election only which does not entitle elector to vote at any succeeding election. Cowart v. City of Waycross, 159 Ga. 589, 126 S. E. 476, 479.

Specialia generalibus derogant. Special words derogate from general words. A special provision as to a particular subject-matter is to be preferred to general language, which might have governed in the absence of such special provision. L. R. 1 C. P. 546.

SPECIALIST. In stock exchange. Broker who remains at one post of exchange where particular stocks are dealt in and executes orders of other brokers, for which he receives commission; one who specializes in limited group of stocks. In re Brown, 242 N. Y. 1, 150 N. E. 581, 585, 44 A. L. R. 510; People ex rel. Berdan v. Goldfogle, 213 App. Div. 702, 211 N. Y. S. 107.

SPECIALTY. A writing sealed and delivered, containing some agreement. A writing sealed and delivered, which is given as a security for the payment of a debt, in which such debt is particularly specified. Bac. Abr. "Obligation," A.

A contract under seal, considered by law as entered into with more solemnity, and, consequently, of higher dignity than ordinary simple contracts. Code Ga. 1882, § 2717 (Civ. Code 1910, § 4219).

As used in statutes of limitations, the term may include not only a sealed bond, In re Harris, 101 N. J. Eq. 5, 137 A. 215, 216, but also interest coupons, whether attached or severed, McDowell v. North Side Bridge Co., 251 Pa. 585, 97 A. 97, 98.

SPECIALTY DEBT. A debt due or acknowledged to be due by deed or instrument under seal. 2 Bl. Comm. 465.

SPECIE. Coin of the precious metals, of a certain weight and fineness, and bearing the stamp of the government, denoting its value as currency. Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 695, 20 L. Ed. 460; Walkup v. Hous- ton, 65 N. C. 501; Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 536.

When spoken of a contract, the expression "performance in specie" means strictly, or according to the exact terms. As applied to things, it signifies individuality or identity. Thus, on a bequest of a specific picture, the legatee would be said to be entitled to the delivery of the picture in specie; i. e., of the very thing. Whether a thing is due in genere or in specie depends, in each case, on the will of the transacting parties. Brown.

SPECIES. Lat. In the civil law. Form; figure; fashion or shape. A form or shape given to materials.

SPECIES FACTI. In Scotch law. The particular criminal act charged against a person.

SPECIFIC. Having a certain form or designation; observing a certain form; particular; precise; definite; tending to specify, or to make particular, definite, limited or precise. Republic Casualty Co. v. Scandinavian-American Bank (D. C.) 2 F.(2d) 113, 114; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 195 Ala. 124, 71 So. 118, 123, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 696; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. South & N. A. R. Co., 184 Ala. 66, 62 So. 788, 793.

As to specific "Denial," "Devise," "Legacy," and "Performance," see those titles.

SPECIFICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Literally, a making of form; a giving of form to materials. That mode of acquiring property through which a person, by transforming a thing belonging to another, especially by working up his materials into a new species, becomes proprietor of the same. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 271.

SPECIFICATION. As used in the law relating to patents, machinery and in building contracts, the term denotes a particular or detailed statement of the various elements involved. Gilbert v. U. S., 1 Ct. Cl. 34; State v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 262, 18 N. W. 85; Wilson v. Coon (C. C.) 6 F. 614; Carroll v. Melville Shoe Corporation (C. C. A.) 272 F. 49, 55; American Automotoneer Co. v. Porter (C. C. A.) 232 F. 456, 459; Ingersoll-Rand Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 92 N. J. Law, 403, 105 A. 236, 237; State Bank of Freeport v. Cape Girardeau & C. R. Co., 172 Mo. App. 662, 155 S. W. 1111, 1113; R. J. Waddell Inv. Co. v. Hall, 255 Mo. 675, 164 S. W. 541, 544.

In Military Law

The clear and particular description of the charges preferred against a person accused of a military offense. Tytler, Mil. Law, 109; Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 22 S. Ct. 181, 46 L. Ed. 236.

In the Law of Personal Property

The acquisition of title to a thing by working it into new forms or species from the raw material; corresponding to the specificatio of the Roman law. See Lampton v. Preston, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 462, 19 Am. Dec. 104.

In Practice

A detailed and particular enumeration of several points or matters urged or relied on by a party to a suit or proceeding; as, a "specification of errors," or a "specification of grounds of opposition to a bankrupt's discharge." See Railway Co. v. McArthur, 96 Tex. 65, 70 S. W. 317; In re Glass (D. C.) 119 F. 514; Frank v. Ruzicka, 45 S. D. 49, 185 N. W. 371, 372.

SPECIFY. To mention specifically; to state in full and explicit terms; to point out; to particularize, or to distinguish by words one thing from another. Independent Highway Dist. No. 2 of Ada County v. Ada County, 24 Idaho, 416, 134 P. 542, 545; Reddig v. Looney, 208 Ill. App. 413, 419; Hollinger v. King, 282 Pa. 157, 127 A. 462, 464; Roche Valley Land Co. v. Barth, 67 Mont. 353, 215 P. 654, 655.

SPECIMEN. A sample; a part of something intended to exhibit the kind and quality of the whole. People v. Freeman, 1 Idaho, 322.

SPECULATION. In commerce. The act or practice of buying lands, goods, etc., in expectation of a rise of price and of selling them at an advance, as distinguished from a regular trade, in which the profit expected is the difference between the retail and wholesale prices, or the difference of price in the place where the goods are purchased, and the place where they are to be carried for market. Webster. See Maxwell v. Burns (Tenn. Ch. App.) 59 S. W. 1067; U. S. v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co. (C. C.) 124 F. 393; U. S. v. Kettenbach (C. C. A.) 208 F. 209, 213.

SPECULATIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

SPECULUM. Lat. Mirror or looking-glass. The title of several of the most ancient law-books or compilations. One of the ancient Icelandic books is styled "Speculum Regale."

SPEEDY EXECUTION. An execution which, by the direction of the judge at nisi prius, issues forthwith, or on some early day fixed upon by the judge for that purpose after the trial of the action. Brown.

SPEEDY REMEDY. One which, having in mind the subject-matter involved, can be pursued with expedition and without essential detriment to the party aggrieved. State v. District Court of Thirteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Yellowstone County, 50 Mont. 289, 146 P. 743, 745, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 164.

SPEEDY TRIAL. In criminal law. As secured by constitutional guaranties, a speedy trial means a trial conducted according to fixed rules, regulations, and proceedings of law, free from unreasonable delay. See People v. Hall, 51 App. Div. 57, 64 N. Y. S. 433; Nixon v. State, 2 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 507, 41 Am. Dec. 601; Cummins v. People, 4 Colo. App. 71, 34 P. 734; Benton v. Com., 91 Va. 782, 21 S. E. 495; Butts v. Commonwealth, 145 Va. 800, 133 S. E. 764, 766; Ex parte Munger, 29 Okl. Cr. 407, 234 P. 219, 221; People v. Klinger, 319 Ill. 275, 149 N. E. 799, 801, 42 A. L. R. 581; State v. Rowley, 198 Iowa, 613, 198 N. W. 37, 38; State v. Lee, 110 Or. 682, 224 P. 627, 628; State v. Harris, 101 Or. 410, 200 P. 923, 928; Hicks v. Boyne, 236 Mich. 689, 211 N. W. 35; Arrowsmith v. State, 131 Tenn. 480, 175 S. W. 545, 547, L. R. A. 1915E, 363; State v. Clark, 86 Or. 464, 168 P. 944, 946.

SPELLING. The formation of words by letters; orthography. Incorrect spelling does not vitiate a written instrument if the intention clearly appears.

SPENDTHRIFT. One who spends lavishly, improvidently, or foolishly; an unthrifty spender; a prodigal. Cent. Dict.

In some jurisdictions, under statutes, a person who by excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery of any kind shall so spend, waste, or lessen his estate as to expose himself or his family to want or suffering, or expose the town to charge or expense for the support of himself or family. Rev. St. Maine, c. 67, § 4, cl. 2 (Rev. St. 1930, c. 80, § 4, cl. 2); Pub. Laws N. H. 1926, c. 291, § 4; G. L. Mass., c. 201, § 8; Smith-Hurd Rev. St. Ill. 1931, c. 86, § 53; Young v. Young, 87 Me. 44, 22 A. 782; Morey's Appeal, 57 N. H. 54; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 152, 161; In re Bishop, 149 Ill. App. 491, 498.

Every person who is liable to be put under guardianship on account of excessive drinking, gaming, idleness, or debauchery. Comp. Laws Mich. 1929, § 15777; G. L. Vt. 3651.

SPENDTHRIFT TRUST. A term commonly applied to those trusts which are created with a view of providing a fund for the maintenance of another, and at the same time securing it against his improvidence or incapacity for his protection. Provisions against alienation of the trust fund by the voluntary act of the beneficiary or by his creditors are the usual incidents. Estes v. Estes (Tex. Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 649, 650; Hoffman v. Beltzhoover, 71 W. Va. 72, 76 S. E. 968, 969; Newcomb v. Masters, 287 Ill. 26, 122 N. E. 85, 87; Carter v. Brownell, 95 Conn. 216, 111 A. 182, 184; Fowler & Lee v. Webster, 173 N. C. 442, 92 S. E. 157, 158; Plitt v. Yakel, 129 Md. 464, 99 A. 669, 670; Keating v. Keating, 182 Iowa, 1056, 165 N. W. 74, 79; Graham v. More (Mo. Sup.) 189 S. W. 1186, 1188.

SPERATE. That of which there is hope. Thus a debt which one may hope to recover may be called "sperate," in opposition to "desperate." See 1 Chit. Pr. 520.

SPES ACCRESCENDI. Lat. Hope of surviving. 3 Atk. 762; 2 Kent, Comm. 424.

Spes est vigilantis somnium. Hope is the dream of the vigilant. 4 Inst. 203.

Spes impunitatis continuum affectum tribuit delinquendi. The hope of impunity holds out a continual temptation to crime. 3 Inst. 236.

SPES RECUPERANDI. Lat. The hope of recovery or recapture; the chance of retaking property captured at sea, which prevents the captors from acquiring complete ownership of the property until they have definitely precluded it by effectual measures. 1 Kent, Comm. 101.

SPIGURNEL. The sealer of the royal writs.

SPINNING HOUSE. A house of correction to which the authorities of Oxford and Cambridge may send persons (mostly women of frivolous character) not members of the University who are found consorting with the students, to the detriment of their morals. 4 Steph. Com. 264.

SPINSTER. The addition given, in legal proceedings, and in conveyancing, to a woman who never has been married.

SPIRITUAL. Relating to religious or ecclesiastical persons or affairs, as distinguished from "secular" or lay, worldly, or business matters. Johnson v. State, 107 Miss. 196, 65 So. 218, 220, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1183.

As to spiritual "Corporation," "Courts," and "Lords," see those titles.

SPIRITUALITIES OF A BISHOP. Those profits which a bishop receives in his ecclesiastical character, as the dues arising from his ordaining and instituting priests, and such like, in contradistinction to those profits which he acquires in his temporal capacity as a baron and lord of parliament, and which are termed his "temporalities," consisting of certain lands, revenues, and lay fees, etc. Cowell.

SPIRITUALITY OF BENEFICES. In ecclesiastical law. The tithes of land, etc. Wharton.

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS. These are inflammable liquids produced by distillation, and forming an article of commerce. See Blankenship v. State, 93 Ga. 814, 21 S. E. 130; State v. Munger, 15 Vt. 293; Allred v. State, 89 Ala. 112, 8 So. 56; Clifford v. State, 29 Wis. 329; State v. Centennial Brewing Co., 55 Mont. 500, 179 P. 296, 297; Hendley v. State, 94 Tex. Cr. R. 440, 250 S. W. 174, 175; Taylor v. State, 17 Ala. App. 579, 88 So. 205; Kenny v. Commonwealth, 211 Ky. 349, 277 S. W. 480, 481; Price v. Russell (D. C.) 296 F. 263, 266; Colotta v. State, 110 Miss. 448, 70 So. 460, 461; State v. Dennison, 85 W. Va. 261, 101 S. E. 458, 459; Shaneyfelt v. State, 8 Ala. App. 370, 62 So. 331, 332; Billing v. State, 99 Tex. Cr. R. 653, 271 S. W. 607.

The phrase "spirituous liquor," in a penal statute, cannot be extended beyond its exact literal sense. Spirit is the name of an inflammable liquor produced by distillation. Wine is the fermented juice of the grape, or a preparation of other vegetables by fermentation; hence the term does not include wine. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 118.

SPITAL, or SPITTLE. A charitable foundation; a hospital for diseased people; a hospital. Cowell.

SPLIT SENTENCE. One where penalty of fine and imprisonment, as provided by statute, is imposed and imprisonment part is suspended and fine part enforced. Cote v. Cummings, 126 Me. 330, 138 A. 547, 552.

SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION. Dividing a single cause of action, claim, or demand into two or more parts, and bringing suit for one of such parts only. The plaintiff who does this is bound by his first judgment, and can recover no more. 2 Black, Judgm. § 734.

SPOLIATION.

In English Ecclesiastical Law

An injury done by one clerk or incumbent to another, in taking the fruits of his benefice without any right to them, but under a pretended title. 3 Bl. Comm. 90, 91.

The name of a suit sued out in the spiritual court to recover for the fruits of the church or for the church itself. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 85.

In Torts

Destruction of a thing by the act of a stranger, as the erasure or alteration of a writing by the act of a stranger, is called "spoliation." This has not the effect to destroy its character or legal effect. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 566; Medlin v. Platt County, 8 Mo. 239, 40 Am. Dec. 135; Crockett v. Thomason, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 344; Foster v. Mayfield (Tex. Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 647; Smith v. Barnes, 51 Mont. 202, 149 P. 963, 967, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 330; Rushing v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Plainview (Tex. Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 337, 340; Edwards v. Thompson, 99 Wash. 188, 169 P. 327, 328; Knox v. Horne (Tex. Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 259, 260.

SPOLIATOR. Lat. A spoiler or destroyer. It is a maxim of law, bearing chiefly on evidence, but also upon the value generally of the thing destroyed, that everything most to his disadvantage is to be presumed against the destroyer, (spoliator.) contra spoliatorem omnia præsumentur. 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. 315.

Spoliatus debet ante omnia restitui. A party despoiled [forcibly deprived of possession] ought first of all to be restored. 2 Inst. 714; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law, 18.

Spoliatus episcopus ante omnia debet restitui. A bishop despoiled of his see ought, above all, to be restored. See 14 L. Q. R. 27.

SPOLIUM. Lat. In the civil and common law. A thing violently or unlawfully taken from another.

SPONDEO. Lat. In the civil law. I undertake; I engage. Inst. 3, 16, 1.

SPONDES? SPONDEO. Lat. Do you undertake? I do undertake. The most common form of verbal stipulation in the Roman law. Inst. 3, 16, 1.

Spondet peritiam artis. He promises the skill of his art; he engages to do the work in a skillful or workmanlike manner. 2 Kent, Comm. 588. Applied to the engagements of workmen for hire. Story, Bailm. § 428.

SPONSALIA, STIPULATIO SPONSALITIA. Lat. In the civil law. Espousal; betrothal; a reciprocal promise of future marriage.

SPONSIO. Lat. In the civil law. An engagement or undertaking; particularly such as was made in the form of an answer to a formal interrogatory by the other party. Calvin.

An engagement to pay a certain sum of money to the successful party in a cause. Calvin.

SPONSIO JUDICIALIS. In Roman law. A judicial wager corresponding in some respects to the "feigned issue" of modern practice.

SPONSIO LUDICRA. A trifling or ludicrous engagement, such as a court will not sustain an action for. 1 Kames, Eq. Introd. 34. An informal undertaking, or one made without the usual formula of interrogation. Calvin.

SPONSIONS. In international law. Agreements or engagements made by certain public officers (as generals or admirals in time of war) in behalf of their governments, either without authority or in excess of the authority under which they purport to be made, and which therefore require an express or tacit ratification.

SPONSOR. A surety; one who makes a promise or gives security for another, particularly a godfather in baptism.

In the Civil Law

One who intervenes for another voluntarily and without being requested.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION. The ignition of a body by the internal development of heat without the action of an external agent. Eckman Chemical Co. v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 107 Neb. 268, 185 N. W. 444, 446.

SPONTE OBLATA. Lat. A free gift or present to the crown.

Sponde virum mulier fugiens et adultera facta, dote sua careat, nisi sponsi sponte retracta. Co. Litt. 32b. Let a woman leaving her husband of her own accord, and committing adultery, lose her dower, unless taken back by her husband of his own accord.

SPORTULA. Lat. In Roman law. A largess, dole, or present; a pecuniary donation; an official perquisite; something over and above the ordinary fee allowed by law. Inst. 4, 6, 24.

SPOTTING. The placing of a railroad car at a designated place or "spot" for unloading by consignee. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Skipper, 174 Ark. 1083, 298 S. W. 849, 854; New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. General Electric Co., 219 N. Y. 227, 114 N. E. 115, 117, 1 A. L. R. 1417.

SPOUSALS. In old English law. Mutual promises to marry.

SPOUSE-BREACH. In old English law. Adultery. Cowell.

SPRING. A fountain of water; an issue of water from the earth, or the basin of water at the place of its issue. Webster. A natural chasm in which water has collected, and from which it either is lost by percolation or rises in a defined channel. Furner v. Seabury, 135 N. Y. 50, 31 N. E. 1004; Bloodgood v. Ayers, 108 N. Y. 405, 15 N. E. 433, 2 Am. St. Rep. 443; Proprietors of Mills v. Braintree Water Supply Co., 149 Mass. 478, 21 N. E. 761, 4 L. R. A. 272; Harrison v. Chaboya, 198 Cal. 473, 245 P. 1087, 1088.

SPRING-BRANCH. In American land law. A branch of a stream, flowing from a spring. Wootton v. Redd's Ex'r, 12 Grat. (Va.) 196.

SPRINGING USE. See Use.

SPUILZIE. In Scotch law. The taking away or meddling with movables in another's possession, without the consent of the owner or authority of law. Bell.

SPUR TRACK. A short track leading from a line of railway and connected with it at one end only, and not an adjunct usual or necessary to the operation of main line trains and cars. Simons Brick Co. v. City of Los Angeles, 182 Cal. 230, 187 P. 1066, 1067; Detroit & M. Ry. Co. v. Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. (D. C.) 286 F. 540, 547; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Commerce Commission, 315 Ill. 461, 146 N. E. 606, 610; Menasha Woodenware Co. v. Railroad Commission of Wisconsin, 167 Wis. 19, 166 N. W. 435, 438.

SPURIOUS. Not proceeding from the true source; not genuine; counterfeited. "A spurious bank-bill may be a legitimate impression from the genuine plate, but it must have the signatures of persons not the officers of the bank whence it purports to have issued, or else the names of fictitious persons. A spurious bill, also, may be an illegitimate impression from a genuine plate, or an impression from a counterfeit plate, but it must have such signatures or names as we have just indicated. A bill, therefore, may be both counterfeit and forged, or both counterfeit and spurious, but it cannot be both forged and spurious." Kirby v. State, 1 Ohio St. 187.

SPURIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A bastard; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation.

SPY. A person sent into an enemy's camp to inspect their works, ascertain their strength and their intentions, watch their movements, and secretly communicate intelligence to the proper officer. By the laws of war among all civilized nations, a spy is punished with death. Webster. See Vattel, 3, 179; U. S. ex rel. Wessels v. McDonald (D. C. 1920) 265 F. 754; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 44, 18 L. Ed. 281 (argument of counsel).

SQUARE. As used to designate a certain portion of land within the limits of a city or town, this term may be synonymous with "block," that is, the smallest subdivision which is bounded on all sides by principal streets, or it may denote a space (more or less rectangular) not built upon, and set apart for public passage, use, recreation, or ornamentation, in the nature of a "park" but smaller. See Caldwell v. Rupert, 10 Bush (Ky.) 179; State v. Natal, 42 La. Ann. 612, 7 South. 781; Rowzee v. Pierce, 75 Miss. 846, 23 South. 307, 40 L. R. A. 402, 65 Am. St. Rep. 625; Methodist Episcopal Church v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. Law, 13, 97 Am. Dec. 696; Rev. Laws Mass. 1902, p. 531, c. 52, § 12 (Gen. Laws 1932, c. 85, § 14).

A "block" or "square" is a portion of a city bounded on all sides by streets or avenues. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. City of Tulsa, 45 Okl. 382, 145 P. 398, 401; City of Mobile v. Chapman, 202 Ala. 194, 79 So. 566, 571.

Public Square

In its popular import, the phrase refers almost exclusively to ground occupied by a courthouse and owned by a county, Logansport v. Dunn, 8 Ind. 378; but it may be used as synonymous with park; Church of Hoboken v. Council of Hoboken, 33 N. J. Law, 13, 97 Am. Dec. 696; Woodward v. City of Des Moines, 182 Iowa, 1102, 165 N. W. 313, 314.

Square Block

Territory bounded by four streets. People ex rel. Beinert v. Miller, 100 Misc. 318, 165 N. Y. S. 602, 607; Bernfeld v. Freedenberg, 125 Misc. 645, 211 N. Y. S. 692.

SQUATTER. In American law. One who settles on another's land, particularly on public lands, without legal authority. See O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 16 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 84; Parkersburg Industrial Co. v. Schultz, 43 W. Va. 470, 27 S. E. 255; Williams v. Alt, 226 N. Y. 283, 123 N. E. 499, 500; Id., 186 App.

Div. 235, 174 N. Y. S. 460, 462; Smith v. Smith (Sup.) 174 N. Y. S. 747, 749; Rosenzweig v. Portnoy, 117 Misc. 136, 191 N. Y. S. 900, 902; Florgus Realty Corporation v. Reynolds (Sup.) 187 N. Y. S. 188, 189; Frazier v. Cropsey, 124 Misc. Rep. 367, 207 N. Y. S. 803.

SQUIRE. A contraction of "esquire."

SS. An abbreviation used in that part of a record, pleading, or affidavit, called the "statement of the venue." Commonly translated or read, "to-wit," and supposed to be a contraction of "scilicet."

Also in ecclesiastical documents, particularly records of early councils, "ss" is used as an abbreviation for subscripti. Occasionally, in Law French, it stands for sans, "without," e. g., "faire feoffment ss son baron." Bendloe, p. 180.

STAB. A wound inflicted by a thrust with a pointed weapon. State v. Cody, 18 Or. 506, 23 Pac. 891; Ward v. State, 56 Ga. 410; Ruby v. State, 7 Mo. 208.

STABILIA. A writ called by that name, founded on a custom in Normandy, that where a man in power claimed lands in the possession of an inferior, he petitioned the prince that it might be put into his hands till the right was decided, whereupon he had this writ. Wharton.

Stabit præsumptio donec probetur in contrarium. A presumption will stand good till the contrary is proved. Hob. 297; Broom, Max. 949.

STABLE-STAND. In forest law. One of the four evidences or presumptions whereby a man was convicted of an intent to steal the king's deer in the forest. This was when a man was found at his standing in the forest with a cross-bow or long-bow bent, ready to shoot at any deer, or else standing close by a tree with grey-hounds in a leash, ready to slip. Cowell; Manwood.

STABULARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. A stable-keeper. Dig. 4, 9, 4, 1.

STACHIA. In old records. A dam or head made to stop a water-course. Cowell.

STAFF-HERDING. The following of cattle within a forest.

STAGE-RIGHT is a word which it has been attempted to introduce as a substitute for "the right of representation and performance," but it can hardly be said to be an accepted term of English or American law. Sweet.

STAGIARIUS. A resident. Cowell.

STAGNUM. In old English law. A pool, or pond. Co. Litt. 5a; Johnson v. Rayner, 6 Gray (Mass.) 110.

STAKE. A deposit made to answer an event, as on a wager. See Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 539; Porter v. Day, 71 Wis. 296, 37 N. W. 259; Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228, 49 N. W. 862; Pompano Horse Club v. State, 93 Fla. 415, 111 So. 801, 813, 52 A. L. R. 51.

STAKEHOLDER primarily means a person with whom money is deposited pending the decision of a bet or wager, (q. v.) but it is more often used to mean a person who holds money or property which is claimed by rival claimants, but in which he himself claims no interest. Sweet. And see Oriental Bank v. Tremont Ins. Co., 4 Metc. (Mass.) 10; Fisher v. Hildreth, 117 Mass. 562; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 95 Mo. App. 477, 75 S. W. 691; Martin v. Francis, 173 Ky. 529, 191 S. W. 259, 262, L. R. A. 1918F, 966, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 289.

STALE, n. In Saxon law. Larceny. Whar-ton.

STALE, adj. In the language of the courts of equity, a "stale" claim or demand is one which has not been pressed or asserted for so long a time that the owner or creditor is chargeable with laches, and that changes occurring meanwhile in the relative situation of the parties, or the intervention of new interests or equities, would render the enforcement of the claim or demand against conscience. See The Galloway C. Morris, 2 Abb. U. S. 164, 9 Fed. Cas. 1,111; King v. White, 63 Vt. 158, 21 Atl. 535, 25 Am. St. Rep. 752; Ashurst v. Peck, 101 Ala. 499, 14 South. 541; The Harriet Ann, 11 Fed. Cas. 597; Thomas v. MacNeill, 138 S. C. 86, 135 S. E. 643, 645; Fordham v. Hicks (D. C.) 224 F. 810, 811; Underwood v. Underwood, 142 Ga. 441, 83 S. E. 208, 209, L. R. A. 1915B, 674.

STALLAGE. The liberty or right of pitching or erecting stalls in fairs or markets, or the money paid for the same. 1 Steph. Comm. 664.

STALLARIUS. In Saxon law. The præfectus stabuli, now master of the horse. Sometimes one who has a stall in a fair or market.

STAMP. An impression made by public authority, in pursuance of law, upon paper or parchment, upon which certain legal proceedings, conveyances, or contracts are required to be written, and for which a tax or duty is exacted.

A small label or strip of paper, bearing a particular device, printed and sold by the government, and required to be attached to mail-matter, and to some other articles subject to duty or excise. U. S. v. Skilken (D. C.) 293 F. 916, 919.

STAMP ACTS. In English law. Acts regulating the stamps upon deeds, contracts, agreements, papers in law proceedings, bills and notes, letters, receipts, and other papers.

STAMP DUTIES. Duties imposed upon and raised from stamps upon parchment and paper, and forming a branch of the perpetual revenue of the kingdom. 1 Bl. Comm. 323.

STANCE. In Scotch law. A resting place; a field or place adjoining a drove-road, for resting and refreshing sheep and cattle on their journey. 7 Bell, App. Cas. 53, 57, 58.

STAND. To abide; to submit to; as "to stand a trial."

To remain as a thing is; to remain in force. Pleadings demurred to and held good are allowed to stand.

To appear in court.

—Standing. One's place in the community in the estimation of others; his relative position and social, commercial, or moral relations; his repute, grade, or rank. Gross v. State, 186 Ind. 581, 117 N. E. 562, 564, 1 A. L. R. 1151.

—Standing aside jurors. A practice by which, on the drawing of a jury for a criminal trial, the prosecuting officer puts aside a juror, provisionally, until the panel is exhausted, without disclosing his reasons, instead of being required to challenge him and show cause. The statute 33 Edw. I. deprived the crown of the power to challenge jurors without showing cause, and the practice of standing aside jurors was adopted, in England, as a method of evading its provisions. A similar practice is in use in Pennsylvania. See Warren v. Com., 37 Pa. 54; Zell v. Com., 94 Pa. 272; Haines v. Com., 100 Pa. 322. But in Missouri, it is said that the words "stand aside" are the usual formula, used in impaneling a jury, for rejecting a juror. State v. Hultz, 106 Mo. 41, 16 S. W. 940.

—Standing by is used in law as implying knowledge, under such circumstances as rendered it the duty of the possessor to communicate it; and it is such knowledge, and not the mere fact of "standing by," that lays the foundation of responsibility. The phrase does not import an actual presence, "but implies knowledge under such circumstances as to render it the duty of the possessor to communicate it." Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 573, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Gatling v. Rodman, 6 Ind. 292; Richardson v. Chickering, 41 N. H. 380, 77 Am. Dec. 769; Morrison v. Morrison, 2 Dana (Ky.) 16; Piqua State Bank v. Brannum, 103 Kan. 25, 173 P. 1, 2.

—Standing mute. A prisoner, arraigned for treason or felony, was said to "stand mute," when he refused to plead, or answered foreign to the purpose, or, after a plea of not guilty, would not put himself upon the country.

—Standing orders are rules and forms regulating the procedure of the two houses of parliament, each having its own. They are of equal force in every parliament, except so far as they are altered or suspended from time to time. Cox, Inst. 136; May, Parl. Pr. 185.

—Standing seised to uses. A covenant to stand seised to uses is one by which the owner of an estate covenants to hold the same to the use of another person, usually a relative, and usually in consideration of blood or marriage. It is a species of conveyance depending for its effect on the statute of uses.

STANDARD. An ensign or flag used in war.

A type, model, or combination of elements accepted as correct or perfect. Ashwell v. Miller, 54 Ind. App. 381, 103 N. E. 37, 40.

STANDARD OF WEIGHT, or MEASURE. A weight or measure fixed and prescribed by law, to which all other weights and measures are required to correspond.

STANNARIES. A district which includes all parts of Devon and Cornwall where some tin work is situate and in actual operation. The tin miners of the stannaries have certain peculiar customs and privileges.

STANNARY COURTS. Courts of Devonshire and Cornwall for the administration of justice among the miners and tanners. These courts were held before the lord warden and his deputies by virtue of a privilege granted to the workers of the tin-mines there, to sue and be sued in their own courts only, in order that they might not be drawn away from their business by having to attend law-suits in distant courts. Brown.

STAPLE.

In English Law

A mart or market. A place where the buying and selling of wool, lead, leather, and other articles were put under certain terms. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 393.

In International Law

The right of staple, as exercised by a people upon foreign merchants, is defined to be that they may not allow them to set their merchandises and wares to sale but in a certain place. This practice is not in use in the United States. 1 Chit. Com. Law, 103.

In General

—Staple Inn. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.

—Statute Staple. The statute of the staple, 27 Ed. III. stat. 2, confined the sale of all commodities to be exported to certain towns in England, called estaple or staple, where foreigners might resort. It authorized a security for money, commonly called statute staple, to be taken by traders for the benefit of commerce; the mayor of the place is entitled to take recognizance of a debt in proper form, which had the effect to convey the lands of the debtor to the creditor till out of the rents and profits of them he should be satisfied. 2 Rolle, Abr. 446; Bac. Abr. Execution (B.1); Co. 4th Inst. 238. A security for a debt acknowledged to be due, so called from its being entered into before the mayor of the staple, that is to say, the grand mart for the principal commodities or manufactures of the kingdom, formerly held by act of parliament in certain trading towns. In other respects it resembled the statute-merchant, (q. v.) but like that has now fallen into disuse. 2 Bl. Comm. 160; 1 Steph. Comm. 287.

STAR-CHAMBER was a court which originally had jurisdiction in cases where the ordinary course of justice was so much obstructed by one party, through writs, combination of maintenance, or overawing influence that no inferior court would find its process obeyed. The court consisted of the privy council, the common-law judges, and (it seems) all peers of parliament. In the reign of Henry VIII. and his successors, the jurisdiction of the court was illegally extended to such a degree (especially in punishing disobedience to the king's arbitrary proclamations) that it became odious to the nation, and was abolished. 4 Steph. Comm. 310; Sweet.

STAR PAGE. The line and word at which the pages of the first edition of a law book began are frequently marked by a star in later editions, and always should be.

STARBOARD. In maritime law. The right-hand side of a vessel when the observer faces forward. "Starboard tack," the course of vessel when she has the wind on her starboard bow. Burrows v. Gower (D. C.) 119 F. 617.

STARE DECISIS. Lat. To stand by decided cases; to uphold precedents; to maintain former adjudications. 1 Kent, Comm. 477; Scott v. Scotts Bluff County, 106 Neb. 355, 183 N. W. 573, 574; Heisler v. Thomas Colliery Co., 274 Pa. 448, 118 A. 394, 395, 24 A. L. R. 1215; Moose v. Board of Com'rs of Alexander County, 172 N. C. 419, 90 S. E. 441, 444, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 1183; In re Peiser's Will, 79 Misc. 668, 140 N. Y. S. 844, 846; State Hospital for Criminal Insane v. Consolidated Water Supply Co., 267 Pa. 29, 110 A. 281, 284; Quaker Realty Co. v. Labasse, 131 La. 996, 60 So. 661, 665, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 1073; Baca v. Chavez, 32 N. M. 210, 252 P. 987, 989; Benavides v. Garcia (Tex. Com. App.) 290 S. W. 739, 740; Printup v. Kenner, 43 S. D. 473, 180 N. W. 512, 513; Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. Morgan, 89 N. J. Law, 165, 98 A. 443, 445; Marguerite Coal Co. v. Meadow River Lumber Co., 98 W. Va. 698, 127 S. E. 644, 646.

Doctrine of stare decisis rests upon principle that law by which men are governed should be fixed, definite, and known, and that, when the law is declared by court of competent jurisdiction authorized to construe it, such declaration, in absence of palpable mistake or error, is itself evidence of the law until changed by competent authority. Griffith v. Benzinger, 144 Md. 575, 125 A. 512, 520.

Stare decisis et non quieta movere. To adhere to precedents, and not to unsettle things which are established. 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 504; 25 id. 119, 142; 4 Hill (N. Y.) 271, 323; 4 id. 592, 595; 87 Pa. 286; Cooley, Const. Lim. 65. See Stare Decisis.

STARE IN JUDICIO. Lat. To appear before a tribunal, either as plaintiff or defendant.

STARR, or STARRA. The old term for contract or obligation among the Jews, being a corruption from the Hebrew word "shetar," a covenant. By an ordinance of Richard I., no starr was allowed to be valid, unless deposited in one of certain repositories established by law, the most considerable of which was in the king's exchequer at Westminster; and Blackstone conjectures that the room in which these chests were kept was thence called the "starr-chamber." 4 Bl. Comm. 266, 267, note a.

Stat pro ratione voluntas. The will stands in place of a reason. Sears v. Shafer, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 408, 411; Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Hunt, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 514, 525.

Stat pro ratione voluntas populi. The will of the people stands in place of a reason. People v. Draper, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 344, 376.

STATE, v. To express the particulars of a thing in writing or in words; to set down or set forth in detail; to aver, allege, or declare. People v. Mercado, 59 Cal. App. 69, 209 P. 1035, 1037.

To set down in gross; to mention in general terms, or by way of reference; to refer. Utica v. Richardson, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 300.

STATE, n. A body politic, or society of men, united together for the purpose of promoting their mutual safety and advantage, by the joint efforts of their combined strength. Cooley, Const. Lim. 1. A political community organized under a distinct government recognized and confirmed by its citizens and subjects as a supreme power. The Lucy H. (D. C.) 235 F. 610, 612.

One of the component commonwealths or states of the United States of America. The term is sometimes applied also to governmental agencies authorized by state, such as municipal corporations. George v. City of Portland, 114 Or. 418, 235 P. 681, 683, 39 A. L. R. 341.

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, "The State vs. A. B."

The section of territory occupied by one of the United States.

The word State describes sometimes a people or community of individuals united more or less closely in political relations, inhabiting temporarily or permanently the same country; often it denotes only the country, or territorial region, inhabited by such a community; not unfrequently it is applied to the government under which the people live; at other times it represents the combined idea of people, territory, and government. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L. Ed. 227.

The circumstances or condition of a being or thing at a given time. State v. Inich, 55 Mont. 1, 173 P. 230, 234.

Foreign State

A foreign country or nation. The several United States are considered "foreign" to each other except as regards their relations as common members of the Union.

State's Evidence

See Evidence.

State Offices

"State offices," as used in Primary Election Law, means offices to be filled by electorate of entire state. Hamilton v. Monroe (Tex. Civ. App.) 287 S. W. 304, 305. See "Office."

State Officers

Those whose duties concern the state at large or the general public, or who are authorized to exercise their official functions throughout the entire state, without limitation to any political subdivision of the state. State ex rel. Consolidated School Dist. No. 2 v. Ingram, 317 Mo. 1141, 298 S. W. 37, 38; Ramsay v. Van Meter, 300 Ill. 193, 133 N. E. 193, 195; State v. Jones, 79 Fla. 56, 84 So. 84, 85; McCullough v. Scott, 182 N. C. 865, 109 S. E. 789, 793. In another sense, officers belonging to or exercising authority under one of the states of the Union, as distinguished from the officers of the United States. See In re Police Com'rs, 22 R. I. 654, 49 A. 36; State v. Burns, 38 Fla. 378, 21 So. 290; People v. Nixon, 158 N. Y. 221, 52 N. E. 1117.

State Paper

A document prepared by, or relating to, the political department of the government of a state or nation, and concerning or affecting the administration of its government or its political or international relations. Also, a newspaper, designated by public authority, as the organ for the publication of public statutes, resolutions, notices, and advertisements.

State Revenue

Current income of state from whatever source derived that is subject to appropriation for public uses. State ex rel. McKinley Pub. Co. v. Hackmann, 314 Mo. 33, 282 S. W. 1007, 1011.

State Tax

A tax the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the expenses of the state, as distinguished from taxation for local or municipal purposes. See Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 413, 20 Am. Rep. 654; State v. Auditor of State, 15 Ohio St. 482; Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures v. City of Paterson, 89 N. J. Law, 208, 98 A. 440, 441.

State Trial

A trial for a political offense.

State Trials

A work in thirty-three volumes octavo, containing all English trials for offenses against the state and others partaking in some degree of that character, from the ninth year of Hen. II. to the first of Geo. IV.

STATE OF FACTS. Formerly, when a master in chancery was directed by the court of chancery to make an inquiry or investigation into any matter arising out of a suit, and which could not conveniently be brought before the court itself, each party in the suit carried in before the master a statement showing how the party bringing it in represented the matter in question to be; and this statement was technically termed a "state of facts," and formed the ground upon which the evidence was received, the evidence being, in fact, brought by one party or the other, to prove his own or disprove his opponent's state of facts. And so now, a state of facts means the statement made by any one of his version of the facts. Brown.

STATE OF FACTS AND PROPOSAL. In English lunacy practice, when a person has been found a lunatic, the next step is to submit to the master a scheme called a "state of facts and proposal," showing what is the position in life, property, and income of the lunatic, who are his next of kin and heir at law, who are proposed as his committees, and what annual sum is proposed to be allowed for his maintenance, etc. From the state of facts and the evidence adduced in support of it, the master frames his report. Elmer, Lun. 22; Pope, Lun. 79; Sweet.

STATE OF THE CASE. A narrative of the facts upon which the plaintiff relies, substituted for a more formal declaration, in suits in the inferior courts. The phrase is used in New Jersey.

STATE PAPER OFFICE. An office established in London in 1578 for the custody of state papers. The head of it was the "Clerk of the Papers."

STATED. Settled; closed. An account stated means an account settled, and at an end. Pull. Acc'ts, 33. "In order to constitute an account stated, there must be a statement of some certain amount of money being due, which must be made either to the party himself or to some agent of his." 5 Mees. & W. 667.

Stated Meeting

A meeting of a board of directors, board of officers, etc., held at the time appointed therefor by law, ordinance, by-law, or other regulation; as distinguished from "special" meetings, which are held on call as the occasion may arise, rather than at a regularly appointed time, and from adjourned meetings. See Zulich v. Bowman, 42 Pa. 87; Hanson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 32 Wyo. 337, 232 P. 1101, 1104.

Stated Term

A regular or ordinary term or session of a court for the dispatch of its general business, held at the time fixed by law or rule; as distinguished from a special term, held out of the due order or for the transaction of particular business.

Stated Times

Occurring at regular intervals or given regularly; fixed, regular in operation or occurrence, not occasional or fluctuating. Zangerle v. State, 115 Ohio St. 168, 152 N. E. 658, 659.

STATEMENT. In a general sense, an allegation; a declaration of matters of fact. The term has come to be used of a variety of formal narratives of facts, required by law in various jurisdictions as the foundation of judicial or official proceedings and in a limited sense is a formal, exact, detailed presentation. Southern Surety Co. v. Schmidt, 117 Ohio St. 28, 158 N. E. 1, 3.

STATEMENT OF AFFAIRS. In English bankruptcy practice, a bankrupt or debtor who has presented a petition for liquidation or composition must produce at the first meeting of creditors a statement of his affairs giving a list of his creditors, secured and unsecured, with the value of the securities, a list of bills discounted, and a statement of his property. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF CLAIM. A written or printed statement by the plaintiff in an action in the English high court, showing the facts on which he relies to support his claim against the defendant, and the relief which he claims. It is delivered to the defendant or his solicitor. The delivery of the statement of claim is usually the next step after appearance, and is the commencement of the pleadings. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF DEFENSE. In the practice of the English high court, where the defendant in an action does not demur to the whole of the plaintiff's claim, he delivers a pleading called a "statement of defense." The statement of defense deals with the allegations contained in the statement of claim, (or the indorsement on the writ, if there is no statement of claim,) admitting or denying them, and, if necessary, stating fresh facts in explanation or avoidance of those alleged by the plaintiff. Sweet.

STATEMENT OF PARTICULARS. In English practice, when the plaintiff claims a debt or liquidated demand, but has not indorsed the writ specially, (i. e., indorsed on it the particulars of his claim under Order iii. r. 6,) and the defendant fails to appear, the plaintiff may file a statement of the particulars of his claim, and after eight days enter judgment for the amount, as if the writ had been specially indorsed. Court Rules, xiii. 5; Sweet.

STATESMAN. A freeholder and farmer in Cumberland. Wharton.

STATIM. Lat. Forthwith; immediately. In old English law, this term meant either "at once," or "within a legal time," i. e., such time as permitted the legal and regular performance of the act in question.

STATING AN ACCOUNT. Exhibiting, or listing in their order, the items which make up an account.

STATING PART OF A BILL. That part of a bill in chancery in which the plaintiff states the facts of his case; it is distinguished from the charging part of the bill and from the prayer.

STATION. In the civil law. A place where ships may ride in safety. Dig. 50, 16, 59.

A place where military duty is performed or stores are kept or something connected with war is done. McGowan v. United States, 48 Ct. Cl. 95.

A place at which both freight and passengers are received for transportation or delivered after transportation. Daniel v. Doyle, 135 Ark. 547, 204 S. W. 210, 211; Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 535, 537.

STATIONER'S COMPANY. A body formed in 1557 in London of 97 London stationers and their successors, to whom was entrusted, in the first instance, and, under Orders in Council, the censorship of the press.

STATIONERS' HALL. In English law. The hall of the stationers' company, at which every person claiming copyright in a book must register his title, in order to be able to bring actions against persons infringing it. 2 Steph. Comm. 37-39.

STATIONERY OFFICE. In English law. A government office established as a department of the treasury, for the purpose of supplying government offices with stationery and books, and of printing and publishing government papers.

STATIST. A statesman; a politician; one skilled in government.

STATISTICS. That part of political science which is concerned in collecting and arranging facts illustrative of the condition and resources of a state. The subject is sometimes divided into (1) historical statistics, or facts which illustrate the former condition of a state; (2) statistics of population; (3) of revenue; (4) of trade, commerce, and navigation; (5) of the moral, social, and physical condition of the people. Wharton.

STATU LIBER. Lat. In Roman law. One who is made free by will under a condition; one who has his liberty fixed and appointed at a certain time or on a certain condition. Dig. 40, 7.

STATU LIBERI. Lat. In Louisiana. Slaves for a time, who had acquired the right of being free at a time to come, or on a condition which was not fulfilled, or in a certain event which had not happened, but who in the meantime remained in a state of slavery. Civ. Code La. 1838, art. 37.

STATUS. The legal position of the individual in or with regard to the rest of the community. L. R. 4 P. D. 11. The rights, duties, capacities and incapacities which determine a person to a given class, constitute his status; Campb. Austin 137. Thus, when we say that the status of a woman after a decree nisi for the dissolution of her marriage has been made, but before it has been made absolute, is that of a married woman, we mean that she has the same legal rights, liabilities, and disabilities as an ordinary married woman. The term is chiefly applied to persons under disability, or persons who have some peculiar condition which prevents the general law from applying to them in the same way as it does to ordinary persons. Sweet. See Barney v. Tourtellotte, 138 Mass. 108; De la Montanya v. De la Montanya, 112 Cal. 115, 44 P. 345, 32 L. R. A. 82, 53 Am. St. Rep. 165; Dunham v. Dunham, 57 Ill. App. 497; In re Ziegler, 143 N. Y. S. 562, 566, 82 Misc. 346.

It also means estate, because it signifies the condition or circumstances in which one stands with regard to his property. In the Year Books, it was used in this sense; 2 Poll. & Maitl. Hist. E. L. 11.

There are certain rights and duties, with certain capacities and incapacities to take rights and incur duties, by which persons, as subjects of law, are variously determined to certain classes. The rights, duties, capacities, or incapacities which determine a given person to any of these classes, constitute a condition or status with which the person is invested. Aust. Jur. § 973.

STATUS DE MANERIO. The assembly of the tenants in the court of the lord of a manor, in order to do their customary suit.

STATUS OF IRREMOVABILITY. In English law. The right acquired by a pauper, after one year's residence in any parish, not to be removed therefrom.

STATUS QUO. The existing state of things at any given date. Status quo ante bellum, the state of things before the war.

Statuta pro publico commodo late interpretantur. Jenk. Cent. 21. Statutes made for the public good ought to be liberally construed.

Statuta suo cluduntur territorio, nec ultra territorium disponunt. Statutes are confined to their own territory, and have no extraterritorial effect. Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen (Mass.) 324.

STATUTABLE, or STATUTORY, is that which is introduced or governed by statute law, as opposed to the common law or equity. Thus, a court is said to have statutory jurisdiction when jurisdiction is given to it in certain matters by act of the legislature.

STATUTE, n. An act of the legislature; a particular law enacted and established by the will of the legislative department of government; the written will of the legislature, solemnly expressed according to the forms necessary to constitute it the law of the state. Federal Trust Co. v. East Hartford Fire Dist. (C. C. A.) 283 F. 95, 98; In re Van Tassell's Will, 196 N. Y. S. 491, 494, 119 Misc. 478; Washington v. Dowling, 92 Fla. 601, 109 So. 588, 591.

This word is used to designate the written law in contradistinction to the unwritten law. See Common Law.

In Foreign and Civil Law

Any particular municipal law or usage, though resting for its authority on judicial decisions, or the practice of nations. 2 Kent, Comm. 456. The whole municipal law of a particular state, from whatever source arising. Story, Conf. Laws, § 12.

"Statute" also sometimes means a kind of bond or obligation of record, being an abbreviation for "statute merchant" or "statute staple." See infra. For mandatory and directory statutes see "Mandatory" and "Directory."

In General

—Affirmative statute. See Affirmative.

—Criminal statute. An act of the Legislature as an organized body relating to crime or its punishment. Washington v. Dowling, 92 Fla. 601, 109 So. 588, 591.

—Declaratory statute. See Declaratory.

—Enabling statute. See that title.

—Expository statute. See that title.

—General statute. A statute relating to the whole community, or concerning all persons generally, as distinguished from a private or special statute. 1 Bl. Comm. 85, 86; 4 Coke 75a.

—Local statute. Such a statute as has for its object the interest of some particular locality, as the formation of a road, the alteration of the course of a river, the formation of a public market in a particular district, etc.

—Negative statute. A statute expressed in negative terms; a statute which prohibits a thing from being done, or declares what shall not be done.

—Penal statute. See Penal.

—Perpetual statute. One which is to remain in force without limitation as to time; one which contains no provision for its repeal, abrogation, or expiration at any future time.

—Personal statutes. In foreign and modern civil law. Those statutes which have principally for their object the person, and treat of property only incidentally. Story, Conf. Laws, § 13. A personal statute, in this sense of the term, is a law, ordinance, regulation, or custom, the disposition of which affects the person and clothes him with a capacity or incapacity, which he does not change with every change of abode, but which, upon principles of justice and policy, he is assumed to carry with him wherever he goes. 2 Kent, Comm. 456. The term is also applied to statutes which, instead of being general, are confined in their operation to one person or group of persons. Bank of Columbia v. Walker, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 308; Saul v. Creditors, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 591, 16 Am. Dec. 212.

—Private statute. A statute which operates only upon particular persons, and private concerns. 1 Bl. Comm. 86. An act which relates to certain individuals, or to particular classes of men. Dwar. St. 629; State v. Chambers, 93 N. C. 600.

—Public statute. A statute enacting a universal rule which regards the whole community, as distinguished from one which concerns only particular individuals and affects only their private rights. See Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1898.

—Real statutes. In the civil law. Statutes which have principally for their object property, and which do not speak of persons, except in relation to property. Story, Conf. Laws, § 13; Saul v. His Creditors, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 582, 16 Am. Dec. 212.

—Reference statutes. Statutes referring to other statutes and making them applicable to the subject of legislation. Trimmier v. Carlton, 116 Tex. 572, 296 S. W. 1070, 1074; State v. Armstrong, 31 N. M. 220, 243 P. 333, 342; Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 698, L. R. A. 1918E, 639.

—Remedial statute. See Remedial.

—Revised statutes. A body of statutes which have been revised, collected, arranged in order, and re-enacted as a whole; this is the legal title of the collections of compiled laws of several of the states and also of the United States.

—Special statute. One which operates only upon particular persons and private concerns. 1 Bl. Comm. 86. Distinguished from a general or public statute.

—Statute fair. In English law. A fair at which laborers of both sexes stood and offered themselves for hire; sometimes called also "Mop."

—Statute-merchant. In English law. A security for a debt acknowledged to be due, entered into before the chief magistrate of some trading town, pursuant to the statute 13 Edw. I. De Mercatoribus, by which not only the body of the debtor might be imprisoned, and his goods seized in satisfaction of the debt, but also his lands might be delivered to the creditor till out of the rents and profits of them the debt be satisfied. 2 Bl. Comm. 160. Now fallen into disuse. 1 Steph. Comm. 287. See Yates v. People, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 404.

—Statute of accumulations. In English law. The statute 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 98, forbidding the accumulation, beyond a certain period, of property settled by deed or will.

—Statute of allegiance de facto. An act of 11 Hen. VII. c. 1, requiring subjects to give their allegiance to the actual king for the time being, and protecting them in so doing.

—Statute of distributions. See Distribution.

—Statute of Elizabeth. In English law. The statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, against conveyances made in fraud of creditors.

—Statute of frauds. See Frauds, Statute of.

—Statute of Gloucester. In English law. The statute 6 Edw. I. c. 1, A. D. 1278. It takes its name from the place of its enactment, and was the first statute giving costs in actions. 3 Bl. Comm. 399.

—Statute of laborers. See Laborer.

—Statute of limitations. See Limitation.

—Statute of uses. See Use.

—Statute of wills. In English law. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, which enacted that all persons being seized in fee-simple (except femes covert, infants, idiots, and persons of non-sane memory might, by will and testament in writing, devise to any other person, except to bodies corporate, two-thirds of their lands, tenements, and hereditaments, held in chivalry, and the whole of those held in socage. 2 Bl. Comm. 375.

—Statute roll. A roll upon which an English statute, after receiving the royal assent, was formerly entered.

—Statute staple. See Staple.

—Statutes at large. Statutes printed in full and in the order of their enactment, in a collected form, as distinguished from any digest, revision, abridgment, or compilation of them. Thus the volumes of "United States Statutes at Large," contain all the acts of congress in their order. The name is also given to an authentic collection of the various statutes which have been passed by the British parliament from very early times to the present day.

—Statutes of amendments and jeofailes. Statutes whereby a pleader who perceives any slip in the form of his proceedings, and acknowledges the error (jeofaile), is permitted to amend. State ex rel. Smith v. Trimble, 315 Mo. 166, 285 S. W. 729, 731.

—Temporary statute. One which is limited in its duration at the time of its enactment. It continues in force until the time of its limitation has expired, unless sooner repealed. A statute which by reason of its nature has only a single and temporary operation—e. g. an appropriation bill—is also called a temporary statute.

STATUTE, v. In old Scotch law. To ordain, establish, or decree.

Statutes in derogation of common law must be strictly construed. Cooley, Const. Lim. 75, note; Arthurs, Appeal of, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 57.

STATUTI. Lat. In Roman law. Licensed or registered advocates; members of the college of advocates. The number of these was limited, and they enjoyed special privileges from the time of Constantine to that of Justinian.

STATUTORY. Relating to a statute; created or defined by a statute; required by a statute; conforming to a statute.

STATUTORY BOND. One that either literally or substantially meets requirements of statute. Southern Surety Co. v. United States Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co. (C. C. A.) 13 F.(2d) 833, 835.

STATUTORY CRIME. See Crime.

STATUTORY DEDICATION. See Dedication.

STATUTORY EXPOSITION. When the language of a statute is ambiguous, and any subsequent enactment involves a particular interpretation of the former act, it is said to contain a statutory exposition of the former act. Wharton.

STATUTORY FORECLOSURE. See Foreclosure.

STATUTORY OBLIGATION. An obligation—whether to pay money, perform certain acts, or discharge certain duties—which is created by or arises out of a statute, as distinguished from one founded upon acts between parties or jural relationships.

STATUTORY RELEASE. A conveyance which superseded the old compound assurance by lease and release. It was created by St. 4 & 5, Vict. c. 21, which abolished the lease for a year.

STATUTORY STAPLE. An ancient writ that lay to take the body of a person and seize the lands and goods of one who had forfeited a bond called statute staple. Reg. Orig. 151. See "Staple."

STATUTUM. Lat.

In the Civil Law

Established; determined. A term applied to judicial action. Dig. 50, 16, 46, pr.

In Old English Law

A statute; an act of parliament.

Statutum affirmativum non derogat communi legi. Jenk. Cent. 24. An affirmative statute does not derogate from the common law.

STATUTUM DE MERCATORIBUS. The statute of Acton Burnell, (q. v.)

Statutum ex gratia regis dicitur, quando rex dignatur cedere de jure suo regio, pro commodo et quiete populi sui. 2 Inst. 378. A statute is said to be by the grace of the king, when the king deigns to yield some portion of his royal rights for the good and quiet of his people.

Statutum generaliter est intelligendum quando verba statuti sunt specialia, ratio autem generalis. When the words of a statute are special, but the reason of it general, the statute is to be understood generally. 10 Coke, 101.

STATUTUM HIBERNIÆ DE COHÆREDIBUS. The statute 14 Hen. III. The third public act in the statute-book. It has been pronounced not to be a statute. In the form of it, it appears to be an instruction given by the king to his justices in Ireland, directing them how to proceed in a certain point where they entertained a doubt. It seems the justices itinerant in that country had a doubt, when land descended to sisters, whether the younger sisters ought to hold of the eldest, and do homage to her for their several portions, or of the chief lord, and do homage to him; and certain knights had been sent over to know what the practice was in England in such a case. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 259.

STATUTUM SESSIONUM. In old English law. The statute session; a meeting in every hundred of constables and householders, by custom, for the ordering of servants, and debating of differences between masters and servants, rating of wages, etc. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

Statutum speciale statuto speciali non derogat. Jenk. Cent. 199. One special statute does not take from another special statute.

STATUTUM WALLIÆ. The statute of Wales. The title of a statute passed in the twelfth year of Edw. I., being a sort of constitution for the principality of Wales, which was thereby, in a great measure, put on the footing of England with respect to its laws and the administration of justice. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 93, 94.

STAUTURUM. In old records. A store, or stock of cattle. A term of common occurrence in the accounts of monastic establishments. Spelman; Cowell.

STAY. In practice, a stopping; the act of arresting a judicial proceeding, by the order of a court. See In re Schwarz (D. C.) 14 F. 788. To "stay" an order or decree means to hold it in abeyance, or refrain from enforcing it. State v. Draney, 57 Utah, 14, 176 P. 767, 769.

Also that which holds, restrains, or supports. Armenti v. Brooklyn Union Gas Co., 142 N. Y. S. 420, 425, 157 App. Div. 276; Rookstool v. Cudahy Packing Co., 100 Neb. 118, 158 N. W. 440, 444.

—Stay laws. Acts of the legislature prescribing a stay of execution in certain cases, or a stay of foreclosure of mortgages, or closing the courts for a limited period, or providing that suits shall not be instituted until a certain time after the cause of action arose, or otherwise suspending legal remedies; designed for the relief of debtors, in times of general distress or financial trouble.

—Stay of execution. The stopping or arresting of execution on a judgment, that is, of the judgment-creditor's right to issue execution, for a limited period. This is given by statute in many jurisdictions, as a privilege to the debtor, usually on his furnishing bail for the debt, costs, and interest. Or it may take place by agreement of the parties. See National Docks, etc., Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 54 N. J. Eq. 167, 33 A. 936; State ex rel. Gray v. Hennings, 194 Mo. App. 545, 185 S. W. 1153, 1154.

—Stay of proceedings. The temporary suspension of the regular order of proceedings in a cause, by direction or order of the court, usually to await the action of one of the parties in regard to some omitted step or some act which the court has required him to perform as incidental to the suit; as where a non-resident plaintiff has been ruled to give security for costs. See Wallace v. Wallace, 13 Wis. 226; Lewton v. Hower, 18 Fla. 876; Rossiter v. Ætna L. Ins. Co., 96 Wis. 466, 71 N. W. 898.

STEADY COURSE. A ship is on a "steady course," not only when her heading does not change, but whenever her future positions are certainly ascertainable from her present position and movements. Commonwealth & Dominion Line v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 729, 731.

STEAL. This term is commonly used in indictments for larceny, ("take, steal, and carry away,") and denotes the commission of theft, that is, the felonious taking and carrying away of the personal property of another, People v. Surace, 295 Ill. 604, 129 N. E. 504, 506; State v. Banoch, 193 Iowa, 851, 186 N. W. 436; Perara v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 221 F. 213, 215, or it may denote the criminal taking of personal property either by larceny, embezzlement, or false pretenses. Commonwealth v. Farmer, 218 Mass. 507, 106 N. E. 150, 151. But, in popular usage "stealing" may include the unlawful appropriation of things which are not technically the subject of larceny, e. g., immovables. See Randall v. Evening News Ass'n, 101 Mich. 561, 60 N. W. 301; People v. Dumar, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 85; Com. v. Kelley, 184 Mass. 320, 68 N. E. 346; Holmes v. Gilman, 64 Hun, 227, 19 N. Y. Supp. 151; Dunnell v. Fiske, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 554; Barnhart v. State, 154 Ind. 177, 56 N. E. 212; Buxton v. International Indemnity Co., 47 Cal. App. 583, 191 P. 84, 86; State v. Blake, 95 W. Va. 467, 121 S. E. 488, 489.

STEALING CHILDREN. See Kidnapping.

STEALTH. Theft is so called by some ancient writers. "Stealth is the wrongful taking of goods without pretense of title." Finch, Law, b. 3, c. 17.

STEAMSHIP. A vessel, the principal motive power of which is steam and not sails. L. R. 7 Q. B. 569. See Western Ins. Co. v. Cropper, 32 Pa. 352, 75 Am. Dec. 561.

STEELBOW GOODS. In Scotch law. Corn, cattle, straw, and implements of husbandry delivered by a landlord to his tenant, by which the tenant is enabled to stock and labor the farm; in consideration of which he becomes bound to return articles equal in quantity and quality, at the expiry of the lease. Bell.

STELLIONATAIRE. Fr. In French law. A party who fraudulently mortgages property to which he has no title.

STELLIONATE. In civil law. A name given generally to all species of frauds committed in making contracts but particularly to the crime of alienating the same subject to different persons. 2 Kames, Eq. 40.

STELLIONATUS. Lat. In the civil law. A general name for any kind of fraud not falling under any specific class. But the term is chiefly applied to fraud practiced in the sale or pledging of property; as, selling the same property to two different persons, selling another's property as one's own, placing a second mortgage on property without disclosing the existence of the first, etc.

STENOGRAPHER. One who is skilled in the art of short-hand writing; one whose business is to write in short-hand. See Rynerson v. Allison, 30 S. C. 534, 9 S. E. 656; In re Appropriations for Deputy State Officers, 25 Neb. 662, 41 N. W. 643; Chase v. Vandergrift, 88 Pa. 217.

STEP-DAUGHTER. The daughter of one's wife by a former husband, or of one's husband by a former wife.

STEP-DOWN TRANSFORMER. An induction coil or a transformer so constructed that there is a higher voltage in the primary current than in the secondary current. General Electric Co. v. Butler Light, Heat & Motor Co. (D. C.) 205 F. 42, 44.

STEP-FATHER. The husband of one's mother by virtue of a marriage subsequent to that of which the person spoken of is the offspring. Owens v. Munden, 168 N. C. 266, 84 S. E. 257, 258, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 1117.

STEP-MOTHER. The wife of one's father by virtue of a marriage subsequent to that of which the person spoken of is the offspring.

STEP-SON. The son of one's wife by a former husband, or of one's husband by a former wife.

STEP-UP TRANSFORMER. An induction coil or a transformer so constructed that there is a higher voltage in the secondary current than in the primary current. General Electric Co. v. Butler Light, Heat & Motor Co. (D. C.) 205 F. 42, 44.

STERBECHE, or STREBRICH. The breaking, obstructing, or straitening of a way. Termes de la Ley.

STÈRE. A French measure of solidity, used in measuring wood. It is a cubic meter.

STERILITY. Barrenness; unfruitfulness; incapacity to germinate or reproduce.

STERLING. In English law. Current or standard coin, especially silver coin; a standard of coinage.

STET BILLA. If the plaintiff in a plaint in the mayor's court of London has attached property belonging to the defendant and obtained execution against the garnishee, the defendant, if he wishes to contest the plaintiff's claim, and obtain restoration of his property, must issue a scire facias ad disprobandum debitum; if the only question to be tried is the plaintiff's debt, the plaintiff in appearing to the scire facias prays stet villa "that his bill original," i. e., his original plaint, "may stand, and that the defendant may plead thereto." The action then proceeds in the usual way as if the proceedings in attachment (which are founded on a fictitious default of the defendant in appearing to the plaintiff) had not taken place. Brand, F. Attachm. 115; Sweet.

STET PROCESSUS. Stet processus is an entry on the roll in the nature of a judgment of a direction that all further proceedings shall be stayed, (i. e., that the process may stand,) and it is one of the ways by which a suit may be terminated by an act of the party, as distinguished from a termination of it by judgment, which is the act of the court. It was used by the plaintiff when he wished to suspend the action without suffering a non-suit. Brown.

STEVEDORE. A person employed in loading and unloading vessels. The Senator (D. C.) 21 F. 191; Rankin v. Merchants' & M. Transp. Co., 73 Ga. 232, 54 Am. Rep. 874; The Elton, 83 F. 521, 31 C. C. A. 496; The Owego (D. C.) 292 F. 505, 507; Zampiere v. William Spencer & Son Corporation, 185 N. Y. S. 639, 640, 194 App. Div. 576.

STEWARD. This word signifies a man appointed in the place or stead of another, and generally denotes a principal officer within his jurisdiction. Brown.

Land Steward

See Land.

Steward of a Manor

An important officer who has the general management of all forensic matters connected with the manor of which he is steward. He stands in much the same relation to the lord of the manor as an under-sheriff does to the sheriff. Cowell.

Steward of all England

In old English law. An officer who was invested with various powers; among others, to preside on the trial of peers.

Steward of Scotland

An officer of the highest dignity and trust. He administered the crown revenues, superintended the affairs of the household, and possessed the privilege of holding the first place in the army, next to the king, in the day of battle. From this office the royal house of Stuart took its name. But the office was sunk on their advancement to the throne, and has never since been revived. Bell.

STEWARTRY, in Scotch law, is said to be equivalent to the English "county." See Brown.

STEW. Certain brothels anciently permitted in England, suppressed by Henry VIII. Also, breeding places for tame pheasants.

STICK. In the old books. To stop; to hesitate; to accede with reluctance. "The court stuck a little at this exception." 2 Show. 491.

STICKER. A gummed slip or strip. Crosby v. Libby, 114 Me. 35, 95 A. 329, 330.

STICKLER. (1) An inferior officer who cuts wood within the royal parks of Clarendon. Cowell. (2) An arbitrator. (3) An obstinate contender about anything.

STIFLING A PROSECUTION. Agreeing, in consideration of receiving a pecuniary or other advantage, to abstain from prosecuting a person for an offense not giving rise to a civil remedy; e. g., perjury. Sweet.

STILL. Any device used for separating alcoholic spirits from fermented substances. Moore v. State, 154 Ark. 13, 240 S. W. 1083, 1084; Davis v. State, 102 Tex. Cr. R. 546, 278 S. W. 848, 849. The word is sometimes applied to the whole apparatus for evaporation and condensation used in the manufacture of ardent spirits, but in the description of the parts of the apparatus it is applied merely to the vessel or retort used for boiling and evaporation of the liquid. Hodgkiss v. State, 156 Ark. 340, 246 S. W. 506, 507.

STILL COKE. Coke formed by the distillation of petroleum. Rodman Chemical Co. v. Steel Treating Equipment Co. (C. C. A.) 288 F. 471, 473.

STILL WORM. The tube or coil used for condensation of the vapor which is passed through it from boiling mash for the purpose of being distilled into whisky. Rosslot v. State, 162 Ark. 340, 258 S. W. 348.

STILLBORN. A stillborn child is one born dead or in such an early stage of pregnancy as to be incapable of living, though not actually dead at the time of birth. Children born within the first six months after conception are considered by the civil law as incapable of living, and therefore, though they are apparently born alive, if they do not in fact survive so long as to rebut this presumption of law, they cannot inherit, so as to transmit the property to others. Marsellis v. Thalhimer, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 41, 21 Am. Dec. 66.

STILLICIDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The drip of water from the eaves of a house. The servitude stillicidii consists in the right to have the water drip from one's eaves upon the house or ground of another. The term "numen" designated the rain-water collected from the roof, and carried off by the gutters, and there is a similar easement of having it discharged upon the adjoining estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 317, par. 4.

STINT. In English law. Limit; a limited number. Used as descriptive of a species of common. See Common sans Nombre.

STIPEND. A salary; settled pay. Mangam v. Brooklyn, 98 N. Y. 597, 50 Am. Rep. 705.

In English and Scotch Law

A provision made for the support of the clergy.

STIPENDIARY ESTATES. Estates granted in return for services, generally of a military kind. 1 Steph. Comm. 174.

STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES. In English law. Paid magistrates; appointed in London and some other cities and boroughs, and having in general the powers and jurisdiction of justices of the peace.

STIPENDIUM. Lat. In the civil law. The pay of a soldier; wages; stipend. Calvin.

STIPES. Lat. In old English law. Stock; a stock; a source of descent or title. Communis stipes, the common stock. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2.

STIPITAL. Relating to stirpes, roots, or stocks. "Stipital distribution" of property is distribution per stirpes; that is, by right of representation.

STIPULATED DAMAGE. Liquidated damage, (q. v.)

STIPULATIO. Lat. In the Roman law, stipulatio was the verbal contract, (verbis obligatio.) and was the most solemn and formal of all the contracts in that system of jurisprudence. It was entered into by question and corresponding answer thereto, by the parties, both being present at the same time, and usually by such words as "spondes? spondeo," "promittis? promitto," and the like. Brown.

STIPULATIO AQUILIANA. A particular application of the stipulatio, which was used to collect together into one verbal contract all the liabilities of every kind and quality of the debtor, with a view to their being released or discharged by an acceptilatio, that mode of discharge being applicable only to the verbal contract. Brown.

STIPULATION. A material article in an agreement.

In Practice

An agreement between counsel respecting business before a court. Anderson, L. Dict; In re Morris Metal Products Corporation (C. C. A.) 4 F.(2d) 1003, 1004.

The name "stipulation" is familiarly given to any agreement made by the attorneys engaged on opposite sides of a cause, (especially if in writing,) regulating any matter incidental to the proceedings or trial, which falls within their jurisdiction. Such, for instance, are agreements to extend the time for pleading, to take depositions, to waive objections, to admit certain facts, to continue the cause. See Lewis v. Orpheus, 15 Fed. Cas. 492; Southern Colonization Co. v. Howard Cole & Co., 185 Wis. 469, 201 N. W. 817, 819.

In Admiralty Practice

A recognizance of certain persons (called in the old law "fide jussors") in the nature of bail for the appearance of a defendant. 3 Bl. Comm. 108.

STIPULATOR. In the civil law. The party who asked the question in the contract of stipulation; the other party, or he who answered, being called the "promissor." But, in a more general sense, the term was applied to both the parties. Calvin.

STIRPES. Lat. A root or stock of descent or title. Taking property by right of representation is called "succession per stirpes," in opposition to taking in one's own right, or as a principal, which is termed "taking per capita." See Rotmanskey v. Heiss, 86 Md. 633, 39 A. 415.

STOCK.In Mercantile Law

The goods and wares of a merchant or tradesman, kept for sale and traffic. Schnitzer v. Excelsior Powder Mfg. Co. (Mo. App.) 160 S. W. 282, 285.

In a Larger Sense

The capital of a merchant or other person, including his merchandise, money, and credits, or, in other words, the entire property employed in business.

In Corporation Law

The term is used in various senses. It may mean the capital or principal fund of a corporation or joint-stock company, formed by the contributions of subscribers or the sale of shares; the aggregate of a certain number of shares severally owned by the members or stockholders of the corporation or the proportional share of an individual stockholder; also the incorporeal property which is represented by the holding of a certificate of stock; and in a wider and more remote sense, the right of a shareholder to participate in the general management of the company and to share proportionally in its net profits or earnings or in the distribution of assets on dissolution, the term "stock" has also been held to embrace not only capital stock of a corporation but all corporate wealth and resources, subject to all corporate liabilities and obligations. Whitman v. Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore, 148 Md. 90, 129 A. 22, 27. See also Thayer v. Wathen, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 382, 44 S. W. 906; Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co., 75 N. Y. 216; State v. Lewis, 118 Wis. 432, 95 N. W. 388; Heller v. National Marine Bank, 89 Md. 602, 43 A. 800, 45 L. R. A. 438, 73 Am. St. Rep. 212; Trask v. Maguire, 18 Wall. 402, 21 L. Ed. 938; Harison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 15; Seawright v. Dickson, 16 Ga. App. 436, 85 S. E. 625, 628; Hood Rubber Co. v. Commonwealth, 238 Mass. 369, 131 N. E. 201, 202.

The capital stock of a corporation differs widely in legal import from the aggregate shares into which it is divided by its charter (Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686, 24 L. Ed. 558; People v. Coleman, 126 N. Y. 437, 27 N. E. 818, 12 L. R. A. 762); the former includes only the fund of money or other property derived by it from the sale or exchange of its shares of stock, while the latter represents the totality of the corporate assets and property; Hamor v. Engineering Co. (C. C.) 84 F. 396. See "Capital Stock."

The funded indebtedness of a state or government, also, is often represented by stocks, shares of which are held by its creditors at interest.

Classes of Corporate Stock

Preferred stock is a separate portion or class of the stock of a corporation, which is accorded, by the charter or by-laws, a preference or priority in respect to dividends, over the remainder of the stock of the corporation, which in that case is called "common" stock. That is, holders of the preferred stock are entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, out of the net earnings or profits of the corporation, before any distribution of earnings is made to the common stock. If the earnings applicable to the payment of dividends are not more than sufficient for such fixed annual dividend, they will be entirely absorbed by the preferred stock. If they are more than sufficient for the purpose, the remainder may be given entirely to the common stock (which is the more usual custom) or such remainder may be distributed pro rata to both classes of the stock, in which case the preferred stock is said to "participate" with the common. The fixed dividend on preferred stock may be "cumulative" or "non-cumulative." In the former case, if the stipulated dividend on preferred stock is not earned or paid in any one year, it becomes a charge upon the surplus earnings of the next and succeeding years, and all such accumulated and unpaid dividends on the preferred stock must be paid off before the common stock is entitled to receive dividends. In the case of "non-cumulative" preferred stock, its preference for any given year is extinguished by the failure to earn or pay its dividend in that year. If a corporation has no class of preferred stock, all its stock is common stock. The word "common" in this connection signifies that all the holders of such stock are entitled to an equal pro rata division of profits or net earnings, if any there be, without any preference or priority among themselves. "Deferred" stock is rarely issued by American corporations, though it is not uncommon in England. This kind of stock is distinguished by the fact that the payment of dividends upon it is expressly postponed until some other class of stock has received a dividend, or until some certain liability or obligation of the corporation is discharged. If there is a class of "preferred" stock, the common stock may in this sense be said to be "deferred," and the term is sometimes used as equivalent to

"common" stock. But it is not impossible that a corporation should have three classes of stock: (1) Preferred, (2) common, and (3) deferred; the latter class being postponed, in respect to participation in profits, until both the preferred and the common stock had received dividends at a fixed rate. See Cook, Corp. § 12; State v. Railroad Co., 16 S. C. 528; Scott v. Railroad Co., 93 Md. 475, 49 A. 327; Jones v. Railroad Co., 67 N. H. 234, 30 A. 614, 68 Am. St. Rep. 650; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76, 18 Am. Rep. 156; Burt v. Rattle, 31 Ohio St. 116; Storrow v. Mfg. Ass'n, 31 C. C. A. 139, 87 F. 616; Armstrong v. Union Trust & Savings Bank (C. C. A.) 248 F. 268, 270; Booth v. Union Fibre Co., 137 Minn. 7, 162 N. W. 677; General Inv. Co. v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 87 N. J. Eq. 234, 100 A. 347, 349; Day v. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co., 96 N. J. Eq. 736, 126 A. 302, 304.

In the Law of Descent

The term is used, metaphorically, to denote the original progenitor of a family, or the ancestor from whom the persons in question are all descended; such descendants being called "branches."

In General

—Capital stock. See that title.

—Certificate of stock. See Certificate.

—Guarantied stock. Stock of a corporation which is entitled to receive dividends at a fixed annual rate, the payment of which dividends is guarantied by some outside person or corporation. See Field v. Lamson, etc., Mfg. Co., 162 Mass. 388, 38 N. E. 1126, 27 L. R. A. 136.

—Public stocks. The funded or bonded debt of a government or state.

—Special stock of a corporation, in Massachusetts, is authorized by statute. It is limited in amount to two-fifths of the actual capital. It is subject to redemption by the corporation at par after a fixed time. The corporation is bound to pay a fixed annual dividend on it as a debt. The holders of it are in no event liable for the debts of the corporation beyond their stock; and an issue of special stock makes all the general stockholders liable for all debts and contracts of the corporation until the special stock is fully redeemed. American Tube Works v. Boston Mach. Co., 139 Mass. 5, 29 N. E. 63.

—Stock association. A joint-stock company, (q. v.)

—Stock-broker. One who buys and sells stock as the agent of others. Banta v. Chicago, 172 Ill. 204, 50 N. E. 233, 40 L. R. A. 611; Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 436; Gast v. Buckley (Ky.) 64 S. W. 632.

—Stock corporation. A corporation having a capital stock divided into shares, and which is authorized by law to distribute to the holders thereof dividends or shares of the surplus profits of the corporation. Buker v. Steele (Co. Ct.) 43 N. Y. S. 350.

—Stock dividend. See Dividend.

—Stock-exchange. A voluntary association of persons (not usually a corporation) who, for convenience in the transaction of business with each other, have associated themselves to provide a common place for the transaction of their business; an association of stock-brokers. Dos Passos, Stock-Brok. 14. The building or room used by an association of stock-brokers for meeting for the transaction of their common business.

—Stock in trade. Merchandise or goods kept for sale or traffic. Woodworth & Co. v. City of Concord, 78 N. H. 54, 96 A. 296, 297; Shasta Lumber Co. v. McCoy, 85 Cal. App. 468, 259 P. 965, 967; also that form of property owned by a craftsman upon which he exercises his art, skill, or workmanship, and upon which he uses the tools of his trade or business. Armstrong Turner Millinery Co. v. Round, 106 Kan. 146, 186 P. 979, 9 A. L. R. 1255.

—Stock-jobber. A dealer in stock; one who buys and sells stock on his own account on speculation. State v. Debenture Co., 51 La. Ann. 1874, 26 So. 600.

—Stock law district. A district in which stock is by law prohibited from running at large. Griffin v. Fowler, 17 Ala. App. 44, 81 So. 426, 428.

—Stock-note. The term "stock-note" has no technical meaning, and may as well apply to a note given on the sale of stock which the bank had purchased or taken in the payment of doubtful debts as to a note given on account of an original subscription to stock. Dunlap v. Smith, 12 Ill. 402.

—Stock of merchandise. Goods or chattels which a merchant holds for sale. Swift & Co. v. Tempelos, 178 N. C. 487, 101 S. E. 8, 7 A. L. R. 1581; Meier Electric & Machine Co. v. Dixon, 81 Ind. App. 400, 143 N. E. 363, 364; Balter v. Crum, 199 Mo. App. 380, 203 S. W. 506, 507.

—Stock-raising. The raising of domestic animals. Krobitzsch v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 181 Cal. 541, 185 P. 396, 398.

—Watered stock. Stock issued by way of increase or addition to the nominal capital stock of the corporation, and passing into the hands of stockholders either by purchase or in the form of a stock dividend, but which does not represent or correspond to any increase in the actual capital or actual value of the assets of the corporation. See Appeal of Wiltbank, 64 Pa. 260, 3 Am. Rep. 585.

STOCKHOLDER. A person who owns shares of stock in a corporation or joint-stock company. See Mills v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 386; Ross v. Knapp, etc., Co., 77 Ill. App. 424; Corwith v. Culver, 69 Ill. 502; Hirshfeld v. Bopp, 145 N. Y. 84, 39 N. E. 817; State v. Hood, 15 Rich. Law (S. C.) 186; Hastings v. International Paper Co., 187 App. Div. 404, 175 N. Y. S. 815, 819; Galatin County Farmers' Alliance v. Flannery, 59 Mont. 534, 197 P. 996, 997; Ludden & Bates v. Watt, 18 Ala. App. 652, 94 So. 239, 240.

The owners of shares in a corporation which has a capital stock are called "stockholders." If a corporation has no capital stock, the corporators and their successors are called "members." Civ. Code Dak. § 392 (Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 4515; Rev. Code 1919, § 247).

STOCKS. A machine consisting of two pieces of timber, arranged to be fastened together, and holding fast the legs of a person placed in it. This was an ancient method of punishment.

STOP ORDER. The name of an order grantable in English chancery practice, to prevent drawing out a fund in court to the prejudice of an assignee or lienholder.

A direction by customer to his broker that, if commodity touches price named, broker shall close trade at best available price. Alexas v. Post & Flagg, 129 S. C. 53, 123 S. E. 769, 35 A. L. R. 969; Richter v. Pœe, 109 Md. 20, 71 A. 420, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 174.

STOPPAGE. In the civil law. Compensation or set-off.

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU. The act by which the unpaid vendor of goods stops their progress and resumes possession of them, while they are in course of transit from him to the purchaser, and not yet actually delivered to the latter.

The right of stoppage in transitu is that which the vendor has, when he sells goods on credit to another, of resuming the possession of the goods while they are in the possession of a carrier or middle-man, in the transit to the consignee or vendee, and before they arrive into his actual possession, or the destination he has appointed for them on his becoming bankrupt and insolvent. 2 Kent, Comm. 702.

Stoppage in transitu is the right which arises to an unpaid vendor to resume the possession, with which he has parted, of goods sold upon credit, before they come into the possession of a buyer who has become insolvent, bankrupt, or pecuniarily embarrassed. Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454.

STORE, v. Storing is the keeping merchandise for safe custody, to be delivered in the same condition as when received, where the safe-keeping is the principal object of deposit, and not the consumption or sale. O'Neil v. Buffalo F. Ins. Co., 3 N. Y. 122; Hynds v. Schenectady County Mut. Ins. Co., 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 119. To put away for future use. State v. Freeman (S. C.) 93 S. E. 13; State v. Burns, 133 S. C. 238, 130 S. E. 641, 642; State v. Campbell, 141 S. C. 428, 140 S. E. 97; State v. Bradley, 109 S. C. 411, 96 S. E. 142, 143; Town of Newberry v. Dorrah, 105 S. C. 28, 89 S. E. 402, 403.

Public Store

A government warehouse, maintained for certain administrative purposes, such as the keeping of military supplies, the storing of imported goods under bonds to pay duty, etc.

Stores

The supplies of different articles provided for the subsistence and accommodation of a ship's crew and passengers.

STORE, n. A house used for the sale of goods, wares, and merchandise, and it will be presumed from such statement that the liquor was administered to a customary or casual visitor. Simpson v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 403, 244 S. W. 912, 913; Divine v. George, 63 Colo. 341, 166 P. 242, 243; Continental Paper Bag Co. v. Bosworth (Tex. Com. App.) 276 S. W. 170, 171; Van Orsdol v. Hutchcroft, 83 Or. 567, 163 P. 978, 979; A house where goods are bought, sold or stored. Campbell v. State, 170 Ark. 936, 282 S. W. 4, 5; De Wolfe v. Pierce, 196 Ill. App. 360, 361. Context may enlarge or restrict ordinary meaning. Debenham v. Short (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1147.

STORE-HOUSE. A building for the storage of goods, grain, food-stuffs, etc. A livery-stable has been held a store-house. Webb v. Com. (Ky.) 35 S. W. 1038.

STOUTHRIEFF. In Scotch law. Formerly this word included every species of theft accompanied with violence to the person, but of late years it has become the vox signata for forcible and masterful depredation within or near the dwelling-house; while robbery has been more particularly applied to violent depredation on the highway, or accompanied by house-breaking. Alis. Prin. Scotch Law, 227.

STOWAGE. In maritime law. The storing, packing, or arranging of the cargo in a ship, in such a manner as to protect the goods from friction, bruising, or damage from leakage.

Money paid for a room where goods are laid; housage. Wharton.

STOWE. In old English law. A valley. Co. Litt. 4b.

STRADDLE. In stock-brokers' parlance the term means the double privilege of a "put" and a "call," and secures to the holder the right to demand of the seller at a certain price within a certain time a certain number of shares of specified stock, or to require him to take, at the same price within the same time, the same shares of stock. Harris v. Tumbridge, 83 N. Y. 95, 38 Am. Rep. 398.

STRAGGLER. In Navy Department regulations. One absent without leave, with the probability that he does not intend to desert, but, if his absence continues for 10 days, he becomes a deserter. Reed v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 252 F. 21, 22.

STRAIGHT-LINE METHOD. In estimating deterioration in a plant. Calculation from examination and experience in like constructions the total life period of the constituent parts of the plant, and then deducting from their value that proportion of decrease represented by the ratio of the years which it has been in use in relation to the entire life period as distinguished from the "sinking-fund method" which consists in charging for depreciation an annual sum, which, with compounding interest thereon, will at the termination of the estimated life of the investment replace the original cost, and if cut off at any given period the accumulation will represent the depreciated value to that date. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Devlin, 188 Cal. 33, 203 P. 1058, 1062; People ex rel. Central Hudson Gas & Electric Co. v. State Tax Commission, 218 App. Div. 44, 217 N. Y. S. 707, 712; Indiana Bell Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission of Indiana (D. C.) 300 F. 190, 198.

STRAMINEUS HOMO. L. Lat. A man of straw, one of no substance, put forward as bail or surety.

STRAND. A shore or bank of the sea or a river. Doane v. Willcutt, 5 Gray (Mass.) 335, 66 Am. Dec. 359; Bell v. Hayes, 60 App. Div. 382, 69 N. Y. S. 898; Stillman v. Burfeind, 21 App. Div. 13, 47 N. Y. S. 280; Harris v. City of St. Helens, 72 Or. 377, 143 P. 941, 944, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1073.

STRANDING. In maritime law. The drifting, driving, or running aground of a ship on a shore or strand. Accidental stranding takes place where the ship is driven on shore by the winds and waves. Voluntary stranding takes place where the ship is run on shore either to preserve her from a worse fate or for some fraudulent purpose. Marsh. Ins. bk. 1, c. 12, § 1. See Barrow v. Bell, 4 Barn. & C. 736; Strong v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 31 N. Y. 106, 88 Am. Dec. 242; Lake v. Columbus Ins. Co., 13 Ohio, 55, 42 Am. Dec. 188; London Assur. Co. v. Companhia de Moagens, 167 U. S. 149, 17 S. Ct. 785, 42 L. Ed. 113; Washington Iron Works v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 128 Wash. 349, 222 P. 487, 489;

In Mining Law

The strike of a vein or lode is its extension in the horizontal plane, or its lengthwise trend or course with reference to the points of the compass; distinguished from its "dip," which is its slope or slant, away from the perpendicular, as it goes downward into the earth, or the angle of its deviation from the vertical plane.

STRIKE OFF. In common parlance, and in the language of the auction-room, property is understood to be "struck off" or "knocked down," when the auctioneer, by the fall of his hammer, or by any other audible or visible announcement, signifies to the bidder that he is entitled to the property on paying the amount of his bid, according to the terms of the sale. Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 439.

In Practice

A court is said to "strike off" a case when it directs the removal of the case from the record or docket, as being one over which it has no jurisdiction and no power to hear and determine it.

STRIKING A DOCKET. In English practice. The first step in the proceedings in bankruptcy, which consists in making affidavit of the debt, and giving a bond to follow up the proceedings with effect. 2 Steph. Comm. 199. When the affidavit and bond are delivered at the bankrupt office, an entry is made in what is called the "docket-book," upon which the petitioning creditor is said to have struck a docket. Eden, Bankr. 51, 52.

STRIKING A JURY. The selecting or nominating a jury of twelve men out of the whole number returned as jurors on the panel. It is especially used of the selection of a special jury, where a panel of forty-eight is prepared by the proper officer, and the parties, in turn, strike off a certain number of names, until the list is reduced to twelve. A jury thus chosen is called a "struck jury."

STRIKING OFF THE ROLL. The disbaring of an attorney or solicitor.

STRIP. The act of spoiling or unlawfully taking away anything from the land, by the tenant for life or years, or by one holding an estate in the land less than the entire fee. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1295.

STRIPPING A MINE. In iron mining. Removal of the earth from the underlying body of iron ore. Bartnes v. Pittsburg Iron Ore Co., 123 Minn. 131, 143 N. W. 117.

STRONG HAND. The words "with strong hand" imply a degree of criminal force, whereas the words vi et armis ("with force and arms") are mere formal words in the action of trespass, and the plaintiff is not bound to prove any force. The statutes relating to forcible entries use the words "with a strong hand" as describing that degree of force which makes an entry or detainer of lands criminal. Brown.

STRUCK. In pleading. A word essential in an indictment for murder, when the death arises from any wounding, beating, or bruising. 1 Bulst. 184; 5 Coke, 122; 3 Mod. 202.

STRUCK JURY. See Striking a Jury.

STRUCTURE. That which is built or constructed; an edifice or building of any kind. Poles connected by wires for the transmission of electricity; Forbes v. Electric Co., 19 Or. 61, 23 P. 670, 20 Am. St. Rep. 793; a mine or pit; Helm v. Chapman, 66 Cal. 291, 5 P. 352; a railroad track; Lee v. Barkhampsted, 46 Conn. 213; see Giant-Powder Co. v. R. Co. (C. C.) 42 F. 470, 8 L. R. A. 700 (contra, Rutherford v. R. Co., 35 Ohio St. 559); are structures. Swings or seats are not; Lothian v. Wood, 55 Cal. 159; Brown v. City of Decatur, 188 Ill. App. 147, 151; McCormack v. Bertschinger, 115 Or. 250, 237 P. 363, 365; Barnes v. Montana Lumber & Hardware Co., 67 Mont. 481, 216 P. 335, 336; State v. Clark, 221 Mo. App. 893, 288 S. W. 77, 78; Lanier v. Lovett, 25 Ariz. 54, 213 P. 391, 394; Kresge v. Maryland Casualty Co., 154 Wis. 627, 143 N. W. 668, 669; Mendoza v. Central Forest Co., 37 Cal. App. 289, 174 P. 359, 361; Standard Boiler & Plate Iron Co. v. McWeeny (C. C. A.) 218 F. 361, 363; Muench v. Steel & Masonry Contracting Co., 155 App. Div. 409, 140 N. Y. S. 330, 331; City of Rock Island v. Industrial Commission of Illinois, 287 Ill. 76, 122 N. E. 82, 83; Le Croy v. Barney (C. C. A.) 12 F.(2d) 363, 366; Armenti v. Brooklyn Union Gas Co., 157 App. Div. 276, 142 N. Y. S. 420, 425; Western Electric Co. v. Cooley, 79 Cal. App. 770, 251 P. 331, 333; Most v. Goebel Const. Co., 199 Mo. App. 336, 203 S. W. 474, 476; Kanawha Oil & Gas Co. v. Wenner, 71 W. Va. 477, 76 S. E. 893, 43 L. R. A. (N. S.) 559; Loesch v. Long Island R. Co., 165 App. Div. 753, 151 N. Y. S. 499, 500; J. E. Moss Iron Works v. Jackson County Court, 89 W. Va. 367, 109 S. E. 343, 346, 26 A. L. R. 319. But see McLaughlin v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 281 Ill. 100, 117 N. E. 819, 820; West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. of Delaware v. Peck, 104 Misc. Rep. 172, 171 N. Y. S. 1065, 1074; Deiner v. Sutermeister, 266 Mo. 505, 178 S. W. 757, 759; Armitage v. Bernheim, 32 Idaho, 594, 187 P. 938, 939.

—Structural alteration or change. One that affects a vital and substantial portion of a thing; that changes its characteristic appearance, the fundamental purpose of its erection, the uses contemplated, one that is extraordinary in scope and effect, or unusual in expenditure. Pross v. Excelsior Cleaning & Dyeing Co., 110 Misc. 195, 179 N. Y. S. 176, 179; Kinston Cotton Mills v. Liability Assur. Corporation, 161 N. C. 562, 77 S. E. 682, 683.

STRUMPET. A whore, harlot, or courtesan. This word was anciently used for an addition. It occurs as an addition to the name of a woman in a return made by a jury in the sixth year of Henry V. Wharton.

STUFF GOWN. The professional robe worn by barristers of the outer bar; viz., those who have not been admitted to the rank of king's counsel. Brown.

STULTIFY. To make one out mentally incapacitated for the performance of an act.

STULTILOQUIUM. Lat. In old English law. Vicious pleading, for which a fine was imposed by King John, supposed to be the origin of the fines for beau-pleader. Crabb, Eng. Law, 135.

STUMPAGE. The sum agreed to be paid to an owner of land for trees standing (or lying) upon his land, the purchaser being permitted to enter upon the land and to cut down and remove the trees; in other words, it is the price paid for a license to cut. Blood v. Drummond, 67 Me. 478.

STUPRUM. Lat. In the Roman and civil law. Unlawful sexual intercourse between a man and an unmarried woman;—distinguished from adultery by being committed with a virgin or widow. Inst. 4, 18, 4; Dig. 48, 5, 6; 50, 16, 101.

SUBDITUS. Lat. In old English law. A vassal; a dependent; any one under the power of another. Spelman.

SUBDIVIDE. To divide a part into smaller parts; to separate into smaller divisions. As, where an estate is to be taken by some of the heirs per stirpes, it is divided and subdivided according to the number of takers in the nearest degree and those in the more remote degree respectively.

SUBDUCT. In English probate practice, to subduct a caveat is to withdraw it.

SUBHASTARE. Lat. In the civil law. To sell at public auction, which was done sub hasta, under a spear; to put or sell under the spear. Calvin.

SUBHASTATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A sale by public auction, which was done under a spear, fixed up at the place of sale as a public sign of it. Calvin.

SUBINFEUDATION. The system which the feudal tenants introduced of granting smaller estates out of those which they held of their lord, to be held of themselves as inferior lords. As this system was proceeding downward ad infinitum, and depriving the lords of their feudal profits, it was entirely suppressed by the statute Quia Emptores, 18 Edw. I. c. 1., and instead of it alienation in the modern sense was introduced, so that thenceforth the alienee held of the same chief lord and by the same services that his alienor before him held. Brown.

SUBJECT.

In Logic

That concerning which the affirmation in a proposition is made; the first word in a proposition. State v. Armstrong, 31 N. M. 220, 243 P. 333, 337.

In Legislation

An individual matter considered as the object of legislation. The constitutions of several of the states require that every act of the legislature shall relate to but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title of the statute. See Ex parte Thomas, 113 Ala. 1, 21 So. 369; In re Mayer, 50 N. Y. 504; State v. County Treasurer, 4 S. C. 528; Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 577, 50 N. W. 923, 28 Am. Subrogation is of two kinds, either conventional or legal; the former being where the subrogation is express, by the acts of the creditor and the third person; the latter being (as in the case of sureties) where the subrogation is effected or implied by the operation of the law. See Gordon v. Stewart, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 852, 96 N. W. 628; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cornwell, 72 Hun, 199, 25 N. Y. S. 348; Seeley v. Bacon (N. J. Ch.) 34 A. 140; Home Sav. Bank v. SUBROGEE. A person who is subrogated; one who succeeds to the rights of another by subrogation.

SUBSCRIBE. To write under; to write the name under; to write the name at the bottom or end of a writing. Wild Cat Branch v. Ball, 45 Ind. 213; Davis v. Shields, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 341; In re Yakel, 118 Misc. 641, 195 N. Y. S. 355, 356; Ashwell v. Miller, 54 Ind. App. 381, 103 N. E. 37, 39; Miller v. Miller, 55 Ind. App. 644, 104 N. E. 588, 591.

Requirement that contract be "subscribed" by both parties is met where the signatures of the parties are placed thereon, for the purpose of authenticating and giving force and effect to the contract, whether they be placed at the bottom, the top, or in the body of the instrument. Myers v. Moore, 78 Neb. 448, 110 N. W. 989. Dollarhide v. James, 107 Neb. 624, 186 N. W. 989, 990. The term is often liberally construed in the case of wills. Lucas v. Brown, 187 Ky. 502, 219 S. W. 796, 798; In re McConihe's Estate, 123 Misc. 318, 205 N. Y. S. 780, 781.

"Subscribe" has been defined as equivalent to agree to pay. While the strict definition of the word "subscribe" or "subscription" involves the idea of a written signature, yet by common usage it is often employed to include an agreement, written or oral, to give or pay some amount to a designated purpose, more usually, perhaps, to some purpose for the promotion of which numerous persons are uniting their means and their efforts. Mills v. Friedman, 111 Misc. 253, 181 N. Y. S. 285, 292.

SUBSCRIBER. One who writes his name under a written instrument; one who affixes his signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as his own expressions, or of binding himself by an engagement which it contains.

One who becomes bound by a subscription to the capital stock of a corporation. Latimer v. Bennett, 37 Ga. App. 246, 139 S. E. 570, 572. A "subscriber" is one who has agreed to take stock from the corporation on the original issue of such stock. Jones v. Rankin, 19 N. M. 56, 140 P. 1120, 1121. "Subscriber," as used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, means an employer who has become a member of the association or insured under the act. In re Cox, 225 Mass. 220, 114 N. E. 281, 283.

SUBSCRIBING WITNESS. He who witnesses or attests the signature of a party to an instrument, and in testimony thereof subscribes his own name to the document.

A subscribing witness is one who sees a writing executed, or hears it acknowledged, and at the request of the party thereupon signs his name as a witness. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1935.

SUBSCRIPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A writing under, or under-writing; a writing of the name under or at the bottom of an instrument by way of attestation or ratification; subscription.

That kind of imperial constitution which was granted in answer to the prayer of a petitioner who was present. Calvin.

SUBSCRIPTION. The act of writing one's name under a written instrument; the affixing one's signature to any document, whether for the purpose of authenticating or attesting it, of adopting its terms as one's own expressions, or of binding one's self by an engagement which it contains.

Subscription is the act of the hand, while attestation is the act of the senses. To subscribe a paper published as a will is only to write on the same paper the name of the witness; to attest a will is to know that it was published as such, and to certify the facts required to constitute an actual and legal publication. In re Downie's Will, 42 Wis. 66, 76.

A written contract by which one engages to take and pay for capital stock of a corporation, or to contribute a sum of money for a designated purpose, either gratuitously, as in the case of subscribing to a charity, or in consideration of an equivalent to be rendered, as a subscription to a periodical, a forthcoming book, a series of entertainments, or the like. Davis v. Rolley, 124 Kan. 132, 257 P. 746, 747; First Caldwell Oil Co. v. Hunt, 100 N. J. Law, 308, 127 A. 209, 210; Pasadena Rapid Transit Co. v. Munson, 37 Cal. App. 352, 174 P. 109; Guaranty Mortg. Co. v. Wilcox, 62 Utah, 184, 218 P. 133, 136.

SUBSCRIPTION LIST. A list of subscribers to some agreement with each other or a third person.

SUBSELLIA. Lat. In Roman law. Lower seats or benches, occupied by the judices and by inferior magistrates when they sat in judgment, as distinguished from the tribunal of the prætor. Calvin.

Subsequens matrimonium tollit peccatum præcedens. A subsequent marriage [of the parties] removes a previous fault, i. e., previous illicit intercourse, and legitimates the offspring. A rule of Roman law.

SUBSEQUENT CONDITION. See Condition.

SUBSIDY.

In English Law

An aid, tax, or tribute granted by parliament to the king for the urgent occasions of the kingdom, to be levied on every subject of ability, according to the value of his lands or goods. Jacob.

In American Law

A grant of money made by government in aid of the promoters of any enterprise, work, or improvement in which the government desires to participate, or which is considered a proper subject for state aid, because likely to be of benefit to the public.

In International Law

The assistance given in money by one nation to another to enable it the better to carry on a war, when such nation does not join directly in the war. Vattel, bk. 3, § 82.

SUBSOIL. The word includes, prima facie, all that is below the actual surface, down to the centre of the earth. 17 L. J. C. P. 162. It is a wider term than mines, quarries, or minerals. 2 L. R. Ir. 339.

SUBSTANCE. Essence; the material or essential part of a thing, as distinguished from "form." See State v. Burgdoerfer, 107 Mo. 1, 17 S. W. 646, 14 L. R. A. 846; Hugo v. Miller, 50 Minn. 105, 52 N. W. 381; Pierson v. Insurance Co., 7 Houst. (Del.) 307; 31 A. 966; U. S. v. Johnston (D. C.) 292 F. 491, 495; Bellows v. Travelers' Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. (Mo. Sup.) 203 S. W. 978, 984; Roughlin v. State, 17 Ga. App. 205, 86 S. E. 452, 454; State v. Japone, 202 Iowa, 450, 209 N. W. 468, 471; People v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 296 Ill. 246, 129 N. E. 846, 848; Metzroth v. City of New York, 241 N. Y. 470, 150 N. E. 519, 520; State v. Gregory, 198 Iowa 316, 198 N. W. 58, 60.

SUBSTANTIAL DAMAGES. A sum, assessed by way of damages, which is worth having; opposed to nominal damages, which are assessed to satisfy a bare legal right. Wharton.

SUBSTANTIAL PERFORMANCE. Substantial performance exists where there has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract, and no omission in essential points, and the contract has been honestly and faithfully performed in its material and substantial particulars, and the only variance from the strict and literal performance consists of technical or unimportant omissions or defects. Cotherman v. Oriental Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 272 S. W. 616, 619; Brown v. Aguilar, 202 Cal. 143, 259 P. 735, 737; Cramer v. Esswein, 220 N. Y. S. 634, 220 App. Div. 10; Transfer Realty Co. v. Osler, 168 Iowa, 59, 150 N. W. 17, 20, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 1126; U. S. v. Whyel (D. C.) 19 F.(2d) 260, 261; Bellows v. Travelers' Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. (Mo. Sup.) 203 S. W. 978, 984; McEwen v. New York Life Ins. Co., 23 Cal. App. 694, 139 P. 242, 243.

SUBSTANTIATE. To establish the existence or truth of, by true or competent evidence, or to verify. State v. Lock, 302 Mo. 400, 259 S. W. 116, 120.

SUBSTANTIVE FELONY. An independent felony; one not dependent upon the conviction of another person for another crime. Karakutza v. State, 163 Wis. 293, 156 N. W. 965, 966; Johnson v. State, 68 Fla. 528, 67 So. 100, 103.

SUBSTANTIVE LAW. That part of the law which the courts are established to administer, as opposed to the rules according to which the substantive law itself is administered. That part of the law which creates, defines, and regulates rights, as opposed to adjective or remedial law, which prescribes the method of enforcing rights or obtaining redress for their invasion. Anderson v. Wirkman, 67 Mont. 176, 215 P. 224, 227; Jones v. Erie R. Co., 106 Ohio St. 408, 140 N. E. 366, 368; Trinity & B. V. Ry. Co. v. Geary, 107 Tex. 11, 172 S. W. 545, 547.

SUBSTITUTE. One appointed in the place or stead of another, to transact business for him; a proxy.

To put under, to put in place of, one put in place of another, one acting for or taking the place of another. New Amsterdam Casualty Co. v. Hamilton, 123 Wash. 147, 212 P. 147, 148. Something placed in a position previously occupied by another thing. Friedle v. First Nat. Bank, 221 N. Y. S. 292, 296, 129 Misc. 309; In re Ross, 86 N. J. Law, 387, 94 A. 304, 306; Riverside Coal Co. v. American Coal Co., 107 Conn. 40, 139 A. 276, 277; Dees v. State, 16 Ala. App. 97, 75 So. 645, 646; People v. O'Connor, 81 Cal. App. 506, 254 P. 630, 636; Dundon v. Pedersen (D. C.) 227 F. 120, 122; Jones v. McDade, 200 Ala. 230, 75 So. 988, 994; Succession of Hall, 141 La. 860, 75 So. 802, 803.

A person hired by one who has been drafted into the military service of the country, to go to the front and serve in the army in his stead.

SUBSTITUTED EXECUTOR. One appointed to act in the place of another executor upon the happening of a certain event; e. g., if the latter should refuse the office.

SUBSTITUTED SERVICE.

In English Practice

Service of process made under authorization of the court upon some other person, when the person who should be served cannot be found or cannot be reached.

In American Law

Service of process upon a defendant in any manner, authorized by statute, other than personal service within the jurisdiction; as by publication, by mailing a copy to his last known address, or by personal service in another state.

SUBSTITUTES. In Scotch law. The person first called or nominated in a tailzie (entailment of an estate upon a number of heirs in succession) is called the "institute" or "heir-institute;" the rest are called "substitutes."

SUBSTITUTIO HÆREDIS. Lat. In Roman law, it was competent for a testator after instituting a hæres (called the "hæres institutus") to substitute another (called the "hæres substitutus") in his place in a certain event. If the event upon which the substitution was to take effect was the refusal of the instituted heir to accept the inheritance at all, then the substitution was called "vulgaris," (or common;) but if the event was the death of the infant (pupillus) after acceptance, and before attaining his majority, (of fourteen years if a male, and of twelve years if a female,) then the substitution was called "pupillaris," (or for minors.) Brown.

SUBSTITUTION.

In the Civil Law

The putting one person in place of another; particularly, the act of a testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest either on failure of the original devisee or legatee or after him.

"Substitution," with respect to wills, and in view of Civ. Code, art. 1520, prohibiting substitution, is the putting of one person in the place of another so that he may, in default of ability in the former, or after him, have the benefit of the devise or legacy, particularly the act of testator in naming a second devisee or legatee who is to take the bequest on failure of the original devisee or legatee, or after him. In re Courtin, 144 La. 971, 81 So. 457, 459; Succession of Hall, 141 La. 860, 75 So. 802, 803; Succession of Reilly, 136 La. 347, 67 So. 27, 33.

In Scotch Law

The enumeration or designation of the heirs in a settlement of property. Substitutes in an entail are those heirs who are appointed in succession on failure of others.

SUBSTITUTIONAL, SUBSTITUTIONARY. Where a will contains a gift of property to a class of persons, with a clause providing that on the death of a member of the class before the period of distribution his share is to go to his issue, (if any,) so as to substitute them for him, the gift to the issue is said to be substitutional or substitutionary. A bequest to such of the children of A. as shall be living at the testator's death, with a direction that the issue of such as shall have died shall take the shares which their parents would have taken, if living at the testator's death, is an example. Sweet. See Acken v. Osborn, 45 N. J. Eq. 377, 17 A. 767; In re De Laveaga's Estate, 119 Cal. 651, 51 P. 1074.

SUBTRACTION. In French law. The fraudulent appropriation of any property, but particularly of the goods of a decedent's estate.

SUBTENANT. An under-tenant; one who leases all or a part of the rented premises from the original lessee for a term less than that held by the latter. Forrest v. Durnell, 86 Tex. 647, 26 S. W. 481; Elliott v. Dodson (Tex. Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 520, 522.

SUBTRACTION. The offense of withholding or withdrawing from another man what by law he is entitled to. There are various descriptions of this offense, of which the principal are as follows: (1) Subtraction of suit and services, which is a species of injury affecting a man's real property, and consists of a withdrawal of (or a neglect to perform or pay) the fealty, suit of court, rent, or services reserved by the lessor of the land. (2) Subtraction of tithes is the withholding from the parson or vicar the tithes to which he is entitled, and this is cognizable in the ecclesiastical courts. (3) Subtraction of conjugal rights is the withdrawing or withholding by a husband or wife of those rights and privileges which the law allows to either party. (4) Subtraction of legacies is the withholding or detaining of legacies by an executor. (5) Subtraction of church rates, in English law, consists in the refusal to pay the amount of rate at which any individual parishioner has been assessed for the necessary repairs of the parish church. Brown.

SUBTRACTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS. The act of a husband or wife living separately from the other without a lawful cause. 3 Bl. Comm. 94.

SUBURBANI. Lat. In old English law. Husbandmen.

SUBVASSORES. In old Scotch law. Base holders; inferior holders; they who held their lands of knights. Skene.

SUCCESSIO. Lat. In the civil law. A coming in place of another, on his decease; a coming into the estate which a deceased person had at the time of his death. This was either by virtue of an express appointment of the deceased person by his will, (ex testamento), or by the general appointment of law in case of intestacy, (ab intestato). Inst. 2, 9, 7; Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 10.

SUCCESSION.

In the Civil Law and in Louisiana

The fact of the transmission of the rights, estate, obligations, and charges of a deceased person to his heir or heirs.

The right by which the heir can take possession of the decedent's estate. The right of the heir to step into the place of the deceased, with respect to the possession, control, enjoyment, administration, and settlement of all the latter's property, rights, obligations, charges, etc.

The estate of a deceased person, comprising all kinds of property owned or claimed by him, as well as his debts and obligations, and considered as a legal entity (according to the notion of the Roman law) for certain purposes, such as collecting assets and paying debts. See Davenport v. Adler, 52 La. Ann. 263, 26 So. 886; Succession of Blumberg, 148 La. 1030, 88 So. 297, 299. In other jurisdictions succession is defined as the devolution of title from a deceased ancestor to his immediate heir. In re Bradley's Estate, 185 Wis. 393, 201 N. W. 973, 976, 38 A. L. R. 1; Adams v. Akerlund, 168 Ill. 632, 48 N. E. 454; Quarles v. Clayton, 87 Tenn. 308, 10 S. W. 505, 3 L. R. A. 170; State v. Payne, 129 Mo. 468, 31 S. W. 797, 33 L. R. A. 576; Blake v. McCartney, 3 Fed. Cas. 596; In re Headen's Estate, 52 Cal. 298.

Succession is the transmission of the rights and obligations of the deceased to the heirs.

Succession signifies also the estates, rights, and charges which a person leaves after his death, whether the property exceeds the charges or the charges exceed the property, or whether he has only left charges without any property.

The succession not only includes the rights and obligations of the deceased as they exist at the time of his death, but all that has accrued thereto since the opening of the succession, as also the new charges to which it becomes subject.

Finally, succession signifies also that right by which the heir can take possession of the estate of the deceased, such as it may be. Civ. Code La. arts. 871-874.

Succession is the coming in of another to take the property of one who dies without disposing of it by will. Civ. Code Dak. § 776 (Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 5741; Rev. Code S. D. 1919, § 699).

In Common Law

The right by which one set of men may, by succeeding another set, acquire a property in all the goods, movables, and other chattels of a corporation. 2 Bl. Comm. 430. The power of perpetual succession is one of the peculiar properties of a corporation. 2 Kent, Comm. 267. See Perpetual.

In General

—Artificial succession. That attribute of a corporation by which, in contemplation of law, the company itself remains always the same though its constituent members or stockholders may change from time to time. See Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 100.

—Hereditary succession. Descent or title, by descent at common law; the title whereby a man on the death of his ancestor acquires his estate by right of representation as his heir at law. See In re Donahue's Estate, 36 Cal. 332; Barclay v. Cameron, 25 Tex. 241.

—Intestate succession. The succession of an heir at law to the property and estate of his ancestor when the latter has died intestate, or leaving a will which has been annulled or set aside. Civ. Code La. art. 1096.

—Irregular succession. That which is established by law in favor of certain persons, or of the state, in default of heirs, either legal or instituted by testament. Civ. Code La. art. 878.

—Legal succession. That which the law establishes in favor of the nearest relation of a deceased person.

—Natural succession. Succession taking place between natural persons, for example, in descent on the death of an ancestor. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 100.

—Succession duty. In English law. A duty, (varying from one to ten per cent.) payable under the statute 16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, in respect chiefly of real estate and leaseholds, but generally in respect of all property (not already chargeable with legacy duty) devolving upon any one in consequence of any death. Brown.

—Succession tax. A tax imposed upon the privilege of receiving property from a decedent by devise or inheritance. See Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 346, 23 L. Ed. 99; State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S. W. 245, 40 L. R. A. 280, 65 Am. St. Rep. 653; Peters v. Lynchburg, 76 Va. 929; Wonderly v. Tax Commission of Ohio, 112 Ohio St. 233, 147 N. E. 509, 512; Shepard v. State, 184 Wis. 88, 197 N. W. 344, 345; Bankers' Trust Co. v. State, 96 Conn. 361, 114 A. 104, 106. "Succession" as subject of taxation includes or may, by the Legislature, lawfully be described to include, as an essential element, the entering into possession and enjoyment of property by the beneficiary. Saltonstall v. Treasurer and Receiver General, 256 Mass. 519, 153 N. E. 4, 6.

—Testamentary succession. In the civil law, that which results from the institution of an heir in a testament executed in the form prescribed by law. Civ. Code La. art. 876.

—Vacant succession. A succession is called "vacant" when no one claims it, or when all the heirs are unknown, or when all the known heirs to it have renounced it. Civ. Code La. art. 1095. Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 11 S. Ct. 369, 34 L. Ed. 1054.

SUCCESSOR. One who succeeds to the rights or the place of another; particularly, the person or persons who constitute a corporation after the death or removal of those who preceded them as corporators.

One who has been appointed or elected to hold an office after the term of the present incumbent.

Singular Successor

A term borrowed from the civil law, denoting a person who succeeds to the rights of a former owner in a single article of property, (as by purchase,) as distinguished from a universal successor, who succeeds to all the rights and powers of a former owner, as in the case of a bankrupt or intestate estate.

Succurritur minori; facilis est lapsus juventutis. A minor is [to be] aided; a mistake of youth is easy, [youth is liable to err.] Jenk. Cent. p. 47, case 89.

SUCH. Alike, similar, of that kind, of the like kind; "such" represents the object as already particularized in terms which are not mentioned, and is a descriptive and relative word, referring to the last antecedent. Strawberry Hill Land Corporation v. Starbuck, 124 Va. 71, 97 S. E. 362, 366. See also Integrity Mut. Ins. Co. v. Boys, 293 Ill. 307, 127 N. E. 748, 751; U. S. v. Johnson Co., 9 Ct. Cust. App. 258, 268; People ex rel. Kelly v. Public Service Commission, 157 N. Y. S. 703, 705, 171 App. Div. 810.

SUCKEN, SUCHEN. In Scotch law. The whole lands astricted to a mill; that is, the lands of which the tenants are obliged to send their grain to that mill. Bell.

SUDDEN AFFRAY. A difficulty or fight suddenly resulting from the mutual agreement of two or more parties. Cavanaugh v. Commonwealth, 172 Ky. 799, 190 S. W. 123, 126.

SUDDEN OR VIOLENT INJURY. Injury occurring unexpectedly and not naturally or in the ordinary course of events. State v. District Court of St. Louis County, 138 Minn. 131, 164 N. W. 585, L. R. A. 1918C, 116.

SUDDEN HEAT OF PASSION. In the common-law definition of manslaughter, this phrase means an access of rage or anger, suddenly arising from a contemporary provocation. It means that the provocation must arise at the time of the killing, and that the passion is not the result of a former provocation, and the act must be directly caused by the passion arising out of the provocation at the time of the homicide. Stell v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 75. And see Farrar v. State, 29 Tex. App. 250, 15 S. W. 719; Violett v. Comm. (Ky.) 72 S. W. 1; State v. Cheatwood, 2 Hill, Law (S. C.) 462.

SUDDER. In Hindu law. The best; the fore-court of a house; the chief seat of government, contradistinguished from "mofussil," or interior of the country; the presidency. Wharton.

SUE. To prosecute by law; to commence legal proceedings against a party. It is applied almost exclusively to the institution and prosecution of a civil action. See Challener v. Niles, 78 Ill. 78; Murphy v. Cochran,

1 Hill (N. Y.) 342; Kuklence v. Vocht, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 372; U. S. v. Moore (C. C.) 11 F. 251.

SUE OUT. To obtain by application; to petition for and take out. Properly the term is applied only to the obtaining and issuing of such process as is only accorded upon an application first made; but conventionally it is also used of the taking out of process which issues of course. The term is occasionally used of instruments other than writs. Thus, we speak of "suing out" a pardon. See South Missouri Lumber Co. v. Wright, 114 Mo. 326, 21 S. W. 811; Kelley v. Vincent, 8 Ohio St. 420; U. S. v. American Lumber Co., 85 F. 830, 29 C. C. A. 431.

SUERTE. In Spanish law. A small lot of ground. Particularly, such a lot within the limits of a city or town used for cultivation or planting as a garden, vineyard or orchard. Building lots in towns and cities are called "solares." Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 554.

SUFFER. To suffer an act to be done or a condition to exist is to permit or consent to it; to approve of it, and not to hinder it. It implies knowledge, a willingness of the mind and responsible control or ability to prevent. See In re Rome Planing Mill (C. C.) 96 F. 815; Wilson v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 22 S. Ct. 74, 46 L. Ed. 147; Selleck v. Selleck, 19 Conn. 505; Gregory v. U. S., 10 Fed. Cas. 1197; In re Thomas (D. C.) 103 F. 274; Block v. Citizens' Trust & Savings Bank, 57 Cal. App. 518, 207 P. 510, 513; Clover Creamery Co. v. Kanode, 142 Va. 542, 129 S. E. 222, 223; Allison v. Commonwealth, 221 Ky. 205, 298 S. W. 680.

SUFFERANCE. Toleration; negative permission by not forbidding; passive consent; license implied from the omission or neglect to enforce an adverse right. See People on Inf. of Price v. Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Co., 225 N. Y. 25, 121 N. E. 474, 476.

SUFFERANCE WHARVES. In English law. Wharves in which goods may be landed before any duty is paid. They are appointed for the purpose by the commissioners of the customs. 2 Steph. Comm. 500, note.

SUFFERENTIA PACIS. Lat. A grant or sufferance of peace or truce.

SUFFERING A RECOVERY. A recovery was effected by the party wishing to convey the land suffering a fictitious action to be brought against him by the party to whom the land was to be conveyed, (the demandant,) and allowing the demandant to recover a judgment against him for the land in question. The vendor, or conveying party, in thus assisting or permitting the demandant so to recover a judgment against him, was thence technically said to "suffer a recovery." Brown.

SUFFICIENT. "Adequate," "enough," "as much as may be necessary," equal or fit for end proposed. Brittain v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 95 Ohio St. 391, 115 N. E. 110; State v. Holter, 32 S. D. 43, 142 N. W. 657, 663, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 376, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 193; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Enderle (Tex. Civ. App.) 170 S. W. 276, 277.

As to sufficient "Consideration" and "Evidence," see those titles.

SUFFRAGAN. Bishops who in former times were appointed to supply the place of others during their absence on embassies or other business were so termed. They were consecrated as other bishops were, and were anciently called "chorepiscopi," or "bishops of the county," in contradistinction to the regular bishops of the city or see. The practice of creating suffragan bishops, after having long been discontinued, was recently revived; and such bishops are now permanently "assistant" to the bishops. Brown.

A suffragan is a titular bishop ordained to aid and assist the bishop of the diocese in his spiritual function; or one who supplieth the place instead of the bishop, by whose suffrage ecclesiastical causes or matters committed to him are to be adjudged, acted on, or determined. Some writers call these suffragans by the name of "subsidiary bishops." Tomlins.

SUFFRAGE. A vote; the act of voting; the right or privilege of casting a vote at public elections. The last is the meaning of the term in such phrases as "the extension of the suffrage," "universal suffrage," etc. See Spitzer v. Fulton, 33 Misc. 257, 68 N. Y. S. 660; Coffield v. Farrell, 38 Okl. 608, 134 P. 407, 409.

Participation in the suffrage is not of right, but is granted by the state on a consideration of what is most for the interest of the state; Cooley, Const., 2d Ed. 752; Spencer v. Board of Registration, 8 D. C. 169, 29 Am. Rep. 582; U. S. v. Anthony, 11 Blatchf. 200, Fed. Cas. No. 14,459. The grant of suffrage makes it a legal right until it is recalled, and it is protected by the law as property is.

SUFFRAGIUM. Lat. In Roman law. A vote; the right of voting in the assemblies of the people.

Aid or influence used or promised to obtain some honor or office; the purchase of office. Cod. 4, 3.

SUGGEST. To introduce indirectly to the thought; to propose with diffidence or modesty; to hint; to intimate. Sims v. Ratcliff, 62 Ind. App. 184, 110 N. E. 122, 123.

SUGGESTIO FALSI. Lat. Suggestion or representation of that which is false; false representation. To recite in a deed that a will was duly executed, when it was not, is suggestio falsi; and to conceal from the heir that the will was not duly executed is suppres- sio veri. 1 P. Wms. 240, and see Turney v. Avery, 92 N. J. Eq. 473, 113 A. 710.

SUGGESTION. In practice. A statement, formally entered on the record, of some fact or circumstance which will materially affect the further proceedings in the cause, or which is necessary to be brought to the knowledge of the court in order to its right disposition of the action, but which, for some reason, cannot be pleaded. Thus, if one of the parties dies after issue and before trial, his death may be suggested on the record. C. J. Huebel Co. v. Mackinnon, 186 Mich. 617, 152 N. W. 1098, 1100.

SUGGESTIVE INTERROGATION. A phrase used by some writers to signify "leading question." 2 Benth. Jud. Ev. b. 3, c. 3. It is used in the French law.

SUI GENERIS. Lat. Of its own kind or class; i. e., the only one of its own kind; peculiar.

SUI HEREDES. Lat. In the civil law. One's own heirs; proper heirs. Inst. 2, 19, 2.

SUI JURIS. Lat. Of his own right; possessing full social and civil rights; not under any legal disability, or the power of another, or guardianship.

Having capacity to manage one's own affairs; not under legal disability to act for one's self. Story, Ag. § 2.

SUICIDE. Self-destruction; the deliberate termination of one's existence, while in the possession and enjoyment of his mental faculties. See Insurance Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41; Weber v. Supreme Tent, 172 N. Y. 490, 65 N. E. 258, 92 Am. St. Rep. 753; Clift v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 458; Knights Templars, etc., Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, 23 S. Ct. 108, 47 L. Ed. 139; Breasted v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 8 N. Y. 299, 59 Am. Dec. 482; Daniels v. Railroad Co., 183 Mass. 393, 67 N. E. 424, 62 L. R. A. 751.

The term "suicide," as used in insurance policies, has been held to mean death by one's own hand, irrespective of mental condition. Travelers' Protective Ass'n of America v. Smith, 183 Ind. 59, 107 N. E. 283, 291, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 1088; Great Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 148 Miss. 173, 114 So. 262, 263, 56 A. L. R. 681. But other cases hold that intent is essential. Benard v. Protected Home Circle, 161 App. Div. 59, 146 N. Y. S. 232, 233; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Pater (C. C. A.) 17 F.(2d) 963, 964.

SUICIDE, SANE OR INSANE. An exemption from liability for death by "suicide, sane or insane," in a life policy includes self-destruction irrespective of the assured's mental condition at the time of the act. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Blum (C. C. A.) 258 F. 897, 899. See also Power v. Modern Brotherhood of America, 98 Kan. 487, 158 P. 870, 872.

SUING AND LABORING CLAUSE is a clause in an English policy of marine insurance, generally in the following form: "In case of any loss or misfortune, it shall be lawful for the assured, their factors, servants and assigns, to sue, labor, and travel for, in, and about the defense, safeguard, and recovery of the" property insured, "without prejudice to this insurance; to the charges whereof we, the assurers, will contribute." The object of the clause is to encourage the assured to exert themselves in preserving the property from loss. Sweet.

SUIT.

In Old English Law

The witnesses or followers of the plaintiff. 3 Bl. Comm. 295. See Secta.

Old books mention the word in many connections which are now disused,—at least, in the United States. Thus, "suit" was used of following any one, or in the sense of pursuit; as in the phrase "making fresh suit." It was also used of a petition to the king or lord. "Suit of court" was the attendance which a tenant owed at the court of his lord. "Suit covenant" and "suit custom" seem to have signified a right to one's attendance, or one's obligation to attend, at the lord's court, founded upon a known covenant, or an immemorial usage or practice of ancestors. "Suit regal" was attendance at the sheriff's tourn or leet, (his court.) "Suit of the king's peace" was pursuing an offender,—one charged with breach of the peace, while "suit-hold" was a tenure in consideration of certain services to the superior lord. Abbott.

In Modern Law

"Suit" is a generic term, of comprehensive signification, and applies to any proceeding by one person or persons against another or others in a court of justice in which the plaintiff pursues, in such court, the remedy which the law affords him for the redress of an injury or the enforcement of a right. See Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. S. 375, 23 L. Ed. 449; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 464, 7 L. Ed. 481; Drake v. Gilmore, 52 N. Y. 393; Philadelphia, etc., Iron Co. v. Chicago, 158 Ill. 9, 41 N. E. 1102; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 405, 5 L. Ed. 257; McWilliams v. Hopkins (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 793, 795; Barton v. Reynolds, 81 Misc. 15, 142 N. Y. S. 895, 897. It is, however, seldom applied to a criminal prosecution. And it is sometimes restricted to the designation of a proceeding in equity, to distinguish such proceeding from an action at law. Patterson v. Standard Accident Ins. Co., 178 Mich. 288, 144 N. W. 491, 492, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 583, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 632. For "Ancillary" suit and suit "In Rem" see those titles.

In General

—Class suits. Those in which one or more in a numerous class, having a common interest in the subject-matter, sue in behalf of themselves and all others of the class. City of Dallas v. Armour & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 222, 224.

—Suit against state. Suit in which relief against the state is sought. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bosworth (D. C.) 209 F. 380, 401.

—Suit of a civil nature. A suit for the remedy of a private wrong, the test being whether the law is penal in the strict and primary sense, and whether the wrong is to the public or to the individual. City of Montgomery, Ala., v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. (D. C.) 218 F. 471, 474.

—Suit of court. This phrase denoted the duty of attending the lord's court, and, in common with fealty, was one of the incidents of a feudal holding. Brown.

—Suit of the king's peace. The pursuing a man for breach of the king's peace by treasons, insurrections, or trespasses. Cowell.

—Suit money. An allowance, in the nature of temporary alimony, authorized by statute in some states to be made to a wife on the institution of her suit for divorce, intended to cover the reasonable expenses of the suit and to provide her with means for the efficient preparation and trial of her case. See Yost v. Yost, 141 Ind. 584, 41 N. E. 11.

—Suit silver. A small sum of money paid in lieu of attendance at the court-baron. Cowell.

—Suits or proceedings at law or in chancery. Suits instituted and carried on in substantial conformity with the forms and modes prescribed by the common law or by the rules in chancery excluding cases instituted and carried on solely in accordance with statutory provisions. Lavin v. Wells Bros. Co., 272 Ill. 609, 112 N. E. 271, 272.

SUITABLE. Fit and appropriate for the end in view. U. S. v. American & Patterson, 9 Ct. Cust. App. 244, 245.

SUITAS. Lat. In the civil law. The condition or quality of a suus hæres, or proper heir. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 2, c. 9, no. 11; Calvin.

SUITE. Those persons who by his authority follow or attend an ambassador or other public minister.

SUITOR. A party to a suit or action in court. In its ancient sense, "suitor" meant one who was bound to attend the county court; also one who formed part of the secta.

SUITORS' DEPOSIT ACCOUNT. Formerly suitors in the English court of chancery derived no income from their cash paid into court, unless it was invested at their request and risk. Now, however, it is provided by the court of chancery (funds) act, 1872, that all money paid into court, and not required by the suitor to be invested, shall be placed on deposit and shall bear interest at two per cent. per annum for the benefit of the suitor entitled to it. Sweet.

SUITORS' FEE FUND. A fund in the English court of chancery into which the fees of suitors in that court were paid, and out of which the salaries of various officers of the court were defrayed. Wharton.

SUITORS' FUND IN CHANCERY. In England. A fund consisting of moneys which, having been paid into the court of chancery, are placed out for the benefit and better security of the suitors, including interest from the same. By St. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 91, § 4, the principal of this fund, amounting to over £3,000,000, was transferred to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt. Mozley & Whitley.

SULCUS. In old English law. A small brook or stream of water. Cowell.

SULLERY. In old English law. A plowland. 1 Inst. 5.

SUM. In English law. A summary or abstract; a compendium; a collection. Several of the old law treatises are called "sums." Lord Hale applies the term to summaries of statute law. Burrill.

The sense in which the term is most commonly used is "money"; a quantity of money or currency; any amount indefinitely, a sum of money, a small sum, or a large sum. U. S. v. Van Auken, 96 U. S. 368, 24 L. Ed. 852; Donovan v. Jenkins, 52 Mont. 124, 155 P. 972, 973.

SUM PAYABLE. The term "sum payable" as used within Negotiable Instruments Law is the amount for which, by the terms of the instrument, the maker becomes liable, and which he might tender and pay in full satisfaction of his obligation. First Nat. Bank of Iowa City, Iowa, v. Watson, 56 Okl. 495, 155 P. 1152.

SUMAGE. Toll for carriage on horseback. Cowell.

Summa caritas est facere justitiam singulis, et omni tempore quando necesse fuerit. The greatest charity is to do justice to every one, and at any time whenever it may be necessary. 11 Coke, 70.

Summa est lex quæ pro religione facit. That is the highest law which favors religion. 10 Mod. 117, 119; Broom, Max. 19.

Summa ratio est quæ pro religione facit. That consideration is strongest which determines in favor of religion. Co. Litt. 341a; Broom, Max. 19.

SUMMARY, n. An abridgment; brief; compendium; also a short application to a court or judge, without the formality of a full proceeding. Wharton.

SUMMARY, adj. Immediate, peremptory; off-hand; without a jury; provisional; statutory. The term used in connection with legal proceedings means a short, concise, and immediate proceeding, Phil Hollenbach Co. v. Hollenbach, 181 Ky. 262, 204 S. W. 152, 161, 13 A. L. R. 524; Vance v. Noel, 143 La. 477, 78 So. 741, 742; and trial of a "summary" character is a trial without a jury. State v. King, 137 Tenn. 17, 191 S. W. 352, 354; City of St. Paul v. Robinson, 129 Minn. 383, 152 N. W. 777, Ann. Cas. 1916E, 845.

—Summary actions. In Scotch law. Those which are brought into court not by summons, but by petition, corresponding to summary proceedings in English courts. Bell; Brown.

—Summary conviction. See Conviction.

—Summary jurisdiction. See Jurisdiction.

—Summary procedure on bills of exchange. This phrase refers to the statute 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, passed in 1855, for the purpose of facilitating the remedies on bills and notes by the prevention of frivolous or fictitious defenses. By this statute, a defendant in an action on a bill or note, brought within six months after it has become payable, is prohibited from defending the action without the leave of the court or a judge. See 2 Steph. Comm. 118, note; Lush. Pr. 1027.

—Summary proceeding. See Proceeding.

SUMMER FALLOWING. Plowing and harrowing of grounds preparatory to cropping during next season. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Walla Walla v. Small, 131 Wash. 197, 229 P. 531, 533.

SUMMER-HUS SILVER. A payment to the lords of the wood on the Wealds of Kent, who used to visit those places in summer, when their under-tenants were bound to prepare little summer-houses for their reception, or else pay a composition in money. Cowell.

SUMMING UP, on the trial of an action by a jury, is a recapitulation of the evidence adduced, in order to draw the attention of the jury to the salient points. The counsel for each party has the right of summing up his evidence, if he has adduced any, and the judge sometimes sums up the whole in his charge to the jury. Smith, Act. 157. And see State v. Ezzard, 40 S. C. 312, 18 S. E. 1025.

SUMMON. In practice. To serve a summons; to cite a defendant to appear in court to answer a suit which has been begun against him; to notify the defendant that an action has been instituted against him, and that he is required to answer to it at a time and place named.

SUMMONEAS. L. Lat. In old practice. A writ of summons; a writ by which a party was summoned to appear in court.

SUMMONERS. Petty officers, who cite and warn persons to appear in any court. Fleta, lib. 9.

SUMMONITIO. L. Lat. In old English practice. A summoning or summons; a writ by which a party was summoned to appear in court, of which there were various kinds. Spelman.

Summationes aut citationes nullæ liceant fieri intra palatium regis. 3 Inst. 141. Let no summonses or citations be served within the king's palace.

SUMMONITORES SCACCARII. Officers who assisted in collecting the revenues by citing the defaulters therein into the court of exchequer.

SUMMONS.

In Practice

A writ, directed to the sheriff or other proper officer, requiring him to notify the person named that an action has been commenced against him in the court whence the writ issues, and that he is required to appear, on a day named, and answer the complaint in such action. See Whitney v. Blackburn, 17 Or. 564, 21 P. 874, 11 Am. St. Rep. 857; Horton v. Railway Co., 26 Mo. App. 358.

Under code procedure a summons is not process, but is a notice to defendant that an action against him has been commenced and that judgment will be taken against him if he fails to answer the complaint. Flanary v. Kusha, 143 Minn. 308, 173 N. W. 652; Hammond-Chandler Lumber Co. v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 163 Wis. 596, 158 N. W. 292, 294; Hooper v. Hooper, 67 Or. 187, 135 P. 205.

Civil actions in the courts of record of this state shall be commenced by the service of a summons. Code N. Y. § 127 (Civil Practice Act, § 218).

In Scotch Law

A writ passing under the royal signet, signed by a writer to the signet, and containing the grounds and conclusions of the action, with the warrant for citing the defender. This writ corresponds to the writ of summons in English procedure. Bell; Paters. Comp.

SUMMONS AND ORDER. In English practice. The summons is the application to a common-law judge at chambers in reference to a pending action, and upon it the judge or master makes the order. Mozley & Whitley.

SUMMONS AND SEVERANCE. The proper name of what is distinguished in the books by the name of "summons and severance" is "severance;" for the summons is only a process which must, in certain cases, issue before judgment of severance can be given; while severance is a judgment by which one or more of parties joined in action is enabled to proceed without the other or others. Jacob.

SUMMUM JUS. Lat. Strict right; extreme right. The extremity or rigor of the law. See "Apex Juris."

Summum jus, summa injuria; summa lex, summa crux. Extreme law (rigor of law) is the greatest injury; strict law is great punishment. Hob. 125. That is, insistence upon the full measure of a man's strict legal rights may work the greatest injury to others, unless equity can aid.

SUMNER. See Sompnour.

SUMPTUARY LAWS. Laws made for the purpose of restraining luxury or extravagance, particularly against inordinate expenditures in the matter of apparel, food, furniture, etc.

SUNDAY. The first day of the week is designated by this name; also as the "Lord's Day," and as the "Sabbath." State v. Reade, 98 N. J. Law, 596, 121 A. 288, 289.

For Work of Necessity see "Necessity."

SUNDRY. Separate, divers, or various. Hammond v. State, 173 Ark. 674, 293 S. W. 714, 717.

SUNSTROKE. An inflammatory disease of the brain, brought on by exposure to the too intense heat of the sun's rays, or to overheated air. Gallagher v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, 163 App. Div. 556, 148 N. Y. S. 1016, 1017; Mather v. London Guarantee & Accident Co., 125 Minn. 186, 145 N. W. 963; Continental Casualty Co. v. Clark, 70 Okl. 187, 173 P. 453, L. R. A. 1918F, 1007.

SUO NOMINE. Lat. In his own name.

SUO PERICULO. Lat. At his own peril or risk.

SUPELLEX. Lat. In Roman law. Household furniture. Dig. 33, 10.

SUPER ALTUM MARE. On the high sea. Hob. 212; 2 Ld. Raym. 1453.

Super fidem chartarum, mortuis testibus, erit ad patriam de necessitate recurrendum. Co. Litt. 6. The truth of charters is necessarily to be referred to a jury, when the witnesses are dead.

SUPER-JURARE. Over-swearing. A term anciently used when a criminal endeavored to excuse himself by his own oath or the oath of one or two witnesses, and the crime objected against him was so plain and notorious that he was convicted on the oaths of many more witnesses. Wharton.

SUPER PRÆROGATIVA REGIS. A writ which formerly lay against the king's tenant's widow for marrying without the royal license. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 174.

SUPER STATUTO. A writ, upon the statute 1 Edw. III. c. 12, that lay against the king's tenant holding in chief, who aliened the king's land without his license.

SUPER STATUTO DE ARTICULIS CLERI. A writ which lay against a sheriff or other officer who distrained in the king's highway, or on lands anciently belonging to the church.

SUPER STATUTO FACTO POUR SENE-SCHAL ET MARSHAL DE ROY, ETC. A writ which lay against a steward or marshal for holding plea in his court, or for trespass or contracts not made or arising within the king's household. Wharton.

SUPER STATUTO VERSUS SERVANTES ET LABORATOIRES. A writ which lay against him who kept any servants who had left the service of another contrary to law.

SUPER VISUM CORPORIS. Upon view of the body. When an inquest is held over a body found dead, it must be super visum corporis.

SUPERARE RATIONES. In old Scotch law. To have a balance of account due to one; to have one's expenses exceed the receipts.

SUPERCARGO. In maritime law. A person specially employed by the owner of a cargo to take charge of and sell to the best advantage merchandise which has been shipped, and to purchase returning cargoes and to receive freight, as he may be authorized.

SUPERFICIARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. He who has built upon the soil of another, which he has hired for a number of years or forever, yielding a yearly rent. Dig. 43, 18, 1. In other words, a tenant on ground-rent.

SUPERFICIES. Lat. In the civil law. The alienation by the owner of the surface of the soil of all rights necessary for building on the surface, a yearly rent being generally reserved; also a building or erection. Sanders' Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 133.

Superficies solo cedit. Whatever is attached to the land forms part of it. Gaius 2, 73.

Superflua non nocent. Superfluities do not prejudice. Jenk. Cent. 184. Surplusage does not vitiate.

SUPERFLUOUS LANDS, in English law, are lands acquired by a railway company under its statutory powers, and not required for the purposes of its undertaking. The company is bound within a certain time to sell such lands, and, if it does not, they vest in and become the property of the owners of the adjoining lands. Sweet.

SUPERFETATION. In medical jurisprudence. The conception of a second embryo during the gestation of the first, or the conception of a child by a woman already pregnant with another, during the time of such pregnancy.

SUPERINDUCTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A species of obliteration. Dig. 28, 4, 1, 1.

SUPERINSTITUTION. The institution of one in an office to which another has been previously instituted; as where A. is admitted and instituted to a benefice upon one title, and B. is admitted and instituted on the title or presentment of another. 2 Cro. Eliz. 463.

A church being full by institution, if a second institution is granted to the same church this is a superinstitution. Wharton.

SUPERINTEND. To have charge and direction of; to direct the course and oversee the details; to regulate with authority; to manage; to oversee with the power of direction; to take care of with authority. Burrell Engineering & Construction Co. v. Grisier, 111 Tex. 477, 240 S. W. 899, 900; Booth v. State, 179 Ind. 405, 100 N. E. 563, 565, L. R. A. 1915B, 420, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 987; State v. First State Bank of Jud, 52 N. D. 231, 202 N. W. 391, 402.

SUPERINTENDENT. One who superintends or has the oversight and charge of something with the power of direction; a manager. Indiana Fibre Products Co. v. Cyclone Mfg. Co., 81 Ind. App. 682, 143 N. E. 169, 171.

SUPERINTENDENT REGISTRAR. In English law. An officer who superintends the registers of births, deaths, and marriages. There is one in every poor-law union in England and Wales.

SUPERIOR, n. One who has a right to command; one who holds a superior rank.

SUPERIOR, adj. Higher; more elevated in rank or office. Possessing larger power. Entitled to command, influence, or control over another.

In estates, some are superior to others. An estate entitled to a servitude or easement over another estate is called the "superior" or "dominant," and the other, the "inferior" or "servient," estate. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 1612.

In the feudal law, until the statute quia emptores precluded subinfeudations, (q. v.) the tenant who granted part of his estate to be held of and from himself as lord was called a "superior."

—Superior and vassal. In Scotch law. A feudal relation corresponding with the English "lord and tenant." Bell.

—Superior courts. In English law. The courts of the highest and most extensive jurisdiction, viz., the court of chancery and the three courts of common law, i. e., the queen's bench, the common pleas, and the exchequer, which sit at Westminster, were commonly thus denominated. But these courts are now united in the supreme court of judicature. In American law. Courts of general or extensive jurisdiction, as distinguished from the inferior courts. As the official style of a tribunal, the term "superior court" bears a different meaning in different states. In some it is a court of intermediate jurisdiction between the trial courts and the chief appellate court; elsewhere it is the designation of the ordinary nisi prius courts; in Delaware it is the court of last resort.

—Superior fellow servant. A term introduced into the law of negligence, and meaning one higher in authority than another, and whose commands and directions his inferiors are bound to respect and obey, though engaged at the same manual work. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Coleman, 22 Ky. Law Rep. 878, 59 S. W. 14; Knutter v. Telephone Co., 67 N. J. Law, 646, 52 A. 565, 58 L. R. A. 808.

—Superior force. In the law of bailments and of negligence, an uncontrollable and irresistible force, of human agency, producing results which the person in question could not avoid; equivalent to the Latin phrase "vis major." See Vis.

SUPERIORITY. In Scotch law. The dominium directum of lands, without the profit. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 97.

SUPERNUMERARII. Lat. In Roman law. Advocates who were not registered or enrolled and did not belong to the college of advocates. They were not attached to any local jurisdiction. See Statuti.

SUPERONERATIO. Lat. Surcharging a common; i. e., putting in beasts of a number or kind other than the right of common allows.

—Superoneratione pasturæ. A judicial writ that lay against him who was impleaded in the county court for the surcharge of a common with his cattle, in a case where he was formerly impleaded for it in the same court, and the cause was removed into one of the superior courts.

SUPERPLUSAGIUM. In old English law. Overplus; surplus; residue or balance. Bract. fol. 301; Spelman.

SUPERSEDE. To make void, inefficacious, or useless by superior power, or by coming in place of; to set aside, render unnecessary, suspend, or stay. Taylor v. New York Telephone Co., 97 Misc. 160, 160 N. Y. S. 865; Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Holliday, 45

Okla. 536, 145 P. 786, 793; Dick v. King, 73 Mont. 456, 236 P. 1093, 1095.

Thus, it is said that the proceedings of outlawry may be superseded by the entry of appearance before the return of the exigent, or that the court would supersede a fiat in bankruptcy, if found to have been improperly issued. Brown.

SUPERSEDEAS. In Practice. The name of a writ containing a command to stay the proceedings at law.

An auxiliary process issued by an appellate court, designed to supersede the enforcement of the judgment of the court below pending review thereof. Williams v. Bruffy, 102 U. S. 249, 26 L. Ed. 135; Belzoni Land Co. v. Robertson, 125 Miss. 338, 87 So. 669, 671; Seaboard Air-Line Ry. Co. v. Horton, 176 N. C. 115, 96 S. E. 954, 956; Stabler v. Porter, 72 Mont. 62, 232 P. 187, 188.

Originally it was a writ directed to an officer, commanding him to desist from enforcing the execution of another writ which he was about to execute, or which might come in his hands. In modern times the term is often used synonymously with a "stay of proceedings," and is employed to designate the effect of an act or proceeding which of itself suspends the enforcement of a judgment; Dulin v. Coal Co., 98 Cal. 306, 33 P. 123.

The only function of the writ of supersedeas is to restrain proceedings upon the judgment from which the appeal has been taken. Lickley v. Board of Education of Los Angeles County, 62 Cal. App. 527, 217 P. 133, 134.

SUPERSTITIOUS USE. In English law. When lands, tenements, rents, goods, or chattels are given, secured, or appointed for and towards the maintenance of a priest or chaplain to say mass, for the maintenance of a priest or other man to pray for the soul of any dead man in such a church or elsewhere, to have and maintain perpetual obits, lamps, torches, etc., to be used at certain times to help to save the souls of men out of purgatory,—in such cases the king, by force of several statutes, is authorized to direct and appoint all such uses to such purposes as are truly charitable. Bac. Abr. "Charitable Uses." The doctrine has no recognition in this country; Appeal of Seibert, 18 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 276; and a bequest to support a Catholic priest, and perhaps other uses void in England, would not be considered as superstitious uses. See Methodist Church v. Remington, 1 Watts (Pa.) 225, 26 Am. Dec. 61; Harrison v. Brophy, 59 Kan. 1, 51 P. 883, 40 L. R. A. 721.

SUPERVENING CAUSE. A new effective cause which, operating independently of anything else, becomes proximate cause of accident. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Crum, 140 Va. 333, 125 S. E. 301, 304.

SUPERVENING NEGLIGENCE. That situations may come within the doctrine of last clear chance or supervening negligence, four conditions must coexist, to wit: (1) That the injured party has already come into a position of peril; (2) that the injuring party then or thereafter becomes, or in the exercise of ordinary prudence ought to have become, aware, not only of that fact, but also that the party in peril either reasonably cannot escape from it or apparently will not avail himself of opportunities open to him for doing so; (3) that the injuring party subsequently has the opportunity by the exercise of reasonable care to save the other from harm; and (4) that he fails to exercise such care. Fine v. Connecticut Co., 92 Conn. 626, 103 A. 901, 902.

See Last Clear Chance.

SUPERVISE. To oversee; to superintend; to inspect with authority. Hutchins v. City of Des Moines, 176 Iowa, 189, 157 N. W. 881, 890; In re James, 97 Vt. 362, 123 A. 385, 387.

SUPERVISOR. A surveyor or overseer; a highway officer. Also, in some states, the chief officer of a town; one of a board of county officers.

In a broad sense, one having authority over others, to superintend and direct. Cafferty v. Southern Tier Pub. Co., 226 N. Y. 87, 123 N. E. 76, 77.

SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION. Persons appointed and commissioned by the United States circuit judges to supervise the registration of voters and the holding of elections for representatives in congress under Rev. St. §§ 2011-2031; repealed by the act of Feb. 8, 1894 (28 Stat. 36).

SUPERVISORY CONTROL. Control exercised by courts to compel inferior tribunals to act within their jurisdiction, to prohibit them from acting outside their jurisdiction, and to reverse their extrajudicial acts. State v. Superior Court of Dane County, 170 Wis. 385, 175 N. W. 927, 928.

SUPPLEMENT, LETTERS OF. In Scotch practice. A process by which a party not residing within the jurisdiction of an inferior court may be cited to appear before it. Bell.

SUPPLEMENTAL. "That which is added to a thing to complete it." State v. Day, 189 Ind. 243, 123 N. E. 402, 403; People ex rel. Astor Trust Co. v. State Tax Commission, 174 App. Div. 320, 160 N. Y. S. 854, 858.

SUPPLEMENTAL ACT. One designed to improve an existing statute by adding something thereto without changing the original text. First State Bank of Shelby v. Bottineau County Bank, 56 Mont. 363, 185 P. 162, 164, 8 A. L. R. 631; Edwards v. Stein, 94 N. J. Eq. 251, 119 A. 504, 507.

SUPPLEMENTAL AFFIDAVIT. An affidavit made in addition to a previous one, in order to supply some deficiency in it. Callan v. Lukens, 89 Pa. 136.

SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER. One which was filed in chancery for the purpose of correcting, adding to, and explaining an answer already filed. Smith, Ch. Pr. 334. French v. Edwards, 9 Fed. Cas. 780; Yeatman v. Patricia, 144 Wash. 241, 257 P. 622, 624.

SUPPLEMENTAL BILL. In equity pleading. A bill filed in addition to an original bill, in order to supply some defect in its original frame or structure which cannot be supplied by amendment. Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 332-338; Bloxham v. Railroad Co., 39 Fla. 243, 22 So. 697; Schwab v. Schwab, 93 Md. 382, 49 A. 331, 52 L. R. A. 414; Thompson v. Railroad Co. (C. C.) 119 F. 634; Butler v. Cunningham, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Bowie v. Minter, 2 Ala. 411; Bartee v. Matthews, 212 Ala. 667, 103 So. 874, 876. A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review cannot be entertained unless new facts pertinent to the litigation are alleged which were unknown to the complainants at the date of the original decree; City of Omaha v. Redick, 63 F. 1, 11 C. C. A. 1, 27 U. S. App. 204.

SUPPLEMENTAL CLAIM. A further claim which was filed when further relief was sought after the bringing of a claim. Smith, Ch. Pr. 655.

SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT. Under the codes of practice obtaining in many of the states, this name is given to a complaint filed in an action to bring to the notice of the court and the opposite party matters occurring after the commencement of action and which may affect the rights asserted. Pouder v. Tate, 132 Ind. 327, 30 N. E. 880; Plumer v. McDonald Lumber Co., 74 Wis. 137, 42 N. W. 250; Young v. Matthew Turner Co., 168 Cal. 671, 143 P. 1029, 1030.

SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADING. A "supplemental pleading," has reference to the inserting of allegations of material facts, which occurred after the original pleading was served, or of which the pleader at that time had no knowledge. Fisher v. Bullock, 198 N. Y. S. 538, 540, 204 App. Div. 523.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROCEEDINGS. Proceedings supplementary to an execution, directed to the discovery of the debtor's property and its application to the debt for which the execution is issued. They are purely statutory, they are in the nature of a creditor's bill for the collection of a judgment or tax, and are proceedings in personam and not in rem. In re Maltbie, 223 N. Y. 227, 119 N. E. 389, 391.

SUPPLETORY OATH. See Oath.

SUPPLIANT. The actor in, or party preferring, a petition of right.

SUPPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A petition for pardon of a first offense; also a petition for reversal of judgment; also equivalent to "duplicatio," which corresponds to the common law rejoinder. Calvin.

SUPPLICAVIT. In English law. A writ issuing out of the king's bench or chancery for taking sureties of the peace. It is commonly directed to the justices of the peace, when they are averse to acting in the affair in their judicial capacity. 4 Bl. Comm. 253.

SUPPLICIUM. Lat. In the civil law. Punishment; corporal punishment for crime. Death was called "ultimum supplicium," the last or extreme penalty.

SUPPLIES. In English law. The "supplies" in parliamentary proceedings signify the sums of money which are annually voted by the house of commons for the maintenance of the crown and the various public services. Jacob; Brown.

Means of provision or relief; stores; available aggregate of things needed or demanded in amount sufficient for a given use or purpose; accumulated stores reserved for distribution; sufficiency for use or need; a quantity of something supplied or on hand. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Sanders County, 66 Mont. 608, 214 P. 596, 599.

In connection with building contracts this term is used to designate things other than labor, which are consumed in, but do not become a physical part of, the structure and is distinguished from the word "materials," generally used to designate those things which do become a physical part of the structure. Hurley-Mason Co. v. American Bonding Co., 79 Wash. 564, 140 P. 575, 576, L. R. A. 1915B, 1131, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 948.

SUPPLY, COMMISSIONERS OF. Persons appointed to levy the land-tax in Scotland, and to cause a valuation roll to be annually made up, and to perform other duties in their respective counties. Bell.

SUPPLY, COMMITTEE OF. In English law. All bills which relate to the public income or expenditure must originate with the house of commons, and all bills authorizing expenditure of the public money are based upon resolutions moved in a committee of supply, which is always a committee of the whole house. Wharton.

SUPPORT, v. To support a rule or order is to argue in answer to the arguments of the party who has shown cause against a rule or order nisi.

To provide a means of livelihood; to sustain, to furnish with funds or means for maintenance, to maintain. Board of Com'rs of Logan County v. State, 122 Okl. 268, 254 P. 710, 711; In re Neil's Estate, 191 N. Y. S. 362, 366, 117 Misc. 498; State v. Clausen, 85 Wash. 260, 148 P. 28, 31, Ann. Cas. 1916B; 810.

"Support" also means to vindicate, to maintain, to defend, to uphold with aid or countenance. U. S. v. Schulze (D. C.) 253 F. 377, 379.

SUPPORT, n. That which furnishes a livelihood; a source or means of living; subsistence, sustenance, or living. Great Western Power Co. of California v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 191 Cal. 424, 218 P. 1009, 1014; Paquin, Limited, v. Westervelt, 93 Conn. 513, 106 A. 766, 767.

In a broad sense the term includes all such means of living as would enable one to live in the degree of comfort suitable and becoming to his station of life. Benjamin F. Shaw Co. v. Palmatory, 105 A. 417, 419, 7 Boyce (Del.) 197. It is said to include anything requisite to housing, feeding, clothing, health, proper recreation, vacation, traveling expense, or other proper cognate purposes. In re Vanderbilt's Estate, 223 N. Y. S. 314, 316, 129 Misc. 605; and proper care, nursing, and medical attendance in sickness, and suitable burial at death. McKnight v. McKnight, 212 Mich. 318, 180 N. W. 437, 442.

The right of support is an easement consisting in the privilege of resting the joists or beams of one's house upon, or inserting their ends into, the wall of an adjoining house belonging to another owner. It may arise either from contract or prescription. 3 Kent, Comm. 436.

Support also signifies the right to have one's ground supported so that it will not cave in, when an adjoining owner makes an excavation. This support is of two kinds, lateral and subjacent. Lateral support is the right of land to be supported by the land which lies next to it. Subjacent support is the right of land to be supported by the land which lies under it.

SUPPRESS. To put a stop to a thing actually existing; to prohibit, put down, or end by force. State v. Mustachia, 152 La. 821, 94 So. 408, 409.

SUPPRESSIO VERI. Lat. Suppression or concealment of the truth. "It is a rule of equity, as well as of law, that a suppressio veri is equivalent to a suggestio falsi; and where either the suppression of the truth or the suggestion of what is false can be proved, in a fact material to the contract, the party injured may have relief against the contract." Fleming v. Slocum, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 405, 9 Am. Dec. 224; Turney v. Avery, 92 N. J. Eq. 473, 113 A. 710.

Suppressio veri, expressio falsi. Suppression of the truth is [equivalent to] the expression of what is false. Addington v. Allen, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 374, 417.

Suppressio veri, suggestio falsi. Suppression of the truth is [equivalent to] the suggestion of what is false. Paul v. Hadley, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 521, 525.

SUPRA. Lat. Above; upon. This word occurring by itself in a book refers the reader to a previous part of the book, like "ante;" it is also the initial word of several Latin phrases.

SUPRA PROTEST. See Protest.

SUPRA-RIPARIAN. Upper riparian; higher up the stream. This term is applied to the estate, rights, or duties of a riparian proprietor whose land is situated at a point nearer the source of the stream than the estate with which it is compared.

Suprema potestas seipsam dissolvere potest. Supreme power can dissolve itself. Bac. Max.

SUPREMACY. The state of being supreme, or in the highest station of power; paramount authority; sovereignty; sovereign power.

Act of Supremacy

The English statute 1 Eliz. c. 1, whereby the supremacy and autonomy of the crown in spiritual or ecclesiastical matters was declared and established.

Oath of Supremacy

An oath to uphold the supreme power of the kingdom of England in the person of the reigning sovereign.

SUPREME. Superior to all other things.

SUPREME COURT. A court of high powers and extensive jurisdiction, existing in most of the states. In some it is the official style of the chief appellate court or court of last resort. In others (as New Jersey and New York) the supreme court is a court of general original jurisdiction, possessing also (in New York) some appellate jurisdiction, but not the court of last resort.

—Supreme court of errors. In American law. An appellate tribunal, and the court of last resort, in the state of Connecticut.

—Supreme court of the United States. The court of last resort in the federal judicial system. It is vested by the constitution with original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors, public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a state is a party, and appellate jurisdiction over all other cases within the judicial power of the United States, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as congress may make. Its appellate powers extend to the subordinate federal courts, and also (in certain cases) to the supreme courts of the several states. The court is composed of a chief justice and eight associate justices.

—Supreme judicial court. In American law. An appellate tribunal, and the court of last resort, in the states of Maine, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE. The court formed by the English judicature act, 1873, (as modified by the judicature act, 1875, the appellate jurisdiction act, 1876, and the judicature acts of 1877, 1879, and 1881,) in substitution for the various superior courts of law, equity, admiralty, probate, and divorce, existing when the act was passed, including the court of appeal in chancery and bankruptcy, and the exchequer chamber. It consists of two permanent divisions, viz., a court of original jurisdiction, called the "high court of justice," and a court of appellate jurisdiction, called the "court of appeal." Its title of "supreme" is now a misnomer, as the superior appellate jurisdiction of the house of lords and privy council, which was originally intended to be transferred to it, has been allowed to remain. Sweet.

High Court of Justice

That branch of the English supreme court of judicature (q. v.) which exercises (1) the original jurisdiction formerly exercised by the court of chancery, the courts of queen's bench, common pleas, and exchequer, the courts of probate, divorce, and admiralty, the court of common pleas at Lancaster, the court of pleas at Durham, and the courts of the judges or commissioners of assize; and (2) the appellate jurisdiction of such of those courts as heard appeals from inferior courts. Judicature act, 1873, § 16.

SUPREME POWER. The highest authority in a state, all other powers in it being inferior thereto. Ruth. Nat. L. b. 2, c. 4, p. 67.

SUPREMUS. Lat. Last; the last.

Supremus est quem nemo sequitur. He is last whom no one follows. Dig. 50, 16, 92.

SUR. Fr. On; upon; over. In the titles of real actions "sur" was used to point out what the writ was founded upon. Thus, a real action brought by the owner of a reversion or seignior, in certain cases where his tenant repudiated his tenure, was called "a writ of right sur disclaimer." So, a writ of entry sur disseisin was a real action to recover the possession of land from a disseisor. Sweet.

SUR CUI ANTE DIVORTIUM. See Cui Ante Divortium.

SUR CUI IN VITA. A writ that lay for the heir of a woman whose husband had aliened her land in fee, and she had omitted to bring the writ of cui in vita for the recovery thereof; in which case her heir might have this writ against the tenant after her decease. Cowell. See Cui in Vita.

SUR DISCLAIMER. A writ in the nature of a writ of right brought by the lord against a tenant who had disclaimed his tenure, to recover the land.

SUR MORTGAGE. Upon a mortgage. In some states the method of enforcing the security of a mortgage, upon default, is by a writ of "scire facias sur mortgage," which requires the defendant (mortgagor) to show cause why it should not be foreclosed.

SURCHARGE, n. An overcharge; an exaction, impost, or incumbrance beyond what is just and right, or beyond one's authority or power. "Surcharge" may mean a second or further mortgage. Wharton.

SURCHARGE, v. To put more cattle upon a common than the herbage will sustain or than the party has a right to do. 3 Bl. Comm. 237.

In Equity Practice

To show that a particular item, in favor of the party surcharging, ought to have been included, but was not, in an account which is alleged to be settled or complete. To prove the omission of an item from an account which is before the court as complete, which should be inserted to the credit of the party surcharging. Story, Eq. Jur. § 525; 2 Ves. 565; Perkins v. Hart, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 237, 6 L. Ed. 463; Dempsey v. McGinnis, 203 Mo. App. 494, 219 S. W. 148, 150. See, also, In re Kenny (D. C.) 269 F. 54, 57.

In General

—Second surcharge. In English law. The surcharge of a common a second time, by the same defendant against whom the common was before admeasured, and for which the writ of second surcharge was given by the statute of Westminster, 2. 3 Bl. Comm. 239.

—Surcharge and falsify. This phrase, as used in the courts of chancery, denotes the liberty which these courts will occasionally grant to a plaintiff, who disputes an account which the defendant alleges to be settled, to scrutinize particular items therein without opening the entire account. The showing an item for which credit ought to have been given, but was not, is to surcharge the account; the proving an item to have been inserted wrongly is to falsify the account. Brown. See Philips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 23; Rehill v. McTague, 114 Pa. 82, 7 A. 224, 60 Am. Rep. 341; Kennedy v. Adickes, 37 S. C. 174, 15 S. E. 922; Shores-Mueller Co. v. Bell, 21 Ga. App. 194, 94 S. E. 83, 84.

SURDUS. Lat. In the civil law. Deaf; a deaf person. Inst. 2, 12, 3. Surdus et mutus, a deaf and dumb person.

SURENCHÈRE. In French law. A party desirous of repurchasing property at auction before the court, can, by offering one-tenth or one-sixth, according to the case, in addition to the price realized at the sale, oblige the property to be put up once more at auction. This bid upon a bid is called a "surenchère." Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 575.

SURETY. A person who binds himself for the payment of a sum of money, or for the performance of something else, for another. See Dibert v. D'Arcy, 248 Mo. 617, 154 S. W. 1116, 1129; Ensign v. Dunn, 181 Mich. 456, 148 N. W. 343, 344.

One who at the request of another, and for the purpose of securing to him a benefit, becomes responsible for the performance by the latter of some act in favor of a third person, or hypothecates property as security therefor. Civ. Code Cal. § 2831; Civ. Code Dak. § 1673 (Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 6675; Rev. Code S. D. 1919, § 1498); Thayer v. Braden, 27 Cal. App. 435, 150 P. 653, 655.

A person who, being liable to pay a debt or perform an obligation, is entitled, if it is enforced against him, to be indemnified by some other person who ought himself to have made payment or performed before the surety was compelled to do so. Smith v. Sheldon, 35 Mich. 42, 24 Am. Rep. 529. And see Young v. McFadden, 125 Ind. 254, 25 N. E. 284; Wise v. Miller, 45 Ohio St. 388, 14 N. E. 218; O'Connor v. Morse, 112 Cal. 31, 44 Pac. 305, 53 Am. St. Rep. 155; Hall v. Weaver (C. C.) 34 F. 106; Mellette Farmers' Elevator Co. v. H. Poehler Co. (D. C.) 18 F.(2d) 430, 431; Bright v. Mack, 197 Ala. 214, 72 So. 433, 436.

A surety and guarantor have this in common, that they are both bound for another person; yet there are points of difference between them. A surety is usually bound with his principal by the same instrument, executed at the same time and on the same consideration. He is an original promisor and debtor from the beginning, and is held ordinarily to every known default of his principal. On the other hand, the contract of guarantor is his own separate undertaking, in which the principal does not join. It is usually entered into before or after that of the principal, and is often founded on a separate consideration from that supporting the contract of the principal. The original contract of the principal is not the guarantor's contract, and the guarantor is not bound to take notice of its non-performance. The surety joins in the same promise as his principal and is primarily liable; the guarantor makes a separate and individual promise and is only secondarily liable. His liability is contingent on the default of his principal, and he only becomes absolutely liable when such default takes place and he is notified thereof. Georgia Casualty Co. v. Dixie Trust & Security Co., 23 Ga. App. 447, 98 S. E. 414, 416; Stifel Estate Co. v. Cella, 220 Mo. App. 657, 291 S. W. 515, 518; Shores-Mueller Co. v. Palmer, 141 Ark. 64, 216 S. W. 295, 297; Anderson v. Border, 75 Mont. 516, 244 P. 494, 498; Young v. Merie & Heaney Mfg. Co., 184 Ind. 403, 110 N. E. 669, 671; Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank of Comanche v. Lillard Milling Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 260, 261; Ricketson v. Lizotte, 90 Vt. 386, 98 A. 801.

A surety is an insurer of the debt or obligation; a guarantor is an insurer of the solvency of the principal debtor or of his ability to pay. Saint v. Wheeler, 95 Ala. 362, 10 So. 539, 36 Am. St. Rep. 210; Notes to Deering v. Mortell, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 365; McClain v. Georgian Co., 17 Ga. App. 648, 87 S. E. 1090; Bishop v. Currie-McGraw Co., 133 Miss. 517, 97 So. 886, 889.

Where a contract defines a time when the promisor is to assume liability for a debt, his obligation is that of surety; but, where there is no time fixed, the obligation is general and merely that of guaranty. Homewood People's Bank v. Hastings, 263 Pa. 260, 106 A. 308, 309.

SURETY COMPANY. A company, usually incorporated, whose business is to assume the responsibility of a surety on the bonds of officers, trustees, executors, guardians, etc., in consideration of a fee proportioned to the amount of the security required.

SURETY INSURANCE. This phrase is generally used as synonymous with "guaranty insurance." People v. Potts, 264 Ill. 522, 106 N. E. 524, 528.

SURETY OF THE PEACE. Surety of the peace is a species of preventive justice, and consists in obliging those persons whom there is a probable ground to suspect of future misbehavior, to stipulate with, and to give full assurance to, the public that such offense as is apprehended shall not take place, by finding pledges or securities for keeping the peace, or for their good behavior. Brown. See Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 582.

SURETYSHIP. The contract of suretyship is that whereby one obligates himself to pay the debt of another in consideration of credit or indulgence, or other benefit given to his principal, the principal remaining bound therefor. It differs from a guaranty in this: that the consideration of the latter is a benefit flowing to the guarantor. Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 3538; Brock Candy Co. v. Craton, 33 Ga. App. 690, 127 S. E. 619, 620; Loewenherz v. Weil, 33 Ga. App. 760, 127 S. E. 883, 885. See Surety.

A contract of suretyship is a contract whereby one person engages to be answerable for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another. Pitm. Princ. & Sur. 1, 2; Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo v. Westby, 41 N. D. 276, 172 N. W. 665, 670.

An accessory promise by which a person binds himself for another already bound, and agrees with the creditor to satisfy the obligation, if the debtor does not. Civ. Code La. art. 3035; Hope v. Board, 43 La. Ann. 738, 9 So. 754.

A lending of credit to aid a principal having insufficient credit of his own; the one expected to pay, having the primary obligation, being the "principal," and the one bound to pay, if the principal does not, being the "surety." Rollings v. Gunter, 211 Ala. 671, 101 So. 446, 448.

In contracts of "indemnity" against liability, the engagement is to indemnify another against liability on some obligation which he has incurred, or is about to incur, to a third person, and is not, as in "suretyship," a promise to one to whom another is answerable; in the former there is direct privity between the promisor and promisee and no debt owing by the third person to the promisee and the promisee has no remedy against the third person, whereas in the latter both principal and surety are bound to answer to the promisee. McManus v. Tralles (Mo. App.) 253 S. W. 406, 409.

For the distinctions between "suretyship" and "guaranty," see Guaranty, n.

SURFACE. This term, when used in law, is seldom, if ever, limited to mere geometrical superficies, Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S. E. 308, 312, 55 A. L. R. 1376, although when used without any qualifying phrase in a deed, it ordinarily signifies only the superficial part of land, Drummond v. White Oak Fuel Co., 104 W. Va. 368, 140 S. E. 57, 58, 56 A. L. R. 303. And when employed in connection with mining, it usually means that part of the earth or geologic section lying over the minerals in question, unless the contract or conveyance otherwise defines it. Marquette Cement Mining Co. v. Oglesby Coal Co. (D. C.) 253 F. 107, 111. Thus, where the surface is granted to one and the underlying coal to another, the "surface" includes the soil and waters which lie above and are superincumbent on the coal. Clinchfield Coal Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S. E. 308, 312, 55 A. L. R. 1376. Nevertheless, a conveyance of the "surface," except the oil and gas rights in the land, may be deemed, under certain circumstances, to constitute a conveyance of all the land (including coal deposits), except only the oil and gas rights specifically reserved. Ramage v. South Penn Oil Co., 94 W. Va. 81, 118 S. E. 162, 171, 31 A. L. R. 1509.

The term "surface," when used as the subject of a conveyance, is not a definite one capable of a definition of universal application, but is susceptible of limitation according to the intention of the parties using it; and in determining its meaning, regard may be had, not only to the language of the deed in which it occurs, but, also to the situation of the parties, the business in which they were engaged, and to the substance of the transaction. Ramage v. South Penn Oil Co., 94 W. Va. 81, 118 S. E. 162, 171, 31 A. L. R. 1509.

SURFACE WATERS. See Water.

SURGEON. One whose profession or occupation is to cure diseases or injuries of the body by manual operation; one who practices surgery; Webster, Dict.; which is therapy of a distinctly operative kind, such as cutting operations, the reduction and putting up of fractures and dislocations and similar manual forms of treatment; Napier v. Greenzweig (C. C. A.) 256 F. 196, 197.

Popularly, one possessing particular knowledge and skill to correct and relieve some unnatural condition of the human body. Maupin v. Southern Surety Co., 205 Mo. App. 81, 220 S. W. 20, 21. One whose occupation is to cure local injuries or disorders, whether by manual operation, or by medication and constitutional treatment. See Smith v. Lane, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 632; Stewart v. Raab, 55 Minn. 20, 56 N. W. 256; Nelson v. State Board of Health, 108 Ky. 769, 57 S. W. 501, 50 L. R. A. 383; Surgery.

SURGERY. The art or practice of healing by manual operation; that branch of medical science which treats of mechanical or operative measures for healing diseases, deformities or injuries. State v. Eustace, 117 Kan. 746, 233 P. 109, 110; Maryland Casualty Co. v. McCallum, 200 Ala. 154, 75 So. 902, 904. Therapy of a distinctly operative kind, such as cutting operations, the reduction and putting up of fractures and dislocations and similar manual forms of treatment. Napier v. Greenzweig (C. C. A.) 256 F. 196, 197. As used in statutes, the term does not include osteopathy. Rev. St. Mo. 1919, § 9202 (Mo. St. Ann. § 13514); Le Grand v. Security Benefit Ass'n, 210 Mo. App. 700, 240 S. W. 852, 853. See, also, State v. Eustace, 117 Kan. 746, 233 P. 109, 110; Ex parte Rust, 35 Cal. App. 422, 169 P. 1050.

The practice of medicine, in contradistinction to the practice of surgery, denotes the treatment of disease by the administration of drugs or other sanative substances. There cannot be a complete separation between the practice of medicine and surgery; the principles of both are the same throughout, and no one is qualified to practice either who does not properly understand the fundamental principles of both.

SURGICAL OPERATION. An act or series of acts performed on a patient's body by a surgeon to produce a cure. Hartford Live Stock Ins. Co. v. McMillen (C. C. A.) 9 F.(2d) 961, 962.

SURMISE. Formerly where a defendant pleaded a local custom, for instance, a custom of the city of London, it was necessary for him to "surmise," that is, to suggest that such custom should be certified to the court by the mouth of the recorder, and without such a surmise the issue was to be tried by the country as other issues of fact are. 1 Burrows, 251; Vin. Abr. 246.

Something offered to a court to move it to grant a prohibition, audita querela, or other writ grantable thereon. Jacob.

In Ecclesiastical Law

An allegation in a libel. A collateral surmise is a surmise of some fact not appearing in the libel. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1445.

SURNAME. The family name; the name over and above the Christian name. The part of a name which is not given in baptism; the last name; the name common to all members of a family. A patronymic. Riley v. Litchfield, 168 Iowa, 187, 150 N. W. 81, 83, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 172.

SURPLICE FEES. In English ecclesiastical law. Fees payable on ministerial offices of the church; such as baptisms, funerals, marriages, etc.

SURPLUS. That which remains of a fund appropriated for a particular purpose; the remainder of a thing; the overplus; the residue. See Boviard Supply Co. v. American Nat. Bank, 123 Okl. 245, 253 P. 92, 94; Smith v. Cotting, 231 Mass. 42, 120 N. E. 177, 181; People's F. Ins. Co. v. Parker, 35 N. J. Law, 577; Towery v. McGaw (Ky.) 56 S. W. 727; Appeal of Coates, 2 Pa. 137; 18 Ves. 466.

The "surplus" of a corporation may mean either the net assets of the corporation in excess of all liabilities including capital stock, Phillips v. U. S. (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 598, 600, or what remains after making provisions for all liabilities of every kind, except capital stock. Insurance Co. of North America v. McCoach (C. C. A.) 224 F. 657, 658. The term is also defined as the residue of assets after defraying liabilities; Douglas v. Edwards (C. C. A.) 298 F. 229, 237; Cochrane v. Interstate Packing Co., 139 Minn. 452, 167 N. W. 111, 113; the excess of net assets over the face value of the stock; Sexton v. C. L. Percival Co., 189 Iowa, 586, 177 N. W. 83, 86; the excess of gross assets over the outstanding capital stock, without deducting debts or liabilities; State v. State Tax Commission ex rel. Marquette Hotel Inv. Co., 282 Mo. 213, 221 S. W. 721, 722; and as the accumulation of moneys or property in excess of the par value of the stock; People ex rel. McClure Publications v. Purdy, 161 App. Div. 541, 146 N. Y. S. 646; Small v. Sullivan, 245 N. Y. 343, 157 N. E. 261, 263.

There is a sharp distinction between the "surplus," as of a bank, and undivided profits. Surplus, like the capital stock, constitutes the working capital of the bank and is, in addition, a fund for the protection of the depositors. (First Nat. Bank v. Moon, 102 Kan. 334, 170 P. 33, 34, L. R. A. 1918C, 986.) The "undivided profits" constitute a temporary fund changing in size from day to day and carried only until dividend periods when it is distributed to the stockholders or transferred to the permanent surplus. It is the fund from which the expenses and losses of the bank are paid. Sarles v. Scandinavian American Bank, 33 N. D. 40, 156 N. W. 556, 557. See, also, Willcuts v. Milton Dairy Co., 48 S. Ct. 71, 72, 275 U. S. 215, 72 L. Ed. 247; State ex rel. Payne v. Exchange Bank of Natchitoches, 147 La. 25, 84 So. 481, 482.

As to surplus "Earnings," "Profits," and "Water," see those titles.

SURPLUSAGE. Extraneous, impertinent, superfluous, or unnecessary matter. In re Wolcott's Estate, 54 Utah, 165, 180 P. 169, 170, 4 A. L. R. 727.

In Accounts

A greater disbursement than the charge of the accountant amounts unto. In another sense, the remainder or overplus of money left. Jacob. A balance over. 1 Lew. 219.

In Pleading

Allegations of matter wholly foreign and impertinent to the cause. All matter beyond the circumstances necessary to constitute the action. 5 East 275; Allaire v. Ouland, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 52; Kottwitz v. Bagby, 16 Tex. 656; Buchanan v. Jencks, 38 R. I. 443, 96 A. 307, 311, 2 A. L. R. 986; State v. Whitehouse, 95 Me. 179, 49 A. 869; Adams v. Capital State Bank, 74 Miss. 307, 20 So. 881; Bradley v. Reynolds, 61 Conn. 271, 23 A. 928. Any allegation without which the pleading would yet be adequate. Mathews v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 15 F.(2d) 139, 142; State v. Williams, 94 Vt. 423, 111 A. 701, 708; Johnson v. Biddle (C. C. A.) 12 F.(2d) 366, 369; People v. Osborne, 278 Ill. 104, 115 N. E. 890, 891.

Surplusagium non nocet. Surplusage does no harm. 3 Bouv. Inst. no. 2949; Broom, Max. 627.

SURPRISE.

In Equity Practice

The act by which a party who is entering into a contract is taken unawares, by which sudden confusion or perplexity is created, which renders it proper that a court of equity should relieve the party so surprised. 2 Brown, Ch. 150.

The situation in which a party is placed without any default of his own, which will be injurious to his interests. Rawle v. Skipwith, 8 Mart. N. S. (La.) 407.

Anything which happens without the agency or fault of the party affected by it, tending to disturb and confuse the judgment, or to mislead him, of which the opposite party takes an undue advantage, is in equity a surprise, and one species of fraud for which relief is granted. Code Ga. 1882, § 3180 (Civ. Code 1910, § 4631). And see Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 386; Gidionsen v. Union Depot R. Co., 129 Mo. 392, 31 S. W. 800; Fretwell v. Laffoon, 77 Mo. 27; Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548, 4 Pac. 557; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Bank, 59 Neb. 661, 81 N. W. 849; Thompson v. Connell, 31 Or. 231, 48 P. 467, 65 Am. St. Rep. 818.

There does not seem anything technical or peculiar in the word "surprise," as used in courts of equity. Where a court of equity relieves on the ground of surprise, it does so upon the ground that the party has been taken unawares, and that he has acted without due deliberation, and under confused and sudden impressions. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 120, note. But Jeremy, Eq. Jur. 366, 383, note, seems to think that the word surprise is a technical expression, and nearly synonymous with fraud. It is sometimes used in this sense when it is deemed presumptive of, or approaching to, fraud. 1 Fonbl. Eq. 123; 3 Ch. Cas. 56, 74, 103, 114.

In Law

As a ground for a new trial, that situation in which a party is unexpectedly placed without default on his part, which will work injury to his interests. State v. Price, 131 S. E. 710, 711, 100 W. Va. 699. He must show himself to have been diligent at every stage of the proceedings; Henderson v. Hazlett, 75 W. Va. 255, 83 S. E. 907, 908; and that the event was one which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against; Cupples v. Zupan, 35 Idaho, 458, 207 P. 328, 329; Rudin v. Luman, 53 Cal. App. 212, 199 P. 874, 877.

A situation, status, or result produced, having a substantive basis of fact and reason, from which the court may justly deduce, as a legal conclusion, that the party will suffer a judicial wrong if not relieved from his mistake. Levy v. Caledonian Ins. Co. (D. C.) 226 F. 336, 337.

The general rule is that when a party or his counsel is "taken by surprise," in a material point or circumstance which could not have been anticipated, and when want of skill, care, or attention cannot be justly imputed, and injustice has been done, a new trial should be granted. Hill. New Trials, 521.

SURREBUTTER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebutter. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed by the same rules as the replication. See 6 Com. Dig. 185; 7 id. 389.

SURREJOINDER. In pleading. The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rejoinder. Steph. Pl. 59. It is governed in every respect by the same rules as the replication. Steph. Pl. 77; 7 Com. Dig. 389.

SURRENDER. To yield; render up. Nolander v. Burns, 48 Minn. 13, 50 N. W. 1016.

A yielding up of an estate for life or years to him who has an immediate estate in reversion or remainder, by which the lesser estate is merged in the greater by mutual agreement. Co. Litt. 337*b*; Rogers v. Ogburn, 116 Ark. 233, 172 S. W. 867, 868. And see Johnson v. Northern Trust Co., 265 Ill. 263, 106 N. E. 814, 817; Heroy v. Reilly, 84 N. J. Law, 671, 87 A. 112, 113; Coe v. Hobby, 72 N. Y. 145, 28 Am. Rep. 120; Gluck v. Baltimore, 81 Md. 315, 32 A. 515, 48 Am. St. Rep. 515; Dayton v. Craik, 26 Minn. 133, 1 N. W. 813; Robertson v. Winslow, 99 Mo. App. 546, 72 S. W. 442; Welcome v. Hess, 90 Cal. 507, 27 P. 369, 25 Am. St. Rep. 145.

An assurance restoring or yielding up an estate, the operative verbs being "surrender and yield up." The term is usually applied to the giving up of a lease before the expiration of it. Wharton.

Also, the deed by which the surrender is made.

A surrender is of a nature directly opposite to a release; for, as the latter operates by the greater estate descending upon the less, the former is the falling of a less estate into a greater, by deed. Shepp. Touchst. 300.

Surrender differs from "abandonment," as applied to leased premises, inasmuch as the latter is simply an act on the part of the lessee alone; but to show a surrender, a mutual agreement between lessor and lessee that the lease is terminated must be clearly proved. Noble v. Sturm, 210 Mich. 462, 178 N. W. 99, 103. To constitute a surrender, there must be an acceptance on the part of the landlord. Marder v. New System Napkin, Towel Supply & Steam Laun- dry Co. (Sup.) 140 N. Y. S. 1026, 1027; Coe v. Haight, 95 Misc. 603, 159 N. Y. S. 666, 669.

SURRENDER BY BAIL. The act, by bail or sureties in a recognizance, of giving up their principal again into custody, in their own discharge. 1 Burrill, Pr. 394.

SURRENDER BY OPERATION OF LAW. This phrase is properly applied to cases where the tenant for life or years has been a party to some act the validity of which he is by law afterwards estopped from disputing, and which would not be valid if his particular estate continued to exist. Copper v. Fretnoransky (Com. Pl.) 16 N. Y. S. 866; Ledsinger v. Burke, 113 Ga. 74, 38 S. E. 313; Brown v. Cairns, 107 Iowa, 727, 77 N. W. 478; Lewis v. Angermiller, 89 Hun, 65, 35 N. Y. S. 69. An implied surrender occurs when an estate incompatible with the existing estate is accepted, or the lessee takes a new lease of the same lands. Livingston v. Potts, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 28; 1 B. & Ald. 50. See Beall v. White, 94 U. S. 389, 24 L. Ed. 173; Martin v. Stearns, 52 Iowa, 347, 3 N. W. 92. The rule of law as now settled by recently adjudicated cases is that any acts which are equivalent to an agreement on the part of the tenant to abandon, and on the part of the landlord to resume the possession of the demised premises, amount to a "surrender by operation of law." (Carlton Chambers Co. v. Trask, 261 Mass. 264, 158 N. E. 786, 788.) The rule may be safely said to be that a surrender is created by operation of law, when the parties to a lease do some act so inconsistent with the subsisting relation of landlord and tenant as to imply that they have both agreed to consider the surrender as made. Flannagan v. Dickerson, 103 Okl. 206, 229 P. 552, 553; Hodgkiss v. Dayton-Brower Co. (Sup.) 156 N. Y. S. 907, 908; Triest & Co. v. Goldstone, 173 Cal. 240, 159 P. 715, 716. A surrender of a lease by act and operation of law arises only when the minds of the parties to the lease concur in relinquishing the relation of landlord and tenant, and the parties execute such intent by acts tantamount to a stipulation to terminate the lease. Lott v. Chaffee, 46 R. I. 242, 126 A. 559, 560; Albrecht v. Thieme, 97 N. J. Law, 103, 116 A. 276, 277.

SURRENDER OF CHARTER. A corporation created by charter may give up or "surrender" its charter to the people, unless the charter was granted under a statute, imposing indefeasible duties on the bodies to which it applies. Grant, Corp. 45.

SURRENDER OF COPYHOLD. The mode of conveying or transferring copyhold property from one person to another is by means of a surrender, which consists in the yielding up of the estate by the tenant into the hands of the lord for such purposes as are expressed in the surrender. The process in most manors is for the tenant to come to the steward, either in court or out of court, or else to two customary tenants of the same manor, provided there be a custom to warrant it, and there, by delivering up a rod, a glove, or other symbol, as the custom directs, to resign into the hands of the lord, by the hands and acceptance of his steward, or of the said two tenants, all his interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be again granted out by the lord to such persons and for such uses as are named in the surrender, and as the custom of the manor will warrant. Brown.

SURRENDER OF CRIMINALS. The act by which the public authorities deliver a person accused of a crime, and who is found in their jurisdiction, to the authorities within whose jurisdiction it is alleged the crime has been committed.

SURRENDER OF A PREFERENCE. In bankruptcy practice. The surrender to the assignee in bankruptcy, by a preferred creditor, of anything he may have received under his preference and any advantage it gives him, which he must do before he can share in the dividend. In re Richter's Estate, 1 Dill. 544, Fed. Cas. No. 11,803. The word as generally defined may denote either compelled or voluntary action. Keppel v. Bank, 197 U. S. 356, 25 S. Ct. 443, 49 L. Ed. 790. In Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57g (11 USCA § 93 (g)), providing that creditors must surrender preferences before having claims allowed, it is unqualified and generic, and hence embraces both meanings. Keppel v. Bank, supra.

SURRENDER TO USES OF WILL. Formerly a copyhold interest would not pass by will unless it had been surrendered to the use of the will. By St. 55 Geo. III. c. 192, this is no longer necessary. 1 Steph. Comm. 639; Mozley & Whitley.

SURRENDEREE. The person to whom a surrender is made.

SURRENDEROR. One who makes a surrender. One who yields up a copyhold estate for the purpose of conveying it.

SURREPTITIOUS. Stealthily or fraudulently done, taken away, or introduced.

SURROGATE.

In English Law

One that is substituted or appointed in the room of another, as by a bishop, chancellor, judge, etc.; especially an officer appointed to dispense licenses to marry without banns. 2 Steph. Comm. 247.

In American Law

The name given in some of the states to the judge or judicial officer who has the administration of probate matters, guardian-ships, etc. See Malone v. Sts. Peter & Paul's Church, 172 N. Y. 269, 64 N. E. 961. In other states he is called judge of probate, register, judge of the orphans' court, etc. He is ordinarily a county officer, with a local jurisdiction limited to his county.

SURROGATE'S COURT. In the United States. A state tribunal, with similar jurisdiction to the court of ordinary, court of probate, etc., relating to matters of probate, etc. 2 Kent, Comm. 409, note b. And see Robinson v. Fair, 128 U. S. 53, 9 S. Ct. 30, 32 L. Ed. 415; In re Hawley, 104 N. Y. 250, 10 N. E. 352.

SURSISE. L. Fr. In old English law. Neglect; omission; default; cessation.

SURSUM REDDERE. Lat. In old conveying. To render up; to surrender.

SURSUMREDDITIO. Lat. A surrender.

SURVEY, v. Of land, to ascertain corners, boundaries, divisions, with distances and directions, and not necessarily to compute areas included within defined boundaries. Keer v. Fee, 179 Iowa, 1097, 161 N. W. 545, 547.

SURVEY, n. The process by which a parcel of land is measured and its contents ascertained; also a statement of the result of such survey, with the courses and distances and the quantity of the land. Corporation of Frederick Scholes v. Theodore Picke Warehouses, 213 App. Div. 259, 210 N. Y. S. 341, 343; People's Trust Co. of Lancaster v. Consumers' Ice & Coal Co., 283 Pa. 76, 128 A. 723, 725. The land included in field notes. Cross v. Wilkinson (Tex. Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 345, 346.

In Marine Insurance

An examination. A plan and description of the present existing state, condition, and mode of use of the property. Macatawa Transp. Co. v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 179 Mich. 443, 146 N. W. 396, 398.

In insurance law, the term has acquired a general meaning, inclusive of what is commonly called the "application," which contains the questions propounded on behalf of the company, and the answers of the assured. Albion Lead Works v. Williamsburg City F. Ins. Co. (C. C.) 2 F. 484; May v. Buckeye Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 291, 3 Am. Rep. 76.

In Sales

An examination. Thus, a contract for the sale of canned fish, imposing liability on the seller for damaged cans, to be established by an independent survey, contemplated an examination of the fish, on arrival at destination, by some unbiased and reasonably competent person to determine its condition. Pacific Commercial Co. v. Northwestern Fisheries Co., 115 Wash. 608, 197 P. 930, 935.

In General

—Survey of a vessel. A statement of its present condition. Chicago S. S. Lines v. U. S. Lloyds (C. C. A.) 12 F.(2d) 733, 737. A public document, looked to both by underwriters and owners, as affording the means of ascertaining, at the time and place, the state and condition of the ship and other property at hazard. Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 3 Sumn. 43, 19 Fed. Cas. 1,173; Hathaway v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 68.

SURVEYOR. One who makes surveys of land; one who has the overseeing or care of another person's land or works.

SURVEYOR OF HIGHWAYS. In English law. A person elected by the inhabitants of a parish, in vestry assembled, to survey the highways therein. He must possess certain qualifications in point of property; and, when elected, he is compellable, unless he can show some grounds of exemption, to take upon himself the office. Mozley & Whitely.

SURVEYOR OF THE PORT. A revenue officer of the United States appointed for each of the principal ports of entry, whose duties chiefly concern the importations at his station and the determination of their amount and valuation. Rev. St. U. S. § 2627 (19 US CA § 40).

SURVIVE. To continue to live or exist beyond the life, or existence of; to continue to live or exist beyond (a specified period or event); to live through in spite of; live on after passing through; to remain alive; exist in force or operation beyond any period specified. Thompson v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 145 La. 805, 83 So. 19, 20.

SURVIVING. Remaining alive. State ex rel. Baker v. Bird, 253 Mo. 569, 162 S. W. 119, 123, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 353.

SURVIVOR. One who survives another; one who outlives another; one of two or more persons who lives after the death of the other or others. Baker v. Baker, 182 Ala. 194, 62 So. 284, 286; Knight v. Knight, 14 C. L. R. 86, High Court of Australia 1912; State Bank & Trust Co. v. Nolan, 103 Conn. 308, 130 A. 483, 486; Ridgely v. Ridgely, 147 Md. 419, 128 A. 131, 132; Armstrong v. Thomas, 112 Miss. 272, 72 So. 1006, 1007; Supp v. Second Nat. Bank & Trust Co., 98 N. J. Eq. 242, 130 A. 549, 552; Van Wyk v. Realty Traders, 215 App. Div. 254, 213 N. Y. S. 28, 31; Caognard v. Tarnke (Tex. Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 221; In re Rosecrantz's Estate, 183 Wis. 643, 198 N. W. 728, 729, 35 A. L. R. 139.

The word "survivor," however, in connection with the power of one of two trustees to act, is used not only with reference to a condition arising where one of such trustees dies, but also as indicating a trustee who continues to administer the trust after his cotrustee is disqualified, has been removed, renounces, or refuses to act. Busch v. Schuttler, 216 Ill. App. 212, 217.

SURVIVORSHIP. The living of one of two or more persons after the death of the other or others.

Survivorship is where a person becomes entitled to property by reason of his having survived another person who had an interest in it. The most familiar example is in the case of joint tenants, the rule being that on the death of one of two joint tenants the whole property passes to the survivor. Sweet.

SUS. PER COLL. An abbreviation of "suspendatur per collum," let him be hanged by the neck. Words formerly used in England in signing judgment against a prisoner who was to be executed; being written by the judge in the margin of the sheriff's calendar or list, opposite the prisoner's name. 4 Bl. Comm. 403. Written, also, "sus' per coll'."

SUSCEPTIBLE. Capable. U. S. v. Sisco (D. C.) 262 F. 1001, 1005. And see Bensdorff v. Uihlein, 132 Tenn. 193, 177 S. W. 481, 482, 2 A. L. R. 1364.

SUSPECT. To have a slight or even vague idea concerning;—not necessarily involving knowledge or belief or likelihood. Cheek v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., 89 Kan. 247, 131 P. 617, 624.

"Suspect" with reference to probable cause as grounds for arrest without warrant is ordinarily used in place of the word believe. U. S. v. Rembert (D. C.) 234 F. 996, 1001. But to "suspect and believe" that a person, claiming to have been falsely imprisoned by a deputy sheriff, is a felon, is not the legal equivalent of belief on probable cause. Hill v. Wyrosdick, 216 Ala. 235, 113 So. 49, 50.

SUSPEND. To interrupt; to cause to cease for a time; to stay, delay, or hinder; to discontinue temporarily, but with an expectation or purpose of resumption. To forbid a public officer, attorney, employee, or ecclesiastical person from performing his duties or exercising his functions for a more or less definite interval of time. See Insurance Co. v. Aiken, 82 Va. 428; Stack v. O'Hara, 98 Pa. 232; Reeside v. U. S., 8 Wall. 42, 19 L. Ed. 318; Williston v. Camp, 9 Mont. 88, 22 P. 501; Dyer v. Dyer, 17 R. I. 547, 23 A. 910; State v. Melvin, 166 Mo. 565, 66 S. W. 534; Poe v. State, 72 Tex. 625, 10 S. W. 732; Kriebel v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 10 F.(2d) 762, 764; U. S. v. Felder (D. C.) 13 F.(2d) 527, 528.

To postpone, as a judicial sentence. State v. Anderson, 43 S. D. 630, 181 N. W. 839, 840; People ex rel. Holton v. Hunt, 217 App. Div. 428, 216 N. Y. S. 765, 768. To stay, as a decree;—not synonymous with vacate. Stewart v. Oneal (C. C. A.) 237 F. 897, 903.

To cause a temporary cessation, as of work by an employee; to lay off;—not synonymous with remove. Thomas v. City of Chicago, 194 Ill. App. 526, 529.

Also, sometimes, to discontinue or dispense with (permanently); to remove permanently from office; to discharge (an employee) permanently. Phelps v. Connellee (Tex. Civ. App.) 278 S. W. 939, 941. See Suspension.

SUSPENDER. In Scotch law. He in whose favor a suspension is made.

SUSPENSE. When a rent, profit à prendre, and the like, are, in consequence of the unity of possession of the rent, etc., of the land out of which they issue, not in esse for a time, they are said to be in suspense, tunc dormiunt; but they may be revived or awakened. Co. Litt. 313a.

SUSPENSION. A temporary stop of a right, of a law, and the like. Thus, we speak of a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, of a statute, of the power of alienating an estate, of a person in office, etc.

A temporary cutting off or debaring one, as from the privileges of an institution or society. John B. Stetson University v. Hunt, 88 Fla. 510, 102 So. 637, 639.

An ad interim stoppage or arrest of official power and pay;—not synonymous with “removal,” which terminates wholly the incumbency of the office or employment. State v. Board of Police & Fire Com'rs of La Crosse, 159 Wis. 295, 150 N. W. 493, 494. Temporary withdrawal or cessation from public work as distinguished from permanent severance accomplished by removal, Bois v. City of Fall River, 257 Mass. 471, 154 N. E. 270; “removal” being, however, the broader term, which may on occasion include suspension, State v. Medler, 19 N. M. 252, 142 P. 376, 379.

In Ecclesiastical Law

An ecclesiastical censure, by which a spiritual person is either interdicted the exercise of his ecclesiastical function or hindered from receiving the profits of his benefice. It may be partial or total, for a limited time, or forever, when it is called “deprivation” or “amotion.” Ayl. Par. 501.

In Scotch Law

A stay of execution until after a further consideration of the cause. Ersk. Inst. 4, 3, 5.

In General

—Pleas in suspension were those which showed some matter of temporary incapacity to proceed with the action or suit. Steph. Pl. 45.

—Suspension of a right. The act by which a party is deprived of the exercise of his right for a time. A temporary stop of a right, a partial extinguishment for a time, as contrasted with a complete extinguishment, where the right is absolutely dead. In re Muser's Estate, 122 Misc. 164, 203 N. Y. S. 619, 621. Suspension of a right in an estate is a temporary or partial withholding of it from use or exercise. It differs from extinguishment, because a suspended right is susceptible of being revived, which is not the case where the right was extinguished. Bac. Abr. Extinguishment (A).

—Suspension of a statute. A temporary stop. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Holliday, 45 Okl. 536, 145 P. 786, 793. The suspension of a statute for a limited time operates so as to prevent its operation for the time; but it has not the effect of a repeal. Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365, 1 L. Ed. 638.

—Suspension of arms. An agreement between belligerents, made for a short time or for a particular place, to cease hostilities between them. See, also, Armistice.

—Suspension of business. These words in a statute contemplate an interruption of ordinary business operations, evidenced by some objective features; an interruption of the ordinary course of business, other than a mere failure to meet maturing obligations. Hoover Steel Ball Co. v. Schafer Ball Bearings Co., 89 N. J. Eq. 433, 105 A. 500, 501.

SUSPENSIVE CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPENSORY CONDITION. See Condition.

SUSPICION. The act of suspecting, or the state of being suspected; imagination, generally of something ill; distrust; mistrust; doubt. McCalla v. State, 66 Ga. 348. The apprehension of something without proof or upon slight evidence. State v. Hall (Mo. App.) 285 S. W. 1009, 1011.

Suspicion implies a belief or opinion based upon facts or circumstances which do not amount to proof. Bushardt v. United Inv. Co., 121 S. C. 324, 113 S. E. 637, 639, 35 A. L. R. 637.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER. In the criminal laws of some of the states, a person who is known or strongly suspected to be an habitual criminal, or against whom there is reasonable cause to believe that he has committed a crime or is planning or intending to commit one, or whose actions and behavior give good ground for suspicion and who can give no good account of himself, and who may therefore be arrested or required to give security for good behavior. See McFadin v. San Antonio, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 140, 54 S. W. 48; People v. Russell, 35 Misc. Rep. 765, 72 N. Y. Supp. 1; 4 Bl. Comm. 252.

SUSTAIN. To carry on; to maintain. George v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co., 84 Okl. 172, 201 P. 510, 512, 23 A. L. R. 80.

To support; to warrant;—said of evidence in connection with a verdict, decision, etc. Johnson v. Allispaugh, 58 Ind. App. 83, 107 N. E. 686, 688; Work v. Whittington, 61 Cal. App. 302, 214 P. 474.

As to a distinction between “sustaining” and “taking” a loss on a short sale, as regards income tax, see People ex rel. Keim v. Wendell, 200 App. Div. 388, 193 N. Y. S. 143, 147.

To suffer; bear; undergo. To endure or undergo without failing or yielding; to bear up under. Webster, Dict.

SUTHDURE. The south door of a church, where canonical purgation was performed, and plaints, etc., were heard and determined. Wharton.

SUTLER. A person who, as a business, follows an army and sells provisions and liquor to the troops. A small trader who follows an army and who is licensed to sell goods, especially edibles, to the soldiers. Keane v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 272 F. 577, 582.

SUUM CUIQUE TRIBUERE. Lat. To render to everyone his own. One of the three fundamental maxims of the law laid down by Justinian.

SUUS HÆRES. See Hæres.

SUUS JUDEX. Lat. In old English law. A proper judge; a judge having cognizance of a cause. Literally, one's own judge. Bract. fol. 401.

SUZERAIN. In French and feudal law. The immediate vassal of the king; a crown vassal; a tenant in capite. A lord who possesses a fief whence other fiefs issue. Note 77 of Butler & Hargrave's notes, Co. Litt. 1. 3. Also spelled "suzereign."

In International Law

A state that exercises political control over another state, in relation to which it is sovereign. Webster, Dict.

The word has no clear or precise signification. It has been extended to the control of European Powers through their colonies over imperfectly civilized people. 12 L. Quart. Rev. 223; [1896] P. 122. See, also, Hershey, Int. L. 106.

In modern times suzerainty is used as descriptive of relations, ill-defined and vague, which exist between powerful and dependent states; its very indefiniteness being its recommendation. While protecting and protected states tend to draw nearer, the reverse is true of suzerain and vassal states; a protectorate is generally the preliminary to incorporation; suzerainty, to separation. Encycl. Br.

It is said that suzerainty is title without corresponding power; protectorate is power without corresponding title. Freund, Pol. Sci. Quart. (1899) p. 28.

SWAIN; SWAINMOTE. See Swain; Swainmote.

SWAMP LANDS. See Land.

SWANIMOTE. See Swainmote.

SWARF-MONEY. Warth-money; or guard-money paid in lieu of the service of castleward. Cowell.

SWATCH. Commercially, a small sample of cloth from which suits, etc., are to be ordered.

U. S. Fashion & Sample Book Co. v. Montrose Cloak & Suit Co. (Mo. Sup.) 218 S. W. 867, 869.

SWEAR. To put on oath; to administer an oath to a person.

To take an oath; to become bound by an oath duly administered. To declare on oath the truth (of a petition, etc.). Indiana Quarries Co. v. Simms, 158 Ky. 415, 165 S. W. 422; Landrum v. Landrum, 159 Ga. 324, 125 S. E. 832, 833, 38 A. L. R. 217.

To use profane language;—a punishable offense in many jurisdictions. See Gaines v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 410, 40 Am. Rep. 64; State v. Chrisp, 85 N. C. 528, 39 Am. Rep. 713.

SWEARING THE PEACE. Showing to a magistrate that one has just cause to be afraid of another in consequence of his menaces, in order to have him bound over to keep the peace.

SWEATING. The questioning of a person in custody charged with crime with intent to obtain information concerning his connection therewith or knowledge thereof by plying him with questions, or by threats or other wrongful means, extorting information to be used against him. Act March 19, 1912 (Acts Ky. 1912, c. 135). Under the statute mere questioning amounts to "sweating" if done for the purpose of extorting from the accused information to be used against him; that is, inducing him to unwillingly or involuntarily give such information. Commonwealth v. McClanahan, 153 Ky. 412, 155 S. W. 1131, 1132, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 132.

SWEEPING. Comprehensive; including in its scope many persons or objects; as, a sweeping objection.

SWEEPSTAKES. In horse racing, the sum of the stakes for which the subscribers agree to pay for each horse nominated. Stone v. Clay, 61 F. 889, 10 C. C. A. 147.

SWEIN. In old English law. A freeman or freeholder within the forest.

SWEINMOTE. In forest law. A court holden before the verderors, as judges, by the steward of the swainmote, thrice in every year, the swains or freeholders within the forest composing the jury. Its principal jurisdiction was—First, to inquire into the oppressions and grievances committed by the officers of the forest; and, secondly, to receive and try presentments certified from the court of attachments in offenses against vert and venison. 3 Bl. Comm. 72.

SWELL. To enlarge or increase. In an action of tort, circumstances of aggravation may "swell" the damages.

SWIFT WITNESS. A term colloquially applied to a witness who is unduly zealous or partial for the side which calls him, and who betrays his bias by his extreme readiness to answer questions or volunteer information.

SWINDLER. A cheat; one guilty of defrauding divers persons. 1 Term, 748.

SWINDLING. Cheating and defrauding grossly with deliberate artifice. Wyatt v. Ayres, 2 Port. (Ala.) 157; Forrest v. Hanson, 9 Fed. Cas. 456; Chase v. Whitlock, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 140. Usually applied to a transaction where the guilty party procures the delivery to him, under a pretended contract, of the personal property of another, with the felonious design of appropriating it to his own use. 2 Russ. Cr. 130; Stevenson v. Hayden, 2 Mass. 406; Jones v. State, 97 Ga. 430, 25 S. E. 319.

The acquisition of any personal or movable property, money, or instrument of writing conveying or securing a valuable right, by means of some false or deceitful pretense or device, or fraudulent representation, with intent to appropriate the same to the use of the party so acquiring, or of destroying or impairing the rights of the party justly entitled to the same. Pen. Code Tex. 1911, art. 1421 (Vernon's Ann. P. C., art. 1545); May v. State, 15 Tex. App. 436; Cochran v. State, 93 Tex. Cr. R. 483, 248 S. W. 43, 44.

The distinction between swindling and theft by false pretext under Penal Code Tex. 1911, art. 1332 (Vernon's Ann. P. C., art. 1413), depends upon whether the injured party was induced to part or intended to part with both title and possession, in which case the offense is swindling, or whether he intended to part only with possession, in which case it is theft by false pretext. Gibson v. State, 85 Tex. Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341, 342; Gordon v. State, 85 Tex. Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980; Segal v. State, 98 Tex. Cr. R. 485, 265 S. W. 911, 912, 35 A. L. R. 1331.

In Kansas, under a contract of insurance issued to protect a dealer in automobiles against "theft, robbery, or pilferage," the act of a swindler, who deprives the insured of an automobile, by means of a preconceived plan which involves misrepresentation and fraud, is a species of theft for which the insurance company is liable. Overland-Reno Co. v. International Indemnity Co., 115 Kan. 137, 222 P. 122; following Hill v. North River Ins. Co., 111 Kan. 225, 207 P. 205, 206, 24 A. L. R. 736.

SWITCH. A mechanical device which turns a movable object from one course to another. Jeffery v. Kewaunee, G. B. & W. Ry. Co., 189 Wis. 207, 207 N. W. 283, 284.

As used in railroading, a device for moving a small section of track so that rolling stock may be run or shunted from one line to another. Jeffery v. Kewaunee, G. B. & W. Ry. Co., supra. A mechanical arrangement of movable parts of rails for transferring cars from one track to another; also a siding; a turnout. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. v. Borough of Carrick, 259 Pa. 333, 103 A. 106, 108. A track in the nature of a sidetrack adjacent to and used in connection with another line of track. Indiana Rys. & Light Co. v. City of Kokomo, 183 Ind. 543, 108 N. E. 771, 772.

SWITCH LIMITS. Depot or station grounds; yard limits. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. McCall, 48 Okl. 602, 150 P. 173, 174.

SWITCH-YARD DOCTRINE. The doctrine that there can be no implied license to the public to use the track of a railroad company within the limits of its switch-yard. In Georgia, the doctrine has been held not to apply to a case where there is only one track, which is the main track of the company, although this track may be partly within the yard limits, and occasionally used in connection with the switch-yard. Binion v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co., 12 Ga. App. 663, 78 S. E. 132.

SWITCHING MOVEMENT or OPERATION. This term becomes of importance in determining whether or not the Safety Appliance Act (45 USCA § 1 et seq.) is applicable to a particular set of facts, and is distinguished from "train movement." Thus, the continuous movement of freight cars, reassembled after switching, from one portion of a railroad yard to another 4,500 feet away, through the business or warehouse part of a city, and crossing several city streets at grade, was held to be a "train movement," and not a "switching operation." Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 14 F.(2d) 747, 748. For other illustrative cases of "train movements," see Great Northern Ry. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 297 F. 692, 694; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 288 F. 190, 191; Kraemer v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 148 Minn. 310, 181 N. W. 847, 848. For cases of "switching operations," see U. S. v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 255 F. 655; Chattanooga Station Co. v. Harper, 138 Tenn. 562, 199 S. W. 394, 397.

SWITCHING SERVICE. This term is principally used in law in contradistinction to "transportation service," for which different rates may be set. "Transportation service" is one which requires no other service to complete the shipper's object, while "switching service" is one which precedes or follows transportation service. Andrews Steel Co. v. Davis, 210 Ky. 473, 276 S. W. 148, 150, and applies only to a shipment on which legal freight charges have already been earned, or are to be earned, J. P. Doppes Sons Lumber Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., 92 Ohio St. 206, 110 N. E. 640, 642, L. R. A. 1916D, 452. The word "switching" in this connection is synonymous with "transferring." J. B. Doppes Sons Lumber Co. v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., supra. The test of distinction between these two services is not only whether the switching service follows transportation, but whether the movement of cars is under the yard-master's direction, in which case it is switching service, or under the trainmaster's direction, in which event it is transportation service. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Clark Pressed Brick Co., 127 Ark. 474, 192 S. W. 382, 384. "Switching services" may also be distinguished from a "line haul," in that the latter is a definite service rendered between two definite points, to which switching is a mere incident. Cummings Sand & Gravel Co. v. Minneapolis & St. L. Ry. Co., 182 Iowa, 955, 166 N. W. 354, 356, L. R. A. 1918C, 797.

SWOLING OF LAND. So much land as one's plow can till in a year; a hide of land. Cowell.

SWORN. Frequently used interchangeably with "verified." Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa, 307, 214 N. W. 882, 885. See Swear.

SWORN BROTHERS. In old English law. Persons who, by mutual oaths, covenant to share in each other's fortunes.

SWORN CLERKS IN CHANCERY. Certain officers in the English court of chancery, whose duties were to keep the records, make copies of pleadings, etc. Their offices were abolished by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103.

SYB AND SOM. A Saxon form of greeting, meaning peace and safety.

SYLLABUS. An abstract; a head-note; a note prefixed to the report of an adjudged case, containing an epitome or brief statement of the rulings of the court upon the point or points decided in the case. In West Virginia it is the law of the case, whatever may be the reasoning employed in the opinion of the court. Kuhn v. Coal Co., 215 U. S. 356, 30 S. Ct. 140, 141, 54 L. Ed. 228. The syllabus, however, in that state, is never made up of finding of facts, but is limited to points of law determined. Sometimes the finding of facts is referred to for the purpose of explaining the point of law adjudicated, but only for that purpose. Koonce v. Doolittle, 48 W. Va. 592, 37 S. E. 644, 645. Likewise in Ohio, the authority of decisions of its Supreme Court is limited to points stated in the syllabus. Walsh v. E. G. Shinner & Co. (C. C. A.) 20 F. (2d) 586, 588. But ordinarily, where a head-note, even though prepared by the court, is given no special force by statute or rule of court, the opinion is to be looked to for the original and authentic statement of the grounds of decision. Burbank v. Ernst, 232 U. S. 162, 34 S. Ct. 299, 58 L. Ed. 551.

Also, a catalogue or list; specifically (capitalized), a collection of eighty condemned propositions addressed by Pope Pius IX to all the Catholic episcopate, December 8, 1864. It gave rise to the most violent polemics; the Ultramontane party was loud in its praise, while the liberals treated it as a declaration of war by the church on modern society and civilization. Encycl. Br.

SYLLOGISM. In logic. The full logical form of a single argument. It consists of three propositions, (two premises and the conclusion,) and these contain three terms, of which the two occurring in the conclusion are brought together in the premises by being referred to a common class.

SYLVA CÆDUA. Lat. In ecclesiastical law. Wood of any kind which was kept on purpose to be cut, and which, being cut, grew again from the stump or root. Lynd. Prov. 190; 4 Reeve, Eng. Law 90. And see Silva Cædua.

SYMBOLÆOGRAPHY. The art or cunning rightly to form and make written instruments. It is either judicial or extrajudicial; the latter being wholly occupied with such instruments as concern matters not yet judicially in controversy, such as instruments of agreements or contracts, and testaments or last wills. Wharton.

SYMBOLIC DELIVERY. The constructive delivery of the subject-matter of a sale or gift, where it is cumbersome or inaccessible, by the actual delivery of some article which is conventionally accepted as the symbol or representative of it, or which renders access to it possible, or which is evidence of the purchaser's or donee's title to it. Thus, a present gift of the contents of a box in a bank vault, accompanied by a transfer of the key thereto, is valid as a symbolical delivery. In re Leadnam's Estate, 289 Pa. 216, 137 A. 247, 249.

SYMBOLUM ANIMÆ. Lat. A mortuary, or soul scot. See Soul Scot.

SYMMETRY. Due proportion of several parts of a body to each other; adaptation of the form or dimensions of the several parts of a thing to each other; harmonious relation of parts; conformance; consistency; congruity; correspondence or similarity of form, dimensions, or parts on opposite sides of an axis, center, or a dividing plane. Maxwell v. City of Buhl, 40 Idaho, 644, 236 P. 122, 123.

SYMOND'S INN. Formerly an inn of chancery.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE. A boycott. Booth v. Brown (C. C.) 62 F. 794, 795.

SYNALLAGMATIC CONTRACT. In the civil law. A bilateral or reciprocal contract, in which the parties expressly enter into mutual engagements, each binding himself to the other. Poth. Obl. no. 9. Such are the contracts of sale, hiring, etc.

SYNCHRONISM. Two things may be said to be operating in "synchronism," not merely when they operate simultaneously, but also when their cycles of operation bear a timed relation to each other. Diamond Power Specialty Corporation v. Bayer (C. C. A.) 13 F. (2d) 337, 342.

SYNCOPE. To cut short, or pronounce things so as not to be understood. Cowell.

SYNDIC.

In the Civil Law

An advocate or patron; a burgess or recorder; an agent or attorney who acts for a corporation or university; an actor or procurator; an assignee. Wharton.

The word "syndic" in the civil law corresponds very nearly with that of assignee under the common law. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Whitney, 39 Ala. 468, 471.

In English Common Law

An agent appointed by a corporation for the purpose of obtaining letters of guardianship and the like, to whom such letters were issued. Minnesota L. & T. Co. v. Beebe, 40 Minn. 7, 41 N. W. 232, 233, 2 L. R. A. 418.

In French Law

The person who is commissioned by the courts to administer a bankruptcy. He fulfills the same functions as the trustee or assignee. Also, one who is chosen to conduct the affairs and attend to the concerns of a body corporate or community. In this sense the word corresponds to director or manager. Rodman Notes to Code de Com. p. 351; Dalloz, Dict. Syndic. See Field v. United States, 9 Pet. 182, 9 L. Ed. 94.

In Louisiana

The assignee of a bankrupt. Also, one of several persons to be elected by the creditors of a succession, for the purpose of administering thereon, whenever a succession has been renounced by the heirs, or has been accepted under the benefit of an inventory, and neither the beneficiary heirs, their attorney in fact, nor tutor will accept the administration and give the security required. Civ. Code. La. art. 1224.

SYNDICALISM. The theory, plan, or practice of trade-union action which aims by the general strike and direct action to establish control by local organizations of workers over the means and processes of production. Webster, Dict.

A form or development of trade-unionism, originating in France, which aims at the possession of the means of production and distribution, and ultimately at the control of society and government, by the federated bodies of industrial workers, and which seeks to realize its purposes through the agency of general strikes and of terrorism, sabotage, violence, or other criminal means. New Cent. Dict.

Criminal Syndicalism

Defined by the California Criminal Syndicalism Act as any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching, or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage (defined in the act as willful and malicious physical damage or injury to physical property), or unlawful acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism, as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership, or control, or effecting any political change. See People v. Lesse, 52 Cal. App. 280, 199 P. 46, 47; State v. Dingman, 37 Idaho, 253, 219 P. 760, 763.

SYNDICATE. A university committee. A combination of persons or firms united for the purpose of enterprises too large for individuals to undertake; or a group of financiers who buy up the shares of a company in order to sell them at a profit by creating a scarcity. Mozley & Whitley.

An association of individuals, formed for the purpose of conducting and carrying out some particular business transaction, ordinarily of a financial character, in which the members are mutually interested. Hambleton v. Rhind, 84 Md. 456, 36 A. 597, 40 L. R. A. 216. An organization formed for some temporary purpose. Gates v. Megargel (C. C. A.) 266 F. 811, 817, such as the organization of a real estate trust and the sale of shares to the public. Minot v. Burroughs, 223 Mass. 595, 112 N. E. 620, 623.

SYNDICATING. Gathering materials suitable for newspaper publication from writers and artists and distributing the same at regular intervals, in the form of matrices, to newspapers throughout the country for publication on the same day. Star Co. v. Wheeler Syndicate, 155 N. Y. S. 782, 784, 91 Misc. Rep. 640.

SYNDICOS, or SYNDICUS. One chosen by a college, municipality, etc., to defend its cause. Calvin. See Syndic.

SYNGRAPH. The name given by the canonists to deeds or other written instruments of which both parts were written on the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters of the alphabet written between them, through which the parchment was cut in such a manner as to leave half the word on one part and half on the other. It thus corresponded to the chirograph or indenture of the common law. 2 Bl. Comm. 295, 296.

Formerly such writings were attested by the subscription and crosses of the witnesses; afterwards, to prevent frauds and concealments, they made deeds of mutual covenant in a script and rescript, or in a part and counterpart, and in the middle between the two copies they wrote the word syngraphus in large letters, which, being cut through the parchment and one being delivered to each party, on being afterwards put together proved their authenticity.

A deed, bond, or other written instrument under the hand and seal of all the parties. It was so called because the parties wrote together.

SYNOD. A meeting or assembly of ecclesiastical persons concerning religion; being the same thing; in Greek, as convocation in Latin. There are four kinds: (1) A general or universal synod or council, where bishops of all nations meet; (2) a national synod of the clergy of one nation only; (3) a provincial synod, where ecclesiastical persons of a province only assemble, being now what is called the "convocation;" (4) a diocesan synod, of those of one diocese. A synod in Scotland is composed of three or more presbyteries. Wharton.

A convention of bishops and elders within a district including at least three presbyteries. Com. v. Green, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 560.

A meeting of the few adjoining presbyteries,—not the same as an ecumenical council, which is a council of all, and not of a part. Groesbeeck v. Dunscomb, 41 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 344.

SYNODAL. A tribute or payment in money paid to the bishop or archdeacon by the inferior clergy, at the Easter visitation.

SYNODALES TESTES. L. Lat. Synods-men (corrupted into sidesmen) were the urban and rural deans, now the church-wardens. See Sidesmen.

SYNONYMOUS. Expressing the same or nearly the same idea. McCarthy v. Dunlevy-Franklin Co., 277 Pa. 467, 121 A. 409, 410; Hoffne v. Ewing, 60 Neb. 729, 84 N. W. 93, 95.

SYPHILIS. In medical jurisprudence. A venereal disease (vulgarly called "the pox") of peculiar virulence, infectious by direct contact, capable of hereditary transmission, and the source of various other diseases and, directly or indirectly, of insanity.

SYSTEM. Method; manner; mode. Fosche v. Union Traction Co., 108 Kan. 585, 196 P. 423, 424. An organized plan or scheme in keeping with which the constituent parts thereof are rendered similar and are connected and combined into one complete harmonious whole, importing both a unity of purpose and entirety of operation. Coulter v. Pool, 187 Cal. 181, 201 P. 120, 125. Thus, as used in a constitutional provision making it the duty of the legislature to establish a system of free public schools, the term indicates some degree of uniformity and equality of opportunity for pupils attending such schools. Miller v. Childers, 107 Okl. 57, 238 P. 204, 206.

In mining usage, under the principle that a system or plan of development is sufficient to meet the requirements of annual expenditure in development of mining claims, the term "system" or "general system" of work means that work as it is commenced on the ground is such that if continued it will lead to a discovery and development of the veins or ore bodies that are supposed to be in the claims, or if these are known that the work will facilitate the extraction of ores and minerals. Golden Giant Mining Co. v. Hill, 27 N. M. 124, 198 P. 276, 279, 14 A. L. R. 1450.

T. As an abbreviation, this letter usually stands for either "Territory," "Trinity," "term," "tempore," (in the time of,) or "title."

Every person who was convicted of felony, short of murder, and admitted to the benefit of clergy, was at one time marked with this letter upon the brawn of the thumb. Abolished by 7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 27. Whart. Dict.

By a law of the Province of Pennsylvania, A. D. 1698, it was provided that a convicted thief should wear a badge in the form of the letter "T," upon his left sleeve, which badge should be at least four inches long and of a color different from that of his outer garment. Linn, Laws Prov. Pa. 275.

T. R. E. An abbreviation of "Tempore Regis Edwardi," (in the time of King Edward,) of common occurrence in Domesday, when the valuation of manors, as it was in the time of Edward the Confessor, is recounted. Cowell.

TABARD. A short gown; a herald's coat; a surcoat.

TABARDER. One who wears a tabard or short gown; the name is still used as the title of certain bachelors of arts on the old foundation of Queen's College, Oxford. Enc. Lond.

TABELLA. Lat. In Roman law. A tablet. Used in voting, and in giving the verdict of juries and decision of judges; and, when written upon, commonly translated "ballot." The laws which introduced and regulated the mode of voting by ballot were called "leges tabellarie." Calvin.; 1 Kent, Comm. 232, note.

TABELLIO. Lat. In Roman law. An officer corresponding in some respects to a notary. His business was to draw legal instruments, (contracts, wills, etc.) and witness their execution. Calvin.

Tabelliones differed from notaries in many respects: they had judicial jurisdiction in some cases, and from their judgments there were no appeals. Notaries were then the clerks or aiders of the tabelliones; they received the agreements of the parties, which they reduced to short notes; and these contracts were not binding until they were written in extenso, which was done by the tabelliones. Jacob Law Dict. Tabellion.

TABERNACULUM. In old records. A public inn, or house of entertainment. Cowell.

TABERNARIUS. Lat.

In the Civil Law

A shop-keeper. Dig. 14, 3, 5, 7.

In Old English Law

A taverner or tavern keeper. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 12, § 17.

TABES DORSALIS. In medical jurisprudence. Another name for locomotor ataxia.

It accompanies attacks of tabetic dementia. See Insanity.

TABETIC DEMENTIA. See Insanity.

TABLE. A synopsis or condensed statement, bringing together numerous items or details so as to be comprehended in a single view; as genealogical tables, exhibiting the names and relationships of all the persons composing a family; life and annuity tables, used by actuaries; interest tables, etc.

TABLE DE MARBRE. Fr. In old French law. Table of Marble; a principal seat of the admiralty, so called. These Tables de Marbre are frequently mentioned in the Ordinance of the Marine. Burrill.

TABLE OF CASES. An alphabetical list of the adjudged cases cited, referred to, or digested in a legal text-book, volume of reports, or digest, with references to the sections, pages, or paragraphs where they are respectively cited, etc., which is commonly either prefixed or appended to the volume.

TABLE RENTS. In English law. Payments which used to be made to bishops, etc., reserved and appropriated to their table or house-keeping. Wharton.

TABLEAU OF DISTRIBUTION. In Louisiana. A list of creditors of an insolvent estate, stating what each is entitled to. Taylor v. Hollander, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 535.

TABULA. Lat. In the civil law. A table or tablet; a thin sheet of wood, which, when covered with wax, was used for writing.

TABULA IN NAUFRAGIO. Lat. A plank in a shipwreck. This phrase is used metaphorically to designate the power subsisting in a third mortgagee, who took without notice of the second mortgage, to acquire the first incumbrance, attach it to his own, and thus squeeze out and get satisfaction, before the second is admitted to the fund. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 414; 2 Ves. Ch. 573. "It may be fairly said that the doctrine survives only in the unjust and much-criticised English rule of tacking." Ames, Lect. Leg. Hist. 269. See Tacking. The use of the expression is attributed to Sir Matthew Hale. See 2 P. Wms. 491.

TABULÆ. Lat. In Roman law. Tables. Writings of any kind used as evidences of a transaction. Brissonius. Contracts and written instruments of all kinds, especially wills. So called because originally written on tablets and with wax. Calvinus.

TABULÆ NUPTIALES. In the civil law. A written record of a marriage; or the agreement as to the dos.

TABULARIUS. Lat. A notary, or tabellio. Calvin.

TAC, TAK. In old records. A kind of customary payment by a tenant. Cowell.

TAC FREE. In old records. Free from the common duty or imposition of tac. Cowell.

TACIT. Not expressed; implied or inferred; manifested by the refraining from contradiction or objection; inferred from the situation and circumstances, in the absence of express matter. Thus, tacit consent is consent inferred from the fact that the party kept silence when he had an opportunity to forbid or refuse.

TACIT ACCEPTANCE. In the civil law, a tacit acceptance of an inheritance takes place when some act is done by the heir which necessarily supposes his intention to accept and which he would have no right to do but in his capacity as heir. Civ. Code La. art. 988.

TACIT HYPOTHECATION. In the civil law, a species of lien or mortgage which is created by operation of law without any express agreement of the parties. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 343. In admiralty law, this term is sometimes applied to a maritime lien, which is not, strictly speaking, an hypothecation in the Roman sense of the term, though it resembles it. See The Nestor, 1 Sumn. 73, 18 Fed. Cas. 9.

TACIT LAW. A law which derives its authority from the common consent of the people without any legislative enactment. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 120.

TACIT MORTGAGE. In the law of Louisiana. The law alone in certain cases gives to the creditor a mortgage on the property of his debtor, without it being requisite that the parties should stipulate it. This is called "legal mortgage." It is called also "tacit mortgage," because it is established by the law without the aid of any agreement. Civ. Code La. art. 3311.

TACIT RELOCATION. In Scotch law. The tacit or implied renewal of a lease, inferred when the landlord, instead of warning a tenant to remove at the stipulated expiration of the lease, has allowed him to continue without making a new agreement. Bell, "Relocation."

TACIT TACK. In Scotch law. An implied tack or lease; inferred from a tacksman's possessing peaceably after his tack is expired. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

Tacita quædam habentur pro expressis. 8 Coke, 40. Things unexpressed are sometimes considered as expressed.

TACITE. Lat. Silently; impliedly; tacitly.

TACITURNITY. In Scotch law, laches in not prosecuting a legal claim, or in acquiescing in an adverse one. Mozley & Whitley.

TACK, v. To annex some junior lien to a first lien, thereby acquiring priority over an intermediate one. See Tacking.

TACK, n. In Scotch law. A term corresponding to the English "lease," and denoting the same species of contract.

—Tack duty. Rent reserved upon a lease.

TACKING. The uniting of securities given at different times, so as to prevent any intermediate purchaser from claiming a title to redeem or otherwise discharge one lien, which is prior, without redeeming or discharging the other liens also, which are subsequent to his own title. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 412. The term is particularly applied to the action of a third mortgagee who, by buying the first lien and uniting it to his own, gets priority over the second mortgagee. The source and origin of the English doctrine is the case of Marsh v. Lee, 2 Vent. 337; 1 Ch. Cas. 162; 1 Wh. & T. L. C. Eq. 611, notes. This case and the doctrine founded upon it has been the subject of severe criticism. Langd. Eq. Pl. 191. Lord Ch. J. Holt is said to have been one of the first to benefit by the right of tacking; see Holt v. Mill, 2 Vern. 279. This doctrine is inconsistent with laws which require the recording of mortgages, and in the United States, it does not exist to any extent. Peabody v. Patten, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 517; Brayee v. Bank, 14 Ohio 318; Anderson v. Neff, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 208; Dyer v. Graves, 37 Vt. 375; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 399; Bisph. Eq. § 159.

The term is also used in a number of other connections, as of possessions, disabilities, or items in accounts or other dealings. In these several cases the purpose of the proposed tacking is to avoid the bar of a statute of limitations. See Davis v. Coblens, 174 U. S. 719, 19 S. Ct. 832, 43 L. Ed. 1147; Knippenberg v. Morris, 80 Ind. 540; Eager v. Com., 4 Mass. 182; Caperton v. Gregory, 11 Grat. (Va.) 505; Sharp v. Stephens' Committee, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 687, 52 S. W. 977; Graham v. Stanton, 177 Mass. 321, 58 N. E. 1023; Moore v. Blackman, 109 Wis. 528, 85 N. W. 429. The term is applied especially to the process of making out title to land by adverse possession, when the present occupant and claimant has not been in possession for the full statutory period, but adds or "tacks" to his own possession that of previous occupants under whom he claims. See J. B. Streeter Co. v. Fredrickson, 11 N. D. 300, 91 N. W. 692; Frost v. Curtis, 172 Mass. 401, 52 N. E. 515; Lantry v. Wolff, 49 Neb. 374, 68 N. W. 494; Woodruff v. Roysden, 103 Tenn. 491, 58 S. W. 1066, 80 Am. St. Rep. 905; Harris v. McGovern, 99 U. S. 161, 25 L. Ed. 317; Murray v. Pannaci, 67 N. J. Eq. 724, 57 A. 1132; Johnston v. Case, 131 N. C. 491, 42 S. E. 957.

TACKSMAN. In Scotch law. A tenant or lessee; one to whom a tack is granted. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 153.

TACTIS SACROSANCTIS. Lat. In old English law. Touching the holy evangelists. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 16, § 21. "A bishop may swear visis evangelis, [looking at the Gospels,] and not tactis, and it is good enough." Freem. 133.

TACTO PER SE SANCTO EVANGELIO. Lat. Having personally touched the holy Gospel. Cro. Eliz. 105. The description of a corporal oath.

TAIL. Limited; abridged; reduced; curtailed, as a fee or estate in fee, to a certain order of succession, or to certain heirs.

TAIL, ESTATE IN. An estate of inheritance, which, instead of descending to heirs generally, goes to the heirs of the donee's body, which means his lawful issue, his children, and through them to his grandchildren in a direct line, so long as his posterity endures in a regular order and course of descent, and upon the death of the first owner without issue, the estate determines. 1 Washb. Real Prop. *72. Kolmer v. Miles, 270 Ill. 20, 110 N. E. 407, 408; Inlow v. Herren, 306 Mo. 42, 267 S. W. 893, 899; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N. J. Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 121; Harwell v. Harwell, 151 Tenn. 587, 271 S. W. 353, 355.

An estate tail is a freehold of inheritance, limited to a person and the heirs of his body, general or special, male or female, and is the creature of the statute de Donis. The estate, provided the entail be not barred, reverts to the donor or reversioner, if the donee die without leaving descendants answering to the condition annexed to the estate upon its creation, unless there be a limitation over to a third person on default of such descendants, when it vests in such third person or remainder-man. Wharton. In re Reeves, 10 Del. Ch. 324, 92 A. 246, 247; 10 Del. Ch. 483, 94 A. 511, 513; Conover v. Cade, 184 Ind. 604, 112 N. E. 7, 11; Gardner v. Anderson, 114 Kan. 778, 227 P. 743, 748; Cox v. Fink, 200 Ky. 219, 254 S. W. 757, 758.

Several Tail

An entail severally to two; as if land is given to two men and their wives, and to the heirs of their bodies begotten; here the donees have a joint estate for their two lives, and yet they have a several inheritance, because the issue of the one shall have his moiety, and the issue of the other the other moiety. Cowell.

Tail after Possibility of Issue Extinct

A species of estate tail which arises where one is tenant in special tail, and a person from whose body the issue was to spring dies without issue, or, having left issue, that issue becomes extinct. In either of these cases the surviving tenant in special tail becomes "tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct." 2 Bl. Comm. 124.

Tail Female

When lands are given to a person and the female heirs of his or her body, this is called an "estate tail female," and the male heirs are not capable of inheriting it.

Tail General

An estate in tail granted to one "and the heirs of his body begotten," which is called "tail general" because, how often soever such donee in tail be married, his issue in general by all and every such marriage is, in successive order, capable of inheriting the estate tail per formam doni. 2 Bl. Comm. 113; Tantum v. Campbell, 83 N. J. Eq. 361, 91 A. 120, 122. This is where an estate is limited to a man and the heirs of his body, without any restriction at all; or, according to some authorities, with no other restriction than that in relation to sex. Thus, tail male general is the same thing as tail male; the word "general," in such case, implying that there is no other restriction upon the descent of the estate than that it must go in the male line. So an estate in tail female general is an estate in tail female. The word "general," in the phrase, expresses a purely negative idea, and may denote the absence of any restriction, or the absence of some given restriction which is tacitly understood. Mozley & Whitley.

Tail Male

When certain lands are given to a person and the male heirs of his or her body, this is called an "estate tail male," and the female heirs are not capable of inheriting it.

Tail Special

This denotes an estate in tail where the succession is restricted to certain heirs of the donee's body, and does not go to all of them in general; e. g., where lands and tenements are given to a man and "the heirs of his body on Mary, his now wife, to be begotten;" here no issue can inherit but such special issue as is engendered between those two, not such as the husband may have by another wife, and therefore it is called "special tail." 2 Bl. Comm. 113. It is defined by Cowell as the limitation of lands and tenements to a man and his wife and the heirs of their two bodies. But the phrase need not be thus restricted. Tail special, in its largest sense, is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs of the donor's body, and does not go to all of them in general. Mozley & Whitley.

TAILAGE. See Tallage.

TAILLE. Fr.

In Old French Law

A tax or assessment levied by the king, or by any great lord, upon his subjects, usually taking the form of an imposition upon the owners of real estate. Brande. The equivalent of the English tallage—the typical direct tax in France of the Middle Ages, as tonlieu was the generic term for an indirect tax. See Tallage.

In Old English Law

The fee which is opposed to fee-simple, because it is so minced or pared that it is not in the owner's free power to dispose of it, but it is, by the first giver, cut or divided from all other, and tied to the issue of the donee, —in short, an estate-tail. Wharton.

TAILORS TO THE TRADE. Those who cut, make, and trim garments for merchant tailors in different parts of the United States. Magid v. Tannenbaum, 164 App. Div. 142, 149 N. Y. S. 445.

TAILZIE. In Scotch law. An entail. A tailzied fee is that which the owner, by exercising his inherent right of disposing of his property, settles upon others than those to whom it would have descended by law. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 101.

TAINT. A conviction of felony, or the person so convicted. Cowell.

TAKE. To lay hold of; to gain or receive into possession; to seize; to deprive one of the use or possession of; to assume ownership. City of Durham v. Wright, 190 N. C. 568, 130 S. E. 161, 163. Thus, constitutions generally provide that a man's property shall not be taken for public uses without just compensation. Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Dick, 9 Ind. 433; Gas Products Co. v. Rankin, 63 Mont. 372, 207 P. 993, 998, 24 A. L. R. 294; Piper v. Ekern, 180 Wis. 586, 194 N. W. 159, 162, 34 A. L. R. 32. Property may be deemed "taken" within the meaning of these constitutional provisions when it is totally destroyed or rendered valueless, Lund v. Salt Lake County, 58 Utah, 546, 200 P. 510, 513, or when it is damaged by a public use in connection with an actual taking by the exercise of eminent domain, City of St. Louis v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 272 Mo. 80, 197 S. W. 107, 111. See, however, United States v. Louisville Bridge Co. (D. C.) 233 F. 270, 277; Richards v. Washington Terminal Co., 233 U. S. 546, 34 S. Ct. 654, 657, 58 L. Ed. 1088, L. R. A. 1915A, 887; Pontiac Improvement Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Cleveland Metropolitan Park Dist., 104 Ohio St. 447, 13 N. E. 635, 638, 23 A. L. R. 866.

To "take" a thing is to receive it. Ordinarily if some further action is to be taken by the recipient the use of the word "accept" is expected. Johnston v. Schwenck, 99 Ohio St. 59, 124 N. E. 61, 63, 8 A. L. R. 170.

In the law of larceny, to obtain or assume possession of a chattel unlawfully, and without the owner's consent; to appropriate things to one's own use with felonious intent. Thus, an actual taking is essential to constitute larceny. 4 Bl. Comm. 430. A "taking" occurs when a person with a pre-conceived design to appropriate property to his own use obtains possession of it by means of fraud or trickery. People v. Edwards, 72 Cal. App. 102, 236 P. 944, 948.

In this connection, "take" is not synonymous with "obtain," which embraces many other ways of acquiring property. Allen v. State, 97 Tex. Cr. R. 467, 262 S. W. 502, 503. Nor is "take" necessarily synonymous with "steal." Hunt v. State, 89 Tex. Cr. R. 89, 229 S. W. 869, 871; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Malone, 200 Ala. 330, 76 So. 296, 297. But the phrase "take by stealth" may have the same meaning as "steal." Roach v. State, 23 Okl. Cr. 230, 214 P. 563, 564.

To seize or apprehend a person; to arrest the body of a person by virtue of lawful process. Thus, a capias commands the officer to take the body of the defendant. Com. v. Hall, 9 Gray (Mass.) 267, 69 Am. Dec. 285.

To acquire the title to an estate; to receive or be entitled to an estate in lands from another person by virtue of some species of title. Thus one is said to "take by purchase," "take by descent," "take a life-interest under the devise," etc. In re Bock, 125 Misc. 653, 211 N. Y. S. 621, 622.

Technically "inherit" is a word of limitation, and "take" is a word of purchase. Barmore v. Darragh (Tex. Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 472, 479.

To receive the verdict of a jury; to superintend the delivery of a verdict; to hold a court. The commission of assize in England empowers the judges to take the assizes; that is, according to its ancient meaning, to take the verdict of a peculiar species of jury called an "assize;" but, in its present meaning, "to hold the assizes." 3 Bl. Comm. 59, 185. To choose; e. g., ad capiendas assisas, to choose a jury.

To procure or to obtain (an appeal). Nesans v. Colomes, 136 La. 1051, 68 So. 122; Cochran v. State, 206 Ala. 74, 89 So. 278.

See, also, Taking.

TAKE AWAY. This term in a statute punishing every person who shall take away any female under 18 from her father for the purpose of prostitution requires only that such person procure or cause her to go away by some persuasion, enticement, or inducement offered, exercised, or held out to the girl, or by furnishing her the means or money with which to go away. State v. Corrigan, 262 Mo. 195, 171 S. W. 51, 54.

TAKE BACK. To revoke; to retract; as, to take back one's promise. Dimock State Bank v. Boehnen, 46 S. D. 50, 190 N. W. 485.

TAKE BY STEALTH. To steal; feloniously to take and carry away the personal goods of another; to take without right, secretly, and without leave or consent of the owner. Roach v. State, 23 Okl. Cr. 230, 214 P. 563, 564.

TAKE CARE OF. To support; maintain; look after (a person). Ballenger v. Ballenger, 208 Ala. 147, 94 So. 127. To pay (a debt). Scranton Mercantile Co. v. E. Schneider & Co., 163 Ark. 536, 260 S. W. 426, 427.

TAKE EFFECT. To become operative or executed. Miller v. Oliver, 54 Cal. App. 495, 202 P. 168, 171.

TAKE OVER. To assume control or management of;—not necessarily involving the transfer of absolute title. New York Trust Co. v. Farmers' Irr. Dist. (C. C. A.) 280 F. 785, 795. See, however, Knight v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 281 F. 968, 972.

TAKE UP. To pay or discharge (a note). Ashville Sav. Bank v. Lee, 214 Ala. 501, 108 So. 335, 337; McKenzie v. Smith, 18 Ga. App. 626, 89 S. E. 1097, 1098; Dilenbeck v. Herrold, 183 Iowa, 264, 164 N. W. 869, 870. Also, sometimes, to purchase a note. Dilenbeck v. Herrold, supra. To retire (a negotiable instrument); to discharge one's liability on it;—said particularly of an indorser or acceptor.

A party to a negotiable instrument, particularly an indorser or acceptor, is said to "take up" the paper, or to "retire" it, when he pays its amount, or substitutes other security for it, and receives it again into his own hands. See Hartzell v. McClurg, 64 Neb. 316, 74 N. W. 626; McKenzie v. Smith, 18 Ga. App. 626, 89 S. E. 1097, 1098.

TAKENOKO. Chopped, cooked, and canned bamboo sprouts from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to asparagus. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 548, 549.

TAKER. One who takes or acquires; particularly, one who takes an estate by devise. When an estate is granted subject to a remainder or executory devise, the devisee of the immediate interest is called the "first taker."

TAKING. In criminal law and torts. The act of laying hold upon an article, with or without removing the same. It implies a transfer of possession, dominion, or control. See Take.

Under various statutes relating to sexual offenses, such as the abduction of a girl under the age of 18 years for the purpose of carnal intercourse, to constitute a "taking" no force, actual or constructive, need be exercised. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N. W. 558, 559. The "taking" may be effected by persuasion, enticement, or inducement. State v. Richards, 88 Wash. 160, 152 P. 720. And it is not necessary that the girl be taken from the control or against the will of those having lawful authority over her. State v. Lauzer, 152 Minn. 279, 188 N. W. 558. But the state must prove conduct by defendant indicating a control, complete or partial, of her person, having sexual intercourse as its object. State v. Clough (Del. Gen. Sess.) 134 A. 172, 173.

TALC. A mineral compound, known as hydrated silicate of magnesia. United States v. R. C. Boeckel & Co. (C. C. A.) 221 F. 885, 886.

TALE. The count or counting of money. Said to be derived from the same root as "tally." Cowell. Whence also the modern word "teller."

In Old Pleading

The plaintiff's count, declaration, or narrative of his case. 3 Bl. Comm. 293.

TALES. Lat. Such; such men. A number of jurors added to a deficient panel to supply the deficiency. Nesbit v. People, 19 Colo. 441, 36 P. 221. See Shields v. Bank, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 477, 479. When, by means of challenges or any other cause, a sufficient number of unexceptionable jurors does not appear at the trial, either party may pray a "tales," as it is termed; that is, a supply of such men as are summoned on the first panel in order to make up the deficiency. Brown. See State v. McCrystal, 43 La. Ann. 907, 9 So. 922; Railroad Co. v. Mask, 64 Miss. 738, 2 So. 360.

A list of such jurymen as were of the tales, kept in the king's bench office in England.

TALES DE CIRCUMSTANTIBUS. So many of the by-standers. The emphatic words of the old writ awarded to the sheriff to make up a deficiency of jurors out of the persons present in court. 3 Bl. Comm. 365.

The order of the judge for taking such by-standers as jurors. See Lee v. Evaul, 1 N. J. Law, 283; Fuller v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 65.

TALESMAN. A person summoned to act as a juror from among the by-standers in the court. Linehan v. State, 113 Ala. 70, 21 So. 497; Shields v. Niagara County Sav. Bank, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 587. A person summoned as one of the tales added to a jury. Webster, Dict.

TALIO. Lat. In the civil law. Like for like; punishment in the same kind; the punishment of an injury by an act of the same kind, as an eye for an eye, a limb for a limb, etc. Calvin.

Talis interpretatio semper fienda est, ut evitetur absurdum et inconveniens, et ne iudicium sit illusorium. 1 Coke, 52. Interpretation is always to be made in such a manner that what is absurd and inconvenient may be avoided, and the judgment be not illusory [or nugatory].

Talis non est eadem; nam nullum simile est idem. 4 Coke, 18. What is like is not the same; for nothing similar is the same.

Talis res, vel tale rectum, quæ vel quod non est in homine adtunc superstitie sed tantummodo est et consistit in consideratione et intelligentia legis, et quod alii dixerunt talem rem vel tale rectum fore in nubibus. Such a thing or such a right as is not vested in a person then living, but merely exists in the consideration and contemplation of law [is said to be in abeyance,] and others have said that such a thing or such a right is in the clouds. Co. Litt. 342.

TALITER PROCESSUM EST. "So it has proceeded." Words formerly used in pleading, by which a defendant, in justifying his conduct by the process of an inferior court, alleged the proceedings in such inferior court. Steph. Pl. 5th ed. p. 369. Upon pleading the judgment of an inferior court, the proceedings preliminary to such judgment, and on which the same was founded, must, to some extent, appear in the pleading, but the rule is that they may be alleged with a general allegation that "such proceedings were had," instead of a detailed account of the proceedings themselves, and this general allegation is called the "taliter processum est." A like concise mode of stating former proceedings in a suit is adopted at the present day in chancery proceedings upon petitions and in actions in the nature of bills of revivor and supplement. Brown.

TALLAGE, or TAILAGE. A piece cut out of the whole. Cowell. Used metaphorically for a share of a man's substance paid by way of tribute, toll, or tax, being derived from the French "tailer," which signifies to cut a piece out of the whole. Cowell. See State v. Switzler, 143 Mo. 287, 45 S. W. 245, 40 L. R. A. 280, 65 Am. St. Rep. 653; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 102 Mich. 374, 60 N. W. 767, 29 L. R. A. 195. A term used to denote subsidies, taxes, customs, and, indeed, any imposition whatever by the government for the purpose of raising a revenue. Bacon, Abr. Smuggling, etc. (B); Fort. De Laud. 26; Madd. Exch. c. 17; Co. 2d Inst. 531. A tax upon cities, townships and boroughs granted to the king as a part of the royal revenue. 2 Steph. Com. 622; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 647.

TALLAGER. A tax or toll gatherer; mentioned by Chaucer (and spelled "talaigier").

TALLAGIUM. L. Lat. A term including all taxes. 2 Inst. 532; People v. Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 551; Bernards Tp. v. Allen, 61 N. J. Law, 228, 39 A. 716.

TALLAGIUM FACERE. To give up accounts in the exchequer, where the method of accounting was by tallies.

TALLATIO. A keeping account by tallies. Cowell.

TALLEY, or TALLY. A stick cut into two parts, on each whereof is marked, with notches or otherwise, what is due between debtor and creditor. It was the ancient mode of keeping accounts. One part was held by the creditor, and the other by the debtor. The use of tallies in the exchequer was abolished by St. 23 Geo. III. c. 82, and the old tallies were ordered to be destroyed by St. 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 15. Wharton. By the custom of London, sealed tallies were effectual as a deed. Liber Albus 191a. They are admissible by the French and Italian Codes as evidence between traders. It is said that they were negotiable. See Penny Encycl.; Hall, Antiq. of Exch., 118.

—Tallies of loan. A term originally used in England to describe exchequer bills, which were issued by the officers of the exchequer when a temporary loan was necessary to meet the exigencies of the government, and charged on the credit of the exchequer in general, and made assignable from one person to another. Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 328, 9 L. Ed. 709.

—Tally trade. A system of dealing by which dealers furnish certain articles on credit, upon an agreement for the payment of the stipulated price by certain weekly or monthly installments. McCul. Dict.

TALLIA. L. Lat. A tax or tribute; tallage; a share taken or cut out of any one's income or means. Spelman.

TALMUD. A work which embodies the civil and canonical law of the Jewish people.

TALTARUM'S CASE. A case reported in Yearb. 12 Edw. IV. 19–21, which is regarded as having established the foundation of common recoveries.

TAM QUAM. A phrase used as the name of a writ of error from inferior courts, when the error is supposed to be as well in giving the judgment as in awarding execution upon it. (Tam in redditione iudicii, quam in adjudicatione executionis.)

Venire Tam Quam

One by which a jury was summoned, as well to try an issue as to inquire of the damages on a default. 2 Tidd, Pr. 722, 895.

TAME. Domesticated; accustomed to man; reclaimed from a natural state of wildness. In the Latin phrase, tame animals are described as domite naturæ.

TAMEN. Lat. Notwithstanding; nevertheless; yet.

TANGIBLE PROPERTY. Goods, wares, and merchandise. In re Arbib's Estate, 127 Misc. 820, 216 N. Y. S. 522, 523. Such property as may be seen, weighed, measured, and estimated by the physical senses, and which is capable of being possessed. People ex rel. Astor Trust Co. v. State Tax Commission, 160 N. Y. S. 854, 855, 174 App. Div. 320. Property which may be touched; such as is perceptible to the senses; corporeal property, whether real or personal. The phrase is used in opposition to such species of property as patents, franchises, copyrights, rents, ways, and incorporeal property generally.

TANISTRY. In old Irish law. A species of tenure, founded on ancient usage, which allotted the inheritance of lands, castles, etc., to the "oldest and worthiest man of the deceased's name and blood." It was abolished in the reign of James I. Jacob; Wharton.

TANK. A receptacle for liquid. American Tank Co. v. Revert Oil Co., 196 P. 1111, 1112, 108 Kan. 690.

TANKAGE. Waste matter from tanks, especially the dried, nitrogenous residue from tanks, in which fat has been rendered, used as a fertilizer. Jenkins v. Springfield Reduction & Chemical Co., 109 Mo. App. 534, 154 S. W. 832, 834. The refuse of meat-packing houses, unfit for human consumption, is known as "tankage" or "liquid stick" according to its water content. Darling & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 86, 87.

TANNERIA. In old English law. Tannery; the trade or business of a tanner. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 52, § 35.

TANTEO. Span. In Spanish law. Pre-emption. White, New kecop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 3.

TANTO, RIGHT OF. In Mexican law. The right enjoyed by an usufructuary of property, of buying the property at the same price at which the owner offers it to any other person, or is willing to take from another. Civ. Code Mex. art. 992.

Tantum bona vaent, quantum vendi possunt. Shep. Touch. 142. Goods are worth so much as they can be sold for. 3 Inst. 305.

Tantum habent de lege, quantum habent de justitia. (Precedents) have value in the law to the extent that they represent justice. Hob. 270.

TARDE VENIT. Lat. In practice. The name of a return made by the sheriff to a writ, when it came into his hands too late to be executed before the return-day.

TARE. A deficiency in the weight or quantity of merchandise by reason of the weight of the box, cask, bag, or other receptacle which contains it and is weighed with it. Also an allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity which the seller makes to the buyer, on account of the weight of such box, cask, etc. Napier v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 191, 17 Fed. Cas. 1149. See Tret.

TARIFF. A cartel of commerce, a book of rates, a table or catalogue, drawn usually in alphabetical order, containing the names of several kinds of merchandise, with the duties or customs to be paid for the same, as settled by authority, or agreed on between the several princes and states that hold commerce together. Enc. Lond.; Railway Co. v. Cushman, 92 Tex. 623, 50 S. W. 1009; Pacific S. S. Co. v. Cockette (C. C. A.) 8 F.(2d) 259, 261.

The list or schedule of articles on which a duty is imposed upon their importation into the United States, with the rates at which they are severally taxed. Also the custom or duty payable on such articles. And, derivatively, the system or principle of imposing duties on the importation of foreign merchandise.

TASSUM. In old English law. A heap; a hay-mow, or hay-stack. Fœnum in tassis, hay in stacks. Reg. Orig. 96.

TATH. In the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, the lords of manors anciently claimed the privilege of having their tenants' flocks or sheep brought at night upon their own demesne lands, there to be folded for the improvement of the ground, which liberty was called by the name of the "tath." Spelman.

TAURI LIBERI LIBERTAS. Lat. A common bull; because he was free to all the tenants within such a manor, liberty, etc.

TAUTOLOGY. Describing the same thing twice in one sentence in equivalent terms; a fault in rhetoric. It differs from repetition or iteration, which is repeating the same sentence in the same or equivalent terms; the latter is sometimes either excusable or necessary in an argument or address; the former (tautology) never. Wharton.

TAVERN. A place of entertainment; a house kept up for the accommodation of strangers. Originally, a house for the retailing of liquors to be drunk on the spot. Webster. City of Independence v. Richardson, 117 Kan. 656, 232 P. 1044, 1046; Audubon Country Club v. Commonwealth, 169 Ky. 399, 183 S. W. 911, 912; Waitt Const. Co. v. Chase, 197 App. Div. 327, 188 N. Y. S. 589, 592; City of Birmingham v. Bollas, 209 Ala. 512, 96 So. 591, 592.

The word "tavern," in a charter provision authorizing municipal authorities to "license and regulate taverns," includes hotels. "Tavern," "hotel," and "public house" are, in this country, used synonymously; and while they entertain the traveling public, and keep guests, and receive compensation therefor, they do not lose their character, though they may not have the privilege of selling liquors. St. Louis v. Siegrist, 46 Mo. 595. And see State v. Heise, 7 Rich. Law (S. C.) 520; Bonner v. Welborn, 7 Ga. 306; Rafferty v. Insurance Co., 18 N. J. Law, 484, 38 Am. Dec. 525; In re Brewster, 39 Misc. 689, 80 N. Y. S. 666; Braswell v. Comm., 5 Bush. (Ky.) 544; Kelly v. New York, 54 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 331.

TAVERN KEEPER. One who keeps a tavern. One who keeps an inn; an innkeeper.

TAVERNER. In old English law. A seller of wine; one who kept a house or shop for the sale of wine.

TAX, v. To impose a tax; to enact or declare that a pecuniary contribution shall be made by the persons liable, for the support of government. Spoken of an individual, to be taxed is to be included in an assessment made for purposes of taxation.

In Practice

To assess or determine; to liquidate, adjust, or settle. Spoken particularly of taxing costs (q. v.).

TAX, n. Taxes are a ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means for continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. Black, Tax Titles, § 2; New London v. Miller, 60 Conn. 112, 22 A. 499; Graham v. St. Joseph Tp., 67 Mich. 652, 35 N. W. 808; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. Ed. 23; Des Moines Union Ry. Co. v. A. 380; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Decatur, 147 U. S. 190, 13 S. Ct. 293, 37 L. Ed. 132.

In a general sense, a tax is any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. Story, Const. § 950.

Synonyms

In a broad sense, taxes undoubtedly include assessments, and the right to impose assessments has its foundation in the taxing power of the government; and yet, in practice and as generally understood, there is a broad distinction between the two terms. "Taxes," as the term is generally used, are public burdens imposed generally upon the inhabitants of the whole state, or upon some civil division thereof, for governmental purposes, without reference to peculiar benefits to particular individuals or property. "Assessments" have reference to impositions for improvements which are specially beneficial to particular individuals or property, and which are imposed in proportion to the particular benefits supposed to be conferred. They are justified only because the improvements confer special benefits, and are just only when they are divided in proportion to such benefits. Roosevelt Hospital v. New York, 84 N. Y. 112. As distinguished from other kinds of taxation, "assessments" are those special and local impositions upon property in the immediate vicinity of municipal improvements which are necessary to pay for the improvement, and are laid with reference to the special benefit which the property is supposed to have derived therefrom. Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599; Ride-nour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464; King v. Portland, 2 Or. 146; Williams v. Corcoran, 46 Cal. 553; State v. Moenter, 99 Ohio St. 110, 124 N. E. 70, 72; Shaver v. Rice, 209 Ky. 467, 273 S. W. 48, 51; Jackson v. Board of Education of Cedarville Tp. Rural School Dist., Greene County, 115 Ohio St. 368, 154 N. E. 247, 248; Warren v. Lower Salt Creek Drainage Dist. of Logan County, 316 Ill. 345, 147 N. E. 248, 249; Board of Drainage Com'rs of McCracken County v. Graves County, 209 Ky. 193, 272 S. W. 387, 388; Carlyle v. Bartels, 315 Ill. 271, 146 N. E. 192, 193; State v. Mikkelsen, 24 N. D. 175, 139 N. W. 525, 527; In re Walker River Irrigation District, 44 Nev. 321, 195 P. 327, 330; Witherow v. Board of Drainage Com'rs of Powder Springs Creek Drainage Dist. No. 2, 155 Ga. 476, 117 S. E. 329, 330.

Taxes differ from subsidies, in being certain and orderly, and from forced contributions, etc., in that they are levied by authority of law, and by some rule of proportion which is intended to insure uniformity of contribution, and a just apportionment of the burdens of government. Cooley, Tax'n, 2.

The words "tax" and "excise," although often used as synonymous, are to be considered as having entirely distinct and separate significations. The former is a charge apportioned either among the whole people of the state, or those residing within certain districts, municipalities, or sections. It is required to be imposed, as we shall more fully explain hereafter, so that, if levied for the public charges of government, it shall be shared according to the estate, real and personal, which each person may possess; or, if raised to defray the cost of some local government of a public nature, it shall be borne by those who will receive some special and peculiar benefit or advantage which an expenditure of money for a public object may cause to those on whom the tax is assessed. An exercise, on the other hand, is of a different character. It is based on no rule of apportionment or equality whatever. It is a fixed, absolute, and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities, without any regard to the amount of property belonging to those on whom it may fall, or to any supposed relation between money expended for a public object and a special benefit occasioned to those by whom the charge is to be paid. Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.) 274.

In General

—Ad valorem tax. See Ad Valorem.

—Capitation tax. See that title.

—Collateral inheritance tax. See Collateral inheritance.

—Direct tax. A direct tax is one which is demanded from the very persons who, it is intended or desired, should pay it. Indirect taxes are those which are demanded from one person, in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. Mill, Pol. Econ. Taxes are divided into "direct," under which designation would be included those which are assessed upon the property, person, business, income, etc., of those who are to pay them, and "indirect," or those which are levied on commodities before they reach the consumer, and are paid by those upon whom they ultimately fall, not as taxes, but as part of the market price of the commodity. Cooley, Tax'n, 6.

Historical evidence shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded as the subjects of direct tax. The phrase is understood to be limited to taxes on land and its appurtenances, and on polls. Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. Ed. 482. See Hylton v. U. S., 3 Dall. 171, 1 L. Knight*, 174 N. Y. 475, 67 N. E. 65, 63 L. R. A. 87.

—Estate tax. A tax upon the right to transfer, while a succession or legacy tax is a tax upon the right to receive. Hazard v. Bliss, 43 R. I. 431, 113 A. 469, 471, 23 A. L. R. 826; Frick v. Lewellyn (D. C.) 298 F. 803, 810; Hazard v. Bliss, 43 R. I. 431, 113 A. 469, 471, 23 A. L. R. 431; Plunkett v. Old Colony Trust Co., 233 Mass. 471, 124 N. E. 265, 266, 7 A. L. R. 696; Frick v. Lewellyn (D. C.) 298 F. 803, 810; In re Hamlin, 226 N. Y. 407, 124 N. E. 4, 6, 7 A. L. R. 701; In re Sherman's Estate, 179 App. Div. 497, 166 N. Y. S. 19, 23.

—Floor tax. A tax on all the distilled spirits "on the floor" of a warehouse, i. e., in the warehouse. Greenbrier Distillery Co. v. U. S. (D. C.) 288 F. 893, 895.

—Franchise tax. See Franchise.

—Income tax. See Income.

—Indirect taxes are those demanded in the first instance from one person in the expectation and intention that he shall indemnify himself at the expense of another. "Ordinarily all taxes paid primarily by persons who can shift the burden upon some one else, or who are under no legal compulsion to pay them, are considered indirect taxes." Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 157 U. S. 429, 15 S. Ct. 673, 39 L. Ed. 759; Springer v. U. S., 102 U. S. 602, 26 L. Ed. 253; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 451; Foster & Creighton Co. v. Graham, 154 Tenn. 412, 285 S. W. 570, 572, 47 A. L. R. 971.

—Inheritance tax. See Inheritance.

—License tax. See License.

—Local taxes. Those assessments which are limited to certain districts, as poor-rates, parochial taxes, county rates, municipal taxes, etc.

—Occupation tax. See Occupation.

—Parliamentary taxes. Such taxes as are imposed directly by act of parliament, i. e., by the legislature itself, as distinguished from those which are imposed by private individuals or bodies under the authority of an act of parliament. Thus, a sewers rate, not being imposed directly by act of parliament, but by certain persons termed "commissioners of sewers," is not a parliamentary tax; whereas the income tax, which is directly imposed, and the amount also fixed, by act of parliament, is a parliamentary tax. Brown.

—Personal tax. This term may mean either a tax imposed on the person without reference to property, as a capitation or poll tax, or a tax imposed on personal property, as distinguished from one laid on real property. See Jack v. Walker (C. C.) 79 F. 141; Potter v. Ross, 23 N. J. Law, 517; Bates' Ann. St. Ohio, 1904, § 2860 (Gen. Code, § 5321).

—Poll tax. See that title.

—Proportional taxes. Taxes are "proportional" when the proportion paid by each taxpayer bears the same ratio to the amount to be raised that the value of his property bears to the total taxable value, and in the case of a special tax when that is apportioned according to the benefits received. In re Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N. E. 570, 572; Perkins v. Inhabitants of Town of Westwood, 226 Mass. 268, 115 N. E. 411, 412; In re Opinion of the Justices, 77 N. H. 611, 93 A. 311, 312.

—Public tax. A tax levied for some general public purpose or for the purposes of the general public revenue, as distinguished from local municipal taxes and assessments. Morgan v. Cree, 46 Vt. 783, 14 Am. Rep. 640; Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 509.

—Sinking fund tax. See Fund.

—Specific tax. A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind, without regard to its value; opposed to ad valorem tax.

—Succession tax. See Succession.

—Tax certificate. A certificate of the purchase of land at a tax sale thereof, given by the officer making the sale, and which is evidence of the holder's right to receive a deed of the land if it is not redeemed within the time limited by law. See Eaton v. Manitowoc County, 44 Wis. 492; Nelson v. Central Land Co., 35 Minn. 408, 29 N. W. 121.

—Tax-deed. The conveyance given upon a sale of lands made for non-payment of taxes; the deed whereby the officer of the law undertakes to convey the title of the proprietor to the purchaser at the tax-sale.

—Tax lease. The instrument (or estate) given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale, where the law does not permit the sale of the estate in fee for non-payment of taxes, but instead thereof directs the sale of an estate for years.

—Tax levy. The total sum to be raised by a tax. Also the bill, enactment, or measure of legislation by which an annual or general tax is imposed.

—Tax-lien. A statutory lien, existing in favor of the state or municipality, upon the lands of a person charged with taxes, binding the same either for the taxes assessed upon the specific tract of land or (in some jurisdictions) for all the taxes due from the individual, and which may be foreclosed for non-payment, by judgment of a court or sale of the land.

—Taxpayer. A person chargeable with a tax; one from whom government demands a pecuniary contribution towards its support.

—Taxpayers' lists. Written exhibits required to be made out by the taxpayers resident in a district, enumerating all the property owned by them and subject to taxation, to be handed to the assessors, at a specified date or at regular periods, as a basis for assessment and valuation.

—Tax purchaser. A person who buys land at a tax-sale; the person to whom land, at a tax-sale thereof, is struck down.

—Tax roll. See Roll.

—Tax sale. See Sale.

—Tax-title. The title by which one holds land which he purchased at a tax sale. That species of title which is inaugurated by a successful bid for land at a collector's sale of the same for non-payment of taxes, completed by the failure of those entitled to redeem within the specified time, and evidenced by the deed executed to the tax purchaser, or his assignee, by the proper officer.

—Taxing district. The district throughout which a particular tax or assessment is ratably apportioned and levied upon the inhabitants; it may comprise the whole state, one county, a city, a ward, or part of a street.

—Tonnage tax. See Tonnage Duty.

—Wheel tax. A tax on wheeled vehicles of some or all kinds and bicycles.

—Window tax. See Window.

TAXA. L. Lat. A tax. Spelman.

In Old Records

An allotted piece of work; a task.

TAXABLE. Subject to taxation; liable to be assessed, along with others, for a share in a tax. Persons subject to taxation are sometimes called "taxables;" so property which may be assessed for taxation is said to be taxable.

Applied to costs in an action, the word means proper to be taxed or charged up; legally chargeable or assessable.

TAXARE. Lat. To rate or value. Calvin.

To tax; to lay a tax or tribute. Spelman.

In Old English Practice

To assess; to rate or estimate; to moderate or regulate an assessment or rate.

TAXATI. In old European law. Soldiers of a garrison or fleet, assigned to a certain station. Spelman.

TAXATIO. Lat. In Roman law. Taxation or assessment of damages; the assessment, by the judge, of the amount of damages to be awarded to a plaintiff, and particularly in the way of reducing the amount claimed or sworn to by the latter.

TAXATIO ECCLESIASTICA. The value of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, on occasion of Pope Innocent IV. granting to King Henry III. the tenth of all spirituals for three years. This taxation was first made by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III., and hence called "Taxatio Norwicensis." It is also called "Pope Innocent's Valor." Wharton.

TAXATIO EXPENSARUM. In old English practice. Taxation of costs.

TAXATIO NORWICENSIS. A valuation of ecclesiastical benefices made through every diocese in England, by Walter, bishop of Norwich, delegated by the pope to this office in 38 Hen. III. Cowell.

TAXATION. The imposition of a tax; the act or process of imposing and levying a pecuniary charge or enforced contribution, ratable, or proportioned to value or some other standard, upon persons or property, by or on behalf of a government or one of its divisions or agencies, for the purpose of providing revenue for the maintenance and expenses of government.

The term "taxation," both in common parlance and in the laws of the several states, has been ordinarily used, not to express the idea of the sovereign power which is exercised, but the exercise of that power for a particular purpose, viz., to raise a revenue for the general and ordinary expenses of the government, whether it be the state, county, town, or city government. But there is another class of expenses, also of a public nature, necessary to be provided for, peculiar to the local government of counties, cities, towns, and even smaller subdivisions, such as opening, grading, improving in various ways, and repairing highways and streets, and constructing sewers in cities, and canals and ditches for the purpose of drainage in the country. They are generally of peculiar local benefit. These burdens have always, in every state, from its first settlement, been charged upon the localities benefited, and have been apportioned upon various principles; but, whatever principle of apportionment has been adopted, they have been known, both in the legislation and ordinary speech of the country, by the name of "assessments." Assessments have also, very generally, if not always, been apportioned upon principles different from those adopted in "taxation," in the ordinary sense of that term; and any one can see, upon a moment's reflection, that the apportionment, to bear equally, and do substantial justice to all parties, must be made upon a different principle from that adopted in "taxation," so called. Emery v. San Francisco Gas Co., 28 Cal. 356.

The differences between taxation and taking property in right of eminent domain are that taxation exacts money or services from individuals, as and for their respective shares of contribution to any public burden; while private property taken for public use, by right of eminent domain, is taken, not as the owner's share of contribution to a public burden, but as so much beyond his share, and for which compensation must be made. Moreover, taxation operates upon a community, or upon a class of persons in a community, and by some rule of apportionment; while eminent domain operates upon an individual, and without reference to the amount or value exacted from any other individual, or class of individuals. People v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266.

Double Taxation

See Double.

Taxation of Costs

In practice. The process of ascertaining and charging up the amount of costs in an action to which a party is legally entitled, or which are legally chargeable. And, in English practice, the process of examining the items in an attorney's bill of costs and making the proper deductions, if any.

TAXERS. Two officers yearly chosen in Cambridge, England, to see the true gauge of all the weights and measures.

TAXICAB. A vehicle which operates from a fixed station at which the driver receives passengers or receives telephone calls directing where the passengers will be found, and which drives to the destination of their passengers over any streets which are available for such travel. Frick v. City of Gary, 192 Ind. 7, 135 N. E. 346, 347. A conveyance similar to a hackney carriage, held for public hire at designated places, subject to municipal control. Anderson v. Yellow Cab Co., 179 Wis. 300, 191 N. W. 748, 750, 31 A. L. R. 1197. Taxicabs are now so generally in use that they are included in the class of common carriers. Donnelly v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co., 53 Pa. Super. Ct. 78, 82; Kerr v. Pennsylvania & Reading Ry. Co., Id., 83; City of Memphis v. State, 133 Tenn. 83, 179 S. W. 634, L. R. A. 1916B, 1151, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1056. A coach driven by mechanical power on which a taximeter is affixed. People v. Cuneen, 94 Misc. 509, 159 N. Y. S. 967, 969.

TAXING MASTER. See Master.

TAXING OFFICER. Each house of parliament has a taxing officer, whose duty it is to tax the costs incurred by the promoters or opponents of private bills. May, Parl. Pr. 843.

TAXING POWER. The power of any government to levy taxes.

TAXT-WARD. An annual payment made to a superior in Scotland, instead of the duties due to him under the tenure of ward-holding. Abolished. Wharton.

TEA CHEST. A box containing a definite and prescribed amount of tea, otherwise called whole chest (a hundred weight to 140 pounds or more), now seldom shipped, the smaller package being spoken of as half chest (75 to 80 pounds, but the weight varies according to the kind of tea), and quarter chest (from 25 to 30 pounds) and thus a "tea chest" in the language of the trade is understood to be a half chest and not a whole chest. Japan Tea Co. v. Franklin MacVeagh & Co., 142 Minn. 152, 171 N. W. 305, 307.

TEACH. To impart knowledge by means of lessons; to give instruction in; communicating knowledge; introducing into or impressing on the mind as truth or information, and may be done as well through written communications, personal direction, through the public press, or through any means by which information may be disseminated, or it may be done by the adoption of sentiment expressed or arguments made by others which are distributed to others for their adoption and guidance. Ex parte Bernat (D. C.) 255 F. 429, 432.

TEACHER. One who teaches or instructs; especially one whose business or occupation is to teach others; an instructor; preceptor.

Jeu Jo Wan v. Nagle (C. C. A.) 9 F.(2d) 309, 310.

TEAM. Two or more horses, oxen, or other beasts harnessed together for drawing; Inman v. C., M. & St. P. R. Co., 60 Iowa, 462, 15 N. W. 286; with the vehicle to which they are customarily attached; Dains v. Prosser, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 291; Wilcox v. Hawley, 31 N. Y. 655, in reference to an exemption law. It may mean a vehicle with animals drawing it and used for loads instead of persons. Hóthkiss v. Hoy, 41 Conn. 577. A horse driven with other horses unharnessed; Elliott v. Lisbon, 57 N. H. 29; and a single horse; Hoyt v. Van Alstyne, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 563; are held teams; Jones v. Holland Furnace Co., 188 Wis. 394, 206 N. W. 57, 59; Tate v. Cody-Henderson Co., 11 Ala. App. 350, 66 So. 837, 838; Turk v. Daniel, 19 Ala. App. 289, 97 So. 125; Transfer Co. v. Davenport, 15 Ala. App. 507, 74 So. 156, 158; American Mut. Liability Ins. Co. v. Witham, 124 Me. 240, 127 A. 719. Automobiles may also be included in the meaning of team. Bragdon v. Kellogg, 118 Me. 42, 105 A. 433, 434, 6 A. L. R. 669; Smith v. Howard, 42 R. I. 126, 105 A. 649, 650.

TEAM, or THEAME. In old English law. A royalty or privilege granted, by royal charter, to a lord of a manor, for the having, restraining, and judging of bondmen and villeins, with their children, goods, and chattels, etc. Glan. lib. 5, c. 2.

TEAM TRACK. "Team tracks" are analogous to freight depots in that they bear the same relation to carload freight that such depots bear to less than carload freight. Shippers have no part in their construction or maintenance. There is a difference between "industrial tracks" and "team tracks." The former are for the handling of carload freight from and to such plants. The cost of construction is usually borne in part by the owners of the plants. Carload freight is switched to and from the plants irrespective of whether the carrier performing the switching service participated in the line haul or not. Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana Ry. & Nav. Co., 144 La. 786, 81 So. 314, 317; Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana Ry. & Nav. Co., 144 La. 786, 81 So. 314, 317.

TEAM WORK. Within the meaning of an exemption law, this term means work done by a team as a substantial part of a man's business; as in farming, staging, express carrying, drawing of freight, peddling, or the transportation of material used or dealt in as a business. Hickok v. Thayer, 49 Vt. 375.

TEAMSTER. One who drives horses and a wagon for the purpose of carrying goods for hire. Elder v. Williams, 16 Nev. 416; Brusie v. Griffith, 34 Cal. 306, 91 Am. Dec. 695. He is liable as a common carrier. Story, Bailm. § 496. A teamster is a laborer; McElwaine

v. Hosey, 135 Ind. 481, 35 N. E. 272. See Carrier.

TECHNICAL. Belonging or peculiar to an art or profession. Technical terms are frequently called in the books "words of art."

Immaterial, not affecting substantial rights, without substance. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Waco Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 315, 317; City of Hartselle v. Culver, 216 Ala. 668, 114 So. 58, 60; National Surety Co. v. Chalkley (Tex. Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 216, 218; U. S. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (C. C. A.) 283 F. 937, 938; Hintz v. Wagner, 25 N. D. 110, 140 N. W. 729, 734; Judah v. F. H. Cheyne Electric Co., 53 Ind. App. 476, 101 N. E. 1039, 1043; People v. Maestry, 167 App. Div. 266, 152 N. Y. S. 767, 769; Lichtbach v. Kelbach (Sup.) 186 N. Y. S. 126, 128; Shaw v. Union Trust Co. of Indianapolis, 79 Ind. App. 277, 137 N. E. 895, 896; Englebretson v. Industrial Accident Commission, 170 Cal. 793, 151 P. 421, 422; Jones v. State, 10 Okl. Cr. 216, 137 P. 121, 122.

TECHNICAL MORTGAGE. A true and formal mortgage, as distinguished from other instruments which, in some respects, have the character of equitable mortgages. Harrison v. Annapolis & E. R. R. Co., 50 Md. 514.

TEDDING. Spreading. Tedding grass is spreading it out after it is cut in the swath. 10 East, 5.

TEDING-PENNY. In old English law. A small tax or allowance to the sheriff from each tithing of his county towards the charge of keeping courts, etc. Cowell.

TEEP. In Hindu law. A note of hand; a promissory note given by a native banker or money-lender to zemindars and others, to enable them to furnish government with security for the payment of their rents. Whar-ton.

TEGULA. In the civil law. A tile. Dig. 19, 1, 18.

TEIND COURT. In Scotch law. A court which has jurisdiction of matters relating to teinds, or tithes.

TEIND MASTERS. Those entitled to tithes.

TEINDS. In Scotch law. A term corresponding to tithes (q. v.) in English ecclesiastical law.

TEINLAND. Sax. In old English law. Land of a thane or Saxon noble; land granted by the crown to a thane or lord. Cowell; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 5.

TELEGRAM. A telegraphic dispatch; a message sent by telegraph.

TELEGRAPH. In the English telegraph act of 1863, the word is defined as "a wire or wires used for the purpose of telegraphic communication, with any casing, coating, tube, or pipe inclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for the purpose of telegraphic communication." St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 112, § 3. See also: State Public Utilities Commission v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N. E. 795, 796; Cochran Telephone Co. v. Public Service Commission, 70 Pa. Super. Ct. 212, 215; Holmes Electric Protective Co. v. Williams, 228 N. Y. 407, 127 N. E. 315, 317; Stock Quotation Telegraph Co. v. Hayes, 200 N. Y. S. 188, 189, 120 Misc. Rep. 644; Shaffer v. Public Service Commission, 268 Pa. 456, 111 A. 877; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 202 Ala. 542, 81 So. 44, 50.

TELEGRAPHIÆ. A word occasionally used in old English law to describe ancient documents or written evidence of things past. Blount.

TELEPHONE. In a general sense, the name "telephone" applies to any instrument or apparatus which transmits sound beyond the limits of ordinary audibility. But, since the recent discoveries in telephony, the name is technically and primarily restricted to an instrument or device which transmits sound by means of electricity and wires similar to telegraphic wires. In a secondary sense, however, being the sense in which it is most commonly understood, the word "telephone" constitutes a generic term, having reference generally to the art of telephony as an institution, but more particularly to the apparatus, as an entirety, ordinarily used in the transmission, as well as in the reception, of telephonic messages. Hockett v. State, 105 Ind. 261, 5 N. E. 178, 55 Am. Rep. 201; State Public Utilities Commission ex rel. Chicago Telephone Co. v. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., 285 Ill. 411, 120 N. E. 795, 796.

TELESCOPIC. The word "telescopic" covers the thought of one part fitted within another, and by sliding or working, one against the other, producing prolongation or retraction. Weber Electric Co. v. Connecticut Electric Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 263 F. 583, 585.

TELLER. One who numbers or counts. An officer of a bank who receives or pays out money. Also one appointed to count the votes cast in a deliberative or legislative assembly or other meeting. The name was also given to certain officers formerly attached to the English exchequer.

The teller is a considerable officer in the exchequer, of which officers there are four, whose office is to receive all money due to the king, and to give the clerk of the pells a bill to charge him therewith. They also pay to all persons any money payable by the king, and make weekly and yearly books of their receipts and payments, which they deliver to the lord treasurer. Cowell; Jacob.

TELLERS IN PARLIAMENT. In the language of parliament, the "tellers" are the members of the house selected to count the members when a division takes place. In the house of lords a division is effected by the "non-contents" remaining within the bar, and the "contents" going below it, a teller being appointed for each party. In the commons the "ayes" go into the lobby at one end of the house, and the "noes" into the lobby at the other end, the house itself being perfectly empty, and two tellers being appointed for each party. May, Parl. Pr.; Brown.

TELIGRAPHUM. An Anglo-Saxon charter of land. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 1, p. 10.

TELLTALES. In railroad practice ropes suspended from a wire across the track warning of a low bridge. West v. R. Co., 179 F. 801, 103 C. C. A. 293.

TELLWORC. That labor which a tenant was bound to do for his lord for a certain number of days.

TEMENTALE, or TENEMENTALE. A tax of two shillings upon every plow-land, a decennary.

TEMERE. Lat. In the civil law. Rashly; inconsiderately. A plaintiff was said temere litigare who demanded a thing out of malice, or sued without just cause, and who could show no ground or cause of action. Brisonius.

TEMPERANCE. Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions; restrained or moderate indulgence; moderation; as temperance in eating and drinking; temperance in the indulgence of joy or mirth. Web. Dict. in People v. Dashaway Ass'n, 84 Cal. 123, 24 P. 277, 12 L. R. A. 117.

TEMPEST. A violent or furious storm; a current of wind rushing with extreme violence, and usually accompanied with rain or snow. See Stover v. Insurance Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 39; Thistle v. Union Forwarding Co., 29 U. C. C. P. 84.

TEMPLARS. A religious order of knighthood, instituted about the year 1119, and so called because the members dwelt in a part of the temple of Jerusalem, and not far from the sepulcher of our Lord. They entertained Christian strangers and pilgrims charitably, and their profession was at first to defend travelers from highwaymen and robbers. The order was suppressed A. D. 1307, and their substance given partly to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and partly to other religious orders. Brown.

TEMPLE. Two English inns of court, thus called because anciently the dwelling place of the Knights Templar. On the suppression of the order, they were purchased by some professors of the common law, and converted into hospitia or inns of court. They are called the "Inner" and "Middle Temple," in relation to Essex House, which was also a part of the house of the Templars, and called the "Outer Temple," because situated without Temple Bar. Enc. Lond.

TEMPORAL LORDS. The peers of England; the bishops are not in strictness held to be peers, but merely lords of parliament. 2 Steph. Comm. 330, 345.

TEMPORALIS. Lat. In the civil law. Temporary; limited to a certain time.

TEMPORALIS ACTIO. An action which could only be brought within a certain period.

TEMPORALIS EXCEPTIO. A temporary exception which barred an action for a time only.

TEMPORALITIES. In English law. The lay fees of bishops, with which their churches are endowed or permitted to be endowed by the liberality of the sovereign, and in virtue of which they become barons and lords of parliament. Spelman. In a wider sense, the money revenues of a church, derived from pew rents, subscriptions, donations, collections, cemetery charges, and other sources. See Barabasz v. Kabat, 86 Md. 23, 37 A. 720.

TEMPORALITY. The laity; secular people.

TEMPORARILY. Lasting for a time only, existing or continuing for a limited time, not of long duration, not permanent, transitory, changing, but a short time. Young v. Povich, 121 Me. 141, 116 A. 26, 27, 29 A. L. R. 48; Burdine v. Sewell, 92 Fla. 375, 109 So. 648, 653; Verduyze v. Ulaga, 229 Mich. 49, 201 N. W. 192, 193.

TEMPORARY. That which is to last for a limited time only, as distinguished from that which is perpetual, or indefinite, in its duration. Thus, temporary alimony is granted for the support of the wife pending the action for divorce. Dayton v. Drake, 64 Iowa, 714, 21 N. W. 158; Floyd v. Floyd, 91 Fla. 910, 108 So. 896, 898; Wohlfort v. Wohlfort, 116 Kan. 154, 225 P. 746, 748, 40 A. L. R. 538; Duss v. Duss, 92 Fla. 1081, 111 So. 382, 384. A temporary injunction restrains action or any change in the situation of affairs until a hearing on the merits can be had. Jesse French Piano Co. v. Porter, 134 Ala. 302, 32 So. 678, 92 Am. St. Rep. 31; Calvert v. State, 34 Neb. 616, 52 N. W. 687; Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. art. 4642, § 2; Gordon v. Hoencke (Tex. Civ. App.) 253 S. W. 629, 630; Walbridge-Aldinger Co. v. City of Tulsa, 107 Okl. 259, 233 P. 171, 175; State v. Superior Court of Washington for Snohomish County, 130 Wash. 668, 228 P. 847, 848; City of Emporia v. Emporia Telephone Co., 90 Kan. 118, 133 P. 858, 859; Hoskins v. Cauble (Tex. Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 629, 630; Laswell v. Seaton, 107 Kan. 439, 191 P. 266, 267; Beers v. City of Watertown, 42 S. D. 441, 176 N. W. 149, 150; Mason v. Milligan, 185 Ind. 319, 114 N. E. 3. A temporary receiver is one appointed to take charge of property until a hearing is had and an adjudication made. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 107 F. 895, 47 C. C. A. 43. A temporary statute is one limited in respect to its duration. People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 399.

As to temporary "Disability" and "Insanity," see those titles.

TEMPORE. Lat. In the time of. Thus, the volume called "Cases tempore Holt" is a collection of cases adjudged in the king's bench during the time of Lord Holt. Wall. Rep. 398.

TEMPORIS EXCEPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A plea of time; a plea of lapse of time, in bar of an action. Corresponding to the plea of prescription, or the statute of limitations, in our law. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 213.

TEMPUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. Time in general. A time limited; a season; e. g., tempus personis, mast time in the forest.

TEMPUS CONTINUUM. In the civil law. A continuous or absolute period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, even though he for whom it runs has no knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, all the days are reckoned as they follow one another in the calendar. Dig. 3, 2, 8; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195.

Tempus enim modus tollendi obligationes et actiones, quia tempus currit contra desides et sui juris contemptores. For time is a means of destroying obligations and actions, because time runs against the slothful and contemners of their own rights. Fleta, l. 4, c. 5, § 12.

TEMPUS SEMESTRE. In old English law. The period of six months or half a year, consisting of one hundred and eighty-two days. Cro. Jac. 166.

TEMPUS UTILE. In the civil law. A profitable or advantageous period of time. A term which begins to run from a certain event, only when he for whom it runs has obtained a knowledge of the event, and in which, when it has once begun to run, those days are not reckoned on which one has no experiundi potestas; i. e., on which one cannot prosecute his rights before a court. Dig. 3, 6, 6; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 195. A period of time which runs beneficially; i. e. feast-days are not included, nor does it run against one absent in a foreign country, or on business of the republic, or detained by stress of weather. But one detained by sickness is not protected from its running; for it runs where there is power to act by an agent as well as where there is power to act personally; and the sick man might have deputed his agent. Calvinus.

TENANCY.The Estate of a Tenant

The estate of a tenant, as in the expressions "joint tenancy," "tenancy in common."

The Term or Interest of a Tenant

The term or interest of a tenant for years or at will, as when we say that a lessee must remove his fixtures during his tenancy. Sweet.

In General

—General tenancy. A tenancy which is not fixed and made certain in point of duration by the agreement of the parties. Brown v. Bragg, 22 Ind. 122.

—Joint tenancy. An estate in joint tenancy is an estate in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will, arising by purchase or grant to two or more persons. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. The grand incident of joint tenancy is survivorship, by which the entire tenancy on the decease of any joint tenant remains to the survivors, and at length to the last survivor. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1292; Simons v. McLain, 51 Kan. 153, 32 P. 919; Thornburg v. Wiggins, 135 Ind. 178, 34 N. E. 999, 22 L. R. A. 42, 41 Am. St. Rep. 422; Appeal of Lewis, 85 Mich. 340, 48 N. W. 580, 24 Am. St. Rep. 94; Redemptorist Fathers v. Lawler, 205 Pa. 24, 54 A. 487; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States v. Weightman, 61 Okl. 106, 160 P. 629, 632, L. R. A. 1917B, 1210; Appeal of Garland, 126 Me. 84, 136 A. 459, 464; Furman v. Brewer, 38 Cal. App. 687, 177 P. 495, 496; Burton v. Cahill, 192 N. C. 505, 135 S. E. 332, 334; Fleming v. Fleming, 194 Iowa 71, 174 N. W. 946, 950; Greenwood v. Bennett, 208 Ala. 680, 95 So. 159, 164; Liese v. Hentze, 326 Ill. 633, 158 N. E. 428; Van Ausdall v. Van Ausdall, 48 R. I. 106, 135 A. 850, 851; In re Huggins' Estate, 96 N. J. Eq. 275, 125 A. 27, 30. A joint interest is one owned by several persons in equal shares, by a title created by a single will or transfer, when expressly declared in the will or transfer to be a joint tenancy, or when granted or devised to executors or trustees as joint tenants. Civ. Code Cal. § 683.

—Several tenancy. A tenancy which is separate, and not held jointly with another person.

—Tenancy at sufferance, or at will. This is the least and lowest estate which can subsist in realty. It is in strictness not an estate, but a mere possession only. It arises when a person, after his right to the occupation, under a lawful title, is at an end, continues (having no title at all) in possession of the land, without the agreement or disagreement of the person in whom the right of possession resides. 2 Bl. Comm. 150; Crawford v. Crawford, 139 Ga. 394, 77 S. E. 557, 559; Arnold Realty Co. v. William K. Toole Co., 46 R. I. 204, 125 A. 363, 365; Gartlan v. C. A. Hooper & Co., 177 Cal. 414, 170 P. 1115, 1119; Rourke v. Fraser, 43 R. I. 71, 110 A. 377; Rutledge v. White, 206 Ala. 329, 89 So. 599; Molter v. Spencer, 173 Wis. 38, 180 N. W. 261; Hancock v. Maurer, 103 Okl. 196, 229 P. 611, 612; Cole v. Bunch, 85 Okl. 38, 204 P. 119, 121.

—Tenancy by the entirety. A "tenancy by the entirety" is created by a conveyance to husband and wife, whereupon each becomes seized and possessed of the entire estate and after the death of one the survivor takes the whole. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Tait (D. C.) 295 F. 429, 431; Dutton v. Buckley, 116 Or. 661, 242 P. 626, 627; Settle v. Settle, 8 F.(2d) 911, 912, 56 App. D. C. 50, 43 A. L. R. 1079; Van Ausdall v. Van Ausdall, 48 R. I. 106, 135 A. 850, 852; Adams v. Caplan, 132 Md. 66, 103 A. 94, 95, L. R. A. 1918D, 276; Parrish v. Parrish, 151 Ark. 161, 235 S. W. 792, 794; Davis v. Bass, 188 N. C. 200, 124 S. Pierce, 286 Pa. 529, 134 A. 494, 495; Smith v. Russell, 172 App. Div. 793, 159 N. Y. S. 169, 170.

TENANT. In the broadest sense, one who holds or possesses lands or tenements for any kind of right or title, whether in fee, for life, for years, at will, or otherwise. Cowell; Young v. Home Telephone Co. (Mo. App.) 201 S. W. 635, 636; Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 114 Misc. 590, 187 N. Y. S. 216, 230.

In a more restricted sense, one who holds lands of another; one who has the temporary use and occupation of real property owned by another person, (called the "landlord,") the duration and terms of his tenancy being usually fixed by an instrument called a "lease." See Becker v. Becker, 13 App. Div. 342, 43 N. Y. S. 17; Bowe v. Hunking, 125 Mass. 383, 46 Am. Rep. 471; Clift v. White, 12 N. Y. 527; Lightbody v. Truelsen, 39 Minn. 310, 40 N. W. 67; Woolsey v. State, 30 Tex. App. 347, 17 S. W. 546; Dutton v. Dutton, 122 Kan. 640, 253 P. 553, 554; Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co. v. Jones, 119 S. C. 480, 112 S. E. 267, 271; Stubblefield v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 720, 721; Williams v. Treeco, 184 Mo. App. 135, 168 S. W. 209, 211; Minneapolis Iron Store Co. v. Branum, 36 N. D. 355, 162 N. W. 543, 545, L. R. A. 1917E, 298.

The word "tenant" conveys a much more comprehensive idea in the language of the law than it does in its popular sense. In popular language it is used more particularly as opposed to the word "landlord," and always seems to imply that the land or property is not the tenant's own, but belongs to some other person, of whom he immediately holds it. But, in the language of the law, every possessor of landed property is called a "tenant" with reference to such property, and this, whether such landed property is absolutely his own, or whether he merely holds it under a lease for a certain number of years. Brown.

In Feudal Law

One who holds of another (called "lord" or "superior") by some service; as fealty or rent.

One who has actual possession of lands claimed in suit by another; the defendant in a real action. The correlative of "demandant." 3 Bl. Comm. 180.

Strictly speaking, a "tenant" is a person who holds land; but the term is also applied by analogy to personalty. Thus, we speak of a person being tenant for life, or tenant in common, of stock. Sweet.

In General

—Joint tenants. Two or more persons to whom are granted lands or tenements to hold in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will. 2 Bl. Comm. 179. Persons who own lands by a joint title created expressly by one and the same deed or will. 4 Kent, Comm. 357. Joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl. Comm. 180.

—Quasi tenant at sufferance. An under-tenant, who is in possession at the determination of an original lease, and is permitted by the reversioner to hold over.

—Sole tenant. He that holds lands by his own right only, without any other person being joined with him. Cowell.

—Tenant a volente. L. Fr. A tenant at will.

—Tenant at sufferance. One that comes into the possession of land by lawful title, but holds over by wrong, after the determination of his interest. 4 Kent, Comm. 116; 2 Bl. Comm. 150; Fielder v. Childs, 73 Ala. 577; Pleasants v. Claghorn, 2 Miles (Pa.) 304; Bright v. McQuat, 40 Ind. 525; Garner v. Hannah, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 270; Wright v. Graves, 80 Ala. 418; Standard Realty Co. v. Gates, 99 N. J. Eq. 271, 132 A. 487, 489; Westheimer v. Sterling, 123 Okl. 7, 251 P. 738, 739; Power Mercantile Co. v. Moore Mercantile Co., 55 Mont. 401, 177 P. 406, 407; Parker v. Smith, 211 Ky. 624, 277 S. W. 986, 987; Lawer v. Mitts, 33 Wyo. 249, 238 P. 654, 659; Stanley v. Stenbridge, 140 Ga. 750, 79 S. E. 842, 844.

—Tenant at will "is where lands or tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold to him at the will of the lessor, by force of which lease the lessee is in possession. In this case the lessee is called 'tenant at will,' because he hath no certain nor sure estate, for the lessor may put him out at what time it pleaseth him." Litt. § 68; Sweet. Post v. Post, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 258; Spalding

v. Hall, 6 D. C. 125; Cunningham v. Holton, 55 Me. 36; Willis v. Harrell, 118 Ga. 906, 45 S. E. 794; Standard Realty Co. v. Gates, 99 N. J. Eq. 271, 132 A. 487, 489; Radigan v. Hughes, 86 Conn. 536, 86 A. 220, 222; Lawrence v. Goodstein, 91 Misc. 19, 154 N. Y. S. 229, 231; Angel v. Black Band Consol. Coal Co., 96 W. Va. 47, 122 S. E. 274, 276, 35 A. L. App. 388, 218 P. 637, 640; O'Connor v. Brinsfield, 212 Ala. 68, 101 So. 679, 680.

—Tenant by copy of court roll (shortly, "tenant by copy") is the old-fashioned name for a copyholder. Litt. § 73.

—Tenant by the curtesy. One who, on the death of his wife seised of an estate of inheritance, after having by her issue born alive and capable of inheriting her estate, holds the lands and tenements for the term of his life. Co. Litt. 30a; 2 Bl. Comm. 126.

—Tenant by the manner. One who has a less estate than a fee in land which remains in the reversioner. He is so called because in avowries and other pleadings it is specially shown in what manner he is tenant of the land, in contradistinction to the veray tenant, who is called simply "tenant." Ham. N. P. 393.

—Tenant for life. One who holds lands or tenements for the term of his own life, or for that of any other person, (in which case he is called "pur auter vie,") or for more lives than one. 2 Bl. Comm. 120; In re Hyde, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 75.

—Tenant for years. One who has the temporary use and possession of lands or tenements not his own, by virtue of a lease or demise granted to him by the owner, for a determinate period of time, as for a year or a fixed number of years. 2 Bl. Comm. 140.

—Tenant from year to year. One who holds lands or tenements under the demise of another, where no certain term has been mentioned, but an annual rent has been reserved. See 1 Steph. Comm. 271; 4 Kent, Comm. 111, 114. One who holds over, by consent given either expressly or constructively, after the determination of a lease for years. 4 Kent, Comm. 112. See Shore v. Porter, 3 Term, 16; Rothschild v. Williamson, 83 Ind. 388; Hunter v. Frost, 47 Minn. 1, 49 N. W. 327; Arbenz v. Exley, 52 W. Va. 476, 44 S. E. 149, 61 L. R. A. 957; Wolverton v. Ward, 74 Okl. 40, 176 P. 924; Coffman v. Sammons, 76 W. Va. 12, 84 S. E. 1061, 1063; Lawrence v. Goodstein, 91 Misc. Rep. 19, 154 N. Y. S. 229, 231.

—Tenant in capite. In feudal and old English law. Tenant in chief; one who held immediately under the king, in right of his crown and dignity. 2 Bl. Comm. 60.

—Tenant in common. Tenants in common are generally defined to be such as hold the same land together by several and distinct titles, but by unity of possession, because none knows his own severalty, and therefore they all occupy promiscuously. 2 Bl. Comm. 191. A tenancy in common is where two or more hold the same land, with interests accruing under different titles, or accruing under the same title, but at different periods, or conferred by words of limitation importing that the grantees are to take in distinct shares. 1 Steph. Comm. 323. See Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 336; Taylor v. Millard, 118 N. Y. 244, 23 N. E. 376, 6 L. R. A. 667; Silloway v. Brown, 12 Allen (Mass.) 36; Gage v. Gage, 66 N. H. 232, 29 A. 543, 28 L. R. A. 829; Hunter v. State, 60 Ark. 312, 30 S. W. 42; Deal v. State, 14 Ga. App. 121, 80 S. E. 537, 542; Anderson v. Lucky, 18 Ga. App. 479, 89 S. Jones*, 48 Okl. 362, 150 P. 168, 169; Whyman v. Johnston, 62 Colo. 461, 163 P. 76, 77; Stewart v. Young, 212 Ala. 426, 103 So. 44, 45.

—Tenant in dower. This is where the husband of a woman is seised of an estate of inheritance and dies; in this case the wife shall have the third part of all the lands and tenements whereof he was seised at any time during the coverture, to hold to herself for life, as her dower. Co. Litt. 30; 2 Bl. Comm. 129; Combs v. Young, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 225, 26 Am. Dec. 225.

—Tenant in fee-simple (or tenant in fee). He who has lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever, generally, absolutely, and simply; without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of the law. 2 Bl. Comm. 104; Litt. § 1.

—Tenant in severalty is he who holds lands and tenements in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest during his estate therein. 2 Bl. Comm. 179.

—Tenant in tail. One who holds an estate in fee-tail, that is, an estate which, by the instrument creating it, is limited to some particular heirs, exclusive of others; as to the heirs of his body or to the heirs, male or female, of his body.

—Tenant in tail ex provisione viri. Where an owner of lands, upon or previously to marrying a wife, settled lands upon himself and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and then died, the wife, as survivor, became tenant in tail of the husband's lands, in consequence of the husband's provision, (ex provisione viri.) Originally, she could bar the estate-tail like any other tenant in tail; but the husband's intention having been merely to provide for her during her widowhood, and not to enable her to bar his children of their inheritance, she was early restrained from so doing, by the statute 32 Hen. VII. c. 36. Brown.

—Tenant of the demesne. One who is tenant of a mesne lord; as, where A. is tenant of B., and C. of A., B. is the lord, A. the mesne lord, and C. tenant of the demesne. Ham. N. P. 392, 393.

—Tenant paravaile. The under-tenant of land; that is, the tenant of a tenant; one who held of a mesne lord.

—Tenant to the præcipe. Before the English fines and recoveries act, if land was conveyed to a person for life with remainder to another in tail, the tenant in tail in remainder was unable to bar the entail without the concurrence of the tenant for life, because a common recovery could only be suffered by the person seised of the land. In such a case, if the tenant for life wished to concur in barring the entail, he usually conveyed his life-estate to some other person, in order that the præcipe in the recovery might be issued against the latter, who was therefore called the "tenant to the præcipe." Williams, Seis. 169; Sweet.

—Tenants by the verge "are in the same nature as tenants by copy of court roll, [i. e., copyholders.] But the reason why they be called 'tenants by the verge' is for that, when they will surrender their tenements into the hands of their lord to the use of another, they shall have a little rod (by the custome) in their hand, the which they shall deliver to the steward or to the bailife, * * * and the steward or bailife, according to the custome, shall deliver to him that taketh the land the same rod, or another rod, in the name of seisin; and for this cause they are called 'tenants by the verge,' but they have no other evidence [title-deed] but by copy of court roll." Litt. § 78; Co. Litt. 61a.

TENANT-RIGHT. A kind of customary estate in the north of England, falling under the general class of copyhold, but distinguished from copyhold by many of its incidents.

The so-called tenant-right of renewal is the expectation of a lessee that his lease will be renewed, in cases where it is an established practice to renew leases from time to time, as in the case of leases from the crown, from ecclesiastical corporations, or other collegiate bodies. Strictly speaking, there can be no right of renewal against the lessor without an express compact by him to that effect, though the existence of the custom often influences the price in sales.

The Ulster tenant-right may be described as a right on the tenant's part to sell his holding to the highest bidder, subject to the existing or a reasonable increase of rent from time to time, as circumstances may require, with a reasonable veto reserved to the landlord in respect of the incoming tenant's character and solvency. Mozley & Whitley.

TENANT'S FIXTURES. This phrase signifies things which are fixed to the freehold of the demised premises, but which the tenant may detach and take away, provided he does so in season. Wall v. Hinds, 4 Gray (Mass.) 256, 270, 64 Am. Dec. 64.

TENANTABLE REPAIR. Such a repair as will render a house fit for present habitation.

TENCON. L. Fr. A dispute; a quarrel. Kelham.

TEND. In old English law. To tender or offer. Cowell.

TENDER. An offer of money; the act by which one produces and offers to a person holding a claim or demand against him the amount of money which he considers and admits to be due, in satisfaction of such claim or demand, without any stipulation or condition. Salinas v. Ellis, 26 S. C. 337, 2 S. E. 121; Tompkins v. Batie, 11 Neb. 147, 7 N. W. 747, 38 Am. Rep. 361; Holmes v. Holmes, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 144; Smith v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 119; Noyes v. Wyckoff, 114 N. Y. 204, 21 N. E. 158; Kelley v. Clark, 23 Idaho, 1, 129 P. 921, 924, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 665; Hart v. Kanawha Oil Co., 79 W. Va. 161; 90 S. E. 604, 606; Bane v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 171 N. C. 328, 88 S. E. 477, 479; St. George's Society v. Sawyer, 204 Iowa, 103, 214 N. W. 877, 878; Kastens v. Ruland, 94 N. J. Eq. 451, 120 A. 21, 22; Mondello v. Hanover Trust Co., 252 Mass. 563, 148 N. E. 136, 137; Wooton v. Dahlquist, 42 Idaho, 121, 244 P. 407, 409; McCall Co. v. Hobbs-Henderson Co., 138 S. C. 435, 136 S. E. 762, 763; Rowell v. Ross, 87 Conn. 157, 87 A. 355, 357.

"Tender," though usually used in connection with an offer to pay money, is properly used in connection with offer of property other than money. Maxwell Implement Co. v. Fitzgerald, 85 Ind. App. 206, 146 N. E. 883, 885; Central Flour Mills Co. v. Gateway Milling Co. (Mo. App.) 213 S. W. 131, 134; In re Katzowitz, 214 App. Div. 429, 212 N. Y. S. 336, 338; Harrison v. Beals, 111 Or. 563, 222 P. 728, 731; Jose v. Aufderheide, 222 Mo. App. 524, 293 S. W. 476, 479.

Tender, in pleading, is a plea by defendant that he has been always ready to pay the debt demanded, and before the commencement of the action tendered it to the plaintiff, and now brings it into court ready to be paid to him, etc. Brown.

Legal Tender

That kind of coin, money, or circulating medium which the law compels a creditor to accept in payment of his debt, when tendered by the debtor in the right amount.

Tender of Amends

An offer by a person who has been guilty of any wrong or breach of contract to pay a sum of money by way of amends. If a defendant in an action make tender of amends, and the plaintiff decline to accept it, the defendant may pay the money into court, and plead the payment into court as a satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. Mozley & Whitley.

Tender of Issue

A form of words in a pleading, by which a party offers to refer the question raised upon it to the appropriate mode of decision. The common tender of an issue of fact by a defendant is expressed by the words, "and of this he puts himself upon the country." Steph. Pl. 54, 230.

TENEMENT. This term, in its vulgar acceptation, is only applied to houses and other buildings, but in its original, proper, and legal sense it signifies everything that may be holden, provided it be of a permanent nature, whether it be of a substantial and sensible, or of an unsubstantial, ideal, kind. Thus, liberum tenementum, frank tenement, or freehold, is applicable not only to lands and other solid objects, but also to offices, rents, commons, advowsons, franchises, peerages, etc. 2 Bl. Comm. 16; Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 517; Oskaloosa Water Co. v. Board of Equalization, 84 Iowa, 407, 51 N. W. 18, 15 L. R. A. 296; Field v. Higgins, 35 Me. 341; Sacket v. Wheaton, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 105; Lenfers v. Henke, 73 Ill. 408, 24 Am. Rep. 263; Sox v. Miracle, 35 N. D. 458, 160 N. W. 716, 719; State v. Bluementhal, 133 Ark. 584, 203 S. W. 36, 37, L. R. A. 1918E, 482; Hughes v. Milby & Dow Coal & Mining Co., 127 Okl. 30, 259 P. 559, 560.

"Tenement" is a word of greater extent than "land," including not only land, but rents, commons, and several other rights and interests issuing out of or concerning land. 1 Steph. Comm. 153, 159.

Its original meaning, according to some, was "house" or "homestead." Jacob. In modern use it also signifies rooms let in houses. Webster.

Dominant Tenement

One for the benefit or advantage of which an easement exists or is enjoyed.

Servient Tenement

One which is subject to the burden of an easement existing for or enjoyed by another tenement. See Easement.

TENEMENTAL LAND. Land distributed by a lord among his tenants, as opposed to the demesnes which were occupied by himself and his servants. 2 Bl. Comm. 90.

TENEMENTIS LEGATIS. An ancient writ, lying to the city of London, or any other corporation, (where the old custom was that men might devise by will lands and tenements, as well as goods and chattels,) for the hearing and determining any controversy touching the same. Reg. Orig. 244.

TENENDAS. In Scotch law. The name of a clause in charters of heritable rights, which derives its name from its first words, "tenendas predictas terras;" it points out the superior of whom the lands are to be holden, and expresses the particular tenure. Ersk. Inst. 2, 3, 24.

TENENDUM. Lat. To hold; to be holden. The name of that formal part of a deed which is characterized by the words "to hold." It was formerly used to express the tenure by which the estate granted was to be held; but, since all freehold tenures have been converted into socage, the tenendum is of no further use, and is therefore joined in the habendum,—"to have and to hold." 2 Bl. Comm. 298; 4 Cruise, Dig. 26.

TENENS. A tenant; the defendant in a real action.

TENENTIBUS IN ASSISÂ NON ONERANDIS. A writ that formerly lay for him to whom a disseisor had alienated the land whereof he disseised another, that he should not be molested in assize for damages, if the disseisor had wherewith to satisfy them. Reg. Orig. 214.

TENERE. Lat. In the civil law. To hold; to hold fast; to have in possession; to retain.

In relation to the doctrine of possession, this term expresses merely the fact of manual detention, or the corporal possession of any object, without involving the question of title; while habere (and especially possidere) denotes the maintenance of possession by a lawful claim; i. e., civil possession, as distinguished from mere natural possession.

TENERI. The Latin name for that clause in a bond in which the obligor expresses that he is "held and firmly bound" to the obligee, his heirs, etc.

TENET; TENUIT. Lat. He holds; he held. In the Latin forms of the writ of waste against a tenant, these words introduced the allegation of tenure. If the tenancy still existed, and recovery of the land was sought, the former word was used, (and the writ was said to be "in the tenet.") If the tenancy had already determined, the latter term was used, (the writ being described as "in the tenuit,") and then damages only were sought.

TENHEDED, or TIENHEOFED. In old English law. A dean. Cowell.

TENMENTALE. The number of ten men, which number, in the time of the Saxons, was called a "decennary;" and ten decennaries made what was called a "hundred." Also a duty or tribute paid to the crown, consisting of two shillings for each plowland. Enc. Lond.

TENNE. A term of heraldry, meaning orange color. In engravings it should be represented by lines in bend sinister crossed by others bar-ways. Heraldry who blazon by the names of the heavenly bodies, call it "dragon's head," and those who employ jewels, "jacinth." It is one of the colors called "stainand." Wharton.

TENOR. A term used in pleading to denote that an exact copy is set out. 1 Chit. Crim. Law. 235.

By the tenor of a deed, or other instrument in writing, is signified the matter contained therein, according to the true intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

"Tenor," in pleading a written instrument, imports that the very words are set out. "Purport" does not import this, but is equivalent only to "substance." Com. v. Wright, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 65; Dana v. State, 2 Ohio St. 93; State v. Bonney, 34 Me. 384; State v. Atkins, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 458; State v. Chinn, 142 Mo. 507, 44 S. W. 245; Saugerties Bank v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 198 N. Y. S. 722, 723, 204 App. Div. 211; State v. Collins, 297 Mo. 257, 248 S. W. 599, 602; Johns v. Rice, 165 Iowa, 233, 145 N. W. 290, 291.

The action of proving the tenor, in Scotland, is an action for proving the contents and purport of a deed which has been lost. Bell.

In Chancery Pleading

A certified copy of records of other courts removed in chancery by certiorari. Gres. Eq. Ev. 309.

Tenor est qui legem dat feudo. It is the tenor [of the feudal grant] which regulates its effect and extent. Craigius, Jus Feud. (3d Ed.) 66; Broom, Max. 459.

TENORE INDICTAMENTI MITTENDO. A writ whereby the record of an indictment, and the process thereupon, was called out of another court into the queen's bench. Reg. Orig. 69.

TENORE PRÆSENTIUM. By the tenor of these presents, i. e., the matter contained therein, or rather the intent and meaning thereof. Cowell.

TENSERIÆ. A sort of ancient tax or military contribution. Wharton.

TENT. A shelter of flexible material supported by poles stretched by cords that are secured by pegs in the ground. Knowles v. State, 19 Ala. App. 476, 98 So. 207, 208; City of St. Louis v. Nash, 266 Mo. 523, 181

S. W. 1145, 1146, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 134; Killman v. State, 2 Tex. App. 222, 28 Am. Rep. 432.

TENTATES PANIS. The essay or assay of bread. Blount.

TENTERDEN'S ACT. In English law. The statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 14, taking its name from Lord Tenterden, who procured its enactment, which is a species of extension of the statute of frauds, and requires the reduction of contracts to writing.

TENTHS.

In English Law

A temporary aid issuing out of personal property, and granted to the king by parliament; formerly the real tenth part of all the movables belonging to the subject. 1 Bl. Comm. 308.

In English Ecclesiastical Law

The tenth part of the annual profit of every living in the kingdom, formerly paid to the pope, but by statute 26 Hen. VIII. c. 3, transferred to the crown, and afterwards made a part of the fund called "Queen Anne's Bounty." 1 Bl. Comm. 284-286.

TENUIT. A term used in stating the tenure in an action for waste done after the termination of the tenancy. See Tenet.

TENURA. In old English law. Tenure.

Tenura est pactio contra communem feudi naturam ac rationem, in contractu interposita. Wright, Ten. 21. Tenure is a compact contrary to the common nature and reason of the fee, put into a contract.

TENURE. The mode or system of holding lands or tenements in subordination to some superior, which, in the feudal ages, was the leading characteristic of real property.

Tenure is the direct result of feudalism, which separated the dominium directum, (the dominion of the soil,) which is placed mediately or immediately in the crown, from the dominion utile, (the possessory title,) the right to the use and profits in the soil, designated by the term "seisin," which is the highest interest a subject can acquire. Wharton; Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 114 Misc. 590, 187 N. Y. S. 216, 231.

Wharton gives the following list of tenures which were ultimately developed:

Lay Tenures

I. Frank tenement, or freehold. (1) The military tenures (abolished, except grand serjeanty, and reduced to free socage tenures) were: Knight service proper, or tenure in chivalry; grand serjeanty; cornage. (2) Free socage, or plow-service; either petit serjeanty, tenure in burgage, or gavelkind.

II. Villeinage. (1) Pure villeinage, (whence copyholds at the lord's [nominal] will, which is regulated according to custom). (2) Privileged villeinage, sometimes called "villein socage," (whence tenure in ancient demesne, which is an exalted species of copyhold, held according to custom, and not according to the lord's will,) and is of three kinds: Tenure in ancient demesne; privileged copyholds, customary freeholds, or free copyholds; copyholds of base tenure.

Spiritual Tenures

- I. Frankalmoine, or free alms.
- II. Tenure by divine service.

Tenure, in its general sense, is a mode of holding or occupying. Thus, we speak of the tenure of an office, meaning the manner in which it is held, especially with regard to time, (tenure for life, tenure during good behavior,) and of tenure of land in the sense of occupation or tenancy, especially with reference to cultivation and questions of political economy; e. g., tenure by peasant proprietors, cottiers, etc. Sweet. See Bard v. Grundy, 2 Ky. 169; People v. Waite, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 58; Richman v. Lippincott, 29 N. J. Law, 59; State v. Young, 137 La. 102, 68 So. 241, 244; Hunt v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 178 Cal. 470, 173 P. 1097, 1098; Barrett v. Duff, 114 Kan. 220, 217 P. 918, 922.

TENURE BY DIVINE SERVICE is where an ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, holds land by a certain divine service; as, to say prayers on a certain day in every year, "or to distribute in alms to an hundred poore men an hundred pence at such a day." Litt. § 137.

TERCE. In Scotch law. Dower; a widow's right of dower, or a right to a life estate in a third part of the lands of which her husband died seised.

TERCER. In Scotch law. A widow that possesses the third part of her husband's land, as her legal jointure. 1 Kames, Eq. pref.

TERCERONE. A term applied in the West Indies to a person one of whose parents was white and the other a mulatto. See Daniel v. Guy, 19 Ark. 131.

TERM. A word or phrase; an expression; particularly one which possesses a fixed and known meaning in some science, art, or profession.

In the Civil Law

A space of time granted to a debtor for discharging his obligation. Poth. Obl. pt. 2, c. 3, art. 3, § 1; Civ. Code La. art. 2048.

In Estates

"Term" signifies the bounds, limitation, or extent of time for which an estate is granted; as when a man holds an estate for any limited or specific number of years, which is called his "term," and he himself is called, with reference to the term he so holds, the "termor," or "tenant of the term." See Gay Mfg. Co. v. Hobbs, 128 N. C. 46, 38 S. E. 26, 83 Am. St. Rep. 661; Sanderson v. Scranton, 105 Pa. 472; Hurd v. Whitsett, 4 Colo. 84; Taylor v. Terry, 71 Cal. 46, 11 Pac. 813; Cochran v.

Canty, 176 Iowa, 713, 153 N. W. 559, 560, 9 A. L. R. 288; Johnson v. Moxley, 22 Ala. App. 1, 113 So. 651, 654; Key v. Swanson, 113 Okl. 287, 241 P. 490, 492; Rooney v. City of Omaha, 105 Neb. 447, 181 N. W. 143, 144; Curry v. Bacharach Quality Shops, 271 Pa. 364, 117 A. 435, 438.

Of Court

The word "term," when used with reference to a court, signifies the space of time during which the court holds a session. A session signifies the time during the term when the court sits for the transaction of business, and the session commences when the court convenes for the term, and continues until final adjournment, either before or at the expiration of the term. The term of the court is the time prescribed by law during which it may be in session. The session of the court is the time of its actual sitting. Lipari v. State, 19 Tex. App. 431. And see Horton v. Miller, 38 Pa. 271; Dees v. State, 78 Miss. 250, 28 South. 849; Conkling v. Ridgely, 112 Ill. 36, 1 N. E. 261, 54 Am. Rep. 204; Brown v. Hume, 16 Grat. (Va.) 462; Brown v. Leet, 136 Ill. 203, 26 N. E. 639; Walton v. State, 147 Miss. 851, 112 So. 790, 793; Ansonia Foundry Co. v. Bethlehem Steel Co., 98 Conn. 501, 120 A. 310, 31 A. L. R. 1087; Wood Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 196, 244 S. W. 429, 431, 432; Lanier v. Shayne, 85 Fla. 212, 95 So. 617, 618; Trower v. Mudd (Mo. App.) 242 S. W. 993, 994. But "term" and "session" are often used interchangeably. Nation v. Savelly, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 35; Muse v. Harris, 122 Okl. 250, 254 P. 72, 73; Wood Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 196 Ky. 196, 244 S. W. 429, 431; Curry v. McCaffery, 47 Mont. 191, 131 P. 673, 675; Lewis County Pub. Co. v. Lewis County Court, 75 W. Va. 305, 83 S. E. 993, 995.

In General

—General term. A phrase used in some jurisdictions to denote the ordinary session of a court, for the trial and determination of causes, as distinguished from a special term, for the hearing of motions or arguments or the despatch of various kinds of formal business, or the trial of a special list or class of cases. Or it may denote a sitting of the court in banc. State v. Eggers, 152 Mo. 485, 54 S. W. 498.

—Regular term. A regular term of court is a term begun at the time appointed by law, and continued, in the discretion of the court, to such time as it may appoint, consistent with the law. Wightman v. Karsner, 20 Ala. 451; Glebe v. State, 106 Neb. 251, 183 N. W. 295, 296; Carter v. State, 14 Ga. App. 242, 80 S. E. 533, 534; State v. Thompson, 100 W. Va. 253, 130 S. E. 456, 460; Ex parte Daly, 66 Fla. 345, 63 So. 834, 835.

—Special term. In New York practice, that branch of the court which is held by a single judge for hearing and deciding in the first instance motions and causes of equitable nature is called the "special term," as opposed to the "general term," held by three judges (usually) to hear appeals. Abbott; Gracie v. Freeland, 1 N. Y. 232.

—Term attendant on the inheritance. See Attendant Terms.

—Term fee. In English practice. A certain sum which a solicitor is entitled to charge to his client, and the client to recover, if successful, from the unsuccessful party; payable for every term in which any proceedings subsequent to the summons shall take place. Wharton.

—Term for deliberating. By "term for deliberating" is understood the time given to the beneficiary heir, to examine if it be for his interest to accept or reject the succession which has fallen to him. Civ. Code La. art. 1033.

—Term for years. An estate for years and the time during which such estate is to be held are each called a "term;" hence the term may expire before the time, as by a surrender. Co. Litt. 45.

—Term in gross. A term of years is said to be either in gross (outstanding) or attendant upon the inheritance. It is outstanding, or in gross, when it is unattached or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, as where it is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance; it is attendant, when vested in some trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. Brown.

—Term of lease. The word "term," when used in connection with a lease, means the period which is granted for the lessee to occupy the premises, and does not include the time between the making of the lease and the tenant's entry. Young v. Dake, 5 N. Y. 463, 55 Am. Dec. 356.

—Term of office. The period during which elected officer or appointee is entitled to hold office, perform its functions, and enjoy its privileges and emoluments. State v. Knight, 76 Mont. 71, 245 P. 267, 268; Wilson v. McCarron, 112 Me. 181, 91 A. 839, 840; State ex inf. Major v. McKay, 249 Mo. 249, 155 S. W. 396, Ann. Cas. 1914D, 97; People v. Sweitzer, 280 Ill. 436, 117 N. E. 625, 631; State v. Carroll, 133 Wash. 549, 234 P. 22, 24; Carver v. Wheeler County (Tex. Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 537, 538; Lee v. Cahill, 95 N. J. Law, 383, 112 A. 855, 856; Broadwater v. Kendig, 80 Mont. 515, 261 P. 264, 267; Carter v. State, 77 Okl. 31, 186 P. 464, 465; Barrett v. Duff, 114 Kan. 220, 217 P. 918, 922; Wilson v. Shaw, 194 Iowa, 28, 188 N. W. 940, 941, 943; Chenoweth v. Chambers, 33 Cal. App. 104, 164 P. 428, 430; State v. Young, 137 La. 102, 68 So. 241, 244; State ex rel. Emmons v. Farmer, 271 Mo. 306, 196 S. W. 1106, 1108;

State v. Board of Com'rs of Sierra County, 29 N. M. 209, 222 P. 654, 655, 31 A. L. R. 1310; State v. Oklahoma City, 38 Okl. 349, 134 P. 58, 59, 60; Bayley v. Garrison, 190 Cal. 690, 214 P. 871, 872.

—Term probatory. The period of time allowed to the promoter of an ecclesiastical suit to produce his witnesses, and prove the facts on which he rests his case. Coote, Ecc. Pr. 240, 241.

—Term to conclude. In English ecclesiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are understood to renounce all further exhibits and allegations.

—Term to propound all things. In English ecclesiastical practice. An appointment by the judge of a time at which both parties are to exhibit all the acts and instruments which make for their respective causes.

In the Law of Contracts and in Court Practice

The word is generally used in the plural, and "terms" are conditions; propositions stated or promises made which, when assented to or accepted by another, settle the contract and bind the parties. Webster. See Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 313, 60 Am. Dec. 381; State v. Fawcett, 58 Neb. 371, 78 N. W. 636; Rokes v. Amazon Ins. Co., 51 Md. 512, 34 Am. Rep. 323; Williamson v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 190 Ind. 239, 128 N. E. 758, 761; Roberts-Atkinson Co. v. International Harvester Co. of America, 191 N. C. 291, 131 S. E. 757, 759; Nakdimen v. Ft. Smith & Van Buren Bridge Dist., 115 Ark. 194, 172 S. W. 272, 275.

—Special terms. Peculiar or unusual conditions imposed on a party before granting some application to the favor of the court.

—Under terms. A party is said to be under terms when an indulgence is granted to him by the court in its discretion, on certain conditions. Thus, when an injunction is granted ex parte, the party obtaining it is put under terms to abide by such order as to damages as the court may make at the hearing. Mozley & Whitley.

TERMES DE LA LEY. Terms of the law. The name of a lexicon of the law French words and other technicalities of legal language in old times.

TERMINABLE PROPERTY. This name is sometimes given to property of such a nature that its duration is not perpetual or indefinite, but is limited or liable to terminate upon the happening of an event or the expiration of a fixed term; e. g., a leasehold, a life-annuity, etc.

TERMINATING BUILDING SOCIETIES. Societies, in England, where the members commence their monthly contributions on a particular day, and continue to pay them until the realization of shares to a given amount for each member, by the advance of the capital of the society to such members as required it, and the payment of interest as well as principal by them, so as to insure such realization within a given period of years. They have been almost superseded by permanent building societies. Wharton.

TERMINER. L. Fr. To determine. See Oyer and Terminer.

TERMINI. Lat. Ends; bounds; limiting or terminating points.

TERMINO. In Spanish law. A common; common land. Common because of vicinage. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 1, c. 6, § 1, note.

TERMINUM. A day given to a defendant. Spelman.

TERMINUM QUI PRETERIIT, WRIT OF ENTRY AD. A writ which lay for the reversioner, when the possession was withheld by the lessee, or a stranger, after the determination of a lease for years. Brown.

TERMINUS. Boundary; a limit, either of space or time.

The phrases "terminus a quo" and "terminus ad quem" are used, respectively, to designate the starting point and terminating point of a private way. In the case of a street, road, or railway, either end may be, and commonly is, referred to as the "terminus."

Terminus annorum certus debet esse et determinatus. Co. Litt. 45. A term of years ought to be certain and determinate.

Terminus et feodum non possunt constare simul in una eademque persona. Plowd. 29. A term and the fee cannot both be in one and the same person at the same time.

TERMINUS HOMINIS. In English ecclesiastical practice. A time for the determination of appeals, shorter than the terminus juris, appointed by the judge. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 11, no. 36.

TERMINUS JURIS. In English ecclesiastical practice. The time of one or two years, allowed by law for the determination of appeals. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 11, no. 38.

TERMOR. He that holds lands or tenements for a term of years or life. But we generally confine the application of the word to a person entitled for a term of years. Mozley & Whitley.

TERMS TO BE UNDER. A party is said to be under terms, when an indulgence is granted to him by the court in its discretion, on certain conditions. Thus, when an injunction is granted ex parte, the party obtaining it is put under terms to abide by such order as to damages as the court may make at the hearing. Moz. & W.

TERRA. Lat. Earth; soil; arable land. Kennett, Gloss.

TERRA AFFIRMATA. Land let to farm.

TERRA BOSCALIS. Woody land.

TERRA CULTA. Cultivated land.

TERRA DEBILIS. Weak or barren land.

TERRA DOMINICA, or INDOMINICATA. The demesne land of a manor. Cowell.

TERRA EXCULTABILIS. Land which may be plowed. Mon. Ang. i. 426.

TERRA EXTENDENDA. A writ addressed to an escheator, etc., that he inquire and find out the true yearly value of any land, etc., by the oath of twelve men, and to certify the extent into the chancery. Reg. Writs, 293.

TERRA FRUSCA, or FRISCA. Fresh land, not lately plowed. Cowell.

TERRA HYDATA. Land subject to the payment of hydage. Selden.

TERRA LUCRABILIS. Land gained from the sea or inclosed out of a waste. Cowell.

TERRA NORMANORUM. Land held by a Norman. Paroch. Antiq. 197.

TERRA NOVA. Land newly converted from wood ground or arable. Cowell.

Terra manens vacua occupanti conceditur. 1 Sid. 347. Land lying unoccupied is given to the first occupant.

TERRA PUTURA. Land in forests, held by the tenure of furnishing food to the keepers therein. 4 Inst. 307.

TERRA SABULOSA. Gravelly or sandy ground.

TERRA SALICA. In Salic law. The land of the house; the land within that inclosure which belonged to a German house. No portion of the inheritance of Salic land passes to a woman, but this the male sex acquires; that is, the sons succeed in that inheritance. Lex Salic. tit. 62, § 6.

TERRA TESTAMENTALIS. Gavel-kind land, being disposable by will. Spelman.

Terra transit cum onere. Land passes with the incumbrances. Co. Litt. 231; Broom, Max. 437, 630.

TERRA VESTITA. Land sown with corn. Cowell.

TERRA WAINABILIS. Tillable land. Cowell.

TERRA WARRENATA. Land that has the liberty of free-warren.

TERRÆ DOMINICALES REGIS. The demesne lands of the crown.

TERRAGE. In old English law. A kind of tax or charge on land; a boon or duty of plowing, reaping, etc. Cowell.

TERRAGES. An exemption from all uncertain services. Cowell.

TERRARIUS. In old English law. A landholder.

TERRE-TENANT. He who is literally in the occupation or possession of the land, as distinguished from the owner out of possession. But, in a more technical sense, the person who is seised of the land, though not in actual occupancy of it, and locally, in Pennsylvania, one who purchases and takes land subject to the existing lien of a mortgage or judgment against a former owner. See Dengler v. Kiehner, 13 Pa. 38, 53 Am. Dec. 441; Hulett v. Insurance Co., 114 Pa. 142, 6 A. 554; Handel & Hayden Building & Loan Ass'n v. Elleford, 258 Pa. 143, 101 A. 951, 952.

TERRIER. In English law. A landroll or survey of lands, containing the quantity of acres, tenants' names, and such like; and in the exchequer there is a terrier of all the glebe lands in England, made about 1338. In general, an ecclesiastical terrier contains a detail of the temporal possessions of the church in every parish. Cowell; Tomlins; Mozley & Whitley.

TERRIS BONIS ET CATALLIS REHABENDIS POST PURGATIONEM. A writ for a clerk to recover his lands, goods, and chattels, formerly seized, after he had cleared himself of the felony of which he was accused, and delivered to his ordinary to be purged. Reg. Orig.

TERRIS ET CATALLIS TENTIS ULTRA DEBITUM LEVATUM. A judicial writ for the restoring of lands or goods to a debtor who is distrained above the amount of the debt. Reg. Jud.

TERRIS LIBERANDIS. A writ that lay for a man convicted by attain, to bring the record and process before the king, and take a fine for his imprisonment, and then to deliver to him his lands and tenements again, and release him of the strip and waste. Reg. Orig. 232. Also it was a writ for the delivery of lands to the heir, after homage and relief performed, or upon security taken that he should perform them. Id. 293.

TERRITORIAL, TERRITORIALITY. These terms are used to signify connection with, or limitation with reference to, a particular country or territory. Thus, "territorial law" is the correct expression for the law of a particular country or state, although "municipal law" is more common. "Territorial waters" are that part of the sea adjacent to the coast of a given country which is by international law deemed to be within the sovereignty of that country, so that its courts have jurisdiction over offenses committed on those waters, even by a person on board a foreign ship. Sweet.

TERRITORIAL COURTS. The courts established in the territories of the United States.

TERRITORIAL PROPERTY. The land and water over which the state has jurisdiction and control whether the legal title be in the state itself or in private individuals. Lakes and waters wholly within the state are its property and also the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property.

TERRITORY. A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction.

In American Law

A portion of the United States, not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized, with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial officers appointed by the president. See Ex parte Morgan (D. C.) 20 F. 304; People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 288, 22 P. 159, 5 L. R. A. 444; Snow v. U. S., 18 Wall. 317, 21 L. Ed. 784; Symons v. Eichelberger, 110 Ohio St. 224, 144 N. E. 279, 281; Ex parte Heikich Terui, 187 Cal. 20, 200 P. 954, 956, 17 A. L. R. 630.

Const. Amend. 18, prohibiting the transportation of intoxicating liquor within or the importation thereof into the United States and territory subject to its jurisdiction, uses the word "territory" as meaning the regional areas of land and adjacent waters over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign power. Cunard S. S. Co. v. Mellon, 262 U. S. 100, 43 S. Ct. 504, 507, 67 L. Ed. 894, 27 A. L. R. 1306; International Mercantile Marine v. Stuart (D. C.) 285 F. 78, 81; State v. Morton, 31 Idaho, 329, 171 P. 495, 496.

TERRITORY OF A JUDGE. The territorial jurisdiction of a judge; the bounds, or district, within which he may lawfully exercise his judicial authority. Phillips v. Thralls, 26 Kan. 781.

TERROR. Alarm; fright; dread; the state of mind induced by the apprehension of hurt from some hostile or threatening event or manifestation; fear caused by the appearance of danger. In an indictment for riot, it must be charged that the acts done were "to the terror of the people." See Arto v. State, 19 Tex. App. 136.

TERTIA DENUNCIATIO. Lat. In old English law. Third publication or proclamation of intended marriage.

TERTIUS INTERVENIENS. Lat. In the civil law. A third person intervening; a third person who comes in between the parties to a suit; one who interpleads. Gilbert's Forum Rom. 47.

TEST. To bring one to a trial and examination, or to ascertain the truth or the quality or fitness of a thing.

Something by which to ascertain the truth respecting another thing; a criterion, gauge, standard, or norm.

In public law, an inquiry or examination addressed to a person appointed or elected to a public office, to ascertain his qualifications therefor, but particularly a scrutiny of his political, religious, or social views, or his attitude of past and present loyalty or disloyalty to the government under which he is to act. See Attorney General v. Detroit Common Council, 58 Mich. 213, 24 N. W. 887, 55 Am. Rep. 675; People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 587, 5 N. E. 596, 56 Am. Rep. 793; Rogers v. Buffalo, 51 Hun, 637, 3 N. Y. S. 674.

TEST ACT. The statute 25 Car. II. c. 2, which directed all civil and military officers to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and make the declaration against transubstantiation, within six months after their admission, and also within the same time receive the sacrament according to the usage of the Church of England, under penalty of £500 and disability to hold the office. 4 Bl. Comm. 58, 59. This was abolished by St. 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, so far as concerns receiving the sacrament, and a new form of declaration was substituted.

TEST ACTION. An action selected out of a considerable number of suits, concurrently depending in the same court, brought by several plaintiffs against the same defendant, or by one plaintiff against different defendants, all similar in their circumstances, and embracing the same questions, and to be supported by the same evidence, the selected action to go first to trial, (under an order of court equivalent to consolidation,) and its decision to serve as a test of the right of recovery in the others, all parties agreeing to be bound by the result of the test action.

TEST OATH. An oath required to be taken as a criterion of the fitness of the person to fill a public or political office; but particularly an oath of fidelity and allegiance (past or present) to the established government.

TEST-PAPER. In practice. A paper or instrument shown to a jury as evidence. A term used in the Pennsylvania courts. Depue v. Clare, 7 Pa. 428.

TESTA DE NEVIL. An ancient and authentic record in two volumes, in the custody of the king's remembrancer in the exchequer, said to be compiled by John de Nevil, a justice itinerant, in the eighteenth and twenty-fourth years of Henry III. Cowell. These volumes were printed in 1807, under the authority of the commissioners of the public records, and contain an account of fees held either immediately of the king or of others who held of the king in capite; fees holden in frankalmoigne; serjeanties holden of the king; widows and heiresses of tenants in capite, whose marriages were in the gift of the king; churches in the gift of the king; escheats, and sums paid for scutages and aids, especially within the county of Hereford. Cowell; Wharton.

TESTABLE. A person is said to be testable when he has capacity to make a will; a man of twenty-one years of age and of sane mind is testable.

TESTACY. The state or condition of leaving a will at one's death. Opposed to "intestacy."

TESTAMENT. A disposition of personal property to take place after the owner's decease, according to his desire and direction. Pluche v. Jones, 54 F. 865, 4 C. C. A. 622; Aubert's Appeal, 109 Pa. 447, 1 A. 336; Conklin v. Egerton, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 436; Ragsdale v. Booker, 2 Strob. Eq. (S. C.) 348; In re Lester's Will, 100 N. J. Eq. 521, 136 P. 322.

A testament is the act of last will, clothed with certain solemnities, by which the testator disposes of his property, either universally, or by universal title, or by particular title. Civ. Code La. art. 1571.

Strictly speaking, the term denotes only a will of personal property; a will of land not being called a "testament." The word "testament" is now seldom used, except in the heading of a formal will, which usually begins: "This is the last will and testament of me, A. B.," etc. Sweet.

Testament is the true declaration of a man's last will as to that which he would have to be done, after his death. It is compounded, according to Justinian, from testatio mentis; but the better opinion is that it is a simple word formed from the Latin testor, and not a compound word. Mozley & Whitley.

Military Testament

In English law. A nuncupative will, that is, one made by word of mouth, by which a soldier may dispose of his goods, pay, and other personal chattels, without the forms and solemnities which the law requires in other cases. St. 1 Vict. c. 26, § 11.

Mutual Testaments

Wills made by two persons who leave their effects reciprocally to the survivor.

Mystic Testament

A form of testament made under Spanish law which prevailed in Louisiana and California. See BROUTIN v. VASSANT, 5 Mart. O. S. (La.) 182; Schoul, Wills § 9. In the law of Louisiana. A sealed testament. The mystic or secret testament, otherwise called the "closed testament," is made in the following manner: The testator must sign his dispositions, whether he has written them himself or has caused them to be written by another person. The paper containing those dispositions, or the paper serving as their envelope, must be closed and sealed. The testator shall present it thus closed and sealed to the notary and to seven witnesses, or he shall cause it to be closed and sealed in their presence. Then he shall declare to the notary, in presence of the witnesses, that that paper contains his testament written by himself, or by another by his direction, and signed by him, the testator. The notary shall then draw up the act of superscription, which shall be written on that paper, or on the sheet that serves as its envelope, and that act shall be signed by the testator, and by the notary and the witnesses. Civ. Code La. art. 1584.

Testamenta cum duo inter se pugnancia reperuntur, ultimum ratum est; sic est, cum duo inter se pugnancia reperiuntur in eodem testamento. Co. Litt. 112. When two conflicting wills are found, the last prevails; so it is when two conflicting clauses occur in the same will.

Testamenta latissimam interpretationem habere debent. Jenk. Cent. 81. Wills ought to have the broadest interpretation.

TESTAMENTARY. Pertaining to a will or testament; as testamentary causes. Derived from, founded on, or appointed by a testament or will; as a testamentary guardian, letters testamentary, etc.

A paper, instrument, document, gift, appointment, etc., is said to be "testamentary" when it is written or made so as not to take effect until after the death of the person making it, and to be revocable and retain the property under his control during his life, although he may have believed that it would operate as an instrument of a different character. Sweet.

Letters Testamentary

The formal instrument of authority and appointment given to an executor by the proper court, upon the admission of the will to probate, empowering him to enter upon the discharge of his office as executor.

Testamentary Capacity

That measure of mental ability which is recognized in law as sufficient for the making a will. See Nicewander v. Nicewander, 151 Ill. 156, 37 N. E. 698; Delafield v. Parish, 25 N. Y. 29; Yardley v. Cuthbertson, 108 Pa. 395, 1 A. 765, 56 Am. Rep. 218; Leech v. Leech, 21 Pa. 67; Duffield v. Robeson, 2 Har. (Del.) 379; Lowe v. Williamson, 2 N. J. Eq. 85.

Testamentary Causes

In English law. Causes or matters relating to the probate of wills, the granting of administrations, and the suing for legacies, of which the ecclesiastical courts have jurisdiction. 3 Bl. Comm. 95, 98. Testamentary causes are causes relating to the validity and execution of wills. The phrase is generally confined to those causes which were formerly matters of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and are now dealt with by the court of probate. Mozley & Whitley.

Testamentary Disposition

A disposition of property by way of gift, which is not to take effect unless the grantor dies or until that event. Diefendorf v. Diefendorf, 56 Hun, 639, 8 N. Y. S. 617; Chestnut St. Nat. Bank v. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co., 186 Pa. 333, 40 A. 486, 65 Am. St. Rep. 860; Rhines v. Young, 97 Wash. 437, 166 P. 642, 643; Ga Nun v. Palmer, 159 App. Div. 86, 144 N. Y. S. 457, 459.

Testamentary Guardian

A guardian appointed by the last will of a father for the person and real and personal estate of his child until the latter arrives of full age. 1 Bl. Comm. 462; 2 Kent, Comm. 224; In re De Saulles, 101 Misc. 447, 167 N. Y. S. 445, 453.

Testamentary Paper or Instrument

An instrument in the nature of a will; an unprobated will; a paper writing which is of the character of a will, though not formally such, and, if allowed as a testament, will have the effect of a will upon the devolution and distribution of property. Young v. O'Donnell, 129 Wash. 219, 224 P. 682, 684.

Testamentary Succession

In Louisiana, that which results from the institution of an heir contained in a testament executed in the form prescribed by law. Civ. Code La. 1900, art. 876.

Testamentary Trustee

See Trustee.

TESTAMENTI FACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. The ceremony of making a testament, either as testator, heir, or witness.

TESTAMENTUM. Lat.

In the Civil Law

A testament; a will, or last will.

In Old English Law

A testament or will; a disposition of property made in contemplation of death. Bract. fol. 60.

A general name for any instrument of conveyance, including deeds and charters, and so called either because it furnished written testimony of the conveyance, or because it was authenticated by witnesses, (testes.) Spelman.

Testamentum est voluntatis nostræ justa sententia, de eo quod quis post mortem suam fieri velit. A testament is the just expression of our will concerning that which any one wishes done after his death, [or, as Blackstone translates, "the legal declaration of a man's intentions which he wills to be performed after his death."] Dig. 28, 1, 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 499.

Testamentum, i. e., testatio mentis, facta nullo præsentate metu periculi, sed cogitatione mortalitatis. Co. Litt. 322. A testament, i. e., the witnessing of one's intention, made under no present fear of danger, but in expectancy of death.

TESTAMENTUM INOFFICIOSUM. Lat. In the civil law. An inofficious testament, (q. v.)

Testamentum omne morte consummatur. Every will is perfected by death. A will speaks from the time of death only. Co. Litt. 232.

TESTARI. Lat. In the civil law. To testify; to attest; to declare, publish, or make known a thing before witnesses. To make a will. Calvin.

TESTATE. One who has made a will; one who dies leaving a will.

TESTATION. Witness; evidence.

TESTATOR. One who makes or has made a testament or will; one who dies leaving a will. This term is borrowed from the civil law. Inst. 2, 14, 5, 6.

Testatoris ultima voluntas est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. Co. Litt. 322. The last will of a testator is to be thoroughly fulfilled according to his real intention.

TESTATRIX. A woman who makes a will; a woman who dies leaving a will; a female testator.

TESTATUM.

In Practice

When a writ of execution has been directed to the sheriff of a county, and he returns that the defendant is not found in his bailiwick, or that he has no goods there, as the case may be, then a second writ, reciting this former writ and the sheriff's answer to the same, may be directed to the sheriff of some other county wherein the defendant is supposed to be, or to have goods, commanding him to execute the writ as it may require; and this second writ is called a "testatum" writ, from the words with which it concludes, viz.: "Whereupon, on behalf of the said plaintiff, it is testified in our said court that the said defendant is [or has goods, etc.] within your bailiwick."

In Conveyancing

That part of a deed which commences with the words, "This indenture witnesseth."

TESTATUM WRIT. In practice. A writ containing a testatum clause; such as a testatum capias, a testatum fl. ja., and a testatum ca. sa. See Testatum.

TESTATUS. Lat. In the civil law. Testate; one who has made a will. Dig. 50, 17, 7.

TESTE MEIPSO. Lat. In old English law and practice. A solemn formula of attestation by the sovereign, used at the conclusion of charters, and other public instruments, and also of original writs out of chancery. Spelman.

TESTE OF A WRIT. In practice. The concluding clause, commencing with the word "Witness," etc. A writ which bears the teste is sometimes said to be tested.

"Teste" is a word commonly used in the last part of every writ, wherein the date is contained beginning with the words, "Teste meipso," meaning the sovereign, if the writ be an original writ, or be issued in the name of the sovereign; but, if the writ be a judicial writ, then the word "Teste" is followed by the name of the chief judge of the court in which the action is brought, or, in case of a vacancy of such office, in the name of the senior puisne judge. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTED. To be tested is to bear the teste, (q. v.)

TESTES. Lat. Witnesses.

Testes ponderantur, non numerantur. Witnesses are weighed, not numbered. That is, in case of a conflict of evidence, the truth is to be sought by weighing the credibility of the respective witnesses, not by the mere numerical preponderance on one side or the other.

Testes qui postulat debet dare eis sumptus competentes. Whosoever demands witnesses must find them in competent provision.

TESTES, TRIAL PER. A trial had before a judge without the intervention of a jury, in which the judge is left to form in his own breast his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined; but this mode of trial, although it was common in the civil law, was seldom resorted to in the practice of the common law, but it is now becoming common when each party waives his right to a trial by jury. Brown.

Testibus deponentibus in pari numero, dignioribus est credendum. Where the witnesses who testify are in equal number, [on both sides,] the more worthy are to be believed. 4 Inst. 279.

TESTIFY. To bear witness; to give evidence as a witness; to make a solemn declaration, under oath or affirmation, in a judicial inquiry, for the purpose of establishing or proving some fact. See State v. Robertson, 26 S. C. 117, 1 S. E. 443; Gannon v. Stevens, 13 Kan. 459; Nash v. Hoxie, 59 Wis. 384, 18 N. W. 408; O'Brien v. State, 125 Ind. 38, 25 N. E. 137, 9 L. R. A. 323; Mudge v. Gilbert, 43 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 221.

Testimonia ponderanda sunt, non numeranda. Evidence is to be weighed, not enumerated.

TESTIMONIAL. Besides its ordinary meaning of a written recommendation to character, "testimonial" has a special meaning, under St. 39 Eliz. c. 17, § 3, passed in 1597, under which it signified a certificate under the hand of a justice of the peace, testifying the place and time when and where a soldier or mariner landed, and the place of his dwelling or birth, unto which he was to pass, and a convenient time limited for his passage. Every idle and wandering soldier or mariner not having such a testimonial, or willfully exceeding for above fourteen days the time limited thereby, or forging or counterfeiting such testimonial, was to suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy. This act was repealed, in 1812, by St. 52 Geo. III. c. 31. Mozley & Whitley.

TESTIMONIAL PROOF. In the civil law. Proof by the evidence of witnesses, i. e., parol evidence, as distinguished from proof by written instruments, which is called "literal" proof.

TESTIMONIO. In Spanish law. An authentic copy of a deed or other instrument, made by a notary and given to an interested party as evidence of his title, the original remaining in the public archives. Guilbeau v. Mays, 15 Tex. 414.

TESTIMONIUM CLAUSE. In conveyancing. That clause of a deed or instrument with which it concludes: "In witness whereof, the parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands and seals."

TESTIMONY. Evidence given by a competent witness, under oath or affirmation; as distinguished from evidence derived from writings, and other sources. Edelstein v. United States, 149 F. 636, 640, 79 C. C. A. 328, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 236; State v. Berberick, 38 Mont. 423, 100 P. 209, 215, 16 Ann. Cas. 1077 (quoting 1 Wigmore, Ev. § 479); State v. Winney, 21 N. D. 72, 128 N. W. 680, 681; Sutton v. Commonwealth, 207 Ky. 597, 269 S. W. 754, 758; Meyers v. State, 112 Neb. 149, 198 N. W. 871, 872; John Bright Shoe Stores Co. v. Scully, 24 Ohio App. 15, 156 N. E. 155, 156; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Rogers, 21 Ga. App. 324, 94 S. E. 321, 322; Crosby v. State, 90 Fla. 381, 106 So. 741, 747; Industrial Commission v. Jasionowski, 24 Ohio App. 66, 156 N. E. 616, 618; Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. v. Bates Expanded Steel Truss Co. (D. C.) 296 F. 281, 282; Grayson v. Durant, 43 Okl. 799, 144 P. 592, 594; Caulbe v. Key (Tex. Civ. App.) 256 S. W. 654, 655.

Negative Testimony

Testimony not bearing directly upon the immediate fact or occurrence under consideration, but evidencing facts from which it may be inferred that the act or fact in question could not possibly have happened. See Barclay v. Hartman, 2 Marv. (Del.) 351, 43 A. 174; Cinadar v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 193 Mich. 38, 159 N. W. 312; Suick v. Krom, 171 Wis. 254, 177 N. W. 20; Jurkovic v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 166 Wis. 266, 164 N. W. 993, 994; Gaston v. Avansino, 39 Nev. 128, 154 P. 85; Heywood v. State, 12 Ga. App. 643, 77 S. E. 1130; Williams v. State, 23 Ga. App. 542, 99 S. E. 43.

Positive Testimony

Direct testimony that a thing did or did not happen. Williams v. State, 23 Ga. App. 542, 99 S. E. 43; Roberts v. State, 90 Fla. 779, 107 So. 242, 244; Heywood v. State, 12 Ga. App. 643, 77 S. E. 1130.

TESTIS. Lat. A witness; one who gives evidence in court, or who witnesses a document.

Testis de visu præponderat aliis. 4 Inst. 279. An eye-witness is preferred to others.

Testis lupanaris sufficit ad factum in lupanari. Moore, 817. A lewd person is a sufficient witness to an act committed in a brothel.

Testis nemo in sua causa esse potest. No one can be a witness in his own cause.

Testis oculatus unus plus valet quam auritis decem. 4 Inst. 279. One eye-witness is worth more than ten ear-witnesses.

TESTMOIGNE. An old law French term, denoting evidence or testimony or a witness.

Testmoignes ne poent testifier le negative, mes l'affirmative. Witnesses cannot testify to a negative; they must testify to an affirmative. 4 Inst. 279.

TEXT-BOOK. A legal treatise which lays down principles or collects decisions on any branch of the law.

TEXTUS ROFFENSIS. In old English law. The Rochester text. An ancient manuscript containing many of the Saxon laws, and the rights, customs, tenures, etc., of the church of Rochester, drawn up by Ernulph, bishop of that see from A. D. 1114 to 1124. Cowell.

THAINLAND. In old English Law. The land which was granted by the Saxon kings to their thains or thanes was so called.

THALWEG. Germ. A term used in topography to designate a line representing the deepest part of a continuous depression in the surface, such as a watercourse; hence the middle of the deepest part of the channel of a river or other stream. See Iowa v. Illinois, 13 S. Ct. 239, 147 U. S. 1, 37 L. Ed. 55; Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. v. People, 34 N. E. 482, 145 Ill. 596; State of Minnesota v. State of Wisconsin, 40 S. THANAGE OF THE KING. A certain part of the king's land or property, of which the ruler or governor was called "thane." Cowell.

THANE. An Anglo-Saxon nobleman; an old title of honor, perhaps equivalent to "baron." There were two orders of thanes,—the king's thanes and the ordinary thanes. Soon after the Conquest this name was disused. Cowell.

THANELANDS. Such lands as were granted by charter of the Saxon kings to their thanes with all immunities, except from the trinoda necessitas. Cowell.

THANESHIP. The office and dignity of a thane; the seigniorship of a thane.

That which I may defeat by my entry I make good by my confirmation. Co. Litt. 300.

THAVIES INN. An inn of chancery. See Inns of Chancery.

THE. An article which particularizes the subject spoken of. "Grammatical niceties should not be resorted to without necessity; but it would be extending liberality to an unwarrantable length to confound the articles 'a' and 'the.' The most unlettered persons understand that 'a' is indefinite, but 'the' refers to a certain object." Per Tilghman, C. J., Sharff v. Com., 2 Bin. (Pa.) 516; Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Henderson (D. C.) 244 F. 877, 880; Howell v. State, 138 S. E. 206, 210, 164 Ga. 204; Boston & M. R. R. v. City of Concord, 98 A. 66, 67, 78 N. H. 192; Jackson v. Quarry Realty Co. (Mo. App.) 231 S. W. 1063, 1066; Hoffman v. Franklin Motor Car Co., 122 S. E. 896, 900, 32 Ga. App. 229. "The" house means only one house. Rocci v. Massachusetts Acc. Co., 110 N. E. 972, 973, 222 Mass. 336, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 529.

The fund which has received the benefit should make the satisfaction. 4 Bouv. Inst. note 3730.

The law abhors a multiplicity of suits.

The parties being in pari casu, justice is in equilibrio.

The repeal of the law imposing a penalty is itself a remission.

THEATER. Any edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays, or performances, for admission to which entrance-money is received, not including halls rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representations. Act Cong. July 13, 1866, § 9 (14 Stat. 126). And see Bell v. Mahn, 121 Pa. 225, 15 A. 523, 1 L. R. A. 364, 6 Am. St. Rep. 786; Lee v. State, 56 Ga. 478; Jacko v. State, 22 Ala. 74; *Asa G. App.) 261 S. W. 492, 497; Reese v. State, 239 S. W. 619, 620, 91 Tex. Cr. R. 457.

In Scotch Law

The secret and felonious abstraction of the property of another for sake of lucre, without his consent. Alis. Crim. Law, 250.

THEFT-BOTE. The offense committed by a party who, having been robbed and knowing the felon, takes back his goods again, or receives other amends, upon an agreement not to prosecute. See Forshner v. Whitcomb, 44 N. H. 16.

Theft-bote est emenda furti capta, sine consideratione curiæ domini regis. 3 Inst. 134. Theft-bote is the paying money to have goods stolen returned, without having any respect for the court of the king.

THEGN. An Anglo-Saxon term meaning a retainer. Afterwards it came to designate the territorial nobility. At a later period these were king's thegns, who were persons of great importance, and inferior thegns. Military service appears to have run through it all. After the Conquest, they were merged into the class of knights. Encycl. Br.

THEGNAGE TENURE. A kind of tenure in Northumbria in the 13th century and beyond, of which little is known. 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 132.

THELONIO IRRATIONABILI HABENDO. A writ that formerly lay for him that had any part of the king's demesne in fee-farm, to recover reasonable toll of the king's tenants there, if his demesne had been accustomed to be tolled. Reg. Orig. 87.

THELONIUM. An abolished writ for citizens or burgesses to assert their right to exemption from toll. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 226.

THELONMANNUS. The toll-man or officer who receives toll. Cowell.

THELUSSON ACT. The statute 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 98, which restricted accumulations to a term of twenty-one years from the testator's death. It was passed in consequence of litigation over the will of one Thelussou.

THEME. In Saxon law. The power of having jurisdiction over naifs or villeins, with their suits or offspring, lands, goods, and chattels. Co. Litt. 116a.

THEMMAGIUM. A duty or acknowledgment paid by inferior tenants in respect of theme or team. Cowell.

THEN. This word, as an adverb, means "at that time," referring to a time specified, either past or future. It has no power in itself to fix a time. It simply refers to a time already fixed. Mangum v. Piester, 16 S. C. 329. It may also denote a contingency, and be equivalent to "in that event." Pintard v. Irwin, 20 N. J. Law, 505; Western & A. R. Co. v. Smith, 145 Ga. 276, 88 S. E. 983, 985; Derryberry v. State Board of Election Com'rs, 150 Tenn. 525, 266 S. W. 102, 105; Campbell v. Fetty (C. C. A.) 271 F. 671, 672; Bedell v. Richardson Lubricating Co., 201 Mo. App. 251, 211 S. W. 104, 106; Bischoff v. Atlantic Realty Corporation, 95 S. C. 276, 78 S. E. 988, 993; State v. Klasner, 19 N. M. 474, 145 P. 679, 680, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 824; State v. Archer, 32 N. M. 319, 255 P. 396, 399; First Nat. Bank v. Somers, 106 Conn. 267, 137 A. 737, 739; Munger v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, 176 Iowa, 291, 154 N. W. 879, 880; Oates v. McNeil, 169 Cal. 697, 147 P. 944, 946; Wilcher v. Walker, 144 Ga. 526, 87 S. E. 671, 673; State ex rel. Hanly v. Montgomery, 132 La. 679, 61 So. 735, 736; In re Swift's Estate, 279 Pa. 424, 124 A. 135, 136; Lermond v. Hyler, 121 Me. 54, 115 A. 546, 551; Roberts v. Wadley, 156 Ga. 35, 118 S. E. 664, 665.

THEN AND THERE. At the time and place last previously mentioned or charged. Context, however, may give the phrase a more remote antecedent than the time and place last previously mentioned or charged. Vogrin v. American Steel & Wire Co., 263 Ill. 474, 105 N. E. 332, 333; State v. Mahoney, 115

Me. 251, 98 A. 750, 752; Brogan v. State, 199 Ind. 203, 156 N. E. 515, 516; State v. Taylor (Mo. Sup.) 190 S. W. 330, 332; People v. Petrovich, 116 Misc. 528, 190 N. Y. S. 760, 761; State v. Roe, 37 Idaho, 297, 215 P. 835, 836; Bashara v. State, 84 Tex. Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359, 360; State v. Buckwald, 117 Me. 344, 104 A. 520, 521; State v. Klasner, 19 N. M. 474, 145 P. 679, 680, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 824.

THENCE. In surveying, and in descriptions of land by courses and distances, this word, preceding each course given, imports that the following course is continuous with the one before it. Flagg v. Mascn, 141 Mass. 66, 6 N. E. 702.

THENCE DOWN THE RIVER. The expression, "thence down the river," as used in field notes of a surveyor of a patent, is construed to mean with the meanders of the river, unless there is positive evidence that the meander line as written was where the surveyor in fact ran it; for such lines are to show the general course of the stream and to be used in estimating acreage, and not necessarily boundary lines. Burkett v. Chestnutt (Tex. Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 271, 274.

THEOCRACY. Government of a state by the immediate direction of God, (or by the assumed direction of a supposititious divinity,) or the state thus governed.

THEODEN. In Saxon law. A husbandman or inferior tenant; an under-thane. Cowell.

THEODOSIAN CODE. See Codex Theodosianus.

THEOF. In Saxon law. Offenders who joined in a body of seven to commit depredations. Wharton.

THEOWES, THEOWMEN, or THEWS. In feudal law. Slaves, captives, or bondmen. Spel. Feuds, c. 5.

THERE. In or at that place. Bedell v. Richardson Lubricating Co., 201 Mo. App. 251, 211 S. W. 104, 106.

THEREABOUT. About that place. Austin v. Bluff City Shoe Co., 176 Mo. App. 546, 158 S. W. 709, 713.

THEPEAFTER. After the time last mentioned; after that; after that time; afterward; subsequently; thenceforth. People v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co., 300 Ill. 519, 133 N. E. 217; Lamoutte v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 165 App. Div. 573, 151 N. Y. S. 148, 154; Brandenburg v. Buda Co., 299 Ill. 133, 132 N. E. 514, 516; McAlister v. National Life Ins. Co. of U. S. of America (Mo. App.) 251 S. W. 98, 99; People ex rel. Dare v. Howell, 174 App. Div. 118, 160 N. Y. S. 959, 961.

THEREBY. By that means; in consequence of that. Fall City Ice & Beverage Co. v.

Scanlan Coal Co., 208 Ky. 820, 271 S. W. 1097, 1099.

THEREFOR. For that thing; for it, or them. State v. Dayton Lumber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 391, 398.

THEREIN. In that place. Mulville v. City of San Diego, 183 Cal. 734, 192 P. 702, 703; City Hospital of Quincy v. Inhabitants of Town of Milton, 232 Mass. 273, 122 N. E. 274.

THEREUPON. Without delay or lapse of time. Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 205. See Hill v. Wand, 47 Kan. 340, 27 P. 988, 27 Am. St. Rep. 288. Immediately. 6 M. & W. 492. See 3 Q. B. 79, where the terms thereupon and thereby are distinguished. Following on; in consequence of. Yuma County Water Users' Ass'n v. Schlecht, 262 U. S. 138, 43 S. Ct. 498, 500, 67 L. Ed. 909; Stephens v. Nacey, 47 Mont. 479, 133 P. 361, 362; Atlanta Gaslight Co. v. Sams, 29 Ga. App. 446, 116 S. E. 21, 25.

THESAURER. Treasurer. 3 State Tr. 691.

THESAURUS, THESAURIUM. The treasury; a treasure.

THESAURUS ABSCONDITUS. In old English law. Treasure hidden or buried. Spelman.

Thesaurus competit domino regi, et non domino liberatis, nisi sit per verba specialia. Fitzh. Coron. 281. A treasure belongs to the king, and not to the lord of a liberty, unless it be through special words.

THESAURUS INVENTUS. In old English law. Treasure found; treasure-trove. Bract. fols. 119b, 122.

Thesaurus inventus est vetus dispositio pecuniæ, etc., cujus non extat modo memoria, adeo ut jam dominum non habeat. 3 Inst. 132. Treasure-trove is an ancient hiding of money, etc., of which no recollection exists, so that it now has no owner.

Thesaurus non competit regi, nisi quando nemo scit qui abscondit thesaurum. 3 Inst. 132. Treasure does not belong to the king, unless no one knows who hid it.

Thesaurus regis est vinculum pacis et bellorum nervus. Godb. 293. The king's treasure is the bond of peace and the sinews of war.

THESMOTHETE. A law-maker; a law-giver.

THETHINGA. A tithing.

THIA. Lat. In the civil and old European law. An aunt.

THIEF. One who has been guilty of larceny or theft. The term covers both compound and simple larceny. America Ins. Co. v. Bryan, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 25; People v. Wolf, 199 Ill. App. 445, 446.

THINGS. The most general denomination of the subjects of property, as contradistinguished from persons. 2 Bl. Comm. 16. A term that is particularly subject to the force of context. State v. Japone, 202 Iowa, 450, 209 N. W. 468, 471; In re Arnold's Estate, 240 Pa. 261, 87 A. 590, L. R. A. 1918A, 220, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 23; Feder v. Franklin Simon & Co. (Sup.) 157 N. Y. S. 895, 896; Henderson v. City of Shreveport, 160 La. 360, 107 So. 139, 142; Black v. Commonwealth, 171 Ky. 280, 188 S. W. 362, 363.

The word "estate" in general is applicable to anything of which riches or fortune may consist. The word is likewise relative to the word "things," which is the second object of jurisprudence, the rules of which are applicable to persons, things, and actions. Civ. Code La. art. 448.

Such permanent objects, not being persons, as are sensible, or perceptible through the senses. Aust. Jur. § 452.

A "thing" is the object of a right; i. e., whatever is treated by the law as the object over which one person exercises a right, and with reference to which another person lies under a duty. Holl. Jur. 83.

Things are the subjects of dominion or property, as distinguished from persons. They are distributed into three kinds: (1) Things real or immovable, comprehending lands, tenements, and hereditaments; (2) things personal or movable, comprehending goods and chattels; and (3) things mixed, partaking of the characteristics of the two former, as a title-deed, a term for years. The civil law divided things into corporeal (tangi possunt) and incorporeal (tangi non possunt). Wharton.

THINGS IN ACTION. A thing in action is a right to recover money or other personal property by a judicial proceeding. Civ. Code Cal. § 953. See Chose in Action.

THINGS PERSONAL. Goods, money, and all other movables, which may attend the owner's person wherever he things proper to go. 2 Bl. Comm. 16. Things personal consist of goods, money, and all other movables, and of such rights and profits as relate to movables. 1 Steph. Comm. 156. See People v. Holbrook, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 90; U. S. v. Moulton, 27 Fed. Cas. 11; People v. Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 546; Castle v. Castle (C. C. A.) 267 F. 521, 522.

THINGS REAL. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place; as lands and tenements. 2 Bl. Comm. 16. This definition has been objected to as not embracing incorporeal rights. Mr. Stephen defines things real to "consist of things substantial and immovable, and of the rights and profits annexed to or issuing out of these." 1 Steph. Comm. 156. Things real are otherwise described to consist of lands, tenements, and hereditaments. See Bates v. Sparrell, 10 Mass. 324; People v. Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 546; Sox v. Miracle, 35 N. D. 458, 160 N. W. 716, 719.

Things accessory are of the nature of the principal. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 25.

Things are construed according to that which was the cause thereof. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 4.

Things are dissolved as they be contracted. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 7.

Things grounded upon an ill and void beginning cannot have a good perfection. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, n. 8.

Things in action, entry, or re-entry cannot be granted over. Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N. Y. 100, 103.

Things incident cannot be severed. Finch, Law, b. 3, c. 1, n. 12.

Things incident pass by the grant of the principal. Seymour v. Canandaigua & N. F. R. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 284, 310.

Things incident shall pass by the grant of the principal, but not the principal by the grant of the incident. Co. Litt. 152a, 151b; Broom, Max. 433.

Things shall not be void which may possibly be good.

THINGUS. In Saxon law. A thane or nobleman; knight or freeman. Cowell.

THINK. To believe, to consider, to esteem; to recollect or call to mind. Martin v. Iowa Ry. Co., 59 Iowa, 414, 13 N. W. 424; Jones v. Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., 285 Pa. 317, 132 A. 122, 123; Abbott v. Church, 288 Ill. 91, 123 N. E. 306, 308, 4 A. L. R. 975; E. Matthews & Son v. Richards, 19 Ga. App. 489, 91 S. E. 914.

THIRD. Following next after the second; also, with reference to any legal instrument or transaction or judicial proceeding, any outsider or person not a party to the affair nor immediately concerned in it.

—Third opposition. In Louisiana, when an execution is levied on property which does not belong to the defendant, but to an outsider, the remedy of the owner is by an intervention called a "third opposition," in which, on his giving security, an injunction or prohibition may be granted to stop the sale. See New Orleans v. Louisiana Const. Co., 129 U. S. 45, 9 S. Ct. 223, 32 L. Ed. 607; Norton v. Walton (C. C. A.) 288 F. 359, 360.

—Third parties. See Party.

—Third penny. A portion (one-third) of the amount of all fines and other profits of the county court, which was reserved for the earl, in the early days when the jurisdiction of those courts was extensive, the remainder going to the king.

—Third possessor. In Louisiana, a person who buys mortgaged property, but without assuming the payment of the mortgage. Thompson v. Levy, 50 La. Ann. 751, 23 So. 913; New Orleans Land Co. v. Southern States Fair-Pan-American Exposition Co., 143 La. 884, 79 So. 525, 526.

THIRD-NIGHT-AWN-HINDE. By the laws of St. Edward the Confessor, if any man lay a third night in an inn, he was called a "third-night-awn-hinde," and his host was answerable for him if he committed any offense. The first night, forman-night, or uncouth, (unknown,) he was reckoned a stranger; the second night, twa-night, a guest; and the third night, an awn-hinde, a domestic. Bract. l. 3.

THIRDBOROUGH, or THIRDBOROW. An under-constable. Cowell.

THIRDINGS. The third part of the corn growing on the land, due to the lord for a heriot on the death of his tenant, within the manor of Turfat, in Hereford. Blount.

THIRDS. The designation, in colloquial language, of that portion of a decedent's personal estate (one-third) which goes to the widow where there is also a child or children. See Yeomans v. Stevens, 2 Allen (Mass.) 350; O'Hara v. Dever, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 614.

THIRLAGE. In Scotch law. A servitude by which lands are astricted or "thirled" to a particular mill, to which the possessors must carry the grain of the growth of the astricted lands to be ground, for the payment of such duties as are either expressed or implied in the constitution of the right. Ersk. Inst. 2, 9, 18.

THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES. See Articles of Religion.

THIS. When "this" and "that" refer to different things before expressed, "this" refers to the thing last mentioned, and "that" to the thing first mentioned. Russell v. Kennedy, 66 Pa. 251. "This" is a demonstrative adjective, used to point out with particularity a person or thing present in place or in thought. Stevens v. Haile (Tex. Civ. App.) 162 S. W. 1025, 1028.

THIS DAY SIX MONTHS. Fixing "this day six months," or "three months," for the next stage of a bill, is one of the modes in which the house of lords and the house of commons reject bills of which they disapprove. A bill rejected in this manner cannot be reintroduced in the same session. Wharton.

THISTLE-TAKE. It was a custom within the manor of Halton, in Chester, that if, in driving beasts over a common, the driver permitted them to graze or take but a thistle, he should pay a halfpenny a-piece to the lord of the fee. And at Fiskerton, in Nottinghamshire, by ancient custom, if a native or a cottager killed a swine above a year old, he paid to the lord a penny, which purchase of leave to kill a hog was also called "thistle-take." Cowell.

THOROUGHFARE. The term means, according to its derivation, a street or passage through which one can fare, (travel;) that is, a street or highway affording an unobstructed exit at each end into another street or public passage. If the passage is closed at one end, admitting no exit there, it is called a "cul de sac." See Cemetery Ass'n v. Meninger, 14 Kan. 315; Mankato v. Warren, 20 Minn. 150 (Gil. 128); Wiggins v. Tallmadge, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 462; Morris v. Blunt, 49 Utah, 243, 161 P. 1127, 1130; Simmons v. State, 149 Ark. 348, 232 S. W. 597, 598; In re Wallace, Barnes, and Matthews Aves. in City of New York, 222 N. Y. 139, 118 N. E. 506, 507.

THRAVE. In old English law. A measure of corn or grain, consisting of twenty-four sheaves or four shocks, six sheaves to every shock. Cowell.

THREAD. A middle line; a line running through the middle of a stream or road. See Filum; Filum Aquæ; Filum Viæ; Thalweg.

THREAT. In criminal law. A menace; especially, any menace of such a nature and extent as to unsettle the mind of the person on whom it operates, and to take away from his acts that free and voluntary action which alone constitutes consent. Abbott. United States v. French (D. C.) 243 F. 785, 786; State v. Kramer, 115 A. 8, 11, 1 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 454; State v. Cushing, 17 Wash. 544, 50 P. 512; State v. Brownlee, 84 Iowa, 473, 51 N. W. 25; Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 28 A. 190, 23 L. R. A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686.

A declaration of one's purpose or intention to work injury to the person, property, or rights of another, with a view of restraining such person's freedom of action. McKenzie v. State, 113 Neb. 576, 204 N. W. 60, 61; United States v. Metzendorf (D. C.) 252 F. 933, 937; United States v. Jasick (D. C.) 252 F. 931, 932; Brooker v. Silverthorne, 111 S. C. 553, 99 S. E. 350, 352, 5 A. L. R. 1283; Kamenitsky v. Corcoran, 177 App. Div. 605, 164 N. Y. S. 297, 300.

THREATENING LETTERS. Sending threatening letters is the name of the offense of sending letters containing threats of the kinds recognized by the statute as criminal. See People v. Griffin, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 429.

THREE-WEEKS COURT. In the Kentish custom of gavellet, it was the lord's court. 18 Harv. L. R. 40.

THRENGES. Vassals, but not of the lowest degree; those who held lands of the chief lord.

THRITHING. In Saxon and old English law. The third part of a county; a division of a county consisting of three or more hundreds. Cowell. Corrupted to the modern "riding," which is still used in Yorkshire. 1 Bl. Comm. 116.

THROUGH. By means of, in consequence of, by reason of; in, within; over; from end to end, or from one side to the other. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Pace, 109 Miss. 667, 68 So. 926, 927; Rieger v. London Guarantee & Accident Co. of London, England, 202 Mo. App. 184, 215 S. W. 920, 926; Manufacturers' Nat. Bank of Troy v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 218 App. Div. 455, 218 N. Y. E. 627.

THROUGH LOT. A lot that abuts upon a street at each end. Illinois Surety Co. v. O'Brien (C. C. A.) 223 F. 933, 938.

THROW OUT. To ignore (a bill of indictment.)

THRUSTING. Within the meaning of a criminal statute, "thrusting" is not necessarily an attack with a pointed weapon; it means pushing or driving with force, whether the point of the weapon be sharp or not. State v. Lowry, 33 La. Ann. 1224.

THRYMSA. A Saxon coin worth fourpence. Du Fresne.

THUDE-WEALD. A woodward, or person that looks after a wood.

THURINGIAN CODE. One of the "barbarian codes," as they are termed; supposed by Montesquieu to have been given by Theodoric, king of Austrasia, to the Thuringians, who were his subjects. Esprit des Lois, lib. 28, c. 1.

THWERTNICK. In old English law. The custom of giving entertainments to a sheriff, etc., for three nights.

TICK. A colloquial expression for credit or trust; credit given for goods purchased.

TICKET.

In Contracts

A slip of paper containing a certificate that the person to whom it is issued, or the holder, is entitled to some right or privilege therein mentioned or described; such, for example, are railroad tickets, theater tickets, pawn tickets, lottery tickets, etc. See Allaire v. Howell Works Co., 14 N. J. Law, 24; Summerfield v. Hines, 45 Nev. 60, 197 P. 690, 692; Norman v. East Carolina Ry. Co., 161 N. C. 330, 77 S. E. 345, 347, Ann. Cas. 1914D, 917; Interstate Amusement Co. v. Martin, 8 Ala. App. 481, 62 So. 404, 405.

In Election Law

A list of candidates for particular offices to be submitted to the voters at an election; a ballot. Barr v. Cardell, 173 Iowa, 18, 155 N. W. 312, 313; Denny v. Pratt, 104 Conn. 396, 133 A. 107, 109; In re Gerberich's Nomination, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 255.

"Before the opening of the polls, * * * the county clerk of the county shall cause to be delivered to the boards of election * * * the proper number of general tickets, * * * in sealed packages, with marks on the outside clearly designating the precinct or polling-place for which they are intended, and the number of ballots inclosed, and in case of a consolidated city and county, also a like number of municipal tickets * * *." Pol. Code Cal. § 1201.

TICKET OF LEAVE. In English law. A license or permit given to a convict, as a reward for good conduct, particularly in the penal settlements, which allows him to go at large, and labor for himself, before the expiration of his sentence, subject to certain specific conditions and revocable upon subsequent misconduct.

TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN. A convict who has obtained a ticket of leave.

TIDAL. In order that a river may be "tidal" at a given spot, it may not be necessary that the water should be salt, but the spot must be one where the tide, in the ordinary and regular course of things, flows and reflows. 8 Q. B. Div. 630.

TIDE. The ebb and flow of the sea. See Baird v. Campbell, 67 App. Div. 104, 73 N. Y. S. 617.

Neap Tides

Those tides which happen between the full and change of the moon twice in every 24 hours. F. A. Hihn Co. v. City of Santa Cruz, 170 Cal. 430, 150 P. 62, 65.

Tide Lands

See Land.

Tide-water

Water which falls and rises with the ebb and flow of the tide. The term is not usually applied to the open sea, but to coves, bays, rivers, etc.

Tideway

That land between high and low water mark. In re Inwood Hill Park in Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, 217 App. Div. 587, 217 N. Y. S. 359, 363.

TIDESMEN, in English law, are certain officers of the custom-house, appointed to watch or attend upon ships till the customs are paid; and they are so called because they go aboard the ships at their arrival in the mouth of the Thames, and come up with the tide. Jacob.

TIE, v. To bind. "The parson is not tied to find the parish clerk." 1 Leon. 94.

TIE, n. When, at an election, neither candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, but each has the same number, there is said to be a "tie." So when the number of votes cast in favor of any measure, in a legislative or deliberative body, is equal to the number cast against it. See Wooster v. Mullins, 64 Conn. 340, 30 A. 144, 25 L. R. A. 694.

TIEL. L. Fr. Such. Nul tiel record, no such record.

TIEMPO INHABIL. Span. A time of inability; a time when the person is not able to pay his debts, (when, for instance, he may not alienate property to the prejudice of his creditors.) The term is used in Louisiana. Brown v. Kenner, 3 Mart. O. S. (La.) 270; Thorn v. Morgan, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 292, 16 Am. Dec. 173.

TIERCE. L. Fr. Third. Tierce mein, third hand. Britt. c. 120.

TIERCE. A liquid measure, containing the third part of a pipe, or forty-two gallons.

TIGH. In old records. A close or inclosure; a croft. Cowell.

TIGHT. As colloquially applied to a note, bond, mortgage, lease, etc., this term signifies that the clauses providing the creditor's remedy in case of default (as, by foreclosure, execution, distress, etc.) are summary and stringent.

TIGNI IMMITTENDI. Lat. In the civil law. The name of a servitude which is the right of inserting a beam or timber from the wall of one house into that of a neighboring house, in order that it may rest on the latter, and that the wall of the latter may bear this weight. Wharton. See Dig. 8, 2, 36.

TIGNUM. Lat. A civil-law term for building material; timber.

TIHLER. In old Saxon law. An accusation.

TILLAGE. A place tilled or cultivated; land under cultivation, as opposed to lands lying fallow or in pasture.

TIMBER. Wood felled for building or other such like use. In a legal sense it generally means (in England) oak, ash, and elm, but in some parts of England, and generally in America, it is used in a wider sense, which is recognized by the law.

The term "timber," as used in commerce, refers generally only to large sticks of wood, squared or capable of being squared for building houses or vessels; and certain trees only having been formerly used for such purposes, namely, the oak, the ash, and the elm, they alone were recognized as timber trees. But the numerous uses to which wood has come to be applied, and the general employment of all kinds of trees for some valuable purpose, has wrought a change in the general acceptance of terms in connection therewith, and we find that Webster defines "timber" to be "that sort of wood which is proper for buildings or for tools, utensils, furniture, carriages, fences, ships, and the like." This would include all sorts of wood from which any useful articles may be made, or which may be used to advantage in any class of manufacture or construction. U. S. v. Stores (C. C.) 14 F. 824. And see Donworth v. Sawyer, 94 Me. 243, 47 A. 523; Wilson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 393; U. S. v. Soto, 7 Ariz. 230, 64 P. 420; Great Southern Lumber Co. v. Newsom Bros., 129 Miss. 158, 91 So. 864, 865; Ladnier v. Ingram Day Lumber Co., 135 Miss. 632, 100 So. 369, 370; Colleton Mercantile & Mfg. Co. v. Gruber (D. Patrick's Adm'r*, 161 Ky. 333, 170 S. W. 960, 961.

TIMBER CULTURE ENTRY. See Entry.

TIMBER-TREES. Oak, ash, elm, in all places, and, by local custom, such other trees as are used in building. 2 Bl. Comm. 281.

TIMBERLODE. A service by which tenants were bound to carry timber felled from the woods to the lord's house. Cowell.

TIME. The measure of duration.

The word is expressive both of a precise point or terminus and of an interval between two points.

In Pleading

A point in or space of duration at or during which some fact is alleged to have been committed.

In General

—Cooling time. See that title.

—Reasonable time. Such length of time as may fairly, properly, and reasonably be allowed or required, having regard to the nature of the act or duty, or of the subject-matter, and to the attending circumstances. It is a maxim of English law that "how long a 'reasonable time' ought to be is not defined in law, but is left to the discretion of the judges." Co. Litt. 50. See Hoggins v. Becraft, 1 Dana (Ky.) 28; Hill v. Hobart, 16 Me. 168; Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 591, 23 L. Ed. 328; Campbell v. Whoriskey, 170 Mass. 63, 48 N. E. 1070; *Citizens' Bank Bldg. v. S. 211, 213; In re Hellams (D. C.) 223 F. 460, 461; Henderson v. Daniels, 62 Mont. 363, 205 P. 964, 967; Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. Boden (Tex. Civ. App.) 286 S. W. 330, 331; Smith Sand & Gravel Co. v. Corbin, 81 Wash. 494, 142 P. 1163, 1166; Hearne v. Fischer Lime & Cement Co., 220 Ky. 791, 295 S. W. 1012, 1013; Lumbermen's Reciprocal Ass'n v. Warren (Tex. Civ. App.) 272 S. W. 826, 827; Simmons v. Western Indemnity Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 713, 715.

—Time-bargain. In the language of the stock exchange, a time-bargain is an agreement to buy or sell stock at a future time, or within a fixed time, at a certain price. It is in reality nothing more than a bargain to pay differences.

—Time check. A certificate signed by a master mechanic or other person in charge of laborers, reciting the amount due to the laborer for labor for a specified time. Burlington Voluntary Relief Dept. v. White, 41 Neb. 547, 59 N. W. 747, 43 Am. St. Rep. 701; Gerlach v. North Texas & S. F. Ry. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 244 S. W. 662, 666.

—Time immemorial. Time whereof the memory of a man is not to the contrary.

—Time of memory. In English law. Time commencing from the beginning of the reign of Richard I. 2 Bl. Comm. 31. Lord Coke defines time of memory to be "when no man alive hath had any proof to the contrary, nor hath any consance to the contrary." Co. Litt. 86a, 86b.

—Time out of memory. Time beyond memory; time out of mind; time to which memory does not extend.

—Time-policy. A policy of marine insurance in which the risk is limited, not to a given voyage, but to a certain fixed term or period of time.

—Time the essence of the contract. A case in which "time is of the essence of the contract" is one where the parties evidently contemplated a punctual performance, at the precise time named, as vital to the agreement, and one of its essential elements. Time is not of the essence of the contract in any case where a moderate delay in performance would not be regarded as an absolute violation of the contract.

TIMOCRACY. An aristocracy of property; government by men of property who are possessed of a certain income.

Timores vani sunt æstimandi qui non cadunt in constantem virum. 7 Coke, 17. Fears which do not assail a resolute man are to be accounted vain.

TINBOUNDING is a custom regulating the manner in which tin is obtained from waste-land, or land which has formerly been waste-land, within certain districts in Cornwall and Devon. The custom is described in the leading case on the subject as follows: "Any person may enter on the waste-land of another, and may mark out by four corner boundaries a certain area. A written description of the plot of land so marked out with metes and bounds, and the name of the person, is recorded in the local stannaries court, and is proclaimed on three successive court-days. If no objection is sustained by any other person, the court awards a writ to the bailiff to deliver possession of the said 'bounds of tin-work' to the 'bounder,' who thereupon has the exclusive right to search for, dig, and take for his own use all tin and tin-ore within the inclosed limits, paying as a royalty to the owner of the waste a certain proportion of the produce under the name of 'toll-tin.'" 10 Q. B. 26, cited in Elton Commons, 113. The right of tinbounding is not a right of common, but is an interest in land, and, in Devonshire, a corporeal hereditament. In Cornwall tin bounds are personal estate. Sweet.

TINEL. L. Fr. A place where justice was administered. Kelham.

TINEMAN. Sax. In old forest law. A petty officer of the forest who had the care of vert and venison by night, and performed other servile duties.

TINET. In old records. Brush-wood and thorns for fencing and hedging. Cowell; Blount.

TINEWALD. The ancient parliament or annual convention in the Isle of Man, held upon Midsummer-day, at St. John's chapel. Cowell.

TINKERMEN. Fishermen who destroyed the young fry on the river Thames by nets and unlawful engines. Cowell.

TINNELUS. In old Scotch law. The sea-mark; high-water mark. Tide-mouth. Skene.

TINPENNY. A tribute paid for the liberty of digging in tin-mines. Cowell.

TINSEL OF THE FEU. In Scotch law. The loss of the feu, from allowing two years of feu duty to run into the third unpaid. Bell.

TIPLING HOUSE. A place where intoxicating drinks are sold in drams or small quantities to be drunk on the premises, and where men resort for drinking purposes. See Leesburg v. Putnam, 103 Ga. 110, 29 S. E. 602; Morrison v. Com., 7 Dana (Ky.) 219; Patten v. Centralia, 47 Ill. 370; Hussey v. State, 69 Ga. 58; Emporia v. Volmer, 12 Kan. 629;

Mohrman v. State, 32 S. E. 143, 105 Ga. 709, 43 L. R. A. 398, 70 Am. St. Rep. 74.

TIPSTAFF.

In English Law

An officer appointed by the marshal of the king's bench to attend upon the judges with a kind of rod or staff tipped with silver, who take into their custody all prisoners, either committed or turned over by the judges at their chambers, etc. Jacob.

In American Law

An officer appointed by the court, whose duty is to wait upon the court when it is in session, preserve order, serve process, guard juries, etc.

TITHER. One who gathers tithes.

TITHES. In English law. The tenth part of the increase, yearly arising and renewing from the profits of lands, the stock upon lands, and the personal industry of the inhabitants. 2 Bl. Comm. 24. A species of incorporeal hereditament, being an ecclesiastical inheritance collateral to the estate of the land, and due only to an ecclesiastical person by ecclesiastical law. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. § 133.

Great Tithes

In English ecclesiastical law. Tithes of corn, peas and beans, hay and wood. 2 Chit. Bl. Comm. 24, note; 3 Steph. Comm. 127.

Mixed Tithes

Those which arise not immediately from the ground, but from those things which are nourished by the ground, e. g., colts, chickens, calves, milk, eggs, etc. 3 Burn, Ecc. Law, 380; 2 Bl. Comm. 24.

Minute Tithes

Small tithes, such as usually belong to a vicar, as of wool, lambs, pigs, butter, cheese, herbs, seeds, eggs, honey, wax, etc.

Personal Tithes

Personal tithes are tithes paid of such profits as come by the labor of a man's person; as by buying and selling, gains of merchandise and handicrafts, etc. Tomlins.

Predial Tithes

Such as arise immediately from the ground; as, grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruits, and herbs.

Tithe-Free

Exempted from the payment of tithes.

Tithe Rent-Charge

A rent-charge established in lieu of tithes, under the tithes commutation act, 1836, (St. 6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 71.) As between landlord and tenant, the tenant paying the tithe rent-charge is entitled, in the absence of express agreement, to deduct it from his rent, under section 70 of the above act. And a tithe rent-charge unpaid is recoverable by distress as rent in arrear. Mozley & Whitley.

TITHING. One of the civil divisions of England, being a portion of that greater division called a "hundred." It was so called because ten freeholders with their families composed one. It is said that they were all knit together in one society, and bound to the king for the peaceable behavior of each other. In each of these societies there was one chief or principal person, who, from his office, was called "teothing-man," now "tithing-man." Brown.

TITHING-MAN.

In Saxon Law

The head or chief of a tithing or decennary of ten families; he was to decide all lesser causes between neighbors. Jacob, Law Dict. In modern English law, he is the same as an under-constable or peace-officer.

In Modern Law

A constable. "After the introduction of justices of the peace, the offices of constable and tithing-man became so similar that we now regard them as precisely the same." Willc. Const. Introd.

In New England

A parish officer annually elected to preserve good order in the church during divine service, and to make complaint of any disorderly conduct. Webster, Dict.

TITHING-PENNY. In Saxon and old English law. Money paid to the sheriff by the several tithings of his county. Cowell.

TITIUS. In Roman law. A proper name, frequently used in designating an indefinite or fictitious person, or a person referred to by way of illustration. "Titius" and "Seius," in this use, correspond to "John Doe" and "Richard Roe," or to "A. B." and "C. D."

TITLE. The radical meaning of this word appears to be that of a mark, style, or designation; a distinctive appellation; the name by which anything is known. Thus, in the law of persons, a title is an appellation of dignity or distinction, a name denoting the social rank of the person bearing it; as "duke" or "count." So, in legislation, the title of a statute is the heading or preliminary part, furnishing the name by which the act is individually known. It is usually prefixed to the statute in the form of a brief summary of its contents; as "An act for the prevention of gaming." State v. Thomas, 301 Mo. 603, 256 S. W. 1028, 1029. Again, the title of a patent is the short description of the invention, which is copied in the letters patent from the inventor's petition; e. g., "a new and improved method of drying and preparing malt." Johns. Pat. Man. 90.

In the Law of Trade-Marks

A title may become a subject of property; as one who has adopted a particular title for a newspaper, or other business enterprise, may, by long and prior user, or by compliance with statutory provisions as to registration and notice, acquire a right to be protected in the exclusive use of it. Abbott.

The title of a book, or any literary composition, is its name; that is, the heading or caption prefixed to it, and disclosing the distinctive appellation by which it is to be known. This usually comprises a brief description of its subject-matter and the name of its author.

"Title" is also used as the name of one of the subdivisions employed in many literary works, standing intermediate between the divisions denoted by the term "books" or "parts," and those designated as "chapters" and "sections."

In Real Property Law

Title is the means whereby the owner of lands has the just possession of his property. Co. Litt. 345; 2 Bl. Comm. 195; Horney v. Price, 189 N. C. 820, 128 S. E. 321, 323; Hahn v. Fletcher, 189 N. C. 729, 128 S. E. 326, 327; Stewart v. Patterson (Tex. Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 768, 770; Brady v. Carteret Realty Co., 82 N. J. Eq. 620, 90 A. 257, 258, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 1093; Wimpey v. Ledford (Mo. Sup.) 11 A. L. R. 7, 177 S. W. 302, 304.

Title is the means whereby a person's right to property is established. Code Ga. 1882, § 2348 (Civ. Code 1910, § 3796).

Title may be defined generally to be the evidence of right which a person has to the possession of property. The word "title" certainly does not merely signify the right which a person has to the possession of property; because there are many instances in which a person may have the right to the possession of property, and at the same time have no title to the same. In its ordinary legal acceptation, however, it generally seems to imply a right of possession also. It therefore, appears, on the whole, to signify the outward evidence of the right, rather than the mere right itself. Thus, when it is said that the "most imperfect degree of title consists in the mere naked possession or actual occupation of an estate," it means that the mere circumstance of occupying the estate is the weakest species of evidence of the occupier's right to such possession. The word is defined by Sir Edward Coke thus: Titulus est justa causa possidendi id quod nostrum est, (1 Inst. 34;) that is to say, the ground whether purchase, gift, or other such ground of acquiring; "titulus" being distinguished in this respect from "modus acquirendi," which is the traditio, i. e., delivery or conveyance of the thing. Brown.

Title is when a man hath lawful cause of entry into lands, whereof another is seised; and it signifies also the means whereby a man comes to lands or tenements, as by feoffment, last will and testament, etc. The word "title" includes a right, but is the more general word. Every right is a title, though every title is not a right for which an action lies. Jacob.

nill v. Coles, 81 Va. 383; Hunt v. Eaton, 55 Mich. 362, 21 N. W. 429; Loventhal v. Home Ins. Co., 112 Ala. 108, 20 South. 419, 33 L. R. A. 258, 57 Am. St. Rep. 17; Irving v. Brownell, 11 Ill. 414; Roberts v. Wentworth, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 193; Campfield v. Johnson, 21 N. J. Law, 85; Pratt v. Fountain, 73 Ga. 262.

A title is a lawful cause or ground of possessing that which is ours. An interest, though primarily it includes the terms "estate," "right," and "title," has latterly come often to mean less, and to be the same as "concern," "share," and the like. Merrill v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 73 N. Y. 456, 29 Am. Rep. 184.

The investigation of titles is one of the principal branches of conveyancing and in that practice the word "title" has acquired the sense of "history," rather than of "right." Thus, we speak of an abstract of title, and of investigating a title, and describe a document as forming part of the title to property. Sweet.

In Pleading

The right of action which the plaintiff has. The declaration must show the plaintiff's title, and, if such title be not shown in that instrument, the defect cannot be cured by any of the future pleadings. Bac. Abr. "Pleas," etc., B 1.

In Procedure

Every action, petition, or other proceeding has a title, which consists of the name of the court in which it is pending, the names of the parties, etc. Administration actions are further distinguished by the name of the deceased person whose estate is being administered. Every pleading, summons, affidavit, etc., commences with the title. In many cases it is sufficient to give what is called the "short title" of an action, namely, the court, the reference to the record, and the surnames of the first plaintiff and the first defendant. Sweet.

In General

—Absolute title. As applied to title to land, an "absolute" title means an exclusive title, or at least a title which excludes all others not compatible with it; an absolute title to land cannot exist at the same time in different persons or in different governments. Johnson v. McIntosh, 8 Wheat. 543, 588, 5 L. Ed. 681.

—Abstract of title. See that title.

—Adverse title. A title set up in opposition to or defeasance of another title, or one acquired or claimed by adverse possession.

—Bond for title. See Bond.

—Chain of title. See that title.

—Clear title, good title, merchantable title, marketable title, are synonymous; "clear title" meaning that the land is free from incumbrances, "good title" being one free from litigation, palpable defects, and grave doubts, comprising both legal and equitable titles and fairly deducible of record. Ogg v. Herman, 71 Mont. 10, 227 P. 476, 477; Veselka v. Forres

(Tex. Civ. App.) 283 S. W. 303, 306; Sipe v. Greenfield, 116 Okl. 241, 244 P. 424, 425.

—Clear title of record, or clear record title, means freedom from apparent defects, grave doubts, and litigious uncertainties, and is such title as a reasonably prudent person, with full knowledge, would accept. A title dependent for its validity on extraneous evidence, ex parte affidavits, or written guaranties against the results of litigation is not a clear title of record, and is not such title as equity will require a purchaser to accept. Ammerman v. Karnowski, 109 Okl. 156, 234 P. 774, 776; Cleval v. Sullivan, 258 Mass. 348, 154 N. E. 920, 921.

—Color of title. See that title.

—Covenants for title. Covenants usually inserted in a conveyance of land, on the part of the grantor, and binding him for the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred to the grantee. They comprise "covenants for seisin, for right to convey, against incumbrances, for quiet enjoyment, sometimes for further assurance, and almost always of warranty." Rawle, Cov. § 21.

—Doubtful title. See that title.

—Equitable title. An equitable title is a right in the party to whom it belongs to have the legal title transferred to him; or the beneficial interest of one person whom equity regards as the real owner, although the legal title is vested in another. Thygerson v. Whitbeck, 5 Utah, 406, 16 P. 403; Beringer v. Lutz, 188 Pa. 364, 41 A. 643; Hegstad v. Wysiecki, 178 App. Div. 733, 165 N. Y. S. 898, 900; Tanner v. Imle (Tex. Civ. App.) 253 S. Mason*, 120 Tenn. 668, 115 S. W. 1146, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1101; Niles v. Anderson, 5 How. (Miss.) 365, 385, quoted in Ayres v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 385, 413. See Equitable Estate.

—Imperfect title. One which requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass the fee in land, or which does not convey full and absolute dominion. Paschal v. Perez, 7 Tex. 367; Paschal v. Dangerfield, 37 Tex. 300; Lambert v. Gant (Tex. Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 548, 551.

—Legal title. One cognizable or enforceable in a court of law, or one which is complete and perfect so far as regards the apparent right of ownership and possession, but which carries no beneficial interest in the property, another person being equitably entitled thereto; in either case, the antithesis of "equitable title." Wheeler v. Ballard, 91 Kan. 354, 137

P. 789, 790; Burnham v. Hardy Oil Co., 108 Tex. 555, 195 S. W. 1139, 1141; Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Ainsworth (Tex. Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 614, 617; Tobin v. Gartiez, 44 Nev. 179, 191 P. 1063, 1064; Union Tanning Co. v. Lowe, 148 Tenn. 407, 255 S. W. 712, 714.

—Lucrative title. In the civil law, title acquired without the giving of anything in exchange for it; the title by which a person acquires anything which comes to him as a clear gain, as, for instance, by gift, descent, or devise. Opposed to "onerous title," as to which see infra.

—Marketable title. See that title.

—Onerous title. In the civil law, title to property acquired by the giving of a valuable consideration for it, such as the payment of money, the rendition of services, the performance of conditions, the assumption of obligations, or the discharge of liens on the property; opposed to "lucrative" title, or one acquired by gift or otherwise without the giving of an equivalent. See Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 471; Kircher v. Murray (C. C. A.) 54 F. 624; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 453; Rev. Civ. Code La. 1900, art. 3556, subd. 22.

—Paper title. A title to land evidenced by a conveyance or chain of conveyances; the term generally implying that such title, while it has color or plausibility, is without substantial validity.

—Passive title. In Scotch law. A title incurred by an heir in heritage who does not enter as heir in the regular way, and therefore incurs liability for all the debts of the decedent, irrespective of the amount of assets. Pater-son.

—Perfect title. Various meanings have been attached to this term: (1) One which shows the absolute right of possession and of property in a particular person. Henderson v. Beatty, 124 Iowa, 163, 99 N. W. 716; Converse v. Kellogg, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 590; Wilcox Lumber Co. v. Bullock, 109 Ga. 532, 35 S. E. 52; Donovan v. Pitcher, 53 Ala. 411, 25 Am. Rep. 634. (2) A grant of land which requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land taking effect at once. Hancock v. McKinney, 7 Tex. 457. (3) A title which does not disclose a patent defect suggesting the possibility of a lawsuit to defend it; a title such as a well-informed and prudent man paying full value for the property would be willing to take. Birge v. Bock, 44 Mo. App. 77. (4) A title which is good both at law and in equity. Warner v. Middlesex Mut. Assur Co., 21 Conn. 449. (5) One which is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt. Sheehy v. Miles, 93 Cal. 288, 28 P. 1046; Reynolds v. Borel, 86 Cal. 538, 25 P. 67. (6) A marketable or merchantable title. Ross v. Smiley, 18 Colo. App. 204, 70 P. 766; McCleary v. Chipman, 32 Ind. App. 489, 68 N. E. 320.

—Presumptive title. A barely presumptive title, which is of the very lowest order, arises out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property, (jus possessionis), without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue such possession.

—Record title. See Record.

—Singular title. The title by which a party acquires property as a singular successor.

—Tax title. See Tax.

—Title-deeds. Deeds which constitute or are the evidence of title to lands.

—Title by prescription. The right which a possessor acquires to property by reason of the continuance of his possession for a period of time fixed by law. Civil Code 1910, § 4163. Walker v. Steffes, 139 Ga. 520, 77 S. E. 580.

—Title insurance. See Insurance.

—Title of a cause. The distinctive appellation by which any cause in court, or other juridical proceeding, is known and discriminated from others.

—Title of an act. The heading, or introductory clause, of a statute, wherein is briefly recited its purpose or nature, or the subject to which it relates.

—Title of clergymen, (to orders.) Some certain place where they may exercise their functions; also an assurance of being preferred to some ecclesiastical benefice. 2 Steph. Comm. 661.

—Title of declaration. That preliminary clause of a declaration which states the name of the court and the term to which the process is returnable.

—Title of entry. The right to enter upon lands. Cowell.

—Title to orders. In English ecclesiastical law, a title to orders is a certificate of preferment or provision required by the thirty-third canon, in order that a person may be admitted into holy orders, unless he be a fellow or chaplain in Oxford or Cambridge, or master of arts of five years' standing in either of the universities, and living there at his sole charges; or unless the bishop himself intends shortly to admit him to some benefice or curacy. 2 Steph. Comm. 661.

TITULADA. In Spanish law. Title. White, New Recop. b. 1, tit 5, c. 3, § 2.

TITULARS OF ERECTION. Persons who in Scotland, after the Reformation, obtained grants from the crown of the monasteries and priories then erected into temporal lordships. Thus the titles formerly held by the religious houses, as well as the property of the lands, were conferred on these grantees, who were also called "lords of erection" and "titulars of the teinds." Bell.

TITULUS. Lat.

In the Civil Law

Title; the source or ground of possession; the means whereby possession of a thing is acquired, whether such possession be lawful or not.

In Old Ecclesiastical Law

A temple or church; the material edifice. So called because the priest in charge of it derived therefrom his name and title. Spelman.

Titulus est justa causa possidendi id quod nostrum est; dicitur a tuendo. 8 Coke, 153. A title is the just right of possessing that which is our own; it is so called from "tuendo," defending.

TO. This is ordinarily a word of exclusion, when used in describing premises; it excludes the terminus mentioned. Montgomery v. Reed, 69 Me. 514; Littlefield v. Hubbard, 120 Me. 226, 113 A. 304, 306; Sinford v. Watts, 123 Me. 230, 122 A. 573, 574; Skeritt Inv. Co. v. City of Englewood, 79 Colo. 645, 248 P. 6, 8. It may be a word of inclusion, and may also mean "into." People v. Poole, 284 Ill. 39, 119 N. E. 916, 917; Thompson v. Reynolds, 59 Utah, 416, 204 P. 516, 518; Brandenburg v. Buda Co., 299 Ill. 133, 132 N. E. 514, 516; U. S. v. Alaska Consol. Canneries (D. C.) 2 F.(2d) 614, 616.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD. The words in a conveyance which show the estate intended to be conveyed. Thus, in a conveyance of land in fee-simple, the grant is to "A. and his heirs, to have and to hold the said [land] unto and to the use of the said A., his heirs and assigns forever." Williams, Real Prop. 198.

Strictly speaking, however, the words "to have" denote the estate to be taken, while the words "to hold" signify that it is to be held of some superior lord, i. e., by way of tenure, (q. v.). The former clause is called the "habendum," the latter, the "tenendum." Co. Litt. 6a.

TO WIT. That is to say; namely; scilicet; videlicet. Spears v. Wise, 187 Ala. 346, 65 So. 786; Williams v. Shows, 187 Ala. 132, 65 So. 839, 840; J. R. Kilgore & Son v. Shannon & Co., 6 Ala. App. 537, 60 So. 520, 525.

TOALIA. In feudal law. A towel. There is a tenure of lands by the service of waiting with a towel at the king's coronation. Cowell.

TOBACCONIST. Any person, firm, or corporation whose business it is to manufacture cigars, snuff, or tobacco in any form. Act of congress of July 13, 1866, § 9 (14 Stat. 120).

TOFT. A place or piece of ground on which a house formerly stood, which has been destroyed by accident or decay. 2 Broom & H. Comm. 17.

TOFTMAN. In old English law. The owner of a toft. Cowell; Spelman.

TOGATI. Lat. In Roman law. Advocates; so called under the empire because they were required, when appearing in court to plead a cause, to wear the toga, which had then ceased to be the customary dress in Rome. Vicat.

TOKEN. A sign or mark; a material evidence of the existence of a fact. Thus, cheating by "false tokens" implies the use of fabricated or deceitfully contrived material objects to assist the person's own fraud and falsehood in accomplishing the cheat. See State v. Green, 18 N. J. Law, 181; State v. Middleton, Dud. (S. C.) 285; Jones v. State, 50 Ind. 476; State v. Leonard, 73 Or. 451, 144 P. 113, 118; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 277; State v. Whiteaker, 64 Or. 297, 129 P. 534, 537.

TOKEN-MONEY. A conventional medium of exchange consisting of pieces of metal, fashioned in the shape and size of coins, and circulating among private persons, by consent, at a certain value. No longer permitted or recognized as money. 2 Chit. Com. Law, 182.

TOLERATE. To allow so as not to hinder; to permit as something not wholly approved of; to suffer; to endure. Gregory v. U. S., 17 Blatchf. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 5,803.

TOLERATION. The allowance of religious opinions and modes of worship which are contrary to, or different from, those of the established church or belief. Webster.

TOLERATION ACT. The statute 1 W. & M. St. 1, c. 18, for exempting Protestant dissenters from the penalties of certain laws is so called. Brown.

TOLL, v. To bar, defeat, or take away; thus, to toll the entry means to deny or take away the right of entry.

To toll the statute of limitations means to show facts which remove its bar of the action.

TOLL, n.

In English Law

Toll means an excise of goods; a seizure of some part for permission of the rest. It has two significations: A liberty to buy and sell within the precincts of the manor, which seems to import as much as a fair or market; a tribute or custom paid for passage. Whar- ton.

A Saxon word signifying, properly, a payment in towns, markets, and fairs for goods and cattle bought and sold. It is a reasonable sum of money due to the owner of the fair or market, upon sale of things tollable within the same. The word is used for a liberty as well to take as to be free from toll. Jacob.

In Modern English Law

A reasonable sum due to the lord of a fair or market for things sold there which are tollable. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 350, § 683.

In Contracts

A sum of money for the use of something, generally applied to the consideration which is paid for the use of a road, bridge, or the like, of a public nature. See Sands v. Maun-istee River Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 288, 8 S. Ct. 113, 31 L. Ed. 149; Wadsworth v. Smith, 11 Me. 283, 26 Am. Dec. 525; Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 477; St. Louis v. Green, 7 Mo. App. 476; McNeal Pipe & Foundry Co. v. How-land, 111 N. C. 615, 16 S. E. 857, 20 L. R. A. 743; Boyle v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 54 Pa. 314; Anthony v. Kozar (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 641, 645; City of Madera v. Black, 181 Cal. 306, 184 P. 397, 400. The compensation paid to a miller for grinding another person's grain. Quoted in Lake S. & M. R. Co. v. U. S., 93 U. S. 458, 23 L. Ed. 965.

In General

—Toll and team. Words constantly associ-ated with Saxon and old English grants of liberties to the lords of manors. Bract. fols. 56, 104b, 124b, 154b. They appear to have imported the privileges of having a market, and jurisdiction of villeins. See Team.

—Toll bridge. A "toll bridge" is a part of the public highway the same as a bridge built by general taxation, the only difference being that it is made at the expense of others, instead of the public, and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll fixed for the purpose. White River Bridge Co. v. Hurd, 252 S. W. 917, 159 Ark. 652.

—Toll-gatherer. The officer who takes or collects toll.

—Toll-thorough. In English law. A toll for passing through a highway, or over a ferry or bridge. Cowell. A toll paid to a town for such a number of beasts, or for every beast that goes through the town, or over a bridge or ferry belonging to it. Com. Dig. "Toll." C. A toll claimed by an individual where he is bound to repair some particular highway. 3 Steph. Comm. 257. And see King v. Nicholson, 12 East, 340; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 582, 9 L. Ed. 773.

—Toll-traverse. In English law. A toll for passing over a private man's ground. Cowell. A toll for passing over the private soil of another, or for driving beasts across his ground. Cro. Eliz. 710.

—Toll-turn. In English law. A toll on beasts returning from a market. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 101, § 102. A toll paid at the return of beasts from fair or market, though they were not sold. Cowell.

TOLLAGE. Payment of toll; money charged or paid as toll; the liberty or franchise of charging toll.

TOLLBOOTH. A prison; a customhouse; an exchange; also the place where goods are weighed. Wharton.

TOLLDISH. A vessel by which the toll of corn for grinding is measured.

Tolle voluntatem et erit omnis actus indifferens. Take away the will, and every action will be indifferent. Bract. fol. 2.

TOLLER. One who collects tribute or taxes.

TOLLERE. Lat. In the civil law. To lift up or raise; to elevate; to build up.

TOLLS. In a general sense, tolls signify any manner of customs, subsidy, prestation, imposition, or sum of money demanded for exporting or importing of any wares or merchandise to be taken of the buyer. 2 Inst. 58.

TOLLSESTER. An old excise; a duty paid by tenants of some manors to the lord for liberty to brew and sell ale. Cowell.

TOLSEY. The same as "tollbooth." Also a place where merchants meet; a local tribunal for small civil causes held at the Guildhall, Bristol.

TOLT. A writ whereby a cause depending in a court baron was taken and removed into a county court. Old Nat. Brev. 4.

TOLTA. In old English law. Wrong; rapine; extortion. Cowell.

TOLZEY COURT. An inferior court of record having civil jurisdiction, still existing at Bristol, England.

TON. A measure of weight; differently fixed, by different statutes, at two thousand pounds avoirdupois, (1 Rev. St. N. Y. 609, § 35,) or at twenty hundred-weights, each hundred-weight being one hundred and twelve pounds avoirdupois, (Rev. St. U. S. § 2951 [19 USCA § 420]); Chemung Iron & Steel Co. v. Mersereau Metal Bed Co. (Sup.) 179 N. Y. S. 577, 578.

TONNAGE. The capacity of a vessel for carrying freight or other loads, calculated in tons. But the way of estimating the tonnage varies in different countries. In England, tonnage denotes the actual weight in tons which the vessel can safely carry; in America, her carrying capacity estimated from the cubic dimensions of the hold. See Roberts v. Opdyke, 40 N. Y. 259.

The "tonnage" of a vessel is her capacity to carry cargo, and a charter of "the whole tonnage" of a ship transfers to the charterer only the space necessary for that purpose. Thwing v. Insurance Co., 103 Mass. 405, 4 Am. Rep. 567.

The tonnage of a vessel is her internal cubical capacity, in tons. Inman S. S. Co. v. Tinker, 94 U. S. 238, 24 L. Ed. 118.

TONNAGE DUTY.

In English Law

A duty imposed by parliament upon merchandise exported and imported, according to a certain rate upon every ton. Brown.

In American Law

A tax laid upon vessels according to their tonnage or cubical capacity.

A tonnage duty is a duty imposed on vessels in proportion to their capacity. The vital principle of a tonnage duty is that it is imposed, whatever the subject, solely according to the rule of weight, either as to the capacity to carry or the actual weight of the thing itself. Inman S. S. Co. v. Tinker, 94 U. S. 238, 24 L. Ed. 118.

The term "tonnage duty," as used in the constitutional prohibition upon state laws imposing tonnage duties, describes a duty proportioned to the tonnage of the vessel; a certain rate on each ton. But it is not to be taken in this restricted sense in the constitutional provision. The general prohibition upon the states against levying duties on imports or exports would have been ineffectual if it had not been extended to duties on the ships which serve as the vehicles of conveyance. The prohibition extends to any duty on the ship, whether a fixed sum upon its whole tonnage or a sum to be ascertained by comparing the amount of tonnage with the rate of duty. Southern S. S. Co. v. New Orleans, 6 Wall. 31, 18 L. Ed. 749.

A tonnage tax is defined to be a duty levied on a vessel according to the tonnage or capacity. It is a tax upon the boat as an instrument of navigation, and not a tax upon the property of a citizen of the state. The North Cape, 6 Biss. 505. Fed. Cas. No. 10,316.

TONNAGE-RENT. When the rent reserved by a mining lease or the like consists of a royalty on every ton of minerals gotten in the mine, it is often called a "tonnage-rent." There is generally a dead rent in addition. Sweet.

TONNAGIUM. In old English law. A custom or impost upon wines and other merchandise exported or imported, according to a certain rate per ton. Spelman; Cowell.

TONNETIGHT. In old English law. The quantity of a ton or tun, in a ship's freight or bulk, for which tonnage or tunnage was paid to the king. Cowell.

TONODERACH. In old Scotch law. A thief-taker.

TONSURA. Lat. In old English law. A shaving, or polling; the having the crown of the head shaven; tonsure. One of the peculiar badges of a clerk or clergyman.

TONSURE. In old English law. A being shaven; the having the head shaven; a shaven head. 4 Bl. Comm. 367.

TONTINE. In French law. A species of association or partnership formed among persons who are in receipt of perpetual or life annuities, with the agreement that the shares or annuities of those who die shall accrue to the survivors. This plan is said to be thus named from Tonti, an Italian, who invented it in the seventeenth century. The principle is used in some forms of life insurance. Merl. Repert.; Cahn v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 208 Ill. App. 317, 322; Gourley v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 94 Okl. 46, 220 P. 645, 646.

TOOK AND CARRIED AWAY. In criminal pleading. Technical words necessary in an indictment for simple larceny.

TOOL. The usual meaning of the word "tool" is "an instrument of manual operation;" that is, an instrument to be used and managed by the hand instead of being moved and controlled by machinery. Lovewell v. Westchester F. Ins. Co., 124 Mass. 420, 26 Am. Rep. 671; Anderson v. Hanson, 52 N. D. 746, 204 N. W. 669, 670; Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 178 Iowa, 375, 157 N. W. 855, 857. L. R. A. 1917B, 934; Reffitt v. Southern Sheet & Tin Plate Co., 170 Ky. 362, 186 S. W. 155, 157.

Simple Tool

In law of Master and Servant. A simple tool is one whose condition can be seen at a glance, or by slightest inspection. Track wrench used to tighten and loosen nuts on railroad track held "simple tool." Allen Gravel Co. v. Yarbrough, 133 Mass. 652, 98 So. 117, 118; Arkansas Cent. R. Co. v. Goad, 136 Ark. 467, 206 S. W. 901, 902; Swaim v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. (Iowa) 170 N. W. 296, 299; Fordyce Lumber Co. v. Lynn, 108 Ark. 377, 158 S. W. 501, 503, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 270; Wisconsin & Arkansas Lumber Co. v. The servant assumes the risk of the condition of "simple tools."

Tools of Trade, Apparatus of Trade

And like terms under exemption statutes and bankruptcy act cover tools that vary according to the trade, handicraft or art in which they are used. The meaning of the word "tool" dominates the meaning of such terms. Comer v. Powell (Tex. Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 88, 91; Lindquist v. Clayton, 54 Utah 79, 179 P. 655, 656; Baker v. TOP ANNUAL. In Scotch law. An annual rent out of a house built in a burgh. Whishaw. A duty which, from the act 1551, c. 10, appears to have been due from certain lands in Edinburgh, the nature of which is not now known. Bell.

TORT. Wrong; injury; the opposite of right. So called, according to Lord Coke, because it is wrested, or crooked, being contrary to that which is right and straight. Co. Litt. 158b.

In modern practice, tort is constantly used as an English word to denote a wrong or wrongful act, for which an action will lie, as distinguished from a contract. 3 Bl. Comm. 117.

A tort is a legal wrong committed upon the person or property independent of contract. It may be either (1) a direct invasion of some legal right of the individual; (2) the infraction of some public duty by which special damage accrues to the individual; (3) the violation of some private obligation by which like damage accrues to the individual. In the former case, no special damage is necessary to entitle the party to recover. In the two latter cases, such damage is necessary. Code Ga. 1882, § 2951 (Civ. Code 1910, § 4403). And see Hayes v. Insurance Co., 18 N. E. 322, 125 Ill. 626, 1 L. R. A. 303; Railway Co. v. Hennehan, 76 S. W. 453, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 314; Mumford v. Wright, 55 P. 744, 12 Colo. App. 214; Tomlin v. Maritime Tort

See Maritime.

Personal Tort

One involving or consisting in an injury to the person or to the reputation or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property, called a "property tort." See Mumford v. Wright, 55 P. 744, 12 Colo. App. 214.

Quasi Tort

Though not a recognized term of English law, may be conveniently used in those cases where a man who has not committed a tort is liable as if he had. Thus, a master is liable for wrongful acts done by his servant in the course of his employment. Broom, Com. Law, 690; Underh. Torts, 29.

TORT-FEASOR. A wrong-doer; one who commits or is guilty of a tort.

Joint Tort-Feasors

To be "joint tort-feasors," the parties must either act together in committing the wrong, or their acts, if independent of each other, must unite in causing a single injury. Young v. Dille, 220 P. 782, 784, 127 Wash. 398; Anderson v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 142, 144; Kirkland v. Ensign-Bickford Co. (D. C.) 267 F. 472, 475; Hobbs v. Hurley, 104 A. 815, 816, 117 Me. 449; Hammond v. Kansas, O. & G. Ry. Co., 234 P. 731, 732, 109 Okl. 72; Weinberg Co. v. Bixby, 196 P. 25, 34, 185 Cal. 87; Dickson v. Yates, 188 N. W. 948, 950, 194 Iowa, 910, 27 A. L. R. 533; Verheyen v. Dewey, 146 P. 1116, 1119, 27 Idaho, 1; The Ross Codding-ton (C. C. A.) 6 F.(2d) 191, 192; Anderson v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 142, 144.

TORTIOUS. Wrongful; of the nature of a tort. Formerly certain modes of conveyance (e. g., feoffments, fines, etc.) had the effect of passing not merely the estate of the person making the conveyance, but the whole fee-simple, to the injury of the person really entitled to the fee; and they were hence called "tortious conveyances." Litt. § 611; Co. Litt. 271b, n. 1; 330b, n. 1. But this operation has been taken away. Sweet.

Tortura legum pessima. The torture or wresting of laws is the worst [kind of torture.] 4 Bacon's Works, 434.

TORTURE. In old criminal law. The question; the infliction of violent bodily pain upon a person, by means of the rack, wheel, or other engine, under judicial sanction and superintendence, in connection with the interrogation or examination of the person, as a means of extorting a confession of guilt, or of compelling him to disclose his accomplices.

TORY. Originally a nickname for the wild Irish in Ulster. Afterwards given to, and adopted by, one of the two great parliamentary parties which have alternately governed Great Britain since the Revolution in 1688. Wharton.

The name was also given, in America, during the struggle of the colonies for independence, to the party of those residents who favored the side of the king and opposed the war.

TOT. In old English practice. A word written by the foreign opposer or other officer opposite to a debt due the king, to denote that it was a good debt; which was hence said to be totted.

TOTA CURIA. L. Lat. In the old reports. The whole court.

TOTAL. Whole, not divided, entire, full, complete, the whole amount. In re Merritt's Estate (Sur.) 180 N. Y. S. 877, 879.

Illustrative phrases. Color blindness is not "total and permanent blindness," Fallin v. Locomotive Engineers' Mut. Life & Accident Ins. Ass'n, 24 Ga. App. 724, 102 S. E. 177 (see, however, Rouff v. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 101 Neb. 763, 165 N. W. 141, 143, holding that color blindness resulting in a railroad employee's discharge was tantamount to the "complete and permanent loss of the sight of both eyes"), but the loss of the lens of an eye is the "total loss of one eye," Juergens Bros. Co. v. Industrial Commission, 290 Ill. 420, 125 N. E. 337, and loss of the use of a hand without total severance was "total loss of the use of the hand," though with a mechanical appliance on his wrist the injured person could perform some manual labor. Mark Mfg. Co. v. Industrial Commission, 286 Ill. 620, 122 N. E. 84. Loss of sight is not "total" where by use of glasses a large percentage of normal vision is attained, Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Richmond (Tex. Com. App.) 291 S. W. 1085, 1088; and where an employee suffering an injury impairing the vision of both eyes had a remaining vision of $\frac{19}{200}$ in one and $\frac{19}{200}$ in the other, but had good protective vision remaining enabling him to do coarse work and to earn \$3.37 per day as janitor, he was not entitled to compensation under St. Wis. 1921, § 2394-9 (St. 1931, § 102.44), as for "total blindness of both eyes," Nestle's Food Co. v. Duckow, 178 Wis. 646, 190 N. W. 434.

TOTAL DISABILITY. See Disability.

TOTAL LOSS.

In Marine Insurance

A total loss is the entire destruction or loss, to the insured, of the subject-matter of the policy, by the risks insured against. As to the distinction between "actual" and "constructive" total loss, see infra. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Beacham, 97 A. 708, 709, 128 Md. 414, L. R. A. 1916F, 1168.

In Fire Insurance

A total loss is the complete destruction of the insured property by fire, so that nothing of value remains from it; as distinguished from a partial loss, where the property is damaged, but not entirely destroyed. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. of Springfield, Mass., v. Shapoff, 201 S. W. 1116, 1118, 179 Ky. 804; Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Strayhorn (Tex. Com. App.) 211 S. W. 447, 448, 449; Lowry v. Fidelity-Phoenix Fire Ins. Co., 272 S. W. 79, 80, 219 Mo. App. 121; Roquette v. Farmers Ins. Co., 191 N. W. 772, 774, 49 N. D. 478; Teter v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 82 S. E. 40, 42, 74 W. Va. 344; City of Aurora v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co., 165 S. W. 357, 360, 180 Mo. App. 263; Prather v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co., 176 S. W. 527, 528, 188 Mo. App. 653; National Fire Ins. Co. v. House (Tex. Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 476, 477.

In General

—Actual total loss. In marine insurance. The total loss of the vessel covered by a policy of insurance, by its real and substantive destruction, by injuries which leave it no longer existing in specie, by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or by its being placed beyond the control of the insured and beyond his power of recovery. Distinguished from a constructive total loss, which occurs where the vessel, though injured by the perils insured against, remains in specie and capable of repair or recovery, but at such an expense, or under such other conditions, that the insured may claim the whole amount of the policy upon abandoning the vessel to the underwriters. "An actual total loss is where the vessel ceases to exist in specie,—becomes a 'mere congeries of planks,' incapable of being repaired; or where, by the peril insured against, it is placed beyond the control of the insured and beyond his power of recovery. A constructive total loss is where the vessel remains in specie, and is susceptible of repairs or recovery, but at an expense, according to the rule of the English common law, exceeding its value when restored, or, according to the terms of this policy, where 'the injury is equivalent to fifty per cent. of the agreed value in the policy,' and where the insured abandons the vessel to the underwriter. In such cases the insured is entitled to indemnity as for a total loss. An exception to the rule requiring abandonment is found in cases where the loss occurs in foreign ports or seas, where it is impracticable to repair. In such cases the master may sell the vessel for the benefit of all concerned, and the insured may claim as for a total loss by accounting to the insurer for the amount realized on the sale. There are other exceptions to the rule, but it is sufficient now to say that we have found no case in which the doctrine of constructive total loss without abandonment has been admitted, where the injured vessel remained in specie and was brought to its home port by the insured. A well marked distinction between an actual and a constructive total loss is therefore found in this: that in the former no abandonment is necessary, while in the latter it is essential, unless the case be brought within some exception to the rule requiring it. A partial loss is where an injury results to the vessel from a peril insured against, but where the loss is neither actually nor constructively total." Globe Ins. Co. v. Sherlock, 25 Ohio St. 50, 64; Burt v. Insurance Co., 9 Hun (N. Y.) 383; Carr v. Insurance Co., 17 N. E. 369, 109 N. Y. 504; Monroe v. Insurance Co., 52 F. 777, 3 C. C. A. 280; Murray v. Hatch, 6 Mass. 465; Livermore v. Insurance Co., 1 Mass. 264; Delaware, etc., Ins. Co. v. Gossler, 96 U. S. 645, 24 L. Ed. 863; Wallerstein v. Insurance Co., 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 528.

—Constructive total loss. In marine insurance. This occurs where the loss or injury to the vessel insured does not amount to its total disappearance or destruction, but where, although the vessel still remains, the cost of repairing or recovering it would amount to more than its value when so repaired, and consequently the insured abandons it to the underwriters. See Insurance Co. v. Sugar Refining Co., 87 F. 491, 31 C. C. A. 65; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Beacham, 97 A. 708, 709, 128 Md. 414, L. R. A. 1916F, 1168.

TOTIDEM VERBIS. Lat. In so many words.

TOTIES QUOTIES. Lat. As often as occasion shall arise.

TOTIS VIRIBUS. Lat. With all one's might or power; with all his might; very strenuously.

TOTTED. A good debt to the crown, i. e., a debt paid to the sheriff, to be by him paid over to the king. Cowell; Mozley & Whitley.

Totum præfertur unicuique parti. 3 Coke, 41. The whole is preferable to any single part.

TOUCH. In insurance law. To stop at a port. If there be liberty granted by the policy to touch, or to touch and stay, at an intermediate port on the passage, the better opinion now is that the insured may trade there, when consistent with the object and the furtherance of the adventure, by breaking bulk, or by discharging and taking in cargo, provided it produces no unnecessary delay, nor enhances nor varies the risk. 3 Kent. Comm. 314.

TOUCH AND STAY. Words frequently introduced in policies of insurance, giving the party insured the right to stop and stay at certain designated points in the course of the voyage. A vessel which has the power to touch and stay at a place in the course of the voyage must confine herself strictly to the terms of the liberty so given; for any attempt to trade at such a port during such a stay, as, by shipping or landing goods, will amount to a species of deviation which will discharge the underwriters, unless the ship have also liberty to trade as well as to touch and stay at such a place; 1 Marsh. Ins. 275.

TOUCHING A DEAD BODY. It was an ancient superstition that the body of a murdered man would bleed freshly when touched by his murderer. Hence, in old criminal law, this was resorted to as a means of ascertaining the guilt or innocence of a person suspected of the murder.

TOUJOURS ET UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Always and still ready. This is the name of a plea of tender.

TOUR D'ECHELLE. In French law. An easement consisting of the right to rest ladders upon the adjoining estate, when necessary in order to repair a party-wall or buildings supported by it.

Also the vacant space surrounding a building left unoccupied in order to facilitate its reparation when necessary. Merl. Repert.

TOURN. In old English law. A court of record, having criminal jurisdiction, in each county, held before the sheriff, twice a year, in one place after another, following a certain circuit or rotation.

TOUT. Fr. All; whole; entirely. Tout temps prist, always ready.

Tout ce que la loi ne defend pas est permis. Everything is permitted which is not forbidden by law.

TOUT TEMPS PRIST. L. Fr. Always ready. The emphatic words of the old plea of tender; the defendant alleging that he has always been ready, and still is ready, to discharge the debt. 3 Bl. Comm. 303; 2 Salk. 622.

TOUT UN SOUND. L. Fr. All one sound; sounding the same; idem sonans.

Toute exception non surveillée tend à prendre la place du principe. Every exception not watched tends to assume the place of the principle.

TOWAGE. The act or service of towing ships and vessels, usually by means of a small steamer called a "tug." That which is given for towing ships in rivers.

Towage is the drawing a ship or barge along the water by another ship or boat, fastened to her, or by men or horses, etc., on land. It is also money which is given by bargemen to the owner of ground next a river, where they tow a barge or other vessel. Jacob. And see Ryan v. Hook, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 191; The Kingaloch, 26 Eng. Law & Eq. 597; The Egypt (D. C.) 17 F. 370.

TOWAGE SERVICE. In admiralty law. A service rendered to a vessel, by towing, for the mere purpose of expediting her voyage, without reference to any circumstances of danger. It is confined to vessels that have received no injury or damage. The Reward, 1 W. Rob. 177; The Athenian (D. C.) 3 F. 249; McConochin v. Kerr (D. C.) 9 F. 53; The Plymouth Rock (D. C.) 9 F. 416; The Roan- oke (D. C.) 209 F. 114, 115; Smith & Sons Co. v. Trexler Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 216 F. 134, 136; Sacramento Nav. Co. v. Salz, 273 U. S. 326, 47 S. Ct. 368, 369, 71 L. Ed. 663; The Kennebec (C. C. A.) 231 F. 423, 425; The Mercer (C. C. A.) 297 F. 981, 984.

TOWARD. The word has been held to mean not simply "to" but to include "about." Hudson v. State, 6 Tex. App. 565, 32 Am. Rep. 593. Also, in a course or line leading to, in the direction of. People v. Kreidler, 180 Mich. 654, 147 N. W. 559, 560; State v. Cunningham, 107 Miss. 140, 65 So. 115, 117, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1179; State v. Trent, 122 Or. 444, 259 P. 893, 898.

TOWN.

In English Law

Originally, a vill or tithing; but now a generic term, which comprehends under it the several species of cities, boroughs, and common towns. 1 Bl. Comm. 114.

In American Law

A civil and political division of a state, varying in extent and importance, but usually one of the divisions of a county. In the New England states, the town is the political unit, and is a municipal corporation. In some other states, where the county is the unit, the town is merely one of its subdivisions, but possesses some powers of local self-government. In still other states, such subdivisions of a county are called "townships," and "town" is the name of a village, borough, or smaller city. See Herrman v. Guttenberg, 62 N. J. Law, 605, 43 A. 703; Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N. J. Law, 1; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449, 21 N. E. 274, 4 L. R. A. 65; Sessions v. State, 115 Ga. 18, 41 S. E. 259; Milford v. Godfrey, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 97; Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680, 7 S. Ct. 358, 30 L. Ed. 523; Rogers v. Galloway Female College, 64 Ark. 627, 44 S. W. 454, 39 L. R. A. 636; Railway Co. v. Oconto, 50 Wis. 189, 6 N. W. 607, 36 Am. Rep. 840; Lovejoy v. Foxcroft, 91 Me. 367, 40 A. 141; Bloomfield v. Charter Oak Bank, 121 U. S. 121, 7 S. Ct. 865, 30 L. Ed. 923; Lynch v. Adams State Bank, 272 Ill. 277, 111 N. E. 989, 991; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N. E. 778, 781.

The word "town" is quite commonly used as a generic term and as including both cities and villages. Village of Ashley v. Ashley Lumber Co., 40 N. D. 515, 169 N. W. 87, 90; Decatur v. Auditor of City of Peabody, 251 Mass. 82, 146 N. E. 360, 362; Plainfield-Union Water Co. v. Inhabitants of City of Plainfield, 84 N. J. Law, 634, 87 A. 448, 450.

TOWN AGENT. Under the prohibitory liquor laws in force in some of the New England states a town agent is a person appointed in each town to purchase intoxicating liquors for the town and having the exclusive right to sell the same for the permitted purposes, medical, mechanical, scientific, etc. He either receives a fixed salary or is permitted to make a small profit on his sales. The stock of liquors belongs to the town, and is bought with its money. See Black, Intox. Liq. §§ 204, 205.

TOWN CAUSE. In English practice. A cause tried at the sittings for London and Middlesex. 3 Steph. Comm. 517.

TOWN-CLERK. In those states where the town is the unit for local self-government, the town-clerk is a principal officer who keeps the records, issues calls for town-meetings, and performs generally the duties of a secretary to the political organization. See Seamons v. Pitts, 21 R. I. 236, 42 A. 863.

TOWN COLLECTOR. One of the officers of a town charged with collecting the taxes assessed for town purposes.

TOWN COMMISSIONER. In some of the states where the town is the political unit the town commissioners constitute a board of administrative officers charged with the general management of the town's business.

TOWN-CRIER. An officer in a town whose business it is to make proclamations.

TOWN-HALL. The building maintained by a town for town-meetings and the offices of the municipal authorities.

TOWN-MEETING. Under the municipal organization of the New England states, the town-meeting is a legal assembly of the qualified voters of a town, held at stated intervals or on call, for the purpose of electing town officers, and of discussing and deciding on questions relating to the public business, property, and expenses of the town. See In re Foley, 8 Misc. 57, 28 N. Y. S. 608; Railroad Co. v. Mallory, 101 Ill. 588; Comstock v. Lincoln School Committee, 17 R. I. 827, 24 A. 145; Portland Water Co. v. Town of Portland, 97 Conn. 628, 118 A. 84, 86; In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N. E. 778, 781.

TOWN ORDER OR WARRANT. An official direction in writing by the auditing officers of a town, directing the treasurer to pay a sum of money.

TOWN POUND. A place of confinement maintained by a town for estrays.

TOWN PURPOSE. When it is said that taxation by a town, or the expenditure of the town's money, must be for town purposes, it is meant that the purposes must be public with respect to the town; i. e., concern the welfare and advantage of the town as a whole.

TOWN-REEVE. The reeve or chief officer of a town.

TOWN TAX. Such tax as a town may levy for its peculiar expenses; as distinguished from a county or state tax.

TOWN TREASURER. The treasurer of a town which is an organized municipal corporation.

TOWNSHIP. 1. In surveys of the public land of the United States, a "township" is a division of territory six miles square, containing thirty-six sections.

2. In some of the states, this is the name given to the civil and political subdivisions of a county. See Town, and Liberty Tp. v. Rock Island Tp., 44 Okl. 398, 144 P. 1025, 1026; People v. Stewart, 281 Ill. 365, 118 N. E. 55, 56; People v. Munising Tp., 213 Mich. 629, 182 N. W. 118, 119; State v. Bone Creek Tp., Butler County, 109 Neb. 202, 190 N. W. 586, 587; City of Hutchinson v. Reno County, 124 Kan. 149, 257 P. 750, 751.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, affairs of a township are intrusted.

TOXIC. (Lat. toxicum; Gr. toxikon.) In medical jurisprudence. Poisonous; having the character or producing the effects of a poison; referable to a poison; produced by or resulting from a poison.

—Toxic convulsions. Such as are caused by the action of a poison on the nervous system.

—Toxic dementia. Weakness of mind or feeble cerebral activity, approaching imbecility, resulting from continued use or administration of slow poisons or of the more active poisons in repeated small doses, as in cases of lead poisoning and in some cases of addiction to such drugs as opium or alcohol.

—Toxanemia. A condition of anemia (impoverishment or deficiency of blood) resulting from the action of certain toxic substances or agents.

—Toxemia or toxicemia. Blood-poisoning; the condition of the system caused by the presence of toxic agents in the circulation, including both septicemia and pyæmia.

—Toxicosis. A diseased state of the system due to the presence and action of any poison.

TOXICAL. Poisonous; containing poison.

TOXICANT. A poison; a toxic agent; any substance capable of producing toxication or poisoning.

TOXICATE. To poison. Not used to describe the act of one who administers a poison, but the action of the drug or poison itself.

Intoxication

The state of being poisoned; the condition produced by the administration or introduction into the human system of a poison. This term is popularly used as equivalent to "drunkenness," which, however, is more accurately described as "alcoholic intoxication."

Auto-intoxication

Self-empoisonment from the absorption of the toxic products of internal metabolism, e. g., ptomaine poisoning.

TOXICOLOGY. The science of poisons; that department of medical science which treats of poisons, their effect, their recognition, their antidotes, and generally of the diagnosis and therapeutics of poisoning.

TOXIN. In its widest sense, this term may denote any poison or toxicant; but as used in pathology and medical jurisprudence it signifies, in general, any diffusible alkaloidal substance (as, the ptomaines, abrin, brucin, or serpent venoms), and in particular the poisonous products of pathogenic (disease-producing) bacteria.

Anti-Toxin

A product of pathogenic bacteria which, in sufficient quantities, will neutralize the toxin or poisonous product of the same bacteria. In therapeutics, a preventive remedy (administered by inoculation) against the effect of certain kinds of toxins, venoms, and disease-germs, obtained from the blood of an animal which has previously been treated with repeated minute injections of the particular poison or germ to be neutralized.

Toxicomania

An excessive addiction to the use of toxic or poisonous drugs or other substances; a form of mania or affective insanity characterized by an irresistible impulse to indulgence in opium, cocaine, chloral, alcohol, etc.

Toxiphobia

Morbid dread of being poisoned; a form of insanity manifesting itself by an excessive and unfounded apprehension of death by poison.

TRABES. Lat.

In the Civil Law

A beam or rafter of a house. Calvin.

In old English Law

A measure of grain, containing twenty-four sheaves; a thrave. Spelman.

TRACEA. In old English law. The track or trace of a felon, by which he was pursued with the hue and cry; a foot-step, hoof-print, or wheel-track. Bract. fols. 116, 121b.

TRACING. A tracing is a mechanical copy or fac simile of an original, produced by following its lines, with a pen or pencil, through a transparent medium, called tracing paper. Chapman v. Ferry (C. C.) 18 F. 540.

TRACKS. A term that may mean rails, or rails and cross-ties, or roadbed according to context. City of Bayonne v. Public Service Ry. Corporation, 98 N. J. Law, 255, 119 A. 9; City of Durham v. Durham Public Service Co., 182 N. C. 333, 109 S. E. 40, 42; Woolsley v. Wabash Ry. Co. (Mo. App.) 274 S. W. 871, 874; Rowland v. City Council of City of Augusta, 153 Ga. 763, 113 S. E. 2; City of Dayton v. South Covington & C. St. Ry. Co., 177 Ky. 202, 197 S. W. 670, 672, L. R. A. 1918B, 476, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 229.

Dead Track

A track having a switch to other tracks at one end only with a bumper at the other end. Hoyer v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (C. C. A.) 255 F. 493, 494.

Track Delivery Shipments

Carload shipments, as distinguished from ordinary freight unloaded from the cars, known as a "drop shipment" delivery. Boshell v. Receivers of St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 200 Ala. 366, 76 So. 282, 284.

TRACT. A lot, piece or parcel of land, of greater or less size, the term not importing, in itself, any precise dimension. See Edwards v. Derrickson, 28 N. J. Law, 45; Schofield v. Harrison Land & Mining Co. (Mo. Sup.) 187 S. W. 61, 64; Smith v. Heyward, 115 S. C. 145, 105 S. E. 275, 279.

A "tract of land," as generally understood, is much more extensive in area than the ordinary town or city lot, and may be used for the usual agricultural or other rural purposes. Young v. Shriver, 56 Cal. App. 653, 206 P. 99, 101; Johnson v. Benbow, 93 Fla. 124, 111 So. 504, 506.

As applied to a mineral location the word "tract" implies a surface location. Whildin v. Maryland Gold Quartz Mining Co., 33 Cal. App. 270, 164 P. 908, 910.

To constitute single tract of land so that exercise of servitude such as right to mine oil, gas and other minerals will preserve servitude as to the whole tract, it must be so situated that one may pass from one part to another without passing over lands of another, and two sections do not constitute single tract because southwest point of one is northeast point of the other. Lee v. Giaque, 154 La. 491, 97 So. 669, 670.

Tractent fabrilia fabri. Let smiths perform the work of smiths. 3 Co. Epist.

TRADAS IN BALLIUM. You deliver to bail. In old English practice. The name of a writ which might be issued in behalf of a party who, upon the writ de odio et atia, had been found to have been maliciously accused of a crime, commanding the sheriff that, if the prisoner found twelve good and lawful men of the county who would be mainpernors for him, he should deliver him in bail to those twelve, until the next assize. Bract. fol. 123; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 252.

TRADE. The act or business of exchanging commodities by barter; or the business of buying and selling for money; traffic; barter. Webster; May v. Sloan, 101 U. S. 237, 25 L. Ed. 797; U. S. v. Cassidy (D. C.) 67 F. 841; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 250, 24 S. W. 397, 22 L. R. A. 483; National League of Professional Baseball Clubs v. Federal Baseball Club of Baltimore, 269 F. 681, 684, 50 App. D. C. 165; State v. Deckebach, 113 Ohio St. 347, 149 N. E. 194, 196.

The business which a person has learned and which he carries on for procuring subsistence, or for profit; occupation or employment, particularly mechanical employment; distinguished from the liberal arts and learned professions, and from agriculture. Webster; Woodfield v. Colzey, 47 Ga. 124; People v. Warden of City Prison, 144 N. Y. 529, 39 N. E. 686, 27 L. R. A. 718; In re Stone Cutters' Ass'n, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 520; Polhemus v. De Lisle, 98 N. J. Eq. 256, 130 A. 618, 622; Detroit Taxicab & Transfer Co. v. Callahan (C. C. A.) 1 F.(2d) 911, 912.

Traffic; commerce, exchange of goods for other goods, or for money. All wholesale trade, all buying in order to sell again by wholesale, may be reduced to three sorts: The home trade, the foreign trade of consumption, and the carrying trade. 2 Smith, Wealth Nat. b. 2, c. 5.

The word "trade" originally meant a track or course. Hence it came to mean a way of life, business, or occupation, and especially a handicraft by which one earns a livelihood, or a mercantile business, as opposed to the liberal arts or professions. A still further development makes the word synonymous with commerce. Spence v. Johnson, 142 Ga. 267, 82 S. E. 646, 648, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1195; Metropolitan Opera Co. v. Hammerstein, 147 N. Y. S. 532, 534, 162 App. Div. 691.

TRADE ACCEPTANCE. A form of obligation defined in the regulations of the Federal Reserve Board as a draft or bill of exchange drawn by the seller on purchaser of goods sold, and accepted by such purchaser. Atterbury v. Bank of Washington Heights of City of New York, 241 N. Y. 231, 149 N. E. 841, 843.

TRADE AND COMMERCE. The words "trade" and "commerce," when used in juxtaposition impart to each other enlarged signification, so as to include practically every business occupation carried on for subsistence or profit, and into which the elements of bargain and sale, barter, exchange, or traffic, enter. State v. Tagami, 195 Cal. 522, 234 P. 102, 105.

TRADE COMMISSION, FEDERAL. An act of congress was passed September 26, 1914, creating a Federal Trade Commission, composed of five commissioners appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The act provides: "That unfair methods of competition in commerce are hereby declared unlawful," and the commission is "directed to prevent persons, partnerships or corporations, except banks, and common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

TRADE DOLLAR. A silver coin of the United States, of the weight of four hundred and twenty grains, troy. Rev. St. U. S. § 3513.

TRADE FIXTURES. See Fixtures.

TRADE-MARK. A distinctive mark, motto, device, or emblem, which a manufacturer stamps, prints, or otherwise affixes to the goods he produces, so that they may be identified in the market, and their origin be vouched for. See Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 87, 25 L. Ed. 550; Moorman v. Hoge, 17 Fed. Cas. 715; Solis Cigar Co. v. Pozo, 16 Colo. 388, 26 P. 556, 25 Am. St. Rep. 279; State v. Bishop, 128 Mo. 373, 31 S. W. 9, 29 L. R. A. 200, 49 Am. St. Rep. 569; Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Raymond (C. C.) 70 F. 380; Hegeman & Co. v. Hegeman, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 1. Beech-Nut Packing Co. v. P. Lorillard Co., 47 S. Ct. 481, 482, 273 U. S. 629, 71 L. Ed. 810. Buffalo Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Batavia Rubber Co., 153 N. Y. S. 779, 783, 90 Misc. Rep. 418. Iowa Auto Market v. Auto Market & Exchange, 197 Iowa, 420, 197 N. W. 321, 322.

Generally speaking, a "trade-mark" is applicable to a vendible commodity, to which it is affixed, and a "trade-name" to a business and its good will. American Steel Foundries v. Robertson, 46 S. Ct. 160, 162, 269 U. S. 372, 70 L. Ed. 317.

TRADE-MARKS REGISTRATION ACT, 1875. This is the statute 38 & 39 Vict. c. 91, amended by the acts of 1876 and 1877. It provides for the establishment of a register of trade-marks under the superintendence of the commissioners of patents, and for the registration of trade-marks as belonging to particular classes of goods, and for their assignment in connection with the good-will of the business in which they are used. Sweet.

TRADE-NAME. A name used in trade to designate a particular business of certain individuals considered somewhat as an entity, or the place at which a business is located, or of a class of goods, but which is not a technical trade-mark either because not applied or affixed to goods sent into the market or because not capable of exclusive appropriation by anyone as a trade-mark. "Trade-names" may, or may not, be exclusive. Non-exclusive "trade-names" are names that are publici juris in their primary sense, but which in a secondary sense have come to be understood as indicating the goods or business of a particular trader. "Trade-names" are acquired by adoption and user and belong to one who first used them and gave them a value. St. Louis Independent Packing Co. v. Houston (C. C. A.) 215 F. 553, 560; Hartzler v. Goshen Churn & Ladder Co., 55 Ind. App. 455, 104 N. E. 34, 37.

A name which by user and reputation has acquired the property of indicating that a certain trade or occupation is carried on by a particular person. Seb. Trade-Marks, 37. Sweet.

TRADE-SECRET. A plan or process, tool, mechanism, or compound known only to its owner and those of his employees to whom it is necessary to confide it. Victor Chemical Works v. Iff, 299 Ill. 532, 132 N. E. 806, 811; Cameron Mach. Co. v. Samuel M. Langston Co. (N. J. Ch.) 115 A. 212, 214; Progress Laundry Co. v. Hamilton, 208 Ky. 348, 270 S. W. 834, 835. A secret formula or process not patented, but known only to certain individuals using it in compounding some article of trade having a commercial value. Glucol Mfg. Co. v. Shulist, 239 Mich. 70, 214 N. W. 152, 153; U. S. ex rel. Norwegian Nitrogen Products Co. v. U. S. Tariff Commission, 6 F.(2d) 491, 495, 55 App. D. C. 366.

TRADE UNION. A combination or association of men employed in the same trade, (usually a manual or mechanical trade,) united for the purpose of regulating the customs and standards of their trade, fixing prices or hours of labor, influencing the relations of employer and employed, enlarging or maintaining their rights and privileges, and other similar objects.

TRADE-UNION ACT. The statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, passed in 1871, for the purpose of giving legal recognition to trade unions, is known as the "trade-union act," or "trade-union funds protection act." It provides that the members of a trade union shall not be prosecuted for conspiracy merely by reason that the rules of such union are in restraint of trade; and that the agreements of trade unions shall not on that account be void or voidable. Provisions are also made with reference to the registration and registered offices of trade unions, and other purposes connected therewith. Mozley & Whitley.

TRADE USAGE. The usage or customs commonly observed by persons conversant in, or connected with, a particular trade.

TRADER. A person engaged in trade; one whose business is to buy and sell merchandise, or any class of goods, deriving a profit from his dealings. 2 Kent, Comm. 389; State v. Chabourn, 80 N. C. 481, 30 Am. Rep. 94; In re New York & W. Water Co. (D. C.) 98 F. 711; Morris v. Clifton Forge Grocery Co., 46 W. Va. 197, 32 S. E. 997; Harris v. National Surety Co., 258 Mass. 353, 155 N. E. 10, 11; Merchants' & Farmers' Bank v. Schaaf, 108 Miss. 121, 66 So. 402, 403.

TRADESMAN. In England, a shopkeeper; in the United States, a mechanic or artificer of any kind, whose livelihood depends on the labor of his hands; Richie v. McCauley, 4 Pa. 472.

TRADICION. Span. In Spanish law. Delivery. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 9.

TRADING. Engaging in trade, (q. v.) pursuing the business or occupation of trade or of a trader.

TRADING CORPORATION. See Corporation.

TRADING PARTNERSHIP. A firm the nature of whose business, according to the usual modes of conducting it, imports the necessity of buying and selling. Dowling v. National Exch. Bank, 145 U. S. 512, 12 S. Ct. 928, 36 L. Ed. 795; Schumacher v. Sumner Telephone Co., 161 Iowa, 326, 142 N. W. 1034, 1036, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 201; Maasdam v. Blokland, 123 Or. 128, 261 P. 66, 68.

TRADING STAMPS. The name for a method of conducting some kinds of retail business which consists of an agreement between a number of merchants and a corporation that the latter shall print the names of the former in its subscribers' dictionary and circulate a number of copies of the book, and that the merchants shall purchase of the corporation a number of so-called trading stamps, to be given to purchasers with their purchases, and by them preserved and pasted in the books aforesaid until a certain number have been secured, when they shall be presented to the corporation in exchange for the choice of certain articles kept in stock by the corporation. Lansburgh v. D. of Col., 11 App. D. C. 512.

TRADING VOYAGE. One which contemplates the touching and stopping of the vessel at various ports for the purpose of traffic or sale and purchase or exchange of commodities on account of the owners and shippers, rather than the transportation of cargo between terminal points, which is called a "freighting voyage." See Brown v. Jones, 4 Fed. Cas. 406.

TRADITIO. Lat. In the civil law. Delivery; transfer of possession; a derivative mode of acquiring, by which the owner of a corporeal thing, having the right and the will of alienating it, transfers it for a lawful consideration to the receiver. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 1, § 380.

Quasi Traditio

A supposed or implied delivery of property from one to another. Thus, if the purchaser of an article was already in possession of it before the sale, his continuing in possession is considered as equivalent to a fresh delivery of it, delivery being one of the necessary elements of a sale; in other words, a quasi traditio is predicated.

Traditio Brevi Manu

A species of constructive or implied delivery. When he who already holds possession of a thing in another's name agrees with that other that thenceforth he shall possess it in his own name, in this case a delivery and redelivery are not necessary. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 284.

Traditio Clavium

Delivery of keys; a symbolical kind of delivery, by which the ownership of merchandise in a warehouse might be transferred to a buyer. Inst. 2, 1, 44.

Traditio Longa Manu

A species of delivery which takes place where the transferor places the article in the hands of the transferee, or, on his order, delivers it at his house. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 284.

Traditio Rei

Delivery of the thing. See 5 Maule & S. 82.

Traditio loqui facit chartam. Delivery makes a deed speak. 5 Coke, 1a. Delivery gives effect to the words of a deed. Id.

Traditio nihil amplius transferre debet vel potest, ad eum qui accipit, quam est apud eum qui tradit. Delivery ought to, and can, transfer nothing more to him who receives than is with him who delivers. Dig. 41, 1, 20, pr.

TRADITION. Delivery. A close translation or formation from the Latin "traditio." 2 Bl. Comm. 307.

The tradition or delivery is the transferring of the thing sold into the power and possession of the buyer. Civ. Code La. art. 2477.

In the rule respecting the admission of tradition or general reputation to prove boundaries, questions of pedigree, etc., this word means knowledge or belief derived from the statements or declarations of contemporary witnesses and handed down orally through a considerable period of time. See Westfelt v. Adams, 131 N. C. 379, 42 S. E. 823; In re Hurlburt's Estate, 68 Vt. 366, 35 A. 77, 35 L. R. A. 794.

TRADITOR. In old English law. A traitor; one guilty of high treason. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 21, § 8.

TRADITUR IN BALLIUM. In old practice. Is delivered to bail. Emphatic words of the old Latin bail-piece. 1 Salk. 105.

TRAFFIC. Commerce; trade; sale or exchange of merchandise, bills, money, and the like. The passing of goods or commodities from one person to another for an equivalent in goods or money; Senior v. Ratterman, 44 Ohio St. 673, 11 N. E. 321; People v. Horan, 293 Ill. 314, 127 N. E. 673, 674; People v. Dunford, 207 N. Y. 17, 100 N. E. 433, 434; Fine v. Moran, 74 Fla. 417, 77 So. 533, 538; Bruno v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 289 F. 649, 655.

Traffic includes the ordinary uses of the streets and highways by travelers. Stewart v. Hugh Nawn Contracting Co., 223 Mass. 525, 112 N. E. 218, 219; Withey v. Fowler Co., 164 Iowa, 377, 145 N. W. 923, 927.

TRAFFIC BALANCES. Balances of moneys collected in payment for the transportation of passengers and freight. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. United States & Mexican Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 225 F. 940, 946.

TRAHENS. Lat. In French law. The drawer of a bill. Story, Bills, § 12 note.

TRAIL-BASTON. Justices of trail-baston were justices appointed by King Edward I., during his absence in the Scotch and French wars, about the year 1305. They were so styled, says Hollingshed, for trailing or drawing the staff of justice. Their office was to make inquisition, throughout the kingdom, of all officers and others, touching extortion, bribery, and such like grievances, of intruders into other men's lands, barrators, robbers, breakers of the peace, and divers other offenders. Cowell; Tomlins.

TRAILER. A separate vehicle, not driven or propelled by its own power, but drawn by some independent power; a semi-trailer is a separate vehicle which is not driven or propelled by its own power, but, which, to be useful, must be attached to and become a part of another vehicle, and then loses its identity as a separate vehicle. Leamon v. State, 17 Ohio App. 323, 326.

TRAIN. Several cars coupled together and moved on a railroad by a locomotive. Mochel v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n, 203 Iowa, 623, 213 N. W. 259, 260, 51 A. L. R. 1327; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 211 F. 12, 18.

Within the safety appliance act, it is one aggregation of cars drawn by the same engine. If the engine is changed then there is a different train; U. S. v. Boston & M. R. Co. (D. C.) 168 F. 148.

TRAIN WRECK. These words, in an accident insurance policy, mean either total or partial destruction of the train. The smashing in of a portion of a passenger car is a "train wreck," though the car is not derailed, and the train soon continues under its own power. Mochel v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Ass'n, 203 Iowa, 623, 213 N. W. 259, 261, 51 A. L. R. 1327.

TRAINBANDS. The militia; the part of a community trained to martial exercises.

TRAITISTIS. In old Scotch law. A roll containing the particular dittay taken up upon malefactors, which, with the porteous, is delivered by the justice clerk to the coroner, to the effect that the persons whose names are contained in the porteous may be attached, conform to the dittay contained in the traitis. So called, because committed to the traist, [trust,] faith, and credit of the clerks and coroner. Skene; Burrill.

TRAITOR. One who, being trusted, betrays; one guilty of treason, (q. v.) Vulcan Detinning Co. v. St. Clair, 315 Ill. 140, 145 N. E. 657, 659.

TRAITOROUSLY. In criminal pleading. An essential word in indictments for treason. The offense must be laid to have been committed traitorously. Whart. Crim. Law, 100.

TRAJECTITIA PECUNIA. A loan to a shipper to be repaid only in case of a successful voyage. The lender could charge an extraordinary rate of interest, nauticum fœnus. Holland, Jurispr. 250.

TRAJECTITIUS. Lat. In the civil law. Sent across the sea.

TRAMMER. A mine laborer shoveling the ore or dirt as it is mined or thrown down into tram cars. Mesich v. Tamarack Mining Co., 184 Mich. 363, 151 N. W. 564, 566.

TRAMP. One who roams about from place to place, begging or living without labor or visible means of support; a vagrant. See State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 202, 58 N. E. 572, 52 L. R. A. 863, 81 Am. St. Rep. 626; Miller v. State, 73 Ind. 92; Railway Co. v. Boyle, 115 Ga. 836, 42 S. E. 242, 59 L. R. A. 104.

TRANSACT. In Scotch law. To compound. Amb. 185.

In common parlance, equivalent to "carry on," when used with reference to business. Territory v. Harris, 8 Mont. 140, 19 P. 286; In re Wellings' Estate, 192 Cal. 506, 221 P. 628, 631.

TRANSACTING BUSINESS. Doing or performing series of acts occupying time, attention, and labor of men for purpose of livelihood, profit or pleasure. Pauline Oil & Gas Co. v. Mutual Tank Line Co., 118 Okl. 111, 246 P. 851, 852.

TRANSACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. The settlement of a suit or matter in controversy, by the litigating parties, between themselves, without referring it to arbitration. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 8, no. 14. An agreement by which a suit, either pending or about to be commenced, was forborne or discontinued on certain terms. Calvin.

TRANSACTION.

In the Civil Law

An agreement between two or more persons, who, for preventing or putting an end to a lawsuit, adjust their differences by mutual consent, in the manner which they agree on. This contract must be reduced into writing. Civ. Code La. art. 3071.

In Common Law

Whatever may be done by one person which affects another's rights, and out of which a cause of action may arise. Scarborough v. Smith, 18 Kan. 406.

"Transaction" is a broader term than "contract." A contract is a transaction, but a transaction is not necessarily a contract. See Ter Kuile v. Marsland, 81 Hun, 420, 31 N. Y. S. 5; Xenia Branch Bank v. Lee, 7 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 372; Roberts v. Donovan, 70 Cal. 113, 11 P. 599. The term is comprehensive of many occurrences, depending not so much on their immediateness of connection as on their logical relationship. Moore v. New York Cotton Exchange, 270 U. S. 593, 46 S. Ct. 367, 371, 70 L. Ed. 750, 45 A. L. R. 1370.

In Code Practice

"Transaction," as used in statutes permitting cause of action arising out of transaction set forth in complaint to be foundation of counterclaim, properly embraces that combination of acts and events, whether in nature of contract or tort, out of which a legal right springs, or upon which a legal obligation is predicated. Haut v. Gunderson, 54 N. D. 826, 211 N. W. 982, 983; Southeastern Life Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 120 S. C. 490, 113 S. E. 310, 311; Scott v. Waggoner, 48 Mont. 536, 139 P. 454, 456, L. R. A. 1916C, 491. Transaction includes all the facts and circumstances out of which the injury arose, Barnard v. Weaver (Mo. App.) 224 S. W. 152, 153; or the entire series of acts and conduct of the parties in the business or proceeding between them which forms the basis of their agreement. Mulcahy v. Duggan, 67 Mont. 9, 214 P. 1106, 1108.

In Evidence

A "transaction" between a witness and a decedent, within statutory provisions excluding evidence of such transactions, embraces every variety of affairs which can form the subject of negotiations, interviews, or actions between two persons, and includes every method by which one person can derive impressions or information from the conduct, condition, or language of another. Kentucky Utilities Co. v. McCarty's Adm'r, 169 Ky. 38, 183 S. W. 237, 239; Bright v. Virginia & Gold Hill Water Co. (C. C. A.) 270 F. 410, 413; Madero v. Calzado (Tex. Civ. App.) 281 S. W. 328, 331.

TRANSCRIPT. An official copy of certain proceedings in a court. Thus, any person interested in a judgment or other record of a court can obtain a transcript of it. U. S. v. Gausson, 19 Wall. 212, 22 L. Ed. 41; State v. Board of Equalization, 7 Nev. 95; Hastings School Dist. v. Caldwell, 16 Neb. 68, 19 N. W. 634; Dearborn v. Patton, 4 Or. 61.

TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD. The printed record as made up in each case for the supreme court of the United States is so called; also in the Circuit Court of Appeals. If a necessary part has been omitted and is subsequently presented to the appellate court, duly certified, it may be made part of the record by direct order. Jurisdiction attaches upon the filing in the court above of the writ of error and is not defeated by irregularity in the transcript or its certification; Burnham v. R. Co., 87 F. 168, 30 C. C. A. 594.

TRANSCRIPTIO PEDIS FINIS LEVATI MITTENDO IN CANCELLARIUM. A writ which certified the foot of a fine levied before justices in eyre, etc., into the chancery. Reg. Orig. 669.

TRANSCRIPTIO RECOGNITIONIS FACTÆ CORAM JUSTICIARIIS ITINERANTIBUS, Etc. An old writ to certify a cognizance taken by justices in eyre. Reg. Orig. 152.

TRANSFER, v. To carry or pass over; to pass a thing over to another; to convey.

TRANSFER, n. The passing of a thing or of property from one person to another; alienation; conveyance. 2 Bl. Comm. 294.

An act of the parties, or of the law, by which the title to property is conveyed from one person to another. Civ. Code Cal. § 1039. And see Pearre v. Hawkins, 62 Tex. 437; Innerarity v. Mims, 1 Ala. 669; Sands v. Hill, 55 N. Y. 18; Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 S. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171; In re Stewart's Estate, 174 Cal. 547, 163 P. 902; W. T. Rawleigh Co. v. McCoy, 96 Or. 474, 190 P. 311, 312; Elwood v. State Soldiers' Compensation Board, 117 Kan. 753, 232 P. 1049; Wallach v. Stein, 103 N. J. Law, 470, 136 A. 209, 210.

In Procedure

"Transfer" is applied to an action or other proceeding, when it is taken from the jurisdiction of one court or judge, and placed under that of another.

In General

—Transfer of a cause. The removal of a cause from the jurisdiction of one court or judge to another by lawful authority.

—Transfer in contemplation of death. A transfer made under a present apprehension on the part of the transferor, from some existing bodily or mental condition or impending peril, creating a reasonable fear that death is near at hand. This apprehension must be direct and animating and the only cause of the transfer. Rea v. Heiner (D. C.) 6 F.(2d) 389, 392.

—Transfer tax. A tax upon the passing of the title to property or a valuable interest therein out of or from the estate of a decedent, by inheritance, devise, or bequest. See In re Hoffman's Estate, 143 N. Y. 327, 38 N. E. 311; In re Gould's Estate, 156 N. Y. 423, 51 N. E. 287; In re Brez's Estate, 172 N. Y. 609, 64 N. E. 958. Sometimes also applied to a tax on the transfer of property, particularly of an incorporeal nature, such as bonds or shares of stock, between living persons.

TRANSFERABLE. A term used in a quasi legal sense, to indicate that the character of assignability or negotiability attaches to the particular instrument, or that it may pass from hand to hand, carrying all rights of the original holder. The words "not transferable" are sometimes printed upon a ticket, receipt, or bill of lading, to show that the same will not be good in the hands of any person other than the one to whom first issued.

TRANSFEREE. He to whom a transfer is made. Kramer v. Spradlin, 148 Ga. 805, 98 S. E. 487, 488.

TRANSFERENCE. In Scotch law. The proceeding to be taken upon the death of one of the parties to a pending suit, whereby the action is transferred or continued, in its then condition, from the decedent to his representatives. Transference is either active or passive; the former, when it is the pursuer (plaintiff) who dies; the latter, upon the death of the defender. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 60.

The transferring of a legacy from the person to whom it was originally given to another; this is a species of ademption, but the latter is the more general term, and includes cases not covered by the former.

TRANSFERROR. One who makes a transfer.

Transferuntur dominia sine titulo et traditione, per usucaptionem, scilicet, per longam continuam et pacificam possessionem. Co. Litt. 113. Rights of dominion are transferred without title or delivery, by usucaption, to-wit, long and quiet possession.

TRANSFRETATIO. Lat. In old English law. A crossing of the strait, [of Dover:] a passing or sailing over from England to France. The royal passages or voyages to Gascony, Brittany, and other parts of France were so called, and time was sometimes computed from them.

TRANSGRESSIO. In old English law. A violation of law. Also trespass; the action of trespass.

Transgressio est cum modus non servatur nec mensura, debet enim quilibet in suo facto modum habere et mensuram. Co. Litt. 37. Transgression is when neither mode nor measure is preserved, for every one in his act ought to have a mode and measure.

TRANSGRESSIONE. In old English law. A writ or action of trespass.

Transgressione multiplicata, crescat pœnæ inflicto. When transgression is multiplied, let the infliction of punishment be increased. 2 Inst. 479.

TRANSGRESSIVE TRUST. See Trust.

TRANSHIPMENT. In maritime law. The act of taking the cargo out of one ship and loading it in another.

TRANSIENT.

In Poor-Laws

A "transient person" is not exactly a person on a journey from one known place to another, but rather a wanderer ever on the tramp. Middlebury v. Waltham, 6 Vt. 203; Londonderry v. Landgrove, 66 Vt. 264, 29 A. 256.

In Spanish law

A "transient foreigner" is one who visits the country, without the intention of remaining. Yates v. Iams, 10 Tex. 170.

TRANSIENT MERCHANT. A merchant who engages in the vending or sale of merchandise at any place in the state temporarily, and who does not intend to become, and does not become, a permanent merchant of such place. State v. Fleming, 24 N. D. 593, 140 N. W. 674.

TRANSIRE, v. Lat. To go, or pass over; to pass from one thing, person, or place to another.

TRANSIRE, n. In English law. A warrant or permit for the custom-house to let goods pass.

TRANSIT. An act or process of moving or causing to pass from one place to another. Underwood v. Globe Indemnity Co., 216 N. Y. S. 109, 111, 217 App. Div. 63; Koshland v. Columbia Ins. Co., 237 Mass. 467, 130 N. E. 41, 45. "Transit" is said to include, not only carriage of goods to destination, but delivery there according to the terms of the contract. In re J. F. Growe Const. Co. (D. C.) 256 F. 907, 918.

Transit in rem judicatam. It passes into a matter adjudged; it becomes converted into a res judicata or judgment. A contract upon which a judgment is obtained is said to pass in rem judicatam. United States v. Cushman, 2 Sumn. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 14,908; 3 East, 251; Robertson v. Smith, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 480, 9 Am. Dec. 227.

Transit terra cum onere. Land passes subject to any burden affecting it. Co. Litt. 231a; Broom, Max. 495, 706.

TRANSITIVE COVENANT. See Covenant.

TRANSITORY. Passing from place to place; that may pass or be changed from one place to another; the opposite of "local." See "Action."

TRANSITUS. Lat. Passage from one place to another; transit. In transitu, on the passage, transit, or way. 2 Kent, Comm. 543.

TRANSLADO. Span. A transcript.

TRANSLATION. The reproduction in one language of a book, document, or speech in another language.

The transfer of property; but in this sense it is seldom used. 2 Bl. Comm. 294.

In Ecclesiastical Law

As applied to a bishop, the term denotes his removal from one diocese to another.

TRANSLATITUM EDICTUM. Lat. In Roman law. The prætor, on his accession to office, did not usually publish an entirely new edict, but retained the whole or a part of that promulgated by his predecessor, as being of an approved or permanently useful character. The portion thus repeated or handed down from year to year was called the "edictum translaticium." See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 36.

TRANSLATIVE FACT. A fact by means of which a right is transferred or passes from one person to another; one, that is, which fulfills the double function of terminating the right of one person to an object, and of originating the right of another to it.

TRANSMISSION. In the civil law. The right which heirs or legatees may have of passing to their successors the inheritance or legacy to which they were entitled, if they happen to die without having exercised their rights. Domat, liv. 3, t. 1, s. 10; 4 Toullier, no. 186; Dig. 50, 17, 54; Code, 6, 51.

TRANSPORT. In old New York law. A conveyance of land.

TRANSPORT. To carry from one place to another. Sacramento Nav. Co. v. Salz, 47 S. Ct. 368, 369, 273 U. S. 326, 71 L. Ed. 663; McLaughlin v. State, 104 Neb. 392, 177 N. W. 744. This is the meaning of the word as used in statutes prohibiting the transportation of liquor. Lee v. State, 95 Tex. Cr. R. 654, 255 S. W. 425, 426; Hammell v. State, 198 Ind. 45, 152 N. E. 161, 163.

TRANSPORTATION. The removal of goods or persons from one place to another, by a carrier. See Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 133, 22 L. Ed. 827; Interstate Commerce Com'n v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 14 Sup. Ct. 1125, 38 L. Ed. 1047; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 5 Sup. Ct. 826, 29 L. Ed. 158.

Under Interstate Commerce Act, (49 USCA § 1 et seq.), "transportation" includes the entire body of services rendered by a carrier in connection with the receipt, handling, and delivery of property transported, and includes the furnishing of cars. Pletcher v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 103 Kan. 834, 177 P. 1, 2.

In a general sense transportation means merely conveyance from one place to another. People v. Martin, 235 Mich. 206, 209 N. W. 87.

In Criminal Law

A species of punishment consisting in removing the criminal from his own country to another, (usually a penal colony,) there to remain in exile for a prescribed period. Fong Yue Ting v. U. S., 149 U. S. 698, 13 Sup. Ct. 1016, 37 L. Ed. 905.

TRANSMUMPTS. In Scotch law, an action of transumpt is an action competent to any one having a partial interest in a writing, or immediate use for it, to support his title or defenses in other actions. It is directed against the custodian of the writing, calling upon him to exhibit it, in order that a transumpt, i. e., a copy, may be judicially made and delivered to the pursuer. Bell.

TRASLADO. In Spanish law. A copy; a sight. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 3.

A copy of a document taken by the notary from the original, or a subsequent copy taken from the protocol, and not a copy taken directly from the matrix or protocol. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 436, 16 S. W. 54.

TRASSANS. Drawing; one who draws. The drawer of a bill of exchange.

TRASSATUS. One who is drawn, or drawn upon. The drawee of a bill of exchange. Heinecc. de Camb. c. 6, §§ 5, 6.

TRAUMA. In medical jurisprudence. A wound; any injury to the body caused by external violence. Oliver v. Detroit Taxicab Co., 210 Mich. 89, 177 N. W. 235, 239.

TRAUMATIC. Caused by or resulting from a wound or any external injury; as, traumatic insanity, produced by an injury to or fracture of the skull with consequent pressure on the brain. Straight Creek Fuel Co. v. Hunt, 221 Ky. 265, 298 S. W. 686, 687.

TRAUMATISM. A diseased condition of the body or any part of it caused by a wound or external injury. Markham v. State Industrial Commission, 85 Okl. 81, 205 P. 163, 169.

TRAVAIL. The act of child-bearing. A woman is said to be in her travail from the time the pains of child-bearing commence until her delivery. Scott v. Donovan, 153 Mass. 378, 26 N. E. 871.

TRAVEL. To go from one place to another at a distance; to journey; spoken of voluntary change of place. See White v. Beazley, 1 Barn. & Ald. 171; Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1, 46 Am. Rep. 112; Gholson v. State, 53 Ala. 521, 25 Am. Rep. 652; Campbell v. State, 28 Tex. App. 44, 11 S. W. 832; State v. Smith, 157 Ind. 241, 61 N. E. 566, 87 Am. St. Rep. 205.

TRAVELED PLACE. A place where the public have, in some manner, acquired the legal right to travel. Sanders v. Southern Ry. Co., Carolina Division, 97 S. C. 423, 81 S. E. 786, 788.

TRAVELED WAY. The traveled path, or the path used for public travel, within located limits of the way. Dupuis v. Town of Billerica, 260 Mass. 210, 157 N. E. 339, 341. Also called "traveled part of highway." Westlund v. Iverson, 154 Minn. 52, 191 N. W. 253; Schnabel v. Kafer, 39 S. D. 70, 162 N. W. 935, 936.

TRAVELER. One who passes from place to place, whether for pleasure, instruction, business or health. Lockett v. State, 47 Ala. 45; 10 C. B. N. S. 429. The term is used to designate those who patronize inns; the distance which they travel is not material. Walling v. Potter, 35 Conn. 185.

TRAVELING SALESMAN. A person who travels from town to town and who takes or solicits orders for goods, and forwards them to his principal for approval or rejection. T. C. May Co. v. Menzies Shoe Co., 184 N. C. 150, 113 S. E. 593, 594; Upchurch v. City of La Grange, 159 Ga. 113, 125 S. E. 47, 48.

TRAVELING WAYS. As applied to coal mining, places for the passage of workmen to and from different parts of the mine. Ricardo v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 100 Kan. 95, 163 P. 641, 643.

TRAVERSE. In the language of pleading, a traverse signifies a denial. Thus, where a defendant denies any material allegation of fact in the plaintiff's declaration, he is said to traverse it, and the plea itself is thence frequently termed a "traverse." Brown.

In Criminal Practice

To put off or delay the trial of an indictment till a succeeding term. More properly, to deny or take issue upon an indictment. 4 Bl. Comm. 351.

In General

—Common traverse. A simple and direct denial of the material allegations of the opposite pleading, concluding to the country, and without inducement or absque hoc.

—General traverse. One preceded by a general inducement, and denying in general terms all that is last before alleged on the opposite side, instead of pursuing the words of the allegations which it denies. Gould. Pl. vii. 5.

—Special traverse. A peculiar form of traverse or denial, the design of which, as distinguished from a common traverse, is to explain or qualify the denial, instead of putting it in the direct and absolute form. It consists of an affirmative and a negative part, the first setting forth the new affirmative matter tending to explain or qualify the denial, and technically called the "inducement," and the latter constituting the direct denial itself, and technically called the "absque hoc." Steph. Pl. 169-180; Allen v. Stevens, 29 N. J. Law, 513; Chambers v. Hunt, 18 N. J. Law, 352; People v. Pullman's Car Co., 175 Ill. 125, 51 N. E. 664, 64 L. R. A. 366.

—Traverse jury. A petit jury; a trial jury; a jury impaneled to try an action or prosecution, as distinguished from a grand jury. State v. James, 96 N. J. Law, 132, 114 A. 553, 555, 16 A. L. R. 1141.

—Traverse of indictment or presentment. The taking issue upon and contradicting or denying some chief point of it. Jacob.

—Traverse of office. The proving that an inquisition made of lands or goods by the escheator is defective and untruly made. Tomlins. It is the challenging, by a subject, of an inquest of office, as being defective and untruly made. Mozley & Whitley.

—Traverse upon a traverse. One growing out of the same point or subject-matter as is embraced in a preceding traverse on the other side.

TRAVERSER. In pleading. One who traverses or denies. A prisoner or party indicted; so called from his traversing the indictment.

TRAVERSING NOTE. This is a pleading in chancery, and consists of a denial put in by the plaintiff on behalf of the defendant, generally denying all the statements in the plaintiff's bill. The effect of it is to put the plaintiff upon proof of the whole contents of his bill, and is only resorted to for the purpose of saving time, and in a case where the plaintiff can safely dispense with an answer. A copy of the note must be served on the defendant. Brown.

TREACHER, TRECHETOUR, or TREACH-OUR. A traitor.

TREAD-MILL, or TREAD-WHEEL, is an instrument of prison discipline, being a wheel or cylinder with an horizontal axis, having steps attached to it, up which the prisoners walk, and thus put the axis in motion. The men hold on by a fixed rail, and, as their weight presses down the step upon which they tread, they ascend the next step, and thus drive the wheel. Enc. Brit.

TREASON. The offense of attempting by overt acts to overthrow the government of the state to which the offender owes allegiance; or of betraying the state into the hands of a foreign power. Webster.

In England, treason is an offense particularly directed against the person of the sovereign, and consists (1) in compassing or imagining the death of the king or queen, or their eldest son and heir; (2) in violating the king's companion, or the king's eldest daughter unmarried, or the wife of the king's eldest son and heir; (3) in levying war against the king in his realm; (4) in adhering to the king's enemies in his realm, giving to them aid and comfort in the realm or elsewhere, and (5) slaying the chancellor, treasurer, or the king's justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eyre, or justices of assize, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine, being in their places doing their offices. 4 Steph. Comm. 185-193; 4 Bl. Comm. 76-84.

"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." U. S. Const. art. 3, § 3, cl. 1. See Young v. U. S., 97 U. S. 62, 24 L. Ed. 992; U. S. v. Bollman, 1 Cranch, C. C. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 14,622; U. S. v. Greathouse, 4 Sawy. 457, 2 Abb. U. S. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 15,254; U. S. v. Hanway, 2 Wall. Jr. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 15,299; U. S. v. Hoxie, 1 Paine, 265, Fed. Cas. No. 15,407; U. S. v. Pryor, 3 Wash. C. C. 234, Fed. Cas. No. 16,096.

Constructive Treason

Treason imputed to a person by law from his conduct or course of actions, though his deeds taken severally do not amount to actual treason. This doctrine is not known in the United States.

High Treason

In English law. Treason against the king or sovereign, as distinguished from petit or petty treason, which might formerly be committed against a subject. 4 Bl. Comm. 74, 75; 4 Steph. Comm. 183, 184, note.

Misprision of Treason

See Misprision.

Petit Treason

In English law. The crime committed by a wife in killing her husband, or a servant his lord or master, or an ecclesiastic his lord or ordinary. 4 Bl. Comm. 75.

Treason-felony

Under the English statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, passed in 1848, is the offense of compassing, devising, etc., to depose her majesty from the crown; or to levy war in order to intimidate either house of parliament, etc., or to stir up foreigners by any printing or writing to invade the kingdom. This offense is punishable with penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than five years, etc., under statutes 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, § 3; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, § 2; 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, § 2. By the statute first above mentioned, the government is enabled to treat as felony many offenses which must formerly have been treated as high treason. Mozley & Whitley.

TREASONABLE. Having the nature or guilt of treason.

TREASURE. A treasure is a thing hidden or buried in the earth, on which no one can prove his property, and which is discovered by chance. Civil Code La. art. 3423, par. 2. See Treasure-Trove.

TREASURE-TROVE. Literally, treasure found. Money or coin, gold, silver, plate or bullion found hidden in the earth or other private place, the owner thereof being unknown. 1 Bl. Comm. 295. Called in Latin "thesaurus inventus," and in Saxon "fynderinga." See Huthmacher v. Harris, 38 Pa. 499, 80 Am. Dec. 502; Livermore v. White, 74 Me. 456, 43 Am. Rep. 600; Sovern v. Yoran, 16 Or. 269, 20 P. 100, 8 Am. St. Rep. 293; Vickery v. Hardin, 77 Ind. App. 558, 133 N. E. 922, 923.

TREASURER. An officer of a public or private corporation, company, or government, charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement of its moneys or funds. See State v. Eames, 39 La. Ann. 986, 3 So. 93; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Martien, 27 Mont. 437, 71 P. 470; Weld v. May, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 189; In re Millward-Cliff Cracker Co.'s Estate, 161 Pa. 167, 28 A. 1072; Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S. W. 570, 574.

TREASURER, LORD HIGH. Formerly the chief treasurer of England, who had charge of the moneys in the exchequer, the chancellor of the exchequer being under him. He appointed all revenue officers and escheaters, and leased crown lands. The office is obsolete, and his duties are now performed by the lords commissioners of the treasury. Stim. Gloss.

TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES. An officer in the treasury department appointed by the president by and with the advice and consent of the senate. His principal duties are—to receive and keep the moneys of the United States, and disburse the same upon warrants drawn by the secretary of the treasury, countersigned by either comptroller and recorded by the register; to take receipts for all moneys paid by him; to render his account to the first comptroller quarterly, or oftener if required, and transmit a copy thereof, when settled, to the secretary of the treasury; to lay before each house, on the third day of every session of congress, fair and accurate copies of all accounts by him from time to time rendered to and settled with the first comptroller, and a true and perfect account of the state of the treasury; to submit at all times to the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller, or either of them, the inspection of the moneys in his hands. (31 USCA § 141 et seq.)

TREASURER'S REMEMBRANCER. In English law. He whose charge was to put the lord treasurer and the rest of the judges of the exchequer in remembrance of such things as were called on and dealt in for the sovereign's behoof. There is still one in Scotland. Wharton.

TREASURY. A place or building in which stores of wealth are repositied; particularly, a place where the public revenues are deposited and kept, and where money is disbursed to defray the expenses of government. Webster.

That department of government which is charged with the receipt, custody, and disbursement (pursuant to appropriations) of the public revenues or funds.

TREASURY BENCH. In the English house of commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker is so called, because occupied by the first lord of the treasury or principal minister of the crown. Brown.

TREASURY CHEST FUND. A fund, in England, originating in the unusual balances of certain grants of public money, which is used for banking and loan purposes by the commissioners of the treasury. Wharton.

TREASURY, FIRST LORD OF. A high office of state in Great Britain, usually held by the Prime Minister.

TREASURY NOTE. A note or bill issued by the treasury department by the authority of the United States' government, and circulating as money. See Brown v. State, 120 Ala. 342, 25 So. 182.

TREASURY STOCK. Stock belonging to and subject to sale by corporation. Maynard v. Doe Run Lead Co., 305 Mo. 353, 265 S. W. 94. The term implies that the stock has already been regularly issued and has found its way into ownership by the corporation as one of its own stockholders. Union Trust Co. of New Jersey v. Van Schaick, 156 App. Div. 769, 141 N. Y. S. 945, 948.

TREATY.

In International Law

An agreement between two or more independent states. Brande. An agreement, league, or contract between two or more nations or sovereigns, formally signed by commissioners properly authorized, and solemnly ratified by the several sovereigns or the supreme power of each state. Webster; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 60, 8 L. Ed. 25; Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580, 5 S. Ct. 247, 23 L. Ed. 798; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 571, 10 L. Ed. 579; U. S. v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 7 S. Ct. 234, 30 L. Ed. 425; Ex parte Ortiz (C. C.) 100 F. 962; Charlton v. Kelly, 33 S. Ct. 945, 954, 29 S. Ct. 447, 57 L. Ed. 1274, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 397.

Personal treaties relate exclusively to the persons of the contracting sovereigns, such as family alliances, and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his family. As they relate to the persons, they expire of course on the death of the sovereign or the extinction of his family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe these treaties have lost their importance. Real treaties relate solely to the subject-matters of the convention, independently of the persons of the contracting parties, and continue to bind the state, although there may be changes in its constitution or in the persons of its rulers. Boyd's Wheat. Int. Law § 29.

In Private Law

"Treaty" signifies the discussion of terms which immediately precedes the conclusion of a contract or other transaction. A warranty on the sale of goods, to be valid, must be made during the "treaty" preceding the sale. Chit. Cont. 419; Sweet.

TREATY OF PEACE. An agreement or contract made by belligerent powers, in which they agree to lay down their arms, and by which they stipulate the conditions of peace and regulate the manner in which it is to be restored and supported. Vattel, b. 4, c. 2, § 9.

TREBELLANIC PORTION. "In consequence of this article, the trebellanic portion of the civil law—that is to say, the portion of the property of the testator which the instituted heir had a right to detain when he was charged with a fidei commissa or fiduciary bequest—is no longer a part of our law." Civ. Code La. art. 1520, par. 3.

TREBLE COSTS. See Costs.

TREBLE DAMAGES. In practice. Damages given by statute in certain cases, consisting of the single damages found by the jury, actually tripled in amount. The usual practice has been for the jury to find the single amount of the damages, and for the court, on motion, to order that amount to be trebled. 2 Tidd, Pr. 893, 894.

TREBUCKET. A tumbrel, castigatory, or cucking-stool. See James v. Comm., 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 227.

TREE. A woody plant, the branches of which spring from, and are supported upon, a trunk or body. Clay v. Tel. Co., 70 Miss. 411, 11 So. 658.

TREET. In old English law. Fine wheat.

TREMAGIUM, TREMESIUM. In old records. The season or time of sowing summer corn, being about March, the third month, to which the word may allude. Cowell.

Tres faciunt collegium. Three make a corporation; three members are requisite to constitute a corporation. Dig. 50, 16, 8; 1 Bl. Comm. 469.

TRESAEL. L. Fr. A great-great-grandfather. Britt. c. 119. Otherwise written "tresail," and "tresayle." 3 Bl. Comm. 186; Litt. § 20.

TRESAYLE. An abolished writ sued on ouster by abatement, on the death of the grandfather's grandfather.

TRESPASS. An unlawful act committed with violence, actual or implied, causing injury to the person, property, or relative rights of another; an injury or misfeasance to the person, property, or rights of another, done with force and violence, either actual or implied in law. See Grunson v. State, 89 Ind. 536, 46 Am. Rep. 178; Southern Ry. Co. v. Harden, 101 Ga. 263, 28 S. E. 847; Blood v. Kemp, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 173; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. McLaughlin, 63 Ill. 391; Agnew v. Jones, 74 Miss. 347, 23 So. 25; Hill v. Kimball, 76 Tex. 210, 13 S. W. 59, 7 L. R. A. 618; Brown v. Walker, 188 N. C. 52, 123 S. E. 633, 636; Reed v. Guessford, 7 Boyce (Del.) 228, 105 A. 428, 429.

In the strictest sense, an entry on another's ground, without a lawful authority, and doing some damage, however inconsiderable, to his real property. 3 Bl. Comm. 209. An entry on land without lawful authority by either a man, his servants, or his cattle. Stark v. Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Co. (Mun. Ct.) 166 N. Y. S. 411, 413.

Trespass, in its most comprehensive sense, signifies any transgression or offense against the law of nature, of society, or of the country in which we live; and this, whether it relates to a man's person or to his property. In its more limited and ordinary sense, it signifies an injury committed with violence, and this violence may be either actual or implied; and the law will imply violence though none is actually used, when the injury is of a direct and immediate kind, and committed on the person or tangible and corporeal property of the plaintiff. Of actual violence, an assault and battery is an instance; of implied, a peaceable but wrongful entry upon a person's land. Brown.

In Practice

A form of action, at the common law, which lies for redress in the shape of money damages for any unlawful injury done to the plaintiff, in respect either to his person, property, or rights, by the immediate force and violence of the defendant.

In General

—Continuing trespass. One which is in its nature a permanent invasion of the rights of another; as, where a person builds on his own land so that a part of the building overhangs his neighbor's land. H. H. Hitt Lumber Co. v. Cullman Property Co., 189 Ala. 13, 66 So. 720, 721.

—Joint trespass. A "joint trespass" occurs where two or more persons unite in committing it, or where some actually commit the tort, the others command, encourage or direct it. Stephens v. Schadler, 182 Ky. 833, 207 S. W. 704.

—Permanent trespass. One which consists of a series of acts, done on successive days, which are of the same nature, and are renewed or continued from day to day, so that, in the aggregate, they make up one indivisible wrong. 3 Bl. Comm. 212.

—Trespass de bonis asportatis. (Trespass for goods carried away.) In practice. The technical name of that species of action of trespass for injuries to personal property which lies where the injury consists in carrying away the goods or property. See 3 Bl. Comm. 150, 151.

—Trespass for mesne profits. A form of action supplemental to an action of ejectment, brought against the tenant in possession to recover the profits which he has wrongfully received during the time of his occupation. 3 Bl. Comm. 205.

—Trespass on the case. The form of action, at common law, adapted to the recovery of damages for some injury resulting to a party from the wrongful act of another, unaccompanied by direct or immediate force, or which is the indirect or secondary consequence of defendant's act. Commonly called, by abbreviation, "Case." See Munal v. Brown (C. C.) 70 F. 968; Nolan v. Railroad Co., 70 Conn. 159, 39 A. 115, 43 L. R. A. 305; Christian v. Mills, 2 Walk. (Pa.) 131.

—Trespass quare clausum fregit. "Trespass wherefore he broke the close." The common-law action for damages for an unlawful entry or trespass upon the plaintiff's land. In the Latin form of the writ, the defendant was called upon to show why he broke the plaintiff's close; i. e., the real or imaginary structure inclosing the land, whence the name. It is commonly abbreviated to "trespass qu. cl. fr." See Kimball v. Hilton, 92 Me. 214, 42 A. 394.

—Trespass to try title. The name of the action used in several of the states for the recovery of the possession of real property, with damages for any trespass committed upon the same by the defendant.

—Trespass vi et armis. Trespass with force and arms. The common-law action for damages for any injury committed by the defendant with direct and immediate force or violence against the plaintiff or his property.

TRESPASSER. One who has committed trespass; one who unlawfully enters or intrudes upon another's land, or unlawfully and forcibly takes another's personal property. The term is generally used in a limited sense to designate one who goes upon the premises of another without invitation, express or implied, and does so out of curiosity, or for his own purposes or convenience, and not in the performance of any duty to the owner. Heller v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 265 F. 192, 194.

Joint Trespassers

Two or more who unite in committing a trespass. Kansas City v. File, 60 Kan. 157, 55 P. 877; Bonte v. Postel, 109 Ky. 64, 58 S. W. 536, 51 L. R. A. 187.

Trespasser Ab Initio

Trespasser from the beginning. A term applied to a tort-feasor whose acts relate back so as to make a previous act, at the time innocent, unlawful; as, if he enter peaceably, and subsequently commit a breach of the peace, his entry is considered a trespass. Stim. Gloss. See Wright v. Marvin, 59 Vt. 437, 9 A. 601.

TRESTORNARE. In old English law. To turn aside; to divert a stream from its course. Bract. fols. 115, 234b. To turn or alter the course of a road. Cowell.

TRESVIRI. Lat. In Roman law. Officers who had the charge of prisons, and the execution of condemned criminals. Calvin.

TRET. An allowance made for the water or dust that may be mixed with any commodity. It differs from tare, (q. v.)

TRETHINGA. In old English law. A trithing; the court of a trithing.

TREYT. Withdrawn, as a juror. Written also treat. Cowell.

TRIA CAPITA, in Roman law, were civitas, libertas, and familia; i. e., citizenship, freedom, and family rights.

TRIAL. The examination before a competent tribunal, according to the law of the land, of the facts or law put in issue in a cause, for the purpose of determining such issue. Marsch v. Southern New England R. Corporation, 235 Mass. 304, 126 N. E. 519, 520.

The judicial examination of the issues in an action whether they be issues of law or of fact. Code of Iowa 1931, § 11428.

The examination of a cause, civil or criminal, before a judge who has jurisdiction over it, according to the laws of the land. See Finn v. Spagnoli, 67 Cal. 330, 7 P. 746; In re Chauncey, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 431; Bullard v. Kuhl, 54 Wis. 545, 11 N. W. 801; Spencer v. Thistle, 13 Neb. 229, 13 N. W. 214; State v. Brown, 63 Mo. 444; State v. Clifton, 57 Kan. 449, 46 P. 715; State v. Bergman, 37 Minn. 407, 34 N. W. 737; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Dunn, 19 Wall. 224, 22 L. Ed. 68; Crane v. Reeder, 28 Mich. 535, 15 Am. Rep. 223; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 109 Tex. 352, 207 S. W. 897, 899, 4 A. L. R. 613; State v. Dubray, 121 Kan. 886, 250 P. 316, 319; Photo Cines Co. v. American Film Mfg. Co., 190 Ill. App. 124, 128.

In its strict definition, the word "trial" in criminal procedure means the proceedings in open court after the pleadings are finished and the prosecution is otherwise ready, down to and including the rendition of the verdict. Thomas v. Mills, 117 Ohio St. 114, 157 N. E. 488, 489, 54 A. L. R. 1220.

Fair Trial

A trial conducted in substantial conformity to law. Sunderland v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 202, 216; Flynn v. State, 10 Okl. Cr. 41, 133 P. 1133; People v. Ephraim, 77 Cal. App. 29, 245 P. 769, 774.

Mistrial

See that title.

New Trial

A re-examination of an issue of fact in the same court after a trial and decision by a jury or court or by referees. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 656. A re-examination of the issue in the same court, before another jury, after a verdict has been given. Pen. Code Cal. § 1179. A re-examination in the same court of an issue of fact, or some part or portions thereof, after the verdict by a jury, report of a referee, or a decision by the court. Rev. Code Iowa 1880, § 2837 (Code 1931, § 11549). And see Oxford v. State, 80 Okl. 103, 194 P. 101; Warner v. Goding, 91 Fla. 260, 107 So. 406, 408.

New Trial Paper

In English practice. A paper containing a list of causes in which rules nisi have been obtained for a new trial, or for entering a verdict in place of a nonsuit, or for entering judgment non obstante veredicto, or for otherwise varying or setting aside proceedings which have taken place at nisi prius. These are called on for argument in the order in which they stand in the paper, on days appointed by the judges for the purpose. Brown.

Public Trial

A trial held in public, in the presence of the public, or in a place accessible and open to the attendance of the public at large, or of persons who may properly be admitted. "The requirement of a public trial is for the benefit of the accused; that the public may see he is fairly dealt with and not unjustly condemned, and that the presence of interested spectators may keep his triers keenly alive to a sense of their responsibility and to the importance of their functions; and the requirement is fairly observed if, without partiality or favoritism, a reasonable proportion of the public is suffered to attend, notwithstanding that those persons whose presence could be of no service to the accused, and who would only be drawn thither by a prurient curiosity, are excluded altogether." Cooley, Const. Lim. *312. And see People v. Hall, 51 App. Div. 57, 64 N. Y. S. 433; People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223, 3 P. 809; Commonwealth v. Trinkle, 279 Pa. 564, 124 A. 191, 192; People v. Greeson, 230 Mich. 124, 203 N. W. 141, 149.

Separate Trial

See Separate.

Speedy Trial

See that title.

State Trial

See State.

Trial at Bar

A species of trial now seldom resorted to, excepting in cases where the matter in dispute is one of great importance and difficulty. It takes place before all the judges at the bar of the court in which the action is brought. Brown. See 2 Tidd, Pr. 747; Steph. Pl. 84.

Trial at Nisi Prius

In practice. The ordinary kind of trial which takes place at the sittings, assizes, or circuit, before a single judge. 2 Tidd, Pr. 751, 819.

Trial by Certificate

A form of trial allowed in cases where the evidence of the person certifying was the only proper criterion of the point in dispute. Under such circumstances, the issue might be determined by the certificate alone, because, if sent to a jury, it would be conclusive upon them, and therefore their intervention was unnecessary. Tomlins.

Trial by Grand Assize

A peculiar mode of trial allowed in writs of right. See Assize; Grand Assize.

Trial by Inspection or Examination

A form of trial in which the judges of the court, upon the testimony of their own senses, decide the point in dispute.

Trial by Jury

A trial in which the issues of fact are to be determined by the verdict of a jury of twelve men, duly selected, impaneled, and sworn. The terms "jury" and "trial by jury" were used at the adoption of the constitution, and always, it is believed, before that time, and almost always since, in a single sense. A jury for the trial of a cause was a body of twelve men, described as upright, well-qualified, and lawful men, disinterested and impartial, not of kin nor personal dependents of either of the parties, having their homes within the jurisdictional limits of the court, drawn and selected by officers free from all bias in favor of or against either party, duly impaneled under the direction of a competent court, sworn to render a true verdict according to the law and the evidence given them, who, after hearing the parties and their evidence, and receiving the instructions of the court relative to the law involved in the trial, and deliberating, when necessary, apart from all extraneous influences, must return their unanimous verdict upon the issue submitted to them. State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 60. And see Gunn v. Union R. Co., 23 R. I. 289, 49 A. 999; State v. Hamey, 168 Mo. 167, 67 S. W. 620, 57 L. R.

A. 846; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 19 S. Ct. 580, 43 L. Ed. 873; Lommen v. Minneapolis Gaslight Co., 65 Minn. 196, 68 N. W. 53, 33 L. R. A. 437, 60 Am. St. Rep. 450; People v. Dutcher, 83 N. Y. 242; Vaughn v. Scade, 30 Mo. 600; Ward v. Farwell, 97 Ill. 612; Liska v. Chicago Rys. Co., 318 Ill. 570, 149 N. E. 469, 476; Branham v. Commonwealth, 209 Ky. 734, 273 S. W. 489, 490; Davis v. Central States Fire Ins. Co., 121 Kan. 69, 245 P. 1062, 1063.

Trial by Proviso

A proceeding allowed where the plaintiff in an action desists from prosecuting his suit, and does not bring it to trial in convenient time. The defendant, in such case, may take out the venire facias to the sheriff, containing these words, "proviso quod," etc., i. e., provided that. If plaintiff take out any writ to that purpose, the sheriff shall summon but one jury on them both. This is called "going to trial by proviso." Jacob, tit. "Proviso."

Trial by the Record

A form of trial resorted to where issue is taken upon a plea of nul tiel record, in which case the party asserting the existence of a record as pleaded is bound to produce it in court on a day assigned. If the record is forthcoming, the issue is tried by inspection and examination of it. If the record is not produced, judgment is given for his adversary. 3 Bl. Comm. 330.

Trial by Wager of Battel

This was a species of trial introduced into England, among other Norman customs, by William the Conqueror, in which the person accused fought with his accuser, under the apprehension that Heaven would give the victory to him who was in the right. 3 Bl. Comm. 337-341.

Trial by Wager of Law

In old English law. A method of trial, where the defendant, coming into court, made oath that he did not owe the claim demanded of him, and eleven of his neighbors, as compurgators, swore that they believed him to speak the truth. 3 Bl. Comm. 343. See Wager of Law.

Trial by Witnesses

The name "trial per testes" has been used for a trial without the intervention of a jury, is the only method of trial known to the civil law, and is adopted by depositions in chancery. The judge is thus left to form, in his own breast, his sentence upon the credit of the witnesses examined. But it is very rarely used at common law. Tomlins.

Trial De Novo

A new trial or retrial had in an appellate court in which the whole case is gone into as if no trial whatever had been had in the court below. See Karcher v. Green, 8 Houst. (Del.) 163, 32 A. 225; Ex parte Morales (Tex. Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 108; Shultz v. Lempert, 55 Tex. 277; Town of Rayville v. Mann, 136 La. 237, 66 So. 957, 958; Carlson v. Avery Co., 196 Ill. App. 262, 272.

Trial Jury

The jury participating in the trial of a given case; or a jury summoned and impaneled for the trial of a case, and in this sense a petit jury as distinguished from a grand jury.

Trial List

A list of cases marked down for trial for any one term.

Trial With Assessors

Admiralty actions involving nautical questions, e. g., actions of collision, are generally tried in England before a judge, with Trinity Masters sitting as assessors. Rosc. Adm. 179.

Triatio ibi semper debet fieri, ubi juratores meliorem possunt habere notitiam. Trial ought always to be had where the jurors can have the best information. 7 Coke, 1.

TRIBAL LANDS. Lands of Indian reservation which are not occupied by individual Indians and are the unallotted or common lands of the nation. Tuscarora Nation of Indians v. Williams, 79 Misc. 445, 141 N. Y. S. 207, 208.

TRIBUERE. Lat. In the civil law. To give; to distribute.

TRIBUNAL. The seat of a judge; the place where he administers justice. The whole body of judges who compose a jurisdiction; a judicial court; the jurisdiction which the judges exercise. See Foster v. Worcester, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 81.

In Roman Law

An elevated seat occupied by the prætor, when he judged, or heard causes in form. Originally a kind of stage made of wood in the form of a square, and movable, but afterwards built of stone in the form of a semicircle. Adams, Rom. Ant. 132, 133.

TRIBUNAUX DE COMMERCE. In French law. Certain courts composed of a president, judges, and substitutes, which take cognizance of all cases between merchants, and of disagreements among partners. Appeals lie from them to the courts of justice. Brown.

TRIBUTARY, n. Any stream flowing directly or indirectly into a river. [1895] 1 Q. B. 237.

TRIBUTARY, adj. Paying or yielding tribute, taxed or assessed by tribute. Amsbary v. City of Twin Falls, 34 Idaho, 313, 200 P. 723, 724.

TRIBUTE. A contribution which is raised by a prince or sovereign from his subjects to sustain the expenses of the state.

A sum of money paid by an inferior sovereign or state to a superior potentate, to secure the friendship or protection of the latter. Brande.

TRICESIMA. An ancient custom in a borough in the county of Hereford, so called because thirty burgesses paid 1d. rent for their houses to the bishop, who was lord of the manor. Wharton.

TRIDING-MOTE. The court held for a triding or trithing. Cowell.

TRIDUUM. In old English law. The space of three days. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 31, § 7.

TRIENNIAL ACT. An act of parliament of 1641, which provided that if in every third year parliament was not summoned and assembled before September 3, it should assemble on the second Monday of the next November.

Also an act of 1694, which provided that a parliament be called within three years after dissolution, and that the utmost limit of a parliament be three years. This was followed by the Septennial Act of 1716.

TRIENS. Lat.

In Roman Law

A subdivision of the as, containing four unciae; the proportion of four-twelfths or one-third. 2 Bl. Comm. 462, note m. A copper coin of the value of one-third of the as. Brande.

In Feudal Law

Dower or third. 2 Bl. Comm. 129.

TRIGAMUS. In old English law. One who has been thrice married; one who, at different times and successively, has had three wives; a trigamist. 3 Inst. 88.

TRIGILD. In Saxon law. A triple gild, geld, or payment; three times the value of a thing, paid as a composition or satisfaction. Spelman.

TRINEPOS (Lat.).

In Roman Law

Great-grandson of a grandchild.

TRINEPTIS (Lat.). Great-granddaughter of a grandchild.

TRINITY HOUSE. In English law. A society at Deptford Strond, incorporated by Hen. VIII. in 1515, for the promotion of commerce and navigation by licensing and regulating pilots, and ordering and erecting beacons, light-houses, buoys, etc. Wharton.

TRINITY MASTERS are elder brethren of the Trinity House. If a question arising in an admiralty action depends upon technical skill and experience in navigation, the judge or court is usually assisted at the hearing by two Trinity Masters, who sit as assessors, and advise the court on questions of a nautical character. Williams & B. Adm. Jur. 271; Sweet.

TRINITY SITTINGS. Sittings of the English court of appeal and of the high court of justice in London and Middlesex, commencing on the Tuesday after Whitsun week, and terminating on the 8th of August.

TRINITY TERM. One of the four terms of the English courts of common law, beginning on the 22d day of May, and ending on the 12th of June. 3 Steph. Comm. 562.

TRINIUMGELDUM. In old European law. An extraordinary kind of composition for an offense, consisting of three times nine, or twenty-seven times the single geld or payment. Spelman.

TRINKETS. Small articles of personal adornment or use when the object is essentially ornamental. 28 L. J. C. P. 626.

TRINODA NECESSITAS. Lat. In Saxon law. A threefold necessity or burden. A term used to denote the three things from contributing to the performance of which no lands were exempted, viz., pontis reparatio, (the repair of bridges,) arcis constructio, (the building of castles,) et expeditio contra hostem, (military service against an enemy.) 1 Bl. Comm. 263, 357.

TRIORS. In practice. Persons who are appointed to try challenges to jurors, i. e., to hear and determine whether a juror challenged for favor is or is not qualified to serve.

The lords chosen to try a peer, when indicted for felony, in the court of the lord high steward, are also called "triors." Mozley & Whitley.

TRIP. In mining, a number of cars attached together and drawn by a mule. Maize v. Big Creek Coal Co. (Mo. App.) 203 S. W. 633, 634.

TRIPARTITE. In conveyancing. Of three parts; a term applied to an indenture to which there are three several parties, (of the first, second, and third parts,) and which is executed in triplicate.

TRIPLE ALLIANCE. A treaty between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy, formed at the close of the Franco-Prussian War (1870-71).

TRIPLE ENTENTE. A treaty between Russia, France and Great Britain, formed early in the 20th century.

TRIPLICACION. L. Fr. In old pleading. A rejoinder in pleading; the defendant's answer to the plaintiff's replication. Britt. c. 77.

TRIPPLICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The reply of the plaintiff to the rejoinder of the defendant. It corresponds to the surrejoinder of common law. Inst. 4, 14; Bract. l. 5, t. 5, c. 1.

TRISTRIS. In old forest law. A freedom from the duty of attending the lord of a forest when engaged in the chase. Spelman.

TRITAVIA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandmother's great-grandmother; the female ascendant in the sixth degree.

TRITAVUS. Lat. In the civil law. A great-grandfather's great-grandfather; the male ascendant in the sixth degree.

TRITHING. In Saxon law. One of the territorial divisions of England, being the third part of a county, and comprising three or more hundreds. Within the trithing there was a court held (called "trithing-mote") which resembled the court-leet, but was inferior to the county court.

TRITHING-MOTE. The court held for a trithing or riding.

TRITHING-REEVE. The officer who superintended a trithing or riding.

TRIUMVIR. Lat. In old English law. A trithing man or constable of three hundred. Cowell.

TRIUMVIRI CAPITALES. Lat. In Roman law. Officers who had charge of the prison, through whose intervention punishments were inflicted. They had eight lictors to execute their orders. Vicat, Voc. Jur.

TRIVERBIAL DAYS. In the civil law. Juridical days; days allowed to the prætor for deciding causes; days on which the prætor might speak the three characteristic words of his office, viz., do, dico, addico. Calvin. Otherwise called "dies fasti." 3 Bl. Comm. 424, and note u.

TRIVIAL. Trifling; inconsiderable; of small worth or importance. In equity, a demurrer will lie to a bill on the ground of the triviality of the matter in dispute, as being below the dignity of the court. 4 Bouv. Inst. no. 4237.

TRONAGE. In English law: A customary duty or toll for weighing wool; so called because it was weighed by a common trona, or beam. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 12.

TRONATOR. A weigher of wool. Cowell.

TROOPS. "Troops," as used in the railroad land grant acts, requiring the railroads to transport free from toll or other charge troops of the United States, and in the land grant equalization agreements, whereby the railroads were to transport such troops at half rates, means soldiers collectively, a body of soldiers, and does not include discharged soldiers or military prisoners, rejected applicants for enlistment returning home from recruiting depots, accepted applicants for enlistment going to recruiting depots, retired soldiers or soldiers on furloughs, traveling as individuals and not as a body. United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., 249 U. S. 354, 39 S. Ct. 294, 295, 63 L. Ed. 643.

TROPHY MONEY. Money formerly collected and raised in London, and the several counties of England, towards providing harness and maintenance for the militia, etc.

TROVER. In common-law practice, the action of trover (or trover and conversion) is a species of action on the case, and originally lay for the recovery of damages against a person who had found another's goods and wrongfully converted them to his own use. Subsequently the allegation of the loss of the goods by the plaintiff and the finding of them by the defendant was merely fictitious, and the action became the remedy for any wrongful interference with or detention of the goods of another. 3 Steph. Comm. 425. Sweet. See Burnham v. Pidcock, 33 Misc. 65, 66 N. Y. S. 806; Larson v. Dawson, 24 R. I. 317, 53 A. 93, 96 Am. St. Rep. 716; Waring v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 76 Pa. 496; Metropolitan Mfg. Co. v. Lynch, 68 Conn. 459, 36 A. 832; Spellman v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 35 S. C. 475, 14 S. E. 947, 28 Am. St. Rep. 858.

In form it is a fiction; in substance, a remedy to recover the value of personal chattels wrongfully converted by another to his own use. 1 Burr. 31; Athens & Pomeroy Coal & Land Co. v. Tracy, 22 Ohio App. 21, 153 N. E. 240, 243; Siverson v. Clanton, 88 Or. 261, 170 P. 933, 935. See Conversion.

TROY WEIGHT. A weight of twelve ounces to the pound, having its name from Troyes, a city in Aube, France.

TRUCE. In international law. A suspension or temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement between belligerent powers; an armistice. Wheat. Int. Law, 442.

TRUCE OF GOD. In medieval law. A truce or suspension of arms promulgated by the church, putting a stop to private hostilities at certain periods or during certain sacred seasons.

TRUCK ACTS. Acts in England, 1 & 2 Wm. IV, amended in 1887 and 1896, which provide that workmen shall not have unreasonable deductions made from their wages (as for fines, damaged goods, materials, or tools), nor have their wages paid otherwise than in current coin, nor be obliged to spend them in any particular place or manner.

TRUE. Conformable to fact; correct; exact; actual; genuine; honest. See First State Bank of Teague v. Hadden (Tex. Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 1168, 1170.

"In one sense, that only is true which is conformable to the actual state of things. In that sense, a statement is untrue which does not express things exactly as they are. But in another and broader sense, the word 'true' is often used as a synonym of 'honest,' 'sincere,' 'not fraudulent.'" Moulou v. American L. Ins. Co., 111 U. S. 345, 4 S. Ct. 466, 28 L. Ed. 447.

TRUE BILL. In criminal practice. The indorsement made by a grand jury upon a bill of indictment, when they find it sustained by the evidence laid before them, and are satisfied of the truth of the accusation. 4 Bl. Comm. 306.

TRUE COPY. A true copy, does not mean an absolutely exact copy but means that the copy shall be so true that anybody can understand it. It may contain an error or omission. 51 L. J. Ch. 905.

TRUE, PUBLIC, AND NOTORIOUS. These three qualities used to be formally predicated in the libel in the ecclesiastical courts, of the charges which it contained, at the end of each article severally. Wharton.

TRUE VERDICT. A true "verdict" is the truthful saying of 12 impartial, fair-minded men, who arrive at a conclusion because it is their duty under the evidence to do so, and not because they are coerced, either wittingly or unwittingly, by a trial judge. Meadows v. State, 182 Ala. 51, 62 So. 737, 738, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 663.

TRUST.

I. In General

A right of property, real or personal, held by one party for the benefit of another. See Goodwin v. McMinn, 193 Pa. 646, 44 A. 1094, 74 Am. St. Rep. 703; Beers v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 613; Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. 202, 19 L. Ed. 306; Keplinger v. Keplinger, 185 Ind. 81, 113 N. E. 292, 293; Boyce v. Mosely, 102 S. C. 361, 86 S. E. 771, 773.

An obligation arising out of a confidence reposed in the trustee or representative, who has the legal title to property conveyed to him, that he will faithfully apply the property according to the confidence reposed, or, in other words, according to the wishes of the grantor of the trust. 4 Kent, Comm. 304; Willis, Trustees, 2; Beers v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 613; Thornburg v. Buck, 13 Ind. App. 446, 41 N. E. 85; Marble v. Marble's Estate, 304 Ill. 229, 136 N. E. 589, 593. An equitable obligation, either express or implied, resting upon a person by reason of a confidence reposed in him, to apply or deal with property for the benefit of some other person, or for the benefit of himself and another or others, according to such confidence. McCreary v. Gewinner, 103 Ga. 528, 29 S. E. 960; Christopher v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 284 S. W. 253, 257; Templeton v. Bockler, 73 Or. 494, 144 P. 405, 409.

A holding of property subject to a duty of employing it or applying its proceeds according to directions given by the person from whom it was derived. Munroe v. Crouse, 59 Hun, 248, 12 N. Y. S. 815.

"Trust" is further defined in a broad comprehensive sense as a relation between two persons, by virtue of which one of them holds property for the benefit of the other. In re Vosburgh's Estate, 279 Pa. 329, 123 A. 813, 815; Shelton v. Harrison, 182 Mo. App. 404, 167 S. W. 634, 636; and as a confidence reposed in one person, by and for the benefit of another, with respect to property held by the former, for the latter's benefit; Teal v. Pleasant Grove Local Union No. 204, Farmers' Educational & Co-operative Union of America, 200 Ala. 23, 75 So. 335, 337; Moore v. Shifflett, 187 Ky. 7, 216 S. W. 614, 616; State v. Exchange Bank of Ogallala, 114 Neb. 664, 209 N. W. 249, 252.

—Accessory trust. In Scotch law, equivalent to "active" or "special" trust. See infra.

—Active trust. One which imposes upon the trustee the duty of taking active measures in the execution of the trust, as, where property is conveyed to trustees with directions to sell and distribute the proceeds among creditors of the grantor; distinguished from a "passive" or "dry" trust. In re Buch's Estate, 278 Pa. 185, 122 A. 239, 240; Welch v. Northern Bank & Trust Co., 100 Wash. 349, 170 P. 1029, 1032.

—Cestui que trust. The person for whose benefit a trust is created or who is to enjoy the income or the avails of it.

—Charitable trusts. Trusts designed for the benefit of a class or the public generally. They are essentially different from private trusts in that the beneficiaries are uncertain. Bauer v. Myers (C. C. A.) 244 F. 902, 911.

—Complete voluntary trust. One completely created, the subject-matter being designated, the trustee and beneficiary being named, and the limitations and trusts being fully and perfectly declared. In re Leigh's Estate, 186 Iowa, 931, 173 N. W. 143, 146.

—Constructive trust. A trust raised by construction of law, or arising by operation of law, as distinguished from an express trust. Wherever the circumstances of a transaction are such that the person who takes the legal estate in property cannot also enjoy the beneficial interest without necessarily violating some established principle of equity, the court will immediately raise a constructive trust, and fasten it upon the conscience of the legal owner, so as to convert him into a trustee for the parties who in equity are entitled to the beneficial enjoyment. Hill, Trustees, 116; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 511. Nester v. Gross, 66

Minn. 371, 69 N. W. 39; Jewelry Co. v. Volfer, 106 Ala. 205, 17 So. 525, 28 L. R. A. 707, 54 Am. St. Rep. 31; Westphal v. Williams (Ind. App.) 107 N. E. 91, 94; Porter v. Shaffer, 147 Va. 921, 133 S. E. 614, 616; Misamore v. Berglin, 197 Ala. 111, 72 So. 347, 349, L. R. A. 1916F, 1024.

—Contingent trust. An express trust may depend for its operation upon a future event, and is then a "contingent" trust. Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 3734.

—Direct trust. A direct trust is an express trust, as distinguished from a constructive or implied trust. Currence v. Ward, 43 W. Va. 367, 27 S. E. 329.

—Directory trust. One which is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions.

—Dry trust. One which merely vests the legal title in the trustee, and does not require the performance of any active duty on his part to carry out the trust. In re Shaw's Estate, 198 Cal. 352, 246 P. 48, 52; Blackburn v. Blackburn, 167 Ky. 113, 180 S. W. 48, 49.

—Educational trusts. Trusts for the founding, endowing, and supporting schools for the advancement of all useful branches of learning, which are not strictly private. Richards v. Wilson, 185 Ind. 335, 112 N. E. 780, 794.

—Executed trust. A trust of which the scheme has in the outset been completely declared. Adams, Eq. 151. A trust in which the estates and interest in the subject-matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust, and require no further instruments to complete them. Bisp. Eq. 20; Pillot v. Landon, 46 N. J. Eq. 310, 19 A. 25; Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. 177, 47 Am. Dec. 505; In re Fair's Estate, 132 Cal. 523, 60 P. 442, 84 Am. St. Rep. 70; Cushing v. Blake, 29 N. J. Eq. 403; Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H. L. Cas. 210; Mattsen v. U. S. Ensilage Harvester Co., 171 Minn. 237, 213 N. W. 893, 895. As all trusts are executory in this sense, that the trustee is bound to dispose of the estate according to the tenure of his trust, whether active or passive, it would be more accurate and precise to substitute the terms, "perfect" and "imperfect" for "executed" and "executory" trusts. 1 Hayes, Conv. 85.

—Executory trust. One which requires the execution of some further instrument, or the doing of some further act, on the part of the creator of the trust or of the trustee, towards its complete creation or full effect. Martling v. Martling, 55 N. J. Eq. 771, 39 A. 203; Carradine v. Carradine, 33 Miss. 729; Cornwell v. Wulff, 148 Mo. 542, 50 S. W. 439, 45 L. R. A. 53; In re Fair's Estate, 132 Cal. 523, 60

P. 442, 84 Am. St. Rep. 70; Pillot v. Landon, 46 N. J. Eq. 310, 19 A. 25.

—Express trust. A trust created or declared in express terms, and usually in writing, as distinguished from one inferred by the law from the conduct or dealings of the parties. State v. Campbell, 59 Kan. 246, 52 P. 454; Kaphan v. Toney (Tenn. Ch.) 58 S. W. 913; McMonagle v. McGlinn (C. C.) 85 F. 91; Ransdel v. Moore, 153 Ind. 393, 53 N. E. 767, 53 L. R. A. 753; Sanford v. Van Pelt, 314 Mo. 175, 282 S. W. 1022, 1030; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind. App. 390, 117 N. E. 547, 549. Express trusts are those which are created in express terms in the deed, writing, or will, while implied trusts are those which, without being expressed, are deducible from the nature of the transaction, as matters of intent, or which are superinduced upon the transactions by operation of law, as matters of equity, independently of the particular intention of the parties. Brown v. Cherry, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 635.

—Imperfect trust. An executory trust, (which see;) and see Executed Trust.

—Implied trust. A trust raised or created by implication of law; a trust implied or presumed from circumstances. Wilson v. Welles, 79 Minn. 53, 81 N. W. 549; In re Morgan, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 220; Kaphan v. Toney (Tenn. Ch.) 58 S. W. 913; Cone v. Dunham, 59 Conn. 145, 20 A. 311, 8 L. R. A. 647; Russell v. Peyton, 4 Ill. App. 478; Holsapple v. Schrontz, 65 Ind. App. 390, 117 N. E. 547, 549; Springer v. Springer, 144 Md. 465, 125 A. 162, 166.

—Involuntary trust. "Involuntary" or "constructive" trusts embrace all those instances in which a trust is raised by the doctrines of equity, for the purpose of working out justice in the most efficient manner, when there is no intention of the parties to create a trust relation. This class of trusts may usually be referred to fraud, either actual or constructive, as an essential element. Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S. D. 388, 47 N. W. 402, 36 Am. St. Rep. 739.

—Massachusetts or Business Trusts. See "Trust Estates as Business Companies."

—Ministerial trusts. (Also called "instrumental trusts.") Those which demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ; as to convey an estate. They are a species of special trusts, distinguished from discretionary trusts, which necessarily require much exercise of the understanding. 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 1896.

—Naked trust. A dry or passive trust; one which requires no action on the part of the trustee, beyond turning over money or property to the cestui que trust. Cerri v. Akron-People's Telephone Co. (D. C.) 219 F. 285, 292, —Passive trust. A trust as to which the trustee has no active duty to perform. Goodrich v. Milwaukee, 24 Wis. 429; Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N. C. 154, 45 S. E. 542; Holmes v. Walter, 118 Wis. 409, 95 N. W. 380, 62 L. R. A. 986; Dixon v. Dixon, 123 Me. 470, 124 A. 198, 199.

—Precatory trust. Where words employed in a will or other instrument do not amount to a positive command or to a distinct testamentary disposition, but are terms of entreaty, request, recommendation, or expectation, they are termed "precatory words," and from such words the law will raise a trust, called a "precatory trust," to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor. See Bohon v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 378; Hunt v. Hunt, 18 Wash. 14, 50 P. 578; Aldrich v. Aldrich, 172 Mass. 101, 51 N. E. 449.

—Private trust. One established or created for the benefit of a certain designated individual or individuals, or a known person or class of persons, clearly identified or capable of identification by the terms of the instrument creating the trust, as distinguished from trusts for public institutions or charitable uses. See Pennoyer v. Wadhams, 20 Or. 274, 25 P. 720, 11 L. R. A. 210; Doyle v. Whalen, 87 Me. 414, 32 A. 1022, 31 L. R. A. 118; Brooks v. Belfast, 90 Me. 318, 38 A. 222; Bauer v. Myers (C. C. A.) 244 F. 902, 911.

—Proprietary trust. In Scotch law, a naked, dry, or passive trust. See supra.

—Public trust. One constituted for the benefit either of the public at large or of some considerable portion of it answering a particular description; public trusts and charitable trusts may be considered in general as synonymous expressions. Lewin, Trusts, 20; Bauer v. Myers (C. C. A.) 244 F. 902, 911.

—Resulting trust. One that arises by implication of law, or by the operation and construction of equity, and which is established as consonant to the presumed intention of the parties as gathered from the nature of the transaction. A "resulting trust," arises where the legal estate in property is disposed of, conveyed, or transferred, but the intent appears or is inferred from the terms of the disposition, or from the accompanying facts and circumstances, that the beneficial interest is not to go or be enjoyed with the legal title. Lafkowitz v. Jackson (C. C. A.) 13 F. (2d) 370, 372. See Sanders v. Steele, 124 Ala. 415, 26 So. 882; Dorman v. Dorman, 187 Ill. 154, 58 N. E. 235, 79 Am. St. Rep. 210; Aborn v. Searles, 18 R. I. 357, 27 A. 796; Fulton v. Jansen, 99 Cal. 587, 34 P. 331; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Shepard, 169 N. Y. 170, 62 N. E. 154, 58 L. R. A. 115; Farwell v. Wilcox, 73 Okl. 230, 175 P. 936, 938, 4 A. L. R. 156; (Civ. Code, § 853). Cummings v. Cummings, 55 Cal. App. 433, 203 P. 452, 455.

—Secret trusts. Where a testator gives property to a person, on a verbal promise by the legatee or devisee that he will hold it in trust for another person, this is called a "secret trust." Sweet.

—Shifting trust. An express trust which is so settled that it may operate in favor of beneficiaries additional to, or substituted for, those first named, upon specified contingencies. Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 3734.

—Simple trust. A simple trust corresponds with the ancient use, and arises where property is simply vested in one person for the use of another, and the nature of the trust, not being qualified by the settlor, is left to the construction of law. Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N. C. 154, 45 S. E. 541; Cone v. Dunham, 59 Conn. 145, 20 A. 311, 8 L. R. A. 647; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. 500, 100 Am. Dec. 586.

—Special trust. One in which a trustee is interposed for the execution of some purpose particularly pointed out, and is not, as in case of a simple trust, a mere passive depository of the estate, but is required to exert himself actively in the execution of the settlor's intention; as, where a conveyance is made to trustees upon trust to reconvey, or to sell for the payment of debts. Lew. Tr. 3, 16.

Special trusts have been divided into (1) ministerial (or instrumental) and (2) discretionary. The former, such as demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ; the latter, such as cannot be duly administered without the application of a certain degree of prudence and judgment. 2 Rouv. Inst. no. 1896; Perkins v. Brinkley, 133 N. C. 154, 45 S. E. 541; Flagg v. Ely, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 209; Freer v. Lake, 115 Ill. 662, 4 N. E. 512; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. 496, 100 Am. Dec. 586.

—Spendthrift trust. See Spendthrift.

—Transgressive trust. A name sometimes applied to a trust which transgresses or violates the rule against perpetuities. See Pulitzer v. Livingston, 89 Me. 359, 36 A. 635.

—Trust allotments. Allotments to Indians, in which a certificate or trust patent is issued declaring that the United States will hold the land for a designated period in trust for the allottee. U. S. v. Bowling, 256 U. S. 484, 41 S. Ct. 561, 562, 65 L. Ed. 1054.

—Trust company. A corporation formed for the purpose of taking, accepting, and executing all such trusts as may be lawfully committed to it, and acting as testamentary trustee, trustee under deeds of settlement or for married women, executor, guardian, etc. To these functions are sometimes (but not necessarily) added the business of acting as fiscal agent for corporations, attending to the registration and transfer of their stock and bonds, serving as trustee for their bond or mortgage creditors, and transacting a general banking and loan business. See Venner v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 54 App. Div. 271, 66 N. Y. Supp. 773; Jenkins v. Neff, 163 N. Y. 320, 57 N. E. 408; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 7 S. Ct. 826, 30 L. Ed. 895.

—Trust-deed. (1) A species of mortgage given to a trustee for the purpose of securing a numerous class of creditors, as the bondholders of a railroad corporation, with power to foreclose and sell on failure of the payment of their bonds, notes, or other claims. (2) In some of the states, and in the District of Columbia, a trust-deed or deed of trust is a security resembling a mortgage, being a conveyance of lands to trustees to secure the payment of a debt, with a power of sale upon default, and upon a trust to apply the net proceeds to paying the debt and to turn over the surplus to the grantor. Dean v. Smith, 53 N. D. 123, 204 N. W. 987, 994; Guaranty Title & Trust Co. v. Thompson, 93 Fla. 983, 113 So. 117, 120.

—Trust estate. This term may mean either the estate of the trustee,—that is, the legal title,—or the estate of the beneficiary, or the corpus of the property which is the subject of the trust. See Cooper v. Cooper, 5 N. J. Eq. 9; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Carroll, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 643.

—Trust ex maleficio. A species of constructive trust arising out of some fraud, misconduct, or breach of faith on the part of the person to be charged as trustee, which renders it an equitable necessity that a trust should be implied. See Rogers v. Richards, 67 Kan. 706, 74 Pac. 255; Kent v. Dean, 128 Ala. 400, 30 South. 543; Barry v. Hill, 166 Pa. 344, 31 Atl. 126; Lefkowitz v. Silver, 182 N. C. 359, 109 S. E. 56, 60, 23 A. L. R. 1491; Yarborough v. Tolbert (Tex. Civ. App.) 282 S. W. 302, 304.

—Trust fund. A fund held by a trustee for the specific purposes of the trust; in a more general sense, a fund which, legally or equitably, is subject to be devoted to a particular purpose and cannot or should not be diverted therefrom. In this sense it is often said that the assets of a corporation are a "trust fund" for the payment of its debts. See Henderson v. Indiana Trust Co., 143 Ind. 561, 40 N. E. 516; In re Beard's Estate, 7 Wyo. 104, 50 Pac. 226, 38 L. R. A. 860, 75 Am. St. Rep. 882; Spencer v. Smith (C. C. A.) 201 F. 647, 652; Terhune v. Weise, 132 Wash. 208, 231 P. 954, 955, 38 A. L. R. 94.

—Trust in invitum. A constructive trust imposed by equity, contrary to the trustee's intention and will, upon property in his hands. Sanford v. Hamner, 115 Ala. 406, 22 South. 117.

—Trust receipt. A well-known instrument of commerce whereby the banker advancing money on an importation takes title directly to himself and as owner delivers the goods to the dealer in whose behalf he is acting secondarily and to whom the title is ultimately to go when the primary right of the banker has been satisfied. People's Nat. Bank v. Mulholland, 228 Mass. 152, 117 N. E. 46, 47.

—Voluntary trust. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another, as distinguished from an "involuntary" trust, which is created by operation of law. Civ. Code Cal. §§ 2216, 2217. According to another use of the term, "voluntary" trusts are such as are made in favor of a volunteer, that is, a person who gives nothing in exchange for the trust, but receives it as a pure gift; and in this use the term is distinguished from "trusts for value," the latter being such as are in favor of purchasers, mortgagees, etc. A "voluntary trust" is an equitable gift, and in order to be enforceable by the beneficiaries must be complete. Cameron v. Cameron, 96 Okl. 98, 220 P. 889, 890; Logan v. Ryan, 68 Cal. App. 448, 229 P. 993, 996. The difference between a "gift inter vivos" and a "voluntary trust" is that, in a gift, the thing itself with title passes to the donee, while, in a voluntary trust, the actual title passes to a cestui que trust while the legal title is retained by the settlor, to be held by him for the purposes of the trust or is by the settlor transferred to another to hold for the purposes of the trust. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

2. In Constitutional and Statutory Law

An association or organization of persons or corporations having the intention and power, or the tendency, to create a monopoly, control production, interfere with the free course of trade or transportation, or to fix and regulate the supply and the price of commodities.

In the history of economic development, the "trust" was originally a device by which several corporations engaged in the same general line of business might combine for their mutual advantage, in the direction of eliminating destructive competition, controlling the output of their commodity, and regulating and maintaining its price, but at the same time preserving their separate individual existence, and without any consolidation or merger. This device was the erection of a central committee or board, composed, perhaps, of the presidents or general managers of the different corporations, and the transfer to them of a majority of the stock in each of the corporations, to be held "in trust" for the several stockholders so assigning their holdings. These stockholders received in return "trust certificates" showing that they were entitled to receive the dividends on their assigned stock, though the voting power of it had passed to the trustees. This last feature enabled the trustees or committee to elect all the directors of all the corporations, and through them the officers, and thereby to exercise an absolutely controlling influence over the policy and operations of each constituent company, to the ends and with the purposes above mentioned. Though the "trust," in this sense, is now seldom if ever resorted to as a form of corporate organization, having given place to the "holding corporation" and other devices, the word has become current in statute laws as well as popular speech, to designate almost any form of combination of a monopolistic character or tendency. See Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 428; Northern Securities Co. v. U. S., 193 U. S. 197, 24 Sup. Ct. 436, 48 L. Ed. 679; MacGinniss v. Mining Co., 29 Mont. 428, 75 P. 89; State v. Continental Tobacco Co., 177 Mo. 1, 75 S. W. 737; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 250, 24 S. W. 397, 22 L. R. A. 483; State v. Insurance Co., 152 Mo. 1, 52 S. W. 595, 45 L. R. A. 333; Georgia Fruit Exchange v. Turnipseed, 9 Ala. App. 123, 62 So. 542, 546; Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. State of Missouri, 35 S. Ct. 671, 673, 238 U. S. 41, 59 L. Ed. 1192.

In a looser sense the term "trust" is applied to any combination of establishments in the same line of business for securing the same ends by holding the individual interests of each subservient to a common authority for the common interests of all. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works v. State of Missouri, 238 U. S. 41, 35 S. Ct. 671, 673, 59 L. Ed. 1192.

TRUST ESTATES AS BUSINESS COMPANIES. A practice originating in Massachusetts of vesting a business or certain real estate in a group of trustees, who manage it for the benefit of the beneficial owners; the ownership of the latter is evidenced by negotiable (or transferable) shares. The trustees are elected by the shareholders, or, in case of a vacancy, by the board of trustees. Provision is made in the agreement and declaration of trust to the effect that when new trustees are elected, the trust estate shall vest in them without further conveyance. The declaration of trust specifies the powers of the trustees. They have a common seal; the board is organized with the usual officers of a board of trustees; it is governed by by-laws; the officers have the usual powers of like corporate officers; so far as practicable, the trustees in their collective capacity, are to carry on the business under a specified name. The trustees may also hold shares as beneficiaries. Provision may be made for the alteration or amendment of the agreement or declaration in a specified manner. In Eliot v. Freeman, 220 U. S. 178, 31 Sup. Ct. 360, 55 L. Ed. 424, it was held that such a trust was not within the corporation tax provisions of the tariff act of Aug. 5, 1909. See also Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, 31 Sup. Ct. 361, 55 L. Ed. 428.

TRUSTEE. The person appointed, or required by law, to execute a trust; one in whom an estate, interest, or power is vested, under an express or implied agreement to administer or exercise it for the benefit or to the use of another called the cestui que trust. Pioneer Mining Co. v. Tyberg (C. C.

A.) 215 F. 501, 506, L. R. A. 1915B, 442; Kaehn v. St. Paul Co-op. Ass'n, 156 Minn. 113, 194 N. W. 112; State v. Exchange Bank of Ogallala, 114 Neb. 664, 209 N. W. 249, 252, 253; Brown v. Bottom Creek Coal & Coke Co., 94 W. Va. 287, 118 S. E. 284, 288.

"Trustee" is also used in a wide and perhaps inaccurate sense, to denote that a person has the duty of carrying out a transaction, in which he and another person are interested, in such manner as will be most for the benefit of the latter, and not in such a way that he himself might be tempted, for the sake of his personal advantage, to neglect the interests of the other. In this sense, directors of companies are said to be "trustees for the shareholders." Sweet.

Conventional Trustee

A "conventional" trustee is one appointed by a decree of court to execute a trust, as distinguished from one appointed by the instrument creating the trust. Gilbert v. Kolb, 85 Md. 627, 37 Atl. 423.

Joint Trustees

Two or more persons who are intrusted with property for the benefit of one or more others.

Judicial Trustee

A "judicial trustee," as distinguished from a conventional trustee, is an officer of a chancery court whose acts are generally limited and defined by familiar and settled rules and procedure. Kramme v. Mewshaw, 147 Md. 535, 128 A. 468, 472.

Public Trustee

An act of 1906 referring to England and Wales provides for the appointment of a public trustee to administer estates of small value, to act as custodian trustee, or as ordinary trustee or judicial trustee, or to administer the property of a convict under the Forfeiture Act.

Quasi Trustee

A person who reaps a benefit from a breach of trust, and so becomes answerable as a trustee. Lewin, Trusts (4th Ed.) 592, 638.

Testamentary Trustee

A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. The term does not ordinarily include an executor or an administrator with the will annexed, or a guardian, except when they act in the execution of a trust created by the will and which is separable from their functions as executors, etc. See In re Hazard, 51 Hun, 201, 4 N. Y. Supp. 701; In re Valentine's Estate, 1 Misc. 491, 23 N. Y. Supp. 289; In re Hawley, 104 N. Y. 250, 10 N. E. 352.

Trustee Acts

The statutes 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, passed in 1850, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, passed in 1852, enabling the court of chancery, without bill filed, to appoint new trustees in lieu of any who, on account of death, lunacy, absence, or otherwise, are unable or unwilling to act as such; and also to make vesting orders by which legal estates and rights may be transferred from the old trustee or trustees to the new trustee or trustees so appointed. Mozley & Whitley.

Trustee Ex Maleficio

A person who, being guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct, is held by equity to the duty and liability of a trustee, in relation to the subject-matter, to prevent him from profiting by his own wrong. Rice v. Braden, 243 Pa. 141, 89 A. 877, 880.

Trustee in Bankruptcy

A person in whom the property of a bankrupt is vested in trust for the creditors.

Trustee Process

The name given, in the New England states, to the process of garnishment or foreign attachment.

Trustee Relief Acts

The statute 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, passed in 1847, and statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 74, passed in 1849, by which a trustee is enabled to pay money into court, in cases where a difficulty arises respecting the title to the trust fund. Mozley & Whitley.

TRUSTER. In Scotch law. The maker or creator of a trust.

TRUSTIS. In old European law. Trust; faith; confidence; fidelity.

TRUSTOR. A word occasionally, though rarely, used as a designation of the creator, donor, or founder of a trust.

TRUTH. There are three conceptions as to what constitutes "truth": Agreement of thought and reality; eventual verification; and consistency of thought with itself. Memphis Telephone Co. v. Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. (C. C. A.) 231 F. 835, 842.

TRY. To examine judicially; to examine and investigate a controversy, by the legal method called "trial," for the purpose of determining the issues it involves.

TSAR. The better, though perhaps less common spelling of "czar" (q. v.).

TUAS RES TIBI HABETO. Lat. Have or take your things to yourself. The form of words by which, according to the old Roman law, a man divorced his wife. Calvin.

TUB. In mercantile law. A measure containing sixty pounds of tea, and from fifty-six to eighty-six pounds of camphor. Jacob.

TUB-MAN. In English law. A barrister who has a preaudience in the exchequer, and also one who has a particular place in court, is so called. Brown.

TUCHAS. In Spanish law. Objections or exceptions to witnesses. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 10.

TUCKER ACT. The act of March 3, 1887, relating to the jurisdiction of the court of claims. Garl. & Ralston, Fed. Pr. 413.

TUERTO. In Spanish law. Tort. Las Partidas, pt. 7, tit. 6, 1, 5.

TUG. A steam vessel built for towing; synonymous with "tow-boat."

TULLIANUM. Lat. In Roman law. That part of a prison which was under ground. Supposed to be so called from Servius Tullius, who built that part of the first prison in Rome. Adams, Rom. Ant. 290.

TUMBREL. A castigatory, trebucket, or ducking-stool, anciently used as a punishment for common scolds.

TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING. Under St. 13 Car. II. St. 1, c. 5, this was a misdemeanor, and consisted in more than twenty persons signing any petition to the crown or either house of parliament for the alteration of matters established by law in church or state, unless the contents thereof had been approved by three justices, or the majority of the grand jury at assizes or quarter sessions. No petition could be delivered by more than ten persons. 4 Bl. Comm. 147; Mozley & Whitley.

TUN. A measure of wine or oil, containing four hogsheads.

TUNING. The term "tuning" as used with reference to signaling by electro-magnetic waves, or wireless telegraphy, means the bringing of two or more electrical circuits into resonance, or the adjustment of capacity and inductance to secure the time-period vibration or wave length desired. The wave length assigned to a station might be called its "tune." National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States (C. C. A.) 208 F. 679, 695.

TUNGREVE. A town-reeve or bailiff. Cowell.

TUNNAGE. A duty in England anciently due upon all wines imported, over and above the prisage and butlerage. 2 Steph. Com. 628.

TURBA. Lat. In the civil law. A multitude; a crowd or mob; a tumultuous assembly of persons. Said to consist of ten or fifteen, at the least. Calvin.

TURBARY. Turbary, or common of turbary, is the right or liberty of digging turf upon another man's ground. Brown.

TURF AND TWIG. A piece of turf, or a twig or a bough, were delivered by the feoffer to the feoffee in making livery of seisin. 2 Bla. Com. 315.

TURN, or TOURN. The great court-leet of the county, as the old county court was the court-baron. Of this the sheriff is judge, and the court is incident to his office; wherefore it is called the "sheriff's tourn;" and it had its name originally from the sheriff making a turn of circuit about his shire, and holding this court in each respective hundred. Wharton.

TURNED TO A RIGHT. This phrase means that a person whose estate is divested by usurpation cannot expel the possessor by mere entry, but must have recourse to an action, either possessory or droitual. Mozley & Whitley.

TURNKEY. A person, under the superintendence of a jailer, who has the charge of the keys of the prison, for the purpose of opening and fastening the doors.

TURNOUT. A short side-track on a railroad which may be occupied by one train while another is passing on the main track; a siding. Philadelphia v. R. Co., 133 Pa. 134, 19 A. 356; Indiana Rys. & Light Co. v. City of Kokomo, 183 Ind. 543, 108 N. E. 771, 772.

TURNPIKE. A gate set across a road, to stop travelers and carriages until toll is paid for the privilege of passage thereon.

TURNPIKE ROADS. These are roads on which parties have by law a right to erect gates and bars, for the purpose of taking toll, and of refusing the permission to pass along them to all persons who refuse to pay. Northam Bridge Co. v. London Ry. Co., 6 Mees. & W. 428. A turnpike road is a public highway, established by public authority for public use, and is to be regarded as a public easement, and not as private property. The only difference between this and a common highway is that, instead of being made at the public expense in the first instance, it is authorized and laid out by public authority, and made at the expense of individuals in the first instance; and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll, levied by public authority for the purpose. Com. v. Wilkinson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 175, 26 Am. Dec. 654.

TURNABLE DOCTRINE. This doctrine requires the owner of premises not to attract or lure children into unsuspected danger or great bodily harm, by keeping thereon attractive machinery or dangerous instrumentalities in an exposed and unguarded condition, and where injuries have been received by a child so enticed the entry is not regarded as unlawful, and does not necessarily preclude a recovery of damages; the attractiveness of the machine or structure amounting to an implied invitation to enter. Heller v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 265 F. 192, 194. It imposes a liability on a property owner for injuries to a child of tender years, resulting from something on his premises that can be operated by such a child and made dangerous by him, and which is attractive to him and calculated to induce him to use it, where he fails to protect the thing so that a child of tender years cannot be hurt by it. Barnhill's Adm'r v. Mt. Morgan Coal Co. (D. C.) 215 F. 608, 609.

TURPIS. Lat. In the civil law. Base; mean; vile; disgraceful; infamous; unlawful. Applied both to things and persons. Calvin.

TURPIS CAUSA. A base cause; a vile or immoral consideration; a consideration which, on account of its immorality, is not allowed by law to be sufficient either to support a contract or found an action; e. g., future illicit intercourse.

TURPIS CONTRACTUS. An immoral or iniquitous contract.

Turpis est pars quæ non convenit cum suo toto. The part which does not agree with its whole is of mean account, [entitled to small or no consideration.] Plowd. 101; Shep. Touch. 87.

TURPITUDE. In its ordinary sense, inherent baseness or vileness of principle or action; shameful wickedness; depravity. In its legal sense, everything done contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. State v. Anderson, 117 Kan. 117, 230 P. 315, 317; Hughes v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 162 Ga. 246, 134 S. E. 42, 46; Ex parte Tsunetaro Machida (D. C.) 277 F. 239, 241.

Moral turpitude

A term of frequent occurrence in statutes, especially those providing that a witness' conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude may be shown as tending to impeach his credibility. In general, it means neither more nor less than "turpitude," i. e., anything done contrary to justice, honesty, modesty, or good morals. In re Williams, 64 Okl. 316, 167 P. 1149, 1152; In re Humphrey, 174 Cal. 290, 163 P. 60, 62. Indeed, it is sometimes candidly admitted that the word "moral" in this phrase does not add anything to the meaning of the term other than that emphasis which may result from a tautological expression. Hughes v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 162 Ga. 246, 134 S. E. 42, 46. It is also commonly defined as an act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellow man or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man. Moore v. State, 12 Ala. App. 243, 67 So. 789, 791; Jones v. Brinkley, 174 N. C. 23, 93 S. E. 372, 373; Lee v. Stanfield, 171 Ky. 71, 186 S. W. 1196, 1197; In re Bartos (D. C.) 13 F.(2d) 138, 139; Ex parte Tsunetaro Machida (D. C.) 277 F. 239, 241; United States v. Uhl (D. C.) 203 F. 152, 153; United States v. Uhl (C. C. A.) 210 F. 860, 862. Although a vague term, it implies something immoral in itself, regardless of its being punishable by law; Pippin v. State, 197 Ala. 613, 73 So. 340, 342; Coykendall v. Skrmetta (C. C. A.) 22 F.(2d) 120; thus excluding unintentional wrong, or an improper act done without unlawful or improper intent; Drazen v. New Haven Taxicab Co., 95 Conn. 500, 111 A. 861, 863. It is also said to be restricted to the gravest offenses, consisting of felonies, infamous crimes, and those that are malum in se and disclose a depraved mind. Bartos v. United States District Court for District of Nebraska (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 722, 724. Violations of the Eighteenth Amendment of the federal Constitution and the National Prohibition Act (27 USCA § 1 et seq.) are sometimes thought to be within the meaning of the term. Kurtz v. Farrington, 104 Conn. 257, 132 A. 540, 541, 48 A. L. R. 259; Riley v. Howes (D. C.) 17 F.(2d) 647, 649; Rousseau v. Weedon (C. C. A.) 284 F. 535, 566. Contra: People v. Cook, 221 N. Y. S. 96, 99, 220 App. Div. 110; Baugh v. State, 215 Ala. 619, 112 So. 157, 158; Bartos v. United States District Court for District of Nebraska (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 722, 724; Coykendall v. Skrmetta (C. C. A.) 22 F.(2d) 120, 121.

TURPITUDO. Lat. Baseness; infamy; immorality; turpitude.

Tuta est custodia quæ sibimet creditur. Hob. 340. That guardianship is secure which is intrusted to itself alone.

TUTELA. Lat. In the civil law. Tutelage; that species of guardianship which continued to the age of puberty; the guardian being called "tutor," and the ward, "pupillus." 1 Dom. Civil Law, b. 2, tit. 1, p. 260. A power given by the civil law over a free person to defend him when by reason of his age he is unable to defend himself. A child under the power of his father was not subject to tutelage, because not a free person, caput liberum.

TUTELA LEGITIMA. Legal tutelage; tutelage created by act of law, as where none had been created by testament. Inst. 1, 15, pr.

TUTELA TESTAMENTARIA. Testamentary tutelage or guardianship; that kind of tutelage which was created by will. Calvin.

TUTELÆ ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An action of tutelage; an action which lay for a ward or pupil, on the termination of tutelage, against the tutor or guardian, to compel an account. Calvin.

TUTELAGE. Guardianship; state of being under a guardian. See Tutela.

TUTELAM REDDERE. Lat. In the civil law. To render an account of tutelage. Calvin. Tutelam reposcere, to demand an account of tutelage.

TUTEUR. In French law. A kind of guardian.

TUTEUR OFFICIEUX. A person over fifty years of age may be appointed a tutor of this sort to a child over fifteen years of age, with the consent of the parents of such child, or, in their default, the conseil de famille. The duties which such a tutor becomes subject to are analogous to those in English law of a person who puts himself in loco parentis to any one. Brown.

TUTEUR SUBROGÉ. The title of a second guardian appointed for an infant under guardianship. His functions are exercised in case the interests of the infant and his principal guardian conflict. Code Nap. 420; Brown.

Tutius erratur ex parte mitiore. 3 Inst. 220. It is safer to err on the gentler side [or on the side of mercy].

Tutius semper est errare acquietando, quam in puniendo, ex parte misericordiæ quam ex parte justitiæ. It is always safer to err in acquitting than punishing, on the side of mercy than on the side of justice. Branch, Princ.; 2 Hale, P. C. 290; Broom, Max. 326; Com. v. York, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 116, 43 Am. Dec. 373.

TUTOR. In the civil law. This term corresponds nearly to "guardian," (i. e., a person appointed to have the care of the person of a minor and the administration of his estate,) except that the guardian of a minor who has passed a certain age is called "curator," and has powers and duties differing somewhat from those of a tutor.

As to tutors under the laws of Louisiana, see Civ. Code La. art. 246 et seq.

TUTOR ALIENUS. In English law. The name given to a stranger who enters upon the lands of an infant within the age of fourteen, and takes the profits. He may be called to an account by the infant and be charged as guardian in socage. Littleton, § 124; Co. Litt. 89b, 90a.

TUTOR PROPRIUS. The name given to one who is rightly a guardian in socage, in contradistinction to a tutor alienus.

TUTORSHIP. The office and power of a tutor. The power which an individual, sui juris, has to take care of the person of one who is unable to take care of himself.

There are four sorts of tutorships: Tutorship by nature; tutorship by will; tutorship by the effect of the law; tutorship by the appointment of the judge. Civ. Code La. art. 247.

TUTORSHIP BY NATURE. Upon the death of either parent, the tutorship of minor children belongs of right to the other. Upon divorce or judicial separation from bed and board of parents, the tutorship of each minor child belongs of right to the parent under whose care he or she has been placed or to whose care he or she has been entrusted. All those cases are called tutorship by nature. Civ. Code La. art. 250.

TUTORSHIP BY WILL. The right of appointing a tutor, whether a relation or a stranger, belongs exclusively to the father or mother dying last. This is called "tutorship by will," because generally it is given by testament; but it may likewise be given by any declaration by the surviving father or mother, executed before a notary and two witnesses. Civ. Code La. art. 257.

TUTRIX. A female tutor.

TWA NIGHT GEST. In Saxon law. A guest on the second night. By the laws of Edward the Confessor it was provided that a man who lodged at an inn, or at the house of another, should be considered, on the first night of his being there, a stranger, (uncuth;) on the second night, a guest; on the third night, a member of the family. This had reference to the responsibility of the host or entertainer for offenses committed by the guest.

TWELFHINDI. The highest rank of men in the Saxon government, who were valued at 1200s. If any injury were done to such persons, satisfaction was to be made according to their worth. Cowell.

TWELVE-DAY WRIT. A writ issued under the St. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67, for summary procedure on bills of exchange and promissory notes, abolished by rule of court in 1880. Wharton.

TWELVEMONTH. This term (in the singular number), includes all the year; but twelve months are to be computed according to twenty-eight days for every month. 6 Coke, 62.

TWELVE-MONTH BOND. "Twelve-month bond," under statute effective Jan. 20, 1837 (Hartley's Dig. art. 1277), had a double character, first as an obligation known to the Spanish civil law, and second, as a summary statutory judgment, with the force and effect of any other judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction; it being also a consent judgment. Clements v. Texas Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 273 S. W. 993, 1001.

TWELVE TABLES. The earliest statute or code of Roman law, framed by a commission of ten men, B. C. 450, upon the return of a commission of three who had been sent abroad to study foreign laws and institutions. The Twelve Tables consisted partly of laws transcribed from the institutions of other nations, partly of such as were altered and accommodated to the manners of the Romans, partly of new provisions, and mainly, perhaps, of laws and usages under their ancient kings. They formed the source and foundation for the whole later development of Roman jurisprudence. They exist now only in fragmentary form. See 1 Kent, Comm. 520. It is by no means certain, that the extant fragments of them have come down to us in their precise form and expression. The language has probably been somewhat modified by subsequent usage. These laws were substantially a codification, and not merely an incorporation, of the customary law of the people. There were Greek elements in them, but still they were essentially Roman. Hunter, Rom. L. 16. See Stephenson, Hist. Rom. L. 120; Sohm's Inst. Rom. L.

TWENTY-FOUR CALENDAR MONTHS. Two years; a period of exactly 730 days. Carey v. Deems, 101 N. J. Law, 419, 129 A. 191, 193.

TWICE IN JEOPARDY. See Jeopardy; Once in Jeopardy.

TWISTING. Colloquially, in insurance, the misrepresentation or misstatements of fact or incomplete comparison of policies to induce the insured to give up a policy in one company for the purpose of taking insurance in another. Brandt v. Beha, 217 App. Div. 644, 216 N. Y. S. 178, 179.

TWO YEARS. A period of exactly 730 days; identical with twenty-four calendar months. Carey v. Deems, 101 N. J. Law, 419, 129 A. 191, 193. Thus, it is held that an accusation filed on March 16, 1912, and charging the commission of an offense on March 16, 1910, was not filed "within two years" after the commission of the offense. McLendon v. State, 14 Ga. App. 274, 80 S. E. 692. But compare In re Puglisi (D. C.) 230 F. 188, 189.

TWYHINDI. The lower order of Saxons, valued at 200s. in the scale of pecuniary mulcts inflicted for crimes. Cowell. See Twelfhindi.

TYBURN TICKET. In English law. A certificate which was given to the prosecutor of a felon to conviction. By the 10 & 11 Will. III, c. 23, the original proprietor or first assignee of such certificate is exempted from all parish and ward offices within the parish or ward where the felony was committed. Bacon, Abr. Constable (C).

TYHTLAN. In Saxon law. An accusation, impeachment, or charge of any offense.

TYING. A term which, as used in a contract of lease of patented machinery means that the lessee has secured only limited rights of use, and that if he exceeds such limited rights by agreeing not to use the machines of others he may lose his lease. The expression may refer merely to the machine, or may mean either that the lessee is bound by contract or merely is under strong practical inducement.

United States v. United Shoe Machinery Co. of New Jersey (D. C.) 222 F. 349, 388, 394.

TYING WIRE. In concrete construction, No. 16 black fencing wire used to fasten the steel together. Soule v. Northern Const. Co., 33 Cal. App. 300, 165 P. 21, 22.

TYLWITH. Brit. A tribe or family branching or issuing out of another. Cowell.

TYMBRELLA. In old English law, a tumbrel, castigatory, or ducking stool, anciently used as an instrument of punishment for common scolds.

TYPEWRITING. The process of printing letter by letter by the use of a typewriter, Acme Coal Co. v. Northrup Nat. Bank of Iola, Kan., 23 Wyo. 66, 146 P. 593, L. R. A. 1915D, 1084, an instrument operated by hand, and used largely in business requiring much correspondence with others, or in connection with commercial transactions. Hooper v. Kennedy, 100 Vt. 314, 137 A. 194, 196. Typewriting, for certain purposes and under different statutes, is sometimes deemed to be included within the term "writing," and sometimes within the term "printing."

TYRANNY. Arbitrary or despotic government; the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power, either vested constitutionally in one ruler, or usurped by him by breaking down the division and distribution of governmental powers.

TYRANT. A despot; a sovereign or ruler, legitimate or otherwise, who uses his power unjustly and arbitrarily, to the oppression of his subjects.

TYROTOXICON. In medical jurisprudence. A poisonous ptomaine produced in milk, cheese, cream, or ice-cream by decomposition of albuminous constituents.

TYRRA, or TOIRA. A mount or hill. Cowell.

TYTHE. Tithe, or tenth part.

TYTHING. A company of ten; a district; a tenth part. See Tithing.

TZAR, TZARINA. Formerly, the emperor and empress of Russia. See Czar.

U

U. B. An abbreviation for "Upper Bench."

U. C. An abbreviation for "Upper Canada," used in citing the reports.

U. R. Initials of "uti rogās," be it as you desire, a ballot thus inscribed, by which the Romans voted in favor of a bill or candidate. Tayl. Civil Law, 191.

U. S. An abbreviation for "United States."

UBERRIMA FIDES. Lat. The most abundant good faith; absolute and perfect candor or openness and honesty; the absence of any concealment or deception, however slight. A phrase used to express the perfect good faith, concealing nothing, with which a contract must be made; for example, in the case of insurance, the insured must observe the most perfect good faith towards the insurer. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 317.

Contracts of life insurance are said to be "uberimæ fidæ" when any material misrepresentation or concealment is fatal to them. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. McElroy, 28 C. C. A. 365, 83 F. 631, 636.

Ubi aliquid conceditur, conceditur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest. When anything is granted, that also is granted without which the thing granted cannot exist. Broom, Max. 483; 13 Mees. & W. 706.

Ubi aliquid impeditur propter unum, eo remoto, tollitur impedimentum. Where anything is impeded by one single cause, if that be removed, the impediment is removed. Branch, Princ., citing 5 Coke, 77a.

Ubi cessat remedium ordinarium, ibi decurritur ad extraordinarium. Where the ordinary remedy fails, recourse must be had to an extraordinary one. 4 Coke, 92b.

Ubi culpa est, ibi pœna subesse debet. Where the crime is committed, there ought the punishment to be undergone. Jenk. Cent. 325.

Ubi damna dantur, victus victori in expensis condemnari debet. Where damages are given, the vanquished party ought to be condemned in costs to the victor. 2 Inst. 289; 3 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 399.

Ubi eadem ratio, ibi eadem lex; et de similibus idem est iudicium. 7 Coke, 18. Where the same reason exists, there the same law prevails; and, of things similar, the judgment is similar. Where there is the same reason, there is the same law, and the same judgment should be rendered on the same state of facts. Broom, Max. 103, n., 153, 155.

Ubi est forum, ibi ergo est jus. The law of the forum governs. 31 Law Mag. & Rev. 471.

Ubi est specialis, et ratio generalis generaliter accipienda est. See Ubi lex est specialis, etc.

Ubi et dantis et accipientis turpitude versatur, non posse repeti dicimus; quotiens autem accipientis turpitude versatur, repeti posse. Where there is turpitude on the part of both giver and receiver, we say it cannot be recovered back; but as often as the turpitude is on the side of the receiver [alone] it can be recovered back. Mason v. Waite, 17 Mass. 562.

Ubi factum nullum, ibi fortia nulla. Where there is no principal fact, there can be no accessory. 4 Coke, 426. Where there is no act, there can be no force.

Ubi jus, ibi remedium. Where there is a right, there is a remedy. Broom, Max. 191, 204; 1 Term R. 512; Co. Litt. 197b; 7 Gray (Mass.) 197; Carroll v. Rye Tp., 13 N. D. 458, 101 N. W. 894, 897; Henry v. Cherry & Webb, 30 R. I. 13, 73 A. 97, 101, 24 L. R. A. 991, 136 Am. St. Rep. 928, 18 Ann. Cas. 1006; Civ. Code Ga. 1895, § 4929 (Civ. Code 1910, § 5506). It is said that the rule of primitive law was the reverse: Where there is a remedy, there is a right. Salmond, Jurispr. 645.

Ubi jus incertum, ibi jus nullum. Where the law is uncertain, there is no law.

Ubi lex aliquem cogit ostendere causam, necesse est quod causa sit justa et legitima. Where the law compels a man to show cause, it is necessary that the cause be just and lawful. 2 Inst. 289.

Ubi lex est specialis, et ratio ejus generalis, generaliter accipienda est. 2 Inst. 43. Where the law is special, and the reason of it general, it ought to be taken as being general. When the reason for a particular legislative act and acts of the same general character is the same, they should have the same effect. Guile v. La Crosse Gas & Electric Co., 145 Wis. 157, 130 N. W. 234, 241.

Ubi lex non distinguit, nec nos distinguere debemus. Where the law does not distinguish, neither ought we to distinguish. 7 Coke, 5b.

Ubi major pars est, ibi totum. Where the greater part is, there the whole is. That is, majorities govern. Moore, 578.

Ubi matrimonium, ibi dos. Where there is marriage, there is dower. Bract. 92.

Ubi non adest norma legis, omnia quasi pro suspectis habenda sunt. When the law fails to serve as a rule, almost everything ought to be suspected. Bac. Aphorisms, 25.

Ubi non est annua renovatio, ibi decimæ non debent solvi. Where there is no annual renovation, there tithes ought not to be paid.

Ubi non est condendi auctoritas, ibi non est parendi necessitas. Dav. Ir. K. B. 69. Where there is no authority for establishing a rule, there is no necessity of obeying it.

Ubi non est directa lex, standum est arbitrio iudicis, vel procedendum ad similia. Ellesm. Post. N. 41. Where there is no direct law, the opinion of the judge is to be taken, or references to be made to similar cases.

Ubi non est lex, ibi non est transgressio, quoad mundum. Where there is no law, there is no transgression, so far as relates to the world. 4 Coke, 16*b*.

Ubi non est manifesta injustitia, iudices habentur pro bonis viris, et iudicatum pro veritate. Where there is no manifest injustice, the judges are to be regarded as honest men, and their judgment as truth. Goix v. Low, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 341, 345.

Ubi non est principalis, non potest esse accessorius. 4 Coke, 43. Where there is no principal, there cannot be an accessory.

Ubi nulla est conjectura quæ ducat alio, verba intelligenda sunt ex proprietate, non grammatica, sed populari ex usu. Where there is nothing to call for a different construction, [the] words [of an instrument] are to be understood, not according to their strict grammatical meaning, but according to their popular and ordinary sense. Grot. de Jure B. lib. 2, c. 16.

Ubi nullum matrimonium, ibi nulla dos. Where there is no marriage, there is no dower. Bract. fol. 92; 2 Bl. Comm. 130; *Co. Litt. 32*a.

Ubi periculum, ibi et lucrum collocatur. He at whose risk a thing is, should receive the profits arising from it.

Ubi pugnantia inter se in testamento juberentur, neutrum ratum est. Where repugnant or inconsistent directions are contained in a will, neither is valid. Dig. 50, 17, 188, pr.

Ubi quid generaliter conceditur inest hæc exceptio, si non aliquid sit contra jus fasque. 10 Coke, 78. Where a thing is conceded generally [or granted in general terms], this exception is implied: that there shall be nothing contrary to law and right.

Ubi quis delinquit, ibi puniatur. Where a man offends, there he shall be punished. 6 Coke, 47*b*. In cases of felony, the trial shall be always by the common law in the same place where the offense was, and shall not be supposed in any other place. Id.

UBI RE VERA. Where in reality; when in truth or in point of fact. Cro. Eliz. 645; Cro. Jac. 4.

Ubi verba conjuncta non sunt sufficit alterutrum esse factum. Dig. 50, 17, 110, 3. Where words are not conjoined, it is enough if one or other be complied with. Where words are used disjunctively, it is sufficient that either one of the things enumerated be performed.

Ubique est injuria, ibi damnum sequitur. Wherever there is a wrong, there damage follows. 10 Co. 116.

UBIQUITY. Omnipresence; presence in several places, or in all places, at one time. A fiction of English law is the "legal ubiquity" of the sovereign, by which he is constructively present in all the courts. 1 Bl. Comm. 270.

UDAL. A term mentioned by Blackstone as used in Finland to denote that kind of right in real property which is called, in English law, "allodial." 2 Bl. Comm. 45, note f.

UKAAS, UKASE. Originally, a law or ordinance made by the czar of Russia.

Hence, any official decree or proclamation. Webster, Dict.

ULLAGE. In commercial law. The amount wanting when a cask, on being gauged, is found not to be completely full.

ULNA FERREA. L. Lat. In old English law. The iron ell; the standard ell of iron, kept in the exchequer for the rule of measure.

ULNAGE. Alnage. See Alnager.

ULTIMA RATIO. Lat. The last argument; the last resort; the means last to be resorted to.

Ultima voluntas testatoris est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. The last will of a testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention. Co. Litt. 322; Broom, Max. 566.

ULTIMATE FACTS. In pleading and practice. Issuable facts. Maxwell Steel Vault Co. v. National Casket Co. (D. C.) 205 F. 515, 524. The issuable, constitutive, or traversable facts essential to the statement of the cause of action. Musser v. Musser, 281 Mo. 649, 221 S. W. 46, 50. Facts in issue as opposed to probative or evidential facts, the latter being such as serve to establish or disprove the issue. Kahn v. Central Smelting Co., 2 Utah, 379. They are found in that vaguely defined field lying between evidential facts on one side and the primary issue or conclusion of law on the other. Universal Oil Products Co. v. Skelly Oil Co. (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 271, 272. Facts are either "evidential facts," meaning facts which can be directly established by testimony or evidence, or "ultimate facts," which can only be deduced by inference from evidential facts. Real Estate Title, Ins. & Trust Co. v. Lederer (D. C.) 229 F. 799, 804. And see Fact.

ULTIMATUM. Lat. The last. The final and ultimate proposition made in negotiating a treaty, a contract, or the like. The word also means the result of a negotiation, and it comprises the final determination of a party concerned in the matter in dispute.

ULTIMUM SUPPLICIUM. Lat. The last or extreme punishment; the extremity of punishment; the punishment of death. 4 Bl. Comm. 17.

Ultimum supplicium esse mortem solam interpretamur. The extremest punishment we consider to be death alone. Dig. 48, 19, 21.

ULTIMUS HÆRES. Lat. The last or remote heir; the lord. So called in contradistinction to the hæres proximus and the hæres remotior. Dalr. Feud. Prop. 110.

ULTRA. Lat. Beyond; outside of; in excess of.

Damages Ultra

Damages beyond a sum paid into court.

Ultra Mare

Beyond sea. One of the old essoins or excuses for not appearing in court at the return of process. Bract. fol. 338.

Ultra Reprises

After deduction of drawbacks; in excess of deductions or expenses.

Ultra Vires

A term used to express the action of a corporation which is beyond the powers conferred upon it by its charter, or the statutes under which it was instituted. 13 Am. Law Rep. 632. The modern technical designation, in the law of corporations, of acts beyond the scope of the powers of a corporation, as defined by its charter or act of incorporation. Lambeth v. City of Thomasville, 179 N. C. 452, 102 S. E. 775, 776. The term "ultra vires," whether with perfect accuracy or not, as to the acts of a corporation, or acts purporting to be done by it, has been used in more than one sense. Georgia Granite R. Co. v. Miller, 144 Ga. 665, 87 S. E. 897; McPherson v. Foster, 43 Iowa, 48, 22 Am. Rep. 215. An act is ultra vires in the strictest sense when it is beyond the scope of the powers granted by law to the corporation, so that it is not in the power of the corporation to perform it under any circumstances or for any purpose. Buck Creek Lumber Co. v. Nelson, 188 Ala. 243, 66 So. 476, 477; Crowder State Bank v. Aetna Powder Co., 41 Okl. 394, 138 P. 392, 393, L. R. A. 1917A, 1021; Desdemona State Bank & Trust Co. v. Streety (Tex. Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 286, 288; Houston v. Utah Lake Land, Water & Power Co., 55 Utah, 393, 47 A. L. R. 1282, 187 P. 174, 176; Lincoln Court Realty Co. v. Kentucky Title Savings Bank & Trust Co., 169 Ky. 840, 185 S. W. 156, 158; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac and Richmond & Petersburg Railroad Connection Co., 145 Va. 266, 133 S. E. 888, 898; Wagg v. Toler, 80 Cal. App. 501, 251 P. 973, 977; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 68, 20 Am. Rep. 504. See, also, Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co. (C. C.) 47 F. 15. Sometimes an act is said to be ultra vires with reference to the rights of certain persons when the corporation cannot legally perform such act without their consent. Sometimes an act is said to be ultra vires with reference to some specific purpose, when the corporation cannot perform it for that purpose. See James Eva Estate v. Mecca Co., 40 Cal. App. 515, 181 P.

415, 416. "Ultra vires" is also sometimes applied to an act which, though within the powers of a corporation, is not binding on it because the consent or agreement of the corporation has not been given in the manner required by its constitution. Thus, where a company delegates certain powers to its directors, all acts done by the directors beyond the scope of those powers are ultra vires, and not binding on the company, unless it subsequently ratifies them. Sweet. And see Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 578, 9J Am. Dec. 30; Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. v. Langdon, 44 Minn. 37, 46 N. W. 312; State v. Morris & E. R. Co., 23 N. J. Law, 360; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 11 S. Ct. 478, 35 L. Ed. 55; Latimer v. Bard (C. C.) 76 F. 543; Edwards County v. Jennings (Tex. Civ. App.) 33 S. W. 585. "Ultra vires contracts" include not only those entirely without the scope and purpose of the charter privileges and objects, but also those beyond the limitation of the charter powers, though within the purposes contemplated by the articles of incorporation. American Southern Nat. Bank v. Smith, 170 Ky. 512, 186 S. W. 482, 485, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 959. While the phrase "ultra vires" has been used to designate, not only acts beyond the express and implied powers of a corporation, but also acts contrary to public policy or contrary to some express statute prohibiting them, the latter class of acts is now termed illegal, and the "ultra vires" confined to the former class. In re Grand Union Co. (C. C. A.) 219 F. 353, 363; Staacke v. Routledge, 111 Tex. 489, 241 S. W. 994, 998; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Minis, 120 Md. 461, 496, 87 A. 1062, 1072.

Ultra posse non potest esse, et vice versa. What is beyond possibility cannot exist, and the reverse, [what cannot exist is not possible.] Wing Max. 100.

ULTRONEOUS WITNESS. In Scotch law. A volunteer witness; one who appears to give evidence without being called upon. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 393.

UMPIRAGE. The decision of an umpire. Powell v. Ford, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 288. The word "Umpirage," in reference to an umpire, is the same as the word "award," in reference to arbitrators; but "award" is commonly applied to the decision of the umpire also.

UMPIRE. A third person appointed to decide between two other judges or referees who differ in opinion. Randel v. Canal, 1 Harr. (Del.) 260. When matters in dispute are submitted to two or more arbitrators, and they do not agree in their decision, it is usual for another person to be called in as "umpire," to whose sole judgment it is then referred. Brown. And see Ingraham v. Whitmore, 75 Ill. 30; Tyler v. Webb, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 123; Lyon v. Blossom, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 325. An "umpire," strictly speaking, makes his award independently of that of the arbitrators. Dennis v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 90 N. J. Eq. 419, 107 A. 161, 163.

A third person, chosen by two arbitrators who cannot agree, is not, in the strict sense, an umpire, unless he succeeds to the duties of those who have chosen him to accomplish that wherein they have failed, making the original arbitrators functus officio. Lesser v. Pallay, 96 Or. 142, 188 P. 718, 719.

UN- "Un-" is a prefix used indiscriminately, and may mean simply "not." Thus, "unlawful" means "not authorized by law." State v. Sanders, 136 La. 1059, 68 So. 125, 126, Ann. Cas. 1916E, 105.

Un ne doit prise advantage de son tort demesne. 2 And. 38, 40. One ought not to take advantage of his own wrong.

Una persona vix potest supplere vices duarum. 7 Coke, 118. One person can scarcely supply the place of two. See 9 H. L. Cas. 274.

UNA VOCE. Lat. With one voice; unanimously; without dissent.

UNABLE. This term, as used in a statute providing that evidence given in a former trial may be proved in a subsequent trial, where the witness is unable to testify, means mentally and physically unable. Hansen-Rynning v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 105 Or. 67, 209 P. 462, 464.

UNACCRUED. Not become due, as rent on a lease. Elms Realty Co. v. Wood, 285 Mo. 130, 225 S. W. 1002, 1005.

UNADJUSTED. Uncertain; not agreed upon. Richardson v. Woodbury, 43 Me. 214.

UNALIENABLE. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred.

UNANIMITY. Agreement of all the persons concerned, in holding one and the same opinion or determination of any matter or question; as the concurrence of a jury in deciding upon their verdict. See Unanimous.

UNANIMOUS. To say that a proposition was adopted by a "unanimous" vote does not always mean that every one present voted for the proposition, but it may, and generally does, mean, when a viva voce vote is taken, that no one voted in the negative. State v. Stephens, 195 Mo. App. 34, 189 S. W. 630, 631.

UNASCERTAINED DUTIES. Payment in gross, on an estimate as to amount, and where the merchant, on a final liquidation, will be entitled by law to allowances or deductions which do not depend on the rate of duty charged, but on the ascertainment of the quantity of the article subject to duty. Moke v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 274, Fed. Cas. No. 9,698.

UNAVOIDABLE ACCIDENT. An inevitable accident. Leland v. Empire Engineering Co., 135 Md. 208, 108 A. 570, 575, which could not have been foreseen and prevented by using ordinary diligence, and resulting without fault, U. S. v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. (D. C.) 189 F. 471. Not necessarily an accident which it was physically impossible, in the nature of things, for the person to have prevented, but one not occasioned in any degree, either remotely or directly, by the want of such care or skill as the law holds every man bound to exercise. Dygert v. Bradley, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; San Pedro, L. A. & S. L. R. Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 220 F. 737, 744. An accident which could not be prevented by the exercise of ordinary care and prudence. Wollaston v. Stiltz, 1 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 273, 114 A. 198, 200; Johnson v. Homestead-Iron Dyke Mines Co., 98 Or. 318, 193 P. 1036, 1041; Dwyer v. Chew, 149 Md. 281, 131 A. 350, 351; E. P. Barnes & Bro. v. Eastin, 190 Ky. 392, 227 S. W. 578, 580; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Cook, 34 Ga. App. 1, 128 S. E. 75, 76. One happening unexpectedly, American Glycerin Co. v. Kenridge Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 633, 635, and without negligence of either party; Wilson v. Roach, 101 Okl. 30, 222 P. 1000, 1002; Larrow v. Martell, 92 Vt. 435, 104 A. 826, 827. A pure accident, for which no one was responsible. Engle v. Bowen, 122 Kan. 283, 251 P. 1108, 1109.

In the Hours of Service Act, "unavoidable accident" means a fortuitous happening caused by some human agency over which the carrier may have some control, yet which could not have been prevented by the exercise of due care, and "act of God" is an accident not occasioned by human agency, but by physical causes alone; United States v. Pennsylvania Co. (D. C.) 239 F. 761, 764; while "casualty," differing from the others and not so broad as to deprive them of meaning and use, is an occurrence or happening due entirely to an outside human agency, i. e., some human agency which the carrier could not control; United States v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 220 F. 630, 633.

The term is sometimes defined, however, as synonymous with "act of God,"—any accident produced by physical causes which are inevitable, such as lightnings, storms, perils of the sea, earthquakes, inundations, sudden death, or illness. Early v. Hampton, 15 Ga. App. 95, 82 S. E. 669, 671.

UNAVOIDABLE CASUALTY. An event or accident which human prudence, foresight, and sagacity cannot prevent. Fernwood Mining Co. v. Pluma, 138 Ark. 193, 211 S. W. 159, 163; Crystal Spring Distillery Co. v. Cox, 1 C. C. A. 365, 49 F. 555, 6 U. S. App. 42; Welles v. Castles, 3 Gray (Mass.) 325. If by any care, prudence, or foresight a thing could have been guarded against, it is not unavoidable. Central Line of Boats v. Lowe, 50 Ga. 509; E. P. Barnes & Bro. v. Eastin, 190 Ky. 392, 227 S. W. 578, 580. The term is not ordinarily limited to an act of God. Kirby v. Davis, 210 Ala. 192, 97 So. 655, 656.

An "unavoidable casualty or misfortune," within the meaning of statutes in several states relating to the vacation of judgments, means some casualty or misfortune growing out of conditions or circumstances that prevented the party or his attorney from doing something that, except therefor, would have been done, and does not include mistakes or errors of judgment growing out of misconstruction or misunderstanding of the law, or the failure of parties or counsel through mistake to avail themselves of remedies, which if resorted to would have prevented the casualty or misfortune. Commonwealth v. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co., 185 Ky. 300, 215 S. W. 42, 44. The term refers to events which human prudence or foresight cannot prevent (but see Kohlman v. Moore, 175 Ky. 710, 194 S. W. 933, 935), such as disease and death, miscarriage of the mails, or mistake in the wording of a telegram. Wagner v. Lucas, 79 Okl. 231, 193 P. 421, 422. It may include the sickness. Thweatt v. Grand Temple and Tabernacle of International Order of Twelve Knights and Daughters of Tabor, of Arkansas, 128 Ark. 269, 193 S. W. 508, 509, or death of an attorney, Columbia County v. England, 151 Ark. 465, 236 S. W. 625, 626, or his failure, through some oversight or misunderstanding, to defend. Krause v. Hobart, 173 Iowa, 330, 155 N. W. 279, but it does not apply to the neglect of an attorney or his client; Gavin v. Heath, 125 Okl. 118, 256 P. 745, 746; McGuire v. Mishawaka Woolen Mills, 218 Ky. 530, 291 S. W. 747, 749.

UNAVOIDABLE CAUSE. A cause which reasonably prudent and careful men under like circumstances do not and would not ordinarily anticipate, and whose effects, under similar circumstances, they do not and would not ordinarily avoid. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. U. S., 194 F. 342, 114 C. C. A. 334.

UNAVOIDABLE DANGERS. This term in a marine policy covering unavoidable dangers of the river includes the unexplained capsizing of a vessel, though human intervention existed in the operation of the vessel, for "unavoidable dangers" mean those unpreventable by persons operating the vessel, and, like the term perils of the sea, include all kinds of marine casualties, thus including accidents in which there is human intervention. A river vessel's tendency to turn over, due to topheavy construction, necessary on account of the shallowness of rivers, is an "unavoidable danger" within the policy. Hillman Transp. Co. v. Home Ins. Co. of New York, 268 Pa. 547, 112 A. 108, 111.

UNBOLTED CORN MEAL. The courts judicially know that corn meal is an unmixed meal made from entire grains of corn, and that "unbolted corn meal" is simply meal not bolted, or from which the bran has not been sifted or separated. Miller Grain & Commission Co. v. International Sugar Feed No. 2 Co., 197 Ala. 100, 72 So. 368.

UNBROKEN. Continuous, as adverse possession. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hoffman (Tex. Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 246, 248.

UNCEASESATH. In Saxon law. An oath by relations not to avenge a relation's death. Blount.

UNCERTAINTY. The state or quality of being unknown or vague. Such vagueness, obscurity, or confusion in any written instrument, e. g., a will, as to render it unintelligible to those who are called upon to execute or interpret it, so that no definite meaning can be extracted from it.

UNCHASTITY. Impurity in mind and conduct, which may exist without actually engaging in unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. Valvoda, 170 Iowa, 102, 152 N. W. 21, 23; Cooper v. State, 15 Ala. App. 657, 74 So. 753, 754.

UNCIA. Lat. In Roman law. An ounce; the twelfth of the Roman "as," or pound. The twelfth part of anything; the proportion of one-twelfth. 2 Bl. Comm. 462, note m.

UNCIA AGRI, UNCIA TERRÆ. These phrases often occur in the charters of the British kings, and signify some measure or quantity of land. It is said to have been the quantity of twelve modii; each modius being possibly one hundred feet square. Jacob; Mon. Ang. tom. 3, pp. 198, 205.

UNCIARIUS HÆRES. Lat. In Roman law. An heir to one-twelfth of an estate or inheritance. Calvin.

UNCLE. The brother of one's father or mother. State v. Reedy, 44 Kan. 190, 24 P. 66; State v. Guiton, 51 La. Ann. 155, 24 So. 784; Capps v. State, 87 Fla. 388, 100 So. 172, 173.

Jocularly, a pawnbroker.

UNCONDITIONAL. Not limited or affected by any condition;—applied especially to the quality of an insured's estate in the property insured. Libby Lumber Co. v. Pacific States Fire Ins. Co., 79 Mont. 166, 255 P. 340, 344, 60 A. L. R. 1; Western Assur. Co. v. White, 171 Ark. 733, 286 S. W. 804, 806, 48 A. L. R. 349; Avery v. Mechanics' Ins. Co. of Philadelphia (Mo. App.) 295 S. W. 509, 513; Rochester German Ins. Co. v. Schmidt, 162 F. 447, 89 C. C. A. 333. See the subtitle "Sole and unconditional owner" under the main title Owner.

UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAIN. An unconscionable bargain or contract is one which no man in his senses, not under delusion, would make, on the one hand, and which no fair and honest man would accept, on the other. Hume v. U. S., 132 U. S. 406, 10 S. Ct. 134, 33 L. Ed. 393; Edler v. Frazier, 174 Iowa, 46, 156 N. W. 182, 187; Hall v. Wingate, 159 Ga. 630, 126 S. E. 796, 813; 2 Ves. 125; 4 Bouv. Inst. n. 3848.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL. That which is contrary to the constitution. The opposite of "constitutional." See State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 10; In re Rahrer (C. C.) 43 F. 558, 10 L. R. A. 444; Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 6 S. Ct. 1121, 30 L. Ed. 178. The word does not necessarily mean that the act assailed is contrary to sound principles of legislation. Ketterer v. Lederer (D. C.) 269 F. 153, 154.

This word is used in two different senses. One, which may be called the English sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some recognized general principle. This is no more than to say that it is unwise, or is based upon a wrong or unsound principle, or conflicts with a generally accepted policy. The other, which may be called the American sense, is that the legislation conflicts with some provision of our written Constitution, which it is beyond the power of the Legislature to change. U. S. v. American Brewing Co. (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 1001, 1002.

This expression as applied to an act of parliament means simply that it is, in the opinion of the speaker, opposed to the spirit of the English constitution; it cannot mean that the act is either a breach of the law or is void. When applied to a law passed by the French parliament, it means that the law is opposed to the articles of the constitution; it does not necessarily mean that the law in question is void, for it is by no means certain that any French court will refuse to enforce a law because it is unconstitutional. It would probably, though not of necessity, be, when employed by a Frenchman, a term of censure. Dicey, Const. 516.

UNCONTROLLABLE IMPULSE. As an excuse for the commission of an act otherwise criminal, this term means an impulse towards its commission of such fixity and intensity that it cannot be resisted by the person subject to it, in the enfeebled condition of his will and moral sense resulting from derangement or mania. See Insanity. And see State v. O'Neil, 51 Kan. 651, 33 P. 287, 24 L. R. A. 555.

UNCORE PRIST. L. Fr. Still ready. A species of plea or replication by which the party alleges that he is still ready to pay or perform all that is justly demanded of him. In conjunction with the phrase "tout temps prist," it signifies that he has always been and still is ready to do what is required, thus saving costs where the whole cause is admitted, or preventing delay where it is a replication, if the allegation is made out. 3 Bl. Comm. 303.

UNCUTH. In Saxon law. Unknown; a stranger. A person entertained in the house of another was, on the first night of his entertainment, so called. Bract. fol. 124b. See Twa Night Gest.

UNDE NIHIL HABET. Lat. In old English law. The name of the writ of dower, which lay for a widow, where no dower at all had been assigned her within the time limited by law. 3 Bl. Comm. 183.

UNDEFENDED. A term sometimes applied to one who is obliged to make his own defense when on trial, or in a civil cause. A cause is said to be undefended when the defendant makes default, in not putting in an appearance to the plaintiff's action; in not putting in his statement of defense; or in not appearing at the trial either personally or by counsel, after having received due notice. Mozley & Whitley.

UNDER. Sometimes used in its literal sense of "below in position," but more frequently in its secondary meaning of "inferior" or "subordinate." Mills v. Stoddard, 8 How. 356, 12 L. Ed. 1107.

According to; as, "under the testimony." Boughan v. State, 193 Ind. 66, 133 N. E. 87. But a count declaring on a contract alleging that plaintiff did the work "under" the contract has been held demurrable as not being equivalent to an allegation that plaintiff did the work as required by or in accordance with the contract. Patterson v. Camp, 209 Ala. 514, 96 So. 605.

UNDER AND SUBJECT. Words frequently used in conveyances of land which is subject to a mortgage, to show that the grantee takes subject to such mortgage. See Walker v. Physick, 5 Pa. 203; Moore's Appeal, 88 Pa. 453, 32 Am. Rep. 469; Blood v. Crew Livick Co., 171 Pa. 328, 33 A. 344; Lavelle v. Gordon, 15 Mont. 515, 39 P. 740; 27 Am. L. Reg. (N. S.) 337, 401.

UNDER-CHAMBERLAINS OF THE EX-CHEQUER. Two officers who cleaved the tallies written by the clerk of the tallies, and read the same, that the clerk of the pell and comptrollers thereof might see their entries were true. They also made searches for records in the treasury, and had the custody of Domesday Book. Cowell. The office is now abolished.

UNDER CONTROL. This phrase does not necessarily mean the ability to stop instanter under any and all circumstances, an automobile being "under control" within the meaning of the law if it is moving at such a rate, and the mechanism and power under such control, that it can be brought to a stop with a reasonable degree of celerity. Carruthers v. Campbell, 195 Iowa, 390, 192 N. W. 138, 28 A. L. R. 949. In general, as applied to street cars or railroad trains, the term denotes the control and preparation appropriate to probable emergencies. Lincoln v. Pacific Electric Ry. Co., 33 Cal. App. 83, 164 P. 412, 445; Torantolla v. Kansas City Rys. Co. (Mo. App.) 226 S. W. 617, 618. It is such control as will enable a train to be stopped promptly if need should arise. Missouri K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 103 Kan. 1, 175 P. 97, 102. It implies the ability to stop within the distance the track is seen to be clear. Fuller v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 93 Or. 160, 181 P. 338, 341; Moyes v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. (Mo. Sup.) 186 S. W. 1027, 1030.

UNDER HERD. A term conveying the idea that a considerable number of domestic animals are gathered together and held together by herders in constant attendance and in control of their movements from place to place on a public range or within certain areas. Schreiner v. Deep Creek Stock Ass'n, 68 Mont. 104, 217 P. 663, 665.

UNDER-LEASE. In conveyancing. A lease granted by one who is himself a lessee for years, for any fewer or less number of years than he himself holds. If a deed passes all the estate or time of the termor, it is an assignment; but, if it be for less portion of time than the whole term, it is an under-lease, and leaves a reversion in the termor. 4 Kent, Comm. 96. And even a conveyance of the whole estate by the lessee, reserving to himself the rent, with a power of re-entry for non-payment, was held to be not an assignment, but an under-lease. 1 Stra. 405; Woodf. L. & T. 731. The transfer of a part only of the lands, though for the whole term, is an under-lease. Fulton v. Stuart, 2 Ohio 216, 15 Am. Dec. 542; contra, Cox v. Fenwick, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 538.

UNDER-SHERIFF. An officer who acts directly under the sheriff, and performs all the duties of the sheriff's office, a few only excepted where the personal presence of the high-sheriff is necessary. The sheriff is civilly responsible for the acts or omissions of his under-sheriff. Mozley & Whitley. A sheriff's deputy, who, being designated by the sheriff as an "under sheriff," becomes his chief deputy with authority by virtue of his appointment to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405, 132 P. 454, 458. A distinction is sometimes made between this officer and a deputy, the latter being appointed for a special occasion or purpose, while the former discharges, in general, all the duties required by the sheriff's office.

UNDER-TENANT. A tenant under one who is himself a tenant; one who holds by under-lease.

UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF LIQUOR. This expression, or substantially identical language, in an accident policy has been held to contemplate intoxication in some substantial degree. Robinson v. Hawkeye Commercial Men's Ass'n, 186 Iowa 759, 171 N. W. 118, 120. And as employed in statutes or ordinances relating to the operation of motor vehicles, it has been construed as equivalent to the words, "in an intoxicated condition," State v. Dudley, 159 La. 872, 106 So. 364, 365, and to the words, "in a drunken or partly drunken condition," Daniels v. State, 155 Tenn. 549, 296 S. W. 20, 23, but not as synonymous with the words, "while intoxicated," Cannon v. State, 91 Fla. 214, 107 So. 360, 362. The expression is said to cover not only all the well-known and easily recognized conditions and degrees of intoxication, but any abnormal mental or physical condition which is the result of indulging in any degree in intoxicating liquors and which tends to deprive the driver of that clearness of intellect and control of himself which he would otherwise possess. Latimer v. Wilson, 103 N. J. Law, 159, 134 A. 750, 751. It is applicable to the condition created where intoxicating liquor has so far affected the nervous system, brain, or muscles of the driver as to impair to an appreciable degree his ability to operate an automobile in a manner that an ordinarily prudent and cautious man in the full possession of his faculties, using reasonable care, would drive a similar vehicle under like conditions. People v. Dingle, 56 Cal. App. 445, 205 P. 705, 706; People v. McKee, 80 Cal. App. 200, 251 P. 675, 677.

UNDER-TREASURER OF ENGLAND. He who transacted the business of the lord high treasurer.

UNDER-TUTOR. In Louisiana. In every tutorship there shall be an under-tutor, whom it shall be the duty of the judge to appoint at the time letters of tutorship are certified for the tutor. It is the duty of the under-tutor to act for the minor whenever the interest of the minor is in opposition to the interest of the tutor. Civ. Code La. arts. 273, 275.

UNDER WAY. Not being at anchor, or made fast to the shore, or aground;—said of vessels subject to the navigation rules embraced in Act June 7, 1897, c. 4, 30 Stat. 96 (33 USCA § 154 et seq., 46 USCA § 381 note). The George W. Elder (C. C. A.) 249 F. 956, 958; The Nimrod, 173 F. 520. Thus, a vessel lying with her nose against the bank of a stream and holding her position against the current by the movement of her wheel is a vessel under way, and not entitled to the rights of an anchored vessel. The Ruth, 186 F. 87, 108 C. C. A. 199. And a steamer being towed down stream by tugs without any steam on her boilers, except for steering purposes, is nevertheless "under way." The Scandinavia (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 542, 543.

UNDERGROUND WATERS. See Water, subtitle Subterranean Waters.

UNDERGROWTH. A term applicable to plants growing under or below other greater plants. Clay v. Telegraph Co., 70 Miss. 411, 11 So. 658.

UNDERLIE THE LAW. In Scotch criminal procedure, an accused person, in appearing to take his trial, is said "to compear and underlie the law." Mozley & Whitley.

UNDERSTAND. To know; to appreciate; as, to understand the nature and effect of an act. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie (Tex. Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 456, 460. To have a full and clear knowledge of; to comprehend. Chaney v. Baker, 304 Ill. 362, 136 N. E. 804, 807. Thus, to invalidate a deed on the ground that the grantor did not understand the nature of the act, the grantor must be incapable of comprehending that the effect of the act would divest him of the title to the land set forth in the deed. Miller v. Folsom, 49 Okl. 74, 149 P. 1185, 1188. As used in connection with the execution of wills and other instruments, the term includes the realization of the practical effects and consequences of the proposed act. Tillman v. Ogren, 99 Misc. 539, 166 N. Y. S. 39, 40.

UNDERSTANDING. In the law of contracts. An agreement. Southern Ry. Co. v. Powell, 124 Va. 65, 97 S. E. 357, 358. An implied agreement resulting from the express terms of another agreement, whether written or oral. United States v. United Shoe Machinery Co. (D. C.) 234 F. 127, 148. An informal agreement, or a concurrence as to its terms. Barkow v. Sanger, 47 Wis. 507, 3 N. W. 16. A valid contract engagement of a somewhat informal character. Winslow v. Lumber Co., 32 Minn. 238, 20 N. W. 145. This is a loose and ambiguous term, unless it be accompanied by some expression to show that it constituted a meeting of the minds of parties upon something respecting which they intended to be bound. Camp v. Waring, 25 Conn. 529.

The term may also import simply a wish or hope, as in a will bequeathing property to another with the "understanding" that at the legatee's death, all property derived under the will should be given to the testatrix's sister. Vincent v. Rix, 127 Misc. 639, 217 N. Y. S. 393, 399.

UNDERSTOOD. The phrase "it is understood," when employed as a word of contract in a written agreement, has the same force as the words "it is agreed." Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray (Mass.) 165; Phoenix Iron & Steel Co. v. Wilkoff Co. (C. C. A.) 253 F. 165, 167; Mertz v. Fleming, 185 Wis. 58, 200 N. W. 655, 656.

UNDERTAKE. To perform; to attempt; to try. Hence, a person, such as a seller of goods, who "undertakes" to make a proportionate delivery in each month, is not absolutely obligated to do so. Garcia S. en C. v. Taggart Coal Co., 27 Ga. App. 204, 108 S. E. 72, 78.

UNDERTAKER. One who undertakes (to do something). In a mechanic's lien statute, the word has been held not to include a mere furnisher of material in connection with the erection of the building. In re American Lime Co. (D. C.) 201 F. 433, 435.

One whose business is to prepare the dead for burial and to take the charge and management of funerals. Anderson v. State, 19

Ala. App. 606, 99 So. 778, 779; State v. Whyte, 177 Wis. 541, 188 N. W. 607, 608, 23 A. L. R. 67.

UNDERTAKING. A promise, engagement, or stipulation. An engagement by one of the parties to a contract to the other, as distinguished from the mutual engagement of the parties to each other. 5 East 17; 4 B. & Ald. 595, followed in Alexander v. State, 28 Tex. App. 186, 12 S. W. 595. It does not necessarily imply a consideration. Thompson v. Blanchard, 3 N. Y. 335.

In a somewhat special sense, a promise given in the course of legal proceedings by a party or his counsel, generally as a condition to obtaining some concession from the court or the opposite party. Sweet.

A promise or security in any form. Code, Iowa, § 48, par. 20.

An official undertaking, such as one by a county clerk or other officer under statutes, unlike an official bond, is not required to be signed by the principal. Fleischner v. Florey, 111 Or. 35, 224 P. 831, 832.

UNDERTOOK. Agreed; promised; assumed. This is the technical word to be used in alleging the promise which forms the basis of an action of assumpsit. Bacon, Abr. Assumpsit (F).

UNDERWRITE. To insure life or property. See Underwriter.

To insure the sale of corporate bonds or similar securities to the public by agreeing to buy those which are not sold. Busch v. Stromberg-Carlson Tel. Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 217 F. 328, 330; Stewart v. G. L. Miller & Co., 161 Ga. 919, 132 S. E. 535, 538, 45 A. L. R. 559. To agree to sell bonds, etc., to the public, or to furnish the necessary money for such securities, and to buy those which cannot be sold. Minot v. Burroughs, 223 Mass. 595, 112 N. E. 620, 623; Rauer's Law & Collection Co. v. Harrell, 32 Cal. App. 45, 162 P. 125, 131.

An underwriting contract, aside from its use in insurance, is an agreement, made before corporate shares are brought before the public, that in the event of the public not taking all the shares or the number mentioned in the agreement, the underwriter will take the shares which the public do not take; "underwriting" being a purchase, together with a guaranty of a sale of the bonds. Fraser v. Home Telephone & Telegraph Co., 91 Wash. 253, 157 P. 692, 694; International Products Co. v. Vail's Estate, 97 Vt. 318, 123 A. 194, 196.

UNDERWRITER. The person who insures another, as in a fire or life policy; the insurer. See Childs v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 66 Minn. 393, 69 N. W. 141, 35 L. R. A. 99. Especially, a person who joins with others in entering into a marine policy of insurance as insurer.

One who underwrites corporate bonds or stocks. Fraser v. Home Telephone & Telegraph Co., 91 Wash. 253, 157 P. 692, 694. One who agrees with others to purchase an entire issue of bonds or other securities, usually at the end of a certain period. By reason of such underwriting, the bonds, etc., obtain a market value or a value as collateral security. See Underwrite.

UNDISPUTED FACT. Within the meaning of a statute, an admitted fact, which the court has not deemed sufficiently material to add to the finding, or has inadvertently omitted from it; a fact not found by the court does not become an "undisputed fact," merely because one or more witnesses testify to it without direct contradiction. Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 532.

UNDIVIDED PROFITS. Profits which have not in fact been divided or distributed, English & Mersick Co. v. Eaton (D. C. Conn.) 299 F. 646, 649, or otherwise used, Douglas v. Edwards (C. C. A.) 298 F. 229, 237. Current undistributed earnings. Edwards v. Douglas, 46 S. Ct. 85, 89, 269 U. S. 204, 70 L. Ed. 235. Profits not set aside as surplus or distributed in dividends. First Nat. Bank v. Moon, 102 Kan. 334, 170 P. 33, 34, L. R. A. 1918C, 986; Phillips v. U. S. (D. C.) 12 F. (2d) 598, 600.

The terms "surplus" and "undivided profits" have different meanings in banking circles. State ex rel. Payne v. Exchange Bank of Natchitoches, 84 So. 481, 482, 147 La. 25. Surplus, like the capital stock, constitutes the working capital of the bank and is, in addition, a fund for the protection of the depositors. The "undivided profits" constitute a temporary fund changing in size from day to day and carried only until dividend periods when it is distributed to the stockholders or transferred to the permanent surplus. It is the fund from which the expenses and losses of the bank are paid. Sarles v. Scandinavian American Bank, 33 N. D. 40, 156 N. W. 556, 557.

"Surplus" and "undivided profits," as commonly employed in corporate accounting, denote an excess in the aggregate value of the assets of the corporation over the sum of liabilities, including capital stock; "surplus" describing such part of the excess in the value of the corporate assets as is treated by the corporation as part of the permanent capital, while the term "undivided profits" designates such part of the excess as consists of profits neither distributed as dividends nor carried to the surplus account. Willcuts v. Milton Dairy Co., 48 S. Ct. 71, 72, 275 U. S. 215, 72 L. Ed. 247.

UNDIVIDED RIGHT. An undivided right or title, or a title to an undivided portion of an estate, is that owned by one of two or more tenants in common or joint tenants before partition. Held by the same title by two or more persons, whether their rights are equal as to value or quantity, or unequal. See In re Wellington, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 98, 26 Am. Dec. 631.

UNDRES. In old English law. Minors or persons under age not capable of bearing arms. Fleta, l. 1, c. 9; Cowell.

UNDUE. More than necessary; not proper; illegal. Webb v. Superior Court in and for Del Norte County, 28 Cal. App. 391, 152 P. 957, 958. See, also, Elk Hotel Co. v. United Fuel Gas Co., 75 W. Va. 200, 83 S. E. 922, 924, L. R. A. 1917E, 970. Under an allegation of the "undue" execution of a will, every species of duress, fraud, undue influence, or whatever else shows undue execution may be proved. Thompson v. Miller, 182 Ind. 545, 107 N. E. 74, 75.

UNDUE INFLUENCE. The antithesis of right influence. In re Ball's Estate, 153 Wis. 27, 141 N. W. 8, 12. In regard to the making of a will and other such matters, undue influence is persuasion carried to the point of overpowering the will, or such a control over the person in question as prevents him from acting intelligently, understandingly, and voluntarily, and in effect destroys his free agency, and constrains him to do what he would not have done if such control had not been exercised. See Bennett v. Bennett, 50 N. J. Eq. 439, 26 A. 573; Francis v. Wilkinson, 147 Ill. 370, 35 N. E. 150; Conley v. Nailor, 118 U. S. 127, 6 S. Ct. 1001, 30 L. Ed. 112; Marx v. McGlynn, 88 N. Y. 370; Gongaware v. Donehoo, 255 Pa. 502, 100 A. 264, 266; In re Hudson's Estate, 131 Minn. 439, 155 N. W. 392, 395; Black v. Funk, 97 Kan. 509, 155 P. 959, 960; Creighton v. Creighton (C. C. A.) 261 F. 333, 335; Folsom v. Buttolph, 82 Ind. App. 283, 143 N. E. 258, 262; Appeal of Rogers, 123 Me. 459, 123 A. 634, 636; Stutiville's Ex'r v. Wheeler, 187 Ky. 361, 219 S. W. 411, 415; In re Chopper's Estate, 112 Okl. 25, 239 P. 592, 593; Burroughs v. Reed, 150 Ga. 724, 105 S. E. 290, 291; In re Klink's Estate, 210 Mich. 614, 178 N. W. 14, 15; Scott v. Townsend (Tex. Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 342, 349; Brown v. Brown, 171 N. C. 649, 88 S. E. 870, 871; Pratt v. Carns, 80 Fla. 243, 85 So. 681, 683.

Undue influence consists (1) in the use, by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over him, of such confidence or authority, for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage over him; (2) in taking an unfair advantage of another's weakness of mind; or (3) in taking a grossly oppressive and unfair advantage of another's necessities or distress. Civ. Code Dak. § 886 (Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 5852; Rev. Code S. D. 1919, § 819); Buchanan v. Prall, 39 N. D. 423, 167 N. W. 488, 489; Dolliver v. Dolliver, 94 Cal. 642, 30 P. 4.

"Undue influence" sufficient to avoid a will is that which compels the testator to do that which is against his will, from fear, the desire of peace, or some feeling that he is unable to resist, and must be such as to overcome his free volition or conscious judgment and substitute the wicked purposes of another instead, and be the efficient cause, without which the obnoxious disposition would not have been made; In re Allen's Estate, 116 Or. 467, 241 P. 996, 998; Sheppey v. Stevens (C. C.) 185 F. 147; and must have been directly connected with and have operated at the time of the execution of the will; Crane v. Hensler, 196 Ind. 341, 146 N. E. 577, 581.

Solicitation, importunity, argument, advice, and persuasion are not "undue influence" sufficient to avoid a contract or will. Influence obtained by persuasion and argument, or gained by kindness and affection, is not prohibited, where no imposition or fraud is practiced, and where the person's will is not overcome. Coleman v. Coleman, 85 Or. 99, 166 P. 47, 50; Peacock v. Du Bois, 90 Fla. 162, 105 So. 321, 322; In re Paczoch's Estate, 202 Iowa, 849, 211 N. W. 500, 532; Cunningham v. Dorwart, 317 Ill. 451, 148 N. E. 314, 316; Craycroft v. Crawford (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 124, 126; In re Anderson's Estate, 185 Cal. 700, 198 P. 407, 410; Talbot v. Giltner, 179 Ky. 571, 200 S. W. 913, 915; Hamlett v. McMillin (Mo. Sup.) 223 S. W. 1069, 1073; Barron v. Reardon, 137 Md. 308, 113 A. 283, 285; Stump v. Sturn (C. C. A.) 254 F. 535, 538. The line between "due" and "undue" influence when drawn must be with full recognition of the liberty due every true owner to obey the voice of justice, the dictates of friendship, of gratitude, and of benevolence, as well as the claims of kindred, when not hindered by personal incapacity or particular regulations, to dispose of his own property according to his own free choice. Coleman v. Coleman, 85 Or. 99, 166 P. 47, 50. The courts will not undertake to define it by definite words or rules, Roche v. Roche, 286 Ill. 336, 121 N. E. 621, 627, but what constitutes "undue influence" must depend upon the peculiar facts and conditions of each case, Sturm v. Stump (D. C.) 239 F. 749, 754. The character of the transaction, the mental condition of the person whose act is in question, and the relationship of the parties concerned to each other may be considered. Hamilton v. Morgan, 93 Fla. 311, 112 So. 80, 82; Geddes v. McElroy, 171 Iowa, 633, 154 N. W. 320, 328.

"Undue influence" is a species of fraud; Price's Ex'r v. Barham, 147 Va. 478, 137 S. E. 511, 512; In re Powers, 176 App. Div. 455, 162 N. Y. S. 828, 831; In re Duncan's Will, 154 Wis. 39, 141 N. W. 1002, 1003; Neill v. Brackett, 234 Mass. 367, 126 N. E. 93, 94; i. e., of constructive fraud; Pilcher v. Surles, 202 Ala. 643, 81 So. 585, 588; Valbert v. Valbert, 282 Ill. 415, 118 N. E. 738, 741. It may also be said to be a species of coercion, In re Buck's Estate, 122 Minn. 463, 142 N. W. 729, 731, or equivalent to coercion or fraud, Phillips v. Gaither, 191 Ala. 87, 67 So. 1001, 1002. However, undue influence may be exercised otherwise than through fraud. Hopper v. Sellers, 91 Kan. 876, 139 P. 365, 368.

Though undue influence is generally declared to be a species of fraud, the two terms are not synonymous (In re Newhall's Estate, 190 Cal. 709, 214 P. 231, 234, 23 A. L. R. 778; Peacock v. Du Bois, 90 Fla. 162, 105 So. 321, 322), since, though a victim of deceit, the testator may still act voluntarily; while, as a victim of undue influence, even though he is not also the subject of deception, the will of another is substituted for his own. Shirley v. Zell, 180 Ala. 352, 60 So. 905, 907; Stolle v. Kanetzky (Tex. Civ. App.) 259 S. W. 657, 662.

"Undue influence" is distinct from testamentary capacity. Capacity is the power to act. It depends solely upon the mental soundness of the actor. It exists whether the act stands in law or not. Undue influence affects the will of one having testamentary capacity, and invalidates what would otherwise be operative. Undue influence and weakness of mind are frequently found together, but they have no necessary connection with each other. Hoff v. Hoff, 106 Kan. 542, 189 P. 613, 617. See, also, Rasmussen v. Evans, 150 Minn. 319, 185 N. W. 297, pointing out that, as to undue influence, the burden of proof is on the contestant, whereas the burden of proving mental capacity is on the proponent.

Undue influence at elections occurs where any one interferes with the free exercise of a voter's franchise, by violence, intimidation, or otherwise. It is a misdemeanor. 1 Russ. Crimes, 321; Steph. Crim. Dig. 79.

UNEARNED INCREMENT. The increase in the value of property from the growth of population. Seaboard Air Line Ry. v. U. S. (D. C.) 275 F. 77, 82.

UNEDUCATED. Not synonymous with illiterate. A man might be able to read and write, carry on a business correspondence, understand business transactions, and be bound by all his contracts, and yet be an "uneducated" man. Baker v. Patton, 144 Ga. 502, 87 S. E. 659, 660.

UNEQUAL. Ill-balanced; uneven; partial; unfair;—not synonymous with inappropriate, which means unsuitable, unfit, or improper. Lane v. St. Denis Catholic Church of Benton (Mo. App.) 274 S. W. 1103, 1106.

UNEQUIVOCAL. Without doubt; clearly demonstrated; free from uncertainty. As used in an instruction on the proof necessary to make out a case, it requires proof of the highest possible character, equaling, if not exceeding, the proof required of the state in a criminal case, while the term "clear and convincing" indicates a degree of proof required in civil cases less than the degree required in criminal cases, but more than is required in the ordinary civil action. Merrick v. Ditzler, 91 Ohio St. 256, 110 N. E. 493, 494.

UNERRING. Incapable of error or failure; certain; sure; infallible. Gardner v. State, 27 Wyo. 316, 196 P. 750, 752, 15 A. L. R. 1040.

UNEXCEPTIONABLE. Without any fault; not subject to any objection or criticism. Washam v. Beaty, 210 Ala. 635, 99 So. 163, 167.

UNFAIR. In the labor movement, unfriendly to organized labor; refusing to recognize its rules and regulations;—applied particularly to employers, e. g., one who refuses to employ members of a trade union. Steffes v. Motion Picture Mach. Operators' Union, 136 Minn. 200, 161 N. W. 524. When borne on a banner carried by pickets of a theater, the term signifies that patronage of the theater is to be withheld because of action taken with reference thereto by a labor or trade union. Campbell v. Motion Picture Mach. Operators' Union of Minneapolis, Local 219, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees of U. S. and Canada, 151 Minn. 220, 186 N. W. 781, 782, 27 A. L. R. 631.

UNFAIR COMPETITION. A term which may be applied generally to all dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce, but is particularly applied in the courts of equity (where it may be restrained by injunction) to the practice of endeavoring to substitute one's own goods or products in the markets for those of another, having an established reputation and extensive sale, by means of imitating or counterfeiting the name, title, size, shape, or distinctive peculiarities of the article, or the shape, color, label, wrapper, or general appearance of the package, or other such simulations, the imitation being carried far enough to mislead the general public or deceive an unwary purchaser, and yet not amounting to an absolute counterfeit or to the infringement of a trade-mark or trade-name. Called in France and Germany "concurrence deloyale." See Reddaway v. Banham, [1896] App. Cas. 199; Singer Mfg. Co. v. June Mfg. Co., 163 U. S. 169, 16 S. Ct. 1002, 41 L. Ed. 118; Dennison Mfg. Co. v. Thomas Mfg. Co. (C. C.) 94 F. 651; Simmons Medicine Co. v. Mansfield Drug Co., 93 Tenn. 84, 23 S. W. 165; Cornelius v. Ferguson, 17 S. D. 481, 97 N. W. 390; Sterling Remedy Co. v. Eureka Chemical Co., 80 F. 108, 25 C. C. A. 314.

Passing off, or attempting to pass off upon the public the goods or business of one person as the goods or business of another. Westminster Laundry Co. v. Hesse Envelope Co., 174 Mo. App. 238, 156 S. W. 767, 768; Sayre v. McGill Ticket Punch Co. (D. C.) 200 F. 771, 773; O. & W. Thum Co. v. Dickinson (C. C. A.) 245 F. 609, 625; Gerosa v. Apco Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 299 F. 19, 25; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Elliott Varnish Co. (C. C. A.) 232 F. 588, 590; Charles Broadway Rouss, Inc., v. Winchester Co. (C. C. A.) 300 F. 706, 723; Vogue Co. v. Thompson-Hudson Co. (C. C. A.) 300 F. 509, 512; Col. W. F. Cody Historical Picture Co. v. Colonial Amusement Co. (D. C.) 284 F. 873, 875; Wirfs v. D. W. Bosley Co. (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 632, 634; Lennox Furnace Co. v. Wrot Iron Heater Co., 181 Iowa, 1331, 160 N. W. 356, 360; Henry Gehring Co. v. McCue, 23 Ohio App. 281, 154 N. E. 171, 172; Metcalf v. Hanover Star Milling Co. (C. C. A.) 204 F. 211, 214; White Studio v. Dreyfoos, 221 N. Y. 46, 116 N. E. 796, 797. The essence of the wrong in unfair competition consists in the sale of the goods of one manufacturer or vendor as those of another. Handel Co. v. Jefferson Glass Co. (D. C.) 265 F. 286, 288; Turner & Seymour Mfg. Co. v. A. & J. Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 298, 301.

The sale of goods by means which shock judicial sensibilities. Margarete Steiff v. Bing (D. C.) 215 F. 204, 206. See, however, Federal Trade Commission v. Gratz, 253 U. S. 421, 40 S. Ct. 572, 575, 64 L. Ed. 993.

UNFAITHFUL. Characterized by bad faith;—not synonymous with "illegal," which means unlawful or contrary to law, nor with "improper," which, as applied to conduct, implies such conduct as a man of ordinary and reasonable prudence would not, under the circumstances, have been guilty of. State v. American Surety Co. of New York, 26 Idaho, 652, 145 P. 1097, 1104, Ann. Cas. 1916E, 209.

UNFIT. Not fit; unsuitable; not adapted to the performance of one's duties;—not necessarily synonymous with incompetent, for a man might be unfit to discharge a dignified office by reason of his moral character, though he could not be said to be incompetent. State v. Latham, 174 Ala. 281, 61 So. 351.

UNFIT FOR USE AS A BEVERAGE. This language in a statute is not necessarily applicable to an alcoholic compound or preparation merely because it may be drunk in sufficient quantities to produce death. Thamann v. Merritt, 111 Neb. 639, 197 N. W. 413, 414.

UNFORESEEN CAUSE. With reference to causes excusing delay, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, in giving notice of injury, a cause which could not have been reasonably foreseen as likely to arise or occur, and yet is of such a nature as to have substantially interfered with the giving of the notice. Wardwell's Case, 121 Me. 216, 116 A. 447, 448. A reasonable cause. Donahue v. R. A. Sherman's Sons Co., 39 R. I. 373, 98 A. 109, L. R. A. 1917A, 76.

UNFORESEEN EVENT. In the civil law. A vis major; an uncontrollable force;—so used in Civ. Code La. art. 2697, relating to the termination of a lease by the total destruction of the property. Knapp v. Guerin, 144 La. 754, 81 So. 302, 305.

UNGELD. In Saxon law. An outlaw; a person whose murder required no composition to be made, or weregeld to be paid, by his slayer.

UNICA TAXATIO. The obsolete language of a special award of venire, where, of several defendants, one pleads, and one lets judgment go by default, whereby the jury, who are to try and assess damages on the issue, are also to assess damages against the defendant suffering judgment by default. Wharton.

UNIFACTORIAL OBLIGATION. See Contract.

UNIFORM, n. Within the meaning of an ordinance requiring a traction company to give free transportation to members of the police force and fire department when in uniform, a plain clothes man, whose only prescribed uniform was a metal badge which might be worn concealed, while wearing such badge was "in uniform." Montgomery Light & Traction Co. v. Avant, 202 Ala. 404, 80 So. 497, 498, 3 A. L. R. 384.

UNIFORM, adj. Conforming to one rule, mode, or unvarying standard; not different at different times or places; applicable to all places or divisions of a country. People v. Vickroy, 266 Ill. 384, 107 N. E. 638, 640. Equable; applying alike to all within a class. Buflin v. Mitchell, 106 Miss. 253, 63 So. 458, 459, 50 L. R. A. (N. S.) 428.

A statute is general and uniform in its operation when it operates equally upon all persons who are brought within the relations and circumstances provided for. McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20 Iowa, 342; People v. Judge, 17 Cal. 554; Kelley v. State, 6 Ohio St. 271; State v. Hogan, 63 Ohio St. 202, 58 N. E. 572, 52 L. R. A. 863, 81 Am. St. Rep. 626; Arms v. Ayer, 192 Ill. 601, 61 N. E. 851, 58 L. R. A. 277, 85 Am. St. Rep. 357; Winston v. Moore, 244 Pa. 447, 91 A. 520, 524, L. R. A. 1915A, 1190, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 498; Stevens v. Village of Nashwauk, 200 N. W. 927, 929, 161 Minn. 20.

"Uniform operation," as used in a constitutional provision requiring all laws of a general nature to have a uniform operation, does not mean that the law shall operate alike on all persons, but that it shall affect all persons uniformly who stand in the same category, or all those who stand in the same relation with respect to particular privileges and immunities conferred by the act. Gregory v. Hecke, 73 Cal. App. 268, 238 P. 787, 793. It means that the law shall apply to all persons, matters, or things which it is intended to affect. If it operates alike on all who come within the scope of its provisions, constitutional uniformity is secured. Cooper v. Rollins, 152 Ga. 588, 110 S. E. 726, 728, 20 A. L. R. 1105.

The words "general" and "uniform" as applied to laws have a meaning antithetical to special or discriminatory laws. Ex parte Nowak, 184 Cal. 701, 195 P. 402, 404. The term "uniform," however, does not mean universal. Watson v. Greely, 67 Cal. App. 328, 227 P. 664, 670.

The burdens of taxation, to be uniform, must have the essential of equality, and must bear alike upon all the property within the limits of the unit wherein it is lawful to levy taxes for a purpose, whether that unit be the state, county, or a municipality. Lang v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 29, 226 S. W. 379, 382. See, also, Jordan v. Duval County, 68 Fla. 48, 66 So. 298, 299.

With reference to locality, a tax is "uniform" when it operates with equal force and effect in every place where the subject of it is found, and with reference to classification, it is uniform when it operates without distinction or discrimination upon all persons composing the described class. Hart v. Board of Comrs. of Burke County, 192 N. C. 161, 134 S. E. 403, 405.

A tax is valid as being at a "uniform rate" if imposed at the same rate in proportion to value as is imposed on other property in the taxing district, for the tax is then proportional and reasonable. In re Opinion of the Justices, 77 N. H. 611, 93 A. 311, 312.

—Uniform laws. A considerable number of laws have been approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and many of them have been adopted in one or more jurisdictions in the United States and its possessions. Among the more important of these laws are the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act which has been adopted in all the states as well as in the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico; the Uniform

Sales Act, which in 1932 had been adopted in 33 jurisdictions; the Uniform Bills of Lading Act, in 28 jurisdictions; the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, in 23 jurisdictions; the Uniform Aeronautics Act, in 22; and the Uniform Partnership Act, in 19. Others which may be mentioned include the Uniform Warehouse Receipts, Declaratory Judgments, Fiduciaries, Fraudulent Conveyance, Desertion and Nonsupport, and Veterans' Guardianship Acts.

UNIFORMITY. Conformity to one pattern; sameness. Naill v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, 103 Okl. 179, 229 P. 833, 837.

"Uniformity of operation" of laws does not require "universality of operation." The former term relates to similarity of conditions affecting subjects or localities of the state that are appropriately classified. The latter term relates to the whole and every part of the state. State v. Daniel, 87 Fla. 270, 99 So. 804, 809.

The constitutional requirement of "uniformity" is complied with when the law operates uniformly upon all persons brought within the relations and circumstances provided by it. Abbott v. Commissioners of Roads and Revenues of Fulton County, 160 Ga. 657, 129 S. E. 38, 41.

Uniformity in taxation implies equality in the burden of taxation, which cannot exist without uniformity in the mode of assessment, as well as in the rate of taxation. Further, the uniformity must be coextensive with the territory to which it applies. And it must be extended to all property subject to taxation, so that all property may be taxed alike and equally. Exchange Bank v. Hines, 3 Ohio St. 15. And see Edye v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580, 5 S. Ct. 247, 28 L. Ed. 798; Adams v. Mississippi State Bank, 75 Miss. 701, 23 So. 395; People v. Auditor General, 7 Mich. 90; Hilger v. Moore, 56 Mont. 146, 182 P. 477, 481.

As a principle of taxation, it is established that "uniformity" does not mean universality. Gallardo v. Porto Rico Ry., Light & Power Co. (C. C. A.) 18 F.(2d) 918, 925.

The rule of "uniformity" does not require that all subjects be taxed, nor taxed alike, but is complied with when the tax is levied equally and uniformly on all subjects of the same class and kind. Sims v. Ahrens, 167 Ark. 557, 271 S. W. 720, 729. The uniformity required in taxation is limited to a uniformity in rate, assessment, and valuation of the particular tax involved, and has no reference to a uniformity of the sum total of taxes which a citizen is required to pay. King v. Sullivan County, 128 Tenn. 393, 160 S. W. 847, 848.

Uniformity in taxation means equality in burden and not equality in method. Ewert v. Taylor, 38 S. D. 124, 160 N. W. 797, 803.

UNIFORMITY, ACT OF. An act which regulates the terms of membership in the Church of England and the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, (St. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4.) See St. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59. The act of uniformity has been amended by the St. 35 & 36 Vict. c.

35, which inter alia provides a shortened form of morning and evening prayer. Whar-ton.

UNIFORMITY OF PROCESS ACT. The English statute of 2 Wm. IV. c. 39, establishing a uniform process for the commencement of actions in all the courts of law at Westminster. 3 Steph. Comm. 566. The improved system thus established was more fully amended by the Procedure Acts of 1852, 1854, and 1860, and by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875.

UNIGENITURE. The state of being the only begotten.

UNILATERAL. One-sided; ex parte; having relation to only one of two or more persons or things.

UNILATERAL CONTRACT. See Contract.

UNILATERAL MISTAKE. A mistake or misunderstanding as to the terms or effect of a contract, made or entertained by one of the parties to it but not by the other. Green v. Stone, 54 N. J. Eq. 387, 34 A. 1099, 55 Am. St. Rep. 577; Kant v. Atlanta, B. & A. R. Co., 189 Ala. 48, 66 So. 598, 599.

UNILATERAL RECORD. Records are unilateral when offered to show a particular fact, as a prima facie case, either for or against a stranger. Colligan v. Cooney, 107 Tenn. 214, 64 S. W. 31.

UNIMPEACHABLE WITNESS. Under a statute requiring proof of a holographic will by the unimpeachable evidence of at least three disinterested witnesses to the testator's handwriting, an "unimpeachable witness" is one whom the jury finds to speak truthfully and whose conclusion they find to be correct, notwithstanding the presence of other evidence contradicting him. Sneed v. Reynolds, 166 Ark. 581, 266 S. W. 686, 689; Murphy v. Murphy, 144 Ark. 429, 222 S. W. 721, 723.

UNIMPROVED LAND. A statutory term which includes lands, once improved, that have reverted to a state of nature, as well as lands that have never been improved. Moore v. Morris, 118 Ark. 516, 177 S. W. 6, 8.

UNINCLOSED PLACE. A place not entirely inclosed, an "inclosed" place being a place inclosed on all sides by some sort of material. Ex parte Wisner, 32 Cal. App. 637, 163 P. 868, 869.

UNINTELLIGIBLE. That which cannot be understood.

UNIO. Lat. In canon law. A consolidation of two churches into one. Cowell.

UNIO PROLIUM. Lat. Uniting of offspring. A method of adoption, chiefly used in Germany, by which step-children (on either or both sides of the house) are made equal, in respect to the right of succession, with the children who spring from the marriage of the two contracting parties. See Heinecc. Elem. § 188.

UNION. A league; a federation; an unincorporated association of persons for a common purpose; as, a trade or labor union. Hughes v. State, 109 Ark. 403, 160 S. W. 209.

In Ecclesiastical Law

Two or more benefices which have been united into one benefice. Sweet.

In English Poor-Law

Two or more parishes which have been consolidated for the better administration of the poor-law therein.

In Public Law

A popular term in America for the United States; also, in Great Britain, for the consolidated governments of England and Scotland, or for the political tie between Great Britain and Ireland.

In Scotch Law

A "clause of union" is a clause in a feoffment by which two estates, separated or not adjacent, are united as one, for the purpose of making a single seisin suffice for both.

UNION-JACK. The national flag of Great Britain and Ireland, which combines the banner of St. Patrick with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. The word "jack" is most probably derived from the surcoat, charged with a red cross, anciently used by the English soldiery. This appears to have been called a "jacque," whence the word "jacket," anciently written "jacquit." Some, however, without a shadow of evidence, derive the word from "Jacques," the first alteration having been made in the reign of King James I. Wharton.

UNION MORTGAGE CLAUSE. A clause, as in a fire policy (together with the rider making the loss, if any, payable to the mortgagee), which provides that if the policy is made payable to a mortgagee of the insured real estate, no act or default of any person other than such mortgagee, or his agents or those claiming under him, shall affect his right to recover in case of loss on such real estate. Bankers' Joint Stock Land Bank of Milwaukee, Wis., v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 158 Minn. 363, 197 N. W. 749.

UNION OF CHURCHES. A combining and consolidating of two churches into one. Also it is when one church is made subject to another, and one man is rector of both; and where a conventual church is made a cathedral. Tomlins.

UNION SOLDIERS. Those who fought in the American Civil War in support of the Union, in contradistinction to Confederate soldiers, who fought for the establishment of the new confederacy. Keely v. Board of Sup'rs of Dubuque County, 158 Iowa, 205, 139 N. W. 473, 474.

UNIT. A term sometimes used in the sense of a share, as in an oil syndicate, Chew v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 9 F.(2d) 348, 351, or as equivalent to an investment security, State v. Summerland, 150 Minn. 266, 185 N. W. 255, 256.

UNIT OF PRODUCTION. The "unit of production" method of determining the taxable net income or profit in the oil or gas business is accomplished by a system of accounting by which is ascertained, as nearly as science will permit, the total amount of recoverable oil in the property, and to each barrel of this oil is assigned its part of the capital investment, and from the sale price of each barrel produced and sold there is deducted the expenses of producing it, and its proportion of the capital investment, leaving the balance as profit, and thus, when the property is exhausted, the operator has received back his capital and expenses, and accounted for his net income or loss. Carter v. Phillips, 88 Okl. 202, 212 P. 747, 750.

UNITAS PERSONARUM. Lat. The unity of persons, as that between husband and wife, or ancestor and heir.

UNITED IN INTEREST. A statutory term applicable to codefendants only when they are similarly interested in and will be similarly affected by the determination of the issues involved in the action; McCord v. McCord, 104 Ohio St. 274, 135 N. E. 548, 549; e. g., joint obligors upon a guaranty; Columbia Graphophone Co. v. Slawson, 100 Ohio St. 473, 126 N. E. 890, 891.

UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. The official title of the kingdom composed of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, and including the colonies and possessions beyond the seas, under the act of January 1, 1801, effecting the union between Ireland and Great Britain.

UNITED STATES BONDS. Obligations for payment of money which have been at various times issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS. It shall be the duty of the district court of each judicial district to appoint such number of persons, to be known as United States commissioners, at such places in the district as may be designated by the district court. Rev. St. U. S. § 627 (28 USCA § 526, note). See 5 USCA § 92; 8 USCA § 45; 18 USCA §§ 591, 641, 651, 652; 22 USCA § 257; 28 USCA §§

123, 126, 392, 393, 526, 758; Austill v. United States, 58 Ct. Cl. 232; United States v. Maresca (D. C.) 266 F. 713.

UNITED STATES COURTS. Except in the case of impeachments the judicial power of the United States is vested by the Constitution in a supreme court and such other inferior courts as may be from time to time established by congress. All the judges are appointed by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate, to hold office during good behavior, and their compensation cannot be diminished during their terms of office. The judges, other than those of the supreme court, are circuit judges and district judges. The circuit judges compose the circuit courts of appeals and the district judges hold the district courts, and also at times sit in the circuit courts of appeal. For a detailed statement of the territorial boundaries of the several districts and divisions of districts, see 28 USCA § 141 et seq. and various special acts.

In statutes, the words "court of the district" (Prieto v. U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, 193 N. Y. S. 342, 117 Misc. 703), and "courts of the United States," are commonly deemed to refer to federal courts and not to state courts. General Inv. Co. v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 269 F. 235, 237.

UNITED STATES CURRENCY. Commonly understood to include every form of currency authorized by the United States government, whether issued directly by it or under its authority. Appel v. State, 28 Ariz. 416, 237 P. 190, 191.

UNITED STATES NOTES. Promissory notes, resembling bank-notes, issued by the government of the United States.

UNITED STATES OFFICER. Usually and strictly, in United States statutes, a person appointed in the manner declared under Const. art. 2, § 2, McGrath v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 275 F. 294, 300, providing for the appointment of officers, either by the President and the Senate, the President alone, the courts of law, or the heads of departments, Steele v. U. S., 45 S. Ct. 417, 418. 267 U. S. 505, 69 L. Ed. 761. Thus, a prohibition agent, appointed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is not an "officer of the United States," within the meaning of article 2, § 2. Keehn v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 300 F. 493, 496. A receiver appointed by a federal court may be an "officer of the United States," within the meaning of Criminal Code, § 97, and Act March 4, 1911 (18 USCA §§ 183, 189), Weitzel v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 274 F. 101, 102, but not within the meaning of the Revenue Act Oct. 3, 1917, § 201(a), 40 Stat. 303, the words "officers or employees" meaning persons holding offices that are public stations, conferred by appointment of the government, and embracing the idea of tenure, duration, emolument, and duties fixed by law. Fleming v. Bowers (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 789, 790. An "officer of the United States," within Const. art. 4, § 3, is one who holds office under appointment by the President, or by heads of departments authorized to make appointments, usually evidenced by a commission, but a commission is not essential to the validity of the appointment. Fekete v. City of East St. Louis, 315 Ill. 58, 145 N. E. 692, 693, 40 A. L. R. 650.

UNITY. In the law of estates. The peculiar characteristic of an estate held by several in joint tenancy, and which is fourfold, viz., unity of interest, unity of title, unity of time, and unity of possession. In other words, joint tenants have one and the same interest, accruing by one and the same conveyance, commencing at one and the same time, and held by one and the same undivided possession. 2 Bl. Comm. 180.

UNITY OF INTEREST. This term is applied to joint tenants, to signify that no one of them can have a greater interest in the property than each of the others, while, in the case of tenants in common, one of them may have a larger share than any of the others. Williams, Real Prop. 134, 139.

UNITY OF POSSESSION. Joint possession of two rights by several titles. As if I take a lease of land from a person at a certain rent, and afterwards I buy the fee-simple of such land, by this I acquire unity of possession, by which the lease is extinguished. Cowell; Brown. It is also one of the essential properties of a joint estate, each of the tenants having the entire possession as well of every parcel as of the whole. 2 Bl. Comm. 182.

UNITY OF SEISIN is where a person seised of land which is subject to an easement, profit à prendre, or similar right, also becomes seised of the land to which the easement or other right is annexed. Sweet.

UNITY OF TIME. One of the essential properties of a joint estate; the estates of the tenants being vested at one and the same period. 2 Bl. Comm. 181.

UNITY OF TITLE is applied to joint tenants, to signify that they hold their property by one and the same title, while tenants in common may take property by several titles. Williams, Real Prop. 134.

Unius omnino testis responsio non audiatur. The answer of one witness shall not be heard at all; the testimony of a single witness shall not be admitted under any circumstances. A maxim of the civil and canon law. Cod. 4, 20, 9; 3 Bl. Comm. 370; Best, Ev. p. 426, § 390, and note.

Uniuscujusque contractus initium spectandum est, et causa. The commencement and cause of every contract are to be regarded. Dig. 17, 1, 8; Story, Bailm. § 56.

UNIVERSAL. Having relation to the whole or an entirety; pertaining to all without exception; a term more extensive than "general," which latter may admit of exceptions. See Blair v. Howell, 68 Iowa, 619, 28 N. W. 199; Koen v. State, 35 Neb. 676, 53 N. W. 595, 17 L. R. A. 821.

UNIVERSAL AGENT. One who is appointed to do all the acts which the principal can personally do, and which he may lawfully delegate the power to another to do. Story, Ag. 18; Baldwin v. Tucker, 112 Ky. 282, 65 S. W. 841, 57 L. R. A. 451; Wood v. McCain, 7 Ala. 800.

UNIVERSAL LEGACY. See Legacy.

UNIVERSAL PARTNERSHIP. See Partnership.

UNIVERSAL REPRESENTATION. In Scotch law. A term applied to the representation by an heir of his ancestor. Bell.

UNIVERSAL SUCCESSION. In the civil law. Succession to the entire estate of another, living or dead, though generally the latter, importing succession to the entire property of the predecessor as a juridical entirety, that is, to all his active as well as passive legal relations. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 649.

Universalia sunt notiora singularibus. 2 Rolle, 294. Things universal are better known than things particular.

UNIVERSITAS. Lat. In the civil law. A corporation aggregate. Dig. 3, 4, 7. Literally, a whole formed out of many individuals. 1 Bl. Comm. 469.

UNIVERSITAS FACTI. In the civil law. A plurality of corporeal things of the same kind, which are regarded as a whole; e. g., a herd of cattle, a stock of goods. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS JURIS. In the civil law. A quantity of things of all sorts, corporeal as well as incorporeal, which, taken together, are regarded as a whole; e. g., an inheritance, an estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

UNIVERSITAS RERUM. In the civil law. Literally, a whole of things. Several single things, which, though not mechanically connected with one another, are, when taken together, regarded as a whole in any legal respect. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 162.

Universitas vel corporatio non dicitur aliquid facere nisi id sit collegialiter deliberatum, etiam si major pars id faciat. A university or corporation is not said to do anything unless it be deliberated upon as a body, although the majority should do it. Dav. 48.

UNIVERSITY. An institution of higher learning, consisting of an assemblage of colleges united under one corporate organization and government, affording instruction in the arts and sciences and the learned professions, and conferring degrees. See Com. v. Banks, 198 Pa. 397, 48 A. 277.

UNIVERSITY COURT. See Chancellor's Courts in the Two Universities.

UNIVERSUS. Lat. The whole; all together. Calvin.

UNJUST. Contrary to right and justice, or to the enjoyment of his rights by another, or to the standards of conduct furnished by the laws. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co. (D. C.) 264 F. 691, 695; Komen v. City of St. Louis, 316 Mo. 9, 289 S. W. 838, 841.

UNKOUTH. Unknown. The law French form of the Saxon "uncouth." Britt. c. 12.

UNLAGE. Sax. An unjust law.

UNLARICH. In old Scotch law. That which is done without law or against law. Spelman.

UNLAW. In Scotch law. A witness was formerly inadmissible who was not worth the king's unlaw; i. e., the sum of £10 Scots, then the common fine for absence from court and for small delinquencies. Bell.

UNLAWFUL. That which is contrary to law or unauthorized by law. State v. Chenault, 20 N. M. 181, 147 P. 283, 285.

"Unlawful" and "illegal" are frequently used as synonymous terms, but, in the proper sense of the word, "unlawful," as applied to promises, agreements, considerations, and the like, denotes that they are ineffectual in law because they involve acts which, although not illegal, i. e., positively forbidden, are disapproved of by the law, and are therefore not recognized as the ground of legal rights, either because they are immoral or because they are against public policy. It is on this ground that contracts in restraint of marriage or of trade are generally void. Sweet. And see Hagerman v. Buchanan, 45 N. J. Eq. 292, 17 A. 946, 14 Am. St. Rep. 732; Tatum v. State, 66 Ala. 467; Johnson v. State, 66 Ohio St. 59, 63 N. E. 607, 61 L. R. A. 277, 90 Am. St. Rep. 564; Pinder v. State, 27 Fla. 370, 8 So. 837, 26 Am. St. Rep. 75; MacDaniel v. U. S., 87 F. 321, 30 C. C. A. 670; People v. Chicago Gas Trust Co., 130 Ill. 268, 22 N. E. 798, 8 L. R. A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY. At common law. The meeting together of three or more persons, to the disturbance of the public peace, and with the intention of co-operating in the forcible and violent execution of some unlawful private enterprise. If they take steps towards the performance of their purpose, it becomes a riot; and, if they put their design into actual execution, it is a riot. 4 Bl. Comm. 146. Any meeting of great numbers of people, with such circumstances of terror as cannot but endanger the public peace, and raise fears and jealousies among the subjects of the realm. 4 Steph. Comm. 254; Shields v. State, 187 Wis. 448, 204 N. W. 486, 487, 40 A. L. R. 945.

UNLAWFUL DETAINER. The unjustifiable retention of the possession of lands by one whose original entry was lawful and of right, but whose right to the possession has terminated and who refuses to quit, as in the case of a tenant holding over after the termination of the lease and in spite of a demand for possession by the landlord. McDevitt v. Lambert, 80 Ala. 536, 2 So. 438; Silva v. Campbell, 84 Cal. 420, 24 Pac. 316; Code Tenn. 1896, § 5093 (Code 1932, § 9247).

Where an entry upon lands is unlawful, whether forcible or not, and the subsequent conduct is forcible and tortious, the offense committed is a "forcible entry and detainer;" but where the original entry is lawful, and the subsequent holding forcible and tortious, the offense is an "unlawful detainer" only. Pullen v. Boney, 4 N. J. Law, 129.

UNLAWFUL ENTRY. An entry upon lands effected peaceably and without force, but which is without color of title and is accomplished by means of fraud or some other willful wrong. Dickinson v. Maguire, 9 Cal. 46; Blaco v. Haller, 9 Neb. 149, 1 N. W. 978.

UNLAWFULLY. Illegally; wrongfully. Dickinson v. New York, 92 N. Y. 584; Dameron v. Hamilton, 264 Mo. 103, 174 S. W. 425, 430; see State v. Massey, 97 N. C. 465, 2 S. E. 445. This word is frequently used in indictments in the description of the offence: it is necessary when the crime did not exist at common law, and when a statute, in describing an offence which it creates, uses the word; 1 Mood. C. C. 339; but is unnecessary whenever the crime existed at common law and is manifestly illegal; 1 Chit. Cr. L. *241.

UNLESS. "If it be not that," "if it be not the case that," "if not," "supposing not," "if it be not," "except." West Lumber Co. v. Keen (Tex. Com. App.) 237 S. W. 236; State v. Timmerari, 96 N. J. Law. 442, 115 A. 394, 395; Ward v. Interstate Business Men's Acc. Ass'n, 185 Iowa, 674, 169 N. W. 451, 452.

"UNLESS" LEASE. An oil and gas lease which provides that lease will be rendered null and void and lessee will automatically be relieved from liability, upon failure to commence operations or to pay rent. It must be expressly stipulated in the lease that lease shall become null and void at a certain time "unless" the lessee begins operations or pays the rental stipulated. Brunson v. Carter Oil Co. (D. C.) 259 F. 656, 663.

UNLIMITED. Without confines, unrestricted, boundless. Flynn v. Caplan, 234 Mass. 516, 126 N. E. 776, 777.

UNLIQUIDATED. Not ascertained in amount; not determined; remaining unassessed or unsettled; as unliquidated damages.

A debt is spoken of as "unliquidated," if the amount thereof cannot be ascertained at the trial by a mere computation, based on the terms of the obligation or on some other accepted standard. Hetrick Mfg. Co. v. Barish, 199 N. Y. S. 755, 767, 120 Misc. 673.

Under the law of accord and satisfaction, a claim or debt will be regarded as unliquidated if it is in dispute as to the proper amount. Early-Foster Co. v. W. F. Klump & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1015, 1018; Schultz v. Farmers' Elevator Co., 174 Iowa, 667, 156 N. W. 716, 719. See Damages.

UNLIVERY. A term used in maritime law to designate the unloading of cargo of a vessel at the place where it is properly to be delivered. The Two Catharines, 24 Fed. Cas. 429.

UNMARRIED. Its primary meaning is "never having been married"; but it is a word of flexible meaning and it may be construed as not having a husband or wife at the time in question. 9 H. L. Cas. 601; People v. Weinstock (Mag. Ct.) 140 N. Y. S. 453, 458; Myers v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 61 Colo. 302, 157 P. 196, 197, L. R. A. 1917D, 287. A divorced woman has been held an unmarried woman; In re Giles, 85 C. C. A. 418, 158 F. 596; State v. Wallace, 79 Or. 129, 154 P. 430, L. R. A. 1916D, 457.

UNNATURAL OFFENSE. The infamous crime against nature; i. e., sodomy or buggery.

UNNATURAL WILL. An expression applied to disposition of estate or large portion thereof to strangers, to exclusion of natural objects of testator's bounty without apparent reason. In re Shay's Estate, 196 Cal. 355, 237 P. 1079, 1083.

UNNECESSARY. Not required by the circumstances of the case. Hickman v. Ohio State Life Ins. Co., 92 Ohio St. 87, 110 N. E. 542, 543.

Uno absurdo dato, infinita sequuntur. 1 Coke, 102. One absurdity being allowed, an infinity follows.

UNO ACTU. Lat. In a single act; by one and the same act.

UNO FLATU. Lat. In one breath. 3 Man. & G. 45. Uno flatu, et uno intuitu, at one breath, and in one view. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, 504, Fed. Cas. No. 11,274.

UNOCCUPIED. In fire policies covering dwellings "unoccupied" means not used as a dwelling by human beings. Russell v. Granite State Fire Ins. Co., 121 Me. 248, 116 A. 554, 556. The terms vacant and "unoccupied" are not synonymous. The former term generally refers to inanimate objects, the latter to animate occupancy. Parmeter v. Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co., 48 N. D. 530, 185 N. W. 810, 811. See Occupation.

UNPRECEDENTED. Unusual and extraordinary; affording no reasonable warning or expectation of recurrence. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Yarbrough, 194 Ala. 162, 69 So. 582, 584.

UNQUES. L. Fr. Ever; always. Ne unques, never.

UNQUES PRIST. L. Fr. Always ready. Cowell. Another form of tout temps prist.

UNREASONABLE. Beyond the rules of reason or moderation; immoderate or exorbitant. U. S. v. Oglesby Grocery Co. (D. C.) 264 F. 691, 695. See "Search."

UNRULY AND DANGEROUS. "Unruly and dangerous" animals, within the meaning of the law, are such as are likely to injure other domestic animals and persons. Fink v. United States Coal & Coke Co., 72 W. Va. 507, 78 S. E. 702, 703.

UNSAFE. "Dangerous." Hanson v. City of Anamosa, 177 Iowa, 101, 158 N. W. 591, 595; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Smallwood (Tex. Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 292, 293.

UNSEATED LAND. See Land.

UNSEAWORTHY. Of a vessel, unable to withstand the perils of an ordinary voyage at sea. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Compania de Navegacion, Interior, S. A. (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 493, 495; The Willdomino (C. C. A.) 300 F. 5, 12; The Asuarca (D. C.) 291 F. 73, 74; Brown v. Jerome (C. C. A.) 298 F. 1, 5. Also, within the meaning of the Harter Act (46 USCA §§ 190-195), unable to withstand an extraordinary peril, such as a tropical hurricane, when the master and manager knew or should have known, when the ship left her home port, that the hurricane was approaching. Texas & Gulf S. S. Co. v. Parker (C. C. A.) 263 F. 864, 868. See, also, Seaworthiness.

UNSOLEMN WAR. War denounced without a declaration; war made not upon general but special declaration; imperfect war. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 409, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

UNSOLEMN WILL.

In the Civil Law

One in which an executor is not appointed. Swinb. Wills 29.

UNSOUND MIND. A person of unsound mind is one who from infirmity of mind is incapable of managing himself or his affairs. The term, therefore, includes insane persons, idiots, and imbeciles. Sweet. See Insanity. And see Cheney v. Price, 90 Hun, 238, 37 N. Y. S. 117; In re Black's Estate, 1 Myr. Prob. (Cal.) 24; In re Mason, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 380; Hart v. Miller, 29 Ind. App. 222, 64 N. E. 239; In re Lindsley, 44 N. J. Eq. 567, 15 A. 1, 6 Am. St. Rep. 913; Dennett v. Dennett, 44 N. H. 531, 84 Am. Dec. 97; Edwards v. Davenport (C. C.) 20 F. 758; Witte v. Gilbert, 10 Neb. 539, 7 N. W. 288; Stewart v. Lisenard, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 300; Ray v. State, 32 Ga. App. 513, 124 S. E. 57.

UNTHRIFT. A prodigal; a spendthrift. 1 Bl. Comm. 306.

UNTIL. Up to time of. "Until" is a word of limitation, used ordinarily to restrict that which precedes to what immediately follows it, and its office is to fix some point of time or some event upon the arrival or occurrence of which what precedes will cease to exist. State v. Kehoe, 49 Mont. 582, 144 P. 162, 164; Whitford v. Lee, 97 Conn. 554, 117 A. 554, 556; Board of Education of School Dist. No. 41 v. Morgan, 316 Ill. 143, 147 N. E. 34, 37; Irwin v. Irwin, 179 App. Div. 871, 167 N. Y. S. 76, 78.

UNTRUE. Prima facie inaccurate, but not necessarily wilfully false. 3 B. & S. 929.

Unumquodque dissolvitur eodem ligamine quo ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved by the same solemnity with which it is created. Broom, Max. 884.

Unumquodque eodem modo quo colligatu est, dissolvitur,—quo constituitur, destruitur. Everything is dissolved by the same means by which it is put together,—destroyed by the same means by which it is established. 2 Rolle, 39; Broom, Max. 891.

Unumquodque est id quod est principalis in ipso. Hob. 123. That which is the principal part of a thing is the thing itself.

Unumquodque principiorum est sibimetipsi fides; et perspicua vera non sunt probanda. Every general principle [or maxim of law] is its own pledge or warrant; and things that are clearly true are not to be proved. Branch; Co. Litt. 11.

UNUS NULLUS RULE, THE. The rule of evidence which obtains in the civil law, that the testimony of one witness is equivalent to the testimony of none. Wharton.

UNVALUED POLICY. One in which the value of the interest at risk is not fixed in the policy but is estimated by a certain standard, and, in case of loss, is made out by proof.

Peninsular & O. S. S. Co. v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. (D. C.) 185 F. 172.

UNWHOLESOME FOOD. Food not fit to be eaten; food which if eaten would be injurious.

UNWORTHY. Unbecoming, discreditable, not having suitable qualities or value. Alsop v. State, 91 Tex. Cr. R. 224, 238 S. W. 667, 669.

UNWRITTEN LAW. All that portion of the law, observed and administered in the courts, which has not been enacted or promulgated in the form of a statute or ordinance, including the unenacted portions of the common law, general and particular customs having the force of law, and the rules, principles, and maxims established by judicial precedents or the successive like decisions of the courts. See Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1899; B. & C. Comp. Or. 1901, § 736 (Code 1930, § 9-609).

A popular expression to designate a supposed rule of law that a man who takes the life of his wife's paramour or daughter's seducer is not guilty of a criminal offence. Almerigi v. State, 17 Okl. Cr. 458, 188 P. 1094, 1096. A trial judge is said to have expressed to a jury his approval of a verdict based upon such a theory; see 43 Canada L. J. 764; it is said to have received recognition in California; see 19 Green Bag 721, an article from the London L. J.; see also 12 Law Notes 224. The rule was much urged upon a jury in the common pleas of Philadelphia: Biddle, J., said to counsel: "In this court the 'unwritten law' is not worth the paper it isn't written on."

UPLANDS. Lands bordering on bodies of waters. Martin v. Busch, 93 Fla. 535, 112 So. 274, 285.

UPLIFTED HAND. The hand raised towards the heavens, in one of the forms of taking an oath, instead of being laid upon the Gospels.

UPPER BENCH. The court of king's bench, in England, was so called during the interval between 1649 and 1660, the period of the commonwealth, Rolle being then chief justice. See 3 Bl. Comm. 202.

UPSET PRICE. The price at which any subject, as lands or goods, is exposed to sale by auction, below which it is not to be sold. In a final decree in foreclosure, the decree should name an upset price large enough to cover costs and all allowances made by the court, receiver's certificates and interest, liens prior to the bonds, amounts diverted from the earnings, and all undetermined claims which will be settled before the confirmation and sale; Blair v. St. Louis, H. & K. R. Co. (C. C.) 25 F. 232.

UPSUN. In Scotch law. Between the hours of sunrise and sunset. Poinding must be executed with upsun. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 3, p. 32.

URBAN HOMESTEAD. See Homestead.

URBAN SERVITUDE. City servitudes, or servitudes of houses, are called "urban." They are the easements appertaining to the building and construction of houses; as, for instance, the right to light and air, or the right to build a house so as to throw the rain-water on a neighbor's house. Mozley & Whitley; Civ. Code La. § 711.

URBS. Lat. In Roman law. A city, or a walled town. Sometimes it is put for civitas, and denotes the inhabitants, or both the city and its inhabitants; i. e., the municipality or commonwealth. By way of special pre-eminence, urbs meant the city of Rome. Ainsworth.

URE. L. Fr. Effect; practice. Mis en ure, put in practice; carried into effect. Kelham.

USAGE. A reasonable and lawful public custom in a locality concerning particular transactions which is either known to the parties, or so well established, general, and uniform that they must be presumed to have acted with reference thereto. And see Milroy v. Railway Co., 98 Iowa, 188, 67 N. W. 276; Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 388, 19 L. Ed. 987; Wilcocks v. Phillips, 29 Fed. Cas. 1203; McCarthy v. McArthur, 69 Ark. 313, 63 S. W. 56; Lincoln & K. Bank v. Page, 9 Mass. 156, 6 Am. Dec. 52; Lane v. Bank, 3 Ind. App. 299, 29 N. E. 613; Morningstar v. Cunningham, 110 Ind. 328, 11 N. E. 593, 59 Am. Rep. 211; Barreda v. Milmo Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 241 S. W. 743, 745. Gerseta Corporation v. Silk Ass'n of America, 220 App. Div. 293, 222 N. Y. S. 11, 13.

This word, as used in English law, differs from "custom" and "prescription," in that no man may claim a rent common or other inheritance by usage, though he may by prescription. Moreover, a usage is local in all cases, and must be proved; whereas, a custom is frequently general, and as such is noticed without proof. "Usage," in French law, is the "usus" of Roman law, and corresponds very nearly to the tenancy at will or on sufferance of English law. Brown.

"Usage," in its most extensive meaning, includes both custom and prescription; but, in its narrower signification, the term refers to a general habit, mode, or course of procedure. A usage differs from a custom, in that it does not require that the usage should be immemorial to establish it; but the usage must be known, certain, uniform, reasonable, and not contrary to law. Lowry v. Read, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 452.

"Usage" is also called a "custom," though the latter word has also another signification; it is a long and uniform practice, applied to habits, modes, and courses of dealing. It relates to modes of action, and does not comprehend the mere adoption of certain peculiar doctrines or rules of law. Dickinson v. Gay, 7 Allen (Mass.) 29, 83 Am. Dec. 656.

General Usage

One which prevails generally throughout the country, or is followed generally by a given profession or trade, and is not local in its nature or observance.

Usage of Trade

A course of dealing; a mode of conducting transactions of a particular kind. Haskins v. Warren, 115 Mass. 535.

USANCE. In mercantile law. The common period fixed by the usage or custom or habit of dealing between the country where a bill is drawn, and that where it is payable, for the payment of bills of exchange. It means, in some countries, a month, in others two or more months, and in others half a month. Story, Bills, §§ 50, 144, 332.

USE, v. To make use of, to convert to one's service, to avail one's self of, to employ. Rice v. Fields, 192 Ky. 161, 232 S. W. 385; Bastian v. State, 104 Misc. 287, 175 N. Y. S. 564, 566; Whitaker v. Regents of the University of California, 39 Cal. App. 111, 178 P. 308, 310.

USE, n. A confidence reposed in another, who was made tenant of the land, or terre-tenant, that he would dispose of the land according to the intention of the cestui que use, or him to whose use it was granted, and suffer him to take the profits. 2 Bl. Comm. 328.

A right in one person, called the "cestui que use," to take the profits of land of which another has the legal title and possession, together with the duty of defending the same, and of making estates thereof according to the direction of the cestui que use. Bouvier.

Uses and trusts are not so much different things as different aspects of the same subject. A use regards principally the beneficial interest; a trust regards principally the nominal ownership. The usage of the two terms is, however, widely different. The word "use" is employed to denote either an estate vested since the statute of uses, and by force of that statute, or to denote such an estate created before that statute as, had it been created since, would have become a legal estate by force of the statute. The word "trust" is employed since that statute to denote the relation between the party invested with the legal estate (whether by force of that statute or independently of it) and the party beneficially entitled, who has hitherto been said to have the equitable estate. Mozeley & Whitley.

In Conveyancing

"Use" literally means "benefit;" thus, in an ordinary assignment of chattels, the assignor transfers the property to the assignee for his "absolute use and benefit." In the expressions "separate use," "superstitious use," and "charitable use," "use" has the same meaning. Sweet.

In the Civil Law

A right of receiving so much of the natural profits of a thing as is necessary to daily sustenance. It differs from "usufruct," which is a right not only to use, but to enjoy. 1 Browne, Civil & Adm. Law, 184.

Use is the right given to any one to make a gratuitous use of a thing belonging to another, or to exact such a portion of the fruit it produces as is necessary for his personal wants and those of his family. Civ. Code La. art. 626.

In a Non-technical Sense

The "use" of a thing means that one is to enjoy, hold, occupy, or have some manner of benefit thereof. Mace v. Hollenbeck (Mo. Sup.) 175 S. W. 876, 877; Bryson v. Hicks, 78 Ind. App. 111, 134 N. E. 874, 875. Use also means usefulness, utility, advantage, productive of benefit. Williams v. City of Norman, 85 Okl. 230, 205 P. 144, 148; National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 95 W. Va. 420, 121 S. E. 291, 295, 36 A. L. R. 1171.

In General

—Cestui que use. A person for whose use and benefit lands or tenements are held by another. The latter, before the statute of uses, was called the "feoffee to use," and held the nominal or legal title.

—Charitable use. See Charitable.

—Contingent use. A use limited to take effect upon the happening of some future contingent event; as where lands are conveyed to the use of A. and B., after a marriage shall be had between them. 2 Bl. Comm. 334; Haywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. Law, 94; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 692.

—Executed use. The first use in a conveyance upon which the statute of uses operates by bringing the possession to it, the combination of which, i. e., the use and the possession, form the legal estate, and thus the statute is said to execute the use. Wharton.

—Executory uses. These are springing uses, which confer a legal title answering to an executory devise; as when a limitation to the use of A. in fee is defeasible by a limitation to the use of B., to arise at a future period, or on a given event.

—Feoffee to uses. A person to whom (before the statute of uses) land was conveyed "for the use" of a third person. He held the nominal or legal title, while the third person, called the "cestui que use," was entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the estate.

—Official use. An active use before the statute of uses, which imposed some duty on the legal owner or feoffee to uses; as a conveyance to A. with directions for him to sell the estate and distribute the proceeds among B., C., and D. To enable A. to perform this duty, he had the legal possession of the estate to be sold. Wharton.

—Passive use. A permissive use. (q. v.)

—Permissive use. A passive use which was resorted to before the statute of uses, in order to avoid a harsh law; as that of mortmain or a feudal forfeiture. It was a mere invention in order to evade the law by secrecy; as a conveyance to A. to the use of B. A. simply held the possession, and B. enjoyed the profits of the estate. Wharton.

—Resulting use. A use raised by equity for the benefit of a feoffor who has made a voluntary conveyance to uses without any declaration of the use. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 100. A resulting use arises where the legal seisin is transferred, and no use is expressly declared, nor any consideration or evidence of intent to direct the use. The use then remains in the original grantor, for it cannot be supposed that the estate was intended to be given away, and the statute immediately transfers the legal estate to such resulting use. Wharton.

—Secondary use. A use limited to take effect in derogation of a preceding estate, otherwise called a "shifting use," as a conveyance to the use of A. and his heirs, with a proviso that, when B. returns from India, then to the use of C. and his heirs. 1 Steph. Comm. 546.

—Shifting use. A use which is so limited that it will be made to shift or transfer itself, from one beneficiary to another, upon the occurrence of a certain event after its creation. For example, an estate is limited to the use of A. and his heirs, provided that, upon the return of B. from Rome, it shall be to the use of C. and his heirs; this is a shifting use, which transfers itself to C. when the event happens. 1 Steph. Comm. 503; 2 Bl. Comm. 335. These shifting uses are common in all settlements; and, in marriage settlements, the first use is always to the owner in fee till the marriage, and then to other uses. The fee remains with the owner until the marriage, and then it shifts as uses arise. 4 Kent, Comm. 297.

—Springing use. A use limited to arise on a future event where no preceding use is limited, and which does not take effect in derogation of any other interest than that which results to the grantor, or remains in him in the mean time. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 281; Smith v. Brisson, 90 N. C. 288.

—Statute of uses. An English statute enacted in 1536, (27 Hen. VIII, c. 10,) directed against the practice of creating uses in lands, and which converted the purely equitable title of persons entitled to a use into a legal title or absolute ownership with right of possession. The statute is said to "execute the use," that is, it abolishes the intervening estate of the feoffee to uses, and makes the beneficial interest of the cestui que use an absolute legal title. See Ohio & Colorado

Smelting & Refining Co. v. Barr, 58 Colo. 116, 144 P. 552, 554.

—Superstitious uses. See that title.

—Use and occupation. This is the name of an action, being a variety of assumpsit, to be maintained by a landlord against one who has had the occupation and enjoyment of an estate, under a contract to pay therefor, express or implied, but not under such a lease as would support an action specifically for rent. Thackray v. Ritz, 223 N. Y. S. 668, 669, 130 Misc. 403.

—Use plaintiff. One for whose use (benefit) an action is brought in the name of another. Thus, where the assignee of a chose in action is not allowed to sue in his own name, the action would be entitled "A. B. (the assignor) for the Use of C. D. (the assignee) against E. F." In this case, C. D. is called the "use plaintiff."

USEE. A person for whose use a suit is brought; otherwise termed the "use plaintiff."

USEFUL. The term "useful," as used in the patent law, when applied to a machine, means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. Besser v. Merrilat Culvert Core Co. (C. C. A.) 243 F. 611.

By "useful" is meant such an invention as may be applied to some beneficial use in society, in contradistinction to an invention which is injurious to the morals, the health, or the good order of society. Bedford v. Hunt, 1 Mason, 302, Fed. Cas. No. 1,217.

USEFULNESS. Capabilities for use. The word pertains to the future as well as to the past. Chesapeake, O. & S. W. R. Co. v. Dyer Co., 87 Tenn. 712, 11 S. W. 943.

USER. The actual exercise or enjoyment of any right or property. It is particularly used of franchises.

Adverse User

Such a use of the property under claim of right as the owner himself would make, asking no permission, and disregarding all other claims to it, so far as they conflict with this use. Blanchard v. Moulton, 63 Me. 434; Murray v. Scribner, 74 Wis. 602, 43 N. W. 549; Ward v. Warren, 82 N. Y. 265; Outhwaite v. Foote, 240 Mich. 327, 215 N. W. 331, 332; Thorworth v. Scheets, 269 Ill. 573, 110 N. E. 42, 45; Cummins v. Dumas, 147 Miss. 215, 113 So. 332, 334.

USER DE ACTION. L. Fr. In old practice. The pursuing or bringing an action. Cowell.

USHER. This word is said to be derived from "huissier," and is the name of a subordinate officer in some English courts of law. Archb. Pr. 25.

USHER OF THE BLACK ROD. The gentleman usher of the black rod is an officer of the house of lords appointed by letters patent from the crown. His duties are, by himself or deputy, to desire the attendance of the commons in the house of peers when the royal assent is given to bills, either by the king in person or by commission, to execute orders for the commitment of persons guilty of breach of privilege, and also to assist in the introduction of peers when they take the oaths and their seats. Brown.

USO. In Spanish law. Usage; that which arises from certain things which men say and do and practice uninterruptedly for a great length of time, without any hindrance whatever. Las Partidas, pt. 1, tit. 2, l. 1.

USQUE. Lat. Up to; until. This is a word of exclusion, and a release of all demands usque ad a certain day does not cover a bond made on that day. 2 Mod. 28.

Usually applied to ownership of property. Applied to right to air it has been held that ownership extends "usque ad coelum." Romano v. Birmingham Ry. Light & Power Co., 62 So. 677, 182 Ala. 335, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 642, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 776. See A Coelo Usque Ad Centrum.

USQUE AD FILUM AQUÆ, OR VIÆ. Up to the middle of the stream or road.

USUAL. Habitual; ordinary; customary; according to usage or custom; commonly established, observed, or practised. Such as is in common use or occurs in ordinary practice or course of events. See Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Hause, 71 Ill. App. 147; Kellogg v. Curtis, 69 Me. 214, 31 Am. Rep. 273; Tescher v. Merea, 118 Ind. 586, 21 N. E. 316; Trust Co. v. Norris, 61 Minn. 256, 63 N. W. 634; Commonwealth v. Weber, 103 A. 348, 349, 259 Pa. 592; Oilmen's Reciprocal Ass'n v. Gilleland (Tex. Com. App.) 291 S. W. 197, 199; Roberts Coal Co. v. Corder Coal Co., 143 Va. 133, 129 S. E. 341, 344.

USUAL COVENANTS. See Covenant.

USUAL TERMS. A phrase in the common-law practice, which meant pleading issuably, rejoining gratis, and taking short notice of trial. When a defendant obtained further time to plead, these were the terms usually imposed. Wharton.

USUARIUS. Lat. In the civil law. One who had the mere use of a thing belonging to another for the purpose of supplying his daily wants; a usuary. Dig. 7, 8, 10, pr.; Calvin.

USUCAPIO, or USUCAPTIO. A term of Roman law used to denote a mode of acquisition of property. It corresponds very nearly to the term "prescription." But the prescription of Roman law differed from that of the English law, in this: that no mala fide pos-essor (i. e., person in possession knowingly of the property of another) could, by however long a period, acquire title by possession merely. The two essential requisites to usucapio were justa causa (i. e., title) and bona fides, (i. e., ignorance.) The term "usucapio" is sometimes, but erroneously, written "usucaptio." Brown. See Pavey v. Vance, 56 Ohio St. 162, 46 N. E. 898.

Usucapio constituta est ut aliquis litium finis esset. Prescription was instituted that there might be some end to litigation. Dig. 41, 10, 5; Broom, Max. 894, note.

USUFRUCT. In the civil law. The right of enjoying a thing, the property of which is vested in another, and to draw from the same all the profit, utility, and advantage which it may produce, provided it be without altering the substance of the thing. Civ. Code La. art. 533. And see Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 102; Cartwright v. Cartwright, 18 Tex. 628; Strausse v. Sheriff, 43 La. Ann. 501, 9 So. 102.

Imperfect Usufruct

An imperfect or quasi usufruct is that which is of things which would be useless to the usufructuary if he did not consume or expend them or change the substance of them; as, money, grain, liquors. Civ. Code La. art. 534.

Perfect Usufruct

An usufruct in those things which the usufructuary can enjoy without changing their substance, though their substance may be diminished or deteriorate naturally by time or by the use to which they are applied, as, a house, a piece of land, furniture, and other movable effects. Civ. Code La. art. 534.

Quasi Usufruct

In the civil law. Originally the usufruct gave no right to the substance of the thing, and consequently none to its consumption; hence only an inconsumable thing could be the object of it, whether movable or immovable. But in later times the right of usufruct was, by analogy, extended to consumable things, and therewith arose the distinction between true and quasi usufructs. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 307; Civ. Code La. art. 534.

USUFRUCTUARY. In the civil law. One who has the usufruct or right of enjoying anything in which he has no property, Cartwright v. Cartwright, 18 Tex. 628.

USUFRUIT. In French law. The same as the usufruct of the English and Roman law.

USURA. Lat. In the civil law. Money given for the use of money; interest. Commonly used in the plural, "usuræ." Dig. 22, 1.

Usura est commodum certum quod propter usum rei mutuata recipitur. Sed secundario spirare de aliqua retributione, ad voluntatem ejus qui mutuatus est, hoc non est vitiosum. Usury is a certain benefit which is received for the use of a thing lent. But to have an understanding [literally, to breathe or whisper,] in an incidental way, about some compensation to be made at the pleasure of the borrower, is not lawful. Branch, Princ.; 5 Coke, 70b; Glan. lib. 7, c. 16.

USURA MANIFESTA. Manifest or open usury; as distinguished from usura velata, veiled or concealed usury, which consists in giving a bond for the loan, in the amount of which is included the stipulated interest.

USURA MARITIMA. Interest taken on bottomry or respondentia bonds, which is proportioned to the risk, and is not affected by the usury laws.

USURARIUS. In old English law. A usurer. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 52, § 14.

USURIOUS. Pertaining to usury; partaking of the nature of usury; involving usury; tainted with usury; as, a usurious contract.

USURPATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The interruption of a usucaption, by some act on the part of the real owner. Calvin.

USURPATION.

Torts

The unlawful assumption of the use of property which belongs to another; an interruption or the disturbing a man in his right and possession. Tomlins.

In Public Law

The unlawful seizure or assumption of sovereign power; the assumption of government or supreme power by force or illegally, in derogation of the constitution and of the rights of the lawful ruler.

USURPATION OF ADVOWSON. An injury which consists in the absolute ouster or dispossession of the patron from the advowson or right of presentation, and which happens when a stranger who has no right presents a clerk, and the latter is thereupon admitted and instituted. Brown.

USURPATION OF FRANCHISE OR OFFICE. The unjustly intruding upon or exercising any office, franchise, or liberty belonging to another.

USURPED POWER. In insurance. An invasion from abroad, or an internal rebellion, where armies are drawn up against each other, when the laws are silent, and when the firing of towns becomes unavoidable. These words cannot mean the power of a common mob. 2 Marsh. Ins. 791.

USURPER. One who assumes the right of government by force, contrary to and in violation of the constitution of the country. Toul, Droit. Civ. n. 32.

One who intrudes himself into an office which is vacant, and ousts the incumbent without any color of title whatever; his acts are void in every respect; McCraw v. Williams, 33 Grat. (Va.) 513; Hooper v. Goodwin, 48 Me. 80.

USURY.

In Old English Law

Interest of money; increase for the loan of money; a reward for the use of money. 2 Bl. Comm. 454. The taking of any compensation whatever for the use of money. Marshall v. Beeler, 104 Kan. 32, 178 P. 245, 246.

In Modern Law

Unlawful interest; a premium or compensation paid or stipulated to be paid for the use of money borrowed or returned, beyond the rate of interest established by law. Carter v. Hook, 116 Va. 812, 83 S. E. 386, 389. An unconscionable or exorbitant rate or amount of interest. Grossman v. Calonia Land & Improvement Co., 103 N. J. Law, 98, 134 A. 740, 742.

A profit greater than the lawful rate of interest, intentionally exacted as a bonus, for the forbearance of an existing indebtedness or a loan of money, imposed upon the necessities of the borrower in a transaction where the money is to be returned at all events. Monk v. Goldstein, 172 N. C. 516, 99 S. E. 519, 520.

"Usury" can attach only to a loan of money or to the forbearance of a debt. Commercial Credit Co. v. Tarwater, 215 Ala. 123, 110 So. 39, 40, 48 A. L. R. 1437.

An unlawful contract upon the loan of money, to receive the same again with exorbitant increase. 4 Bl. Comm. 156.

The reserving and taking, or contracting to reserve and take, either directly or by indirection, a greater sum for the use of money than the lawful interest. Code Ga. 1882, § 2051 (Civ. Code 1910, § 3427). See Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill. (N. Y.) 528; Parham v. Pulliam, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 501; New England Mortg. Sec. Co. v. Gay (C. C.) 33 F. 640; Lee v. Peckham, 17 Wis. 386; Rosenstein v. Fox, 150 N. Y. 354, 44 N. E. 1027; MacRackan v. Bank, 164 N. C. 24, 80 S. E. 184, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1043; Midland Savings & Loan Co. v. Tuohy, 69 Okl. 270, 170 P. 244, 246; Williams v. American Exchange Bank, 222 Mo. App. 483, 280 S. W. 720, 723; Stuart v. Durland, 115 Neb. 211, 212 N. W. 31, 32, 53 A. L. R. 739; In re Elmore Cotton Mills (D. C.) 217 F. 810, 814.

Usury is odious in law.

USUS. Lat. In Roman law. A precarious enjoyment of land, corresponding with the right of habitatio of houses, and being closely analogous to the tenancy at sufferance or at will of English law. The usuarius (i. e., tenant by usus) could only hold on so long as the owner found him convenient, and had to go so soon as ever he was in the owner's way, (molestus.) The usuarius could not have a friend to share the produce. It was scarcely permitted to him (Justinian says) to have even his wife with him on the land; and he could not let or sell, the right being strictly personal to himself. Brown.

USUS BELLICI. Lat. In international law. Warlike uses or objects. It is the usus bellici which determine an article to be contraband. 1 Kent, Comm. 141.

Usus est dominium fiduciarium. Bac. St. Uses. Use is a fiduciary dominion.

Usus et status sive possessio potius differunt secundum rationem fori, quam secundum rationem rei. Bac. St. Uses. Use and estate, or possession, differ more in the rule of the court than in the rule of the matter.

USUS FRUCTUS. Lat. In Roman law. Usufruct; usufructuary right or possession. The temporary right of using a thing, without having the ultimate property, or full dominion, of the substance. 2 Bl. Comm. 327.

UT CURRERE SOLEBAT. Lat. As it was wont to run; applied to a water-course.

UT DE FEODO. L. Lat. As of fee.

UT HOSPITES. Lat. As guests. 1 Salk. 25, pl. 10.

Ut pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat. That the punishment may reach a few, but the fear of it affect all. A maxim in criminal law, expressive of one of the principal objects of human punishment. 4 Inst. 6; 4 Bl. Comm. 11.

Ut res magis valeat quam pereat. That the thing may rather have effect than be destroyed. Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.) 455; Simonds v. Walker, 100 Mass. 113; National Pemberton Bank v. Lougee, 108 Mass. 373, 11 Am. Rep. 367.

Ut summæ potestatis regis est posse quantum veit, sic magnitudinis est velle quantum possit. 3 Inst. 236. As the highest power of a king is to be able to do all he wishes, so the highest greatness of him is to wish all he is able to do.

UTAS. In old English practice. Octave; the octave; the eighth day following any term or feast. Cowell.

UTENSIL. A much broader term than "tool," though it may be applicable to many implements designated tools in common parlance. Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 178 Iowa, 375, 157 N. W. 855, 857, L. R. A. 1917B, 934.

UTERINE. Born of the same mother. A uterine brother or sister is one born of the same mother, but by a different father.

UTERO-GESTATION. Pregnancy.

UTERQUE. Lat. Both; each. "The justices, being in doubt as to the meaning of this word in an indictment, demanded the opinions of grammarians, who delivered their opinions that this word doth aptly signify one of them." 1 Leon. 241.

UTFANGTHEF, or UTFANGENETHEF. In Saxon and old English law. The privilege of a lord of a manor to judge and punish a thief dwelling out of his liberty, and committing theft without the same, if he were caught within the lord's jurisdiction. Cowell.

The right of the lord of a manor to hang a thief caught with the stolen goods, whether or not the capture was made on the manor. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 11. See Infangenthef.

UTI. Lat. In the civil law. To use. Strictly, to use for necessary purposes; as distinguished from "frui," to enjoy. Heinecc. Elem. lib. 2, tit. 4, § 415.

UTI FRUI. Lat. In the civil law. To have the full use and enjoyment of a thing, without damage to its substance. Calvin.

UTI POSSIDETIS. Lat.

In the Civil Law

A species of interdict for the purpose of retaining possession of a thing, granted to one who, at the time of contesting suit, was in possession of an immovable thing, in order that he might be declared the legal possessor. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 6, no. 8. See Utrubi.

In International Law

A phrase used to signify that the parties to a treaty are to retain possession of what they have acquired by force during the war. Wheat. Int. Law, 627.

A treaty which terminates a war may adopt this principle or that of the status quo ante bellum, or a combination of the two. In default of any treaty stipulation, the former doctrine prevails. Guillermo Alvarez y Sanchez v. U. S., 42 Ct. Cl. 458.

UTI ROGAS. Lat. In Roman law. The form of words by which a vote in favor of a proposed law was orally expressed. Uti rogas, volo vel jubeo, as you ask, I will or order; I vote as you propose; I am for the law. The letters "U. R." on a ballot expressed the same sentiment. Adams, Rom. Ant. 98, 100.

Utile per inutile non vitiatur. The useful is not vitiated by the useless. Surplusage does not spoil the remaining part if that is good in itself. Dyer, 392; Broom, Max. 627; 2 Wheat. 221, 4 L. Ed. 224; 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 298; 6 Mass. 303; 12 Mass. 438.

UTILIDAD. Span. In Spanish law. The profit of a thing. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 1.

UTILIS. Lat. In the civil law. Useful; beneficial; equitable; available. Actio utilis, an equitable action. Calvin. Dies utilis, an available day.

UTILITY. In patent law. The absence of frivolity and mischievousness, and utility for some beneficial purpose. Rob. Pat. § 339. But there is no utility if the invention can be used only to commit a fraud with; Klein v. Russell, 19 Wall. 433, 22 L. Ed. 116; or for some immoral purpose; Lowell v. Lewis, 1 Mason, 182, Fed. Cas. No. 8,568; or can be used only for gambling purposes in saloons; Schultze v. Holtz (C. C.) 82 Fed. 448; or if the invention is dangerous in its use; Mitchell v. Tilghman, 19 Wall. 287, 22 L. Ed. 125.

The "utility" which an infringing defendant is estopped to deny means sufficient practical utility to make a device useful in the sense of the patent statute. The estoppel does not forbid him to deny that there is any useful function, or new result serving to give inventive character to the slight step which a patentee has taken in differentiation from prior art. Sandy MacGregor Co. v. Vaco Grip Co. (C. C. A.) 2 F.2d 655, 656.

UTLAGATUS, or UTLAGATUM. In old English law. An outlawed person; an outlaw.

Utlagatus est quasi extra legem positus. Caput gerit lupinum. 7 Coke, 14. An outlaw is, as it were, put out of the protection of the law. He bears the head of a wolf.

Utlagatus pro contumacia et fuga, non propter hoc convictus est de facto principali. Fleta. One who is outlawed for contumacy and flight is not on that account convicted of the principal fact.

UTLAGE. L. Fr. An outlaw. Britt. c. 12.

UTLESSE. An escape of a felon out of prison.

UTMOST CARE. Substantially synonymous with "highest care." Brogan v. Union Traction Co., 76 W. Va. 698, 86 S. E. 753, 756.

It is the duty of a common carrier to use the utmost care, skill, and diligence to transport its passengers, which means the care, skill, and diligence that a cautious man in similar employment would use. Link v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (Mo. App.) 233 S. W. 834, 837.

UTMOST RESISTANCE. This term, under the rule that to constitute rape there must be utmost resistance by the woman, is a relative rather than a positive term. What would be "utmost resistance" on the part of a weak and nervous person, with a temperament easily frightened, might be the veriest sham on the part of a robust person in good health, whose nerves and courage are normal. McLain v. State, 159 Wis. 204, 149 N. W. 771, 772.

UTRUBI.

In the Civil Law

The name of a species of interdict for retaining a thing, granted for the purpose of protecting the possession of a movable thing, as the uti possidetis was granted for an immovable. Inst. 4, 15, 4; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 260.

In Scotch Law

An interdict as to movables, by which the colorable possession of a bona fide holder is continued until the final settlement of a contested right; corresponding to uti possidetis as to heritable property. Bell.

UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM. Both of us. Words used formerly in bonds.

UTTER, v. To put or send (as a forged check) into circulation; Smith v. Commonwealth, 151 Ky. 517, 152 S. W. 574, 575; to publish or put forth; Barron v. State, 12 Ga. App. 342, 77 S. E. 214, 215; Valley Dry Goods Co. v. Buford, 114 Miss. 414, 75 So. 252, 254; to offer; Bish. Cr. L. § 607. To utter and publish an instrument, as a counterfeit note, is to declare or assert, directly or indirectly, by words or actions, that it is good; uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention or offer to pass it. Whart. Crim. Law, § 703; People v. Bradford, 84 Cal. App. 707, 258 P. 660, 662; Com. v. Searle, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 338, 4 Am. Dec. 446.

To utter, as used in a statute against forgery and counterfeiting, means to offer, whether accepted or not, a forged instrument, with the representation, by words or actions, that the same is genuine. See State v. Horner, 48 Mo. 522; People v. Rathbun, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 521; Lindsey v. State, 38 Ohio St. 511; State v. Calkins, 73 Iowa, 128, 34 N. W. 777; People v. Caton, 25 Mich. 392; Commonwealth v. Fenwick, 177 Ky. 685, 198 S. W. 32, 34, L. R. A. 1918B, 1189; 2 Bish. Cr. L. § 605.

"Uttering" or "publishing" a check consists in presenting it for payment, and the act is then done although no money may be obtained. State v. Hohl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924.

UTTER, adj. Entire; complete; absolute; total. In a statute making utter desertion for three years a ground for divorce, it suggests an abnegation of all the duties and obligations resulting from the marriage contract. Moody v. Moody, 118 Me. 454, 108 A. 649.

UTTER BAR. In English law. The bar at which those barristers, usually junior men, practice who have not yet been raised to the dignity of king's counsel. These junior barristers are said to plead without the bar; while those of the higher rank are admitted to seats within the bar, and address the court or a jury from a place reserved for them, and divided off by a bar. Brown. Also called "outer bar."

UTTER BARRISTER. In English law. Those barristers who plead without the bar, and are distinguished from benchers, or those who have been readers, and who are allowed to plead within the bar, as the king's counsel are. Cowell. See Outer Bar.

UXOR. Lat. In the civil law. A wife; a woman lawfully married.

Et Uxor

And his wife. A term used in indexing, abstracting, and describing conveyances made by a man and his wife as grantors, or to a man and his wife as grantees. Often abbreviated "et ux." Thus, "John Doe et ux. to Richard Roe."

Jure Uxoris

In right of his wife. A term used of a husband who joins in a deed, is seised of an estate, brings a suit, etc., in the right or on the behalf of his wife. 3 Bl. Comm. 210.

Uxor et filius sunt nomina naturæ. Wife and son are names of nature. 4 Bac. Works, 350.

Uxor non est sui juris, sed sub potestate viri. A wife is not her own mistress, but is under the power of her husband. 3 Inst. 108.

Uxor sequitur domicilium viri. A wife follows the domicile of her husband. Tray. Lat. Max. 606.

UXORICIDE. The killing of a wife by her husband; one who murders his wife. Not a technical term of the law.

V

V. As an abbreviation, this letter may stand for "Victoria," "volume," or "verb;," also "vide" (see) and "vocce" (word).

It is also a common abbreviation of "versus," in the titles of causes, and reported cases.

V. C. An abbreviation for "vice-chancellor."

V. C. C. An abbreviation for "vice-chancellor's court."

V. E. An abbreviation for "venditioni exponas," (q. v.)

V. G. An abbreviation for "verbi gratia," for the sake of example.

VACANCY. A place which is empty. An unoccupied or unfilled post, position, or office. Wallace v. Payne, 197 Cal. 539, 241 P. 879, 883. An existing office, etc., without an incumbent. State v. Board of Election Com'rs of City of Tipton, 196 Ind. 472, 149 N. E. 69, 71. The state of being destitute of an incumbent, or a proper or legally qualified officer. Ashcroft v. Goodman, 139 Tenn. 625, 202 S. W. 939. The term is principally applied to an interruption in the incumbency of an office, or to cases where the office is not occupied by one who has a legal right to hold it and to exercise the rights and perform the duties pertaining thereto. Frantz v. Davis, 144 Va. 320, 131 S. E. 784, 785; Clark v. Wonnacott, 30 Idaho, 98, 162 P. 1074, 1075.

The term applies not only to an interregnum in an existing office, but it aptly and fitly describes the condition of an office when it is first created, and has been filled by no incumbent. Walsh v. Comm., 83 Pa. 426, 33 Am. Rep. 771. And see Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 350; People v. Opel, 188 Ill. 194, 58 N. E. 996; Gormley v. Taylor, 44 Ga. 76. See also, however, Delehanty v. Britt, 163 App. Div. 736, 149 N. Y. S. 97, 98.

The word "vacancy," when applied to official positions, means, in its ordinary and popular sense, that an office is unoccupied, and that there is no incumbent who has a lawful right to continue therein until the happening of a future event, though the word is sometimes used with reference to an office temporarily filled. Futrell v. Oldham, 107 Ark. 386, 155 S. W. 502, 504, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 571; State v. Caulk, 3 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 344, 138 A. 354, 357.

The word "vacancy," in its literal and precise sense, means a place that is empty or unoccupied, but, as applied to the expiration of a term of office, it is ordinarily given a more liberal, figurative meaning conforming to the intention of the lawmaker and the purpose to be accomplished. According to the latter meaning, the expiration of the term of office creates a vacancy, though the incumbent is willing to continue performing the duties of the office. State v. Young, 137 La. 102, 68 So. 241, 247; People v. Brundage, 296 Ill. 197, 129 N. E. 500, 502.

VACANT. Empty; unoccupied; as, "vacant" office. Shaffner v. Shaw, 191 Iowa, 1047, 180 N. W. 853, 854. Without an incumbent. Conger v. Roy, 151 Tenn. 30, 267 S. W. 122, 124; State v. Rogge, 80 Mont. 1, 257 P. 1029, 1032. Unoccupied by a legally qualified incumbent who has a right to exercise the functions (of an office, etc.). Board of Education of Newark v. Civil Service Commission of New Jersey, 98 N. J. Law, 417, 119 A. 875, 877; Cason v. Harn, 161 Ga. 366, 131 S. E. 88, 89; Barrett v. Duff, 114 Kan. 220, 217 P. 918, 924.

Deprived of contents; empty. Southern Nat. Ins. Co. v. Cobb (Tex. Civ. App.) 180 S. W. 155, 156. Unoccupied; as, a "vacant" house. Covey v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, 31 Cal. App. 579, 161 P. 35, 38.

As used in fire insurance policies, which commonly provide that the policies shall be void if the premises become vacant or unoccupied, the terms "vacant" and "unoccupied" are not synonymous. "Vacant" may be construed to mean empty of all furniture and household articles, while "unoccupied" means not used as a dwelling by human beings. Russell v. Granite State Fire Ins. Co., 121 Me. 248, 116 A. 554, 556; Parmeter v. Williamsburgh City Fire Ins. Co., 48 N. D. 530, 185 N. W. 810, 811; Herrman v. Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 184, 37 Am. Rep. 483. Yet a dwelling house may be vacant although it may be far from being empty of everything but air. Robinson v. Mennonite Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 91 Kan. 850, 139 P. 420, 422.

Absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied; as, "vacant" land. Donley v. Van Horn, 49 Cal. App. 383, 193 P. 514, 516. See, also, War Fork Land Co. v. Llewellyn, 199 Ky. 607, 251 S. W. 663, 665. But land which is partially cultivated may still be "vacant land" within the meaning of a statute. Di Legge v. Peper, 148 Md. 268, 129 A. 292, 293.

As to vacant "Possession" and "Succession," see those titles.

VACANTIA BONA. Lat. In the civil law. Goods without an owner, or in which no one claims a property; escheated goods. Inst. 2, 6, 4; 1 Bl. Comm. 298.

VACATE. To annul; to set aside; to cancel or rescind; to render an act void; as, to vacate an entry of record, or a judgment. With reference to the effect of an appeal on a judgment or decree, it is not synonymous with "suspend." Stewart v. O'Neal (C. C. A.) 237 F. 897, 903.

To put an end to; as, to vacate a street. McCarl v. Clarke County, 167 Iowa, 14, 148 N. W. 1015, 1017.

To move out; to make vacant or empty; to leave; especially, to surrender possession by removal; to cease from occupancy. Ruble v. Ruble (Tex. Civ. App.) 264 S. W. 1018, 1020; Polich v. Severson, 68 Mont. 225, 216 P. 785, 787.

VACATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Exemption; immunity; privilege; dispensation; exemption from the burden of office. Calvin.

VACATION. The act or result of vacating. An intermission of procedure; a stated interval in the round of the duties of one's employment. Kettlekamp v. Watkins, 70 Mont. 391, 225 P. 1003, 1006. It is not a termination of the relation of master and servant. Gutzwiller v. American Tobacco Co., 97 Vt. 281, 122 A. 586, 588. In schools, there are customary vacations at Christmas, Easter, and during the summer. Duffey v. School Committee of Town of Hopkinton, 236 Mass. 5, 127 N. E. 540.

That period of time between the end of one term of court and the beginning of another. O'Neal v. State, 35 Ga. App. 665, 134 S. E. 332, 333; Peterson v. Beals, 102 Or. 245, 201 P. 727, 728; Trower v. Mudd (Mo. App.) 242 S. W. 993, 994; Saund v. Saund, 100 Vt. 387, 138 A. 867, 869; Ex parte Earman, 85 Fla. 297, 95 So. 755, 761, 31 A. L. R. 1226; Union Motor Car Co. v. Cartledge, 133 Miss. 318, 97 So. 801, 803; Unbehahn v. Fader, 319 Ill. 250, 149 N. E. 773, 774; Von Schmidt v. Widber, 99 Cal. 511, 34 P. 109; Conkling v. Ridgely, 112 Ill. 36, 1 N. E. 261, 54 Am. Rep. 204; Brayman v. Whitcomb, 134 Mass. 525.

Sometimes, any time when the court is not in session. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Ingram, 118 Ark. 377, 176 S. W. 692, 693.

In a statute providing that issues of law may be tried by the circuit court in vacation, the word "vacation" includes any period during which court might legally have been held, which period elapses between one day's session of court and another day's session, even though both be days of the same term. State v. Denis, 40 S. D. 219, 167 N. W. 151, 152.

In Ecclesiastical Law

Vacation signifies that a church or benefice is vacant; e. g., on the death or resignation of the incumbent, until his successor is appointed. 2 Inst. 359; Phillim. Ecc. Law, 495.

VACATION BARRISTER. See Barrister.

VACATUR. Lat. Let it be vacated. In practice, a rule or order by which a proceeding is vacated; a vacating.

VACATURA. An avoidance of an ecclesiastical benefice. Cowell.

VACCARIA. In old English law. A dairy-house. Co. Litt. 5b.

VACCINATION. Inoculation with vaccine or the virus of cowpox as a preventive against the smallpox; frequently made compulsory by statute. See Daniel v. Putnam County, 113 Ga. 570, 38 S. E. 980, 54 L. R. A. 292; Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 11, 25 S. Ct. 358, 49 L. Ed. 643, 3 Ann. Cas. 765; Zucht v. King (Tex. Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 267, cert. dism. 42 S. Ct. 53, 257 U. S. 650, 66 L. Ed. 416.

VACUA POSSESSIO. Lat. The vacant possession, i. e., free and unburdened possession, which (e. g.) a vendor had and has to give to a purchaser of lands.

VACUITY. Emptiness; vacancy; want of reality; nihility. McQueen v. Ahbe, 99 W. Va. 650, 130 S. E. 261, 262.

VACUUM. Practically synonymous with suction, although suction may be the result of vacuum. Pennsylvania Rubber Co. v. Dreadnaught Tire & Rubber Co. (D. C.) 225 F. 138, 141.

VACUUS. Lat. In the civil law. Empty; void; vacant; unoccupied. Calvin.

VADES. Lat. In the civil law. Pledges; sureties; bail; security for the appearance of a defendant or accused person in court. Calvin.

VADIARE DUELLUM. L. Lat. In old English law. To wage or gage the duellum; to wage battle; to give pledges mutually for engaging in the trial by combat.

VADIMONIUM. Lat. In Roman law. Bail or security; the giving of bail for appearance in court; a recognizance. Calvin. An ancient form of suretyship. Hunter, Rom. L. 526.

VADIUM. Lat. A pledge; security by pledge of property. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 913.

VADIUM MORTUUM. A mortgage or dead pledge; a security given by the borrower of a sum of money, by which he grants to the lender an estate in fee, on condition that, if the money be not repaid at the time appointed, the estate so put in pledge shall continue to the lender as dead or gone from the mortgagor. 2 Bl. Comm. 157.

VADIUM PONERE. To take bail for the appearance of a person in a court of justice. Tomlins.

VADIUM VIVUM. A species of security by which the borrower of a sum of money made over his estate to the lender until he had received that sum out of the issues and profits of the land. It was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost, and were not left in dead pledge, but this was a living pledge, for the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. Litt. § 206; 1 Pow. Mortg. 3; Termes de la Ley; Spect v. Spect, 88 Cal. 437, 26 P. 203, 13 L. R. A. 137, 22 Am. St. Rep. 314; O'Neill v. Gray, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 566; Kortright v. Cady, 21 N. Y. 344, 78 Am. Dec. 145.

VADLET. In old English law. The king's eldest son; hence the valet or knave follows the king and queen in a pack of cards. Bar. Obs. St. 344.

VADUM. In old records, a ford, or wading place. Cowell.

VAGABOND. One that wanders about, and has no certain dwelling; an idle fellow. Jacob. Not synonymous with vagrant. Johnson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005. See Vagrant. Under an Illinois statute, an idle and dissolute person is not a "vagabond" unless he goes about begging. People v. Klein, 292 Ill. 420, 127 N. E. 72, 75.

Vagabonds are described in old English statutes as "such as wake on the night and sleep on the day, and haunt customary taverns and ale-houses and routs about; and no man wot from whence they came, nor whither they go." 4 Bl. Comm. 169. See Forsyth v. Forsyth, 46 N. J. Eq. 400, 19 A. 119; Johnson v. State, 28 Tex. App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

Vagabundum nuncupamus eum qui nullibi domicilium contraxit habitacionis. We call him a "vagabond" who has acquired nowhere a domicile of residence. Phillim. Dom. 23, note.

VAGRANCY. At common law, the act of going about from place to place by a person without visible means of support, who is idle, and who, though able to work for his or her maintenance, refuses to do so, but lives without labor or on the charity of others. Ex parte Hudgins, 86 W. Va. 526, 103 S. E. 327, 328, 9 A. L. R. 1361. Although obtaining a livelihood by gambling is not vagrancy or vagabondage at common law, it may be declared vagrancy and denounced as such by a statute or municipal ordinance. Town of Marksville v. Brouillette, 142 La. 916, 77 So. 790, 791. See Vagrant.

VAGRANT. A wandering, idle person; a strolling or sturdy beggar; a person who refuses to work, or goes about begging; an able-bodied married man who has neglected and refused to provide support for his family; State v. Chapman (Mo. App.) 202 S. W. 439, 440; one who strolls from place to place; one who has no settled habitation; an incorrigible rogue; a vagabond. Ex parte Oates, 91 Tex. Cr. R. 79, 238 S. W. 930, 931. A general term, including, in English law, the several classes of idle and disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues. 4 Steph. Comm. 308, 309.

In American law, the term is variously defined by statute but the general meaning is that of an able-bodied person having no visible means of support and who lives idly without seeking work, or who is a professional beggar, or roams about from place to place without regular employment or fixed residence; and in some states the term also includes those who have a fixed habitation and pursue a regular calling which is condemned by the law as immoral, such as gambling or prostitution. See In re Jordan, 90 Mich. 3, 50 N. W. 1087; In re Aldermen and Justices of the Peace, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 464; Roberts v. State, 14 Mo. 145, 55 Am. Dec. 97; McLean v. State, 16 Ala. App. 196, 76 So. 480; James v. State, 37 Ga. App. 126, 138 S. E. 913, 914; Code Cr. Proc. N. Y. § 887, subd. 4, as amended by Laws 1919, c. 502. And see the statutes of the various other states, under which the term may be so defined as to apply to a clairvoyant; Stauffer v. State, 85 Tex. Cr. R. 1, 209 S. W. 748, 749; and a seller of liquors; McCrosky v. State, 17 Ala. App. 523, 87 So. 219, 220; as well as to a prostitute, a tin-horn gambler, a beggar, or a habitual drunkard; Campbell v. State, 31 Okl. Cr. 39, 237 P. 133, 134.

Under the statute (Act March 3, 1909, § 1, 35 Stat. 711 [D. C. Code 1929, T. 6, § 2911]), defining vagrants as persons leading an idle or immoral life, who have no property to support them, and who are able of body to work and do not work, a woman cannot be convicted as a vagrant when she has on deposit to her credit in a bank $1,000, even though the money was the proceeds of prostitution. Rose v. District of Columbia, 51 App. D. C. 222, 277 F. 621.

VAGRANT ACT. In English law. The statute 5 Geo. IV, c. 83, which is an act for the punishment of idle and disorderly persons. 2 Chit. St. 145. The act of 17 Geo. II divided vagrants into idle and disorderly persons; rogues and vagabonds; and incorrigible rogues. Other statutes were passed as late as 32 Geo. III bearing on this subject. See Jacob's Law Dict. s. v. Vagrant.

VAGUE. Uncertain; not susceptible of being understood. 5 B. & C. 583. Vague and unsatisfactory testimony is that which is dim and shadowy and fails to relieve the mind of the trier of facts from doubt or uncertainty. Weliska's Case, 125 Me. 147, 131 A. 860, 861.

VALE. In Spanish law. A promissory note. White, New Recop. b. 3, tit. 7, c. 5, § 3. See Govin v. De Miranda, 140 N. Y. 662, 35 N. E. 628.

Valeat quantum valere potest. It shall have effect as far as it can have effect. Cowp. 600; 4 Kent, Comm. 493; Shep. Touch. 87.

VALEC, VALECT, or VADELET. In old English law. A young gentleman; also a servitor or gentleman of the chamber. Cowell.

VALENTIA. L. Lat. The value or price of anything.

VALESHERIA. In old English law. The proving by the kindred of the slain, one on the father's side, and another on that of the mother, that a man was a Welshman. Wharton. See Engleshire.

VALET. Anciently, a name denoting young gentlemen of rank and family, but afterwards applied to those of lower degree; now used for a menial servant, more particularly occupied about the person of his employer. Cab. Lawy. 800.

VALID. Of binding force; legally sufficient or efficacious; authorized by law. Anderson, L. Dict.; Morrison v. Farmers' & Traders' State Bank, 70 Mont. 146, 225 P. 123, 125. Good or sufficient in point of law; efficacious; executed with the proper formalities; incapable of being rightfully overthrown or set aside; sustainable and effective in law, as distinguished from that which exists or took place in fact or appearance, but has not the requisites to enable it to be recognized and enforced by law. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118; United States v. McCutchen (D. C.) 234 F. 702, 709. A deed, will, or other instrument, which has received all the formalities required by law, is said to be valid.

Meritorious; as, a valid defense. Berringer v. Stevens, 145 Ark. 293, 225 S. W. 14, 15.

VALID REASON. These words, in a statute providing for the withdrawal of the names of petitioners for a road improvement district when valid reasons therefor are presented, mean a sound sufficient reason, such as fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, duress, etc., a reason upon which the petitioner could support or justify his change in attitude. The word "valid" necessarily possesses an element of legal strength and force, and inconsistent positions have no such force. Echols v. Trice, 130 Ark. 97, 196 S. W. 801, 802.

VALIDATE. To test the validity of; to make valid; to confirm. Thompson v. Town of Frostproof, 89 Fla. 92, 103 So. 118.

VALIDITY. Legal sufficiency, in contradistinction to mere regularity. Home Ins. Co. of New York v. Gaines, 74 Colo. 62, 218 P. 907, 908. "An official sale, an order, judgment, or decree may be regular,—the whole practice in reference to its entry may be correct,—but still invalid, for reasons going behind the regularity of its forms." Sharp-leigh v. Surdam, 1 Flip. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 12,711.

VALIDITY OF A STATUTE. This phrase, within the meaning of a constitutional provision relating to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, refers to the power to enact the particular statute, and not merely to its judicial construction or application. Boehringer v. Yuma County, 15 Ariz. 546, 140 P. 507, 508.

VALIDITY OF A TREATY. "The term 'validity,' as applied to treaties, admits of two descriptions—necessary and voluntary. By the former is meant that which results from the treaties having been made by persons authorized by, and for purposes consistent with, the constitution. By voluntary validity is meant that validity which a treaty, voidable by reason of violation by the other party, still continues to retain by the silent acquiescence and will of the nation. It is voluntary, because it is at the will of the nation to let it remain or to extinguish it. The principles which govern and decide the necessary validity of a treaty are of a judicial nature, while those on which its voluntary validity depends are of a political nature." 2 Paine 688, as paraphrased in 5 Moore, Int. L. Dig. 183.

VALIDITY OF A WILL. These words, within the meaning of a statute constituting the legal basis of a right of appeal to the orphans' court from a decree of the register, include only questions of the genuineness of the instrument and the testamentary capacity of the testator, including his freedom from all restraint and undue influence, and not questions as to the operation of the will. In re Baum's Estate, 260 Pa. 33, 103 A. 614, 615.

VALLEY. As applied to a mountainous country, lowlands, in contradistinction to mountain slopes and ridges. Whaley v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (C. C.) 167 F. 664.

VALOR BENEFICIORUM. L. Lat. The value of every ecclesiastical benefice and preferment, according to which the first fruits and tenths are collected and paid. It is commonly called the "king's books," by which the clergy are at present rated. 2 Steph. Comm. 533; Wharton.

VALOR MARITAGII. Lat. Value of the marriage. The amount forfeited under the ancient tenures by a ward to a guardian who had offered her a marriage without disparagement, which she refused. In feudal law, the guardian in chivalry had the right of tendering to his infant ward a suitable match, without "disparagement," (inequality,) which, if the infants refused, they forfeited the value of the marriage (valor maritagii) to their guardian; that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give, to the guardian for such an alliance. 2 Bl. Comm. 70; Litt. § 110.

A writ which lay against the ward, on coming of full age, for that he was not married, by his guardian, for the value of the marriage, and this though no convenient marriage had been offered. Termes de la Ley.

VALUABLE. Of financial or market value; commanding or worth a good price; of considerable worth in any respect; estimable. Webster, Dict.

VALUABLE CONSIDERATION. A class of consideration upon which a promise may be founded, which entitles the promisee to enforce his claim against an unwilling promisor. Cockrell v. McKenna, 103 N. J. Law, 166, 134 A. 687, 688, 48 A. L. R. 234. Some legal right acquired by the promisor in consideration of his promise, or forborne by the promisee in consideration of such promise. Thomas v. Mott, 74 W. Va. 493, 82 S. E. 325, 326. A thing of value parted with, or a new obligation assumed, at the time of obtaining a thing, which is a substantial compensation for that which is obtained thereby. It is also called simply "value." Civ. Code Dak. § 2121 (Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 7303; Rev. Code S. D. 1919, § 27). It may consist of some right, interest, profit, or benefit accruing to one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss, or responsibility given, suffered, or undertaken by the other. Callaham v. Ridgeway, 138 S. C. 10, 135 S. E. 646, 649; Smith v. Maxey, 186 Mich. 151, 152 N. W. 1011, 1015; Fowler v. Smith, 24 Ohio App. 324, 156 N. E. 913, 914; Snyder v. Snyder, 193 Ky. 233, 235 S. W. 743, 746. It is not essential that the person to whom the consideration moves should be benefited, provided the person from whom it moves, is, in a legal sense, injured. The injury may consist of a compromise of a disputed claim or forbearance to exercise a legal right; the alteration in position being regarded as a detriment that forms a consideration independent of the actual value of the right forborne. Guggenheim v. Guggenheim (Sup.) 168 N. Y. S. 209, 210. A valuable consideration may be other than the actual payment of money. Kenedy Pasture Co. v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 287, 295. It need not be one translatable into dollars and cents. In re Griswold's Estate, 113 Neb. 256, 202 N. W. 609, 615, 38 A. L. R. 858. The distinction between a good and a valuable consideration is that the former consists of blood, or of natural love and affection; as when a man grants an estate to a near relation from motives of generosity, prudence, and natural duty; and the latter consists of such a consideration as money, marriage which is to follow, or the like, which the law esteems an equivalent given for the grant. 2 Bl. Comm. 297; Exum v. Lynch, 188 N. C. 392, 125 S. E. 15, 18; Gay v. Fricks, 211 Ala. 119, 99 So. 846, 847; Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 4213; Hanscome-James, Winship v. Ainger, 71 Cal. App. 735, 236 P. 325, 327; Barton v. Wilson, 116 Ark. 400, 172 S. W. 1032, 1034; Wrench v. Robertson (Mo. Sup.) 175 S. W. 587, 590. See, also, Consideration.

VALUABLE IMPROVEMENTS. As used in a statute relating to the specific performance of a parol contract for the purchase of real estate, improvements of such character as add permanent value to the freehold, and such as would not likely be made by one not claiming the right to the possession and enjoyment of the freehold estate. Improvements of a temporary and unsubstantial character will not amount to such part performance as, when accompanied by possession alone, will take the contract out of the operation of the statute of frauds. Farr v. West, 152 Ga. 595, 110 S. E. 724. The valuable improvements may, however, be slight and of small value, provided they are substantial and permanent in their nature, beneficial to the freehold, and such as none but an owner would ordinarily make. Vickers v. Robinson, 157 Ga. 731, 122 S. E. 405, 408.

VALUABLE PAPERS. These words, as used in a statute relating to the finding of a will among testatrix's valuable papers and effects, mean papers regarded by testatrix as worthy of preservation, and therefore of some value, and are not limited to pecuniary value. In re Westfeldt's Will, 188 N. C. 702, 125 S. E. 531, 534; Marr v. Marr, 2 Head (Tenn.) 306; Hooper v. McQuary, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 129.

VALUABLE THING. This phrase, as used in statutes relating to cheating and defrauding by means of false pretenses, does not embrace a mere pecuniary advantage devoid of any physical attribute possessed by money, chattels, or valuable securities. State v. Tower, 122 Kan. 165, 251 P. 401, 402, 52 A. L. R. 1160. The words include everything of value; State v. Thatcher, 35 N. J. Law, 452; as a promissory note; State v. Tomlin, 29 N. J. Law, 13; or a physician's services; State v. Ball, 114 Miss. 505, 75 So. 373, 374, L. R. A. 1917E, 1046. In statutes pertaining to the bribery or personation of a state or federal officer, the term includes a substantial favor asked by a public official in return for the official's promise to give protection in illicit traffic in intoxicating liquors; Scott v. State, 107 Ohio St. 475, 141 N. E. 19, 22; and a month's lodging obtained by personating a United States officer; U. S. v. Ballard (D. C.) 118 F. 757.

VALUATION. The act of ascertaining the worth of a thing. The estimated worth of a thing. See Lowenstein v. Schiffer, 38 App. Div. 178, 56 N. Y. S. 674; State v. Central Pac. R. Co., 7 Nev. 104; Sergeant v. Dwyer, 44 Minn. 309, 46 N. W. 444; Eldridge v. City of Bellingham, 106 Wash. 96, 179 P. 109, 112; Soniat v. Board of State Affairs, 146 La. 450, 83 So. 760, 762. In taxation, it is not the assessment, but is only its most important element. Adams v. Lamb-Fish Lumber Co., 104 Miss. 48, 61 So. 6, 7.

VALUATION LIST. In English law. A list of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, showing the names of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value; prepared by the overseers of each parish in a union under section 14 of the union assessment committee act, 1862, (St. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103,) for the purposes of the poor rate. Wharton.

VALUE. The utility of an object in satisfying, directly or indirectly, the needs or desires of human beings, called by economists "value in use;" or its worth consisting in the power of purchasing other objects, called "value in exchange." Also the estimated or appraised worth of any object of property, calculated in money.

Any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract. Fowler v. Smith, 24 Ohio App. 324, 156 N. E. 913, 914; Veigel v. Johnson, 163 Minn. 288, 204 N. W. 36, 37; McConnell v. Blackley, 66 Mont. 510, 214 P. 64, 65; Nickey Bros. v. Longsdale Mfg. Co., 149 Tenn. 391, 258 S. W. 776, 780; Northern Trading Co. v. Drexel State Bank of Chicago, 37 N. D. 521, 164 N. W. 151, 154; Fidelity State Bank v. Miller, 29 Idaho, 777, 162 P. 244, 245; In re Progressive Wall Paper Corporation (D. C.) 224 F. 143, 149; Standard Bank of Canada v. Lowman (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 935, 941; German-American Bank of Seattle v. Wright, 85 Wash. 460, 148 P. 769, 772, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 381; Wilbour v. Hawkins, 38 R. I. 116, 94 A. 856, 857. The term is often used as an abbreviation for "valuable consideration," especially in the phrases "purchaser for value," "holder for value," etc. See Mays v. First State Bank of Keller (Tex. Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 326, 328; Frank v. Von Bayer, 236 N. Y. 473, 141 N. E. 920; Crane & Co. v. Hall, 141 Tenn. 556, 213 S. W. 414, 416; Ohio Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Schneider, 202 Iowa, 938, 211 N. W. 248, 249; Farr-Barnes Lumber Co. v. Town of St. George, 128 S. C. 67, 122 S. E. 24, 26.

In economic consideration, the word "value," when used in reference to property, has a variety of significations, according to the connection in which the word is employed. It may mean the cost of a production or reproduction of the property in question, when it is sometimes called "sound value"; or it may mean the purchasing power of the property, or the amount of money which the property will command in exchange, if sold, this being called its "market value," which in the case of any particular property may be more or less than either the cost of its production or its value measured by its utility to the present or some other owner; or the word may mean the subjective value of property, having in view its profitableness for some particular purpose, sometimes termed its "value for use." William H. Low Estate Co. v. Lederer Realty Corporation, 35 R. I. 352, 86 A. 881, 883, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 341. See Agency of Canadian Car & Foundry Co. v. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co. (C. C. A.) 256 F. 339, 344; Babbitt v. Read (C. C. A.) 236 F. 42, 46; Carson v. State, 30 Okl. Cr. 438, 236 P. 627, 628; Cunningham v. State, 90 Tex. Cr. R. 500, 236 S. W. 89, 90; Dean v. Hawes, 29 Cal. App. 689, 157 P. 558, 559; State v. Woodward, 208 Ala. 31, 93 So. 826; Cole v. Wells, 224 Mass. 504, 113 N. E. 189, 191; James v. Speer, 69 Mont. 100, 220 P. 535, 537; Burroughs v. School Dist. No. 2, Town of Richland, 155 Wis. 426, 144 N. W. 977, 978.

"Value," as used in reference to lands taken under eminent domain, is a relative term, depending on the circumstances. Wood v. Syracuse School Dist. No. 1, 108 Kan. 1, 193 P. 1049, 1050.

Salable value, actual value, market value, fair value, reasonable value, and cash value may all mean the same thing and may be designed to effect the same purpose. Burr. Tax. 227. See Cummings v. Bank, 101 U. S. 162, 25 L. Ed. 903; Wood v. Syracuse School Dist. No. 1, 108 Kan. 1, 193 P. 1049, 1050; Tyson Creek R. Co. v. Empire Mill Co., 31 Idaho, 580, 174 P. 1004, 1006; Safford v. McNeil, 102 Conn. 684, 129 A. 721, 723; Castner, Curran & Bullitt v. Lederer (D. C.) 275 F. 221, 225; Black v. Nabarrette (Tex. Civ. App.) 281 S. W. 1087, 1089; Central Union Trust Co. of New York v. Edwards (C. C. A.) 287 F. 324, 327; Montesano Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Portland Iron Works, 94 Or. 677, 186 P. 428, 432; Gulf Compress Co. v. Insurance Co. of Pennsylvania, 129 Tenn. 586, 167 S. W. 859, 863; In re Woolsey's Estate, 109 Neb. 133, 190 N. W. 215, 24 A. L. R. 1038.

The word has a peculiar meaning in determining the basis on which a public service company is entitled to return, and means only the amount upon which returns should be computed, not the value of the property as an income-producing instrumentality nor the price at which it would sell. Petersburg Gas Co. v. City of Petersburg, 132 Va. 82, 110 S. E. 533, 539, 20 A. L. R. 542.

"Value," as used in Const. U. S. art. 1, § 8, giving Congress power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, is the true, inherent, and essential value, not depending upon accident, place, or person, but the same everywhere and to every one, and in this sense regulating the value of the coinage is merely determining and maintaining coinage composed of certain coins within certain limitations at a certain specific composition and weight. Klatenburg v. Qualsett, 114 Neb. 18, 205 N. W. 577, 578.

Clear Value

The "clear value" of an estate for the purpose of an inheritance tax is what remains after all claims against it have been paid. In re Hildebrand's Estate, 262 Pa. 112, 104 A. 866.

Net Value

The "reserve" or "net value" of a life insurance policy is the fund accumulated out of the net premiums during the earlier years of the policy while the premium uniform throughout life or a term of years exceeds the actual value of the risk, and with the net premiums to be received in the future is the exact mathematical equivalent of the obligation incurred by the company. Hay v. Meridian Life & Trust Co., 57 Ind. App. 536, 101 N. E. 651, 654. The "net value" of a policy is equivalent to "reserve," and means that part of the annual premium paid by insured which, according to the American Experience Table of Mortality, must be set apart to meet or mature the company's obligations to insured, the net value of a policy on a given date being its actual value, its reserve. Jefferson v. New York Life Ins. Co., 151 Ky. 609, 152 S. W. 780, 783.

Value of Matter in Controversy

As used in the Judicial Code, § 24 (28 USCA § 41), the pecuniary result to either party which a judgment entered in the case would directly produce, either at once or in the future. Elliott v. Empire Natural Gas Co. (C. C. A.) 4 F.(2d) 493, 497.

Value of Plant in Successful Operation

Synonymous with "going value," or "going concern value," meaning the additional value that a purchaser will give for the properties and business of the companies because they are going concerns with established businesses; the additional value, over and above the fair and reasonable value of the physical properties plus the working capital, which a customer would pay for the property because it is a going concern. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Whitcomb (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 279, 284.

Value received

A phrase usually employed in a bill of exchange or promissory note, to denote that a consideration has been given for it. Baker v. Thomas, 102 Neb. 401, 167 N. W. 407. It is prima facie evidence of consideration; Palmer v. Blanchard, 113 Me. 380, 94 A. 220, 223, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 809; Moses v. Bank, 149 U.

S. 298, 13 S. Ct. 900, 37 L. Ed. 743; although not necessarily in money; Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265. The phrase when put in a bill of exchange, will bear two interpretations: The drawer of the bill may be presumed to acknowledge the fact that he has received value from the payee; 3 Maule & S. 351; Benjamin v. Tillman, 2 McLean 213, Fed. Cas. No. 1,304; or when the bill has been made payable to the order of the drawer and accepted, it implies that value has been received by the acceptor; 5 Maule & S. 65; Thurman v. Van Brunt, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 409. The words are not required by the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act.

VALUED POLICY. One which expresses on its face an agreement that the thing insured should be valued at a specified sum; Civ. Code Cal. § 2596;—distinguished from an open policy, which is one in which the value of the thing insured is not agreed upon, but is left to be determined in case of loss; Civ. Code Cal. § 2595. A “valued policy” is one in which a definite valuation is by agreement of both parties put on the subject-matter of the insurance and written in the face of the policy and such value, in the absence of fraud or mistake, is conclusive on the parties. Lee v. Hamilton Fire Ins. Co., 130 Misc. Rep. 165, 223 N. Y. S. 441, 442. A policy is called “valued,” when the parties, having agreed upon the value of the interest insured, in order to save the necessity of further proof have inserted the valuation in the policy, in the nature of liquidated damages. 1 Duer, Ins. 97; Columbia Trust Co. v. Norske Lloyd Ins. Co., 100 Misc. 550, 166 N. Y. S. 915, 919.

VALUELESS. Worthless. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Cooper, 14 Ga. App. 738, 82 S. E. 310, 311.

VALUER. A person whose business is to appraise or set a value upon property.

VALVASORS, or VIDAMES. An obsolete title of dignity next to a peer. 2 Inst. 667; 2 Steph. Comm. 612.

Vana est illa potentia quæ nunquam venit in actum. That power is vain [idle or useless] which never comes into action, [which is never exercised.] 2 Coke, 51.

Vani timores sunt æstimandi, qui non cadunt in constantem virum. Those are to be regarded as idle fears which do not affect a steady [firm or resolute] man. 7 Coke, 27.

Vani timoris justa excusatio non est. A frivolous fear is not a legal excuse. Dig. 50, 17, 184; 2 Inst. 483; Broom, Max. 256, n.

VANTARIUS. L. Lat. In old records. A fore-footman. Spelman; Cowell.

VARA. A Spanish-American measure of length, equal to 33 English inches or a trifle more or less, varying according to local usage. See U. S. v. Perot, 98 U. S. 428, 25 L. Ed. 251.

A measure used in Mexican land grants equal to 32.9927 inches. Ainsa v. U. S., 161 U. S. 219, 16 S. Ct. 544, 40 L. Ed. 673.

VARDA. In old Scotch law. Ward; custody; guardianship. Answering to “warda,” in old English law. Spelman.

VARENNA. In old Scotch law. A warren. Answering to “warenna,” in old English law. Spelman.

VARIANCE. In pleading and practice. A discrepancy or disagreement between two instruments or two steps in the same cause, which ought by law to be entirely consonant. Thus, if the evidence adduced by the plaintiff does not agree with the allegations of his declaration, it is a variance; and so if the statement of the cause of action in the declaration does not coincide with that given in the writ. See Keiser v. Topping, 72 Ill. 229; Mulligan v. U. S., 120 F. 98, 56 C. C. A. 50; Bank of New Brunswick v. Arrowsmith, 9 N. J. Law, 287; Skinner v. Grant, 12 Vt. 462; State v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 57; Mathews v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 15 F.(2d) 139, 142.

A disagreement between the allegations and the proof in some matter which, in point of law, is essential to the charge or claim. Franks v. Reeder, 101 Okl. 18, 223 P. 126, 127; Hodges v. State, 73 Tex. Cr. R. 638, 165 S. W. 607, 611; Hibler v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 292 Mo. 14, 237 S. W. 1614, 1017; Maguire v. Kiesel, 86 Conn. 453, 85 A. 689, 690; State v. Brozich, 108 Ohio St. 559, 141 N. E. 491. A substantial departure in the evidence adduced from the issue as made by the pleadings. Sposedo v. Merriman, 111 Me. 530, 90 A. 387, 392; Davidson Grocery Co. v. Johnston, 24 Idaho, 336, 133 P. 929, 931, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1129. That which is a “departure” in pleading is a “variance” in evidence. Wilson v. Oil Well Supply Co., 111 Okl. 63, 238 P. 415, 416.

To constitute a “variance,” there must be a real and tangible difference between the allegations in the pleading and the proof offered in its support. James A. C. Tait & Co. v. Stryker, 117 Or. 338, 243 P. 104, 106. The difference must be substantial and material. Epstein v. Waas, 28 N. M. 608, 216 P. 506, 508; Johnson v. Doubleday, 92 Vt. 267, 102 A. 1088, 1040. It must be one that actually misleads the adverse party to his prejudice in maintaining his action or defense on the merits; German-American Bank of Seattle v. Wright, 85 Wash. 460, 148 P. 769, 771, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 381; State v. Earley, 119 Kan. 446, 239 P. 981, 982; Rev. St. Mo. 1919, § 1272 (Mo. St. Ann. § 817); Civ. Code Prac. Ky. § 129; Comp. St. Wyo. 1910, § 4591 (Rev. St. 1931, § 89-1735), or, in criminal cases, one which might mislead the defense or expose a defendant to being put twice in jeopardy for the same offense; Brashears v. State, 38 Okl. Cr. 175, 259 P. 665, 667; Marshall v. State, 116 Neb. 45, 215 N. W. 564, 568; People v. Boneau, 327 Ill. 194, 158 N. E. 431, 435.

“Variance,” i. e., a disagreement between allegations and proof in some matter which, in point of law, is essential to the claim or charge, differs from “repugnancy,” which consists of two inconsistent allegations in one pleading. Fowler v. State, 20 Okl. Cr. 410, 203 P. 900, 901.

“Variance” also differs from failure of proof. Gordon v. Pollock, 124 Okl. 64, 253 P. 1021, 1023. A variance occurs when, though the pleading and proof do not exactly correspond, they may be made to do so by amendment in the discretion of the court and upon such terms and conditions as may be just. Deligny v. Tate Furniture Co., 170 N. C. 189, 86 S. E. 980, 984.

VARRANTIZATIO. In old Scotch law. Warranty.

VAS. Lat. In the civil law. A pledge; a surety; bail or surety in a criminal proceeding or civil action. Calvin.

VASECTOMY. A comparatively simple and painless operation, performed by section (cutting) of the vas deferens or spermatic cord, or by a tying off or ligaturing thereof;—sometimes performed on rapists and other criminals (especially sexual offenders), and on persons who are mentally defective. Laws Ind. 1907, c. 215; Acts Conn. 1909, c. 209; Stat. Cal. 1909, c. 720; Laws Iowa 1911, c. 129; Rem. & Bal. Code (Wash.) § 2287 (Rem. Laws Stat. § 2287); Rev. Laws Nev. § 6293 (Comp. Laws 1929, § 9977). Some of these and similar statutes have been declared unconstitutional; Williams v. Smith, 190 Ind. 526, 131 N. E. 2; Mickle v. Henrichs (D. C.) 262 F. 687; Smith v. Bd. of Examiners, 85 N. J. Law, 46, 88 A. 963; but in 1927, the validity of a Virginia statute (Laws 1924, c. 394) providing for vasectomy in the case of males and for salpingectomy in the case of females was sustained in Buck v. Bell, 274 U. S. 200, 47 S. Ct. 584, 71 L. Ed. 1000, affirming 143 Va. 310, 130 S. E. 516, 51 A. L. R. 855. Sterilization of the female may also be accomplished by an operation known as oöphorectomy or ovariectomy. Acts Conn. 1909, c. 209.

VASSAL.

In Feudal Law

A feudal tenant or grantee; a feudatory; the holder of a fief on a feudal tenure, and by the obligation of performing feudal services. The correlative term was "lord." The vassal himself might be lord of some other vassal.

In after-times, this word was used to signify a species of slave who owed servitude and was in a state of dependency on a superior lord. 2 Bla. Comm. 53.

In International Law

Vassal states are states which are supposed to possess only those rights and privileges which have been expressly granted to them, but actually they seem to be well-nigh independent. Hershey, Int. L. 106. Egypt was such; also Crete.

VASSALAGE. The state or condition of a vassal.

VASSELERIA. The tenure or holding of a vassal. Cowell.

VASTUM. L. Lat. A waste or common lying open to the cattle of all tenants who have a right of commoning. Cowell.

VASTUM FORESTÆ VEL BOSCI. In old records. Waste of a forest or wood. That part of a forest or wood wherein the trees and underwood were so destroyed that it lay in a manner waste and barren. Paroch. Antiq. 351, 497; Cowell.

VAUDERIE. In old European law. Sorcery; witchcraft; the profession of the Vaudois.

VAUDEVILLE. A species of theatrical entertainment, composed of isolated acts forming a balanced show. Hart v. B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange (C. C. A.) 12 F.(2d) 341, 342. And see Princess Amusement Co. v. Wells (C. C. A.) 271 F. 226, 231.

VAVASORY. The lands that a vavasour held. Cowell.

VAVASOUR. One who was in dignity next to a baron. Britt. 109; Bract. lib. 1, c. 8. One who held of a baron. Enc. Brit.

VEAL-MONEY. The tenants of the manor of Bradford, in the county of Wilts, paid a yearly rent by this name to their lord, in lieu of veal paid formerly in kind. Wharton.

VECORIN. In old Lombardic law. The offense of stopping one on the way; forestalling. Spelman.

VECTIGAL JUDICIARIUM. Lat. Fines paid to the crown to defray the expenses of maintaining courts of justice. 3 Salk. 33.

Vectigal, origine ipsa, jus Cæsarum et regum patrimoniale est. Dav. 12. Tribute, in its origin, is the patrimonial right of emperors and kings.

VECTIGALIA. In Roman law. Customs-duties; taxes paid upon the importation or exportation of certain kinds of merchandise. Cod. 4, 61. They differed from tribute, which was a tax paid by each individual.

Rent from state lands. Hunter, Rom. L. 901.

VECTURA. In maritime law. Freight.

VEGETABLE. The meaning of this word in the tariff law is not limited to such vegetables as grow in a vegetable garden. Whether a certain vegetable product is or is not a vegetable depends upon the use to which it is or may be put, and each case must depend upon its own facts. Togasaki & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 463, 465. The test is whether it is eaten and treated as a vegetable in the kitchen and dining room. If so, it is a vegetable; but, if used and eaten as a condiment or relish only, it is not. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 548, 551.

VEHICLE. Any carriage, conveyance, or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on land;—not ordinarily including locomotives, cars, and street cars which run and are operated only over and upon a permanent track or fixed way, unless the context of the ordinance or statute in question clearly indicates an intention to the contrary. Conder v. Griffith, 61 Ind. App. 218, 111 N. E. 816, 818; Rev. St. U. S. § 4 (1 USCA § 4). The word includes a street sprinkler; St. Louis v. Woodruff, 71 Mo. 92; but not a ferry boat; Duckwall v. Albany, 25 Ind. 286; nor a domestic animal, unattached to a vehicle or a conveyance; State v. One Black Horse Mule, 207 Ala. 277, 92 So. 548. It has also been held to include a scraper used to remove snow from ice which was to be cut, particularly since the scraper had facilities for dumping and unloading and was horse-drawn; Berg v. Hetzler Bros., 166 N. Y. S. 830, 179 App. Div. 551; a combined thresher and cleaner, mounted on axles and wheels, while being drawn from farm to farm; Vincent v. Taylor Bros., 168 N. Y. S. 287, 288, 180 App. Div. 818; a bicycle; Sharkey v. Herman Bros., 3 N. J. Misc. 126, 127 A. 525, 526; Tulsa Ice Co. v. Wilkes, 54 Okl. 519, 153 P. 1169, 1171; and a motorcycle; Knight v. Savannah Electric Co., 20 Ga. App. 314, 93 S. E. 17. And it includes an automobile; Shepard v. Findley, 204 Iowa, 107, 214 N. W. 676, 678; Mills v. Court of Com'rs of Conecuh County, 204 Ala. 40, 85 So. 564, 566; Commonwealth v. Dzewiacin, 252 Mass. 126, 147 N. E. 582, 583; Fishback v. Foster, 23 Ariz. 206, 202 P. 806, 808; Stanley v. Tomlin, 143 Va. 187, 129 S. E. 379, 382; even though, at the time of the enactment of the legislation involved, automobiles were not in use; U. S. v. One Cadillac Automobile (D. C.) 2 F.(2d) 886, 888; City of Henderson v. Lockett, 157 Ky. 366, 163 S. W. 199, 201; White v. District of Columbia, 4 F.(2d) 163, 164, 55 App. D. C. 197. The term was held not to include a street car in the following cases: City of Chicago v. Keogh, 291 Ill. 188, 125 N. E. 881, 882; Harris v. Johnson, 174 Cal. 55, 161 P. 1155, 1156, L. R. A. 1917C, 477, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 560; Reed v. Public Service Ry. Co., 89 N. J. Law, 431, 99 A. 100; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. R. Co., 114 Pa. 484, 8 A. 233. Contra, Bradley v. Minneapolis St. Ry. Co., 161 Minn. 322, 201 N. W. 606, 608, 46 A. L. R. 993.

As used in various statutes, however, the word is often given a somewhat narrower meaning than that which might be indicated by the above definition. Thus, it has been held that the term is inapplicable to a hand sled; Idell v. Day, 273 Pa. 34, 116 A. 506, 507, 20 A. L. R. 1429; to a child's coaster; Wright v. Salzberger & Sons, 81 Cal. App. 690, 254 P. 671, 676; and to an elevator; Wilson v. C. Dorfinger & Sons, 218 N. Y. 84, 112 N. E. 567, 568, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 38, reversing Wilson v. C. Dorfinger & Sons, 170 App. Div. 119, 155 N. Y. S. 857, 858.

But as defined in the Tariff Act, it has a much broader meaning, and includes any sort of conveyance used in the transportation of passengers and merchandise either by land or by water or through the air. Mellon v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 11 F.(2d) 332, 334, 56 App. D. C. 160.

VEHMERGICHT. See Fehmgericht.

VEIES. L. Fr. Distresses forbidden to be replevied; the refusing to let the owner have his cattle which were distrained. Kelham.

VEILINGS. As used in the tariff act, a material chiefly or exclusively used for the making of veils. A veil is a piece of cloth or other material, usually thin and light, designed to be worn over the head and face as an ornament or to protect or wholly or partly conceal the face from view. The textile material which is used to mask or screen the features resting beneath the face panels of caskets would be commonly and popularly regarded as veiling. Tiedeman & Sons v. U. S., 8 Ct. Cust. App. 134, 135.

VEIN. In mining law. A continuous body of mineral or mineralized rock, filling a seam or fissure in the earth's crust, within defined boundaries in the general mass of the mountain (which boundaries clearly separate it from the neighboring rock), and having a general character of continuity in the direction of its length. See Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cheesman, 116 U. S. 529, 6 S. Ct. 481, 29 L. Ed. 712; U. S. v. Iron Silver Min. Co., 128 U. S. 673, 9 S. Ct. 195, 32 L. Ed. 571; Stinchfield v. Gillis, 96 Cal. 33, 30 P. 839; Synnott v. Shaughnessy, 2 Idaho (Hasb.) 122, 7 P. 82; Beals v. Cone, 27 Colo. 473, 62 P. 948, 83 Am. St. Rep. 92; Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, 82 F. 51, 27 C. C. A. 50; Consolidated, etc., Min. Co. v. Champion Min. Co. (C. C.) 63 F. 544; San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield (C. C. A.) 201 F. 830, 835. A well-defined body of mineral within inclosed rocks. Stewart Mining Co. v. Ontario Mining Co., 237 U. S. 350, 35 S. Ct. 610, 614, 59 L. Ed. 989. A lode, or ledge. Myers v. Lloyd, 4 Alaska, 263, 265.

A requirement that a miner shall locate his claim "along the vein" means along the out-crop or course of the apex, and not along the strike. Stewart Mining Co. v. Bourne (C. C. A.) 218 F. 327, 329.

The terms "principal," "original," and "primary," as well as "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental," have all been employed to describe the different veins found within the same surface boundaries, but their meaning is not entirely clear in all cases. They may refer to the relative importance or value of the different veins, or the relations to each other, or to the time of discovery, but the words "secondary," "accidental," and "incidental" are most frequently used to distinguish between the discovery vein and other veins within the same surface boundaries. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co. (D. C.) 271 F. 105, 111.

Discovery Vein

That vein which served as a basis of the location, in contradistinction to secondary, accidental, and incidental veins. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co. (D. C.) 271 F. 105, 113. The primary vein for the purpose of locating a mining claim and determining which are the end and which the side lines. Where the discovery vein crosses the opposite side lines of the claim as located, the side lines become end lines, not only with respect to such vein, but for determination of extralateral rights in any other vein which apexes within the claim. Northport Smelting & Refining Co. v. Lone Pine-Surprise Consol. Mines Co. (C. C. A.) 278 F. 719, 720.

VEJOURS. Viewers; persons sent by the court to take a view of any place in question, for the better decision of the right. It signifies, also, such as are sent to view those that essoïn themselves de malo lecti, (i. e., excuse themselves on ground of illness) whether they be in truth so sick as that they cannot appear, or whether they do counterfeit. Cowell.

VELABRUM. In old English law. A toll-booth. Cro. Jac. 122.

VELITIS JUBEATIS QUIRITES? Lat. Is it your will and pleasure, Romans? The form of proposing a law to the Roman people. Tayl. Civil Law, 155.

Velle non creditur qui obsequitur imperio patris vel domini. He is not presumed to consent who obeys the orders of his father or his master. Dig. 50, 17, 4.

VELTRARIA. The office of dog-leader, or courser. Cowell.

VELTRARIUS. One who leads greyhounds. Blount.

VELVET. In a secondary meaning, soft; smooth. Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co. (D. C.) 231 F. 550, 551; Chapin-Sacks Mfg. Co. v. Hendler Creamery Co. (C. C. A.) 254 F. 553, 555.

VENAL. Pertaining to something that is bought; capable of being bought; offered for sale; mercenary. Used usually in an evil sense, such purchase or sale being regarded as corrupt and illegal.

VENARIA. Beasts caught in the woods by hunting.

VENATIO. Hunting. Cowell.

VEND. To sell; to transfer the ownership of an article to another for a price in money. The term is not commonly applied to the sale of real estate, although its derivatives "vendor" and "vendee" are.

VENDEE. A purchaser or buyer; one to whom anything is sold. Generally used of the purchaser of real property, one who acquires chattels by sale being called a "buyer."

Vendens eandem rem duobus falsarius est. He is fraudulent who sells the same thing twice. Jenk. Cent. 107.

VENDETTA. A private blood feud, in which a family seeks to avenge one of its members on the offender or his family. Stephens v. Howells Sales Co. (D. C.) 16 F.(2d) 805, 808.

VENDIBLE. Fit or suitable to be sold; capable of transfer by sale; merchantable.

VENDITÆ. In old European law. A tax upon things sold in markets and public fairs. Spelman.

VENDITIO. Lat. In the civil law. In a strict sense, sale; the act of selling; the contract of sale, otherwise called "emptio venditio." Inst. 3, 24. Calvin.

In a large sense, any mode or species of alienation; any contract by which the property or ownership of a thing may be transferred. Id.

VENDITION. Sale; the act of selling.

VENDITIONI EXPONAS. Lat. You expose to sale. Richmond Cedar Works v. Stringfellow (D. C.) 236 F. 264, 272. The name of a writ of execution, requiring a sale to be made, directed to a sheriff when he has levied upon goods under a feri facias, but returned that they remained unsold for want of buyers; and in some jurisdictions it is issued to cause a sale to be made of lands, seized under a former writ, after they have been condemned or passed upon by an inquisition. Frequently abbreviated to "vend. ex." See Beebe v. U. S., 161 U. S. 104, 16 S. Ct. 532, 40 L. Ed. 633; Borden v. Tillman, 39 Tex. 273; Ritchie v. Higginbotham, 26 Kan. 648; W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Bendy (Tex. Civ. App.) 251 S. W. 265, 272.

The office of a "venditioni exponas" is to sell property previously taken in execution, and it is not a writ separate from the fi. fa., but a part of it. McLanahan v. Goodman, 265 Pa. 43, 108 A. 206, 208.

VENDITOR. Lat. A seller; a vendor. Inst. 3, 24; Bract. fol. 41.

VENDITOR REGIS. In old English law. The king's seller or salesman; the person who exposed to sale those goods and chattels which were seized or distrained to answer any debt due to the king. Cowell.

VENDITRIX. Lat. A female vendor. Cod. 4, 51, 3.

VENDOR. The person who transfers property by sale, particularly real estate, "seller" being more commonly used for one who sells personally. The latter may, however, with entire propriety, be termed a vendor; Atlantic Refining Co. v. Van Valkenburg, 265 Pa. 456, 109 A. 208, 210; e. g., a merchant; a retail dealer; Edgin v. Bell-Wayland Co. (Okl. Cr. App.) 149 P. 1145, L. R. A. 1915F, 916; sometimes, one who buys to sell; Commonwealth v. Thorne, Neal & Co., 70 Pa. Super. Ct. 599, 602.

One who negotiates the sale, and becomes the recipient of the consideration, though the title comes to the vendee from another source, and not from the vendor. Rutland v. Brister, 53 Miss. 685; Canavan v. Coleman, 204 Iowa 901, 216 N. W. 292, 293.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER ACT. The act of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 78, which substitutes forty for sixty years as the root of title, and amends in other ways the law of vendor and purchaser. Mozley & Whitley.

VENDOR'S LIEN. A lien for purchase money remaining unpaid, allowed in equity to the vendor of land, when the statement of receipt of the price in the deed is not in accordance with the fact. Also, a lien existing in the unpaid vendor of chattels, the same remaining in his hands, to the extent of the purchase price, where the sale was for cash, or on a term of credit which has expired, or on an agreement by which the seller is to retain possession. See Morgan v. Dalrymple, 59 N. J. Eq. 22, 46 A. 664; Lee v. Murphy, 119 Cal. 364, 51 P. 549; Graham v. Moffett, 119 Mich. 303, 78 N. W. 132, 75 Am. St. Rep. 393; Gessner v. Palmateer, 89 Cal. 89, 26 P. 789, 13 L. R. A. 187; Blomstrom v. Dux, 175 Ill. 435, 51 N. E. 755; Tiernan v. Beam, 2 Ohio, 388, 15 Am. Dec. 557; Warford v. Hankins, 150 Ind. 489, 50 N. E. 468; Slide & Spur Gold Mines v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 509, 14 S. Ct. 842, 38 L. Ed. 802; Digen v. Schultz, 65 Mont. 190, 210 P. 1057, 1058; Osburn v. Lindley, 163 Ark. 260, 259 S. W. 729, 730; Spinder v. Iowa & O. S. L. Ry. Co., 173 Iowa, 348, 155 N. W. 271, 272; State v. Williams, 214 Ala. 89, 106 So. 500; Johns v. Seeley, 94 Fla. 851, 114 So. 452, 453. In English and American law a vendor's lien is exceptional in character, and is an importation from the civil law, which found its recognition through courts of chancery, on the equitable principle that the person who had secured the estate of another ought not in conscience to be allowed to keep it and not pay full consideration money, and that to enforce that payment it was just that the vendor should have a lien upon the property. Martin v. Becker, 169 Cal. 301, 146 P. 665, 671, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 171.

VENDUE. A sale; generally a sale at public auction; and more particularly a sale so made under authority of law, as by a constable, sheriff, tax collector, administrator, etc.

VENDUE MASTER. An auctioneer.

VENEREAL. Sexual; as, venerereal diseases. State v. Hollinshead, 77 Or. 473, 151 P. 710, 711.

VENIA. A kneeling or low prostration on the ground by penitents; pardon.

VENIA ÆTATIS. A privilege granted by a prince or sovereign, in virtue of which a person is entitled to act, sui juris, as if he were of full age. Story, Conf. Laws, § 74.

Veniæ facilitas incentivum est delinquendi. 3 Inst. 236. Facility of pardon is an incentive to crime.

VENIRE. Lat. To come; to appear in court. Sometimes used as the name of the writ for summoning a jury, more commonly called a "venire facias."

VENIRE DE NOVO. See Venire Facias.

VENIRE FACIAS. Lat. In practice. A judicial writ, directed to the sheriff of the county in which a cause is to be tried, commanding him that he "cause to come" before the court, on a certain day therein mentioned, twelve good and lawful men of the body of his county, qualified according to law, by whom the truth of the matter may be the better known, and who are in no wise of kin either to the plaintiff or to the defendant, to make a jury of the county between the parties in the action, because as well the plaintiff as the defendant, between whom the matter in variance is, have put themselves upon that jury, and that he return the names of the jurors, etc. 2 Tidd, Pr. 777, 778; 3 Bl. Comm. 352.

VENIRE FACIAS AD RESPONDENDUM. A writ to summon a person, against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been found, to appear and be arraigned for the offense. A justice's warrant is now more commonly used. Archb. Crim. Pl. 81; Sweet.

VENIRE FACIAS DE NOVO. A fresh or new venire, which the court grants when there has been some impropriety or irregularity in returning the jury, or where the verdict is so imperfect or ambiguous that no judgment can be given upon it, or where a judgment is reversed on error, and a new trial awarded. See Bosseker v. Cramer, 18 Ind. 44; Maxwell v. Wright, 160 Ind. 515, 67 N. E. 267. "The ancient common-law mode of proceeding to a new trial was by a writ of venire facias de novo. The new trial is a modern invention, intended to mitigate the severity of the proceeding to attain. While a venire de novo and new trial are quite different, they are alike in that a new trial takes place in both. The material difference between them is that a venire de novo must be granted upon matters appearing upon the face of the record, but a new trial may be granted for things out of the record. Lowry v. Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Co., 77 Ind. App. 138, 126 N. E. 223, 225. See, also, 1 Wils. 48; 47 Am. L. Rev. 377.

VENIRE FACIAS JURATORES. A judicial writ directed to the sheriff, when issue was joined in an action, commanding him to cause to come to Westminster, on such a day, twelve free and lawful men of his county by whom the truth of the matter at issue might be better known. This writ was abolished by section 104 of the common-law procedure act, 1852, and by section 105 a precept issued by the judges of assize is substituted in its place. The process so substituted is sometimes loosely spoken of as a "venire." Brown. See, also, Steph. Pl. 104; Cridland v. Floyd, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 414; 3 Chitty, Pr. 797.

VENIRE FACIAS TOT MATRONAS. A writ to summon a jury of matrons to execute the writ de ventre inspiciendo.

VENIREMAN. A member of a panel of jurors; a juror summoned by a writ of venire facias.

VENIT ET DEFENDIT. L. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and defends. The proper words of appearance and defense in an action. 1 Ld. Raym. 117.

VENIT ET DICIT. Lat. In old pleading. Comes and says. 2 Salk. 544.

VENTE. In French law. Sale; contract of sale.

VENTE À RÉMÉRÉ. A conditional sale, in which the seller reserves the right to redeem or repurchase at the same price. The term is used in Canada and Louisiana.

VENTE ALEATOIRE. A sale subject to an uncertain event.

VENTE AUX ENCHÈRES. An auction.

VENTER, VENTRE. Lat. The belly; the womb; the wife. Used in law as designating the maternal parentage of children. Thus, where in ordinary phraseology we should say that A. was B.'s child by his first wife, he would be described in law as "by the first venter." Brown. A child is said to be en ventre sa mere before it is born; while it is a fetus.

VENTRE INSPICIENDO. See De Ventre Inspiciendo; Venire facias tot matronas.

VENTURE, v. To take (the) chances. Allan v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 315 Mo. 254, 286 S. W. 16, 19.

VENTURE, n. An undertaking attended with risk, especially one aiming at making money; business speculation. McRee v. Quitman Oil Co., 16 Ga. App. 12, 84 S. E. 487.

VENUE. Formerly spelled visne. Co. Litt. 125a. In pleading and practice. A neighborhood; the neighborhood, place, or county in which an injury is declared to have been done, or fact declared to have happened. 3 Bl. Comm. 294; Jackson v. State, 187 Ind. 694, 121 N. E. 114, 115; Orthwein v. Germania Life Ins. Co. of City of New York, 261 Mo. 650, 170 S. W. 885, 887; 4 C. & P. 363; Heikes v. Com., 26 Pa. 513; Searcy v. State, 4 Tex. 450; People v. Lafuente, 6 Cal. 202.

Also, the county (or geographical division) in which an action or prosecution is brought for trial, and which is to furnish the panel of jurors. To "change the venue" is to transfer the cause for trial to another county or district. See Moore v. Gardner, 5 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 243; Armstrong v. Emmet, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 242, 41 S. W. 87; Sullivan v. Hall, 86 Mich. 7, 48 N. W. 646, 13 L. R. A. 556; State v. McKinney, 5 Nev. 198; Loftus v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 107 Ohio St. 352, 140 N. E. 94, 96; Paige v. Sinclair, 237 Mass. 482, 130 N. E. 177, 178. However, the transfer of a case from division 2 of a county circuit court to division 1 thereof may also constitute a "change of venue." Towle v. City of St. Joseph (Mo. App.) 185 S. W. 1151, 1152.

"Venue" means the place at which an action is tried, and not merely the judge or court by whom it is tried. State ex rel. McAllister v. State, 278 Mo. 570, 214 S. W. 85, 87, 8 A. L. R. 1226.

"Jurisdiction" of the court means the inherent power to decide a case, whereas "venue" designates the particular county or city in which a court with jurisdiction may hear and determine the case. Southern Sand & Gravel Co. v. Massaponax Sand & Gravel Corporation, 145 Va. 317, 133 S. E. 812, 813. See, also, Davis v. City of Waycross, 16 Ga. App. 239 85 S. E. 81. But compare People v. Wakao, 33 Cal. App. 454, 165 P. 720, 721.

In the common-law practice, that part of the declaration in an action which designates the county in which the action is to be tried. Sweet.

Local Venue

In pleading. A venue which must be laid in a particular county. When the action could have arisen only in a particular county, it is local, and the venue must be laid in that county. 1 Tidd, Pr. 427; Deacon v. Shreve, 23 N. J. Law, 204.

VERANDA. A porch; a portico; a covered place of entrance to a building, differentiated from its principal mass. Hieronimus v. Moran, 272 Ill. 254, 111 N. E. 1022, 1025.

VERAY. L. Fr. True. An old form of vrai. Thus, veray, or true, tenant, is one who holds in fee-simple; veray tenant by the manner, is the same as tenant by the manner, (q. v.) with this difference only: that the fee-simple instead of remaining in the lord, is given by him or by the law to another. Ham. N. P. 393, 394.

VERBA. Lat. (Plural of verbum.) Words.

Verba accipienda sunt cum effectu, ut sortiantur effectum. Words are to be received with effect, so that they may produce effect. Bac. Max.

Verba accipienda sunt secundum subjectam materiam. 6 Coke, 62. Words are to be understood with reference to the subject-matter.

Verba accipienda ut sortiantur effectum. Words are to be taken so that they may have some effect. 4 Bacon, Works 258.

Verba æquivoca, ac in dubio sensu posita, intelliguntur digniori et potentiori sensu. Equivocal words, and such as are put in a doubtful sense, are [to be] understood in the more worthy and effectual sense [in their best and most effective sense]. 6 Coke, 20a.

Verba aliquid operari debent; debent intelligi ut aliquid operentur. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to have some operation; they ought to be interpreted in such a way as to have some operation.

Verba aliquid operari debent, verba cum effectu sunt accipienda. Words are to be taken so as to have effect. Bacon, Max. Reg. 3, p. 47. See 1 Duer, Ins. 210, 211, 216.

Verba artis ex arte. Terms of art should be explained from the art. 2 Kent, Comm. 556, note.

VERBA CANCELLARIÆ. Words of the chancery. The technical style of writs framed in the office of chancery. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 10, § 3.

Verba chartarum fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem. The words of charters are to be received more strongly against the grantor [or the person offering them]. Co. Litt. 36; Broom, Max. 594; Bacon, Max. Reg. 3; Noy, Max., 9th ed. p. 48; 3 B. & P. 399, 403; 1 C. & M. 657; 8 Term 605; 15 East 546; 1 Ball. & B. 335; 2 Pars. Con. 22.

Verba cum effectu accipienda sunt. Bac. Max. 3. Words ought to be used so as to give them their effect.

Verba currentis monetæ, tempus solutionis designant. Dav. 20. The words "current money" designate current at the time of payment.

Verba debent intelligi cum effectu, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Words ought to be understood with effect, that a thing may rather be preserved than destroyed. 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 530.

Verba debent intelligi ut aliquid operentur. Words ought to be understood so as to have some operation. 8 Coke, 94a.

Verba dicta de persona intelligi debent de conditione personæ. Words spoken of a person are to be understood of the condition of the person. 2 Rolle, 72.

Verba fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem. Words are to be taken most strongly against him who uses them. Bac. Max. 11, reg. 3.

Verba generalia generaliter sunt intelligenda. 3 Inst. 76. General words are to be generally understood.

Verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel aptitudinem personæ. General words must be narrowed either to the nature of the subject-matter or to the aptitude of the person. Broom, Max. 646; Bacon, Max. Reg. 10; 11 C. B. 254, 356.

Verba illata (relata) inesse videntur. Words referred to are to be considered as if incorporated. Broom, Max. 674, 677; 11 Mees. & W. 183; 10 C. B. 261, 263, 266.

Verba in differenti materia per prius, non per posterius, intelligenda sunt. Words on a different subject are to be understood by what precedes, not by what comes after. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

Verba intelligenda sunt in casu possibili. Words are to be understood in [or "of," or "in reference to"] a possible case. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

Verba intentioni, non e contra, debent inservire. 8 Coke, 94. Words ought to be made subservient to the intent, not the intent to the words. 6 Allen (Mass.) 324; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 527; 2 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 379.

Verba ita sunt intelligenda, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. The words [of an instrument] are to be so understood, that the subject-matter may rather be of force than perish, [rather be preserved than destroyed; or, in other words, that the instrument may have effect, if possible.] Bac. Max. 17, in reg. 3; Plowd. 156; 2 Bl. Comm. 380; 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

Verba mere æquivoca, si per communem usum loquendi in intellectu certo summuntur, talis intellectus præferendus est. [In the case of] words merely equivocal, if they are taken by the common usage of speech in a certain sense, such sense is to be preferred. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

Verba nihil operari melius est quam absurde. It is better that words should have no operation at all than [that they should operate] absurdly. A maxim of the civil law. Calvin.

Verba non tam intuenda, quam causa et natura rei, ut mens contrahentium ex eis potius quam ex verbis appareat. The words [of a contract] are not so much to be looked at as the cause and nature of the thing, [which is the subject of it,] in order that the intention of the contracting parties may appear rather from them than from the words. Calvin.

Verba offendi possunt, imo ab eis recedere licet, ut verba ad sanum intellectum reducantur. Words may be opposed, [taken in a contrary sense,] nay, we may disregard them altogether, in order that the [general] words [of an instrument] may be restored to a sound meaning. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

Verba ordinationis quando verificari possunt in sua vera significatione, trahi ad extraneum intellectum non debent. When the words of an ordinance can be carried into effect in their own true meaning, they ought not to be drawn to a foreign intendment. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

Verba posteriora propter certitudinem addita, ad priora quæ certitudine indigent, sunt referenda. Subsequent words, added for the purpose of certainty, are to be referred to the preceding words which require the certainty. Wing. Max. 167, max. 53; Broom, Max. 586; 6 Coke, 236.

VERBA PRECARIA. In the civil law. Precatory words; words of trust, or used to create a trust.

Verba pro re et subjecta materia accipi debent. Words ought to be understood in favor of the thing and subject-matter. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.

Verba quæ aliquid operari possunt non debent esse superflua. Words which can have any kind of operation ought not to be [considered] superfluous. Calvin.

Verba, quantumvis generalia, ad aptitudinem restringantur, etiamsi nullam aliam paterentur restrictionem. Words, howsoever general, are restrained to fitness, (i. e., to harmonize with the subject-matter,) though they would bear no other restriction. Spiegelius.

Verba relata hoc maxime operantur per referentiam, ut in eis inesse videntur. Related words [words connected with others by reference] have this particular operation by the reference, that they are considered as being inserted in those [clauses which refer to them.] Co. Litt. 9b, 359a. Words to which reference is made in an instrument have the same effect and operation as if they were inserted in the clauses referring to them. Broom, Max. 673; 14 East 568.

Verba relata inesse videntur. Words to which reference is made seem to be incorporated. 11 Cush. (Mass.) 137.

Verba secundum materiam subjectam intelligi nemo est qui nesciat. There is no one who does not know that words are to be understood according to their subject-matter. Calvin.

Verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiori sensu. Words are always to be taken in the milder sense. 4 Coke, 13a.

Verba strictæ significationis ad latam extendi possunt, si subsit ratio. Words of a strict or narrow signification may be extended to a broad meaning, if there be ground in reason for it. A maxim of the civilians. Calvin.; Spiegelius.

Verba sunt indices animi. Words are the indices or indicators of the mind or thought. Latch, 106.

VERBAL. Strictly, of or pertaining to words; expressed in words, whether spoken or written, but commonly in spoken words; hence, by confusion, spoken; oral. Webster, Dict. Parol; by word of mouth; as, verbal agreement, verbal evidence; or written, but not signed, or not executed with the formalities required for a deed or prescribed by statute in particular cases. Musgrove v. Jackson, 59 Miss. 390.

VERBAL NOTE. A memorandum or note, in diplomacy, not signed, sent when an affair has continued a long time without any reply, in order to avoid the appearance of an urgency which perhaps is not required; and, on the other hand, to guard against the supposition that it is forgotten, or that there is an intention of not prosecuting it any further. Wharton.

VERBAL PROCESS. In Louisiana. Procès verbal, (q. v.)

Verbis standum ubi nulla ambiguitas. One must abide by the words where there is no ambiguity. Tray. Lat. Max. 612.

Verbum imperfecti temporis rem adhuc imperfectam significat. The imperfect tense of the verb indicates an incomplete matter. Mac-tier v. Frith, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 103, 120, 21 Am. Dec. 262.

VERDERER, or VERDEROR. An officer of the king's forest, who is sworn to maintain and keep the assizes of the forest, and to view, receive, and enroll the attachments and presentments of all manner of trespasses of vert and venison in the forest. Manw. c. 6, § 5.

VERDICT. From the Latin "veredictum," a true declaration. State v. Blue, 134 La. 561, 64 So. 411, 413; Doe ex dem. Rowe v. Goetchius, 180 Ala. 381, 61 So. 330, 331; Mars v. State, 163 Ga. 43, 135 S. E. 410, 419. In practice. The formal and unanimous decision or finding made by a jury, impaneled and sworn for the trial of a cause, and reported to the court (and accepted by it), upon the matters or questions duly submitted to them upon the trial. Sitterson v. Sitterson, 191 N. C. 319, 131 S. E. 641, 642, 51 A. L. R. 760; Roth v. East Connellsville Coke Co., 242 Pa. 23, 88 A. 781. A declaration of the truth as to matters of fact submitted to jury. Groves v. State, 162 Ga. 161, 132 S. E. 769, 770; Arcadia Timber Co. v. Evans, 304 Mo. 674, 264 S. W. 810. The definitive answer given by the jury to the court concerning the matters of fact committed to the jury for their deliberation and determination. State v. Williams, 89 N. J. Law, 234, 98 A. 416, 417.

Until accepted by the court, a finding of the jury is not a "verdict." Schulman v. Stock, 89 Conn. 237, 93 A. 531. The only "verdict" is that which the jury announces orally to the court, and which is received and recorded as the jury's finding. Mattice v. Maryland Casualty Co. (D. C.) 5 F. (2d) 233.

Although in common language, the word may be used in a more extended sense, it has a well-defined signification in law. It means the decision of a jury; and not the decision of a court or a referee or a commissioner. Kerner v. Petigo, 25 Kan. 656. "Decision" bears the same relation to nonjury cases as "verdict" to jury cases, and a "verdict" is a conclusion upon the facts, and in effect a direction for judgment, while a "decision" is an order for judgment, and determines the judgment to be entered. Schofield v. Baker (D. C.) 242 F. 657, 658.

Adverse Verdict

Where a party, appealing from an allowance of damages by commissioners, recovers a verdict in his favor, but for a less amount of damages than had been originally allowed, such verdict is adverse to him, within the meaning of his undertaking to pay costs if the verdict should be adverse to him. Hamblin v. Barnstable County, 16 Gray (Miss.) 256.

Chance Verdict

One determined by hazard or lot, and not by the deliberate understanding and agreement of the jury. Goodman v. Cody, 1 Wash. T. 335, 34 Am. Rep. 808; Dixon v. Pluns, 98 Cal. 384, 33 P. 268, 20 L. R. A. 698, 35 Am. St. Rep. 180; Improvement Co. v. Adams, 1 Colo. App. 250, 28 P. 662. A verdict is not a "chance verdict" merely because, in arriving at the amount, the jury took each juror's estimate of what should be assessed as the damages and divided the total by the number of jurors, and afterward knowingly and understandingly agreed that such quotient should be the amount of the verdict. Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 31 N. D. 555, 154 N. W. 275, 277. See, also, Foley v. Hornung, 35 Cal. App. 304, 169 P. 705, 709; Quotient verdict, infra.

Compromise Verdict

One which is the result, not of justifiable concession of views, but of improper compromise of the vital principles which should have controlled the decision. Goelet v. Matt J. Ward Co. (C. C. A.) 242 F. 65, 67. Although it is proper for jurors to harmonize their views and reach a verdict with proper regard for each other's opinions, it is not proper for any juror to surrender his conscientious convictions on any material issue in return for a relinquishment by others of their like settled opinions on another issue, producing a result which does not command the approval of the whole panel. Snyder v. Portland Ry., Light & Power Co., 107 Or. 673, 215 P. 887, 889.

False Verdict

One obviously opposed to the principles of right and justice; an untrue verdict. Formerly, if a jury gave a false verdict, the party injured by it might sue out and prosecute a writ of attaint against them, either at common law or on the statute 11 Hen. VII. c. 24, at his election, for the purpose of reversing the judgment and punishing the jury for their verdict; but not where the jury erred merely in point of law, if they found according to the judge's direction. The practice of setting aside verdicts and granting new trials, however, so superseded the use of attaints that there is no instance of one to be found in the books of reports later than in the time of Elizabeth, and it was altogether abolished by 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, § 60. Wharton.

General Verdict

A verdict whereby the jury find either for the plaintiff or for the defendant in general terms; the ordinary form of a verdict. Glenn v. Sumner, 10 S. Ct. 41, 132 U. S. 152, 33 L. Ed. 301; Childs v. Carpenter, 32 A. 780, 87 Me. 114. A finding by the jury in the terms of the issue referred to them. Settle v. Alison, 8 Ga. 208, 52 Am. Dec. 393; Tidd, Pr. 798. That by which the jury pronounces generally on all of the issues in favor of plaintiff or defendant. Skelton v. City of Newberg, 148 P. 53, 55, 76 Or. 126; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Wolf, 128 N. E. 38, 40, 189 Ind. 585. That by which they pronounce generally upon all or any of the issues, either in favor of the plaintiff or defendant;—distinguished from a special verdict, which is that by which the jury finds facts only. Comp. Stat. Okl. 1921, § 551 (Code 1931, § 369). A "general verdict" is one by which the jury pronounces at the same time on the facts and the law, either in favor of the plaintiff or the defendant. Schofield v. Baker (D. C.) 242 F. 657, 658; Co. Litt. 228; 4 Bla. Comm. 461. A general verdict of guilty in a criminal case means guilty on every count. Simmons v. State, 134 S. E. 54, 55, 162 Ga. 316.

Open Verdict

A verdict of a coroner's jury which finds that the subject "came to his death by means to the jury unknown," or "came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown," that is, one which leaves open either the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

Partial Verdict

In criminal law, a verdict by which the jury acquit the defendant as to a part of the accusation and find him guilty as to the residue. State v. McGee, 33 S. E. 353, 55 S. C. 247, 74 Am. St. Rep. 741; U. S. v. Watkins, 28 Fed. Cas. 419.

Privy Verdict

One given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, being agreed, in order to be delivered from their confinement, obtain leave to give their verdict privily to the judge out of court. Such a verdict is of no force unless afterwards affirmed by a public verdict given openly in court. This practice is now superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See Young v. Seymour, 4 Neb. 89.

Public Verdict

A verdict openly delivered by the jury in court. Withee v. Rowe, 45 Me. 571.

Quotient Verdict

A money verdict the amount of which is fixed by the following process: Each juror writes down the sum he wishes to award by the verdict, and these amounts are all added together, and the total is divided by twelve, (the number of jurors,) the quotient being the verdict of the jury by their agreement. Speer v. State, 198 S. W. 113, 115, 130 Ark. 457; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 144 P. 1075, 1077, 45 Okl. 143; Spain v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 153 P. 470, 475, 78 Or. 355, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 1104; Hull v. Larson, 131 P. 668, 669, 14 Ariz. 492, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1145; Hamilton v. Owego Water Works, 48 N. Y. S. 106, 22 App. Div. 573. To invalidate a verdict of this kind, it must appear that, in advance of the computation, there was an agreement to be bound by the result. In re Havenmaier's Estate, 203 N. W. 958, 959, 163 Minn. 218; Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Lenton, 154 N. W. 275, 277, 31 N. D. 555; Benjamin v. Helena Light & Ry. Co., 255 P. 20, 21, 79 Mont. 144, 52 A. L. R. 33; Pushcart v. New York Shipbuilding Co., 89 A. 980, 981, 85 N. J. Law, 525; Bank of Tallassee v. Elmore Fertilizer Co., 78 So. 648, 649, 16 Ala. App. 465; International Agr. Corporation v. Abercrombie, 63 So. 549, 553, 184 Ala. 244, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 415; Carter v. Marshall Oil Co., 170 N. W. 798, 800, 185 Iowa 416.

Sealed Verdict

See Sealed.

Special Verdict

A special finding of the facts of a case by a jury, leaving to the court the application of the law to the facts thus found. 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 213; 3 Bl. Comm. 377; Statler v. U. S., 15 S. Ct. 616, 157 U. S. 277, 39 L. Ed. 700; Day v. Webb, 28 Conn. 144; Wallingford v. Dunlap, 14 Pa. 32; McCormick v. Royal Ins. Co., 29 A. 747, 163 Pa. 184; Brown v. Ralston, 4 Rand. (Va.) 504; Huether v. McCaull-Dinsmore Co., 204 N. W. 614, 619, 52 N. D. 721; Samlin v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 278 F. 170, 172; St. Wis. 1911, § 2857 (St. 1931, § 270.25); Pen. Code Ariz. 1913, § 1085 (Rev. Code 1928, § 5085); Pen. Code Cal. § 1152; Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 1186 (Civil Practice Act, § 458). A special finding by the jury on each material issue of the case. Ford v. Brown, 200 P. 522, 525, 45 Nev. 202. A "special verdict" exhibits the legitimate facts and leaves the legal conclusions to the court, and must cover all the issues in the case, while an answer to a special interrogatory may respond to but a single inquiry pertaining merely to one issue essential to the general verdict. Childress v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 105 N. E. 467, 470, 182 Ind. 251.

Verdict by Lot

This type of verdict was formerly held to be legitimate; 1 Keble 811; but such verdicts are now held to be illegal. See Barnard v. State, 221 S. W. 293, 294, 87 Tex. Cr. R. 365; Chance Verdict, supra.

BL. LAW DICT. (3D ED.)—114

Verdict of Guilty But Insane

A special verdict which amounts to an acquittal of the person tried. Rex v. Taylor, [1915] 2 K. B. 709, 712.

Verdict of no Cause of Action.

A verdict for defendant. Felter v. Mulliner, 2 Johns. 181.

Verdict of Not Guilty

Simply a verdict of not proven in the particular case tried; it is not a verdict of innocence, and hence is not conclusive against the state in favor of any other person than the defendant who was actually acquitted. Woody v. State, 136 P. 430, 432, 10 Okl. Cr. 322, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 479.

Verdict Subject to Opinion of Court

A verdict returned by the jury, the entry of judgment upon which is subject to the determination of points of law reserved by the court upon the trial.

VEREBOT. Sax. In old records. A packet-boat or transport vessel. Cowell.

VEREDICTUM. L. Lat. In old English law. A verdict; a declaration of the truth of a matter in issue, submitted to a jury for trial.

Veredictum, quasi dictum veritatis; ut iudicium quasi juris dictum. Co. Litt. 226. The verdict is, as it were, the dictum [saying] of truth; as the judgment is the dictum of law.

VERGE, or VIRGE. In English law. The compass of the royal court, which bounds the jurisdiction of the lord steward of the household; it seems to have been twelve miles about. Britt. 68. An uncertain quantity of land from fifteen to thirty acres. 28 Edw. I. Also a stick, or rod, whereby one is admitted tenant to a copyhold estate. Old Nat. Brev. 17.

VERGELT. In Saxon law. A mulct or fine for a crime. See Weregild.

VERGENS AD INOPIAM. L. Lat. In Scotch law. Verging towards poverty; in declining circumstances. 2 Kames, Eq. 8.

VERGERS. In English law. Officers who carry white wands before the justices of either bench. Cowell. Mentioned in Fleta, as officers of the king's court, who oppressed the people by demanding exorbitant fees. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 38.

VERIFICATION.In Pleading

A certain formula with which all pleadings containing new affirmative matter must conclude, being in itself an averment that the party pleading is ready to establish the truth of what he has set forth.

The usual form of verification of a plea containing matter of fact is, "And this he is ready to verify," etc. See 3 Bla. Comm. 309.

In Practice

The examination of a writing for the purpose of ascertaining its truth. A certificate or affidavit that it is true.

"Verification" is not identical with "authentication." A notary may verify a mortgagee's written statement of the actual amount of his claim, but need not authenticate the act by his seal. Ashley v. Wright, 19 Ohio St. 291.

Confirmation of the correctness, truth, or authenticity of a pleading, account, or other paper, by an affidavit, oath, or deposition. Herbert v. Roxana Petroleum Corporation (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 81, 83; McDonald v. Rosen-garten, 134 Ill. 126, 25 N. E. 429; Summerfield v. Phoenix Assur. Co. (C. C.) 65 F. 296; Patterson v. Brooklyn, 6 App. Div. 127, 40 N. Y. S. 581.

VERIFY. To confirm or substantiate by oath, S. B. McMaster, Inc., v. Chevrolet Motor Co., (D. C.) 3 F.(2d) 469, 471; Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa 307, 214 N. W. 882, 885; Marshall v. State, 116 Neb. 45, 215 N. W. 564, 566. Particularly used of making formal oath to accounts, petitions, pleadings, and other papers.

The word "verified," when used in a statute, ordinarily imports a verity attested by the sanctity of an oath. Bristol v. Buck, 201 App. Div. 100, 194 N. Y. S. 53, 55. It is frequently used interchangeably with "sworn." Francesconi v. Independent School Dist. of Wall Lake, 204 Iowa, 307, 214 N. W. 882, 885.

To prove to be true or correct; to confirm or establish the truth or authority of; to confirm; to substantiate. City of Arlington v. Dallas-Fort Worth Safety Coach Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 270 S. W. 1094, 1095; State v. Lock, 302 Mo. 400, 259 S. W. 116, 120. To make certain by comparison. State v. Brown, 83 Fla. 339, 91 So. 370, 371.

The word "verify" sometimes means to confirm and substantiate by oath, and sometimes by argument. When used in legal proceedings it is generally employed in the former sense. De Witt v. Hosmer, 3 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 284.

VERILY. In very truth; beyond doubt or question; in fact; certainly; truly; confidently; really. Gregg v. Sigurdson, 67 Mont. 272, 215 P. 662.

Veritas, a quocunque dicitur, a Deo est. 4 Inst. 153. Truth, by whomsoever pronounced, is from God.

Veritas demonstrationis tollit errorem nominis. The truth of the description removes an error in the name. 1 Ld. Raym. 303.

Veritas habenda est in Juratore; justitia et judicium in judice. Truth is the desideratum in a juror; justice and judgment in a judge. Bract. fol. 185b.

Veritas nihil veretur nisi abscondi. Truth fears nothing but to be hid. 9 Coke, 20b.

Veritas nimium altercando amittitur. Truth is lost by excessive altercation. Hob. 344.

Veritas nominis tollit errorem demonstrationis. The truth of the name takes away the error of description. Bacon, Max. Reg. 25; Broom, Max. 637, 641; 8 Taunt. 313; 2 Jones, Eq. (N. C.) 72.

Veritas, quæ minime defensatur opprimitur; et qui non improbat, approbat. 3 Inst. 27. Truth which is not sufficiently defended is overpowered; and he who does not disapprove, approves.

Veritatem qui non libere pronunciat proditor est veritatis. 4 Inst. Epil. He who does not freely speak the truth is a betrayer of truth.

VERITY. Truth; truthfulness; conformity to fact. The records of a court "import uncontrollable verity." 1 Black, Judgm. § 276.

VERNA. Lat. In the civil law. A slave born in his master's house.

VERSARI. Lat. In the civil law. To be employed; to be conversant. Versari male in tutela, to misconduct one's self in a guardianship. Calvin.

VERSUS. Lat. Against. In the title of a cause, the name of the plaintiff is put first, followed by the word "versus," then the defendant's name. Thus, "Fletcher versus Peck," or "Fletcher against Peck." The word is commonly abbreviated "vs." or "v." Vs. and versus have become ingrafted upon the English language; their meaning is as well understood and their use quite as appropriate as the word against could be. Smith v. Butler, 25 N. H. 523.

VERT. Everything bearing green leaves in a forest. Manwood, For. Law 146.

Also that power which a man has, by royal grant, to cut green wood in a forest.

In heraldry, green color, called "venus" in the arms of princes, and "emerald" in those of peers, and expressed in engravings by lines in bend. Wharton.

VERUS. Lat. True; truthful; genuine; actual; real; just.

VERY. In a high degree; to no small extent; exceedingly; extremely. Shriver v. Union Stockyards Nat. Bank, 117 Kan. 638, 232 P. 1062, 1066.

VERY LORD AND VERY TENANT. They that are immediate lord and tenant one to another. Cowell.

VESSEL. A ship, brig, sloop, or other craft used in navigation. The word in its broadest sense is more comprehensive than "ship."

Any structure which is made to float upon the water, for purposes of commerce or war, whether impelled by wind, steam, or oars. Chaffe v. Ludeling, 27 La. Ann. 607.

Every description of water craft or other contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation in water or in water and in air. Act Sept. 21, 1922, c. 356 (19 USCA § 231).

Every description of water-craft or other artificial contrivances used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water. Rev. St. U. S. § 3 (1 USCA § 3). Under this definition, the term has been held to include a large dredging barge, having no propelling power, but capable of being towed at sea; City of Los Angeles v. United Dredging Co. (C. C. A.) 14 F.(2d) 364, 365; and likewise a house boat, not permanently attached to the shore, though without motive power; The Ark (D. C.) 17 F.(2d) 446, 447; but not a wharfboat, secured to the shore by cables and used as an office, warehouse, and wharf, and having water and electric light connections and telephone system; Evansville & Bowling Green Packet Co. v. Chero Cola Bottling Co., 271 U. S. 19, 46 S. Ct. 379, 380, 70 L. Ed. 805; nor a dry dock used for the repair of vessels, though capable of being floated and towed from place to place; Berton v. Tietjen & Lang Dry Dock Co. (D. C.) 219 F. 763, 771.

As used in various other statutes, the word "vessel" has been held applicable to a ferryboat; Port Huron & Sarnia Ferry Co. v. Lawson (D. C.) 292 F. 216, 219; a pile driver scow; George Leary Const. Co. v. Matson (C. C. A.) 272 F. 461, 462; a derrick boat, carrying a derrick used for loading logs from the river bank upon boats; Patton-Tully Transp. Co. v. Turner (C. C. A.) 269 F. 334, 336; a hydro-aeroplane while moving on the water; Reinhardt v. Newport Flying Service Corporation, 232 N. Y. 115, 133 N. E. 37, 372, 18 A. L. R. 1324; and even to a log raft; The Libby Maine (D. C.) 3 F.(2d) 79, 80. The term is broad enough to include a vessel's tackle, apparel, furniture, chronometer and appurtenances. The Frolic (D. C.) 148 F. 921.

The word has also been held to include a new ship as soon as its hull has been launched; The Pinthis (C. C. A.) 286 F. 122; and any structure which is so far completed as to be capable of being used as a means of transportation on water; R. R. Ricou & Sons Co. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. (C. C. A.) 11 F.(2d) 103, 104; but not an old hull built of timber taken from an old dry dock; The Dredge A (D. C.) 217 F. 617, 630. Contra, Moore v. Underwriters (C. C.) 14 F. 236.

The words "boat," "craft," and "water craft" are usually applied to small vessels, while larger vessels, especially in the case of large iron steamships, are usually referred to by the term "steamer," or "steamship," or "vessel." The Saxon (D. C.) 269 F. 639, 641.

A utensil, such as a bottle, designed to hold liquids, etc. Old Tavern Farm v. Fickett, 125 Me. 123, 131 A. 305, 306.

Foreign Vessel

A vessel owned by residents in, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. "Foreign vessel," under the embargo act of January, 1808, means a vessel under the flag of a foreign power, and not a vessel in which foreigners domiciled in the United States have an interest. The Sally, 1 Gall. 58, Fed. Cas. No. 12,257.

Public Vessel

One owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise.

VEST. To accrue to; to be fixed; to take effect; to give a fixed and indefeasible right.

It may denote either a vesting in interest or a vesting in possession. Busick v. Busick, 65 Ind. App. 655, 115 N. E. 1025, 1029. An estate is vested in possession when there exists a right of present enjoyment; and an estate is vested in interest when there is a present fixed right of future enjoyment. Fearnle, Rem. 2; Butler v. Sherwood, 114 Misc. 483, 186 N. Y. S. 712, 714; Schee v. Boone, 295 Mo. 212, 243 S. W. 882, 885; State v. Welch's Estate, 235 Mich. 555, 209 N. W. 930, 934; Ziegler v. Love, 185 N. C. 40, 115 S. E. 887, 888; Hignett v. Sherman, 75 Colo. 64, 224 P. 411, 415; Gray v. Shinn, 293 Ill. 573, 127 N. E. 755, 758; In re Neel's Estate, 252 Pa. 394, 97 A. 502, 504.

The normal sense of the word is to indicate a present and immediate interest, as distinguished from one that is contingent. In re Stocker's Estate, 260 Pa. 385, 103 A. 885, 886; Class v. Strack, 85 N. J. Eq. 319, 96 A. 405, 406; Snortum v. Snortum, 155 Minn. 230, 193 N. W. 304, 305; Crawford v. Carlisle, 206 Ala. 379, 89 So. 565, 571.

To clothe with possession; to deliver full possession of land or of an estate; to give seisin; to enfeoff. Spelman.

VESTA. The crop on the ground. Cowell.

VESTED. Fixed; accrued; settled; absolute. Orthwein v. Germania Life Ins. Co. of City of New York, 261 Mo. 650, 170 S. W. 885, 888. Having the character or giving the rights of absolute ownership; not contingent; not subject to be defeated by a condition precedent. See Scott v. West, 63 Wis. 529, 24 N. W. 161; McGillis v. McGillis, 11 App. Div. 359, 42 N. Y. S. 924; Smith v. Proskoy, 39 Misc. 385, 79 N. Y. S. 851.

VESTED DEVISE. See Devise.

VESTED ESTATE. An interest clothed with a present, legal, and existing right of alienation. Anderson v. Menefee (Tex. Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 904, 908. Any estate, property, or interest is called "vested," whether in possession or not, which is not subject to any condition precedent and unperformed. The interest may be either a present and immediate interest, or it may be a future but uncontingent, and therefore transmissible, interest. Brown. See Taylor v. Gould, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 388; Flanner v. Fellows, 206 Ill. 136, 68 N. E. 1057; Tindall v. Tindall, 167 Mo. 218, 66 S. W. 1092; Ward v. Edge, 100 Ky. 757, 39 S. W. 440. A vested estate, whether present or future, may be absolutely or defeasibly vested. L'Etourneau v. Henquet, 89 Mich. 428, 50 N. W. 1077, 28 Am. St. Rep. 310. If a present right exists to future possession, the estate is "vested," even though actual possession may be defeated by a future event. Wheaton Coal Co. v. Harris, 288 Pa. 294, 135 A. 637, 638. See, also, Vest.

VESTED IN INTEREST. A legal term applied to a present fixed right of future enjoyment; as reversions, vested remainders, such executory devises, future uses, conditional limitations, and other future interests as are not referred to, or made to depend on, a period or event that is uncertain. Wharton. See Smith v. West, 103 Ill. 337; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 466; Gates v. Seibert, 157 Mo. 254, 57 S. W. 1065, 80 Am. St. Rep. 625.

VESTED IN POSSESSION. A legal term applied to a right of present enjoyment actually existing. See Vest.

VESTED INTEREST. A present right or title to a thing, which carries with it an existing right of alienation, even though the right to possession or enjoyment may be postponed to some uncertain time in the future, as distinguished from a future right, which may never materialize or ripen into title, and it matters not how long or for what length of time the future possession or right of enjoyment may be postponed, if the present right exists to alienate and pass title. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Tiffany, 202 Ky. 618, 260 S. W. 357, 359. A future interest not dependent on an uncertain period or event, or a fixed present right of future enjoyment. In re Whiting (D. C.) 3 F.(2d) 440, 441; McManus v. Peerless Casualty Co., 114 Me. 98, 95 A. 510. It is not the uncertainty of enjoyment in the future, but the uncertainty of the right of enjoyment, which makes the difference between a "vested" and a "contingent" interest. Mahoney v. Mahoney, 98 Conn. 525, 120 A. 342, 345. A future interest is vested when there is a person in being who would have a right, defeasible or indefeasible, to the immediate possession of the property, upon the ceasing of the intermediate or precedent interest. Civil Code Cal. § 694. See Allison v. Allison, 101 Va. 537, 44 S. E. 904, 63 L. R. A. 920; Hawkins v. Bohling, 168 Ill. 214, 48 N. E. 94; Stewart v. Harriman, 56 N. H. 25, 22 Am. Rep. 408; Bunting v. Speek, 41 Kan. 424, 21 P. 288, 3 L. R. A. 690.

VESTED LEGACY. A legacy given in such terms that there is a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. In re Central Union Trust Co. of New York, 183 N. Y. S. 671, 673, 193 App. Div. 292. A legacy payable at a future time, certain to arrive, and not subject to conditions precedent, is vested, where there is a person in esse at the testator's death capable of taking when the time arrives, though his interest may be altogether defeated by his own death. In re Marshall's Estate, 262 Pa. 145, 105 A. 63, 64. A legacy is said to be vested when the words of the testator making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee in the legacy. Thus a legacy to one to be paid when he attains the age of twenty-one years is a vested legacy, because it is given unconditionally and absolutely, and therefore vests an immediate interest in the legatee, of which the enjoyment only is deferred or postponed. Brown. See Magoffin v. Patton, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 113; Talmadge v. Seaman, 85 Hun. 242, 32 N. Y. S. 906; Rubencane v. McKee, 6 A. 639, 6 Del. Ch. 40.

VESTED REMAINDER. See Remainder.

VESTED RIGHTS. In constitutional law. Rights which have so completely and definitely accrued to or settled in a person that they are not subject to be defeated or canceled by the act of any other private person, and which it is right and equitable that the government should recognize and protect, as being lawful in themselves, and settled according to the then current rules of law, and of which the individual could not be deprived arbitrarily without injustice, or of which he could not justly be deprived otherwise than by the established methods of procedure and for the public welfare. See Cassard v. Tracy, 52 La. Ann. 835, 27 So. 368, 49 L. R. A. 272; Stimson Land Co. v. Rawson (C. C.) 62 F. 429; Grinder v. Nelson, 9 Gill. (Md.) 309, 52 Am. Dec. 694; Moore v. State, 43 N. J. Law, 243, 39 Am. Rep. 558; Board of Com'rs of Everglades Drainage Dist. v. Forbes Pioneer Boat Line, 80 Fla. 252, 86 So. 199, 202; McDonald v. McDonald, 212 Ala. 137, 102 So. 38, 41, 36 A. L. R. 761; Parker v. Schrimsher (Tex. Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 165, 168. A right is not "vested" unless it is more than a mere expectation based on the anticipated continuance of present laws; it must be an established interest in property, not open to doubt. Leach v. Commercial Sav. Bank of Des Moines, 205 Iowa 1154, 213 N. W. 517, 521; McCutcheon & Church v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 831, 834. To be vested in its accurate legal sense, a right must be complete and consummated, and one of which the person to whom it belongs cannot be divested without his consent. Merchants' Bank v. Garrard, 158 Ga. 867, 124 S. E. 715, 717, 38 A. L. R. 102; Jennings v. Capen, 321 Ill. 291, 151 N. E. 900, 902. Rights are vested when the right to enjoyment, present or prospective, has become the property of some particular person or persons as a present interest. They are expectant, when they depend upon the continued existence of the present condition of things until the happening of some future event. They are contingent when they are only to come into existence on an event or condition which may not happen or be performed until some other event may prevent their vesting. Avery v. Curtiss, 108 Okl. 154, 235 P. 195, 197; Wirtz v. Nestos, 51 N. D. 603, 200 N. W. 524, 530; U. S. v. Heinrich (D. C.) 12 F.(2d) 938, 940; Arnold & Murdock Co. v.

Industrial Commission, 314 Ill. 251, 145 N. E. 342, 344, 40 A. L. R. 1470. A "vested right" is an immediate fixed right of present or future enjoyment, or an immediate right of present enjoyment, or present fixed right of future enjoyment. Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co. (C. C. A.) 233 F. 861, 867; Steinfeld v. Nielsen, 15 Ariz. 424, 139 P. 879, 896; City of Chicago v. Collin, 302 Ill. 270, 134 N. E. 751, 752.

VESTIGIAL WORDS. Those contained in a statute which by reason of a succession of statutes on the same subject-matter, amending or modifying previous provisions of the same, are rendered useless or meaningless by such amendments. They should not be permitted to defeat the fair meaning of the statute. Saltonstall v. Birtwell, 164 U. S. 70, 17 S. Ct. 19, 41 L. Ed. 348.

VESTIGIUM. Lat. In the law of evidence, a vestige, mark, or sign; a trace, track, or impression left by a physical object. Fleta, l. 1, c. 25, § 6.

VESTING ORDER. In English law. An order which may be granted by the chancery division of the high court of justice, (and formerly by chancery,) passing the legal estate in lieu of a conveyance. Commissioners also, under modern statutes, have similar powers. St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55; Wharton.

VESTRY. In ecclesiastical law. The place in a church where the priest's vestures are deposited. Also an assembly of the minister, church-wardens, and parishioners, usually held in the vestry of the church, or in a building called a "vestry-hall," to act upon business of the church. Mozley & Whitley.

VESTRY CESS. A rate levied in Ireland for parochial purposes, abolished by St. 27 Vict. c. 17.

VESTRY-CLERK. An officer appointed to attend vestries, and take an account of their proceedings, etc.

VESTRY-MEN. A select number of parishioners elected in large and populous parishes to take care of the concerns of the parish; so called because they used ordinarily to meet in the vestry of the church. Cowell.

VESTURA. A crop of grass or corn. Also a garment; metaphorically applied to a possession or seisin.

VESTURA TERRÆ. In old English law. The vesture of the land; that is, the corn, grass, underwood, sweepage, and the like. Co. Litt. 4b. See Simpson v. Coe, 4 N. H. 301.

VESTURE. In old English law. Profit of land. "How much the vesture of an acre is worth." Cowell.

VESTURE OF LAND. A phrase including all things, trees excepted, which grow upon the surface of the land, and clothe it externally. Ham. N. P. 151.

VETERA STATUTA. Lat. Ancient statutes. The English statutes from Magna Charta to the end of the reign of Edward II. are so called; those from the beginning of the reign of Edward III. being contradistinguished by the appellation of "Nova Statuta." 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 85.

VETERINARIAN. One who practices the art of treating diseases and injuries of domestic animals, surgically or medically. Tucker v. Williamson (D. C.) 229 F. 201, 210.

VETITUM NAMIUM. L. Lat. Where the bailiff of a lord distrains beasts or goods of another, and the lord forbids the bailiff to deliver them when the sheriff comes to make replevin, the owner of the cattle may demand satisfaction in placitum de vetito namio. 2 Inst. 140; 2 Bl. Comm. 148.

VETO (Lat. I forbid). The refusal of assent by the executive officer whose assent is necessary to perfect a law which has been passed by the legislative body, and the message which is usually sent to such body by the executive, stating such refusal and the reasons therefor. It is either absolute or qualified, according as the effect of its exercise is either to destroy the bill finally, or to prevent its becoming law unless again passed by a stated proportion of votes or with other formalities. Or the veto may be merely suspensive. See People v. Board of Councilmen (Super. Buff.) 20 N. Y. Supp. 51.

Pocket Veto

Non-approval of a legislative act by the president or state governor, with the result that it fails to become a law, not by a written disapproval, (a veto in the ordinary form,) but by remaining silent until the adjournment of the legislative body, when that adjournment takes place before the expiration of the period allowed by the constitution for the examination of the bill by the executive.

VETUS JUS. Lat. The old law. A term used in the civil law, sometimes to designate the law of the Twelve Tables, and sometimes merely a law which was in force previous to the passage of a subsequent law. Calvin.

VEX. To harrass, disquiet, annoy; as by repeated litigation upon the same facts.

VEXARI. Lat. To be harrassed, vexed, or annoyed; to be prosecuted; as in the maxim, Nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa, no one should be twice prosecuted for one and the same cause.

VEXATA QUÆSTIO. Lat. A vexed question; a question often agitated or discussed, but not determined or settled; a question or point which has been differently determined, and so left doubtful. 7 Coke, 450; 3 Burrows, 1547.

VEXATION. The injury or damage which is suffered in consequence of the tricks of another.

VEXATIOUS. A proceeding is said to be vexatious when the party bringing it is not acting bona fide, and merely wishes to annoy or embarrass his opponent, or when it is not calculated to lead to any practical result. Such a proceeding is often described as "frivolous and vexatious," and the court may stay it on that ground. Sweet.

VEXATIOUS ACTIONS ACT. An act of parliament of 1896, authorizing the High Court to make an order, on the application of the attorney-general, that a person shown to be habitually and vexatiously litigious, without reasonable ground, shall not institute legal proceedings in that or any other court, without leave of the High Court judge thereof, upon satisfactory proof that such legal proceedings are not an abuse of the process of the court and that there is a prima facie ground therefor. The order when made is published in the Gazette. See 76 L. T. 351; [1913] W. N. 274 (Div. Ct.).

VEXED QUESTION. A question or point of law often discussed or agitated, but not determined or settled.

VI AUT CLAM. Lat. In the civil law. By force or covertly. Dig. 43, 24.

VI BONORUM RAPTORUM. Lat. In the civil law. Of goods taken away by force. The name of an action given by the prætor as a remedy for the violent taking of another's property. Inst. 4, 2; Dig. 47, 8.

VI ET ARMIS. Lat. With force and arms. See Trespass.

VIA. Lat.

In the Civil Law

Way; a road; a right of way. The right of walking, riding, and driving over another's land. Inst. 2, 3, pr. A species of rural servitude, which included iter (a footpath) and actus, (a driftway.)

In old English law

A way; a public road; a foot, horse, and cart way. Co. Litt. 56a.

Via antiqua via est tuta. The old way is the safe way. Manning v. Manning's Ex'rs, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 527, 530.

VIA ORDINARIA; VIA EXECUTIVA. In the law of Louisiana, the former phrase means in the ordinary way or by ordinary process, the latter means by executory process or in an executory proceeding. A proceeding in a civil action is "ordinary" when a citation takes place and all the delays and forms of law are observed; "executory" when seizure is obtained against the property of the debtor, without previous citation, in virtue of an act or title importing confession of judgment, or in other cases provided by law. Code Prac. La. art. 98.

VIA PUBLICA. In the civil law. A public way or road, the land itself belonging to the public. Dig. 43, 8, 2, 21.

VIA REGIA. In English law. The king's highway for all men. Co. Litt. 56a. The highway or common road, called "the king's" highway, because authorized by him and under his protection. Cowell.

Via trita est tutissima. The trodden path is the safest. Broom, Max. 134; 10 Coke, 142.

VIABILITY. Capability of living. A term used to denote the power a new-born child possesses of continuing its independent existence.

VIALE. Capable of life. This term is applied to a newly-born infant, and especially to one prematurely born, which is not only born alive, but in such a state of organic development as to make possible the continuance of its life.

VIAE SERVITUS. Lat. A right of way over another's land.

VIAGÈRE RENTE. In French law. A rent-charge or annuity payable for the life of the annuitant.

VIANDER. In old English law. A returning officer. 7 Mod. 13.

VIATOR. Lat. In Roman law. A summoner or apparitor; an officer who attended on the tribunes and ædiles.

VICAR. One who performs the functions of another; a substitute. Also the incumbent of an appropriated or impropriated ecclesiastical benefice, as distinguished from the incumbent of a non-appropriated benefice, who is called a "rector." Wharton. See Pinder v. Barr, 4 El. & Bl. 115.

VICAR GENERAL. An ecclesiastical officer who assists the archbishop in the discharge of his office.

VICARAGE. In English ecclesiastical law. The living or benefice of a vicar, as a parsonage is of a parson. 1 Bl. Comm. 387, 388.

VICARIAL TITHES. Petty or small tithes payable to the vicar. 2 Steph. Comm. 681.

VICARIO, etc. An ancient writ for a spiritual person imprisoned, upon forfeiture of a recognizance, etc. Reg. Orig. 147.

VICARIUS APOSTOLICUS. An officer through whom the Pope exercises authority in parts remote, and who is sometimes sent with episcopal functions into provinces where there is no bishop resident or there has been a long vacancy in the see, or into infidel or heretical countries. 2 Phill. Int. L. 529.

Vicarius non habet vicarium. A deputy has not [cannot have] a deputy. A delegated power cannot be again delegated. Broom, Max. 839.

VICE. A fault, defect, or imperfection. In the civil law, redhibitory vices are such faults or imperfections in the subject-matter of a sale as will give the purchaser the right to return the article and demand back the price.

VICE. Lat. In the place or stead. Vice mea, in my place.

—Vice-admiral. An officer in the navy next in rank after the admiral.

—Vice-admiral of the coast. A county officer in England appointed by the admiral "to be answerable to the high admiral for all the coasts of the sea, when need and occasion shall be." He also had power to arrest ships, when found within a certain district, for the use of the king. His office was judicial as well as ministerial. The appointment to the office is still made for a few countries of England.

—Vice-admiralty courts. In English law. Courts established in the king's possessions beyond the seas, with jurisdiction over maritime causes, including those relating to prize. 3 Steph. Comm. 435; 3 Bl. Comm. 69.

—Vice-chamberlain. A great officer under the lord chamberlain, who, in the absence of the lord chamberlain, has the control and command of the officers appertaining to that part of the royal household which is called the "chamber." Cowell.

—Vice-chancellor. See Chancellor.

—Vice-comes. A title formerly bestowed on the sheriff of a county, when he was regarded as the deputy of the count or earl. Co. Litt. 168.

—Vice-comitissa. In old English law. A viscountess. Spelman.

—Vice commercial agent. In the consular service of the United States, this is the title of a consular officer who is substituted temporarily to fill the place of a commercial agent when the latter is absent or relieved from duty. Rev. St. U. S. § 1674 (22 USCA § 51).

—Vice-constable of England. An ancient officer in the time of Edward IV.

—Vice consul. In the consular service of the United States this term denotes a consular officer who is substituted temporarily to fill the place of a consul who is absent or relieved from duty. 22 USCA § 51. Schunior v. Russell, 83 Tex. 83, 18 S. W. 484. In international law generally the term designates a commercial agent who acts in the place or stead of a consul or who has charge of a portion of his territory. In old English law, it meant the deputy or substitute of an earl (comes), who was anciently called "consul," answering to the more modern "vice-comes." Burrill.

—Vice-dominus. A sheriff.

—Vice-dominus episcopi. The vicar general or commissary of a bishop. Blount.

—Vice-gerent. A deputy or lieutenant.

—Vice-judex. In old Lombardic law. A deputy judge.

—Vice-marshal. An officer who was appointed to assist the earl marshal.

—Vice-president of the United States. The title of the second officer, in point of rank, in the executive branch of the government of the United States.

—Vice-principal. See Principal.

—Vice versa. Conversely; in inverted order; in reverse manner.

VICE-COMES NON MISIT BREVE. The sheriff hath not sent the writ. The form of continuance on the record after issue and before trial. 7 Mod. 349; 11 Mod. 231.

VICEROY. A person clothed with authority to act in place of the king; hence, the usual title of the governor of a dependency.

VICINAGE. Neighborhood; near dwelling; vicinity. 2 Bl. Comm. 33; Cowell. In modern usage, it means the county where a trial is had, a crime committed, etc. See State v. Crinklaw, 40 Neb. 759, 59 N. W. 370; Convers v. Railway Co., 18 Mich. 468; Taylor v. Gardiner, 11 R. I. 184; Ex parte McNeeley, 36 W. Va. 84, 14 S. E. 436, 15 L. R. A. 226, 32 Am. St. Rep. 831; Commonwealth v. Collins, 268 Pa. 295, 110 A. 738, 739; Ex parte MacDonald, 20 Cal. App. 641, 129 P. 957.

VICINETUM. The neighborhood; vicinage; the venue. Co. Litt. 185b.

Vicini viciniora præsumentur scire. 4 Inst. 173. Persons living in the neighborhood are presumed to know the neighborhood.

VICINITY. Neighborhood; etymologically, by common understanding, it admits of a wider latitude than proximity or contiguity, and may embrace a more extended space than that lying contiguous to the place in question; and, as applied to towns and other territorial divisions, may embrace those not adjacent; Haley v. Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 545; Langley v. Barnstead, 63 N. H. 246; State v. Longley, 119 Me. 535, 112 A. 260, 262; Chandler, Gardner & Williams v. Reynolds, 250 Mass. 309, 145 N. E. 476, 478.

VICIOUS INTROMISSION. In Scotch law. A meddling with the movables of a deceased, without confirmation or probate of his will or other title. Wharton.

VICIS ET VENELLIS MUNDANDIS. An ancient writ against the mayor or bailiff of a town, etc., for the clean keeping of their streets and lanes. Reg. Orig. 267.

VICOUNTIEL, or VICONTIEL. Anything that belongs to the sheriffs, as vicontiel writs; i. e., such as are triable in the sheriff's court. As to vicontiel rents, see St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 99, §§ 12, 13, which places them under the management of the commissioners of the woods and forests. Cowell.

VICOUNTIEL JURISDICTION. That jurisdiction which belongs to the officers of a county; as sheriffs, coroners, etc.

VICTUALLER. In English law. A person authorized by law to keep a house of entertainment for the public; a publican. 9 Adol. & E. 423. One who serves food or drink prepared for consumption on the premises. Friend v. Childs Dining Hall Co., 231 Mass. 65, 120 N. E. 407, 409, 5 A. L. R. 1100.

VICTUALS. Food ready to eat. Friend v. Childs Dining Hall Co., 231 Mass. 65, 120 N. E. 407, 5 A. L. R. 1100.

VICTUS. Lat. In the civil law. Sustenance; support; the means of living.

VIDAME. In French feudal law. Originally, an officer who represented the bishop, as the viscount did the count. In process of time, these dignitaries erected their offices into fiefs, and became feudal nobles, such as the vidame of Chartres, Rheims, etc., continuing to take their titles from the seat of the bishop whom they represented, although the lands held by virtue of their fiefs might be situated elsewhere. Brande; Burrill.

VIDE. Lat. A word of reference. Vide ante, or vide supra, refers to a previous passage, vide post, or vide infra, to a subsequent passage, in a book.

Videbis ea sæpe committi quæ sæpe vindicantur. 3 Inst. Epil. You will see these things frequently committed which are frequently punished.

VIDELICET. Lat. The words "to-wit," or "that is to say," so frequently used in pleading, are technically called the "videlicet" or "scilicet;" and when any fact alleged in pleading is preceded by, or accompanied with these words, such fact is, in the language of the law, said to be "laid under a videlicet." The use of the videlicet is to point out, particularize, or render more specific that which has been previously stated in general language only; also to explain that which is doubtful or obscure. Brown. See Stukeley v. Butler, Hob. 171; Gleason v. McVickar, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 43; Sullivan v. State, 67 Miss. 346, 7 So. 275; Clark v. Employers' Liability Assur. Co., 72 Vt. 458, 48 A. 639; Com. v. Quinlan, 153 Mass. 483, 27 N. E. 8.

Videtur qui surdus et mutus ne potest faire alienation. It seems that a deaf and dumb man cannot alienate. Brower v. Fisher, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 444; Brooke, Abr. "Eschete," pl. 4.

VIDIMUS. An inspeximus, (q. v.) Barring, Ob. St. 5.

VIDUA REGIS. Lat. In old English law. A king's widow. The widow of a tenant in capite. So called, because she was not allowed to marry a second time without the king's permission; obtaining her dower also from the assignment of the king, and having the king for her patron and defender. Spelman.

VIDUITATIS PROFESSIO. Lat. The making a solemn profession to live a sole and chaste woman.

VIDUITY. Widowhood.

VIE. Fr. Life; occurring in the phrases cestui que vie, pur autre vie, etc.

VIEW. The right of prospect; the outlook or prospect from the windows of one's house. A species of urban servitude which prohibits the obstruction of such prospect. 3 Kent, Comm. 448.

We understand by view every opening which may more or less facilitate the means of looking out of a building. Lights are those openings which are made rather for the admission of light than to look out of. Civ. Code La. art. 715.

Also an inspection by the jury previously to the trial of property in controversy, or of a place where a crime has been committed. See Garbarsky v. Simkin, 36 Misc. 195, 73 N. Y. S. 199; Wakefield v. Railroad Co., 63 Me. 385; Lancaster County v. Holyoke, 37 Neb. 328, 55 N. W. 950, 21 L. R. A. 394; Commonwealth v. Dascalakis, 246 Mass. 12, 140 N. E. 470, 477.

VIEW AND DELIVERY. When a right of common is exercisable not over the whole waste, but only in convenient places indicated from time to time by the lord of the manor or his bailiff, it is said to be exercisable after "view and delivery." Elton, Commons, 233.

VIEW, DEMAND OF. In real actions, the defendant was entitled to demand a view, that is, a sight of the thing, in order to ascertain its identity and other circumstances. As, if a real action were brought against a tenant, and such tenant did not exactly know what land it was that the demandant asked, then he might pray the view, which was that he might see the land which the demandant claimed. Brown.

VIEW OF AN INQUEST. A view or inspection taken by a jury, summoned upon an inquisition or inquest, of the place or property to which the inquisition or inquiry refers. Brown.

VIEW OF FRANK-PLEDGE. In English law. An examination to see if every freeman above twelve years of age within the district had taken the oath of allegiance, and found nine freemen pledges for his peaceable demeanor. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 7.

VIEWERS. Persons appointed by a court to make an investigation of certain matters, or to examine a particular locality, (as, the proposed site of a new road,) and to report to the court the result of their inspection, with their opinion on the same.

In Old Practice

Persons appointed under writs of view to testify the view. Rosc. Real Act. 253.

VIF-GAGE. L. Fr. In old English law. A vivum vadum or living pledge, as distinguished from a mortgage or dead pledge. Properly, an estate given as security for a debt, the debt to be satisfied out of the rents, issues, and profits.

VIGIL. In ecclesiastical law. The eve or next day before any solemn feast.

VIGILANCE. Watchfulness; precaution; a proper degree of activity and promptness in pursuing one's rights or guarding them from infraction, or in making or discovering opportunities for the enforcement of one's lawful claims and demands. It is the opposite of laches.

Vigilantibus et non dormientibus jura subveniunt. The laws aid those who are vigilant, not those who sleep upon their rights. 2 Inst. 690; Merchants' Bank of Newburyport, President, etc., of, v. Stevenson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 493; Broom, Max. 892.

VIGOR. Lat. Strength; virtue; force; efficiency. Proprio vigore, by its own force.

VIIS ET MODIS. Lat. In the ecclesiastical courts, service of a decree or citation viis et modis, i. e., by all "ways and means" likely to affect the party with knowledge of its contents, is equivalent to substituted service in the temporal courts, and is opposed to personal service. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 1258, 1283.

VILL. In old English law, this word was used to signify the parts into which a hundred or wapentake was divided. It also signifies a town or city.

Demi-vill

A town consisting of five freemen, or frankpledges. Spelman.

Villa est ex pluribus mansionibus vicinata, et collata ex pluribus vicinis, et sub appellatione villarum continentur burgi et civitates. Co. Litt. 115. Vill is a neighborhood of many mansions, a collection of many neighbors, and under the term of "vills" boroughs and cities are contained.

VILLA REGIA. Lat. In Saxon law. A royal residence. Spelman.

VILLAGE. Any small assemblage of houses for dwellings or business, or both, in the country, whether they are situated upon regularly laid out streets and alleys or not. Hebert v. Lavalle, 27 Ill. 448; People v. Van Nuys Lighting Dist. of Los Angeles County, 173 Cal. 792, 162 P. 97, 98, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 255; State v. Booth, 169 Iowa, 143, 149 N. W. 244, 245. The houses comprising the village must be reasonably contiguous to each other. State v. County Com'rs of McKinley County, 20 N. M. 67, 145 P. 1083, 1085, L. R. A. 1915C, 898.

In some states, this is the legal description of a class of municipal corporations of smaller population than "cities" and having a simpler form of government, and corresponding to "towns" and "boroughs," as these terms are employed elsewhere.

VILLAIN. An opprobrious epithet, implying great moral delinquency, and equivalent to knave, rascal, or scoundrel. The word is libelous. 1 Bos. & P. 331.

VILLANIS REGIS SUBTRACTIS REDUCENDIS. A writ that lay for the bringing back of the king's bondmen, that had been carried away by others out of his manors whereto they belonged. Reg. Orig. 87.

VILLANUM SERVITIUM. In old English law. Villein service. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 13, § 1.

VILLEIN. A person attached to a manor, who was substantially in the condition of a slave, who performed the base and servile work upon the manor for the lord, and was, in most respects, a subject of property belonging to him. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 26.

VILLEIN IN GROSS. A villein who was annexed to the person of the lord, and transferable by deed from one owner to another. 2 Bl. Comm. 93.

VILLEIN REGARDANT. A villein annexed to the manor of land; a serf.

VILLEIN SERVICES. Base services, such as villeins performed. 2 Bl. Comm. 93. They were not, however, exclusively confined to villeins, since they might be performed by freemen, without impairing their free condition. Bract. fol. 24b.

VILLEIN SOCAGE. In feudal and old English law. A species of tenure in which the services to be rendered were certain and determinate, but were of a base or servile nature; i. e., not suitable to a man of free and honorable rank. This was also called "privileged villeinage," to distinguish it from "pure villeinage," in which the services were not certain, but the tenant was obliged to do whatever he was commanded. 2 Bl. Comm. 61.

VILLENAGE. A servile kind of tenure belonging to lands or tenements, whereby the tenant was bound to do all such services as the lord commanded, or were fit for a villein to do. Cowell. See Villein.

Pure Villenage

A base tenure, where a man holds upon terms of doing whatsoever is commanded of him, nor knows in the evening what is to be done in the morning, and is always bound to an uncertain service. 1 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 188.

VILLENOUS JUDGMENT. A judgment which deprived one of his libera lex, whereby he was discredited and disabled as a juror or witness; forfeited his goods and chattels and lands for life; wasted the lands, razed the houses, rooted up the trees, and committed his body to prison. It has become obsolete. 4 Bl. Comm. 136; 4 Steph. Comm. 230; 4 Broom & H. Comm. 153. Wharton.

Vim vi repellere licet, modo fiat moderamine inculpatæ tutelæ, non ad sumendam vindictam, sed ad propulsandam injuriam. It is lawful to repel force by force, provided it be done with the moderation of blameless defense, not for the purpose of taking revenge, but to ward off injury. Co. Litt. 162a.

VINAGIUM: A payment of a certain quantity of wine instead of rent for a vineyard. 2 Mon. Ang. p. 980.

VINCULACION. In Spanish law. An entail. Schm. Civil Law, 308.

VINCULO. In Spanish law. The bond, chain, or tie of marriage. White, New Recop, b. 1, tit. 6, c. 1, § 2.

VINCULO MATRIMONII. See A Vinculo Matrimonii; Divorce.

VINCULUM JURIS. Lat. In the Roman law, an obligation is defined as a vinculum juris, i. e., "a bond of law," whereby one party becomes or is bound to another to do something according to law.

VINDEX. Lat. In the civil law. A defender.

VINDICARE. Lat. In the civil law. To claim, or challenge; to demand one's own; to assert a right in or to a thing; to assert or claim a property in a thing; to claim a thing as one's own. Calvin.

VINDICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. The claiming a thing as one's own; the asserting of a right or title in or to a thing.

VINDICATORY PARTS OF LAWS. The sanction of the laws, whereby it is signified what evil or penalty shall be incurred by such as commit any public wrongs, and transgress or neglect their duty. 1 Steph. Comm. 37.

VINDICTA. In Roman law. A rod or wand; and, from the use of that instrument in their course, various legal acts came to be distinguished by the term; e. g., one of the three ancient modes of manumission was by the vindicta; also the rod or wand intervened in the progress of the old action of vindicatio, whence the name of that action. Brown.

VINDICTIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

VINOUS LIQUORS. This term includes all alcoholic beverages made from the juice of the grape by the process of fermentation, and perhaps similar liquors made from apples and from some species of berries; but not pure alcohol nor distilled liquors nor malt liquors such as beer and ale. See Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 23; Reyfelt v. State, 73 Miss. 415, 18 So. 925; Lemly v. State, 70 Miss. 241, 12 So. 22, 20 L. R. A. 645; Com. v. Reyburg, 122 Pa. 299, 16 A. 351, 2 L. R. A. 415; Feldman v. Morrison, 1 Ill. App. 462; Hinton v. State, 132 Ala. 29, 31 So. 563.

VINTNER. One who sells wine. A covenant prohibiting the trade of a vintner includes a person selling wines not to be drunk on the premises. 25 L. T. (N. S.) 312.

VIOL. Fr. In French law. Rape. Barring, Ob. St. 139.

VIOLATION. Injury; infringement; breach of right, duty or law; ravishment; seduction. The statute 25 Edw. III. St. 5, c. 2, enacts that any person who shall violqte the king's companion shall be guilty of high treason.

VIOLENCE. The abuse of force. That force which is employed against common right, against the laws, and against public liberty. Merl. Répert.

Violence is synonymous with physical force, and the two are used interchangeably, in relation to assaults, by elementary writers on criminal law. State v. Wells, 31 Conn. 212. See Agee v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, Limited, of London, Eng., 213 Mo. App. 693, 253 S. W. 46, 48; People v. Ruthenberg, 229 Mich. 315, 201 N. W. 358, 361.

VIOLENT. Characterized or caused by violence; severe; assailing the person (and metaphorically, the mind) with a great degree of force.

VIOLENT DEATH. Death caused by violent external means, as distinguished from natural death, caused by disease or the wasting of the vital forces.

VIOLENT PRESUMPTION. In the law of evidence. Proof of a fact by the proof of circumstances which necessarily attend it. 3 Bl. Comm. 371. Violent presumption is many times equal to full proof. Id. See Davis v.

Curry, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 239; Shealy v. Edwards, 75 Ala. 419.

VIOLENT PROFITS. Mesne profits in Scotland. "They are so called because due on the tenant's forcible or unwarrantable detaining the possession after he ought to have removed." Ersk. Inst. 2, 6, 54; Bell.

Violenta præsumptio aliquando est plena probatio. Co. Litt. 6b. Violent presumption is sometimes full proof.

VIOLENTLY. By the use of force; forcibly; with violence. The term is used in indictments for certain offenses. State v. Blake, 39 Me. 324; State v. Williams, 32 La. Ann. 337, 36 Am. Rep. 272; Craig v. State, 157 Ind. 574, 62 N. E. 5; State v. Crawford, 60 Utah, 6, 206 P. 717, 718.

Viperina est expositio quæ corrodit viscera textus. 11 Coke, 34. It is a poisonous exposition which destroys the vitals of the text.

VIR. Lat. A man, especially as marking the sex. In the Latin phrases and maxims of the old English law, this word generally means "husband," the expression vir et uxor corresponding to the law French baron et feme.

Vir et uxor censentur in lege una persona. Jenk. Cent. 27. Husband and wife are considered one person in law.

Vir et uxor sunt quasi unica persona, quia caro et sanguis unus; res licet sit propria uxoris, vir famen ejus custos, cum sit caput mulieris. Co. Litt. 112. Man and wife are, as it were, one person, because only one flesh and blood; although the property may be the wife's, the husband is keeper of it, since he is the head of the wife.

Vir militans Deo non implicetur secularibus negotiis. Co. Litt. 70. A man fighting for God must not be involved in secular business.

VIRES. Lat. (The plural of "vis.") Powers; forces; capabilities; natural powers; powers granted or limited. See Ultra Vires.

Vires acquirit eundo. It gains strength by continuance. Mann v. Mann's Ex'rs, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 231, 237.

VIRGA. In old English law. A rod or staff; a rod or ensign of office. Cowell.

VIRGA TERRÆ, (or VIRGATA TERRÆ.) In old English law. A yard-land; a measure of land of variable quantity, containing in some places twenty, in others twenty-four, in others thirty, and in others forty, acres. Cowell; Co. Litt. 5a.

VIRGATA. A quarter of an acre of land. It might also be used to express a quarter of a hide of land.

VIRGATA REGIA. In old English law. The verge; the bounds of the king's household, within which the court of the steward had jurisdiction. Crabb, Eng. Law, 185.

VIRGATE. A yard-land.

VIRGE, TENANT BY. A species of copyholder, who holds by the virge or rod.

VIRGO INTACTA. Lat. A pure virgin.

VIRIDARIO ELIGENDO. A writ for choice of a verderer in the forest. Reg. Orig. 177.

VIRILIA. The privy members of a man, to cut off which was felony by the common law, though the party consented to it. Bract. l. 3, 144; Cowell.

VIRTUE. The phrase "by virtue" differs in meaning from "under color."

Acts done "virtute officii" are those within the authority of the officer, when properly performed, but which are performed improperly; acts done "colore officii" are those which are entirely outside or beyond the authority conferred by the office. Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco v. Smith, 42 Idaho, 224, 244 P. 1102, 1104. For instance, the proper fees are received by virtue of the office; extortion is under color of the office. Phil. Law, 380.

VIRTUOUS. A woman is a "virtuous female" if her body be pure and if she has never had sexual intercourse with another, though both her mind and heart be impure. Thomas v. State, 19 Ga. App. 104, 91 S. E. 247, 250.

VIRTUTE CUJUS. Lat. By virtue whereof. This was the clause in a pleading justifying an entry upon land, by which the party alleged that it was in virtue of an order from one entitled that he entered. Wharton.

VIRTUTE OFFICII. Lat. By virtue of his office. By the authority vested in him as the incumbent of the particular office.

VIS. Lat. Any kind of force, violence, or disturbance relating to a man's person or his property.

VIS ARMATA. In the civil and old English law. Armed force; force exerted by means of arms or weapons.

VIS CLANDESTINA. In old English law. Clandestine force; such as is used by night. Bract. fol. 162.

VIS COMPULSIVA. In the civil and old English law. Compulsive force; that which is exerted to compel another to do an act against his will; force exerted by menaces or terror.

VIS DIVINA. In the civil law. Divine or superhuman force; the act of God.

VIS ET METUS. In Scotch law. Force and fear. Bell.

VIS EXPULSIVA. In old English law. Expulsive force; force used to expel another, or put him out of his possession. Bracton contrasts it with "vis simplex," and divides it into expulsive force with arms, and expulsive force without arms. Bract. fol. 162.

VIS EXTURBATIVA. In the civil law. Exturbative force; force used to thrust out another. Force used between two contending claimants of possession, the one endeavoring to thrust out the other. Calvin.

VIS FLUMINIS. In the civil law. The force of a river; the force exerted by a stream or current; water-power.

VIS IMPRESSA. The original act of force out of which an injury arises, as distinguished from "vis proxima," the proximate force, or immediate cause of the injury. 2 Greenl. Ev. § 224.

VIS INERMIS. In old English law. Unarmed force; the opposite of "vis armata." Bract. fol. 162.

VIS INJURIOSA. In old English law. Wrongful force; otherwise called "illicita," (unlawful.) Bract. fol. 162.

VIS INQUIETATIVA. In the civil law. Disquieting force. Calvin. Bracton defines it to be where one does not permit another to use his possession quietly and in peace. Bract. fol. 162.

VIS LAICA. In old English law. Lay force; an armed force used to hold possession of a church. Reg. Orig. 59, 60.

Vis legibus est inimica. 3 Inst. 176. Violence is inimical to the laws.

VIS LICITA. In old English law. Lawful force. Bract. fol. 162.

VIS MAJOR. A greater or superior force; an irresistible force. A loss by vis major is one that results immediately from a natural cause without the intervention of man, and could not have been prevented by the exercise of prudence, diligence, and care. The George Shiras, 61 F. 300, 9 C. C. A. 511, 17 U. S. App. 528; Brousseau v. The Hudson, 11 La. Ann. 428; Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. Div. 437. A natural and inevitable necessity, and one arising wholly above the control of human agencies, and which occurs independently of human action or neglect. The Adventuress (D. C.) 214 F. 834, 839. In the civil law, this term is sometimes used as synonymous with "vis divina," or the act of God. Calvin.

VIS PERTURBATIVA. In old English law. Force used between parties contending for a possession.

VIS PROXIMA. Immediate force. See Vis Impressa.

VIS SIMPLEX. In old English law. Simple or mere force. Distinguished by Bracton from "vis armata," and also from "vis expulsiva." Bract. fol. 162.

VISA. An official indorsement upon a document, passport, commercial book, etc., to certify that it has been examined and found correct or in due form. See also Visé.

VISCOUNT. A decree of English nobility, next below that of earl.

An old title of the sheriff.

VISÉ. An indorsement made on a passport by the proper authorities, denoting that it has been examined, and that the person who bears it is permitted to proceed on his journey. Webster. See also Visa.

VISIBLE. Perceptible, discernible, clear, distinct, evident, open, conspicuous. Mutual Trust & Deposit Co. v. Travelers' Protective Ass'n of America, 57 Ind. App. 329, 104 N. E. 880, 883; Branch v. State, 73 Tex. Cr. R. 471, 165 S. W. 605, 606.

VISIT. In international law. The right of visit or visitation is the right of a cruiser or war-ship to stop a vessel sailing under another flag on the high seas, and send an officer to such vessel to ascertain whether her nationality is what it purports to be. It is exercisable only when suspicious circumstances attend the vessel to be visited; as when she is suspected of a piratical character.

VISITATION. The act of examining into the affairs of a corporation. Inspection; superintendence; direction; regulation. A power given by law to the founders of all eleemosynary corporations. 2 Kent, Comm. 300-303; 1 Bl. Comm. 480, 481. In England, the visitation of ecclesiastical corporations belongs to the ordinary. Id. See Trustees of Union Baptist Ass'n v. Hunn, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 249, 26 S. W. 755; Allen v. McKean, 1 Fed. Cas. 498; Thompson v. Southern Connellsville Coke Co., 269 Pa. 500, 112 A. 533, 534.

VISITATION BOOKS. In English law. Books compiled by the heralds, when progresses were solemnly and regularly made into every part of the kingdom, to inquire into the state of families, and to register such marriages and descents as were verified to them upon oath; they were allowed to be good evidence of pedigree. 3 Bl. Comm. 105; 3 Steph. Comm. 724.

VISITOR. An inspector of the government of corporations, or bodies politic. 1 Bl. Comm. 482.

Visitor is an inspector of the government of a corporation, etc. The ordinary is visitor of spiritual corporations. But corporations instituted for private charity, if they are lay, are visitable by the founder, or whom he shall appoint; and from the sentence of such visitor there lies no appeal. By implication of law, the founder and his heirs are visitors of lay foundations, if no particular person is appointed by him to see that the charity is not perverted. Jacob.

The term "visitor" is also applied to an official appointed to see and report upon persons found lunatics by inquisition, and to a person appointed by a school board to visit houses and see that parents are complying with the provisions in reference to the education of their children. Mozley & Whitley.

VISITOR OF MANNERS. The regarder's office in the forest. Manw. i. 195.

VISNE. L. Fr. The neighborhood; vicinage; venue. The district from which juries were drawn at common law. Ex parte McNeely, 36 W. Va. 84, 14 S. E. 436, 15 L. R. A. 226, 32 Am. St. Rep. 831; State v. Kemp, 34 Minn. 61, 24 N. W. 349.

VISUS. Lat. In old English practice. View; inspection, either of a place or person.

VITAL STATISTICS. Public records kept by a state, city or other governmental subdivision, under a statutory provision, of births, marriages and deaths, and disease.

VITIATE. To impair; to make void or voidable; to cause to fail of force or effect; to destroy or annul, either entirely or in part, the legal efficacy and binding force of an act or instrument; as when it is said that fraud vitiates a contract.

VITILIGATE. To litigate cavilously, vexatiously, or from merely quarrelsome motives.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION. In Scotch law. An unwarrantable intermeddling with the movable estate of a person deceased, without the order of law. Ersk. Prin. b. 3, tit. 9, § 25. The irregular intermeddling with the effects of a deceased person, which subjects the party to the whole debts of the deceased. 2 Kames, Eq. 327.

VITIMUM CLERICI. In old English law. The mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

Vitium clerici nocere non debet. Jenk. Cent. 23. A clerical error ought not to hurt.

Vitium est quod fugi debet, nisi, rationem non invenias, mox legem sine ratione esse clames. Ellesm. Post. N. 86. It is a fault which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason you should presently exclaim that the law is without reason.

VITIMUM SCRIPTORIS. In old English law. The fault or mistake of a writer or copyist; a clerical error. Gilb. Forum Rom. 185.

VITREOUS. Consisting of or resembling glass in its important characteristics. Vantine & Co. v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cust. App. 291, 292.

VIVA AQUA. Lat. In the civil law. Living water; running water; that which issues from a spring or fountain. Calvin.

VIVA PECUNIA. Lat. Cattle, which obtained this name from being received during the Saxon period as money upon most occasions, at certain regulated prices. Cowell.

VIVA VOCE. Lat. With the living voice; by word of mouth. As applied to the examination of witnesses, this phrase is equivalent to "orally." It is used in contradistinction to evidence on affidavits or depositions. As descriptive of a species of voting, it signifies voting by speech or outcry, as distinguished from voting by a written or printed ballot.

VIVARIUM. Lat. In the civil law. An enclosed place, where live wild animals are kept. Calvin; Spelman.

VIVARY. In English law. A place for keeping wild animals alive, including fishes; a fish pond, park, or warren.

VIVUM VADIUM. See Vadium.

Vix ulla lex fieri potest quæ omnibus commoda sit, sed si majori parti prospiciat, utilis est. Scarcely any law can be made which is adapted to all, but, if it provide for the greater part, it is useful. Plowd. 369.

VIZ. A contraction for videlicet, to-wit, namely, that is to say.

VOCABULA ARTIS. Lat. Words of art; technical terms.

Vocabula artium explicanda sunt secundum definitiones prudentum. Terms of arts are to be explained according to the definitions of the learned or skilled [in such arts.] Bl. Law Tracts, 6.

VOCARE AD CURIAM. In feudal law. To summon to court. Feud. Lib. 2, tit. 22.

VOCATIO IN JUS. Lat. A summoning to court. In the earlier practice of the Roman law, (under the legis actiones), the creditor orally called upon his debtor to go with him before the prætor for the purpose of determining their controversy, saying, "In jus eamus; in jus te voco." This was called "vocatio in jus."

VOCATION. A calling, a systematic employment in an occupation appropriate to the person employed. Miller v. Stevens, 224 Mich. 626, 195 N. W. 481, 482.

VOCIFERATIO. Lat. In old English law. Outcry; hue and cry. Cowell.

VOCIFEROUS. In a statute forbidding the use of loud and vociferous language, making a loud outcry; clamorous; noisy. Webst.; Anderson v. State (Tex. Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 359; Thomason v. State, 98 Tex. Cr. R. 312, 265 S. W. 579.

VOCO. Lat. In the civil and old English law. I call; I summon; I vouch. In jus voco te, I summon you to court; I summon you before the prætor. The formula by which a Roman action was anciently commenced. Adams, Rom. Ant. 242.

VOID. Null; ineffectual; nugatory; having no legal force or binding effect; unable, in law, to support the purpose for which it was intended. McGarry v. Village of Wilmette, 303 Ill. 147, 135 N. E. 96, 98; Mobile County v. Williams, 180 Ala. 639, 61 So. 963, 965.

"Void" seldom implies entire nullity; but is, in a legal sense, subject to large qualifications in view of all the circumstances calling for its application, and the rights and interests to be affected in a given case. Brown v. Brown, 50 N. H. 538, 552. Thus Way v. Root, 174 Mich. 418, 140 N. W. 577, 579. Things are voidable which are valid and effectual until they are avoided by some act, while things are often said to be void which are without validity until confirmed; Toy Toy v. Hopkins, 212 U. S. 542, 29 S. Ct. 416, 53 L. Ed. 644; Unkle v. Wills (C. C. A.) 281 F. 29, 41.

There is this difference between the two words "void" and "voidable:" void in the strict sense, means that an instrument or transaction is nugatory and ineffectual so that nothing can cure it; voidable, when an imperfection or defect can be cured by the act or confirmation of him who could take advantage of it. Wharton. The term "void," however, as applicable to conveyances or other agreements, has not at all times been used with technical precision, nor restricted to its peculiar and limited sense, as contradistinguished from "voidable;" it being frequently introduced, even by legal writers and jurists, when the purpose is nothing further than to indicate that a contract was invalid, and not binding in law. But the distinction between the terms "void" and "voidable," in their application to contracts, is often one of great practical importance; and, whenever entire technical accuracy is required, the term "void" can only be properly applied to those contracts that are of no effect whatsoever, such as are a mere nullity, and incapable of confirmation or ratification. Allis v. Billings, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 415, 39 Am. Dec. 744.

In Statutes

The word "void" is used in statutes in the sense of utterly void so as to be incapable of ratification, and also in the sense of voidable and resort must be had to the rules of construction in many cases to determine in which sense the Legislature intended to use it. An act or contract neither wrong in itself nor against public policy, which has been declared void by statute for the protection or benefit of a certain party, or class of parties, is voidable only. Westerland v. Black Bear Mining Co. (C. C. A.) 203 F. 599, 611; Elerick v. Reed, 113 Okl. 195, 240 P. 1045, 1047, 44 A. L. R. 474; Sherman v. Smith, 185 Iowa, 654, 169 N. W. 216, 217; U. S. v. New York & Porto Rico S. S. Co., 239 U. S. 88, 36 S. Ct. 41, 42, 60 L. Ed. 161.

As to Judgments

The words "void" and "voidable," as applied to a judgment, are not interchangeable; a voidable judgment being subject to validation by subsequent acts, while a void judgment cannot be vitalized by any subsequent action of the parties, but is subject to collateral attack. Owens v. Cocroft, 14 Ga. App. 322, 80 S. E. 906, 907.

As to Marriage

A "void marriage" is one not good for any legal purpose, the invalidity of which may be maintained in any proceeding between any parties, while a "voidable marriage" is one where there is an imperfection which can be inquired into only during the lives of both of the parties in a proceeding to obtain a sentence declaring it void. State v. Smith, 101 S. C. 293, 85 S. E. 958, 959, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 149.

Void in part, void in toto. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 9, 96.

Void things are as no things. People v. Shall, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 778, 784.

VOIDABLE. That may be avoided, or declared void; not absolutely void, or void in itself. Most of the acts of infants are voidable only, and not absolutely void. 2 Kent, Comm. 234. See Void.

VOIDANCE. The act of emptying; ejection from a benefice.

VOIR DIRE. L. Fr. To speak the truth. This phrase denotes the preliminary examination which the court may make of one presented as a witness or juror, where his competency, interest, etc., is objected to.

VOITURE. Fr. Carriage; transportation by carriage.

VOLENS. Lat. Willing. He is said to be willing who either expressly consents or tacitly makes no opposition. Calvin.

Volenti non fit injuria. He who consents cannot receive an injury. Broom, Max. 268, 269, 271, 395; Shelf. Mar. & Div. 449; Wing. Max. 482; 4 Term R. 657. Milliken v. Hedgesheimer, 110 Ohio St. 381, 144 N. E. 264, 266, 33 A. L. R. 53.

Voluit, sed non dixit. He willed, but he did not say. He may have intended so, but he did not say so. A maxim frequently used in the construction of wills, in answer to arguments based upon the supposed intention of a testator. 2 Pow. Dev. 625; 4 Kent, Comm. 538.

VOLUMEN. Lat. In the civil law. A volume; so called from its form, being rolled up.

VOLUMUS. Lat. We will; it is our will. The first word of a clause in the royal writs of protection and letters patent. Cowell.

VOLUNTARIUS DÆMON. A voluntary madman. A term applied by Lord Coke to a drunkard, who has voluntarily contracted madness by intoxication. Co. Litt. 247; 4 Bl. Comm. 25.

VOLUNTARY. Free; without compulsion or solicitation. Thus the voluntary statement of a witness is one not responsive to any question. Weil v. Lynds, 105 Kan. 440, 185 P. 51, 52, 12 A. L. R. 1236.

Produced in or by an act of choice, acting of itself, spontaneous. Hartingh v. Bay Circuit Judge, 176 Mich. 289, 142 N. W. 585, 587, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 520. Resulting from choosing. Travelers' Protective Ass'n v. Jones, 75 Ind. App. 29, 127 N. E. 783, 784.

Done by design or intention; purposed; intended. Federal Sav. & Ins. Co. v. Rager, 75 Ind. App. 295, 128 N. E. 773, 774. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Sweeney v. Sweeney, 96 Vt. 196, 118 A. 882, 26 A. L. R. 1066; Choate v. State, 19 Okl. Cr. 169, 197 P. 1060, 1063. Using the word in a somewhat special sense, it is also said that if the circumstances under which a vessel leaves port are such that it must be known that she will be compelled to deviate for reasons such as shortage of fuel, the deviation is "voluntary." The Malcolm Baxter, Jr. (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 304, 306.

Without consideration; without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. London v. G. L. Anderson Brass Works, 197 Ala. 16, 72 So. 359, 363. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed. Russ v. Blackshear, 88 Fla. 573, 102 So. 749, 750.

As to voluntary "Answer," "Assignment," "Bankruptcy," "Confession," "Conveyance," "Deposit," "Escape," "Indebtedness," "Jurisdiction," "Manslaughter," "Nonsuit," "Oath," "Payment," "Redemption," "Sale," "Settlement," "Trust," and "Waste," see those titles.

VOLUNTARY COURTESY. A voluntary act of kindness; an act of kindness performed by one man towards another, of the free will and inclination of the doer, without any previous request or promise of reward made by him who is the object of the courtesy; from which the law will not imply a promise of remuneration. Holthouse.

VOLUNTARY EXPOSURE TO UNNECESSARY DANGER. An intentional act which reasonable and ordinary prudence would pronounce dangerous. Archibald v. Order of United Commercial Travelers, 117 Me. 418, 104 A. 792, 793; Fédéral Sav. & Ins. Co. v. Rager, 75 Ind. App. 295, 128 N. E. 773, 774. Intentional exposure to unnecessary danger, implying a conscious knowledge of the danger. Empire Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 111 Ga. 413, 81 S. E. 120, 122. The voluntary doing of an act which is not necessary to be done, but which requires exposure to known danger to which one would not be exposed if unnecessary act is not done. Landau v. Travelers'

Ins. Co., 315 Mo. 760, 287 S. W. 346, 351. The term implies a conscious, intentional exposure, something of which one is conscious but willing to take the risk.

VOLUNTARY IGNORANCE. This exists where a party might, by taking reasonable pains, have acquired the necessary knowledge, but has neglected to do so.

VOLUNTAS. Lat. Properly, volition, purpose, or intention, or a design or the feeling or impulse which prompts the commission of an act; but in old English law the term was often used to denote a will, that is, the last will and testament of a decedent, more properly called testamentum.

Voluntas donatoris in charta doni sui manifeste expressa observetur. Co. Litt. 21. The will of the donor manifestly expressed in his deed of gift is to be observed.

Voluntas est justa sententia de eo quod quis post mortem suam fieri velit. A will is an exact opinion or determination concerning that which each one wishes to be done after his death.

Voluntas et propositum distinguunt maleficia. The will and the proposed end distinguish crimes. Bract. fols. 2b, 136b.

Voluntas facit quod in testamento scriptum valeat. Dig. 30, 1, 12, 3. It is intention which gives effect to the wording of a will.

Voluntas in delictis, non exitus spectatur. 2 Inst. 57. In crimes, the will, and not the consequence, is looked to.

Voluntas reputatur pro facto. The intention is to be taken for the deed. 3 Inst. 69; Broom, Max. 311.

Voluntas testatoris est ambulatoria usque ad extremum vitæ exitum. 4 Coke, 61. The will of a testator is ambulatory until the latest moment of life.

Voluntas testatoris habet interpretationem latam et benignam. Jenk. Cent. 260. The intention of a testator has a broad and benignant interpretation.

Voluntas ultima testatoris est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. Co. Litt. 322. The last will of the testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention.

VOLUNTEER. One who gives his services without any express or implied promise of remuneration. Sweet; Seavert v. Cooper, 187 Iowa, 1109, 175 N. W. 19, 21. One who intrudes himself into a matter which does not concern him, or one who pays the debt of another without request, when he is not legally or morally bound to do so, and when he has no interest to protect in making such payment. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Hood (Tex. Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 1120. See Irvine v. Angus, 93 F. 633, 35 C. C. A. 501; Arnold v. Green, 116 N. Y. 566, 23 N. E. 1; Bennett v. Chandler, 199 Ill. 97, 64 N. E. 1052; Welch v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 86 Me. 552, 30 A. 116, 25 L. R. A. 658; McKinnon v. New York Assets Realization Co. (C. C. A.) 217 F. 339, 343.

In Conveyancing

One who holds a title under a voluntary conveyance, i. e., one made without consideration, good or valuable, to support it.

In the Law of Master and Servant

The term "Volunteer" includes one who, without the assent of the master and without justification arising from a legitimate personal interest, unnecessarily assists a servant in the performance of the master's business. Kalmich v. White, 95 Conn. 568, 111 A. 845, 846; Eugene Dietzen Co. v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 279 Ill. 11, 116 N. E. 684, 685, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 764; Goshen Furnace Corporation v. Tolley's Adm'r, 134 Va. 404, 114 S. E. 728, 730.

In Military Law

One who freely and voluntarily offers himself for service in the army or navy; as distinguished from one who is compelled to serve by draft or conscription, and also from one entered by enlistment in the standing army.

VOTE. Suffrage; the expression of his will, preference, or choice, formally manifested by a member of a legislative or deliberative body, or of a constituency or a body of qualified electors, in regard to the decision to be made by the body as a whole upon any proposed measure or proceeding, or the selection of an officer or representative. And the aggregate of the expressions of will or choice, thus manifested by individuals, is called the "vote of the body." See Maynard v. Board of Canvasers, 84 Mich. 228, 47 N. W. 756, 11 L. R. A. 332; Gillespie v. Palmer, 20 Wis. 546; Davis v. Brown, 46 W. Va. 716, 34 S. E. 839; Straughan v. Meyers, 268 Mo. 580, 187 S. W. 1159, 1161; State v. State Board of Canvasers, 44 N. D. 126, 172 N. W. 80, 87.

Casting Vote

See that title.

Cumulative Voting

See Cumulative.

Voting Trust

A term applied to the accumulation in a single hand or in a few hands of shares of corporate stock, belonging to several or many owners, in trust for purpose of voting the shares in order, thereby, to control the business of the company through selection of directors. Manson v. Curtis, 223 N. Y. 313, 119 N. E. 559, 561, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 247; Groub v. Blish, 88 Ind. App. 309, 152 N. E. 609, 611.

VOTER. The word "voters," as ordinarily used, has two meanings—persons who perform the act of voting, and persons who have the qualifications entitling them to vote. Its meaning depends on the connections in which it is used, and is not always equivalent to electors. Board of Education of Oklahoma City v. Woodworth, 89 Okl. 192, 214 P. 1077, 1079. See Clayton v. Hill City, 111 Kan. 595, 207 P. 770.

In a limited sense a voter is a person having the legal right to vote, sometimes called a legal voter. Aczel v. United States (C. C. A.) 232 F. 652, 657; Trammell v. Griffin, 141 Tenn. 139, 207 S. W. 726; State ex inf. Barrett ex rel. Newman v. Clements, 305 Mo. 297, 264 S. W. 984, 986; State v. Stewart, 57 Mont. 397, 188 P. 904, 907.

VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS. In the houses of parliament the clerks at the tables make brief entries of all that is actually done; and these minutes, which are printed from day to day for the use of members, are called the "votes and proceedings of parliament." From these votes and proceedings the journals of the house are subsequently prepared, by making the entries at greater length. Brown.

VOTUM. Lat. A vow or promise. Dies votorum, the wedding day. Fleta l. 1, c. 4.

VOUCH. To call upon; to call in to warranty; to call upon the grantor or warrantor to defend the title to an estate.

To vouch is to call upon, rely on, or quote as an authority. Thus, in the old writers, to vouch a case or report is to quote it as an authority. Co. Litt. 70a.

VOUCHEE. In common recoveries, the person who is called to warrant or defend the title is called the "vouchee." 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2093.

Common Vouchee

In common recoveries, the person who is vouched to warranty. In this fictitious proceeding the crier of the court usually performs the office of a common vouchee. 2 Bl. Comm. 358; 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 2093.

VOUCHER. A receipt, acquittance, or release, which may serve as evidence of payment or discharge of a debt, or to certify the correctness of accounts. An account-book containing the acquittances or receipts showing the accountant's discharge of his obligations. Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 218.

When used in connection with the disbursement of money, voucher means a written or printed instrument in the nature of a bill of particulars, account, etc., which shows on what account and by what authority a particular payment has been made. State v. Moore, 36 Neb. 579, 54 N. W. 866; People v. Swigert, 107 Ill. 495. An instrument that shows on what account, or by what authority, a particular payment of money is made. Camp & Du Puy v. Lauterman, 78 Or. 134, 152 P. 288, 289.

In Old Conveyancing

The person on whom the tenant calls to defend the title to the land, because he warranted the title to him at the time of the original purchase.

VOUCHER TO WARRANTY. The calling one who has warranted lands, by the party warranted, to come and defend the suit for him. Co. Litt. 101b.

Vox emissa volat; litera scripta manet. The spoken word flies; the written letter remains. Broom, Max. 666.

VOX SIGNATA. In Scotch practice. An emphatic or essential word. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 280.

VOYAGE. In maritime law. The passing of a vessel by sea from one place, port, or country to another. The term is held to include the enterprise entered upon, and not merely the route. Friend v. Insurance Co., 113 Mass. 326.

Foreign Voyage

A voyage to some port or place within the territory of a foreign nation. The terminus of a voyage determines its character. If it be within the limits of a foreign jurisdiction, it is a foreign voyage, and not otherwise. Taber v. United States, 1 Story, 1, Fed. Cas. No. 13,722; The Three Brothers, 23 Fed. Cas. 1,162.

Voyage Insured

In insurance law. A transit at sea from the terminus a quo to the terminus ad quem, in a prescribed course of navigation, which is never set out in any policy, but virtually forms parts of all policies, and is as binding on the parties thereto as though it were minutely detailed. 1 Arn. Ins. 333.

Voyage Policy

See Policy of Insurance.

VRAIC. Seaweed. It is used in great quantities by the inhabitants of Jersey and Guernsey for manure, and also for fuel by the poorer classes.

VS. An abbreviation for versus, (against,) constantly used in legal proceedings, and especially in entitling cases.

VULGAR. "Vulgar" signifies lack of cultivation or refinement. Darnell v. State, 72 Tex. Cr. R. 271, 161 S. W. 971.

Vulgaris opinio est duplex, viz., orta inter graves et discretos, quæ multum veritatis habet, et opinio orta inter leves et vulgares homines absque specie veritatis. 4 Coke 107. Common opinion is of two kinds, viz., that which arises among grave and discreet men, which has much truth in it, and that which arises among light and common men, without any appearance of truth.

VULGARIS PURGATIO. Lat. In old English law. Common purgation; a name given to the trial by ordeal, to distinguish it from the canonical purgation, which was by the oath of the party. 4 Bl. Comm. 342.

VULGO CONCEPTI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; bastards.

VULGO QUÆSITI. Lat. In the civil law. Spurious children; literally, gotten from the people; the offspring of promiscuous cohabitation, who are considered as having no father. Inst. 3, 4, 3; Id. 3, 5, 4.

W

W. As an abbreviation, this letter frequently stands for "William," (king of England,) "Westminster," "west," or "western."

W. D. An abbreviation for "Western District."

WACREOUR. L. Fr. A vagabond, or vagrant. Britt. c. 29.

WADIA. A pledge. See Vadium; Fides Facta.

WADSET. In Scotch law. The old term for a mortgage. A right by which lands or other heritable subjects are impignorated by the proprietor to his creditor in security of his debt. Wadsets are usually drawn in the form of mutual contracts, in which one party sells the land, and the other grants the right of reversion. Ersk. Inst. 2, 8, 3.

WADSETTER. In Scotch law. A creditor to whom a wadset is made, corresponding to a mortgagee.

WAFORS. Conductors of vessels at sea. Cowell.

WAGA. In old English law. A weigh; a measure of cheese, salt, wool, etc., containing two hundred and fifty-six pounds avoirdupois. Cowell; Spelman.

WAGE. In old English practice. To give security for the performance of a thing. Cowell.

WAGER. A contract by which two or more parties agree that a certain sum of money or other thing shall be paid or delivered to one of them or that they shall gain or lose on the happening of an uncertain event or upon the ascertainment of a fact in dispute, where the parties have no interest in the event except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. Trust Co. v. Goodrich, 75 Ill. 560; Jordan v. Kent, 44 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 207; Winward v. Lincoln, 23 R. I. 476, 51 A. 106, 64 L. R. A. 160; Edson v. Pawlet, 22 Vt. 293; Woodcock v. McQueen, 11 Ind. 15; Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. 90; Kitchen v. Loudenback, 48 Ohio St. 177, 26 N. E. 979, 29 Am. St. Rep. 540; H. Seay & Co. v. Moore (Tex. Com. App.) 261 S. W. 1013, 1014; Young v. Stephenson, 82 Okl. 239, 200 P. 225, 228, 24 A. L. R. 978. See, also, Bet.

WAGER OF BATTEL. The trial by wager of battel was a species of trial introduced into England, among other Norman customs, by William the Conqueror, in which the person accused fought with his accuser, under the apprehension that Heaven would give the victory to him who was in the right. 3 Bl. Comm. 337. It was abolished by St. 59 Geo. III, c. 46.

WAGER OF LAW. In old practice. The giving of gage or sureties by a defendant in an action of debt that at a certain day assigned he would make his law; that is, would take an oath in open court that he did not owe the debt, and at the same time bring with him eleven neighbors, (called "compurgators,") who should avow upon their oaths that they believed in their consciences that he said the truth. Glanv. lib. 1, c. 9, 12; Bract. fol. 156b; Britt. c. 27; 2 Bl. Comm. 343; Cro. Eliz. 818.

WAGER POLICY. See Policy of Insurance.

WAGERING CONTRACT. One in which the parties stipulate that they shall gain or lose, upon the happening of an uncertain event, in which they have no interest except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. 89.

WAGES. A compensation given to a hired person for his or her services; the compensation agreed upon by a master to be paid to a servant, or any other person hired to do work or business for him. Ciarla v. Solvay Process Co., 184 App. Div. 629, 172 N. Y. S. 426, 428; Russell v. McGaughey, 82 Ind. App. 624, 147 N. E. 283, 284. Cookes v. Lymperis, 178 Mich. 299, 144 N. W. 514, 515; Phoenix Iron Co. v. Roanoke Bridge Co., 169 N. C. 512, 86 S. E. 184, 185.

Agreed compensation for services by workmen, clerks or servants—those who have served an employer in a subordinate or menial capacity and who are supposed to be dependent upon their earnings to pay for their present support, whether they are to be paid by the hour, the day, the week, the month, the job, or the piece. In re Gurewitz, 121 F. 982, 58 C. C. A. 320.

In Maritime Law

The compensation allowed to seamen for their services on board a vessel during a voyage.

In Political Economy

The reward paid, whether in money or goods, to human exertion, considered as a factor in the production of wealth, for its co-operation in the process.

"Three factors contribute to the production of commodities,—nature, labor, and capital. Each must have a share of the product as its reward, and this share, if it is just, must be proportionate to the several contributions. The share of the natural agents is rent; the share of labor, wages; the share of capital, interest. The clerk receives a salary; the lawyer and doctor, fees; the manufacturer, profits. Salary, fees, and profits are so many forms of wages for services rendered." De Laveleye, Pol. Econ.

—Wage earner. One who earns his living by labor of a menial or mechanical kind or performed in a subordinate capacity, such as domestic servants, mechanics, farm hands, clerks, porters, and messengers. In the United States bankruptcy act of 1898, an individual who works for wages, salary, or hire, at a compensation not exceeding $1,500 per year. See In re Pilger (D. C.) 118 F. 206; In re Gurewitz, 121 F. 982, 58 C. C. A. 320.

WAGON. A common vehicle for the transportation of goods, wares, and merchandise of all descriptions. The term does not include a hackney-coach. Quigley v. Gorham, 5 Cal. 418, 63 Am. Dec. 139.

A "wagon" has been defined as a vehicle moving on wheels and usually drawn by horses. The word wagon is a generic term and includes other species of vehicle by whatever name they may be called. An automobile is a vehicle propelled by power generated within itself, used to convey passengers or materials, and in a general sense is a wagon. Strycker v. Richardson, 77 Pa. Super. Ct. 252, 255, but see contra United States v. One Automobile (D. C.) 237 F. 891, 892; Whitney v. Welnitz, 153 Minn. 162, 190 N. W. 57, 28 A. L. R. 68.

WAGONAGE. Money paid for carriage in a wagon.

WAIF. Waifs are goods found, but claimed by nobody; that of which every one waives the claim. Also, goods stolen and waived, or thrown away by the thief in his flight, for fear of being apprehended. Wharton.

Waifs are to be distinguished from bona fugitiva, which are the goods of the felon himself, which he abandons in his flight from justice. Brown. See People v. Kaatz, 3 Parker, Cr. R. (N. Y.) 138; Hall v. Gildersleeve, 36 N. J. Law, 237.

WAIN—BOTE. In feudal and old English law. Timber for wagons or carts.

WAINABLE. In old records. That may be plowed or manured; tillable. Cowell; Blount.

WAINAGE. In old English law. The team and instruments of husbandry belonging to a countryman, and especially to a villein who was required to perform agricultural services.

WAINAGIUM. What is necessary to the farmer for the cultivation of his land. Barring. Ob. St. 12; Magna Carta, c. 14. Instruments of husbandry. 1 Poll. & Maitl. 399.

WAITING CLERKS. Officers whose duty it formerly was to wait in attendance upon the court of chancery. The office was abolished in 1842 by St. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103. Mozley & Whitley.

WAIVE, v. To abandon or throw away; as when a thief, in his flight, throws aside the stolen goods, in order to facilitate his escape, he is technically said to waive them.

In modern law, to renounce, repudiate, or surrender a claim, a privilege, a right, or the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong.

A person is said to waive a benefit when he renounces or disclaims it, and he is said to waive a tort or injury when he abandons the remedy which the law gives him for it. Sweet.

WAIVE, n. A woman outlawed. The term is, as it were, the feminine of "outlaw," the latter being always applied to a man; "waive," to a woman. Cowell.

WAIVER. The intentional or voluntary relinquishment of a known right, Lehigh Val. R. Co. v. Ins. Co., 172 F. 364, 97 C. C. A. 62; Bennecke v. Ins. Co., 105 U. S. 359, 26 L. Ed. 990; Lincoln Furniture Co. v. Bornstein, 135 A. 83, 85, 100 N. J. Eq. 78; Lukens Iron & Steel Co. v. Hartmann-Greiling Co., 169 Wis. 350, 172 N. W. 894, 896; Howe Scale Co. of Illinois v. Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co. (Mo. App.) 285 S. W. 141, 143; Anti v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 247 Mass. 1, 141 N. E. 598, 599; or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of such right, Rand v. Morse (C. C. A.) 289 F. 339, 344; Dexter Yarn Co. v. American Fabrics Co., 102 Conn. 529, 129 A. 527, 537; Gibbs v. Bergh, 51 S. D. 432, 214 N. W. 838, 841; or is inconsistent with claiming it, Marfield v. Cincinnati, D. & T. Traction Co., 111 Ohio St. 139, 144 N. E. 689, 691, 40 A. L. R. 357.

The renunciation, repudiation, abandonment, or surrender of some claim, right, privilege, or of the opportunity to take advantage of some defect, irregularity, or wrong. See Christenson v. Carleton, 69 Vt. 91, 37 A. 226; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 395, 97 Am. Dec. 107, 1 Am. Rep. 115; Star Brewery Co. v. Primas, 163 Ill. 652, 45 N. E. 145; Reid v. Field, 83 Va. 26, 1 S. E. 395; Caulfield v. Finnegan, 114 Ala. 39, 21 So. 484; Lyman v. Littleton, 50 N. H. 54; Smiley v. Barker, 83 F. 684, 28 C. C. A. 9; Boos v. Ewing, 17 Ohio, 523, 49 Am. Dec. 478.

A "waiver" is a voluntary relinquishment of a known right, while "estoppel" is based on some misleading conduct or language of one person which, being relied on, operates to the prejudice of another, and is applied to the wrongdoer by the court in denial of some right which otherwise might exist. In insurance cases the terms are used interchangeably, and it is sometimes expressed as "waiver by estoppel." Dabrooge v. Rochester-German Ins. Co. of Rochester, N. Y., 143 N. W. 608, 611, 177 Mich. 442, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 906; Crawford v. Winterbottom, 88 N. J. Law, 588, 96 A. 497, 498. See, also, Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, v. Newsum, 142 Ark. 132, 219 S. W. 759, 767, 14 A. L. R. 903.

Implied Waiver

A waiver is implied where one party has pursued such a course of conduct with reference to the other party as to evidence an intention to waive his rights or the advantage to which he may be entitled, or where the conduct pursued is inconsistent with any other honest intention than an intention of such waiver, provided that the other party concerned has been induced by such conduct to act upon the belief that there has been a waiver, and has incurred trouble or expense thereby. Astritch v. German-American Ins. Co., 131 F. 20, 65 C. C. A. 251; Roumage v. Insurance Co., 13 N. J. Law, 124.

Waiver of Exemption

A clause inserted in a note, bond, lease, etc., expressly waiving the benefit of the laws exempting limited amounts of personal property from levy and sale on judicial process, so far as concerns the enforcement of the particular debt or obligation. See Mitchell v. Coates, 47 Pa. 203; Wyman v. Gay, 90 Me. 36, 37 A. 325, 60 Am. St. Rep. 238; Howard B. & L. Ass'n v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 102 Pa. 223.

Waiver of Protest

An agreement by the indorser of a note or bill to be bound in his character of indorser without the formality of a protest in case of non-payment, or, in the case of paper which cannot or is not required to be protested, dispensing with the necessity of a demand and notice. See First Nat. Bank v. Falkenhan, 94 Cal. 141, 29 P. 866; Coddington v. Davis, 1 N. Y. 190.

Waiver of Tort

The election, by an injured party, for purposes of redress, to treat the facts as establishing an implied contract, which he may enforce, instead of an injury by fraud or wrong, for the committing of which he may demand damages, compensatory or exemplary. Harway v. Mayor, etc., of City of New York, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 630.

WAKEMAN. The chief magistrate of Ripon, in Yorkshire.

WAKENING. In Scotch law. The revival of an action. A process by which an action that has lain over and not been insisted in for a year and a day, and thus technically said to have "fallen asleep," is awakened, or put in motion again. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 170; Ersk. Prin. 4, 1, 33.

WALAPAUZ. In old Lombardic law. The disguising the head or face, with the intent of committing a theft.

WALL. An erection of stone, brick, or other material, raised to some height, and intended for purposes of security or inclosure. In law, this term occurs in such compounds as "ancient wall," "party-wall," "division-wall," etc.

Common Wall

A party wall; one which has been built at the common expense of the two owners whose properties are contiguous, or a wall built by one party in which the other has acquired a common right. Campbell v. Mesier, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 342, 8 Am. Dec. 570.

WALLIA. In old English law. A wall; a sea-wall; a mound, bank, or wall erected in marshy districts as a protection against the sea. Spelman.

WAMPUM. Beads made of shells, used as money by the North American Indians, and which continued current in New York as late as 1693.

WAND OF PEACE. In Scotch law. A wand or staff carried by the messenger of a court, and which, when deforced, (that is, hindered from executing process,) he breaks, as a symbol of the deforcement, and protest for remedy of law. 2 Forb. Inst. 207.

WANDER. To ramble here and there without any certain course. Guidoni v. Wheeler (C. C. A.) 230 F. 93, 96; Ex parte Karnstrom, 297 Mo. 384, 249 S. W. 595, 596.

WANLASS. An ancient customary tenure of lands; i. e., to drive deer to a stand that the lord may have a shot. Blount, Ten. 140.

WANT OF REPAIR. As to highways, a "defect" or "want of repair" is anything in the state or condition of the highway which renders it unsafe or inconvenient for ordinary travel. Gregoire v. City of Lowell, 253 Mass. 119, 148 N. E. 376.

WANTAGE. In marine insurance. Ullage; deficiency in the contents of a cask or vessel caused by leaking. Cory v. Boylston Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 107 Mass. 140, 9 Am. Rep. 14.

WANTON. Characterized by reckless disregard of rights or safety of others. Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268; Strough v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (C. C. A.) 209 F. 23, 26; Bernier v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 296 Ill. 464, 129 N. E. 747, 749.

WANTON NEGLIGENCE. The negligent act of one who, without having the intent to injure, is conscious from his knowledge of the existing circumstances and conditions that his conduct will naturally and probably result in injury. United Transp. Co. v. Hass, 155 N. Y. S. 110, 117, 91 Misc. 311.

WANTON AND FURIOUS DRIVING. An offence against public health, which under the stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 56, is punishable as a misdemeanor by fine or imprisonment. In this country the offence is usually provided for by state, county, or municipal legislation.

WANTONNESS. A reckless or intentional disregard of the property, rights, or safety of others, implying, actively, a willingness to injure and disregard of the consequences to others, and, passively, more than mere negligence, that is, a conscious and intentional disregard of duty. See Brasington v. South Bound R. Co., 62 S. C. 325, 40 S. E. 665, 89 Am. St. Rep. 905; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Webb, 97 Ala. 308, 12 So. 374; Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 625; Harward v. Davenport, 105 Iowa, 592, 75 N. W. 487; Trauerman v. Lippincott, 39 Mo. App. 488; Everett v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 121 N. C. 519, 27 S. E. 991; Birmingham Ry. & El. Co. v. Pinckard, 124 Ala. 372, 26 So. 880; Fabac v. St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co., 119 Kan. 58, 237 P. 1019, 1021; Higbee Co. v. Jackson, 101 Ohio St. 75, 128 N. E. 61, 64, 14 A. L. R. 131; Walldren Express & Van Co. v. Krug, 291 Ill. 472, 126 N. E. 97, 98.

Reckless sport; willfully unrestrained action, running immoderately into excess. Cobb v. Bennett, 75 Pa. 330, 15 Am. Rep. 752.

A licentious act by one man towards the person of another, without regard to his rights. See State v. Brigman, 94 N. C. 888.

WAPENTAKE. In English law. A local division of the country; the name is in use north of the Trent to denote a hundred. The derivation of the name is said to be from "weapon" and "take," and indicates that the division was originally of a military character. Cowell; Brown.

Also a hundred court.

WAR. An armed contest between nations. Grotius, de Jur. Bell. l. 1, c. 1. The state of nations among whom there is an interruption of all pacific relations, and a general contention by force, authorized by the sovereign. 1 Kent. *61. See, also, Commercial Cable Co. v. Burleson (D. C.) 255 F. 99, 105; Vanderbilt v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. S. 54, 55, 112 Misc. 248.

Every connection by force between two nations, in external matters, under the authority of their respective governments, is a public war. If war is declared in form, it is called "solemn," and is of the perfect kind; because the whole nation is at war with another whole nation. When the hostilities are limited as respects places, persons, and things, the war is properly termed "imperfect war." Bas v. Tingy, 4 Dall. 37, 40, 1 L. Ed. 731.

Articles of War

See Article.

Civil War

An internecine war. A war carried on between opposing masses of citizens of the same country or nation. Before the declaration of independence, the war between Great Britain and the United Colonies was a civil war; but instantly on that event the war changed its nature, and became a public war between independent states. Hubbard v. Exp. Co., 10 R. I. 244; Brown v. Hiatt, 4 Fed. Cas. 387; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 667, 17 L. Ed. 459; Central R. & B. Co. v. Ward, 37 Ga. 515.

Laws of War

See Law.

Mixed War

A mixed war is one which is made on one side by public authority, and on the other by mere private persons. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 377, 415, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

Private War

One between private persons, lawfully exerted by way of defense, but otherwise unknown in civil society. People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 576, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

Public War

Every contention by force, between two nations, in external matters, under the authority of their respective governments. Prize Cases, 2 Black. 666, 17 L. Ed. 459; People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 483, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

Solemn War

A war made in form by public declaration; a war solemnly declared by one state against another.

War-Office

In England. A department of state from which the sovereign issues orders to his forces. Wharton.

WARABI. Dried wild ferns from Japan, used as a vegetable in a manner similar to spinach. Nippon Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 548, 549.

WARD. Guarding; care; charge; as, the ward of a castle; so in the phrase "watch and ward."

A division in the city of London committed to the special ward (guardianship) of an alderman.

A territorial division is adopted in most American cities by which the municipality is separated into a number of precincts or districts called "wards" for purposes of police, sanitary regulations, prevention of fires, elections, etc.

A corridor, room, or other division of a prison, hospital, or asylum.

A person, especially an infant, placed by authority of law under the care of a guardian.

In General

—Ward-corn. In old English law. The duty of keeping watch and ward, with a horn to blow upon any occasion of surprise. 1 Mon. Ang. 976.

—Ward-fegh. Sax. In old records. Ward-fee; the value of a ward, or the money paid to the lord for his redemption from wardship. Blount.

—Ward-holding. In old Scotch law. Tenure by military service; the proper feudal tenure of Scotland. Abolished by St. 20 Geo. II. c. 50. Ersk. Prin. 2, 4, 1.

—Ward in chancery. An infant who is under the superintendence of the chancellor.

—Ward-mote. In English law. A court kept in every ward in London, commonly called the "ward-mote court," or "inquest." Cowell.

—Ward-penny. In old English law. Money paid to the sheriff or castellains, for the duty of watching and warding a castle. Spelman.

—Ward-staff. In old records. A constable's or watchman's staff. Cowell.

—Ward-wit. In old English law. Immunity or exemption from the duty or service of ward, or from contributing to such service. Spelman. Exemption from amercement for not finding a man to do ward. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 16.

—Wardage. Money paid and contributed to watch and ward. Domesday.

—Wards of admiralty. Seamen are sometimes thus designated, because, in view of their general improvidence and rashness, the admiralty courts are accustomed to scrutinize with great care their bargains and engagements, when brought before them, with a view to protecting them against imposition and overreaching.

—Wardship. In military tenures, the right of the lord to have custody, as guardian, of the body and lands of the infant heir, without any account of profits, until he was twenty-one or she sixteen. In socage the guardian was accountable for profits; and he was not the lord, but the nearest relative to whom the inheritance could not descend, and the wardship ceased at fourteen. In copyholds, the lord was the guardian, but was perhaps accountable for profits. Stim. Gloss. See 2 Bl. Comm. 67.

—Wardship in chivalry. An incident to the tenure of knight-service.

—Wardship in copyholds. The lord is guardian of his infant tenant by special custom.

—Warrant of attorney. In practice. An instrument in writing, addressed to one or more attorneys therein named, authorizing them, generally, to appear in any court, or in some specified court, on behalf of the person giving it, and to confess judgment in favor of some particular person therein named, in an action of debt. It usually contains a stipulation not to bring any writ of error, or file a bill in equity, so as to delay him. 2 Burrill, Pr. 239; Treat v. Tolman, 113 F. 892, 51 C. C. A. 522.

—Warrant of commitment. A warrant of commitment is a written authority committing a person to custody.

—Warrant officers. In the United States navy, these are a class of inferior officers who hold their rank by virtue of a written warrant instead of a commission, including boatswains, gunners, carpenters, etc.

—Warrant to sue and defend. In old practice. A special warrant from the crown, authorizing a party to appoint an attorney to sue or defend for him. 3 Bl. Comm. 25. A special authority given by a party to his attorney, to commence a suit, or to appear and defend a suit, in his behalf. These warrants are now disused, though formal entries of them upon the record were long retained in practice. 1 Burrill, Pr. 39.

WARRANTEE. A person to whom a warranty is made.

WARRANTIA CHARTÆ. In old practice. Warranty of charter. A writ which lay for one who, being enfeoffed of lands or tenements, with a clause of warranty, was afterwards impleaded in an assize or other action in which he could not vouch to warranty. In such case, it might be brought against the warrantor, to compel him to assist the tenant with a good plea or defense, or else to render damages and the value of the land, if recovered against the tenant. Cowell; 3 Bl. Comm. 300.

WARRANTIA CUSTODIÆ. An old English writ, which lay for him who was challenged to be a ward to another, in respect to land said to be holden by knight-service; which land, when it was bought by the ancestors of the ward, was warranted free from such thralldom. The writ lay against the warrantor and his heirs. Cowell.

WARRANTIA DIEI. A writ which lay for a man who, having had a day assigned him personally to appear in court in any action in which he was sued, was in the mean time, by commandment, employed in the king's service, so that he could not come at the day assigned. It was directed to the justices that they might not record him in default for that day. Cowell.

WARRANTIZARE. In old conveyancing. To warrant; to bind one's self, by covenant in a deed of conveyance, to defend the grantee in his title and possession.

Warrantizare est defendere et acquietare tenentem, qui warrantum vocavit, in seisinâ sua; et tenens de re warranti excambium habebit ad valentiam. Co. Litt. 365. To warrant is to defend and insure in peace the tenant, who calls for warranty, in his seisin; and the tenant in warranty will have an exchange in proportion to its value.

WARRANTOR. One who makes a warranty. Shep. Touch. 181.

Warrantor potest excipere quod querens non tenet terram de qua petit warrantiam, et quod donum fuit insufficient. Hob. 21. A warrantor may object that the complainant does not hold the land of which he seeks the warranty, and that the gift was insufficient.

WARRANTY.

In Real Property Law

A real covenant by the grantor of lands, for himself and his heirs, to warrant and defend the title and possession of the estate granted, to the grantee and his heirs, whereby, either upon voucher, or judgment in the writ of warrantia chartæ, and the eviction of the grantee by paramount title, the grantor was bound to recompense him with other lands of equal value. Co. Litt. 365a. See "Covenant."

In Sales of Personal Property

A statement or representation made by the seller of goods, contemporaneously with and as a part of the contract of sale, though collateral to the express object of it, having reference to the character, quality, or title of the goods, by which he promises or undertakes that certain facts are or shall be as he then represents them. Hausken v. Hodson-Fee-naughty Co., 109 Wash. 606, 187 P. 319, 321; Martin v. American Magnestone Corporation (Mo. App.) 247 S. W. 465, 466.

A statement of fact respecting the quality or character of goods sold, made by the seller to induce the sale, and relied on by the buyer. Hercules Powder Co. v. Rich (C. C. A.) 3 F.(2d) 12, 14; American Fruit Product Co. v. Davenport Vinegar & Pickling Works, 172 Iowa, 683, 154 N. W. 1031, 1034; Van Horn v. Stautz, 297 Ill. 530, 131 N. E. 153, 154.

In Contracts

An undertaking or stipulation, in writing, or verbally, that a certain fact in relation to the subject of a contract is or shall be as it is stated or promised to be. An express or implied statement of something which a party undertakes shall be a part of a contract, and, though part of the contract, collateral to the express object of it. United Iron Works Co. v. Henryetta Coal & Mining Co., 62 Okl. 99, 162 P. 209, 210; Hurley-Mason

Co. v. Stebbins, Walker & Spinning, 79 Wash. 366, 140 P. 381, 384, L. R. A. 1915B, 1131, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 948.

A warranty differs from a representation in that a warranty must always be given contemporaneously with, and as part of, the contract; whereas a representation precedes and induces to the contract. And, while that is their difference in nature, their difference in consequence or effect is this: that, upon breach of warranty, (or false warranty,) the contract remains binding, and damages only are recoverable for the breach; whereas, upon a false representation, the defrauded party may elect to avoid the contract, and recover the entire price paid. Brown. And see Griswold v. Morrison, 53 Cal. App. 93, 200 P. 62, 65.

The same transaction cannot be characterized as a warranty and a fraud at the same time. A warranty rests upon contract, while fraud, or fraudulent representations have no element of contract in them, but are essentially a tort. When judges or law-writers speak of a fraudulent warranty, the language is neither accurate nor perspicuous. If there is a breach of warranty, it cannot be said that the warranty was fraudulent, with any more propriety than any other contract can be said to have been fraudulent, because there has been a breach of it. On the other hand, to speak of a false representation as a contract or warranty, or as tending to prove a contract or warranty, is a perversion of language and of correct ideas. Rose v. Hurley, 29 Ind. 81; Boysen v. Petersen, 203 Iowa, 1073, 211 N. W. 894, 895.

In Insurance

In the law of insurance, "warranty" means any assertion or undertaking on the part of the assured, whether expressed in the contract or capable of being annexed to it; on the strict and literal truth or performance of which the liability of the underwriter is made to depend. Maude & P. Shipp. 377; Sweet.

A "warranty" in a policy of insurance is an expressed stipulation that something then exists, or has happened, or been done, or shall happen or be done, and it must be literally and strictly complied with by assured whether the truth of the fact or the happening of the event be or be not material to the risk or connected with the cause of loss. Brown v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 52 Okl. 392, 153 P. 173, 177; Walker v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 114 Or. 545, 234 P. 542, 549. See also "Representation."

In General

—Affirmative warranty. In the law of insurance, warranties may be either affirmative or promissory. Affirmative warranties may be either express or implied, but they usually consist of positive representations in the policy of the existence of some fact or state of things at the time, or previous to the time, of the making of the policy; they are, in general, conditions precedent, and if untrue, whether material to the risk or not, the policy does not attach, as it is not the contract of the insurer. Maupin v. Insurance Co., 53 W. Va. 557, 45 S. E. 1003; Hendricks v. Insurance Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Cowan v. Insurance Co., 78 Cal. 181, 20 P. 408; Orient Ins. Co. v. Van Zandt-Bruce Drug Co., 50 Okl. 558, 151 P. 323, 324.

—Collateral warranty. Existed when the heir's title was not derived from the warranting ancestor, and yet it barred the heir from claiming the land by any collateral title, upon the presumption that he might thereafter have assets by descent from or through the ancestor; and it imposed upon him the obligation of giving the warrantee other lands in case of eviction, provided he had assets. 2 Bl. Com. 301.

—Continuing warranty. One which applies to the whole period during which the contract is in force; e. g., an undertaking in a charter-party that a vessel shall continue to be of the same class that she was at the time the charter-party was made.

—Covenant of warranty. See Covenant.

—Express warranty. In contracts and sales, one created by the apt and explicit statements of the seller or person to be bound. See Borrekins v. Bevan, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 36, 23 Am. Dec. 85; White v. Stelloh, 74 Wis. 435, 43 N. W. 99; Danforth v. Crookshanks, 68 Mo. App. 316; Hausken v. Hodson-Feenaughty Co., 109 Wash. 606, 187 P. 319, 321. In the law of insurance, an agreement expressed in a policy, whereby the assured stipulates that certain facts relating to the risk are or shall be true, or certain acts relating to the same subject have been or shall be done. 1 Phil. Ins. (4th Ed.) p. 425; Petit v. German Ins. Co. (C. C.) 98 F. 802; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Grube, 6 Minn. 82 (Gil. 32); Insurance Co. v. Morgan, 90 Va. 290, 18 S. E. 191.

—General warranty. The name of a covenant of warranty inserted in deeds, by which the grantor binds himself, his heirs, etc., to "warrant and forever defend" to the grantee, his heirs, etc., the title thereby conveyed, against the lawful claims of all persons whatsoever. Where the warranty is only against the claims of persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs, it is called a "special warranty."

—Implied warranty. A warranty raised by the law as an inference from the acts of the parties or the circumstances of the transaction. Hausken v. Hodson-Feenaughty Co., 109 Wash. 606, 187 P. 319, 321. Thus, if the seller of a chattel have possession of it and sell it as his own, and not as agent for another, and for a fair price, he is understood to warrant the title. 2 Kent, Comm. 478. A warranty implied from the general tenor of an instrument, or from particular words used in it, although no express warranty is mentioned. Thus, in every policy of insurance there is an implied warranty that the ship is seaworthy when the policy attaches. 3 Kent Comm. 287; 1 Phil. Ins. 308.

—Lineal warranty. In old conveyancing, the kind of warranty which existed when the heir derived title to the land warranted either from or through the ancestor who made the warranty.

—Personal warranty. One available in personal actions, and arising from the obligation which one has contracted to pay the whole or part of a debt due by another to a third person. Flanders v. Seelye, 105 U. S. 718, 26 L. Ed. 1217.

—Promissory warranty. In the law of insurance, a warranty which requires the performance or omission of certain things or the existence of certain facts after the beginning of the contract of insurance and during its continuance, and the breach of which will avoid the policy. See King v. Relief Ass'n, 35 App. Div. 58, 54 N. Y. S. 1057; Maupin v. Insurance Co., 53 W. Va. 557, 45 S. E. 1003; McKenzie v. Insurance Co., 112 Cal. 548, 44 P. 922.

—Special warranty. A clause of warranty inserted in a deed of lands, by which the grantor covenants, for himself and his heirs, to "warrant and forever defend" the title to the same, to the grantee and his heirs, etc., against all persons claiming "by, through, or under" the grantor or his heirs. If the warranty is against the claims of all persons whatsoever, it is called a "general" warranty.

—Warranty deed. One which contains a covenant of warranty.

—Warranty, voucher to. In old practice. The calling a warrantor into court by the party warranted, (when tenant in a real action brought for recovery of such lands,) to defend the suit for him. Co. Litt. 101b.

WARREN. A term in English law for a place in which birds, fishes, or wild beasts are kept.

A franchise or privilege, either by prescription or grant from the king, to keep beasts and fowls of warren, which are hares, coney, partridges, pheasants, etc.

Also any place to which such privilege extends. Mozley & Whitley.

Free Warren

A franchise for the preserving and custody of beasts and fowls of warren. 2 Bl. Comm. 39, 417; Co. Litt. 233. This franchise gave the grantee sole right of killing, so far as his warren extended, on condition of excluding other persons. 2 Bl. Comm. 39.

WARSCOT. In Saxon law. A customary or usual tribute or contribution towards armor, or the arming of the forces.

WARTH. In old English law. A customary payment, supposed to be the same with ward-penny. Spelman; Blount.

WASH. A shallow part of a river or arm of the sea.

The sandy, rocky, gravelly, boulder-bestrewn part of a river bottom deposited on level land near mouth of a canyon representing rocks and gravel washed down by a mountain stream. Haack v. San Fernando Mission Land Co., 177 Cal. 140, 169 P. 1021, 1022.

A fermented wort from which spirit is distilled. Neal v. State, 154 Ark. 324, 242 S. W. 578, 579; Pack v. State, 116 Or. 416, 241 P. 390, 392.

WASH BANK. A bank composed of such substance that it is liable to be washed away by the action of the water thereon, so as to become unsafe to travelers on highway. Kerr v. Bougher, 16 Ohio App. 434, 437.

WASH SALE or WASHED SALE. In the language of the stock exchange, this term is applied to the operation of simultaneously buying and selling the same stock. In re Wetengel (C. C. A.) 238 F. 798, 799.

WASHING—HORN. The sounding of a horn for washing before dinner. The custom was formerly observed in the Temple.

WASHINGTON, TREATY OF. A treaty signed on May 8, 1871, between Great Britain and the United States of America, with reference to certain differences arising out of the war between the northern and southern states of the Union, the Canadian fisheries, and other matters. Wharton.

WASTE. Spoil or destruction, done or permitted, to lands, houses, gardens, trees, or other corporeal hereditaments, by the tenant thereof, to the prejudice of the heir, or of him in reversion or remainder. 2 Bl. Comm. 281. A destruction or material alteration or deterioration of the freehold, or of the improvements forming a material part thereof, by any person rightfully in possession, but who has not the fee title or the full estate. Hayman v. Rownd, 82 Neb. 598, 118 N. W. 328, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 623. See Stephenson v. National Bank of Winter Haven, 92 Fla. 347, 109 So. 424, 425; Keogh v. Peck, 316 Ill. 318, 147 N. E. 266, 268, 38 A. L. R. 1151; Thomas v. Thomas, 166 N. C. 627, 82 S. E. 1032, 1033, L. R. A. 1915B, 219.

Waste is a lasting damage to the reversion caused by the destruction, by the tenant for life or years, of such things on the land as are not included in its temporary profits. Proffitt v. Henderson, 29 Mo. 325.

In Old English Criminal Law

A prerogative or liberty, on the part of the crown, of committing waste on the lands of felons, by pulling down their houses, extirpating their gardens, plowing their meadows, and cutting down their woods. 4 Bl. Comm. 385.

In General

—Commissive waste. Active or positive waste; waste done by acts of spoliation or de-structure, rather than by mere neglect; the same as voluntary waste. See infra.

—Double waste. See Double.

—Equitable waste. Injury to a reversion or remainder in real estate, which is not recognized by the courts of law as waste, but which equity will interpose to prevent or remedy. Gannon v. Peterson, 193 Ill. 372, 62 N. E. 210, 55 L. R. A. 701; Crowe v. Wilson, 65 Md. 479, 5 A. 427, 57 Am. Rep. 343. Otherwise defined as an unconscientious abuse of the privilege of non-impeachability for waste at common law, whereby a tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, will be restrained from committing willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste, such as pulling down houses, cutting timber of too young a growth, or trees planted for ornament, or for shelter of premises. Wharton.

—Impeachment of waste. Liability for waste committed, or a demand or suit for compensation for waste committed upon lands or tenements by a tenant thereof who has no right to commit waste. On the other hand, a tenure "without impeachment of waste" signifies that the tenant cannot be called to account for waste committed.

—Nul waste. "No waste." The name of a plea in an action of waste, denying the commission of waste, and forming the general issue.

—Permissive waste. That kind of waste which is a matter of omission only, as by suffering a house to fall for want of necessary repairs. 2 Bl. Comm. 281; Willey v. Laraway, 64 Vt. 559, 25 A. 436; Beekman v. Van Dolsen, 63 Hun, 487, 18 N. Y. S. 376; White v. Wagner, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 391, 7 Am. Dec. 674.

—Voluntary waste. Active or positive waste; waste done or committed, in contradistinction to that which results from mere negligence, which is called "permissive" waste. 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2394. "Voluntary waste" is the willful destruction or carrying away of something attached to the freehold, and "permissive waste" is the failure to take reasonable care of the premises. Fisher's Ex'r v. Haney, 180 Ky. 257, 202 S. W. 495, 496. Voluntary or commissive waste consists of injury to the demised premises or some part thereof, when occasioned by some deliberate or voluntary act, as, for instance, the pulling down of a house or removal of floors, windows, doors, furnaces, shelves, or other things affixed to and forming part of the freehold. Regan v. Luthy, 16 Daly, 413, 11 N. Y. S. 709. Contrasted with "permissive" waste.

—Writ of waste. See that title.

WASTE-BOOK. A book used by merchants, to receive rough entries or memoranda of all transactions in the order of their occurrence, previous to their being posted in the journal. Otherwise called a "blotter."

WASTEL. A standard of quality of bread, made of the finest white flour. Cocket bread was slightly inferior in quality. The statute of 1266 mentions seven kinds of bread. See Assisa; Studer, Oak Book of Southampton, Vol. II.

WASTING PROPERTY. A mine or a patent is considered a wasting property. See 41 Ch. Div. 1.

WASTING TRUST. A trust in which the trustee may apply a part of the principal to make good a deficiency of income.

WASTORS. In old statutes. A kind of thieves.

WATCH, v. To keep guard; to stand as sentinel; to be on guard at night, for the preservation of the peace and good order.

WATCH, n. A body of constables on duty on any particular night.

A division of a ship's crew. At sea, the ship's company is divided into two watches, larboard and starboard, with a mate to command each. O'Hara v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 269 U. S. 364, 46 S. Ct. 157, 160, 70 L. Ed. 313.

WATCH AND WARD. "Watch" denotes keeping guard during the night; "ward," by day.

WATCHMAN. An officer in many cities and towns, whose duty it is to watch during the night and take care of the property of the inhabitants. Coerver v. Crescent Lead & Zinc Corporation, 315 Mo. 276, 286 S. W. 3, 10.

WATER. As designating a commodity or a subject of ownership, this term has the same meaning in law as in common speech; but in another sense, and especially in the plural, it may designate a body of water, such as a river, a lake, or an ocean, or an aggregate of such bodies of water, as in the phrases "foreign waters," "waters of the United States," and the like.

Water is neither land nor tenement nor susceptible of absolute ownership. It is a movable thing and must of necessity continue common by the law of nature. It admits only of a transient usufructuary property, and if it escapes for a moment, the right to it is gone forever, the qualified owner having no legal power of reclamation. It is not capable of being sued for by the name of "water," nor by a calculation of its cubical or superficial measure; but the suit must be brought for the land which lies at the bottom covered with water. As water is not land, neither is it a tenement, because it is not of a permanent nature, nor the subject of absolute property. It is not in any possible sense real estate, and hence is not embraced in a covenant of general warranty. Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 518.

Coast Waters

See Coast.

Developed Water

Water which is brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water. Mountain Lake Mining Co. v. Midway Irr. Co., 47 Utah, 346, 149 P. 929, 933.

Foreign Waters

Those belonging to another nation or country or subject to another jurisdiction, as distinguished from "domestic" waters. The Pilot, 50 Fed. 437, 1 C. C. A. 523.

Inland Waters

See Inland.

Navigable Waters

See Navigable.

Percolating Waters

Those which pass through the ground beneath the surface of the earth without any definite channel, and do not form a part of the body or flow, surface or subterranean, of any water-course. They may be either rain waters which are slowly infiltrating through the soil or waters seeping through the banks or the bed of a stream, and which have so far left the bed and the other waters as to have lost their character as a part of the flow of that stream. Vineland Irr. Dist. v. Azusa Irr. Co., 126 Cal. 486, 58 Pac. 1057, 46 L. R. A. 820; Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 585; Herriman Irr. Co. v. Keel, 25 Utah, 96, 69 Pac. 719; Deadwood Cent. R. Co. v. Barker, 14 S. D. 558, 86 N. W. 619; Montecito Val. Water Co. v. Santa Barbara, 144 Cal. 578, 77 Pac. 1113; Clinchfield Coal. Corporation v. Compton, 148 Va. 437, 139 S. E. 308, 311, 55 A. L. R. 1376; Flanigan v. State, 113 Misc. 91, 183 N. Y. S. 934, 935.

Private Waters

Non-navigable streams, or bodies of water not open to the resort and use of the general public, but entirely owned and controlled by one or more individuals. Piazzek v. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Jefferson County, 119 Kan. 119, 237 P. 1059, 1060.

Public Waters

Such as are adapted for the purposes of navigation, or those to which the general public have a right of access, as distinguished from artificial lakes, ponds, and other bodies of water privately owned, or similar natural bodies of water owned exclusively by one or more persons. See Lamprey v. Metcalf, 52 Minn. 181, 53 N. W. 1139, 18 L. R. A. 670, 38 Am. St. Rep. 541; Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104, 42 Am. Rep. 584; Cobb v. Davenport, 32 N. J. Law, 369; West Point Water-Power Co. v. State, 49 Neb. 223, 68 N. W. 507; State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 617, 41 Atl. 1030, 43 L. R. A. 290, 67 Am. St. Rep. 648.

Subterranean Waters

Waters which lie wholly beneath the surface of the ground, and which either ooze and seep through the subsurface strata without pursuing any defined course or channel, (percolating waters,) or flow in a permanent and regular but invisible course, or lie under the earth in a more or less immovable body, as a subterranean lake.

Surface Waters

As distinguished from the waters of a natural stream, lake, or pond, surface waters are such as diffuse themselves over the surface of the ground, following no defined course or channel, and not gathering into or forming any more definite body of water than a mere bog or marsh. They generally originate in rains and melting snows, but the flood waters of a river may also be considered as surface waters if they become separated from the main current, or leave it never to return, and spread out over lower ground. See Schaefer v. Marthaler, 34 Minn. 487, 26 N. W. 726, 57 Am. Rep. 40; Crawford v. Rambo, 44 Ohio St. 279, 7 N. E. 429; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hamlet Hay Co., 149 Ind. 344, 47 N. E. 1060; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Brevoort (C. C.) 62 Fed. 129, 25 L. R. A. 527; Brandenburg v. Zeigler, 62 S. C. 18, 39 S. E. 790, 55 L. R. A. 414, 89 Am. St. Rep. 887; Jones v. Hannover, 55 Mo. 467; Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Cline, 37 Fla. 586, 20 South. 780, 33 L. R. A. 376, 53 Am. St. Rep. 262; San Gabriel Valley Country Club v. Los Angeles County, 182 Cal. 392, 188 P. 554, 556, 9 A. L. R. 1200; Thompson v. New Haven Water Co., 86 Conn. 597, 86 A. 585, 588, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 457.

Surplus Water

Water running off from ground which has been irrigated; water not consumed by the process of irrigation; water which the land irrigated will not take up. Wedgworth v. Wedgworth, 20 Ariz. 518, 181 P. 952, 954.

Tide Waters

See Tide.

Water-Bailiff

The title of an officer, in port towns in England, appointed for the searching of ships. Also of an officer belonging to the city of London, who had the supervising and search of the fish brought thither. Cowell.

Water-Bayley

In American law. An officer mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth, (A. D. 1671,) whose duty was to collect dues to the colony for fish taken in their waters. Probably another form of water-bailiff. Burrell.

Water Course

See that title infra.

Water Front

Land or land with buildings fronting on a body of water. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 175 Cal. 575, 166 P. 333, 335.

Water-Gage

A sea-wall or bank to restrain the current and overflowing of the water; also an instrument to measure water. Cowell.

Water-Gang

A Saxon word for a trench or course to carry a stream of water, such as are commonly made to drain water out of marshes. Cowell.

Water-Gavel

In old records. A gavel or rent paid for fishing in or other benefit received from some river or water. Cowell; Blount.

Water-Logged

A vessel is "water-logged" when she becomes heavy and unmanageable on account of the leakage of water into the hold. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Globe Nav. Co. (C. C. A.) 236 F. 618, 625.

Water-Mark

See that title infra.

Water-Measure

In old statutes. A measure greater than Winchester measure by about three gallons in the bushel. Cowell.

Water-Ordeal

In Saxon and old English law. The ordeal or trial by water. The hot-water ordeal was performed by plunging the bare arm up to the elbow in boiling water, and escaping unhurt thereby. 4 Bl. Comm. 343. The cold-water ordeal was performed by casting the person suspected into a river or pond of cold water, when, if he floated therein, without any action of swimming it was deemed an evidence of his guilt; but, if he sunk, he was acquitted. Id.

Water-Packed

A "water-packed" bale of cotton is one to the lint of which water is added in such a manner that the weight is increased, or in which water-damaged cotton is placed, or the sampling sides of which are packed with lint cotton not so wet or water-damaged. Wallace v. Crosthwait, 196 Ala. 356, 71 So. 666, 667.

Water Power

The water power to which a riparian owner is entitled consists of the fall in the stream, when in its natural state, as it passes through his land, or along the boundary of it; or, in other words, it consists of the difference of level between the surface where the stream first touches his land, and the surface where it leaves it. McCalmont v. Whitaker, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 90, 23 Am. Dec. 102.

Water Right

A legal right, in the nature of a corporeal hereditament, to use the water of a natural stream or water furnished through a ditch or canal, for general or specific purposes, such as irrigation, mining, power, or domestic use, either to its full capacity or to a measured extent or during a defined portion of the time. See Hill v. Newman, 5 Cal. 445, 63 Am. Dec. 140; Cary v. Daniels, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 480, 41 Am. Dec. 532; Canal Co. v. Hess, 6 Colo. App. 497, 42 Pac. 50; Murphy v. Kerr (D. C.) 296 F. 536, 541.

Water Right Claim

A "water right claim," as filed with the state engineer, is merely a declaration of intention to create a water right. Washington State Sugar Co. v. Goodrich, 27 Idaho, 26, 147 P. 1073, 1076.

Waterscape.

An aqueduct or passage for water.

Waters of the United States

All waters within the United States which are navigable for the purposes of commerce, or whose navigation successfully aids commerce, are included in this term. The Daniel Ball, 6 Fed. Cas. 1161.

WATER COURSE. A natural stream of water fed from permanent or periodical natural sources and usually flowing in a particular direction in a defined channel, having a bed and banks or sides, and usually discharging itself into some other stream or body of water. Los Angeles v. Pomeroy, 124 Cal. 597, 57 Pac. 587; Chamberlain v. Hemingway, 63 Conn. 1, 27 Atl. 239, 38 Am. St. Rep. 330; Ribordy v. Murray, 177 Ill. 134, 52 N. E. 325; Rait v. Furrow, 74 Kan. 101, 85 Pac. 934, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 157; Dickinson v. Worcester, 7 Allen (Mass.) 19; Earl v. De Harcourt, 12 N. J. Eq. 284, 72 Am. Dec. 395; Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N. Y. 140, 40 Am. Rep. 519; Simmons v. Winters, 21 Or. 35, 27 Pac. 7, 28 Am. St. Rep. 727; Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co. v. Round, 220 Mich. 475, 190 N. W. 248, 249; Falcon v. Boyer, 157 Iowa, 745, 142 N. W. 427, 429; Walt v. Phillips, 166 Ark. 163, 266 S. W. 71, 73.

There must be a stream usually flowing in a particular direction, though it need not flow continually. It may sometimes be dry. It must flow in a definite channel, having a bed, sides, or banks, and usually discharge itself into some other stream or body of water. It must be something more than a mere surface drainage over the entire face of a tract of land, occasioned by unusual freshets or other extraordinary causes. It does not include the water flowing in the hollows or ravines in land, which is the mere surface water from rain or melting snow, and is discharged through them from a higher to a lower level, but which at other times are destitute of water. Such hollows or ravines are not, in legal contemplation, water courses. Hoyt v. Hudson, 27 Wis. 656, 9 Am. Rep. 473; Sanguinetti v. Pock, 136 Cal. 466, 69 P. 98, 89 Am. St. Rep. 169; Luther v. Winnisimmet Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 171; Pyle v. Richards, 17 Neb. 180, 22 N. W. 370. But if the topography of the surrounding country is such that water accumulates in great quantities after heavy rains or at the season of melting snows, and descends periodically through a well-defined channel which the force of the water has made for itself, and which is the accustomed channel through which it flows and has always flowed, such channel is to be deemed a natural water course. Kelly v. Dunning, 39 N. J. Eq. 482; Earl v. De Hart, 12 N. J. Eq. 280, 72 Am. Dec. 395; Simmons v. Winters, 21 Or. 35, 27 P. 7, 28 Am. St. Rep. 727; San Gabriel Valley Country Club v. Los Angeles County, 182 Cal. 302, 138 P. 554, 556, 9 A. L. R. 1200; Tierney v. Yakima County, 136 Wash. 481, 239 P. 248, 249.

Natural Water Course

A natural stream flowing in a defined bed or channel; one formed by the natural flow of the water, as determined by the general superficies or conformation of the surrounding country, as distinguished from an "artificial" water course, formed by the work of man, such as a ditch or canal. See Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N. Y. 140, 40 Am. Rep. 519; Hawley v. Sheldon, 64 Vt. 491, 24 Atl. 717, 33 Am. St. Rep. 941; Porter v. Armstrong, 129 N. C. 101, 39 S. E. 799; Gaskill v. Barnett, 52 Ind. App. 654, 101 N. E. 40, 42; Williams v. Bass, 179 Wis. 364, 191 N. W. 499, 500.

WATER-MARK. A mark indicating the highest point to which water rises, or the lowest point to which it sinks.

High-Water Mark

This term is properly applicable to tidal waters, and designates the line on the shore reached by the water at the high or flood tide. With reference to the waters of artificial ponds or lakes, created by dams in unnavigable streams, it denotes the highest point on the shores to which the dams can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 423, 14 L. Ed. 189; Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 437, 4 Am. Dec. 155; Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 128 Ala. 335, 30 South. 645, 64 L. R. A. 333, 86 Am. St. Rep. 143; Morrison v. First Nat. Bank, 88 Me. 155, 33 Atl. 782; Brady v. Blackinton, 113 Mass. 245; Cook v. McClure, 58 N. Y. 444, 17 Am. Rep. 270. The high-water mark of a river, not subject to tide, is the line which the river impresses on the soil by covering it for sufficient periods to deprive it of vegetation, and to destroy its value for agriculture. Raide v. Dollar, 34 Idaho, 682, 203 P. 469, 471; Diana Shooting Club v. Husting, 156 Wis. 261, 145 N. W. 816, 820, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1148; Union Sand & Gravel Co. v. Northcott, 102 W. Va. 519, 135 S. E. 589, 592; Tilden v. Smith, 94 Fla. 502, 113 So. 708, 712.

Low-Water Mark

That line on the shore of the sea which marks the edge of the waters at the lowest point of the ordinary ebb tide. See Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. 342, 100 Am. Dec. 566; Gerrish v. Prop'rs of Union Wharf, 26 Me. 395, 46 Am. Dec. 568. The "low-water mark," of a river is the point to which the water recedes at its lowest stage. Union Sand & Gravel Co. v. Northcott, 102 W. Va. 519, 135 S. E. 589, 593;

Joyce-Watkins Co. v. Industrial Commission, 325 Ill. 378, 156 N. E. 346, 348.

WATERED STOCK. Stock which is issued by a corporation as fully paid-up stock, when in fact the whole amount of the par value thereof has not been paid in. Harn v. Smith, 85 Okl. 137, 204 P. 642, 644; Bank of Commerce v. Goolsby, 129 Ark. 416, 196 S. W. 803, 807; Loud v. Solomon, 188 Mich. 7, 154 N. W. 73, 75.

WAVESON. In old records. Such goods as, after a wreck, swim or float on the waves. Jacob.

WAX SCOT. A duty anciently paid twice a year towards the charge of wax candles in churches. Spelman.

WAY. A passage, path, road, or street. In a technical sense, a right of passage over land.

A right of way is the privilege which an individual, or a particular description of persons, as the inhabitants of a village, or the owners or occupiers of certain farms, have of going over another's ground. It is an incorporeal hereditament of a real nature, entirely different from a public highway. Cruise, Dig. tit. 24, § 1.

The term "way" is derived from the Saxon, and means a right of use for passengers. It may be private or public. By the term "right of way" is generally meant a private way, which is an incorporeal hereditament of that class of easements in which a particular person, or particular description of persons, have an interest and a right, though another person is the owner of the fee of the land in which it is claimed. Wild v. Deig, 43 Ind. 455, 13 Am. Rep. 399.

"Ways are appendant or appurtenant" when they are incident to an estate, one terminus being on the land of the party claiming it; while "way in gross" must be a personal right, not assignable nor inheritable. Safety Building & Loan Co. v. Lyles, 131 S. C. 540, 128 S. E. 724, 725. See "Easement."

Private Way

A right which a person has of passing over the land of another. Jones v. Venable, 120 Ga. 1, 47 S. E. 549; Whiting v. Dudley, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 376; Kister v. Reeser, 98 Pa. 1, 42 Am. Rep. 608; Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 P. 879. In another sense (chiefly in New England) a private way is one laid out by the local public authorities for the accommodation of individuals and wholly or chiefly at their expense, but not restricted to their exclusive use, being subject, like highways, to the public easement of passage. See Metcalf v. Bingham, 3 N. H. 459; Clark v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co., 24 N. H. 118; Denham v. Bristol County, 108 Mass. 202; Butchers', etc., Ass'n v. Boston, 139 Mass. 290, 30 N. E. 94.

Right of Way

See that title.

Way of Necessity

A "way of necessity" exists where land granted is completely environed by land of the grantor, or partially by his land and the land of strangers. The law implies from these facts that a private right of way over the grantor's land was granted to the grantee as appurtenant to the estate. Gwinn v. Gwinn, 77 W. Va. 281, 87 S. E. 371, 373; Violet v. Martin, 62 Mont. 335, 205 P. 221, 223. "Way of necessity" is also reserved to vendor, whose land is accessible only over vendee's land. Alcorn v. Reading, 66 Utah, 509, 243 P. 922, 925 and is synonymous with easement by implication. Haas v. Brannon, 99 Okl. 94, 225 P. 931, 935. See "Easement."

WAY-BILL. A writing in which is set down the names of passengers who are carried in a public conveyance, or the description of goods sent with a common carrier by land. Whar-ton.

WAY-GOING CROP. A crop of grain sown by a tenant for a term certain, during his tenancy, but which will not ripen until after the expiration of his lease; to this, by custom in some places, the tenant is entitled. Marple v. Brister, 63 Pa. Super. Ct. 470, 473.

WAYLEAVE is a right of way over or through land for the carriage of minerals from a mine or quarry. It is an easement, being a species of the class called "rights of way," and is generally created by express grant or reservation. Sweet.

WAYNAGIUM. Implements of husbandry. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 5, p. 268.

WAYS AND MEANS. In a legislative body, the "committee on ways and means" is a committee appointed to inquire into and consider the methods and sources for raising revenue, and to propose means for providing the funds needed by the government.

WAYWARDENS. The English highway acts provide that in every parish forming part of a highway district there shall annually be elected one or more waywardens. The waywardens so elected, and the justices for the county residing within the district, form the highway board for the district. Each waywarden also represents his parish in regard to the levying of the highway rates, and in questions arising concerning the liability of his parish to repairs, etc. Sweet.

WEALD. Sax. A wood; the woody part of a country.

WEALREAF. In old English law. The robbing of a dead man in his grave.

WEALTH. All material objects, capable of satisfying human wants, desires, or tastes, having a value in exchange, and upon which human labor has been expended; i. e., which have, by such labor, been either reclaimed from nature, extracted or gathered from the earth or sea, manufactured from raw materials, improved, adopted, or cultivated.

"The aggregate of all the things, whether material or immaterial, which contribute to comfort and enjoyment, which cannot be obtained without more or less labor, and which are objects of frequent barter and sale, is what we usually call 'wealth.'" Bowen, Pol. Econ. See Branham v. State, 96 Ga. 307, 22 S. E. 957.

WEAPON. An instrument used in fighting; an instrument of offensive or defensive combat. People v. Simons, 124 Misc. 28, 207 N. Y. S. 56, 57. The term is chiefly used, in law, in the statutes prohibiting the carrying of "concealed" or "deadly" weapons. See those titles. And see also "Offensive."

WEAR, or WEIR. A great dam or fence made across a river, or against water, formed of stakes interlaced by twigs of osier, and accommodated for the taking of fish, or to convey a stream to a mill. Cowell; Jacob.

WEAR AND TEAR. "Natural wear and tear" means deterioration or depreciation in value by ordinary and reasonable use of the subject-matter. Green v. Kelly, 20 N. J. Law, 548.

WEARING APPAREL. As generally used in statutes, refers not merely to a person's outer clothing, but covers all articles usually worn, and includes underclothing; Arnold v. U. S., 147 U. S. 494, 13 S. Ct. 406, 37 L. Ed. 253. It may include a gold watch; Stewart v. McClung, 12 Or. 431, 8 P. 447, 53 Am. Rep. 374; but see Smith v. Rogers, 16 Ga. 479; Gooch v. Gooch, 33 Me. 535; a pearl necklace; U. S. v. One Pearl Chain, 71 C. C. A. 500, 139 F. 513; but not a travelling trunk or a breastpin; Towns v. Pratt, 33 N. H. 345, 66 Am. Dec. 726; and under the revenue laws shoes are not included; Swayne v. Hager (C. C.) 37 F. 782.

WEATHERING. "Weathering" of natural gas to produce commercial gasoline is merely separating off by evaporation a sufficient quantity of the highly volatile constituents to reduce the vapor tension of the remaining liquor mixture to the desired figure. Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corporation v. Texas Co. (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 199, 201.

WED. Sax. A covenant or agreement. Cowell. A pledge. Jenks, Hist. E. L. 13.

WEDBEDRIP. Sax. In old English law. A customary service which tenants paid to their lords, in cutting down their corn, or doing other harvest duties; as if a covenant to reap for the lord at the time of his bidding or commanding. Cowell.

WEEK. A period of seven consecutive days of time; and, in some uses, the period beginning with Sunday and ending with Saturday. See Leach v. Burr, 188 U. S. 510, 23 S. Ct. 393, 47 L. Ed. 567; Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. 361, 7 L. Ed. 882; Evans v. Job, 8 Nev. 324; Bird v. Burgsteiner, 100 Ga. 486, 28 S. E. 219; Steinle v. Bell, 12 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 175; Russell v. Croy, 164 Mo. 69, 63 S. W. 849; Medland v. Linton, 60 Neb. 249, 82 N. W. 866; In re Wright's Will, 224 N. Y. 293, 120 N. E. 725, 726; United States v. Southern Pac. Co. (C. C. A.) 209 F. 562, 567.

WEEK-WORK. In early English times, the obligation of a tenant to work two or three days in every week for his lord, during the greater part of the year, and four or five during the summer months. 1 Poll. & Maitl. 349.

WEHADING. In old European law. The judicial combat, or duel; the trial by battle.

WEIGHAGE. In English law. A duty or toll paid for weighing merchandise. It is called "tronage" for weighing wool at the king's beam, or "pesage" for weighing other avoirdupois goods. 2 Chit. Com. Law, 16.

WEIGHT. A measure of heaviness or ponderosity; and in a metaphorical sense influence, effectiveness, or power to influence judgment or conduct. The quantity of heaviness, the quality of being heavy, the degree or extent of downward pressure under the influence of gravity, or the quantity of matter as estimated by the balance or scale. Dwight & Lloyd Sintering Co. v. American Ore Reclamation Co. (C. C. A.) 263 F. 315, 316.

Gross Weight

The whole weight of goods and merchandise, including the dust and dross, and also the chest or bag, etc., upon which tare and tret are allowed.

Miner's Weight

Such quantity of mine-run material, as operators and miners may, from time to time, agree as being necessary or sufficient to produce a ton of prepared coal. Drake v. Berry, 259 Pa. 8, 102 A. 315, 320.

WEIR. A fence or an inclosure of twigs, set in a stream to catch fish. Pub. St. Mass. p. 1297; Treat v. Chipman, 35 Me. 38.

WELDING. The art, practiced immemorially, of uniting two pieces of metal in one piece by heating those portions which are to be welded to a temperature at which they become plastic, and then pressing them strongly together, so as to effect a union. Thomson Spot Welder Co. v. Ford Motor Co., 265 U. S. 445, 44 S. Ct. 533, 534, 68 L. Ed. 1098.

WELFARE. Well-doing or well-being in any respect; the enjoyment of health and common blessings of life; exemption from any evil or calamity; prosperity; happiness. Wise-man v. Tanner (D. C.) 221 F. 694, 698.

WESTMINSTER THE FIRST, STATUTE OF. The statute 3 Edw. I., A. D. 1275. This statute, which deserves the name of a code rather than an act, is divided into fifty-one chapters. Without extending the exemption of churchmen from civil jurisdiction, it protects the property of the church from the violence and spoliation of the king and the nobles, provides for freedom of popular elections, because sheriffs, coroners, and conservators of the peace were still chosen by the freeholders in the county court, and attempts had been made to influence the election of knights of the shire, from the time when they were instituted. It contains a declaration to enforce the enactment of Magna Charta against excessive fines, which might operate as perpetual imprisonment; enumerates and corrects the abuses of tenures, particularly as to marriage of wards; regulates the levying of tolls, which were imposed arbitrarily by the barons and by cities and boroughs; corrects and restrains the powers of the king's escheator and other officers; amends the criminal law, putting the crime of rape on the footing to which it has been lately restored, as a most grievous, but not capital, offense; and embraces the subject of procedure in civil and criminal matters, introducing many regulations to render it cheap, simple, and expeditious. 1 Camp. Lives Ld. Ch. p. 167; 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 9, p. 107. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

WESTMINSTER THE SECOND, STATUTE OF. The statute 13 Edw. I. St. 1, A. D. 1285, otherwise called the "Statute de Donis Conditionalibus." See 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, c. 10, p. 163. Certain parts of this act are repealed by St. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 64, and St. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125. Wharton.

WESTMINSTER THE THIRD, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in the eighteenth year of Edward I. More commonly known as the "Statute of Quia Emptores," (q. v.). See Barring. Ob. St. 167-169.

WEST SAXON LAGE. The laws of the West Saxons, which obtained in the counties to the south and west of England, from Kent to Devonshire. Blackstone supposes these to have been much the same with the laws of Alfred, being the municipal law of the far most considerable part of his dominions, and particularly including Berkshire, the seat of his peculiar residence. 1 Bl. Comm. 65.

WET. A term used to designate one in favor of allowing the sale of intoxicating liquors. State v. Shumaker, 200 Ind. 623, 157 N. E. 769, 778.

WETHER. A castrated ram, at least one year old. In an indictment it may be called a "sheep." Rex v. Birket, 4 Car. & P. 216.

WHACK. To divide into shares, apportion, parcel out, make a division settlement, square accounts, or to pay. Schook v. Zimmerman, 188 Mich. 617, 155 N. W. 526, 531.

WHALE. A royal fish, the head being the king's property, and the tail the queen's. 2 Steph. Comm. 19, 448, 540.

WHALER. A vessel employed in the whale fishery.

WHARF. A perpendicular bank or mound, raised on the shore of a harbor, river, canal, etc., or extending some distance into the water, for the convenience of lading and unloading vessels. Webster.

A broad, plain place near a river, canal, or other water, to lay wares on that are brought to or from the water. Cowell.

A structure erected on a shore below high-water mark, and sometimes extending into the channel, for the laying vessels alongside to load or unload, and on which stores are often erected for the reception of cargoes. Doane v. Broad Street Ass'n, 6 Mass. 332; Langdon v. New York, 93 N. Y. 151; Dubuque v. Stout, 32 Iowa, 47; Geiger v. Filor, 8 Fla. 332; Palen v. Ocean City, 64 N. J. Law, 669, 46 Atl. 774; State v. Meaher, 213 Ala. 466, 105 So. 562, 580; Harris v. City of St. Helens, 72 Or. 377, 143 P. 941, 944, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1073.

Private Wharf

One whose owner or lessee has the exclusive enjoyment or use thereof. Hamilton v. Portland State Pier Site Dist., 120 Me. 15, 112 A. 836, 840; The M. L. C. No. 10 (C. C. A.) 10 F.(2d) 699, 702.

Public Wharf

One to which vessels and the public can resort, either at will or on assignment of a berth by a harbor authority. Kaffine v. Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal Co., 180 App. Div. 858, 168 N. Y. S. 120, 121.

Sufferance Wharves

Such as may be appointed by the commissioners for the purpose of customs, under the British act of 1876.

WHARFAGE. The money paid for landing goods upon, or loading them from, a wharf. Dane, Abr. Index; Sacramento v. The "New World," 4 Cal. 41. A charge against a vessel for using or lying at a wharf or landing. Adams v. John R. White & Son, 38 R. I. 240, 94 A. 675; Blank v. Marine Basin Co., 178 App. Div. 666, 165 N. Y. S. 883, 884.

Strictly speaking "wharfage" is money due, or money actually paid, for the privilege of landing goods upon a wharf or loading a vessel from a wharf. 1 Brown, Adm. 37.

WHARFINGER. One who owns or keeps a wharf for the purpose of receiving and shipping merchandise to or from it for hire. M. & J. Tracy v. Marks, Lissberger & Son (C. C. A.) 283 F. 100, 101.

WHEEL. An engine of torture used in medieval Europe, on which a criminal was bound while his limbs or bones were broken one by one till he died.

WHEELAGE. Duty or toll paid for carts, etc., passing over certain ground. Cowell.

WHELPS. The young of certain animals of a base nature or fera natura.

As long as. Moore v. Johnson, 85 N. J. Law, 40, 88 A. 699, 701; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Waterloo, C. F. & N. Ry. Co., 182 Iowa, 550, 164 N. W. 208, 209.

As soon as; upon which; where; in case; if. People v. Merhige, 212 Mich. 601, 180 N. W. 418, 422; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Waterloo, C. F. & N. Ry. Co., 182 Iowa, 550, 164 N. W. 208, 209; Louisiana & A. Ry. Co. v. Woodson, 127 Ark. 323, 192 S. W. 174, 177; Crawford v. Weidemeyer, 93 Ohio St. 461, 113 N. E. 267, 268.

This word, though often used as equivalent to "as soon as," is also often used where the time intended by it is, and will be until its arrival, or for some uncertain period at least, indeterminate. Robinson v. Greene, 14 R. I. 188.

WHERE. At the place. Girl v. U. S. Railroad Administration, 194 Iowa, 1382, 189 N. W. 834, 835; Shearer v. Farmers' Life Ins. Co., 106 Kan. 574, 189 P. 648, 650. As used in the statutory language, "where the prosecution is held," the word does not refer to the geographical location of the place of hearing, but rather to the tribunal or official before whom the case is tried. Barth v. State, 107 Ohio St. 154, 140 N. E. 650, 651.

If; in the case of; in the event that. Graham v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 119 S. C. 218, 112 S. E. 88, 89.

Where there is equal equity, the law must prevail. Bisp. Eq. § 40; 4 Bouv. Inst. n. 3727.

Where two rights concur, the more ancient shall be preferred.

WHEREAS. When in fact. Used in this sense in a pleading, it does not transform an averment into a recital. Stoltz v. People, 59 Colo. 342, 148 P. 865, 866.

This word may, however, imply a recital of a past fact, and, in general, cannot be used in the direct and positive averment of a fact in a declaration or plea. Those facts which are directly denied by the terms of the general issue, or which may, by the established usage of pleading, be specially traversed, must be averred in positive and direct terms; but facts, however material, which are not directly denied by the terms of the general issue, though liable to be contested under it, and which, according to the usage of pleading, cannot be specially traversed, may be alleged in the declaration by way of recital, under a whereas. 2 Chitty, Pl. 151, 178, 191.

Although. Hill v. Smith, 95 Conn. 579, 111 A. 840, 842.

WHEREUPON. Upon which; after which. Lee v. Cook, 1 Wyo. 419.

WHEREVER. As often as. Moore v. Johnson, 85 N. J. Law, 40, 88 A. 699, 701.

WHICH. A clause introduced by the relative pronoun "which" is a sufficient allegation of the fact stated in it, if, when read in connection with its context, it plainly manifests an intent on the part of the pleader to set up such fact and rely upon it. Bishop v. Wheeling Mold & Foundry Co., 82 W. Va. 637, 96 S. E. 1020, 1022.

WHIG. This name was applied in Scotland, A. D. 1648, to those violent Covenanters who opposed the Duke of Hamilton's invasion of England in order to restore Charles I. The appellation of "Whig" and "Tory" to political factions was first heard of in A. D. 1679, and, though as senseless as any cant terms that could be devised, they became instantly as familiar in use as they have since continued. 2 Hall. Const. Hist. c. 12; Wharton.

WHILE. Pending or during the time that. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 161 Ga. 559, 131 S. E. 359, 360; In re Naugle's Estate, 268 Pa. 481, 112 A. 24, 25; American Steam Laundry Co. v. Riverside Printing Co., 171 Wis. 644, 177 N. W. 852, 853.

WHIPPING. A mode of punishment, by the infliction of stripes, occasionally used in England and in a few of the American states. See Act of February 28, 1839, § 5 (18 USCA § 545); 1 Geo. IV, c. 57; 5 & 6 Vict.; 25 Vict. c. 18; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100; and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 96.

WHIPPING-POST. A post or stake to which a criminal is tied to undergo the punishment of whipping.

WHISKY. An intoxicating liquor; Hensberg v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 288 F. 370, 371; Singer v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 278 F. 415, 417; containing many times one-half of 1 per cent. of alcohol; Albert v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 281 F. 511, 513; and at least more than 2.75 per cent. of alcohol; People ex rel. Thomsen v. Commissioner of Correction of New York City, 115 Misc. 331, 188 N. Y. S. 46, 52; distilled from grain, barley, maize, wheat, rye, etc.; Mullins v. Commonwealth, 115 Va. 945, 79 S. E. 324, 327; Weller v. State, 150 Md. 278, 132 A. 624, 626; and generally used as a beverage; State v. Wright, 312 Mo. 626, 280 S. W. 703, 705; U. S. v. Jones (D. C.) 298 F. 131, 133.

Within the pure food act of 1906, it is the product of sound grain distilled at a low temperature so as to retain in the distillate the congeneric properties of the grain which gives to the liquor when matured by aging in charred casks its desirable potable character. Neutral spirits which are distilled at a high temperature may be made from different materials and do not contain such properties, and which are not rendered potable by aging although reduced by water to potable strength, and from which most of the fusel oil has been removed, are not whisky, nor a like substance with whisky. Woolner & Co. v. Rennick (C. C.) 170 F. 662.

As used in a Montana statute, the term includes illicitly distilled or produced (i. e., "moonshine") whisky, even though it contains fusel oil and is not aged or proved as was whisky in commerce when the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted. State v. Sedlacek, 74 Mont. 201, 239 P. 1002, 1005.

WHITE ACRE. A fictitious name given to a piece of land, in the English books, for purposes of illustration.

WHITE BONNET. In Scotch law. A fictitious offerer or bidder at a roup or auction sale. Bell.

WHITE MEATS. In old English law. Milk, butter, cheese, eggs, and any composition of them. Cowell.

WHITE METAL. In a special technical sense, the copper sulphide remaining when, in smelting copper ore, copper matte is treated to break up and remove iron sulphide. United Verde Copper Co. v. Peirce-Smith Converter Co. (C. C. A.) 7 F.(2d) 13, 14.

WHITE MULE. Corn whisky. State v. Johnson (Mo. Sup.) 292 S. W. 41. Contraband whisky. Sloan v. State, 193 Ind. 625, 141 N. E. 321.

WHITE PERSONS. As used in Rev. St. U. S. § 2169 (Naturalization Act March 26, 1790, c. 3, 1 Stat. 103, as amended by Act Feb. 18, 1875, c. 80, § 1, 18 Stat. 318 [8 USCA § 359]), members of the white or Caucasian race, as distinct from the black, red, yellow, and brown races. Petition of Easurk Emsen Charr (D. C.) 273 F. 207, 209; Takao Ozawa v. U. S., 260 U. S. 178, 43 S. Ct. 65, 68, 67 L. Ed. 199; In re Ah Yup, 5 Sawy. 155, Fed. Cas. No. 104.

This term, however, does not necessarily include all Caucasians. In re Sadar Bhagwab Singh (D. C.) 246 F. 496, 499. It is a popular and not a scientific term, and must be given its popular meaning, and as such is not to be construed as identical with "Caucasian," unless the latter term is given its popular meaning, as referring to recognized racial distinctions existing at present, and not to possibly common ancestry of dissimilar races. In the popular meaning, "white persons" refers to immigrants from the British Isles and Northwestern Europe, who composed most of the population when the Naturalization Act was adopted, and the later immigrants from Eastern, Southern, and Middle Europe, who were unquestionably akin to those already here and readily amalgamated with them; and does not include a high-caste Hindu, even though some authorities class such Hindus as members of the Caucasian race. U. S. v. Bhagat Singh Thind, 261 U. S. 204, 43 S. Ct. 338, 339, 341, 67 L. Ed. 616; Akhay Kumar Mozumdar v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 299 F. 240, 242; U. S. v. Khan (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 1006, 1007.

The term excludes, in addition to a high-caste Hindu or an Arabian; U. S. v. Ali (D. C.) 7 F.(2d) 728, 731; a Mongolian; In re Ah Yup, 5 Sawy. 155, Fed. Cas. No. 104; In re Fisher (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 1007; Terrace v. Thompson (D. C.) 274 F. 841, 843; In re Lampitoe (D. C.) 222 F. 382. It has been held to include a Syrian; Dow v. United States (C. C. A.) 226 F. 145; In re Ellis (D. C.) 179 F. 1002; Bessho v. U. S., 178 F. 245, 101 C. C. A. 605; and an Armenian; In re Halladjian (C. C.) 174 F. 834.

In the legislation of the slave period, persons without admixture of colored blood, whatever the actual complexion might be. Du Val v. Johnson, 39 Ark. 192. See, also, White Race.

In South Africa, persons of European descent. [1905] T. S. 621.

WHITE RACE. Within the meaning of the Mississippi Constitution of 1890, § 207, providing that there shall be separate schools for the white and colored races, the Caucasian race;—the term "colored races," being used in contradistinction to the white race, and embracing all other races. Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 107. See, also, White Persons.

WHITE RENTS. In English law. Rents paid in silver, and called "white rents," or "redditus albi," to distinguish them from rents payable in corn, labor, provisions, etc., called "black-rent" or "black-mail." Co. 2d Inst. 19. See Alba Firma.

WHITE SLAVE. A term used in the United States statutes and in common talk (though not very appropriately) to indicate a female with reference to whom an offense is committed under the so-called Mann White Slave Traffic Act of June 25, 1910 (18 USCA §§ 397-404), prohibiting the transportation in interstate and foreign commerce for immoral purposes of women and girls.

WHITE SPURS. A kind of esquires. Cowell.

WHITECAPS. The name of an unlawful organization against which Tennessee in 1897 enacted a statute (Acts 1897, c. 52) entitled, "An act to prevent and punish the formation or continuance of conspiracies and combinations for certain unlawful purposes," etc., commonly known as the "Law against White-caps." Persons guilty of any offense under the act were rendered incompetent for jury service. Jenkins v. State, 99 Tenn. 539, 42 S. W. 263.

WHITEFRIARS. A place in London between the Temple and Blackfriars, which was formerly a sanctuary, and therefore privileged from arrest. Wharton.

WHITEHART SILVER. A mulct on certain lands in or near to the forest of Whitehart, paid into the exchequer, imposed by Henry III. upon Thomas de la Linda, for killing a beautiful white hart which that king before had spared in hunting. Camd. Brit. 150.

WHITSUN FARTHING. Pentecostals, (q. v.)

WHITSUNTIDE. The feast of Pentecost, being the fiftieth day after Easter, and the first of the four cross-quarter days of the year. Wharton.

WHITTANWARII. In old English law. A class of offenders who whitened stolen ox-hides and horse-hides so that they could not be known and identified.

WHOEVER. This word in statutes may be construed as including corporations and partnerships. American Socialist Soc. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 266 F. 212, 213; U. S. v. American Socialist Soc. (D. C.) 260 F. 885, 887.

WHOLE. Hale, hearty, strong, sound; also, entire, complete. Great Eastern Casualty Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 687.

WHOLE BLOOD. See Blood.

WHOLE CHEST. In the tea trade, a chest containing 100 to 140 pounds or more. Japan Tea Co. v. Franklin MacVeagh & Co., 142 Minn. 152, 171 N. W. 305, 307.

WHOLESALE. To sell by wholesale is to sell by large parcels, generally in original packages, and not by retail; to sell goods in gross to retailers, who sell to consumers. Kass v. Hirschberg, Schultz & Co., 191 App. Div. 300, 181 N. Y. S. 35, 37. A sale at "retail" and one at "wholesale" are opposed to each other, one being a sale in small quantities, and the other in large quantities. Kentucky Consumers' Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 192 Ky. 437, 233 S. W. 892, 893. See, also, Commonwealth v. Consolidated Dressed Beef Co., 245 Pa. 605, 91 A. 1065, 1066, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 966. In statutes, however, the term "wholesale dealer" may include retail dealers. State v. Pioneer Oil & Refining Co. (Tex. Com. App.) 292 S. W. 869, 872.

WHOLESALE PRICE. The price fixed on merchandise by one who buys in large quantities from the producer or manufacturer, and who sells the same to jobbers or to retail dealers therein. Fawcner v. Paper Co., 88 Iowa, 169, 55 N. W. 200, 45 Am. St. Rep. 230.

WHOLESALE. One who buys in comparatively large quantities, and who sells, usually in smaller quantities, but never to the ultimate consumer of an individual unit. He sells either to a "jobber," a sort of middleman, or to a "retailer," who sells to the consumer. The quantities bought by the wholesaler may vary from a fraction of a car load to many car loads; it being the character, not of his buying, but of his selling, that marks him as a wholesaler. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Cream of Wheat Co. (C. C. A.) 227 F. 46, 47. Under an act regulating the sale of imitation milk, a person selling cans of milk in quantities of one full case or more at a time. Ex parte Reineger, 184 Cal. 97, 193 P. 81, 83.

WHOLLY. Not partially. Corsaut v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the United States, 203 Iowa, 741, 211 N. W. 222, 224, 51 A. L. R. 1035; McCormick v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 117 Kan. 686, 232 P. 1071, 1074. In a whole or complete manner; entirely; completely; perfectly. Knox v. Washer, 153 Tenn. 630, 284 S. W. 888, 889. A building, however, may be "wholly destroyed" within the meaning of an insurance policy, even though there is not an absolute extinction of all the parts of the building. Horine v. Royal Ins. Co., Limited, of Liverpool, 199 Mo. App. 107, 201 S. W. 958, 963.

Exclusively; to the exclusion of other things. Commonwealth v. City of Richmond, 116 Va. 69, 81 S. E. 69, 73, L. R. A. 1915A, 1118.

Equally. The Canadian Farmer (D. C.) 290 F. 601, 603.

WHORE. A woman who practices illicit sexual intercourse, either for hire or to gratify a depraved passion. Rowe v. Myers, 204 Mich. 374, 169 N. W. 823, 825. A woman given to promiscuous intercourse. Barnett v. Phelps, 97 Or. 242, 191 P. 502, 503, 11 A. L. R. 663. A woman who practices unlawful commerce with men, particularly one who does so for hire; a harlot; a concubine; a prostitute. Sheehy v. Cokley, 43 Iowa, 183, 22 Am. Rep. 236.

WHOREMASTER. Ordinarily, one who practices lewdness; also, one who keeps or procures whores for others; a pimp; a procurer. Hickerson v. Masters, 190 Ky. 168, 226 S. W. 1072, 1073.

WIC. A place on the sea-shore or the bank of a river.

WICA. A country house or farm. Cowell.

WICK. Sax. A village, town, or district. Hence, in composition, the territory over which a given jurisdiction extends. Thus, "bailiwick" is the territorial jurisdiction of a bailiff or sheriff or constable. "Sheriff-wick" was also used in the old books.

WIDEN. To increase in width; to extend. In re Day, 109 A. 573, 7 Boyce (Del.) 556.

WIDOW. A woman whose husband is dead, and who has not remarried. Meton v. State Industrial Insurance Department, 177 P. 696, 697, 104 Wash. 652; Block v. P. & G. Realty Co., 124 A. 372, 96 N. J. Eq. 159; Rosenbloom v. Southern Pac. Co., 59 Cal. App. 102, 210 P. 53; O'Malley v. O'Malley, 46 Mont. 549, 129 P. 501, 502, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 662; Inslee v. Rochester & S. R. Co., 214 App. Div. 680, 213 N. Y. S. 6, 8; In re Application for Support of Minor Children, 164 Iowa, 208, 145 N. W. 467, 469; In re Ryan's Estate, 174 Mo. App. 202, 156 S. W. 759, 760. A widow who has married again cannot be a widow. 20 Q. B. D. 103. Contra, Hansen v. Brann & Stewart Co., 90 N. J. Law, 444, 103 A. 696, 697; Mathews v. Marsden, 71 Mont. 502, 230 P. 775, 778.

A written instrument executed with the formalities of law, whereby a person makes a disposition of his property to take effect after his death. Tax Commission of Ohio v. Parker, 117 Ohio St. 215, 158 N. E. 89, 90; Loveren v. Eaton, 80 N. H. 62, 113 A. 206; Harris v. Harris' Estate (Tex. Civ. App.) 276 S. W. 964, 966; McDermid v. Bourhill, 101 Or. 305, 199 P. 610, 612, 22 A. L. R. 428; In re Hill's Estate, 126 Misc. 768, 215 N. Y. S. 655, 656. The term may include an instrument, duly executed in testamentary form, merely naming an executor, without disposing of property. Fontaine v. Fontaine, 169 Ark. 1077, 277 S.W. 867. It also includes codicils. Newhall v. Newhall, 280 Ill. 199, 117 N. E. 476, 477; Decedent Estate Law N. Y. § 2; Revisal N. C. 1905, § 2831, subd. 9; (Code 1931, § 3949, subd. 9); Code Iowa, § 48, par. 17 (Code 1931, § 63, par. 17).

An instrument by which a person makes a disposition of his property, to take effect after his decease, which instrument is, in its own nature, ambulatory and revocable during his life. Wells v. Lewis, 190 Ky. 626, 228 S. W. 3, 4; McConnell v. Robbins, 193 Ind. 359, 140 N. E. 59, 61. It is this ambulatory quality which forms the characteristic of wills; for though a disposition by deed may postpone the possession or enjoyment, or even the vesting, until the death of the disposing party, yet the postponement is in such case produced by the express terms, and does not result from the nature of the instrument. McDaniel v. Johns, 45 Miss. 641. And see Jasper v. Jasper, 17 Or. 590, 22 P. 152; Leathers v. Greenacre, 53 Me. 567; Cover v. Stem, 67 Md. 449, 10 A. 231, 1 Am. St. Rep. 406; George v. Green, 13 N. H. 524; In re Harrison's Estate, 196 Pa. 576, 46 A. 888; Bayley v. Bailey, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 249; Reagan v. Stanley, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 324; Lane v. Hill, 63 N. H. 398, 44 Atl. 507; Conklin v. Egerton, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 436. If the grantor intends that the title of the property described in the instrument shall pass on its execution to the grantee, it is a deed, though the interest conveyed or its enjoyment is postponed till after the death of the grantor; but, if it is intended no interests shall vest till after the grantor's death, it is a will, as a deed cannot be ambulatory. Phifer v. Mullis, 83 S. E. 582, 584, 167 N. C. 405; Henderson v. Henderson, 210 Ala. 73, 97 So. 353, 372; Civ. Code Ga. 1910, § 3828. Instruments conveying a present interest are deeds, and not wills; Jung v. Petermann (Tex. Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 202, 205; for wills pass no interest until after the death of the maker; Willis v. Fiveash (Tex. Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 509, 510; Sims v. Brown, 252 Mo. 58, 158 S. W. 624, 627.

Except where it would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the legislature, the word "will" shall extend to a testament, and to a codicil, and to an appointment by will, or by writing in the nature of a will, in exercise of a power; and also to any other testamentary disposition. Code Va. 1887, § 2511 (Code 1930, § 5226).

The distinction between a "will" and a "power of appointment" is that a will concerns the estate of the testator, while an appointment under a power concerns that of the donor of the power. Thompson v. Pew, 214 Mass. 520, 102 N. E. 122.

The difference between a will and a trust is that a will operates from the moment of death, while a trust operates in præsentia to a certain extent. Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

A gift inter vivos is distinguishable from a will in that such a gift may be made by parol and, upon the acceptance of the gift by the donee, the gift is irrevocable by the donor, while ordinarily a will is required to be in writing, and usually is made in view of the fact of death, and is ineffective until the death of the testator and the admission of the will to probate. York v. Trigg, 87 Okl. 214, 209 P. 417, 423.

The term will, as an expression of the final disposition of one's property, is confined to the English laws and those countries which derive their jurisprudence from that source. The term testamentum, or testament, is exclusively used in the Roman civil law and by the continental writers upon that subject.

A will, when it operates upon personal property, is sometimes called a "testament," and when upon real estate, a "devise;" but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument embracing equally real and personal estate is that of "last will and testament." 4 Kent, Comm. 501; In re Kiltz's Will, 211 N. Y. S. 450, 461, 125 Misc. Rep. 475.

In Criminal Law

The power of the mind which directs the action of a man.

In Scotch Practice

That part or clause of a process which contains the mandate or command to the officer. Bell.

In General

—Ambulatory will. A changeable will (ambulatoria voluntas), the phrase merely denoting the power which a testator possesses of altering his will during his life-time. See Hattersley v. Bissett, 50 N. J. Eq. 577, 25 A. 332.

—Conditional will. A conditional disposition is one which depends upon the occurrence of some uncertain event, by which it is either to take effect or to be defeated. Rogers v. Mosier, 121 Okl. 213, 245 P. 36, 38. If the happening of an event named in a will is the reason for making the will, it is "unconditional"; but, if the testator intends to dispose of his property in case the event happens, the will is "conditional." Ferguson v. Ferguson (Tex. Civ. App.) 288 S. W. 833, 835.

—Conjoint will. See Joint Will, infra.

—Counter wills. Another name for "double," "mutual," or "reciprocal" wills. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S. W. 188, 189.

—Double will. Called also a "counter," "mutual," or "reciprocal" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S. W. 188, 189. See Double.

—Estate at will. This estate entitles the grantee or lessee to the possession of land during the pleasure of both the grantor and himself, yet it creates no sure or durable right, and is bounded by no definite limits as to duration. It must be at the reciprocal will of both parties, (for, if it be at the will of the lessor only, it is a lease for life,) and the dissent of either determines it. Wharton.

—Holographic will. One that is entirely written, dated, and signed by the hand of the testator himself. In re Hall's Estate, 106 Okl. 124, 235 P. 916, 917; In re Cole's Will, 171 N. C. 74, 87 S. E. 962; Civ. Code La. art. 1588. Sometimes spelled "olographic." Succession of Cunningham, 142 La. 701, 77 So. 506, 510. The statutes in the different states differ to some extent, but agree substantially with the English statute of Charles II. Compliance with the precise terms of the statutory definition or requirements is commonly insisted upon with the utmost meticulousity. In re Thorn's Estate, 183 Cal. 512, 192 P. 19, 20.

—Joint and mutual will. One executed jointly by two persons with reciprocal provisions, which shows on its face that the devisees are made one in consideration of the other. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S. W. 188, 189; Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S. E. 572, 573.

—Joint will. One where the same instrument is made the will of two or more persons and is jointly signed by them. Such wills are usually executed to make testamentary disposition of joint property. Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S. E. 572, 573; Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa, 385, 153 N. W. 56, 58. A joint or conjoint will is a testamentary instrument executed by two or more persons, in pursuance of a common intention, for the purpose of disposing of their several interests in property owned by them in common, or of their separate property treated as a common fund, to a third person or persons. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N. C. 85, 91 S. E. 696.

—Mutual will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N. C. 85, 91 S. E. 696. "Mutual wills" are the separate wills of two persons which are reciprocal in their provisions, and such a will may be both joint and mutual. Campbell v. Dunkelberger, 172 Iowa, 385, 153 N. W. 56, 58; Carle v. Miles, 89 Kan. 540, 132 P. 146, Ann. Cas. 1915A, 363; Bright v. Cox, 147 Ga. 474, 94 S. E. 572, 573. Sometimes called a "reciprocal," "double," or "counter" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S. W. 188, 189.

—Mystic will. See Testament.

—Non-intervention will. In some jurisdictions, one authorizing the executor to act without bond and to manage, control, and settle the estate without the intervention of any court whatsoever. In re MacDonald's Estate, 29 Wash. 422, 428, 69 P. 1111.

—Nuncupative will. See that title.

—Reciprocal will. One in which two or more persons make mutual or reciprocal provisions in favor of each other. Ginn v. Edmundson, 173 N. C. 85, 91 S. E. 696. Also known as a "mutual," "double," or "counter" will. Wright v. Wright, 215 Ky. 394, 285 S. W. 188, 189.

—Unofficial will. In the civil law, testamentum inofficium. One made in disregard of natural obligations as to inheritance. Stein v. Wilzinski, 4 Redf. Sur. (N. Y.) 450; 2 Bla. Comm. 502; Hadley, Rom. L. 317. It has no place in the common law; 1 Fost. & F. 578.

—Statute of wills. See Wills Act, infra.

WILLA. In Hindu law. The relation between a master or patron and his freedman, and the relation between two persons who had made a reciprocal testamentary contract. Wharton.

WILLFUL. Proceeding from a conscious motion of the will; voluntary. Nashville, C. &

St. L. Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 160 Ky. 50, 169 S. W. 511, 513.

Intractable; having a headstrong disposition to act by the rule of contradiction. Bersch v. Morris & Co., 106 Kan. 800, 189 P. 934, 935, 9 A. L. R. 1374. Obstinate; perverse. Lynch v. Commonwealth, 131 Va. 762, 109 S. E. 427, 428; Jones v. State, 7 Ala. App. 180, 62 So. 306, 307.

Intending the result which actually comes to pass; designed; intentional; not accidental or involuntary. Garrett v. Commonwealth, 215 Ky. 484, 285 S. W. 203, 204; State v. Muzzy, 87 Vt. 267, 88 A. 895, 896; In re Pierce, 163 N. C. 247, 79 S. E. 507, 508; Williams v. State, 92 Fla. 648, 109 So. 805, 806; Ezell v. Tipton, 150 Tenn. 300, 264 S. W. 355, 358; In re Keeler (D. C.) 243 F. 770, 771; State v. Baumann, 311 Mo. 443, 278 S. W. 974, 976; Thompson v. Hays (C. C. A.) 11 F. (2d) 244, 248; State v. Psaras, 121 Wash. 156, 208 P. 1094; Stockdale v. Industrial Commission of Colorado, 76 Colo. 494, 232 P. 669, 670; Cover v. Taliaferro, 142 Md. 586, 122 A. 2, 6; Grand Trunk Ry. Co. v. United States (C. C. A.) 229 F. 116, 119; State v. Avery, 111 Kan. 588, 207 P. 883, 840, 23 A. L. R. 453; Miller v. State, 9 Okl. Cr. 55, 130 P. 813, 815; People v. Baylinton, 211 App. Div. 40, 206 N. Y. S. 804, 807; People v. Harrison, 238 N. Y. 348, 144 N. E. 636, 637; Reeves v. State (Tex. Civ. App.) 258 S. W. 577, 583; State v. Mutschler, 55 N. D. 120, 212 N. W. 832, 834; Von Bank v. United States (C. C. A.) 253 F. 641, 642; Holt v. State, 107 Ohio St. 307, 140 N. E. 349, 350; Archbold v. Huntington, 34 Idaho, 558, 201 P. 1041, 1043; Roseville Trust Co. v. American Surety Co. of New York, 91 N. J. Law, 588, 103 A. 182; State v. Lehman, 131 Minn. 427, 155 N. W. 399, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 615.

A "willful" act may be described as one done intentionally, knowingly, and purposely, without justifiable excuse, as distinguished from an act done carelessly, thoughtlessly, heedlessly, or inadvertently. Lobdell Car Wheel Co. v. Subielski, 125 A. 462, 464, 2 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 462.

A willful differs essentially from a negligent act. The one is positive and the other negative. Sturm v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 38 N. Y. Super. Ct. 317; Thayer v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 21 N. M. 330, 154 P. 691, 694. Simple negligence arises merely from heedlessness, and consists simply of facts of non-feasance, and is therefore incompatible with willfulness, which comprises acts of aggressive wrong. Stauffer v. Schlegel, 74 Ind. App. 431, 129 N. E. 44, 46; and presupposes a conscious purpose to injure. In re Cunningham (D. C.) 253 F. 663, 665; Ft. Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction Co. v. Justus, 180 Ind. 464, 115 N. E. 585, 587; Brittain v. Southern Ry. Co., 167 N. C. 642, 83 S. E. 702, 703.

"Willfulness" implies an act done intentionally and designedly; "wantonness" implies action without regard to the rights of others, a conscious failure to observe care, a conscious invasion of the rights of others, willful, unrestrained action; and "recklessness" a disregard of consequences, an indifference whether a wrong or injury is done or not, and an indifference to natural and probable consequences. Jensen v. Denver & R. G. R. Co., 44 Utah, 100, 138 P. 1185, 1188. See, also, Evans v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 289 Mo. 493, 233 S. W. 397, 399; Cover v. Hershey Transit Co., 290 Pa. 551, 139 A. 266, 268; Feore v. Trammel, 212 Ala. 325, 102 So. 529, 533; Crosman v. Southern Pac. Co., 44 Nev. 286, 194 P. 839, 843.

The word "reckless," as applied to negligence, is the legal equivalent of "willful" or "wanton." Heiler v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 265 F. 192, 194. And see Strough v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (C. C. A.) 209 F. 23, 26.

Conscious; knowing; done with stubborn purpose, but not with malice. Bundy v. State, 114 Neb. 121, 206 N. W. 21, 22; American Surety Co. of New York v. Sullivan (C. C. A.) 7 F.(2d) 605, 606; Schultz v. Henry Ericsson Co., 264 Ill. 156, 106 N. E. 236, 240; Ex parte Cowden, 74 Tex. Cr. R. 449, 168 S. W. 539, 540; Beale v. Yazoo Yarn Mill, 125 Miss. 807, 88 So. 411, 414; State v. Rickenberg, 58 Utah, 270, 198 P. 767, 768; Johnson v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 260 F. 783, 785; Siuslaw Timber Co. v. Russell, 91 Or. 6, 178 P. 214; Helme v. Great Western Milling Co., 43 Cal. App. 416, 185 P. 510, 512; Gray v. Alabama Fuel & Iron Co., 216 Ala. 416, 113 So. 35, 39.

Premeditated; malicious; done with evil intent, or with a bad motive or purpose, or with indifference to the natural consequences; unlawful; without legal justification. State v. Vanderveer, 115 Wash. 184, 196 P. 650; State v. Johnson, 194 N. C. 378, 139 S. E. 697, 698; Boyce v. Greeley Square Hotel Co., 228 N. Y. 106, 126 N. E. 647, 649; State v. Ward, 127 Minn. 510, 150 N. W. 209, 210, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 674; King v. Empire Collieries Co., 148 Va. 585, 139 S. E. 478, 479, 58 A. L. R. 193; Hill v. State, 106 Tex. Cr. R. 255, 291 S. W. 914; United States v. Stickrath (D. C.) 242 F. 151, 154; United States v. Schutte (D. C.) 252 F. 212, 213; Rhoads v. First Nat. Bank, 37 N. D. 421, 163 N. W. 1046, 1050; Weatherall v. Brown, 113 Miss. 887, 74 So. 765, 766; State v. Wilson, 108 Kan. 641, 196 P. 753, 762; State v. Roth, 162 Iowa 638, 144 N. W. 339, 342, 50 L. R. A. (N. S.) 841; U. S. Zinc Co. v. Ross, 87 Okl. 21, 208 P. 805, 807; Vanderford v. Wagner, 24 N. M. 467, 174 P. 426, 427; Thompson v. Hays (C. C. A.) 11 F.(2d) 244, 248; Foster v. United States (C. C. A.) 256 F. 207, 209; State v. Palmer, 94 Vt. 278, 110 A. 436, 437.

Words which import an exercise of the will, such as "feloniously," "maliciously," and "unlawfully," will supply the place of the word "willfully" in an indictment. Howenstine v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 263 F. 1, 3; Chapman v. Com., 5 Whart. (Pa.) 427, 34 Am. Dec. 565. Contra, State v. Waters (Mo. App.) 189 S. W. 624; State v. Hyman, 116 Me. 419, 102 A. 231, 232.

WILLFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURY. The word "willful," as used in this phrase in the Bankruptcy Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 17 (2), 30 Stat. 550, as amended by the Act of Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, 32 Stat. 797 (11 USCA § 35), means intentional though not necessarily deliberate. Nunn v. Drieborg, 235 Mich. 383, 209 N. W. 89, 90; Wellman v. Mead, 93 Vt. 322, 107 A. 396, 404. Mere negligence is not enough; In re Roberts (D. C.) 290 F. 257, 259; In re Byrne (C. C. A.) 296 F. 98, 100; there must be an intent to commit a wrong either through actual malice or from which malice will be implied; McClellan v. Schmidt (D. C.) 235 F. 986, 987. Such an injury does not necessarily involve hatred or ill will, as a state of mind, but arises from intentional wrong committed without just cause or excuse. In re Dixon (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 565, 566. It may involve merely a willful disregard of what one knows to be his duty, an act which is against good morals and wrongful in and of itself, and which necessarily causes injury and is done intentionally. In re Stenger (D. C.) 283 F. 419, 420; In re Phillips (D. C.) 298 F. 135, 138.

WILLFUL MURDER. The unlawful and intentional killing of another without excuse or mitigating circumstances. State v. Dalton, 178 N. C. 779, 101 S. E. 548, 549.

WILLFUL NEGLIGENCE. See Negligence.

WILLINGLY. Voluntarily; unreluctantly; without reluctance, and of one's own free choice. Edwards v. State, 21 Ala. App. 375, 108 So. 639, 640. See State v. Schwab, 109 Ohio St. 532, 143 N. E. 29, 31. As used in an instruction that one cannot invoke the doctrine of self-defense if he enters a fight willingly, it means voluntarily, aggressively, and without legal excuse. State v. Evans, 194 N. C. 121, 138 S. E. 518, 519.

WILLS ACT. In England. The statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1, passed in 1540, by which persons seized in fee-simple of lands holden in socage tenure were enabled to devise the same at their will and pleasure, except to bodies corporate; and those who held estates by the tenure of chivalry were enabled to devise two-third parts thereof.

Also, the statute 7 Wm. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, passed in 1837, and also called "Lord Langdale's Act." This act permits of the disposition by will of every kind of interest in real and personal estate, and provides that all wills, whether of real or of personal estate, shall be attested by two witnesses, and that such attestation shall be sufficient. Other important alterations are effected by this statute in the law of wills. Mozley & Whitley.

WINCHESTER MEASURE. The standard measure of England, originally kept at Winchester. 1 Bl. Comm. 274.

WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF. A statute passed in the thirteenth year of the reign of Edward I., by which the old Saxon law of police was enforced, with many additional provisions. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 163; Crabb, Hist. Eng. Law, 189. It required every man to provide himself with armor to aid in keeping the peace; and if it did not create the offices of high and petty constables, it recognized and regulated them, and charged them with duties answering somewhat to those of our militia officers. The statute took its name from the ancient capital of the kingdom. It was repealed by the Statute of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27. See 1 Seld. Essays 153.

WIND SHIELD. On automobiles, the glass between the two front standards or posts;—not ordinarily including wind deflectors placed outside of such standards. Hammond v. Benzer Corporation (D. C.) 295 F. 908, 912.

WIND UP. To settle the accounts and liquidate the assets of a partnership or corporation, for the purpose of making distribution and dissolving the concern. State v. Norman, 86 Okl. 36, 206 P. 522, 527; State v. Quigley, 93 Okl. 296, 220 P. 918; Foster v. Stewart, 113 Kan. 402, 214 P. 429, 430; Barret v. Skalsky, 118 Kan. 162, 233 P. 1043.

WINDING-UP ACTS. In English law. General acts of parliament, regulating settlement of corporate affairs on dissolution.

WINDOW. An opening made in the wall of a building to admit light and air, and to furnish a view or prospect. Hale v. Ins. Co., 46 Mo. App. 508; Benner v. Benner, 119 Me. 79, 109 A. 376, 377. The use of this word in law is chiefly in connection with the doctrine of ancient lights and other rights of adjacent owners.

WINDOW ENVELOPE. One which has on its face a patch of transparent paper forming a window through which an address written upon an inclosure can be seen. Outlook Envelope Co. v. Samuel Cupples Envelope Co. (C. C. A.) 223 F. 327, 329.

WINDOW TAX. A tax on windows, levied on houses which contained more than six windows, and were worth more than £5 per annum; established by St. 7 Wm. III. c. 18. St. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36, substituted for this tax a tax on inhabited houses. Wharton.

WINDSHAKES. Cracks in timber that are due to the wind when the timber stood, or to drying in the center after the timber is cut. Swartz v. Bergendahl-Knight Co., 259 Pa. 421, 103 A. 220, 221.

WINDSOR FOREST. A royal forest founded by Henry VIII.

WINDSTORM. This term, as used in a policy indemnifying against damage to property by windstorm, cyclone, or tornado, takes its meaning from the words "tornado" and "cyclone," and should be construed to be something more than an ordinary gust of wind, no matter how prolonged, and though the whirling features which usually accompany tornadoes and cyclones need not be present, it must assume the aspect of a storm. Scottish Un- ion & National Ins. Co. v. B. E. Linkenhelt & Co., 70 Ind. App. 324, 121 N. E. 373, 375.

WINDY SHOTS. In blasting operations, explosions which cause pieces of rock to fly up in the air. Brede v. Minnesota Crushed Stone Co., 146 Minn. 406, 178 N. W. 820, 821.

WINE. The fermented juice of the grape. State v. Moore, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 118; Burzo v. State, 191 Ind. 319, 130 N. E. 796, 797; United States v. Sweet Valley Wine Co. (D. C.) 208 F. 85, 87. A vinous liquor, Peretto v. State, 31 Okl. Cr. 319, 238 P. 870, containing more than 1 per cent. of alcohol, People v. Mueller, 168 Cal. 526, 143 P. 750, 751. Sometimes loosely used as to unfermented juice of the grape or any fruit used as a beverage. State v. Rosasco, 103 Or. 343, 205 P. 290, 295. But see State v. Dennison, 85 W. Va. 261, 101 S. E. 458, 460.

WINTER. A period of three months, whether reckoned astronomically from the winter solstice, on December 21, to the vernal equinox, on March 21, or according to the conventional method used in the United States as including December, January, and February. Saarela v. Hoglund, 198 Ill. App. 485, 487. In a popular sense, the cold months. Whitney v. Aronson, 130 P. 700, 21 Cal. App. 9.

WINTER CIRCUIT. An occasional circuit appointed for the trial of prisoners, in England, and in some cases of civil causes, between Michaelmas and Hilary terms.

WINTER HEYNING. The season between 11th November and 23d April, which is excepted from the liberty of commoning in certain forests. St. 23 Car. II. c. 3.

WISBY, LAWS OF. The name given to a code of maritime laws promulgated at Wisby, then the capital of Gothland, in Sweden, in the latter part of the thirteenth century. This compilation resembled the laws of Oleron in many respects, and was early adopted, as a system of sea laws, by the commercial nations of Northern Europe. It formed the foundation for the subsequent code of the Hanseatic League. A translation of the Laws of Wisby may be seen in the appendix to 1 Pet. Adm. And see 3 Kent, Comm. 13. They are also printed in 30 Fed. Cas. 1189.

WISH. Eager desire; longing; expression of desire; a thing desired; an object of desire. Noice v. Schnell, 101 N. J. Eq. 252, 137 A. 582, 589, 52 A. L. R. 965. As used in wills, it is sometimes merely directory or precatory; Colonial Trust Co. v. Brown, 105 Conn. 261, 135 A. 555, 563; Schill v. Schill, 101 N. J. Eq. 482, 138 A. 530, 531; and sometimes mandatory; Strout v. Strout, 117 Me. 357, 104 A. 577, 578; being equivalent to "will," Tzesses v. Tenez Const. Co., 97 N. J. Eq. 501, 128 A. 388, or to "give" or "devise," Brown v. Brown, 180 N. C. 433, 104 S. E. 889, 890.

WISTA. In Saxon law. Half a hide of land, or sixty acres.

WIT. To know; to learn; to be informed. Used only in the infinitive, to wit, which term is equivalent to "that is to say," "namely," or "videlicet."

WITAM. The purgation from an offense by the oath of the requisite number of witnesses.

WITAN. In Saxon law. Wise men; persons of information, especially in the laws; the king's advisers; members of the king's council; the optimates, or principal men of the kingdom. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 11, note.

WITCHCRAFT. Under Sts. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 8, and 1 Jac. I. c. 12, the offense of witchcraft, or supposed intercourse with evil spirits, was punishable with death. These acts were not repealed till 1736. 4 Bl. Comm. 60, 61. In Salem, in 1692, 20 persons were put to death by hanging. The last victims in England were executed in 1716, and the last in Scotland in 1722. 29 Encyc. Americana, 430, 431; 1 Beard, Rise of Amer. Civilization, 150.

WITE. Sax. A punishment, pain, penalty, mulct, or criminal fine. Cowell.

An atonement among the early Germans by a wrong-doer to the king or the community. It is said to be the germ of the idea that wrong is not simply the affair of the injured individual, and is therefore a condition precedent to the growth of a criminal law. 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 37. See 1 Sel. Essays, Anglo-Amer. L. H. 100.

WITEKDEN. A taxation of the West Saxons, imposed by the public council of the kingdom.

WITENA DOM. In Saxon law. The judgment of the county court, or other court of competent jurisdiction, on the title to property, real or personal. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 22.

WITENAGEMOTE. (Spelled, also, witenagemot, wittenagemot, witanagemote, etc.) "The assembly of wise men." This was the great national council or parliament of the Saxons in England, comprising the noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of the kingdom, advising and aiding the king in the general administration of government.

It was the grand council of the kingdom, and was held, generally, in the open air, by public notice or particular summons, in or near some city or populous town. These notices or summonses were issued upon determination by the king's select council, or the body met without notice, when the throne was vacant, to elect a new king. Subsequently to the Norman Conquest it was called commune concilium regni, curia regis and finally parliament; but its character had become considerably changed. It was a court of last resort, more especially for determining disputes between the king and his thanes, and, ultimately, from all inferior tribunals. Great offenders, particularly those who were members of or might be summoned to the king's court, were here tried. The casual loss of title-deeds was supplied, and a very extensive equity jurisdiction exercised. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 73; 1 Bla. Comm. 147; 1 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 7; 9 Co. Pref. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest, and the subsequent Parliament was a separate growth, and not a continuation of the Witenagemot. 29 Encyc. Americana, 432.

WITENS. The chiefs of the Saxon lords or thanes, their nobles, and wise men.

WITH. A word denoting association or connection. Van Meter v. Goldfare, 236 Ill. App. 126, 134. Sometimes equivalent to the words, "in addition to," but not synonymous with "including," as in a complaint demanding a specified sum, "with interest." Halpern v. Langrock Bros. Co., 169 App. Div. 464, 155 N. Y. S. 167, 168.

WITH ALL FAULTS. This phrase, used in a contract of sale, implies that the purchaser assumes the risk of all defects and imperfections, provided they do not destroy the identity of the thing sold.

WITH STRONG HAND. In pleading. A technical phrase indispensable in describing a forcible entry in an indictment. No other word or circumlocution will answer the same purpose. Rex v. Wilson, 8 Term R. 357.

WITHDRAW. To take away what has been enjoyed; to take from. Central R. & B. Co. v. State, 54 Ga. 409. To remove. Hamilton v. Kentucky Distilleries & Warehouse Co. (C. C. A.) 288 F. 326, 327.

WITHDRAWAL. The withdrawal of charges is a failure to prosecute by the person preferring them;—distinguished from a dismissal, which is a determination of their invalidity by the tribunal hearing them. Butler v. McSweeney, 222 Mass. 5, 109 N. E. 653, 655.

WITHDRAWING A JUROR. In practice. The withdrawing of one of the twelve jurors from the box, with the result that, the jury being now found to be incomplete, no further proceedings can be had in the cause. The withdrawing of a juror is always by the agreement of the parties, and is frequently done at the recommendation of the judge, where it is doubtful whether the action will lie; and in such case the consequence is that each party pays his own costs (in Pennsylvania it is held that the costs abide the event of the suit). It is, however, no bar to a future action for the same cause. 2 Tidd, Pr. 861, 862; 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 196; Wabash R. Co. v. McCormick, 23 Ind. App. 258, 55 N. E. 251; People v. Judges of New York, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 127; Glendenning v. Canary, 64 N. Y. 636; Wolcott v. Studebaker (C. C.) 34 F. 8; 3 Term 657; 1 Cr. M. & R. 64; Tr. & H. Pr. § 689; Ry. & M. 402; 3 B. & Ad. 349; 3 Chitty, Pr. 917. In American practice, it is usually a mere method of continuing a case, for some good reason. The cases are collected in a note in 48 L. R. A. 432.

WITHDRAWING RECORD. In practice. The withdrawing by a plaintiff of the nisi prius or trial record filed in a cause, just before the trial is entered upon, for the purpose of preventing the cause from being tried. This may be done before the jury are sworn, and afterwards, by consent of the defendant's counsel. 2 Tidd, Pr. 851; 1 Archb. Pr. K. B. 189; 3 Chit. Pr. 870; 2 C. & P. 185; 3 Camp. 333.

WITHERNAM. In practice. A taking by way of reprisal; a taking or a reprisal of other goods, in lieu of those that were formerly taken and eloiigned or withholden. 2 Inst. 141. A reciprocal distress, in lieu of a previous one which has been eloiigned. 3 Bl. Comm. 148.

The name of a writ which issues on the return of elongata to an alias or pluries writ of replevin, by which the sheriff is commanded to take the defendant's own goods which may be found in his bailiwick, and keep them safely, not to deliver them to the plaintiff until such time as the defendant chooses to submit himself and allow the distress, and the whole of it to be replevied; and he is thereby further commanded that he do return to the court in what manner he shall have executed the writ. Hamm. N. P. 453; 2 Inst. 140; Fitzh. N. B. 68, 69.

WITHERSAKE. An apostate, or perfidious renegade. Cowell.

WITHHOLD. To retain in one's possession that which belongs to or is claimed or sought by another. Fitzpatrick v. Garver, 253 Mo. 189, 161 S. W. 714, 715. To omit to disclose upon request; as, to withhold information. State v. Sharp, 121 Minn. 381, 141 N. W. 526, 527, 528. To withhold commissions implies a temporary suspension rather than a total and final denial or rejection of the same. U. S. v. Dumas, 149 U. S. 278, 13 S. Ct. 872, 37 L. Ed. 734.

Withholding the means of support means something more than failure to support or nonsupport. It presupposes the existence or the ability to obtain the means of support by the accused, and need by the alleged dependent or dependents from whom support is withheld. That which has no existence, actual or potential, cannot be withheld; neither can that be withheld which is already possessed. Stedman v. State, 80 Fla. 547, 86 So. 423, 430.

WITHIN. Into. State v. Warburton, 97 Wash. 242, 166 P. 615, 617.

Through. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Pace, 109 Miss. 667, 68 So. 926, 927.

On. Thus, under a policy insuring against accidents by being accidentally thrown from within a vehicle, where the insured is on a log cart loaded with logs, he is "within" the vehicle. Continental Life Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 36 Ga. App. 540, 137 S. E. 403.

Inside the limits of. Sacks v. Legg, 219 Ill. App. 144, 148; Ex parte Watson, 82 W. Va. 201, 95 S. E. 643.

A statute providing that nothing in the act should be construed as affecting the powers of municipalities to regulate motor vehicles which are used "within their limits" for public hire, means vehicles doing business between points within the municipalities themselves, and does not include vehicles carrying passengers exclusively to or from points without the municipalities. City of Argenta v. Keath, 130 Ark. 334, 197 S. W. 686, 687, L. R. A. 1918B, 888. Compare Converse v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 2 F.(2d) 959, 960.

When used in statutes and contracts with reference to the time for performing some act, as in the phrase "within ten days," and in similar expressions, the word "within" may be variously understood. It may mean in; during; inside of. State v. Justice Court of Silver Bow Tp., Silver Bow County, 80 Mont. 53, 257 P. 1034, 1036; State v. Risjord, 183 Wis. 553, 198 N. W. 273, 274; Gallup & Co. v. Rozier, 172 N. C. 283, 90 S. E. 209, 212. See, also, McDougald v. Incorporated Town of Broken Bow, 71 Okl. 231, 176 P. 959, 961. On the other hand, it may mean not beyond; not later than; prior to. Levert v. Read, 54 Ala. 529, 531; In re Cliff Improvement, 122 Wash. 335, 210 P. 676, 677; Live Oak Lumber Co. v. Farr, 28 Cal. App. 641, 153 P. 741, 742. See, also, Royal Grocery Co. v. Oliver, 57 Cal. App. 278, 207 P. 61, 62, with which compare State v. Howell, 77 Wash. 651, 138 P. 286, 287. It may be used in the sense of at the end of. Adams v. Cumiskey, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 420; contra, Dorr v. Bankers' Surety Co. (Mo. App.) 218 S. W. 398, 400.

The use of the word "within" as a limit of time, or degree, or space, embraces the last day, or degree, or entire distance, covered by the limit fixed. Rice v. J. H. Beavers & Co., 196 Ala. 355, 71 So. 659; Ardery v. Dunn, 181 Ind. 225, 104 N. E. 299, 300; Laws N. Y. 1910, c. 347.

WITHOUT. Outside; beyond. Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 277, 23 L. Ed. 347; Ainslie v. Martin, 9 Mass. 456; Collins v. Morgan (C. C. A.) 243 F. 495, 498. In excess of. Milwaukee Western Fuel Co. v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 159 Wis. 635, 150 N. W. 998, 999.

WITHOUT DAY. A term used to signify that an adjournment or continuance is indefinite or final, or that no subsequent time is fixed for another meeting, or for further proceedings. See Sine Die.

WITHOUT DELAY. Instantly; at once. Rathbun v. Globe Indemnity Co., 107 Neb. 18, 184 N. W. 903, 908, 24 A. L. R. 191. Also, within the time allowed by law. See State v. Dolan (Mo. App.) 216 S. W. 334.

WITHOUT HER CONSENT. This phrase, as used in the law of rape, is equivalent to "against the will," and signifies the manifestation of the utmost reluctance and greatest resistance on the woman's part. State v. Catron, 317 Mo. 894, 296 S. W. 141, 143.

WITHOUT IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE.

The effect of the insertion of this clause in a lease for life is to give the tenant the right to cut timber on the estate, without making himself thereby liable to an action for waste. When a tenant for life holds the land without impeachment of waste, he is, of course, punishable for waste, whether wilful or otherwise. But still this right must not be wantonly abused so as to destroy the estate; and he will be enjoined from committing malicious waste. Bac. Abr. Waste (N); 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. Waste (A, pl. 8). And see Derham v. Hovey, 195 Mich. 243, 161 N. W. 883, 884, 21 A. L. R. 999.

WITHOUT JUSTIFICATION. In a statute punishing any parent who willfully or without justification deserts a child under 16 years of age in destitute or necessitous circumstances, the term "without justification" is equivalent to "willfully." Ex parte Strong, 95 Tex. Cr. R. 250, 252 S. W. 767, 769.

WITHOUT NOTICE. As used of purchasers, etc., equivalent to "in good faith." Hunt v. Gragg, 19 N. M. 450, 145 P. 136, 138.

WITHOUT PREJUDICE. Where an offer or admission is made "without prejudice," or a motion is denied or a suit dismissed "without prejudice," it is meant as a declaration that no rights or privileges of the party concerned are to be considered as thereby waived or lost except in so far as may be expressly conceded or decided. See Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 170 N. Y. 278, 63 N. E. 350; O'Keefe v. Irvington Real Estate Co., 87 Md. 196, 39 Atl. 428; Ray v. Adden, 50 N. H. 84, 9 Am. Rep. 175; Seamster v. Blackstock, 83 Va. 232, 2 S. E. 36, 5 Am. St. Rep. 262; Taylor v. Slater, 21 R. I. 104, 41 Atl. 1001; Kempton v. Burgess, 136 Mass. 192; Olson v. Coalfield School Dist. No. 16 of Divide County, 54 N. D. 657, 210 N. W. 180, 181. See, also, In re Hand, 266 Pa. 277, 109 A. 692, 694; Hinton v. Bogart, 79 Misc. 418, 140 N. Y. S. 111, 113. A dismissal "without prejudice" allows a new suit to be brought on the same cause of action. Freidenbloom v. McAfee (Tex. Civ. App.) 167 S. W. 28; W. T. Raleigh Co. v. Barnes, 143 Miss. 597, 109 So. 8, 9; Merrill v. Merrill, 95 N. J. Eq. 398, 123 A. 613, 614; McIntyre v. McIntyre, 205 Mich. 496, 171 N. W. 393, 394.

WITHOUT RECOURSE. This phrase, used in making a qualified indorsement of a negotiable instrument, signifies that the indorser means to save himself from liability to subsequent holders, and is a notification that, if payment is refused by the parties primarily liable, recourse cannot be had to him. See Thompson v. First State Bank, 102 Ga. 696, 29 S. E. 610; Epler v. Funk, 8 Pa. 468; Youngberg v. Nelson, 51 Minn. 172, 53 N. W. 629, 38 Am. St. Rep. 497; Bankhead v. Owen, 60 Ala. 461; National City Bank of St. Louis, Mo., v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 613, 618; Binswanger v. Hewitt, 79 Misc. 425, 140 N. Y. S. 143, 145. See, also (as to a deed), Robinson v. Boynton Coal Co., 58 Pa. Super. Ct. 176, 179. An indorser "without recourse" specially declines to assume any responsibility for payment. Arthur v. Rosier, 217 Mo. App. 382, 266 S. W. 737, 738. He assumes no contractual liability by virtue of the indorsement itself, Kaill v. Bell, 88 Kan. 666, 129 P. 1135, 1136, and becomes a mere assignor of the title to the paper, Cameron v. Ham, 23 Ohio App. 359, 155 N. E. 655, 656, but such an indorsement does not indicate that the indorsee takes with notice of defects, or that he does not take on credit of the other parties to the note, Rqbertson v. American Inv. Co., 170 Ark. 413, 279 S. W. 1008, 1010.

WITHOUT RESERVE. A term applied to a sale by auction, indicating that no price is reserved.

WITHOUT STINT. Without limit; without any specified number.

WITHOUT THE STATE. This phrase, in a statute providing that in computing limitations, the time during which the defendant shall be without the state shall be excluded, has no relation to mere temporary absence from domicile or residence in the state. Clegg v. Bishop, 105 Conn. 564, 136 A. 102, 104.

WITHOUT THIS, THAT. In pleading. Formal words used in pleadings by way of traverse, particularly by way of special traverse, (q. v.), importing an express denial of some matter of fact alleged in a previous pleading, including the declaration, plea, replication, etc. Steph. Pl. 168, 169, 179, 180. The Latin term is absque hoc. Com. Dig. Pleader (G 1); 1 Chitty, Pl. 576, note a.

WITNESS, v. To subscribe one's name to a deed, will, or other document, for the purpose of attesting its authenticity, and proving its execution, if required, by bearing witness thereto.

WITNESS, n. In the primary sense of the word, a person who has knowledge of an event. As the most direct mode of acquiring knowledge of an event is by seeing it, "witness" has acquired the sense of a person who is present at and observes a transaction. Sweet. See State v. Desforges, 47 La. Ann. 1167, 17 South. 811; In re Losee's Will, 13 Misc. 298, 34 N. Y. Supp. 1120; Bliss v. Shuman, 47 Me. 248.

A person whose declaration under oath (or affirmation) is received as evidence for any purpose, whether such declaration be made on oral examination or by deposition or affidavit. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 1878.

One who is called upon to be present at a transaction, as a wedding, or the making of a will, that he may thereafter, if necessary, testify to the transaction.

In Conveyancing

One who sees the execution of an instrument, and subscribes it, for the purpose of confirming its authenticity by his testimony.

In General

—Adverse witness. A witness whose mind discloses a bias hostile to the party examining him. Brown; Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B. (N. S.) 801.

—Attesting witness. See Attestation.

—Competent witness. See Competent.

—Credible witness. See Credible.

—Prosecuting witness. See that title.

—Subscribing witness. See that title.

—Swift witness. See that title.

—Witness to will. One who has attested the will by subscribing his name thereto. In re Johnson's Will, 175 Wis. 1, 183 N. W. 888, 889.

WITNESSING PART, in a deed or other formal instrument, is that part which comes after the recitals, or, where there are no recitals, after the parties. It usually commences with a reference to the agreement or intention to be effectuated, then states or refers to the consideration, and concludes with the operative words and parcels, if any. Where a deed effectuates two distinct objects, there are two witnessing parts. 1 Dav. Prec. Con. 63, et seq.; Sweet.

WITTINGLY means with knowledge and by design, excluding only cases which are the result of accident or forgetfulness, and including cases where one does an unlawful act through an erroneous belief of his right. Osborne v. Warren, 44 Conn. 357.

WITWORD. A legally allowed claim, more especially the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one's affirmation under oath. Vinogradoff, Engl. Soc. in 11th Cent. 9.

WOLD. Sax. In England. A down or champaign ground, hilly and void of wood. Cowell; Blount.

WOLF'S HEAD. In old English law. This term was used as descriptive of the condition of an outlaw. Such persons were said to carry a wolf's head, (caput lupinum;) for if caught alive they were to be brought to the king, and if they defended themselves they might be slain and their heads carried to the king, for they were no more to be accounted of than wolves. Termes de la Ley, "Woolferthod."

WOMEN. All the females of the human species. All such females who have arrived at the age of puberty. Dig. 50, 16, 13.

WONG. Sax. In old records. A field. Spelman; Cowell.

WOOD. The tough, hard substance of all trees and shrubs. It includes not only the hard fiber bundles of trees and shrubs in general, but also the tougher fibrous components of some herbaceous plants. It is a very broad term and includes not only material obtained from exogenous plants, but also like substances obtained from palms, from bamboo (which is a giant grass), and from some ferns (which are herbaceous plants). Steinhardt & Bro. v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cust. App. 62, 63.

WOOD-CORN. In old records. A certain quantity of oats or other grain, paid by customary tenants to the lord, for liberty to pick up dead or broken wood. Cowell.

WOOD-GELD. In old English law. Money paid for the liberty of taking wood in a forest. Cowell.

Immunity from such payment. Spelman.

WOOD LEAVE. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber on a given estate or tract of land. Osborne v. O'Reilly, 42 N. J. Eq. 467, 9 Atl. 209.

WOOD-MOTE. In forest law. The old name of the court of attachments; otherwise called the "Forty-Days Court." Cowell; 3 Bl. Comm. 71.

WOOD PLEA COURT. A court held twice in the year in the forest of Clun, in Shropshire, for determining all matters of wood and agistments. Cowell.

WOOD-STREET COMPTEER. The name of an old prison in London.

WOODS. A forest; land covered with a large and thick collection of natural forest trees. The old books say that a grant of "all his woods" (omnes boscos suos) will pass the land, as well as the trees growing upon it. Co. Litt. 4b. See Averitt v. Murrell, 49 N. C. 323; Hall v. Cranford, 50 N. C. 3; Achenbach v. Johnston, 84 N. C. 264.

WOODSRIDER. This term has been applied to an overseer of work in the woods for a private turpentine operator. Griffith v. Hulton, 90 Fla. 582, 107 So. 354, 355.

WOODWARDS. Officers of the forest, whose duty consists in looking after the wood and vert and venison, and preventing offenses relating to the same. Manw. 189.

WOODWORK. Objects made of wood and things produced by the carpenter or joiner's art. Smith v. National Fire Ins. Co., 175 N. C. 314, 95 S. E. 562, 564.

WOODWORKER. A worker in wood, as a carpenter, joiner, or cabinetmaker. Smith v. National Fire Ins. Co., 175 N. C. 314, 95 S. E. 562, 564.

WOOL-SACK. The seat of the lord chancellor of England in the house of lords, being a large square bag of wool, without back or arms, covered with red cloth. Webster; Brande.

WORDS. As used in law, this term generally signifies the technical terms and phrases appropriate to particular instruments, or aptly fitted to the expression of a particular intention in legal instruments. See the subtitles following.

WORDS OF ART. The vocabulary or terminology of a particular art or science, and especially those expressions which are idiomatic or peculiar to it. See Cargill v. Thompson, 57 Minn. 534, 59 N. W. 638.

WORDS OF LIMITATION. See Limitation.

WORDS OF PROCREATION. To create an estate tail by deed, it is necessary that words of procreation should be used in order to confine the estate to the descendants of the first grantee, as in the usual form of limitation,—“to A. and the heirs of his body.” Sweet.

WORDS OF PURCHASE. See Purchase.

WORK. Any form of physical or mental exertions, or both combined, for the attainment of some object other than recreation or amusement. Republic Tool & Mfg. Co. v. Lenarz, 17 Ohio App. 500, 501, 502.

WORK AND LABOR. The name of one of the common counts in actions of assumpsit, being for work and labor done and materials furnished by the plaintiff for the defendant.

WORK-BEAST, or WORK-HORSE. These terms mean an animal of the horse kind, which can be rendered fit for service, as well as one of maturer age and in actual use. Winfrey v. Zimmerman, 8 Bush (Ky.) 587.

WORK FLOATS. “Work floats,” used to recover sunken logs, are rafts made of logs with boards nailed across on which men stand to work. Ledoux v. Joncas, 163 Minn. 498, 204 N. W. 635, 636.

WORK-HOUSE. A place where convicts (or paupers) are confined and kept at labor.

WORKING DAYS.

In Maritime Law

Running or calendar days on which law permits work to be done, excluding Sundays and legal holidays. Sherwood v. American Sugar Refining Co. (C. C. A.) 8 F.(2d) 586, 588; The Olaf (D. C.) 248 F. 807, 809.

Under Construction Contracts

The term “working days” may exclude not only Sundays and holidays, but also days upon which no work can be done because of weather conditions. Christopher & Simpson Architectural Iron & Foundry Co. v. E. A. Steininger Const. Co., 200 Mo. App. 33, 205 S. W. 278, 283; F. J. Mumm Contracting Co. v. Village of Kenmore, 104 Misc. 268, 171 N. Y. S. 673.

WORKMAN. One who labors; one employed to do business for another; one engaged in some form of manual labor, whether skilled or unskilled. Harris v. City of Baltimore, 151 Md. 11, 133 A. 888, 889; Europe v. Addison Amusements, 231 N. Y. 105, 131 N. E. 750.

A “workman,” in the broad sense, is one who works in any department of physical or mental labor, but in common speech is one who is employed in manual labor, such as an artificer, mechanic, or artisan; while an “employé” in a broad sense is one who receives salary, wages, or other compensation from another, but the term is usually applied to clerks, laborers, etc., and not to the higher officers of a corporation. Bowne v. S. W. Bowne Co., 221 N. Y. 28, 116 N. E. 364, 365.

Under Workmen's Compensation Acts

The term “workman” in the Workmen's Compensation Act means, as the act states, one who engages to furnish services subject to the control of an employer, and the relation necessary to constitute one an employer and another a workman under the act is the relation of master and servant originating in a contract for personal services, subject to complete control of the details of the work and the mode of its performance. Landberg v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 107 Or. 498, 215 P. 594, 596.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS.

Laws passed in most of the states of the Union which provide for fixed awards to employees or their dependents in case of industrial accidents and dispense with proof of negligence and legal actions. Some of the acts go beyond the simple determination of the right to compensation, and provide insurance systems, either under state supervision or otherwise.

Under the acts, methods are usually prescribed for the expression by employers and workmen of their preference as to the acceptance or rejection of the compensation system. This ranges from each workman filing a written rejection to a presumed acceptance in the absence of formal rejection.

Under the elective system in most of the states, it is made an inducement, that where employers refuse to come within the provisions of the compensation law, the customary defenses to actions for injuries shall not be allowed them.

WORKS. Sometimes, a mill, factory, or other establishment for performing industrial labor of any sort (South St. Joseph Land Co. v. Pitt, 114 Mo. 135, 21 S. W. 449); also, a building, structure, or erection of any kind upon land, as in the civil-law phrase “new works.”

New Works

A term of the civil law comprehending every sort of edifice or other structure which is newly commenced on a given estate or lot. Its importance lies chiefly in the fact that a remedy is given ("denunciation of new works") to an adjacent proprietor whose property would be injured or subjected to a more onerous servitude if such a work were allowed to proceed to completion.

Public Works

Works, whether of construction or adaptation, undertaken and carried out by the national, state, or municipal authorities, and designed to subserve some purpose of public necessity, use, or convenience; such as public buildings, roads, aqueducts, parks, etc. See Ellis v. Common Council, 123 Mich. 567, 82 N. W. 244; Winters v. Duluth, 82 Minn. 127, 84 N. W. 788; Clough v. City of Colorado Springs, 70 Colo. 87, 197 P. 896; Johnston v. City of Hartford, 96 Conn. 142, 113 A. 273, 274; American Tobacco Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 247 Mo. 374, 157 S. W. 502, 552; Chatanooga & Tennessee River Power Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 209 F. 28, 29. All fixed works constructed for public use. State v. A. H. Read Co., 33 Wyo. 387, 240 P. 208, 211. The term usually relates to the construction of public improvements and not to their maintenance or operation. State v. Peters, 112 Ohio St. 249, 147 N. E. 81, 83. It is not so uncertain as to invalidate a statute providing that in the employment of mechanics and laborers in the construction of public works, preference shall be given to citizens. Lee v. City of Lynn, 223 Mass. 109, 111 N. E. 700, 701.

WORKSHOP. Under the Workmen's Compensation Act (Rem. Code Wash. 1915, §§ 6604—2, 6604—3), Rem. Rev. Stat. §§ 7674, 7675, a room or place wherein power-driven machinery is employed and manual labor is exercised by way of trade for gain or otherwise. Remsnider v. Union Savings & Trust Co., 89 Wash. 87, 154 P. 135, 136, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 40.

WORLD. This term sometimes denotes all persons whatsoever who may have, claim, or acquire an interest in the subject-matter; as in saying that a judgment in rem binds "all the world."

WORLDLY. Of or pertaining to the world or the present state of existence; temporal; earthly; devoted to, interested in, or connected with this present life, and its cares, advantages, or pleasures, to the exclusion of those of a future life. Anderson v. Gibson, 116 Ohio St. 684, 157 N. E. 377, 379, 54 A. L. R. 92. Concerned with enjoyment of this present existence; secular; not religious, spiritual, or holy. Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 290 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A. L. R. 1027.

WORLDLY EMPLOYMENT OR BUSINESS, which, on Sunday, is prohibited by statutes in some states, includes the operation of a motion picture show under the New Jersey Vice and Immorality Act, § 1 (4 Comp. St. 1910, p. 5712), Rosenberg v. Arrowsmith, 82

N. J. Eq. 570, 89 A. 524, 525, and one who does this habitually is guilty of keeping a disorderly house. State v. Rosenberg (N. J. Sup.) 115 A. 203. The words also include, in Delaware, under Rev. Code 1915, § 4784, the playing of football on Sunday, knowing that tickets of admission were being offered for sale and sold to the public, Walsh v. State (Del. Super.) 136 A. 160, 163, and, in Pennsylvania, professional baseball, Commonwealth v. American Baseball Club of Philadelphia, 200 Pa. 136, 138 A. 497, 499, 53 A. L. R. 1027. But in the latter state it has been thought, at least by the lower courts, that notwithstanding Act April 22, 1794 (3 Smith's Laws, p. 177), § 1 (18 PS § 1991) one may lawfully purchase a cigar on Sunday. Commonwealth v. Hoover, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 133, 134.

WORSHIP. The act of offering honor and adoration to the Divine Being. Religious exercises participated in by a number of persons assembled for that purpose, the disturbance of which is a statutory offense in many states. See Hamsher v. Hamsher, 132 Ill. 273, 22 N. E. 1123, 8 L. R. A. 556; State v. District Board, 76 Wis. 177, 44 N. W. 967, 7 L. R. A. 330, 20 Am. St. Rep. 41; State v. Buswell, 40 Neb. 158, 58 N. W. 728, 24 L. R. A. 63; State v. Norris, 59 N. H. 536; Woodall v. State, 4 Ga. App. 783, 62 S. E. 485.

In English Law

A title of honor or dignity used in addresses to certain magistrates and other persons of rank or office. Co. 2d Inst. 666; Bacon, Abr. Misnomer (A 2).

Public Worship

This term may mean the worship of God, conducted and observed under public authority; or it may mean worship in an open or public place, without privacy or concealment; or it may mean the performance of religious exercises, under a provision for an equal right in the whole public to participate in its benefits; or it may be used in contradistinction to worship in the family or the closet. In this country, what is called "public worship" is commonly conducted by voluntary societies, constituted according to their own notions of ecclesiastical authority and ritual propriety, opening their places of worship, and admitting to their religious services such persons, and upon such terms, and subject to such regulations, as they may choose to designate and establish. A church absolutely belonging to the public, and in which all persons without restriction have equal rights, such as the public enjoy in highways or public landings, is certainly a very rare institution. Attorney General v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 586.

WORSTED. Primarily and popularly, a yarn or fabric made wholly of wool. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, 42 S. Ct. 384, 385, 66 L. Ed. 729.

WORT. Mash; wash; specifically, the mash after the malt, or other active ingredient, has been added, either before or during fermentation. Pack v. State, 116 Or. 416, 241 P. 390, 392.

"Mash" means crushed malt, meal, rye, wheat, or corn, etc., steeped and stirred in hot water to form "wort," a liquid in incipient fermentation, and "wash," a fermented wort ready for distillation, or from which the spirit is distilled. Neal v. State, 154 Ark. 324, 242 S. W. 578, 579.

WORT or WORTH. A curtilage or country farm.

WORTH. The quality of a thing which gives it value. McLane v. Pittsburg Rys. Co., 230 Pa. 29, 79 A. 237, 238. Although "worth" in some connections may mean more than pecuniary value, in law it means that sum of valuable qualities which renders a thing valuable and useful expressed in the current medium of the country; value. Duke v. City of Anniston, 5 Ala. App. 348, 60 So. 447.

WORTHIER OF BLOOD. In the English law of descent. A term applied to males, expressive of the preference given to them over females. See 2 Bl. Comm. 234-240. See some singular reasons given for this in Plowd. 305.

WORTHING OF LAND. A certain quantity of land so called in the manor of Kingsland, in Hereford. The tenants are called "worthies." Wharton.

WORTHLESS. A word of relative, not absolute, signification, Colburn v. United States (C. C. A.) 223 F. 590, 593, practically synonymous with "valueless," Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Cooper, 14 Ga. App. 738, 82 S. E. 310, 311.

WOULD. A word sometimes expressing what might be expected. Taylor v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 256 Mo. 191, 165 S. W. 327, 331. Often interchangeable with the word "should," Barnett v. Savannah Electric Co., 15 Ga. App. 270, 82 S. E. 910, 911, but not with "could," Gehrig v. Chicago, & A. R. Co., 201 Ill. App. 287, 293.

WOUND. In medical usage, a solution of the natural continuity of any of the tissues of the body, Taylor, Med. Jurispr., including bruises, fractures, and the like, Robinson v. Masonic Protective Ass'n, 87 Vt. 138, 88 A. 531, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 924.

In criminal cases, especially under statutes (such as 9 Geo. IV. c. 21, § 12), an injury to the person by which the skin is broken. State v. Henggeler, 312 Mo. 15, 278 S. W. 743, 746; State v. Leonard, 22 Mo. 451; Moriarty v. Brooks, 6 Car. & P. 684; State v. Foster, 156 La. 891, 101 So. 255, 257. It must include a complete parting or solution of the external or internal skin. State v. Coontz, 94 W. Va. 59, 117 S. E. 701, 703.

Under other statutes, a "wound" does not necessarily import a breaking of the skin, but includes injuries of every kind which affect the body, whether they are cuts, lacerations, fractures, or bruises. State v. Hammerli (Kan. Sup.) 58 P. 559; Gatlin v. State, 18 Ga. App. 9, 89 S. E. 345. Also, any lesion of the body, Robinson v. Masonic Protective Ass'n, 87 Vt. 138, 88 A. 531, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 924, a "lesion" being a hurt, loss, or injury, People v. Durrand, 307 Ill. 611, 139 N. E. 78, 83.

"In legal medicine, the term 'wound' is used in a much more comprehensive sense than in surgery. In the latter, it means strictly a solution of continuity; in the former, injuries of every description that affect either the hard or the soft parts; and accordingly under it are comprehended bruises, contusions, fractures, luxations," etc. 2 Beck. Med. Jur. 106.

WOUNDING. An aggravated species of assault and battery, consisting in one person giving another some dangerous hurt. 3 Bl. Comm. 121.

Wreccum maris significat illa bona quæ naufragio ad terram pelluntur. A wreck of the sea signifies those goods which are driven to shore from a shipwreck.

WRECK, v. To destroy, disable, or seriously damage. Aurnhammer v. Brotherhood Acc. Co., 250 Mass. 563, 146 N. E. 47, 48.

WRECK, n.

At Common Law

Such goods as after a shipwreck are cast upon the land by the sea, and, as lying within the territory of some county, do not belong to the jurisdiction of the admiralty, but to the common law. 2 Inst. 167; 1 Bl. Comm. 290.

Goods found at low water, between high and low water mark, and goods between the same limits partly resting on the ground, but still moved by the water, are wreck. 3 Hagg. Adm. 257, 294.

Goods cast ashore from a wrecked vessel, where no living creature has escaped from the wreck alive; and which are forfeited to the crown, or to persons having the franchise of wreck. Cowell. But if claimed by the true owner within a year and a day the goods, or their proceeds, must be restored to him, by virtue of stat. Westm. I., 3 Edw. I. c. 4.

In American Law

Goods cast ashore by the sea, and not claimed by the owner within a year, or other specified period; which, in such case, become the property of the state. 2 Kent, Comm. 322. See, also, Proctor v. Adams, 113 Mass. 376, 18 Am. Rep. 500; Barker v. Bates, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 255, 23 Am. Dec. 678. The term applies to property cast upon land by the sea; Baker v. Hoag, 7 N. Y. 555, 59 Am. Dec. 431; to jetsam, flotsam, and ligan; Murphy v. Dunham (D. C.) 38 F. 503.

In Maritime Law

A ship becomes a wreck when, in consequence of injuries received, she is rendered absolutely unnavigable, or unable to pursue her voyage, without repairs exceeding the half of her value. Wood v. Insurance Co., 6 Mass. 479, 4 Am. Dec. 163; Collard v. Eddy, 17 Mo. 355; Baker v. Hoag, 7 N. Y. 558, 59 Am. Dec. 431; Peele v. Insurance Co., 19 Fed. Cas. 104; Lacaze v. State, 1 Add. (Pa.) 99. A "wrecked vessel," however, in common phraseology, includes a sunken vessel. See Gilchrist v. Godman (D. C.) 79 F. 970; Act March 3, 1839, § 15 (33 USCA § 409); The R. J. Moran (C. C. A.) 299 F. 500; Thames Towboat Co. v. Fields (D. C.) 287 F. 155.

Wreck Commissioners

Persons appointed by the English lord chancellor under the merchant shipping act, 1876, (section 29), to hold investigations at the request of the board of trade into losses, abandonments, damages, and casualties of or to ships on or near the coast of the United Kingdom, whereby loss of life is caused. Sweet.

WRECKFREE. Exempt from the forfeiture of shipwrecked goods and vessels to the king. Cowell.

WRESTLING. Engaging in a contest, usually between two persons, who seek to throw each other to the ground or floor, commonly in such a manner that one contestant's shoulders are held against the ground or floor. Jacobs v. Loyal Protective Ins. Co., 97 Vt. 516, 124 A. 848, 852.

WRINKLE. A stria; furrow; channel; hollow; depression; rut; cup; pocket; dimple. Maxim Mfg. Co. v. Imperial Mach. Co. (C. C. A.) 286 F. 79, 83.

WRIST-DROP. A form of paralysis of the hand and wrist resulting from an affection of the nerve which supplies the muscles of the forearm, wrist, and hand. Freeman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 52 Mont. 1, 154 P. 912, 913.

WRIT. A precept in writing, couched in the form of a letter, running in the name of the king, president, or state, issuing from a court of justice, and sealed with its seal, addressed to a sheriff or other officer of the law, or directly to the person whose action the court desires to command, either as the commencement of a suit or other proceeding or as incidental to its progress, and requiring the performance of a specified act, or giving authority and commission to have it done.

Process. Love v. National Liberty Ins. Co., 157 Ga. 259, 121 S. E. 648, 649.

For the names and description of various particular writs, see the titles below.

In Old English Law

An instrument in the form of a letter; a letter or letters of attorney. This is a very ancient sense of the word.

In the old books, "writ" is used as equivalent to "action;" hence writs are sometimes divided into real, personal, and mixed.

In Scotch Law

A writing; an instrument in writing, as a deed, bond, contract, etc. 2 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, pp. 175-179.

In General

—Alias writ. A second writ issued in the same cause, where a former writ of the same kind has been issued without effect.

—Close writ. In English law, a name given to certain letters of the sovereign, sealed with his great seal and directed to particular persons and for particular purposes, which, not being proper for public inspection, were closed up and sealed on the outside; also, a writ directed to the sheriff instead of to the lord. 2 Bl. Comm. 346, 3 Reeve, Eng. Law, 45.

—Concurrent writs. Duplicate originals, or several writs running at the same time for the same purpose, for service on or arrest of a person, when it is not known where he is to be found; or for service on several persons, as when there are several defendants to an action. Mozley & Whitley.

—Judicial writs. In English practice. The capias and all other writs subsequent to the original writ not issuing out of chancery, but from the court to which the original was returnable. Being grounded on what had passed in that court in consequence of the sheriff's return, they were called judicial writs, in contradistinction to the writs issued out of chancery, which were called original writs. 3 Bl. Comm. 282. Such writs as issue under the private seal of the courts, and not under the great seal of England, and are tested or witnessed, not in the king's name, but in the name of the chief judge of the court out of which they issue. The word "judicial" is used in contradistinction to "original;" original writs being such as issue out of chancery under the great seal, and are witnessed in the king's name. See 3 Bl. Comm. 282. Pullman's Palace-Car Co. v. Washburn (C. C.) 66 F. 792.

—Junior writ. One which is issued, or comes to the officer's hands, at a later time than a similar writ, at the suit of another party, or on a different claim, against the same defendant.

—Original writ. In English practice. An original writ was the process formerly in use for the commencement of personal actions. It was a mandatory letter from the king, issuing out of chancery, sealed with the great seal, and directed to the sheriff of the county wherein the injury was committed, or was supposed to have been committed, requiring him to command the wrong-doer or accused party either to do justice to the plaintiff or else to appear in court and answer the accusation against him. This writ is now disused, the writ of summons being the process prescribed by the uniformity of process act for commencing personal actions; and under the judicature act, 1873, all suits, even in the court of chancery, are to be commenced by such writs of summons. Brown.

—Patent writ. In old practice, an open writ; one not closed or sealed up.

—Peremptory writ. An original writ, called from the words of the writ a "si te fecerit securum," and which directed the sheriff to cause the defendant to appear in court without any option given him, provided the plaintiff gave the sheriff security effectually to prosecute his claim. The writ was very occasionally in use, and only where nothing was specifically demanded, but only a satisfaction in general; as in the case of writs of trespass on the case, wherein no debt or other specific thing was sued for, but only damages to be assessed by a jury. Brown.

—Prerogative writs. Those issued by the exercise of the extraordinary power of the crown (the court, in modern practice) on proper cause shown; namely, the writs of procedendo, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and certiorari.

WRIT DE BONO ET MALO. See De Bono et Malo; Assize.

WRIT DE EJECTIONE FIRMÆ. See Ejectione Firmæ.

WRIT DE HÆRETICO COMBURENDO. See De Hæretico Comburendo.

WRIT DE HOMINE REPLEGIANDO. See De Homine Replegiando.

WRIT DE ODIO ET ATIA. See De Odio et Atia.

WRIT DE RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM. See De Rationabili Parte Bonorum.

WRIT OF AD QUOD DAMNUM. See Ad Quod Damnum.

WRIT OF ASSISTANCE. The name of a writ which issues from the court of chancery, in aid of the execution of a judgment at law, to put the complainant into possession of lands adjudged to him, when the sheriff cannot execute the judgment. See Emerick v. Miller (Ind. App.) 62 N. E. 285; Hagerman v. Heltzel, 21 Wash. 444, 58 P. 580; O'Connor v. Schaeffel (City Ct. N. Y.) 11 N. Y. S. 737; Knight v. Houghtalling, 94 N. C. 410; Clarke v. Aldridge, 162 N. C. 326, 78 S. E. 216, 217; McDonnell v. Hartnett, 323 Ill.

87, 153 N. E. 666; Marblehead Land Co. v. Los Angeles County (D. C.) 276 F. 305.

A form of process issued by an equity court to transfer the possession of lands, title or possession to which it has previously adjudicated, as a means of enforcing its decree. Southern State Bank v. Leverette, 187 N. C. 743, 123 S. E. 68, 69; Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 196 Ind. 373, 145 N. E. 493, 495.

Its office is to give effect to chancery decrees, where the rights of the parties are fixed thereby. Ramsdell v. Maxwell, 32 Mich. 285. It is founded on the general principle that a court of equity will, when it can do so justly, carry its own decrees into full execution without relying on the co-operation of any other tribunal; Beatty v. De Forest, 27 N. J. Eq. 482; and grows out of the principle that the jurisdiction to enforce is coextensive with the jurisdiction to hear and determine rights; Beck v. Kirk, 69 Mont. 592, 223 P. 499, 500; Fox v. Stubenrauch, 2 Cal. App. 88, 83 P. 82.

A "writ of assistance" is equivalent to the writ of habere facias possessionem at law, and issues as of course without notice, so far as the parties to the record are concerned, when necessary to execute a decree. Gardner v. Duncan, 104 Miss. 477, 61 So. 545, 546.

While the office of both a writ of assistance and a writ of possession is to put the party entitled thereto into the possession of property, the former issues from equity and the latter from law. Southern State Bank v. Leverette, 187 N. C. 743, 123 S. E. 68, 70.

An ancient writ issuing out of the exchequer. Moz. & W. A writ issuing from the court of exchequer to the sheriff commanding him to be in aid of the king's tenants by knight's service, or the king's collectors, debtors, or accountants, to enforce payment of their own dues, in order to enable them to pay their own dues to the king. 1 Madox, Hist. Exch. 675.

WRIT OF ASSOCIATION. In English practice. A writ whereby certain persons (usually the clerk of assize and his subordinate officers) are directed to associate themselves with the justices and serjeants; and they are required to admit the said persons into their society in order to take the assizes. 3 Bl. Comm. 59.

WRIT OF ATTACHMENT. A writ employed to enforce obedience to an order or judgment of the court. It may take the form of commanding the sheriff to attach the disobedient party and to have him before the court to answer his contempt. Smith, Act. 176.

In its generic sense, any mesne civil process in the nature of a writ on which property may be attached, including trustee process. Smith v. Smith, 120 Me. 379, 115 A. 87, 88.

WRIT OF CONSPIRACY. A writ which anciently lay against persons who had conspired to injure the plaintiff, under the same circumstances which would now give him an action on the case. It did not lie at common law, in any case, except when the conspiracy was to indict the party either of treason or felony; all the other cases of conspiracy in the books were but actions on the case. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 104.

WRIT OF COVENANT. A writ which lies where a party claims damages for breach of covenant; i. e., of a promise under seal.

WRIT OF DEBT. A writ which lies where the party claims the recovery of a debt; i. e., a liquidated or certain sum of money alleged to be due to him.

This is debt in the debet, which is the principal and only common form. There is another species mentioned in the books, called the debt in the detinet, which lies for the specific recovery of goods under a contract to deliver them. 1 Chitty, Pl. 101.

WRIT OF DECEIT. The name of a writ which lies where one man has done anything in the name of another, by which the latter is damnified and deceived. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 95, E.

WRIT OF DELIVERY. A writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment for the delivery of chattels. It commands the sheriff to cause the chattels mentioned in the writ to be returned to the person who has obtained the judgment; and, if the chattels cannot be found, to distrain the person against whom the judgment was given until he returns them. Smith, Act. 175; Sweet.

WRIT OF DETINUE. A writ which lies where a party claims the specific recovery of goods and chattels, or deeds and writings, detained from him. This is seldom used; trover is the more frequent remedy, in cases where it may be brought.

WRIT OF DOWER. This is either a writ of dower unde nihil habet, which lies for a widow, commanding the tenant to assign her dower, no part of which has yet been set off to her; or a writ of right of dower, whereby she seeks to recover the remainder of the dower to which she is entitled, part having been already received from the tenant. This latter writ is seldom used.

WRIT OF EJECTMENT. The writ in an action of ejectment, for the recovery of lands. See Ejectment.

WRIT OF ENTRY. A real action to recover the possession of land where the tenant (or owner) has been disseised or otherwise wrongfully dispossessed. If the disseisor has aliened the land, or if it has descended to his heir, the writ of entry is said to be in the per, because it alleges that the defendant (the alienee or heir) obtained possession through the original disseisor. If two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the per and qui, because it alleges that the defendant (the second alienee) obtained possession through the first alienee, to whom the original disseisor had aliened it. If more than two alienations (or descents) have taken place, the writ is in the post, because it simply alleges that the defendant acquired possession after the original disseisin. Co. Litt. 238b; 3 Bl. Comm. 180. The writ of entry was abolished, with other real actions, in England, by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27, § 36, but is still in use in a few of the states of the Union. Sweet. See, also, Entry, Writ of.

WRIT OF ERROR. A writ issued from a court of appellate jurisdiction, directed to the judge or judges of a court of record, requiring them to remit to the appellate court the record of an action before them, in which a final judgment has been entered, in order that examination may be made of certain errors alleged to have been committed, and that the judgment may be reversed, corrected, or affirmed, as the case may require. Siegelschiffer v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. (C. C. A.) 248 F. 226, 228; Ward v. Williams, 270 Ill. 547, 110 N. E. 821, 823; Board of County Com'rs of Harford County v. Jay, 122 Md. 324, 89 A. 715, 717. It is of common-law origin and was used to review alleged errors of law, Buessel v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 258 F. 811, 814, arising on the face of the proceedings, Curless v. Watson, 180 Ind. 86, 102 N. E. 497, 499, or apparent on the judgment record, Lippitt v. Bidwell, 87 Conn. 608, 89 A. 347, 349. See, generally, 1 Vern. 169; 1 Salk. 322; 2 Saund. 46, 101; 3 Bl. Comm. 405. While an appeal operates as a supersedeas, and is in effect a continuation of the original suit, a writ of error is a new suit or proceeding. Thompson v. Davis, 297 Ill. 11, 130 N. E. 455, 457; Reed v. State, 94 Fla. 32, 113 So. 630, 635; Boston & M. R. R. v. State, 77 N. H. 437, 93 A. 306. When the writ, being directed to the judges of a court of record in which final judgment has been given, commands those judges themselves to examine the record, it is called a "writ of error coram nobis" or vobis. See those titles, infra.

The office of an ordinary "writ of error" at common law was to remove the record to a superior court for the review of errors of law appearing on the face thereof, while the principal office of a "writ of error coram nobis" was to enable the court rendering a judgment to reconsider it, and grant relief from errors of fact not appearing on the face of the record, where the latter was still before such court. People v. Reid, 195 Cal. 249, 232 P. 457, 459, 36 A. L. R. 1435.

A commission by which the judges of one court are authorized to examine a record upon which a judgment was given in another court, and, on such examination, to affirm or reverse the same, according to law. Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 409, 5 L. Ed. 257.

As used in Circuit Court of Appeals Act § 5, the proceedings by which a cause, in which there has been a final judgment, is removed from a court below to an appellate court for review, reversal, or affirmance. In re Stearns & White Co. (C. C. A.) 295 F. 833, 836.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM NOBIS. A common-law writ, the purpose of which is to correct a judgment in the same court in which it was rendered, on the ground of error of fact, Washington v. State, 92 Fla. 740, 110 So. 259, 262, for which the statute provides no other remedy, which fact did not appear of record, Ernst v. State, 181 Wis. 155, 193 N. W. 973, or was unknown to the court when judgment was pronounced, and which, if known, would have prevented the judgment, and which was unknown, and could not have been known to the party by the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to have been otherwise presented to the court, unless he was prevented from so presenting them by duress, fear, or other sufficient cause; Nickels v. State, 86 Fla. 208, 98 So. 502, 504; State ex rel. Mitchell, Co. Atty., v. Swindall, 33 Okl. Cr. 210, 241 P. 456, 458; as where judgment is rendered against a party after his death, or an infant not properly represented by guardian, or a feme covert where common-law disability still exists, or where some defect exists in the process or the execution thereof; Schneider v. Schneider (Mo. App.) 273 S. W. 1081, 1083; 1 Saund. 101; *Steph. Pl. 119; Day v. Hamburgh, 1 Browne, Pa. 75. At common law in England, it issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Its principal aim is to afford the court in which an action was tried an opportunity to correct its own record with reference to a vital fact not known when the judgment was rendered. Lamb v. State, 91 Fla. 396, 107 So. 535, 537, 538; Rhodes v. State, 199 Ind. 183, 156 N. E. 389, 392. It is also said that at common law it lay to correct purely ministerial errors of the officers of the court. Cramer v. Illinois Commercial Men's Ass'n, 260 Ill. 516, 103 N. E. 459, 461.

WRIT OF ERROR CORAM VOBIS. This writ, at the English common law, is distinguished from "writ of error coram nobis," in that the former issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, whereas the latter issued from the Court of King's Bench to a judgment of that court. Lamb v. State, 91 Fla. 396, 107 So. 535, 537.

WRIT OF EXECUTION. A writ to put in force the judgment or decree of a court.

WRIT OF EXIGI FACIAS. See Exigent.

WRIT OF FALSE JUDGMENT. A writ which appears to be still in use to bring appeals to the English high court from inferior courts not of record proceeding according to the course of the common law. Archb. Pr. 1427.

WRIT OF FORMEDON. A writ which lies for the recovery of an estate by a person claiming as issue in tail, or by the remainder-man or reversioner after the termination of the entail. See Formedon.

WRIT OF INQUIRY. In common-law practice. A writ which issues after the plaintiff in an action has obtained a judgment by default, on an unliquidated claim, directing the sheriff, with the aid of a jury, to inquire as to the amount of the plaintiff's demand and assess his damages. Lennon v. Rawitzer, 57 Conn. 583, 19 A. 334; Havens v. Hartford & N. R. Co., 28 Conn. 70; McGowin v. Dickson, 182 Ala. 161, 62 So. 685, 688.

WRIT OF MAINPRIZE, or MAINPRISE. In English law. A writ directed to the sheriff, (either generally, when any man is imprisoned for a bailable offense and bail has been refused, or specially, when the offense or cause of commitment is not properly bailable below,) commanding him to take sureties for the prisoner's appearance, commonly called "mainpernors," and to set him at large. 3 Bl. Comm. 128. See, also, Mainprise.

WRIT OF MANDAMUS. See Mandamus.

WRIT OF MESNE. In old English law. A writ which was so called by reason of the words used in the writ, namely, "Unde idem A. qui medius est inter C. et præfatum B.;" that is, A., who is mesne between C., the lord paramount, and B., the tenant paravail. Co. Litt. 100a.

WRIT OF POSSESSION. This is the writ of execution employed to enforce a judgment to recover the possession of land. It commands the sheriff to enter the land and give possession of it to the person entitled under the judgment. Smith, Act. 175. For a distinction between this writ and the "Writ of Assistance," see that title.

WRIT OF PRÆCIPE. This writ is also called a "writ of covenant," and is sued out by the party to whom lands are to be conveyed by fine, the foundation of which is a supposed agreement or covenant that the one shall convey the land to the other. 2 Bl. Comm. 349.

WRIT OF PREVENTION. This name is given to certain writs which may be issued in anticipation of suits which may arise. Co. Litt. 100. See Quia Timet.

WRIT OF PROCESS. See Process; Action.

WRIT OF PROCLAMATION. In English law. By the statute 31 Eliz. c. 3, § 1, when an exigent is sued out, a writ of proclamation shall issue at the same time, commanding the sheriff of the county where the defendant dwells to make three proclamations thereof, in places the most notorious, and most likely to come to his knowledge, a month before the outlawry shall take place. 3 Bl. Comm. 284.

When it is not directed to the same sheriff as the exigent is, it is called a foreign writ of proclamation. 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 261.

WRIT OF PROHIBITION. See Prohibition.

WRIT OF PROTECTION. In England, the king may, by his writ of protection, privilege any person in his service from arrest in civil proceedings during a year and a day; but this prerogative is seldom, if ever, exercised. Archb. Pr. 687. See Co. Litt. 130a.

WRIT OF QUARE IMPEDIT. See Quare Impedit.

WRIT OF RECAPTION. If, pending an action of replevin for a distress, the defendant distrains again for the same rent or service, the owner of the goods is not driven to another action of replevin, but is allowed a writ of recaption, by which he recovers the goods and damages for the defendant's contempt of the process of the law in making a second distress while the matter is sub judice. Woodf. Landl. & Ten. 484.

WRIT OF REPLEVIN. See Replevin.

WRIT OF RESTITUTION. A writ which is issued on the reversal of a judgment commanding the sheriff to restore to the defendant below the thing levied upon, if it has not been sold, and, if it has been sold, the proceeds. Bac. Abr. "Execution," Q. A writ which lies, after the reversal of a judgment, to restore a party to all that he has lost by occasion of the judgment. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1186.

WRIT OF REVIEW. A general designation of any form of process issuing from an appellate court and intended to bring up for review the record or decision of the court below. Burrell v. Burrell, 10 Mass. 222; Hopkins v. Benson, 21 Me. 401; West v. De Moss, 50 La. Ann. 1349, 24 So. 325.

In Code practice, a substitute for, or equivalent of, the writ of certiorari. California & O. Land Co. v. Gowen (C. C.) 48 F. 775; Burnett v. Douglas County, 4 Or. 389; In re Winegard, 78 Hun, 58, 28 N. Y. S. 1039.

WRIT OF RIGHT. A writ which lay for one who had the right of property, against another who had the right of possession and the actual occupation. The writ properly lay only to recover corporeal hereditaments for an estate in fee-simple; but there were other writs, said to be "in the nature of a writ of right," available for the recovery of incorporeal hereditaments or of lands for a less estate than a fee-simple. Brown; Fitzh. N. B. 1 (B); 3 Bl. Comm. 391.

"Originally a writ of right is so called because it orders the feudal lord to do full right to the demandant, plenum rectum tenere. . . . But when possessory actions have been established in the king's court, 'right' is contrasted with 'seisin,' and all writs originating proprietary actions for land . . . come to be known as writs of right." Maitland, in 2 Sel. Essays, Anglo-Am. Leg. Hist. 563.

In another sense, a writ which is grantable as a matter of right, as opposed to a "prerogative writ," which is issued only as a matter of grace or discretion.

WRIT OF SUMMONS. The writ by which, under the English judicature acts, all actions are commenced.

WRIT OF SUPERSEDEAS. See Supersedeas.

WRIT OF SUPERVISORY CONTROL. A writ which is issued only to correct erroneous rulings made by the lower court within its jurisdiction, where there is no appeal, or the remedy by appeal cannot afford adequate relief, and gross injustice is threatened as the result of such rulings. State v. District Court of First Judicial Dist. in and for Lewis and Clark County, 50 Mont. 428, 147 P. 612, 613.

WRIT OF TOLT. In old English law. The name of a writ to remove proceedings on a writ of right patent from the court-baron into the county court.

WRIT OF TRIAL. In English law. A writ directing an action brought in a superior court to be tried in an inferior court or before the under-sheriff, under St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 42. It is now superseded by the county courts act of 1867, c. 142, § 6, by which a defendant, in certain cases, is enabled to obtain an order that the action be tried in a county court. 3 Steph. Comm. 515, n.; Mozley & Whitley.

WRIT OF WASTE. The name of a writ to be issued against a tenant who has committed waste of the premises. There were anciently several forms of this writ, adapted to the particular circumstances. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 125.

WRIT PRO RETORNO HABENDO. A writ commanding the return of the goods to the defendant, upon a judgment in his favor in replevin, upon the plaintiff's default.

WRITER TO THE SIGNET. In Scotch law. An officer nearly corresponding to an attorney at law, in English and American practice. "Writers to the signet," called also "clerks to the signet," derive their name from the circumstance that they were anciently clerks in the office of the secretary of state, by whom writs were prepared and issued under the royal signet or seal; and, when the signet became employed in judicial proceedings, they obtained a monopoly of the privileges of acting as agents or attorneys before the court of session. Brande, voc. "Signet."

WRITER OF THE TALLIES. In England, An officer of the exchequer whose duty it was to write upon the tallies the letters of tellers' bills.

WRITING. The expression of ideas by letters visible to the eye. Clason v. Bailey, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 491. The giving an outward and objective form to a contract, will, etc., by means of letters or marks placed upon paper, parchment, or other material substance.

In the most general sense of the word, "writing" denotes a document, whether manuscript or printed, as opposed to mere spoken words. Writing is essential to the validity of certain contracts and other transactions. Sweet. See "Instrument."

WRITING OBLIGATORY. The technical name by which a bond is described in pleading. Denton v. Adams, 6 Vt. 40.

WRITTEN CONTRACT. One which is all in writing so that all terms can be ascertained from instrument itself. Sallo v. Boas, 327 Ill. 145, 158 N. E. 364, 365.

WRITTEN INSTRUMENT. Something reduced to writing as a means of evidence, and as the means of giving formal expression to some act or contract. Curlee Clothing Co. v. Lowery (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 730, 732.

WRITTEN LAW. One of the two leading divisions of the Roman law, comprising the leges, plebiscita, senatus-consulta, principum placita, magistratum edicta, and responsa prudentum. Inst. 1, 2, 3

Statute law; law deriving its force from express legislative enactment. 1 Bl. Comm. 62, 85.

WRONG. An injury; a tort; a violation of right or of law.

In its most usual sense, wrong signifies an injury committed to the person or property of another, or to his relative rights unconnected with contract; and these wrongs are committed with or without force. Lisk v. Hora, 109 Ohio St. 519, 143 N. E. 545, 546. But in a more extended signification, wrong includes the violation of a contract; a failure by a man to perform his undertaking or promise is a wrong or injury to him to whom it was made; 3 Bl. Comm. 158.

The idea of rights naturally suggests the correlative one of wrongs; for every right is capable of being violated. A right to receive payment for goods sold (for example) implies a wrong on the part of him who owes, but withholds the price; a right to live in personal security, a wrong on the part of him who commits personal violence. And therefore, while, in a general point of view, the law is intended for the establishment and maintenance of rights, we find it, on closer examination, to be dealing both with rights and wrongs. It first fixes the character and definition of rights, and then, with a view to their effectual security, proceeds to define wrongs, and to devise the means by which the latter shall be prevented or redressed. 1 Steph. Comm. 126.

Private Wrong

The violation of public or private rights, when considered in reference to the injury sustained by the individual, and consequently as subjects for civil redress or compensation. 3 Steph. Comm. 256; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 13 S. Ct. 224, 36 L. Ed. 1123; Tomlin v. Hildreth, 65 N. J. Law, 438, 47 A. 649; State v. Magee Pub. Co., 29 N. M. 455, 224 P. 1028, 1031, 38 A. L. R. 142.

Public Wrongs

Violations of public rights and duties which affect the whole community, considered as a community; crimes and misdemeanors. 3 Bl. Comm. 2; 4 Bl. Comm. 1.

Real Wrong

In old English law. An injury to the freehold.

WRONG-DOER. One who commits an injury; a tort-feasor. The term ordinarily imports an invasion of right to the damage of the party who suffers such invasion. Merrill v. Comstock, 154 Wis. 434, 143 N. W. 313, 317.

WRONGFUL. Injurious, heedless, unjust, reckless, unfair. Jabich v. People, 58 Colo. 175, 143 P. 1092, 1095. "Wrongful" implies the infringement of some right, and may result from disobedience to lawful authority. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. Blount Plow Works, 78 Ind. App. 529, 136 N. E. 559, 561.

WRONGFULLY. In a wrong manner; unjustly; in a manner contrary to the moral law, or to justice. Webster, cited Board of Com'rs of Howard County v. Armstrong, 91 Ind. 536.

WRONGFULLY INTENDING. In the language of pleading, this phrase is appropriate to be used in alleging the malicious motive of the defendant in committing the injury which forms the cause of action.

WRONGOUS. In Scotch law. Wrongful; unlawful; as wrongous imprisonment. Ersk. Prin. 4, 4, 25.

WURTH. In Saxon law. Worthy; competent; capable. Atheswurthe, worthy of oath; admissible or competent to be sworn. Spelman.

WYE. As applied to a street railway, a "wye" means a track with two branches, one joining the main track from one direction and the other joining the main track from another direction. Falls v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 189 Mich. 644, 155 N. W. 548, 549.

WYTE. In old English law. Acquittance or immunity from amercement.

X

X. In the written terminology of various arts and trades, where two or more dimensions of the same piece or article are to be stated, this letter is a well-known symbol equivalent to the word "by." Thus, the formula "3 x 5 in." will be understood, or may be explained by parol evidence, to mean "three by five inches," that is, measuring three inches in one direction and five in another. See Jaqua v. Witham & A. Co., 106 Ind. 547, 7 N. E. 314.

XENODOCHIUM. In the civil and old English law. An inn allowed by public license, for the entertainment of strangers, and other guests. Calvin.; Cowell.

A hospital; a place where sick and infirm persons are taken care of. Cowell.

XENODOCHY. Reception of stranger; hospitality. Enc. Lond.

XYLON. A punishment among the Greeks answering to our stocks. Wharton.

Y

YA ET NAY. In old records. Mere assertion and denial, without oath.

YARD. A measure of length, containing three feet, or thirty-six inches.

A piece of land inclosed for the use and accommodation of the inhabitants of a house.

YARDLAND, or virgata terræ, is a quantity of land, said by some to be twenty acres, but by Coke to be of uncertain extent.

YEA AND NAY. Yes and no. According to a charter of Athelstan, the people of Ripon were to be believed in all actions or suits upon their yea and nay, without the necessity of taking any oath. Brown.

See, also, Yeas and Nays.

YEAR. The period in which the revolution of the earth round the sun, and the accompanying changes in the order of nature, are completed. Generally, when a statute speaks of a year, twelve calendar, and not lunar, months are intended. Cro. Jac. 166. The year is either astronomical, ecclesiastical, or regnal, beginning on the 1st of January, or 25th of March, or the day of the sovereign's accession. Wharton.

The civil year differs from the astronomical, the latter being composed of three hundred and sixty-five days, five hours, forty-eight seconds and a fraction, while the former consists sometimes of three hundred and sixty-five days, and at others, in leap-years, of three hundred sixty-six days.

When the period of a "year" is named, a calendar year is generally intended, but the subject-matter or context of statute or contract in which the term is found or to which it relates may alter its meaning. J. L. Hammett Co. v. Alfred Peates Co., 217 Mass. 520, 105 N. E. 370, L. R. A. 1915A, 334. See also City of Sedalia v. Chalfant (C. C. A.) 4 F.(2d) 350, 352 and People v. Escheman, 63 Colo. 227, 165 P. 260, 262, in which the term "preceding year" in a statute is said to mean the preceding twelve months, and not preceding calendar year.

Natural Year

In old English law. That period of time in which the sun was supposed to revolve in its orbit, consisting of 365 days and one-fourth of a day, or six hours. Bract. fol. 359b.

Year and Day

This period was fixed for many purposes in law. Thus, in the case of an estray, if the owner did not claim it within that time, it became the property of the lord. So the owners of wreck must claim it within a year and a day. Death must follow upon wounding within a year and a day if the wounding is to be indicted as murder. Also, a year and a day were given for prosecuting or avoiding certain legal acts; e. g., for bringing actions after entry, for making claim for avoiding a fine, etc. Brown.

Year Books

Books of reports of cases in a regular series from the reign of the English King Edward I., inclusive, to the time of Henry VIII., which were taken by the prothonotaries or chief scribes of the courts, at the expense of the crown, and published annually; whence their name, "Year Books." Brown.

Year, Day, and Waste

In English law. An ancient prerogative of the king, whereby he was entitled to the profits, for a year and a day, of the lands of persons attainted of petty treason or felony, together with the right of wasting the tenements, afterwards restoring the property to the lord of the fee. Abrogated by St. 54 Geo. III, c. 145. Wharton.

See An, Jour, et Waste.

—Year of our Lord. In England the time of an offense may be alleged as that of the sovereign's reign, or as that of the year of our Lord. The former is the usual mode. Hence there "year" alone might not indicate the time intended, but as we have no other era, therefore, any particular year must mean that year in our era. Com. v. Doran, 14 Gray (Mass.) 38. The abbreviation A. D. may be omitted; and the word year is not fatal; State v. Bartlett, 47 Me. 393; contra, Com. v. McLoon, 5 Gray (Mass.) 92, 66 Am. Dec. 354.

—Year to year, tenancy from. This estate arises either expressly, as when land is let from year to year; or by a general parol demise, without any determinate interest, but reserving the payment of an annual rent; or impliedly, as when property is occupied generally under a rent payable yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly; or when a tenant holds over, after the expiration of his term, without having entered into any new contract, and pays rent, (before which he is tenant on sufferance.) Wharton.

—Years, estate for. See Estate for Years.

YEAS AND NAYS. The affirmative and negative votes on a bill or measure before a legislative assembly. "Calling the yeas and nays" is calling for the individual and oral vote of each member, usually upon a call of the roll.

YEME. In old records. Winter; a corruption of the Latin "hiems."

YEOMAN. In English law. A commoner; a freeholder under the rank of gentleman. Cowell. A man who has free land of forty shillings by the year; who was anciently thereby qualified to serve on juries, vote for knights of the shire, and do any other act, where the law requires one that is probus et legalis homo. 1 Bl. Comm. 406, 407.

This term is occasionally used in American law, but without any definite meaning, except in the United States navy, where it designates an appointive petty officer, who has charge of the stores and supplies in his department of the ship's economy.

YEOMANRY. The collected body of yeomen.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD. Properly called "yeomen of the guard of the royal household;" a body of men of the best rank under the gentry, and of a larger stature than ordinary, every one being required to be six feet high. Enc. Lond.

YEVEN, or YEOVEN. Given; dated. Cowell.

YIDDISH. A Middle High German dialect, or number of dialects, spoken by Jews, containing a large number of Germanized Hebrew words, and using Hebrew characters for its literature. U. S. v. Tod (C. C. A.) 294 F. 820, 822.

YIELD.

In the Law of Real Property

To perform a service due by a tenant to his lord. Hence the usual form of reservation of a rent in a lease begins with the words "yielding and paying." Sweet.

In Patent Law

The word "yielding," as used in a patent claim, is not the equivalent of "resilient," or "spring-supported," but may be applied to a part which is retractable at will. Mergenthaler Linotype Co. v. International Typesetting Mach. Co. (D. C.) 229 F. 168, 192.

YIELDING AND PAYING. In conveyancing. The initial words of that clause in leases in which the rent to be paid by the lessee is mentioned and reserved.

YOKELET. A little farm, requiring but a yoke of oxen to till it.

YORK-ANTWERP RULES. Certain rules relating to uniform bills of lading formulated by the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Laws of Nations, now the International Law Association.

These rules are commonly incorporated in contracts of affreightment. They are the result of conferences of representatives of mercantile interests from several countries, in the interest of uniformity of law. They have no statutory authority. The text is in MacLachlan's Mercht. Shipping. For a history of them, see Lowndes, Gen. Av.

YORK, CUSTOM OF. A custom of the province of York in England, by which the effects of an intestate, after payment of his debts, are in general divided according to the ancient universal doctrine of the pars rationabilis; that is, one-third each to the widow, children, and administrator. 2 Bl. Comm. 518.

YORIK, STATUTE OF. An important English statute passed at the city of York, in the twelfth year of Edward II., containing provisions on the subject of attorneys, witnesses, the taking of inquests by nisi prius, etc. 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 299-302.

YOUNGER CHILDREN. This phrase, when used in English conveyancing with reference to settlements of land, signifies all such children as are not entitled to the rights of an eldest son. It therefore includes daughters, even those who are older than the eldest son. Mozley & Whitley.

YOUTH. This word may include children and young persons of both sexes. Nelson v. Cushing, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 519, 528.

YULE. The times of Christmas and Lamas.

YVERNAIL BLE. L. Fr. Winter grain. Kelham.

Z

ZAMINDAR. See Zemindar.

ZANJA. Span. A water ditch or artificial canal, and particularly one used for purposes of irrigation. See Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578.

ZANJERO. Span. A water commissioner or superintendent, or supervisor of an irrigation system. See Pico v. Colimas, 32 Cal. 578; Everett v. Standard Acc. Ins. Co., 45 Cal. App. 332, 187 P. 996, 1000.

ZEALOT. This word is commonly taken in a bad sense, as denoting a separatist from the Church of England, or a fanatic. Brown.

ZEALOUS WITNESS. An untechnical term denoting a witness, on the trial of a cause, who manifests a partiality for the side calling him, and an eager readiness to tell anything which he thinks may be of advantage to that side.

ZEIR. O. Sc. Year. "Zeir and day." Bell.

Inst., 1, 2, 31. Justinian's Institutes, lib. 1, tit. 2, § 31.

The Institutes of Justinian are divided into four books,—each book is divided into titles, and each title into paragraphs, of which the first, described by the letters pr., or princip., is not numbered. The old method of citing the Institutes was to give the commencing words of the paragraph and of the title; e. g., § si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. Sometimes the number of the paragraph was introduced, e. g., § 12, si adversus, Inst. de Nuptiis. The modern way is to give the number of the book, title, and paragraph, thus;—Inst. I. 10, 12; would be read Inst., Lib. I. tit. 10, § 12.

Inst. Epil. Epilogue to [a designated part or volume of] Coke's Institutes.
