PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

TWENTY-THREE years have passed since the publication of the Second Edition of Black's Law Dictionary. These years, covering the period of the greatest war in history, followed by a period of prosperity never before equaled, and succeeded by the most widespread depression ever known, have of necessity been fraught with changes and complexities of law, which are reflected in legal nomenclature and definitions. New terms have come into use, and old terms have taken on new meaning.

In the present edition of this work, attempt has been made to meet changed conditions by adding new words and modernized definitions, together with illustrations and current authorities supporting new use of old terms.

The same general alphabetical plan pursued in the two former editions has been followed, but the separation of secondary headings from principal ones has been made clearer.

The publishers offer this work to the legal profession with the firm belief that it merits the same favorable reception accorded the earlier editions.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

IN THE preparation of the present edition of this work, the author has taken pains, in response to a general demand in that behalf, to incorporate a very great number of additional citations to decided cases, in which the terms or phrases of the law have been judicially defined. The general plan, however, has not been to quote seriatim a number of such judicial definitions under each title or heading, but rather to frame a definition, or a series of alternative definitions, expressive of the best and clearest thinking and most accurate statements in the reports, and to cite in support of it a liberal selection of the best decisions, giving the preference to those in which the history of the word or phrase, in respect to its origin and use, is reviewed, or in which a large number of other decisions are cited. The author has also taken advantage of the opportunity to subject the entire work to a thorough revision, and has entirely rewritten many of the definitions, either because his fresh study of the subject-matter or the helpful criticism of others had disclosed minor inaccuracies in them, or because he thought they could profitably be expanded or made more explicit, or because of new uses or meanings of the term. There have also been included a large number of new titles. Some of these are old terms of the law which had previously been overlooked, a considerable number are Latin and French words, ancient or modern, not heretofore inserted, and the remainder are terms new to the law, or which have come into use since the first edition was published, chiefly growing out of the new developments in the social, industrial, commercial, and political life of the people.

Particularly in the department of medical jurisprudence, the work has been enriched by the addition of a great number of definitions which are of constant interest and importance in the courts. Even in the course of the last few years medical science has made giant strides, and the new discoveries and theories have brought forth a new terminology, which is not only much more accurate but also much richer than the old; and in all the fields where law and medicine meet we now daily encounter a host of terms and phrases which, no more than a decade ago, were utterly unknown. This is true—to cite but a few examples—of the new terminology of insanity, of pathological and criminal psychology, the innumerable forms of nervous disorders, the new tests and reactions, bacteriology, toxicology, and so on. In this whole department I have received much valuable assistance from my friend Dr. Fielding H. Garrison, of this city, to whose wide and thorough scientific learning I here pay cheerful tribute, as well as to his constant and obliging readiness to place at the command of his friends the resources of his well-stored mind.

Notwithstanding all these additions, it has been possible to keep the work within the limits of a single volume, and even to avoid materially increasing its bulk, by a new system of arrangement, which involves grouping all compound and descriptive terms and phrases under the main heading or title from which they are radically derived or with which they are conventionally associated, substantially in accordance with the plan adopted in the Century Dictionary and most other modern works of reference.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

THE dictionary now offered to the profession is the result of the author's endeavor to prepare a concise and yet comprehensive book of definitions of the terms, phrases, and maxims used in American and English law and necessary to be understood by the working lawyer and judge, as well as those important to the student of legal history or comparative jurisprudence. It does not purport to be an epitome or compilation of the body of the law. It does not invade the province of the text-books, nor attempt to supersede the institutional writings. Nor does it trench upon the field of the English dictionary, although vernacular words and phrases, so far as construed by the courts, are not excluded from its pages. Neither is the book encyclopædic in its character. It is chiefly required in a dictionary that it should be comprehensive. Its value is impaired if any single word that may reasonably be sought between its covers is not found there. But this comprehensiveness is possible (within the compass of a single volume) only on condition that whatever is foreign to the true function of a lexicon be rigidly excluded. The work must therefore contain nothing but the legitimate matter of a dictionary, or else it cannot include all the necessary terms. This purpose has been kept constantly in view in the preparation of the present work. Of the most esteemed law dictionaries now in use, each will be found to contain a very considerable number of words not defined in any other. None is quite comprehensive in itself. The author has made it his aim to include all these terms and phrases here, together with some not elsewhere defined.

For the convenience of those who desire to study the law in its historical development, as well as in its relations to political and social philosophy, place has been found for numerous titles of the old English law, and words used in old European and feudal law, and for the principal terminology of the Roman law. And in view of the modern interest in comparative jurisprudence and similar studies, it has seemed necessary to introduce a considerable vocabulary from the civil, canon, French, Spanish, Scotch, and Mexican law and other foreign systems. In order to further adapt the work to the advantage and convenience of all classes of users, many terms of political or public law are here defined, and such as are employed in trade, banking, and commerce, as also the principal phraseology of international and maritime law and forensic medicine. There have also been included numerous words taken from the vernacular, which, in consequence of their interpretation by the courts or in statutes, have acquired a quasi-technical meaning, or which, being frequently used in laws or private documents, have often been referred to the courts for construction. But the main body of the work is given to the definition of the technical terms and phrases used in modern American and English jurisprudence.

In searching for definitions suitable to be incorporated in the work, the author has carefully examined the codes, and the compiled or revised statutes, of the various states, and from these sources much valuable matter has been obtained. The definitions thus enacted by law are for the most part terse, practical, and of course authoritative. Most, if not all, of such statutory interpretations of words and phrases will be found under their appropriate titles. Due prominence has also been given to definitions formulated by the appellate courts and embodied in the reports. Many of these judicial definitions have been literally copied and adopted as the author's definition of the particular term, of course with a proper reference. But as the constant aim has been to present a definition at once concise, comprehensive, accurate, and lucid, he has not felt bound to copy the language of the courts in any instance where, in his judgment, a better definition could be found in treatises of acknowledged authority, or could be framed by adaptation or re-arrangement. But many judicial interpretations have been added in the way of supplementary matter to the various titles.

The more important of the synonyms occurring in legal phraseology have been carefully discriminated. In some cases, it has only been necessary to point out the correct and incorrect uses of these pairs and groups of words. In other cases, the distinctions were found to be delicate or obscure, and a more minute analysis was required.

A complete collection of legal maxims has also been included, comprehending as well those in English and Law French as those expressed in the Latin. These have not been grouped in one body, but distributed in their proper alphabetical order through the book. This is believed to be the more convenient arrangement.

It remains to mention the sources from which the definitions herein contained have been principally derived. For the terms appertaining to old and middle English law and the feudal polity, recourse has been had freely to the older English law dictionaries, (such as those of Cowell, Spelman, Blount, Jacob, Cunningham, Wishaw, Skene, Tomlins, and the "Termes de la Ley,") as also to the writings of Bracton, Littleton, Coke, and the other sages of the early law. The authorities principally relied on for the terms of the Roman and modern civil law are the dictionaries of Calvinus, Scheller, and Vicat, (with many valuable suggestions from Brown and Burrill), and the works of such authors as Mackeldey, Hunter, Browne, Hallifax, Wolff, and Maine, besides constant reference to Gaius and the Corpus Juris Civilis. In preparing the terms and phrases of French, Spanish, and Scotch law, much assistance has been derived from the treatises of Pothier, Merlin, Toullier, Schmidt, Argles, Hall, White, and others, the commentaries of Erskine and Bell, and the dictionaries of Dalloz, Bell, and Escriche. For the great body of terms used in modern English and American law, the author, besides searching the codes and statutes and the reports, as already mentioned, has consulted the institutional writings of Blackstone, Kent, and Bouvier, and a very great number of text-books on special topics of the law. An examination has also been made of the recent English law dictionaries of Wharton, Sweet, Brown, and Mozley & Whitley, and of the American lexicographers, Abbott, Anderson, Bouvier, Burrill, and Rapalje & Lawrence. In each case where aid is directly levied from these sources, a suitable acknowledgment has been made. This list of authorities is by no means exhaustive, nor does it make mention of the many cases in which the definition had to be written entirely de novo; but it will suffice to show the general direction and scope of the author's researches.

It is also used as an abbreviation for many words of which it is the initial letter.

An abbreviation of adversus used for versus, indicating the parties to an action.

At Roman criminal trials the judge, on a table covered with wax, provided for the purpose, inscribed the letter A (absolvo) when he voted to acquit.

An adulteress among the Puritans was condemned to wear the initial letter "A" in red cloth on her dress.

In Latin phrases a preposition, denoting from, by, in, on, of, at, and is of common use as a part of a title.

In French phrases it is also a preposition, denoting of, at, to, for, in, with.

The article "a" is not necessarily a singular term, it is often used in the sense of "any," and is then applied to more than one individual object, National Union Bank v. Copeland, 141 Mass. 266, 4 N. E. 794; Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458, 5 N. E. 322; Thompson v. Stewart, 60 Iowa, 225, 14 N. W. 247; Commonwealth v. Watts, 84 Ky. 537, 2 S. W. 123; Deutsch v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Canton, 185 Ill. App. 29, 32.

A. D. Lat. Contraction for Anno Domini, (in the year of our Lord).

"Abandonment" differs from surrender, in that surrender requires an agreement, Noble v. Sturm, 178 N. W. 99, 103, 210 Mich. 462; and from forfeiture, in that forfeiture may be against the intention of the party alleged to have forfeited, Gila Water Co. v. Green, 241 P. 307, 308, 29 Ariz. 304.

In the Civil and French Law

The act by which a debtor surrenders his property for the benefit of his creditors; Merlin, Répert. See Abandonment for Torts.

In Insurance

A relinquishment or cession of property by the owner to the insurer of it, in order to claim as for a total loss, when in fact it is so by construction only. 2 Steph. Comm. 178; Chicago S. S. Lines v. U. S. Lloyds (C. C. A. Ill.) 12 F. (2d) 733, 738; Dwpuy v. Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 182; Allen v. Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 154; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Beacham, 97 A. 708, 128 Ind. 414, L. R. A. 1916F, 1168.

The exercise of a right which a party having insured goods or vessels has to call upon the insurers, in cases where the property insured has, by perils of the sea, become so much damaged as to be of little value, to accept of what is or may be saved, and to pay the full amount of the insurance, as if a total loss had actually happened. Park, Ins. 143; 2 Marsh. Ins. 559; 3 Kent, Comm. 318-335, and notes; The St. Johns (D. C.) 101 Fed. 469; Roux v. Salvador, 3 Bing. N. C. 266, 284; Mellich v. Andrews, 15 East, 13; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Duffield, 6 Ohio St. 200, 67 Am. Dec. 339.

Abandonment is the act by which, after a constructive total loss, a person insured by contract of marine insurance declares to the insurer that he relinquishes to him his interest in the thing insured. Civil Code Cal. § 2716.

The term is used only in reference to risks in navigation; but the principle is applicable in fire insurance, where there are remnants, and sometimes, also, under stipulations in life policies in favor of creditors. Cooley's Briefs on Insurance, pp. 5025-5035; 3 Kent, 265; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Duffield, 6 Ohio St. 200, 67 Am. Dec. 339; 6 East 72; Klein v. Globe & Rutgers Ins. Co. of New York City, 2 F. (2d) 137. But see Hicks v. McGehee, 39 Ark. 264.

In Maritime Law

The act by which the owner of a ship surrenders the ship and freight to a trustee for the benefit of claimants. See 46 USCA § 185; Ohio Transp. Co. v. Davidson S. S. Co., 148 F. 185, 78 C. C. A. 319, aff 131 F. 373, cert den 27 S. Ct. 782, 203 U. S. 593, 51 L. Ed. 332.

In France and other countries it is the surrender of a vessel and freight by the owner of the same to a person having a claim arising out of a contract made with the master. American Transp. Co. v. Moore, 5 Mich. 368; Poth. Chart. § 2, art. 3, § 51.

In Patent Law

As applied to inventions, abandonment is the giving up of his rights by the inventor, as where he surrenders his idea or discovery or relinquishes the intention of perfecting his invention, and so throws it open to the public, or where he negligently postpones the assertion of his claims or fails to apply for a patent, and allows the public to use his invention without objection. Woodbury, etc., Machine Co. v. Keith, 101 U. S. 479, 485, 25 L. Ed. 939; American Hide, etc., Co. v. American Tool, etc., Co., 1 Fed. Cas. 647; Mast v. Dempster Mill Co. (C. C.) 71 Fed. 701; Bartlette v. Crittenden, 2 Fed. Cas. 981; Pitts v. Hall, 19 Fed. Cas. 754. There may also be an abandonment of a patent, where the inventor dedicates it to the public use; and this may be shown by his failure to sue infringers, to sell licenses, or otherwise to make efforts, to realize a personal advantage from his patent. Ransom v. New York, 4 Blatchf. 157, 20 Fed. Cas. 286.

Of Rights in General

The relinquishment of a right. It implies some act of relinquishment done by the owner without regard to any future possession by himself, or by any other person, but with an intention to abandon; 14 M. & W. 789; Dyer v. Sanford, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 395, 43 Am. Dec. 399; Dawson v. Daniel, 2 Flip. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 3,669; Moore v. Sherman, 159 P. 966, 52 Mont. 542.

Abandonment is properly confined to incorporeal hereditaments, as legal rights once vested must be divested according to law, though equitable rights may be abandoned. Great Falls Co. v. Worster, 15 N. H. 412; Cox v. Colossal Cavern Co., 276 S. W. 540, 210 Ky. 612; Cringan v. Nicolson's Ex'rs, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 429; Barker v. Salmon, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 32; Inhabitants of School Dist. No. 4 v. Benson, 31 Me. 381, 52 Am. Dec. 618.

Of Easements in General

Jones, 8 Mont. 225, 19 P. 571; McClain v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 90 Iowa, 646, 57 N. W. 594; Oviatt v. Big Four Min. Co., 39 Or. 118, 65 P. 811; Finch v. Unity Fee Co., 208 N. Y. S. 369, 211 App. Div. 430. Intention and completed act are both essential. Town of Orlando v. Stevens, 215 P. 1050, 1051, 90 Okl. 2; Goodman v. Brenner, 188 N. W. 377, 219 Mich. 55; Pascal v. Hynes, 152 N. W. 26, 27, 170 Iowa, 121.

Of Oil Lease

The relinquishment of a right, resting upon the intention of the parties. "Forfeiture," as distinguished from "abandonment," does not rest upon the intent to release the premises, but is an enforced release. Fisher v. Crescent Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 178 S. W. 905, 908. There must be intention to abandon and actual relinquishment of the enterprise. Sigler Oil Co. v. W. T. Waggoner Estate (Tex. Civ. App.) 276 S. W. 936, 938; U. S. v. Brown (D. C. Okl.) 15 F.(2d) 565, 567; Chapman v. Ellis (Tex. Civ. App.) 254 S. W. 615, 618. The drawing of the casing from an oil or gas well with no intention of replacing it is an act of abandonment within Ky. St. § 3914a, requiring plugging of well. Seaboard Oil Co. v. Commonwealth, 237 S. W. 48, 50, 193 Ky. 629.

Of Right of Way

Mere nonuser is not an abandonment of a right of way acquired by grant. Burnham v. Mahoney, 111 N. E. 396, 398, 222 Mass. 524; Raleigh, C. & S. Ry. Co. v. McGuire, 88 S. E. 337, 339, 171 N. C. 277; Williams v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (C. C. A. S. C.) 17 F.(2d) 17, 22; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 81 So. 44, 202 Ala. 542.

Of Water Right

To "abandon" a water right means to desert or forsake it. The intent and an actual relinquishment must concur. In re Willow Creek, 144 P. 505, 522, 74 Or. 592; Central Trust Co. v. Culver, 129 P. 253, 254, 23 Colo. App. 317; Sander v. Bull, 135 P. 489, 492, 76 Wash. 1; O'Shea v. Doty, 218 P. 658, 659, 68 Mont. 316; Lindblom v. Round Valley Water Co., 173 P. 994, 996, 178 Cal. 450.

Of Mining Claim

Relinquishment of a claim held by location without patent, where the holder voluntarily leaves his claim to be appropriated by the next comer, without any intention to retake or resume it, and regardless of what may become of it in the future. McKay v. McDougall, 25 Mont. 258, 64 P. 669, 87 Am. St. Rep. 395; St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 263, 272; Oreamuno v. Uncle Sam Min. Co., 1 Nev. 215; Derry v. Ross, 5 Colo. 295; Tripp v. Silver Dyke Mining Co., 224 P. 272, 274, 70 Mont. 120. The leaving of a claim by the owner with the express or implied intention of not returning to it, and the leaving it open to subsequent location. O'Hanlon v. Ruby Gulch Mining Co., 135 P. 913, 918, 48 Mont. 65. The term includes both the intention to abandon and the act by which the abandonment is carried into effect. Peachy v. Frisco Gold Mines Co. (D. C. Ariz.) 204 F. 659, 668. It differs from "forfeiture," which occurs by operation of law, without regard to the appropriator's intention, when he fails to comply with the statutory conditions. Shank v. Holmes, 137 P. 871, 875, 15 Ariz. 229.

Of Contract

To constitute "abandonment" of a contract by conduct, action relied on must be positive, unequivocal, and inconsistent with the existence of the contract. Mood v. Methodist Episcopal Church South (Tex. Civ. App.) 289 S. W. 461, 464.

Of Actions and Proceedings Therein

The result of a failure for an indefinite period to prosecute an action or suit, Morris v. Phifer State Bank, 105 So. 150, 90 Fla. 55, unless caused by an injunction, Barton v. Burbank, 71 So. 134, 138 La. 997. By statute in some states a definite time has been stated which will render a suit abandoned and subject to dismissal. City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court of California in and for Tuolumne County, 197 P. 79, 185 Cal. 405; Wheeler v. Whitney, 194 N. W. 777, 156 Minn. 362; Teutonia Loan & Building Co. v. Connolly, 63 So. 63, 64, 133 La. 401; Public Utilities Commission v. Smith, 131 N. E. 371, 375, 298 Ill. 151.

A failure to submit issue by instruction thereon constitutes "abandonment" of issue. Unterlachner v. Wells, 317 Mo. 181, 296 S. W. 755, 756.

Failure to perform the conditions necessary to a valid appeal or writ of error is usually considered the abandonment thereof. Lewis v. Martin, 98 So. 635, 210 Ala. 401. Taking out a second writ of error is an abandonment of the first. Board of Public Instruction for Marion County v. Goodwin, 104 So. 779, 89 Fla. 379.

Of Children

Separation from the child and failure to supply its needs. Brock v. Commonwealth, 268 S. W. 315, 316, 206 Ky. 621; Fry v. State, 136 S. E. 466, 467, 36 Ga. App. 312; State v. Clark, 182 N. W. 452, 453, 148 Minn. 389; Campbell v. State, 92 S. E. 951, 20 Ga. App. 190.

The "abandonment," which, in California (Civil Code, § 224), New York (Domestic Relations Law, § 111), North Carolina (Code 1931, § 189), Utah (Compiled Laws 1917, § 20) and Washington (Rem. Comp. St. Supp. 1927, § 1696) gives a right of adoption without the parents' consent, may consist of placing the child on some doorstep, or leaving it in some convenient place in the hope that some one will find and take charge of it, or abandonment entirely to chance or fate. Jensen v. Earley, 228 P. 217, 220, 63 Utah, 604. Abandonment in this connection does not mean that a parent has no interest in the child's welfare. It means rather a withdrawal or neglect of parental duties. In re Potter, 85 Wash. 617, 149 P. 23; In re Bistany, 201 N. Y. S. 684, 685, 121 Misc. 540; Truelove v. Parker, 132 S. E. 295, 299, 191 N. C. 430.

Of Domicile

Permanent removal from the place of one's domicile with the intention of taking up a residence elsewhere and with no intention of returning to the original home except temporarily. Stafford v. Mills, 31 A. 1023, 57 N. J. Law, 570; Mills v. Alexander, 21 Tex. 154; Jarvais v. Moe, 38 Wis. 440.

Of Office

Abandonment of a public office is a species of resignation, but differs from resignation in that resignation is a formal relinquishment, while abandonment is a voluntary relinquishment through nonuser. Steingruber v. City of San Antonio (Tex. Com. App.) 220 S. W. 77, 78; State v. Harmon, 98 A. 804, 805, 115 Me. 268. Abandonment of an office creating a vacancy is not wholly a matter of intention, but may result from the complete abandonment of duties of such a continuance that the law will infer a relinquishment. Wilkinson v. City of Birmingham, 68 So. 999, 1002, 193 Ala. 139.

By Husband or Wife

The act of a husband or wife who leaves his or her consort willfully, and with an intention of causing perpetual separation. Gay v. State, 105 Ga. 599, 31 S. E. 569, 70 Am. St. Rep. 68; People v. Cullen, 153 N. Y. 629, 47 N. E. 894, 44 L. R. A. 420; Domb v. Domb, 186 N. Y. S. 306, 308, 195 App. Div. 526; Heinmuller v. Heinmuller, 105 A. 745, 746, 133 Md. 491; Shockey v. Shockey, 231 S. ABATAMENTUM. L. Lat. In old English law. An abatement of freehold; an entry upon lands by way of interposition between the death of the ancestor and the entry of the heir. Co. Litt. 277a; Yel. 151.

ABATARE. To abate. Yel. 151.

ABATE. To throw down, to beat down, destroy, quash. 3 Shars. Bla. Com. 168; Case v. Humphrey, 6 Conn. 140; Klamath Lumber Co. v. Bamber, 142 P. 359, 74 Or. 287. See Abatement; Abatement and Revival.

ABATEMENT.Of Debts

In equity, when equitable assets are insufficient to satisfy fully all the creditors, their debts must abate in proportion, and they must be content with a dividend, for aquitas est quasi aequalitas.

Of Freehold

The unlawful entry upon and keeping possession of an estate by a stranger, after the death of the ancestor and before the heir or devisee takes possession. Such an entry is technically called an "abatement," and the stranger an "abator." It is, in fact, a figurative expression, denoting that the rightful possession or freehold of the heir or devisee is overthrown by the unlawful intervention of a stranger. Abatement differs from intrusion, in that it is always to the prejudice of the heir or immediate devisee, whereas the latter is to the prejudice of the reversioner or remainder-man; and disseisin differs from them both, for to disseise is to put forcibly or fraudulently a person seized of the freehold out of possession. 1 Co. Inst. 277a; 3 Bl. Comm. 166; Brown v. Burdick, 25 Ohio St. 268. By the ancient laws of Normandy, this term was used to signify the act of one who, having an apparent right of possession to an estate, took possession of it immediately after the death of the actual possessor, before the heir entered. (Howard, Anciennes Loix des Français, tome 1, p. 539.)

Of Legacies

A proportional diminution or reduction of the pecuniary legacies, when the funds or assets out of which such legacies are payable are not sufficient to pay them in full. Ward, Leg. p. 369, c. 6, § 7; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 555; 2 Bl. Comm. 512, 513; Brown v. Brown, 79 Va. 648; Neistrath's Estate, 66 Cal. 330, 5 P. 507; Towle v. Swasey, 106 Mass. 100; Brant v. Brant, 40 Mo. 280; Armstrong's Appeal, 63 Pa. 312; In re Hawgood's Estate, 159 N. W. 117, 123, 37 S. D. 565.

Of Nuisance

The removal of a nuisance. 3 Bla. Comm. 5. See Nuisance.

In Contracts

A reduction made by the creditor for the prompt payment of a debt due by the payor or debtor. Wesk. Ins. 7.

In Mercantile or Revenue Law

A drawback or rebate allowed in certain cases on the duties due on imported goods, in consideration of their deterioration or damage suffered during importation, or while in store. A diminution or decrease in the amount of tax imposed upon any person. Varied remedies and procedure are provided by the different states for the abatement and equalization of taxes. Rogers v. Gookin, 85 N. E. 405, 198 Mass. 434; State v. McVey, 115 N. W. 647, 103 Minn. 485; Central National Bank v. City of Lynn, 259 Mass. 1, 156 N. E. 42.

ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL.

In Chancery Practice

A suspension of all proceedings in a suit, from the want of proper parties capable of proceeding therein. See 2 Tidd Pr. 932; Story Eq. Pl. § 354; Witt v. Ellis, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 38.

It differs from an abatement at law in this; that in the latter the action is entirely dead and cannot be revived; but in the former the right to proceed is merely suspended, and may be revived; 3 Bla. Comm. 301; Boynton v. Boynton, 21 N. H. 246; Sto. Eq. Pl. § 20 n. § 354; Ad. Eq. 403; Mitf. Eq. Pl., by Jeremy 57; Brooks v. Jones, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 244; Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. 164, 9 L. Ed. 1041; Kronenberger v. Heinemann, 104 Ill. App. 156; Zoellner v. Zoellner, 46 Mich. 511, 9 N. W. 831; Spring v. Webb (D. C. Vt.) 227 F. 481, 483; F. A. Mfg. Co. v. Hayden & Clemons (U. S. C. C. A. Mass. 1921) 273 F. 374.

All declinatory and dilatory pleas in equity are said to be pleas in abatement, or in the nature thereof; see Story, Eq. Pl. § 708.

In England, in equity pleading, declinatory pleas to the jurisdiction and dilatory to the persons were (prior to the judicature act) sometimes, by analogy to common law, termed "pleas in abatement."

Of Actions at Law

The overthrow of an action caused by the defendant's pleading some matter of fact tending to impeach the correctness of the writ or declaration, which defeats the action for the present, but does not debar the plaintiff from recommencing it in a better way. 3 Bla. Comm. 301; 1 Chit. Pl. (6th Lond. Ed.) 446; Guild v. Richardson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 370; Doe v. Penfield, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 308; Sayles v. Daniels Sales Agency, 196 P. 465, 100 Or. 37; Wirtele v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 111 Neb. 302, 196 N. W. 510. See Plea in Abatement.

ABATOR. In real property law, a stranger who, having no right of entry, contrives to get possession of an estate of freehold, to the prejudice of the heir or devisee, before the latter can enter, after the ancestor's death. ABBOT. A prelate in the 13th century who had had an immemorial right to sit in the national assembly. Taylor, Science of Jurispr. 287.

ABBOT, ABBAT. The spiritual superior or governor of an abbey. Feminine, Abbess.

ABBREVIATE OF ADJUDICATION. In Scotch law. An abstract of the decree of adjudication, and of the lands adjudged, with the amount of the debt. Adjudication is that diligence (execution) of the law by which the real estate of a debtor is adjudged to belong to his creditor in payment of a debt; and the abbreviate must be recorded in the register of adjudications.

ABBREVIATIO PLACITORUM. An abstract of ancient judicial records, prior to the Year Books. See Steph. Pl. (7th Ed.) 410.

ABBREVIATIONS. Shortened conventional expressions, employed as substitutes for names, phrases, dates, and the like, for the saving of space, of time in transcribing, etc. Abbott. The abbreviations in common use in modern times consist of the initial letter or letters, syllable or syllables, of the word. Anciently, also, contracted forms of words, obtained by the omission of letters intermediate between the initial and final letters were much in use. These latter forms are now more commonly designated by the term contraction. Abbreviations are of frequent use in referring to text-books, reports, etc., and in indicating dates, but should be very sparingly employed, if at all, in formal and important legal documents. See 4 C. & P. 51; 9 Co. 48; 1 East 180, n. As to how far a judicial record may contain abbreviations of English words without invalidating it, see Stein v. Meyers, 253 Ill. 199, 97 N. E. 297.

For Table of Abbreviations, see Appendix.

Abbreviationum ille numerus et sensus accipendus est, ut concessio non sit inanis. In abbreviations, such number and sense is to be taken that the grant be not made void. 9 Coke, 48.

ABDICATION. The act of a sovereign in renouncing and relinquishing his government or throne, so that either the throne is left entirely vacant, or is filled by a successor appointed or elected beforehand.

Also, where a magistrate or person in office voluntarily renounces or gives it up before the time of service has expired.

The act of abdicating; giving up of office, power or authority, right or trust; renunciation. McCormick v. Engstrom, 241 P. 685, 688, 119 Kan. 698.

It differs from resignation, in that resignation is made by one who has received his office from another and restores it into his hands, as an inferior into the hands of a superior; abdication is the relinquishment of an office which has devolved by act of law. It is said to be a renunciation, quitting, and relinquishing, so as to have nothing further to do with a thing, or the doing of such actions as are inconsistent with the holding of it. Chambers.

An instrument purporting to be a renunciation and "abdication" of rights to property may constitute in legal effect an "assignment." In re Johnston's Estate, 203 N. W. 376, 377, 186 Wis. 599.

ABDITORIUM. An abditory or hiding place, to hide and preserve goods, plate or money. Jacob.

ABDUCTION. In criminal law. The offense of taking away a man's wife, child, or ward, by fraud and persuasion, or open violence. 3 Bl. Comm. 139-141; Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 253, 54 P. 847; State v. George, 93 N. C. 567; State v. Chisenhall, 106 N. C. 676, 11 S. E. 518; People v. Seeley, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 190; State v. Hopper, 119 S. E. 769, 772, 186 N. C. 405.

The unlawful taking or detention of any female for purposes of marriage, concubinage, or prostitution. 4 Steph. Com. 84; People v. Crotty, 55 Hun, 611, 9 N. Y. S. 937. In many states this offence is created by statute and in most cases applies to females under a given age.

By statute in some states, abduction includes the withdrawal of a husband from his wife, as where another woman alienates his affection and entices him away and causes him to abandon his wife. King v. Hanson, 13 N. D. 85, 99 N. W. 1085.

ABEARANCE. Behavior; as a recognizance to be of good abearance signifies to be of good behavior. 4 Bl. Comm. 251, 256.

ABEREMURDER. (From Sax. abere, apparent, notorious; and mord, murder.) Plain or downright murder, as distinguished from the less heinous crime of manslaughter, or chance medley. It was declared a capital offense, without fine or commutation, by the laws of Canute, c. 93, and of Hen. I. c. 13. Spelman; Cowell; Blount.

ABESSE. Lat. In the civil law. To be absent; to be away from a place. Said of a person who was extra continentia urbis, (beyond the suburbs of the city.)

ABET. To encourage, incite, or set another on to commit a crime. This word is always applied to aiding the commission of a crime. To abet another to commit a murder is to command, procure, or counsel him to commit it. Old Nat. Brev. 21; Co. Litt. 475.

"Aid" and "abet" are nearly synonymous terms as generally used; but, strictly speaking, the former term does not imply guilty knowledge or felonious intent, whereas the word "abet" includes knowledge of the wrongful purpose and counsel and encouragement in the commission of the crime. People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 55 P. 581, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50; People v. Morine, 138 Cal. 626, 72 P. 166; State v. Empey, 79 Iowa, 460, 44 N. W. 707; Raiford v. State, 59 Ala. 106; White v. People, 81 Ill. 333; State v. Ankrom, 103 S. E. 925, 927, 36 W. Va. 570; People v. William Yee, 174 P. 343, 345, 37 Cal. App. 579; State v. Start, 132 P. 512, 513, 65 Or. 178, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 266; People v. Powers, 127 N. E. 681, 682, 293 Ill. 600.

See Abettor; Aid and Abet.

ABETTATOR. L. Lat. In old English law. An abettor. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 65, § 7. See Abettor.

ABETTOR. In criminal law. An instigator, or setter on; one who promotes or procures a crime to be committed. Old Nat. Brev. 21. One who commands, advises, instigates, or encourages another to commit a crime; a person who, being present or in the neighborhood, incites another to commit a crime, and thus becomes a principal. See State v. Baldwin, 137 S. E. 590, 591, 193 N. C. 566.

The distinction between abettors and accessories is the presence or absence at the commission of the crime. Cowell; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 34. Presence and participation are necessary to constitute a person an abettor. 4 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 33; Green v. State, 13 Mo. 382; State v. Teahan, 50 Conn. 92; Connaughty v. State, 1 Wis. 159, 60 Am. Dec. 370; Russ. & R. 99; 9 Bingh. N. C. 440; White v. People, 81 Ill. 333; Doan v. State, 26 Ind. 495; King v. State, 21 Ga. 220; Thompson v. State, 95 S. E. 292, 293, 147 Ga. 745; Bradley v. Commonwealth, 257 S. W. 11, 13, 201 Ky. 413.

ABEYANCE. In the law of estates. In expectation, remembrance, and contemplation of law; the condition of a freehold when there is no person in being in whom it is vested. In such cases the freehold has been said to be in nudibus (in the clouds), McKown v. Mc-

Kown, 117 S. E. 557, 559, 93 W. Va. 689; in pendentis (in suspension); and in gremio legis (in the bosom of the law). It has been denied by some that there is such a thing as an estate in abeyance; Fearn, Cont. Rem. 513. See also the note to 2 Sharsw. Bla. Comm. 107; 1 P. Wms. 516; 1 Plowd. 29. Where there is a tenant of the freehold, the remainder or reversion in fee may exist for a time without any particular owner, in which case it is said to be in abeyance; Lyle v. Richards, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 367; 3 Plowd. 29 a, b, 35 a; 1 Washb. R. P. 47.

The term may also be applied to the franchise of a corporation; Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 691, 4 L. Ed. 629. So, too, personal property may be in abeyance or legal sequestration, as in case of a vessel captured at sea from its captors until it becomes invested with the character of a prize; 1 Kent, 102; 1 C. Rob. Adm. 139; 3 id. 97, n.; or the rights of property of a bankrupt, pending adjudication; Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403, 25 L. Ed. 866. See Dillingham v. Snow, 5 Mass. 555; Jewett v. Burroughs, 15 Mass. 464.

Sometimes "abeyance" is used to denote a condition of being undetermined. Fenn v. American Rattan & Reed Mfg. Co., 130 N. E. 129, 130, 75 Ind. App. 146.

ABIATICUS, or AVIATICUS. L. Lat. In feudal law. A son's son; a grandson in the male line. Du Cange, Avius; Spelman; Lib. Feud., Baraterii, tit. 8, cited Id.

ABIDE. To accept the consequences of; to rest satisfied with.

With reference to an order, judgment, or decree of a court, to perform, to execute. Taylor v. Hughes, 3 Greenl. (Me.) 433; Hodge v. Hodgdon, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 294; Jackson v. State, 30 Kan. 88, 1 P. 317; Petition of Griswold, 13 R. I. 125. Where a statute provides for a recognizance "to abide the judgment of the court," one conditioned "to await the action of the court" is not sufficient; Wilson v. State, 7 Tex. App. 38. And under Alabama Code 1928, § 1943, defendant does not "abide the judgment" of the appellate court until costs of appeal are paid. Ex parte Tillery, 22 Ala. App. 193, 114 So. 15. And see State v. Gregory, 205 Iowa, 707, 216 N. W. 17, 19.

To abide and satisfy is used to express the execution or performance of a judgment or order by carrying it into complete effect; Erickson v. Elder, 34 Minn. 371, 25 N. W. 804. Cp. Woolfolk v. Jones (D. C. Va.) 216 F. 807, 809.

Where it is said by an appellate court that costs are to abide the final result, "abide" is synonymous with conform to. Getz v. Johnston, 125 A. 689, 691, 145 Md. 426.

To abide by an award means to await the award without revoking the submission. It does not mean to "acquiesce in" or "not dispute," in the sense of not being at liberty to contest the validity of the award when made; Hunt v. Wilson, 6 N. H. 36; Quimby v. Melvin, 35 N. H. 198; Marshall v. Reed, 48 N. H. 36, 40; Shaw v. Hatch, 6 N. H. 162; Weeks v. Trask, 16 A. 413, 81 Me. 127, 2 L. R. A. 532.

ABIDING BY. In Scotch law. A judicial declaration that the party abides by the deed on which he founds, in an action where the deed or writing is attacked as forged. Unless this be done, a decree that the deed is false will be pronounced. Pat. Comp. It has the effect of pledging the party to stand the consequences of founding on a forged deed. Bell.

ABIDING CONVICTION. A definite conviction of guilt derived from a thorough examination of the whole case. Hopt v. Utah, 120 U. S. 439, 7 S. Ct. 614, 30 L. Ed. 708. A settled or fixed conviction. Davis v. State, 62 So. 1027, 1033, 8 Ala. App. 147.

ABIGEATORES. See Abigeus.

ABIGEATUS. Lat. In the civil law. The offense of stealing or driving away cattle. See Abigeus.

ABIGEI. See Abigeus.

ABIGERE. Lat. In the civil law. To drive away. Applied to those who drove away animals with the intention of stealing them. Applied, also, to the similar offense of cattle stealing on the borders between England and Scotland. See Abigeus.

To drive out; to expel by force; to produce abortion. Dig. 47, 11, 4.

ABIGEUS. Lat. (Pl., abigei, or more rarely abigeatores.) In the civil law. A stealer of cattle; one who drove or drew away (subtravit) cattle from their pastures, as horses or oxen from the herds, and made booty of them, and who followed this as a business or trade.

The term was applied also to those who drove away the smaller animals, as swine, sheep, and goats. In the latter case, it depended on the number taken, whether the offender was fur (a common thief) or abigeus. But the taking of a single horse or ox seems to have constituted the crime of abigeatus. And those who frequently did this were clearly abigei, though they took but an animal or two at a time. Dig. 47, 14, 3, 2. See Cod. 9, 37; Nov. 22, c. 15, § 1; 4 Bl. Comm. 239.

ABILITY. When the word is used in statutes, it is usually construed as referring to pecuniary ability, as in the construction of Tenterden's Act (q. v.); 1 M. & W. 101.

A Wisconsin Act (1885), making a husband "being of sufficient ability" liable for the support of an abandoned wife, contemplates earning capacity as well as property actually owned; State v. Witham, 70 Wis. 473, 35 N. W. 934; a contrary view was taken in Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 475, where the term was limited to the possession by the husband of the means in property to provide such necessaries, not to his capacity of acquiring such means by labor.

The ability to buy, required in a purchaser as a condition to the broker's right to a commission, is the financial ability to meet the required terms of the sale, and does not mean solvency or ability to respond in damages for a breach of the contract. Stewart v. Sisk, 114 S. E. 71, 29 Ga. App. 17. See Abte to Purchase.

A voter's "ability to read" within meaning of election statutes is satisfied if he can read in a reasonably intelligent manner sentences composed of words in common use and of average difficulty, although each word may not be always accurately pronounced, and "ability to write" is satisfied if he can by use of alphabetical signs express in a fairly legible way words of common use and average difficulty, though each word may not be accurately spelled. Williams v. Hays, 193 S. W. 1046, 1047, 175 Ky. 170. But the mere ability to write one's name and post office address, and nothing more, is insufficient. Murrel v. Allen, 203 S. W. 313, 314, 180 Ky. 604.

ABISHERING, or ABISHERSING. Quit of amerancements. It originally signified a forfeiture or amerement, and is more properly mishering, mishersing, or miskering, according to Spelman. It has since been termed a liberty of freedom, because, wherever this word is used in a grant, the persons to whom the grant is made have the forfeitures and amerancements of all others, and are themselves free from the control of any within their fee. Termes de la Ley, 7.

ABJUDICATIO. In old English law. The depriving of a thing by the judgment of a court; a putting out of court; the same as forisjudicatio, forjudgment, forjudger. Co. Litt. 100a, b; Townsh. Pl. 49. A removal from court. Calvinus, Lex.

Used to indicate an adverse decision in a writ of right: Thus, the land is said to be abjudged from one of the parties and his heirs. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 62.

ABJURATION. A renunciation or abandonment by or upon oath.

In English Law

The oath by which any person holding office in England was formerly obliged to bind himself not to acknowledge any right in the Pretender to the throne of England; 1 Bla. Com. 368; 13 and 14 W. III, c. 6, repealed by 30 and 31 Vic. c. 59.

It also denotes an oath abjuring certain doctrines of the church of Rome.

ABJURATION OF ALLEGIANCE. In American law. Every alien, upon application to become a citizen of the United States, must declare on oath or affirmation before the court where the application is made, amongst other things, that he doth absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity which he owes to any foreign prince, state, etc. 8 USCA § 381.

ABJURATION OF THE REALM. In ancient English law. A renunciation of one's country, a species of self-imposed banishment, under an oath never to return to the kingdom unless by permission. This was formerly allowed to criminals, as a means of saving their lives, when they had confessed their crimes, and fled to sanctuary. See 4 Bl. Comm. 332; Avery v. Everett, 110 N. Y. 317, 18 N. E. 148, 1 L. R. A. 264, 6 Am. St. Rep. 368; 11 East, 301; 2 Kent, 156, n.; Termes de la Ley; 2 Poll. & Maitl. 588. See Abjure.

ABJURE. To renounce, or abandon, by or upon oath. See Abjure.

"The decision in Arthur v. Broadnax, 3 Ala. 567, affirms that if the husband has abjured the state, and remains abroad, the wife, meanwhile trading as a feme sole, could recover on a note which was given to her as such. We must consider the term 'abjure,' as there used, as implying a total abandonment of the state; a departure from the state without the intention of returning, and not a renunciation of one's country, upon an oath of perpetual banishment, as the term originally implied." Mead v. Hughes, 15 Ala. 148, 1 Am. Rep. 123.

ABLE-BODIED. As used in a statute relating to service in the militia, this term does not imply an absolute freedom from all physical ailment. It imports an absence of those palpable and visible defects which evidently incapacitate the person from performing the ordinary duties of a soldier. Darling v. Bowen, 10 Vt. 152. Ability to perform ordinary labor is not the test. Town of Marlborough v. Sisson, 26 Conn. 57.

ABLE TO EARN. The phrase "able to earn," as used in the Workmen's Compensation Act in reference to wages an injured employee is able to earn subsequent to his injury, does not mean the maximum sum earned in any one week, but a fair average of the weekly wages which an employee is able to earn covering a sufficient period of time to determine his earning capacity. Reeves v. Dietz, 1 La. App. 501, 505. See also, Mt. Olive & Staunton Coal Co. v. Industrial Commission, 134 N. E. 16, 301 Ill. 521.

ABLE TO PURCHASE. One is able to purchase, within the requirement that a purchaser found by a broker, to entitle him to commission, must be ready, willing, and able to purchase, if one is financially able, that is to say, able to command the necessary funds to close the deal within the time required, even though part of the money must be obtained on the purchased property itself. Pellaton v. Brunski, 231 P. 583, 584, 69 Cal. App. 301. But see Bateman v. Richard, 232 P. 443, 445, 105 Okl. 272, and Reynor v. Mackrill, 164 N. W. 335, 181 Iowa, 210, 1 A. L. R. 523, holding that a person, to be able to purchase, must have the money for the cash payment, and not merely property on which he could raise it. See, also, Peters v. Mullins, 277 S. W. 316, 317, 211 Ky. 123. See Financially Able.

ABLEGATI. Papal ambassadors of the second rank, who are sent to a country where there is not a nuncio, with a less extensive commission than that of a nuncio. This title is equivalent to envoy.

ABLOCATIO. A letting out to hire, or leasing for money. Calvin. Sometimes used in the English form "ablocation."

ABMATERTERA. Lat. In the civil law. A great-great-grandmother's sister, (abavia soror). Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3. Called matertera maxima. Id. 38, 10, 10, 17. Called, by Bracton, abmatertera magna. Bract. fol. 68b.

ABNEPOS. Lat. A great-great-grandson. The grandson of a grandson or granddaughter. Calvinus, Lex.

ABNEPTIS. Lat. A great-great-granddaughter. The granddaughter of a grandson or granddaughter. Calvinus, Lex.

ABODE. The place where a person dwells. Dorsey v. Brigham, 177 Ill. 250, 52 N. E. 303, 42 L. R. A. 809, 69 Am. St. Rep. 228; Vanderpoel v. O'Hanlon, 53 Iowa, 246, 5 N. W. 119, 36 Am. Rep. 216. It is the criterion determining the residence of a legal voter. Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. 302, 10 Am. Rep. 698; Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 181.

One's home; habitation; place of dwelling or residence. The term is commonly so used in statutes relating to service of process. Camden Auto Co. v. Mansfield, 113 A. 175, 176, 120 Me. 187; De Laval Separator Co. v. Hofberger, 154 N. W. 387, 389, 161 Wis. 344; Armour & Co. v. Strahan, 93 So. 364, 130 Miss. 109; L. J. Mueller Furnace Co. v. Dreibelbis (Mo. App.) 229 S. W. 240, 241. See, also, In re Barklow (D. C. Or.) 282 F. 892, 894. See Domicile; Residence.

ABOGADO. Sp. An advocate. See Bozero.

ABOLISH. To do away with wholly; to annul. Webster. To dispense with. Alexander v. City of Lampasas (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 614, 616. And see Reilly v. Smith, 156 N. Y. S. 684, 687, 92 Misc. 309.

ABOLITION. The destruction, annihilation, abrogation, or extinguishment of anything. Thus, authority to shorten a school year does not include authority to close a school, for the mere shortening of a term is to be distinguished from its abolition. Peterson v. Pratt, 167 N. W. 101, 183 Iowa, 462.

Also the leave given by the sovereign or judges to a criminal accuser to desist from further prosecution. 25 Hen. VIII. c. 21.

In the Civil, French and German law, abolition is used nearly synonymously with pardon, remission, grace. Dig. 39. 4. 3. 3. There is, however, this difference: grace is the generic term; pardon, according to those laws, is the clemency which the prince extends to a man who has participated in a crime, without being a principal or accomplice; remission is made in cases of involuntary homicides, and self-defence. Abolition is used when the crime cannot be remitted. The prince then may, by letters of abolition, remit the punishment, but the infamy remains, unless letters of abolition have been obtained before sentence. Encycl. de D'Altembert.

ABORDAGE. Fr. In French commercial law. Collision of vessels.

ABORTIFACIENT. In medical jurisprudence. A drug or medicine capable of, or used for, producing abortion.

ABORTION. The expulsion of the fœtus at a period of utero-gestation so early that it has not acquired the power of sustaining an independent life.

The unlawful destruction, or the bringing forth prematurely, of the human fetus before the natural time of birth; State v. Magnell, 3 Pennewill (Del.) 307, 51 A. 606.

The act of bringing forth what is yet imperfect. Also the thing prematurely brought forth, or product of an untimely process. Sometimes loosely used for the offense of procuring a premature delivery; but strictly, the early delivering is the abortion; causing or procuring abortion is the full name of the offense. Abbott; Smith v. State, 33 Me. 48, 59, 54 Am. Dec. 607; State v. Crook, 16 Utah, 212, 51, P. 1091; Belt v. Spaulding, 17 Or. 130, 20 P. 827; Mills v. Commonwealth, 13 Pa. 631; Wells v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 191 Pa. 207, 43 A. 126, 53 L. R. A. 327, 71 Am. St. Rep. 763.

ABORTIVE TRIAL. A term descriptive of the result when a case has gone off, and no verdict has been pronounced, without the fault, contrivance, or management of the parties. Jebb & B. 51.

ABORTUS. Lat. The fruit of an abortion; the child born before its time, incapable of life.

ABOUT. Almost or approximately; near in time, quantity, number, quality, or degree.

When used with reference to time, the term is of flexible significance, varying with the circumstances and the connection in which it is employed. Burlington Grocery Co. v. Heaphy's Estate, 126 A. 525, 528, 98 Vt. 122. But its use does not necessarily render time immaterial, nor make a contract one terminable at will. Costello v. Siems-Carey Co., 167 N. W. 551, 552, 140 Minn. 208. In a charter party, "about to sail" means just ready to sail. [1893] 2 Q. B. 274. And when it is said that one is "about" to board a street car, it means "in the act of." Fox v. Denver City Tramway Co., 143 P. 278, 280, 57 Colo. 511.

With relation to quantity, the term suggests only an estimate of probable amount. Barke-meyer Grain & Seed Co. v. Hannant, 213 P. 208, 210, 66 Mont. 120. Its import is that the actual quantity is a near approximation to that mentioned, and it has the effect of providing against accidental variations. Nor-rington v. Wright, 6 S. Ct. 12, 115 U. S. 188, 29 L. Ed. 366; Cavender v. B. Johnson & Son (Mo.

App.) 212 S. W. 53, 54. It may be given practically the same effect as the phrase more or less. Pierce v. Miller, 187 N. W. 105, 107, 107 Neb. 851.

As to number, it merely implies an estimate of a particular lot or class and not a warranty. Holland v. Rock, 50 Nev. 340, 259 P. 415.

In connection with distance or locality, the term is of relative significance, varying with the circumstances. Parker v. Town of Pittsfield, 92 A. 24, 26, 88 Vt. 155. Thus, an employee on an elevator on the employer's premises is "about the premises" within the Workmen's Compensation Act. Lienau v. Northwestern Telephone Exch. Co., 186 N. W. 945, 946, 151 Minn. 258; Novack v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 198 N. W. 290, 293, 158 Minn. 495. Likewise, a workman 200 feet from a factory at time of an injury was "about" the factory. Wise v. Central Dairy Co., 246 P. 501, 503, 121 Kan. 258.

"About" may be synonymous with "on" or "upon," as in a statute making it an offense to carry weapons concealed on or about the person. State v. Brunson, 111 So. 321, 323, 162 La. 902; State v. Scanlan, 273 S. W. 1062, 1065, 308 Mo. 683. The phrase, "about the person," is broad enough to include the carriage of a pistol or revolver in a grip, satchel, or hand bag held in the hand or connected with the person, State v. Blazovitch, 107 S. E. 291, 88 W. Va. 612, or on the running board of an automobile, Armstrong v. State, 265 S. W. 701, 98 Tex. Cr. R. 335. See, also, Livesey v. Helbig, 94 A. 47, 48, 87 N. J. Law, 303; Emerson v. State, 190 S. W. 485, 80 Tex. Cr. R. 354; Paulk v. State, 261 S. W. 779, 780, 97 Tex. Cr. R. 415. "About" means near by, close at hand, convenient of access, and within such distance of the party so having it as that such party could, without materially changing his position, get his hand on the pistol, etc. Welch v. State, 262 S. W. 485, 97 Tex. Cr. R. 617; People v. Niemoth, 152 N. E. 537, 322 Ill. 51.

ABOUTISSEMENT. Fr. An abuttal or abutment. See Guyot, Répert. Univ. "Aboutissans."

ABOVE. Higher; superior. As, court above, plaintiff or defendant above. Above all incumbrances means in excess thereof; Williams v. McDonald, 42 N. J. Eq. 395, 7 A. 886.

Principal; as distinguished from what is auxiliary or instrumental. Bail to the action, or special bail, is otherwise termed bail above. 3 Bl. Comm. 291. See Below.

As used in an act establishing a city court with jurisdiction "above" the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, the word "above" was held synonymous with "without." Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Nellwood Lumber Co., 94 S. E. 86, 87, 21 Ga. App. 209.

ABOVE CITED, or MENTIONED. Quoted before. A figurative expression taken from the ancient manner of writing books on scrolls, where whatever is mentioned or cited before in the same roll must be above. Encyc. Lond.

ABPATRUUS. Lat. A great-great-uncle; or, a great-great-grandfather's brother (abavi frater). Inst. 3, 6, 6; Dig. 38, 10, 3; Du Cange, Patruus. Called by Bracton and Fleta, abpatruus magnus. Bract. fol. 68b; Fleta, lib. 6, c. 2, § 17. It sometimes means uncle, and sometimes great-uncle.

ABRIDGE. To reduce or contract; usually spoken of written language.

In Copyright Law

To epitomize; to reduce; to contract. It implies preserving the substance, the essence, of a work, in language suited to such a purpose. In making extracts there is no condensation of the author's language, and hence no abridgment. To abridge requires the exercise of the mind; it is not copying. Between a compilation and an abridgment there is a clear distinction. A compilation consists of selected extracts from different authors; an abridgment is a condensation of the views of one author. Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean, 306, 310, Fed. Cas. No. 13,497.

In Practice

To shorten a declaration or count by taking away or severing some of the substance of it. Brooke, Abr., Com., Dig. Abridgment; 1 Viner, Abr. 109. See Abridgment.

ABRIDGMENT. Condensation; contraction. An epitome or compendium of another and larger work, wherein the principal ideas of the larger work are summarily contained.

Abridgments of the law are brief digests of the law, arranged alphabetically. The oldest are those of Fitzherbert, Brooke, and Rolle; among somewhat more modern works are those of Viner, Comyns, and Bacon. (1 Steph. Comm. 51.) The term "digest" has now supplanted that of "abridgment." Sweet. With few exceptions, the old abridgments are not entitled to be considered authoritative. See 2 Wils. 1, 2; 1 Burr. 364; 1 W. Bla. 101; 3 Term 64, 241; and an article in the North American Review, July, 1826, p. 8, by Justice Story, which is reprinted in his "Miscellaneous Writings," p. 79. See Abridge.

ABRIDGMENT OF DAMAGES. The right of the court to reduce the damages in certain cases. Vide Brooke, tit. "Abridgment."

ABROAD. In English chancery law, beyond the seas.

ABROGATE. To annul, repeal, or destroy; to annul or repeal an order or rule issued by a subordinate authority; to repeal a former law by legislative act, or by usage.

ABROGATION. The destruction or annulling of a former law, by an act of the legislative power, by constitutional authority, or by usage.

It stands opposed to rogation; and is distinguished from derogation, which implies the taking away only some part of a law; from subrogation, which denotes the adding a clause to it; from dispensation, which only sets it aside in a particular instance; and from antiquation, which is the refusing to pass a law. Encyc. Lond.

Express abrogation is that literally pronounced by the new law either in general terms, as when a final clause abrogates or repeals all laws contrary to the provisions of the new one, or in particular terms, as when it abrogates certain preceding laws which are named.

Implied abrogation takes place when the new law contains provisions which are positively contrary to former laws, without expressly abrogating such laws; De Armas' Case, 10 Mart. O. S. (La.) 172; Bernard v. Vignaud, 10 Mart. O. S. (La.) 560; and also when the order of things for which the law has been made no longer exists. See Ex parte Lum Poy (D. C.) 23 F.(2d) 690.

ABSCOND. To go in a clandestine manner out of the jurisdiction of the courts, or to lie concealed, in order to avoid their process. Malvin v. Christoph, 7 N. W. 6, 54 Iowa, 562.

To hide, conceal, or absent oneself clandestinely, with the intent to avoid legal process. Smith v. Johnson, 43 Neb. 754, 62 N. W. 217; Hoggett v. Emerson, 8 Kan. 262; Ware v. Todd, 1 Ala. 200; Kingsland v. Worsham, 15 Mo. 657; Johnstone v. Thompson, 2 La. 411. See Absconding Debtor.

ABSCONDING DEBTOR. One who absconds from his creditors. An absconding debtor is one who lives without the state, or who has intentionally concealed himself from his creditors, or withdrawn himself from the reach of their suits, with intent to frustrate their just demands. Thus, if a person departs from his usual residence, or remains absent therefrom, or conceals himself in his house, so that he cannot be served with process, with intent unlawfully to delay or defraud his creditors, he is an absconding debtor; but if he departs from the state or from his usual abode, with the intention of again returning, and without any fraudulent design, he has not absconded, nor absented himself, within the intendment of the law. Stafford v. Mills, 57 N. J. Law, 574, 32 A. 7; Fitch v. Waite, 5 Conn. 117; Martin v. Barrett (Mo. App.) 204 S. W. 410; Little v. Long, 107 A. 412, 93 N. J. Law, 99; Kershbaum v. London Guarantee & Accident Co., 133 A. 229, 232, 286 Pa. 213.

A party may abscond, and subject himself to the operation of the attachment law against absconding debtors, without leaving the limits of the state. Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209.

A debtor who is shut up from his creditors in his own house is an absconding debtor. Ives v. Curtiss, 2 Root (Conn.) 133; Bennett v. Avant, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 152.

ABSENCE. The state of being absent, removed, or away from one's domicile, or usual place of residence. See Maley v. Pennsyl-

Absence is of a fivefold kind: (1) A necessary absence, as in banished or transported persons; this is entirely necessary. (2) Necessary and voluntary, as upon the account of the commonwealth, or in the service of the church. (3) A probable absence, according to the civilians, as that of students on the score of study. (4) Entirely voluntary, on account of trade, merchandise, and the like. (5) Absence cum dolo et culpa, as not appearing to a writ, subpoena, citation, etc., or to delay or defeat creditors, or avoiding arrest, either on civil or criminal process. Ayliffe.

Where the statute allows the vacation of a judgment rendered against a defendant "in his absence," the term "absence" means non-appearance to the action, and not merely that the party was not present in court. Strine v. Kaufman, 12 Neb. 423, 11 N. W. 867; L. R. 1 P. & D. 169; 14 L. T. 604. But the word "absence," in its usual and natural signification, means physical absence. Inhabitants of Lanesborough v. Inhabitants of Ludlow, 145 N. E. 57, 58, 250 Mass. 99. See Cytacki v. Busecko, 197 N. W. 1021, 1022, 226 Mich. 524.

ABSENT. Being away from; at a distance from; not in company with. Paine v. Drew, 44 N. H. 306, where it was held that the word when used as an adjective referred only to the condition or situation of the person or thing spoken of at the time of speaking without reference to any prior condition or situation of the same person or thing, but when used as a verb implies prior presence. It has also been held to mean "not being in a particular place at the time referred to," and not to import prior presence; [1893] A. C. 339; 62 L. J. C. P. 107; 62 L. T. 159.

The term absent defendants does not embrace non-resident defendants but has reference to parties resident in the state, but temporarily absent therefrom; Wash v. Heard, 27 Miss. 400; Wheeler v. Wheeler, 35 Ill. App. 123. See, however, Seimer v. James Dickinson Farm Mortg. Co. (D. C. Ill.) 299 F. 651, 658, holding that a foreign corporation is "absent" from the state, and limitation does not run in its favor.

A judge, disqualified to act in a case, is "absent from the county," within Kentucky Civ. Code Prac. § 273, authorizing the clerk of court to grant an injunction or temporary restraining order. Dark Tobacco Growers' Co-op. Ass'n v. Wilson, 267 S. W. 1092, 1093, 206 Ky. 550.

A deceased stockholder employee is not "absent" from duty so as to entitle his heirs or assigns, under a contract, to his share of the profits, etc., less the cost of a capable person to fill his position. Nichols v. Olympia Veneer Co., 236 P. 794, 796, 185 Wash. 2.

As a verb, "absent" means to take or withdraw to such a distance as to prevent intercourse; to depart from. People v. Day, 152 N. E. 495, 497, 321 Ill. 552.

One who is absent from his usual place of residence or domicile.

In Louisiana law, one who has left his residence in a state leaving no one to represent him; Bartlett v. Wheeler, 31 La. Ann. 540; or who resides in another state but has property in Louisiana; Penn v. Evans, 28 id. 576. It has been also defined as one who has never been domiciled in the state and who resides abroad. Civil Code La. art. 3556; Dreville v. Cucullu, 18 La. Ann. 695; Morris v. Bienvenu, 30 La. Ann. 878. One person cannot be both, at the same time, in the meaning of the law, a resident and an absentee. Savant v. Mercadal, 66 So. 961, 962, 136 La. 248; Spence v. Spence, 105 So. 28, 29, 158 La. 961.

Absentia ejus qui reipublicæ causâ abest, neque ei neque alii damnosa esse debet. The absence of him who is away in behalf of the republic (on business of the state) ought not to be prejudicial either to him or to another. Dig. 50, 17, 140.

ABSOILE, ASSOIL, ASSOILE. To pardon; to deliver from excommunication. Stauford, Pl. Cr. 72; Kelham; Cowell.

Under the National Bank Act, "abstraction" is the act of one who, being an officer of a national banking association, wrongfully takes or withdraws from it any of its moneys, funds, or credits, with intent to injure or defraud it or some other person or company, and, without its knowledge or consent or that of its board of directors, converts them to the use of himself or of some person or company other than the bank. It is not necessarily the same as embezzlement, larceny, or misapplication of funds. United States v. Harper (C. C.) 33 F. 471; United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327, 7 S. Ct. 580, 30 L. A complete history in short, abbreviated form of the case as found in the record, complete enough to show that the questions presented for review have been properly reserved. Poshek v. Marceline Coal & Mining Co. (Mo. App.) 231 S. W. 70; State ex rel. Wallace State Bank v. Trimble, 272 S. W. 72, 73, 308 Mo. 278. It should be a synopsis or summary of the facts, rather than a table of contents of the transcript. Wing v. Brasher, 194 P. 1106, 1108, 59 Mont. 10.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE. A condensed history of the title to land, consisting of a synopsis or summary of the material or operative portion of all the conveyances, of whatever kind or nature, which in any manner affect said land, or any estate or interest therein, together with a statement of all liens, charges, or liabilities to which the same may be subject, and of which it is in any way material for purchasers to be apprised. Warv. Abst. § 2. Stevenson v. Polk, 71 Iowa, 278, 32 N. W. 340; Union Safe Deposit Co. v. Chisholm, 33 Ill. App. 647; Banker v. Caldwell, 3 Minn. 94 (Gil. 46); Heinsen v. Lamb, 117 Ill. 549, 7 N. E. 75; Smith v. Taylor, 82 Cal. 533, 23 P. 217; Geithman v. Eichler, 107 N. E. 180, 183, 265 Ill. 579; Duncan v. Kelley, 229 P. 425, 426, 103 Okl. 74; Wright v. Bott (Tex. Civ. App.) 163 S. W. 360, 365; Sheehan v. McKinstry, 210 P. 167, 170, 105 Or. 473, 34 A. L. R. 1315. The term "abstract of title" refers to record title, and not to extrinsic evidence thereof, Upton v. Smith, 166 N. W. 268, 183 Iowa, 588; Danzer v. Moerschel (Mo. Sup.) 214 S. W. 849, 7 A. L. R. 1162; Savage v. Shields (C. C. A. Ark.) 293 F. 863, 866; Wright v. Glass (Tex. Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 717, 718; and a "proper abstract of title," must be held to be an abstract showing a marketable title, Morgan v. W. A. Howard Realty Co., 191 P. 114, 115, 68 Colo. 414.

Abundans cautela non nocet. Abundant or extreme caution does no harm. 11 Co. 6; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 28, § 1; 6 Wheat. 108. This principle is generally applied to the construction of instruments in which superfluous words have been inserted more clearly to express the intention.

ABSURDITY. That which is both physically and morally impossible; and that is to be regarded as morally impossible which is contrary to reason, so that it could not be imputed to a man in his right senses. State v. Hayes, 81 Mo. 574, 585. Anything which is so irrational, unnatural, or inconvenient that it cannot be supposed to have been within the intention of men of ordinary intelligence and discretion. Black, Interp. Laws, 104; Graves v. Scales, 90 S. E. 499, 172 N. C. 915.

Obviously and flatly opposed to the manifest truth; inconsistent with the plain dictates of common sense; logically contradictory; nonsensical; ridiculous. Wade v. Empire Dist. Electric Co., 158 P. 28, 30, 98 Kan. 366.

ABUSE, n. Everything which is contrary to good order established by usage. Merl. Répert. Departure from use; immoderate or improper use.

In the Civil Law

The destruction of the substance of a thing in using it. See Abuse, v.

Of Corporate Franchise or Entity

The abuse or misuse of its franchises by a corporation signifies any positive act in violation of the charter and in derogation of public right, willfully done or caused to be done; the use of rights or franchises as a pretext for wrongs and injuries to the public. Baltimore v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 3 Pittsh. R. (Pa.) 20, Fed. Cas. No. 827; Erie & N. E. R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. 287, 318; Railroad Commission v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 90 Tex. 340, 38 S. W. 750; People v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 513, 26 N. E. 622; United States v. Reading Co. (D. C. Pa.) 226 F. 229, 277.

Of Female Child

An injury to the genital organs in an attempt at carnal knowledge, falling short of actual penetration. Dawkins v. State, 58 Ala. 376, 29 Am. Rep. 754; Miller v. State, 79 So. 314, 315, 16 Ala. App. 534. But, according to other authorities, "abuse" is here equivalent to ravishment or rape. Palin v. State, 38 Neb. 862, 57 N. W. 743; Commonwealth v. Roosnell, 143 Mass. 32, 8 N. E. 747; Chambers v. State, 46 Neb. 447, 64 N. W. 1078; 6 H. & N. 193.

Of Discretion

A discretion exercised to an end or purpose not justified by and clearly against reason and evidence. State v. Ferranto, 148 N. E. 362, 367, 112 Ohio St. 667; Bringhurst v. Harkins (Del.) 122 A. 783, 787, 2 W. W. Har. 324; Webber v. Webber, 196 N. W. 646, 648, 157 Minn. 422; Kinnear v. Dennis, 223 P. 383, 384, 97 Okl. 206. Unreasonable departure from considered precedents and settled judicial custom, constituting error of law. In re Horowitz (C. C. N. Y.) 250 F. 106, 107. See also, Reid v. Ehr, 162 N. W. 903, 905, 36 N. D. 552; Lyles v. Williams, 80 S. E. 470, 471, 96 S. C. 290; State v. Robinson, 98 S. E. 329, 330, 111 S. C. 467.

The term is commonly employed to justify an interference by a higher court with the exercise of discretionary power by a lower court and is said by some authorities to imply not merely error of judgment, but perversity of will, passion, prejudice, partiality, or moral delinquency. The exercise of an honest judgment, however erroneous it may appear to be, is not an abuse of discretion. People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 29 N. Y. 418, 431; Stroup v. Raymond, 183 Pa. 279, 38 A. 626, 63 Am. St. Rep. 758; Day v. Donohue, 62 N. J. Law, 380, 41 A. 934; Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Heath, 29 Ind. App. 395, 62 N. E. 107; Grayson County v. Harrell (Tex. Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 160; Deeds v. Deeds, 108 Kan. 770, 196 P. 1109. Where a court does not exercise a discretion in the sense of being discreet, circumspect, prudent, and exercising cautious judgment, it is an abuse of discretion. Murray v. Buell, 74 Wis. 14, 41 N. W. 1010; Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, 16 P. 345; State Board of Medical Examiners v. Spears, 247 P. 563, 565, 79 Colo. 588.

Of Distress

The using an animal or chattel distrained, which makes the distrainer liable as for a conversion.

Of Process

There is said to be an abuse of process when an adversary, through the malicious and unfounded use of some regular legal proceeding, obtains some advantage over his opponent. Wharton.

A malicious abuse of legal process occurs where the party employs it for some unlawful object, not the purpose which it is intended by the law to effect; in other words, a perversion of it. Lauzon v. Charroux, 18 R. I. 467, 28 A. 975; Mayer v. Walter, 64 Pa. 283; Bartlett v. Christhilf, 69 Md. 219, 14 A. 518; King v. Johnston, 81 Wis. 578, 51 N. W. 1011; Kline v. Hibbard, 80 Hun, 50, 29 N. Y. S. 807; Porter v. Johnson, 96 Ga. 145, 23 S. E. 123; McKellar v. Moynihan, 111 S. E. 580, 28 Ga. App. 431; Dixon v. Smith-Wallace Shoe Co., 119 N. E. 265, 268, 283 Ill. 234; Assets Collecting Co. v. Myers, 152 N. Y. S. 930, 933, 167 App. Div. 133; Griffin v. Baker, 134 S. E. 651, 192 N. C. 297; Carpenter, Baggott & Co. v. Hanes, 83 S. E. 577, 579, 167 N. C. 551; Glidewell v. Murray-Lacy & Co., 98 S. E. 665, 667, 124 Va. 563, 4 A. L. R. 225. Thus, where the purpose of a prosecution for issuance of a check without funds was to collect a debt, the prosecution constituted an abuse of criminal process. Hotel Supply Co. v. Reid, 80 So. 137, 138, 16 Ala. App. 563.

ABUSE, v. To make excessive or improper use of a thing, or to employ it in a manner contrary to the natural or legal rules for its use; to make an extravagant or excessive use, as to abuse one's authority.

In the civil law, the borrower of a chattel which, in its nature, cannot be used without consuming it, such as wine or grain, is said to abuse the thing borrowed if he uses it.

It has been held to include misuse; Erie & North-East R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. 287; to signify to injure, diminish in value, or wear away by improper use; id.; to be synonymous with injure; Dawkins v. State, 58 Ala. 376, 29 Am. Rep. 754.

ABUSIVE. Tending to deceive; practicing abuse; prone to ill treat by coarse, insulting words. U. S. v. Strong (D. C. Wash.) 263 F. 789, 796; U. S. v. Ault (D. C. Wash.) 263 F. 800, 810. Using ill treatment, injurious, improper, hurtful, offensive, reproachful. People on Complaint of Wilson v. Sinclair, 149 N. Y. S. 54, 56, 86 Misc. 426; State v. Pape, 96 A. 313, 314, 90 Conn. 98.

ABUT. To reach, to touch. In old law, the ends were said to abut, the sides to adjoin. Cro. Jac. 184. And see Lawrence v. Killam, 11 Kan. 499, 511; Springfield v. Green, 120 Ill. 269, 11 N. E. 261.

To take a new direction; as where a bounding line changes its course. Spelman, Gloss. Abuttare.

To touch at the end; be contiguous; join at a border or boundary; terminate; to end at; to border on; to reach or touch with an end. Hensler v. City of Anacortes, 248 P. 406, 407, 140 Wash. 184; People ex rel. New York, W. & B. Ry. Co. v. Waldorf, 153 N. Y. S. 1072, 1075, 168 App. Div. 473. See Kingshighway Supply Co. v. Banner Iron Works, 181 S. W. 30, 32, 266 Mo. 138; Boonville Mercantile Co. v. Hogan, 226 S. W. 620, 621, 205 Mo. App. 594. The term "abutting" implies a closer proximity than the term "adjacent." City of Hutchinson v. Danley, 129 P. 163, 164, 88 Kan. 437.

Though the usual meaning of the word is that the things spoken of do actually adjoin, "bounding and abutting" have no such inflexible meaning as to require lots assessed actually to touch the improvement; Cohen v. Cleveland, 43 Ohio St. 190, 1 N. E. 589; Cincinnati v. Batsche, 52 Ohio St. 324, 40 N. E. 21, 27 L. R. A. 536; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. City of Quincy, 27 N. E. 192, 136 Ill. 563, 29 Am. St. Rep. 334; 1 Ex. D. 336; contra, Holt v. City Council, 127 Mass. 408. See, also, Board of Com'rs of Licking County v. Bolin, 124 N. E. 45, 46, 99 Ohio St. 117; Anderson v. Town of Albermarle, 109 S. E. 262, 264, 182 N. C. 434.

ABUTMENTS. The walls of a bridge adjoining the land which support the end of the roadway and sustain the arches. The ends of a bridge, or those parts of it which touch the land. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Sussex County v. Strader, 18 N. J. Law, 108, 35 Am. Dec. 530; Bardwell v. Town of Jamaica, 15 Vt. 438.

ABUTTALS. Fr. The buttings or boundaries of lands, showing to what other lands, highways, or places they belong or are abutting. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Toml. It has been used to express the end boundary lines as distinguished from those on the sides, as "buttals and sidings"; Cro. Jac. 183.

ABUTTER. One whose property abuts, is contiguous, or joins at a border or boundary, as where no other land, road, or street intervenes.

ABUTTING OWNER. An owner of land which abuts or adjoins. The term usually implies that the relative parts actually adjoin, but is sometimes loosely used without implying more than close proximity. See Abut.

AC ETIAM. (Lat. And also.) The introduction of the statement of the real cause of action, used in those cases where it was necessary to allege a fictitious cause of action to give the court jurisdiction, and also the real cause in compliance with the statutes. It is sometimes written acetiam. 2 Stra. 922. This clause is no longer used in the English courts. 2 Will. IV. c. 39. 3 Bla. Comm. 288. See Bill of Middlesex under Bill, definition 2.

AC ETIAM BILLÆ. And also to a bill. See Ac Etiam.

AC SI. (Lat. As if.) Townsh. Pl. 23, 27. These words frequently occur in old English statutes. Lord Bacon expounds their meaning in the statute of uses: "The statute gives entry, not simpliciter, but with an ac si." Bac. Read. Uses, Works, iv. 195.

ACADEMY. An institution of learning. An association of experts in some particular branch of art, literature, or science.

In its original meaning, an association formed for mutual improvement, or for the advancement of science or art; in later use, a species of educational institution, of a grade between the common school and the college. Academy of Fine Arts v. Philadelphia County, 22 Pa. 496; Commonwealth v. Banks, 198 Pa. 397, 48 A. 277; Blackwell v. State, 36 Ark. 178; Mary S. Fithian Night School & Academy v. College Board of Presbyterian Church in United States, 102 A. 855, 856, 88 N. J. Eq. 468. See School.

ACAPTE. In French feudal law. A species of relief; a seignorial right due on every change of a tenant. A feudal right which formerly prevailed in Languedoc and Guyenne, being attached to that species of heritable estates which were granted on the contract of emphyteusis. Guyot, Inst. Feod. c. 5, § 12.

ACCEDAS AD CURIAM. (Lat. That you go to court.) An original writ out of chancery directed to the sheriff, for the purpose of removing a replevin suit from a Court Baron or a hundred court to one of the superior courts of law. It directs the sheriff to go to the lower court, and enroll the proceedings and send up the record. See Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 18; Dy. 169; 3 Bl. Comm. 34.

ACCEDAS AD VICE COMITEM. L. Lat. (You go to the sheriff.) A writ formerly directed to the coroners of a county in England, commanding them to go to the sheriff, where the latter had suppressed and neglected to return a writ of pone, and to deliver a writ to him requiring him to return it. Reg. Orig. 83. See Pone.

ACCELERATION. The shortening of the time for the vesting in possession of an expectant interest. Wharton.

The word is also used in reference to contracts for payment of money in what is usually called an "acceleration clause" by which the time for payment of the debt is hastened or advanced because of breach of some condition such as failure to pay interest when due, McCormick v. Daggett, 162 Ark. 16, 257 S. W. 358; Stern v. Rainier, 193 Iowa, 665, 187 N. W. 442; insolvency of the maker, Wright v. Seaboard Steel & Manganese Corporation (C. C. A.) 272 F. 807; or failure to keep mortgaged premises insured, Porter v. Schroll, 93 Kan. 297, 144 P. 216.

ACCEPT. To receive with approval or satisfaction; to receive with intent to retain. See Fleming v. Law, 28 Cal. App. 110, 151 P. 385, 389; Morris v. State, 102 Ark. 513, 145 S. W. 213, 214. Also, in the capacity of drawee of a bill, to recognize the draft, and engage to pay it when due. It is not equivalent to "acquiesce." Applett v. Empire Inv. Co., 194 P. 461, 462, 99 Or. 533. For its meaning under certain statutes, see Lee v. Continental Ins. Co. (D. C. Ky.) 292 F. 408, 411; State v. Miller, 181 N. W. 745, 746, 173 Wis. 412; Northwestern Consol. Milling Co. v. Rosenberg (C. C. A. Pa.) 287 F. 785, 788; Ruediger v. Dennis, 201 S. W. 943, 199 Mo. App. 102; Davis v. State, 275 S. W. 1060, 1061, 101 Tex. Cr. R. 243.

ACCEPTANCE. The taking and receiving of anything in good part, and as it were a tacit agreement to a preceding act, which might have been defeated or avoided if such acceptance had not been made. Brooke, Abr.

The act of a person to whom a thing is offered or tendered by another, whereby he receives the thing with the intention of retaining it, such intention being evidenced by a sufficient act.

In the Law of Sales

An acceptance implies, not only the physical fact of receiving the goods, but also the intention of retaining them. Omaha Beverage Co. v. Temp Brew Co., 171 N. W. 704, 707, 185 Iowa, 1189; Mueller v. Simon (Tex. Civ. App.) 183 S. W. 63, 64. If an article is found defective, but is retained and used, it may be held to be a sufficient acceptance; Logan v. Berkshire Apartment Ass'n, 3 Misc. 296, 22 N. Y. S. 776; Noel & McGinnis v. Kauffman Buggy Co., 106 S. W. 237, 32 Ky. Law Rep. 576; Edwards v. Wooldridge, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 512, 115 S. W. 920; Ohio Electric Co. v. Wisconsin-Minnesota Light & Power Co., 155 N. W. 112, 113, 161 Wis. 632.

The acceptance of goods sold under a contract which would be void by the statute of frauds without delivery and acceptance involves something more than the act of the vendor in the delivery. It requires that the vendee should also act, and that his act should be of such a nature as to indicate that he receives and accepts the goods delivered as his property. He must receive and retain the articles delivered, intending thereby to assume the title to them, to constitute the acceptance mentioned in the statute. Rodgers v. Phillips, 40 N. Y. 524. See, also, Snow v. Warner, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 132, 43 Am. Dec. 417. There must be some unequivocal act, with intent to take possession as owner. Vacuum Ash & Soot Conveyor Co. v. Huyler's, 127 A. 203, 204, 101 N. J. Law, 147.

A "conditional acceptance" is in effect a statement that the offeree is willing to enter into a bargain differing in some respects from that proposed in the original offer. The conditional acceptance is, therefore, itself a counter offer and rejects the original offer, so that thereafter even an unqualified acceptance of that offer will not form a contract. Hoskins v. Michener, 197 P. 724, 33 Idaho, 681.

In Marine Insurance

The acceptance of an abandonment by the underwriter is his assent, either express or to be implied from the surrounding circumstances, to the sufficiency and regularity of the abandonment. Its effect is to perfect the insured's right of action as for a total loss, if the cause of loss and circumstances have been truly disclosed. Rap. & Law.

Of Bills of Exchange

An engagement to pay the bill in money when due. 4 East 72; Hunt v. Security State Bank, 179 P. 248, 251, 91 Or. 362. The act by which the person on whom a bill of exchange is drawn (called the "drawee") assents to the request of the drawer to pay it, or, in other words, engages, or makes himself liable, to pay it when due. 2 Bl. Comm. 469; Cox v. National Bank, 100 U. S. 704, 25 L. Ed. 739; Bell-Wayland Co. v. Bank of Sugden, 218 P. 703, 95 Okl. 67. It may be by parol or in writing, and either general or special, absolute or conditional; and it may be impliedly, as well as expressly, given. 3 Kent, Comm. 83, 85; Story, Bills, §§ 238, 251. But the usual and regular mode of acceptance is by the drawee's writing across the face of the bill the word "accepted," and subscribing his name; after which he is termed the acceptor. Id. § 243.

The following are the principal varieties of acceptances:

Absolute. An express and positive agreement to pay the bill according to its tenor.

Conditional. An engagement to pay the bill on the happening of a condition. Todd v. Bank of Kentucky, 3 Bush (Ky.) 628; Mo. St. Ann. § 2769.

For some examples of what do and what do not constitute conditional acceptances, see 6 C. & P.

218; 3 C. B. 841; Heaverin v. Donnell, 7 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 245, 45 Am. Dec. 302; Campbell v. Pettengill, 7 Greenl. (Me.) 126, 20 Am. Dec. 349; Swansey v. Breck, 10 Ala. 533; Hunton v. Ingraham, 1 Strob. (S. C.) 271; Tassey v. Church, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 346; Cook v. Wolfendale, 105 Mass. 401; Marsshall v. Clary, 44 Ga. 513; Ray v. Faulkner, 73 Ill. 469; Stevens v. Power Co., 62 Me. 498; Pope v. Huth, 14 Cal. 407; Palmer v. Rice, 36 Neb. 844, 55 N. W. 256; Vanstrum v. Liljengren, 37 Minn. 191, 33 N. W. 555; Gerow v. Riffe, 29 W. Va. 462, 2 S. E. 104; Ensign v. Clark Bros. Cutlery Co., 193 S. W. 961, 962, 195 Mo. App. 584.

Express. An undertaking in direct and express terms to pay the bill; an absolute acceptance.

Implied. An undertaking to pay the bill inferred from acts of the drawee of a character which fairly warrant such an inference.

Partial. An acceptance varying from the tenor of the bill.

An acceptance to pay part of the amount for which the bill is drawn, 1 Strange 214; Freeman v. Perot, 2 Wash. C. C. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 5,087; or to pay at a different time, 14 Jur. 806; Hatcher v. Stolworth, 25 Miss. 376; Molloy, b. 2, c. 10, § 20; or at a different place, 4 M. & S. 462, would be partial.

Qualified. One either conditional or partial, and which introduces a variation in the sum, time, mode, or place of payment.

Supra protest. An acceptance by a third person, after protest of the bill for non-acceptance by the drawee, to save the honor of the drawer or some particular indorser.

A general acceptance is an absolute acceptance precisely in conformity with the tenor of the bill itself, and not qualified by any statement, condition, or change. Rowe v. Young, 2 Brod. & B. 180; Todd v. Bank of Kentucky, 3 Bush (Ky.) 628.

A special acceptance is the qualified acceptance of a bill of exchange, as where it is accepted as payable at a particular place "and not elsewhere." Rowe v. Young, 2 Brod. & B. 180. See Trade Acceptance.

ACCEPTANCE AU BESOIN. Fr. In French law. Acceptance in case of need; an acceptance by one on whom a bill is drawn au besoin, that is, in case of refusal or failure of the drawee to accept. Story, Bills, §§ 65, 254, 255.

ACCEPTARE. Lat.

In Old Pleading

To accept. Acceptavit, he accepted. 2 Strange, 817. Non acceptavit, he did not accept. 4 Man. & G. 7.

In the Civil Law

To accept; to assent; to assent to a promise made by another. Gro. de J. B. lib. 2, c. 11, § 14.

ACCEPTEUR PAR INTERVENTION. In French law. Acceptor of a bill for honor.

ACCEPTILATION. In the civil and Scotch law. A release made by a creditor to his debtor of his debt, without receiving any consideration. Ayl. Pand. tit. 26, p. 570. It is a species of donation, but not subject to the forms of the latter, and is valid unless in fraud of creditors. Merl. Répert.

The verbal extinction of a verbal contract, with a declaration that the debt has been paid when it has not; or the acceptance of something merely imaginary in satisfaction of a verbal contract. Sanders' Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 386.

ACCEPTOR. The person who accepts a bill of exchange, (generally the drawee,) or who engages to be primarily responsible for its payment.

ACCEPTOR SUPRA PROTEST. One who accepts a bill which has been protested, for the honor of the drawer or any one of the indorsers.

ACCESS. Approach; or the means, power, or opportunity of approaching. Sometimes importing the occurrence of sexual intercourse; otherwise as importing opportunity of communication for that purpose as between husband and wife.

In real property law, the term "access" denotes the right vested in the owner of land which adjoins a road or other highway to go and return from his own land to the highway without obstruction. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 95 Wis. 561, 70 N. W. 678, 37 L. R. A. 856, 60 Am. St. Rep. 136; Ferguson v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 108 Ky. 662, 57 S. W. 460; Reining v. New York, etc., R. Co. (Super. Buff.) 13 N. Y. S. 238. See, also, Cobb v. Commissioners of Lincoln Park, 67 N. E. 5, 6, 8, 202 Ill. 427, 63 L. R. A. 264, 95 Am. St. Rep. 258. "Access" to property does not necessarily carry with it possession. People v. Brenneauer, 166 N. Y. S. 801, 806, 101 Misc. 156. A deed, however, which conveys land and "also the right of access to the adjoining park and use of spring on same," may be deemed to convey not merely the right to pass through the park in order to reach the spring, but to convey a right of entry into the park as a park and by implication, the right to the use and enjoyment of the park. Getz v. Knoxville Power & Light Co., 290 S. W. 409, 414, 154 Tenn. 545.

The right of "access to public records" includes not only a legal right of access, but a reasonable opportunity to avail oneself of the same. American Surety Co. of New York v. Sandberg (D. C. Wash.) 225 F. 150, 155.

In Canon Law

The right to some benefice at some future time.

ACCESS (EASEMENT OF). An "easement of access" is the right which an abutting owner has of ingress to and egress from his premises, in addition to the public easement in the street. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Milwaukee R. & K. Electric Ry. Co., 70 N. W. 678, 680, 95 Wis. 561, 37 L. R. A. 856, 60 Am. St. Rep. 136; Chambersburg Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Cumberland Valley R. Co., 87 A. 968, 970, 240 Pa. 519. "Access to an underground sewer" means more than a right to open the surface to make repairs, and implies the right of connection by branches. Heyman v. Biggs, 150 N. Y. S. 246, 247, 164 App. Div. 430.

ACCESSARY. See Accessory.

ACCESSIO. In Roman law. An increase or addition; that which lies next to a thing, and is supplementary and necessary to the principal thing; that which arises or is produced from the principal thing; an "accessory obligation" (q. v.). Calvinus, Lex. Jurid.

One of the modes of acquiring property, being the extension of ownership over that which grows from, or is united to, an article which one already possesses. Mather v. Chapman, 40 Conn. 382, 397, 16 Am. Rep. 46.

Accessio includes both accession and accretion as used in the common law. See Adjunctio.

ACCESSION. Coming into possession of a right or office; increase; augmentation; addition.

The right to all which one's own property produces, whether that property be movable or immovable; and the right to that which is united to it by accession, either naturally or artificially. 2 Kent, 360; 2 Bl. Comm. 404.

A principle derived from the civil law, by which the owner of property becomes entitled to all which it produces, and to all that is added or united to it, either naturally or artificially, (that is, by the labor or skill of another,) even where such addition extends to a change of form or materials; and by which, on the other hand, the possessor of property becomes entitled to it, as against the original owner, where the addition made to it by his skill and labor is of greater value than the property itself, or where the change effected in its form is so great as to render it impossible to restore it to its original shape. Burrill. Betts v. Lee, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 348, 4 Am. Dec. 368; Lampton v. Preston, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 454, 19 Am. Dec. 104; Eaton v. Munroe, 52 Me. 63; Pulcifer v. Page, 32 Me. 404, 54 Am. Dec. 582; Wetherbee v. Green, 22 Mich. 311, 7 Am. Rep. 653. In Blackwood Tire & Vulcanizing Co. v. Auto Storage Co., 182 S. W. 576, 133 Tenn. 515, L. R. A. 1916E, 254, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1168, this principle was applied in favor of the conditional seller who, on nonpayment, retook the automobile sold, together with tire casings which the buyer had fitted thereto.

In International Law

The absolute or conditional acceptance by one or several states of a treaty already concluded between other sovereignties. Merl. Répert. It may be of two kinds: First, the formal entrance of a third state into a treaty so that such state becomes a party to it; and this can only be with the consent of the original parties. Second, a state may accede to a treaty between other states solely for the purpose of guarantee, in which case, though a party, it is affected by the treaty only as a guarantor. 1 Oppenheim, Int. L. sec. 532. See Adhesion.

Also, the commencement or inauguration of a sovereign's reign.

ACCESSION, DEED OF. In Scotch law. A deed executed by the creditors of a bankrupt or insolvent debtor, by which they approve of a trust given by their debtor for the general behoof, and bind themselves to concur in the plans proposed for extricating his affairs. Bell, Diet.

Accessorium non ducit, sed sequitur suum principale. Co. Litt. 152a, 389a. That which is the accessory or incident does not lead, but follows, its principal.

Accessorius sequitur naturam sui principalis. An accessory follows the nature of his principal. 3 Inst. 139. One who is accessory to a crime cannot be guilty of a higher degree of crime than his principal.

ACCESSORY. Anything which is joined to another thing as an ornament, or to render it more perfect, or which accompanies it, or is connected with it, as an incident, or as subordinate to it, or which belongs to or with it; for example, the halter of a horse, the frame of a picture, the keys of a house.

Under Civ. Code La. art. 2461, a sale of land carries with it the standing timber as an "accessory." Woollums v. Hewitt, 77 So. 295, 296, 142 La. 597.

Storage batteries were held not to be automobile accessories under the Revenue Act. Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. v. Lederer (D. C. Pa.) 21 F.(2d) 320, 321; McCaughn v. Electric Storage Battery Co. (C. C. A.) 63 F.(2d) 715.

In Criminal Law

Contributing to or aiding in the commission of a crime. One who, without being present at the commission of a felonious offense, becomes guilty of such offense, not as a chief actor, but as a participator, as by command, advice, instigation, or concealment; either before or after the fact or commission; a particeps criminis. 4 Bl. Comm. 35; Cowell. One who is not the chief actor in the offense, nor present at its performance, but in some way concerned therein, either before or after the act committed. Code Ga. 1882, § 4306 (Pen. Code 1926, § 44). People v. Schwartz, 32 Cal. 160; Fixmer v. People, 153 Ill. 123, 38 N. E. 667; State v. Berger, 121 Iowa, 581, 96 N. W. 1094; People v. Ah Ping, 27 Cal. 489; United States v. Hartwell, 26 Fed. Cas. 198; Hitt v. Commonwealth, 109 S. E. 597, 600, 131 Va. 752; State v. Thomas, 136 A. 475, 477, 105 Conn. 757.

An "accessory" to a crime is always an "accomplice." People v. Ah Gee, 174 P. 371, 373, 37 Cal. App. 1. In certain crimes, there can be no accessories; all who are concerned are principals. These are (according to many authorities) treason, and all offenses below the degree of felony; 4 Bl. Comm. 35; Com. v. McAtee, 8 Dana (Ky.) 28; Williams v. State, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 58; Com. v. Ray, 3 Gray (Mass.) 448; Schmidt v. State, 14 Mo. 137; Sanders v. State, 18 Ark. 198; Stevens v. People, 67 Ill. 587; Griffith v. State, 90 Ala. 583, 8 So. 812; U. S. v. Boyd, 45 F. 851; In re Burr, 4 Cr. 472, 501; U. S. v. Fries, Fed. Cas. No. 5127.

—Accessory before the fact. One who, being absent at the time a crime is committed, yet procures, counsels, or commands another to commit it; and, in this case, absence is necessary to constitute him an accessory, for, if he be present at any time during the transaction, he is guilty as principal. Plow. 97; 1 Hale, P. C. 615, 616; 4 Steph. Comm. 90, note n.

An accessory before the fact is one who, being absent at the time of the crime committed, doth yet procure, counsel, or command another to commit a crime. Code Ga. 1882, § 4307 (Pen. Code 1911, art. 79 (Vernon's Ann. P. C. art. 70), an "accessory before the fact" is no longer an accessory, but is an "accomplice." Fondren v. State, 169 S. W. 411, 414, 74 Tex. Cr. R. 552.

—Accessory during the fact. One who stands by without interfering or giving such help as may be in his power to prevent the commission of a criminal offense. Farrell v. People, 8 Colo. App. 524, 46 P. 841.

—Accessory after the fact. One who, having full knowledge that a crime has been committed, conceals it from the magistrate, and harbors, assists, or protects the person charged with, or convicted of, the crime. Code Ga. 1882, § 4308 (Pen. Code 1926, § 47); Pen. Code Cal. § 32; Code Cr. Proc. Tex. 1911, art. 86 (Vernon's Ann. C. C. P. art. 53).

An accessory contract is made for assuring the performance of a prior contract, either by the same parties or by others; such as suretyship, mortgage, and pledge. Civil Code La. art. 1771. Waring v. Smyth, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 119, 47 Am. Dec. 299; Ackla v. Ackla, 6 Pa. 228; Blaisdell v. Coe, 83 N. H. 167, 139 A. 758, 65 A. L. R. 626.

See, further, Obligation.

ACCESSORY TO ADULTERY. A phrase used in the law of divorce, and derived from the criminal law. It implies more than connivance, which is merely knowledge with consent. A conniver abstains from interference; an accessory directly commands, advises, or procures the adultery. A husband or wife who has been accessory to the adultery of the other party to the marriage cannot obtain a divorce on the ground of such adultery. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, §§ 29, 31.

ACCIDENT. An unforeseen event, occurring without the will or design of the person whose mere act causes it; an unexpected, unusual, or undesigned occurrence; the effect of an unknown cause, or, the cause being known, an unprecedented consequence of it; a casualty. Burkhard v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 102 Pa. 262, 48 Am. Rep. 205; Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Vandecar, 86 F. 282, 30 C. A. 48; Carnes v. Iowa Traveling Men's Ass'n, 106 Iowa, 281, 76 N. W. 683, 68 Am. State Industrial Accident Commission of Oregon*, 249 P. 820, 822, 119 Or. 357, 50 A. L. R. 1129; United States Mut. Acc. Ass'n v. Barry, 131 U. S. 100, 9 S. Ct. 755, 33 L. Ed. 60; Stasmas v. State Industrial Commission, 195 P. 762, 763, 80 Okl. 221, 15 A. L. R. 576.

In its proper use the term excludes negligence; that is, an accident is an event which occurs without the fault, carelessness, or want of proper circumspection of the person affected, or which could not have been avoided by the use of that kind and degree of care necessary to the exigency and in the circumstances in which he was placed. Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292; United States v. Boyd (C. C.) 45 F. 851; Armijo v. Abeytia, 5 N. M. 533, 25 P. 777; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Barnett, 65 Ark. 255, 45 S. W. 550; Aurora Branch R. Co. v. Grimes, 13 Ill. 585; Sprecher v. Ensinger, 149 N. W. 97, 99, 167 Iowa, 118; Hoffman v. Peerless White Lime Co., 317 Mo. 86, 296 S. W. 764, 772; Industrial Commission of Ohio v. Roth, 120 N. E. 172, 174, 98 Ohio St. 34, 6 A. L. R. 1463. But see Schneider v. Provident L. Ins. Co., 24 Wis. 28, 1 Am. Rep. 157. It has been said, moreover, that the word "accident" does not have a settled legal signification; Klopfenstein v. Union Traction Co., 212 P. 1097, 1098, 112 Kan. 770; and that in its ordinary meaning it does not negative the idea of negligence on the part of the person whose physical act caused the occurrence. Campbell v. Jones, 132 P. 635, 636, 73 Wash. 688.

See Act of God.

In Equity

Such an unforeseen event, misfortune, loss, act, or omission as is not the result of any negligence or misconduct in the party. Fran. Max. 87; Story, Eq. Jur. § 78; Eaton on Equity § 109; Engler v. Knoblaugh, 110 S. W. 16, 131 Mo. App. 481.

The meaning to be attached to the word "accident," in relation to equitable relief, is any unforeseen and undesigned event, productive of disadvantage. Wharton.

An accident relievable in equity is such an occurrence, not the result of negligence or misconduct of the party seeking relief in relation to a contract, as was not anticipated by the parties when the same was entered into, and which gives an undue advantage to one of them over another in a court of law. Code Ga. 1882, § 3112 (Civ. Code 1926, § 4567). And see Bostwick v. Stiles, 35 Conn. 195;

Kopper v. Dyer, 59 Vt. 477, 9 A. 4, 59 Am. Rep. 742; Magann v. Segal, 92 F. 252, 34 C. C. A. 323; Bucki, etc., Lumber Co. v. Atlantic Lumber Co., 116 F. 1, 53 C. C. A. 513; Zimmerer v. Fremont Nat. Foster, 122 S. E. 29, 30, 157 Ga. 493.

The word "surprise" is used interchangeably with accident. State ex rel. Hartley v. Innes, 118 S. W. 1168, 137 Mo. App. 420.

In Maritime Law and Marine Insurance

"Accidents of navigation" or "accidents of the sea" are such as are peculiar to the sea or to usual navigation or the action of the elements, which do not happen by the intervention of man, and are not to be avoided by the exercise of proper prudence, foresight, and skill. In such case, two contracts take place: First, the contract called mandatum, by which the owner of the property gives the master power to dispose of it; and the contract of partnership, in virtue of which the profits are to be divided between them. One party runs the risk of losing his capital; the other, his labor. If the sale produces no more than first cost, the owner takes all the proceeds. It is only the profits which are to be divided. Emerig. Mar. Loans, § 5.

ACCOMMODATED PARTY. One to whom the credit of the accommodation party is loaned, and is not necessarily the payee, since the inquiry always is as to whom did the maker of the paper loan his credit as a matter of fact. maintain for the accommodation of the owners or occupiers of land adjoining the railway; e. g., gates, bridges, culverts, fences, etc. 8 Vict. c. 20, § 68.

ACCOMMODATUM. The same as commodatium, q. v.

ACCOMPANY. To go along with. Webster's Dict. The word has been defined judicially in cases involving varied facts; thus, a boy driver was held not accompanying the team when he was running to stop it. Willis v. Semmes, 71 So. 865, 866, 111 Miss. 589. A motion based on answer already deposited with the clerk of court is accompanied with copy of answer. Los Angeles County v. W. 214; People v. Bolanger, 71 Cal. 17, 11 P. 799; State v. Umble, 115 Mo. 452, 22 S. W. 378; Carroll v. State, 45 Ark. 539; State v. Light, 17 Or. 358, 21 P. 132; People v. Seiffert, 81 Cal. App. 195, 253 P. 189, 190; Hewett v. State, 38 Okl. Cr. 105, 259 P. 144, 146; Minter v. State, 159 S. W. 286, 300, 70 Tex. Cr. R. 634; Singer v. U. S. (C. C. A. N. J.) 278 F. 415, 419. One who is in some way concerned or associated in commission of crime; partaker of guilt; one who aids or assists, or is an accessory. McLendon v. U. S. (C. C. A. Mo.) 19 F.(2d) 465, 466.

As specifically applied to witnesses for the state and the necessity for corroborating them, "accomplice" includes all persons connected with the offense by an unlawful act or omission either before, at the time of, or after the commission of the offense, whether such witness was present or participated in the crime or not. Chandler v. State, 230 S. W. 1002, 1003, 89 Tex. Cr. R. 309; Scales v. State, 217 S. W. 149, 150, 86 Tex. Cr. R. 433; State v. Price, 160 N. W. 677, 679, 135 Minn. 159.

The term includes all the participes criminis, Darden v. State, 68 So. 550, 551, 12 Ala. App. 165, whether they are considered, in strict legal propriety, as principals in the first or second degree, or merely as accessories before or after the fact. In re Rowe, 77 F. 161, 23 C. C. A. 103; People v. Bolanger, 71 Cal. 17, 11 P. 799; Armstrong v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 417, 26 S. W. 829; Cross v. People, 47 Ill. 152, 95 Am. Dec. 474; Norris v. State, 269 S. W. 46, 47, 168 Ark. 151; Stevens v. State, 163 S. W. 778, 780, 111 Ark. 299. But in Kentucky it has been held that "accomplice" does not include an accessory after the fact, Elmendorf v. Commonwealth, 188 S. W. 483, 489, 171 Ky. 410; Marcum v. Commonwealth, 4 S.W.(2d) 728, 223 Ky. 831; see, however, Commonwealth v. Barton, 156 S. W. 113, 114, 153 Ky. 465. And the same rule has been announced elsewhere. State v. Lyons, 175 N. W. 689, 691, 144 Minn. 348; People v. Sapp, 118 N. E. 416, 421, 282 Ill. 51; State v. Seward (Mo. Sup.) 247 S. W. 150, 154.

ACCORD, n. A satisfaction agreed upon between the party injuring and the party injured which, when performed, is a bar to all actions upon this account. Kromer v. Heim, 75 N. Y. 576, 31 Am. Rep. 491; Hargrave v. City of Colfax, 154 P. 824, 829, 89 Wash. 467. An agreement to accept, in extinction of an obligation, something different from or less than that to which the person agreeing to accept is entitled. Civ. Code Cal. § 1521; Comp. Laws N. D. 1913, § 5825; Rev. Code S. D. 1919, § 784; Reilly v. Barrett, 115 N. E. 453, 454, 220 N. Y. 170.

It may arise both where the demand itself is unliquidated or in dispute, and where the amount and nature of the demand is undisputed, and it is agreed to give and take less than the demand. J. F. Morgan Paving Co. v. Carroll, 211 Ala. 121, 99 So. 640, 641.

"Payment," as distinguished from accord, means full satisfaction. State v. Tyler County State Bank (Tex. Com. App.) 277 S. W. 625, 627, 42 A. L. R. 1347.

See Accord and Satisfaction; Compromise and Settlement.

ACCORD, v. In practice. To agree or concur, as one judge with another. "I accord." Eyre, C. J., 12 Mod. 7. "The rest accorded." 7 Mod. 361.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. An agreement between two persons, one of whom has a right of action against the other, that the latter should do or give, and the former accept, something in satisfaction of the right of action different from, and usually less than, what might be legally enforced. When the agreement is executed, and satisfaction has been made, it is called "accord and satisfaction." 3 Blackstone's Comm. 15; Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Hamill, 5 Md. 170; Rogers v. Spokane, 9 Wash. 168, 37 P. 300; Davis v. Noaks, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 494; Lytle v. Clifton, 261 S. W. 664, 666, 149 Tenn. 655; Buford v. Inge Const. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 279 S. W. 513, 515; McPike Drug Co. v. Williams, 230 P. 904, 104 Okl. 244; In re Trexler Co. of America, 15 Del. Ch. 76, 132 A. 144, 145; Reliance Life Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., v. Garth, 68 So. 871, 872; 192 Ala. 91; Reilly v. Barrett, 115 N. E. 453, 454, 220 N. Y. 170; Walker v. Burt, 109 S. E. 43, 44, 182 N. C. 325.

See, also, Civ. Code Cal. §§ 1521, 1523, quoted and applied in Sierra & San Francisco Power Co. v. Universal Electric & Gas Co., 241 P. 76, 80, 197 Cal. 376.

More recently, a broader application of the doctrine has been made, where one promise or agreement is set up in satisfaction of another. The rule is that an agreement or promise of the same grade will not be held to be in satisfaction of a prior one, unless it has been expressly accepted as such; as, where a new promissory note has been given in lieu of a former one, to have the effect of a satisfaction of the former, it must have been accepted on an express agreement to that effect. Pulliam v. Taylor, 50 Miss. 251; Continental Nat. Bank v. McGeoch, 92 Wis. 286, 66 N. W. 603; Heath v. Vaughn, 11 Colo. App. 384, 53 P. 229; Story v. Maclay, 6 Mont. 492, 13 P. 198; Swofford Bros. W. 893; Hill v. Texas Trust Co. of Austin (Tex. Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 767. See Acceptance; Composition; Compromise; Novation.

ACCORDANCE. Agreement; harmony; concord; conformity. Webster, Dict.

In Accordance With

An act done in accordance with a purpose once formed is not necessarily an act done in pursuance of such purpose, for the purpose may have been abandoned before the act was done. State v. Robinson, 20 W. Va. 713, 742. A charter providing that a city's power of taxation shall be exercised "in accordance with" the state Constitution and laws means in a manner not repugnant to or in conflict or inconsistent therewith. City of Norfolk v. Norfolk Landmark Pub. Co., 28 S. E. 959, 960, 95 Va. 564. The words "in accordance with this act" as used in N. M. Laws 1899, c. 22, § 25, dealing with validity of tax titles, was not improperly interpreted as meaning "under this act." Straus v. Foxworth, 34 S. Ct. 42, 44, 231 U. S. 162, 58 L. Ed. 168.

ACCORDANT. Fr. and Eng. Agreeing; concurring. "Baron Parker, accordant," Hardr. 93; "Holt, C. J., accordant," 6 Mod. 299; "Powys, J., accord," "Powell, J., accord," Id. 298.

ACCOUCHEMENT. The act of a woman in giving birth to a child. The fact of the accouchement, which may be proved by the direct testimony of one who was present, as a physician or midwife, is often important evidence in proving parentage.

ACCOUNT. A detailed statement of the mutual demands in the nature of debt and credit between parties, arising out of contracts or some fiduciary relation. Whitwell v. Willard, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 216; Blakeley v. Biscoe, 1 Hempst. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 18,239; Portsmouth v. Donaldson, 32 Pa. 202, 72 Am. Dec. 782.

A statement in writing, of debts and credits, or of receipts and payments; a list of items of debts and credits, with their respective dates. Rensselaer Glass Factory v. Reid, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 593.

The word is sometimes used to denote the balance, or the right of action for the balance, appearing due upon a statement of dealings; as where one speaks of an assignment of accounts; but there is a broad distinction between an account and the mere balance of an account, resembling the distinction in logic between the premises of an argument and the conclusions drawn therefrom. A balance is but the conclusion or result of the debit and credit sides of an account. It implies mutual dealings, and the existence of debt and credit, without which there could be no balance. McWilliams v. Allan, 45 Mo. 574.

The word "account" is flexible in meaning, meaning, among other things, valuation; worth; value. Ex parte Means, 200 Ala. 378, 76 So. 294. It has no inflexible technical meaning; In re McLean (D. C. Wash.) 270 F. 348, 350, and may refer either to past or future indebtedness. Semel v. Braun, 157 N. Y. S. 907, 908, 94 Misc. 238. It means invariably in mercantile transactions an itemized account, Brooks v. International Shoe Co., 132 Ark. 386, 200 S. W. 1027, and a suit on a quantum meruit is not a suit on an account, Pollard v. Carlisle (Mo. App.) 218 S. W. 921, 922.

—Account closed. An account to which no further additions can be made on either side, but which remains still open for adjustment and set-off, which distinguishes it from an account stated. Bass v. Bass, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 187; Volkening v. De Graaf, 81 N. Y. 268; Mandeville v. Wilson, 5 Cranch, 15, 3 L. Ed. 23.

—Account current. An open or running or unsettled account between two parties; the antithesis of an account stated. See Watson v. Gillespie, 200 N. Y. S. 191, 198, 205 App. Div. 613; Caffarelli Bros. v. Lyons Bros. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 685, 686; Continental Casualty Co. v. Easley (Tex. Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 251, 253. An "account current" is an active checking account, through which credit and debit items are constantly passing. In re Hricke's Will, 202 N. Y. S. 906, 912, 122 Misc. 427.

—Account duties. Duties payable by the English customs and inland revenue act, 1881, (44 Vict. c. 12, § 3C), on a donatio mortis causa, or on any gift, the donor of which dies within three months after making it, or on joint property voluntarily so created, and taken by survivorship, or on property taken under a voluntary settlement in which the settlor had a life-interest.

—Account payable. "Accounts payable" are contract obligations owing by a person on open account. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. v. Karnes, 137 Va. 714, 120 S. E. 321, 322.

—Account rendered. An account made out by the creditor, and presented to the debtor for his examination and acceptance. When accepted, it becomes an account stated. Wiggins v. Burkham, 10 Wall. 129, 19 L. Ed. 884; Stebbins v. Niles, 25 Miss. 267; Freeland v. Cocke, 17 Va. (3 Munf.) 352.

—Account settled. One in which the balance has been in fact paid, thereby differing from an account stated. See Dempsey v. McGinnis, 219 S. W. 148, 150, 203 Mo. App. 494; McCarty v. Chalfant, 14 W. Va. 531, 549.

—Account stated. The settlement of an account between the parties, with a balance struck in favor of one of them; an account rendered by the creditor, and by the debtor assented to as correct, either expressly, or by implication of law from the failure to object. Preston v. La Belle View Corporation, 212 N. W. 286, 288, 192 Wis. 168; Cutino Co. v. Weeks, 213 N. W. 413, 414, 203 Iowa, 581; McMahon v. Brown, 106 N. E. 576, 578, 219 Mass. 23; Harrison v. Henderson, 72 P. 878, 67 Kan. 202; Dettmer v. Fulls, 251 P. 396, 397, 122 Kan. 98; Lowry v. Law, 150 P. 660, 663, 27 Cal. App. 483. No particular form is necessary; it may be oral, written, partly oral and partly written. Murphy v. Smith, 226 P. 206, 208, 26 Ariz. 394. An account stated is not ordinarily recognized in Virginia and West Virginia, except as between merchant and merchant, and principal and agent, with mutual accounts. Price Hill Colliery Co. v. Pinkney, 122 S. E. 434, 436, 96 W. Va. 74; Ivy Coal Co. v. Long, 139 Ala. 535, 36 So. 722; Zacarino v. Pallotti, 49 Conn. 36; McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Me. 307; James v. Fellowes, 20 La. Ann. 116; Lockwood v. Thorne, 18 N. Y. 285; Holmes v. Page, 19 Or. 232, 23 P. 961; Philips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Ware v. Manning, 86 Ala. 238, 5 So. 682; Morse v. Minton, 101 Iowa, 603, 70 N. W. 691; Patillo v. Allen-West Commission Co. (C. C. A. Ark. 1904) 131 F. 680. This was also a common count in a declaration upon a contract under which the plaintiff might prove an absolute acknowledgment by the defendant of a liquidated demand of a fixed amount, which implies a promise to pay on request. It might be joined with any other count for a money demand. The acknowledgment or admission must have been made to the plaintiff or his agent. Wharton.

—Mutual accounts. Accounts comprising mutual credits between the parties; or an existing credit on one side which constitutes a ground for credit on the other, or where there is an understanding that mutual debts shall be a satisfaction or set-off pro tanto between the parties. McConnell v. Arkansas Coffin Co., 287 S. W. 1007, 172 Ark. 87; McNeil v. Garland, 27 Ark. 343.

—Open account. An account which has not been finally settled or closed, but is still running or open to future adjustment or liquidation. Open account, in legal as well as in ordinary language, means an indebtedness subject to future adjustment, and which may be reduced or modified by proof. James v. Lederer-Strauss & Co., 233 P. 137, 139, 32 Wyo. 377; Scofield v. Lilienthal (Tex. Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 1047, 1049; Connor Live Stock Co. v. Fisher, 32 Ariz. 80, 255 P. 996, 997, 57 A. L. R. 196; Griggs-Paxton Shoe Co. v. A. Friedheim & Bro., 131 S. E. 620, 624, 133 S. C. 458; Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co. (C. C. A. Or.) 223 F. 501, 504; Nisbet v. Lawson, 1 Ga. 275; Gayle v. Johnston, 72 Ala. 254, 47 Am. Rep. 405; McCament v. Batsell, 59 Tex. 368; Purvis v. Kroner, 18 Or. 414, 23 P. 260. An open account can become an account stated only by the debtor's admission of liability, or failure to deny liability for a reasonable time after receipt of account. Brooks v. White, 122 S. E. 561, 187 N. C. 656.

—Public accounts. The accounts kept by officers of the nation, state, or kingdom, of the receipt and expenditure of the revenues of the government.

ACCOUNT, or ACCOUNT RENDER. In practice. "Account," sometimes called "account render," was a form of action at common law against a person who by reason of some fiduciary relation (as guardian, bailiff, receiver, etc.) was bound to render an account to another, but refused to do so. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 116; Co. Litt. 172; Griffith v. Willing, 3 Bin. (Pa.) 317; Travers v. Dyer, 24 Fed. Cas. 142; Stevens v. Coburn, 71 Vt. 261, 44 Atl. 354; Portsmouth v. Donaldson, 32 Pa. 202, 72 Am. Dec. 782.

In England, this action early fell into disuse; and as it is one of the most dilatory and expensive actions known to the law, and the parties are held to the ancient rules of pleading, and no discovery can be obtained, it never was adopted to any great extent in the United States. But in some states this action was employed, chiefly because there were no chancery courts in which a bill for an accounting would lie. The action is peculiar in the fact that two judgments are rendered, a preliminary judgment that the defendant do account with the plaintiff (quod computet) and a final judgment (quod recuperet) after the accounting for the balance found due. Field v. Brown, 146 Ind. 293, 45 N. E. 464; Travers v. Dyer, 24 Fed. Cas. 142.

ACCOUNT-BOOK. A book kept by a merchant, trader, mechanic, or other person, in which are entered from time to time the transactions of his trade or business. Such books, when regularly kept, may be admitted in evidence. Greenl. Ev. §§ 115-118.

ACCOUNT IN BANK. See Bank Account.

ACCOUNTABLE. Subject to pay; responsible; liable. Where one indorsed a note "A. C. accountable," it was held that, under this form of indorsement, he had waived demand and notice. Furber v. Caverly, 42 N. H. 74.

ACCOUNTABLE RECEIPT. An instrument acknowledging the receipt of money or personal property, coupled with an obligation to account for or pay or deliver the whole or some part of it to some person. State v. Riebe, 27 Minn. 315, 7 N. W. 262.

ACCOUNTANT. One who keeps accounts; a person skilled in keeping books or accounts; an expert in accounts or bookkeeping. See U. S. ex rel. Liebmann v. Flynn (D. C. N. Y.) 16 F.(2d) 1006, 1007; Frazer v. Shelton, 150 N. E. 696, 701, 320 Ill. 253, 43 A. L. R. 1086.

A person who renders an account. When an executor, guardian, etc., renders an account of the property in his hands and his administration of the trust, either to the beneficiary or to a court, he is styled, for the purpose of that proceeding, the "accountant."

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, or ACCOMPTANT GENERAL. An officer of the court of chancery, appointed by act of parliament to receive all money lodged in court, and to place the same in the Bank of England for security. 12 Geo. I. c. 32; 1 Geo. IV. c. 35; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87, §§ 18-22, 39. See Daniell, Ch. Pr. (4th Ed.) 1607 et seq. The office, however, has been abolished by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 44, and the duties transferred to her majesty's paymaster general.

ACCOUNTANTS, CHARTERED. Persons skilled in the keeping and examination of accounts, who are employed for the purpose of examining and certifying to the correctness of accounts of corporations and others. The business is usually carried on by corporations. See Auditor.

ACCOUNTING. The making up and rendition of an account, either voluntarily or by order of a court. Buxton v. Edwards, 134 Mass. 567, 578. In the latter case, it imports a rendition of a judgment for the balance ascertained to be due. Apple v. Smith, 190 P. 8, 10, 106 Kan. 717. The term may include payment of the amount due. Pyatt v. Pyatt, 46 N. J. Eq. 285, 18 A. 1048.

ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE. Contract obligations owing to a person on open account. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. v. Karnes, 120 S. E. 321, 322, 137 Va. 714; State ex rel. Globe-Democrat Pub. Co. v. Gehner, 316 Mo. 694, 294 S. W. 1017, 1018.

The term is used in speaking of islands which are formed in rivers by deposit; Calvinus, Lex.; 3 Kent 428. It is used in a related sense in the common-law phrase jus accrescendi, the right of survivorship; 1 Washb. R. P. 426.

In Pleading

To commence; to arise; to accrue. Quod actio non accrevit infra sex annos, that the action did not accrue within six years; 3 Chit. Pl. 914.

ACCRETION. The act of growing to a thing; usually applied to the gradual and imperceptible accumulation of land by natural causes, as out of the sea or a river. Accretion of land is of two kinds: By alluvion, i. e., by the washing up of sand or soil, so as to form firm ground; or by dereliction, as when the sea shrinks below the usual water-mark.

The increase of real estate by the addition of portions of soil, by gradual deposition through the operation of natural causes, to that already in possession of the owner. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 451. Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co., 134 U. S. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. 518, 33 L. Ed. 872; New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 717, 9 L. Ed. 573; Baumhart v. Code Texas, 1895, art. 240.

In its popular sense "accusation" applies to all derogatory charges or imputations, whether or not they relate to a punishable legal offense, and however made, whether orally, by newspaper, or otherwise. State v. Pat- erson, 196 S. W. 3, 5, 271 Mo. 99; State v. South, 5 Rich. Law (S. C.) 489; Com. v. Andrews, 132 Mass. 263; People v. Braman, 30 Mich. 460. But in legal phraseology, it is limited to such accusations as have taken shape in a prosecution. United States v. Patterson, 150 U. S. 65, 14 Sup. Ct. 20, 37 L. Ed. 999.

ACCUSED. The person against whom an accusation is made; one who is charged with a crime or misdemeanor. See People v. Braman, 30 Mich. 468. Harbour*, 75 Okl. 127, 182 P. 243, 244, 29 A. L. R. 905; Rasmussen v. Stone, 30 N. D. 451, 152 N. W. 809, 810; Billington v. Dunn, 217 Ky. 164, 289 S. W. 213, 214; Rogers v. Pell, 154 N. Y. 518, 49 N. E. 75; Strong v. United States (D. C.) 34 F. 17; In re Virgin (D. C. Ga.) 224 F. 128, 130; Williford v. Davis, 106 Okl. 208, 232 P. 828, 831; Burbank v. Ellis, 7 Neb. 156.

The term is also used of the act of a person who avows or admits the truth of certain facts which, if established, will entail a civil liability upon him. Thus, the debtor's acknowledgment of the creditor's demand or right of action will toll the statute of limitations. Ft. Scott v. Hickman, 112 U. S. 150, 163, 5 Sup. Ct. 56, 28 L. Ed. 636; Wade v. Sheehan (Tex. Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 444; York v. Hughes (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 229, 231; Hayes Pump & Planter Co. v. Taylor, 114 Kan. 380, 219 P. 258, 259; *Nixon v. E. 969. Admission is also used in this sense. Roanes v. Archer, 4 Leigh (Va.) 550. To denote an avowal of criminal acts, or the concession of the truth of a criminal charge, the word "confession" seems more appropriate.

Of a Child

An avowal or admission that the child is one's own; recognition of a parental relation, either by a written agreement, verbal declarations or statements, by the life, acts, and conduct of the parties, or any other satisfactory evidence that the relation was recognized and admitted. In re Spencer (Sur.) 4 N. Y. S. 395; In re Hunt's Estate, 86 Hun, 232, 33 N. Y. S. 256; Blythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 532, 31 P. 915, 19 L. R. A. 40; Bailey v. Boyd, 59 Ind. 292.

It is "familiar knowledge"; Wyllis v. Haun, 47 Iowa, 614; Chauvin v. Wagner, 18 Mo. 531. To be "personally acquainted with," and to "know personally," are equivalent terms; Kelly v. Calhoun, 95 U. S. 710, 24 L. Ed. 544. When used with reference to a paper to which a certificate or affidavit is attached, it indicates a substantial knowledge of the subject-matter thereof. Bohan v. Casey, 5 Mo. App. 101; U. S. v. Jones, 14 Blatchf. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 15,491.

See Community; Conquêts.

ACQUIESCE. To give an implied consent to a transaction, and to the accrual of a right, or to any act, by one's mere silence, or without express assent or acknowledgment. Matthews v. Murchison (C. C.) 17 F. 760; Cass County v. Plotner, 149 Ind. 116, 48 N. E. 635; Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 P. 898.

ACQUIESCENCE. A silent appearance of consent. Worcester, Dict. Dartnell v. Bidwell, 115 Me. 227, 98 A. 743, 745, 5 A. L. R. 1320; Dwight v. City of Des Moines, 174 Iowa, 178, 156 N. W. 336, 338.

Failure to make any objections. 2 Phil. 117; 8 Ch. Div. 286; Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 P. 898; State ex rel. Bankers' Life Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, v. Reynolds, 277 Mo. 14, 208 S. W. 618, 621. Submission to an act of which one had knowledge. See Pence v. Langdon, 99 U. S. 578, 25 L. Ed. 420. It imports full knowledge; Rabe v. Dunlap, 51 N. J. Eq. 40, 25 A. 959; Kent v. Mining Co., 73

N. Y. 159; Union Cemetery Co. v. Jackson, 188 Ala. 599, 65 So. 986, 988.

It is to be distinguished from avowed consent, on the one hand, and from open discontent or opposition, on the other.

It arises where a person who knows that he is entitled to impeach a transaction or enforce a right neglects to do so for such a length of time that, under the circumstances of the case, the other party may fairly infer that he has waived or abandoned his right. City of Rome v. Reese, 91 S. E. 880, 882, 19 Ga. App. 559; Scott v. Jackson, 89 Cal. 258, 26 P. 898; Lowndes v. Wicks, 69 Conn. 15, 36 A. 1072; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Perdue, 40 W. Va. 442, 21 S. E. 755.

Acquiescence and laches are cognate but not equivalent terms. The former is a submission to, or resting satisfied with, an existing state of things, while laches implies a neglect to do that which the party ought to do for his own benefit or protection. Hence laches may be evidence of acquiescence. Laches, imports a merely passive assent, while acquiescence implies active assent. Ocmulgee River Lumber Co. v. Ocmulgee Valley R. Co. (D. C. Ga.) 251 F. 161, 162; Rodick v. Pineo, 120 Me. 160, 113 A. 45, 47; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674, 678; Kenyon v. National Life Ass'n, 39 App. Div. 276, 57 N. Y. S. 60; Johnson-Brinkman Commission Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 126 Mo. 345, 28 S. W. 870, 26 L. R. A. 840, 47 Am. St. Rep. 675.

"Acquiescence" is synonymous with "abandonment"; Sclawr v. City of St. Paul, 132 Minn. 238, 156 N. W. 283, 284; and is distinguished from "admission"; Saunders v. Busch-Everett Co., 138 La. 1049, 71 So. 153, 154; People v. Nitti, 312 Ill. 73, 143 N. E. 448, 455; and from "ratification" and "estoppel in pais"; Marion Sav. Bank v. Leahy, 200 Iowa, 220, 204 N. W. 456, 458; but see Murray v. Smith, 152 N. Y. S. 102, 108, 166 App. Div. 528.

ACQUIRE. In the law of contracts and of descents. To become the owner of property; to make property one's own. Ex parte Okahara, 191 Cal. 353, 216 P. 614, 618; Sandlin v. Maury Nat. Bank, 210 Ala. 349, 98 So. 190, 191; Spofford v. Rose, 145 Tenn. 533, 237 S. W. 68, 71; Martin v. Raleigh State Bank, 146 Miss. 1, 111 So. 448, 450, 51 A. L. R. 442; Wulzen v. San Francisco, 101 Cal. 15, 35 P. 353, 40 Am. St. Rep. 17. To gain permanently. Parker v. Schrimsher (Tex. Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 165, 169; Rogers v. Rogers (D. C. Okl.) 263 F. 160, 161; Lee v. Lee, 112 Tex. 392, 247 S. W. 823, 832.

It is regularly applied to a permanent acquisition. A man is said to obtain or procure a mere temporary acquisition. But "acquire" is sometimes used in the sense of "procure." Jolly v. McCoy, 36 Cal. App. 479, 172 P. 618, 619; it does not necessarily mean that title has passed, Godwin v. Tuttle, 70 Or. 424, 141 P. 1120, 1122; State v. District Court of Third Judicial Dist. in and for Granite County, 79 Mont. 1, 254 P. 863, 865. It has been held to include a taking by devise, Santa Clara Female Academy v. Sullivan, 116 Ill. 375, 6 N. E. 183, 56 Am. Rep. 776; and by bequest, U. S. v. Merriam, 44 S. Ct. 69, 70, 263 U. S. 179, 68 L. Ed. 240, 29 A. L. R. 1547.

ACQUIRED. Coming to an intestate in any other way than by gift, devise, or descent from a parent or the ancestor of a parent. In re Miller's Will, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 54.

ACQUIRED RIGHTS. Those which a man does not naturally enjoy, but which are owing to his own procurement, as sovereignty, or the right of commanding, or the right of property. Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 519, 527, 44 Am. Dec. 217.

ACQUISITION. The act of becoming the owner of certain property; the act by which one acquires or procures the property in anything. Used also of the thing acquired. Johnson v. Turnholt, 199 Iowa, 1331, 203 N. W. 715; Federal Trade Commission v. Thatcher Mfg. Co. (C. C. A. Wash.) 5 F.(2d) 615, 620; Hartigan v. City of Los Angeles, 170 Cal. 313, 149 P. 590, 592.

Original acquisition is that by which a man secures a property in a thing which is not at the time he acquires it, and in its then existing condition, the property of any other individual. It may result from occupancy; 2 Kent, 289; accession; 2 Kent, 293; intellectual labor—namely, for inventions, which are secured by patent rights; and for the authorship of books, maps, and charts, which is protected by copyrights; 1 Bouv. Inst. 508, n.

Derivative acquisitions are those which are procured from others. Goods and chattels may change owners by act of law in the cases of forfeiture, succession, marriage, judgment, insolvency, and intestacy; or by act of the parties, as by gift or sale.

An acquisition may result from the act of the party himself, or those who are in his power acting for him, as his children while minors; Gale v. Parrot, 1 N. H. 28. See Dig. 41. l. 53; Inst. 2. 9. 3.

ACQUIT. To release, absolve, or discharge one from an obligation or a liability; or to legally certify the innocence of one charged with crime. Dolloway v. Turrill, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 383, 400.

ACQUIT À CAUTION. In French law. Certain goods pay higher export duties when exported to a foreign country than when they are destined for another French port. In order to prevent fraud, the administration compels the shipper of goods sent from one French port to another to give security that such goods shall not be sent to a foreign country. The certificate which proves the receipt of the security is called "acquit à caution." Argles, Fr. Merc. Law, 543.

ACQUITMENT. See Absolution.

ACQUITTAL.

In Contracts

A release, absolution, or discharge from an obligation, liability, or engagement.

According to Lord Coke, there are three kinds of acquittal, namely: by deed, when the party releases the obligation; by prescription; by tenure; Co. Litt. 100 a.

In Criminal Practice

The legal and formal certification of the innocence of a person who has been charged with crime; a deliverance or setting free a person from a charge of guilt.

In a narrow sense, it is the absolution of a party accused on a trial before a traverse jury. Thomas v. De Graffenreid, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 143; Teague v. Wilks, 3 McCord (S. C.) 461. Properly speaking, however, one is not acquitted by the jury but by the judgment of the court. Burgess v. Boetefeur, 7 Man. & G. 481, 504; People v. Lyman, 53 App. Div. 470, 65 N. Y. S. 1062; People v. Rogers, 170 N. Y. S. 86, 87, 102 Misc. Rep. 437. And he may be legally acquitted by a judgment rendered otherwise than in pursuance of a verdict, as where he is discharged by a magistrate because of the insufficiency of the evidence, or the indictment is dismissed by the court or a nol. pros. entered. State v. Hart, 101 A. 278, 280, 90 N. J. Law, 261, L. R. A. 1917F, 985; Junction City v. Keeffe, 40 Kan. 275, 19 P. 735; People v. Lyman, 65 N. Y. S. 1062, 53 App. Div. 470; Lee v. State, 26 Ark. 260, 7 Am. Rep. 611; Morgan County v. Johnson, 31 Ind. 463. But compare State v. Smith, 170 N. C. 742, 87 S. E. 98, 99; Wilson v. Com., 3 Bush (Ky.) 105; State v. Champeau, 52 Vt. 313, 315, 36 Am. Rep. 754. The unnecessary discharge of the jury without the consent of the accused after it has been sworn may constitute an acquittal. Riley v. Commonwealth, 190 Ky. 204, 227 S. W. 146, 147. Acquittal discharges from guilt, pardon only from punishment. Younger v. State, 2 W. Va. 579, 98 Am. Dec. 791.

Acquittals in fact are those which take place when the jury, upon trial, finds a verdict of not guilty.

Acquittals in law are those which take place by mere operation of law; as where a man has been charged merely as an accessory, and the principal has been acquitted. 2 Co. Inst. 364. Compare State v. Walton, 186 N. C. 485, 119 S. E. 886, 888.

See Jeopardy; Autrefois Acquit; Convict.

In Feudal Law

The obligation on the part of a mesne lord to protect his tenant from any claims, entries, or molestations by lords paramount arising out of the services due to them by the mesne lord. See Co. Litt. 100a.

ACQUITTANCE. In contracts. A written discharge, whereby one is freed from an obligation to pay money or perform a duty. It differs from a release in not requiring to be under seal. Pothier, Oblig. n. 781. See 3 Salk. 298; Co. Litt. 212 a, 273 a; Milliken v. Brown, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 391.

This word, though perhaps not strictly speaking synonymous with "receipt," includes it. A receipt is one form of an acquittance; a discharge is another. A receipt in full is an acquittance, and a receipt for a part of a demand or obligation is an acquittance pro tanto. State v. Shelters, 51 Vt. 104, 31 Am. Rep. 679.

ACQUITTED. Released; absolved; purged of an accusation; judicially discharged from accusation; released from debt, etc. Includes both civil and criminal prosecutions. Dolloway v. Turrill, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 383, 399. See Acquittal.

ACRE. A quantity of land containing 160 square rods of land, in whatever shape. Serg. Land Laws Pa. 185; Cro. Eliz. 476, 665; 6 Coke, 67; Poph. 55; Co. Litt. 5b.

Originally the word "acre" (acer, aker, or Sax. æcer) was not used as a measure of land, or to signify any determinate quantity of land, but to denote any open ground, (latum quantumvis agrum,) wide champain, or field; which is still the meaning of the German acker, derived probably from the same source, and is preserved in the names of some places in England, as Castle Acre, South Acre, etc. Burrill. Originally a strip in the fields that was ploughed in the forenoon. Maitland, Domesday and Beyond, 387.

ACRE FOOT. 325,850 gallons, or the amount of water which will cover one acre one foot in depth. Rowles v. Hadden (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 251, 258.

ACRE RIGHT. "The share of a citizen of a New England town in the common lands. The value of the acre right was a fixed quantity in each town, but varied in different towns. A 10-acre lot or right in a certain town was equivalent to 113 acres of upland and 12 acres of meadow, and a certain exact proportion was maintained between the acre right and salable lands." Messages, etc., of the Presidents, Richardson, X, 230.

ACREFIGHT, or ACRE. A camp or field fight; a sort of duel, or judicial combat, anciently fought by single combatants, English and Scotch, between the frontiers of the two kingdoms with sword and lance. Called "campfight," and the combatants "champions," from the open "acre" or field that was the stage of trial. Cowell.

ACROMIAL PROCESS. A point in the region of the shoulder about where the arm joins or fits into the shoulder blade. Mus-kogee Electric Traction Co. v. Mueller, 134 P. 51, 52, 39 Okl. 63.

ACROSS. From side to side. Transverse to the length of. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Packet Co., 125 U. S. 260, 8 S. Ct. 874, 31 L. Ed. 731; but see Appeal of Bennett's Branch Imp. Co., 65 Pa. 242. It may mean over, Brown v. Meady, 10 Me. 391, 25 Am. Dec. 248; or "upon and along," Mt. Vernon Telephone Co. v. Franklin Farmers' Co-op. Telephone Co., 92 A. 934, 935, 113 Me. 46, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 649; or "upon," Jefferson County v. Louisville & I. R. Co., 160 S. W. 502, 504, 155 Ky. 810; or "within," Quanaah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Cooper (Tex. Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 811, 812. See Comstock v. Van Deusen, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 163, where a grant of a right of way across a lot of land was held not to mean a right to enter at one side, go partly across and come out at a place on the same side. And compare Brooklyn Heights R. Co. v. Steers, 106 N. E. 919, 920, 213 N. Y. 76, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 791; but see Holley v. State, 63 So. 738, 9 Ala. App. 33.

ACT, v. In Scotch practice. To do or perform judicially; to enter of record. Surety "acted in the Books of Adjournal." 1 Broun, 4.

ACT, n. In its most general sense, this noun signifies something done voluntarily by a person; the exercise of an individual's power; an effect produced in the external world by an exercise of the power of a person objectively, prompted by intention, and proximately caused by a motion of the will. In a more technical sense, it means something done voluntarily by a person, and of such a nature that certain legal consequences attach to it. Duncan v. Landis, 106 F. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666; Y. & O. Coal Co. v. Paszka, 152 N. E. 31, 32, 20 Ohio App. 248; Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co. v. Myers (Tex. Com. App.) 284 S. W. 216, 218. Thus a grantor acknowledges the conveyance to be his "act and deed," the terms being synonymous.

In its general legal sense, the word may denote something done by an individual, as a private citizen, or as an officer; or by a body of men, as a legislature, a council, or a court of justice; including not merely physical acts, but also decrees, edicts, laws, judgments, resolves, awards, and determinations. Some general laws made by the Congress of the United States are styled joint resolutions, and these have the same force and effect as those styled acts. But see Hawes & Co. v. Trigg Co., 65 S. E. 538, 552, 110 Va. 165. Compare Herbring v. Brown, 180 P. 323, 330, 92 Or. 176; Decher v. Vaughan, 177 N. W. 388, 392, 209 Mich. 565.

An instrument in writing to verify facts. Webster, Dict.

It is used in this sense of the published acts of assembly, congress, etc. In a sense approaching this, it has been held in trials for treason that letters and other written documents were acts; 1 Fost. Cr. Cas. 198; 2 Stark. 116.

In the Civil Law

An act is a writing which states in a legal form that a thing has been said, done, or agreed. Merl. Répert.

Private acts are those made by private persons as registers in relation to their receipts and expenditures, schedules, acquittances, and the like.

Acts under private signature are those which have been made by private individuals under their hands.

Public acts are those which have a public authority, and which have been made before public officers, are authorized by a public seal, have been made public by the authority of a magistrate, or which have been extracted and been properly authenticated from public records.

In Practice

Anything done by a court and reduced to writing; a decree, judgment, resolve, rule, order, or other judicial proceeding. In Scotch law, the orders and decrees of a court, and in French and German law, all the records and documents in an action, are called "acts."

In Legislation

A written law, formally ordained or passed by the legislative power of a state, called in England an "act of parliament," and in the United States an "act of congress," or of the "legislature;" a statute. People v. Tiphaine, 3 Parker, Cr. R. (N. Y.) 241; United States v. Smith, 27 Fed. Cas. 1167.

Acts are either public or private. Public acts (also called general acts, or general statutes, or statutes at large) are those which relate to the community generally, or establish a universal rule for the governance of the whole body politic. Private acts (formerly called special, Co. Litt. 126a) are those which relate either to particular persons (personal acts) or to particular places (local acts), or which operate only upon specified individuals or their private concerns. Public acts are those which concern the whole community and of which courts of law are bound to take judicial notice. Burke v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 63 So. 51, 54, 133 La. 369; Chambers v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 32 Ariz. 102, 255 P. 1092, 1093.

A "special" or "private" act is one operating only on particular persons and private concerns; a "local act" is one applicable only to a particular part of the legislative jurisdiction. Trumper v. School Dist. No. 55 of Musselshell County, 173 P. 946, 947, 55 Mont. 90.

The words bill and law are frequently used synonymously with act, People v. City of Buffalo, 161 N. Y. S. 706, 712, 175 App. Div. 218, but incorrectly; Sedgwick County Com'rs v. Bailey, 13 Kan. 600; a bill being only the draft or form of the act presented to the legislature but not enacted; Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. 446. "Act" does not include ordinances or regulations made by local authorities, or even statutes having only a local application; People v. City of Buffalo, 157 N. Y. S. 938, 940, 93 Misc. 275; although sometimes used interchangeably with "measure" and "law"; Whittemore v. Terral, 215 S. W. 686, 687, 140 Ark. 493.

In Scotch Practice

An abbreviation of actor, (proctor or advocate, especially for a plaintiff or pursuer,) used in records. "Act. A. Alt. B." an abbreviation of Actor, A. Alter, B.; that is, for the pursuer or plaintiff, A., for the defender, B. 1 Broun, 336, note.

Inevitable accident, or casualty; any accident produced by any physical cause which is irresistible, such as lightning, tempests, perils of the seas, an inundation, or earthquake; and also the sudden illness or death of persons. *People v. Y.) 275 F. 254, 261, and changes in the styles of wearing apparel, Rosenblatt v. Winstanley (Mo. App.) 186 S. W. 542, 543, are not "acts of God"; otherwise, however, as to a strike, accompanied with violence and intimidation, see Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 84 S. E. 198, 199, 15 Ga. App. 751.

The term is sometimes defined as equivalent to inevitable accident; Neal v. Saunderson, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 572, 41 Am. Dec. 609; Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349, 46 Am. Dec. 393; *Early v. ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An action or suit; a right or cause of action. It should be noted that this term means both the proceeding to enforce a right in a court and the right itself which is sought to be enforced.

The first sense here given is the older one. Justinian, following Celsus, gives the well-known definition: Actio nihil aliud est quam jus persequendi in iudicio quod sibi debetur, which may be thus rendered: An action is simply the right to enforce one's demands in a court of law. See Inst. Jus. 4, 6, de Actionibus; Pollock, Expansion of C. L. 92.

ACTIO AD EXHIBENDUM. An action for the purpose of compelling a defendant to exhibit a thing or title in his power. It was preparatory to another action, which was always a real action in the sense of the Roman law; that is, for the recovery of a thing, whether it was movable or immovable. Merl. Quest. tome 1, 84.

ACTIO ÆSTIMATORIA; ACTIO QUANTI MINORIS. Two names of an action which lay in behalf of a buyer to reduce the contract price proportionately to the defects of the object, not to cancel the sale; the judex had power, however, to cancel the sale. Hunter, Rom. Law, 332, 505.

ACTIO ARBITRARIA. Action depending on the discretion of the judge. In this, unless defendant would make amends to plaintiff as dictated by the judge in his discretion, he was liable to be condemned. Id. 825, 987.

ACTIO BONÆ FIDEI. (Lat.: An action of good faith.) A class of actions in which the judge might at the trial ex officio, take into account any equitable circumstances that were presented to him affecting either of the parties to the action. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 210, 218.

ACTIO CALUMNIÆ. An action to restrain defendant from prosecuting a groundless proceeding or trumped-up charge against plaintiff. Hunter, Rom. Law, 859, 1020. An action for malicious prosecution. So. Afr. Leg. Dict.

ACTIO CIVILIS. In the common law. A civil action, as distinguished from a criminal action. Bracton divides personal actions into criminalia et civilia, according as they grow out of crimes or contracts. Bract. fol. 101b. Actiones civiles are those forms of remedies which were established under the rigid system of the civil law, the jus civilis. See Actio Honoraria.

ACTIO COMMODATI. Included several actions appropriate to enforce the obligations of a borrower or a lender. Id. 305.

An action of fraud; an action which lay for a defrauded person against the defrauder and his heirs, who had been enriched by the fraud, to obtain the restitution of the thing of which he had been fraudulently deprived, with all its accessions (cum omni causa;) or, where this was not practicable, for compensation in damages. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 227.

ACTIO DE PECULIO. An action concerning or against the peculium, or separate property of a party.

ACTIO DE PECUNIA CONSTITUTA. An action for money engaged to be paid; an action which lay against any person who had engaged to pay money for himself, or for another without any formal stipulation. Inst. 4, 6, 9; Dig. 13, 5; Cod. 4, 18.

ACTIO EX DELICTO. In the civil and common law. An action of tort; an action arising out of fault, misconduct, or malfeasance. Inst. 4, 6, 15; 3 Bl. Comm. 117. Ex maleficio is the more common expression of the civil law; which is adopted by Bracton. Inst. 4, 6, 1; Bract. fols. 102, 103.

The old process by which a thief can be pursued and the goods vindicated. 2 Holdsw. Hist. Eng. L. 202.

ACTIO HONORARIA. An honorary, or prætorian action. Dig. 44, 7, 25, 35. Actiones honorariæ are those forms of remedies which were gradually introduced by the prætors and ædiles, by virtue of their equitable powers, in order to prevent the failure of justice which too often resulted from the employment of the actiones civiles. These were found so beneficial in practice that they eventually supplanted the old remedies, of which in the time of Justinian hardly a trace remained. Mackeldey, Civ. L. § 194; 5 Savigny, System.

ACTIO IN FACTUM. An action adapted to the particular case, having an analogy to some actio in jus, the latter being founded on some subsisting acknowledged law. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 212. The origin of these actions is similar to that of actions on the case at common law.

In admiralty law. An action directed against the particular person who is to be charged with the liability. It is distinguished from an actio in rem, which is a suit directed against a specific thing (as a vessel) irrespective of the ownership of it, to enforce a claim or lien upon it, or to obtain, out of the thing or out of the proceeds of its sale, satisfaction for an injury alleged by the claimant.

ACTIO IN REM. In the civil and common law. An action for a thing; an action for the recovery of a thing possessed by another. Inst. 4, 6, 1. See In Rem.

ACTIO JUDICATI. An action instituted, after four months had elapsed after the rendition of judgment, in which the judge issued his warrant to seize, first, the movables, which were sold within eight days afterwards; and then the immovables, which were delivered in pledge to the creditors, or put under the care of a curator, and if, at the end of two months, the debt was not paid, the land was sold. Dig. 42, 1; Cod. 8, 34. According to some authorities, if the defendant then utterly denied the rendition of the former judgment, the plaintiff was driven to a new action, conducted like any other action, which was called actio judicati, and which had for its object the determination of the question whether such a judgment had been rendered. The exact meaning of the term is by no means clear. See Savigny, Syst. 305, 411; 3 Ortolan, Just. § 2033.

ACTIO LEGIS AQUILIÆ. An action under the Aquilian law; an action to recover damages for maliciously or injuriously killing or wounding the slave or beast of another, or injuring in any way a thing belonging to another. Otherwise called damni injuriæ actio.

ACTIO MIXTA. A mixed action; an action brought for the recovery of a thing, or compensation for the damages, and also for the payment of a penalty; partaking of the nature both of an actio in rem and in personam. Inst. 4, 6, 16, 18, 19, 20; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 209.

ACTIO NEGATORIA (or NEGATIVA). An action brought to repel a claim of the defendant to a servitude in the plaintiff's land. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 324. See Actio Concessoria.

ACTIO NEGOTIORUM GESTORUM. Included actions between principal and agent and other parties to an engagement, whereby one person undertook the transaction of business for another.

ACTIO NON. In pleading. The Latin name of that part of a special plea which follows next after the statement of appearance and defense, and declares that the plaintiff "ought not to have or maintain his aforesaid action thereof against" the defendant (in Latin, actionem non habere debet). 1 Chit. Plead. 531; 2 id. 421; Stephens, Plead. 394.

ACTIO NON ACCREVIT INFRA SEX ANNOS. The name of the plea of the statute of limitations, when the defendant alleges that the plaintiff's action has not accrued within six years.

A name given to the distinctive clause in the plea to the further maintenance of the action, introduced in place of the plea puis darrein continuance; the averment being that the plaintiff ought not further (ulterius) to have or maintain his action. Steph. Pl. 64, 65, 401.

ACTIO NOXALIS. A noxal action; an action which lay against a master for a crime committed or injury done by his slave; and in which the master had the alternative either to pay for the damage done or to deliver up the slave to the complaining party. ACTIO PERSONALIS. In the civil and common law. A personal action. The ordinary term for this kind of action in the civil law is actio in personam, (q. v.) the word personalis being of only occasional occurrence. Inst. 4, 6, 8, in tit.; Id. 4, 11, pr. 1. Bracton, however, uses it freely, and hence the personal action of the common law. Bract. fols. 102a, 159b. See Action.

ACTIO PIGNORATITIA. An action of pledge; an action founded on the contract of pledge (pignus). Dig. 13, 7; Cod. 4, 24.

ACTIO PŒNALIS. Called also actio ex delicto. An action in which a penalty was recovered of the delinquent. Actiones pœnales and actiones mixtæ comprehended cases of injuries, for which the civil law permitted redress by private action, but which modern civilization universally regards as crimes; that is, offences against society at large, and punished by proceedings in the name of the state alone. Thus, theft, receiving stolen goods, robbery, malicious mischief, and the murder or negligent homicide of a slave (in which case an injury to property was involved), gave rise to private actions for damages against the delinquent. Inst. 4, 1. De obligationibus quæ ex delicto nascuntur; id. 2. De bonis vi raptis; id. 3. De lege Aquilia. And see Mackeldey, Civ. L. § 196; 5 Savigny, System, § 210.

ACTIO PRÆSCRIPTIS VERBIS. A form of action which derived its force from continued usage or the responsa prudentium, and was founded on the unwritten law. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 212. The distinction between this action and an actio in factum is said to be, that the latter was founded not on usage or the unwritten law, but by analogy to or on the equity of some subsisting law; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 212.

ACTIO PRÆTORIA. A prætorian action; one introduced by the prætor, as distinguished from the more ancient actio civilis, (q. v.) Inst. 4, 6, 3; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 207.

ACTIO PUBLICIANA. An action which lay for one who had lost a thing of which he had bona fide obtained possession, before he had gained a property in it, in order to have it restored, under color that he had obtained a property in it by prescription. Inst. 4, 6, 4; Heinecc. Elem. lib. 4, tit. 6, § 1131; Halifax. Anal. b. 3, c. 1, n. 9. It was an honorary action, and derived its name from the prætor Publicius, by whose edict it was first given. Inst. 4, 6, 4.

lawful force, or fear (metus causa) that was not groundless, (metus probabilis or justus,) to deliver, sell, or promise a thing to another. Bract. fol. 103b; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 226.

ACTIO REALIS. A real action. The proper term in the civil law was rei vindicatio. Inst. 4, 6, 3.

It was prosecuted to compel complete restitution to the seller of the thing sold, with its produce and accessories, and to give the buyer back the price, with interest, as an equivalent for the restitution of the produce. Hunter, Rom. Law, 332. See Redhibitory Action.

ACTIO RERUM AMOTARUM. An action for things removed; an action which, in cases of divorce, lay for a husband against a wife, to recover things carried away by the latter, in contemplation of such divorce. Dig. 25, 2; Id. 25, 2, 25, 30. It also lay for the wife against the husband in such cases. Id. 25, 2, 7, 11; Cod. 5, 21.

The class of civil law personal actions, which were adjudged only by the strict law, and in which the judge was limited to the precise language of the formula, and had no discretionary power to regard the bona fides of the transaction. See Inst. 4, 6, 28; Gaius, iii. 137; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 210; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 218.

ACTIO TUTELÆ. Action founded on the duties or obligations arising on the relation analogous to that of guardian and ward.

ACTIO UTILIS. A beneficial action or equitable action. An action founded on equity instead of strict law, and available for those who had equitable rights or the beneficial ownership of property. Actions are divided into actiones directæ or utiles. The former are founded on certain legal obligations which from their origin were accurately defined and recognized as actionable. The latter were formed analogically in imitation of the former. They were permitted in legal obligations for which the actiones directæ were not originally intended, but which resembled the legal obligations which formed the basis of the direct action. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 207.

ACTIO VENDITI. An action employed in behalf of a seller, to compel a buyer to pay the price, or perform any special obligations embodied in a contract of sale. Hunter, Rom. Law, 332.

ACTIO VI BONORUM RAPTORUM. An action for goods taken by force; a species of mixed action, which lay for a party whose goods or movables (bona) had been taken from him by force, (vi) to recover the things so taken, together with a penalty of triple the value. Inst. 4, 2; Id. 4, 6, 19. Bracton describes it as lying de rebus mobilibus vi ablatis sive robbatis, (for movable things taken away by force, or robbed.) Bract. fol. 103b.

Classification of Actions

Civil actions are such as lie in behalf of persons to enforce their rights or obtain redress of wrongs in their relation to individuals.

Criminal actions are such as are instituted by the sovereign power, for the purpose of punishing or preventing offenses against the public.

Penal actions are such as are brought, either by the state or by an individual under permission of a statute, to enforce a penalty imposed by law for the commission of a prohibited act.

Common law actions are such as will lie, on the particular facts, at common law, without the aid of a statute.

Statutory actions are such as can only be based upon the particular statutes creating them.

Popular actions, in English usage, are those actions which are given upon the breach of a penal statute, and which any man that will may sue on account of the king and himself, as the statute allows and the case requires. Because the action is not given to one especially, but generally to any that will prosecute, it is called "action popular;" and, from the words used in the process, (qui tam pro domino rege sequitur quam pro se ipso, who sues as well for the king as for himself,) it is called a qui tam action. Tomlins.

Real, personal, mixed. Actions are divided into real, personal, and mixed. See Infra.

Local action. An action is so termed when all the principal facts on which it is founded are of a local nature; as where possession of land is to be recovered, or damages for an actual trespass, or for waste affecting land, because in such case the cause of action relates to some particular locality, which usually also constitutes the venue of the action. Miller v. Rickey (C. C.) 127 F. 577; Crook v. Pitcher, 61 Md. 513; Beirne v. Rosser, 26 Grat. (Va.) 541; McLeod v. Railroad Co., 58 Vt. 727, 6 Atl. 648; Ackerson v. Erie R. Co., 31 N. J. Law, 311; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Gay, 86 Tex. 571, 26 S. W. 599, 25 L. R. A. 52. An action is styled a "local action" if the subject-matter thereof is situated in a county other than one in which the parties reside and the primary and principal relief sought relates to such subject-matter; such action must be brought and tried in the county where such subject-matter is situated. State v. District Court of Blue Earth County, 150 Minn. 512, 185 N. W. 953. Actions are deemed transitory where the transactions on which they are founded might have taken place anywhere, but are local where the cause in its nature could only have arisen in one place. Taylor v. Sommers Bros. Match Co., 35 Idaho, 30, 204 P. 472, 474.

Transitory actions are those founded upon a cause of action not necessarily referring to or arising in any particular locality. Their characteristic feature is that the right of action follows the person of the defendant. Brown v. Brown, 155 Tenn. 530, 296 S. W. 356, 358. Actions are "transitory" when the transactions relied on might have taken place anywhere, and are "local" when they could not occur except in some particular place; the distinction being in the nature of the subject of the injury, and not in the means used or the place at which the cause of action arises. Brady v. Brady, 161 N. C. 324, 77 S. E. 235, 236, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 279; Taylor v.

Sommers Bros. Match Co., 35 Idaho, 30, 204 P. 472, 474, 42 A. L. R. 189. The test of whether an action is local or transitory is whether the injury is done to a subject-matter which, in its nature, could not arise beyond the locality of its situation, in contradistinction to the subject causing the injury. Mattix v. Swepston, 127 Tenn. 693, 155 S. W. 928, 929. Actions triable where defendant resides are termed "transitory" and those triable where the subject-matter is situated are termed "local." State v. District Court of Swift County, 164 Minn. 433, 205 N. W. 284, 285.

Actions are called, in common-law practice, ex contractu when they are founded on a contract; ex delicto when they arise out of a tort. Umlauf v. Umlauf, 103 Ill. 651; Nelson v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 Mont. 297, 72 Pac. 642; Van Oss v. Synon, 85 Wis. 661, 56 N. W. 190.

As to the distinction between a revocatory action and an action in simulation, see Chapman v. Irwin, 157 La. 920, 103 So. 263, 265.

See Cause of Action.

"Action" and "Suit"

The terms "action" and "suit" are now nearly, if not entirely, synonymous. (3 Bl. Comm. 3, 116, et passim.) Elmo v. James (Tex. Civ. App.) 282 S. W. 835, 839; Coleman v. Los Angeles County, 180 Cal. 714, 182 P. 440. Or, if there be a distinction, it is that the term "action" is generally confined to proceedings in a court of law, while "suit" is equally applied to prosecutions at law or in equity. McBride v. University Club, 112 Ohio St. 69, 146 N. E. 804, 805; Guarantee Trust & Banking Co. v. Dickson, 148 Ga. 311, 96 S. E. 561, 562; Giammares v. Allemania Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 105 A. 611, 612, 89 N. J. Eq. 460; White v. Washington School Dist., 45 Conn. 59; Dullard v. Phelan, 83 Iowa, 471, 50 N. W. 204; Lamson v. Hutchings, 118 Fed. 321, 55 C. C. A. 245; Page v. Brewster, 58 N. H. 126; Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 96 Me. 234, 52 A. 774; Miller v. Rapp, 7 Ind. App. 89, 34 N. E. 126; Hall v. Bartlett, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 297; Branyan v. Kay, 33 S. C. 283, 11 S. E. 970; Niantic Mills Co. v. Riverside & O. Mills, 19 R. I. 34, 31 A. 432; Ulshafer v. Stewart, 71 Pa. 170. Formerly, however, there was a more substantial distinction between them. An action was considered as terminating with the giving of judgment, and the execution formed no part of it. (Litt. § 504; Co. Litt. 289a.) A suit, on the other hand, included the execution. (Id. 291a.) So, an action is termed by Lord Coke, "the right of a suit." (2 Inst. 40.) Burrill.

In French Commercial Law

Stock in a company, or shares in a corporation.

In Scotch Law

A suit or judicial proceeding.

In General

—Action for pointing. An action by a creditor to obtain a sequestration of the rents of land and the goods of his debtor for the satisfaction of the debt, or to enforce a distress.

—Action of abstracted multures. An action for multures or tolls against those who are thirled to a mill, i. e., bound to grind their corn at a certain mill, and fail to do so. Bell.

—Action of adherence. See Adherence.

—Mixed action. An action partaking of the twofold nature of real and personal actions, having for its object the demand and restitution of real property and also personal damages for a wrong sustained. 3 Bl. Comm. 118; Hall v. Decker, 48 Me. 257. Mixed actions are those which are brought for the specific recovery of lands, like real actions, but comprise, joined with this claim, one for damages in respect of such property; such as the action of waste, where, in addition to the recovery of the place wasted, the demandant claims damages; the writ of entry, in which, by statute, a demand of mesne profits may be joined; and dower, in which a claim for detention may be included. 48 Me. 255. In the civil law. An action in which some specific thing was demanded, and also some personal obligation claimed to be performed; or, in other words, an action which proceeded both in rem and in personam. Inst. 4, 6, 20.

—Personal action. In the civil law. An action in personam. A personal action seeks to enforce an obligation imposed on the defendant by his contract or delict; that is, it is the contention that he is bound to transfer some dominion or to perform some service or to repair some loss. Gaius, bk. 4, § 2. In common law. An action brought for the recovery of some debt or for damages for some personal injury, in contradistinction to the old real actions, which related to real property only. See 3 Bl. Comm. 117. Boyd v. Cronan, 71 Me. 286; Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co. (C. C.) 43 Fed. 219; Osborn v. Fall River, 140 Mass. 508, 5 N. E. 483. An action which can be brought only by the person himself who is injured, and not by his representatives.

—Real action. At the common law. One brought for the specific recovery of lands, tenements, or hereditaments. Steph. Pl. 3; Crocker v. Black, 16 Mass. 448; Hall v. Decker, 48 Me. 256; Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co., 43 Fed. 220; Mathews v. Sniggs, 75 Okl. 108, 182 P. 703, 708. They are droitural when they are based upon the right of property, and possessory when based upon the right of possession. They are either writs of right; writs of entry upon disseisin (which lie in the per, the per et cui, or the post), intrusion, or alienation; writs ancestral possessory, as mort d'ancestor, aiel, besaial, cossinage, or nuper obiit. Com. Dig. Actions (D 2). The former class was divided into droitural, founded upon demandant's own seisin, and ancestral droitual upon the demandant's claim in respect of a mere right descended to him from an ancestor. Possessory actions were divided in the same way—as to the demandant's own seisin and as to that of his ancestor. Among the civilians, real actions, otherwise called "vindications," were those in which a man demanded something that was his own. They were founded on dominion, or jus in re. The real actions of the Roman law were not, like the real actions of the common law, confined to real estate, but they included personal, as well as real, property. Wharton.

ACTION IN PERSONAM, IN REM. See In Personam, In Rem.

ACTION OF A WRIT. A phrase used when a defendant pleads some matter by which he shows that the plaintiff had no cause to have the writ sued upon, although it may be that he is entitled to another writ or action for the same matter. Cowell.

ACTION OF ASSUMPSIT. See Assumpsit.

ACTION OF BOOK DEBT. A form of action for the recovery of claims, such as are usually evidenced by a book-account; this action is principally used in Vermont and Connecticut. Terrill v. Beecher, 9 Conn. 344; Stoking v. Sage, 1 Conn. 75; Green v. Pratt, 11 Conn. 205; Moy v. Brownell, 3 Vt. 463; Easly v. Eakin, Cooke (Tenn.) 388; Bradley v. Goodyear, 1 Day (Conn.) 105; Smith v. Gilbert, 4 Day (Conn.) 105; Newton v. Higgins, 2 Vt. 366.

ACTION ON CONTRACT. An action brought to enforce rights whereof the contract is the evidence, and usually the sufficient evidence. Kokusai Kisen Kabushiki Kaisha v. Argos Mercantile Corporation (C. C. A. N. Y.) 280 F. 700, 701.

ACTION ON THE CASE. A species of personal action of very extensive application, otherwise called "trespass on the case," or simply "case," from the circumstance of the plaintiff's whole case or cause of complaint being set forth at length in the original writ by which formerly it was always commenced. 3 Bl. Comm. 122. Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Randall, 74 Ala. 170; Cramer v. Fry (C. C.) 68 Fed. 201; Sharp v. Curtiss, 15 Conn. 526; Wallace v. Wilmington & N. R. Co., 8 Houst. (Del.) 529, 18 A. 818. In its most comprehensive signification it includes assumpsit as well as an action in form ex delicto; at present when it is mentioned it is usually understood to mean an action in form ex delicto.

It is founded on the common law or upon acts of Parliament, and lies generally to recover damages for torts not committed with force, actual or implied; or having been occasioned by force where the matter affected was not tangible, or the injury was not immediate but consequential; or where the interest in the property was only in reversion, in all of which cases trespass is not sustainable; 1 Chit. Pl. 132. See Assumpsit.

ACTION REDHIBITORY. See Redhibitory Action.

ACTION TO QUIET TITLE. One in which plaintiff asserts his own estate and declares generally that defendant claims some estate in the land, without defining it, and avers that the claim is without foundation, and calls on defendant to set forth the nature of his claim, so that it may be determined by decree. It differs from a "suit to remove a cloud," in that plaintiff therein declares on his own title, and also avers the source and nature of defendant's claim, points out its defect, and prays that it may be declared void as a cloud on plaintiff's estate. Manning v. Gregoire, 97 Or. 394, 192 P. 406, 407. The apparent difference between an action to restore a lost instrument and one to quiet title is that, in the former, ordinarily both the titles of plaintiff and defendant are deraigned in the complaint, which must disclose that, notwithstanding an apparent interest of defendant the property belongs to plaintiff; and in the latter action the complaint need only allege the ultimate fact of plaintiff's interest and defendant's outstanding claim. Nicholson v. Nicholson, 67 Mont. 517, 216 P. 328, 329, 31 A. L. R. 548. See, also, Slette v. Review Pub. Co., 71 Mont. 518, 230 P. 580, 581.

ACTIONABLE. That for which an action will lie; furnishing legal ground for an action.

ACTIONABLE FRAUD. Deception practiced in order to induce another to part with property or surrender some legal right; a false representation made with an intention to deceive; may be committed by stating what is known to be false or by professing knowledge of the truth of a statement which is false, but in either case, the essential ingredient is a falsehood uttered with intent to deceive. Marsh v. Falker, 40 N. Y. 575; Farrington v. Bullard, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 512; Hecht v. Metzler, 14 Utah, 408, 48 Pac. 37, 60 Am. St. Rep. 906; Sawyer v. Prickett, 19 Wall. 146, 22 L. Ed. 105.

ACTIONABLE MISREPRESENTATION. A false statement respecting a fact material to the contract and which is influential in procuring it. Wise v. Fuller, 29 N. J. Eq. 257.

ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE. The breach or nonperformance of a legal duty, through neglect or carelessness, resulting in damage or injury to another. Roddy v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 104 Mo. 234, 15 S. W. 1112, 12 L. R. A. 746, 24 Am. St. Rep. 333; Boardman v. Creighton, 95 Me. 154, 49 A. 663; Hale v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 60 Vt. 605, 15 A. 300, 1

L. R. A. 187; Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Cutts, 95 Me. 162, 49 Atl. 673.

ACTIONABLE NUISANCE. Anything injurious to health, or indecent, or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property. ACTIONABLE WORDS. In the law of libel and slander. Such words as naturally imply damage. Dahm v. O'Connell, 161 N. Y. S. 909, 911, 96 Misc. 582. Words which import a charge of some punishable crime or some offensive disease, or impute moral turpitude, or tend to injure a party in his trade or business, are said to be "actionable per se." Barnes v. Trundy, 31 Me. 321; Lemons v. Wells, 78 Ky. 117; Mayrant v. Richardson, 1 Nott & McC. 347, 9 Am. Dec. 707; Cady v. Brooklyn Union Pub. Co., 23 Misc. Rep. 409, 51 N. Y. Supp. 198; Barnett v. Phelps, 97 Or. 242, 191 P. 502, 503; Shaw v. Killingsworth, 213 Ala. 655, 106 So. 138, 139; Du Pont Engineering Co. v. Nashville Banner Pub. Co. (D. C.) 13 F.(2d) 186, 195; Ecuyer v. New York Life Ins. Co., 101 Wash. 247, 172 P. 359, 362. Words actionable at law without allegation of special damages are ordinarily designated as "actionable per se." Kluender v. Semann, 203 Iowa, 68, 212 N. W. 326, 327. Words "actionable per se" are those which law presumes must actually, proximately, and necessarily damage defendant and for which general damages are recoverable; words "actionable per quod" are those not actionable per se upon their face, but are only actionable in consequence of extrinsic facts showing circumstances under which they were said or the damages resulting to slandered party therefrom. Smith v. Mustain, 210 Ky. 445, 276 S. W. 154, 155, 44 A. L. R. 386. See, also, Libelous per se.

ACTIONARY. A foreign commercial term for the proprietor of an action or share of a public company's stock; a stockholder.

ACTIONES LEGIS. In the Roman law. Legal or lawful action; actions of or at law, (legitimæ actiones.) Dig. 1, 2, 2, 6.

ACTIONES NOMINATÆ. (Lat. named actions.) In the English chancery. Writs for which there were precedents. The statute of Westminster, 2, c. 24, gave chancery authority to form new writs in consimili casu; hence the action on the case.

ACTIONS ORDINARY. In Scotch law. All actions which are not rescissory. Ersk. Inst. 4, 1, 18.

ACTIONS RESCISSORY. In Scotch law. These are either (1) actions of proper imputation for declaring a writing false or forged; (2) actions of reduction-improbation for the production of a writing in order to have it set aside or its effect ascertained under the certification that the writing if not produced shall be declared false or forged; and (3) actions of simple reduction, for declaring a writing called for null until produced. Ersk. Prin. 4, 1, 5.

Actionum genera maxime sunt servanda. The kinds of actions are especially to be preserved. Lofft 460.

ACTIVE TRUST. See Trust.

ACTIVITY. A recreational "activity" is a physical or gymnastic exercise, an agile performance, such as dancing. McClure v. Board of Education of City of Visalia, 38 Cal. App. 500, 176 P. 711, 712.

ACTON BURNEL, STATUTE OF. In English law. A statute, otherwise called Statutum Mercatorum or de Mercatoribus, the statute of the merchants, made at a parliament held at the castle or village of Acton Burnel in Shropshire, in the 11th year of the reign of Edward I. 2 Reeves, Eng. Law, 158-162. It was a statute for the collection of debts, the earliest of its class, being enacted in 1283. A further statute for the same object, and known as De Mercatoribus, was enacted 13 Edw. I. (c. 3.). See Statute Merchant.

ACTOR.

In Roman Law

One who acted for another; one who attended to another's business; a manager or agent. A slave who attended to, transacted, or superintended his master's business or affairs, received and paid out moneys, and kept accounts. Burrill.

The word has a variety of closely-related meanings, very nearly corresponding with manager. Thus, actor dominiæ, manager of his master's farm; actor ecclesiæ, manager of church property; actores provinciarum, tax-gatherers, treasurers, and managers of the public debt.

Actor ecclesiæ.—An advocate for a church; one who protects the temporal interests of a church. Actor villæ was the steward or head-bailiff of a town or village. Cowell.

A plaintiff or complainant. In a civil or private action the plaintiff was often called by the Romans "petitor;" in a public action (causa publica) he was called "accusator." The defendant was called "reus," both in private and public causes; this term, however, according to Cicero, (De Orat. ii. 43.) might signify either party, as indeed we might conclude from the word itself. In a private action, the defendant was often called "adversarius," but either party might be called so.

Also, the term is used of a party who, for the time being, sustains the burden of proof, or has the initiative in the suit.

In Old European Law

A patron, proctor, advocate, or pleader; one who acted for another in legal matters; one who represented a party and managed his cause. An attorney, bailiff, or steward; one who managed or acted for another. The scotch "doer" is the literal translation.

Actor qui contra regulam quid adduxit, non est audiendus. A plaintiff (or pleader) is not to be heard who has advanced anything against authority, (or against the rule.)

Actor sequitur forum rei. According as rei is intended as the genitive of res, a thing, or reus, a defendant, this phrase means: The plaintiff follows the forum of the property in suit, or the forum of the defendant's residence. Branch, Max. 4. Home, Law Tr. 232; Story, Conf. L. § 325 k; 2 Kent 462.

Actore non probante reus absolvitur. When the plaintiff does not prove his case the defendant is acquitted (or absolved). Hob. 103.

Actori incumbit onus probandi. The burden of proof rests on the plaintiff, (or on the party who advances a proposition affirmatively.) Hob. 103.

Crosby v. City of Greenville, 183 Mich. 452, 150 N. W. 246, 248.

ACTS OF SEDERUNT. In Scotch law. Ordinances for regulating the forms of proceeding, before the court of session, in the administration of justice, made by the judges, who have the power by virtue of a Scotch act of parliament passed in 1540. Ersk. Prin. § 14.

ACTUAL. Real; substantial; existing presently in act, having a valid objective existence as opposed to that which is merely theoretical or possible.

Supp. 394; State v. Wells, 31 Conn. 213; Pascagoula Nat. Bank v. Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta (D. C. Ga.) 3 F. (2d) 465, 467. Y.) 616; or an actual settler, which implies actual residence; McIntyre v. Sherwood, 82 Cal. 139, 22 Pac. 937. An actual seizure means nothing more than seizure, since there was no fiction of constructive seizure before the act; L. R. 6 Exch. 203.

ACTUAL VIOLENCE. An assault with actual violence is an assault with physical force put in action, exerted upon the person assailed. The term violence is synonymous with physical force, and the two are used interchangeably in relation to assaults. State v. Wells, 31 Conn. 210. Tanner v. State, 24 Ga. App. 132, 100 S. E. 44.

It is sometimes translated a "road," and included the kind of way termed "iter," or path. Lord Coke, who adopts the term "actus" from Bracton, defines it a foot and horse way, vulgarly called "pack and prime way;" but distinguishes it from a cart-way. Co. Litt. 56a; Boyden v. Achenbach, 79 N. C. 539.

In Old English Law

An act of parliament; a statute. 8 Coke 40. A distinction, however, was sometimes made between actus and statutum. Actus parliamenti was an act made by the lords and commons; and it became statutum, when it received the king's consent. Barring. Obs. St. 46, note b.

Actus Dei nemini facit injuriam. The act of God does injury to no one. 2 Bl. Comm. 122. A thing which is inevitable by the act of God, which no industry can avoid, nor policy prevent, will not be construed to the prejudice of any person in whom there was no laches. Broom, Max. 230.

Actus inceptus, cujus perfectio pendet ex voluntate partium, revocari potest; si autem pendet ex voluntate tertiæ personæ, vel ex contingenti, revocari non potest. An act already begun, the completion of which depends on the will of the parties, may be revoked; but if it depend on the will of a third person, or on a contingency, it cannot be revoked. Bac. Thus, the style of the king's bench is coram rege, and the style of the court of chancery is coram domino rege in cancellaria; the addition showing the difference. 4 Inst. 80. By the word "fee" is intended fee-simple, fee-tail not being intended by it, unless there be added to it the addition of the word "tail." 2 Bl. Comm. 106; Litt. § 1.

ADDITION. Whatever is added to a man's name by way of title or description. Cowell.

In English law, there are four kinds of additions,—additions of estate, such as yeoman, gentleman, esquire; additions of degree, or names of dignity, as knight, earl, marquis, duke; additions of trade, mystery, or occupation, as scrivener, painter, mason, carpenter; and additions of place of residence, as London, Chester, etc. The only additions recognized in American law are those of mystery and residence.

At common law there was no need of addition in any case; 2 Ld. Raym. 988; it was required only by stat. 1 Hen. V. c. 5, in cases where process of outlawry lies. In all other cases it is only a description of the person, and common reputation is sufficient; 2 Ld. Raym. 849.

In addition to means not exclusive of, but by way of increase or accession to. In re Daggett's Estate, 2 Con. Sur. 230, 9 N. Y. S. 652; Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Hammond, 51 App. D. C. 260, 278 F. 569, 571.

In the Law of Insurance

The word "addition," as applied to buildings, usually means a part added or joined to a main building. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, 65 Ind. App. 541, 116 N. E. 597, 599; Agnew v. Sun Ins. Office, 167 Wis. 456, 167 N. W. 829; Myerstein v. Great American Ins. Co., 82 Cal. App. 131, 255 P. 220, 222; Henry Clay Fire Ins. Co. v. Crider, 191 Ky. 121, 229 S. W. 128. It may also apply to buildings appurtenant to some other building though not actually in physical contact therewith. Seeds v. Royal Ins. Co., 75 Pa. Super. Ct. 302, 304; Taylor v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 34 Cal. App. 471, 167 P. 899.

In the Law of Liens

Within the meaning of the mechanic's lien law, an "addition" to a building must be a lateral addition. It must occupy ground without the limits of the building to which it constitutes an addition, so that the lien shall be upon the building formed by the addition and the land upon which it stands. An alteration in a former building, by adding to its height, or to its depth, or to the extent of its interior accommodations, is merely an "alteration," and not an "addition." Putting a new story on an old building is not an addition. Udike v. Skillman, 27 N. J. Law, 132. See, also, Lamson v. Maryland Casualty Co., 196 Iowa, 1185, 194 N. W. 70, 71.

An "addition" is that which has become united with or become a part of. See Georgia Southern & F. Ry. Co. v. Tifton Produce Co., 160 Ga. 213, 127 S. E. 771, 772; Judge v. Bergman, 258 Ill. 246, 101 N. E. 574, 576; In re Thorn's Estate, 183 Cal. 512, 192 P. 19, 22.

In French Law

A supplementary process to obtain additional information. Guyot, Répert.

ADDITIONAL. This term embraces the idea of joining or uniting one thing to another, so as thereby to form one aggregate. Hurst Home Ins. Co. v. Deatley, 175 Ky. 728, 194 S. W. 910, 911, L. R. A. 1917E, 750; Rose v. Sullivan, 56 Mont. 480, 185 P. 562, 563; Payne v. Albright (Tex. Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 288, 289; Griebel v. School Dist. No. 6 of Rooks County, 110 Kan. 317, 203 P. 718, 719. Thus, "additional security" imports a security, which, united with or joined to the former one, is deemed to make it, as an aggregate, sufficient as a security from the beginning. State v. Hull, 53 Miss. 626; Searcy v. Cullman County, 196 Ala. 287, 71 So. 664, 665.

ADEMPATIO. Lat. In the civil law. A revocation of a legacy; an ademption. Inst. 2, 21, pr. Where it was expressly transferred from one person to another, it was called translatio. Id. 2, 21, 1; Dig. 34, 4.

ADEMPTION. The revocation, recalling, cancellation, or extinction of a legacy, according to the apparent intention of the testator, implied by the law from acts done by him in his life, though such acts do not amount to an express revocation of it. Kenaday v. Sinnott, 179 U. S. 606, 21 Sup. Ct. 233, 45 L. Ed. 339;

Burnham v. Comfort, 108 N. Y. 535, 15 N. E. 710, 2 Am. St. Rep. 462; Tanton v. Keller, 167 Ill. 129, 47 N. E. 376; Cowles v. Cowles, 56 Conn. 240, 13 Atl. 414; Johns Hopkins University v. Uhrig, 145 Md. 114, 125 A. 606, 610; Elwyn v. De Garmendia, 148 Md. 109, 128 A. 913, 914, 40 A. L. R. 553; Lamkin v. Kaiser (Mo. App.) 256 S. W. 558, 559; King v. Sellers, 194 N. C. 533, 140 S. E. 91, 92; In re Goodfellow's Estate, 166 Cal. 409, 137 P. 12, 15.

"The word 'ademption' is the most significant, because, being a term of art, and never used for any other purpose, it does not suggest any idea foreign to that intended to be conveyed. It is used to describe the act by which the testator pays to his legatee, in his life-time, a general legacy which by his will he had proposed to give him at his death. (1 Rep. Leg. p. 365.) It is also used to denote the act by which a specific legacy has become inoperative on account of the testator having parted with the subject." Langdon v. Astor, 16 N. Y. 40.

Ademption, in strictness, is predicable only of specific, and satisfaction of general legacies. Beck v. McGillis, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 35, 56; Langdon v. Astor, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 477, 541; Kramer v. Kramer (C. C. A. Ga.) 201 F. 248, 253. See Advancement.

ADEQUATE CARE. Such care as a man of ordinary prudence would himself take under similar circumstances to avoid accident; care proportionate to the risk to be incurred. Wallace v. Wilmington & N. R. Co., 8 Houst. (Del.) 529, 18 Atl. 818.

ADEQUATE CAUSE. Sufficient cause for a particular purpose. Pennsylvania & N. Y. Canal & R. Co. v. Mason, 109 Pa. 296, 58 Am. Rep. 722. In criminal law, adequate cause for the passion which reduces a homicide committed under its influence from the grade of murder to manslaughter, means such cause as would commonly produce a degree of anger, rage, resentment, or terror, in a person of ordinary temper, sufficient to render the mind incapable of cool reflection. Insulting words or gestures, or an assault and battery so slight as to show no intention to inflict pain or injury, or an injury to property unaccompanied by violence are not adequate causes. McKaskle v. State, 96 Tex. Cr. R. 638, 260 S. W. 588, 589; Pickens v. State, 86 Tex. Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755, 758; Vollintine v. State, 77 Tex. Cr. R. 522, 179 S. W. 108; Solis v. State, 76 Tex. Co. v. Ferris, 26 Tex. 588. It includes interest. Texarkana & Ft. S. Ry. Co. v. Brinkman (Tex. Civ. App.) 288 S. W. 852, 853. ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION. One which is equal, or reasonably proportioned, to the value of that for which it is given. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 244-247. An adequate consideration is one which is not so disproportionate as to shock our sense of that morality and fair dealing which should always characterize transactions between man and man. Eaton v. Patterson, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 9, 19; U. S. Smelting, Refining & Milling Co. v. Utah Power & Light Co., 58 Utah, 168, 197 P. 902, 905; Schader v. White, 173 Cal. 441, 160 P. 557, 559; Greenwood v. ADEQUATE PROVOCATION. An adequate provocation to cause a sudden transport of passion that may suspend the exercise of judgment and exclude premeditation and a previously formed design is one that is calculated to excite such anger as might obscure the reason or dominate the volition of an ordinary reasonable man. Rivers v. State, 75 Fla. 401, 78 So. 343, 344; Commonwealth v. Webb, 252 Pa. 187, 97 A. 189, 191.

Minn.) 280 F. 387, 392. A remedy which is plain and complete and as practical and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration as the remedy in equity. Keplinger v. Woolsey, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 282, 93 N. W. 1008; St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. McElvain (D. C. Mo.) 253 F. 123, 135; Blackstone Hall Co. v. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co., 39 R. I. 69, 97 A. 484, 488; Jones v. ADHERING. Joining, leagued with, cleaving to; as, "adhering to the enemies of the United States."

Rebels, being citizens, are not "enemies," within the meaning of the constitution; hence a conviction for treason, in promoting a rebellion, cannot be sustained under that branch of the constitutional definition which speaks of "adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." United States v. Greathouse, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 364, Fed. Cas. No. 15,254.

ADHESION. The entrance of another state into an existing treaty with respect only to a part of the principles laid down or the stipulations agreed to. Opp. Int. L. § 533.

Cas. 1084; Yuba County v. Kate Hayes Min. Co., 141 Cal. 360, 74 Pac. 1049; United States v. St. Anthony R. Co., 192 U. S. 524, 24 Sup. Ct. 333, 48 L. Ed. 548. But see Wilson v. Kansas City Gas Co., 204 Mo. App. 214, 223 S. W. 975, 982.

Under a statute authorizing a city to operate a waterworks for such city and adjacent territory, "adjacent territory" means the suburbs of the city not within the limits of another municipality. Johnson City v. Weeks, 133 Tenn. 277, 180 S. W. 327, 328, 3 A.L.R. 1431.

ADJECTIVE LAW. The aggregate of rules of procedure or practice. As opposed to that body of law which the courts are established to administer, (called "substantive law,") it means the rules according to which the substantive law is administered. That part of the law which provides a method for enforcing or maintaining rights, or obtaining redress for their invasion. Anderson v. Wirkman, 67 Mont. 176, 215 P. 224, 227.

The primary signification of the term "adjourn" is to put off or defer to another day specified. But it has acquired also the meaning of suspending business for a time,—deferring, delaying. Probably, without some limitation, it would, when used with reference to a sale on foreclosure, or any judicial proceeding, properly include the fixing of the time to which the postponement was made. La Farge v. Van Wagenen, 14 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 54; People v. Martin, 5 N. Y. 22; Waldrop v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., 131 Ark. 453, 199 S. W. 369, 371, L. R. A. 1918B, 1081; Town of Athens v. Miller, 190 Ala. 82, 66 So. 702, 704.

ADJOURNAL. A term applied in Scotch law and practice to the records of the criminal courts. The original records of criminal trials were called "bukis of adiornale," or "books of adjournal," few of which are now extant. An "act of adjournal" is an order of the court of justiciary entered on its minutes.

Adjournamentum est ad diem dicere seu diem dare. An adjournment is to appoint a day or give a day. 4 Inst. 27. Hence the formula "eat sine die."

ADJOURNED TERM. In practice. A continuance, by adjournment, of a regular term. Harris v. Gest, 4 Ohio St. 473; Kingsley v. Bagby, 2 Kan. App. 23, 41 P. 991. Distinguished from an "additional term," which is a distinct term. Id. An adjourned term is a continuation of a previous or regular term; it is the same term prolonged, and the power of the court over the business which has been done, and the entries made at the regular term, continues. Van Dyke v. State, 22 Ala. 57; Carter v. State, 14 Ga. App. 242, 80 S. E. 533, 534.

ADJOURNMENT. A putting off or postponing of business or of a session until another time or place; the act of a court, legislative body, public meeting, or officer, by which the session or assembly is dissolved, either temporarily or finally, and the business in hand dismissed from consideration, either definitely or for an interval. If the adjournment is final, it is said to be sine die. See Johnson City v. Tennessee Eastern Electric Co., 133 Tenn. 632, 182 S. W. 587, 589.

State*, 23 Ohio St. 146.

ADMINISTRATION. In public law. The administration of government means the practical management and direction of the executive department, or of the public machinery or functions, or of the operations of the various organs of the sovereign. The term "administration" is also conventionally applied to the whole class of public functionaries, or those in charge of the management of the executive department. *People v. ADMINISTRATION OF ESTATES. The management and settlement of the estate of an intestate, or of a testator who has no executor, performed under the supervision of a court, by a person duly qualified and legally appointed, and usually involving (1) the collection of the decedent's assets; (2) payment of debts and claims against him and expenses; (3) distributing the remainder of the estate among those entitled thereto.

The term is applied broadly to denote the management of an estate by an executor, and also the management of estates of minors, lunatics, etc., in those cases where trustees have been appointed by authority of law to take charge of such estates in place of the legal owners. Bouvier; Crow v. Hubbard, 62 Md. 565.

Administration is principally of the following kinds, viz.:

Ad colligendum bona defuncti. To collect the goods of the deceased. Special letters of administration granted to one or more persons, authorizing them to collect and preserve the goods of the deceased, are so called. 2 Bl. Comm. 505; 2 Steph. Comm. 241. These are otherwise termed "letters ad colligendum," and the party to whom they are granted, a "collector."

An administrator ad colligendum is the mere agent or officer of the court to collect and preserve the goods of the deceased until some one is clothed with authority to administer them, and cannot complain that another is appointed administrator in chief. Flora v. Mennice, 12 Ala. 836.

Ancillary administration is auxiliary and subordinate to the administration at the place of the decedent's domicile; it may be taken out in any foreign state or country where assets are locally situated, and is merely for the purpose of collecting such assets and paying debts there.

Cum testamento annexo. Administration with the will annexed. Administration granted in cases where a testator makes a will, without naming any executors; or where the executors who are named in the will are incompetent to act, or refuse to act; or in case of the death of the executors, or the survivor of them. 2 Bl. Pendente lite. Administration during the suit. Administration granted during the pendency of a suit touching the validity of a will. 2 Bl. Comm. 503; Cole v. Wooden, 18 N. J. Law, 15, 20.

Public administration is such as is conducted (in some jurisdictions) by an officer called the public administrator, who is appointed to administer in cases where the intestate has left no person entitled to apply for letters.

In this sense, administrative functions or acts are distinguished from such as are judicial. People v. Austin, 46 N. Y. Supp. 526, 20 App. Div. 1; Commonwealth v. Benn, 284 Pa. 421, 131 A. 253, 257; Ex parte Taylor, 68 Fla. 61, 66 So. 292, 295, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 701; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Tax Commission of Ohio (D. C. Jur. 305-307.

ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDY. One not judicial, but provided by commission or board created by legislative power. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Ogden Levee Dist. (C. C. A. Ark.) 15 F.(2d) 637, 642.

ADMINISTRATOR, in the most usual sense of the word, is a person to whom letters of administration, that is, an authority to administer the estate of a deceased person, have been granted by the proper court. He resembles an executor, but, being appointed by the court, and not by the deceased, he has to give security for the due administration of the estate, by entering into a bond with sureties, called the administration bond. Smith v. Gentry, 16 Ga. 31; Collamore v. Wilder, 19 Kan. 78.

By the law of Scotland the father is what is called the "administrator-in-law" for his children. As such, he is ipso jure their tutor while they are pupils, and their curator during their minority. The father's power extends over whatever estate may descend to his children, unless where that estate has been placed by the donor or grantor under the charge of special trustees or managers. This power in the father ceases by the child's discontinuing to reside with him, unless he continues to live at the father's expense; and with regard to daughters, it ceases on their marriage, the husband being the legal curator of his wife. Bell.

ADNIHILARE. In old English law. To annul; to make void; to reduce to nothing; to treat as nothing; to hold as or for nought.

ADNOTATIO. In the civil law. The subscription of a name or signature to an instrument. Cod. 4, 19, 5, 7.

A rescript (q. v.) of the prince or emperor, signed with his own hand, or sign-manual. Cod. 1, 19, 1. "In the imperial law, casual homicide was excused by the indulgence of the emperor, signed with his own sign-manual, annotatione principis." 4 Bl. Comm. 187.

ADOBE. Earth. In arid or desert regions, an alluvial or playa clay from which bricks are made for construction of houses, called "adobe" houses. See Sweeney v. Jackson County, 93 Or. 96, 178 P. 365, 376.

ADOLESCENCE. That age which follows puberty and precedes the age of majority. It commences for males at fourteen, and for females at twelve years, and continues until twenty-one years complete.

ADOPT. To accept, appropriate, choose, or select; to make that one's own (property or act) which was not so originally.

To adopt a route for the transportation of the mail means to take the steps necessary to cause the mail to be transported over that route. Rhodes v. U. S., Dev. Ct. Cl. 47. To adopt a contract is to accept it as binding, notwithstanding some defect which entitles the party to repudiate it. Thus, when a person affirms a voidable contract, or ratifies a contract made by his agent beyond his authority, he is sometimes said to adopt it. Sweet. Strictly, however, the word "adopt" should be used to apply to void transactions, while the word "ratify" should be limited to the final approval of a voidable transaction by one who theretofore had the optional right to relieve himself from its obligations. Cosden Oil & Gas Co. v. Hendrickson, 96 Okl. 206, 221 P. 86, 89; United German Silver Co. v. Bronson, 92 Conn. 266, 102 A. 647, 648. "Adoption" of a contract by one not a party thereto is of the nature of a novation. Edwards v. Heralds of Liberty, 263 Pa. 548, 107 A. 324, 326. See Affirm.

To accept, consent to, and put into effective operation; as in the case of a constitution, constitutional amendment, ordinance, or by-law. Real v. People, 42 N. Y. 282; People v. Norton, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 191.

Adopting a Code. Legislature's employment of such words imports an intention to incorporate into a statute, or to enact and make of force as a statute, every provision in the entire work under consideration. City of Albany v. Nix, 21 Ala. App. 164, 106 So. 199, 200; Baugh v. City of La Grange, 161 Ga. 80, 130 S. E. 69, 71.

To take into one's family the child of another and give him or her the rights, privileges, and duties of a child and heir. State v. Thompson, 13 La. Ann. 515; Abney v. De Loach, 84 Ala. 393, 4 South. 757; In re Sessions' Estate, 70 Mich. 297, 38 N. W. 249, 14 Am. St. Rep. 500; Smith v. Allen, 32 App. Div. 374, 53 N. Y. Supp. 114.

Adoption of children was a thing unknown to the common law, but was a familiar practice under the Roman law and in those countries where the civil law prevails, as France and Spain. Modern statutes authorizing adoption are taken from the civil law, and to that extent modify the rules of the common law as to the succession of property. Butterfield v. Sawyer, 187 Ill. 598, 58 N. E. 602, 52 L. R. A. 75, 79 Am. St. Rep. 246; Vidal v. Commagere, 13 La. Ann. 516; Eckford v. Knox, 67 Tex. 200, 2 S. W. 372.

Adoption and legitimation. Adoption, properly speaking, refers only to persons who are strangers in blood (In re Landers' Estate, 166 N. Y. S. 1036, 1038, 100 Misc. 635; Marshall v. Marshall, 196 Cal. 761, 229 P. 36, 37), and is not synonymous with "legitimation," which refers to persons of the same blood. Where one acknowledges his illegitimate child and takes it into his family and treats it as if it were legitimate, it is not properly an "adoption" but a "legitimation." Blythe v. Ayres, 96 Cal. 532, 31 P. 915, 19 L. R. A. 40. But this distinction is not always observed. In re Presley's Estate, 113 Okl. 160, 240 P. 89, 90.

To accept an alien as a citizen or member of a community or state and invest him with corresponding rights and privileges, either (in general and untechnical parlance) by naturalization, or by an act equivalent to naturalization, as where a white man is "adopted" by an Indian tribe. Hampton v. Mays, 4 Ind. T. 503, 69 S. W. 1115.

ADOPTION. The act of one who takes another's child into his own family, treating him as his own, and giving him all the rights and duties of his own child. See In re Chambers' Estate, 183 N. Y. S. 526, 528, 112 Misc. 551. A juridical act creating between two persons certain relations, purely civil, of paternity and filiation. 6 Demol. § 1. The relation thereby created is a statutory status, not a contractual relation. Ellis v. Nevius Coal Co., 100 Kan. 187, 163 P. 654; Wells v. Zenz, 83 Cal. App. 137, 256 P. 484, 487. Though legal adoption may confer on person adopted rights of actual relationship of child, simple "adoption" extends only to his treatment as member of the household. Zimmerman v. Thomas, 152 Md. 263, 136 A. 637, 639; Ellis v. Nevius Coal Co., 100 Kan. 187, 163 P. 654. See, also, Adopt.

ADOPTIVE ACT. An act of legislation which comes into operation within a limited area upon being adopted, in manner prescribed therein, by the inhabitants of that area.

ADOPTIVUS. Lat. Adoptive. Applied both to the parent adopting, and the child adopted. Inst. 2, 13, 4; Id. 3, 1, 10-14.

ADPROMISSOR. In the civil and Scotch law. A guarantor, surety, or cautioner; a peculiar species of fidejussor; one who adds his own promise to the promise given by the principal debtor, whence the name.

ADQUIETO. Payment. Blount.

ADRECTARE. To set right, satisfy, or make amends.

ADRHAMIRE. In old European law. To undertake, declare, or promise solemnly; to pledge; to pledge one's self to make oath. Spelman.

ADRIFT. Sea-weed, between high and low water-mark, which has not been deposited on the shore, and which during flood-tide is moved by each rising and receding wave, is adrift, although the bottom of the mass may touch the beach. Anthony v. Gifford, 2 Allen (Mass.) 549.

ADROGATION. In the civil law. The adoption of one who was impubes; that is, if a male, under fourteen years of age; if a female, under twelve. Dig. 1, 7, 17, 1.

ADS. An abbreviation for ad sectam (q. v.), meaning "at the suit of." Bowen v. Sewing Mach. Co., 86 Ill. 11.

ADSCENDENTES. Lat. In the civil law. Ascendants. Dig. 23, 2, 68; Cod. 5, 5, 6.

ADSCRIPTI. See Adscriptus.

ADSCRIPTI GLEBÆ. Slaves who served the master of the soil, who were annexed to the land, and passed with it when it was conveyed. Calvinus, Lex.

In Scotland, as late as the reign of George III., laborers in collieries and salt works were bound to the coal-pit or salt work in which they were engaged, in a manner similar to that of the adscripti of the Romans. Bell. These servi adscripti (or adscriptitii) glebæ held the same position as the villeins regardant of the Normans; 2 Bla. Com. 93. See 1 Poll. & Mait. 372.

ADSCRIPTITII. Lat. A species of serfs or slaves. See 1 Poll. & Mait. 372.

Those persons who were enrolled and liable to be drafted as legionary soldiers. Calvinus, Lex.

ADSCRIPTUS. In the civil law. Added, annexed, or bound by or in writing; enrolled, registered; united, joined, annexed, bound to, generally. Servus colonæ adscriptus, a slave annexed to an estate as a cultivator. Dig. 19, 2, 54, 2. Fundus adscriptus, an estate bound to, or burdened with a duty. Cod. 11, 2, 3.

ADSESSORES. Side judges. Assistants or advisers of the regular magistrates, or appointed as their substitutes in certain cases. Calvinus, Lex. See Assessor.

ADSTIPULATOR. In Roman law. An accessory party to a promise, who received the same promise as his principal did, and could equally receive and exact payment; or he only stipulated for a part of that for which the principal stipulated, and then his rights were coextensive with the amount of his own stipulation. One who supplied the place of a procurator at a time when the law refused to allow stipulations to be made by procurator. Sandars, Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 348.

ADULT.

In the Civil Law

A male infant who has attained the age of fourteen; a female infant who has attained the age of twelve. Dom. Liv. Prel. tit. 2, § 2, n. 8.

In the Common Law

One who has attained the legal age of majority, generally 21 years, though in some states women are legally "adults" at 18. Schenault v. State, 10 Tex. App. 410; George v. State, 11 Tex. App. 95; Wilson v. Lawrence, 70 Ark. 545, 69 S. W. 570.

ADULTER. Lat. One who corrupts; one who seduces another man's wife. Adulter solidorum. A corruptor of metals; a counterfeiter. Calvinus, Lex.

ADULTERA. In the civil law. An adulteress; a woman guilty of adultery. Dig. 48, 5, 4, pr.; Id. 48, 5, 15, 8.

ADULTERATION. The act of corrupting or debasing; the act of mixing something impure or spurious with something pure or genuine, or an inferior article with a superior one of the same kind. State v. Norton, 24 N. C. 40. The term is generally applied to the act of mixing up with food or drink intended to be sold other matters of an inferior quality, and usually of a more or less deleterious quality. Grosvenor v. Duffy, 121 Mich. 220, 80 N. W. 19; Com. v. Hufnal, 185 Pa. 376, 39 A. 1052; People v. West, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 162.

ADULTERATOR. Lat. A corrupter. In the civil law. A forger; a counterfeiter. Adulteratores monetæ, counterfeiters of money. Dig. 48, 19, 16, 9.

ADULTERINE. Begotten in an adulterous intercourse. Those are not deemed adulterine who are begotten of a woman openly married through ignorance of a former wife being alive. In the Roman and canon law, adulterine bastards were distinguished from such as were the issue of two unmarried persons, and the former were treated with more severity, not being allowed the status of natural children, and being ineligible to holy orders.

ADULTERINE BASTARDS. The offspring of adulterous relations. Kotzke v. Kotzke's Estate, 205 Mich. 184, 171 N. W. 442, 443. See, also, Adulterous Bastards.

ADULTERINE GUILDS. Traders acting as a corporation without a charter, and paying a fine annually for permission to exercise their usurped privileges. Smith, Wealth Nat. b. 1, c. 10.

Cr. 340, 250 P. 938, 940; State v. Ellis, 1 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 156, 112 A. 172, 173; State v. Ling, 91 Kan. 647, 138 P. 582, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 374; Civil Code Cal. § 93; 1 Bish. Mar. & Div. § 703; Cook v. State, 11 Ga. 53, 56 Am. Dec. 410; State v. Mahan, 81 Iowa, 121, 46 N. W. 855; Banks v. State, 96 Ala. 78, 11 South. 404.

A wife did not commit "adultery" where, due to insanity, the element of intent was lacking. Laudo v. Laudo, 177 N. Y. S. 396, 188 App. Div. 699.

It is sometimes said that the term "adultery" has no technical meaning in law distinct from its ordinary sense. State v. Hart, 30 N. D. 368, 152 N. W. 672, 673.

In some states, however, as was also true under the Roman and Jewish law, this crime is committed only when the woman is married to a third person; the unlawful commerce of a married man with an unmarried woman not being of the grade of adultery. Com. v. Call, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 509, 32 Am. Dec. 284, and note; Com. v. Elwell, 2 Metc. 190, 39 Am. Dec. 398. In other jurisdictions, both parties are guilty of adultery, even though only one of them is married. Goodwin v. State, 158 S. W. 274, 275, 70 Tex. Cr. R. 600; State v. Alamanio, 104 A. 66, 67, 7 Boyce (Del.) 133. In some jurisdictions, also, a distinction is made between double and single adultery, the former being committed where both parties are married to other persons, the latter where one only is so married. State v. Fellows, 50 Wis. 65, 6 N. W. 239; State v. Searle, 56 Vt. 516; State v. Lash, 16 N. J. Law, 380, 32 Am. Dec. 397; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 26 Am. Rep. 21; State v. Connoway, Tapp. (Ohio) 90; State v. Weatherby, 43 Me. 258, 69 Am. Dec. 59; Hunter v. U. S., 1 Pin. (Wis.) 91, 39 Am. Dec. 277.

The term "criminal conversation" (q. v.), in its general and comprehensive sense, is synonymous with "adultery" (Rash v. Pratt, 1 W. W. Harr. (Del.) 18, 111 A. 225, 228); but in its more limited and technical signification it is adultery in the aspect of a tort. Turner v. Heavrin, 182 Ky. 65, 206 S. W. 23, 4 A. L. R. 562.

Open and Notorious Adultery

To constitute living in open and notorious adultery, the parties must reside together publicly in the face of society, as if conjugal relations existed between them, and their so living and the fact that they are not husband and wife must be known in the community. Gill v. State, 32 Okl. Cr. 278, 240 P. 1073, 1075; Burns v. State, 17 Okl. Cr. 26, 182 P. 738, 739; Copeland v. State, 133 P. 258, 10 Okl. Cr. 1. See, also, People v. Stern, 207 Ill. App. 154; McCullough v. State, 107 Tex. Cr. R. 258, 296 S. W. 530.

ADVANCE, v. To pay money or render other value before it is due; to furnish something before an equivalent is received; to loan; to furnish capital in aid of a projected enterprise, in expectation of return from it. Powell v. Allan, 70 Cal. App. 663, 234 P. 339, 344; Houghton v. Jacobs (Mo. Sup.) 246 S. W. 285, 287; William F. Mosser Co. v. Cherry River Boom & Lumber Co., 290 Pa. 67, 138 A. 85, 87.

An agreement to "advance" money for personal property implies a loan with property as pledge, rather than a payment of purchase money in sale. Shelley v. Byers, 73 Cal. App. 44, 238 P. 177, 182.

ADVANCEMENT. Money or property given by a parent to his child or, sometimes, presumptive heir, or expended by the former for the latter's benefit, by way of anticipation of the share which the child will inherit in the parent's estate and intended to be deducted therefrom. It is the latter circumstance which differentiates an advancement from a gift or a loan. Holland v. Bonner, 142 Ark. 214, 218 S. W. 665, 667, 26 A. L. R. 1101; Nobles v. Davenport, 183 N. C. 207, 111 S. E. 180, 181, 26 A. L. R. 1086; Brewer's Adm'r v. Brewer, 181 Ky. 400, 205 S. W. 393, 396; Stenson v. H. S. Halvorson Co., 28 N. D. 151, 147 N. W. 800, 801, L. R. A. 1915A, 1179, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1289; Grattan v. Grattan, 18 Ill. 167, 65 Am. Dec. 726; Beringer v. Lutz, 188 Pa. 364, 41 A. 643; Daugherty v.

Rogers, 119 Ind. 254, 20 N. E. 779, 3 L. R. A. 847; Hattersley v. Bissett, 51 N. J. Eq. 597, 20 A. 187, 40 Am. St. Rep. 532; Chase v. Ewing, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 597; Osgood v. Breed, 17 Mass. 356; Nicholas v. Nicholas, 100 Va. 660, 42 S. E. 669; Moore v. Freeman, 50 Ohio St. 592, 35 N. E. 502; Appeal of Porter, 94 Pa. 332; Bissell v. Bissell, 120 Iowa, 127, 94 N. W. 465; In re Allen's Estate, 207 Pa. 325, 56 A. 928.

"Advancement," unlike "ademption" (q. v.), applies only to cases of intestacy. Ellard v. Ferris, 91 Ohio St. 339, 110 N. E. 476, 479, L. R. A. 1916C, 613; Harper v. Harris (C. C. A. N. M.) 294 F. 44, 46, 32 A. L. R. 727. To constitute an "advancement," the donor must irrevocably part with his title in the subject-matter, and such title must become vested in the donee during the lifetime of the donor. Greene v. Greene, 145 Miss. 87, 110 So. 218, 222, 49 A. L. R. 565. Whether there was an advancement or not depends on the intention of the donor. Leach v. Leach, 162 Minn. 159, 202 N. W. 448, 449; Payne v. Payne, 128 Va. 33, 104 S. E. 712, 714.

Advancement, in its legal acceptance, does not involve the idea of obligation or future liability to answer. It is a pure and irrevocable gift made by a parent to a child in anticipation of such child's future share of the parent's estate. In re Long's Estate, 254 Pa. 370, 98 A. 1066, 1068; Fell v. Bradshaw, 205 Iowa, 100, 215 N. W. 595; Appeal of Yundt, 13 Pa. 580, 53 Am. Dec. 496. An advancement is any provision by a parent made to and accepted by a child out of his estate, either in money or property, during his life-time, over and above the obligation of the parent for maintenance and education. Code Ga. 1882, § 2579 (Civ. Code 1926, § 4052). An "advancement by portion," within the meaning of the statute, is a sum given by a parent to establish a child in life, (as by starting him in business,) or to make a provision for the child, (as on the marriage of a daughter). L. R. 20 Eq. 155. See Ademption; Gift.

ADVANCES. Moneys paid before or in advance of the proper time of payment; money or commodities furnished on credit; a loan or gift, or money advanced to be repaid conditionally. Vail v. Vail, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 69; Laffin, etc., Powder Co. v. Burkhardt, 97 U. S. 110, 24 L. Ed. 973.

This word, when taken in its strict legal sense, does not mean gifts, (advancements,) and does mean a sort of loan; and, when taken in its ordinary and usual sense, it includes both loans and gifts,—loans more readily, perhaps, than gifts. Nolan v. Bolton, 25 Ga. 355; Linderman v. Carmin, 255 Mo. 62, 164 S. W. 614, 617; Landrum & Co. v. Wright, 11 Ala. App. 406, 66 So. 892.

Payments advanced to the owner of property by a factor or broker on the price of goods which the latter has in his hands, or is to receive, for sale.

"Loans" are repayable at maturity, while "advances" are not repayable by party receiving them, but are covered by proceeds of consigned goods. People ex rel. James Talcott, Inc., v. Goldfogle, 211 N. Y. S. 122, 123, 213 App. Div. 719.

ADVANTAGE. Preference or priority. United States v. Preston, 4 Wash. 446, Fed. Cas. No. 16,087.

ADVANTAGIUM. In old pleading. An advantage. Co. Ent. 484; Townsh. Pl. 50.

ADVENA. In Roman law. One of foreign birth, who has left his own country and settled elsewhere, and who has not acquired citizenship in his new locality; often called albanus. Du Cange.

ADVENT. A period of time recognized by the English common and ecclesiastical law, beginning on the Sunday that falls either upon St. Andrew's day, being the 30th of November, or the next to it, and continuing to Christmas day. Wharton.

ADVENTITIOUS. That which comes incidentally, fortuitously, or out of the regular course. "Adventitious value" of lands, see Central R. Co. v. State Board of Assessors, 49 N. J. Law, 1, 7 A. 306.

ADVENTITIUS. Lat. Fortuitous; incidental; coming from an unusual source. Adventitia bona are goods which fall to a man otherwise than by inheritance. Adventitia dos is a dowry or portion given by some friend other than the parent.

ADVENTURA. An adventure. 2 Mon. Angl. 615; Townsh. Pl. 50. Flotson, jetson, and lagon are styled adventuræ maris, (adventures of the sea.) Hale, De Jure Mar. pt. 1, c. 7.

ADVENTURE.

In Mercantile Law

Sending goods abroad under charge of a supercargo or other agent, at the risk of the sender, to be disposed of to the best advantage for the benefit of the owners.

The goods themselves so sent.

In Marine Insurance

A very usual word in policies of marine insurance, and everywhere used as synonymous, or nearly so, with "perils." It is often used by the writers to describe the enterprise or voyage as a "marine adventure" insured against. Moore v. Louisville Underwriters (C. C.) 14 Fed. 233.

In General

—Adventure, bill of. In mercantile law. A writing signed by a merchant, stating that the property in goods shipped in his name belongs to another, to the adventure or chance of which the person so named is to stand, with a covenant from the merchant to account to him for the produce.

—Gross adventure. In maritime law. A loan on bottomry. So named because the lender, in case of a loss, or expense incurred for the common safety, must contribute to the gross or general average.

—Joint adventure. A commercial or maritime enterprise undertaken by several persons jointly; a limited partnership,—not limited in the statutory sense as to the liability of the partners, but as to its scope and duration. Ross v. Willett, 76 Hun, 211, 27 N. Y. S. 785; Lobsitz v. E. Lissberger Co., 168 App. Div. 840, 154 N. Y. S. 556, 557. A special partnership. McDaniel v. State Fair of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 286 S. W. 513, 517. An association of two or more persons to carry out a single business enterprise for profit, for which purpose they combine their property, money, effects, skill, and knowledge. Forman v. Lumm, 214 App. Div. 579, 212 N. Y. S. 487, 491; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 206 Mich. 153, 172 N. W. 436, 440; Hey v. Duncan (C. C. A. Ill.) 13 F.(2d) 794, 795; Sanders v. Newman, 174 Wis. 321, 181 N. W. 822, 824; Wilson v. Maryland, 152 Minn. 506, 189 N. W. 437, 438. A special combination of two or more persons, where, in some specific adventure, a profit is jointly sought, without any actual partnership or corporate designation. Griffin v. Reilly (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 242, 246; Perry v. Morrison, 118 Okl. 212, 247 P. 1004, 1006; Dexter & Carpenter v. Houston (C. C. A. Va.) 20 F.(2d) 647, 651. It is ordinarily, but not necessarily, limited to a single transaction, Forbes v. Butler, 66 Utah, 373, 242 P. 950, 956, which serves to distinguish it from a partnership, Barry v. Kern, 184 Wis. 266, 199 N. W. 77, 78. But the business of conducting it to a successful termination may continue for a number of years. Elliott v. Murphy Timber Co., 117 Or. 387, 244 P. 91, 93, 48 A. L. R. 1043. There is no real distinction between a "joint adventure" and what is termed a "partnership for a single transaction." Atlas Realty Co. v. Galt, 153 Md. 586, 139 A. 285, 286. A "joint adventure," while not identical with a partnership, is so similar in its nature and in the relations created thereby that the rights of the parties as between themselves are governed practically by the same rules that govern partnerships. Goss v. Lanin, 170 Iowa, 57, 152 N. W. 43, 45; Boles v. Akers, 116 Okl. 266, 244 P. 182, 184; Fried v. Guiberson, 30 Wyo. 150, 217 P. 1087, 1089; Welling v. Crosland, 129 S. C. 127, 123 S. E. 776, 781.

ADVENTURER. One who undertakes uncertain or hazardous actions or enterprises. It is also used to denote one who seeks to advance his own interests by unscrupulous designs on the credulity of others. It has been held that to impute that a person is an adventurer is a libel; 18 L. J. C. P. 241.

ADVERSARIA. (From Lat. adversa, things remarked or ready at hand.) Rough memoranda, common-place books.

ADVERSARY. A litigant-opponent, the opposite party in a writ or action.

ADVERSARY PROCEEDING. One having opposing parties; contested, as distinguished from an ex parte application; one of which the party seeking relief has given legal warning to the other party, and afforded the latter an opportunity to contest it. Excludes an

Referring to the use of this term, Prof. Gray says (Nature and Sources of the Law 290): "Austin and Maine take æquitas as having an analogous meaning to equity; they apply the term to those rules which the prætors introduced through the Edict in modification of the ius civile, but it seems to be an error to suppose that æquitas had this sense in the Roman Law." He quotes Prof. Clark (Jurisprudence 367) as doubting "whether æquitas is ever clearly used by the Roman jurists to indicate simply a deparment of Law" and expresses the opinion that an examination of the authorities more than justifies his doubt. Æquitas is opposed to strictum jus and varies in meaning between reasonable modification of the letter and substantial justice. It is to be taken as a frame of mind in dealing with legal questions and not as a source of law.

ÆQUUM ET BONUM. "The Roman conception involved in 'æquum et bonum' or

'æquitas' is identical with what we mean by 'reasonable' or nearly so. On the whole, the natural justice or 'reason of the thing' which the common law recognizes and applies does not appear to differ from the 'law of nature' which the Romans identified with jus gentium, and the medieval doctors of the civil and common law boldly adopted as being divine law revealed through man's natural reason." Sir F. Pollock, Expans. of C. L. 111, citing [1902] 2 Ch. 661, where jus naturale and æquum et bonum were taken to have the same meaning.

AFFECTED WITH A PUBLIC INTEREST.

This phrase, used as a basis for legislative regulation of prices, means something more than "quasi public," or "not strictly private," and similar phrases employed as a basis for upholding police regulation in respect to the conduct of particular businesses. A business is not affected with a public interest merely because the public derives benefit, accommodation, ease or enjoyment from its existence or operation. The price or charge for admissions to theaters or places of amusement or entertainment is not a matter "affected with a public interest." Tyson & Bro.-United Theatre Ticket Offices v. Banton, 273 U. S. 418, 47 S. Ct. 426, 429, 71 L. Ed. 718, 58 A. L. R. 1236.

AFFIANCE. To assure by pledge. A plighting of troth between man and woman. Littleton, § 39.

AFFIDAVIT. A written or printed declaration or statement of facts, made voluntarily, and confirmed by the oath or affirmation of the party making it, taken before an officer having authority to administer such oath. Cox v. Stern, 170 Ill. 442, 48 N. E. 906, 62 Am. St. Rep. 385; Hays v. Loomis, 84 Ill. 18. A statement or declaration reduced to writing, and sworn to or affirmed before some officer who has authority to administer an oath or affirmation. Quoted and approved in Shelton v. An affidavit is always taken ex parte, and in this respect it is distinguished from a deposition, the matter of which is elicited by questions, and which affords an opportunity for cross-examination. In re Liter's Estate, 19 Mont. 474, 48 P. 753; State v. Quartier, 114 Or. 657, 236 P. 746, 748; Osborne v. Commonwealth, 214 Ky. 84, 282 S. W. 762, 763. "Affidavits" are of two kinds; those which serve as evidence to advise the court in the decision of some preliminary issue or determination of some substantial right, and those which merely serve to invoke the judicial power. Worthen v. State, 189 Ala. 395, 66 So. 686, 688.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE. An affidavit stating that the defendant has a good defense to the plaintiff's action on the merits. The statements required in such an affidavit vary considerably in the different states where they are required. Called also an affidavit of merits (q. v.), as in Massachusetts.

AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE. An affidavit intended to certify the service of a writ, notice, or other document.

AFFIDAVIT TO HOLD TO BAIL. An affidavit required in many cases before the defendant in a civil action may be arrested. Pl. 165.

AFFILIATE. The word "affiliate" under Acts Ky. 1912, c. 7, § 19, providing that in precincts where there was no registration electors might vote only the ballot of the party with which they declared their affiliation, requires the elector to in some way make plain the party he espouses and allies himself with; Heitzman v. Voiers, 159 S. W. 625, 626, 155 Ky. 39; Commonwealth v. Carson, 171 Ky. 288, 188 S. W. 372.

AFFILIATION. The act of imputing or determining the paternity of a bastard child, and the obligation to maintain it.

In French Law

A species of adoption which exists by custom in some parts of France. The person affiliated succeeded equally with other heirs to the property acquired by the deceased to whom he had been affiliated, but not to that which he inherited.

In Ecclesiastical Law

AFFINAGE. A refining of metals. Blount.

AFFINES. In the civil law. Connections by marriage, whether of the persons or their relatives. Calvinus, Lex.

Neighbors, who own or occupy adjoining lands. Dig. 10, 1, 12.

From this word we have affinity, denoting relationship by marriage; 1 Bla. Com. 434.

The singular, affinis, is used in a variety of related significations—a boundary; Du Cange; a partaker or sharer, affinis culpæ (an aider or one who has knowledge of a crime); Calvinus, Lex.

Affinis mei affinis non est mihi affinis. One who is related by marriage to a person related to me by marriage has no affinity to me. Shelf. Mar. & Div. 174.

AFFINITAS. Lat. In the civil law. Affinity; relationship by marriage. Inst. 1, 10, 6.

AFFINITAS AFFINITATIS. Remote relationship by marriage. That connection between parties arising from marriage which is neither consanguinity nor affinity. Chinn v. State, 47 Ohio St. 575, 26 N. E. 986, 11 L. R. A. 630; Davidson v. Whitehill, 87 Vt. 499, 89 A. 1081, 1085. This term signifies the connection between the kinsmen of the two persons married, as, for example, the husband's brother and the wife's sister. Erskine, Inst. 1. 6. 8.

AFFINITY. The connection existing, in consequence of marriage, between each of the married persons and the kindred of the other. Clawson v. Ellis, 286 Ill. 81, 121 N. E. 242, 243; Sizemore v. Commonwealth, 210 Ky. 637, 276 S. W. 524, 525.

It is distinguished from consanguinity, which denotes relationship by blood. Affinity is the tie which exists between one of the spouses with the kindred of the other; thus, the relations of my wife, her brothers, her sisters, her uncles, are allied to me by affinity, and my brothers, sisters, etc., are allied in the same way to my wife. But my brother and the sister of my wife are not allied by the ties of affinity. Williams v. Foster (Tex. Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 120, 122; Clawson v. Ellis, 121 N. E. 242, 243, 286 Ill. 81; Everett v. Ingram, 82 S. E. 562, 563, 142 Ga. 145. See Affinitas Affinitatis.

At Common Law

Relationship by marriage between the husband and the blood relations of the wife, and between the wife and the blood relations of the husband. 1 Bl. Comm. 434; Solinger v. Earle, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 80; Tegarden v. Phillips (Ind. App.) 39 N. E. 212.

Affinity is distinguished into three kinds: (1) Direct, or that subsisting between the husband and his wife's relations by blood, or between the wife and the husband's relations by blood; (2) secondary, or that which subsists between the husband and his wife's relations by marriage; (3) collateral, or that which subsists between the husband and the relations of his wife's relations. Wharton.

In the Civil Law

The connection which arises by marriage between each of the married persons and the kindred of the other. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 147; Poydras v. Livingston, 5 Mart. O. S. (La.) 295. A husband is related by affinity to all the consanguinei of his wife, and vice versa, the wife to the husband's consanguinei; for the husband and wife being considered one flesh, those who are related to the one by blood are related to the other by affinity. Gib. Cod. 412; 1 Bl. Comm. 435.

In a larger sense, consanguinity or kindred. Co. Litt. 157a.

Quasi Affinity

In the civil law. The affinity which exists between two persons, one of whom has been betrothed to a kinsman of the other, but who have never been married.

AFFIRM. To ratify, make firm, confirm, establish, reassert.

To ratify or confirm a former law or judgment. Cowell.

In the practice of appellate courts, to affirm a judgment, decree, or order, is to declare that it is valid and right, and must stand as rendered below; to ratify and reassert it; to concur in its correctness and confirm its efficacy. Boner v. Fall River County Bank, 25 Wyo. 260, 168 P. 726, 727.

To ratify or confirm a voidable act.

In the Law of Contracts

A party is said to affirm a contract, the same being voidable at his election, when he ratifies and accepts it, waives his right to annul it, and proceeds under it as if it had been valid originally. Cf. Adopt.

AFFIRMANCE. In practice. The confirming, or ratifying of a former law, or judgment. Cowell; Blount.

The confirmation and ratification by an appellate court of a judgment, order, or decree of a lower court brought before it for review. See Affirm.

A dismissal of an appeal for want of prosecution is not an "affirmance" of the judgment. Drummond v. Husson, 14 N. Y. 60. Contra: Tackett v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 112 Kan. 500, 212 P. 357, 360. See, also, Peck v. Curlee Clothing Co., 63 Okl. 61, 162 P. 735, 736.

The ratification or confirmation of a voidable contract or act by the party who is to be bound thereby.

The term is in accuracy to be distinguished from ratification, which is a recognition of the validity or binding force as against the party ratifying, of some act performed by another person; and from confirmation, which would seem to apply more properly to cases where a doubtful authority has been exercised by another in behalf of the person ratifying; but these distinctions are not generally observed with much care.

AFFIRMANCE DAY GENERAL. In the English court of exchequer, a day appointed by the judges of the common pleas, and barons of the exchequer, to be held a few days after the beginning of every term for the general affirmance or reversal of judgments. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1091.

AFFIRMANT. A person who testifies on affirmation, or who affirms instead of taking an oath. See Affirmation. Used in affidavits and depositions which are affirmed, instead of sworn to in place of the word "deponent."

He is liable to all the pains and penalty of perjury, if he shall be guilty of willfully and maliciously violating his affirmation.

Affirmanti, non neganti incumbit probatio. The [burden of] proof lies upon him who affirms, not upon one who denies. Steph. Pl. 84.

Affirmantis est probare. He who affirms must prove. Porter v. Stevens, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 535.

AFFIRMATION. In practice. A solemn and formal declaration or asseveration that an affidavit is true, that the witness will tell the truth, etc., this being substituted for an oath in certain cases.

A solemn religious asseveration in the nature of an oath. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 371.

Quakers, as a class, and other persons who have conscientious scruples against taking an oath, are allowed to make affirmation in any mode which they may declare to be binding upon their consciences, in confirmation of the truth of testimony which they are about to give. 1 Atk. 21, 46; Cowp. 340, 389; 1 Leach Cr. Cas. 64; 1 Ry. & M. 77; Vail v. Nickerson, 6 Mass. 262; Com. v. Buzzell, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 153; Buller, N. P. 292.

AFFIRMATION OF FACT. A statement concerning a subject-matter of a transaction which might otherwise be only an expression of opinion but which is affirmed as an existing fact material to the transaction, and reasonably induces the other party to consider and rely upon it, as a fact. Stone v. McCarty, 64 Cal. App. 158, 220 P. 690, 694; Ireland v. Louis K. Liggett Co., 243 Mass. 243, 137 N. E. 371, 372.

AFFIRMATIVE. That which declares positively; that which avers a fact to be true; that which establishes; the opposite of negative.

The party who, upon the allegations of pleadings joining issue, is under the obligation of making proof, in the first instance, of matters alleged, is said to hold the affirmative, or, in other words, to sustain the burden of proof. Abbott.

As to affirmative "Damages," "Plea," "Proof," "Warranty," see those titles.

AFFIRMATIVE AUTHORIZATION. Something more than authority by mere implication. White, Gratwick & Mitchell v. Empire Engineering Co., 210 N. Y. S. 563, 572, 125 Misc. 47.

AFFIRMATIVE CHARGE. The general "affirmative charge" is an instruction to the jury that, whatever the evidence may be, defendant cannot be convicted under the count in the indictment to which the charge is directed. Coker v. State, 18 Ala. App. 550, 93 So. 384, 386.

AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE. In code pleading. New matter constituting a defense; new matter which, assuming the complaint to be true, constitutes a defense to it. Carter v. Eighth Ward Bank, 67 N. Y. S. 300, 33 Misc. 128.

Garner v. Hannah, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 262. As used in a statute giving plaintiff right to dismiss at any time before trial if no affirmative relief is demanded in answer, "affirmative relief" has reference only to that relief for which defendant might maintain an action independently of plaintiff's claim and on which he might proceed to recovery, although plaintiff abandoned his cause of action or failed to establish it. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Walsler, 77 Okl. 240, 188 P. 335, 336.

AFFIRMATIVE STATUTE. In legislation. A statute couched in affirmative or mandatory terms; one which directs the doing of an act, or declares what shall be done; as a negative statute is one which prohibits a thing from being done, or declares what shall not be done. Blackstone describes affirmative acts of parliament as those "wherein justice is directed to be done according to the law of the land." 1 Bl. Comm. 142.

AFFIX. To fix or fasten upon, to attach to, inscribe, or impress upon, as a signature, a seal, a trade-mark. Pen. Code N. Y. § 367. To attach, add to, or fasten upon, permanently, as in the case of fixtures annexed to real estate.

A thing is deemed to be affixed to land when it is attached to it by the roots, as in the case of trees, vines, or shrubs; or imbedded in it, as in the case of walls; or permanently resting upon it, as in the case of buildings; or permanently attached to what is thus permanent, as by means of cement, plaster, nails, bolts, or screws. Civ. Code Cal. § 660; Civ. Code Mont. 1895, § 1076 (Rev. Codes 1921, § 6669); McNally v. Connolly, 70 Cal. 3, 11 Pac. 320; Miller v. Waddingham (Cal.) 25 Pac. 688, 11 L. R. A. 510; *Tollé v. A. 182; Auten v. Bennett, 88 App. Div. 15, 84 N. Y. Supp. 689. Life insurance agents are rarely, if ever, "general" in the sense that they execute and deliver policies, as is often done in the business of fire insurance. McDonald v. Equitable Life Assur. Synonyms

The term "agent" is to be distinguished from its synonyms "servant," "representative," and "trustee." A servant acts in behalf of his master and under the latter's direction and authority, but is regarded as a mere instrument, and not as the substitute or proxy of the master. Turner v. Cross, 83 Tex. 218, 18 S. W. 578, 15 L. R. A. 262; People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 226, 10 P. 502. A representative (such as an executor or an assignee in bankruptcy) owes his power and authority to the law, which puts him in the place of the person represented, although the latter may have designated or chosen the representative. A trustee acts in the interest and, for the benefit of one person, but by an authority derived from another person.

A "servant" is a worker for another who deals ordinarily with things and who has no power to bring about contractual relations with third persons; while an "agent" is one who deals not only with things, but persons, using his own discretion as to means, and frequently establishing contractual relations between his principal and third persons. Rendleman v. Niagara Sprayer Co. (D. C. Ill.) 16 F. (2d) 122, 124. See, also, State v. Bond, 118 S. E. 276, 279, 94 W. Va. 255.

AGGER. Lat. In the civil law. A dam, bank or mound. Cod. 9, 38; Townsh. Pl. 48.

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT. An assault with circumstances of aggravation, or of a heinous character, or with intent to commit another crime. In re Burns (C. C.) 113 Fed. 992; Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 393; Barker v. Green, 34 Ga. App. 574, 130 S. E. 599. See Assault.

Defined in Pennsylvania as follows: "If any person shall unlawfully and maliciously inflict upon another person, either with or without any weapon or instrument, any grievous bodily harm, or unlawfully cut, stab, or wound any other person, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," etc. Brightly, Purd. Dig. p. 434, § 167 (18 PS § 2112). Under Pen. Code Tex. 1911, art. 1022 (Vernon's Ann. P. C. art. 1147), an assault becomes an aggravated assault when committed with a deadly weapon under circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder; Myers v. State, 163 S. W. 432, 72 Tex. Cr. R. 630; or when the instrument or means used is such as inflicts disgrace upon the person assaulted; Cirul v. State, 83 Tex. Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088; Scott v. State, 73 Tex. Cr. R. 622, 166 S. W. 729, 730 (indecent and improper fondling of the person). In Arizona, under Pen. Code 1913, § 215, subd. 5 (Rev. Code 1928, § 4613), aggravated assault is different from simple assault only by infliction of serious bodily injury. Brimhall v. State, 31 Ariz. 522, 255 P. 165, 166, 53 A. L. R. 231.

AGGRAVATION. Any circumstance attending the commission of a crime or tort which increases its guilt or enormity or adds to its injurious consequences, but which is above and beyond the essential constituents of the crime or tort itself.

Matter of aggravation, correctly understood, does not consist in acts of the same kind and description as those constituting the gist of the action, but in something done by the defendant, on the occasion of committing the trespass, which is, to some extent, of a different legal character from the principal act complained of. Hathaway v. Rice, 19 Vt. 107. So on an indictment for murder the prisoner may be convicted of manslaughter, for the averment of malice aforethought is merely matter of aggravation. Co. Litt. 232 a.

Story & Clark Co.* (C. C. A. Ind.) 207 F. 946, 951; Line Material Co. v. Brady Electric Mfg. Co. (C. C. A. Conn.) 7 F.(2d) 48, 50. The assembly of old elements, in a device in which each performs the same function in the same way as it did when used alone, without mutuality of action, interaction, or co-operation, is mere "aggregation" not involving invention. Lundie Engineering Co. v. Railroad Supply Co. (C. C. A. Ill.) 8 F.(2d) 995; In re Smith, 19 F.(2d) 678, 679, 57 App. D. C. 204.

One who is under the necessity of answering or replying to irrelevant and redundant matter in a pleading is a "person aggrieved" thereby, who may move that it be stricken out under Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 545. Shea v. Kiely (Sup.) 167 N. Y. S. 570, 572.

* "Party aggrieved" by officer's failure to execute and make return of process, so as to be entitled to recover penalty imposed by statute, is party at whose instance process was issued, or one having beneficial interest therein by transfer or assignment and not party to whom process was directed. *Whitsitt v. AGNATES. In the law of descents. Relations by the father, or on the father's side. This word is used in the Scotch law, and by some writers as an English word, corresponding with the Latin agnati, (q. v.). Ersk. Inst. b. 1, tit. 7, § 4.

AGNATI. In Roman law. The term included "all the cognates who trace their connection exclusively through males. A table of cognates is formed by taking each lineal ancestor in turn and including all his descendants of both sexes in the tabular view. If, then, in tracing the various branches of such a genealogical table or tree, we stop whenever we come to the name of a female, and pursue that particular branch or ramification no further, all who remain after the descendants of women have been excluded are agnates, and their connection together is agnatic relationship." Maine, Anc. Law, 142.

All persons are agnatically connected together who are under the same patria potestas, or who have been under it, or who might have been under it if their lineal ancestor had lived long enough to exercise his empire. Maine, Anc. Law, 144.

The agnate family consisted of all persons living at the same time, who would have been subject to the patria potestas of a common ancestor, if his life had been continued to their time. Hadl. Rom. Law, 131.

Cognates were all persons who could trace their blood to a single ancestor or ancestress, and agnates were those cognates who traced their connection exclusively through males. Maine, Anc. Law. Between agnati and cognati there is this difference: that, under the name of agnati, cognati are included, but not è converso; for instance, a father's brother, that is, a paternal uncle, is both agnatus and cognatus, but a mother's brother, that is, a maternal uncle, is a cognatus but not agnatus. (Dig. 38, 7, 5, pr.) Burrill.

AGNATIC. [From agnati, q. v.] Derived from or through males. 2 Bl. Comm. 236.

AGREEMENTUM. In old English law. Agreement; an agreement. Spelman.

Gypsy Oil Co.*, 110 Okl. 117, 238 P. 194, 198; In re Segregation of School Dist. No. 58 from Rural High School Dist. No. 1, 34 Idaho, 222, 200 P. 138, 139; *Harvey v. AGREED CASE. An agreed statement of facts on which a case is submitted in lieu of evidence is not an "agreed case" under the statute (Rev. St. 1909, § 2117), or at common law. Byers v. Essex Inv. Co., 281 Mo. 375, 219 S. W. 570, 571. Nor is such a statement an "agreed case" within the Indiana statute (Burns' Ann. St. 1926, § 604), providing that parties may submit any matter of controversy upon an agreed statement of the facts, made out and signed by the parties, and accompanied by an affidavit that the controversy is real, and the proceedings in good faith. Reddick v. Board of Com'rs of Pulaski County, 14 Ind. App. 598, 41 N. E. 834; Struble-Werneke Motor Co. v. Metropolitan Securities Corporation, 93 Ind. App. 416, 178 N. E. 460.

AGREED STATEMENT OF FACTS. A statement of facts, agreed on by the parties as true and correct, to be submitted to a court for a ruling on the law of the case. *United States Trust Co. v. The writing or instrument which is evidence of an agreement.

Classification

Agreements are of the following several descriptions, viz.:

Conditional agreements, the operation and effect of which depend upon the existence of a supposed state of facts, or the performance of a condition, or the happening of a contingency.

Executed agreements, which have reference to past events, or which are at once closed and where nothing further remains to be done by the parties.

Executory agreements are such as are to be performed in the future. They are commonly preliminary to other more formal or important contracts or deeds, and are usually evidenced by memoranda, parol promises, etc.

Express agreements are those in which the terms and stipulations are specifically declared and avowed by the parties at the time of making the agreement.

Implied agreement. (1) Implied in fact. One inferred from the acts or conduct of the parties, instead of being expressed by them in written or spoken words. (2) Implied in law: more aptly termed a constructive or quasi contract. One where, by fiction of law, a promise is imputed to perform a legal duty; one inferred by the law where the conduct of the parties with reference to the subject-matter is such as to induce the belief that they intended to do that which their acts indicate they have done. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. U. S., 261 U. S. 592, 43 S. Ct. 425, 67 L. Ed. 816; Bixby v. Moor, 51 N. H. 403; Cuneo v. De Cuneo, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 436, 59 S. W. 284.

Parol agreements. Such as are either by word of mouth or are committed to writing, but are not under seal. The common law draws only one great line, between things under seal and not under seal. Wharton.

Synonyms Distinguished

The term "agreement" is often used as synonymous with "contract." Douglass v. W. L. Williams Art Co., 143 Ga. 846, 85 S. E. 993. Properly speaking, however, it is a wider term than "contract" (Anson, Cont. 4). An agreement might not be a contract, because not fulfilling some requirement of the law of the place in which it is made. So, where a contract embodies a series of mutual stipulations or constituent clauses, each of these clauses might be denominated an "agreement." The meaning of the contracting parties is their agreement. Whitney v. Wyman, 101 U. S. 396, 25 L. Ed. 1050.

"Agreement" is seldom applied to specialties; "contract" is generally confined to simple contracts; and "promise" refers to the engagement of a party without reference to the reasons or considerations for it, or the duties of other parties. Pars. Cont. 6.

"Agreement" is more comprehensive than "promise;" signifies a mutual contract, on consideration, between two or more parties. A statute (of frauds) which requires the agreement to be in writing includes the consideration. Wain v. Warlters, 5 East, 10.

"Agreement" is not synonymous with "promise" or "undertaking," but, in its more proper and correct sense, signifies a mutual contract, on consideration, between two or more parties, and implies a consideration. Andrews v. Pontue, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 285.

An interlocutory judgment of divorce may be a contract or agreement within the meaning of a statute freeing the husband from liability for support. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission, 181 Cal. 460, 184 P. 864, 866.

In General

—Agreement for insurance. An agreement often made in short terms preliminary to the filling out and delivery of a policy with specific stipulations.

—Agreement of sale; agreement to sell. An agreement of sale may imply not merely an obligation to sell, but an obligation on the part of the other party to purchase (cf. Maloney v. Aschaffenburg, 143 La. 509, 78 So. 761, 764; Loud v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 313 Mo. 552, 281 S. W. 744, 755); while an agreement to sell is simply an obligation on the part of the vendor or promisor to complete his promise of sale; Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 21 Sup. Ct. 611, 45 L. Ed. 853; Davis v. Roseberry, 95 Kan. 411, 148 P. 629, 630, 3 A. L. R. 564. Generally, anything short of passing the title is an "agreement to sell," not a sale. Neponsit Holding Corporation v. Ansonge, 215 App. Div. 371, 214 N. Y. S. 91, 96.

—In agreement. In conformity, or harmony with. Brown Real Estate Co. v. Lancaster County, 110 Neb. 665, 194 N. W. 897, 898.

Dict.*; State v. Stewart, 58 Mont. 1, 190 P. 129, 131; Fleckles v. Hille, 83 Ind. App. 715, 149 N. E. 915; Davis v. Industrial Commission of Utah, 59 Utah, 607, 206 P. 267, 268; Gordon v. Buster, 113 Tex. 382, 257 S. W. 220, 221; Tower & Sons v. U. S., 9 Ct. Cust. App. 307, 308; Slycord v. Horn, 179 Iowa, 936, 162 N. W. 249, 252, 7 A. L. R. 1285; People v. City of Joliet, 321 Ill. 385, 152 N. E. 159, 160. And see Binzel v. Grogan, 67 Wis. 147, 29 N. W. 895.

"Agriculture" refers to the field or farm with all its wants, appointments, and products, as distinguished from "horticulture," which refers to the garden, with its less important though varied products. Dillard v. Webb, 55 Ala. 468.

A person is actually engaged in agriculture (within the meaning of a statute giving him special exemptions) when he derives the support of himself and family in whole or in part from the cultivation of land; it must be something more than a garden, though it may be less than a field, and the uniting of any other business with this is not inconsistent with the pursuit of agriculture. Springer v. Lewis, 22 Pa. 193. See Bachelor v. Bickford, 62 Me. 526; Simons v. Lovell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 515.

To act in cooperation with. Cornett v. Commonwealth, 198 Ky. 236, 248 S. W. 540, 542. This word must be distinguished from its synonym "encourage," the difference being that the former connotes active support and assistance, while the latter does not; and also from "abet," which last word imports necessary criminality in the act furthered (see State v. Ankrom, 86 W. Va. 570, 103 S. E. 925, 927; Osborne v. Baughman, 85 Cal. App. 224, 259 P. 70, 71), while "aid," standing alone, does not. But see Acker v. State, 26 Ariz. 372, 226 P. 199, 201, holding that aid given by an accomplice implies guilty knowledge, and a definite aiding in the crime itself. See Abet.

AID AND ABET. In criminal law. That kind of connection with the commission of a crime which, at common law, rendered the person guilty as a principal in the second degree. It consisted in being present at the time and place, and doing some act to render aid to the actual perpetrator of the crime, though without taking a direct share in its commission. See 4 Bl. Comm. 34; People v. Dole, 122 Cal. 486, 55 Pac. 581, 68 Am. St. Rep. 50; State v. Tally, 102 Ala. 25, 15 South. 722; State v. Jones, 115 Iowa, 113, 88 N. W. 196; State v. Cox, 65 Mo. 29, 33; *State v. "Aid and abet" comprehend all assistance rendered by words, acts, encouragement, support, or presence, actual or constructive, to render assistance if necessary. Johnson v. State, 21 Ala. App. 565, 110 So. 55; State v. Davis, 191 Iowa, 720, 183 N. W. 314, 316. It is not sufficient that there is a mere negative acquiescence not in any way made known to the principal malefactor. People v. Barnes, 311 Ill. 559, 143 N. E. 445, 447.

AID AND ASSIST. The words "aided and assisted," as used in the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, as regards the condemnation or confiscation of vehicles, implies either knowledge on the part of the owner that the vehicle was being used for unlawful transportation, or such negligence or want of care as to charge him with such knowledge or notice. In re Gattina, 203 Ala. 517, 84 So. 760; State v. Hughes, 203 Ala. 90, 82 So. 104.

AID AND COMFORT. Help; support; assistance; counsel; encouragement.

As an element in the crime of treason (see Constitution of the United States, art. 3, § 3), the giving of "aid and comfort" to the enemy may consist in a mere attempt. It is not essential to constitute the giving of aid and comfort that the enterprise commenced should be successful and actually render assistance. Young v. United States, 97 U. S. 39, 62, 24 L. Ed. 992; U. S. v. Greathouse, 4 Sawy. 472, Fed. Cas. No. 15,254.

The voluntary execution of an official bond of a commissioned officer of the Confederacy from motives of personal friendship, is giving aid and comfort; U. S. v. Padelford, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 539, 19 L. Ed. 788; as is the giving of mechanical skill to build boats for the Confederacy; Gearing v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl. 172; otherwise, however, as to a devise to an alien enemy; In re Kielsmark's Will, 188 Iowa, 1378, 177 N. W. 690, 693, 11 A. L. R. 156.

E. 575, 579, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 1022. He must share the criminal intent of the principal; State v. Reedy, 97 W. Va. 549, 127 S. E. 24, 28; Whitt v. Commonwealth, 221 Ky. 490, 298 S. W. 1101, 1103; Crawford v. State, 133 Miss. 147, 97 So. 534; and must be actually or constructively present when the crime is committed; Smiddy v. Commonwealth, 210 Ky. 359, 275 S. W. 872, 873. But one who incites or instigates the commission of a felony when he is neither actually nor constructively present is an "aider, abettor, or procurer" within the meaning of a statute. Lamb v. State, 69 Neb. 212, 95 N. W. 1050; Neal v. State, 175 N. W. 669, 670, 104 Neb. 56.

W. 488, 489. The term "ailment," however, covers disorders which could not properly be called diseases. Cromeens v. Sovereign Camp W. O. W. (Mo. App.) 247 S. W. 1033, 1034.

The word "point," however, is not entirely synonymous. "Aim" denotes direction toward some minute point in an object, while "point" implies direction toward the whole object; but the word "point," as used in Comp. St. Okl. 1921, § 1999 (St. 1931, § 2591), implies intention, and in that respect is similar to the word "aim." Buchanan v. State, 25 Okl. Cr. 198, 219 P. 420, 423.

An "alibi" is a general traverse of the material averment of the indictment that the defendant committed the crime charged against him. Ragsdale v. State, 12 Ala. App. 1, 67 So. 783, 787. An "alibi" strictly is not a defense though usually called such in criminal procedure. State v. Norman, 103 Ohio St. 541, 134 N. E. 474. Where the state claims the offense was committed at one time and place, and the defense is merely that it was committed at another time and place, the issue of alibi is not presented. State v. Ivy (Mo. Sup.) 192 S. W. 733, 735.

ALIMONY. The allowance made to a wife out of her husband's estate for her support, either during a matrimonial suit, or at its termination, when she proves herself entitled to a separate maintenance, and the fact of a marriage is established.

Alimony is an allowance out of the husband's estate, made for the support of the wife when living separate from him. It is either temporary or permanent. Code Ga. 1882, § 1736 (Civ. Code 1926, § 2975). Davis v. Davis, 61 Okl. 275, 161 P. 190, 191; Phy v. Phy, 116 Or. 31, 236 P. 751, 240 P. 237, 240, 42 A. L. R. 588; Kutchai v. Kutchai, 233 Mich. 569, 207 N. W. 818, 820.

The allowance which is made by order of court to a woman for her support out of her husband's estate, upon being separated from him by divorce, or pending a suit for divorce. Pub. Stearns, 66 Vt. 187, 28 Atl. 875, 44 Am. St. Rep. 836; In re Spencer, 83 Cal. 460, 23 Pac. 395, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266; Adams v. Storey, 135 Ill. 448, 26 N. E. 582, 11 L. R. A. 790, 25 Am. St. Rep. 392.

A maintenance afforded the wife, where the husband refuses to give it, or where his improper conduct compels her to separate from him; a provision for her to continue for their joint lives, or so long as they live separate, which, on the death of either, or upon their mutual consent to live together, ceases. Polley v. Polley, 97 A. 526, 527, 128 Md. 60.

"Alimony," in its broad sense, means also an award for the support of a child or children. Schaffer v. Schafer, 193 N. Y. S. 43, 44, 118 Misc. Rep. 254; Brown v. Brown, 222 Mass. 415, 111 N. E. 43, 43.

By alimony we understand what is necessary for the nourishment, lodging, and support of the person who claims it. It includes education, when the person to whom the alimony is due is a minor. Civil Code La. art. 230. Floyd v. Floyd, 91 Fla. 910, 108 So. 896, 898.

The term is commonly used as equally applicable to all allowances, whether annual or in gross, made to a wife upon a decree in divorce. Burrows v. Purple, 107 Mass. 432.

The matter of alimony is largely regulated by statute.

Alimony pendente lite is that ordered during the pendency of a suit. Duss v. Duss, 92 Fla. 1081, 111 So. 382, 385. Alimony pending an appeal is "alimony pendente lite." But an application to enforce a final decree for permanent alimony pending an appeal is not an application for alimony pendente lite. Robinson v. Robinson (N. J. Err. & App.) 92 A. 94, 96, L. R. A. 1915B, 1071.

Permanent Alimony

A provision for the support and maintenance of a wife out of her husband's estate, during her lifetime, ordered by a court on decreeing a divorce. Odom v. Odom, 36 Ga. 320; In re Spencer, 83 Cal. 460, 23 Pac. 395, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266; Lape v. Lape, 99 Ohio St. 143, 124 N. E. 51, 52, 6 A. L. R. 187.

The award of alimony is essentially a different thing from a division of the property of the parties. Mesler v. Jackson, Circuit Judge, 188 Mich. 195, 154 N. W. 63, 65; Braecklein v. Braecklein, 136 Md. 32, 109 A. 546, 548; Johnson v. Johnson, 57 Kan. 343, 46 Pac. 700. It is not in itself an "estate" in the technical sense, and therefore not the separate property or estate of the wife. Cizek v. Cizek, 69 Neb. 797, 99 N. W. 28; Guenther v. Jacobs, 44 Wis. 354; Romaine v. Chauncey, 60 Hun, 477, 15 N. Y. Supp. 198; Lynde v. Lynde, 64 N. J. Eq. 736, 52 Atl. 694, 58 L. R. A. 471, 97 Am. St. Rep. 692; Holbrook v. Comstock, 16 Gray (Mass.) 109. But see West v. West, 126 Va. 696, 101 S. E. 876, 877.

"Maintenance" and "permanent alimony" are synonymous, and constitute an allowance in money to be recovered from the one in fault for support of innocent party. Phy v. Phy, 116 Or. 31, 236 P. 751, 752, 42 A. L. R. 588. And see Gilbert v. Hayward, 37 R. I. 303, 92 A. 625, 627.

Alimony in its strictly legal sense relates to the provisions made pendente lite, and hence the allowance provided the wife by Civ. Code S. Dak. § 92, is a permanent allowance for maintenance and not "permanent alimony." Warne v. Warne, 36 S. D. 573, 156 N. W. 60, 62. See, also, Honey v. Honey, 214 P. 250, 251, 60 Cal. App. 759. Compare Emerson v. Emerson, 120 Md. 584, 87 A. 1033, 1035 (holding that in the absence of statute, in case of an absolute divorce the duty to support ceases and with it the right to alimony).

ALIO INTUITU. Lat. In a different view; under a different aspect. 4 Rob. Adm. & Pr. 151.

With another view or object; with respect to another case or condition. 7 East, 558; 6 M. & S. 231. See Diverso Intuitu.

Bract. fols. 39a, 160a.

Aliquis non debet esse judex in propria causâ, quia non potest esse judex et pars. A person ought not to be judge in his own cause, because he cannot act as judge and party. Co. Litt. 141; 3 Bl. Comm. 59.

ALIUQUOT. Strictly, contained in something else an exact number of times. But as applied to resulting trusts, "aliquot" is treated as meaning fractional. Fox v. Shanley, 94 Conn. 350, 109 A. 249, 251. An "aliquot" part of an estate, as used in the rule that in order to create a resulting trust where several contribute to a purchase it shall appear that the sums severally contributed were for an aliquot part of an estate, means any definite interest. Hinshaw v. Russell, 280 Ill. 235, 117 N. E. 406, 408.

ALITER: Otherwise; as otherwise held or decided.

Aliud est celare, aliud tacere. To conceal is one thing; to be silent is another. Lord Mansfield, 3 Burr. 1910.

Aliud est distinctio, aliud separatio. Distinction is one thing; separation is another. It is one thing to make things distinct, another thing to make them separable.

ALIVE. A child to be born alive and capable of inheriting as a requisite to an estate by curtesy need be alive for only a moment of time; the word "alive" meaning that the child shall be alive and have an independent life of its own for some period after birth, and, while respiration at birth is evidence of such life and existence, proof of respiration from actual observation is not necessary to establish it, but other indications of life, such as the beating of the heart and the pulsation of the arteries, may be satisfactory evidence. Fleming v. Sexton, 172 N. C. 250, 90 S. E. 247, 249. Cf. Hydrostatic Test.

ALL. Collectively, this term designates the whole number of particulars, individuals, or separate items; distributively, it may be equivalent to "each" or "every." State v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 66 Me. 510; Sherburne v. Sischo, 143 Mass. 442, 9 N. E. 797; Davis Trust Co. v. Price, 77 W. Va. 678, 88 S. E. 111; State v. Dilworth, 80 Mont. 102, 258 P. 246, 248; Middleton v. Stone, 163 Ky. 571, 174 S. W. 6, 8, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 84; Thurlow Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust. App. 275, 276. Or to "any." In re Licenses for Sale of Used Motor Vehicles (Iowa) 179 N. W. 609, 611. It is a general rather than a universal term, to be understood in one sense or the other according to the demands of sound reason. Kieffer v. Ehler, 18 Pa. 391; 9 Ves. Jr. 137. See Both.

ALL AND SINGULAR. All without exception. A comprehensive term often employed in conveyances, wills, and the like, which includes the aggregate or whole and also each of the separate items or components. McClaskey v. Barr (C. C.) 54 Fed. 798.

ALL DISABILITY. Under Workmen's Compensation Act, § 306, par. (c), being 77 PS § 513, the term "all disability" includes both total and partial disability caused by a permanent injury to the leg or arm, or resulting from or relating to the permanent injury, and embraces not only all incapacity to labor, directly or indirectly arising from such permanent injury, but likewise cases of no incapacity at all. Bausch v. Fidler, 277 Pa. 573, 121 A. 507.

ALL FAULTS. A sale of goods with "all faults" covers, in the absence of fraud on the part of the vendor, all such faults and defects as are not inconsistent with the identity of the goods as the goods described. Whitney v. Boardman, 118 Mass. 242.

The statement of the facts intended to be relied on in support of the contested suit.

ALLEGIANCE. The obligation of fidelity and obedience which the individual owes to the government under which he lives, or to his sovereign in return for the protection he receives. It may be an absolute and permanent obligation, or it may be a qualified and temporary one. The citizen or subject owes an absolute and permanent allegiance to his government or sovereign, or at least until, by some open and distinct act, he renounces it and becomes a citizen or subject of another government or another sovereign. The alien, while domiciled in the country, owes a local and temporary allegiance, which continues during the period of his residence. Carlisle v. U. S., 16 Wall. 154, 21 L. Ed. 426; Jackson v. Goodell, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 191; U. S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 18 Sup. Ct. 456, 42 L. Ed. 890; Wallace v. Harmstad, 44 Pa. 501.

"The tie or ligamen which binds the subject [or citizen] to the king [or government] in return for that protection which the king [or government] affords the subject, [or citizen.]" 1 Bl. Comm. 366. It consists in "a true and faithful obedience of the subject due to his sovereign," 7 Coke, 4b, and is a comparatively modern corruption of ligeance (ligeantia), which is derived from liege (ligius), meaning absolute or unqualified. It signified originally liege fealty, i. e. absolute and unqualified fealty. 18 L. Q. Rev. 47.

Allegiance is the obligation of fidelity and obedience which every citizen owes to the state. Pol. Code Cal. § 55.

In Norman French. Alleviation; relief; redress. Kelham.

Acquired Allegiance

That binding a citizen who was born an alien, but has been naturalized.

Local or Actual Allegiance

That measure of obedience which is due from a subject of one government to another government, within whose territory he is temporarily resident. From this are excepted foreign sovereigns and their representatives, naval and armed forces when permitted to remain in or pass through the country or its waters.

Natural Allegiance

In English law. That kind of allegiance which is due from all men born within the king's dominions, immediately upon their birth, which is intrinsic and perpetual, and cannot be divested by any act of their own. 1 Bl. Comm. 369; 2 Kent, Comm. 42. In American law. The allegiance due from citizens of the United States to their native country, and also from naturalized citizens, and which cannot be renounced without the permission of government, to be declared by law. 2 Kent, Comm. 43-49. It differs from local allegiance, which is temporary only, being due from an alien or stranger born for so long a time as he continues within the sovereign's dominions and protection. Fost. Cr. Law, 184. Natural allegiance is said to be due to the king in his political, not his personal, capacity; L. R. 17 Q. B. D. 54, quoted in U. S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 663, 18 Sup. Ct. 456, 42 L. Ed. 890; and so in the United States "it is a political obligation" depending not on ownership of land, but on the enjoyment of the protection of government; Wallace v. Harmstad, 44 Pa. 492; and it "binds the citizen to the observance of all laws" of his own sovereign; Adams v. People, 1 N. Y. 173.

ALLEGIARE. To defend and clear one's self; to wage one's own law.

ALLEGING DIMINUTION. The allegation in an appellate court, of some error in a subordinate part of the nisi prius record. See Diminution.

ALLEVIARE. L. Lat. In old records. To levy or pay an accustomed fine or composition; to redeem by such payment. Cowell.

ALLEY. A narrow way designed for the special accommodation of the property it reaches. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. City of Chanute, 95 Kan. 161, 147 P. 836, 837. In a plat or statute concerning cities or towns, it means a public way, unless the word "private" is prefixed or the context requires a different meaning. Payne v. Godwin, 147 Va. 1019, 133 S. E. 481, 483; Bellevue Gas & Oil Co. v. Carr, 61 Okl. 290, 161 P. 203, 204.

ALLIANCE. The relation or union between persons or families contracted by intermarriage; affinity.

In International Law

A union or association of two or more states or nations, formed by league or treaty, for the joint prosecution of a war, or for their mutual assistance and protection in repelling hostile attacks. The league or treaty by which the association is formed. The act of confederating, by league or treaty, for the purposes mentioned.

If the alliance is formed for the purpose of mutual aid in the prosecution of a war against a common enemy, it is called an "offensive" alliance. If it contemplates only the rendition of aid and protection in resisting the assault of a hostile power, it is called a "defensive" alliance. If it combines both these features, it is denominated an alliance "offensive and defensive."

The term is also used in a wider sense, embracing unions for objects of common interest to the contracting parties, as the "Holy Alliance" entered into in 1815 by Prussia, Austria and Russia for the purpose of counteracting the revolutionary movement in the interest of political liberalism.

ALLISION. The running of one vessel into or against another, as distinguished from a collision, i. e., the running of two vessels against each other. But this distinction is not very carefully observed.

pany or public loan announcing the number of shares allotted or assigned and the amounts and due dates of the calls or different payments to be made on the same. An "allotment certificate," when issued to an enrolled member of the Five Civilized Tribes of the Indian Territory, is an adjudication of the special tribunal empowered to decide the question that the party to whom it issues is entitled to the land, and it is a conveyance of the right to this title to the allottee. Bowen v. Carter, 42 Okl. 565, 144 P. 170, 173.

ALLOTMENT NOTE. In English law. A writing by a seaman, whereby he makes an assignment of part of his wages in favor of his wife, father or mother, grandfather or grandmother, brother or sister. ALLOTTEE. One to whom an allotment is made, who receives a ratable share under an allotment; a person to whom land under an inclosure act or shares in a public undertaking are allotted.

An "allottee," as the word is used in the act of April 21, 1904 (chapter 1402, 33 Stat. 189-204), is one, generally an Indian, freedman, or adopted citizen of a tribe of Indians, to whom a tract of land out of a common holding has been given by, or under the supervision of, the United States. Lynch v. Franklin, 37 Okl. 60, 130 P. 599, 600. The word does not include such allottee's heirs. Bradley v. Goddard, 45 Okl. 77, 145 P. 409, 410.

As distinguished from a "salary," which is a fixed compensation, decreed by authority and for permanence, and is paid at stated intervals, and depends upon time, and not the amount of the services rendered, "allowance" is a variable quantity. Blaine County v. Pyrah, 32 Idaho, 111, 178 P. 702, 703; Veterans' Welfare Board v. Riley, 188 Cal. 607, 206 P. 631, 637; Jones v. U. S., 60 Ct. Cl. 552, 564.

As used in S. Dak. Civ. Code, § 92, authorizing an allowance to the wife on divorce, it is not synonymous with "alimony" and authorizes setting aside specific property. Warne v. Warne, 36 S. D. 573, 156 N. W. 60, 62.

—Allowance pendente lite. "Alluvio maris is an increase of the land adjoining, by the projection of the sea, casting up and adding sand and slubb to the adjoining land, whereby it is increased, and for the most part by insensible degrees." Hale, de Jure Mar. pt. 1, c. 6.

ALLUVION. That increase of the earth on a shore or bank of a river, or to the shore of the sea, by the force of the water, as by a current or by waves, which is so gradual that no one can judge how much is added at each moment of time. A. 206, 80 Am. St. Rep. 850; State v. Richardson, 72 So. 984, 986, 140 La. 329.

The term is chiefly used to signify a gradual increase of the shore of a running stream, produced by deposits from the waters.

By the common law, alluvion is the addition made to land by the washing of the sea, or a navigable river or other stream, whenever the increase is so gradual that it cannot be perceived in any one moment of time. Lovington v. St. Clair County, 64 Ill. 58, 16 Am. Rep. 516.

Alluvion differs from avulsion in this: that the latter is sudden and perceptible. St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 23 L. Ed. 59. See Accretion; Avulsion.

ALLY. A nation which has entered into an alliance with another nation. 1 Kent, Comm. 69.

Smith v. Gunter*, 154 S. W. 181, 183, 106 Ark. 371. It may be (1) the beginning of an entirely different sentence, or (2) a copulative carrying on the sense of the immediately preceding words into those immediately succeeding. *Stroud, Jud. The other; the opposite party. See Alt.

Synonyms

This term is to be distinguished from its synonyms "change" and "amend." To change may import the substitution of an entirely different thing, while to alter is to operate upon a subject-matter which continues objectively the same while modified in some particular. If a check is raised, in respect to its amount, it is altered; if a new check is put in its place, it is changed. To "amend" implies that the modification made in the subject improves it, which is not necessarily the case with an alteration. An amendment always involves an alteration, but an alteration does not always amend. See Ex parte Woo Jan (D. C.) 228 F. 927, 940.

But "alter" is sometimes used synonymously with "change," Board of Sup'rs of Yavapai County v. Stephens, 20 Ariz. 115, 177 P. 261, 264, and with "enlarge," City of Jamestown v. Pennsylvania Gas Co. (C. C. A.) 1 F.(2d) 871, 883.

ALTERATION. Variation; changing; making different. See Alter.

"Alteration," as applied to a building, means a substantial change. Mayer v. Texas Tire & Rubber Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 874, 875; Cawker v. Trimmel, 155 Wis. 108, 143 N. W. 1046, 1047, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1005; Kresge v. Maryland Casualty Co., 154 Wis. 627, 143 N. W. 668, 669. Advertising signs on the outer walls of a building are not an "alteration" of or addition to the building, which the lessee covenants not to make without consent. Emons v. D. A. Schulte, Inc., 13 Del. Ch. 336, 120 A. 221, 222.

Improvements which add to the height or depth of a building, or which change, increase, and repair the interior accommodations thereof, are repairs or alterations within the meaning of the Mechanic's Lien Act. Fehr Const. Co. v. Postl System of Health Building, 288 Ill. 634, 124 N. E. 315, 317; Hardwood Interior Co. v. Bull, 24 Cal. App. 129, 140 P. 702, 703.

As applied to highways, especially in connection with grade crossings, "alteration" is the substitution of one way for another. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Middlesex County, 220 Mass. 569, 108 N. E. 506, 507; Boston & M. R. R. v. County Com'rs of Middlesex County, 239 Mass. 127, 131 N. E. 283, 286; Police Jury of Jackson Parish, La., v. Tremont & G. Ry. Co., 136 La. 784, 67 So. 829, 830.

An alteration is an act done upon the instrument by which its meaning or language is changed. If what is written upon or erased from the instrument has no tendency to produce this result, or to mislead any person, it is not an alteration. Oliver v. Hawley, 5 Neb. 444.

An alteration is said to be material when it affects, or may possibly affect, the rights of the persons interested in the document.

A "material alteration" of an instrument is one which makes it speak a language different in legal effect from that which it originally spoke, or which carries with it some change in the rights, interests, or obligations of the parties to the writing. McIntosh v. State, 98 S. E. 555, 556, 23 Ga. App. 513; Bank of Moberly v. Meals, 316 Mo. 1158, 295 S. W. 73, 77; Gray v. Williams, 91 Vt. 111, 99 A. 735, 738; Commercial Credit Co. v. Giles (Tex. Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 596, 598; Francen v. Oklahoma Star Oil Co., 30 Okl. 103, 194 P. 193, 194; Dr. Ward's Medical Co. v. Wolleat, 160 Minn. 21, 199 N. W. 733, 740.

Synonyms

An act done upon a written instrument, which, without destroying the identity of the document, introduces some change into its terms, meaning, language, or details is an alteration. See U. S. v. Sacks, 42 S. Ct. 38, 39, 257 U. S. 37, 66 L. Ed. 118; Spencer v. Tripplett (Tex. Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 712; Moore v. First Nat. Bank, 211 Ala. 367, 100 So. 349, 351; Crouch v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 298 F. 437, 439. This may be done either by the mutual agreement of the parties concerned (but this use of the word is rather colloquial than technical; such an alteration becomes a new agreement, superseding the original one; Leake, Cont. 430), or by a person interested under the writing without the consent, or without the knowledge, of the others. Smith v. Barnes, 51 Mont. 202, 149 P. 963, 967, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 330; Rice v. Jones, 102 Okl. 30, 225 P. 958, 960; Edwards v. Thompson, 99 Wash. 188, 169 P. 327, 328. In either case it is properly denominated an alteration; but if performed by a mere stranger, it is more technically described as a spoliation or mutilation. Knox v. Horne (Tex. Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 259, 260; Cochran v. Nebeker, 48 Ind. 462. The term is not properly applied to any change which involves the substitution of a practically new document. Kempner v. Simon, 195 N. Y. S. 333, 334, 119 Misc. Rep. 60. And it should in strictness be reserved for the designation of changes in form or language, and not used with reference to modifications in matters of substance. The term is also to be distinguished from "defacement," which conveys the idea of an obliteration or destruction of marks, signs, or characters already existing. An addition which does not change or interfere with the existing marks or signs, but gives a different tenor or significance to the whole, may be an alteration, but is not a defacement. Linney v. State, 6 Tex. 1, 55 Am. Dec. 756. Again, in the law of wills, there is a difference between revocation and alteration. If what is done simply takes away what was given before, or a part of it, it is a revocation; but if it gives something in addition or in substitution, then it is an alteration. Appeal of Miles, 68 Conn. 237, 36 Atl. 39, 36 L. R. A. 176; In re Thorn's Estate, 183 Cal. 512, 192 P. 19, 22.

ALTERNAT. A usage among diplomatists by which the rank and places of different powers, who have the same right and pretensions to precedence, are changed from time to time, either in a certain regular order or one determined by lot. In drawing up treaties and conventions, for example, it is the usage of certain powers to alternate, both in the preamble and the signatures, so that each power occupies, in the copy intended to be delivered to it, the first place. Wheat. Int. Law, § 157.

ALTERNATIVIM. L. Lat. Interchangeably. Litt. § 371; Townsh. Pl. 37.

ALTERNATIVE OBLIGATION. An obligation allowing the obligor to choose which of two things he will do, the performance of either of which will satisfy the instrument. Where the things which form the object of the contract are separated by a disjunctive, then the obligation is alternative. A promise to deliver a certain thing or to pay a specified sum of money is an example of this kind of obligation. Civil Code La. art. 2066.

ALTERNATIVE RELIEF. The term "alternative," as used in Equity Rule 25 (28 USCA § 723), allowing relief to be stated and sought in alternative forms, means mutually exclusive. Boyd v. New York & H. R. Co. (D. C.) 220 F. 174, 179.

ALTERNATIVE REMEDY. Where a new remedy is created in addition to an existing one, they are called "alternative" if only one can be enforced; but if both, "cumulative."

ALTERNATIVE WRIT. A writ commanding the person against whom it is issued to do a specified thing, or show cause to the court why he should not be compelled to do it. Allee v. McCoy, 2 Marv. (Del.) 465, 38 Atl. 359. Under the common-law practice, the first mandamus is an alternative writ; 3 Bla. Com. 111; but in modern practice this writ is often dispensed with and its place is taken by a rule to show cause. See Mandamus.

ALTERNIS VICIBUS. L. Lat. By alternate turns; at alternate times; alternately. Co. Litt. 4a; Shep. Touch. 206.

ALTERUM NON LÆDERE. Not to injure another. This maxim, and two others, honeste vivere, and suum cuique tribuere, (q. v.) are considered by Justinian as fundamental principles upon which all the rules of law are based. Inst. 1, 1, 3.

ALTIUS NON TOLLENDI. In the civil law. A servitude due by the owner of a house, by which he is restrained from building beyond a certain height. Dig. 8, 2, 4; Sandars, Just. Inst. 119.

ALTIUS TOLLENDI. In the civil law. A servitude which consists in the right, to him who is entitled to it, to build his house as high as he may think proper. In general, however, every one enjoys this privilege, unless he is restrained by some contrary title. Sandars, Just. Inst. 119.

ALUMNUS. A child which one has nursed; a foster-child. Dig. 40, 2, 14.

Also a graduate from a school, college, or other institution of learning.

ALVEUS. The bed or channel through which the stream flows when it runs within its ordinary channel. Calvinus, Lex.

AMALGAMATION. Union of different races, or diverse elements, societies, or corporations, so as to form a homogeneous whole or new body; interfusion; intermarriage; consolidation; coalescence; as, the amalgamation of stock. Stand. Dict.

In England it is applied to the merger or consolidation of two incorporated companies or societies.

The word has no definite meaning; it involves the blending of two concerns into one; [1904] 2 Ch. 268.

In the case of the Empire Assurance Corporation, (1837.) L. R. 4 Eq. 347, the vice-chancellor said: "It is difficult to say what the word 'amalgamate' means. I confess at this moment I have not the least conception of what the full legal effect of the word is. We do not find it in any law dictionary, or expounded by any competent authority. But I am quite sure of this: that the word 'amalgamate' cannot mean that the execution of a deed shall make a man a partner in a firm in which he was not a partner before, under conditions of which he is in no way cognizant, and which are not the same as those contained in the former deed." But in Adams v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 7 Miss. 194, 24 South. 200, 211, 60 L. R. A. 33, it is said that the term "amalgamation" of corporations is used in the English cases in the sense of what is usually known in the United States as "merger," meaning the absorption of one corporation by another, so that the absorbing corporation continues in existence, and differs from "consolidation," the meaning of which is limited to such a union of two or more corporations as necessarily results in the creation of a third new corporation.

AMALPHITAN CODE OR TABLE. A collection of sea-laws, compiled about the end of the eleventh century, by the people of Amalphi. It consists of the laws on maritime subjects, which were or had been in force in countries bordering on the Mediterranean; and was for a long time received as authority in those countries. Azuni; Wharton. It became a part of the law of the sea; The Scotia, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 170, 20 L. Ed. 822. See Code.

AMBASCIATOR. A person sent about in the service of another; a person sent on a service. A word of frequent occurrence in the writers of the middle ages. Spelman.

AMBASSADOR. In international law. A public officer, clothed with high diplomatic powers, commissioned by a sovereign prince or state to transact the international business of his government at the court of the country to which he is sent.

Ambassador is the commissioner who represents one country in the seat of government of another. He is a public minister, which, usually, a consul is not. Brown.

Ambassador is a person sent by one sovereign to another, with authority, by letters of credence, to treat on affairs of state. Jacob.

A distinction was formerly made between Ambassadors Extraordinary, who were sent to conduct special business or to remain for an indeterminate period, and Ambassadors Ordinary, who were sent on permanent missions; but this distinction is no longer observed.

Ambassadors are regarded as the personal representatives of the head of the state which sends them, and in consequence they are entitled to special honors, and have special privileges. The duties of an ambassador are varied; he is the mouthpiece of communications from his state to the foreign country; he must keep his government informed upon all questions of interest to it; he must see to the protection of citizens of his country resident in the foreign state. A foreign ambassador may authorize suit in our courts in the name of his government. Russian Government v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. (D. C.) 293 F. 133. See Letter of Credence; Minister.

AMBER, or AMBRA. In old English law. A measure of four bushels.

AMBIDEXTER. Skillful with both hands; one who plays on both sides. Applied anciently to an attorney who took pay from both sides, and subsequently to a juror guilty of the same offense. Cowell.

Ambiguitas contra stipulatorem est. Doubtful words will be construed most strongly against the party using them.

Ambiguitas verborum latens verificatione suppletur; nam quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione facti tollitur. A latent ambiguity in the language may be removed by evidence; for whatever ambiguity arises from an extrinsic fact may be explained by extrinsic evidence. Bac. Max. Reg. 23. Said to be "an unprofitable subtlety; inadequate and unconstructive." Prof. J. B. Thayer in 6 Harv. L. 417.

Ambiguitas verborum patens nullā verificatione excluditur. A patent ambiguity cannot be cleared up by extrinsic evidence (or is never holpen by averment). Lofft, 249; Bacon, Max. 25.

AMBIGUITY. Doubtfulness; doubleness of meaning; indistinctness or certainty of meaning of an expression used in a written instrument. First Nat. Bank v. Hancock Warehouse Co., 142 Ga. 99, 82 S. E. 481, 483; McCreary v. Acton, 29 Ga. App. 162, 114 S. E. 230, 231; San Antonio Life Ins. Co. v. Griffith (Tex. Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 335, 337; Nindle v. State Bank, 13 Neb. 245, 13 N. W. 275; Ellmaker v. Ellmaker, 4 Watts (Pa.) 89; Kraner v. Halsey, 82 Cal. 209, 22 Pac. 1137; Ward v. Epsy, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 447.

An ambiguity may be either latent or patent. It is the former, where the language employed is clear and intelligible and suggests but a single meaning, but some extrinsic fact or extraneous evidence creates a necessity for interpretation or a choice among two or more possible meanings. But a patent ambiguity is that which appears on the face of the instrument, and arises from the defective, obscure, or insensible language used. Carter v. Holman, 60 Mo. 504; Brown v. Guice, 46 Miss. 302; Stokeley v. Gordon, 8 Md. 503; Chambers v. Ringstaff, 69 Ala. 140; Hawkins v. Garland, 76 Va. 152, 44 Am. Rep. 158; Hand v. Hoffman, 8 N. J. Law, 71; Ives v. Kimball, 1 Mich. 313; Palmer v. Albee, 50 Iowa, 431; Petrie v. Hamilton College, 158 N. Y. 458, 53 N. E. 216; Zilwaukee Tp. v. Saginaw Bay City Ry. Co., 213 Mich. 61, 181 N. Wirtz, 30 N. D. 292, 152 N. E. 803, 807; Perkins v. O'Donald, 77 Fla. 710, 727, 82 So. 401, 404; In re Mizener's Estate, 262 Pa. 62, 105 A. 46, 48; Mirando v. Mirando, 104 Conn. 318, 132 A.

910, 912; Carroll v. Cave Hill Cemetery Co., 172 Ky. 204, 189 S. W. 186, 190.

Synonyms

Ambiguity of language is to be distinguished from unintelligibility and inaccuracy, for words cannot be said to be ambiguous unless their signification seems doubtful and uncertain to persons of competent skill and knowledge to understand them. Story, Contr. 272.

The term "ambiguity" does not include mere inaccuracy, or such uncertainty as arises from the use of peculiar words, or of common words in a peculiar sense. Wig. Wills, 174; In re Milliette's Estate, 206 N. Y. S. 342, 349, 123 Misc. Rep. 745.

A will is ambiguous only when, after full consideration, it is determined judicially that no interpretation can be given to it. In re Altman's Estate, 188 N. Y. S. 493, 115 Misc. Rep. 476; In re Gorsch's Estate, 169 N. Y. S. 1064, 103 Misc. Rep. 156.

AMBIGUITY UPON THE FACTUM. An ambiguity in relation to the very foundation of the instrument itself, as distinguished from an ambiguity in regard to the construction of its terms. The term is applied, for instance, to a doubt as to whether a testator meant a particular clause to be a part of the will, or whether it was introduced with his knowledge, or whether a codicil was meant to republish a former will, or whether the residuary clause was accidentally omitted. Eatherly v. Eatherly, 1 Cold. (Tenn.) 461, 465, 78 Am. Dec. 499.

and tries to induce the injured person to sue for damages, but not including employees and representatives of one charged with tort sent to the injured person to make an amicable adjustment if possible. Kelley v. Boyne, 239 Mich. 204, 214 N. W. 316, 318, 53 A. L. R. 273. A popular name for one who solicits negligence cases for an attorney. In re Newell, 160 N. Y. S. 275, 278, 174 App. Div. 94. See, also, Ambulance Chasing.

AMBULANCE CHASING. A term descriptive of the practice of some attorneys, on hearing of a personal injury which may have been caused by the negligence or wrongful act of another, of at once seeking out the injured person with a view to securing authority to bring action on account of the injury. The practice has been described as in violation of the ethics of the legal profession, branding those who indulge in it with professional infamy. Chunes v. Duluth, W. & P. Ry. Co. (D. C.) 298 F. 964. See Weinard v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. (D. C.) 298 F. 977.

Ambulatoria est voluntas defuncti usque ad vitam supremum exitum. The will of a deceased person is ambulatory until the latest moment of life. Dig. 34, 4, 4.

AMBULATORY. (Lat. ambulare, to walk about). Movable; revocable; subject to change.

Ambulatoria voluntas (a changeable will) denotes the power which a testator possesses of altering his will during his life-time. Hattersley v. Bissett, 50 N. J. Eq. 577, 25 Atl. 332.

The court of king's bench in England was formerly called an "ambulatory court," because it followed the king's person, and was held sometimes in one place and sometimes in another. So, in France, the supreme court or parliament was originally ambulatory. 3 Bl. Comm. 38, 39, 41.

The return of a sheriff has been said to be ambulatory until it is filed. Wilmot, J., 3 Burr. 1644.

AMBUSH. The noun "ambush" means (1) the act of attacking an enemy unexpectedly from a concealed station; (2) a concealed station, where troops or enemies lie in wait to attack by surprise, an ambuscade; (3) troops posted in a concealed place for attacking by surprise. The verb "ambush" means to lie in wait, to surprise, to place in ambush. Dale County v. Gunter, 46 Ala. 118, 142, referred to in DarNeal v. State, 14 Okl. Cr. 540, 174 P. 290, 292, 1 A. L. AMENDE HONORABLE.

In Old English Law

A penalty imposed upon a person by way of disgrace or infamy, as a punishment for any offense, or for the purpose of making reparation for any injury done to another, as the walking into church in a white sheet, with a rope about the neck and a torch in the hand, and begging the pardon of God, or the king, or any private individual, for some delinquency.

In French Law

A punishment somewhat similar to this, which bore the same name, was common in France for offenses against public decency or morality. It was abolished by the law of the 25th of September, 1791; Merlin, Répert. In 1826 it was re-introduced in cases of sacrilege and was finally abolished in 1830.

In modern usage, an apology.

AMENDMENT.

In Practice

The correction of an error committed in any process, pleading, or proceeding at law, or in equity, and which is done either of course, or by the consent of parties, or upon motion to the court in which the proceeding is pending. 3 Bl. Comm. 407, 448; 1 Tidd, Pr. 696. Hardin v. Boyd, 113 U. S. 756, 5 Sup. Ct. 771, 28 L. Ed. 1141. An amendment to a pleading, as distinguished from a "supplemental pleading" (q. v.), has reference to facts existing at the time of the commencement of the action. Fisher v. Bullock, 198 N. Y. S. 538, 540, 204 App. Div. 523.

The office of a "trial amendment" is to supply allegations in a pleading after exception thereto has been sustained. Cotton v. Thompson (Tex. Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 455, 459.

Any writing made or proposed as an improvement of some principal writing. Ex parte Woo Jan (D. C.) 228 F. 927, 941; Couch v. Southern Methodist University (Tex. Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 256, 260; U. S. v. Munday (D. C.) 211 F. 536, 538.

A broad definition of the word "amendment" would include any alteration or change. State v. Le Blond, 108 Ohio St. 41, 140 N. E. 491, 494. It may be used interchangeably with "revise." Pierce v. Solano County, 62 Cal. App. 465, 217 P. 545, 546.

In Legislation

A modification or alteration proposed to be made in a bill on its passage, or an enacted law; also such modification or change when made. Brake v. Callison (C. C.) 122 Fed. 722;

State v. MacQueen, 82 W. Va. 44, 95 S. E. 666, 668; State v. Cooney, 70 Mont. 355, 225 P. 1007, 1009; Aldridge v. Commonwealth, 192 Ky. 215, 232 S. W. 619. An "amendment" merely continues the law or ordinance in its changed form; City of Chicago v. American Tile & Gravel Roofing Co., 282 Ill. 537, 118 N. E. 730, 731. An amendment, as of a bill, is to be distinguished from a "substitute." In re Ross, 86 N. J. Law, 387, 94 A. 304, 306.

"Amendment" includes additions to, as well as corrections of, matters already treated, and there is nothing in the context of Const. art. 5, providing that Congress shall propose amendments, which suggests that it was used in a restricted sense. Christian Feigenspan, Inc., v. Bodine (D. C.) 264 F. 186, 190. See, also, State v. Fulton, 99 Ohio St. 168, 124 N. E. 172, 175.

AMENDS. A satisfaction given by a wrongdoer to the party injured, for a wrong committed. 1 Lil. Reg. 81.

AMENITY. In real property law. Such circumstances, in regard to situation, outlook, access to a water course, or the like, as enhance the pleasantness or desirability of an estate for purposes of residence, or contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of the occupants, rather than to their indispensable needs. In England, upon the building of a railway or the construction of other public works, "amenity damages" may be given for the defacement of pleasure grounds, the impairment of riparian rights, or other destruction of or injury to the amenities of the estate.

In the law of easements, an "amenity" consists in restraining the owner from doing that with and on his property which, but for the grant or covenant, he might lawfully have done; sometimes called a "negative easement" as distinguished from that class of easements which compel the owner to suffer something to be done on his property by another. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brennan (Sup.) 24 N. Y. Supp. 784, 788.

AMENTIA. In medical jurisprudence. Insanity; idiocy. See Insanity.

AMERALIUS. L. Lat. A naval commander, under the eastern Roman empire, but not of the highest rank; the origin, according to Spelman, of the modern title and office of admiral. Spelman.

AMERCE. To impose an amercement or fine; to punish by a fine or penalty.

AMERCEMENT. A pecuniary penalty, in the nature of a fine, imposed upon a person for some fault or misconduct, he being "in mercy" for his offense. It was assessed by the peers of the delinquent, or the afterors, or imposed arbitrarily at the discretion of the court or the lord. Goodyear v. Sawyer (C. C.) 17 Fed. 9.

The difference between amercements and fines is as follows: The latter are certain, and are created by some statute; they can only be imposed and assessed by courts of record; the former are arbitrarily imposed by courts not of record, as courts-leet. Termes de la Ley, 40.

The word "amercement" has long been especially used of a mulct or penalty, imposed by a court upon its own officers for neglect of duty, or failure to pay over moneys collected. In particular, the remedy against a sheriff for failing to levy an execution or make return of proceeds of sale is, in several of the states, known as "amercement." In others, the same result is reached by process of attachment. Abbott Stansbury v. Mfg. Co., 5 N. J. Law, 441.

AMERCEMENT ROYAL. In Great Britain a penalty imposed on an officer for a misdemeanor in his office.

AMERICAN. Pertaining to the western hemisphere or in a more restricted sense to the United States. See Beardsley v. Selectmen of Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 493, 3 A. 557, 55 Am. Rep. 152. It was assumed in Life Photo Film Corp. v. Bell, 154 N. Y. S. 763, 764, 90 Misc. Rep. 469, that the term "American" included all classes of citizens, native and naturalized, irrespective of where they originally came from.

AMERICAN CLAUSE. In marine insurance. A proviso in a policy to the effect that, in case of any subsequent insurance, the insurer shall nevertheless be answerable for the full extent of the sum subscribed by him, without right to claim contribution from subsequent underwriters. American Ins. Co. v. Griswold, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 399.

AMICABLE. Friendly; mutually forbearing; agreed or assented to by parties having conflicting interests or a dispute; as opposed to hostile or adversary.

AMICABLE ACTION. In practice. An action between friendly parties. An action brought and carried on by the mutual consent and arrangement of the parties, in order to obtain the judgment of the court on a doubtful question of law, the facts being usually settled by agreement. Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251, 12 L. Ed. 1067. It differs entirely from a "Moot" Case (q. v.). The words "arbitration" and "amicable lawsuit," used in an obligation or agreement between parties, are not convertible terms. The former carries with it the idea of settlement by disinterested third parties, and the latter by a friendly submission of the points in dispute to a judicial tribunal to be determined in accordance with the forms of law. Thompson v. Moulton, 20 La. Ann. 535. See Case Stated.

AMICABLE COMPOUNDERS. In Louisiana law and practice. "There are two sorts of arbitrators,—the arbitrators properly so called, and the amicable compounders. The arbitrators ought to determine as judges, agreeably to the strictness of law. Amicable compounders are authorized to abate something of the strictness of the law in favor of natural equity. Amicable compounders are in other respects subject to the same rules which are provided for the arbitrators by the present title." Civ. Code La. arts. 3109, 3110.

AMICUS CURIAE. Lat. A friend of the court. A by-stander (usually a counsellor) who interposes and volunteers information upon some matter of law in regard to which the judge is doubtful or mistaken, or upon a matter of which the court may take judicial cognizance. Counsel in court frequently act in this capacity when they happen to be in possession of a case which the judge has not seen, or does not at the moment remember. The Claveresk (C. C. A.) 264 F. 276, 279; In re Perry, 83 Ind. App. 456, 148 N. E. 163, 165; Stâte v. City of Albuquerque, 31 N. M. 576, 249 P. 242, 248; Taft v. Northern Transp. Co., 56 N. H. 416; Birmingham Loan, etc., Co. v. Bank, 100 Ala. 249, 13 South. 945, 46 Am. St. Rep. 45; In re Columbia Real Estate Co. (D. C.) 101 Fed. 970.

It is also applied to persons who have no right to appear in a suit, but are allowed to introduce evidence to protect their own interests. Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 699, 701, 702.

Leave to file briefs as amicus curia will be denied when it does not appear that the applicant is interested in any other case that will be affected by the decision and the parties are represented by competent counsel, whose consent has not been secured; Northern Securities Co. v. U. S., 191 U. S. 555, 24 Sup. Ct. 119, 48 L. Ed. 299; where many cases are cited in the argument.

AMIRAL. Fr. In French maritime law. Admiral. Ord. de la Mar. liv. 1, tit. 1, § 1.

AMITINUS. The child of a brother or sister; a cousin; one who has the same grandfather, but different father and mother. Calvinus, Lex.

AMITTERE. Lat. In the civil, and old English law. To lose. Hence the old Scotch "amitt."

AMITTERE CURIAM. To lose the court; to be deprived of the privilege of attending the court.

AMITTERE LEGEM TERRÆ. To lose the protection afforded by the law of the land.

AMITTERE LIBERAM LEGEM. To lose one's frank-law. A term having the same meaning as amittere legem terræ, (q. v.) He who lost his law lost the protection extended by the law to a freeman, and became subject to the same law as thralls or serfs attached to the land.

To lose the privilege of giving evidence under oath in any court; to become infamous, and incapable of giving evidence. Glanville 2. If either party in a wager of battle cried "craven" he was condemned amittere liberam legem; 3 Bla. Com. 340.

AMNESTY. A sovereign act of oblivion for past acts, granted by a government to all persons (or to certain persons) who have been guilty of crime or delict, generally political offenses,—treason, sedition, rebellion,—and often conditioned upon their return to obedience and duty within a prescribed time.

A declaration of the person or persons who have newly acquired or recovered the sovereign power in a state, by which they pardon all persons who composed, supported, or obeyed the government which has been overthrown.

Express amnesty is one granted in direct terms.

Implied amnesty is one which results when a treaty of peace is made between contending parties. Vattel, 1, 4, c. 2, § 20.

The word "amnesty" properly belongs to international law, and is applied to treaties of peace following a state of war, and signifies there the burial in oblivion of the particular cause of strife, so that that shall not be again a cause for war between the parties; and this signification of "amnesty" is fully and poetically expressed in the Indian custom of burying the hatchet. And so amnesty is applied to rebellions which by their magnitude are brought within the rules of international law, and in which multitudes of men are the subjects of the clemency of the government. But in these cases, and in all cases, it means only "oblivion," and never expresses or implies a grant. Knote v. United States, 10 Ct. Cl. 407.

The distinction between amnesty and pardon is one rather of philological interest than of legal importance. But there are incidental differences of importance. Amnesty is the abolition and forgetfulness of the offense; pardon is forgiveness. Knote v. U. S., 95 U. S. 149, 152, 24 L. Ed. 442; State v. Blalock, 61 N. C. 242, 247. The one overlooks offense; the other remits punishment. The first is usually addressed to crimes against the sovereignty of the state, to political offenses; the second condones infractions of the peace of the state. Amnesty is usually general, addressed to classes or even communities,—a legislative act, or under legislation, constitutional or statutory,—the act of the supreme magistrate. Burdick v. United States, 35 S. Ct. 267, 271, 236 U. S. 79, 59 L. Ed. 476.

AMONG. Mingled with or in the same group or class. Dwight Mfg. Co. v. Word, 200 Ala. 221, 75 So. 979, 983; Gënung v. Best, 100 N. J. Eq. 250, 135 A. 514, 516. Intermingled with. "A thing which is among others is intermingled with them. Commerce among the states cannot stop at the external boundary line of each state, but may be introduced into the interior." Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 194, 6 L. Ed. 23; Ft. Smith & W. R. Co. v. Blevins, 130 P. 525, 529, 35 Okl. 378.

Where property is directed by will to be distributed among several persons, it cannot be all given to one, nor can any of the persons be wholly excluded from the distribution. Hudson v. Hudson, 6 Munf. (Va.) 352.

"Among" is sometimes held to be equivalent to "between"; Hick's Estate, 134 Pa. 507, 19 Atl. 705; Records v. Fields, 155 Mo. 314, 55 S. W. 1021; Senger v. Senger's Ex'r, 81 Va. 687; In re Mays' Estate, 197 Mo. App. 555, 196 S. W. 1039, 1041.

AMORTISSEMENT. (Fr.) The redemption of a debt by a sinking fund.

AMORTIZATION. An alienation of lands or tenements in mortmain. The reduction of the property of lands or tenements to mortmain.

In its modern sense, amortization is the operation of paying off bonds, stock, a mortgage, or other indebtedness, commonly of a state or corporation, by installments, or by a sinking fund. An "amortization plan" for the payment of an indebtedness is one where there are partial payments of the principal, and accrued interest, at stated periods for a definite time, at the expiration of which the entire indebtedness will be extinguished. Bystra v. Federal Land Bank of Columbia, 82 Fla. 472, 90 So. 478, 480.

In Corporation Law

The act of removing an officer, or official representative, of a corporation from his office or official station, before the end of the term for which he was elected or appointed, but without depriving him of membership in the body corporate. In this last respect the term differs from "disfranchisement," (or expulsion) which imports the removal of a member from the corporation itself, and his deprivation of all rights of membership. White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 356; Richards v. Clarksburg, 30 W. Va. 491, 4 S. E. 774. Expulsion (q. v.) is the usual phrase in reference to loss of membership of private corporations.

W. 888.

AMOUNT IN DISPUTE. This phrase, as used in Const. La. 1921, art. 7, § 10, concerning jurisdiction of Supreme Court, includes the value of the thing in contest, where a thing instead of an amount is in dispute. A. Baldwin & Co. v. McCain, 159 La. 966, 106 So. 459, 460.

AMOUNT OF LOSS. In insurance. The diminution, destruction, or defeat of the value of, or of the charge upon, the insured subject to the assured, by the direct consequence of the

In this case, the judges pronounced the word amplius, or by writing the letters N. L. for non liquet (q. v.), signifying that the cause was not clear. It is very similar to the common-law practice of entering cur. adv. vult in similar cases.

As used in patent law, if the elements and purposes in one art are related and similar to those in another art to such extent as to make an appeal to the mind of a person having mechanical skill or knowledge in the second art, the two arts are said to be "analogous." A. J. Deer Co. v. U. S. Slicing Mach. Co. (C. C. A.) 21 F.(2d) 812, 813.

Egan*, 143 Mass. 389, 9 N. E. 747; Murphy v. Henry, 35 Ind. 450.

The term differs from "predecessor," in that it is applied to a natural person and his progenitors, while the latter is applied also to a corporation and those who have held offices before those who now fill them. Co. Litt. 78b. "Ancestor" may embrace both lineals and collaterals, Cornell v. Child, 170 App. Div. 240, 156 N. Y. S. 449, 452, or both testator and testatrix, Pfaffenberger v. Pfaffenberger, 189 Ind. 507, 127 N. E. 766, 767; it may also be limited to mean immediate ancestor, In re Simpson's Estate (Sur.) 144 N. Y. S. 1099, 1101.

Ancestral property is realty which comes to one by descent or devise from a now dead ancestor, or by a deed of actual gift from a living one; there being no other consideration than that of blood;—distinguished from "nonancestral property," which is realty which comes to one in any other way. Gray v. Chapman, 122 Okl. 130, 243 P. 522, 526.

Under Gen. St. Conn. 1902, § 398 (Gen. St. 1930, § 4982), an "ancestral estate" is real estate of the intestate, which comes to the distributee by descent, gift, or devise from any kinsman. Ward v. Ives, 91 Conn. 12, 98 A. 337, 339. And see Carter v. Carter, 129 Ark. 7, 195 S. W. 10, 11.

There are three sorts: (1) Where the lands are held freely by the king's grant; (2) customary freeholds, which are held of a manor in ancient demesne, but not at the lord's will, although they are conveyed by surrender, or deed and admittance; (3) lands held by copy of court-roll at the lord's will, denominated copyholds of base tenure.

Bonds more than 50 years old are admissible as ancient documents, where they are on their face free from suspicion as to their authenticity, come from the proper source, and are accompanied by some corroborating evidence. Smythe v. Inhabitants of New Providence Tp., Union County, N. J. (C. C. A.) 263 F. 481. The Inns of Chancery consist of ancients and students or clerks; from the ancients a principal or treasurer is chosen yearly. Whar-ton.

state other than that of his domicile,) administration may be granted in such foreign state for the purpose of collecting the assets and paying the debts there, and bringing the residue into the general administration. A. 218; Steele v. Insurance Co., 31 App. Div. 389, 52 N. Y. S. 373.

ANCIPITIS USUS. Lat. In international law. Of doubtful use; the use of which is doubtful; that may be used for a civil or peaceful, as well as military or warlike, purpose. Gro. de Jure B. lib. 3, c. 1, § 5, subd. 3; 1 Kent, Comm. 140.

AND. A conjunction connecting words or phrases expressing the idea that the latter is to be added to or taken along with the first. Grand Trunk Western Ry. Co. v. Thrift Co., 68 Ind. App. 198, 116 N. E. 756, 759; Caldwell & Co. v. Lea, 152 Tenn. 48, 272 S. W. 715; McCaufl-Webster Elevator Co. v. Adams, 39 N. D. 259, 167 N. W. 330, 332, L. R. A. 1918D, 1036; Burke v. Southern Pac. R. Co. of California (D. C.) 222 F. 97, 101.

It is said to be equivalent to "as well as," Porter v. Moores, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 16; "including," Finch v. Hunter, 148 Ark. 482, 230 S. W. 553, 554; "and also," Carter v. Keesling, 130 Va. 655, 108 S. E. 708, 713.

It is sometimes construed as meaning "or," Bay State Iron Co. v. Goodall, 39 N. H. 223, 75 Am. Dec. 219; Land & Lake Ass'n v. Conk- lin, 170 N. Y. S. 427, 428, 182 App. Div. 546; State v. Harwi, 117 Kan. 74, 230 P. 331, 332; People v. Emmerson, 302 Ill. 300, 134 N. E. 707, 710, 21 A. L. R. 636; Baker v. State, 36 Okl. That the power to change the words is not arbitrary, but only to effectuate the intention, see Armstrong v. Moran, 1 Bradf. Sur. (N. Y.) 314; Rice v. Bennington County Sav. Bank, 93 Vt. 493, 108 A. 708, 712; Oklahoma Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Norton, 44 Okl. 783, 145 P. 1138, 1139; Voight v. Industrial Commission, 297 Ill. 109, 130 N. E. 470, 472; In re Evans' Will, 234 N. Y. 42, 136 N. E. 233, 234.

The character "&c." has been recognized as "sanctioned by age and good use for perhaps centuries, and is used even at this day in written instruments, in daily transactions, and with such frequency that it may be said to be a part of our language"; Brown v. State, 16 Tex. App. 245. So the abbreviation "&c." is said to have "been naturalized in English for ages," and was constantly used by Lord Coke without a suggestion from any quarter that it is not English; Berry v. Osborn, 28 N. H. 279.

The use of the expression "and/or" in a contract is permissible and is equivalent to a direction that it be construed so as to best accord with the equity of the situation, using either conjunction, but such usage cannot apply to statutes, since the Legislature, in making its laws, must express its own will. State v. Dudley, 159 La. 872, 106 So. 364, 365.

ANGARY, RIGHT OF. In international law. Formerly the right (jus angariæ) claimed by a belligerent to seize merchant vessels in the harbors of the belligerent and to compel them, on payment of freight, to transport troops and supplies to a designated port. It was frequently exercised by Louis XIV. of France, but as a result of specific treaties entered into by states not to exercise the right, it has now come to be abandoned. 2 Opp. 446.

At the present day, the right of a belligerent to appropriate, either for use, or for destruction in case of necessity, neutral property temporarily located in his own territory or in that of the other belligerent. The property may be of any description whatever, provided the appropriation of it be for military or naval purposes.

Requisition of neutral property is justified by military necessity, and accordingly the right of angary is a belligerent right, although the claim of the neutral owner to indemnity properly comes under the law of neutrality.

ANGEL. An ancient English coin, of the value of ten shillings sterling. Jacob.

"Passion," within rule that killing to constitute first degree murder must not have been committed under passion, means the same thing as anger. Winton v. State, 151 Tenn. 177, 268 S. W. 633, 637. The terms are also interchangeable within the meaning of a statute prohibiting display of deadly weapon in rude, angry, and threatening manner. People v. Sica, 76 Cal. App. 648, 245 P. 461, 463.

A more or less degenerate goat, known as the "Cape Angora," produced by breeding the original Angora with the Cape Colony goat, whose hair is shown to be dealt in, used, and known as mohair, is an "Angora goat" within the meaning of that expression in Schedule K, par. 305, Tariff Act of 1913 (Comp. St. § 5291). U. S. v. Beadenkopf Co., 8 Ct. Cust. App. 283, 284.

Some animals which are now usually tamed come within this class, as dogs and cats; and others which, though wild by nature and often reclaimed by art and industry, clearly fall within the same rule, as bears, foxes, apes, monkeys, ferrets, and the like; 1 Hawk. Pl. Cr. 33, § 36; 4 Bla. Com. 236; 2 East, Pl. Cr. 614. See 1 Wms. Saund. 84, note 2.

In the law relating to fixtures: Actual annexation includes every movement by which a chattel can be joined or united to the freehold. Constructive annexation is the union of such things as have been holden parcel of the realty, but which are not actually annexed, fixed, or fastened to the freehold. *Shep. ANNO DOMINI. In the year of the Lord. Commonly abbreviated A. D. The computation of time, according to the Christian era, dates from the birth of Christ.

This phrase has become Anglicized by adoption, so that an indictment or declaration containing the words "Anno Domini" is not demurrable as not being in the English language. State v. Gilbert, 13 Vt. 647; Hale v. Vesper, Smith (N. H.) 283.

Under Workmen's Compensation Act, providing for a death benefit amounting to three times the "annual amount" devoted to support of partial dependents, the term "annual amount" means the annual amount of contribution at the rate at which deceased was contributing at the time of his injury, regardless of whether that rate had existed for a year or more or for less than a year. Spreckles Sugar Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, 186 Cal. 256, 199 P. 8.

ANNUAL ASSAY. An annual trial of the gold and silver coins of the United States, to ascertain whether the standard fineness and weight of the coinage is maintained. See Rev. St. U. S. § 3547 (31 USCA § 363).

ANNUAL VALUE. The net yearly income derivable from a given piece of property; its fair rental value for one year, deducting costs and expenses; the value of its use for a year.

ANNUALLY. Yearly; returning every year.

The meaning of this term, as applied to interest, is not an undertaking to pay interest at the end of one year only, but to pay interest at the end of each and every year during a period of time, either fixed or contingent. Sparhawk v. Wills, 6 Gray (Mass.) 164; Patterson v. McNeeley, 16 Ohio St. 348; Westfield v. Westfield, 19 S. C. 89; First Nat. Bank v. Kirby (Mo. Sup.) 175 S. W. 926, 929.

The words "per annum" or "a year" as applied to interest, or to a charge on an estate as compensation for care of the widow, are not synonymous with "annually," but are used as a means of fixing rate. Hinson v. Hinson, 176 N. C. 613, 97 S. E. 465.

ANNUITANT. The recipient of an annuity; one who is entitled to an annuity.

ANNUITIES OF TIENDS. In Scotch law. Annuities of tithes; 10s. out of the boll of tiend wheat, 8s. out of the boll of beer, less out of the boll of rye, oats, and peas, allowed to the crown yearly of the tiends not paid to the bishops, or set apart for other pious uses.

ANNUITY. A yearly sum stipulated to be paid to another in fee, or for life, or years, and chargeable only on the person of the grantor. Co. Litt. 144b. But the term is often used in a broader sense as designating a fixed sum, granted or bequeathed, payable periodically but not necessarily annually. Wilkin v. Board of Com'rs of Oklahoma County, 77 Okl. 88, 186 P. 474, 475; In re Kohler's Will, 183 N. Y. S. 550, 559, 193 App. Div. 8. A legacy payable in stated amounts by installments. In re Beach's Estate, 203 N. Y. S. 492, 494, 122 Misc. Rep. 261. To constitute an "annuity," the bequest must be of a sum certain, which does not even include the gift of the interest of a fixed and certain sum of money. Moore v. Downey, 83 N. J. Eq. 428, 91 A. 116, 117.

An annuity, which is a yearly payment of a certain sum of money, is distinguished from an "income," in that the latter is interest or profits to be earned. Grand Rapids Trust Co. v. Herbst, 220 Mich. 321, 190 N. W. 250, 252; In re Gurnee, 147 N. Y. S. 396, 397, 84 Misc. Rep. 324. It is distinguishable also by the fact that an annuity, unlike a gift of income, may be paid out of the principal, where necessary. Guthrie v. Guthrie's Ex'r, 168 Ky. 805, 183 S. W. 221, 226.

An annuity is different from a rent-charge, with which it is sometimes confounded, the annuity being chargeable on the person merely, and so far personalty; while a rent-charge is something reserved out of realty, or fixed as a burden upon an estate in land. 2 Bl. Comm. 40; Rolle, Abr. 226; Horton v. Cook, 10 Watts (Pa.) 127, 36 Am. Dec. 151; Bartos v. Skleba, 107 Neb. 293, 185 N. W. 1002, 1003; In re Kohler, 160 N. Y. S. 669, 674, 96 Misc. Rep. 433.

The contract of annuity is that by which one party delivers to another a sum of money, and agrees not to reclaim it so long as the receiver pays the rent agreed upon. This annuity may be either perpetual or for life. Civ. Code La. arts. 2793, 2794. See Succession of Vidalat, 155 La. 1005, 99 So. 801, 802.

The name of an action, now disused, (L. Lat. breve de annuo reddito), which lay for the recovery of an annuity. Reg. Orig. 158b; Bract. fol. 203b; 1 Tidd, Pr. 3.

ANNUITY-TAX. An impost levied annually in Scotland for the maintenance of the ministers of religion.

ANNUL. To cancel; make void; destroy. To abrogate, nullify, or abolish. To annul a judgment or judicial proceeding is to deprive it of all force and operation, either ab initio or prospectively as to future transactions. Wait v. Wait, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 205; In re Morrow's Estate, 54 Atl. 342, 204 Pa. 484.

It is not a technical word and there is nothing which prevents the idea from being expressed in equivalent words; Woodson v. Skinner, 22 Mo. 24.

A suit to "rescind" a contract cannot be differentiated from a suit to "annul" the contract; the two words being used interchangeably. Vaughn v. Fey, 47 Cal. App. 485, 190 P. 1041, 1042.

ANNULMENT OF MARRIAGE. An action or proceeding for the annulment of a marriage is maintained on the theory that for some cause existing at the time of marriage no valid or legal marriage ever existed, even though the marriage be only voidable at the instance of the injured party. Millar v. Millar, 175 Cal. 797, 167 P. 394, 398, L. R. A. 1918B. 415, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 184; Sorenson v. Sorenson, 202 N. Y. S. 620, 625, 122 Misc. Rep. 196. It is therefore distinguishable from an action for divorce, which is based on the theory of a valid marriage, for some cause arising after the marriage. Sorenson v. Sorenson, supra. And see Kellogg v. Kellogg, 203 N. Y. S. 757, 765, 122 Misc. Rep. 734.

ANNUS UTILIS. A year made up of available or servicable days. Brissonius; Calvin. In the plural, anni utiles signifies the years during which a right can be exercised or a prescription grow. In prescription, the period of incapacity of a minor, etc., was not counted; it was no part of the anni utiles.

ANSWER.

In Pleading

Any pleading setting up matters of fact by way of defense. In chancery pleading, the term denotes a defense in writing, made by a defendant to the allegations contained in a bill or information filed by the plaintiff against him.

In pleading, under the Codes of Civil Procedure, the answer is the formal written statement made by a defendant setting forth the grounds of his defense; corresponding to what, in actions under the common-law practice is called the "plea." But as used in a statute providing that defendant must appear and answer the petition, "answer" refers to any sort of pleading filed by defendant. State ex rel. Oliver Hast Auction Co. v. Grimm, 197 Mo. App. 566, 196 S. W. 1019, 1021; Central Deep Creek Orchard Co. v. C. C. Taft Co., 34 Idaho, 458, 202 P. 1062, 1063; Arnold v. Pike (Tex. Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 207, 208. But extending the time to "answer" does not give the right to demur or otherwise plead. Ruland v. Tut-hill, 187 App. Div. 314, 175 N. Y. S. 467.

A demurrer may sometimes be regarded as an answer; Stockham v. Knollenberg, 133 Md. 337, 105 A. 305, 307; and sometimes not; Mariner v. Milisich, 45 Nev. 193, 200 P. 478.

In Massachusetts, the term denotes the statement of the matter intended to be relied upon by the defendant in avoidance of the plaintiff's action, taking the place of special pleas in bar, and the general issue, except in real and mixed actions. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1287.

In matrimonial suits in the (English) probate, divorce, and admiralty division, an answer is the pleading by which the respondent puts forward his defense to the petition. Browne, Div. 223.

Under the old admiralty practice in England, the defendant's first pleading was called his "answer." Williams & B. Adm. Jur. 246.

In Practice

A reply to interrogatories; an affidavit in answer to interrogatories. The declaration of a fact by a witness after a question has been put, asking for it.

As a verb, the word denotes an assumption of liability, as to "answer" for the debt or default of another.

Frivolous Answer

See Sham Answer, infra.

Irrelevant Answer

One that has no substantial relation to the controversy;—distinguishable from a sham answer. Rosatti v. Common School Dist. No. 96 of Cass County, 53 N. D. 268, 205 N. W. 678, 679.

Sham Answer

One sufficient on its face but so clearly false that it presents no real issue to be tried. Bank of Richards, Mo., v. Sheasgreen, 153 Minn. 363, 190 N. W. 484. One good in form, but false in fact and not pleaded in good faith. Burkhalter v. Townsend, 139 S. C. 324, 138 S. E. 34, 36. A frivolous answer, on the other hand, is one which on its face sets up no defense, although it may be true in fact. A frivolous answer is always assumed to be true, while a sham answer must be admittedly false or conclusively proved to be so; the character of the former is determined by mere inspection, while the character of the latter is usually determined by proof aliunde. Milberg v. Keuthe, 98 N. J. Law, 779, 121 A. 713, 714. An answer averring facts not legally responsive to the inquiry involved is in contemplation of law either sham or frivolous, and on motion may be struck out upon either ground. Boynton Lumber Co. v. Evans, 101 N. J. Law, 120, 128 A. 180.

Voluntary Answer

In the practice of the court of chancery, this was an answer put in by a defendant, when the plaintiff had filed no interrogatories which required to be answered. Hunt, Eq.

The term is particularly applied to one born in a country before a revolution, change of government or dynasty, or other political event, such that the question of his rights, status, or allegiance will depend upon the date of his birth with reference to such event. In England, the term commonly denotes one born before the act of union with Scotland; in America, one born before the declaration of independence. Its opposite is post natus, one born after the event.

ANTENUPTIAL SETTLEMENTS. Settlements of property upon the wife, or upon her and her children, made before and in contemplation of the marriage.

ANTHRACITE COAL. "Anthracite coal" differs from bituminous coal in the amount of fixed carbon, the amount of volatile matter, color, luster, and structural character. The percentage of fixed carbon in anthracite coal is much higher and the percentage of volatile matter is much lower than in bituminous coal. Anthracite coal is hard, compact and is comparatively clean and free from dust and is commonly termed "hard coal," and burns with practically no smoke. Commonwealth v. Hudson Coal Co., 287 Pa. 64, 134 A. 413, 414.

ANTHROPOMETRY. In criminal law and medical jurisprudence. The measurement of the human body; a system of measuring the dimensions of the human body, both absolutely and in their proportion to each other, the facial, cranial, and other angles, the shape and size of the skull, etc., for purposes of comparison with corresponding measurements of other individuals, and serving for the identification of the subject in cases of doubtful or disputed identity. It was largely adopted after its introduction in France in 1833, but fell into disfavor as being costly and as liable to error. It has given place to the "finger print" system devised by Francis Galton. See Bertillon System.

ANTI MANIFESTO. A term used in international law to denote a proclamation or manifesto published by one of two belligerent powers, alleging reasons why the war is defensive on its part.

ANTI-TRUST ACTS. Federal and state statutes to protect trade and commerce from unlawful restraints and monopolies. See U. S. v. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. 249, 39 L. Ed. 325; Restraint of Trade.

ANTICHRESIS. In the civil law. A species of mortgage, or pledge of immovables. An agreement by which the debtor gives to the creditor the income from the property which he has pledged, in lieu of the interest on his debt. Guyot, Répert.; Marquise De Portes v. Hurlbut, 44 N. J. Eq. 517, 14 Atl. 891. It is analogous to the Welsh mortgage of the common law. In the French law, if the income was more than the interest, the debtor was entitled to demand an account of the income, and might claim any excess.

A debtor may give as security for his debt any immovable which belongs to him, the creditor having the right to enjoy the use of it on account of the interest due, or of the capital if there is no interest due; this is called "antichresis." Civ. Code Mex. art. 1927.

By the law of Louisiana, there are two kinds of pledges,—the pawn and the antichresis. A pawn relates to movables, and the antichresis to immovables. The antichresis must be reduced to writing; and the creditor thereby acquires the right to the fruits, etc., of the immovables, deducting yearly their proceeds from the interest, in the first place, and afterwards from the principal of his debt. He is bound to pay taxes on the property, and keep it in repair, unless the contrary is agreed. The creditor does not become the proprietor of the property by failure to pay at the agreed time, and any clause to that effect is void. He can only sue the debtor, and obtain sentence for sale of the property. The possession of the property is, however, by the contract, transferred to the creditor. Livingston v. Story, 11 Pet. 351, 9 L. Ed. 746. The "antichresis" is an antiquated contract, requiring the creditor to take possession of and administer the property, to pay the taxes, and to keep up the improvements, and has been resorted to in this state in but a few instances. Harang v. Ragan, 134 La. 201, 63 So. 875, 877.

ANTICIPATION. The act of doing or taking a thing before its proper time.

In conveyancing, anticipation is the act of assigning, charging, or otherwise dealing with income before it becomes due.

In patent law, a person is said to have been anticipated when he patents a contrivance already known within the limits of the country granting the patent. Topliff v. Topliff, 145 U. S. 156, 12 Sup. Ct. 823, 36 L. Ed. 638; Detroit, etc., Co. v. Renchard (C. C.) 9 Fed. 298; National Hollow Brake Beam Co. v. Interchangeable Brake Beam Co. (C. C.) 99 Fed. 772; Thacher v. City of Baltimore (D. C.) 219 F. 909, 910; General Electric Co. v. De Forest Radio Co. (D. C.) 17 F.(2d) 90, 100.

In the law of negligence infrequency of danger, or even lack of its previous occurrence in experience of party charged, is not a decisive test of his duty to anticipate it; "anticipation" not being confined to expectation. Kenney v. Wong Len, 81 N. H. 427, 128 A. 343, 344. But compare Hardy v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (C. C. A.) 266 F. 860, 863, 36 A. L. R. 1.

ANTIQUA CUSTUMA. In English law. Ancient custom. An export duty on wool, woollens, and leather, imposed during the reign of Edw. I. It was so called by way of distinction from an increased duty on the same articles, payable by foreign merchants, which was imposed at a later period of the same reign and was called "custuma nova." 1 Bl. Comm. 314.

A covenant prohibiting erection of an "apartment house" does not prohibit an apartment hotel containing one, two, and three room suites without kitchens or kitchenettes. Griswold Realty & Holding Corporation v. West End Avenue & Seventy-Fifth St. Corporation, 209 N. Y. S. 764, 766, 125 Misc. Rep. 30. See Apartment House.

APARTMENT HOUSE. A building arranged in several suites of connecting rooms, each suite designed for independent housekeeping, but with certain mechanical conveniences, such as heat, light, or elevator services, in common to all families occupying the building. Konick v. Champneys, 108 Wash. 35, 183 P. 75, 77, 6 A. L. R. 459. Sometimes called a flat or flat house. Lignot v. Jaekle, 65 Atl. 221, 72 N. J. Eq. 233. It comes within the prohibition of a restrictive building covenant forbidding buildings designed for any purpose other than a private dwelling house. Taylor v. Lambert, 279 Pa. 514, 124 A. 169, 170. But it is not a "hotel." Satterthwait v. Gibbs, 288 Pa. 428, 135 A. 862, 864. A house for two families has been held to be an "apartment house" within a restriction covenant. Elterich v. Leicht Real Estate Co., 130 Va. 224, 107 S. E. 735, 739, 18 A. L. R. 441; contra, Austin v. Richardson (Tex. Com. App.) 288 S. W. 180, 181.

APATISATIO. An agreement or compact. Du Cange.

APERTA BREVIA. Open, unsealed writs.

APERTUM FACTUM. An overt act.

APERTURA TESTAMENTI. In the civil law. A form of proving a will, by the witnesses acknowledging before a magistrate their having sealed it.

APEX. The summit or highest point of anything; the top; e. g., in mining law, "apex of a vein." See Larkin v. Upton, 144 U. S. 19, 12 Sup. Ct. 614, 36 L. Ed. 330; Stevens v. Williams, 23 Fed. Cas. 40; Duggan v. Davey, 4 Dak. 110, 26 N. W. 887. An "apex" is all that portion of a terminal edge of a mineral vein from which the vein has extension downward in the direction of the dip. Stewart Mining Co. v. Ontario Mining Co., 35 S. Ct. 610, 614, 237 U. S. 350, 59 L. Ed. 989; Alameda Mining Co. v. Success Mining Co., 29 Idaho, 618, 161 P. 862, 865. Or it is the juncture of two dipping limbs of a fissure vein. Jim Butler Tonopah Mining Co. v. West End Consol. Mining Co., 38 S. Ct. 574, 576, 247 U. S. 450, 62 L. Ed. 1207.

APEX JURIS. The summit of the law; a legal subtlety; a nice or cunning point of law; close technicality; a rule of law carried to an extreme point, either of severity or refinement. A term used to denote a stricter application of the rules of law than is indicated by the phrase summum jus (q. v.).

APEX RULE. In mining law. The mineral laws of the United States give to the locator of a mining claim on the public domain the whole of every vein the apex of which lies within his surface exterior boundaries, or within perpendicular planes drawn downward indefinitely on the planes of those boundaries; and he may follow a vein which thus apexes within his boundaries, on its dip, although it may so far depart from the perpendicular in its course downward as to extend outside the vertical side-lines of his location; but he may not go beyond his end-lines or vertical planes drawn downward therefrom. This is called the apex rule. Rev. St. U. S. § 2322 (30 USCA § 26); King v. Mining Co., 9 Mont. 543, 24 Pac. 200; Stewart Mining Co. v. Ontario Mining Co., 23 Idaho, 724, 132 P. 787, 792.

APHASIA. In medical jurisprudence. Loss of the faculty or power of articulate speech; a condition in which the patient, while retaining intelligence and understanding and with the organs of speech unimpaired, is unable (in "motor aphasia") to utter articulate words, or unable to vocalize the particular word which is in his mind and which he wishes to use, or utters words different from those he believes himself to be speaking, or (in "sensory aphasia" or apraxia) is unable to understand spoken or written language. Sensory aphasia includes word blindness and word deafness, visual and auditory aphasia. Motor aphasia often includes agraphia, or the inability to write words of the desired meaning. The seat of the disease is in the brain, but it is not a form of insanity.

APHONIA. In medical jurisprudence. Loss of the power of articulate speech in consequence of morbid conditions of some of the vocal organs. It may be incomplete, in which case the patient can whisper. It is to be distinguished from congenital dumbness, and from temporary loss of voice through extreme hoarseness or minor affections of the vocal cords, as also from aphasia, the latter being a disease of the brain without impairment of the organs of speech.

Apices juris non sunt jura [jus]. Extremities, or mere subtleties of law are not rules of law [are not law]. Co. Litt. 304b; 10 Coke, 126; Wing. Max. 19, max. 14; Broom, Max. 188. Legal principles must not be carried to their extreme consequences, regardless of equity and good sense. Salmond, Jurispr. 639. See Apex Juris.

APICES LITIGANDI. Extremely fine points, or subtleties of litigation. Nearly equivalent to the modern phrase "sharp practice." "It is unconscionable in a defendant to take advantage of the apices litigandi, to turn a plaintiff around and make him pay costs when his demand is just." Per Lord Mansfield, in 3 Burr. 1243.

APNŒA. In medical jurisprudence. Want of breath; difficulty in breathing; partial or temporary suspension of respiration; specifically, such difficulty of respiration resulting from over-oxygenation of the blood, and in this distinguished from "asphyxia" (q. v.), which is a condition resulting from a deficiency of oxygen in the blood due to suffocation or any serious interference with normal respiration. The two terms were formerly (but improperly) used synonymously.

APOCHA (also Apoca). Lat. In the civil law. A writing acknowledging payments; acquittance. It differs from acceptance in this: that acceptance imports a complete discharge of the former obligation whether payment be made or not; apocha, discharge only upon payment being made. Calvin. See Antapocha.

APOCHÆ ONERATORIÆ. In old commercial law. Bills of lading.

APOCRISARIUS. In civil law. A messenger; an ambassador.

In ecclesiastical law. One who answers for another. An officer whose duty was to carry to the emperor messages relating to ecclesiastical matters, and to take back his answer to the petitioners. An officer who gave advice on questions of ecclesiastical law. An ambassador or legate of a pope or bishop. Spelman.

A messenger sent to transact ecclesiastical business and report to his superior; an officer who had charge of the treasury of a monastic edifice; an officer who took charge of opening and closing the doors. Du Cange; Spelman; Calvinus, Lex.

APOCRISARIUS CANCELLARIUS. In the civil law. An officer who took charge of the royal seal and signed royal dispatches.

Called, also, secretarius, consiliarius (from his giving advice); referendarius; a consiliis (from his acting as counsellor); a responsis, or responsatis.

APOGRAPHIA. In civil law. An examination and enumeration of things possessed; an inventory. Calvinus. Lex.

APOPLEXY. In medical jurisprudence. The failure of consciousness and suspension of voluntary motion from suspension of the functions of the cerebrum.

The group of symptoms arising from rupture of a minute artery and consequent hemorrhage into the substance of the brain or from the lodgment of a minute clot in one of the cerebral arteries. The symptoms consist usually of sudden loss of consciousness, muscular relaxation, lividity of the face and slow stertorous respiration, lasting from a few hours to several days. Death frequently ensues. If consciousness returns, there is found paralysis of some of the voluntary muscles, very frequently of the muscles of the face, arm, and leg upon one side, giving the symptom of hemiplegia. There is usually more or less mental impairment, which presents no uniform characters, but varies indefinitely.

By apoplexy is meant a break or rupture of a blood vessel in the brain, not produced by any external cause. Robinson v. Ætna Life Ins. Co. (Tex. Com. App.) 276 S. W. 900, 902.

APOSTACY (also spelled Apostasy). In English law. The total renunciation of Christianity, by embracing either a false religion or no religion at all. This offense can take place only in such as have once professed the Christian religion. 4 Bl. Comm. 43; 4 Steph. Comm. 231.

APOSTATA. In civil and old English law. An apostate; a deserter from the faith; one who has renounced the Christian faith. Cod. 1, 7; Reg. Orig. 71b.

APOSTATA CAPIENDO. An obsolete English writ which issued against an apostate, or one who had violated the rules of his religious order. It was addressed to the sheriff, and commanded him to deliver the defendant into the custody of the abbot or prior. Reg. Orig. 71, 267; Jacob; Wharton.

APOSTILLE, Appostille. L. Fr. An addition; a marginal note or observation. Kellham.

APOSTLES. In English admiralty practice. A term borrowed from the civil law, denoting brief dismissory letters granted to a party who appeals from an inferior to a superior court, embodying a statement of the case and a declaration that the record will be transmitted.

This term is still sometimes applied in the admiralty courts of the United States to the papers sent up or transmitted on appeals.

APOSTOLI. In civil law. Certificates of the inferior judge from whom a cause is removed, directed to the superior. Dig. 49, 6. See Apostles.

Those sent as messengers. Spelman, Gloss.

APOSTOLUS. A messenger; an ambassador, legate, or nuncio. Spelman.

APOTHECA. In the civil law. A repository; a place of deposit, as of wine, oil, books, etc. Calvin.

APOTHECARY. Any person who keeps a shop or building where medicines are compounded or prepared according to prescriptions of physicians, or where medicines are sold. Act Cong. July 13, 1866, c. 184, § 9, 14 Stat. 119; Woodward v. Ball, 6 Car. & P. 577; Westmoreland v. Bragg, 2 Hill (S. C.) 414; Com. v. Fuller, 2 Walk. (Pa.) 550.

The term "druggist" properly means one whose occupation is to buy and sell drugs without compounding or preparing them. The term therefore has a much more limited and restricted meaning than the word "apothecary," and there is little difficulty in concluding that the term "druggist" may be applied in a technical sense to persons who buy and sell drugs. State v. Holmes, 28 La. Ann. 767, 26 Am. Rep. 110; Apothecaries' Co. v. Greenough, 1 Q. B. 803; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781.

In England and Ireland an apothecary is a member of an inferior branch of the medical profession and is licensed by the Apothecaries Company to practice medicine as well as to sell drugs.

APPARATOR. A furnisher or provider. Formerly the sheriff, in England, had charge of certain county affairs and disbursements, in which capacity he was called "apparator comitatus" (apparator for the county), and received therefor a considerable emolument. Cowell.

APPARATUS. An outfit of tools, utensils, or instruments adapted to accomplishment of any branch of work or for performance of experiment or operation. McClintock & Irvine Co. v. Ætna Explosives Co., 260 Pa. 191, 103 A. 622, 623, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1078. A group or set of organs concerned in performance of single function. First State Bank of Perkins v. Pulliam, 112 Okl. 22, 239 P. 595, 596.

As used in statutes granting exemption from execution, etc., "apparatus" means a complex device or machine designed for the accomplishment of a special purpose; a complex instrument or appliance, mechanical or chemical, for a specific action or operation; machinery; mechanism; as a newspaper printing press, Harris v. Townley (Tex. Civ. App.) 161 S. W. 5; or four pool tables, Harris v. Todd (Tex. Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 1189;

but not a threshing outfit, Comer v. Powell (Tex. Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 88, 91; nor a well-drilling rig, consisting of boiler, engine, and other parts of complicated machinery, Thresher v. McEvoy (Tex. Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 159, 160. And see In re Willis (D. C.) 292 F. 872, 873, wherein it was said that the term "apparatus" is practically synonymous with "tools."

APPARENT. That which is obvious, evident, or manifest; what appears, or has been made manifest; appearing to the eye or mind. Milliken v. McKenzie (Tex. Civ. App.) 285 S. W. 1110, 1111; Van Arsdale v. State, 94 Tex. Cr. R. 169, 249 S. W. 863, 866; Walker v. John Smith, T., 199 Ala. 514, 74 So. 451, 453. In respect to facts involved in an appeal or writ of error, that which is stated in the record. An error discovered by close scrutiny of the entire evidence is not "apparent." Stewart v. McAllister (Tex. Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 704, 706.

APPARENT AUTHORITY. In the law of agency, such authority as the principal knowingly permits the agent to assume, or which he holds the agent out as possessing; such authority as he appears to have by reason of the actual authority which he has; such authority as a reasonably prudent man, using diligence and discretion, in view of the principal's conduct, would naturally suppose the agent to possess. Ozark Mut. Life Ass'n v. Dillard, 169 Ark. 136, 273 S. W. 378, 381; Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Seaman, 203 Iowa 310, 210 N. W. 937, 940; Kissell v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. Ry. Co., 194 Mo. App. 346, 188 S. W. 1118, 1121; Caughren v. Kahan, 86 Wash. 356, 150 P. 445, 448; Hudson v. Carlson, 31 Idaho, 196, 170 P. 100, 102; Brager v. Levy, 122 Md. 554, 90 A. 102, 104; Atto v. Saunders, 77 N. H. 527, 93 A. 1037, 1039; Johnson v. Evans, 134 Minn. 43, 158 N. W. 823. It includes the power to do whatever is usually done and necessary to be done in order to carry into effect the principal power conferred. Oliver v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 176 N. C. 598, 97 S. E. 490, 491.

APPARENT DANGER. As used with reference to the doctrine of self-defense in homicide, means such overt actual demonstration, by conduct and acts, of a design to take life or do some great personal injury, as would make the killing apparently necessary to self-preservation. Evans v. State, 44 Miss. 773; Stoneman v. Com., 25 Grat. (Va.) 896; Leigh v. People, 113 Ill. 379; Modesett v. Emmons (Tex. Com. App.) 292 S. W. 855, 856. Under a statute providing that it shall not be a defense to an action for injuries to an employee that the dangers inherent or apparent in the employment contributed to the injury, an "apparent danger" is one the existence of which the employee has knowledge, actual or constructive. Standard Steel Car Co. v. Martinecz, 66 Ind. App. 672, 113 N. E. 244, 248.

APPARENT DEFECTS. In a thing sold, are those which can be discovered by simple inspection. Code La. art. 2497 (Civil Code, § 2521). See, also, Woolley v. Ablah, 119 Kan. 380, 240 P. 266, 269.

APPARENT EASEMENT. See Easement.

APPARENT HEIR. In English law. One whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided he outlives the ancestor. 2 Bl. Comm. 208. See, also, Heir Apparent. In Scotch law. He is the person to whom the succession has actually opened. He is so called until his regular entry on the lands by service or infeftment on a precept of clare constat.

APPARENT NECESSITY. In actions under the Alabama Homicide Act, "apparent necessity" which will justify killing in self-defense must be such as to impress a reasonable man of its presence and imminence, and must so impress defendant at the time of the fatal shot. Drummond v. Drummond, 212 Ala. 242, 102 So. 112, 114.

APPARITIO. In old practice. Appearance; an appearance. Apparitio in judicio, an appearance in court. Bract. fol. 344. Post apparitionem, after appearance. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 10, § 25.

APPARITOR. An officer or messenger employed to serve the process of the spiritual courts in England and summon offenders. Cowell.

In the civil law. An officer who waited upon a magistrate or superior officer, and executed his commands. Calvin.; Cod. 12, 53-57.

APPARLEMENT. In old English law. Resemblance; likelihood; as apparlement of war. St. 2 Rich. II. st. 1, c. 6; Cowell.

APPARURA. In old English law the apparura were furniture, implements, tackle, or apparel. Carucarum apparura, plow-tackle. Cowell.

APPEAL. In civil practice. The complaint to a superior court of an injustice done or error committed by an inferior one, whose judgment or decision the court above is called upon to correct or reverse.

The removal of a cause from a court of inferior to one of superior jurisdiction, for the purpose of obtaining a review and retrial. Wiscart v. Dauchy, 3 Dall. 321, 1 L. Ed. 619; City of Birmingham v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 213 Ala. 92, 104 So. 258, 259; Norman v. Toliver, 94 Kan. 356, 146 P. 1037, 1038; Hall v. Kincaid, 64 Ind. App. 103, 115 N. E. 361, 365.

The distinction between an appeal and a writ of error is that an appeal is a process of civil law origin, and removes a cause entirely, subjecting the facts, as well as the law, to a review and revisal; but a writ of error is of common law origin, and it removes nothing for re-examination but the law. Wiscart v. Dauchy, 3 Dall. 321, 1 L. Ed. 619; U. S. v.

Goodwin, 7 Cranch, 108, 3 L. Ed. 284; Cunningham v. Neagle, 135 U. S. 1, 10 Sup. Ct. 658, 34 L. Ed. 55; Buessel v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 258 F. 811, 814. The present tendency is to ignore the distinction between "writ of error" and "appeal," and, when found in modern statutes, the meaning given "appeal" must be gathered from the language of the statute itself. Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 142 Va. 419, 128 S. E. 516, 518.

But appeal is sometimes used to denote the nature of appellate jurisdiction, as distinguished from original jurisdiction, without any particular regard to the mode by which a cause is transmitted to a superior jurisdiction. U. S. v. Wonson, 1 Gall. 5, 12, Fed. Cas. No. 16,750; Dorris Motor Car Co. v. Colburn, 307 Mo. 137, 270 S. W. 339, 346. "Appeal" has no conclusive meaning, and it is necessary in each instance to look to the particular act giving an appeal, to determine powers to be exercised by the appellate court. McCauley v. Imperial Woolen Co., 261 Pa. 312, 104 A. 617, 620.

An "appeal" in equity is a trial de novo. Simmons v. Stern (C. C. A.) 9 F.(2d) 256; 259.

"Appeal" may also be used to denote the act of invoking another judicial forum for the trial. Newell v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 215 Mich. 153, 183 N. W. 907, 908. See Appealed. As used in statutes authorizing taxpayers or parties to condemnation proceedings to appeal, the term often has its non-technical sense meaning to "apply for" or "ask." Commonwealth v. Deford Co., 137 Va. 542, 120 S. E. 281, 282; Purcell Bank & Trust Co. of Purcell v. Byars, 66 Okl. 70, 167 P. 216, 218.

In Criminal Practice

A formal accusation made by one private person against another of having committed some heinous crime. 4 Bl. Comm. 312.

Appeal was also the name given to the proceeding in English law where a person, indicted of treason or felony, and arraigned for the same, confessed the fact before plea pleaded, and appealed, or accused others, his accomplices in the same crime, in order to obtain his pardon. In this case he was called an "approver" or "prover," and the party appealed or accused, the "appellee." 4 Bl. Comm. 330. Appeals have been abolished by statute.

In Legislation

The act by which a member of a legislative body who questions the correctness of a decision of the presiding officer, or "chair," procures a vote of the body upon the decision.

In Old French Law

A mode of proceeding in the lords' courts, where a party was dissatisfied with the judgment of the peers, which was by accusing them of having given a false or malicious judgment, and offering to make good the charge by the duel or combat. This was called the "appeal of false judgment." Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 28, c. 27.

In General

—Appeal bond. The bond given on taking an appeal, by which the appellant and his sureties are bound to pay damages and costs if he fails to prosecute the appeal with effect. Omaha Hotel Co. v. Kountze, 107 U. S. 378, 2 Sup. Ct. 911, 27 L. Ed. 609. A general purpose of appeal bonds is to discourage vexatious and frivolous appeals. State v. Coletti, 102 Kan. 523, 170 P. 995, 997.

—Cross-appeal. Where both parties to a judgment appeal therefrom, the appeal of each is called a "cross-appeal" as regards that of the other. 3 Steph. Comm. 581.

APPEALED. In a sense not strictly technical, this word may be used to signify the exercise by a party of the right to remove a litigation from one forum to another; as where he removes a suit involving the title to real estate from a justice's court to the common pleas. Lawrence v. Souther, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 166.

APPEAR. In practice. To be properly before a court; as a fact or matter of which it can take notice. To be in evidence; to be proved. "Making it appear and proving are the same thing." Freem. 53.

To be regularly in court; as a defendant in an action. Cf. Bennett v. Rodgers, 205 Mo. App. 458, 225 S. W. 101. See Appearance.

APPEAR OF RECORD. A substitution of trustee under deed of trust "appears of record" in the office of the chancery clerk, by being actually spread at large on the record. King v. Jones, 121 Miss. 319, 83 So. 531.

APPEARANCE. In practice. A coming into court as party to a suit, whether as plaintiff or defendant. In re Puget Sound Engineering Co. (D. C.) 270 F. 353, 354; Stephens v. Ringling, 102 S. C. 333, 86 S. E. 683, 685.

The formal proceeding by which a defendant submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court. Flint v. Comly, 95 Me. 251, 49 Atl. 1044; Crawford v. Vinton, 102 Mich. 83, 62 N. W. 988; Childers v. Lahann, 18 N. M. 487, 138 P. 202, 203.

Appearance anciently meant an actual coming in to court, either in person or by attorney. Appearance may be made by the party in person or by his agent. Everett Ry., Light & Power Co. v. U. S. (D. C.) 236 F. 806, 808. But in criminal cases the personal appearance of the accused in court is often necessary.

Classification

An appearance may be either general or special; the former is a simple and unqualified or unrestricted submission to the jurisdiction of the court, the latter a submission to the jurisdiction for some specific purpose only, not for all the purposes of the suit. National Furnace Co. v. Moline Malleable Iron Works (C. C.) 13 F. 864; Citizens' Trust Co. of Utica v. R. Prescott & Son, 223 N. Y. S. 191, 197, 221

App. Div. 426; Kyser v. American Surety Co. of New York, 213 Ala. 614, 105 So. 689, 690; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 282 Ill. 136, 118 N. E. 483, 485. A special appearance is for the purpose of testing the sufficiency of service or the jurisdiction of the court; a general appearance is made where the defendant waives defects of service and submits to the jurisdiction. Bacon v. Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco (D. C.) 289 F. 513, 515; Whitesides v. Drage, 56 Ind. App. 679, 106 N. E. 382; Brumleve v. Cronan, 176 Ky. 818, 197 S. W. 498, 504; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 282 Ill. 136, 118 N. E. 483, 485; State v. Huller, 23 N. M. 306, 168 P. 523, 534, 1 A. L. R. 170.

An appearance may also be either compulsory or voluntary, the former where it is compelled by process served on the party, the latter where it is entered by his own will or consent, without the service of process, though process may be outstanding. 1 Barb. Ch. Pr. 77. It is said to be optional when entered by a person who intervenes in the action to protect his own interests, though not joined as a party; it occurs in chancery practice, especially in England; conditional, when coupled with conditions as to its becoming or being taken as a general appearance; gratis, when made by a party to the action, but before the service of any process or legal notice to appear; de bene esse, when made provisionally or to remain good only upon a future contingency; subsequent, when made by a defendant after an appearance has already been entered for him by the plaintiff; corporal, when the person is physically present in court.

—Appearance by attorney. This term and “appearance by counsel” are distinctly different, the former being the substitution of a legal agent for the personal attendance of the suitor, the latter the attendance of an advocate without whose aid neither the party attending nor his attorney in his stead could safely proceed; and an appearance by attorney does not supersede the appearance by counsel. Mercer v. Watson, 1 Watts (Pa.) 351. See In re Ford’s Estate, 163 N. Y. S. 960, 98 Misc. Rep. 100.

—Appearance day. The day for appearing; that on which the parties are bound to come into court. Cruger v. McCracken (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 282. Compare City of Decatur v. Barteau, 260 Ill. 612, 103 N. E. 601, 602.

—Appearance docket. A docket kept by the clerk of the court, in which appearances are entered, containing also a brief abstract of all the proceedings in the cause. See McAdams v. Windham, 191 Ala. 287, 68 So. 51, 52.

—Notice of appearance. A notice given by defendant to a plaintiff that he appears in the action in person or by attorney.

APPEARAND HEIR. In Scotch law. An apparent heir. See Heir Apparent.

APPELLANT. The party who takes an appeal from one court or jurisdiction to another. Used broadly or nontechnically, the term includes one who sues out a writ of error. Chickamauga Quarry & Construction Co. v.

Pundt, 136 Tenn. 328, 189 S. W. 686; Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 142 Va. 419, 128 S. E. 516, 518.

APPELLATE. Pertaining to or having cognizance of appeals and other proceedings for the judicial review of adjudications.

APPELLATE COURT. A court having jurisdiction of appeal and review; a court to which causes are removable by appeal, certiorari, or error.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction on appeal; jurisdiction to revise or correct the proceedings in a cause already instituted and acted upon by an inferior court, or by a tribunal having the attributes of a court. Auditor of State v. Railroad Co., 6 Kan. 505, 7 Am. Rep. 575; State v. Anthony, 65 Mo. App. 543; State v. Baker, 19 Fla. 19; Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 101, 2 L. Ed. 554; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Dodd, 105 Miss. 23, 61 So. 743, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 565; Fine v. Lawless, 140 Tenn. 453, 205 S. W. 124. The term includes proceedings in error. *Miami County v. In the civil law, the term was applied to the judge ad quem, or to whom an appeal was taken. Calvin.

APPELLEE. The party in a cause against whom an appeal is taken; that is, the party who has an interest adverse to setting aside or reversing the judgment. Slayton v. Horsey, 97 Tex. 341, 78 S. W. 919. Sometimes also called the “respondent.”

In a nontechnical sense, “appellee” may include a defendant in writ of error. Widgins v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 142 Va. 419, 128 S. E. 516, 518.

In old English law. Where a person charged with treason or felony pleaded guilty and turned approver or “king’s evidence,” and accused another as his accomplice in the same crime, in order to obtain his own pardon, the one so accused was called the “appellee.” 4 Bl. Comm. 330.

When a constitution or court declares that the common law is in force in a particular state so far as it is applicable, it is meant that it must be applicable to the habits and conditions of the community, as well as in harmony with the genius, the spirit, and the objects of their institutions. Wagner v. Bissell, 3 Iowa, 402.

When a constitution prohibits the enactment of local or special laws in all cases where a general law would be applicable, a general law should always be construed to be applicable, in this sense, where the entire people of the state have an interest in the subject, such as regulating interest, statutes of frauds or limitations, etc. But where only a portion of the people are affected, as in locating a county-seat, it will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each particular case whether such a law would be applicable. Evans v. Job, 8 Nev. 322.

APPLICANT. An applicant, as for letters of administration, is one who is entitled thereto, and who files a petition asking that letters be granted. Jerauld v. Chambers, 44 Cal. App. 771, 187 P. 33.

To put, use, or refer, as suitable or relative; to co-ordinate language with a particular subject-matter; as to apply the words of a statute to a particular state of facts.

The word "apply" is used in connection with statutes in two senses. When construing a statute, in describing the class of persons, things, or functions which are within its scope; as that the statute does not "apply" to transactions in interstate commerce. When discussing the use made of a statute, in referring to the process by which the statute is made operative; as where the jury is told to "apply" the statute of limitation if they find that the cause of action arose before a given date. Brandeis, J., dissenting in Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant, 257 U. S. 232, 42 S. Ct. 106, 110, n. 66 L. Ed. 239.

"Appoint" is used where exclusive power and authority is given to one person, officer, or body to name persons to hold certain offices. State v. Doss, 102 W. Va. 162, 134 S. E. 749. It is usually distinguished from "elect," meaning to choose by a vote of the qualified voters of the city. State ex rel. Smith v. Bowman, 170 S. W. 700, 701, 184 Mo. App. 549. But the distinction is not invariably observed. Schaffner v. Shaw, 191 Iowa, 1047, 180 N. W. 853, 854.

APPOINTEE. A person who is appointed or selected for a particular purpose; as the appointee under a power is the person who is to receive the benefit of the power.

APPOINTMENT.

In Chancery Practice

The exercise of a right to designate the person or persons who are to take the use of real estate. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 302; Merchants' Loan & Trust Co. v. Patterson, 308 Ill. 519, 139 N. E. 912, 919.

The act of a person in directing the disposition of property, by limiting a use, or by substituting a new use for a former one, in pursuance of a power granted to him for that purpose by a preceding deed, called a "power of appointment;" also the deed or other instrument by which he so conveys.

Where the power embraces several permitted objects, and the appointment is made to one or more of them, excluding others, it is called "exclusive."

Appointment may signify an appropriation of money to a specific purpose. Harris v. Clark, 3 N. Y. 93, 119, 51 Am. Dec. 352. See Illusory Appointment.

In Public Law

The selection or designation of a person, by the person or persons having authority therefor, to fill an office or public function and discharge the duties of the same. State v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 156, 6 So. 592; Wickersham v. Brittan, 93 Cal. 34, 28 P. 792, 15 L. R. A. 106; Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 210; State v. Braman, 173 Wis. 596, 181 N. W. 729, 730.

The term "appointment" is to be distinguished from "election." The former is an executive act, whereby a person is named as the incumbent of an office and invested therewith, by one or more individuals who have the sole power and right to select and constitute the officer. Election means that the person is chosen by a principle of selection in the nature of a vote, participated in by the public generally or by the entire class of persons qualified to express their choice in this manner. See McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U. S. 1, 13 Sup. Ct. 3, 36 L. Ed. 869; State v. Compson, 34 Or. 25, 54 Pac. 349; Reid v. Gorsuch, 67 N. J. Law, 396, 51 A. 457; State v. Commission, 175 Cal. 752, 167 P. 377, 378.

"Appointment" may also mean the arranging of a meeting. Spears v. State, 89 Tex. Cr. R. 459, 232 S. W. 326, 328.

APPOINTOR. The person who appoints, or executes a power of appointment; as appointee is the person to whom or in whose favor an appointment is made. 1 Steph. Comm. 506, 507; 4 Kent, Comm. 316.

One authorized by the donor, under the statute of uses, to execute a power. 2 Bouv. Inst. n. 1923.

The appointor is the instrument of the donor of the power, and the appointee takes under the original will or instrument which creates the trust, and not from the donee of the power. Barret v. Berea College, 48 R. I. 258, 137 A. 145, 147.

Of Incumbrances

Where several persons are interested in an estate, apportionment, as between them, is the determination of the respective amounts which they shall contribute towards the removal of the incumbrance.

Of Corporate Shares

The pro tanto division among the subscribers of the shares allowed to be issued by the charter, where more than the limited number have been subscribed for. Clarke v. Brooklyn Bank, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 368; Haight v. Day, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 18.

To value property at what it is worth. Tax Commission of Ohio v. Clark, 20 Ohio App. 166, 151 N. E. 780, 781. In a statute directing officers to "appraise all taxable property at its full and true value in money," the words italicized add nothing to the meaning of the statute; Cochecho Mfg. Co. v. Strafford, 51 N. H. 455, 482.

To "appraise" money means to count. In re Hollinger's Estate, 259 Pa. 72, 102 A. 409.

An "arbitration" presupposes a controversy or difference to be decided, and the arbitrators proceed in a judicial way. On the other hand, an appraisal or valuation is generally a mere auxiliary feature of a contract of sale, the purpose of which is not to adjudicate a controversy but to avoid one. Thompson v. Newman, 36 Cal. App. 248, 171 P. 982, 983.

APPRAISER. A person appointed by competent authority to make an appraisement, to ascertain and state the true value of goods or real estate.

The title of "appraiser" carries with it a significance that he is to be the judge of the evidence he desires submitted to him on the question of valuation, in cases fairly treated by him. In re Gibert's Estate, 160 N. Y. S. 213, 214, 96 Misc. Rep. 401.

Ragland* (C. C. A.) 11 F.(2d) 231, 234.

APPRIZING. In Scotch law. A form of process by which a creditor formerly took possession of the estates of the debtor in payment of the debt due. It is now superseded by adjudications.

APPROACH. To come nearer in space. Pezoni v. Pezzoni, 38 Cal. App. 209, 175 P. 801, 802; Lawrence v. Goodwill, 44 Cal. App. 440, 186 P. 781, 785; Weber v. Greenebaum, 270 Pa. 382, 113 A. 413, 414. Thus, an "approaching" street car is one coming near to, in point of time and place. Ruffin Coal & Transfer Co. v. Rich, 214 Ala. 622, 108 So. 600, 602.

APPROACH, RIGHT OF. In international law. The right of a ship of war, upon the high sea, to draw near to another vessel for the purpose of ascertaining the nationality of the latter. The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 43, 44, 6 L. Ed. 405. Kent understood it to be equivalent to the right of visit. 1 Kent, Comm. 153. And at present the right of approach has no existence apart from the right of visit.

APPROACHES. The "approaches" to a bridge or viaduct may include embankments, grades, or structures of any sort serving as a passage or way. Henderson County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 320 Ill. 608, 151 N. E. 542, 545; Starrett v. Inhabitants of Town of Thomaston, 126 Me. 205, 137 A. 67, 70. That part of the roadway which is essential to make the bridge accessible and convenient for public use. Person v. Polk County, 193 Iowa, 733, 185 N. W. 491, 492. Compare State v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 136 Minn. 164, 161 N. W. 506, 508; In re Rosedale Ave. in City of New York, 162 N. Y. S. 877, 885, 175 App. Div. 864. The "approaches" to a rapid transit railway tunnel 60 feet below the surface may include elevators. City of Boston v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 213 Mass. 407, 100 N. E. 601, 603.

APPROBATE AND REPROBATE. In Scotch law. To approve and reject; to attempt to take advantage of one part, and reject the rest. Bell. Equity suffers no person to approve and reprobate the same deed. 1 Kames, Eq. 317; 1 Bell, Comm. 146. The doctrine of approve and reprobate is the English doctrine of election.

APPROPRIATE. To make a thing one's own; to make a thing the subject of property; to exercise dominion over an object to the extent, and for the purpose, of making it subserve one's own proper use or pleasure. Newhouse v. First Nat. Bank (D. C.) 13 F.(2d) 887, 889; People v. Ashworth, 222 N. Y. S. 24, 27, 220 App. Div. 498. The term is properly used in this sense to denote the acquisition of property and a right of exclusive enjoyment in those things which before were without an owner or were publici juris. United States v. Nicholson (D. C.) 12 Fed. 522; Wulzen v. San Francisco, 101 Cal. 15, 35 Pac. 353, 40 Am. St. Rep. 17; People v. Lammerts, 164 N. Y. 137, 58 N. E. 22.

Under a statute punishing any officer of a corporation who fraudulently appropriates the money of the corporation, "appropriates" embraces every mode by which an officer fraudulently or unlawfully obtains the property of the corporation. Commonwealth v. Dow, 217 Mass. 473, 105 N. E. 995, 996. And under similar statutes, it may be synonymous with "convert." State v. Hoff, 29 N. D. 412, 150 N. W. 929, 930.

To destroy property is to "appropriate" it within the meaning of a constitutional prohibition against taking private property for public use without just compensation. Little Falls Fibre Co. v. Henry Ford & Son, 217 N. Y. S. 534, 540, 127 Misc. Rep. 834. See, also, American Woolen Co. v. State, 211 N. Y. S. 149, 166, 125 Misc. Rep. 186.

To prescribe a particular use for particular moneys; to designate or destine a fund or property for a distinct use, or for the payment of a particular demand. Whitehead v. Gibbons, 10 N. J. Eq. 235; State v. Bordelon, 6 La. Ann. 68; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Buchanan (Tex. Civ. App.) 248 S. W. 68, 70.

In its use with reference to payments or moneys, there is room for a distinction between this term and "apply." The former properly denotes the setting apart of a fund or payment for a particular use or purpose, or the mental act of resolving that it shall be so employed, while "apply" signifies the actual expenditure of the fund, or using the payment, for the purpose to which it has been appropriated. Practically, however, the words are used interchangeably.

To allot, assign, or set apart, or apply to a particular use or purpose. Jennings v. Kinsey, 308 Mo. 265, 271 S. W. 786, 787.

Where a sale is of goods not specified at the time the contract is made, the goods are said to be "appropriated" to the contract when they are identified and applied irrevocably to the contract. E. L. Welch Co. v. Lahart Elevator Co., 122 Minn. 432, 142 N. W. 823, 830.

Also used in the sense of distribute; in this sense it may denote the act of an executor or administrator who distributes the estate of his decedent among the legatees, heirs, or others entitled, in pursuance of his duties and according to their respective rights.

APPROPRIATION. The act of appropriating or setting apart; prescribing the destination of a thing; designating the use or application of a fund.

In Public Law

The act by which the legislative department of government designates a particular fund, or sets apart a specified portion of the public revenue or of the money in the public treasury, to be applied to some general object of governmental expenditure, (as the civil service list, etc.) or to some individual purchase or expense. State v. Moore, 50 Neb. 88, 69 N. W. 373, 61 Am. St. Rep. 538; Clayton v. Berry, 27 Ark. 129; State v. Carter, 31 Wyo. 401, 226 P. 690, 693; Blaine County Inv. Co. v. Gallet, 35 Idaho, 102, 204 P. 1066, 1067. An element of the definition of "appropriation" is that the money appropriated be out of the general revenues of the state. Black and White Taxicab Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 25 Ariz. 381, 218 P. 139, 144. An "expenditure" is the expending, a laying out of money, disbursement, and is not the same as an "appropriation," the setting apart or assignment to a particular person or use. Grout v. Gates, 97 Vt. 434, 124 A. 76, 80.

When money is appropriated (i. e., set apart) for the purpose of securing the payment of a specific debt or class of debts, or for an individual purchase or object of expense, it is said to be specifically appropriated for that purpose.

A specific appropriation is an act of the legislature by which a named sum of money has been set apart in the treasury, and devoted to the payment of a particular demand. Stratton v. Green, 45 Cal. 149.

In General

—Appropriation of land. The act of selecting, devoting, or setting apart land for a particular use or purpose, as where land is appropriated for public buildings, military reservations, or other public uses. McSorley v. Hill, 2 Wash. St. 638, 27 Pac. 552; Murdock v. Memphis, 7 Cold. (Tenn.) 500; Jackson v. Wilcox, 2 Ill. 360. Sometimes also applied to the taking of private property for public use in the exercise of the power of eminent domain. Railroad Co. v. Foltz (C. C.) 52 Fed. 629; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 16 Sup. Ct. 43, 40 L. Ed. 188; N. Ward Co. v. Board of Street Com'rs of City of Boston, 217 Mass. 381, 104 N. E. 965, 966. In this sense it may refer merely to physical occupation and contemplate payment prior thereto, in contradistinction to "taking," referring to a legal taking and presupposing payment after damages are due. Keller v. City of Bridgeport, 101 Conn. 669, 127 A. 508, 511.

"Appropriation" under the Civil Code has been said to be but another form of prescription. City of San Bernardino v. City of Riverside, 186 Cal. 7, 198 P. 784, 787.

—Appropriation of payments. This means the application of a payment to the discharge of a particular debt. Thus, if a creditor has two distinct debts due to him from his debtor, and the latter makes a general payment on account, without specifying at the time to which debt he intends the payment to apply, it is optional for the creditor to appropriate (apply) the payment to either of the two debts he pleases. Gwin v. McLean, 62 Miss. 121; Martin v. Draher, 5 Watts (Pa.) 544.

—Appropriation of water. An appropriation of water flowing on the public domain consists in the capture, impounding, or diversion of it from its natural course or channel and its actual application to some beneficial use private or personal to the appropriator, to the entire exclusion (or exclusion to the extent of the water appropriated) of all other persons. To constitute a valid appropriation, there must be an intent to apply the water to some beneficial use existing at the time or contemplated in the future, a diversion from the natural channel by means of a ditch or canal, or some other open physical act of taking possession of the water, and an actual application of it within a reasonable time to some useful or beneficial purpose. Murphy v. Kerr (D. C.) 296 F. 536, 542; Snow v. Abalos, 18 N. M. 681, 140 P. 1044, 1048; In re Water Rights in Silvies River, 115 Or. 27, 237 P. 322, 336; Low v. Rizer, 25 Or. 551, 37 Pac.

82; Clough v. Wing, 2 Ariz. 371, 17 Pac. 453; Offield v. Ish, 21 Wash. 277, 57 Pac. 809; Reservoir Co. v. People, 8 Colo. 614, 9 Pac. 794; McCall v. Porter, 42 Or. 49, 70 Pac. 820; McDonald v. Mining Co., 13 Cal. 220.

Where the annexation is to the use of a lay person, it is usually called an "impropriation" (q. v.). 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 145, § 130. There have been no appropriations since the dissolution of monasteries.

APPROPRIATOR. One who makes an appropriation; as, an appropriator of water. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 Pac. 736.

Oliver*, 147 Ark. 252, 227 S. W. 586, 588; Rooney v. South Sioux City, 111 Neb. 1, 195 N. W. 474, 475. "Approval" implies knowledge and exercise of discretion after knowledge. State v. Duckett, 133 S. C. 85, 130 S. E. 340, 342.

The act of a judge or magistrate in sanctioning and accepting as satisfactory a bond, security, or other instrument which is required by law to pass his inspection and receive his approbation before it becomes operative.

Reno Community High School*, 124 Kan. 175, 257 P. 957, 959; Tibbens v. Clayton (D. C.) 288 F. 393, 394. "Approve" is therefore distinguishable from "authorize," meaning to permit a thing to be done in future. Gray v. Gill, 210 N. Y. S. 658, 660, 125 Misc. 70.

The act of approval "imports the act of passing judgment, the use of discretion, and the determination as a deduction therefrom"; to confirm, ratify, sanction, or consent to some act or thing done by another.

To regard or pronounce as good; think or judge well of; to be pleased with; commend. Melton v. Cherokee Oil & Gas Co., 67 Okl. 247, 170 P. 691, 697.

C. 123, 86 S. E. 1002, 1003; but not necessarily so; Better Built Homes & Mortgage Co. v. Nolte, 211 Mo. App. 601, 249 S. W. 743, 745.

To take to one's proper and separate use. To improve; to enhance the value or profits of anything. To inclose and cultivate common or waste land.

To approve common or waste land is to inclose and convert it to the purposes of husbandry, which the owner might always do, provided he left common sufficient for such as were entitled to it. St. Mert. c. 4; St. Westm. 2, c. 46; 2 Bl. Comm. 34; 3 Bl. Comm. 240; 2 Steph. Comm. 7; 3 Kent, Comm. 406.

APPROVED INDORSED NOTES. Notes indorsed by another person than the maker, for additional security, the indorser being satisfactory to the payee. Mills v. Hunt, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 431.

APPROVEMENT. By the common law, approval is said to be a species of confession, and incident to the arraignment of a prisoner indicted for treason or felony, who confesses the fact before plea pleaded, and appeals or accuses others, his accomplices in the same crime, in order to obtain his own pardon. In this case he is called an "approver," or "prover," "probator," and the party appealed or accused is called the "appellee." Such approval can only be in capital offenses, and it is, as it were, equivalent to an indictment, since the appellee is equally called upon to answer it. Gray v. People, 26 Ill. 344; Whiskey Cases, 99 U. S. 599, 25 L. Ed. 399; State v. Graham, 41 N. J. Law, 15, 32 Am. Rep. 174.

He is one who confesses himself guilty of felony and accuses others of the same crime to save himself from punishment. Myers v. People, 26 Ill. 175. See Antithetarius. By the old law, if he failed to convict those he accused he was at once hung. It is said that they usually failed. 1 Pike, Hist. of Cr. 236.

In Old English Law

Certain men sent into the several counties to increase the farms (rents) of hundreds and wapentakes, which formerly were let at a certain value to the sheriff. Cowell.

I. J. Smith & Co.*, 119 Va. 198, 89 S. E. 123, 126. "Approximately" is very nearly synonymous with "proximately," and an instruction on the causal relation between the injury and the alleged negligence, though using the former instead of the latter, is not prejudicially erroneous. P. B. Arnold Co. v. Buchanan, 60 Ind. App. 626, 111 N. E. 204, 207.

ployed in leases for the purpose of including any easements or servitudes used or enjoyed with the demised premises. Riddle v. Littlefield, 53 N. H. 508, 16 Am. Rep. 388. Civil Code Cal. § 662. Mattix v. Swepston, 127 Tenn. 693, 155 S. W. 928, 930.

In common speech, appurtenant denotes annexed or belonging to; but in law it denotes an annexation which is of convenience merely and not of necessity, and which may have had its origin at any time, in both which respects it is distinguished from appendant (q. v.). *Balcar v. ARBITER. A person chosen to decide a controversy; an arbitrator, referee.

A person bound to decide according to the rules of law and equity, as distinguished from an arbitrator, who may proceed wholly at his own discretion, so that it be according to the judgment of a sound man. Cowell.

According to Mr. Abbott, the distinction is as follows: "Arbiter" is a technical name of a person selected with reference to an established system for friendly determination of controversies, which, though not judicial, is yet regulated by law; so that the powers and duties of the arbitrator, when once he is chosen, are prescribed by law, and his doings may be judicially revised if he has exceeded his authority. "Arbiter" is an untechnical designation of a person to whom a controversy is referred, irrespective of any law to govern the decision; and is the proper word to signify a referee of a question outside of or above municipal law.

But it is elsewhere said that the distinction between arbiters and arbitrators is not observed in modern law. Russ. Arb. 112.

In the Roman Law

A judge invested with a discretionary power. A person appointed by the prætor to examine and decide that class of causes or actions termed "bonæ fidei," and who had the power of judging according to the principles of equity, (ex æquo et bono;) distinguished from the judex, (q. v.;) who was bound to decide according to strict law. Milwaukee County.* 158 Wis. 207, 148 N. W. 22, 33.

ARBITRARINESS. Conduct or acts based alone upon one's will, and not upon any course of reasoning and exercise of judgment. Boyle v. Rock Island Coal Mining Co., 125 Okl. 137, 256 P. 883, 887.

ARBITRARY GOVERNMENT. The difference between a free and an arbitrary government is that in the former limits are assigned to those to whom the administration is committed, but the latter depends on the will of the departments or some of them. Kamper v. Hawkins, 1 Va. Cas. 20, 23.

ARBITRARY POWER. Power to act according to one's own will; especially applicable to power conferred on an administrative officer, who is not furnished any adequate determining principle. Fox Film Corporation v. Trumbull (D. C.) 7 F.(2d) 715, 727.

ARBITRARY PUNISHMENT. That punishment which is left to the decision of the judge, in distinction from those defined by statute.

ARBITRATION. The investigation and determination of a matter or matters of difference between contending parties, by one or more unofficial persons, chosen by the parties, and called arbitrators, or referees. This definition was adopted in Temple v. Riverland Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605, 608.

The submission of a disputed matter to selected parties and the substitution of their award or decision for the judgment of a court. Morgan v. Teel, 109 Okl. 17, 234 P. 200, 201. See, also, Fargo v. Reighard, 13 Ind. App. 39, 39 N. E. 888, 41 N. E. 74; Duren v. Getchell, 55 Me. 241; Henderson v. Beaton, 52 Tex. 43; Boyden v. Lamb, 152 Mass. 416, 25 N. E. 609; In re Curtis-Castle Arbitration, 64 Conn. 501, 30 A. 769, 42 Am. St. Rep. 200; Atlantic Fruit Co. v. Red Cross Line (D. C.) 276 F. 319; Red Cross Line v. Atlantic Fruit Co., 264 U. S. 109, 44 S. Ct. 274, 68 L. Ed. 582.

For cases decided under the United States Arbitration Act, 9 USCA, "Arbitration," enacted Feb. 12, 1925, see The Silverbrook (D. C.) 18 F.(2d) 144; The Fredensbro (D. C.) 18 F.(2d) 983; Danielsen v. Entre Rios Rys. Co. (D. C.) 22 F.(2d) 326.

Compulsory arbitration is that which occurs when the consent of one of the parties is enforced by statutory provisions. Wood v. City of Seattle, 23 Wash. 1, 62 Pac. 135, 52 L. R. A. 369.

Voluntary arbitration is by mutual and free consent of the parties.

The submission is an agreement by which parties agree to submit their differences to the decision of a referee or arbitrators. It is sometimes termed a reference. 3 M. & W. 816; McManus v. McCulloch, 6 Watts (Pa.) 357; Stewart v. Cass, 16 Vt. 663, 42 Am. Dec. 534; Howard v. Sexton, 4 N. Y. 157. As to "final submission," see In re Gitt, 125 N. Y. S. 369, 140 App. Div. 382.

In a wide sense, "arbitration" may embrace the whole method of thus settling controversies, and include all the various steps. But in a more strict use, the term denotes only the submission and hearing, the decision being separately spoken of, and called an "award." An award is the judgment or decision of arbitrators or referees on a matter submitted to them. It is also the writing containing such judgment. Cowell; Termes de la Ley; Jenk. 137. See Award.

As distinguished from appraisal, an arbitration presupposes a controversy or a difference to be tried and decided. On the other hand, an appraisal or valuation is generally a mere auxiliary feature, as of a contract of sale, the purpose of which is not to adjudicate a controversy but to avoid one. Thompson v. Newman, 171 P. 982, 983, 36 Cal. App. 248; Luedinghaus Lumber Co. v. Luedinghaus (C. C. A.) 299 F. 111, 113; Webster v. Van Allen, 216 N. Y. S. 552, 555, 217 App. Div. 219; Dworkin v. Caledonian Ins. Co., 235 Mo. 342, 226 S. W. 846, 848; Toledo S. S. Co. v. Zenith Transp. Co., 184 F. 391, 106 C. C. A. 501.

Arbitration strictly applies to cases where the parties agree beforehand to abide by the award, while "conciliation" is the term used where there is no agreement, but the efforts are made by some indifferent party as a mediator to promote an agreement between the parties.

With reference to labor matters, the investigation and determination of disputed matters between employers and employees (often called "labor arbitration"). As to federal legislation, which is necessarily limited to disputes affecting interstate commerce, see 45 USCA § 10 et seq.

ARBITRATION CLAUSE. A clause inserted in a contract providing for compulsory arbitration in case of dispute as to rights or liabilities under it; ineffectual if it purports to oust the courts of jurisdiction entirely. See Perry v. Cobb, 88 Me. 435, 34 A. 278, 49 L. R. A. 389.

ARBITRATION OF EXCHANGE. This takes place where a merchant pays his debts in one country by a bill of exchange upon another.

ARBITRATOR. A private, disinterested person, chosen by the parties to a disputed question, for the purpose of hearing their contention, and giving judgment between them; to whose decision (award) the litigants submit themselves either voluntarily, or, in some cases, compulsorily, by order of a court. Gordon v. U. S., 7 Wall. 195, 19 L. Ed. 35; Mobile v. Wood (C. C.) 95 Fed. 538; Burchell v. Marsh, 17 How. 349, 15 L. Ed. 96; Miller v. Canal Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; Fudickar v. Insurance Co., 62 N. Y. 399.

"Referee" is of frequent modern use as a synonym of arbitrator, but is in its origin of broader signification and less accurate than arbitrator.

ARBITRIOS. In Spanish and Mexican law. Taxes imposed by municipalities on certain articles of merchandise, to defray the general expenses of government, in default of revenues from "proprios" (q. v.), i. e., lands owned by the municipality, or the income of which was legally set apart for its support. Sometimes used in a wider sense, as meaning the resources of a town, including its privileges in the royal lands as well as the taxes. Es-criche Dict.; Sheldon v. Milmo, 90 Tex. 1, 36 S. W. 413.

ARBITRIUM. The decision of an arbiter, or arbitrator; an award; a judgment.

The court was formerly held in the hall belonging to the College of Civilians, commonly called "Doctors' Commons." It is now held in Westminster Hall. Its proper jurisdiction is only over the thirteen peculiar parishes belonging to the archbishop in London, but, the office of Dean of the Arches having been for a long time united with that of the archbishop's principal official, the Judge of the Arches, in right of such added office, it receives and determines appeals from the sentences of all infe-

Martin*, 34 Ark. 340. But under Laws Va. 1918, c. 388, §§ 1, 49, 58, liquids, mixtures, and preparations which will produce intoxication, as defined in the prohibition act, are "ardent spirits" condemned by the act whether or not they contain alcohol. *Christian v. In rhetoric and logic, an inference drawn from premises, the truth of which is indisputable, or at least highly probable.

The argument of a demurrer, special case, appeal, or other proceeding involving a question of law, consists of the speeches of the opposed counsel; namely, the "opening" of the counsel having the right to begin, (q. v.) the speech of his opponent, and the "reply" of the first counsel. It answers to the trial of a question of fact. Sweet. But the submission of printed briefs may technically constitute an argument. Malcomb v. Hamill, 65 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 506; State v. California Min. Co., 13 Nev. 209. Also, the opening statement to a jury is part of the argument. State v. McCaskill, 173 Iowa, 563, 155 N. W. 976, 977.

If there be in any deed or instrument equivocal expressions, and great inconvenience must necessarily follow from one construction, it is strong to show that such construction is not according to the true intention of the grantor; but where there is no equivocal expression in the instrument, and the words used admit only of one meaning, arguments of inconvenience prove only want of foresight in the grantor. 3 Madd. 540; 7 Taunt. 496.

Hope Natural Gas Co.*, 76 W. Va. 649, 86 S. E. 564, 566; North American Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (D. C.) 288 F. 612, 625.

ARMISCARA. An ancient mode of punishment, which was to carry a saddle at the back as a token of subjection. Spelman.

ARMISTICE. A suspending or cessation of hostilities between belligerent nations or forces for a considerable time. Commercial Cable Co. v. Burleson (D. C.) 255 F. 99, 104. The term cannot properly be applied to agreements between a government on one side and rioters, brigands, and banditti on the other. O'Neill v. Central Leather Co., 87 N. J. Law, 552, 94 A. 789, 790, L. R. A. 1917A, 276.

An armistice differs from a mere "suspension of arms" (q. v.) in that the latter is concluded for very brief periods and for local military purposes only, whereas an armistice not only covers a longer period, but is agreed upon for political purposes. It is said to be general if it relates to the whole area of the war, and partial if it relates to only a portion of that area. Partial armistices are sometimes called truces (q. v.) but there is no hard and fast distinction.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS. In English law. A device depicted on the (now imaginary) shield of one of the nobility, of which gentry is the lowest degree. The criterion of nobility is the bearing of arms, or armorial bearings, received from ancestry.

Armorum appellations, non solum scuta et gladii et galeæ, sed et fustes et lapides continentur. Under the name of arms are included, not only shields and swords and helmets, but also clubs and stones. Co. Litt. 162.

ARMS. Anything that a man wears for his defense, or takes in his hands, or uses in his anger, to cast at or strike at another. Co. Litt. 161b, 162a; State v. Buzzard, 4 Ark. 18.

This term, as it is used in the constitution, relative to the right of citizens to bear arms, refers to the arms of a militiaman or soldier, and the word is used in its military sense. The arms of the infantry soldier are the musket and bayonet; of cavalry and dragoons, the sabre, holster pistols, and carbine; of the artillery, the field-piece, siege-gun, and mortar, with side arms. The term, in this connection, cannot be made to cover such weapons as dirks, daggers, slung-shots, sword-canes, brass knuckles, and bowie-knives. These are not military arms. English v. State, 35 Tex. 476, 14 Am. Rep. 374; Hill v. State, 53 Ga. 472; Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455, 25 Am. Rep. 556; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 179, 8 Am. Rep. 8; Aymette v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 154. But a pistol is properly included within the word "arms." State v. Kerner, 181 N. C. 574, 107 S. E. 222, 224.

Arms, or coat of arms, signifies insignia, i. e., ensigns of honor, such as were formerly assumed by soldiers of fortune, and painted on their shields to distinguish them; or nearly the same as armorial bearings (q. v.).

ARMY. The armed forces of a nation intended for military service on land.

"The term 'army' or 'armies' has never been used by congress, so far as I am advised, so as to include the navy or marines, and there is nothing in the act of 1862, or the circumstances which led to its passage, to warrant the conclusion that it was used therein in any other than its long established and ordinary sense,—the land force, as distinguished from the navy and marines." In re Bailey, 2 Sawy. 205, Fed. Cas. No. 728. But see In re Stewart, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 636.

An "army" is a body of men whose business is war, while the "militia" is a body of men composed of citizens occupied temporarily in the pursuit of civil life, but organized by discipline and drill, and called into the field for temporary military service when the exigencies of the country require it. Story v. Perkins (D. C.) 243 F. 997, 999, 1 A. L. R. 547. And see Brown v. Soldiers' Bonus Board, 44 R. I. 483, 116 A. 280, 281.

Regular Army

"The permanent military establishment, which is maintained both in peace and war according to law." 10 USCA § 3; State v. Moorhead, 102 Neb. 276, 167 N. W. 70, 71. But the term as used in an insurance certificate may mean simply the regular army of any country, not being construable with reference to the congressional classification of the military organizations of the United States. Huntington v. Fraternal Reserve Ass'n of Oshkosh, 173 Wis. 582, 181 N. W. 819, 820.

AROMATARIUS. A word formerly used for a grocer. 1 Vent. 142.

AROUND. "Around" may mean "in the vicinity of." Thus, sheep branded "O" on the hip or side may be within a mortgage covering sheep described as branded "O" around the hip bone. Hawkins v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 175 S. W. 163, 164.

ARPEN, Arpent, Arpennus. A measure of land of uncertain quantity mentioned in Domesday and other old books; by some called an "acre," by others "half an acre," and by others a "furlong." Spelman; Cowell;

Blount. Quoted in McMillan v. Aiken, 205 Ala. 35, 88 So. 135, 143.

A French measure of land, containing one hundred square perches, of eighteen feet each, or about an acre. But the quantity varied in different provinces. Spelman. An "arpent" is a land measure varying in dimension from .84 of an acre to 1.04 acres and to 1.28 acres, accordingly as the arpent meant is an arpent de Paris, an arpent commun, or an arpent d'ordonnance. Troll v. City of St. Louis, 257 Mo. 626, 168 S. W. 167, 171.

In Louisiana, the terms "arpent" and "acre" are sometimes used interchangeably; but there is a considerable difference, the arpent being the square of 192 feet and the acre of 209 and a fraction. Randolph v. Sentilles, 110 La. 419, 34 South. 587.

ARPEMENTOR. A measurer or surveyor of land. Cowell; Spelman.

ARRA. In the civil law. Earnest; earnest-money; evidence of a completed bargain. Used of a contract of marriage, as well as any other. Spelled, also, Arrha, Arrhæ, Arræ, Calvin. Cf. Arles.

In Criminal Practice

The arraignment (q. v.) of a prisoner consists of calling upon him by name, and reading to him the indictment, (in the English tongue,) and demanding of him whether he be guilty or not guilty, and entering his plea. Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 16 Sup. Ct. 952, 40 L. Ed. 1097; Early v. State, 1 Tex. App. 248, 268, 28 Am. Rep. 409; State v. Braunschweig, 36 Mo. 397; Whitehead v. Com., 19 Grat. (Va.) 640; United States v. McKnight (D. C.) 112 Fed. 982; State v. Hunter, 181 Mo. 316, 80 S. W. 955; State v. De Wolfe, 29 Mont. 415, 74 Pac. 1084.

In Old English Law

Particularly used with reference to the public domain or crown lands; as where a license was granted to inclose land in a forest with a low hedge and a ditch, under a yearly rent, or where an encroachment, originally a purpresture, was allowed to remain on the fixing and payment of a suitable compensation to the public for its maintenance.

ARREST. To deprive a person of his liberty by legal authority. Taking, under real or assumed authority, custody of another for the purpose of holding or detaining him to answer a criminal charge or civil demand. Davis & Allcott Co. v. Boozer, 215 Ala. 116, 110 So. 28, 29, 49 A. L. R. 1307; French v. Bancroft, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 502; Emery v. Chesley, 18 N. H. 201; U. S. v. Benner, 24 Fed. Cas. 1084; Rhodes v. Walsh, 55 Minn. 542, 57 N. W. 212, 23 L. R. A. 632; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 Tex. App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

Arrest is well described in the old books as "the beginning of imprisonment, when a man is first taken and restrained of his liberty, by power of a lawful warrant." 2 Shep. Abr. 299; Wood, Inst. Com. Law, 575.

It is the taking, seizing or detaining the person of another, touching or putting hands upon him in the execution of process, or any act indicating an intention to arrest. U. S. v. Benner, Bald. 234, 239, Fed. Cas. No. 14,568; State v. District Court of Eighth Judicial Dist. in and for Cascade County, 70 Mont. 378, 225 P. 1000, 1001; Hart v. Flynn's Ex'r, 8 Dana (Ky.) 190. "An arrest is an imprisonment." Blight v. Meeker, 7 N. J. L. 97; People v. Esposito, 194 N. Y. S. 326, 118 Misc. 867. As used in Bankruptcy Act, § 9 (11 USCA § 27), arrest includes "imprisonment." Ex parte Harrison (D. C.) 272 F. 543, 544.

By arrest is to be understood to take the party into custody. To commit is the separate and distinct act of carrying the party to prison, after having taken him into custody by force of the execution. French v. Bancroft, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 502.

As ordinarily used, the terms arrest and attachment coincide in meaning to some extent; though in strictness, as a distinction, an arrest may be said to be the act resulting from the service of an attachment. And in the more extended sense which is sometimes given to attachment, including the act of taking, it would seem to differ from arrest in that it is more peculiarly applicable to a taking of property, while arrest is more commonly used in speaking of persons.

Arrest is also applied in some instances to a seizure and detention of personal chattels, especially of ships and vessels; thus, in admiralty actions a ship or cargo is arrested when the marshal has served the writ in an action in rem. Williams & B. Adm. Jur. 193; Pelham v. Rose, 9 Wall. 103, 19 L. Ed. 602.

In Civil Practice

The apprehension of a person by virtue of a lawful authority to answer the demand against him in a civil action. Gentry v. Griffith, 27 Tex. 462.

One of the means which the law gives the creditor to secure the person of his debtor while the suit is pending, or to compel him to give security for his appearance after judgment. La. Code Prac. art. 210.

In Criminal Cases

The apprehending or detaining of the person in order to be forthcoming to answer an alleged or suspected crime. Quoted and adopted, as is also the distinction which follows, in County of Montgomery v. Robinson, 85 Ill. 174; Hogan v. Stophlet, 179 Ill. 150, 53 N. E. 604, 44 L. R. A. 809; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 Tex. App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

The word arrest is said to be more properly used in civil cases, and apprehension in criminal. Thus, a man is arrested under a capias ad respondendum, and apprehended under a warrant charging him with larceny.

Malicious Arrest

An arrest made willfully and without probable cause, but in the course of a regular proceeding.

Parol Arrest

One ordered by a judge or magistrate from the bench, without written complaint or other proceedings, of a person who is present before him, and which is executed on the spot; as in case of breach of the peace in open court.

Rearrest

Right of an officer to take without warrant one forcibly freeing himself after arrest, Gross v. State, 186 Ind. 581, 117 N. E. 562, 1 A. L. R. 1151, or escaping in any manner, Heffler v. Hunt, 120 Me. 10, 112 A. 675, or violating parole, Massey v. Cunningham, 169 Ark. 410, 275 S. W. 737, or failing to respond to bond for appearance, Porter v. Garmony, 148 Ga. 261, 96 S. E. 426.

Second Arrest

The "second arrest" forbidden after discharge on habeas corpus means an imprisonment based on the same information and not under a new information followed by a lawful warrant. Sutton v. Butler, 26 N. Y. Cr. R. 413, 133 N. Y. S. 936, 74 Misc. 251; State v. Riley, 109 Minn. 437, 124 N. W. 13. See, also, Stair v. Heska Amone Congregation, 128 Tenn. 190, 159 S. W. 840; 841.

Warrant of Arrest

A written order issued and signed by a magistrate, directed to a peace officer or some other person specially named, and commanding him to arrest the body of a person named in it, who is accused of an offense. Brown v. State, 109 Ala. 70, 20 South. 103.

ARREST OF INQUEST. Pleading in arrest of taking the inquest upon a former issue, and showing cause why an inquest should not be taken.

ARREST OF JUDGMENT. The act of staying a judgment, or refusing to render judgment in an action at law, after verdict, for some matter intrinsic appearing on the face of the record, which would render the judgment, if given, erroneous or reversible. 3 Bl. Comm. 393; 3 Steph. Comm. 628; 2 Tidd, Pr. 918; Browning v. Powers, 142 Mo. 322, 44 S. W. 224; People v. Kelly, 94 N. Y. 526; Byrne v. Lynn, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 252, 44 S. W. 311; Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Walsh, 60 Ind.

App. 76, 110 N. E. 96, 99; State v. Kirby, 34 S. D. 281, 148 N. W. 533; State v. Christian, 101 W. Va. 579, 133 S. E. 329, 330.

It is the fact that a motion in arrest of judgment is based on some defect on the face of the record or pleadings which aids in distinguishing it from a motion for a new trial. Maddox Coffee Co. v. McHan, 23 Ga. App. 198, 95 S. E. 736. It differs also from a motion to set aside a judgment, in that a motion in arrest of judgment must be made during the term when the judgment was rendered. Love v. National Liberty Ins. Co., 157 Ga. 259, 121 S. E. 648, 650.

A motion in arrest of judgment is practically a demurrer, People v. Cordosco, 77 Cal. App. 780, 246 P. 461, 462, and has been abolished in some jurisdictions, Mo. Laws 1925, p. 198; State v. Sharp (Mo. Sup.) 300 S. W. 501.

If, in contempt of the arrestment, he make payment of the sum or deliver the goods arrested to the common debtor, he is not only liable criminally for breach of the arrestment, but he must pay the debt again to the arrester; Erskine, Inst. 3. 6. 6.

ARRESTER. In Scotch law. One who sues out and obtains an arrestment of his debtor's goods or movable obligations. Erskine, Inst. 3. 6. 1.

ARRESTMENT. In Scotch law. Securing a criminal's person till trial, or that of a debtor till he give security judicio sisti.

The order of a judge, by which he who is debtor in a movable obligation to the arrester's debtor is prohibited to make payment or delivery till the debt due to the arrester be paid or secured. Erskine, Inst. 3. 6. 1; 1. 2. 12.

This word is used interchangeably with attachment in the act for the protection of seaman's wages. U. S. R. S. § 4536; Wilder v. Navigation Co., 211 U. S. 239, 29 S. Ct. 58, 53 L. Ed. 164, 15 Ann. Cas. 127. The court, after quoting the above definition, held that, though not literally so, the prohibition against "attachment or arrestment" must apply to execution after judgment as well as attachment before it.

ARRIERE VASSAL. In feudal law. The vassal of a vassal.

ARRIVAL. In marine insurance, arrival of a vessel means an arrival for purposes of business, requiring an entry and clearance and stay at the port so long as to require some of the acts connected with business, and not merely touching at a port for advices, or to ascertain the state of the market, or being driven in by an adverse wind and sailing again as soon as it changes. Gronstadt v. Witthoff (D. C.) 15 Fed. 265; Dagleish v. Brooke, 15 East, 295; Kenyon v. Tucker, 17 R. I. 529, 23 A. 61; Meigs v. Insurance Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 439; Toler v. White, 1 Ware, 280, 24 Fed. Cas. 3; Harrison v. Vose, 9 How. 384, 13 L. Ed. 179. See, also, F. S. Royster Guano Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 18 F.(2d) 469, 470.

"A vessel arrives at a port of discharge when she comes, or is brought, to a place where it is intended to discharge her, and where is the usual and customary place of discharge. When a vessel is insured to one or two ports, and sails for one, the risk terminates on her arrival there. If a vessel is insured to a particular port of discharge, and is destined to discharge cargo successively at two different wharves, docks, or places, within that port, each being a distinct place for the delivery of cargo, the risk ends when she has been moored twenty-four hours in safety at the first place. But if she is destined to one or more places for the delivery of cargo, and delivery or discharge of a portion of her cargo is necessary, not by reason of her having reached any destined place of delivery, but as a necessary and usual nautical measure, to enable her to reach such usual and destined place of delivery, she cannot properly be considered as having arrived at the usual and customary place of discharge, when she is at anchor for the purpose only of using such means as will better enable her to reach it. If she cannot get to the destined and usual place of discharge in the port because she is too deep, and must be lightered to get there, and, to aid in prosecuting the voyage, cargo is thrown overboard or put into lighters, such discharge does not make that the place of arrival; it is only a stopping-place in the voyage. When the vessel is insured to a particular port of discharge, arrival within the limits of the harbor does not terminate the risk, if the place is not one where vessels are discharged and voyages completed. The policy covers the vessel through the port navigation, as well as on the open sea, until she reaches the destined place." Simpson v. Insurance Co., Holmes, 137, Fed. Cas. No. 12,886.

"Arrival of ship," within meaning of bills of lading requiring claims to be filed, must be construed, where misdelivery is charged, as meaning date when cargo is discharged or offered for delivery. The Cardiganshire (D. C.) 9 F.(2d) 416, 420.

As to arrival of goods, see Jewett & Sherman Co. v. Rosenberg Bros. & Co., 182 Wis. 34, 195 N. W. 720; Boyd v. City of Louisville, 178 Ky. 354, 198 S. W. 927, 928; Rhodes v. State of Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 18 S. Ct. 664, 42 L. Ed. 1088.

"Arrival" within the immigration laws means compliance with the requirements entitling an alien to entry. See 8 USCA §§ 106, 380. In re Kempson (D. C.) 14 F.(2d) 668, 669.

ARRIVE. To come to a particular place; to reach a particular or certain place. Thompson v. U. S., 1 Brock. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 13,985; 8 B. & C. 119.

In Insurance Law

To reach that particular place or point in a harbor which is the ultimate destination of a vessel. Meigs v. Insurance Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 439, 453.

The words "arrive" and "enter" are not always synonymous; there certainly may be an arrival without an actual entry or attempt to enter. United States v. Open Boat, 5 Mason, 120, 132, Fed. Cas. No. 15,967. And where a vessel from a foreign port, laden with liquors, anchored within four leagues of the coast, and the master without a permit therefor, allowed part of the cargo to be taken away, with the intention of so disposing of the entire cargo, the vessel had "arrived" within the meaning of Tariff Act 1922, § 586 (19 USCA § 488). The Cherie (C. C. A.) 13 F. (2d) 992, 993, aff The U. S. v. The Cherie (D. C.) 9 F.(2d) 640, 641.

ARROGATION. In the civil law. The adoption of a person who was of full age or sui juris. 1 Browne, Civil & Adm. Law, 119; Dig. 1, 7, 5; Inst. 1, 11, 3. Reinders v. Koppelman, 68 Mo. 497, 30 Am. Rep. 802.

This is not an offense if done with license to convert forest into tillage ground. Consult Manwood's Forest Laws, pt. I, p. 171. Wharnton. See Essarter.

v. Steele, 83 Wash. 470, 145 P. 581; People v. Wein, 187 N. Y. S. 753, 754, 196 App. Div. 368.

Aggravated Assault

One committed with the intention of committing some additional crime; or one attended with circumstances of peculiar outrage or atrocity. This class includes assault with a dangerous or deadly weapon; State v. Kakarikos, 45 Utah, 470, 146 P. 750, 751; People v. Bennett, 37 Cal. App. 324, 173 P. 1004, 1005; Brinkley v. State, 82 Tex. W. 974, 975.

Secret Assault

Under a North Carolina statute, to warrant conviction for malicious, "secret assault," state must prove all essential elements of crime, namely, malice, use of deadly weapon in secret manner, with intent to kill. State v. Kline, 190 N. C. 177, 129 S. E. 417, 418. It is not essential, however, that the person assaulted be unconscious of the presence of his adversary, though the purpose of such adversary must not be known. State v. Oxendine, 187 N. C. 658, 122 S. E. 568, 571.

Simple Assault

One committed with no intention to do any other injury. An offer or attempt to do bodily harm which falls short of an actual battery; an offer or attempt to beat another, but without touching him; for example, a blow delivered within striking distance, but which does not reach its mark. See State v. Lightsey, 43 S. C. 114, 20 S. E. 975; Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 393. Also, sometimes, the use of physical violence upon another, without circumstances of aggravation. Ratcliff v. State, 106 Tex. Cr. R. 37, 289 S. W. 1072, 1074. "Simple assault and battery" is an unlawful act of violent injury to another, unaccompanied by any circumstances of aggravation. State v. ASSEMBLE. When applied to a machine, "assemble" means to collect or gather together the parts and place them in their proper relation to each other to constitute the machine. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Bucheit, 14 Ala. App. 511, 71 So. 82, 88.

ASSEMBLY. The concourse or meeting together of a considerable number of persons at the same place. Also the persons so gathered.

Popular assemblies are those where the people meet to deliberate upon their rights; these are guaranteed by the constitution. Const. U. S. Amend. art. 1.

Political assemblies are those required by the constitution and laws: for example, the general assembly.

The lower or more numerous branch of the legislature in many of the states is also called the "Assembly" or "House of Assembly," but the term seems to be an appropriate one to designate any political meeting required to be held by law.

ASSEMBLY GENERAL. The highest ecclesiastical court in Scotland, composed of a representation of the ministers and elders of the church, regulated by Act 5th Assem. 1694.

ASSEMBLY, UNLAWFUL. In criminal law. The assembling of three or more persons together to do an unlawful act, who separate without actually doing it, or making any motion towards it. 3 Inst. 176; 4 Bl. Comm. 146. It differs from a riot or rout, because in each of the latter cases there is some act done besides the simple meeting. See State v. Stalcup, 23 N. C. 30, 35 Am. Dec. 732; 9 Car. & P.

91, 431; 5 Car. & P. 154; 1 Bish. Crim. Law, § 535; 2 Bish. Crim. Law, §§ 1256, 1259.

Peasley, 80 Wash. 99, 141 P. 316, 317; Illinois State Bank v. Queen City Quarry Co., 203 Ill. App. 176, 177. It implies a conscious approval of facts actually known, as distinguished from mere neglect to ascertain facts. White-Wilson-Drew Co. v. Lyon-Ratcliff Co. (C. C. A. Ill.) 268 F. 525, 526. Sometimes it is equivalent to "authorize." Hagerla v. Mississippi River Power Co. (D. C.) 202 F. 776, 783.

In every agreement the parties must, as regards the principal or essential part of the transaction, intend the same thing: i. e., each must know what the other is to do. This is called "mutuality of assent." Chit. Cont. 13.

In strictness, assent is to be distinguished from consent, which denotes a willingness that something about to be done, be done: acceptance, compliance with, or receipt of, something offered; ratification, rendering valid something done without authority; and approval, an expression of satisfaction with some act done for the benefit of another beside the party approving. But in practice the term is often used in the sense of acceptance and approval.

Under a statute penalizing a broker who consents or assents to unlawful pledge of customer's securities, "consent" means an active circumstance of concurrence, while "assent" is passive act of concurrence before another does act charged, People v. Sugarman, 215 N. Y. S. 56, 66, 216 App. Div. 209; or "consent" means an active acquiescence, and "assent" a silent acquiescence with knowledge of the proposed act, but neither includes approval after commission of act, People v. Lowe, 205 N. Y. S. 77, 78, 209 App. Div. 498.

Express Assent

Implied Assent

Mutual Assent

The meeting of the minds of both or all the parties to a contract; the fact that each agrees to all the terms and conditions, in the same sense and with the same meaning as the others. Insurance Co. v. Young, 23 Wall. 107, 23 L. Ed. 152.

ASSERT. To state as true; declare; maintain. To assert against another has probably a prima facie meaning of a contradiction of him, but the context or circumstances may show that it connotes a criminatory charge; 7 L. J. Ex. 268.

ASSERTORY COVENANT. One which affirms that a particular state of facts exists; an affirming promise under seal.

ASSERTORY OATH. See Oath.

ASSESS. To ascertain; fix the value of. State ex rel. Ambrose v. Trimble, 304 Mo. 533, 263 S. W. 840, 842. To ascertain, adjust, and settle the respective shares to be contributed by several persons toward an object beneficial to them all, in proportion to the benefit received.

To adjust or fix the proportion of a tax which each person, of several liable to it, has to pay; to apportion a tax among several; to distribute taxation in a proportion founded on the proportion of burden and benefit. Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332, 52 Pac. 828; Seymour v. Peters, 67 Mich. 415, 35 N. W. 62. To calculate the rate and amount of taxes. Flanigan v. Police Jury of Jackson Parish, 145 La. 613, 82 So. 722, 726.

To place a valuation upon property for the purpose of apportioning a tax. Bridewell v. Morton, 46 Ark. 73; Moss v. Hindes, 28 Vt. 281.

"Assess" is sometimes used as synonymous with "levy"; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. State Board of Taxes and Assessment, 101 N. J. Law, 298, 128 A. 432, 433; Barnett v. Pension Commission of Police and Fire Departments of Atlantic City, 100 N. J. Eq. 473, 136 A. 317, 319; and is sometimes distinguished therefrom; City of Portland v. Portland Ry. Light & Power Co., 80 Or. 271, 156 P. 1058, 1064.

To impose a pecuniary payment upon persons or property; to tax. People v. Priest, 169 N. Y. 435, 62 N. E. 568; People v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 273 Ill. 220, 112 N. E. 700; State ex rel. Asotsky v. Regan, 317 Mo. 1216, 298 S. W. 747, 749, 55 A. L. R. 773.

ASSESSED. Where the charter of a corporation provides for the payment by it of a state tax, and contains a proviso that "no other tax or impost shall be levied or assessed upon the said company," the word "assessed" in the proviso cannot have the force and meaning of describing special levies for public improvements, but is used merely to describe the act of levying the tax or impost. New Jersey Midland R. Co. v. Jersey City, 42 N. J. Law, 97.

ASSESSMENT. In a general sense, "assessment" denotes the process of ascertaining and adjusting the shares respectively to be contributed by several persons towards a common beneficial object according to the benefit received.

In Taxation

The listing and valuation of property for the purpose of apportioning a tax upon it, either according to value alone or in proportion to benefit received. Also determining the share of a tax to be paid by each of many persons; or apportioning the entire tax to be levied among the different taxable persons, establishing the proportion due from each. Commerce Trust Co. v. Syndicate Lot Co., 208 Mo. App. 261, 232 S. W. 1055, 1056; Town of Albertville v. Hooper, 196 Ala. 642, 72 So. 258; Sussex County v. Jarratt, 129 Va. 672, 106 S.

E. 384, 387; Town of Aunburndale v. Cline, 82 Fla. 121, 89 So. 427, 429; Adams, etc., Co. v. Shelbyville, 154 Ind. 467, 57 N. E. 114, 49 L. R. A. 797, 77 Am. St. Rep. 484; Webb v. Bidwell, 15 Minn. 483 (Gil. 394); State v. Farmer, 94 Tex. 232, 59 S. W. 541; Kinney v. Zimpleman, 36 Tex. 582; Southern R. Co. v. Kay, 62 S. C. 28, 39 S. E. 785; U. S. v. Erie R. Co., 107 U. S. 1, 2 S. Ct. 83, 27 L. Ed. 385.

Assessment, as used in juxtaposition with taxation in a state constitution, includes all the steps necessary to be taken in the legitimate exercise of the power to tax. Hurford v. Omaha, 4 Neb. 336.

Assessment is also popularly used as a synonym for taxation in general,—the authoritative imposition of a rate or duty to be paid. But in its technical signification it denotes only taxation for a special purpose or local improvement; local taxation, as distinguished from general taxation; taxation on the principle of apportionment according to the relation between burden and benefit.

As distinguished from other kinds of taxation, assessments are those special and local impositions upon property in the immediate vicinity of municipal improvements which are necessary to pay for the improvement, and are laid with reference to the special benefit which the property is supposed to have derived therefrom. Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599. And see Ridenour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464; Roosevelt Hospital v. New York, 84 N. Y. 108, 112; King v. Portland, 2 Or. 146; Reeves v. Wood County, 8 Ohio St. 338; Wood v. Brady, 68 Cal. 78, 5 P. 623, 8 P. 599.

Taxes are impositions for purposes of general revenue, while assessments are special and local impositions upon property in the immediate vicinity of an improvement, for the public welfare, which are necessary to pay for the improvement and made with reference to the special benefit which such property derives from the expenditure. Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 329; Kimball v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 190 Iowa, 783, 180 N. W. 988, 991; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Town of Ahsokie, 192 N. C. 258, 134 S. E. 653, 654.

A special assessment is a charge in the nature of a tax, imposed for the purpose of paying the cost of a local improvement in a municipal corporation, and levied only on those parcels of real property which, by reason of the location of such improvement, are specially benefited by it. Village of Morgan Park v. Wiswall, 155 Ill. 262, 40 N. E. 611; Wilson v. Auburn, 27 Neb. 435, 43 N. W. 257; Raleigh v. Peace, 110 N. C. 32, 14 S. E. 521, 17 L. R. A. 330; Sargent v. Tuttle, 67 Conn. 162, 34 A. 1028, 32 L. R. A. 822.

Assessment and tax are not synonymous, although occasionally so used. Orr v. Allen (D. C.) 245 F. 486, 498.

An assessment is doubtless a tax, but the term implies something more; it implies a tax of a particular kind, predicated upon the principle of equivalents, or benefits, which are peculiar to the persons or property charged therewith, and which are said to be assessed or appraised, according to the measure or proportion of such equivalents; whereas a simple tax is imposed for the purpose of supporting the government generally, without reference to any special advantage which may be supposed to accrue to the persons taxed. Taxes must be levied, without discrimination, equally upon all the subjects of property; whilst assessments are only levied upon lands, or some other specific property, the subjects of the supposed benefits; to repay which the assessment is levied. Ridenour v. Saffin, 1 Handy (Ohio) 464; In re Walker River Irr. Dist., 44 Nev. 321, 195 P. 327, 330.

There is a wide difference in law between a tax and an assessment. In the one case the taxes are assessed against the individual and become a charge upon his property generally. In the other, the assessment, being for the benefits accruing to the specific property, becomes a charge only upon and against it, and liability for the charge is confined to the particular property benefited. Therefore an assessment or "special assessment" is not embraced within the meaning of the word taxation, because the owner of the property assessed gets back the amount of his assessment in the benefits received by his property, and therefore does not bear the burden of a tax. In re Walker River Irr. Dist., 44 Nev. 321, 195 P. 327, 330.

A charge or exaction levied on all the property within the limits of some pre-existing political unit, such as a municipality, and made in proportion to the valuation of the property, is a tax, not an assessment, though levied for purposes for which a local assessment might have been levied. Smith v. Hurlburt, 108 Or. 690, 217 P. 1093, 1099.

In Corporations

Installments of the money subscribed for shares of stock, called for from the subscribers by the directors, from time to time as the company requires money, are called "assessments," or, in England, "calls." Water Co. v. Superior Court, 92 Cal. 47, 28 Pac. 54, 27 Am. St. Rep. 91; Spangler v. Railroad Co., 21 Ill. 278; Stewart v. Publishing Co., 1 Wash. St. 521, 20 Pac. 605. While the terms "call" and "assessment" are generally used synonymously, the latter term applies with peculiar aptness to contributions above the par value of stock or the subscription liability of the stockholders; Porter v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 36 N. D. 199, 161 N. W. 1012, 1014; whereas "call" or "installments" means action of the board of directors demanding payment of all or portion of unpaid subscriptions; Seyberth v. American Commander Min. & Mill. Co., 42 Idaho, 254, 245 P. 392, 395. It has been said, however, that the superadded liability of stockholders to creditors, is not in a true sense an "assessment," but is a "statutory liability." Leach v. Arthur Sav. Bank, 203 Iowa, 1052, 213 N. W. 772, 773.

Of Damages

Fixing the amount of damages to which the successful party in a suit is entitled after an interlocutory judgment has been taken.

Assessment of damages is also the name given to the determination of the sum which a corporation proposing to take lands for a public use must pay in satisfaction of the demand proved or the value taken.

In Insurance

An apportionment made in general average upon the various articles and interests at risk, according to their value at the time and place of being in safety, for contribution for damage and sacrifices purposely made, and expenses incurred for escape from impending common peril. 2 Phil. Ins. c. xv.

A sum specially levied in mutual benefit insurance upon a fixed and definite plan within the limit of the company's or society's fundamental law of organization to pay losses, or losses and expenses incurred, being to a certain degree substantially the equivalent of premiums. Beaver State Merchants' Mut. Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Smith, 97 Or. 579, 192 P. 798, 800.

The periodical demands made by a mutual insurance company, under its charter and by-laws, upon the makers of premium notes, are also denominated "assessments." Hill v. Insurance Co., 129 Mich. 141, 88 N. W. 392.

In Mining

"Assessment" as applied to labor on mining claims is universally understood to mean the annual labor required by Rev. St. U. S. § 2324 (30 USCA § 28), in order to hold the right to the possession of the claim after a discovery and complete location has been made. Smith v. Union Oil Co., 166 Cal. 217, 135 P. 966, 969. See Assessment Work.

ASSESSMENT ASSOCIATION. This term, as defined by the Nebraska insurance laws, does not include an insurance company which requires the payment of a fixed premium in advance and provides benefits not in any degree dependent upon the collection of assessments from other members, and which does not provide for the levying of extra assessments, if necessary. Western Life & Accident Co. of Colorado v. State Ins. Board of Nebraska, 101 Neb. 152, 162 N. W. 530.

ASSESSMENT COMPANY. In life insurance. A company in which a death loss is met by levying an assessment on the surviving members of the association. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Marye, 85 Va. 643, 8 S. E. 481; National Ben. Ass'n v. Clay, 162 Ky. 409, 172 S. W. 922, 923.

ASSESSMENT CONTRACT. One wherein the payment of the benefit is in any manner or degree dependent on the collection of an assessment levied on persons holding similar contracts. Folkens v. Insurance Co., 98 Mo. App. 480, 72 S. W. 720.

ASSESSMENT DISTRICT. In taxation. Any subdivision of territory, whether the whole or part of any municipality, in which by law a separate assessment of taxable property is made by the officers elected or appointed therefor. Rev. Stat. Wis. 1898, § 1031 (St. 1931, § 70.04).

ASSESSMENT FUND. The assessment fund of a mutual-benefit association is the balance of the assessments, less expenses, out of which beneficiaries are paid. Kerr v. Ben. Ass'n, 39 Minn. 174, 39 N. W. 312, 12 Am. St. Rep. 631.

ASSESSMENT LABOR. These words in Act Feb. 12, 1903 (30 USCA § 102), providing that such labor on oil claims may be done on one of a group of contiguous claims refers to the annual labor required of the locator of a mineral claim after discovery by Rev. St. § 2324 (30 USCA § 28), and not to work before discovery. Union Oil Co. of California v. Smith, 249 U. S. 337, 39 S. Ct. 308, 311, 63 L. Ed. 635. See Assessment, under the heading "In Mining."

ASSESSMENT LIST. The list furnished by the assessor to the board of equalization. Adsit v. Park, 144 La. 934, 81 So. 430, 434.

ASSESSMENT ROLL. In taxation. The list or roll of taxable persons and property, completed, verified, and deposited by the assessors, not as it appears after review and equalization. Bank v. Genoa, 28 Misc. 71, 59 N. Y. S. 829; Adams v. Brennan, 72 Miss. 894, 18 So. 482. See Esmeralda County v. Mineral County, 37 Nev. 180, 141 P. 73.

ASSESSMENT WORK. Under the mining laws of the United States, the holder of an unpatented mining claim on the public domain is required, in order to hold his claim, to do labor or make improvements upon it to the extent of at least one hundred dollars in each year. Rev. St. U. S. § 2324 (30 USCA § 28). This is commonly called by miners "doing assessment work."

ASSESSOR. An officer chosen or appointed to appraise, value, or assess property.

The assessing power, and not merely the county assessor. Board of Com'rs of San Miguel County v. Floaten, 66 Colo. 540, 181 P. 122.

In Civil and Scotch Law

Persons skilled in law, selected to advise the judges of the inferior courts. Bell; Dig. 1, 22; Cod. 1, 51.

A person learned in some particular science or industry, who sits with the judge on the trial of a cause requiring such special knowledge and gives his advice.

In England it is the practice in admiralty business to call in assessors, in cases involving questions of navigation or seamanship. They are called "nautical assessors" (q. v.), and are always Brethern of the Trinity House.

ASSETS.

In Probate Law

Property of a decedent available for the payment of debts and legacies; the estate coming to the heir or personal representative which is chargeable, in law or equity, with the obligations which such heir or representative is required, in his representative capacity, to discharge.

In an accurate and legal sense, all the personal property of the deceased which is of a salable nature, and may be converted into ready money, is deemed assets. But the word is not confined to such property; for all other property of the deceased, real or personal, tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, which can be made available for or can be appropriated to payment of debts, is, in a large sense, assets. In re Carter's Estate, 113 Okl. 182, 240 P. 727, 729; Agee v. Saunders, 127 Tenn. 680, 157 S. W. 64, 65, 46 L. R. A. (N. S.) 788; Fremd v. Hogg, 68 Fla. 331, 67 So. 75, 76, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 155; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 531; Marvin v. Railroad Co. (C. C.) 49 Fed. 436; Trust Co. v. Earle, 110 U. S. 710, 4 Sup. Ct. 231, 28 L. Ed. 301.

In Commercial Law

The aggregate of available property, stock in trade, cash, etc., belonging to a merchant or mercantile company.

The word "assets," though more generally used to denote everything which comes to the representatives of a deceased person, yet is by no means confined to that use, but has come to signify everything which can be made available for the payment of debts, whether belonging to the estate of a deceased person or not. Hence we speak of the assets of a bank or other monied corporation, the assets of an insolvent debtor, and the assets of an individual or private copartnership; and we always use this word when we speak of the means which a party has, as compared with his liabilities or debts. Stanton v. Lewis, 26 Conn. 449; Vaiden v. Hawkins, 59 Miss. 419; Pelican v. Rock Falls, 81 Wis. 428, 51 N. W. 871, 52 N. W. 1049; Warren v. Warren, 36 R. I. 167, 89 A. 651, 658; Lane v. Barnard, 170 N. Y. S. 946, 947, 103 Misc. 707. The term "assets," as applied to a bank, is broad enough to cover anything which is or may be available to pay creditors; but, as usually understood, it refers to the tangible property of the corporation, and not to the liability of stockholders contingent upon insolvency. Hill v. Smathers, 173 N. C. 642, 92 S. E. 607, 609. But when the individual liability of stockholders has been enforced by the superintendent of banks, funds collected by him thereunder are "assets." Bennett v. Wilkes County, 164 Ga. 790, 139 S. E. 566, 568.

The property or effects of a bankrupt or insolvent, applicable to the payment of his debts.

The term "assets" includes all property of every kind and nature, chargeable with the debts of the bankrupt, that comes into the hands of and under the control of the assignee; and the value thereof is not to be considered a less sum than that actually realized out of said property, and received by the assignee for it. In re Taggart, 16 N. B. R. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 13,725; Progressive Building & Loan Co. v. Hall (C. C. A.) 220 F. 45, 46.

The term "assets," as used in a prosecution of a private banker for receiving deposits while insolvent, means the property of accused, real and personal, his bills receivable, notes, obligations due him, of any and every character, considering the solvency of the makers, indorsers, and guarantors, and the value of the securities thereon, if any, and all stocks held by him as his property. Brown v. State, 71 Tex. Cr. R. 353, 162 S. W. 339, 346.

In General

—Assets entre mains. L. Fr. Assets in hand; assets in the hands of executors or administrators, applicable for the payment of debts. Termes de la Ley; 2 Bl. Comm. 510; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. 23; Favorite v. Booher, 17 Ohio St. 557.

—Assets per descent. That portion of the ancestor's estate which descends to the heir, and which is sufficient to charge him, as far as it goes, with the specialty debts of his ancestors. 2 Williams, Ex'rs, 1011.

—Equitable assets. Equitable assets are all assets which are chargeable with the payment of debts or legacies in equity, and which do not fall under the description of legal assets. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 552. Those portions of the property which by the ordinary rules of law are exempt from debts, but which the testator has voluntarily charged as assets, or which, being non-existent at law, have been created in equity. Adams, Eq. 254, et seq. They are so called because they can be reached only by the aid and instrumentality of a court of equity, and because their distribution is governed by a different rule from that which governs the distribution of legal assets. 2 Fonbl. Eq. b. 4, pt. 2, c. 2, § 1, and notes; Story, Eq. Jur. § 552.

—Legal assets. That portion of the assets of a deceased party which by law is directly liable, in the hands of his executor or administrator, to the payment of debts and legacies. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 551. Such assets as can be reached in the hands of an executor or administrator, by a suit at law against him.

—Personal assets. Chattels, money, and other personal property belonging to a bankrupt, insolvent, or decedent estate, which go to the assignee or executor.

—Quick assets. This term was used in a corporation credit statement merely to distinguish liquid assets from those permanently invested in the business, like real estate and machinery, and, included amounts charged against officers for return of part of salaries paid them in a previous year, in accordance with the agreement of employment. In re American Knit Goods Mfg. Co., 173 F. 480, 97 C. C. A. 486, aff (D. C.) 155 F. 906.

—Real assets. Lands or real estate in the hands of an heir, chargeable with the payment of the debts of the ancestor. 2 Bl. Comm. 244, 302.

ASSEVERATION. An affirmation; a positive assertion; a solemn declaration. This word is seldom, if ever, used for a declaration made under oath, but denotes a declaration accompanied with solemnity or an appeal to conscience, whereas by an oath one appeals to God as a witness of the truth of what one says.

ASSEWIARE. To draw or drain water from marsh grounds. Cowell.

ASSIGN, v.

In Conveyancing

To make or set over to another; to transfer; as to assign property, or some interest therein. Cowell; 2 Bl. Comm. 326; Bump v. Van Orsdale, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 638; Hoag v. Mendenhall, 19 Minn. 336 (Gil. 289); Kramer v. Spradlin, 148 Ga. 805, 98 S. E. 487, 488. To transfer the title or ownership, as of choses in action. Burkett v. Doty, 176 Cal. 89, 167 P. 518, 520. Insured property is not "assigned" in violation of a provision of the policy by giving a bill of sale as security which was in legal effect a chattel mortgage. King v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 133 Minn. 322, 158 N. W. 435, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 861.

In Practice

To appoint, allot, select, or designate for a particular purpose, or duty. Thus, in England, justices are said to be "assigned to take the assises," "assigned to hold pleas," "assigned to make gaol delivery," "assigned to keep the peace," etc. St. Westm. 2, c. 30; Reg. Orig. 68, 69; 3 Bl. Comm. 58, 59, 353; 1 Bl. Comm. 351.

To transfer persons, as a sheriff is said to assign prisoners in his custody.

To point at, or point out; to set forth, or specify; to mark out or designate; as to assign errors on a writ of error; to assign breaches of a covenant. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1168; 1 Tidd, 686. Where the owner of six separate tracts of land executed a written instrument whereby, in consideration of love and affection, he divided and assigned a tract to each of his six children, "assigned" was used in the sense of dividing and pointing out. Dantzer v. Riley, 109 S. C. 44, 95 S. E. 132.

ASSIGNABLE. That may be assigned or transferred; transferable; negotiable, as a bill of exchange. Comb. 176; Story, Bills, § 17.

ASSIGNATION.

In French Law

A writ of summons.

In Scotch Law

A term equivalent to assignment.

ASSIGNATION HOUSE. A bawdyhouse. State v. Bragg (Mo. App.) 220 S. W. 25, 26. See, also, People v. Arcega, 49 Cal. App. 239, 193 P. 264, 266.

Assignatus utitur jure auctoris. An assignee uses the right of his principal; an assignee is clothed with the rights of his principal. Halk. Max. 14; Broom, Max. 465, 477; Wing. Max. 56; 1 Exch. 32; 18 Q. B. 878.

ASSIGNAY. In Scotch law. An assignee.

ASSIGNEE. A person to whom an assignment is made. Allen v. Pancoast, 20 N. J. Law, 74; Ely v. Com'rs, 49 Mich. 17, 12 N. W. 893, 13 N. W. 784. The term is commonly used in reference to personal property; but it is not incorrect, in some cases, to apply it to realty, e. g., "assignee of the reversion."

Assignee in fact is one to whom an assignment has been made in fact by the party having the right. Starkweather v. Insurance Co., 22 Fed. Cas. 1091; Tucker v. West, 31 Ark. 643.

Assignee in law is one in whom the law vests the right; as an executor or administrator. Idem.

The word has a special and distinctive use as employed to designate one to whom, under an insolvent or bankrupt law, the whole estate of a debtor is transferred to be administered for the benefit of creditors.

In Old Law

A person deputed or appointed by another to do any act, or perform any business. Blount. An assignee, however, was distinguished from a deputy, being said to occupy a thing in his own right, while a deputy acted in right of another. Cowell.

ASSIGNMENT. A transfer or making over to another of the whole of any property, real or personal, in possession or in action, or of any estate or right therein. This definition is adopted in Love v. Clayton, 287 Pa. 205, 134 A. 422; Talty v. Schoenholz, 224 Ill. App. 158; Stannard v. Marboe, 159 Minn. 119, 198 N. W. 127; Kramer v. Spradlin, 148 Ga. 805, 98 S. E. 487, 488. It includes transfers of all kinds of property, but is ordinarily limited to transfers of choses in action and to rights in or connected with property, as distinguished from the particular item of property. In re Beffa's Estate, 54 Cal. App. 186, 201 P. 616, 617. It is generally appropriate to the transfer of equitable interests. Kavanaugh v. Cohoes Power & Light Corporation, 187 N. Y. S. 216, 228, 114 Misc. 590.

A transfer by writing, as distinguished from one by delivery.

The transfer of the interest one has in lands and tenements; more particularly applied to the unexpired residue of a term or estate for life or years; Cruise, Dig. tit. xxxii. (Deed) c. vii, § 15; 1 Steph. Com. 507.

The deed by which the transfer is made. Comyns, Dig.; Bacon, Abr.; Humphrey v. Coquillard Wagon Works, 37 Okl. 714, 132 P. 899, 902, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 600.

The word "assignment" has a comprehensive meaning, and has been held to include gift of a debt by will. Elwood v. State Soldiers' Compensation Board, 117 Kan. 753, 232 P. 1049. But see Hight v. Sackett, 34 N. Y. 447.

A transfer of the title to a bill, note, or check.

An assignment at common law differs from an indorsement in that by an assignment the assignor passed title to the assignee but did not subject himself to any contractual liability, whereas an indorser, in addition to passing title, impliedly contracts to pay note at maturity on demand and notice on maker's failure to so do. Jones County Trust & Savings Bank v. Kurt, 192 Iowa, 965, 182 N. W. 409, 413; Johnson v. Beickey, 64 Utah, 43, 223 P. 189, 191.

In patent law, the transfer of the entire interest in a patented invention or of an undivided portion of such entire interest as to every section of the United States. Rob. Pat. § 762. It differs from grant in relation to the territorial area to which they relate. A grant is the transfer of the exclusive right in a specific part of the United States. It is an exclusive sectional right. A license is a transfer of a less or different interest than either the interest in a whole patent or an undivided part of such whole interest or an exclusive sectional interest. Potter v. Holland, 4 Blatch. 206, Fed. Cas. No. 11,329. See Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 22 L. Ed. 577.

A license is distinguished from an assignment and a grant in that the latter transfers the monopoly as well as the invention, while a license transfers only the invention and does not affect the monopoly otherwise than by estopping the licensor from exercising his prohibitory powers in derogation of the privileges conferred by him upon the licensee. Rob. Pat. § 806. See Pope Mfg. Co. v. Mfg. Co., 144 U. S. 248, 12 Sup. Ct. 641, 36 L. Ed. 423.

—Assignment for benefit of creditors. An assignment in trust made by insolvent and other debtors for the payment of their debts. These are usually regulated by state statutes. Barnett v. Kinney, 147 U. S. 476, 13 S. Ct. 403, 37 L. Ed. 247; Boyum v. Jordan, 146 Minn. 66, 178 N. W. 158, 161; Stuart v. Bloch, 39 Okl. 556, 135 P. 1147, 1148; Woodard v. Morrissey, 115 Kan. 511, 223 P. 306, 307. The distinctive test between an "assignment" and a sale, where another creditor is to be paid off, is that in the former case such other creditor is to receive some of the property or its proceeds, and in the latter the creditor to whom title is passed takes for himself the whole property, stipulating to pay the other creditor out of his own means and not out of the property or its proceeds. Silver & Goldstein v. Chapman, 163 Ga. 604, 136 S. E. 914, 919.

—Assignment of dower. The act by which the share of a widow in her deceased husband's real estate is ascertained and set apart to her. Bettis v. McNider, 137 Ala. 588, 34 So. 813, 97 Am. St. Rep. 59; Pierce v. Williams, 3 N. J. Law, 709; Meserve v. Meserve, 19 N. H. 240; Blood v. Blood, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 80; Chaplin v. Simmons' Heirs, 7 T. B. Monr. (Ky.) 337; Stedman v. Fortune, 5 Conn. 462.

—Assignment of error. See Error.

—Assignment with preferences. An assignment for the benefit of creditors, with directions to the assignee to prefer a specified creditor or class of creditors, by paying their claims in full before the others receive any dividend, or in some other manner. More usually termed a "preferential assignment."

—Foreign assignment. An assignment made in a foreign country, or in another state. 2 Kent, Comm. 405, et seq.

—General assignment. An assignment made for the benefit of all the assignor's creditors, instead of a few only; or one which transfers the whole of his estate to the assignee, instead of a part only. Royer Wheel Co. v. Fielding, 101 N. Y. 504, 5 N. E. 431; Halsey v. Connell, 111 Ala. 221, 20 South. 445; Mussey v. Noyes, 26 Vt. 471.

—Voluntary assignment. An assignment for the benefit of his creditors made by a debtor voluntarily; as distinguished from a compulsory assignment which takes place by operation of law in proceedings in bankruptcy or insolvency. Presumably it means an assignment of a debtor's property in trust to pay his debts generally, in distinction from a transfer of property to a particular creditor in payment of his demand, or to a conveyance by way of collateral security or mortgage. Dias v. Bouchaud, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 445.

ASSIGNOR. One who makes an assignment of any kind; one who assigns or transfers property.

ASSIGNS. Assignees; those to whom property shall have been transferred. Now seldom used except in the phrase, in deeds, "heirs, administrators, and assigns." Grant v. Carpenter, 8 R. I. 36; Baily v. De Crespigny, 10 Best & S. 12; Tennison v. Walker (Mo. Sup.) 190 S. W. 9, 12; McKee v. Elwell, 69 Colo. 316, 194 P. 616; Whittier v. Riley, 104 Neb. 805, 178 N. W. 762, 763; Stannard v. Marboe, 159 Minn. 119, 198 N. W. 127.

The word "assigns" generally comprehends all those who take either immediately or remotely from or under the assignor, whether by conveyance, devise, descent, or act of law. Ferrell v. Deverick, 85 W. Va. 1, 100 S. E. 850, 853.

Anything reduced to a certainty in respect to time, number, quantity, quality, weight, measure, etc. Spelman.

747. But a third assistant district attorney cannot be said to be a "clerk" in view of the difference in meaning in common speech between "assistant" and "clerk." Maginnis v. Schlottman, 271 Pa. 305, 114 A. 782, 783.

An "assistant," meaning one who assists, a helper, may be distinguished from a "deputy," being one appointed to substitute for another with power to act for him in his name or behalf. Saxby v. Sonnemann, 318 Ill. 600, 149 N. E. 526, 528.

ASSISTANT JUDGE. A judge of the English court of general or quarter sessions in Middlesex. He differs from the other justices in being a barrister of ten years' standing, and in being salaried. St. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 71; 22 & 23 Vict. c. 4; Pritch. Quar. Sess. 31.

ASSISTANT TEACHER. An "assistant teacher," meaning a classroom teacher of a subject, is not a "laboratory assistant," meaning a helper of a teacher who does no teaching. People ex rel. Becker v. Board of Education of City of New York (Sup.) 162 N. Y. S. 643, 648.

ASSIZES. Sessions of the justices or commissioners of assize. These assizes are held twice in each year in each of the various shires of England, with some exceptions, for the trial of matters of fact in issue in both civil and criminal cases. They still retain the ancient name in popular language, though the commission of assize is no longer issued. See Assise.

ASSIZES DE JERUSALEM. A code of feudal jurisprudence prepared by an assembly of barons and lords A. D. 1099, after the conquest of Jerusalem. It was compiled principally from the laws and customs of France.

ASSOCIATE. A partner in interest.

The associates are now officers of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and are styled "Masters of the Supreme Court." Wharton.

A person associated with the judges and clerk of assise in the commission of general jail delivery. Mozley & Whitley.

The term is frequently used of the judges of appellate courts, other than the presiding judge or chief justice.

It is a word of vague meaning used to indicate a collection of persons who have joined together for a certain object. Ruse v. Williams, 14 Ariz. 445, 130 P. 887, 888, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 923; Van Pelt v. Hilliard, 75 Fla. 792, 78 So. 693, 695, L. R. A. 1918E, 639; U. S. v. Martindale (D. C.) 146 F. 280, 284.

An unincorporated society; a body of persons united and acting together without a charter, but upon the methods and forms used by incorporated bodies for the prosecution of some common enterprise. Allen v. Stevens, 33 App. Div. 485, 54 N. Y. Supp. 23; State v. Steele, 37 Minn. 428, 34 N. W. 903; Mills v. State, 23 Tex. 303; Laycock v. State, 136 Ind. 217, 36 N. E. 137; Hecht v. Malley, 265 U. S. 144, 157, 44 S. Ct. 462, 467, 68 L. Ed. 949. It is not a legal entity separate from the persons who compose it. Meinhart v. Contresta (Sup.) 194 N. Y. S. 593, 594.

A "confederacy or union for particular purposes, good or ill. Johnson's Dict. In that sense it [the term "association"] is a generic term and may indifferently comprehend a voluntary confederacy, which is a partnership dissoluble by the persons who formed it, or a corporate confederacy, deriving its existence from a confederacy, and dissoluble only by the law." Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 9, 104. See, also, In re Graves' Estate, 171 N. Y. 40, 63 N. E. 787, 789; St. John's Military Academy v. Edwards, 143 Wis. 51, 128 N. W. 113, 114, 139 Am. Floyd*, 153 Pa. 84, 25 A. 1033, 1036.

The word "association" means a body of persons invested with some, yet not full, corporate rights and powers, but will not include the state. State v. Taylor, 7 S. D. 533, 64 N. W. 548.

The word may be synonymous with "company." Lee Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State, 60 Miss. 395, 396.

ASSOCIÉ EN NOM. In French law. In a société en commandité an associé en nom is one who is liable for the engagements of the undertaking to the whole extent of his property. This expression arises from the fact that the names of the associés so liable figure in the firm-name or form part of the société en nom collectif. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 546.

ASSOIL. (Spelled also assoile, absoile, as-soilyie.) To absolve; acquit; to set free; to deliver from excommunication. St. 1 Hen. IV. c. 7; Cowell.

ASSOILZIE. In Scotch law. To acquit the defendant in an action; to find a criminal not guilty.

De Wolf, 194 Ill. 218, 62 N. E. 542, 56 L. R. A. 465, 88 Am. St. Rep. 153; Anicker v. Doyle, 84 Okl. 62, 202 P. 281, 284. A contract to "assume" an interest-bearing debt means the taking over of the liability for interest as well as principal. Commonwealth of Virginia v. State of West Virginia, 238 U. S. 202, 35 S. Ct. 795, 808, 59 L. Ed. 1272.

ASSUMED RISK. See Assumption of Risk.

ASSUMPSIT. Lat. He undertook; he promised. A promise or engagement by which one person assumes or undertakes to do some act or pay something to another. It may be either oral or in writing, but is not under seal. It is express if the promisor puts his engagement in distinct and definite language; it is implied where the law infers a promise (though no formal one has passed) from the conduct of the party or the circumstances of the case. Willenborg v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 11 Ill. App. 302.

In Practice

A form of action which lies for the recovery of damages for the non-performance of a parol or simple contract; or a contract that is neither of record nor under seal. 7 Term, 351; Ballard v. Walker, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 60.

The ordinary division of this action is into (1) common or indebitatus assumpsit, brought for the most part on an implied promise; and (2) special assumpsit, founded on an express promise. Steph. Pl. 11, 13. See Special Assumpsit; General Assumpsit.

The action of assumpsit differs from trespass and trover, which are founded on a tort, not upon a contract; from covenant and debt, which are appropriate where the ground of recovery is a sealed instrument, or special obligation to pay a fixed sum; and from replevin, which seeks the recovery of specific property, if attainable, rather than of damages.

Special Assumpsit

An action of assumpsit is so called where the declaration sets out the precise language or effect of a special contract, which forms the ground of action; it is distinguished from a general assumpsit, in which the technical claim is for a debt alleged to grow out of the contract, not the agreement itself. An action brought on a promise or contract implied in law that the defendant, in equity and in good conscience, is bound to pay plaintiff the consideration of a benefit conferred. Ruse v. Williams, 14 Ariz. 445, 130 P. 887, 888, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 923.

ASSUMPTION. The act of conceding or taking for granted. Gordon v. Schellhorn, 95 N. J. Eq. 563, 123 A. 549, 552. The term is substantially synonymous with "inference," "probability," and "presumption." Ohio Bldg. Safety Vault Co. v. Industrial Board of Illinois, 277 Ill. 96, 115 N. E. 149, 154.

The act or agreement of assuming or taking upon one's self; the undertaking or adoption of a debt or obligation primarily resting upon another, as where the purchaser of real estate "assumes" a mortgage resting upon it, in which case he adopts the mortgage debt as his own and becomes personally liable for its payment. Eggleston v. Morrison, 84 Ill. App. 631; Locke v. Homer, 131 Mass. 93, 41 Am. Rep. 199; Springer v. De Wolf, 194 Ill. 218, 62 N. E. 542, 56 L. R. A. 465, 88 Am. St. Rep.

155; Lenz v. Railroad Co., 111 Wis. 198, 86 N. W. 607.

The difference between the purchaser of land assuming a mortgage on it and simply buying subject to the mortgage, is that in the former case he makes himself personally liable for the payment of the mortgage debt, while in the latter case he does not. Hancock v. Fleming, 103 Ind. 533, 3 N. E. 254; Braman v. Dowse, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 227. When he takes the conveyance subject to the mortgage, he is bound only to the extent of the property. Brichetto v. Raney, 76 Cal. App. 232, 245 P. 235, 241.

Where one "assumes" a lease, he takes to himself the obligations, contracts, agreements, and benefits to which the other contracting party was entitled under the terms of the lease. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 44 Ohio St. 287, 314, 7 N. E. 152.

ASSUMPTION OF RISK. A term or condition in a contract of employment, either express or implied from the circumstances of the employment, by which the employee agrees that dangers of injury ordinarily or obviously incident to the discharge of his duty in the particular employment shall be at his own risk. Narramore v. Railway Co., 96 F. 301, 37 C. C. A. 499, 48 L. R. A. 68; Faulkner v. Mining Co., 23 Utah, 437, 66 P. 799; Railroad Co. v. Tuohy, 67 Ark. 209, 54 S. W. 577, 77 Am. St. Rep. 109; Bodie v. Railway Co., 61 S. C. 468, 39 S. E. 715; Martin v. Railroad Co., 118 Iowa, 148, 91 N. W. 1034, 59 L. R. A. 698, 96 Am. St. Rep. 371; Biskup v. Hoffman, 220 Mo. App. 542, 287 S. W. 865, 869; Alko-Nak Coal Co. v. Barton, 88 Okl. 212, 212 P. 591, 594; Hennessy v. Ginsberg, 46 N. D. 229, 180 N. W. 796, 800; Schuh v. R. H. Heron Co., 177 Cal. 13, 169 P. 682, 684; Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Hodnett, 106 Tex. 190, 163 S. W. 13, 15; Carleton v. E. & T. Fairbanks & Co., 88 Vt. 537, 93 A. 462, 465. It has reference to dangers that are normally and necessarily incident to the occupation, which are deemed to be assumed by workmen of mature years, whether they are actually aware of them or not. Chesapeake, & O. Ry. Co. v. Cochran (C. C. A.) 22 F.(2d) 22, 25. It is founded upon the knowledge of the servant, either actual or constructive, as to the hazards to be encountered and his consent to take the chance of danger. Schuppenies v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 38 Idaho, 672, 225 P. 501, 505. But it does not include the risks from the negligence of the master, or the gross negligence of his superior servant. Burton Const. Co. v. Metcalfe, 162 Ky. 366, 172 S. W. 698, 702; Frederick Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Traver, 36 Okl. 717, 129 P. 747, 748. The term is rightly applicable only to master and servant cases and is a result of a contract of hiring. City of Linton v. Maddox, 130 N. E. 810, 812, 75 Ind. App. 449. "Contributory negligence" is not synonymous with assumption of risk. Dolose Bros. Co. v. Kahl (C. C.

A.) 203 F. 627, 630. "Assumed risk" is founded upon the knowledge of the employee, either actual or constructive, of the risks to be encountered, and his consent to take the chance of injury therefrom. Contributory negligence implies misconduct, the doing of an imprudent act by the injured party, or his dereliction in failing to take proper precaution for his personal safety. The doctrine of assumed risk is founded upon contract, while contributory negligence is solely matter of conduct. Cobia v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 188 N. C. 487, 125 S. E. 18, 21; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Cooper (Tex. Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 579, 582; Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. De Atley, 159 Ky. 687, 167 S. W. 933, 935; Barber v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co., 88 Kan. 767, 129 P. 1151, 1156, 43 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1121; Wheeler v. Tyler, 129 Minn. 206, 152 N. W. 137.

ASSUMPTION OF SKILL. The doctrine known as the "assumption of skill" on the part of the master sometimes makes the knowledge implied against the master relative to the safety of the place of work, and the nature, constituents, and general characteristics of the things used in the business, superior to that implied against the servant, especially where the servant is inexperienced. Burton v. Wadley Southern Ry. Co., 25 Ga. App. 380, 103 S. E. 881; Hines v. Little, 26 Ga. App. 136, 105 S. E. 618.

ASSURANCE.

In Conveyancing

A deed or instrument of conveyance. The legal evidences of the transfer of property are in England called the "common assurances" of the kingdom, whereby every man's estate is assured to him, and all controversies, doubts, and difficulties are either prevented or removed. 2 Bl. Comm. 294. State v. Farland, 8 N. J. Law, 335.

In Commercial Law

A pledge, guaranty, or surety. National Watch Co. v. Weiss, 163 N. Y. S. 46, 47, 98 Misc. 453. Compare Gallagher v. Montpelier & Wells River R. R., 100 Vt. 299, 137 A. 207, 209, 52 A. L. R. 744, as to "assurance of safety" arising from presence of gates and automatic bell at railroad crossing.

A making secure; insurance. The term was formerly of very frequent use in the modern sense of insurance, particularly in English maritime law, and still appears in the policies of some companies, but is otherwise seldom seen of late years. There seems to be a tendency, however, to use assurance for the contracts of life insurance companies, and insurance for risks upon property.

ASSURANCE, FURTHER, COVENANT FOR. See Covenant for Further Assurance.

ASSURE. To make certain and put beyond doubt. Armour & Co. v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 41 R. I. 361, 103 A. 1031, 1033.

ASSURED. A person who has been insured by some insurance company, or underwriter, against losses or perils mentioned in the policy of insurance. Brockway v. Insurance Co. (C. C.) 29 Fed. 766; Sanford v. Insurance Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 548.

The person for whose benefit the policy is issued and to whom the loss is payable, not necessarily the person on whose life or property the policy is written. Thus where a wife insures her husband's life for her own benefit and he has no interest in the policy, she is the "assured" and he the "insured." Hogle v. Insurance Co., 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 570; Ferdon v. Canfield, 104 N. Y. 143, 10 N. E. 146; Insurance Co. v. Luchs, 108 U. S. 498, 2 Sup. Ct. 949, 27 L. Ed. 800. But ordinarily the two words are synonymous. Thompson v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 161 Iowa, 446, 143 N. W. 518.

ASSURER. An insurer against certain perils and dangers; an underwriter; an indemnifier.

ASSYTHEMENT. In Scotch law. Damages awarded to the relative of a murdered person from the guilty party, who has not been convicted and punished. Paters. Comp.

ASTIPULATION. A mutual agreement, assent, and consent between parties; also a witness or record.

ASTITRARIUS HÆRES. An heir apparent who has been placed, by conveyance, in possession of his ancestor's estate during such ancestor's life-time. Co. Litt. 8.

ASTITUTION. An arraignment (q. v.)

ASTRARIUS. In old English law. A householder; belonging to the house; a person in actual possession of a house.

ASTRARIUS HÆRES. Where the ancestor by conveyance hath set his heir apparent and his family in a house in his lifetime. Cunningham, L. Dict.

ASTRER. In old English law. A household-er, or occupant of a house or hearth.

ASTRICT. In Scotch law. To assign to a particular mill.

ASTRICTION TO A MILL. A servitude by which grain growing on certain lands or brought within them must be carried to a certain mill to be ground, a certain culture or price being paid for the same. Jacob.

ASTRIHILTET. In Saxon law. A penalty for a wrong done by one in the king's peace. The offender was to replace the damage twofold. Spelman.

ASTRUM. A house, or place of habitation. Bract. fol. 267b; Cowell.

ASYLUM. A sanctuary, or place of refuge and protection, where criminals and debtors found shelter, and from which they could not be taken without sacrilege. State v. Bacon, 6 Neb. 291; Cromie v. Institution of Mercy, 3 Bush (Ky.) 391.

Shelter; refuge; protection from the hand of justice. The word includes not only place, but also shelter, security, protection; and a fugitive from justice, who has committed a crime in a foreign country, "seeks an asylum" at all times when he claims the use of the territories of the United States. In re De Giacomo, 12 Blatchf. 395, Fed. Cas. No. 3,747. Every sovereign state has the right to offer an asylum to fugitives from other countries, but there is no corresponding right on the part of the alien to claim asylum. In recent years this right of asylum has been voluntarily limited by most states by treaties providing for the extradition (q. v.) of fugitive criminals.

In time of war, a place of refuge in neutral territory for belligerent war-ships.

An institution for the protection and relief of unfortunates, as asylums for the poor, for the deaf and dumb, or for the insane. Lawrence v. Leidigh, 58 Kan. 594, 50 Pac. 600, 62 Am. St. Rep. 631. The term may also include a hospital constructed and maintained by the United States government for the treatment of soldiers and ex-soldiers. Kemp v. Heebner, 77 Colo. 177, 234 P. 1068, 1069.

AT. A term of considerable elasticity of meaning, and somewhat indefinite. As used to fix a time, it does not necessarily mean eo instante or the identical time named, or even a fixed definite moment. Barnett v. Strain, 151 Ga. 553, 107 S. E. 530, 532. Under a statute making admissible evidence of other sales of intoxicating liquor "at the same time," "at" means the very day charged. People v. Fochtman, 226 Mich. 53, 197 N. W. 166, 169, and may likewise in other cases mean on the same day. Perry v. Gross, 172 Cal. 468, 156 P. 1031, 1032. But "at" may often express simply nearness and proximity, and consequently may denote a reasonable time. Childers v. Brown, 81 Or. 1, 158 P. 166, 168, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 170; Gregory v. Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, 151 La. 228, 91 So. 717, 719.

The words "at any time" are often taken to mean merely within a reasonable time. Hawkins v. Duvall, 177 N. Y. S. 584, 586, 108 Misc. 333; Terry v. Crossway (Tex. Civ. App.) 264 S. W. 718, 720; City of Erie v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 246 Pa. 238, 92 A. 192, 193.

Primarily, "at" means "near" or "near to," and involves the idea of proximity. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Hill, 215 Ky. 222, 284 S. W. 1047, 1048, 48 A. L. R. 327; Abernathy v. Peterson, 38 Idaho, 727, 225 P. 132, 133; Fenolio v. Sebastian Bridge Dist., 133 Ark. 380, 200 S. W. 501, 504; Goninon v. Lee, 119 Wash. 471, 206 P. 2, 4. "At" a village or city may mean "near." Howell v. State, 164 Ga. 204, 138 S. E. 206, 209; Board of Trustees of Albany College v. Monteith, 64 Or. 356, 130 P. 633, 636. But a statute fixing compensation for the loss of a leg "at or above the knee" has reference to the exact location of the knee, not near to it or below it. Cone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n (Tex. Civ. App.) 251 S. W. 262, 264.

Depending on the context, "at" may be equivalent to "in"; Feore v. Trammel, 212 Ala. 325, 102 So. 529, 531; Millikan v. Security Trust Co., 187 Ind. 307, 118 N. E. 568, 569 (contra: Fayette County Board of Education v. Tompkins, 212 Ky. 751, 280 S. W. 114, 116); "toward"; State v. Cunningham, 107 Miss. 140, 65 So. 115, 117, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1179; "after"; Davis v. Godart, 131 Minn. 221, 154 N. W. 1091, 1092; Ex parte Szumrak (D. C.) 278 F. 803, 810; "not later than"; Smith v. Jacksonville Oil Mill Co., 21 Ga. App. 679, 94 S. E. 900, 901; or to the words on, by, about, under, over, through, from, to, etc.

AT ARM'S LENGTH. Beyond the reach of personal influence or control. Parties are said to deal "at arm's length" when each stands upon the strict letter of his rights, and conducts the business in a formal manner, without trusting to the other's fairness or integrity, and without being subject to the other's control or overmastering influence.

AT BAR. Before the court. "The case at bar," etc. Dyer, 31.

AT ISSUE. Whenever the parties come to a point in the pleadings which is affirmed on one side and denied on the other, they are said to be at an issue. Willard v. Zehr, 215 Ill. 154, 74 N. E. 107, 108.

AT LARGE. Not limited to any particular place, district, person, matter, or question; open to discussion or controversy; not precluded. Free; unrestrained; not under corporal control; as a ferocious animal so free from restraint as to be liable to do mischief. Fully; in detail; in an extended form. A congressman at large is one who is elected by the electors of an entire state.

AT LAW. According to law; by, for, or in law; particularly in distinction from that which is done in or according to equity; or in titles such as sergeant at law, barrister at law, attorney or counsellor at law. See Hooker v. Nichols, 116 N. C. 157, 21 S. E. 208.

AT ONCE. In contracts of various kinds the phrase "at once" is construed as synonymous with "immediately" and "forthwith," where the subject-matter is the giving of notice. The use of such term does not ordinarily call for instantaneous action, but rather that notice shall be given within such time as is reasonable in view of the circumstances. National Live Stock Ins. Co. v. Simmons, 62 Ind. App. 15, 111 N. E. 18, 19; Empire State Surety Co. v. Northwest Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 203 F. 417, 420. Likewise, contracts or statutes requiring the performance of a particular act

"at once" are usually held to mean simply within a reasonable time. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. Liberal Elevator Co. (C. C. A.) 243 F. 99, 102; Rouleau v. Continental Life Ins. & Inv. Co., 45 Utah, 234, 144 P. 1096, 1099; Dixon v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 291, 294; State ex rel. Conway v. Nolte (Mo. App.) 218 S. W. 862; Arizona Power Co. v. State, 19 Ariz. 114, 166 P. 275, 277. An order to "ship at once" was held to mean "with all reasonable haste consistent with fair business activity." Grays Harbor Commercial Co. v. Yakima Valley Producers' Ass'n, 130 Wash. 567, 228 P. 600, 601. As to other sale contracts requiring shipment "at once," see Lawson v. Hobbs, 120 Va. 690, 91 S. E. 750, 752; B. A. Collins & Co. v. Gus Blass Co., 154 Ark. 244, 242 S. W. 70; Gladney Milling Co. v. Dement (Tex. Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1038, 1040; Christenson v. Gorton-Pew Fisheries Co. (C. C. A.) 8 F.(2d) 689, 691. As to sales involving warranties, see Monroe & Monroe v. Cowne, 133 Va. 181, 112 S. E. 848, 855; Wood, Stubbs & Co. v. Kaufmann, 233 Ill. App. 138, 142.

AT SEA. Out of the limits of any port or harbor on the sea-coast. The Harriet, 1 Story, 251, Fed. Cas. No. 6,099. See Wales v. Insurance Co., 8 Allen (Mass.) 380; Hubbard v. Hubbard, 8 N. Y. 199; Ex parte Thompson, 4 Bradf. Sur. (N. Y.) 158; Hutton v. Insurance Co., 7 Hill (N. Y.) 325; Bowen v. Insurance Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 276, 32 Am. Dec. 213; U. S. v. Symonds, 120 U. S. 46, 7 Sup. Ct. 411, 30 L. Ed. 557; U. S. v. Barnette, 165 U. S. 174, 17 Sup. Ct. 286, 41 L. Ed. 675.

ATAVUNCULUS. The brother of a great-grandfather's grandmother, or a great-great-great-grandfather's brother.

ATAVUS. The male ascendant in the fifth degree. The great-grandfather's or great-grandmother's grandfather; a fourth grandfather. The ascending line of lineal ancestry runs thus: Pater, Avus, Proavus, Abavus, Atavus, Tritavus. The seventh generation in the ascending scale will be Tritavi-pater, and the next above it Proavi-atavus.

ATHA. (Spelled also Atta, Athe, Atte.) In Saxon law. An oath; the power or privilege of exacting and administering an oath. Spelman.

ATHEIST. One who does not believe in the existence of a God. Gibson v. Insurance Co., 37 N. Y. 584; Thurston v. Whitney, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 110; Com. v. Hills, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 530.

ATTACH. To take or apprehend by commandment of a writ or precept. Buckeye Pipe-Line Co. v. Fee, 62 Ohio St. 543, 57 N. E. 446, 78 Am. St. Rep. 743.

It differs from arrest, because it takes not only the body, but sometimes the goods, whereas an arrest is only against the person; besides, he who attaches keeps the party attached in order to produce him in court on the day named, but he who arrests lodges the person arrested in the custody of a higher power, to be forthwith disposed of. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 24. See Attachment.

In a broad sense, "attach" indicates any seizure of property for the purpose of bringing it within the custody of the court, and is not limited to a seizure on mesne process. In re Safady Bros. (D. C.) 228 F. 538, 540; In re Clark (D. C.) 11 F.(2d) 540, 541.

ATTACHÉ. A person attached to an embassy, to the suite of an ambassador, or to a foreign legation. Hence, one connected with an office, e. g., a public office. Noel v. Lewis, 35 Cal. App. 658, 170 P. 857, 859.

ATTACHED. A term describing the physical union of two otherwise independent structures or objects, or the relation between two parts of a single structure, each having its own function. National Brake & Electric Co. v. Christensen (C. C. A.) 229 F. 564, 570. As applied to buildings, the term is often synonymous with "annexed." Williams Mfg. Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 93 Vt. 161, 106 A. 657, 659. For cases involving chattels attached (or not attached) to realty, see In re Banos (D. C.) 8 F.(2d) 95, 96; Cutler Mail Chute Co. v. Crawford, 167 App. Div. 246, 152 N. Y. S. 750, 752; Cohoes Iron Foundry & Machine Co. v. Glavin, 190 App. Div. 87, 179 N. Y. S. 357, 358.

The word "attached," in an affidavit of service of a notice, used to designate a notice appearing on the reverse side of the affidavit, is improper. Wood v. Yearous, 159 Iowa, 211, 140 N. W. 362, 364.

ATTACHIAMENTA BONORUM. A distress formerly taken upon goods and chattels, by the legal attachiators or bailiffs, as security to answer an action for personal estate or debt.

ATTACHING CREDITOR. See Creditor.

ATTACHMENT. The act or process of taking, apprehending, or seizing persons or property, by virtue of a writ, summons, or other judicial order, and bringing the same into the custody of the law; used either for the purpose of bringing a person before the court, of acquiring jurisdiction over the property seized, to compel an appearance, to furnish security for debt or costs, or to arrest a fund in the hands of a third person who may become liable to pay it over.

Also the writ or other process for the accomplishment of the purposes above enumerated, this being the more common use of the word.

Of Persons

A writ issued by a court of record, commanding the sheriff to bring before it a person who has been guilty of contempt of court, either in neglect or abuse of its process or of subordinate powers. 3 Bl. Comm. 280; 4 Bl. Comm. 283; Burbach v. Light Co., 119 Wis. 384, 96 N. W. 829; 1 Term, 266; Stra. 441. See State v. McDermott, 10 N. J. Law, 63; Bacon v. Wilber, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 121, n.; Commonwealth v. Shecter, 250 Pa. 282, 95 A. 468, 470.

Of Property

A species of mesne process, by which a writ is issued at the institution or during the progress of an action, commanding the sheriff to seize the property, rights, credits, or effects of the defendant to be held as security for the satisfaction of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover. It is principally used against absconding, concealed, or fraudulent debtors. U. S. Capsule Co. v. Isaacs, 23 Ind. App. 533, 55 N. E. 832; Campbell v. Keys, 130 Mich. 127; 89 N. W. 720; Rempe v. Ravens, 68 Ohio St. 113, 67 N. E. 282; Daley v. Torrey, 71 Mont. 513, 230 P. 782, 783.

To Give Jurisdiction

Where the defendant is a non-resident, or beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the court, his goods or land within the territory may be seized upon process of attachment; whereby he will be compelled to enter an appearance, or the court acquires jurisdiction so far as to dispose of the property attached. This is sometimes called "foreign attachment." See the following paragraph. See, also, Drake, Att. § 4 a; Megee v. Beirne, 39 Pa. 50; Bray v. McClury, 55 Mo. 128. In such a case, the proceeding becomes in substance one in rem against the attached property. Clifford v. Pateros Transfer Co., 71 Wash. 665, 129 P. 369, 371.

Domestic and Foreign

In some jurisdictions it is common to give the name "domestic attachment" to one issuing against a resident debtor, (upon the special ground of fraud, intention to abscond, etc.) and to designate an attachment against a non-resident, or his property, as "foreign." Longwell v. Hartwell, 164 Pa. 533, 30 A. 495; David E. Kennedy, Inc., v. Schleindl, 290 Pa. 38, 137 A. 815, 816, 53 A. L. R. 1020. But the term "foreign attachment" more properly belongs to the process otherwise familiarly known as "garnishment." It was a peculiar and ancient remedy open to creditors within the jurisdiction of the city of London, by which they were enabled to satisfy their own debts by attaching or seizing the money or goods of the debtor in the hands of a third person within the jurisdiction of the city. Welsh v. Blackwell, 14 N. J. Law, 346. This power and process survive in modern law, in all common-law jurisdictions, and are variously denominated "garnishment," "trustee process," or "factorizing." Raiguel v. McConnell, 25 Pa. 362, 363.

A garnishment proceeding under the statutes of Oklahoma is so effectually an attachment that it is included within the term "attachment." Berry-Beall Dry Goods Co. v. Adams, 87 Okl. 54, 211 P. 79, 81.

ATTACHMENT EXECUTION. A name given in some states to a process of garnishment for the satisfaction of a judgment. As to the judgment debtor it is an execution; but as to the garnishee it is an original process—a summons commanding him to appear and show cause, if any he has, why the judgment should not be levied on the goods and effects of the defendant in his hands. Kennedy v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 165 Pa. 179, 30 Atl. 724; Appeal of Lane, 105 Pa. 61, 51 Am. Rep. 166.

ATTACHMENT OF PRIVILEGE. In English law. A process by which a man, by virtue of his privilege, calls another to litigate in that court to which he himself belongs, and who has the privilege to answer there.

A writ issued to apprehend a person in a privileged place. Termes de la Ley.

ATTACHMENT OF THE FOREST. One of the three courts formerly held in forests. The highest court was called "justice in eyre's seat;" the middle, the "swainmote;" and the lowest, the "attachment." Manwood, 90, 99.

ATTAINDER. That extinction of civil rights and capacities which takes place whenever a person who has committed treason or felony receives sentence of death for his crime. 1 Steph. Com. 408; 1 Bish. Cr. L. § 641; Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 431; In re Garland, 32 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 251; Cozens v. Long, 3 N. J. Law. 766; State v. Hastings, 37 Neb. 96, 55 N. W. 781.

It differs from conviction, in that it is after judgment, whereas conviction is upon the verdict of guilty, but before judgment pronounced, and may be quashed upon some point of law reserved, or judgment may be arrested. The consequences of attainder are forfeiture of property and corruption of blood. 4 Bl. Comm. 380.

At the common law, attainder resulted in three ways, viz.: by confession, by verdict, and by process or outlawry. The first case was where the prisoner pleaded guilty at the bar, or having fled to sanctuary, confessed his guilt and abjured the realm to save his life. The second was where the prisoner pleaded not guilty at the bar, and the jury brought in a verdict against him. The third, when the person accused made his escape and was outlawed. Coke, Litt. 391.

In England, by statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, attainder upon conviction, with consequent corruption of blood, forfeiture, or escheat, is abolished. In the United States, the doctrine of attainder is now scarcely known, although during and shortly after the Revolution acts of attainder were passed by several of the states. The passage of such bills is expressly forbidden by the constitution.

Bill of Attainder

A legislative act, directed against a designated person, pronouncing him guilty of an alleged crime, (usually treason,) without trial or conviction according to the recognized rules of procedure, and passing sentence of death and attainder upon him. "Bills of attainder," as they are technically called, are such special acts of the legislature as inflict capital punishments upon persons supposed to be guilty of high offenses, such as treason and felony, without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings. If an act inflicts a milder degree of punishment than death, it is called a "bill of pains and penalties," but both are included in the prohibition in the Federal constitution. Story,

Const. § 1344: Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 323, 18 L. Ed. 356; Ex parte Garland, 4 Wall. 387, 18 L. Ed. 366; People v. Hayes, 140 N. Y. 484, 35 N. E. 951, 23 L. R. A. 830, 37 Am. St. Rep. 572; Green v. Shumway, 39 N. Y. 431; In re Yung Sing Hee (C. C.) 36 Fed. 439. See, also, Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. 339, 19 L. Ed. 696; People v. Camperlingo, 69 Cal. App. 466, 231 P. 601, 603; Davis v. Berry (D. C.) 216 F. 413, 414; Butcher v. Maybury (D. C.) 8 F.(2d) 155, 159.

ATTAINT. Attainted, stained, or blackened.

In old English practice. A writ which lay to inquire whether a jury of twelve men had given a false verdict, in order that the judgment might be reversed. 3 Bl. Comm. 402; Bract. fol. 288b-292; Fleta, 1, 5, c. 22, § 8. This inquiry was made by a grand assise or jury of twenty-four persons, usually knights, and, if they found the verdict a false one, the judgment was that the jurors should become infamous, should forfeit their goods and the profits of their lands, should themselves be imprisoned, and their wives and children thrust out of doors, should have their houses razed, their trees extirpated, and their meadows plowed up, and that the plaintiff should be restored to all that he lost by reason of the unjust verdict. 3 Bl. Comm. 404; Co. Litt. 294b.

ATTAINT D'UNE CAUSE. In French law. The gain of a suit.

ATTEMPT.

In Criminal Law

An effort or endeavor to accomplish a crime, amounting to more than mere preparation or planning for it, which, if not prevented, would have resulted in the full consummation of the act attempted, but which, in fact, does not bring to pass the party's ultimate design. People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254, 25 N. E. 412, 10 L. R. A. 109, 20 Am. St. Rep. 732; Gandy v. State, 13 Neb. 445, 14 N. W. 143; Scott v. People, 141 Ill. 195, 30 N. E. 329; Brown v. State, 27 Tex. App. 330, 11 S. W. 412; U. S. v. Ford (D. C.) 34 F. 26; Com. v. Eagan, 42 A. 374, 190 Pa. 10.

An intent to do a particular criminal thing combined with an act which falls short of the thing intended. 1 Bish. Crim. Law, § 728; Johnson v. State, 14 Ga. 55; People v. Lawton, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 126; Cunningham v. State, 49 Miss. 685; Woodriddle v. United States (C. C. A.) 237 F. 775, 776; State v. Schwarzbach, 84 N. J. Law, 268, 86 A. 423, 424; Lahey v. Lahey, 109 Or. 146, 219 P. 807, 809; Gustine v. State, 86 Fla. 24, 97 So. 207, 208. An "attempt" to commit a crime consists of three elements: (1) The intent to commit the crime; (2) performance of some act toward the commission of a crime; and (3) the failure to consummate its commission. State v. Thompson, 118 Kan. 256, 234 P. 980, 981; People v. Lardner, 300 Ill. 264, 133 N. E. 375, 19 A. L. R. 721.

There is a marked distinction between "attempt" and "intent." The former conveys the idea of physical effort to accomplish an act; the latter, the quality of mind with which an act was done. To charge, in an indictment, an assault with an attempt to murder, is not equivalent to charging an assault with intent to murder. State v. Marshall, 14 Ala. 411. But an assault with intent to commit a crime necessarily embraces an "attempt" to commit the crime. People v. Akens, 25 Cal. App. 373, 143 P. 795, 796. Compare Cirul v. State, 83 Tex. Cr. R. 8. 200 S. W. 1088, holding that the word "attempt" is more comprehensive than the word "intent," implying both the purpose and an actual effort to carry that purpose into execution.

In Civil Matters

In statutes and in cases other than criminal prosecutions an "attempt" ordinarily means an intent combined with an act falling short of the thing intended. See Thompson v. Kreutzer, 103 Miss. 388, 60 So. 334, 335; Fox v. Denver City Tramway Co., 57 Colo. 511, 143 P. 278, 280; Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Snohomish County, 101 Wash. 686, 172 P. 878, 880; In re Bergland's Estate, 180 Cal. 629, 182 P. 277, 283, 5 A. L. R. 1363. It may be described as an endeavor to do an act, carried beyond mere preparation, but short of execution. Columbian Ins. Co. of Indiana v. Modern Laundry (C. C. A.) 217 F. 355, 358, 20 A. L. R. 1159; Follett v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 77 N. H. 457, 92 A. 956, 957.

ATTENDANT, n. One who owes a duty or service to another, or in some sort depends upon him. Termes de la Ley. One who follows and waits upon another.

ATTENDANT, adj. Accompanying, or connected with. Fletcher v. Winnfield Bottling Works, 160 La. 261, 107 So. 103, 104.

ATTENDANT TERMS. In English law, terms, (usually mortgages,) for a long period of years, which are created or kept outstanding for the purpose of attending or waiting upon and protecting the inheritance. 1 Steph. Comm. 351.

A phrase used in conveyancing to denote estates which are kept alive, after the objects for which they were originally created have ceased, so that they might be deemed merged or satisfied, for the purpose of protecting or strengthening the title of the owner. Abbott.

ATTENTAT. Lat. He attempts. In the civil and canon law. Anything wrongfully innovated or attempted in a suit by an inferior judge (or judge a quo) pending an appeal. 1 Addams, 22, note; Shelf. Mar. & Div. 562; Ayliffe, Parerg. 100.

ATTENTION. Consideration; notice. The phrase "your bill shall have attention" was held to be ambiguous and not to amount to an acceptance of the bill. 2 B. & Ald. 113.

ATTERMINARE. In old English law. To put off to a succeeding term; to prolong the time of payment of a debt. Stat. Westm. 2, c. 4; Cowell; Blount.

ATTERMINING. In old English law. A putting off; the granting of a time or term, as for the payment of a debt. Cowell.

ATTERMOIEMENT. In canon law. A making terms; a composition, as with creditors. 7 Low. C. 272, 306.

ATTEST. To bear witness to; to affirm to be true or genuine. Ex parte Lockhart, 72 Mont. 136, 232 P. 183, 186. To witness the execution of a written instrument, at the request of him who makes it, and subscribe the same as a witness. White v. Magarahan, 87 Ga. 217, 13 S. E. 509; Logwood v. Hussey, 60 Ala. 424; Arrington v. Arrington, 122 Ala. 510, 26 So. 152. This is also the technical word by which, in the practice in many of the states, a certifying officer gives assurance of the genuineness and correctness of a copy. Thus, an "attested" copy of a document is one which has been examined and compared with the original, with a certificate or memorandum of its correctness, signed by the persons who have examined it. Goss, etc., Co. v. People, 4 Ill. App. 515; Donaldson v. Wood, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 400; Gerner v. Mosher, 58 Neb. 135, 78 N. W. 384, 46 L. R. A. 244.

ATTESTATION. The act of witnessing an instrument in writing, at the request of the party making the same, and subscribing it as a witness. 3 P. Wms. 254; Shanks v. Christopher, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 146; Hall v. Hall, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 373; In re Jones' Estate, 101 Wash. 128, 172 P. 206, 207. The act of witnessing the execution of a paper and subscribing the name of the witness in testimony of such fact. In re Drusch's Estate, 138 Minn. 322, 164 N. W. 1023, 1024; First Nat. Bank v. Devore, 110 Okl. 283, 234 P. 734, 735; In re Virgin (D. C.) 224 F. 128, 130; Quirk v. Pierson, 287 Ill. 176, 122 N. E. 518, 520. See Attest.

Execution and attestation are clearly distinct formalities; the former being the act of the party, the latter of the witnesses only.

Subscription differs from attestation, in that the former is the mere manual or mechanical act of signing—the act of the hand, whereas the latter signifies the mental act of bearing witness to—the act of the senses. Moore v. Walton, 158 Ga. 408, 123 S. E. 812, 814; In re Klufa's Estate, 78 Okl. 13, 138 P. 329, 330; Tilton v. Daniels, 79 N. H. 368, 109 A. 145, 8 A. L. R. 1073.

ATTESTATION CLAUSE. That clause wherein the witnesses certify that the instrument has been executed before them, and the manner of the execution of the same.

ATTESTED COPY. See Attest.

ATTESTING WITNESS. One who signs his name to an instrument, at the request of the party or parties, for the purpose of proving and identifying it. Skinner v. Bible Soc., 92 Wis. 209, 65 N. W. 1037; 3 Campb. 232; Jenkins v. Dawes, 115 Mass. 599; In re Reid's Estate, 130 Minn. 256, 153 N. W. 324, 325; In re McDonough's Estate, 201 App. Div. 203, 193 N. Y. S. 734, 736.

ATTILE. In old English law. The rigging or furniture of a ship. Jacob, L. Dict. Rigging; tackle. Cowell.

ATTORN.

In Feudal Law

To turn over; to transfer to another money or goods; to assign to some particular use or service. Kennet, Paroch. Antiq. 283; 2 Bla. Comm. 288; Littleton § 551; 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 137; 1 Washb. R. P. 28, n.

Where a lord aliened his seignior, he might, with the consent of the tenant, and in some cases without, attorn or transfer the homage and service of the latter to the alienee or new lord. Bract. fols. 81b, 82.

In Modern Law

ATTORNE. L. Fr. In old English law. An attorney. Britt. c. 126.

ATTORNEY. In the most general sense this term denotes an agent or substitute, or one who is appointed and authorized to act in the place or stead of another. Baxter v. City of Venice, 271 Ill. 233, 111 N. E. 111, 112; In re Ricker, 66 N. H. 207, 29 A. 559, 24 L. R. A. 740; Eichelberger v. Sifford, 27 Md. 320.

It is "an ancient English word, and signifieth one that is set in the turne, stead, or place of another; and of these some be private * * * and some be publike, as attorneys at law." Co. Litt. 51b, 128a; Britt. 285b; Spelman; Termes de la Ley.

One who is appointed by another to do something in his absence, and who has authority to act in the place and turn of him by whom he is delegated.

When used with reference to the proceedings of courts, or the transaction of business in the courts, the term always means "attorney at law" (q. v.) unless a contrary meaning is clearly indicated. See People v. May, 3 Mich. 605; Kelly v. Herb, 147 Pa. 563, 23 A. 889; Clark v. Morse, 16 La. 576; In re Morse, 98 Vt. 85, 126 A. 550, 551, 36 A. L. R. 527.

"Lawyer" and "attorney" are synonymous. People v. Taylor, 56 Colo. 441, 138 P. 762, 763.

—Attorney ad hoc. See Ad hoc.

—Attorney at large. In old practice. An attorney who practiced in all the courts. Cowell.

—Attorney at law. An advocate, counsel, or official agent employed in preparing, managing, and trying cases in the courts. An officer in a court of justice, who is employed by a party in a cause to manage it for him. See Langen v. Borkowski, 188 Wis. 277, 206 N. W. 181, 190, 43 A. L. R. 622; City of Pittsburgh v. O'Brien, 239 Pa. 60, 86 A. 651, 652; In re Bergeron, 220 Mass. 472, 107 N. E. 1007, 1008, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 549.

In English law. A public officer belonging to the superior courts of common law at Westminster, who conducted legal proceedings on behalf of others, called his clients, by whom he was retained; he answered to the solicitor in the courts of chancery, and the proctor of the admiralty, ecclesiastical, probate, and divorce courts. An attorney was almost invariably also a solicitor. It is now provided by the judicature act, 1873, § 87, that solicitors, attorneys, or proctors of, or by law empowered to practise in, any court the jurisdiction of which is by that act transferred to the high court of justice or the court of appeal, shall be called "solicitors of the supreme court." Wharton.

The term "attorney at law," as used in the United States, usually includes "barrister," "counsellor," and "solicitor," in the sense in which those terms are used in England. In some states, as well as in the United States supreme court, "attorney" and "counsellor" are distinguishable, the former term being applied to the younger members of the bar, and to those who carry on the practice and formal parts of the suit, while "counsellor" is the adviser, or special counsel retained to try the cause. Rap. & L.

—Attorney in fact. A private attorney authorized by another to act in his place and stead, either for some particular purpose, as to do a particular act, or for the transaction of business in general, not of a legal character. This authority is conferred by an instrument in writing, called a "letter of attorney," or more commonly a "power of attorney." Treat v. Tolman, 113 F. 893, 51 C. C. A. 522; Hall v. Sawyer, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 119; White v. Ferguson, 29 Ind. App. 144, 64 N. E. 49.

This term is employed to designate persons who act under a special agency, or a special letter of attorney, so that they are appointed in factum, for the deed, or special act to be performed; but in a more extended sense it includes all other agents employed in any business, or to do any act or acts in pais for another. Bacon, Abr. Attorney; Story, Ag. § 25.

—Attorney of record. The one whose name is entered on the record of an action or suit as the attorney of a designated party thereto. Delaney v. Husband, 64 N. J. Law, 275, 45 Atl. 265.

—Attorney of the wards and liveries. In English law. This was the third officer of the duchy court. Bac. Abr. "Attorney."

—Attorney's certificate. In English practice, a certificate of the commissioners of stamps that the attorney therein named has paid the annual tax or duty. This must be renewed yearly; and the penalty for practising without such certificate is fifty pounds; Stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 90, §§ 26, 28, 30. See also 7 & 8 Vict. c. 73, §§ 21-26; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 63.

—Attorney's lien. See Lien; Charging Lien.

—Letter of attorney. A power of attorney; a written instrument by which one person constitutes another his true and lawful attorney, in order that the latter may do for the former, and in his place and stead, some lawful act. People v. Smith, 112 Mich. 192, 70 N. W. 466, 67 Am. St. Rep. 392; Civ. Code La. art. 2985. An instrument of writing, appointing an attorney in fact for an avowed purpose and setting forth his powers and duties. Mullins v. Commonwealth, 179 Ky. 71, 200 S. W. 9, 11. It is, in effect, a mere contract of agency. Filtsch v. Bishop, 118 Okl. 272, 247 P. 1110, 1111. A general power authorizes the agent to act generally in behalf of the principal. A special power is one limited to particular acts.

—Public attorney. A name sometimes given to an attorney at law, as distinguished from a private attorney, or attorney in fact.

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

In English Law

The chief law officer of the realm, being created by letters patent, whose office is to exhibit informations and prosecute for the crown in matters criminal, and to file bills in the exchequer in any matter concerning the king's revenue. State v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 90, 53 N. W. 35, 17 L. R. A. 145, 35 Am. St. Rep. 27; 3 Bla. Comm. 27; Termes de la Ley.

In American Law

The attorney general of the United States is the head of the department of justice, appointed by the president, and a member of the cabinet. He appears in behalf of the government in all cases in the supreme court in which the government is interested, and gives his legal advice to the president and heads of departments upon questions submitted to him. Act of Sept. 24, 1789 (5 USCA §§ 291, 303, 309).

In each state also there is an attorney general, or similar officer, who appears for the people, as in England the attorney general appears for the crown. State v. District Court, 22 Mont. 25, 55 Pac. 916; People v. Kramer, 33 Misc. 209, 68 N. Y. Supp. 353; Com. v. Burrell, 7 Pa. 39; Platte Valley Drainage Dist. of Worth County v. National Surety Co., 221 Mo. App. 898, 295 S. W. 1083, 1088. He is the chief law officer of the state and head of the legal department. People v. Newcomer, 284 Ill. 315, 120 N. E. 244, 247.

ATTORNEYSHIP. The office of an agent or attorney.

ATTORNMENT. In feudal and old English law. A turning over or transfer by a lord of the services of his tenant to the grantee of his seignior.

Attornment is the act of a person who holds a leasehold interest in land, or estate for life or years, by which he agrees to become the tenant of a stranger who has acquired the fee in the land, or the remainder or reversion, or the right to the rent or services by which the tenant holds. Lindley v. Dakin, 13 Ind. 388; Willis v. Moore, 59 Tex. 636, 46 Am. Rep. 284; Foster v. Morris, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 610, 13 Am. Dec. 205; De Good v. Gettle, 119 Kan. 534, 240 P. 960, 961; Snyder v. Bernstein Bros., 201 Iowa, 931, 208 N. W. 503, 504. See Attorn.

The doctrine of attornment grew out of the peculiar relations existing between the landlord and his tenant under the feudal law, and the reasons for the rule never had any existence in this country, and is inconsistent with our laws, customs and institutions. Beyond its application to estop a tenant from denying the title of his landlord, it can serve but little, if any, useful purpose. Perrin v. Lepper, 34 Mich. 292.

ATTRACTIVE NUISANCE DOCTRINE. A doctrine which holds a property owner liable, when he knowingly leaves a dangerous instrumentality, which he may be charged with knowing is of a character to attract children, exposed in a place liable to be frequented by children, and, as a result, a child, who did not realize the danger, is injured. McKiddy v. Des Moines Electric Co., 202 Iowa, 225, 206 N. W. 815, 817; Union P. R. Co. v. McDonald, 152 U. S. 262, 14 Sup. Ct. 619, 38 L. Ed. 434. For illustrative cases applying this doctrine, see Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Sandberg v. McGilvray, Raymond Granite Co., 66 Cal. App. 261, 226 P. 28, 30; Barrett v. Southern Pac. Co., 91 Cal. 296, 27 P. 666, 25 Am. St. Rep. 186; Keffe v. R. Co., 21 Minn. 207, 18 Am. Rep. 393. For cases to which the doctrine was deemed inapplicable, see Lineberry v. North Carolina Ry. Co., 187 N. C. 786, 123 S. E. 1, 4 (a railroad cut); State ex rel. Kansas City v. Ellison, 281 Mo.

AU BESOIN. (Fr. in case of need. "Au besoin chez Messieurs — à —") "In case of need, apply to Messrs. — at —").

A phrase sometimes used in the direction of a bill of exchange, pointing out the person to whom application may be made for payment in case of failure or refusal of the drawee to pay. Story, Bills § 65.

AUBAINE. See Droit d'Aubaine.

AUCTION. A public sale of land or goods, at public outcry, to the highest bidder. Russell v. Miner, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 539; Hibler v. Hoag, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 553; Crandall v. State, 28 Ohio St. 481; 19 Cent. L. J. 247; Bateman, Auct.; Civ. Code La. art. 2601; Bond v. Stephens, 161 Ga. 140, 129 S. E. 636, 638.

A sale by auction is a sale by public outcry to the highest bidder on the spot. Barber Lumber Co. v. Gifford, 25 Idaho, 654, 139 P. 557, 560.

While auction is very generally defined as a sale to the highest bidder, and this is the usual meaning, there may be a sale to the lowest bidder, as where land is sold for non-payment of taxes to whomsoever will take it for the shortest term; or where a contract is offered to the one who will perform it at the lowest price. And these appear fairly included in the term "auction." Abbott.

Dutch Auction

A method of sale by auction which consists in the public offer of the property at a price beyond its value, and then gradually lowering the price until some one becomes the purchaser. Crandall v. State, 28 Ohio St. 482.

Public Auction

A sale of property at auction, where any and all persons who choose are permitted to attend and offer bids. The phrase imports a sale to the highest and best bidder with absolute freedom for competitive bidding. State v. Miller, 52 Mont. 562, 160 P. 513, 515.

Though this phrase is frequently used, it is doubtful whether the word "public" adds anything to the force of the expression, since "auction" itself imports publicity. If there can be such a thing as a private auction, it must be one where the property is sold to the highest bidder, but only certain persons, or a certain class of persons, are permitted to be present or to offer bids.

Puffing the Bidding

See Bid.

AUCTIONARIÆ. Catalogues of goods for public sale or auction.

AUCTIONARIUS. A seller; a regrator; a retailer; one who bought and sold; an auctioneer, in the modern sense. Spelman, Gloss. One who buys poor, old, worn-out things to sell again at a greater price. Du Cange.

AUCTIONEER. A person authorized or licensed by law to sell lands or goods of other persons at public auction; one who sells at auction. City of Chicago v. Ornstein, 323 Ill. 258, 154 N. E. 100, 52 A. L. R. 489; Com. v. Harnden, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 482; Crandall v. State, 28 Ohio St. 481; Williams v. Millington, 1 H. Bl. 83; Russell v. Miner, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 539.

Auctioneers differ from brokers, in that the latter may both buy and sell, whereas auctioneers can only sell; also brokers may sell by private contract only, and auctioneers by public auction only. Auctioneers can only sell goods for ready money, but factors may sell upon credit. Wilkes v. Ellis, 2 H. Bl. 557; Steward v. Winters, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 590.

AUDITA QUERELA. The name of a writ constituting the initial process in an action brought by a judgment defendant to obtain relief against the consequences of the judgment, on account of some matter of defense or discharge, arising since its rendition and which could not be taken advantage of otherwise. This definition is adopted in Kelley v. Kelley (Mo. App.) 290 S. W. 624, 628. See, also, Foss v. Witham, 9 Allen (Mass.) 572; Longworth v. Screven, 2 Hill (S. C.) 208, 27 Am. As used in a lease of coal lands providing for the removal of all available and merchantable coal, "available" coal includes all coal recoverable as a practical and reasonable mining proposition, considering actual conditions, cost, and all surrounding circumstances; and "merchantable" means, not coal which under all conditions can be handled at a profit, but coal which is ordinarily used, for sale, and can be usually sold at a profit. Big Vein Pocahontas Co. v. Browning, 137 Va. 34, 120 S. E. 247, 253. In determining the meaning of these terms, important elements are the location and condition of the coal in the mine and the disproportionate difference between the cost of operation therefor and the profits to be derived therefrom if mined and sold. Flavelle v. Red Jacket Consol. Coal & Coke Co., 82 W. Va. 295, 96 S. E. 600, 605.

In Maritime Law

Loss or damage accidentally happening to a vessel or to its cargo during a voyage.

Also a small duty paid to masters of ships, when goods are sent in another man's ship, for their care of the goods, over and above the freight.

In Marine Insurance

Where loss or damage occurs to a vessel or its cargo at sea, average is the adjustment and apportionment of such loss between the owner, the freight, and the cargo, in proportion to their respective interests and losses, in order that one may not suffer the whole loss, but each contribute ratably. Coster v. Insurance Co., 2 Wash. C. C. 51, 6 Fed. Cas. 611; Insurance Co. v. Bland, 9 Dana (Ky.) 147; Whitteridge v. Norris, 6 Mass. 125; Nickerson v. Tyson, 8 Mass. 467; Insurance Co. v. Jones, 2 Bin. (Pa.) 552.

General average (also called "gross") consists of expense purposely incurred, sacrifice made, or damage sustained for the common safety of the vessel, freight, and cargo, or the two of them, at risk, and is to be contributed for by the several interests in the proportion of their respective values exposed to the common danger, and ultimately surviving, including the amount of expense, sacrifice, or damage so incurred in the contributory value. 2 Phil. Ins. § 1269 et seq.; 3 Kent, Comm. 232; Padelford v. Boardman, 4 Mass. 548; The Roanoke, 46 F. 297; id., 53 F. 270; id., 59 F. 161, 8 C. C. A. 67; Wilson v. Cummings, 73 Pa. 98; Star of Hope v. Annan, 9 Wall. 203, 19 L. Ed. 638; Lew Rhodia, Dig. 14, 2, 1.

"General average" is a contribution by the several interests engaged in a maritime venture to make good the loss of one of them for the voluntary sacrifice of a part of the ship or cargo to save the residue of the property and the lives of those on board, or for extraordinary expenses necessarily incurred for the common benefit and safety of all. California Canneries Co. v. Canton Ins. Office, 25 Cal. App. 303, 143 P. 549, 553; Fagan Iron Works v. Calumet Const. Co., 82 N. J. Eq. 345, 83 A. 1069; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Beacham, 128 Md. 414, 97 A. 708, 709, L. R. A. 1916F, 1168. The law of general average is part of the maritime law, and not of the municipal law, and applies to maritime adventures only. Ralli v. Troop, 157 U. S. 336, 15 S. Ct. 657, 39 L. Ed. 742.

Particular average is a loss happening to the ship, freight, or cargo which is not to be shared by contribution among all those interested, but must be borne by the owner of the subject to which it occurs. It is thus called in contradistinction to general average. Bargett v. Insurance Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 395.

Petty average denotes such charges and disbursements as, according to occurrences and the custom of every place, the master necessarily furnishes for the benefit of the ship and cargo, either at the place of loading or unloading, or on the voyage; such as the hire of a pilot for conducting a vessel from one place to another, towage, light money, beaconage, anchorage, bridge toll, quarantine and such like. Park, Ins. 100; Le Guidon, c. 5, a. 13; Weyt, de A. 3, 4; Weskett, art. Petty Av.; 2 Phill. Ins. § 1269, n. 1; 2 Arnould, Mar. Ins. 927.

Simple average is the same as "particular average" (q. v.).

The term describes the condition of a benefice when it has no incumbent.

In Parliamentary Language

Avoidance of a decision signifies evading or superseding a question, or escaping the coming to a decision upon a pending question. Holthouse.

In Pleading

The allegation or statement of new matter, in opposition to a former pleading, which, admitting the facts alleged in such former pleading, shows cause why they should not have their ordinary legal effect. Mahaiwe Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 175; Cooper v. Tappan, 9 Wis. 366; Meadows v. Insurance Co., 62 Iowa, 387, 17 N. W. 600; Uri v. Hirsch (C. C.) 123 F. 570. See Confession and avoidance.

To make an avowry. For example, when replevin is brought for a thing distrained, and the party taking claims that he had a right to make the distress, he is said to avow. Newell Mill Co. v. Muxlow, 115 N. Y. 170, 21 N. E. 1048; Fleta, l. 1, c. 4; Cunningham, Dict. See Avowry; Justification.

AVOWRY. A pleading in the action of replevin, by which the defendant avows, that is, acknowledges, the taking of the distress or property complained of, where he took it in his own right, and sets forth the reason of it; as for rent in arrear, damage done, etc. 3 Bl. Comm. 149; 1 Tidd. Pr. 645. Brown v. Bissett, 21 N. J. Law, 274; Hill v. Miller, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 357; State v. Patrick, 14 N. C. 478; Lawes, Pl. 35.

Avowry is the setting forth, as in a declaration, the nature and merits of the defendant's case, showing that the distress taken by him was lawful, which must be done with such sufficient authority as will entitle him to a retorno habendo. Hill v. Stocking, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 284.

An avowry must be distinguished from a justification. The former species of plea admits the plaintiff's ownership of the property, but alleges a right in the defendant sufficient to warrant him in taking the property and which still subsists. A justification, on the other hand, denies that the plaintiff had the right of property or possession in the subject-matter, alleging it to have been in the defendant or a third person, or avers a right sufficient to warrant the defendant in taking it, although such right has not continued in force to the time of making answer. See 2 W. Jones, 25.

The property of the part thus separated continues in the original proprietor, in which respect avulsion differs from alluvion, by which an addition is insensibly made to a property by the gradual washing down of the river, and which addition becomes the property of the owner of the lands to which the addition is made. Wharton. And see Rees v. McDaniel, 115 Mo. 145, 21 S. W. 913; Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 12 Sup. Ct. 396, 36 L. Ed. 186; Bouvier v. Stricklett, 40 Neb. 792, 59 N. W. 550; Chicago v. Ward, 169 Ill. 392, 48 N. E. 927, 38 L. R. A. 849, 61 Am. St. Rep. 185; Attorney General v. Bay Boom Wild Rice & Fur Farm, 172 Wis. 363, 178 N. W. 569, 573.

Where running streams are the boundaries between states, the same rule applies as between private proprietors, and, if the stream from any cause, natural or artificial, suddenly leaves its old bed and forms a new one by the process known as "avulsion," the resulting change of channel works no change of boundary, which remains in the middle of the old channel though no water may be flowing in it and irrespective of subsequent changes in the new channel. State of Arkansas v. State of Tennessee, 38 S. Ct. 301, 304, 246 U. S. 158, 62 L. Ed. 638, L. R. A. 1918D, 258.

E. 1, 2 (holding that a finding that a contract was "awarded to" a bidder meant it was entered into with all required legal formalities).

AWARD, n. The decision or determination rendered by arbitrators or commissioners, or other private or extrajudicial deciders, upon a controversy submitted to them; also the writing or document embodying such decision. Halnon v. Halnon, 55 Vt. 321; Henderson v. Beaton, 52 Tex. 43; Peters v. Peirce, 8 Mass. 398; Benjamin v. U. S., 29 Ct. Cl. 417; Keiser v. Berks County, 253 Pa. 167, 97 A. 1067, 1068.

Under Workmen's Compensation Acts, the term may be used in the above sense, as signifying a decision or determination of the Industrial Board, or some equivalent body. Frankfort General Ins. Co. v. Conduitt, 74 Ind. App. 584, 127 N. E. 212, 215. It may also be used to refer to the amount of compensation fixed by the board, an "award" being an amount fixed by arbitration. Odrowski v. Swift & Co., 99 Kan. 163, 162 P. 268, 269. Hence, a compensation agreement, which is not approved by the Industrial Board, is not an award. Bruce v. Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, 83 Ind. An obligation signed by the accused with sureties, conditioned that the same shall be void on the performance by the accused of such acts as he is required to perform. State v. Wilson, 265 Mo. 1, 175 S. W. 603, 605. In criminal cases, a bail bond is a contract under seal, which, from its nature, requires sureties or bail, and therefore differs from a "recognizance," which is a debt or obligation of record, acknowledged before some court or magistrate authorized to take it, with condition to do some particular act, and which need not be executed by the parties. State v. Bradsher, 189 N. C. 401, 127 S. E. 349, 351, 38 A. L. R. 1102; National Surety Co. v. Nazzaro, 233 Mass. 74, 123 N. E. 346. See, also, Ewing v. United States (C. C. A.) 240 F. 241, 246. But under the law of Connecticut, "recognizance" and "bail" are interchangeable. National Surety Co. v. Nazzaro, 239 Mass. 341, 132 N. E. 49, 50.

—Bail common. A fictitious proceeding, intended only to express the appearance of a defendant, in cases where special bail is not required. It is put in in the same form as special bail, but the sureties are merely nominal or imaginary persons, as John Doe and Richard Roe. 3 Bl. Comm. 287.

Comm. 291; 1 Tidd, Pr. 250; Worthen v. Prescott, 60 Vt. 68, 11 Atl. 690; Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 154; 1 Sellon, Pr. 139.

—Bail to the action or bail above. Special bail (q. v.).

—Bail to the sheriff or bail below. Persons who undertake that a defendant arrested upon mesne process in a civil action shall duly appear to answer the plaintiff; such undertaking being in the form of a bond given to the sheriff, termed a "bail bond" (q. v.). 3 Bl. Comm. 290; 1 Tidd, Pr. 221. Sureties who bind themselves to the sheriff to secure the defendant's appearance, or his putting in bail to the action on the return-day of the writ.

"Bail to the sheriff was originally designed to temporarily liberate the defendant from close custody, and to place means in the sheriff's hands to insure the defendant's appearance to answer at the return of the writ. * * * The appearance which was contemplated was not, however, necessarily an actual appearance in person, but by putting in new bail, called bail to the action, special bail, or bail above. This special bail, or bail above, was by recognizance, which was matter of record, and an act of appearance, and by it the bail were bound that if the defendant should be condemned he should pay or render himself a prisoner, and if he did not, that they would pay the condemnation. The undertaking of the bail to the sheriff, or bail below, was wholly different, and was adapted to the specific exigency. It was in the form of a bond to the sheriff, and was conditioned for the defendant's appearance at the return of the writ, which meant putting in and perfecting bail above." De Myer v. McGonegal, 32 Mich. 120, 124.

—Civil bail. That taken in civil actions.

—Common bail. Fictitious sureties formally entered in the proper office of the court. See Bail common, supra.

—Special bail. Responsible sureties who undertake as bail above. Persons who undertake jointly and severally in behalf of a defendant arrested on mesne process in a civil action that, if he be condemned in the action, he shall pay the costs and condemnation, (that is, the amount which may be recovered against him,) or render himself a prisoner, or that they will pay it for him. 3 Bl. Comm. 291; 1 Tidd, Pr. 245; Sellon, Pr. 137. See Bail to the sheriff or bail below, supra.

—Straw bail. Nominal or worthless bail. Irresponsible persons, or men of no property, who make a practice of going bail for any one who will pay them a fee therefor, and who originally, as a mark of their purpose, wore straw in their shoes.

—Bail à rente. A contract partaking of the nature of the contract of sale, and that of the contract of lease; it is translatif of property, and the rent is essentially redeemable. Clark's Heirs v. Christ's Church, 4 La. 286; Poth. Bail à Rente, 1, 3.

—Bail emphyteotique. An emphyteutic lease; a lease for a term of years with a right to prolong indefinitely; practically equivalent to an alienation. 5 Low. C. 381; 6 Low. C. 58. See Emphyteusis.

As used in some embezzlement statutes, the word "bailee" does not include all bailments, but only those for the sole benefit of the bailor, where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties. Johnson v. State, 71 Tex. Cr. R. 206, 159 S. W. 849, 850.

BAILMENT. A delivery of something of a personal nature by one party to another, to be held according to the purpose or object of the delivery, and to be returned or delivered over when that purpose is accomplished. Prof. Joel Parker, MS. Lect. Harvard Law School, 1851. Adopted in Hogan v. O'Brien, 206 N. Y. S. 831, 833, 123 Misc. 865.

A delivery of goods or personal property, by one person to another, in trust for the execution of a special object upon or in relation to such goods, beneficial either to the bailor or bailee or both, and upon a contract, express or implied, to perform the trust and carry out such object, and thereupon either to redeliver the goods to the bailor or otherwise dispose of the same in conformity with the purpose of the trust. Watson v. State, 70 Ala. 13, 45 Am. Rep. 70; Com. v. Maher, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 425; McCaffrey v. Knapp, 74 Ill. App. 80; Krause v. Com., 93 Pa. 418, 39 Am. Rep. 762; Fulcher v. State, 32 Tex. Cr. R. 621, 25 S. W. 625.

The transfer of the possession of personal property without the transfer of ownership for the accomplishment of a certain purpose. Essex v. Fife, 67 Okl. 55, 168 P. 814.

A delivery of a thing in trust for some special object or purpose, and upon a contract, express or implied, to conform to the object or purpose of the trust. Story, Bailm. 3.

Bailment is a word of French origin, significant of the curtailed transfer, the delivery or mere handing over, which is appropriate to the transaction Schouler, Pers. Prop. 635.

A delivery of goods in trust upon a contract, expressed or implied, that the trust shall be faithfully executed on the part of the bailee. 2 Bl. Comm. 455; D. M. Ferry & Co. v. Forquer, 61 Mont. 336, 202 P. 193, 195, 29 A. L. R. 642.

A delivery of goods in trust upon a contract, expressed or implied, that the trust shall be duly executed, and the goods restored by the bailee as soon as the purposes of the bailment shall be answered. 2 Kent, Comm. 559; Zetterstrom v. Thomas, 92 Conn. 702, 104 A. 237, 1 A. L. R. 392; Samples v. Geary (Mo. App.) 292 S. W. 1036, 1067; Tashima v. People, 58 Colo. 98, 144 P. 200, 201.

A delivery of goods in trust upon a contract, either expressed or implied, that the trust shall be duly executed, and the goods redelivered as soon as the time or use for which they were bailed shall have elapsed or be performed. Jones, Bailm. 117.

A delivery of goods for some purpose, upon a contract, express or implied, that, after the purpose has been fulfilled, they shall be redelivered to the bailor, or otherwise dealt with, according to his directions, or (as the case may be) kept till he reclaims them. 2 Steph. Comm. 80; Lord v. Oklahoma State Fair Ass'n, 95 Okl. 294, 219 P. 713, 718; Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Cross (C. C. A.) 17 F.(2d) 417, 418.

According to Story, the contract does not necessarily imply an undertaking to redeliver the goods. On the other hand, Blackstone, although his definition does not include the return, speaks of it in all his examples of bailments as a duty of the bailee; and Kent says that the application of the term to cases in which no return or redelivery to the owner or his agent is contemplated, is extending the definition of the term beyond its ordinary acceptance in English law. A consignment to a factor would be a bailment for sale, according to Story; while according to Kent it would not.

Classification

Sir William Jones has divided bailments into five sorts, namely: Depositum, or deposit; mandatum, or commission without recompense; commodatum, or loan for use without pay; pignori acceptum, or pawn; locatum, or hiring, which is always with reward. This last is subdivided into locatio rei, or hiring, by which the hirer gains a temporary use of the thing; locatio operis faciendi, when something is to be done to the thing delivered; locatio operis mercium vehendarum, when the thing is merely to be carried from one place to another. Jones, Bailm. 36.

Lord Holt divided bailments thus:

(1) Depositum, or a naked bailment of goods, to be kept for the use of the bailor.

(2) Commodatum. Where goods or chattels that are useful are lent to the bailee gratis, to be used by him.

(3) Locatio rei. Where goods are lent to the bailee to be used by him for hire.

(4) Vadium. Pawn or pledge.

(5) Locatio operis faciendi. Where goods are delivered to be carried, or something is to be done about them, for a reward to be paid to the bailee.

(6) Mandatum. A delivery of goods to somebody who is to carry them, or do something about them, gratis. 2 Ld. Raym. 909.

Another division, suggested by Bouvier as being a better general division for practical purposes, is as follows: First, those bailments which are for the benefit of the bailor, or of some person whom he represents; second, those for the benefit of the bailee, or some person represented by him; third, those which are for the benefit of both parties.

Bailments as Distinguished from Other Transactions

—Chattel mortgages. A radical distinction between a bailment and a chattel mortgage is that, by a mortgage, the title is transferred to the mortgagee, subject to be revested by performance of the condition, but, in case of a bailment, the bailor retains the title and parts with the possession for a special purpose. Walker v. Staples, 5 Allen (Mass.) 34.

—Exchanges. An agreement by which A is to let B have a horse, in consideration that B will let A have another horse, creates an exchange, not a bailment. King v. Fuller, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 152; Austin v. Seligman, 21 Blatchf. 506, 18 Fed. 519.

—Partnerships. Where animals are delivered to be taken care of for a certain time, and at the expiration of that time the same number of animals is to be returned, and any increase is to be enjoyed by both parties, there is a bailment, not a partnership. Robinson v. Haas, 40 Cal. 474; Simmons v. Shaft, 91 Kan. 553, 138 P. 614, 615. See, also, Ward v. Thompson, Fed. Cas. No. 17,162.

—Sales. The test of a bailment is that the identical thing is to be returned in the same or in some altered form; if another thing of equal value is to be returned, the transaction is a sale. Marsh v. Titus, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 29; Sturm v. Boker, 150 U. S. 312, 14 S. Ct. 99, 37 L. Ed. 1093.

This distinction or test is recognized in Lafin & R. Powder Co. v. Burkhardt, 97 U. S. 116, 24 L. Ed. 973; Walker v. Butterick, 105 Mass. 237; Middleton v. Stone, 111 Pa. 589, 4 A. 523; In re Ballard (D. C.) 279 F. 574, 585; Mitchell v. Eagle Creek Oil Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 211, 212; Finch v. McClellan, 77 Ind. App. 533, 130 N. E. 13, 15; Borman v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 262 F. 26, 29.

A "sale" contemplates that, at some time, the title shall pass to the vendee, and that, at some time and in some manner, he shall pay the purchase price, whereas a "bailment" contemplates that the title shall not pass to the bailee, but remain in the bailor, and that the property shall return to the bailor, or be disposed of as he may direct. Norris v. Boston Music Co., 129 Minn. 198, 151 N. W. 971, 972, L. R. A. 1917B, 615; In re Tansill (D. C.) 17 F.(2d) 413, 414.

The principal test by which to determine whether a contract creates a bailment, or is a sale on credit, is whether there was a binding promise by the person to whom the possession was given to pay for the article. People v. Baker, 64 Cal. App. 336, 221 P. 654, 656; Miles v. Sabin, 90 Or. 129, 175 P. 863, 864; In re Thomas (D. C.) 231 F. 513, 516; Botkin v. State, 16 Okl. Cr. 610, 185 P. 835, 838; Randolph & Co. v. Columbia Graphophone Co., 45 App. D. C. 146, 152.

For cases involving the deposit of wheat in elevators, see Zuber v. Minshall, 123 Kan. 595, 256 P. 806, 807; Kansas Flour Mills Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Harper County, 124 Kan. 312, 259 P. 795, 796, 54 A. L. R. 1164; Finch v. McClellan, 77 Ind. App. 533, 130 N. E. 13, 15; Burke v. Boulder Milling & Elevator Co., 77 Colo. 230, 235 P. 574, 575.

—Trusts. The passing of the legal title from the owner to the party to whom personal property is delivered distinguishes a "trust" from a bailment. National Cattle Loan Co. v. Ward, 113 Tex. 312, 255 S. W. 160, 164.

In General

—Bailment for hire. A contract in which the bailor agrees to pay an adequate recompense for the safe-keeping of the thing intrusted to the custody of the bailee, and the bailee agrees to keep it and restore it on the request of the bailor, in the same condition substantially as he received it, excepting injury or loss from causes for which he is not responsible. Arent v. Squire, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 356. Under Pennsylvania law, it is essential to the validity of a "bailment" for hire or use that there be a term for which the chattel is to remain in the possession of the bailee, an agreed rental, and an agreement, express or implied, for redelivery of the article to the bailor in the same or in an altered form, and the subject-matter of the bailment must be a chattel. Duhrkop Oven Co. v. Tormay (C. C. A.) 9 F.(2d) 281, 282.

—Actual bailment. One which exists where there is either (a) an "actual delivery," consisting in giving to the bailee or his agent the real possession of the chattel, or (b) a "constructive delivery," consisting of any of those acts which, although not truly comprising real possession of the goods transferred, have been held by legal construction equivalent to acts of real delivery. Gilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 86 N. J. Law, 446, 92 A. 59, 60; Wentworth v. Riggs, 159 App. Div. 899, 143 N. Y. S. 955, 956.

—Constructive bailment. One arising where the person having possession of a chattel holds it under such circumstances that the law imposes upon him the obligation to deliver it to another. Gilson v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 86 N. J. Law, 446, 92 A. 59, 60; Hope v. Costello, 222 Mo. App. 187, 297 S. W. 100, 103; Wentworth v. Riggs, 159 App. Div. 899, 143 N. Y. S. 955, 956. See, also, Involuntary bailment, infra.

—Gratuitous bailment. Another name for a depositum or naked bailment, which is made only for the benefit of the bailor and is not a source of profit to the bailee. Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 499, 9 Am. Dec. 168.

—Involuntary bailment. One arising by the accidental leaving of personal property in the possession of any person without negligence on the part of its owner. Grossman Co. v. White, 52 Okl. 117, 152 P. 816, 817. A “bailment” is created by the element of lawful possession and the duty to act for the thing as the property of another, whether such possession is based on contract in the ordinary sense or not. Foulke v. New York Consol. R. Co., 228 N. Y. 269, 127 N. E. 237, 239, 9 A. L. R. 1384. See Constructive bailment, supra.

—Lucrative bailment. One which is undertaken upon a consideration and for which a payment or recompense is to be made to the bailee, or from which he is to derive some advantage. Prince v. Alabama State Fair, 106 Ala. 340, 17 So. 449, 28 L. R. A. 716.

BAILOR. The party who bails or delivers goods to another, in the contract of bailment. McGee v. French, 49 S. C. 454, 27 S. E. 487; Story, Bailm. §§ 74, 388.

BAKERY SHOP. A term which, when used in an agreement restricting the right to maintain such a shop, may contemplate not only the acts in making the bread and selling it, but of selling the product manufactured by others, either in a shop especially set up for that purpose or through a place where other articles of commerce are sold, or peddling it without having an established place. Kuhns v. Loetzbieer, 58 Pa. Super. Ct. 148, 153.

BAKING POWDER. A mixture in dry form of certain alkali and acid substances, combined with a filler; when moistened and heated, as in baking dough, a chemical reaction occurs, liberating carbonic gas, which “raises” or leavens the bread. Royal Baking Powder Co. v. Emerson (C. C. A.) 270 F. 429, 436.

BALÆNA. A large fish, called by Blackstone a “whale.” Of this the king had the head and the queen the tail as a perquisite whenever one was taken on the coast of England. 1 Bl. Comm. 222; Prynne, Ann. Reg. 127.

BALANCE. An equality between the sums total of the two sides of an account, or the excess on either side. Jones v. Marrs, 114 Tex. 62, 263 S. W. 570, 574. The conclusion or result of the debit and credit sides of an account. It implies mutual dealings, and the existence of debt and credit, without which there could be no balance. Loeb v. Keyes, 156 N. Y. 529, 51 N. E. 285; McWilliams v. Allan, 45 Mo. 574; Thillman v. Shadrick, 69 Md. 528, 16 Atl. 138.

The amount remaining due from one person to another on a settlement of the accounts involving their mutual dealings; the difference between the two sides (debit and credit) of an account.

The term is also used, with more frequency than propriety, to signify residue or remainder; as when a will speaks of the “balance” of an estate. Bunnell v. Beam, 86 N. J. Eq. 101, 97 A. 494, 495; In re Plumly's Estate, 261 Pa. 432, 104 A. 670; Guerin v. Guerin, 270 Ill. 239, 110 N. E. 402, 405; Jordan v. Ringstaff, 213 Ala. 512, 105 So. 641, 642; *Rice v. But the terms are distinguishable, in that "ballot" is the instrument by which a voter expresses his choice between candidates, or in respect to propositions, while his "vote" is the choice or election as expressed by his ballot. Board of Education of Oklahoma City v. Woodworth, 214 P. 1077, 1079, 89 Okl. 192; Martin v. Fullam, 90 Vt. 163, 97 A. 442, 445; Straughan v. Meyers, 268 Mo. 580, 187 S. W. 1159, 1162.

See State v. Shaw, 9 S. C. 144.

Official Ballot

Depending on its use in local statutes, this term has a varied meaning. It may refer to a ballot which has been furnished by the clerk; Cain v. Garvey (Tex. Civ. App.) 187 S. The full bench, full court. A "sitting in banc" is a meeting of all the judges of a court, usually for the purpose of hearing arguments on demurrers, points reserved, motions for new trial, etc., as distinguished from the sitting of a single judge at the assises or at nisi prius and from trials at bar. It is inflicted principally upon political offenders. "transportation" being the word used to express a similar punishment of ordinary criminals. Banishment, however, merely forbids the return of the person banished before the expiration of the sentence, while transportation involves the idea of deprivation of liberty after the convict arrives at the place to which he has been carried. Rap. & L.

BANISTER AND RAILING. These words, in the New York Tenement House Law, § 35, mean a balustrade, consisting of balusters or supports, upon which is placed a railing commonly placed on the outer or open edge of a stairway. Cahill v. Kleinberg, 233 N. Y. 255, 135 N. E. 323.

Banks are fast land, on which vegetation appropriate to such land in the particular locality grows wherever the bank is not too steep to permit such growth, and bed is soil of a different character, and having no vegetation, or only such as exists, when commonly submerged in water. State v. Nolegs, 40 Okl. 479, 139 P. 943, 946.

The term "bank" is usually restricted in its application to an incorporated body; while a private individual making it his business to conduct banking operations is generally denominated a "banker." Hobbs v. Bank, 101 Fed. 75, 41 C. C. A. 205; Kiggins v. Munday, 19 Wash. 233, 52 P. 855; Oulton v. Loan Soc., 17 Wall. 117, 21 L. Ed. 618; Hamilton Nat. Bank v. American L. & T. Co., 66 Neb. 67, 92 N. W. 190; Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co. (C. C.) 23 F. 469.

The house or place where the business of banking is carried on.

Banks in the commercial sense are of three kinds, viz.: (1) Of deposit; (2) of discount; (3) of circulation. Strictly speaking, the term "bank" implies a place for the deposit of money, as that is the most obvious purpose of such an institution. Originally the business of banking consisted only in receiving deposits, such as bullion, plate, and the like, for safe-keeping until the depositor should see fit to draw it out for use, but the business, in the progress of events, was extended, and bankers assumed to discount bills and notes, and to loan money upon mortgage, pawn, or other security, and, at a still later period, to issue notes of their own, intended as a circulating currency and a medium of exchange, instead of gold and silver. Modern bankers frequently exercise any two or even all three of those functions, but it is still true that an institution prohibited from exercising any more than one of those functions is a bank, in the strictest commercial sense. Oulton v. German Sav. & L. Soc., 17 Wall. 118, 21 L. Ed. 618; Millikan v. Security Trust Co., 137 Ind. 307, 118 N. E. 568, 569; Rev. St. U. S. § 3407 (12 USCA § 561).

—Bank-account. A sum of money placed with a bank or banker, on deposit, by a customer, and subject to be drawn out on the latter's check. The statement or computation of the several sums deposited and those drawn out by the customer on checks, entered on the books of the bank and the depositor's pass-book. Gale v. Drake, 51 N. H. 84.

—Bank bill. Same as bank note. Eastman v. Com., 4 Gray (Mass.) 416. See Bank note, infra.

—Bank book. A book kept by a customer of a bank, showing the state of his account with it. See Pass-book.

In the early history of banks, their notes were generally denominated bills of credit. Briscoe v. Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 257, 9 L. Ed. 709. See, also, Banker's note.

Grant, Banks, 546; Johnson v. Ward, 2 Ill. App. 274; Com. v. Reading Sav. Bank, 133 Mass. 16, 19, 43 Am. Rep. 495; National Bank of Redemption v. Boston, 125 U. S. 60, 8 Sup. Ct. 772, 31 L. Ed. 689; Barrett v. Bloomfield Sav. Inst., 64 N. J. Eq. 425, 54 Atl. 543; Williams v. Johnson, 50 Mont. 7, 144 P. 768, 770, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 595; Bulakowski v. Philadelphia Sav. Fund Soc., 270 Pa. 538, 113 A. 553, 554. They differ from the ordinary banks of discount and deposit in not being engaged in business for profit. Commercial Trust Co. of New Jersey v. Hudson County Board of Taxation, 86 N. J. Law, 424, 92 A. 263, 265.

BANKABLE PAPER. In mercantile law. Notes, checks, bank bills, drafts, and other securities for money, received as cash by the banks. The term does not necessarily mean discountable paper, but paper of such high credit that, if the time of payment was reasonable and the banks had loanable funds, they would ordinarily discount it. Edward P. Allis Co. v. Madison Electric Light, Heat & Power Co., 9 S. D. 459, 70 N. W. 650, 652.

National bank notes are received as bankable money without regard to the locality of the bank issuing them. See U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5133 (12 USCA § 21); Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 3 Wall. 533, 19 L. Ed. 482.

An individual is not engaged in the banking business merely because he does some of the things which are frequently or usually done by banks; thus, a dealer in foreign exchange and foreign money is not necessarily a banker, and does not necessarily perform a banking function. Wedesweiler v. Brundage, 297 Ill. 228, 130 N. E. 520. See, also,

People v. Young, 207 N. Y. 522, 101 N. E. 451, 453 (holding that an unincorporated association engaged in making salary loans, etc., was not a banker).

Individual Banker

Under some statutes, an individual banker, as distinguished from a "private banker" (q. v.), is a person who, having complied with the statutory requirements, has received authority from the state to engage in the business of banking, while a private banker is a person engaged in banking without having any special privileges or authority from the state. Perkins v. Smith, 116 N. Y. 441, 23 N. E. 21.

Private Banker

One who carries on the business of banking without being incorporated. State of Missouri v. Angle (C. C. A.) 236 F. 644, 650; Herzog v. Transatlantic Trust Co. (Sup.) 172 N. Y. S. 394, 395. One who carries on the business of banking by receiving money on deposit with or without interest, by buying and selling bills of exchange, promissory notes, gold or silver coin, bullion, uncurrent money, bonds or stock, or other securities, and by loaning money without being incorporated. Rev. St. Mo. 1909, § 1116 (repealed by Laws 1915, p. 102); State ex rel. Barker v. Sage, 267 Mo. 493, 184 S. W. 984, 988. See Individual banker, supra.

BANKER'S ACCEPTANCE. A draft or bill of exchange of which the acceptor is a bank or banker engaged generally in the business of granting bankers' acceptance credits. Atterbury v. Bank of Washington Heights of City of New York, 241 N. Y. 231, 149 N. E. 841, 843.

BANKER'S LIEN. A lien which a banker has by virtue of which he can appropriate any money or property in his possession belonging to a customer to the extinguishment of any matured debt of such customer to the bank, provided such property or money has not been charged, with the knowledge of the bank, with the subservience of a special burden or purpose, or does not constitute a trust fund of which the banker has notice. American Surety Co. of New York v. Bank of Italy, 63 Cal. App. 149, 218 P. 466, 468.

BANKER'S NOTE. A commercial instrument resembling a bank note in every particular except that it is given by a private banker or unincorporated banking institution. 6 Mod. 29; 3 Chit. Comm. Law 590.

BANKEROUT. O. Eng. Bankrupt; insolvent; indebted beyond the means of payment.

BANKING. The business of receiving money on deposit, loaning money, discounting notes, issuing notes for circulation, collecting money on notes deposited, negotiating bills, etc. Bank v. Turner, 154 Ind. 456, 57 N. E. 110.

The business of banking, as defined by law and custom, consists in the issue of notes payable on demand intended to circulate as money when the banks are banks of issue; in receiving deposits payable on demand; in discounting commercial paper; making loans of money on collateral security; buying and selling bills of exchange; negotiating loans, and dealing in negotiable securities issued by the government, state and national, and municipal and other corporations. Mercantile Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 156, 7 S. Ct. 826, 30 L. Ed. 895; First Nat. Bank v. Dawson County, 66 Mont. 321, 213 P. 1097, 1103.

Having a place of business where deposits are received and paid out on checks and where money is loaned on security is the substance of the "business of banking." Marvin v. Kentucky Title Trust Co., 218 Ky. 135, 291 S. W. 17, 18, 50 A. L. R. 1337; Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 704, 23 L. Ed. 421. See, also, Old Colony Trust Co. v. Malley (D. C.) 238 F. 903, 91L.

BANKING HOURS. A term which, in addition to the regular hours, includes time to allow presentment, after closing, to the bank returning a check, if such presentment is necessary in fact. Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Miller, 156 App. Div. 810, 142 N. Y. S. 440, 445.

BANKRUPT. Originally and strictly, a trader who secretes himself or does certain other acts tending to defraud his creditors. 2 Bl. Comm. 471.

In a looser sense, an insolvent person; a broken-up or ruined trader. Everett v. Stone, 3 Story, 453, Fed. Cas. No. 4577.

In the English law there were two characteristics which distinguished bankrupts from insolvents: the former must have been a trader and the object of the proceedings against, not by, him. As used in American law, the distinction between a bankrupt and an insolvent is not generally regarded. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529; 2 Kent, 390; McCormick v. Pickering, 4 N. Y. 263. On the continent of Europe, however, the distinction still exists. Holtz. Enc. voc. sig. Bankerott.

A person who has committed an act of bankruptcy; one who has done some act or suffered some act to be done in consequence of which, under the laws of his country, he is liable to be proceeded against by his creditors for the seizure and distribution among them of his entire property. Ashby v. Steere, 2 Woodb. & M. 347, 2 Fed. Cas. 15; In re Scott, 21 Fed. Cas. 803; U. S. v. Pusey, 27 Fed. Cas. 632.

A person who, by the formal decree of a court, has been declared subject to be proceeded against under the bankruptcy laws, or entitled, on his voluntary application, to take the benefit of such laws. See Bankruptcy Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 1, 30 Stat. 544 (11 USCA § 1).

BANKRUPT LAW. A law relating to bankrupts and the procedure against them in the courts. A law providing a remedy for the creditors of a bankrupt, and for the relief and restitution of the bankrupt himself.

A bankrupt law is distinguished from the ordinary law between debtor and creditor, as involving these three general principles: (1) A summary and immediate seizure of all the debtor's property; (2) a distribution of it among the creditors in general, instead of merely applying a portion of it to the payment of the individual complainant; and (3) the discharge of the debtor from future liability for the debts then existing.

The leading distinction between a bankrupt law and an insolvent law, in the proper technical sense, consists in the character of the persons upon whom it is designed to operate,—the former contemplating as its objects bankrupts only, that is, traders of a certain description; the latter, insolvents in general, or persons unable to pay their debts. This has led to a marked separation between the two systems, in principle and in practice, which in England has always been carefully maintained, although in the United States it has of late been disregarded. A bankrupt law, moreover, in its proper sense, is a remedy intended primarily for the benefit of creditors; it is set in motion at their instance, and operates upon the debtor against his will, (in invitum), although in its result it effectually discharges him from his debts. An insolvent law, on the other hand, is chiefly intended for the benefit of the debtor, and is set in motion at his instance, though possibly less effective as a discharge in its final result. Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 194, 4 L. Ed. 529; Vanuxen v. Hazlehurst, 4 N. J. Law, 192, 7 Am. Dec. 532; Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, 79, 1 Fed. Cas. 142; Kunzler v. Kohaus, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 317.

The only substantial difference between a strictly bankrupt law and an insolvent law lies in the circumstance that the former affords relief upon the application of the creditor, and the latter upon the application of the debtor. Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 222.

BANKRUPTCY. The state or condition of one who is a bankrupt; amenability to the bankrupt laws; the condition of one who has committed an act of bankruptcy, and is liable to be proceeded against by his creditors therefor, or of one whose circumstances are such that he is entitled, on his voluntary application, to take the benefit of the bankrupt laws.

The term is used in a looser sense as synonymous with "insolvency,"—inability to pay one's debts; the stopping and breaking up of business because the trader is broken down, insolvent, ruined. Phipps v. Harding, 70 Fed. 468, 17 C. C. A. 203, 30 L. R. A. 513; Arnold v. Maynard, 2 Story, 354, Fed. Cas. No. 561; Bernhardt v. Curtis, 109 La. 171, 33 South. 125, 94 Am. St. Rep. 445.

Insolvency means a simple inability to pay as debts should become payable, whereby the debtor's business would be broken up; bankruptcy means the particular legal status, to be ascertained and declared by a judicial decree. In re Black, 2 Ben. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 1457.

The proceedings taken under the bankrupt law, against a person (or firm or company) to have him adjudged a bankrupt, and to have his estate administered for the benefit of the creditors, and divided among them.

That branch of jurisprudence, or system of law and practice, which is concerned with the definition and ascertainment of acts of bankruptcy and the administration of bankrupts' estates for the benefit of their creditors and the absolution and restitution of bankrupts.

This term includes all proceedings in a federal court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, founded on a petition in bankruptcy and either directly or collaterally involved in the adjudication and discharge of the bankrupt and the collection and administration of his estate. Kidder v. Horrobin, 72 N. Y. 167. See, also, Proceedings in bankruptcy.

Controversies Arising in Bankruptcy Proceedings

See Proceedings in bankruptcy.

Involuntary Bankruptcy

See Voluntary bankruptcy, infra.

Voluntary Bankruptcy

Bankruptcy (in the sense of proceedings taken under the bankruptcy law) is either voluntary or involuntary; the former where the proceeding is initiated by the debtor's own petition to be adjudged a bankrupt and have the benefit of the law (In re Murray [D. C.] 96 Fed. 600; Metsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, 2 Sup. Ct. 351, 27 L. Ed. 654), the latter where he is forced into bankruptcy on the petition of a sufficient number of his creditors.

See Bankrupt; Bankrupt Law.

BANNS OF MATRIMONY. Public notice or proclamation of a matrimonial contract, and the intended celebration of the marriage of the parties in pursuance of such contract. Cowell; 1 Bla. Comm. 439; Pothier, Du Mariage p. 2, c. 2.

Such announcement is required by the English law to be made in a church or chapel, during service, on three consecutive Sundays before the marriage is celebrated. The object is to afford an opportunity for any person to interpose an objection if he knows of any impediment or other just cause why the marriage should not take place. The publication of the bans may be dispensed with by procuring a special license to marry.

BANNUM. A ban (q. v.).

BANNUS. In old English law. A proclamation. Bannus regis; the king's proclamation, made by the voice of a herald, forbidding all present at the trial by combat to interfere either by motion or word, whatever they might see or hear. Bract. fol. 142.

BAR. A partition or railing running across a court-room, intended to separate the general public from the space occupied by the judges, counsel, jury, and others concerned in the trial of a cause. In the English courts it is the partition behind which all outer-barristers and every member of the public must stand. Solicitors, being officers of the court, are admitted within it; as are also queen's counsel, barristers with patents of precedence, and serjeants, in virtue of their ranks. Parties who appear in person also are placed within the bar on the floor of the court.

A particular part of the court-room; for example, the place where prisoners stand at their trial, whence the expression "prisoner at the bar."

The court, in its strictest sense, sitting in full term. The presence, actual or constructive, of the court. Thus, a trial at bar is one had before the full court, distinguished from a trial had before a single judge at nisi prius. So the "case at bar" is the case now before the court and under its consideration; the case being tried or argued.

In another sense, the whole body of attorneys and counsellors, or the members of the legal profession, collectively, who are figuratively called the "bar," from the place which they usually occupy in court. They are thus distinguished from the "bench," which term denotes the whole body of judges.

In the practice of legislative bodies, the outer boundary of the house; therefore, all persons, not being members, who wish to address the house, or are summoned to it, appear at the bar for that purpose.

In the law of contracts, an impediment, obstacle, or preventive barrier. Thus, relationship within the prohibited degrees is a bar to marriage. In this sense also we speak of the "bar of the statute of limitations."

That which defeats, annuls, cuts off, or puts an end to. Thus, a provision "in bar of dower" is one which has the effect of defeating or cutting off the dower-rights which the wife would otherwise become entitled to in the particular land.

In pleading, a special plea, constituting a sufficient answer to an action at law; so called because it barred, i. e., prevented, the plaintiff from further prosecuting it with effect, and, if established by proof, defeated and destroyed the action altogether. Now called a special "plea in bar." It may be further described as a plea or peremptory exception of a defendant to destroy the plaintiff's action. City of San Antonio v. Johnson (Tex. Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 866. See Plea in bar.

BAR ASSOCIATION. An association of members of the bar. Such associations have been organized in most states. The first was in Mississippi in 1825, but it is not known to have had a continued existence. An association of Grafton and Coös counties in New Hampshire had an existence before 1800, and probably a more or less continuous life since then, having finally merged into a state association. Similar associations exist in many of the counties in various states.

BAR FEE. In English law. A fee taken by the sheriff, time out of mind, for every prisoner who is acquitted. Bac. Abr. "Extortion." Abolished by St. 14 Geo. III. c. 26; 55 Geo. III. c. 50; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 114.

BAR ROOM. A place where intoxicating liquors are sold to be drunk on the same premises. Christopher v. Charles Blum Co., 82 So. 765, 766, 78 Fla. 240; City of Spokane v.

Baughman, 103 P. 14, 17, 54 Wash. 315; also so defined in Act Congress March 3, 1893, 27 Stat. 563, quoted in Army & Navy Club v. District of Columbia, 8 App. Cas. 544, 550.

A room containing a bar or counter at which liquors are sold, or a room with a bar where liquors and refreshments are served. Town of Leesburg v. Putnam, 103 Ga. 110, 29 S. E. 602, 603, 68 Am. St. Rep. 80; Mustard v. Elwood (C. C. A.) 223 F. 225, 226.

The words "bar" and "bar room" have a more restrictive meaning than "saloon," and mean a place from which intoxicating liquors are to be sold. Greil Bros. Co. v. Mabson, 179 Ala. 444, 60 So. 876, 377, 43 L. R. A. (N. S.) 664.

BAR SINISTER. A term popularly though erroneously used for baton, a mark of illegitimacy. Webster.

BARAGARIA. Span. A concubine, whom a man keeps alone in his house, unconnected with any other woman. Las Partidas, pt. 4, tit. 14.

Baratriam committit qui propter pecuniam justitiam baractat. He is guilty of barratry who for money sells justice. Bell. (This maxim, however, is one pertaining more to the meaning of "barratry" as used in Scotch law than to its common-law meaning. See Barratry.)

BARBANUS. In old Lombardic law. An uncle, (patruus.)

BARBAROUS. As used in a divorce statute, it implies a merciless and savage disposition, taking pleasure in suffering, without pity, and with an evil and malicious will. Hansell v. Hansell, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. R., 514, 515.

BARBER. One who makes a business of shaving and trimming beards and cutting and dressing hair. Dellacorte v. Gentile, 98 N. J. Eq. 194, 129 A. 739, 740.

The term has been held to include a woman, who, being employed in a beauty parlor serving women customers exclusively, cut a woman's hair in the style of bobbed hair. State v. Leftwich, 142 Wash. 329, 253 P. 448, 449, 59 A. L. R. 539. But it has also been thought that the proprietor of a "hairdressing and beauty parlor," the important features of whose business included cutting hair, massaging, clipping hair with barber clippers, singeing the hair, giving tonics, shampooing, and manicuring, but not shaving the face, was not a "barber" within a statute subjecting barbers to examination and regulation. Keith v. State Barber Board, 112 Kan. 834, 212 P. 871, 872, 31 A. L. R. 432.

In England in former times, barbers also practiced surgery and dentistry, but by 32 Hen. VIII, c. 42, barbers, although they were thereby incorporated with the surgeons of London, were not to practice surgery, except the drawing of teeth.

BARBICANAGE. In old European law. Money paid to support a barbican or watch-tower.

BARBITTS. L. Fr. (Modern Fr. brebis.) Sheep. See Millen v. Fawen, Bendloe, 171, "home ove petit chien chase barbitts."

One whose trust is to convey, and the time has arrived for a conveyance by him; or a trustee to whose office no duties were originally attached, or who, although such duties were originally attached to his office, would, on the requisition of his cestuis que' trust, be compellable in equity to convey the estate to them or by their direction. Christie v. Ovington, 1 Ch. Div. 279, 281.

BAREBONES PARLIAMENT. A parliament summoned by Cromwell in 1653.

BARET. L. Fr. A wrangling suit. Britt. c. 92; Co. Litt. 368b.

BARGAIN. A mutual undertaking, contract, or agreement.

A contract or agreement between two parties, the one to sell goods or lands, and the other to buy them. Hunt v. Adams, 5 Mass. 360, 4 Am. Dec. 68; Sage v. Wilcox, 6 Conn. 91; Bank v. Archer, 16 Miss. 192.

As a verb, "bargain" means to sell for cash, or on terms, rather than to trade or exchange. In re Wellings' Estate, 197 Cal. 189, 240 P. 21, 24.

"If the word 'agreement' imports a mutual act of two parties, surely the word 'bargain' is not less significative of the consent of two. In a popular sense, the former word is frequently used as declaring the engagement of one only. A man may agree to pay money or to perform some other act, and the word is then used synonymously with 'promise' or 'engage.' But the word 'bargain' is seldom used, unless to express a mutual contract or undertaking." Packard v. Richardson, 17 Mass. 131, 9 Am. Dec. 123.

—Bargain money. These words in a contract for the sale of land have much the same significance as earnest money. Morgan v. Forbes, 236 Mass. 480, 128 N. E. 792, 793.

—Catching bargain. A bargain by which money is loaned, at an extortionate or extravagant rate, to an heir or any one who has an estate in reversion or expectancy, to be repaid on the vesting of his interest; or a similar unconscionable bargain with such person for the purchase outright of his expectancy. See Edler v. Frazier, 174 Iowa, 46, 156 N. W. 182, 187. "Catching bargain" describes that kind of fraud often perpetrated upon young, inexperienced, or ignorant people. Provident Life & Trust Co. v. Fletcher (C. C. A.) 258 F. 583, 586.

See Unconscionable Bargain.

BARGAIN AND SALE. In conveyancing. The transferring of the property of a thing from one to another, upon valuable consideration, by way of sale. Shep. Touch. (by Preston,) 221.

A contract or bargain by the owner of land, in consideration of money or its equivalent paid, to sell land to another person, called the "bargainee," whereupon a use arises in favor of the latter, to whom the seisin is transferred by force of the statute of uses. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 128; Bisp. Eq. 419; Brittin v. Freeman, 17 N. J. Law, 231; Iowa v. McFarland, 110 U. S. 471, 4 Sup. Ct. 210, 28 L. Ed. 198; Love v. Miller, 53 Ind. 296, 21 Am. Rep. 192; Slifer v. Beates, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 176; Laing v. McClung, 103 W. Va. 341, 137 S. E. 744, 745.

The proper and technical words to denote a bargain and sale are "bargain and sell;" but any other words that are sufficient to raise a use upon a valuable consideration are sufficient. 2 Wood. Conv. 15; Jackson ex dem. Hudson v. Alexander, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 484, 3 Am. Dec. 517; Lynch v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 463. See 2 Washb. R. P. 620; Shepp. Touchst. 222.

The expression "bargain and sale" is also applied to transfers of personalty, in cases where there is first an executory agreement for the sale, (the bargain,) and then an actual and completed sale.

BARGAINEE. The grantee of an estate in a deed of bargain and sale. The party to a bargain to whom the subject-matter of the bargain or thing bargained for is to go.

The term may also include a steam pleasure yacht under a statute pertaining to the liability of vessel owners. The Mamie (D. C.) 5 F. 813; Id. (C. C.) 8 F. 367.

BARK. It is sometimes figuratively used to denote the mere words or letter of an instrument, or outer covering of the ideas sought to be expressed, as distinguished from its inner substance or essential meaning. "If the bark makes for them, the pith makes for us." Bacon.

N. C. 354, 355. It may be both a cornhouse and a stable; State v. Smith, 28 Iowa, 565, 568; and has been used interchangeably with stable; Saylor v. Commonwealth (Ky.) 57 S. W. 614, 615. The term has been held to include a garage within the meaning of a restrictive building covenant. Beach v. Jenkins, 159 N. Y. S. 652, 657, 174 App. Div. 813; Wilmot v. Gandy, 203 N. Y. S. 535, 536, 122 Misc. 571; Williams v. Carr, 213 Mo. App. 223, 248 S. W. 625, 627. But there are also holdings to the contrary, especially where the garage is not a wholly detached structure, but is merely an addition to the dwelling, or is constructed up against it. See Wilmot v. Gandy, 203 N. Y. S. 535, 537, 122 Misc. 571; Bassett v. Pepe, 94 Conn. 631, 110 A. 56, 57; Riverbank Improvement Co. v. Bancroft, 209 Mass. 248, 95 N. E. 216, 34 L. R. A. (N. A wife being under the protection and influence of her baron, lord, or husband, is styled a "feme-covert," (femina viro cooperta.) and her state of marriage is called her "coverture." *Cummings v. (Pa.) 137; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 7-13. See 1 Stark. Ev. 41; 2 Powell, Mortg. 555; 1 Ves. Ch. 95; 12 id. 80; Dy. 53; 2 W. Bla. 881; Carmalt v. Post, 8 Watts (Pa.) 406; Benfield v. A conviction of the truth of a given proposition or an alleged fact resting upon grounds insufficient to constitute positive knowledge. Boone v. Merchants' & Farmers' Bank (D. C.) 285 F. 183, 191.

With regard to things which make not a very deep impression on the memory, it may be called "belief." "Knowledge" is nothing more than a man's firm belief. The difference is ordinarily merely in the degree; to be judged of by the court, when addressed to the court; by the jury, when addressed to the jury. Hatch v. Carpenter, 9 Gray (Mass.) 274.

Although "belief" as sometimes used is tantamount to knowledge; State v. Van Treese, 198 Iowa, 984, 200 N. W. 570; the terms are distinguishable; Francken v. State, 190 Wis. 424, 209 N. W. 766, 769.

The distinction between the two mental conditions seems to be that knowledge is an assurance of a fact or proposition founded on perception by the senses, or intuition; while belief is an assurance gained by evidence, and from other persons. Abbott.

In the Workmen's Compensation Act, the term "benefits" is used of an award to be granted when an injury results in death, and is distinguished from "compensation," which is to be granted when an injury results in incapacity or disability. Di Cicco v. Industrial Commission of Ohio, 11 Ohio App. 271, 273.

In Contracts

When it is said that a valuable consideration for a promise may consist of a benefit to the promisor, "benefit" means that the promisor has, in return for his promise, acquired some legal right to which he would not otherwise have been entitled. Harp v. Hamilton (Tex. Civ. App.) 177 S. W. 565, 566; Wallace v. Cook, 190 Ky. 262, 227 S. W. 279, 281. "Benefit" is not limited to pecuniary gains, nor to any particular kind of advantage; it refers to what is advantageous, whatever promotes prosperity or happiness, what enhances the value of the property or rights of citizens as contradistinguished from what is injurious. National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 95 W. Va. 420, 121 S. E. 291, 295. See, also, Hooper v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 190 N. C. 423, 130 S. E. 49, 52.

In Eminent Domain

It is a rule that, in assessing damages for private property taken or injured for public use, "special benefits" may be set off against the amount of damage found, but not "general benefits." Within the meaning of this rule, general benefits are such as accrue to the community at large, to the vicinage, or to all properly similarly situated with reference to the work or improvement in question; while special benefits are such as accrue directly and solely to the owner of the land in question and not to others. Little Miami R. Co. v. Collett, 6 Ohio St. 182; St. Louis, etc., Ry. Co. v. Fowler, 142 Mo. 670, 44 S. W. 771; Gray v. Manhattan Ry. Co., 16 Daly, 510, 12 N. Y. Supp. 542; Barr v. Omaha, 42 Neb. 341, 60 N. W. 591; McGibson v. Roane County Court, 95 W. Va. 338, 121 S. E. 99, 103; Brand v. Union Elevated R. Co., 258 Ill. 133, 101 N. E. 247, 249, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 473, L. R. A. 1918A, 878.

In Taxation

With reference to an assessment for a drainage ditch, a benefit is anything that will make land more valuable for tillage or more desirable for a residence or more valuable in the general market. Watson v. Armstrong, 102 N. E. 273, 180 Ind. 49.

BENEFIT ASSOCIATION. See Benefit Societies.

BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY. The original name for what is now more commonly called a "building society" (q. v.).

BENEFIT CERTIFICATE. A written obligation to pay the person therein named the amount specified upon the conditions therein stipulated. Green v. Grand United Order of Odd Fellows (Tex. Civ. App.) 163 S. W. 1068, 1070.

BENEFIT OF CESSION. In the civil law. The release of a debtor from future imprisonment for his debts, which the law operates in his favor upon the surrender of his property for the benefit of his creditors. Poth. Proc. Civil, pt. 5, c. 2, § 1.

BENEFIT OF CLERGY. In its original sense, the phrase denoted the exemption which was accorded to clergymen from the jurisdiction of the secular courts, or from arrest or attachment on criminal process issuing from those courts in certain particular cases. Afterwards, it meant a privilege of exemption from the punishment of death accorded to such persons as were clerks, or who could read. This privilege of exemption from capital punishment was anciently allowed to clergymen only, but afterwards to all who were connected with the church, even to its most subordinate officers, and at a still later time to all persons who could read, (then called "clerks,") whether ecclesiastics or laymen. It does not appear to have been extended to cases of high treason, nor did it apply to mere misdemeanors. The privilege was claimed after the person's conviction, by a species of motion in arrest of judgment, technically called "praying his clergy." As a means of testing his clerical character, he was given a psalm to read, (usually, or always, the fifty-first,) and, upon his reading it correctly, he was turned over to the ecclesiastical courts, to be tried by the bishop or a jury of twelve clerks. These heard him on oath, with his witnesses and compurgators, who attested their belief in his innocence. This privilege operated greatly to mitigate the extreme rigor of the criminal laws, but was found to involve such gross abuses that parliament began to enact that certain crimes should be felonies "without benefit of clergy," and finally, by St. 7 Geo. IV. c. 28, § 6, it was altogether abolished. The act of congress of April 30, 1790, § 31 (18 USCA § 542 note), provided that there should be no benefit of clergy for any capital crime against the United States, and, if this privilege formed a part of the common law of the several states before the Revolution, it no longer exists.

BENEFIT OF COUNSEL. The guaranty of "benefit of counsel" to accused, given in the Georgia Bill of Rights of Const. art. 1, § 1, par. 5 (Civ. Code 1910, § 6361; Civ. Code 1926, § 6361), means more than the mere appointment by the court of counsel to represent the accused and implies also that such counsel be given a reasonable time for preparation to properly represent the accused at the trial. Reliford v. State, 140 Ga. 777, 79 S. E. 1128, 1129.

BENEFIT OF DISCUSSION. In the civil law. The right which a surety has to cause the property of the principal debtor to be applied in satisfaction of the obligation in the first instance. Civ. Code La. arts. 3045-3051. In Scotch law. That whereby the antecedent heir, such as the heir of line in a pursuit against the heir of tailzie, etc., must be first pursued to fulfill the defunct's deeds and pay his debts. This benefit is likewise competent in many cases to cautioners.

BENEFIT OF DIVISION. Same as beneficium divisionis, (q. v.).

BENEFIT OF INVENTORY. In the civil law. The privilege which the heir obtains of being liable for the charges and debts of the succession, only to the value of the effects of the succession, by causing an inventory of these effects within the time and manner prescribed by law. Civil Code La. art. 1032.

BENEFIT SOCIETIES. Under this and several similar names, in various states, corporations exist to receive periodical payments from members, and hold them as a fund to be loaned or given to members needing pecuniary relief. Such are beneficial societies of Maryland, fund associations of Missouri, loan and fund associations of Massachusetts, mechanics' associations of Michigan, protection societies of New Jersey. Friendly societies in Great Britain are a still more extensive and important species belonging to this class. Comm. v. Equitable Ben. Ass'n, 137 Pa. 412, 18 Atl. 1112; Com. v. Aid Ass'n, 94 Pa. 489.

BENERTH. A feudal service rendered by the tenant to his lord with plow and cart. Cowell.

BENEVOLENCE. The doing of a kind or helpful action towards another, under no obligation except an ethical one.

The love of humanity; the desire to promote its prosperity or happiness. The term includes acts of well-wishing towards others, for the promotion of general happiness, and plans actuated by love of others and a desire for their well-being. In re Peabody's Estate, 208 N. Y. S. 664, 671, 124 Misc. 338.

It is no doubt distinguishable from the words "liberality" and "charity"; for, although many charitable institutions are very properly called "benevolent," it is impossible to say that every object of a man's benevolence is also an object of his charity. James v. Allen, 3 Mer. 17; Pell v. Mercer, 14 R. I. 443; Murdock v. Bridges, 91 Me. 124, 39 Atl. 475. "Benevolence" is a much broader term than "charity." In re Johnson's Estate, 100 Or. 142, 196 P. 335, 390; In re Altman's Estate, 149 N. Y. S. 601, 605, 87 Misc. 255.

But the terms are sometimes used synonymously. Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.) 446; Susman v. Young Men's Christian Ass'n of Seattle, 101 Wash. 487, 172 P. 554, 556.

In public law. Nominally a voluntary gratuity given by subjects to their king, but in reality a tax or forced loan. Cowell; 1 Bla. Comm. 140; 4 id. 436.

BENEVOLENT. Philanthropic; humane; having a desire or purpose to do good to men; intended for the conferring of benefits, rather than for gain or profit; loving others and actively desirous of their well being. In re Altman's Estate, 149 N. Y. S. 601, 605, 87 Misc. 255.

This word is certainly more indefinite, and of far wider range, than "charitable" or "religious;" it would include all gifts prompted by good-will or kind feeling towards the recipient, whether an object of charity or not. The natural and usual meaning of the word would so extend it. It has no legal meaning separate from its usual meaning. "Charitable" has acquired a settled limited meaning in law, which confines it within known limits. But in all the decisions in England on the subject it has been held that a devise or bequest for benevolent objects, or in trust to give to such objects, is too indefinite, and therefore void. Norris v. Thomson, 19 N. J. Eq. 313; Thomson v. Norris, 20 N. J. Eq. 523; Suter v. Hilliard, 132 Mass. 413, 42 Am. Rep. 444; Fox v. Gibbs, 86 Me. 87, 29 A. 940; Hays v. Harris, 73 W. Va. 17, 80 S. E. 827, 830; In re Watkins' Estate, 194 N. Y. S. 342, 347, 118 Misc. 645. This word, as applied to objects or purposes, may refer to those which are in their nature charitable, and may also have a broader meaning and include objects and purposes not charitable in the legal sense of that word. Acts of kindness, friendship, forethought, or good-will might properly be described as benevolent. It has therefore been held that gifts to trustees to be applied for "benevolent purposes" at their discretion, or to such benevolent purposes as they could agree upon, do not create a public charity. But where the word is used in connection with other words explanatory of its meaning, and indicating the intent of the donor to limit it to purposes strictly charitable, it has been held to be synonymous with, or equivalent to, "charitable." Suter v. Hilliard, 132 Mass. 412, 42 Am. Rep. 444; De Camp v. Dobbins, 31 N. J. Eq. 695; Chamberlain v. Stearns, 111 Mass. 268; Goodale v. Mooney, 60 N. H. 535, 49 Am. Rep. 334; Busser v. Snyder, 282 Pa. 440, 128 A. 80, 83, 37 A. L. R. 1515; Smith v. Pond, 90 N. J. Eq. 445, 107 A. 800, 801; Pirkey v. Grubb's Ex'r, 122 Va. 91, 94 S. E. 344, 347; In re Dol's Estate, 182 Cal. 159, 187 P. 428, 431.

BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS. Those having a philanthropic or charitable purpose, as distinguished from such as are conducted for profit; specifically, "benefit associations" or "beneficial associations." See In re Watkins' Estate, 194 N. Y. S. 342, 347, 118 Misc. 645; Methodist Episcopal Church Baraca Club v. City of Madison, 167 Wis. 207, 167 N. W. 258, L. R. A. 1918D, 1124.

S. 154, 158, 177 App. Div. 786; Society of Helpers of Holy Souls v. Law, 267 Mo. 667, 186 S. W. 718, 725; Corbin v. American Industrial Bank & Trust Co., 95 Conn. 50, 110 A. 459, 461. The term may include a corporation to which a bequest is made to be used in the improvement of the social, physical, and economic condition of the employees of a business corporation. In re Altman's Estate, 149 N. Y. S. 601, 605, 87 Misc. 255.

Benigne faciendæ sunt interpretationes chartarum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et quæ libet concessio fortissime contra donatorem interpretanda est. Liberal interpretations are to be made of deeds, so that the purpose may rather stand than fall; and every grant is to be taken most strongly against the grantor. Wallis v. Wallis, 4 Mass. 135, 3 Am. Dec. 210; Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258, 268.

Benigne faciendæ sunt interpretationes, propter simplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et verba intentioni, non e contra, debent inservire. Constructions [of written instruments] are to be made liberally, on account of the simplicity of the laity, [or common people,] in order that the thing [or subject-matter] may rather have effect than perish, [or become void]; and words must be subject to the intention, not the intention to the words. Co. Litt. 36 a; Broom, Max. 540, 565, 645; 11 Q. B. 852, 856, 868, 870; 4 H. L. Cas. 556; 2 Bla. Com. 379; 1 Bulstr. 175; Krider v. Lafferty, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 315.

Benignior sententia in verbis generalibus seu dubiis, est præferenda. The more favorable construction is to be placed on general or doubtful expressions. 4 Co. 15; Dig. 50, 17, 192, 1; 2 Kent 557.

Benignius leges interpretandæ sunt quo voluntas earum conservetur. Laws are to be more liberally interpreted, in order that their intent may be preserved. Dig. 1, 3, 18.

BEQUEATH. To give personal property by will to another. Lasher v. Lasher, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 106. It therefore is distinguishable from "devise," which is properly used of realty. Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 857; Dantzler v. Riley, 109 S. C. 44, 95 S. E. 132; In re Lewis' Estate, 39 Nev. 445, 159 P. 961, 963, 4 A. L. R. 241.

But if the context clearly shows the intention of the testator to use the word "bequeath" as synonymous with "devise," it may be held to pass real property. Dow v. Dow, 36 Me. 216; Borgner v. Brown, 133 Ind. 391, 33 N. E. 92; Logan v. Logan, 11 Colo. 44, 17 P. 99; Laing v. Barbour, 119 Mass. 525; Scholle v. Scholle, 113 N. Y. 261, 21 N. The term does not mean a "gift" in the narrow sense of a voluntary act of charity or good will, but ordinarily means a testamentary disposition of the testator's personalty. First Presbyterian Church of Mt. Vernon v. Dennis, 178 Iowa, 1352, 161 N. W. 183, 185, L. R. A. 1917C, 1005. It is not necessarily limited to a gratuity, and may include a recompense. Ream v. Bowers (D. C.) 14 F.(2d) 993, 994; U. S. v. Merriam, 44 S. Ct. 69, 70, 263 U. S. 173, 68 L. Ed. 240, 29 A. L. R. 1547.

BES. Lat. In the Roman law. A division of the as, or pound, consisting of eight unciae, or duodecimal parts, and amounting to two-thirds of the as. 2 Bl. Comm. 462, note m.

Two-thirds of an inheritance. Inst. 2, 14, 5.

Eight per cent. interest. 2 Bl. Comm. ubi supra.

BESAILE, BESAYLE. The great-grandfather, proavus. 1 Bl. Comm. 186.

BESAYEL, Besaiel, Besayle. In old English law. A writ which lay where a great-grandfather died seized of lands and tenements in fee-simple, and on the day of his death a stranger abated, or entered and kept out the heir. Reg. Orig. 226; Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 221 D; 3 Bl. Comm. 186.

BESIDES. In addition to; moreover; also; likewise. State v. State Road Commission, 100 W. Va. 531, 131 S. E. 7, 10.

In provisions in a will for children "besides" an eldest son, no children take unless there be a son. 4 Dr. & War. 235.

BESOT. To stupefy, to make dull or senseless, to make to dote; and "to dote" is to be delirious, silly, or insane. Gates v. Meredith, 7 Ind. 440, 441.

BESS. A well-known contraction of "Elizabeth." H. R. & C. Co. v. Smith, 212 App. Div. 173, 208 N. Y. S. 396, 400.

BESSEMERIZING. A process by which copper relatively pure is obtained from matte. Peirce-Smith Converter Co. v. United Verde Copper Co. (D. C.) 293 F. 108, 109; United Verde Copper Co. v. Peirce-Smith Converter Co. (C. C. A.) 7 F.(2d) 13.

BEST. Of the highest quality; of the greatest usefulness for the purpose intended. For example:

The "best bid" of interest by a prospective depository of school funds would not necessarily be the highest bid, but, looking to the solvency of the bidder, the bond tendered, and all the circumstances surrounding the transaction, the safety and preservation of the school fund, the "best bid" might be the lowest bid. Donna Independent School Dist. v. First State Bank of Donna (Tex. Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 974, 975.

Where one covenants to use his "best endeavors," there is no breach if he is prevented by causes wholly beyond his control and without any default on his part. 7 H. & N. 92.

The "best interests" of a child whose custody is in question has reference more particularly to the moral welfare than to mere comforts, benefits, or advantages that wealth can give. Jones v. Moore, 61 Utah, 383, 213 P. 191, 194. Similarly, under a testamentary trust to promote the best interests of sewing girls, the words "best interests" include not only the relief of poverty and distress, but may comprehend whatever aids to their welfare and advancement, and enables them to establish themselves in life. Bowditch v. Attorney General, 241 Mass. 163, 134 N. E. 796, 800, 28 A.L.R. 713. The "best interests" of an estate mean the greatest or most advantage or usefulness to such estate. Stockyards Nat. Bank of South Omaha v. Bragg, 67 Utah, 60, 245 P. 966, 971.

A contract to erect a building of the "best lumber" means the best lumber of which buildings are ordinarily constructed at that place. McIntire v. Barnes, 4 Col. 285. But a contract for future delivery of the "best marketable corn" requires delivery of the best grade of corn generally or usually dealt with in the markets of the country, and not merely in the markets in the immediate vicinity where delivery was to be made. Yontz v. McVean, 202 Mo. App. 377, 217 S. W. 1000, 1002.

BEST EVIDENCE. Primary evidence, as distinguished from secondary; original, as distinguished from substitutory; the best and highest evidence of which the nature of the case is susceptible, not the highest or strongest evidence which the nature of the thing to be proved admits of. A written instrument is itself always regarded as the primary or best possible evidence of its existence and contents; a copy, or the recollection of a witness, would be secondary evidence. State v. McDonald, 65 Me. 467; Elliott v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 53, 20 Am. Rep. 668; Scott v. State, 3 Tex. App. 104; Gray v. Pentland, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 34; U. S. Sugar Refinery v. Allis Co., 56 Fed. 786, 6 C. C. A. 121; Manhattan Malting Co. v. Sweteland, 14 Mont. 269, 36 P. 84.

"Best evidence" or "primary evidence" includes the best evidence which is available to a party and procurable under the existing situation, and all evidence falling short of such standard, and which in its nature suggests there is better evidence of the same fact, is "secondary evidence." Best v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. (Mo. App.) 299 S. W. 118, 120.

The best evidence of a fact is the testimony of a person who knows. State v. Normandale, 154 La. 523, 97 So. 798, 799 (mother could testify to the date of her daughter's birth, as against an objection that the baptismal certificate or the registry was the best evidence).

BESTIALITY. A sexual connection between a human being and a brute of the opposite sex.

Both bestiality and sodomy may be embraced by the term "crime against nature," as felony embraces murder, larceny, etc., though the term "crime against nature" (q. v.) is perhaps more generally used in reference to sodomy. Buggery seems to include both sodomy and bestiality. Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 356, 71 Am. Dec. 331. See Sodomy.

BESTOW. To give, grant, confer, or impart; not necessarily limited in meaning to "devise." Tillett v. Nixon, 180 N. C. 195, 104 S. E. 352, 355.

BET. An agreement between two or more persons that a sum of money or other valuable thing, to which all jointly contribute, shall become the sole property of one or some of them on the happening in the future of an event at present uncertain, or according as a question disputed between them is settled in one way or the other. Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532; Rich v. State, 38 Tex. Cr. R. 199, 42 S. W. 291, 38 L. R. A. 719; Jacobus v. Hazlett, 78 Ill. App. 241; Shaw v. Clark, 49 Mich. 384, 13 N. W. 786, 43 Am. Rep. 474; Alvord v. Smith, 63 Ind. 62. A contract with a merchant for holding a trade-increasing contest for prizes, whereby the contest promoter agreed that, if a certain per cent. of the year's sales did not amount to the face of the note given by the merchant, he would pay the deficiency in cash, did not amount to a "bet" or "wager," within the prohibition of St. 1917, § 4538 (St. 1931, § 348.16). Steven v. Freund, 169 Wis. 68, 171 N. W. 300, 301.

The wager of money or property on an incident by which one or both parties stand to win or lose by chance. Gilbert v. Berkheiser, 157 Minn. 491, 196 N. W. 653; Commonwealth v. Sullivan, 218 Mass. 281, 105 N. E.

895, Ann. Cas. 1916B, 98; Carpenter v. Beal-McDonnell & Co. (D. C.) 222 F. 453, 460.

In a "bet" or "wager" money belongs to the persons posting it, each of whom has a chance to win it, but, in the case of a "purse" or "premium," money belongs to the person offering it, who has no chance to win it, but is certain to lose it. Toomey v. Penwell, 76 Mont. 166, 245 P. 943, 945, 45 A. L. R. 993 (horse race, run for a reward offered by fair association, held not a gambling transaction).

Bet and wager are synonymous terms, and are applied both to the contract of betting or wagering and to the thing or sum bet or wagered. For example, one bets or wagers, or lays a bet or wager of so much, upon a certain result. But these terms cannot properly be applied to the act to be done, or event to happen, upon which the bet or wager is laid. Bets or wagers may be laid upon acts to be done, events to happen, or facts existing or to exist. The bets or wagers may be illegal, and the acts, events, or facts upon which they are laid may not be. Bets or wagers may be laid upon games, and things that are not games. Everything upon which a bet or wager may be laid is not a game. Woodcock v. McQueen, 11 Ind. 16; Shumate v. Com., 15 Grat. (Va.) 660.

BETTING BOOK. A book kept for registering bets on the result of a race as operated on race track. In a broader sense, the "betting book" is that book which enables the professional bettor to carry on his business, and to promote a race, and it includes the book, the making book and the bookmaker. State v. Austin, 142 La. 384, 76 So. 809, 810.

BETRAYAL. A "betrayal," as of a professional secret on the part of a physician, signifies a wrongful disclosure in violation of the trust imposed by the patient. Simonsen v. Swenson, 104 Neb. 224, 177 N. W. 831, 832, 9 A. L. R. 1250.

BETROTHED. One who has exchanged promises to marry. The term may be synonymous with "intended wife." Mace v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Massachusetts, 234 Mass. 299, 125 N. E. 569.

BETROTHMENT, BETROTHAL. Mutual promise of marriage; the plighting of troth; a mutual promise or contract between a man and woman competent to make it, to marry at a future time.

BETTER DESCRIBED. More fully delineated or more fully pictured or painted. Katzin v. Krivant, 99 N. J. Eq. 619, 133 A. 516, 517.

BETTER EQUITY. See Equity.

BETTERMENT. An improvement put upon an estate which enhances its value more than mere repairs. The improvement may be either temporary or permanent. People v. Klee, 282 Ill. 440, 118 N. E. 754, 757. The term is also applied to denote the additional value which an estate acquires in consequence of some public improvement, as laying out or widening a street, etc. Union St. Ry. v. City of New Bedford, 253 Mass. 304, 149 N. E. 42, 44; French v. New York, 16 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 220; Abell v. Brady, 79 Md. 94, 28 A. 817; Chase v. Sioux City, 86 Iowa, 603, 53 N. W. 333.

BETTERMENT ACTS. Statutes which provide that a bona fide occupant of real estate making lasting improvements in good faith shall have a lien upon the estate recovered by the real owner to the extent that his improvements have increased the value of the land. Also called "occupying claimant acts." Jones v. Hotel Co., 86 F. 386, 30 C. C. A. 108.

BETWEEN. As a measure or indication of distance, this word has the effect of excluding the two termini. Revere v. Leonard, 1 Mass. 93; State v. Godfrey, 12 Me. 366; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Loyd, 186 Ala. 119, 65 So. 153, 158. But see Morris & E. R. Co. v. Central R. Co., 31 N. J. Law, 212. Similarly, a franchise to a street railway, requiring it to pave the space between the rails, did not require it to pave between double tracks nor to the ends of the ties. Village of Grandville v. Grand Rapids, H. & C. R. R., 225 Mich. 587, 196 N. W. 351, 354, 36 A. L. R. 1464.

If an act is to be done "between" two certain days, it must be performed before the commencement of the latter day. In computing the time in such a case, both the days named are to be excluded. Richardson v. Ford, 14 Ill. 333; Bunce v. Reed, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 352; Fry v. Hoffman, 54 Ind. App. 434, 102 N. E. 167, 168; Hodges v. Filstrup, 94 Fla. 943, 114 So. 521, 522. But a clause in a contract of sale to the effect that the purchaser could require the vendor to repurchase between the fifth and sixth year from a certain date means during the sixth year. Van Demark v. California Home Extension Ass'n, 43 Cal. App. 685, 185 P. 866, 868.

"Between" properly indicates division in halves, and refers to two, and not more. Branch v. De Wolf, 38 R. I. 395, 95 A. 857, 861; Roelfs' Cousins v. White, 75 Or. 549, 147 P. 753, 754; Rowley v. Currie, 94 N. J. Eq. 606, 120 A. 653, 655. It is said, however, that such meaning is not commonly observed in ordinary writing and speech, Rogers v. Smith, 145 Ga. 234, 88 S. E. 963, 964, and the term may be equivalent to "among." This is often true in cases involving wills. In re Mays' Estate, 197 Mo. App. 555, 196 S. W. 1039, 1040; Courtenay v. Courtenay, 138 Md. 204, 113 A. 717, 718; In re Fisk's Estate, 182 Cal. 238, 187 P. 958.

In case of a devise to A. and B. "between them," these words create a tenancy in common. Lashbrook v. Cock, 2 Mer. 70.

Between equal equities the law must prevail. This is hardly of general application.

BEVERAGE. A liquor or liquid for drinking. Commonwealth v. Sookey, 236 Mass. 448, 128 N. E. 788, 11 A. L. R. 1230; State v. McMa- hon (Iowa) 211 N. W. 409, 410. Especially pleasant or refreshing drink, or a habitual one. Tennant v. F. C. Whitney & Sons, 133 Wash. 581, 234 P. 666, 670. This term is properly used to distinguish a sale of liquors to be drunk for the pleasure of drinking, from liquors to be drunk in obedience to a physician's advice, Com. v. Mandeville, 142 Mass. 469, 8 N. E. 327; Falstaff Corporation v. Allen (D. C.) 278 F. 643, 645; or from a liquid which it is possible to swallow, but which is not reasonably palatable or fit for drinking, Tennant v. F. C. Whitney & Sons, supra. Thus, it is held that pure alcohol is not a "beverage" but a violent irritant. Chas. L. Joy & Co. v. Carlson, 28 Idaho, 445, 154 P. 640, 641. And the mere fact that a person, in order to gratify an inordinate appetite for intoxicants, may drink poisonous or noxious compounds or mixtures containing alcohol is not evidence that they are capable of being used as a "beverage," Simms v. State, 29 Okl. Cr. 172, 233 P. 494, 495.

This term sometimes has a narrower meaning signifying a drink artificially prepared. Climax Dairy Co. v. Mulder, 78 Colo. 407, 242 P. 666, 669.

BEWARED. O. Eng. Expended. Before the Britons and Saxons had introduced the general use of money, they traded chiefly by exchange of wares. Wharton.

BEYOND SEA. Beyond the limits of the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; outside the United States; out of the state.

Beyond sea, beyond the four seas, beyond the seas, and out of the realm, are synonymous. Prior to the union of the two crowns of England and Scotland, on the accession of James I., the phrases "beyond the four seas," "beyond the seas," and "out of the realm," signified out of the limits of the realm of England. Pancoast's Lessee v. Addison, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 350, 2 Am. Dec. 520.

In Pennsylvania, it has been construed to mean "without the limits of the United States," which approaches the literal signification. Ward v. Hallam, 2 Dall. 217, 1 L. Ed. 355; Id., 1 Yeates (Pa.) 329; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 300, 8 L. Ed. 402. The same construction has been given to it in Missouri. Keeton's Heirs v. Keeton's Admr., 20 Mo. 530. See Ang. Lim. §§ 200, 201.

The term "beyond seas," in the proviso or saving clause of a statute of limitations, is equivalent to without the limits of the state where the statute is enacted; and the party who is without those limits is entitled to the benefit of the exception. Faw v. Roberdeau, 3 Cranch, 174, 2 L. Ed. 402; Murray v. Baker, 3 Wheat. 541, 4 L. Ed. 454; Shelby v. Guy, 11 Wheat. 361, 6 L. Ed. 495; Piatt v. Vattier, 1 McLean, 146, Fed. Cas. No. 11,117; Forbes' Admr. v. Foot's Admr., 2 McCord (S. C.) 331, 13 Am. Dec. 732; Wakefield v. Smart, 8 Ark. 483; Denham v. Coleman, 26 Ga. 182, 71 Am. Dec. 198; Galusha v. Cobleigh, 13 N. H. 79.

BIAS. Inclination; bent; prepossession; a preconceived opinion; a predisposition to decide a cause or an issue in a certain way, which does not leave the mind perfectly open to conviction. Maddox v. State, 32 Ga. 587, 79 Am. Dec. 307; Pierson v. State, 18 Tex. App. 558; Hinkle v. State, 94 Ga. 595, 21 S. E. 601; Commonwealth Tobacco Co. v. Alliance Ins. Co., 238 Mass. 514, 131 N. E. 213, 214. "Bias" as applied to competency of jurors, is synonymous with partiality. Smith v. Allbright (Tex. Civ. App.) 279 S. W. 852, 855.

This term is not synonymous with "prejudice." By the use of this word in a statute declaring disqualification of jurors, the legislature intended to describe another and somewhat different ground of disqualification. A man cannot be prejudiced against another without being biased against him; but he may be biased without being prejudiced. Bias is "a particular influential power, which sways the judgment; the inclination of the mind towards a particular object." It is not to be supposed that the legislature expected to secure in the juror a state of mind absolutely free from all inclination to one side or the other. The statute means that, although a juror has not formed a judgment for or against the prisoner, before the evidence is heard on the trial, yet, if he is under such an influence as so sways his mind to the one side or the other as to prevent his deciding the cause according to the evidence, he is incompetent. Willis v. State, 12 Ga. 444; Littrell v. State, 22 Okl. Cr. 1, 209 P. 184, 186. "Prejudice" imports the formation of a fixed anticipatory judgment as contradistinguished from those opinions which may yield to evidence. Temples v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co., 15 Ga. App. 115, 82 S. E. 777, 780.

Actual bias consists in the existence of a state of mind on the part of the juror which satisfies the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, that the juror cannot try the issues impartially and without prejudice to the substantial rights of the party challenging. Crawford & Moses' Dig. (Ark.) § 3159; State v. Chapman, 1 S. D. 414, 47 N. W. 411, 10 L. R. A. 432; People v. McQuade, 110 N. Y. 284, 18 N. E. 156, 1 L. R. A. 273; People v. Wells, 100 Cal. 227, 34 P. 718.

As to the bias of judges, see Saunders v. Piggly Wiggly Corporation (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 582, 584; State v. Waterman, 210 P. 208, 210, 36 Idaho, 259.

BIBLE. See Family Bible.

BICAMERAL SYSTEM. A term applied by Jeremy Bentham to the division of a legislative body into two chambers, as in the United States government.

BID. An offer by an intending purchaser to pay a designated price for property which is about to be sold at auction. U. S. v. Vestal (D. C.) 12 F. 59; Payne v. Cave, 3 Term, 149; Eppes v. Railroad Co., 35 Ala. 56. See Chilling a sale.

An offer to perform a contract for work and labor or supplying materials at a specified price.

Similarly, an offer to do any of various other acts, as the payment by a bank of a particular rate of interest for the privilege of becoming a depositary of county funds. Casey v. Independence County, 109 Ark. 11, 159 S. W. 24, 25, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1008. A "bid" for bonds is no more nor less than a proposition. Joint School Dist. No. 132 in Major County and Alfalfa County v. Dabney, 127 Okl. 234, 260 P. 486, 491.

—Bid in. Property sold at auction is said to be “bid in” by the owner or an incumbrancer or some one else who is interested in it, when he attends the sale and makes the successful bid.

—Bid off. One is said to “bid off” a thing when he bids for it at an auction sale, and it is knocked down to him in immediate succession to the bid and as a consequence of it. Eppes v. Railroad Co., 35 Ala. 56; Doudna v. Harlan, 45 Kan. 484, 25 Pac. 883.

—Bidder. One who makes a bid. One who offers to pay a specified price for an article offered for sale at a public auction. Webster v. French, 11 Ill. 254. As to “Responsible bidder” see that title.

—Biddings. Offers of a designated price for goods or other property put up for sale at auction.

—By-bidding. In the law relating to sales by auction, this term is equivalent to “puffing.” The practice consists in making fictitious bids for the property, under a secret arrangement with the owner or auctioneer, for the purpose of misleading and stimulating other persons who are bidding in good faith.

—Competitive bidding. “Competitive bidding” means that the council must by due advertisement give opportunity for everyone to bid, but does not mean that more than one bid must be submitted. Blanton v. Town of Wallins, 218 Ky. 295, 291 S. W. 372, 375. The term means bidding upon the same undertaking, upon the same material items in the subject-matter, upon the same thing. Leininger v. Ward, 126 Okl. 114, 258 P. 863, 864.

—Upset bid. A bid made after a judicial sale, but before the successful bid at the sale has been confirmed, larger or better than such successful bid, and made for the purpose of upsetting the sale and securing to the “upset bidder” the privilege of taking the property at his bid or competing at a new sale. Yost v. Porter, 80 Va. 858.

BIDAL, or BIDALL. An invitation of friends to drink ale at the house of some poor man, who hopes thereby to be relieved by charitable contribution. It is something like “housewarming;” i. e., a visit of friends to a person beginning to set up housekeeping. Wharton.

BIELBRIEF. Germ. In European maritime law. A document furnished by the builder of a vessel, containing a register of her admeasurement, particularizing the length, breadth, and dimensions of every part of the ship. It sometimes also contains the terms of agreement between the party for whose account the ship is built, and the ship-builder. It has been termed in English the “grand bill of sale;” in French, “contrat de construction ou de la vente d'un vaisseau,” and corresponds in a great degree with the English, French, and American “register,” (q. v.), being an equally essential document to the lawful ownership of vessels. Jac. Sea Laws, 12, 13, and note. In the Danish law, it is used to denote the contract of bottomry.

BIENES. Sp. In Spanish law. Goods; property of every description, including real as well as personal property; all things (not being persons) which may serve for the uses of man. Larkin v. U. S., 14 Fed. Cas. 1154.

—Bienes comunes. Common property; those things which, not being the private property of any person, are open to the use of all, such as the air, rain, water, the sea and its beaches. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 315, 10 Pac. 707.

—Bienes gananciales. A species of community in property enjoyed by husband and wife, the property being divisible equally between them on the dissolution of the marriage; does not include what they held as their separate property at the time of contracting the marriage. Welder v. Lambert, 91 Tex. 510, 44 S. W. 281.

—Bienes publicos. Those things which, as to property, pertain to the people or nation, and, as to their use, to the individuals of the territory or district, such as rivers, shores, ports, and public roads. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 315, 10 P. 707.

BIENNIALY. This term, in a statute, signifies, not duration of time, but a period for the happening of an event; once in every two years. People v. Tremain, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 576; People v. Kilbourn, 68 N. Y. 479.

BIENS.

In English Law

Property of every description, except estates of freehold and inheritance. Sugd. Vend. 495; Co. Litt. 119b.

In French Law

This term includes all kinds of property, real and personal. Biens are divided into biens meubles, movable property; and biens immeubles, immovable property. The distinction between movable and immovable property is recognized by the continental jurists, and gives rise, in the civil as well as in the common law, to many important distinctions as to rights and remedies. Story, Conf. Laws, § 13, note 1. Castle v. Castle (C. C. A.) 267 F. 521, 523.

BIGA, or BIGATA. A cart or chariot drawn with two horses, coupled side to side; but it is said to be properly a cart with two wheels, sometimes drawn by one horse; and in the ancient records it is used for any cart, wain, or wagon. Jacob.

BIGAMUS. In the civil law. A man who was twice married; one who at different times and successively has married two wives. 4 Inst. 88. One who has two wives living. One who marries a widow.

Used in ecclesiastical matters as a reason for denying benefit of the clergy. Termes de la Ley.

Bigamus seu trigamus, etc., est qui diversis temporibus et successivè duas seu tres uxores habuit. 4 Inst. 88. A bigamus or trigamus, etc., is one who at different times and successively has married two or three wives.

BIGAMY. The criminal offense of willfully and knowingly contracting a second marriage (or going through the form of a second marriage) while the first marriage, to the knowledge of the offender, is still subsisting and undissolved. Com. v. McNerny, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 207; Gise v. Com., 81 Pa. 430; Scoggins v. State, 32 Ark. 213; Cannon v. U. S., 116 U. S. 55, 6 Sup. Ct. 287, 29 L. Ed. 561; Allen v. State, 17 Ga. App. 431, 87 S. E. 681, 682; People v. Manfredonio, 191 N. Y. S. 748, 117 Misc. 626, 39 N. Y. Cr. R. 41.

The state of a man who has two wives, or of a woman who has two husbands, living at the same time. State v. Lindsey, 26 N. M. 526, 194 P. 877.

The offense of having a plurality of wives at the same time is commonly denominated "polygamy;" but the name "bigamy" has been more frequently given to it in legal proceedings. 1 Russ. Crimes, 185.

The use of the word "bigamy" to describe this offense is well established by long usage, although often criticized as a corruption of the true meaning of the word. Polygamy is suggested as the correct term, instead of bigamy, to designate the offense of having a plurality of wives or husbands at the same time, and has been adopted for that purpose in the Massachusetts statutes. But as the substance of the offense is marrying a second time, while having a lawful husband or wife living, without regard to the number of marriages that may have taken place, bigamy seems not an inappropriate term. The objection to its use urged by Blackstone (4 Bl. Comm. 163) seems to be founded not so much upon considerations of the etymology of the word as upon the propriety of distinguishing the ecclesiastical offense termed "bigamy" in the canon law, and which is defined below, from the offense known as "bigamy" in the modern criminal law. The same distinction is carefully made by Lord Coke, (4 Inst. 88.) But, the ecclesiastical offense being now obsolete, this reason for substituting polygamy to denote the crime here defined ceases to have weight. Abbott.

In the canon law, the term denoted the offense committed by an ecclesiastic who married two wives successively. It might be committed either by marrying a second wife after the death of a first or by marrying a widow.

BIGOT. An obstinate person, or one that is wedded to an opinion, in matters of religion, etc.

BILAGINES. By-laws of towns; municipal laws.

BILAN. A term used in Louisiana, derived from the French. A book in which bankers, merchants, and traders write a statement of all they owe and all that is due them; a balance-sheet. See Dauphin v. Soulie, 3 Mart. (N. S.) 446.

BILANCIIS DEFERENDIS. In English law. An obsolete writ addressed to a corporation for the carrying of weights to such a haven, there to weigh the wool anciently licensed for transportation. Reg. Orig. 270.

BILATERAL CONTRACT. A term, used originally in the civil law, but now generally adopted, denoting a contract in which both the contracting parties are bound to fulfill obligations reciprocally towards each other; as a contract of sale, where one becomes bound to deliver the thing sold, and the other to pay the price of it. Montpelier Seminary v. Smith, 69 Vt. 382, 38 Atl. 66.

"Every convention properly so called consists of a promise or mutual promises proffered and accepted. Where one only of the agreeing parties gives a promise, the convention is said to be 'unilateral.' Wherever mutual promises are proffered and accepted, there are, in strictness, two or more conventions. But where the performance of either of the promises is made to depend on the performance of the other, the several conventions are commonly deemed one convention, and the convention is then said to be 'bilateral.'" Aust. Jur. § 308.

A contract executory on both sides, National Surety Co. v. City of Atlanta, 102 S. E. 175, 176, 24 Ga. App. 732, and one which includes both rights and duties on each side, Crane Ice Cream Co. v. Terminal Freezing & Heating Co., 128 A. 280, 282, 147 Md. 588, 39 A. L. R. 1184.

A term applied in the old books to a jury composed partly of Englishmen and partly of foreigners, which, by the English law, an alien party to a suit is, in certain cases, entitled to; more commonly called a "jury de medietate lingue." 3 Bl. Comm. 360; 4 Steph. Comm. 422.

BILL. A formal declaration, complaint, or statement of particular things in writing.

As a legal term, this word has many meanings and applications, the more important of which are enumerated below.

1. A formal written statement of complaint to a court of justice

In the ancient practice of the court of king's bench, the usual and orderly method of beginning an action was by a bill, or original bill, or plaint. This was a written statement of the plaintiff's cause of action, like a declaration or complaint, and always alleged a trespass as the ground of it, in order to give the court jurisdiction. 3 Bl. Comm. 43.

In Scotch law, every summary application in writing, by way of petition to the Court of Session, is called a "bill." Cent. Dict.

—Bill chamber. In Scotch law. A department of the court of session in which petitions for suspension, interdict, etc., are entertained. It is equivalent to sittings in chambers in the English and American practice. Paters. Comp.

—Bill of privilege. In old English law. A method of proceeding against attorneys and officers of the court not liable to arrest. 3 Bl. Comm. 289.

—Bill of proof. In English practice. The name given, in the mayor's court of London, to a species of intervention by a third person laying claim to the subject-matter in dispute between the parties to a suit.

2. A species of writ

A formal written declaration by a court to its officers, in the nature of process.

—Bill of Middlesex. An old form of process similar to a capias, issued out of the court of king's bench in personal actions, directed to the sheriff of the county of Middlesex, (hence the name,) and commanding him to take the defendant and have him before the king at Westminster on a day named, to answer the plaintiff's complaint. State v. Mathews, 2 Brev. (S. C.) 83; Sims v. Alderson, 8 Leigh (Va.) 484.

3. A formal written petition.

To a superior court for action to be taken in a cause already determined, or a record or certified account of the proceedings in such action or some portion thereof, accompanying such a petition.

—Bill of advocation. In Scotch practice. A bill by which the judgment of an inferior court is appealed from, or brought under review of a superior. Bell.

—Bill of certiorari. A bill, the object of which is to remove a suit in equity from some inferior court to the court of chancery, or some other superior court of equity, on account of some alleged incompetency of the inferior court, or some injustice in its proceedings. Story, Eq. Pl. (5th Ed.) § 298.

—Bill of exceptions. A formal statement in writing of the objections or exceptions taken by a party during the trial of a cause to the decisions, rulings, or instructions of the trial judge, stating the objection, with the facts and circumstances on which it is founded, and, in order to attest its accuracy, signed and sealed by the judge; the object being to put the controverted rulings or decisions upon the record for the information of the appellate court. Ex parte Crane, 5 Pet. 193, 8 L. Ed. 92; Galvin v. State, 56 Ind. 56; Coxe v. Field, 13 N. J. Law, 218; Sackett v. McCord, 23 Ala. 854; Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Manatee County, 83 So. 268, 269, 78 Fla. 470; Buessel v. United States (C. C. A.) 258 F. 811, 815. It is designed to preserve and make a part of the record proceedings not otherwise of record. Yott v. Yott, 100 N. E. 902, 903, 257 Ill. 419; Hinton Milling Co. v. New River Milling Co., 88 S. E. 1079, 1082, 78 W. Va. 314. It is only that part of the proceedings not embraced in the judgment roll. Nave v. Central Life Ins., 238 P. 424, 113 Okl. 76. When the ends of justice require it, the terms "bill of exceptions" and "statement of case" are regarded as synonymous. Bell v. Fee Title Co., 231 P. 598, 599, 69 Cal. App. 437.

"Bill of exceptions" and "transcripts of evidence," however, are clearly distinguishable. The latter may contain no objection or exception, and nothing other than the evidence introduced on the trial; the former is, strictly speaking, only a record which points out alleged errors committed below in relation to evidence as well as other things. Broadway & Newport Bridge Co. v. Commonwealth, 190 S. W. 715, 719, 173 Ky. 165.

4. In equity practice.

A formal written complaint, in the nature of a petition, addressed by a suitor in chancery to the chancellor or to a court of equity or a court having equitable jurisdiction, showing the names of the parties, stating the facts which make up the case and the complainant's allegations, averring that the acts disclosed are contrary to equity, and praying for process and for specific relief, or for such relief as the circumstances demand. U. S. v. Ambrose, 108 U. S. 336, 2 Sup. Ct. 682, 27 L. Ed. 746; Feeney v. Howard, 79 Cal. 525, 21 Pac. 984, 4 L. R. A. 826, 12 Am. St. Rep. 162; Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185, 7 Pac. 456.

Bills are said to be original, not original, or in the nature of original bills. They are original when the circumstances constituting the case are not already before the court, and relief is demanded, or the bill is filed for a subsidiary purpose.

—Bill for a new trial. A bill in equity in which the specific relief asked is an injunction against the execution of a judgment rendered at law, and a new trial in the action, on account of some fact which would render it inequitable to enforce the judgment, but which was not available to the party on the trial at law, or which he was prevented from presenting by fraud or accident, without concurrent fraud or negligence on his own part.

—Bill for foreclosure. One which is filed by a mortgagee against the mortgagor, for the purpose of having the estate sold, thereby to obtain the sum mortgaged on the premises, with interest and costs. 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. 528.

—Bill in nature of a bill of review. A bill in equity, to obtain a re-examination and reversal of a decree, filed by one who was not a party to the original suit, nor bound by the decree.

—Bill in nature of a bill of revivor. Where, on the abatement of a suit, there is such a transmission of the interest of the incapacitated party that the title to it, as well as the person entitled, may be the subject of litigation in a court of chancery, the suit cannot be continued by a mere bill of revivor, but an original bill upon which the title may be litigated must be filed. This is called a "bill in the nature of a bill of revivor." It is founded on privity of estate or title by the act of the party. And the nature and operation of the whole act by which the privity is created is open to controversy. Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 378-380; 2 Amer. & Eng. Enc. Law, 271.

—Bill in nature of a supplemental bill. A bill filed when new parties, with new interests, arising from events happening since the suit was commenced, are brought before the court; wherein it differs from a supplemental bill, which is properly applicable to those cases only where the same parties or the same interests remain before the court. Story, Eq. Pl. (5th Ed.) § 345 et seq.

—Bill in nature of interpleader. See Bill of Interpleader.

—Bill of conformity. One filed by an executor or administrator, who finds the affairs of the deceased so much involved that he cannot safely administer the estate except under the direction of a court of chancery. This bill is filed against the creditors, generally, for the purpose of having all their claims adjusted, and procuring a final decree settling the order of payment of the assets. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 440.

—Bill of discovery. A bill in equity filed to obtain a discovery of facts resting in the knowledge of the defendant, or of deeds or writings, or other things in his custody or power. Story, Eq. Pl. (5th Ed.) § 311; Wright v. Superior Court, 139 Cal. 469, 73 Pac. 145; Everson v. Assur. Co. (C. C.) 68 F. 258; State

v. Savings Co., 28 Or. 410, 43 P. 162; Campbell v. Knight, 92 Fla. 246, 109 So. 577, 579.

—Bill of information. Where a suit is instituted on behalf of the crown or government, or of those of whom it has the custody by virtue of its prerogative, or whose rights are under its particular protection, the matter of complaint is offered to the court by way of information by the attorney or solicitor general, instead of by petition. Where a suit immediately concerns the crown or government alone, the proceeding is purely by way of information, but, where it does not do so immediately, a relator is appointed, who is answerable for costs, etc., and, if he is interested in the matter in connection with the crown or government, the proceeding is by information and bill. Informations differ from bills in little more than name and form, and the same rules are substantially applicable to both. See Story, Eq. Pl. 5; 1 Daniell, Ch. Pr. 2, 8, 288; 3 Bl. Comm. 261.

—Bill of interpleader. The name of a bill in equity to obtain a settlement of a question of right to money or other property adversely claimed, in which the party filing the bill has no interest, although it may be in his hands, by compelling such adverse claimants to litigate the right or title between themselves, and relieve him from liability or litigation. Van Winkle v. Owen, 54 N. J. Eq. 253, 34 A. 400; Wakeman v. Kingsland, 46 N. J. Eq. 113, 18 A. 680; Gibson v. Goldthwaite, 7 Ala. 281, 42 Am. Dec. 592; Lowry v. Downing Mfg. Co., 74 So. 525, 526, 73 Fla. 535; Republic Casualty Co. v. Fischmann, 134 A. 179, 180, 99 N. J. Eq. 758.

The only distinction between a "bill of interpleader" and a bill in the nature of interpleader is that in the latter the plaintiff may claim an interest, while in the former he cannot. Winemiller v. Stewart, 257 P. 288, 289, 125 Okl. 230.

—Bill of peace. One which is filed when a person has a right which may be controverted by various persons, at different times, and by different actions. Chicago Auditorium Ass'n v. Cramer (D. C.) 8 F.(2d) 998, 1004; Smith v. Cretors, 164 N. W. 338, 340, 181 Iowa 189; Ritchie v. Dorland, 6 Cal. 33; Murphy v. Wilmington, 6 Houst. (Del.) 108, 22 Am. St. Rep. 345; Eldridge v. Hill, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 281; Randolph v. Kinney, 3 Rand. (Va.) 395.

—Bill of review. One which is brought to have a decree of the court reviewed, corrected, or reversed. Dodge v. Northrop, 48 N. W. 505, 85 Mich. 243. It is in the nature of a writ of error. Rubin v. Midlinsky, 158 N. E. 395, 327 Ill. 89.

The object of a "bill of review" and of a bill in nature of a bill of review in the old chancery practice was to procure a reversal, modification, or explanation of a decree in a former suit. Barz v. Sawyer, 141 N. W. 319, 321, 159 Iowa, 481.

A "bill of review," or a bill in the nature of a bill of review, are of three classes; those for error appearing on the face of the record, those for newly discovered evidence, and those for fraud impeaching the original transaction. Moore v. Shook, 114 N. E. 592, 593, 276 Ill. 47. Such bills are peculiar to courts of equity at common law. Satterwhite v. State, 231 S. W. 886, 887, 149 Ark. 147.

—Bill of revivor. One which is brought to continue a suit which has abated before its final consummation, as, for example, by death, or marriage of a female plaintiff. Clarke v. Mathewson, 12 Pet. 164, 9 L. Ed. 1041; Brooks v. Laurent, 98 Fed. 647, 39 C. C. A. 201.

—Bill of revivor and supplement. One which is a compound of a supplemental bill and bill of revivor, and not only continues the suit, which has abated by the death of the plaintiff, or the like, but supplies any defects in the original bill arising from subsequent events, so as to entitle the party to relief on the whole merits of his case. Mitf. Eq. Pl. 32, 74; Westcott v. Cady, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 342, 9 Am. Dec. 306; Bowie v. Minter, 2 Ala. 411.

—Bill quia timet. A bill invoking the aid of equity "because he fears," that is, because the complainant apprehends an injury to his property rights or interests, from the fault or neglect of another. Such bills are entertained to guard against possible or prospective injuries, and to preserve the means by which existing rights may be protected from future or contingent violations; differing from injunctions, in that the latter correct past and present or imminent and certain injuries. Bisp. Eq. § 568; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 826; Bailey v. Southwick, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 364; Bryant v. Peters, 3 Ala. 169; Randolph v. Kinney, 3 Rand. (Va.) 398; Chicago Auditorium Ass'n v. Cramer (D. C.) 8 F.(2d) 998, 1005.

—Bill to carry a decree into execution. One which is filed when, from the neglect of parties or some other cause, it may become impossible to carry a decree into execution without the further decree of the court. Hind, Ch. Pr. 68; Story, Eq. Pl. § 42.

—Bill to perpetuate testimony. A bill in equity filed in order to procure the testimony of witnesses to be taken as to some matter not at the time before the courts, but which is likely at some future time to be in litigation. Story, Eq. Pl. (5th Ed.) § 300 et seq.

—Bill to quiet possession and title. Also called a bill to remove a cloud on title (q. v.), and though sometimes classed with bills quia timet or for the cancellation of void instruments, they may be resorted to in other cases when the complainant's title is clear and there is a cloud to be removed; Mellen v. Iron Works, 131 U. S. 352, 9 Sup. Ct. 781, 33 L. Ed. 178; Emig v. Frank P. Miller Corporation, 214 N. W. 144, 145, 238 Mich. 695; Johnston v. Kramer Bros. & Co. (D. C.) 203

F. 733, 742; Alberts v. Steiner, 211 N. W. 46, 48, 237 Mich. 143; Maguire v. City of Macomb, 127 N. E. 682, 686, 293 Ill. 441.

—Bill to suspend a decree. One brought to avoid or suspend a decree under special circumstances.

—Bill to take testimony de bene esse. One which is brought to take the testimony of witnesses to a fact material to the prosecution of a suit at law which is actually commenced, where there is good cause to fear that the testimony may otherwise be lost before the time of trial. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1813, n.

—Class bill. A taxpayer's bill to enjoin a borough from borrowing money for street improvements is essentially a "class bill," and can be filed only by the common consent of all the taxpayers of the borough. Schlanger v. Borough of West Berwick, 104 A. 764, 261 Pa. 605.

—Cross-bill. One which is brought by a defendant in a suit against a plaintiff in or against other defendants in the same suit, or against both, touching the matters in question in the original bill. Story, Eq. Pl. § 389; Mitf. Eq. Pl. 80. A cross-bill is a bill brought by a defendant against a plaintiff, or other parties in a former bill depending, touching the matter in question in that bill. It is usually brought either to obtain a necessary discovery of facts in aid of the defense to the original bill, or to obtain full relief to all parties in reference to the matters of the original bill. It is to be treated as a mere auxiliary suit. Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 144, 15 L. Ed. 158; Kidder v. Barr, 35 N. H. 251; Blythe v. Hinckley (C. C.) 84 Fed. 234. A cross-bill is a species of pleading, used for the purpose of obtaining a discovery necessary to the defense, or to obtain some relief founded on the collateral claims of the party defendant to the original suit. Tison v. Tison, 14 Ga. 167. Also, if a bill of exchange or promissory note be given in consideration of another bill or notice, it is called a "cross" or "counter" bill or note. See, generally, Lovett v. Lovett, 93 Fla. 611, 112 So. 768, 777; Lovell v. Latham & Co. (D. C.) 211 F. 374, 378; Atlanta Northern Ry. Co. v. Harris, 93 S. E. 210, 212, 147 Ga. 214; Smith v. Weeks, 147 N. E. 676, 678, 252 Mass. 244; McDowell v. Hunt Contracting Co., 181 S. W. 680, 681, 133 Tenn. 437; Magruder v. Hattiesburg Trust & Banking Co., 67 So. 485, 488, 108 Miss. 857; Brundage v. Knox, 117 N. E. 123, 132, 279 Ill. 450; Landon v. Public Utilities Commission of Kansas (D. C.) 234 F. 152, 167.

—Supplemental bill. A bill to bring before the court matters arising after the filing of the original bill or not then known to complainant. Puget Sound Power & Light Co. v. City of Seattle (C. C. A.) 5 F.(2d) 393, mod (D. C.) 300 F. 441, 443. See Bill in nature of a supplemental bill.

5. In legislation and constitutional law

The word means a draft of an act of the legislature before it becomes a law; a proposed or projected law. A draft of an act presented to the legislature, but not enacted. Hubbard v. Lowe (D. C.) 226 F. 135, 137. The word "bill" may mean the bill as it is first introduced in one of the houses of the legislature, or it may refer to it at any time in any of its stages until finally passed. People v. Brady, 105 N. E. 1, 4, 262 Ill. 578. An act is the appropriate term for it, after it has been acted on by, and passed by, the legislature. Herbring v. Brown, 180 P. 328, 330, 92 Or. 176; Southwark Bank v. Comm., 26 Pa. 450; Sedgwick County Com'rs v. Bailey, 13 Kan. 608; May v. Rice, 91 Ind. 549; State v. Hegeman, 2 Pennewill (Del.) 147, 44 A. 621. Also a special act passed by a legislative body in the exercise of a quasi judicial power. Thus, bills of attainder, bills of pains and penalties, are spoken of.

—Bill of attainder. See Attainder.

—Bill of indemnity. In English law. An act of parliament, passed every session until 1869, but discontinued in and after that year, as having been rendered unnecessary by the passing of the promissory oaths act, 1868, for the relief of those who have unwittingly or unavoidably neglected to take the necessary oaths, etc., required for the purpose of qualifying them to hold their respective offices. Wharton.

—Bill of pains and penalties. A special act of the legislature which inflicts a punishment, less than death, upon persons supposed to be guilty of treason or felony, without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings. It differs from a bill of attainder in this: that the punishment inflicted by the latter is death.

—Private bill. One dealing only with a matter of private personal or local interest. Lowell, Gov. of Eng. 266. All legislative bills which have for their object some particular or private interest are so termed, as distinguished from such as are for the benefit of the whole community, which are thence termed "public bills." See People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 17.

—Private bill office. See Private.

—Private member's bill. One of a public nature introduced by a private member;—distinguished from a private bill, which is one dealing only with a matter of private personal or local interest. Lowell, Gov. of Eng. 266.

6. A solemn and formal legislative declaration of popular rights and liberties

Promulgated on certain extraordinary occasions, as the famous Bill of Rights in English history.

—Bill of rights. A formal and emphatic legislative assertion and declaration of popular rights and liberties usually promulgated upon a change of government; particularly the statute 1 W. & M. St. 2, c. 2. Also the summary of the rights and liberties of the people, or of the principles of constitutional law deemed essential and fundamental, contained in many of the American state constitutions. Eason v. State, 11 Ark. 491; Atchison St. R. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 31 Kan. 661, 3 Pac. 284; Orr v. Quimby, 54 N. H. 613.

7. In the law of contracts

An obligation; a deed, whereby the obligor acknowledges himself to owe to the obligee a certain sum of money or some other thing. It may be indented or poll, and with or without a penalty.

—Bill obligatory. A bond absolute for the payment of money. It is called also a "single bill," and differs from a promissory note only in having a seal. See Bill penal. Bank v. Greiner, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 115.

—Bill of debt. An ancient term including promissory notes and bonds for the payment of money. Com. Dig. "Merchant," F. 2.

—Bill penal. A written obligation by which a debtor acknowledges himself indebted in a certain sum, and binds himself for the payment thereof, in a larger sum, called a "penalty." Bonds with conditions have superseded such bills in modern practice. They are sometimes called bills obligatory, and are properly so called; but every bill obligatory is not a bill penal. Comyns, Dig. Obligations, D; Cro. Car. 515. See 2 Ventr. 106, 198.

—Bill single. A written promise to pay to a person or persons named a stated sum at a stated time, without any condition. When under seal, as is usually the case, it is sometimes called a "bill obligatory," (q. v.) It differs from a "bill penal," (q. v.) in that it expresses no penalty.

A "bill single" under seal of the obligor was technically distinct from a promissory note, although identical in form, so that a declaration on one was not supported by proof of the other; but this law of variance has been abrogated by Code 1907, § 4963, declaring that the validity and negotiable character of an instrument are not affected by the fact that it bears a seal. Long v. Gwin, 80 So. 440, 441, 202 Ala. 358.

8. In commercial law

A written statement of the terms of a contract, or specification of the items of a transaction or of a demand; also a general name for any item of indebtedness, whether receivable or payable.

Accounts for goods sold, services rendered, or work done. Newman v. San Antonio Traction Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 688, 690.

As used in a lease providing that all "bills" of whatever nature should be chargeable against lessee, taxes were not necessarily included in term "bills" which would more appropriately include assessments for street and sidewalk improvements. McClure Realty & Investment Co. v. Eubanks, 129 S. E. 669, 34 Ga. App. 391.

As a verb, as generally and customarily used in commercial transactions, "bill" is synonymous with "charge" or "invoice." George M. Jones Co. v. Canadian Nat. R. Co. (D. C.) 14 F.(2d) 852, 855.

—Bill-book. In mercantile law. A book in which an account of bills of exchange and promissory notes, whether payable or receivable, is stated.

—Bill-head. A printed form on which merchants and traders make out their bills and render accounts to their customers.

—Bill of lading. In common law. The written evidence of a contract for the carriage and delivery of goods sent by sea for a certain freight. Mason v. Lickbarrow, 1 H. Bl. 359. A written memorandum, given by the person in command of a merchant vessel, acknowledging the receipt on board the ship of certain specified goods, in good order or "apparent good order," which he undertakes, in consideration of the payment of freight, to deliver in like good order (dangers of the sea excepted) at a designated place to the consignee therein named or to his assigns. Devato v. Barrels (D. C.) 20 Fed. 510; Gage v. Jaqueth, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 210; The Delaware, 14 Wall. 596, 600, 20 L. Ed. 779. The term is often applied to a similar receipt and undertaking given by a carrier of goods by land. A bill of lading is an instrument in writing, signed by a carrier or his agent, describing the freight so as to identify it, stating the name of the consignor, the terms of the contract for carriage, and agreeing or directing that the freight be delivered to the order or assigns of a specified person at a specified place. See Civil Code Cal. § 2126a; Aman v. Dover & Southbound R. Co., 102 S. E. 392, 393, 179 N. C. 310; Hines v. Scott, 248 S. W. 663, 664, 112 Tex. 506; Swift v. Davis, 193 N. Y. The extortion of money by threats or overtures towards criminal prosecution or the destruction of a man's reputation or social standing.

In common parlance, the term is equivalent to, and synonymous with, "extortion,"—the exaction of money, either for the performance of a duty, the prevention of an injury, or the exercise of an influence. It supposes the service to be unlawful, and the payment involuntary. Not infrequently it is extorted by threats, or by operating upon the fears or the credulity, or by promises to conceal, or offers to expose, the weaknesses, the follies, or the crimes of the victim. Edsall v. Brooks, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 284, 17 Abb. Prac. 221; Life Ass'n v. Boogher, 3 Mo. App. 173; Hess v. Sparks, 44 Kan. 465, 24 P. 979, 21 Am. St. Rep. 300; People v. Thompson, 97 N. Y. 313; Utterback v. State, 153 Ind. 545, 55 N. E. 420; Mitchell v. Sharon (C. C.) 51 F. 424; In re Mills, 104 Wash. 278, 176 P. 556, 562. "Blackmail" has a broader meaning than the New York statutory crime of blackmail, and denotes extortion in any mode by means of intimidation, as the extortion of money by threats of accusation or exposure, or of unfavorable criticism in the press. Guenther v. Ridgway Co., 156 N. Y. S. 534, 535, 170 App. Div. 725.

In English Law

Blasphemy is the offense of speaking matter relating to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, or the Book of Common Prayer, intended to wound the feelings of mankind or to excite contempt and hatred against the church by law established, or to promote immorality. Sweet.

In American Law

Any oral or written reproach maliciously cast upon God, His name, attributes, or religion. Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 213; Young v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 165; Com. v. Spratt, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 365; People v. Ruggles, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 290, 5 Am. Dec. 335; Updegraph v. Com., 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 406.

In general, blasphemy may be described as consisting in speaking evil of the Deity with an impious purpose to derogate from the divine majesty, and to alienate the minds of others from the love and reverence of God. It is purposely using words concerning God calculated and designed to impair and destroy the reverence, respect, and confidence due to Him as the intelligent creator, governor, and judge of the world. It embraces the idea of detraction, when used towards the Supreme Being, as "calumny" usually carries the same idea when applied to an individual. It is a willful and malicious attempt to lessen men's reverence of God by denying His existence, or His attributes as an intelligent creator, governor, and judge of men, and to prevent their having confidence in Him as such. Com. v. Kneeland, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 211, 212.

The offense of blasphemy under Rev. St. c. 126, § 30 (Rev. St. 1930, ch. 135, § 34), may be committed either by using profanely insolent and reproachful language against God, or by contumeliously reproaching Him, His creation, government, final judgment of the world, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, or the Holy Scriptures as contained in the canonical books of the Old and New Testament, or by exposing any of these enumerated Beings or Scriptures to contempt and ridicule. State v. Mockus, 120 Me. 84, 113 A. 39, 42, 14 A. L. R. 871.

The use of this word is, in modern law exclusively confined to sacred subjects; but blasphemia and blasphemare were anciently used to signify the reviling by one person of another. Nov. 77, c. 1, § 1; Spelman.

BLASTING. A mode of rending rock and other solid substances by means of explosives.

BLEES. In old English law. Grain; particularly corn.

A voter is not "blind" within the meaning of Ky. St. § 1475, authorizing clerk to mark ballot for blind person, if he has left his spectacles at home, but a person so devoid of sight that he cannot see pencil mark made by clerk is "blind." Smith v. Jones, 289 S. W. 170, 171, 221 Ky. 546. One who by accident lost all vision except enough to enable him to recognize a form without distinguishing its outlines is "blind" within the Workmen's Compensation Act. Industrial Commission of Colorado v. Johnson, 172 P. 422, 423, 64 Colo. 461. For other cases, see Total.

BLIND NAILING. "Blind nailing," in a contract relating to the interior finish of a house, means driving the nails in with a nail set, and concealing them with putty and paint. Sterling Engineering and Construction Co. v. Berg, 161 Wis. 280, 152 N. W. 851, 852.

BLIND TIGER. A place where intoxicants are sold on the sly, and contrary to the law. Town of Ruston v. Fountain, 118 La. 53, 42 So. 644; City of Shreveport v. Maroun, 134 La. 490, 64 So. 388, 389. Defined by statute in Louisiana as any place in those subdivisions of the state, where prohibition obtains, in which liquor is kept for sale, exchange, or habitual giving away in connection with any business conducted at such place. City of Shreveport v. Knowles, 136 La. 770, 67 So. 824, 825. A "tippling-house." Calhoun v. Bell, 136 La. 149, 66 So. 761, 762, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1165.

Chapman*, 202 Ala. 194, 79 So. 566, 571; Commerce Trust Co. v. Blakeley, 274 Mo. 52, 202 S. W. 402, 404. The platted portion of a city surrounded by streets. Cravens v. Putnam, 101 Kan. 161, 165 P. 801, 802. The term need not, however, be limited to blocks platted as such, but may mean an area bounded on all sides by streets or avenues. St.

Louis-San Francisco R. Co. v. City of Tulsa, Okl. (C. C. A.) 15 F.(2d) 960, 963; Commerce Trust Co. v. Keck, 283 Mo. 209, 223 S. W. 1057, 1061 (irregular parallelograms). Yet two blocks each, bounded by a street, do not necessarily, when thrown together by the vacation of a street, constitute a single block to be included as such within an assessment district. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. City of Tulsa, 45 Okl. 382, 145 P. 398, 401.

"Block" is often synonymous with "square." Weeks v. Hetland, 52 N. D. 351, 202 N. W. 807, 812, 813. As a measure of length, "block" denotes the length of one side of such a square. Skolnick v. Orth, 84 Misc. 71, 145 N. Y. S. 961, 962. Sometimes it means both sides of a street measured from one intersecting street to the next. Chamberlain v. Roberts, 81 Colo. 23, 253 P. 27. And on occasion it may be construed not to extend between two streets that completely cross the street in question, but to stop at a street running into it though not across it. Wise v. City of Chicago, 183 Ill. App. 215, 216.

Under a statute providing that territory sought to be excluded from a new county must be in one block, the word "block" implies the thought of solidity or compactness, and the territory sought to be excluded must be in some regular and compact form. State v. Moulton, 57 Mont. 414, 189 P. 59, 61.

BLOCK-HOLER. One who follows up the miner to blast or throw down large rocks left in the process of mining in a "stope." Mesich v. Tamarack Mining Co., 184 Mich. 363, 151 N. W. 564, 566.

BLOCKADE. In international law. A marine investment or beleaguering of a town or harbor. A sort of circumvallation round a place by which all foreign connection and correspondence is, as far as human power can effect it, to be cut off. 1 C. Rob. Adm. 151. It is not necessary, however, that the place should be invested by land, as well as by sea, in order to constitute a legal blockade; and, if a place be blockaded by sea only, it is no violation of belligerent rights for the neutral to carry on commerce with it by inland communications. 1 Kent, Comm. 147.

The actual investment of a port or place by a hostile force fully competent, under ordinary circumstances, to cut off all communication therewith, so arranged or disposed as to be able to apply its force to every point of practicable access or approach to the port or place so invested. The Olinde Rodrigues (D. C.) 91 Fed. 274; Id., 174 U. S. 510, 19 Sup. Ct. 851, 43 L. Ed. 1065; U. S. v. The William Arthur, 28 Fed. Cas. 624; The Peterhoff, 5 Wall. 50, 18 L. Ed. 564; Grinnan v. Edwards, 21 W. Va. 347.

An instance of it occurred when Great Britain and Germany united to prevent the slave traffic and stop the importation of arms on the east coast of Africa. Snow, Int. Law 79. In 1827 Greece was blockaded by France, Russia, and Great Britain; in 1850 the Greek ports were blockaded by Great Britain, and again in 1855 by the combined fleets of the five Great Powers. In 1887 the Institute of International Law unanimously declared in favor of the legality of pacific blockade, subject to certain conditions. See 21 L. Mag. & Rev. 285; 2 Oppen. §§ 40-49.

Under the system obtaining in some of the northern states, this name is given to an organized committee, or body of officials, composed of delegates from the several townships in a county, constituting part of the county government, and having special charge of the revenues of the county.

BOARD OF TRADE. An organization of the principal merchants, manufacturers, tradesmen, etc., of a city, for the purpose of furthering its commercial interests, encouraging the establishment of manufactures, promoting trade, securing or improving shipping facilities, and generally advancing the prosperity of the place as an industrial and commercial community. In England, one of the administrative departments of government, being a committee of the privy council which is appointed for the consideration of matters relating to trade and foreign plantations.

BOARD OF WORKS. The name of a board of officers appointed for the better local management of the English metropolis. They have the care and management of all grounds and gardens dedicated to the use of the inhabitants in the metropolis; also the superintendence of the drainage; also the regulation of the street traffic, and, generally, of the buildings of the metropolis. Brown.

BOARDER. One who, being the inhabitant of a place, makes a special contract with another person for food with or without lodging. Berkshire Woollen Co. v. Proctor, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 424.

One who has food and lodging in the house or with the family of another for an agreed price, and usually under a contract intended to continue for a considerable period of time. Ullman v. State, 1 Tex. App. 220, 28 Am. Rep. 405; Ambler v. Skinner, 7 Rob. (N. Y.) 561. Compare Semple School for Girls v. Yielding, 16 Ala. App. 584, 80 So. 158, 161. See Board.

The distinction between a guest and a boarder is this: The guest comes and remains without any bargain for time, and may go away when he pleases, paying only for the actual entertainment he receives; and the fact that he may have remained a long time in the inn, in this way, does not make him a boarder, instead of a guest. Stewart v. McCready, 24 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 62; In re Doubleday, 173 App. Div. 739, 159 N. Y. S. 947, 949.

BOARDING-HOUSE. A boarding-house is not in common parlance, or in legal meaning, every private house where one or more boarders are kept occasionally only and upon special considerations. But it is a quasi public house, where boarders are generally and habitually kept, and which is held out and known as a place of entertainment of that kind. Cady v. McDowell, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 486; State v. McRae, 170 N. C. 712, 86 S. E. 1039; Friedrich Music House v. Harris, 200 Mich. 421, 166 N. W. 869, L. R. A. 1918D, 400.

The distinction between a "boarding-house" and a private dwelling house is whether the house is occupied as a home for the occupant and his wife and child, or whether he occupied it as a place for carrying on the business of keeping boarders, although while prosecuting the business and as a means of prosecuting it, he and his wife and children live in the house also. Neither the size of the house nor the number of the boarders is of importance except as evidence that may have weight in determining which is the principal use for which the building is occupied. Trainor v. Le Beck, 101 N. J. Eq. 823, 139 A. 16, 17.

A boarding-house is not an inn, the distinction being that a boarder is received into a house by a voluntary contract, whereas an innkeeper, in the absence of any reasonable or lawful excuse, is bound to receive a guest when he presents himself. 2 El. & Bl. 144; McClagherty v. Cline, 128 Tenn. 605, 163 S. W. 801.

The distinction between a boarding-house and an inn or hotel is that in a boarding-house the guest is under an express contract, at a certain rate for a certain period of time, while in an inn there is no express agreement; the guest, being on his way, is entertained from day to day, according to his business, upon an implied contract. Willard v. Reinhardt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 148; McIntosh v. Schops, 92 Or. 307, 180 P. 593. A "boarding-house" is also less public in character. State v. Brown, 112 Kan. 814, 212 P. 663, 664, 31 A. L. R. 338. See, also, Talbott v. Southern Seminary, 131 Va. 576, 109 S. E. 440, 19 A. L. R. 534. A "rooming house" differs from a "boarding-house" only in that the latter furnishes meals. City of Independence v. Richardson, 232 P. 1044, 1046, 117 Kan. 656. A boarding school, however, is not a boarding-house within a lien statute. Talbott v. Southern Seminary, 131 Va. 576, 109 S. E. 440, 441, 19 A. L. R. 534.

BOAT. A small open vessel, or water craft, usually moved by oars or rowing. It is commonly distinguished in law from a ship or vessel, by being of smaller size and without a deck. U. S. v. Open Boat, 5 Mason, 120, 137, Fed. Cas. No. 15,967; The Saxon (D. C.) 269 F. 639, 641. But "boat" and "vessel" are often used synonymously. R. R. Ricou & Sons Co. v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co. (C. C. A.) 11 F.(2d) 103, 104; Southern Pac. Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, 37 S. Ct. 524, 527, 61 L. Ed. 1086, L. R. A. 1918C, 451, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 900. And see State v. Hutchins, 79 N. H. 132, 105 A. 519, 521, 2 A. L. R. 1685 ("boats and rafts" held broad enough to cover all water craft, not merely small rowboats).

BOATABLE. A term applied in some states to minor rivers and streams capable of being navigated in small boats, skiffs, or launches, though not by steam or sailing vessels. New England Trout, etc., Club v. Mather, 63 Vt. 338, 35 A. 323, 33 L. R. A. 569. A "boatable stream" is one of common passage as a highway. Boutwell v. Champlain Realty Co., 89 Vt. 80, 94 A. 108, 111, Ann. Cas. 1918A, 726.

BOC. In Saxon law. A book or writing; a deed or charter. Boo land, deed or charter land. Land boc, a writing for conveying land; a deed or charter; a land-book. The land-bocs, or evidences of title, corresponding to modern deeds, were destroyed by William the Conqueror.

But under a health insurance policy the words "bodily disease or illness" have been held to embrace insanity. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Denman (Tex. Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 226, 227.

—Bodily harm. Any touching of the person of another against his will with physical force, in an intentional, hostile, and aggressive manner, or a projecting of such force against his person. People v. Moore, 50 Hun, 356, 3 N. Y. Supp. 159. See Great bodily harm, infra.

—Bodily injury. Any physical or corporeal injury; not necessarily restricted to injury to the trunk or main part of the body as distinguished from the head or limbs. Quirk v. Siegel-Cooper Co., 43 App. Div. 464, 60 N. Y. Supp. 228; State Life Ins. Co. v. Allison (C. C. A.) 269 F. 93, 94, 14 A. L. R. 412; Ross v. International Travelers Ass'n (Tex. Civ. App.) 283 S. E. 189, 191, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 538.

—Great bodily harm. These words usually imply an injury of a greater and more serious kind than battery. Shires v. Bogges, 72 W. Va. 109, 77 S. E. 542, 545. They have been held equivalent to "maim." State v. Foster, 281 Mo. 618, 220 S. W. 958, 959.

—Great bodily injury. An injury to the person of a more grave and serious character than an ordinary battery, but one which cannot be definitely defined. State v. Ockij, 165 Iowa, 237, 145 N. W. 486, 487; Hallett v. State, 109 Neb. 311, 190 N. W. 862, 863.

BODMERIE, BODEMERIE, BODDEMEREY. Belg. and Germ. Bottomry (q. v.).

BODY. A person. Used of a natural body, or of an artificial one created by law, as a corporation.

The term may, however, embrace all members of the person, Louisville Ry. Co. v. Veith, 163 S. W. 217, 157 Ky. 424; including the head, Franklin v. State, 33 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 21, 22.

A term applied to a corporation, which is usually designated as a "body corporate and politic."

The term is particularly appropriate to a public corporation invested with powers and duties of government. It is often used, in a rather loose way, to designate the state or nation or sovereign power, or the government of a county or municipality, without distinctly connoting any express and individual corporate character. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 124, 24 L. Ed. 77; Coyle v. McIntire, 7 Houst. (Del.) 44, 30 Atl. 728, 40 Am. St. Rep. 109; Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 123; People v. Morris, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 334.

C.) 257 F. 849, 850; nor damage by gas explosion in fire box and chimney, Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Insurance Co. v. Kleinman (Tex. Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 894, 895.

Under the Boiler Inspection Act Feb. 17, 1911, § 2 (45 USCA § 23), a locomotive cab is an appurtenance to the boiler, Brown v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 177 N. Y. S. 618, 619, 108 Misc. 384; and a bell ringer is a part or appurtenance of a locomotive and tender, Hines v. Smith (C. C. A.) 275 F. 766, 767; but not a so-called trail car similar to a flat car, used exclusively in switching cars or trains onto a transfer boat, for the purpose of preventing the great weight of the locomotive from being placed on the apron or approaches of the transfer boat, *Alabama & V. BON. Fr.

In Old French Law

A royal order or check on the treasury, invented by Francis I. Bon pour mille livres, good for a thousand livres. Step. Lect. 387.

In Modern Law

The name of a clause (bon pour ———, good for so much) added to a cedule or promise, where it is not in the handwriting of the signer, containing the amount of the sum which he obliges himself to pay. Poth. Obl. part 4, ch. 1, art. 2, § 1.

BONA. Lat. n. Goods; property; possessions. In the Roman law, this term was used to designate all species of property, real, personal, and mixed, but was more strictly applied to real estate. In modern civil law, it includes both personal property (technically so called) and chattels real, thus corresponding to the French biens (q. v.). In the common law, its use was confined to the description of movable goods. Tisdale v. Harris, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 13; Penniman v. French, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 404, 28 Am. Dec. 309.

—Bona confiscata. Goods confiscated or forfeited to the imperial fisc or treasury. 1 Bl. Comm. 299.

—Bona et catalla. Goods and chattels. Movable property. This expression includes all personal things that belong to a man. 16 Mees. & W. 68.

—Bona fugitivorum. In English law. Goods of fugitives; the proper goods of him who flies for felony. 5 Coke, 109b.

—Bona immobilia. Lands. Castle v. Castle (C. C. A.) 267 F. 521, 522.

—Bona notabilia. In English probate law. Notable goods; property worthy of notice, or of sufficient value to be accounted for. This value has varied at different periods, but was finally established at £5, in 1603. Where a decedent leaves goods of sufficient amount (bona notabilia) in different dioceses, administration is granted by the metropolitan, to prevent the confusion arising from the appointment of many different administrators. 2 Bl. Comm. 509; Rolle, Abr. 908. Moore v. Jordan, 36 Kan. 271, 13 Pac. 337, 59 Am. Rep. 550.

—Bona paraphernalia. In the civil law. The separate property of a married woman other than that which is included in her dowry; more particularly, her clothing, jewels, and ornaments. Whiton v. Snyder, 88 N. Y. 303.

—Bona peritura. Goods of a perishable nature; such goods as an executor or trustee must use diligence in disposing of and converting them into money.

—Bona utlagatorum. Goods of outlaws; goods belonging to persons outlawed.

—Bona vacantia. Vacant, unclaimed, or stray goods. Those things in which nobody claims a property, and which belonged, under the common law, to the finder, except in certain instances, when they were the property of the king. 1 Bl. Comm. 298.

BONA. Lat. adj. Good. Used in numerous legal phrases of which the following are the principal:

—Bona gestura. Good abearance or behavior.

—Bona gratia. In the Roman law. By mutual consent; voluntarily. A term applied to a species of divorce where the parties separated by mutual consent; or where the parties renounced their marital engagements without assigning any cause, or upon mere pretexts. Tayl. Civil Law, 361, 362; Calvin.

—Bona memoria. Good memory. Generally used in the phrase sane mentis et bonæ memoriæ, of sound mind and good memory, as descriptive of the mental capacity of a testator.

—Bona patria. In the Scotch law. An assize or jury of good neighbors. Bell.

BONA FIDE. In or with good faith; honestly, openly, and sincerely; without deceit or fraud. M. Lowenstein & Sons v. British-American Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 7 F.(2d) 51, 53; Fairfield Holding Corporation v. Souther, 155 N. E. 639, 640, 258 Mass. 540.

Truly; actually; without simulation or pretense.

Innocently; in the attitude of trust and confidence; without notice of fraud, etc.

See Bona fidei.

The phrase "bona fide" is sometimes used ambiguously; thus, the expression "bona fide holder for value" (see that title, infra) may either mean a holder for real value, as opposed to a holder for pretended value, or it may mean a holder for real value without notice of any fraud, etc. Byles, Bills, 121.

—Bona fide holder for value. An innocent or "bona fide holder for value" of negotiable paper is one who has taken it in good faith for a valuable consideration in the ordinary course of business and when it was not overdue. McCament v. McCament (Tex. Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 1096, 1099. Negotiable Instruments Act, § 52, in using the term "holder in due course," used it as equivalent for the expression "bona fide holder for value without notice," and the act does not change the common-law rule as to who is a bona fide holder, except, perhaps, by eliminating the requirement that the transfer must be in the regular course of business. Drumm Const. Co. v. Forbes, 137 N. E. 225, 226, 305 Ill. 303, 26 A. L. R. 764; Bank of California v. National City Co., 244 P. 690, 691, 138 Wash. 517; Bruce v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Lincolnville, 64 So. 82, 84, 185 Ala. 221; Weller v. Meadows (Mo. App.) 272 S. W. 85, 90.

—Bona fide judgment creditor. One who in good faith, without fraud or collusion, recovers a judgment for money honestly due him. Rochester Trust Co. v. White, 90 A. 127, 129, 243 Pa. 469.

—Bona fide purchaser. A purchaser for a valuable consideration paid or parted with in the belief that the vendor had a right to sell, and without any suspicious circumstances to put him on inquiry. Merritt v. Railroad Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 605. One who acts without covin, fraud, or collusion; one who, in the commission of or connivance at no fraud, pays full price for the property, and in good faith, honestly, and in fair dealing buys and goes into possession. Sanders v. McAfee, 42 Ga. 250. A bona fide purchaser is one who buys property of another without notice that some third person has a right to, or interest in, such property, and pays a full and fair price for the same, at the time of such purchase, or before he has notice of the claim or interest of such other in the property. Spicer v. Waters, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 231; Beam v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank, 249 P. 325, 326, 121 Okl. 164; Moore v. De Bernardi, 220 P. 544, 547, 47 Nev. 33; Mayes v. Thompson, 91 So. 275, 276, 128 Miss. 561; Miller v. Vanicek, 184 N. W. 132, 133, 106 Neb. 661; Richlands Brick Corp. v. Hurst Hardware Co., 92 S. E. 685, 80 W. Va. 476; Gleaton v. Wright, 100 S. E. 72, 73, 149 Ga. 220.

BONÆ FIDEI POSSESSOR. A possessor in good faith. One who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession than himself. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 243.

BOND, n. A contract by specialty to pay a certain sum of money; being a deed or instrument under seal, by which the maker or obligor promises, and thereto binds himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, to pay a designated sum of money to another; usually with a clause to the effect that upon performance of a certain condition (as to pay another and smaller sum) the obligation shall be void. U. S. v. Rundle, 100 Fed. 403, 40 C. C. A. 450; Turck v. Mining Co., 8 Colo. 113, 5 Pac. 838; Boyd v. Boyd, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 126.

The word "bond" shall embrace every written undertaking for the payment of money or acknowledgment of being bound for money, conditioned to be void on the performance of any duty, or the occurrence of anything therein expressed, and subscribed and delivered by the party making it, to take effect as his obligation, whether it be sealed or unsealed; and, when a bond is required by law, an undertaking in writing without seal shall be sufficient. Code Miss. 1930, § 1365.

The word "bond" has with us a definite legal signification. It has a clause, with a sum fixed as a penalty, binding the parties to pay the same, conditioned, however, that the payment of the penalty may be avoided by the performance by some one or more of the parties of certain acts. In re Fitch,

3 Redf. Sur. (N. Y.) 459. And see Stifel Estate Co. v. Cella, 220 Mo. App. 657, 291 S. W. 515, 518.

There is no distinction between a "recognizance" and a "bond"; a "recognizance" being an acknowledgment of record of a pre-existing debt owing by the cognizors to the state as principal. State v. Price, 129 P. 940, 941, 88 Kan. 724. And an "undertaking," unlike a "bond," need not be signed by the principal. Fleischner v. Florey, 111 Or. 35, 224 P. 831, 832.

Bonds are either single (simple) or double, (conditional.) A single bond is one in which the obligor binds himself, his heirs, etc., to pay a certain sum of money to another person at a specified day. A double (or conditional) bond is one to which a condition is added that if the obligor does or forbears from doing some act the obligation shall be void. Formerly such a condition was sometimes contained in a separate instrument, and was then called a "defeasance."

The term is also used to denote debentures or certificates or evidences of indebtedness issued by individuals, partnerships, public and private corporations, municipalities, and governments, as security for the repayment of money loaned to them. First State Bank of Kansas City v. Bone, 122 Kan. 493, 252 P. 250, 254. Thus, "railway aid bonds" are bonds issued by municipal corporations to aid in the construction of railroads likely to benefit them, and exchanged for the company's stock.

But it has been held that certificates of indebtedness issued by a drainage district are not "bonds" in a technical sense because not payable by taxation in the strict sense of that term. Jackson v. Breeland, 103 S. C. 184, 88 S. E. 123, 130. Similarly, securities issued by a corporation, which were payable only out of the assets of the corporation after its other obligations were paid, though designated as "bonds," were more like preferred stock. In re Collier's Estate, 182 N. Y. S. 93, 94, 112 Misc. 70; In re Fechheimer Fishel Co., 212 F. 357, 360, 129 C. C. A. 33. See, also, State v. Pasco Reclamation Co., 90 Wash. 606, 156 P. 834, 835, holding that a "warrant" of a municipality is a general order, payable when the funds are found, which lacks the stable quality of a definite time of payment peculiar to a "bond" or note. Accord: Marshall v. State, 88 Fla. 323, 102 So. 650, 651.

In Old Scotch Law

A bond-man; a slave. Skene.

In General

A parliamentary borough is a town which returns one or more members to parliament.

In its more modern English acceptation, "borough" denotes a town or city organized for purposes of government.

It is impossible to reconcile the meanings of this word given by the various authors cited, except upon the supposition of a change of requirements necessary to constitute a borough at different periods. Many causes, in no two cases quite alike, went to make up the peculiar community which the 13th Century recognized as a borough.

A corporate body erected by the charter of the sovereign, consisting of the inhabitants of the territory erected into the borough. Bell.

In American Law

In Pennsylvania, the term denotes a part of a township having a charter for municipal purposes; and the same is true of Connecticut and New Jersey. Southport v. Ogden, 23 Conn. 128. See, also, 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 41, n.

"Borough" and "village" are duplicate or cumulative names of the same thing; proof of either will sustain a charge in an indictment employing the other term. Brown v. State, 18 Ohio St. 496.

A "borough," within Const. Cal. art. 11, § 8, authorizing the division of a city into boroughs, is one of the units composing a territorial fraction of a city, and having certain powers with reference to local concerns. Croese v. City of Los Angeles, 167 P. 386, 337, 175 Cal. 774.

In General

—Borough courts. In English law. Private and limited tribunals, held by prescription, charter, or act of parliament, in particular districts for the convenience of the inhabitants, that they may prosecute small suits and receive justice at home.

—Borough English. A custom prevalent in some parts of England, by which the youngest son inherits the estate in preference to his older brothers. 1 Bl. Comm. 75.

The custom is said by Blackstone to have been derived from the Saxons, and to have been so called in distinction from the Norman rule of descent; 2 Bla. Comm. 83.

—Borough fund. In English law. The revenues of a municipal borough derived from the rents and produce of the land, houses, and stocks belonging to the borough in its corporate capacity, and supplemented where necessary by a borough rate.

—Borough-heads. Borough-holders, bors-holders, or burs-holders.

—Borough-reeve. The chief municipal officer in towns unincorporated before the municipal corporations act (5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 76).

—Borough sessions. Courts of limited criminal jurisdiction, established in English boroughs under the municipal corporations act.

—Pocket borough. A term formerly used in English politics to describe a borough entitled to send a representative to parliament, in which a single individual, either as the principal landlord or by reason of other predominating influence, could entirely control the election and insure the return of the candidate whom he should nominate.

BORROW. To solicit and receive from another any article of property or thing of value with the intention and promise to repay or return it or its equivalent. Strictly speaking, borrowing implies a gratuitous loan; if any price or consideration is to be paid for the use of the property, it is "hiring." Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Angell (Tex. Civ. App.) 181 S. W. 237, 238. But money may be "borrowed" on an agreement to pay interest for its use. Neel v. State, 33 Tex. Cr. R. 408, 26 S. W. 726; Kent v. Mining Co., 78 N. Y. 177; Legal Tender Cases, 110 U. S. 421, 4 Sup. Ct. 122, 28 L. Ed. 204.

The word is often used in the sense of returning the thing borrowed in specie, as to borrow a book or any other thing to be returned again. But it is evident that where money is borrowed, the identical money loaned is not to be returned, because, if this were so, the borrower would derive no benefit from the loan. In the broad sense of the term, it means a contract for the use of money. State v. School Dist., 13 Neb. 88, 12 N. W. 812; Railroad Co. v. Stichter, 11 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 325. The term "borrowed" may also be used with reference to other things, such as wheat, to express the idea of receiving something from another for one's own use, to appropriate. Finch v. McClellan, 130 N. E. 13, 15, 77 Ind. App. 533.

The right to borrow money as applied to a municipal corporation is a power to create indebtedness and procure for its payment funds from others to be paid at a future date. Jones v. Board of Education of Guilford County, 117 S. E. 37, 40, 185 N. C. 303.

The word "loan" is the correlative of "borrow," the one implying the other. U. S. v. Warn (D. C.) 295 F. 328, 330. The terms "loan" and "borrow," however, when used in connection with the act on the part of an automobile owner in lending the machine and his chauffeur to relatives, do not imply that the owner surrenders control over the chauffeur during the period of the loan, as regards the owner's responsibility for a collision. Hooper v. Brawner, 129 A. 672, 677, 148 Md. 417. Compare Henderson v. State, 73 So. 427, 428, 75 Fla. 464, holding that an indictment alleging that defendant "did borrow" a shotgun sufficiently alleged that defendant received the shotgun into his possession.

BORROW PIT. A pit adjacent to a fill or embankment from which material is taken for the purpose of making the fill or constructing and maintaining the embankment. Haynes v. Jones, 110 N. E. 469, 470, 91 Ohio St. 197.

BORROWE. In old Scotch law. A pledge.

BORROWER. He to whom a thing is lent at his request.

Under a usury statute, the word may include one having the use of money by the forbearance of his creditor, or any person who secures the use of money in any way upon an agreed consideration exceeding 8 per cent. of the principal. Law, Clark & Co. v. Mitchell, 76 So. 923, 924, 200 Ala. 565.

BORSHOLDER. In Saxon law. The borough's ealder, or headborough, supposed to be in the discreetest man in the borough, town, or tithing.

BOSCAGE. In English law. The food which wood and trees yield to cattle; browsewood, mast, etc. Spelman.

An ancient duty of wind-fallen wood in the forest. Manwood.

BOSCARIA. Wood-houses, or ox-houses.

BOSCUS. Wood; growing wood of any kind, large or small, timber or coppice. Cowell; Jacob.

BOTE, BOT. In old English law. A recompense or compensation, or profit or advantage. Also reparation or amends for any damage done. Necessaries for the maintenance and carrying on of husbandry. An allowance; the ancient name for estovers. The common word to boot comes from this word.

House-bote is a sufficient allowance of wood from off the estate to repair or burn in the house, and sometimes termed "fire-bote;" plow-bote and cart-bote are wood to be employed in making and repairing all instruments of husbandry; and hay-bote or hedge-bote is wood for repairing of hays, hedges, or fences. The word also signifies reparation for any damage or injury done, as man-bote, which was a compensation or amends for a man slain, etc.

BOTELESS. In old English law. Without amends; without the privilege of making satisfaction for a crime by a pecuniary payment; without relief or remedy. Cowell.

BOTH. This word is peculiarly appropriate to express the thought of all of two, and the word "all" indicates every one of a class, etc., though it be limited to only two. United States v. Bachman (D. C.) 246 F. 1009, 1011. See All.

Both law and equity favor the diligent creditor.

BOTHA. In old English law. A booth, stall, or tent to stand in, in fairs or markets. Cowell.

BOTHAGIUM, or BOOTHAGE. Customary dues paid to the lord of a manor or soil, for the pitching or standing of booths in fairs or markets.

BOTHNA, or BUTHNA. In old Scotch law. A park where cattle are inclosed and fed. Bothna also signifies a barony, lordship, etc. Skene.

BOTTOM LAND. The term "bottom land," as used in a contract to convey means low land formed by alluvial deposits along the river, low-lying ground, a dale, valley, or intervale, but does not mean the bed of the river or creek. Lexington & E. Ry. Co. v. Williams, 209 S. W. 59, 62, 183 Ky. 343.

BOTTOMAGE. L. Fr. Bottomry.

BOTTOMRY. In maritime law. A contract in the nature of a mortgage, by which the owner of a ship borrows money for the use, equipment, or repair of the vessel, and for a definite term, and pledges the ship (or the keel or bottom of the ship, pars pro toto) as a security for its repayment, with maritime or extraordinary interest on account of the marine risks to be borne by the lender; it being stipulated that if the ship be lost in the course of the specified voyage, or during the limited time, by any of the perils enumerated in the contract, the lender shall also lose his money. The Draco, 2 Sumn. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 4,057; White v. Cole, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 126; Carrington v. The Pratt, 18 How. 63, 15 L. Ed. 267; The Dora (D. C.) 34 Fed. 343; Jennings v. Insurance Co., 4 Bin. (Pa.) 244, 5 Am. Dec. 404; Braynard v. Hoppock, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 157.

Bottomry is a contract by which a ship or its freightage is hypothecated as security for a loan, which is to be repaid only in case the ship survives a particular risk, voyage, or period. Civ. Code Cal. § 3017.

The contract of bottomry is usually in form a bond (termed a bottomry bond, q. v.), conditioned for the repayment of the money lent, with the interest agreed upon, if the ship safely accomplishes the specified voyage or completes in safety the period limited by the contract.

When the loan is not made upon the ship, but on the goods laden on board, and which are to be sold or exchanged in the course of the voyage, the borrower's personal responsibility is deemed the principal security for the performance of the contract, which is therefore called "respondentia," which see. And in a loan upon respondentia the lender must be paid his principal and interest though the ship perish, provided the goods are saved. In most other respects the contracts of bottomry and of respondentia stand substantially upon the same footing.

BOTTOMRY BOND The instrument embodying the contract or agreement of bottomry.

The true definition of a bottomry bond, in the sense of the general maritime law, and independent of the peculiar regulations of the positive codes of different commercial nations, is that it is a contract for a loan of money on the bottom of the ship, at an extraordinary interest, upon maritime risks, to be borne by the lender for a voyage, or for a definite period. The Draco, 2 Sumn. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 4,057; Cole v. White, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 515; Greely v. Smith, 10 Fed. Cas. 1077; The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. 135, 19 L. Ed. 651.

BOUCHE. Fr. The mouth. An allowance of provision. Avoir bouche à court; to have an allowance at court; to be in ordinary at court; to have meat and drink scotfree there. Blount; Cowell.

BOUCHE OF COURT, or BUDGE OF COURT. A certain allowance of provision from the king to his knights and servants, who attended him on any military expedition.

BOUGH OF A TREE. In feudal law. A symbol which gave seisin of land, to hold of the donor in capite.

BOUGHT. The word "bought" implies a completed transaction, a vesting of the right of title to and possession of the property sold, Bull v. Morrison (Tex. Civ. App.) 241 S. W. 561, 562, and also imports a valuable consideration, Grimes v. State, 32 Ga. App. 541, 123 S. E. 918.

BOUGHT AND SOLD NOTES. When a broker is employed to buy and sell goods, he is accustomed to give to the buyer a note of the sale, commonly called a "sold note," and to the seller a like note, commonly called a "bought note," in his own name, as agent of each, and thereby they are respectively bound, if he has not exceeded his authority. Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 83; Keim v. Lindley (N. J. Ch.) 30 A. 1063, 1070; Avondale Mills v. Benchley Bros., 244 Mass. 153, 138 N. E. 586, 589.

BOULEVARD. The word "boulevard," which originally indicated a bulwark or rampart, and was afterwards applied to a public walk or road on the site of a demolished fortification, is now employed in the same sense as public drive. A park is a piece of ground adapted and set apart for purposes of ornament, exercise, and amusement. It is not a street or road, though carriages may pass through it.

So a boulevard or public drive is adapted and set apart for purposes of ornament, exercise, and amusement. It is not technically a street, avenue, or highway, though a carriage-way over it is a chief feature. People v. Green, 52 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 445; Howe v. Lowell, 171 Mass. 575, 51 N. E. 536; Park Com'rs v. Farber, 171 Ill. 146, 49 N. E. 427; City of St. Louis v. Breuer (Mo. Sup.) 223 S. W. 108, 110. But "street" and "boulevard" may be interchangeable, depending on the context. City of Fargo v. Gearey, 33 N. D. 64, 156 N. W. 552, 555. See, also, Avenue.

A "boulevard" is a street of special width, given a parklike appearance by reserving spaces for trees, flowers, etc., and not used for heavy teaming; or one specially designed for pleasure walking or driving. Newbold v. Brotzge, 209 Ky. 218, 272 S. W. 755, 756; Bouis v. City of Baltimore, 138 Md. 284, 113 A. 852, 855; Chaplin v. Kansas City, 259 Mo. 479, 168 S. W. 763, 765.

BOUND. As an adjective, denotes the condition of being constrained by the obligations of a bond or a covenant.

In the law of shipping, "bound to" or "bound for" denotes that the vessel spoken of is intended or designed to make a voyage to the place named. U. S. v. Bengochea (C. C. A.) 279 F. 537, 541.

As a noun, the term denotes a limit or boundary, or a line inclosing or marking off a tract of land. In the familiar phrase "metes and bounds," the former term properly denotes the measured distances, and the latter the natural or artificial marks which indicate their beginning and ending. A distinction is sometimes taken between "bound" and "boundary," to the effect that, while the former signifies the limit itself, (and may be an imaginary line,) the latter designates a visible mark which indicates the limit. But no such distinction is commonly observed.

BOUND BAILIFFS. In English law. Sheriffs' officers are so called, from their being usually bound to the sheriff in an obligation with sureties, for the due execution of their office. 1 Bl. Comm. 345, 346.

BOUNDARY. By boundary is understood, in general, every separation, natural or artificial, which marks the confines or line of division of two contiguous estates. Trees or hedges may be planted, ditches may be dug, walls or inclosures may be erected, to serve as boundaries. But we most usually understand by boundaries stones or pieces of wood inserted in the earth on the confines of the two estates. Civ. Code La. art. 826.

Boundaries are either natural or artificial. Of the former kind are water-courses, growing trees, beds of rock, and the like. Artificial boundaries are landmarks or signs erected by the hand of man, as a pole, stake, pile of stones, etc.

Case of Boundary

A "case of boundary" within Rev. St. Tex. 1911, art. 1591 (Vernon's Rev. Civ. St. art. 1321), making judgments of the Courts of Civil Appeals conclusive, is one where the location of the boundary is the determining question of the entire case. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Tex. Com. App.) 223 S. W. 183, 191; Maxfield v. E. L. Sterling & Sons, 110 Tex. 212, 217 S. W. 937.

Natural Boundary

Any formation or product of nature (as opposed to structures or erections made by man) which may serve to define and fix one or more of the lines inclosing an estate or piece of property, such as a water-course, a line of growing trees, a bluff or mountain chain, or the like. See Peuker v. Canter, 62 Kan. 363, 63 P. 617; Stapleford v. Brinson, 24 N. C. 311; Eureka Mining, etc., Co. v. Way, 11 Nev. 171.

Private Boundary

An artificial boundary, consisting of some monument or landmark set up by the hand of man to mark the beginning or direction of a boundary line of lands.

Public Boundary

A natural boundary; a natural object or landmark used as a boundary of a tract of land, or as a beginning point for a boundary line.

BOUNDED TREE. A tree marking or standing at the corner of a field or estate.

BOUNDERS. In American law. Visible marks or objects at the ends of the lines drawn in surveys of land, showing the courses and distances. Burrill.

BOUNDS. The external or limiting lines, either real or imaginary, of any object or space; that which limits or circumscribes. Stone v. Waukegan (C. C. A.) 205 F. 495, 496.

In the English law of mines, the trespass committed by a person who excavates minerals under-ground beyond the boundary of his land is called "working out of bounds."

BOUNTY. A gratuity, or an unusual or additional benefit conferred upon, or compensation paid to, a class of persons. Iowa v. McFarland, 110 U. S. 471, 4 S. Ct. 210, 28 L. Ed. 198; In re Hoag (D. C.) 227 F. 478, 479.

An amount appropriated by Congress to repay the city of Memphis for the rental value of land taken for a navy yard during the Civil War is not a gift or bounty, but is in the nature of a debt. Moyers v. City of Memphis, 135 Tenn. 263, 186 S. W. 105, 113, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 854.

A premium given or offered to induce men to enlist into the public service. The term is applicable only to the payment made to the enlisted man, as the inducement for his service, and not to a premium paid to the man through whose intervention, and by whose procurement, the recruit is obtained and mustered. Abbe v. Allen, 39 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 488.

It is not easy to discriminate between bounty, reward, and bonus. The first is the appropriate term, however, where the services or action of many persons are desired, and each who acts upon the offer may entitle himself to the promised gratuity, without prejudice from or to the claims of others; while reward is more proper in the case of a single service, which can be only once performed, and therefore will be earned only by the person or co-operative persons who succeed while others fail. Thus, bounties are offered to all who will enlist in the army or navy; to all who will engage in certain fisheries which government desire to encourage; to all who kill dangerous beasts or noxious creatures. A reward is offered for rescuing a person from a wreck or fire; for detecting and arresting an offender; for finding a lost chattel. Kircher v. Murray (C. C.) 54 F. 624; Ingram v. Colgan, 106 Cal. 113, 38 P. 315, 23 L. R. A. 187, 46 Am. St. Rep. 221.

Bonus, as compared with bounty, suggests the idea of a gratuity to induce a money transaction between individuals; a percentage or gift, upon a loan or transfer of property, or a surrender of a right. Abbott.

—Bounty lands. Portions of the public domain given to soldiers for military services, by way of bounty. See 43 USCA § 791.

—Bounty of Queen Anne. A name given to a royal charter, which was confirmed by 2 Anne, c. 11, whereby all the revenue of first-fruits and tenths was vested in trustees, to form a perpetual fund for the augmentation of poor ecclesiastical livings. Wharton.

It includes cows, bulls, and steers, but not horses, mares, geldings, colts, mules, jacks, or jennies, goats, hogs, sheep, shoats, or pigs. State v. State, 81 So. 345, 346, 17 Ala. App. 9.

BOY. A provision by a testator directing his "boys" to sell his farm and divide the proceeds among "the boys," in the absence of some other controlling factor, will be construed to refer to the male children. Hinerman v. Hinerman, 101 S. E. 789, 790, 85 W. Va. 349.

And see Hailey v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 781, 783; Hoban v. Dempsey, 104 N. E. 717, 718, 217 Mass. 166, L. R. A. 1915A, 1217, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 810; Steffes v. Motion Picture Mach. Druggists' Ass'n, 175 N. Y. 1, 67 N. E. 136, 62 L. R. A. 632, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578. The word "boycott" does not necessarily import illegality. Hill Engraving Co. v. Doerr (D. C.) 214 F. 111, 118.

A "boycott" is a combination to cause a loss to one person by coercing others to withdraw from him their business intercourse, by threats that unless the others do so, the combination will cause similar loss to them. Hall v. Johnson, 87 Or. 21, 169 P. 515, 516, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 49; Clarkson v. Laiblan, 178 Mo. App. 708, 161 S. W. 660, 663.

Deering*, 41 S. Ct. 172, 176, 254 U. S. 443, 65 L. Ed. 349, 16 A. L. R. 196; Pierce v. Stablen's Union, Local No. 8760, 103 Pac. 325, 156 Cal. 70. An act which, when committed in concert with others, under certain circumstances, may cause such injury to the public, or be so useless or unfair that these conditions will be decisive as to whether such act is permissible or forbidden, is a "secondary boycott," and must be held to be an unlawful interference with trade and commerce. Justin Seubert, Inc., v. Reiff, 164 N. Y. S. 522, 526, 98 Misc. 402. The picketing of a non-union barber shop by placing a man on the sidewalk in front of the entrance wearing a placard that the shop was unfair to organized labor was an attempted boycott, both primary and secondary, the purpose of the secondary boycott being to bring to bear a duress upon the customers of the person under attack by threatening them directly or indirectly with a boycott if they persist in trading with such a person. Ellis v. Journeyman Barbers' International Union of America, Local Union No. 52, 191 N. W. 111, 112, 194 Iowa, 1179, 32 A. L. R. 756.

They are correlative terms, the one employed to express the meaning of the other, and are so defined by approved lexicographers. Legally, they mean the same kind of disturbance to the public peace, produced by the same class of agents, and can be well comprehended to define one and the same offense. State v. Perkins, 42 N. BREACH. The breaking or violating of a law, right, or duty, either by commission or omission.

In Contracts

The violation or non-fulfilment of an obligation, contract, or duty.

When, in anticipation of the time for performance, one definitely and specifically refuses to do something which he is obligated to do, so that it amounts to a refusal to go on with the contract, it may be treated as a breach by anticipation. Friedman v. Katzner, 114 A. 884, 886, 139 Md. 195. Thus, the conduct of a buyer in insisting on inspection contrary to the contract was an "anticipatory breach." Estes v. Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Corporation, 182 N. Y. S. 25, 26, 191 App. Div. 719. An anticipatory breach will operate as a present breach only if accepted and acted upon by the other party, who may disregard it and await the appointed day. Lewis v. Scoville, 108 A. 501, 502, 94 Conn. 79; Smith v. Georgia Loan Savings & Banking Co., 39 S. E. 410, 113 Ga. 975; Byrd Printing Co. v. Whitaker Paper Co., 70 S. E. 798, 135 Ga. 865, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 182.

A continuing breach occurs where the state of affairs, or the specific act, constituting the breach, endures for a considerable period of time, or is repeated at short intervals. A constructive breach of contract takes place when the party bound to perform disables himself from performance by some act, or declares, before the time comes, that he will not perform. Jordan v. Madsen, 69 Utah, 112, 252 P. 570, 573; The Adamello (D. C.) 19 F. (2d) 388, 389.

App. 633.

A constructive breach of the peace is an unlawful act which, though wanting the elements of actual violence or injury to any person, is yet inconsistent with the peaceable and orderly conduct of society. Various kinds of misdemeanors are included in this general designation, such as sending challenges to fight, going armed in public without lawful reason and in a threatening manner, etc. An apprehended breach of the peace is caused by the conduct of a man who threatens another with violence or physical injury, or who goes about in public with dangerous and unusual weapons in a threatening or alarming manner, or who publishes an aggravated libel upon another, etc.

BREACH OF TRUST. Any act done by a trustee contrary to the terms of his trust, or in excess of his authority and to the detriment of the trust; or the wrongful omission by a trustee of any act required of him by the terms of the trust. Also the wrongful misappropriation by a trustee of any fund or property which had been lawfully committed to him in a fiduciary character. Every violation by a trustee of a duty which equity lays upon him, whether willful and fraudulent, or done through negligence, or arising through mere oversight and forgetfulness, is a "breach of trust." The term, therefore, includes every omission and commission in carrying out the trust according to its terms, of care and diligence in protecting and investing the trust property, and of using perfect good faith. H. B. Cartwright & Bro. v. United States Bank & Trust Co., 167 P. 436, 453, 23 N. M. 82; National Surety Co. v. State, 136 A. 274, 277, 152 Md. 71, 50 A. L. R. 308. See Breach of duty, supra.

As used in the law of sales, "breach of warranty," unlike fraud, does not involve guilty knowledge, Anglo-California Trust Co. v. Hall, 211 P. 991, 993, 61 Utah, 223, and rests on contract,

When we say that the record is in the "breast of the court" to be changed during the term, we only mean that the proceedings attested by it have not yet obtained that irrevocable character which places them beyond the power of the court after the term. *Willson v. The offense is not confined, as some have supposed, to judicial officers. Brown.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS. The offense committed by one who gives or promises or offers money or any valuable inducement to an elector, in order to corruptly induce the latter to vote in a particular way or to abstain from voting, or as a reward to the voter for having voted in a particular way or abstained from voting.

A private bridge is one which is not open to the use of the public generally, and does not form part of the highway, but is reserved for the use of those who erected it, or their successors, and their licensees. Rex v. Bucks County, 12 East, 192. Such a bridge will not be considered a public bridge although it may be occasionally used by the public. Thompson v. R. Co., 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 625; 1 Rolle, Abr. 368, Bridges, pl. 2; 2 Inst. 701; 1 Salk. 359.

—Brief papal. In ecclesiastical law. The pope's letter upon matters of discipline.

In English Practice

A document prepared by the attorney, and given to the barrister, before the trial of a cause, for the instruction and guidance of the latter. It contains, in general, all the information necessary to enable the barrister to successfully conduct their client's case in court, such as a statement of the facts, a summary of the pleadings, the names of the witnesses, and an outline of the evidence expected from them, and any suggestions arising out of the peculiarities of the case.

In American Practice

A written or printed document, prepared by counsel to serve as the basis for an argument upon a cause in an appellate court, and usually filed for the information of the court. It embodies the points of law which the counsel desires to establish, together with the arguments and authorities upon which he rests his contention.

A brief, within a rule of court requiring counsel to furnish briefs, before argument, implies some kind of statement of the case for the information of the court. Gardner v. Stover, 43 Ind. 356. A "brief" is the vehicle of counsel to convey to the appellate court the essential facts of his client's case, a statement of the questions of law involved, the law he would have applied, and the application he desires made of it by the court. Bell v. Germain, 107 P. 630, 12 Cal. App. 375.

—Printed brief. Typewritten brief is a written and not a "printed brief." Waterman Lumber & Supply Co. v. Holmes (Tex. Civ. App.) 161 S. W. 70.

In Scotch Law

Brief is used in the sense of "writ," and this seems to be the sense in which the word is used in very many of the ancient writers.

In Ecclesiastical Law

Ponder*, 77 S. E. 32, 34, 139 Ga. 283. But the term "broker" is no longer limited, but extends to almost every branch of business, to realty as well as personalty. Richmond Mortgage & Loan Corporation v. Rose, 128 S. E. 604, 605, 142 Va. 342.

Those who are engaged for others in the negotiation of contracts relative to property, with the custody of which they have no concern. Paley, Prin. & Ag. § 13; Gile v. Tsutakawa, 187 P. 323, 326, 109 Wash. 366.

The broker or intermediary is he who is employed to negotiate a matter between two parties, and who, for that reason, is considered as the mandatary of both. Civil Code La. art. 3016.

One whose business is to negotiate purchases or sales of stocks, exchange, bullion; coined money, bank-notes, promissory notes, or other securities, for himself or for others. Ordinarily, the term "broker" is applied to one acting for others; but the part of the definition which speaks of purchases and sales for himself is equally important as that which speaks of sales and purchases for others. Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 710, 23 L. Ed. 421; McCornick & Co., Bankers, v. Tolmie Bros., 243 P. 355, 358, 42 Idaho, 1.

A broker is a mere negotiator between other parties, and does not act in his own name, but in the name of those who employ him. Henderson v. State, 50 Ind. 234; San Jacinto Life Ins. Co. v. Brooks (Tex. Civ. App.) 274 S. W. 648, 650.

Brokers are persons whose business it is to bring buyer and seller together; they need have nothing to do with negotiating the bargain. Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. 42.

A "broker" is an agent acting under a limited authority usually authorized to buy or sell a particular thing in specified quantities. Portsmouth Cotton Oil Refining Corp. v. Madrid Cotton Oil Co., 200 Ala. 634, 77 So. 8, 9.

As distinguished from a broker, a "middleman," in a real estate transaction, is employed merely to bring the parties together when each desires to exchange his property for that of the other, or where one desires to sell and the other to purchase; his services are not rendered as the agent of either party, and he may later receive a commission from both; but a "broker" is the agent of a party, employed to procure a customer or to effect the sale or exchange. Tracey v. Blake, 229 Mass. 57, 118 N. E. 271, 272.

The difference between a factor or commission merchant and a broker is this: A factor may buy and sell in his own name, and he has the goods in his possession; while a broker, as such, cannot ordinarily buy or sell in his own name, and has no possession of the goods sold. Slack v. Tucker, 23 Wall. 321, 330, 23 L. Ed. 143; Lawrence Gas Co. v. Hawkeye Oil Co., 165 N. W. 445, 446, 132 Iowa, 179, 8 A. L. R. 192. Moreover, a factor has a special property in the goods. Sutton & Cummins v. Kiel Cheese & Butter Co., 155 Ky. 465, 159 S. W. 950, 951.

The legal distinction between a broker and a factor is that the factor is entrusted with the property the subject of the agency; the broker is only employed to make a bargain in relation to it. Perkins v. State, 50 Ala. 154, 156.

Brokers are of many kinds, the most important being enumerated and defined as follows:

—Exchange brokers, who negotiate foreign bills of exchange.

—Insurance brokers, who procure insurances for those who employ them and negotiate between the party seeking insurance and the companies or their agents.

—Merchandise brokers, who buy and sell goods and negotiate between buyer and seller, but without having the custody of the property.

—Money-broker. A money-changer; a scrivener or jobber; one who lends or raises money to or for others.

—Note brokers, who negotiate the discount or sale of commercial paper.

—Pawnbrokers, who lend money on goods deposited with them in pledge, taking high rates of interest.

—Real-estate brokers, who procure the purchase or sale of land, acting as intermediary between vendor and purchaser to bring them together and arrange terms; and who negotiate loans on real-estate security, manage and lease estates, etc. Latta v. Kilbourn, 150 U. S. 524, 14 S. Ct. 201, 37 L. Ed. 169; Chadwick v. Collins, 26 Pa. 139; Brauckman v. Leighton, 60 Mo. App. 42; Abraham v. Wasaff, 111 Okl. 138, 239 P. 138, 140; Crews v. Sullivan, 133 Va. 478, 113 S. E. 865, 866. A "real estate broker" is one employed in negotiating the sale, purchase, or exchange of lands on a commission contingent on success. Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 184 P. 487, 491. To constitute one a "real estate broker" within statutes requiring a license to engage in such business, it is not sufficient that he make one or two sales, but it must be shown that he is engaged in the business to such an extent that it is his vocation or partial vocation. Morris v. O'Neill, 239 Mich. 663, 215 N. W. 8, 9; Boggan v. Clark, 141 Miss. 849, 105 So. 760, 761; Killen v. Irmiter, 233 Ill. App. 116, 119; Kolb v. Burkhardt, 148 Md. 539, 129 A. 670, 672.

—Ship-brokers, who transact business between the owners of ships and freighters or charterers, and negotiate the sale of vessels.

—Stock-brokers, who are employed to buy and sell for their principals all kinds of stocks, corporation bonds, debentures, shares in companies, government securities, municipal bonds, etc. The term "broker" applies as well to a broker on the Board of Trade as to one on the Stock Exchange. Cutler v. Partridge, 182 Ill. App. 350, 358.

BROKERAGE. The wages or commissions of a broker; also, his business or occupation.

BROTHER. One person is a brother "of the whole blood" to another, the former being a male, when both are born from the same father and mother. He is a brother "of the half blood" to that other (or half-brother) when the two are born to the same father by different mothers or by the same mother to different fathers.

In the civil law, the following distinctions are observed: Two brothers who descend from the same father, but by different mothers, are called "consanguine" brothers. If they have the same mother, but are begotten by different fathers, they are called "uterine" brothers. If they have both the same father and mother, they are denominated brothers "germane."

The phrase "brothers and sisters" as used in statutes of descent and in inheritance tax statutes is commonly construed to include half brothers and half sisters. Thompson v. Smith, 102 Okl. 150, 227 P. 77, 80; People v. Elliff, 74 Colo. 81, 219 P. 224, 225.

BROTHER-IN-LAW. A wife's brother or a sister's husband. There is not any relationship, but only affinity, between brothers-in-law. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Iowa Water Co. (C. C.) 80 Fed. 469. See State v. Foster, 112 La. 533, 36 So. 554. Two men are not brothers-in-law from the circumstance merely of having married sisters. Cruce v. State, 87 Fla. 406, 100 So. 264, 265.

This is the meaning of the word as used in Judicial Code § 41 (28 USCA § 102) providing that the trial of offenses on the high seas or elsewhere out of the jurisdiction of any particular state or district shall be in the district where the offender is found, or into which he is first brought. United States v. Townsend (D. C.) 219 F. 761, 762.

A writ of error is not "brought" until it is filed or lodged in the court, or with the clerk of the court, which rendered the judgment, United States v. Alamogordo Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 202 F. 700, 703; U. S. v. Shaffer (D. C.) 278 F. 549, 551.

BUBBLE ACT. The statute 6 Geo. I. c. 18 (1719), "for restraining several extravagant and unwarrantable practices herein mentioned," was so called. It prescribed penalties for the formation of companies with little or no capital, with the intention, by means of alluring advertisements, of obtaining money from the public by the sale of shares. Such undertakings were then commonly called "bubbles." This legislation was prompted by the collapse of the "South Sea Project," which, as Blackstone says, "had beggared half the nation." It was mostly repealed by the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 91.

BUCKET SHOP. Ausman v. Veal, 10 Ind. 356, 71 Am. Dec. 331; Com. v. J., 21 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 626. Law, 416, 99 A. 119, 120; Bruen v. People, 69 N. E. 24, 206 Ill. 417, 423.

Whether a wide difference of meaning of the words "building," "improvement" and "structure" exists depends upon the context in connection with which they are used. They might mean the same thing, for, in a certain sense, a "building" is an "improvement" and also a "structure," and vice versa, an "improvement" or "structure" may be a "building." Lanier v. Lovett, 25 Ariz. 54, 213 P. 391, 394.

The word in its legal sense is ambiguous, and is susceptible of being construed, without violence, as including many different kinds of structures and edifices erected by man. Great Eastern Casualty Co. v. Blackwelder, 21 Ga. App. 586, 94 S. E. 843, 844. For illustrative cases, see State v. Clark, 221 Mo. App. 893, 288 S. W. 77, 78 (a dugout or artificial cave); Bush v. Norman (Mo. App.) 199 S. W. 721 (a silo); Mecca Realty Co. v. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes Co., 148 N. Y. S. 1040, 85 Misc. 598; Id., 151 N. Y. S. 750, 753, 166 App. Div. 74 (a sign); State v. Lintner, 19 S. D. 447, 104 N. W. 205 (a box car); Adams v. State, 13 Ala. App. 330, 69 So. 357, 359 (each room or apartment in a state capitol).

Norton*, 102 S. E. 536, 538, 149 Ga. 805; Washington Nat. Building, Loan & Investment Ass'n v. Stanley, 63 P. 489, 492, 38 Or. 319, 84 Am. St. Rep. 793; Albany Mut. Bldg. Ass'n v. Mikkelsen, 196 Ill. 575, 63 N. E. 1036, 1037.

BULK. Unbroken packages. Merchandise which is neither counted, weighed, nor measured. See Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Gate City Fertilizer Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 176 S. W. 868, 869.

Bulk is said of that which is neither counted, weighed, nor measured. A sale by the bulk is the sale of a quantity such as it is, without measuring, counting, or weighing. Civil Code La. art. 3556, par. 6.

When used in relation to sale of goods by sample, "bulk" means the whole quantity of goods sold, which is supposed to be fairly represented by the sample. American Paper Products Co. v. Morton Salt Co. (Mo. App.) 279 S. W. 761, 763. This is the meaning which the word has as used in Uniform Sales Act Pa. § 14 (P. L. c. 543; 69 PS § 123). F. A. D. Andrea, Inc., v. Dodge (C. C. Long Cigar & Grocery Co. v. Harvey*, 33 Ga. App. 236, 125 S. E. 870.

BULK WINDOWS. "Bulk windows" include show windows as well as bay windows, sometimes called "bow windows," within a statute conferring on cities the power to regulate certain obstructions in the street. City of Baltimore v. Nirdlinger, 131 Md. 600, 102 A. 1014, 1019.

There are three kinds of apostolical rescripts—the brief, the signature, and the bull; which last is most commonly used in legal matters.

This is also a cant term of the Stock Exchange, meaning one who speculates for a rise in the market.

Co. v. Kennon*, 3 Mont. 44; Thalheim v. State, 38 Fla. 169, 20 So. 938; Counsel v. Min. Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 77.

Buoys are regulated by federal legislation; see 33 USCA § 734.

BURDEN. A burden, as on interstate commerce, means anything that imposes either a restrictive or onerous load upon such commerce. State of Missouri v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. (D. C.) 282 F. 341, 345.

Where the Railroad Commission ordered construction of a viaduct carrying a street over railroad tracks, construction and operation of street car tracks on the viaduct was not an "additional burden," and did not entitle abutting owners to damages. In eminent domain or condemnation proceedings see Henry v. City of La Crosse, 165 Wis. 625, 162 N. W. 174, 176; In re Ely Ave. in City of New York, 150 N. Y. S. 698, 701, 88 Misc. 320.

BURDEN OF PROOF. (Lat. onus probandi.) In the law of evidence. The necessity or duty of affirmatively proving a fact or facts in dispute on an issue raised between the parties in a cause. Willett v. Rich, 142 Mass. 356, 7 N. E. 776, 56 Am. Rep. 684; Wilder v. Cowles, 100 Mass. 490; People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 58, 69 Am. Dec. 642.

The term "burden of proof" is not to be confused with "prima facie case," Kendall v. Brownson, 47 N. H. 200; Carver v. Carver, 97 Ind. 511; Heinemann v. Heard, 62 N. Y. 455; Feurt v. Ambrose, 34 Mo. App. 366; Gibbs v. Bank, 123 Iowa, 736, 99 N. W. 703, or with expressions referring to a similar idea, such as the "burden of evidence," Hyer v. C. E. Holmes & Co., 12 Ga. App. 837, 79 S. E. 58, 60, or "the burden of proceeding," Mason v. Geist (Mo. App.) 263 S. W. 236, 237, or the burden of going forward with the evidence, First Nat. Bank v. Ford, 30 Wyo. 110, 216 P. 691, 694, 31 A. L. R. 1441.

It is frequently said, however, to have two distinct meanings: (1) the duty of producing evidence as the case progresses, and (2) the duty to establish the truth of the claim by preponderance of the evidence, and though the former may pass from party to party, the latter rests throughout upon the party asserting the affirmative of the issue. Sellers v. Kincaid, 303 Ill. 216, 135 N. E. 429, 433; Hansen v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 97 Or. 190, 188 P. 963, 969; Stofer v. Dunham (Mo. App.) 208 S. W. 641, 644; Moore v. Williams, 111 Neb. 342, 196 N. W. 695, 698; In re Gedney's Will (Sur.) 142 N. Y. S. 157, 161; North Memphis Sav. Bank v. Union Bridge & Construction Co., 138 Tenn. 161, 196 S. W. 492, 498; Sanderhofner v. Calmenson, 170 Minn. 69, 212 N. W. 9, 11; Giblin v. Dudley Hardware Co., 44 R. I. 371, 117 A. 418, 419. Again "burden of proof" is sometimes used to refer merely to the rule of practice fixing the order of proof, as distinguished from the "preponderance of the evidence" meaning the weight of evidence. Welch v. Creech, 88 Wash. 429, 153 P. 355, 358, L. R. A. 1918A, 353; Thompson v. Dyson, 120 Kan. 591, 244 P. 867, 868.

BURGUNDIAN LAW. See Lex Burgundionum.

BURGWAR. A burgess (q. v.).

BURH. A fastness. The hill-top that has been fortified as a burh. Very often it has given its name to a neighboring village; it is the future borough. The entrenchment around a great man's house was a burh. See Maitland, Domesday and Beyond, 183.

BURIAL. Sepulture; the act of interring dead human bodies. See Lay v. State, 12 Ind. App. 362, 39 N. E. 768; In re Reformed, etc., Church, 7 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 476; Cemetery Ass'n v. Assessors, 37 La. Ann. 35.

BURKING, BURKISM. Murder committed with the object of selling the cadaver for purposes of dissection, particularly and originally, by suffocating or strangling the victim.

So named from William Burke, a notorious practitioner of this crime, who was hanged at Edinburgh in 1829. See the reference thereto in 4 Redf. Sur. (N. Y.) 540. It is said that the first instance of his name being thus used as a synonym for the form of death he had inflicted on others occurred when he himself was led to the gibbet, the crowd around the scaffold shouting "Burke him!"

BURLAW COURTS. Courts consisting of neighbors selected by common consent to act as judges in determining disputes between neighbor and neighbor.

BURLAWS. In Scotch law. Laws made by neighbors elected by common consent in the burlaw courts. Skene.

BURN, n. A hurt, injury, or effect caused by burning. Webster, Dict.

A "first-degree burn" varies from redness to a blister. A "second-degree burn" results where the skin is charred or killed. Murphy v. Ludowici Gas & Oil Co., 96 Kan. 321, 150 P. 581, 582.

BURN, v. To consume with fire. See Hiatt v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 197 N. W. 3, 4, 197 Iowa, 153, 33 A. L. R. 655; Pacific Creosoting Co. v. Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co. (D. C.) 210 F. 958, 959.

The verb "to burn," in an indictment for arson, is to be taken in its common meaning of "to consume with fire." Hester v. State, 17 Ga. 130. To constitute the "burning" which is essential to the crime of arson, it is not necessary that the building should be consumed or materially injured. It is sufficient if fire is actually communicated to any part thereof, however small. State v. Mutschler, 55 N. D. 120, 212 N. W. 832, 833.

BURNING FLUID. As used in policies of insurance, this term does not mean any fluid which will burn, but it means a recognized article of commerce, called by that name, and which is a different article from naphtha or kerosene. Putnam v. Insurance Co. (C. C.) 4 Fed. 764; Wheeler v. Insurance Co., 6 Mo. App. 235; Mark v. Insurance Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 569.

BURNING IN THE HAND. In old English criminal law, laymen, upon being accorded the benefit of clergy, were burned with a hot iron in the brawn of the left thumb, in order that, being thus marked, they could not again claim their clergy. 4 Bl. Comm. 367. This practice was finally abolished by Stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 74; though before that time the burning was often done with a cold iron.

BURNT COTTON. Cotton which has been on fire, and which has not been subsequently re-picked and rebaled. Southern Ry. Co. v. Pettit (C. C. A.) 257 F. 663, 664.

But the dimensions of a bushel, and the weight of a bushel of grain, etc., vary in the different states in consequence of statutory enactments. Richardson v. Spafford, 13 Vt. 245; Milk v. Christie, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 106; Hoekin v. Cooke, 4 Term, 316.

BUSINESS. This word embraces everything about which a person can be employed. People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 242, 244; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U. S. 107, 31 Sup. Ct. 342, 55 L. Ed. 859, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312; Conhaim Holding Co. v. Willeuts (D. C.) 21 F.(2d) 91, 92; Feitelberg v. Matuson, 208 N. Y. S. 786, 790, 124 Misc. 595; Down v. Comstock, 149 N. E. 507, 510, 318 Ill. 445; McCullough v. Harshman, 226 P. 555, 556, 99 Okl. 262.

Jeter*, 244 P. 149, 153, 42 Idaho, 169; Herald v. Glendale Lodge No. 1289, B. P. O. E. of United States, 189 P. 329, 331, 46 Cal. App. 325; Three Forks Coal Co. v. U. S. (D. C.) 9 F.(2d) 946, 948; R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. City of Lexington, 205 S. W. 592, 593, 181 Ky. 503.

"Business" is often synonymous with calling, occupation, or trade. Gray v. Board of County Com'rs of Sedgwick County, 165 P. 867, 868, 101 Kan. 195, L. R. A. 1918F, 182; Griffin v. Russell, 87 S. E. 10, 11, 144 Ga. 275, L. R. A. 1916F, 216, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 994; and it is so used in Workmen's Compensation Act, providing that the act shall not apply to "persons whose employment at the time of the injury is but casual, and not in the usual course of the trade, business, profession, or occupation of the employer," State v. District Court of Douglas County, 164 N. W. 366, 368, 138 Minn. 103; Kaplan v. Gaskill, 187 N. W. 943, 946, 108 Neb. 455.

The doing of a single act pertaining to a particular business will not be considered engaging in or carrying on the business; yet a series of such acts would be so considered. Goddard v. Chaffee, 2 Allen (Mass.) 395, 79 Am. Dec. 796; Sterne v. State, 20 Ala. 46. But see Industrial Commission v. Hammond, 236 P. 1006, 1008, 77 Colo. 414.

Labor, business, and work are not synonyms. Labor may be business, but it is not necessarily so; and business is not always labor. Making an agreement for the sale of a chattel is not within a prohibition of labor upon Sunday, though it is (if by a merchant in his calling) within a prohibition upon business. Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 387.

As used in a will giving the testator's "business" to persons named, the term may be equivocal, and may mean property, or simply good will. In re Weber's Estate, 261 Pa. 561, 104 A. 735, 737. It has been held not to include notes, in re Rogers' Estate, 91 N. J. Eq. 294, 109 A. 16, nor to include coal on hand or a bank account kept in connection with the business, but that it did include the leasehold, wagons, horses, and other equipment, Coyle v. Donaldson, 90 N. J. Eq. 122, 105 A. 605, 607.

There is, however, a clear distinction between "business" and "property," as generally used in taxing and other statutes. Sullivan v. Associated Billposters and Distributors of United States and Canada (C. C. A.) 6 F.(2d) 1006, 1010, 42 A. L. R. 503.

—Business hours. Those hours of the day during which, in a given community, commercial, banking, professional, public, or other kinds of business are ordinarily carried on.

This phrase is declared to mean not the time during which a principal requires an employee's services, but the business hours of the community generally. Derosia v. Railroad Co., 18 Minn. 133 (Gil. 119).

In respect to the time of presentment and demand of bills and notes, business hours generally range through the whole day down to the hours of rest in the evening, except when the paper is payable at a bank or by a banker; Cayuga County Bank v. Hunt, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 635. See Flint v. Rogers, 15 Me. 67; Lunt v. Adams, 17 Me. 230.

An order allowing a stockholder to examine the books of a corporation "during business hours" does not mean that such examination be carried on throughout the entire business day, nor in the nighttime. Breslauer v. S. Franklin & Co., 205 Ill. App. 372, 374.

Gann*, 244 P. 233, 235, 120 Kan. 365; Lockwood v. Blodgett, 138 A. 520, 525, 106 Conn. 525.

—Business trust. As distinguished from a joint-stock company, a pure "business trust" is one in which the managers are principals, and the shareholders are cestuis que trust. Betts v. Hackathorn, 252 S. W. 602, 604, 159 Ark. 621, 31 A. L. R. 847.

—Private business. A "private business or enterprise" is one in which an individual or individuals, an association, copartnership, or private corporation have invested capital, time, attention, labor, and intelligence for the purpose of creating and conducting such business, for the sole purpose that those who make such contributions may, from the conducting and operating of it, make, gain, and acquire a financial profit for their exclusive benefit, improvement, and enjoyment, and, exclusively for their own private purposes and use. Green v. Frazier, 176 N. W. 11, 17, 44 N. D. 395.

—Public business. An element of "public business" prescribed by Comp. St. Okl. 1921, § 11032 (St. 1931, § 12805), relating to regulation by Corporation Commission, is that the business by its nature must be such that the public must use the same, or the commodities bought and sold in such manner as to affect the community at large as to supply, price, etc.,

They appear to have been men appointed for some purpose of limited authority by the other inhabitants, under by-laws of the corporation appointing.

BY-LAWS. Regulations, ordinances, or rules enacted by a private corporation for its own government.

A by-law is a rule or law of a corporation, for its government, and is a legislative act, and the solemnities and sanction required by the charter must be observed. A resolution is not necessarily a by-law though a by-law may be in the form of a resolution. Peck v. Elliott, 79 Fed. 10, 24 C. C. A. 425, 38 L. R. A. 616; Mining Co. v. King, 94 Wis. 439, 69 N. W. 181, 36 L. R. A. 51; Bagley v. Oil Co., 201 Pa. 78, 50 Atl. 760, 56 L. R. A. 184; Dairy Ass'n v. Webb, 40 App. Div. 49, 57 N. Y. Supp. 572. A "by-law" of a private corporation is a permanent rule of action adopted by the stockholders, in accordance with which the corporate affairs are to be conducted. Griffith v. Klamath Water Users' Ass'n, 68 Or. 402, 137 P. 226, 227; Cummings v. State, 47 Okl. 627, 149 P. 864, 866, L. R. A. 1915E, 774.

"That the reasonableness of a by-law of a corporation is a question of law, and not of fact, has always been the established rule; but in the case of State v. Overton, 24 N. J. Law, 435, 61 Am. Dec. 671, a distinction was taken in this respect between a by-law and a regulation, the validity of the former being a judicial question, while the latter was regarded as a matter in pais. But although, in one of the opinions read in the case referred to, the view was clearly expressed that the reasonableness of a corporate regulation was properly for the consideration of the jury, and not of the court, yet it was nevertheless stated that the point was not involved in the controversy then to be decided. There is no doubt that the rule thus intimated is in opposition to recent American authorities. Nor have I been able to find in the English books any such distinction as that above stated between a by-law and a regulation of a corporation." Compton v. Van Volkenburgh, 34 N. J. Law, 135.

The word has also been used to designate the local laws or municipal statutes of a city or town. See Kilgour v. Gratto, 112 N. E. 489, 490, 224 Mass. 78. But of late the tendency is to employ the word "ordinance" exclusively for this class of enactments, reserving "by-law" for the rules adopted by private corporations.

In England the term by-law includes any order, rule or regulation made by any local authority or statutory corporation subordinate to Parliament; 1 Odgers, C. L. 91.

BY-PASSING. As used in a contract for the construction of a subway, requiring the by-passing of all gas pipes whose service cannot be temporarily dispensed with, "by-passing" means the temporary cutting out of the gas mains under the street and laying of substituted temporary overhead gas pipes until all danger in using the original pipes is passed. Degnon Contracting Co. v. City of New York, 196 N. Y. S. 63, 64, 202 App. Div. 390.

BY REASON OF. Because of. Freeman v. Bennett (Tex. Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 238, 241. By means, acts, or instrumentality of. State v. Kaufman, 50 S. D. 645, 211 N. W. 691, 692.

BY THE BY (also Bye). Incidentally; without new process. A term used in former English practice to denote the method of filing a declaration against a defendant who was already in the custody of the court at the suit of a different plaintiff or of the same plaintiff in another cause. It is no longer allowed; Archbold, New Pr. 293.

BY VIRTUE OF. Because of, through, or in pursuance of. State ex rel. and to Use of Jasper County v. Gass, 317 Mo. 744, 296 S. W. 431, 432. Money received by an officer by virtue of his office is money which that officer received under the law of his office, and not in violation thereof. Hollingsworth v. State, 73 Fla. 44, 75 So. 612, 614.

BYE-BIL-WUFFA. In Hindu law. A deed of mortgage or conditional sale.

BYRLAWS. See Burlaws.

BYROAD. The statute law of New Jersey recognizes three different kinds of roads: A public road, a private road, and a byroad. A byroad is a road used by the inhabitants, and recognized by statute, but not laid out. Such roads are often called "driftways." They are roads of necessity in newly-settled countries. Van Blarcom v. Frike, 29 N. J. Law, 516. See, also, Stevens v. Allen, 29 N. J. Law, 68.

An obscure or neighborhood road in its earlier existence, not used to any great extent by the public, yet so far a public road that the public have of right free access to it at all times. Wood v. Hurd, 34 N. J. Law, 89.

BYSTANDER. One who stands near; a chance looker-on; hence one who has no concern with the business being transacted. Baker v. State, 187 S. W. 949, 952, 79 Tex. Cr. R. 510.

Under statutes relating to summoning of bystanders to complete jury panel, "bystanders" may be held to mean qualified talesmen summoned by sheriff from county at large. Commonwealth v. Sacco, 151 N. E. 839, 847, 255 Mass. 369. The term means qualified electors, not necessarily persons present in court. Bennett v. State, 257 S. W. 372, 373, 161 Ark. 496; Rogers v. State, 201 S. W. 845, 846, 133 Ark. 85.

Under statutes authorizing "bystanders" to certify bill of exceptions, parties to the suit and their attorneys, Walker v. State, 227 S. W. 308, 312, 88 Tex. Cr. R. 389; and also witnesses in the case, McConnell v. McCord, 281 S. W. 384, 170 Ark. 839, as well as persons not present at the trial, are not bystanders, Buck v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 185 S. W. 208, 211, 267 Mo. 644. Though jurors are not "bystanders" in the ordinary meaning of that term, they can sign a bystanders' bill of exceptions to acts and comments by the court and the argument of attorneys thereon. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Tex. Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 282, 291.

This consists in making an incision into the abdomen and uterus of the mother and withdrawing the fœtus thereby. If this operation be performed after the mother's death, the husband cannot be tenant by the curtesy; since his right begins from the birth of the issue, and is consummated by the death of the wife; but, if mother and child are saved, then the husband would be entitled after her death. Wharton.

CALENDAR. The established order of the division of time into years, months, weeks, and days; or a systematized enumeration of such arrangement; an almanac. Rives v. Guthrie, 46 N. C. 86. Julius Cæsar ordained that the Roman year should consist of 365 days, except every fourth year, which should contain 366. This period of time exceeds the solar year by eleven minutes or thereabouts, which amounts to the error of a day in about 131 years. In 1582 the error amounted to eleven days or more, which was corrected by Pope Gregory. Out of this correction grew the distinction between Old and New Style. The Gregorian or New Style was introduced into England in 1752, the 2d of September (O. S.) of that year being reckoned as the 14th of September (N. S.).

—Calendar days. So many days reckoned according to the course of the calendar. For example, a note dated January 1 and payable "thirty calendar days after date," without grace, is payable on the 31st of January, though if expressed to be payable simply "thirty days after date," it would be payable February 1.

A calendar day contains 24 hours; and as used in a contract for hiring of a derrick boat for a rental based on calendar days, "calendar days" may be synonymous with "working days," which mean, in maritime affairs, running or calendar days on which the law permits work to be done, excluding Sundays and legal holidays, but not stormy days. Sherwood v. American Sugar Refining Co. (C. C. A.) 8 F.(2d) 586, 588.

—Calendar month. One of the months of the year as enumerated in the calendar,—January, February, March, etc.,—without reference to the number of days it may contain; as distinguished from a lunar month, of twenty-eight days, or a month for business purposes, which may contain thirty, at whatever part of the year it occurs. Daley v. Anderson, 7 Wyo. 1, 48 P. 840, 75 Am. St. Rep. 870; Migotti v. Colvil, 4 C. P. Div. 233; In re Parker's Estate, 14 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 566.

—Calendar year. The period from January 1 to December 31 next thereafter, inclusive. Byrne v. Bearden, 27 Ga. App. 149, 107 S. E. 782, 783. Ordinarily and in common acceptance calendar year means 365 days except leap year, and is composed of 12 months varying in length according to the common or Gregorian calendar. Shaffner v. Lipinsky, 194 N. C. 1, 138 S. E. 418, 419; U. S. v. Carroll Chain Co. (D. C.) 8 F.(2d) 529, 530.

It is sometimes called the "trial list," or "docket."

—Calendar of prisoners. In English practice. A list kept by the sheriffs containing the names of all the prisoners in their custody, with the several judgments against each in the margin. Staundef. P. C. 182; 4 Bl. Comm. 403.

—Special calendar. A calendar or list of causes, containing those set down specially for hearing, trial, or argument.

CALENDS. Among the Romans the first day of every month, being spoken of by itself, or the very day of the new moon, which usually happen together. And if pridie, the day before, be added to it, then it is the last day of the foregoing month, as pridie calend. Septemb. is the last day of August. If any number be placed with it, it signifies that day in the former month which comes so much before the month named, as the tenth calends of October is the 20th day of September; for if one reckons backwards, beginning at October, that 20th day of September makes the 10th day before October. In March, May, July, and October, the calends begin at the sixteenth day, but in other months at the fourteenth; which calends must ever bear the name of the month following, and be numbered backwards from the first day of the said following months. Jacob. See Rives v. Guthrie, 46 N. C. 87.

CALENDS, GREEK. A metaphorical expression for a time never likely to arrive, inasmuch as the Greeks had no calends.

CALF. As used in an exemption statute, "calf" should be construed to include an animal sucking a cow that is being milked, even though the animal be a yearling, that is, one over a year old. Kiggins v. Henne & Meyer Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 494, 496.

W. 10, 13.

In Corporation Law

A demand made by the directors of a stock company upon the persons who have subscribed for shares, requiring a certain portion or installment of the amount subscribed to be paid in. The word, in this sense, is synonymous with "installment" or "assessment," and is said to be capable of three meanings: (1) The resolution of the directors to levy the assessment; (2) its notification to the persons liable to pay; (3) the time when it becomes payable. Railway Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Exch. 543; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205, 25 L. Ed. 885; Railroad Co. v. Spreckles, 65 Cal. 193, 3 P. 661, 802; Stewart v. Pub. Co., 1 Wash. St. 521, 20 P. 605.

Although the terms "call" and "assessment" are often used synonymously, the latter term applies with peculiar aptness to contributions above the par value of stock or the subscription liability of the stockholders. Porter v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 36 N. D. 199, 161 N. W. 1012, 1014; Seyberth v. American Commander Min. & Mill. Co., 42 Idaho, 392, 245 P. 295, 392.

CALL, v. To summon or demand by name; to demand the presence and participation of a number of persons by calling aloud their names, either in a pre-arranged and systematic order or in a succession determined by chance.

—Call of the house. A call of the names of all the members of a legislative body, made by the clerk in pursuance of a resolution requiring the attendance of members. The names of absentees being thus ascertained, they are imperatively summoned (and, if necessary, compelled) to attend the session.

—Calling a summons. In Scotch practice. See this described in Bell, Dict.

—Calling an election. This expression is commonly construed as including, or as being synonymous with, the giving of notice of the election. State v. Hall, 73 Or. 231, 144 P. 475, 478; People v. Gough, 260 Ill. 542, 103 N. E. 685, 686.

—Calling the docket. The public calling of the docket or list of causes at the commencement of a term of court, for the purpose of disposing of the same with regard to setting a time for trial or entering orders of continuance, default, nonsuit, etc. Blanchard v. Ferdinand, 132 Mass. 391.

—Calling the jury. Successively drawing out of a box into which they have been previously put the names of the jurors on the panels annexed to the nisi prius record, and calling them over in the order in which they are so drawn. The twelve persons whose names are first called, and who appear, are sworn as the jury, unless some just cause of challenge or excuse, with respect to any of them, shall be brought forward.

—Calling the plaintiff. In practice. A formal method of causing a nonsuit to be entered. When a plaintiff or his counsel, seeing that sufficient evidence has not been given to maintain the issue, withdraws, the crier is ordered to call or demand the plaintiff, and if neither he, nor any person for him appear, he is nonsuited, the jurors are discharged without giving a verdict, the action is at an end, and the defendant recovers his costs. The phrase "let the plaintiff be called," which occurs in some of the earlier state reports, is to be explained by reference to this practice. See 3 Bla. Comm. 376; 2 C. & P. 403; *Porter v. Such intervention, Calvo says, is not in accordance with the practice of European States towards one another, and is contrary to the principle of state sovereignty. 3 Calvo §§ 1280, 1297. Inst. 78; Dugdale Orig. Jur. fol. 34; and generally Selden, Discourses; Inderwick, King's Peace; 3 Steph. Com. 346; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 172; 1 Stubbs, Const. Hist. 351; Campbell, Lives of the Lord Chancellors, vol. 1; Holdsw. Hist. E. L.; Pollock, Expans. of C. L.

CANCELLATION. The act of crossing out a writing. Plaut v. Shirley, 255 S. W. 273, 274, 200 Ky. 619; Mercurio v. Board of Cancellers and Registration of City of Providence, 104 A. 886, 887, 42 R. I. 17; In re Parsons' Will, 195 N. Y. S. 742, 745, 119 Misc. 26; Dowling v. Gilliland, 122 N. E. 70, 286 Ill. 530, 3 A. L. R. 829. The manual operation of tearing or destroying a written instrument; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 409.

The original and proper meaning of the word is the defacement of a writing by drawing lines across it in the form of crossbars or lattice work; but the same legal result may be accomplished by drawing lines through any essential part, erasing the signature, writing the word "canceled" on the face of the instrument, tearing off seals, or any similar act which puts the instrument in a condition where its invalidity appears on its face. In re Akers' Will, 74 App. Div. 461, 77 N. Y. Supp. 643; Baldwin v. Howell, 45 N. J. Eq. 519, 15 Atl. 236; In re Alger's Will, 38 Misc. 143, 77 N. Y. Supp. 166; Evans' Appeal, 58 Pa. 244; Glass v. Scott, 14 Colo. App. 377, 60 Pac. 186; In re Olmsted's Estate, 122 Cal. 224, 54 Pac. 745; Doe v. Perkes, 3 Barn. & A. 492. A revenue stamp is canceled by writing on its face the initials of the person using or affixing it. Spear v. Alexander, 42 Ala. 575.

There is also a secondary or derivative meaning of the word, in which it signifies annulment or abrogation by the act or agreement of parties concerned, though without physical defacement. Golden v. Fowler, 26 Ga. 464; Winton v. Spring, 18 Cal. 455; Beha v. Breger, 223 N. Y. S. 726, 731, 130 Misc. 235.

Synonyms

Cancellation is properly distinguished from obliteration in this, that the former is a crossing out, while the latter is a blotting out; the former leaves the words still legible, while the latter renders them illegible. Townshend v. Howard, 86 Me. 285, 29 Atl. 1077. "Spoliation" is the erasure or alteration of a writing by a stranger, and may amount to a cancellation if of such a nature as to invalidate it on its face; but defacement of an instrument is not properly called "spoliation" if performed by one having control of the instrument as its maker or one duly authorized to destroy it. "Revocation" is an act of the mind, of which cancellation may be a physical manifestation; but cancellation does not revoke unless done with that intention. Dan v. Brown, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 490, 15 Am. Dec. 395; In re Woods' Will (Sur.) 11 N. Y. Supp. 157.

CANCELLATURA. In old English law. A canceling. Bract. 398b.

CANDIDATE. A person who offers himself, or is presented by others, to be elected to an office. Derived from the Latin candidus, (white,) because in Rome it was the custom for those who sought office to clothe themselves in white garments.

One who seeks or aspires to some office or privilege, or who offers himself for the same. A man is a candidate for an office when he is seeking such office; it is not necessary that he should have been nominated. Leonard v. Com., 112 Pa. 624, 4 Atl. 224. See State v. Hirsch, 125 Ind. 207, 24 N. E. 1062, 9 L. R. A. 170; In re Deitz, 150 N. Y. S. 43, 47, 87

Moreover, under a presidential primary law, a person receiving the approval of the required number of petitioners may be deemed a candidate even contrary to his wishes. McCamant v. CANON.

A Law, Rule, etc.

A law, rule, or ordinance in general, and of the church in particular. An ecclesiastical law or statute. A rule of doctrine or discipline. The term is generally applied to designate the ordinances of councils and decrees of popes.

—Canon law. A body of ecclesiastical jurisprudence which, in countries where the Roman Catholic church is established, is composed of maxims and rules drawn from patristic sources, ordinances, and decrees of general councils, and the decretals and bulls of the popes. In England, according to Blackstone, there is a kind of national canon law, composed of legatine and provincial constitutions enacted in England prior to the reformation, and adapted to the exigencies of the English church and kingdom. 1 Bl. Comm. 82. The canon law consists partly of certain rules taken out of the Scripture, partly of the writings of the ancient fathers of the church, partly of the ordinances of general and provincial councils, and partly of the decrees of the popes in former ages; and it is contained in two principal parts, —the decrees and the decretals. The decrees are ecclesiastical constitutions made by the popes and cardinals. The decretals are canonical epistles written by the pope, or by the pope and cardinals, at the suit of one or more persons, for the ordering and determining of some matter of controversy, and have the authority of a law. As the decrees set out the origin of the canon law, and the rights, dignities, and decrees of ecclesiastical persons, with their manner of election, ordination, etc., so the decretals contain the law to be used in the ecclesiastical courts. Jacob. The canon law forms no part of the law of England, unless it has been brought into use and acted on there; 11 Q. B. 649. See generally Encycl. Br., sub voce, Canon Law; Maitland, Canon Law; Jenks' Teutonic Law; 1 Sel. Essays on Anglo-Amer. Leg. Hist. 46; Ayliffe, Par. Jur. Can. Ang.; Preface to Burn, Eccl. Law, Tyrwhitt ed. 22; Hale, Civ. A System or Aggregation of Correlated Rules

The Archbishop of Canterbury has also, by 25 Hen. VIII. c. 21, the power of granting dispensations in any case not contrary to the holy scriptures and the law of God, where the pope used formerly to grant them, which is the foundation of his granting special licenses to marry at any place or time; to hold two livings, (which must be confirmed under the great seal,) and the like; and on this also is founded the right he exercises of conferring degrees in prejudice of the two universities. CAPIAS. Lat. "That you take." The general name for several species of writs, the common characteristic of which is that they require the officer to take the body of the defendant into custody; they are writs of attachment or arrest.

In English Practice

A capias is the process on an indictment when the person charged is not in custody, and in cases not otherwise provided for by statute. 4 Steph. Comm. 383.

In General

—Capias ad audiendum judicium. A writ issued, in a case of misdemeanor, after the defendant has appeared and is found guilty, to bring him to hear judgment if he is not present when called. 4 Bl. Comm. 368.

—Capias ad computandum. In the action of account render, after judgment of quod computet; if the defendant refuses to appear personally before the auditors and make his account, a writ by this name may issue to compel him. The writ is now disused. See Thesaurus Brevium, 38; Coke, Entries, 46, 47, Rastell, Entries, 14 b. 15.

—Capias ad respondendum. A judicial writ, (usually simply termed a “capias,”) by which actions at law were frequently commenced; and which commands the sheriff to take the defendant, and him safely keep, so that he may have his body before the court on a certain day, to answer the plaintiff in the action. 3 Bl. Comm. 282; 1 Tidd, Pr. 128. The name of this writ is commonly abbreviated to ca. resp.

—Capias ad satisfaciendum. A writ of execution, (usually termed, for brevity, a “ca. sa.,”) which a party may issue after having recovered judgment against another in certain actions at law. It commands the sheriff to take the party named, and keep him safely, so that he may have his body before the court on a certain day, to satisfy the party by whom it is issued, the damages or debt and damages recovered by the judgment. Its effect is to deprive the party taken of his liberty until he makes the satisfaction awarded. 3 Bl. Comm. 414, 415; 2 Tidd, Pr. 993, 1025; Litt. § 504; Co. Litt. 289a; Strong v. Linn, 5 N. J. Law, 803. As a rule at common law it lay in all cases where a capias ad respondendum lay as a part of the mesne process. It was a very common form of execution; but its efficiency has been destroyed by statutes facilitating the discharge of the debtor, in some states, and by statutes prohibiting its issue, in others, except in specified cases.

—Capias extendi facias. A writ of execution issuable in England against a debtor to the crown, which commands the sheriff to “take” or arrest the body, and “cause to be extended” the lands and goods of the debtor. Man. Exch. Pr. 5.

—Capias in withernam. A writ, in the nature of a reprisal, which lies for one whose goods or cattle, taken under a distress, are removed from the county, so that they cannot be replevied, commanding the sheriff to seize other goods or cattle of the distrainer of equal value.

—Capias pro fine. (That you take for the fine or in mercy.) Formerly, if the verdict was for the defendant, the plaintiff was adjudged to be amerced for his false claim; but, if the verdict was for the plaintiff, then in all actions vi et armis, or where the defendant, in his pleading, had falsely denied his own deed, the judgment contained an award of a capiatur pro fine; and in all other cases the defendant was adjudged to be amerced. The insertion of the misericordia or of the capiatur in the judgment is now unnecessary. Wharton; 8 Coke, 60; 11 Coke, 43; Co. Litt. 131; 3 Bl. Comm. 398; 5 Mod. 285.

—Capias utlagatum. (You take the outlaw.) In English practice. A writ which lies against a person who has been outlawed in an action, by which the sheriff is commanded to take him, and keep him in custody until the day of the return, and then present him to the court, there to be dealt with for his contempt. Reg. Orig. 138b; 3 Bl. Comm. 284.

CAPIATUR PRO FINE. (Let him be taken for the fine.) In English practice. A clause inserted at the end of old judgment records in actions of debt, where the defendant denied his deed, and it was found against him upon his false plea, and the jury were troubled with the trial of it. Cro. Jac. 64. See Capias pro Fine.

CAPITA. Heads, and, figuratively, entire bodies, whether of persons or animals. Spelman.

Persons individually considered, without relation to others, (polls;) as distinguished from stirpes or stocks of descent. The term in this sense, making part of the common phrases, in capita, per capita, is derived from the civil law. Inst. 3, 1, 6.

CAPITA, PER. By heads; by the poll; as individuals. In the distribution of an intestate's personalty, the persons legally entitled to take are said to take per capita, that is, equal shares, when they claim, each in his own right, as in equal degree of kindred; in contradistinction to claiming by right of representation, or per stirpes.

CAPITAL, n. In political economy, that portion of the produce of industry existing in a country, which may be made directly available, either for the support of human existence, or the facilitating of production; but, in commerce, and as applied to individuals, it is understood to mean the sum of money which a merchant, banker, or trader adventures in any undertaking, or which he contributes to the common stock of a partnership. Also the fund of a trading company or corporation, in which sense the word “stock” is often added to it. Pearce v. Augusta, 37 Ga. 599; People v. Feitner, 56 App. Div. 280, 67 N. Y. S. 893; Webb v. Armistead (C. C.) 26 Fed. 70.

The actual estate, whether in money or property, owned by an individual or corporation; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 192; it is the fund upon which it transacts its business, which would be liable to its creditors, and in case of insolvency pass to a receiver; International Life Assur. Soc. of London v. Com'rs of Taxes, 28 Barb. (N. Y.)

318; Trefry v. Putnam, 116 N. E. 904, 907, 227 Mass. 522, L. R. A. 1917F, 806; In re Desnoyers Shoe Co. (C. C. A.) 224 F. 372, 377; *State v. With reference to a corporation, "capital" designates that portion of the assets, regardless of their source, which is utilized for the conduct of the corporate business and for the purposes of deriving therefrom the gains and profits. Turner v. Cattleman's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Tex. Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831, 832; In re Wells' Estate, 144 N. W. 174, 178, 156 Wis. 294. On the other hand, the "capital stock" or "authorized capital stock" is the sum fixed by the charter as the amount to be paid in by the stockholders for the prosecution of the business of the corporation and for the benefit of its creditors. Armstrong v. Emmerson, 132 N. E. 768, 770, 300 Ill. 54, 18 A. L. R. 603. The "capital stock" is the amount in money or property subscribed, paid in, or secured to be paid in. American Refining Co. v. Old Colony Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 299 F. 523, 528; Bivens v. Hull, 145 P. 694, 695, 58 Colo. 338. See Capital Stock.

When used with respect to the property of a corporation or association, the term has a settled meaning. It applies only to the property or means contributed by the stockholders as the fund or basis for the business or enterprise for which the corporation or association was formed. As to them the term does not embrace temporary loans, though the moneys borrowed be directly appropriated in their business or undertakings. And, when used with respect to the property of individuals in any particular business, the term has substantially the same import; it does not embrace temporary loans made in the regular course of business. Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. 286, 22 L. Ed. 651. But see Bridgewater Mfg. Co. v. Funkhouser, 115 Va. 476, 79 S. E. 1074, 1075.

Both in popular and legal parlance income is distinguished from "capital" or principal. Capital is the source of income. Income is the fruit of capital. Carter v. Rector, 88 Okl. 12, 210 P. 1025, 1037.

The principal sum of a fund of money; money invested at interest.

Also the political and governmental metropolis of a state or country; the seat of government; the place where the legislative department holds its sessions, and where the chief offices of the executive are located.

Capital stock, as employed in acts of incorporation, is never used to indicate the value of the property of the company. It is very generally, if not universally, used to designate the amount of capital prescribed to be contributed at the outset by the stockholders, for the purposes of the corporation. The value of the corporate assets may be greatly increased by surplus profits, or be diminished by losses, but the amount of the capital stock remains the same. The funds of the company may fluctuate; its capital stock remains invariable, unless changed by legislative authority. Canfield v. Fire Ass'n, 23 N. J. Law, 195; In re Wells' Estate, 144 N. W. 174, 177, 156 Wis. 294.

"The 'usages of the Franks' begin in what are known in international law as 'the capitulations,' granting rights of extraterritoriality to Christians residing or traveling in Mohammedan countries. * * * By these * * * capitulations a usage was established that Franks [a generic name for all participants in such privileges], being in Turkey, whether domiciled or temporarily, should be under the jurisdiction, civil and criminal, of their respective ministers and consuls." *Dalmease v. The governor or controlling officer of a vessel in the merchant service is usually styled "captain" by the inferior officers and seamen, but in maritime business and admiralty law is perhaps more commonly designated as "master." In foreign jurisprudence his title is often that of "patron."

In the United States army (and the militia) the captain is the commander of a company of soldiers, one of the divisions of a regiment. The term is also used to designate the commander of a squad of municipal police.

The "captain of the watch" on a vessel is a kind of foreman or overseer, who, under the supervision of the mate, has charge of one of the two watches into which the crew is divided for the convenience of work. He calls them out and in, and directs them where to store freight, which packages to move, when to go or come ashore, and generally directs their work, and is an "officer" of the vessel within the meaning of statutes regulating the conduct of officers to the seamen. *U. That part of a legal instrument, as a commission, indictment, etc., which shows where, when, and by what authority it is taken, found, or executed. State v. Sutton, 5 N. C. 281; U. S. v. Beebe, 2 Dak. 292, 11 N. W. 505; State v. Jones, 9 N. J. Law, 365, 17 Am. Dec. 483.

When used with reference to an indictment, caption signifies the style or preamble or commencement of the indictment; when used with reference to a commission, it signifies the certificate to which the commissioners' names are subscribed, declaring when and where it was executed. Brown. The caption is not a part of the indictment, but is the formal history of its finding, and is to be distinguished from the introductory portion. Harrington v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 267 F. 97, 100. The caption of an indictment is that entry of record showing when and where court is held, who presided as judge, complete venire and indorsements, and who were summoned and sworn as grand jurors. Williams v. State, 20 Ala. App. 26, 100 So. 573, 574.

The caption of a pleading, deposition, or other paper connected with a case in court, is the heading or introductory clause which shows the names of the parties, name of the court, number of the case on the docket or calendar, etc. Quoted with approval in St. Louis Lightning Rod Co. v. Johnson, 18 Ga. App. 190, 89 S. E. 169, 170. The terms "title" and "caption" are synonymous. Id. The caption of depositions should state the title of the cause, the names of the parties, and at whose instance the depositions are taken; Knight v. Nichols, 34 Me. 208. See Waskern v. Diamond, 1 Hemp. 701, Fed. Cas. No. 17,248. Generally, the title or caption is not part of the pleading, unless expressly made so by reference in the body thereof. Jackson v. Ashton, 8 Pet. 148, 8 L. Ed. 898. For some decisions as to the forms and requisites of captions, see State v. Sutton, 5 N. C. 281; State v. Creight, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 169, 2 Am. Dec. 656; Mitchell v. State, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 514; State v. Brickell, 8 N. C. 354; Kirk v. State, 6 Mo. 469; Duncan v. People, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 456; Beauchamp v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 299; Thomas v. State, 5 How. (Miss.) 20.

Capture, in technical language, is a taking by military power; a seizure is a taking by civil authority. U. S. v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 344, Fed. Cas. No. 14,473.

In some cases, this is a mode of acquiring property. Thus every one may, as a general rule, on his own land, or on the sea, capture any wild animal, and acquire a qualified ownership in it by confining it, or absolute ownership by killing it. 2 Steph. Comm. 79.

CARE. Attention, oversight, management. Seaman v. State, 106 Ohio St. 177, 140 N. E. 103, 111. See Ryan v. Sawyer, 195 Ala. 69, 70 So. 652; Stafford v. Stovall, 109 Okl. 234, 235 P. 238, 239.

As a legal term, this word means diligence, prudence, discretion, attentiveness, watchfulness, vigilance. It is the opposite of negligence or carelessness. See Raymond v. Portland R. Co., 100 Me. 529, 62 A. 602, 605, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 94.

There are three degrees of care which are frequently recognized, corresponding (inversely) to the three degrees of negligence, viz.: slight care, ordinary care, and great care.

Slight care is such as persons of ordinary prudence usually exercise about their own affairs of slight importance. Rev. Codes N. D. 1899, § 5109 (Comp. Laws 1913, § 7281); Rev. St. Okl. 1903, § 2782 (St. 1931, § 64). Or it is that degree of care which a person exercises about his own concerns, though he may be a person of less than common prudence or of careless and inattentive disposition. Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 442, 57 Am. Dec. 534; Bank v. Guilmartin, 93 Ga. 503, 21 S. E. 55, 44 Am. St. Rep. 182.

"The exact boundaries between the several degrees of care, and their correlative degrees of carelessness, or negligence, are not always clearly defined or easily pointed out. We think, however, that by 'ordinary care' is meant 'that degree of care which may reasonably be expected from a person in the party's situation,' that is, 'reasonable care'; and that 'gross negligence' imports not a malicious intention or design to produce a particular injury, but a thoughtless disregard of consequences; the absence, rather than the actual exercise, of volition with reference to results." Neal v. Gillett (1855), 23 Conn. 443.

Ordinary care is that degree of care which persons of ordinary care and prudence are accustomed to use and employ, under the same or similar circumstances, in order to conduct the enterprise in which they are engaged to a safe and successful termination having due regard to the rights of others and the objects to be accomplished. Gunn v. Railroad Co., 36 W. Va. 165, 14 S. E. 465, 32 Am. St. Rep. 842; Sullivan v. Scripture, 3 Allen (Mass.)

566; Osborn v. Woodford, 31 Kan. 290, 1 P. 543; Railroad Co. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 570; Railroad Co. v. McCoy, 81 Ky. 403; Railroad Co. v. Howard, 79 Ga. 44, 3 S. E. 426; Paden v. Van Blarcom, 100 Mo. App. 185, 74 S. W. 124; Liston v. Reynolds, 223 P. 507, 509, 69 Mont. 480; Pen-American Petroleum Transp. Co. v. Robins Dry Dock & Repair Co. (C. C. City of Rome*, 141 Ga. 140, 80 S. E. 655, 656; Pauls Valley Compress & Storage Co. v. Harris, 62 Okl. 103, 162 P. 216, 218; Fisher v. Cedar Rapids & M. C. Ry. Co., 177 Iowa, 406, 157 N. W. 860, 866; John B. Carter Co. v. Cox, 159 Ky. 711, 169 S. W. 472, 473; Louviere v. Southwestern Traction & Power Co., 142 La. 590, 77 So. 293, 294, L. R. A. 1918C, 169; De Pow v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 143 N. W. 654, 656, 154 Wis. 610; New York, S. & W. R. Co. v. Thierer (C. C. A.) 221 F. 571, 574. Sometimes said to be synonymous with reasonable or due care. Monk v. Bangor Power Co., 92 A. 617, 112 Me. 492; Midland Valley R. Co. v. Bell (C. C. A.) 242 F. 803, 808; Roberts v. Chicago City Ry. Co., 262 Ill. 228, 104 N. E. 708, 710; Wiley v. Rutland R. Co., 86 Vt. 504, 86 A. 808, 811; Richards v. Palace Laundry Co., 55 Utah, 409, 186 P. 439, 443.

Reasonable care is such a degree of care, precaution, or diligence as may fairly and properly be expected or required, having regard to the nature of the action, or of the subject-matter, and the circumstances surrounding the transaction. "Reasonable care and skill" is a relative phrase, and, in its application as a rule or measure of duty, will vary in its requirements, according to the circumstances under which the care and skill are to be exerted. See Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.) 646; Cunningham v. Hall, 4 Allen (Mass.) 276; Dexter v. McCready, 54 Conn. 171, 5 Atl. 855; Appel v. Eaton & Price Co., 97 Mo. App. 428, 71 S. W. 741; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Noble, 142 Ill. 578, 32 N. E. 684. "Reasonable care" means, not extraordinary care, but such care as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under the conditions existing at the time he is called upon to act. Pesin v. Jugovich, 88 A. 1101, 1102, 85 N. J. Law, 256; Midland Valley R. Co. v. Bell (C. C. A.) 242 F. 803, 808; Spindler v. American Exp. Co. (Mo. Sup.) 232 S. W. 690, 691; Burroughs v. Postal Telegraph Cable Co., 199 Mich. 672, 165 N. W. 707, 710; Loverage v. Carmichael, 204 N. W. 921, 922, 164 Minn. 76. Substantially synonymous with ordinary or due care. Kucera v. Grigsby, 24 Ohio App. 457, 156 N. E. 249, 250; Reed v. L. Hammel Dry Goods Co., 215 Ala. 494, 111 So. 237, 239; Union Traction Co. of Indiana v. Berry, 188 Ind. 514, 121 N. E. 655, 657, 32 A. L. R. 1171; Monk v. Bangor Power Co., 112 Me. 492, 92 A. 617; Wiley v. Rutland R. Co., 86 Vt. 504, 86 A. 808, 811.

Great care is such as persons of ordinary prudence usually exercise about affairs of their own which are of great importance; or it is that degree of care usually bestowed upon the matter in hand by the most competent, prudent, and careful persons having to do with the particular subject. Railway Co. v. Rollins, 5 Kan. 180; Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 442, 57 Am. Dec. 534; Railway Co. v. Smith, 87 Tex. 348, 28 S. W. 520; Telegraph Co. v. Cook, 61 F. 628, 9 C. C. A. 680.

A high degree of care is not the legal equivalent of reasonable care. Gallaty v. Central R. of New Jersey, 86 N. J. Law, 416, 92 A. 279, 280. The "high degree of care," which it is the duty of a carrier to exercise toward its passengers, is that degree of care which a very cautious, careful, and prudent person would exercise under the same or similar circumstances, and the failure to exercise which, where required by law to do so, is negligence. Bryning v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 167 S. W. 826, 827. "High degree of care" denotes no more than a degree of care commensurate with the risk of danger. New Jersey Fidelity & Plate Glass Ins. Co. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 92 N. J. Law, 467, 105 A. 206, 207.

The words "highest degree of care" and "utmost degree of care" have substantially the same meaning. Brogan v. Union Traction Co., 76 W. Va. 698, 86 S. E. 753, 756. The term "highest degree of care" is a relative term, and its use, in an instruction, with respect to the degree of care required to be exercised in the operation of a car by a carrier of passengers was not erroneous, where it was not followed by the words "known to human skill and foresight," as it did not require a superlative degree of care, or that extraordinary skill that is possible without regard to the nature of the duties to be performed, but only required the care and skill exacted of persons engaged in the same or similar business as such carrier. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Cockrell, 10 Ala. App. 578, 65 So. 704. It means the highest degree required by law in any case where human safety is at stake, and the highest degree known to the usage and practice of very careful, skillful, and diligent persons engaged in the same business by similar means or agencies, but does not mean that every possible or conceivable act of care or precaution which might increase or even assure the safety of a passenger must be taken, only such as are reasonably practicable under the circumstances, viz., reasonably consistent with the practical operation of the carrier's business, being required. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co. v. Barrett, 179 Ala. 274, 60 So. 262, 264. The phrase "highest degree of care," in a charge defining the duty of a carrier to a passenger in the running of a car, is proper; that being only the reasonable care demanded by circumstances. Donahoe v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 214 Mass. 70, 100 N. E. 1033, 1034.

This division into three degrees of care, however, does not command universal assent. In Raymond v. Portland R. Co., 62 A. 602, 605, 100 Me. 529, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 94, the court say: "We are inclined to agree with the great weight of judicial opinion that the attempt to divide negligence, or its opposite due care, into degrees, will often lead to confusion and uncertainty." And in a later case, the same court describes the distinction in degrees of care, such as "slight," "ordinary," or "great," as unscientific and impracticable, as the law furnishes no definition of these terms which can be applied in practice. Pomroy v. Bangor & Aroostook R. Co., 102 Me. 497, 67 A. 561, 562.

CARELESS. Synonymous with "negligent," the latter being probably the better word in pleadings. Delmore v. Kansas City Hardwood Flooring Co., 90 Kan. 29, 133 P. 151, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1220.

CARELESSLY. Without care. Seago v. Paul Jones Realty Co., 185 Mo. App. 292, 170 S. W. 372, 373. Negligently; denoting the absence of ordinary care. Jones v. Commonwealth, 213 Ky. 356, 281 S. W. 164, 167.

The loading of a ship or other vessel, the bulk of which is to be ascertained from the capacity of the ship or vessel. The word embraces all that the vessel is capable of carrying. Flanagan v. Demarest, 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 173. While "cargo" is primarily the load of the ship, it may have a varying meaning. Pennsylvania Sugar Co. v. Czarnikow-Rionda Co. (C. C. A.) 245 F. 913, 915.

The term may be applied in such a sense as to include passengers, as well as freight, but in a technical sense it designates goods only. Wolcott v. Eagle Ins. Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 429. Thus, we say, A cargo of emigrants. See 7 M. & G. 729, 744; Davison v. Von Lingen, 113 U. S. 49, 5 Sup. Ct. 346, 28 L. Ed. 885.

An act of debauchery of the female sexual organs by those of the male which does not amount to penetration;—the offense commonly called statutory rape consists of carnal abuse. State v. Huggins, 84 N. J. Law, 254, 87 A. 630, 633. An injury to the genital organs in an attempt at carnal knowledge, falling short of actual penetration. Snyder v. State, 92 Ohio St. 167, 110 N. There is "carnal knowledge" if there is the slightest penetration of the sexual organ of the female by the sexual organ of the male. It is not necessary that the vagina be entered or that the hymen be ruptured; the entering of the vulva or labia is sufficient. State v. Huggins, 84 N. J. Law, 254, 87 A. 630, 633.

Some authorities suggest that the words "carnally knew" are included in the term "rapuit" and are therefore unnecessary; 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, § 56; 2 Stark. Cr. Pl. 431, n. (e); at least in states in which the statutes do not designate the crime by the words "did ravish and carnally know"; 1 Hale, P. C. 628, 632; 3 Russell, Cr. (6th ed.) 230. See *Noble v. Common and Private Carriers

Carriers are either common or private. Private carriers are persons who undertake for the transportation in a particular instance only, not making it their vocation, nor holding themselves out to the public as ready to act for all who desire their services. Allen v. Sackrider, 37 N. Y. 341. Private carriers are those who, without being engaged in such business as a public employment, undertake to deliver goods or passengers in a particular case for hire or reward. Rathbun v. Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation, 299 Ill. 562, 132 N. E. 754, 755, 19 A. L. R. 140; Smitherman & McDonald v. Mansfield Hardwood Lumber Co. (D. C.) 6 F.(2d) 29, 31. To bring a person within the description of a common carrier, he must exercise it as a public employment; he must undertake to carry goods for persons generally; and he must hold himself out as ready to transport goods for hire, as a business, not as a casual occupation, pro hac vice. Alexander v. Greene, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 564; Bell v. Pidgeon (D. C.) 5 Fed. 634; Wyatt v. Irr. Co., 1 Colo. App. 480, 29 P. 906. A common carrier may therefore be defined as one who, by virtue of his calling and as a regular business, undertakes for hire to transport persons or commodities from place to place, offering his services to all such as may choose to employ him and pay his charges. Iron Works v. Hurlbut, 158 N. Y. 34, 52 N. E. 665, 70 Am. St. Rep. 432; Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 53, 11 Am. Dec. 133; Railroad Co. v. Waterbury Button Co., 24 Conn. 479; *Fuller v. Common Carriers of Passengers

Such as undertake for hire to carry all persons indifferently who may apply for passage, so long as there is room, and there is no legal excuse for refusing. Vinton v. R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 304, 87 Am. Dec. 714; Hollister v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 239, 32 Am. Dec. 455; Bennett v. Dutton, 10 N. H. 486; *Galena & C. U. R. Co. v. Action, Cause, Suit, or Controversy

A general term for an action, cause, suit, or controversy, at law or in equity; a question contested before a court of justice; an aggregate of facts which furnishes occasion for the exercise of the jurisdiction of a court of justice. Quoted with approval in Kelly v. Roetzel, 165 P. 1150, 1153, 64 Okl. 36. See, also, Smith v. Waterbury, 54 Conn. 174, 7 Atl. 17; Kundolf v. Thalheimer, 12 N. Y. 596; Gebhard v. Sattler, 40 Iowa, 156; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 352, 4 L. Ed. 97; Tutun v. U. S., 46 S. Ct. 425, 426, 270 U. S. 568, 70 L. Ed. 738; Zilz v. Wilcox, 190 Mich. 486, 157 N. W. 77, 80. A controversy that is litigated. City of Akron v. Roth, 88 Ohio St. 456, 103 N. E. 465, 467. A cause of action. Strother v. Union Pac. R. Co. (D. C.) 220 F. 731, 732.

The word "case" or "cause" means a judicial proceeding for the determination of a controversy between parties wherein rights are enforced or protected, or wrongs are prevented or redressed. Ex parte Chesser, 93 Fla. 590, 112 So. 87, 90.

—Cases and controversies. This term, as used in the constitution of the United States, embraces claims or contentions of litigants brought before the court for adjudication by regular proceedings established for the protection or enforcement of rights, or the prevention, redress, or punishment of wrongs; and whenever the claim or contention of a party takes such a form that the judicial power is capable of acting upon it, it has become a case or controversy. Interstate Commerce Com'n v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 14 Sup. Ct. 1125, 38 L. Ed. 1047; Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 167, 9 Sup. Ct. 566, 32 L. Ed. 895; In re Railway Com'n (C. C.) 32 Fed. 255; Musk-rat v. U. S., 219 U. S. 346, 31 S. Ct. 250, 55 L. Ed. 246. But these two terms are to be distinguished; for there may be a "separable controversy" within a "case," which may be removed from a state court to a federal court, though the case as a whole is not removable. Snow v. Smith (C. C.) 88 Fed. 658.

Statement of Facts

A statement of the facts involved in a transaction or series of transactions, drawn up in writing in a technical form, for submission to a court or judge for decision or opinion. Under this meaning of the term are included a "case made" for a motion for new trial, a "case reserved" on the trial of a cause, an "agreed case" for decision without trial, etc.

—Case agreed on. A formal written enumeration of the facts in a case, assented to by both parties as correct and complete, and submitted to the court by their agreement, in order that a decision may be rendered without a trial, upon the court's conclusions of law upon the facts as stated.

—Case for motion. In English divorce and probate practice, when a party desires to make a motion, he must file, among other papers, a case for motion, containing an abstract of the proceedings in the suit or action, a statement of the circumstances on which the motion is founded, and the prayer or nature of the decree or order desired. Browne, Div. 251; Browne, Prob. Pr. 295.

—Case-made. A statement of facts in relation to a disputed point of law, agreed to by both parties and submitted to the court without a preceding action. This is found only in the Code states. —Case on appeal. In American practice. Before the argument in the appellate court of a case brought there for review, the appellant's counsel prepares a document or brief, bearing this name, for the information of the court, detailing the testimony and the proceedings below. In English practice. The "case on appeal" is a printed statement prepared by each of the parties to an appeal to the house of lords or the privy council, setting out methodically the facts which make up his case, with appropriate references to the evidence printed in the "appendix." The term also denotes a written statement, prepared and transmitted by an inferior court or judge raising a question of law for the opinion of a superior court.

—Case reserved. A statement in writing of the facts proved on the trial of a cause, drawn up and settled by the attorneys and counsel for the respective parties under the supervision of the judge, for the purpose of having certain points of law, which arose at the trial and could not then be satisfactorily decided, determined upon full argument before the court in danc. This is otherwise called a "special case;" and it is usual for the parties, where the law of the case is doubtful, to agree that the jury shall find a general verdict for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court upon such a case to be made, instead of obtaining from the jury a special verdict. 3 Bl. Comm. 378; 3 Steph. Comm. 621; Steph. Pl. 92, 93; 1 Burrill, Pr. 242, 463.

—Case stated. In practice. An agreement in writing, between a plaintiff and defendant, that the facts in dispute between them are as therein agreed upon and set forth. Diehl v. Ihrie, 3 Whart. with the names of the witnesses, and a detail of the documents which are to support them. A brief. As to the distinction between submission on a case stated and a submission merely on agreed facts, see Frati v. Jannini, 226 Mass. 430, 115 N. E. 746, 747.

Though courts have refrained from defining "casual employee" as such term is used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, the test in the particular case is whether service rendered or work done, rather than contract of hiring, is of casual nature; infrequency of employment or its duration being immaterial. Hygeia Ice & Coal Co. v. Schaeffer, 152 Md. 231, 136 A. 548, 551.

CASUAL EMPLOYMENT. The question whether an employment is "casual," within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, must be determined with principal reference to the scope and purpose of the hiring, rather than with sole regard to the duration and regularity of the service. *State Acc. "Casualty" is a word of quite frequent use; yet it cannot be said that its definition has been very accurately settled by the courts. It has been said that strictly and literally the word "casualty" is limited to injuries which arise solely from accident, without any element of conscious human design or intentional human agency; something not to be foreseen or guarded against; something that happens not in the usual course of events; an accident. Eaton v. Glindeman, 33 Idaho, 389, 195 P. 90, 91.

The civilians use the term "cause," in relation to obligations, in the same sense as the word "consideration" is used in the jurisprudence of England and the United States. It means the motive, the inducement to the agreement,—id quod inducet ad contrahendum. Mouton v. Noble, 1 La. Ann. 192. But see Ames, 3 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Amer. Leg. Hist. 279; Poll. Contr. 74.

Used also in the civil law in the sense of res (a thing). Non porcellum, non agnellum nec alia causa (not a hog, not a lamb, nor other thing). Du Cange.

In Pleading

Reason; motive; matter of excuse or justification. See 8 Co. 67; 11 East 451; 1 Chit. Pl. 585.

In Practice

A suit, litigation, or action. Any question, civil or criminal, contested before a court of justice.

Cause imports a judicial proceeding entire, and is nearly synonymous with lis in Latin, or suit in English. Although allied to the word "case," that word not infrequently has a more limited signification, importing a collection of facts, with the conclusion of law thereon. See Shirts v. Irons, 47 Ind. 445; Blyew v. U. S., 13 Wall. 581, 20 L. Ed. 638; Erwin v. U. S., 37 Fed. 470, 2 L. R. A. 229. But "cause" and "case" are often used as synonymous. Zilz v. Wilcox, 190 Mich. 486, 157 N. W. 77, 80; Ex parte Chesser, 93 Fla. 590, 112 So. 87, 90; Schmalz v. Arnwine, 118 Or. 300, 246 P. 718, 719; Patterson v. People, 23 Colo. App. 479, 130 P. 618, 620; U. S. v. Rockefeller (D. C.) 221 F. 462, 466.

A distinction is sometimes taken between "cause" and "action." Burrill observes that a cause is not, like an action or suit, said to be commenced, nor is an action, like a cause, said to be tried. But, if there is any substantial difference between these terms, it must lie in the fact that "action" refers more peculiarly to the legal procedure of a controversy; "cause" to its merits or the state of facts involved. Thus, we cannot say "the cause should have been replevin." Nor would it be correct to say "the plaintiff pleaded his own action."

As to "Probable Cause" and "Proximate Cause," see those titles. As to challenge "for cause," see "Challenge."

CAUSE-BOOKS. Books kept in the central office of the English supreme court, in which are entered all writs of summons issued in the office. Rules of Court, v 8.

CAUSE LIST. In English practice. A printed roll of actions, to be tried in the order of their entry, with the names of the solicitors for each litigant. Similar to the calendar of causes, or docket, used in American courts.

CAUSE OF ACTION. Matter for which an action may be brought. The ground on which an action may be sustained. A fact, or a state of facts, to which the law, or principle of law, sought to be enforced against a person or thing, applies. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Cities Service Co. (D. C.) 270 F. 994, 995; Savage v. H. C. Burks & Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 270 S. W. 244, 245. An averment of facts sufficient to justify a court in rendering a judgment. Vickers v. Vickers, 45 Nev. 274, 202 P. 31, 32.

Under the code system of pleading, there is but one primary right, one primary duty, and one delict, and these three combined constitute one "cause of action." Williams v. Nelson, 45 Utah, 255, 145 P. 39, 41; Westover v. Hoover, 94 Neb. 596, 143 N. W. 946, 948, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 984; Hoag v. Washington-Oregon Corporation, 75 Or. 588, 147 P. 756, 759; Hurt v. Haering, 190 Cal. 198, 211 P. 228, 229; McLaughlin v. Marlatt, 296 Mo. 656, 246 S. W. 548, 552.

Sometimes used synonymously with right of action or right of recovery. Graham v. Scripture, 26 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 501; Davis v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 271 S. W. 190, 192. In this usage, "cause of action" is said to be the right to bring suit; Spring v. Webb (D. C.) 227 F. 481, 484; Viers v. Webb, 76 Mont. 38, 245 P. 257, 259; or, more accurately perhaps, the right to prosecute an action with effect; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Louis Padula Co., 224 N. Y. 397, 121 N. E. 348, 350; the right to relief in court; Mulligan v. Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Co., 184 N. Y. S. 429, 431, 193 App. Div. 741; the legal liability arising out of the facts on which plaintiff relies; White v. Nemours Trading Corporation (D. C.) 290 F. 250, 252.

A distinction may be taken, however, between "cause of action" and "right of action." The cause of action is based on the substantive law of legal liability, whereas the right of action pertains to the remedy and relief through judicial procedure. Elliott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 35 S. D. 57, 150 N. W. 777, 779. The cause of action is distinct from the "remedy," which is simply the means by which the cause of action is satisfied. Dennison v. Payne (C. C. A.) 293 F. 333, 344; Tonn v. Inner Shoe Tire Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 1078, 1080. And the cause of action may exist, though the remedy does not. Chandler v. Horne, 23 Ohio App. 1, 154 N. E. 748, 750; Talbott v. Hill, 261 F. 244, 49 App. D. C. 96.

Cause of action is not synonymous with chose in action; the latter includes debts, etc., and even stocks. Bank of Commerce v. Rutland & W. R. Co., 10 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 1. But under a Montana statute, if the relief sought is the recovery of money or other personal property, the cause of action is designated a "thing in action." State v. District Court of Tenth Judicial Dist. in and for Fergus County, 74 Mont. 355, 240 P. 667, 669.

Cause of action may sometimes mean a person having a right of action. Thus, where a legacy is left to a married woman, and she and her husband bring an action to recover it, she is called in the old books the "meritorious cause of action." 1 H. Bl. 108.

CAUSES CÉLÈBRES. Celebrated cases. A work containing reports of the decisions of interest and importance in French courts in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Secondarily a single trial or decision is often called a "cause célèbre," when it is remarkable on account of the parties involved or the unusual, interesting, or sensational character of the facts.

The terms "cautious" and "prudent" may be used interchangeably in defining negligence. Malcolm v. Mooresville Cotton Mills, 191 N. C. 727, 133 S. E. 7, 9. But "cautious" differs from "prudent" in suggesting the idea of timidity, with its secondary meaning as overprudent; fearful. People v. Anderson, 58 Cal. App. 267, 208 P. 324, 325. See Prudence.

CAVEAT. Lat. Let him beware. A formal notice or warning given by a party interested to a court, judge, or ministerial officer against the performance of certain acts within his

This process may be used in the proper courts to prevent (temporarily or provisionally) the proving of a will or the grant of administration, or to arrest the enrollment of a decree in chancery when the party intends to take an appeal, to prevent the grant of letters patent, etc. It is also used, in the American practice, as a kind of equitable process, to stay the granting of a patent for lands. *Wilson v. CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT. Since 1834, an English court, having jurisdiction for the trial of crimes and misdemeanors committed in London and certain adjoining parts of Kent, Essex, and Sussex, and of such other criminal cases as may be sent to it out of the king's bench, though arising beyond its proper jurisdiction. It was constituted by the acts 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 36, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, and superseded the "Old Bailey."

CENTRAL OFFICE. The central office of the supreme court of judicature in England is the office established in pursuance of the recommendation of the legal departments commission in order to consolidate the offices of the masters and associates of the common-law divisions, the crown office of the king's bench division, the record and writ clerk's report, and enrollment offices of the chancery division, and a few others. The central office is divided into the following departments, and the business and staff of the office are distributed accordingly: (1) Writ, appearance, and judgment; (2) summons and order, for the common-law divisions only; (3) filing and record, including the old chancery report office; (4) taxing, for the common-law divisions only; (5) enrollment; (6) judgments, for the registry of judgments, executions, etc.; (7) bills of sale; (8) married women's acknowledgments; (9) king's remembrancer; (10) crown office; and (11) associates. Sweet.

CENTRALIZATION. This word is used to express the system of government prevailing in a country where the management of local matters is in the hands of functionaries appointed by the ministers of state, paid by the state, and in constant communication and under the constant control and inspiration of the ministers of state, and where the funds of the state are largely applied to local purposes. Wharton.

CENTUMVIRI. In Roman law. The name of an important court consisting of a body of one hundred and five judges. It was made up by choosing three representatives from each of the thirty-five Roman tribes. The judges sat as one body for the trial of certain important or difficult questions, (called, "causæ centumvirales,") but ordinarily they were separated into four distinct tribunals. 3 Bla. Comm. 515.

CENTURY. One hundred. A body of one hundred men. The Romans were divided into centuries as the English were divided into hundreds.

Also a cycle of one hundred years.

A tenant at will of free condition, who held land of the thane on condition of paying rent or services. Cowell.

A freeman of inferior rank occupied in husbandry. Spelman.

Under the Norman rule, this term, as did others which denoted workmen, especially those which applied to the conquered race, became a term of reproach, as is indicated by the popular signification of churl. Cowell; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 8; 2 id. 458.

CEPI. Lat. I have taken. This word was of frequent use in the returns of sheriffs when they were made in Latin, and particularly in the return to a writ of capias.

The full return (in Latin) to a writ of capias was commonly made in one of the following forms: Cepi corpus, I have taken the body, i. e., arrested the body of the defendant; Cepi corpus et bail, I have taken the body and released the defendant on a bail-bond; Cepi corpus et committitur, I have taken the body and he has been committed (to prison); Cepi corpus et est in custodia, I have taken the defendant and he is in custody; Cepi corpus et est languidus, I have taken the defendant and he is sick, i. e., so sick that he cannot safely be removed from the place where the arrest was made; Cepi corpus et paratum habeo, I have taken the body and have it (him) ready, i. e., in custody and ready to be produced when ordered.

CEPIT.

In Civil Practice

He took. This was the characteristic word employed in (Latin) writs of trespass for goods taken, and in declarations in trespass and replevin.

Replevin in the cepit is a form of replevin which is brought for carrying away goods merely. Wells, Repl. § 53; Cummings v. Vorce, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 282; Davis v. Calvert, 17 Ark. 85; Ford v. Ford, 3 Wis. 399.

—Cepit et asportavit. He took and carried away. Applicable in a declaration in trespass or an indictment for larceny where the defendant has carried away goods without right. 4 Bl. Comm. 231.

—Cepit in alio loco. In pleading. A plea in replevin, by which the defendant alleges that he took the thing replevied in another place than that mentioned in the declaration. 1 Chit. Pl. 490; Rast. Entr. 554, 555; Morris, Repl. 141; Wells, Repl. § 707.

CERTA RES. In old English law. A certain thing. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60, §§ 24, 25.

CERTAIN. Ascertained; precise; identified; definitive; clearly known; unambiguous; or, in law, capable of being identified or made known, without liability to mistake or ambiguity, from data already given. Cooper v. Bigly, 13 Mich. 479; Losecco v. Gregory, 108 La. 648, 32 So. 986; Smith v. Fyler, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 649; White v. Wadhams, 204 Mich. 381, 170 N. W. 60, 62. That is "certain" which can be made certain. Singer v. Campbell, 217 Ky. 830, 290 S. W. 667, 668; Civ. Code La. art. 3556. See, also, Larson v. Russell, 45 N. D. 33, 176 N. W. 998, 1002.

CERTAIN SERVICES. In feudal and old English law. Such services as were stinted (limited or defined) in quantity, and could not be exceeded on any pretense; as to pay a stated annual rent, or to plow such a field for three days. 2 Bl. Comm. 61.

CERTAINTY.In Pleading

Distinctness; clearness of statement; particularity. Such precision and explicitness in the statement of alleged facts that the pleader's averments and contention may be readily understood by the pleader on the other side, as well as by the court and jury. State v. Hayward, 83 Mo. 309; State v. Burke, 151 Mo. 143, 52 S. W. 226; David v. David, 66 Ala. 148.

This word is technically used in pleading in two different senses, signifying either distinctness, or particularity, as opposed to undue generality.

Certainty is said to be of three sorts: (1) Certainty to a common intent is such as is attained by using words in their ordinary meaning, but is not exclusive of another meaning which might be made out by argument or inference. See 2 H. Bl. 530; Andr. Steph. Pl. 384. (2) Certainty to a certain intent in general is that which allows of no misunderstanding if a fair and reasonable construction is put upon the language employed, without bringing in facts which are possible, but not apparent. 1 Wms. Saund. 49; Fuller v. Hampton, 5 Conn. 423. (3) Certainty to a certain intent in particular is the highest degree of technical accuracy and precision. Co. Litt. 303; 2 H. Bl. 530; Spencer v. Southwick, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 317; State v. Parker, 34 Ark. 158, 36 Am. Rep. 5; Lawes, Pl. 54.

These definitions, which have been adopted from Coke, have been subjected to severe criticism, but are of some utility in drawing attention to the different degrees of exactness and fulness of statement required in different instances. 8 East, 85; 13 East, 112; 3 Maule & S. 14; People v. Dunlap, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 437.

In Contracts

A thing is certain when its essence, quality, and quantity are described, distinctly set forth, etc. Dig. 12, 1, 6. It is uncertain when the description is not that of an individual object, but designates only the kind. Civ. Code La. art. 3556, par. 7; 5 Coke, 121.

CERTIFICANDO DE RECOGNITIONE STAPULÆ. In English law. A writ commanding the mayor of the staple to certify to the lord chancellor a statute-staple taken before him where the party himself detains it, and refuses to bring in the same. A written instrument signed by the proper officers of the corporation, stating or acknowledging that the person named therein is the owner of a designated number of shares of its stock. It is not the stock itself, but merely written evidence of ownership thereof, and of the rights and liabilities resulting from such ownership. It is merely a paper representation of an incorporeal right, and stands on the footing similar to that of other muniments of title. Whitehead v. Gormley, 116 Okl. 287, 245 P. 562, 565, 47 A. L. CERTIFICATE, TRIAL BY. This is a mode of trial now little in use; it is resorted to in cases where the fact in issue lies out of the cognizance of the court, and the judges, in order to determine the question, are obliged to rely upon the solemn averment or information of persons in such a station as affords them the clearest and most competent knowledge of the truth. Brown.

In Massachusetts it is defined by statute as a writ issued by the supreme judicial court to any inferior tribunal, commanding it to certify and return to the supreme judicial court its records in a particular case, in order that any errors or irregularities which appear in the proceedings may be corrected. Pub. St. Mass. 1882, p. 1288; Inhabitants of Town of Westport v. County Com'rs of Bristol County, 246 Mass. 556, 141 N. E. 591, 592; Coolidge v. Bruce, 249 Mass. 465, 144 N. E. 397.

County Judge*, 40 Cal. 479; Sutherlin v. Roberts, 4 Or. 388; Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Robinson, 48 F. 771, 1 C. C. A. 91.

CESSE. (1) An assessment or tax; (2) a tenant of land was said to cesse when he neglected or ceased to perform the services due to the lord. Co. Litt. 373a, 380b.

CESSER. Neglect; a ceasing from, or omission to do, a thing. 3 Bl. Comm. 232.

The determination of an estate. 1 Coke, 84; 4 Kent, Comm. 33, 90, 105, 295.

The "cesser" of a term, annuity, or the like, takes place when it determines or comes to an end. The expression is chiefly used (in England) with reference to long terms of a thousand years or some similar period, created by a settlement for the purpose of securing the income, portions, etc., given to the objects of the settlement. When the trusts of a term of this kind are satisfied, it is desirable that the term should be put an end to, and with this object it was formerly usual to provide in the settlement itself that, as soon as the trusts of the term had been satisfied, it should cease and determine. This was called a "proviso for cesser." Sweet.

As to the cesser clause in a charter party, see Steamship Rutherglen Co. v. Howard Houlder & Partners, 203 F. 848, 122 C. C. A. 166; The Marpesia (C. C. A.) 292 F. 957, 973.

CESSER, PROVISIO FOR. Where terms for years are raised by settlement, it is usual to introduce a proviso that they shall cease when the trusts end. This proviso generally expresses three events: (1) The trusts never arising; (2) their becoming unnecessary or incapable of taking effect; (3) the performance of them. Sugd. Vend. (14th Ed.) 621-623.

CESSET EXECUTIO. (Let execution stay.) In practice. A stay of execution; or an order for such stay; the entry of such stay on record. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1104.

CESSET PROCESSUS. (Let process stay.) A stay of proceedings entered on the record. See 2 Dougl. 627; 11 Mod. 231.

CESSIO. Lat. A cession; a giving up, or relinquishment; a surrender; an assignment.

CESSIO BONORUM. In Roman law. Cession of goods. A surrender, relinquishment, or assignment of all his property and effects made by an insolvent debtor for the benefit of his creditors. The effect of this voluntary action on the debtor's part was to secure him against imprisonment or any bodily punishment, and from infamy, and to cancel his debts to the extent of the property ceded. It much resembled our voluntary bankruptcy or assignment for creditors. The term is commonly employed in modern continental jurisprudence to designate a bankrupt's assignment of property to be distributed among his creditors, and is used in the same sense by some English and American writers, but here rather as a convenient than as a strictly technical term. See 2 Bl. Comm. 473; 1 Kent, Comm. 247, 422; Ersk. Inst. 4, 3, 26; Dig. 2, 4, 25; 48, 19, 1; Nov. 4, 3; La. Civ. Code art. 2166 (Civ. Code, art. 2170); Golis v. His Creditors, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 108; Richards v. His Creditors, 5 Mart. N. S. (La.) 299; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529.

CESSIO IN JURE. In Roman law. A fictitious suit, in which the person who was to acquire the thing claimed (vindicabat) the thing as his own, the person who was to transfer it acknowledged the justice of the claim, and the magistrate pronounced it to be the property (adicebat) of the claimant. Sanders' Just. Inst. (5th Ed.) 89, 122.

The person who possesses the equitable right to property and receives the rents, issues, and profits thereof, the legal estate of which is vested in a trustee. *Bernardsville Methodist Episcopal Church v. It has been proposed to substitute for this uncouth term the English word "beneficiary," and the latter, though still far from universally adopted, has come to be quite frequently used. It is equal in precision to the antiquated and unwieldy Norman phrase, and far better adapted to the genius of our language.

CESTUI QUE USE. He for whose use and benefit lands or tenements are held by another. The cestui que use has the right to receive the profits and benefits of the estate, but the legal title and possession (as well as the duty of defending the same) reside in the other. 2 Bla. When the house is in committee on bills introduced by the government, or in committee of ways and means, or supply, or in committee to consider preliminary resolutions, it is his duty to preside.

CHALDRON, CHALDERN, or CHALDER. Twelve sacks of coals, each holding three bushels, weighing about a ton and a half. In Wales they reckon 12 barrels or pitchers a ton or chaldron, and 29 cwt. of 120 lbs. to the ton. Wharton.

CHAMBER SURVEYS. CHAMPERTOUS. Of the nature of champerty; affected with champerty.

CHAMPERTY. A bargain made by a stranger with one of the parties to a suit, by which such third person undertakes to carry on the litigation at his own cost and risk, in consideration of receiving, if he wins the suit, a part of the land or other subject sought to be recovered by the action. Small v. Mott, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 405; Jewel v. Neidy, 61 Iowa, 299, 16 N. W. 141; Weakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio, 175, 42 Am. Dec. 194; Poe v. Davis, 29 Ala. 683; *Gilman v. The purchase of an interest in a thing in dispute, with the object of maintaining and taking part in the litigation. 7 Bing. 378.

Champerty is the carrying on a suit in the name of another, but at one's own expense, with the view of receiving as compensation a certain share of the avails of the suit. Ogden v. Des Arts, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 275; Wilhoit's Adm'r v. Richardson, 193 Ky. 559, 236 S. W. 1025, 1026. As to an attorney's contract for a contingent fee varying with whether the case was settled, tried in the district court, or appealed, see Clancy v. Kelly, 182 Iowa, 1207, 166 N. W. 583 (holding the contract nonchampertous; contra, where an attorney contracted to carry on litigation at his own expense for a share of what he might recover. Phillips v. South Park Comrs., 119 Ill. 626, 636).

Champerty differs from maintenance chiefly in this, that in champerty the compensation to be given for the service rendered is a part of the matter in suit, or some profit growing out of it; 4 Bla. Com., Chase's ed. 905, n. 8; Wheeler v. Pounds, 24 Ala. 472; Lathrop v. Bank, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 489; Barnes v. Strong, 54 N. C. 100; Arden v. Patterson, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 44; Meeks v. Dewberry, 57 Ga. 263; Hayney v. Coyne, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 339; Coleman v. Billings, 89 Ill. 183; while in simple maintenance the question of compensation does not enter into the account; 2 Bish. Cr. Law, § 131; Quigley v. Thompson, 53 Ind. 317. Quoted with approval in Whisman v. Wells, 206 Ky. 59, 266 S. W. 897, 898. In maintenance the interfering party is in no way benefited by the success of the party aided, but simply intermeddles officiously. Thus every champerty includes maintenance, but not every maintenance is champerty. See 2 Inst. 208; Stotsenburg v. Marks, 79 Ind. 196; Lytle v. State, 17 Ark. 624; Sampliner v. Motion Picture Patents Co. (C. C. A.) 255 F. 242, 247.

The king drank to him, and sent him a gilt cup covered, full of wine, which the champion drank, retaining the cup for his fee. This ceremony, long discontinued, was revived at the coronation of George IV., but not afterwards. Wharton.

CHANCE. In criminal law. An accident; an unexpected, unforeseen, or unintended consequence of an act; a fortuitous event. The opposite of intention, design, or contrivance.

There is a wide difference between chance and accident. The one is the intervention of some unlooked-for circumstance to prevent an expected result; the other is the uncalculated effect of mere luck. The shot discharged at random strikes its object by chance; that which is turned aside from its well-directed aim by some unforeseen circumstance misses its mark by accident. Pure chance consists in the entire absence of all the means of calculating results; accident, in the unusual prevention of an effect naturally resulting from the means employed. Harless v. U. S., Morris (Iowa) 173.

What a man does not know and cannot find out is "chance" as to him. Dillingham v. McLaughlin, 44 S. Ct. 362, 363, 264 U. S. 370, 68 L. Ed. 742.

CHANCE-MEDLEY. In criminal law. A sudden affray. This word is sometimes applied to any kind of homicide by misadventure, but in strictness it is applicable to such killing only as happens in defending one's self. 4 Bl. Comm. 184.

CHANCEL. In ecclesiastical law. The part of a church in which the communion table stands; it belongs to the rector or the impropriator. 2 Broom & H. Comm. 420.

CHANCELLOR. In American law, this is the name given in some states to the judge (or the presiding judge) of a court of chancery. In England, besides being the designation of the chief judge of the court of chancery, the term is used as the title of several judicial officers attached to bishops or other high dignitaries and to the universities. The title is also used in some of the dioceses of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States to designate a member of the legal profession who gives advice and counsel to the bishop and other ecclesiastical authorities.

In Scotland, this title is given to the foreman of an assize or jury. Bisph. Eq. 7.

An officer bearing this title is to be found in some countries of Europe, and is generally invested with extensive political authority.

—Chancellor of a cathedral. In English ecclesiastical law. One of the quatuor personæ, or four chief dignitaries of the cathedrals of the old foundation. The duties assigned to the office by the statutes of the different chapters vary, but they are chiefly of an educational character, with a special reference to the cultivation of theology.

—Chancellor of a diocese. In ecclesiastical law, the officer appointed to assist a bishop in matters of law, and to hold his consistory courts for him. 1 Bl. Comm. 382; 2 Steph. Comm. 672.

—Chancellor of a university. In English law. The official head of a university. His principal prerogative is to hold a court with jurisdiction over the members of the university, in which court the vice-chancellor presides. The office is for the most part honorary.

—Chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. In English law. An officer before whom, or his deputy, the court of the duchy chamber of Lancaster is held. This is a special jurisdiction concerning all manner of equity relating to lands holden of the king in right of the duchy of Lancaster. Hob. 77; 3 Bl. Comm. 78.

—Chancellor of the exchequer. In English law. A high officer of the crown, who formerly sat in the exchequer court, and, together with the regular judges of the court, saw that things were conducted to the king's benefit. Cowell. In modern times, however, his duties are not of a judicial character, but such as pertain to a minister of state charged with the management of the national revenue and expenditure. 2 Steph. Com. 467.

—Chancellor of the order of the garter, and other military orders, in England, is an officer who seals the commissions and the mandates of the chapter and assembly of the knights, keeps the register of their proceedings, and delivers their acts under the seal of their order.

—Chancellor, the lord high. In England, this is the highest judicial functionary in the kingdom, and superior, in point of precedency, to every temporal lord. He is appointed by the delivery of the king's great seal into his custody. He may not be a Roman Catholic. He is a cabinet minister, a privy counsellor, and prolocutor of the house of lords by prescription, (but not necessarily, though usually, a peer of the realm,) and vacates his office with the ministry by which he was appointed. To him belongs the appointment of all justices of the peace throughout the kingdom. Being, in the earlier periods of English history, usually an ecclesiastic, (for none else were then capable of an office so conversant in writings,) and presiding over the royal chapel, he became keeper of the sovereign's conscience, visitor, in right of the crown, of the hospitals and colleges of royal foundation, and patron of all the crown livings under the value of twenty marks per annum in the king's books. He is the general guardian of all infants, idiots, and lunatics, and has the general superintendence of all charitable uses, and all this, over and above the vast and extensive jurisdiction which he exercises in his judicial capacity in the supreme court of judicature, of which he is the head. Wharton.

—Vice-chancellor. In English law. A judge of the court of chancery, acting as assistant to the lord chancellor, and holding a separate court, from whose judgment an appeal lay to the chancellor. 3 Steph. Comm. 418.

CHANCELLOR'S COURTS IN THE TWO UNIVERSITIES. In English law. Courts of local jurisdiction, resembling borough courts, in and for the two universities of Oxford and Cambridge in England. 3 Bl. Comm. 83; Odgers, C. L. 1030; 12 East. 12; 13 East, 635; 15 East, 634; 10 Q. B. 292.

CHANCER. To adjust according to principles of equity, as would be done by a court of chancery. Cent. Dict.

The practice indicated by the word arose in parts of New England at a time when the courts had no equity jurisdiction, and were sometimes compelled to act upon equitable principles; as by restraining the enforcement of the penalty of a bond beyond what was equitable. See Lewiston v. Gagne, 89 Me. 395, 36 A. 629, 56 Am. St. Rep. 432; Colt v. Eaton, 1 Root (Conn.) 524; In re Appel, 163 F. 1002, 90 C. C. A. 172, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 76; James v. Smith, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 128; Philbrick v. Buxton, 40 N. H. 384; Murphy v. Paris, 57 App. D. C. 19, 16 F.(2d) 515.

CHANCERY. Equity; equitable jurisdiction; a court of equity; the system of jurisprudence administered in courts of equity. Kenyon v. Kenyon, 3 Utah, 431, 24 P. 829; Sullivan v. Thomas, 3 Rich. (S. C.) 531. See Court of Chancery.

CHANGE, n. An alteration; substitution of one thing for another. This word does not connote either improvement or deterioration as a result. In this respect it differs from amendment, which, in law, always imports a change for the better. As a verb, "change" is synonymous with "alter" or "vacate," as a road. Board of Sup'rs of Yavapai County v. Stephens, 20 Ariz. 115, 177 P. 261, 264; Tummons v. Stokes (Mo. App.) 274 S. W. 528, 529; Police Jury of Jackson Parish, La., v. Tremont & G. Ry. Co., 136 La. 784, 67 So. 829, 830. See Alteration.

Exchange of money against money of a different denomination. Also small coin. Also an abbreviation of exchange.

CHANGE OF GRADE. Usually understood as an elevation or depression of the surface of a street, or a change of the natural contour of its face so as to facilitate travel over it. McCabe v. City of New York, 140 N. Y. S. 127, 131, 155 App. Div. 262. It is essential that there shall have been a previously established grade and that a new grade be physically made. Gas Engine & Power Co. v. City of New York, 151 N. Y. S. 310, 313, 166 App. Div. 297; Berglar v. University City (Mo. App.) 190 S. W. 620, 623.

CHANGE OF VENUE. Properly speaking, the removal of a suit begun in one county or district to another county or district for trial, though the term is also sometimes applied to the removal of a suit from one court to another court of the same county or district. Dudley v. Power Co., 139 Ala. 453, 36 So. 700; Felts v. Railroad Co., 195 Pa. 21, 45 A. 493; State v. Wofford, 119 Mo. 375, 24 S. W. 764.

CHANGER. An officer formerly belonging to the king's mint, in England, whose business was chiefly to exchange coin for bullion brought in by merchants and others.

CHANNEL. The bed in which the main stream of a river flows, rather than the deep water of the stream as followed in navigation. Bridge Co. v. Dubuque County, 55 Iowa, 558, 8 N. W. 443. See The Oliver (D. C.) 22 F. 849; Iowa v. Illinois, 147 U. S. 1, 13 S. Ct. 239, 37 L. Ed. 55; Cessill v. State, 40 Ark. 504.

But the term is sometimes used to designate the customary and traveled fairway. The Arlington (C. C. A.) 19 F.(2d) 285, 286, 54 A. L. R. 101.

It may also be used as a generic term applicable to any water course, whether a river, creek, slough, or canal. McKissick Cattle Co. v. Alsaga, 182 P. 793, 797, 41 Cal. App. 380.

The "channel" of a river is to be distinguished from a "branch." U. S. v. Hutchings (D. C.) 252 F. 841, 844.

By act of Sept. 19, 1890 (33 USCA § 403), any alteration of the channel of any navigable water without the approval of the secretary of war, is prohibited. See U. S. v. Burns (C. C.) 54 F. 351.

Main Channel

That bed of the river over which the principal volume of water flows. Many great rivers discharge themselves into the sea through more than one channel. They all, however, have a main channel. Packet Co. v. Bridge

Co. (C. C.) 31 F. 757. Compare State of Oklahoma v. State of Texas, 258 U. S. 574, 42 S. Ct. 406, 414, 66 L. Ed. 771.

The main channel of a navigable stream, called for as a boundary between states, means the "thalweg," or deepest and most navigable channel as it then existed. White-side v. Norton (C. O. A.) 205 F. 5, 9.

Natural Channel

The channel of a stream as determined by the natural conformation of the country through which it flows; that is, the bed over which the waters of the stream flow when not in any manner diverted or interfered with by man. See Larrabee v. Cloverdale, 131 Cal. 96, 63 P. 143.

The floor or bed on which the water flows, and the banks on each side thereof as carved out by natural causes. Pima Farms Co. v. Proctor, 30 Ariz. 96, 245 P. 369, 372.

—Chapel of ease. In English ecclesiastical law. A chapel founded in general at some period later than the parochial church itself, and designed for the accommodation of such of the parishioners as, in course of time, had begun to fix their residence at some distance from its site; and so termed because built in aid of the original church. 3 Steph. Comm. 151.

—Free chapels. So called from their freedom or exemption from all ordinary jurisdiction.

—Private chapels. Chapels owned by private persons, and used by themselves and their families, are called "private," as opposed to chapels of ease, which are built for the accommodation of particular districts within a parish, in ease of the original parish church. 2 Steph. Comm. 745.

—Proprietary chapels. In English law. Those belonging to private persons who have purchased or erected them with a view to profit or otherwise.

—Public chapels. In English law, are chapels founded at some period later than the church itself. They were designed for the accommodation of such of the parishioners as in course of time had begun to fix their residence at a distance from its site; and chapels so circumstanced were described as "chapels of ease," because built in aid of the original church. 3 Steph. Comm. (7th Ed.) 745.

And they are termed "capitulum," as a kind of head, instituted not only to assist the bishop in manner aforesaid, but also anciently to rule and govern the diocese in the time of vacation. Burn, Dict.; Coke, Litt. 103.

CHARACTER. The aggregate of the moral qualities which belong to and distinguish an individual person; the general result of the one's distinguishing attributes.

That moral predisposition or habit, or aggregate of ethical qualities, which is believed to attach to a person, on the strength of the common opinion and report concerning him. A person's fixed disposition or tendency, as evidenced to others by his habits of life, through the manifestation of which his general reputation for the possession of a character, good or otherwise, is obtained. Keith v. State, 127 Tenn. 40, 152 S. W. 1029, 1030.

The opinion generally entertained of a person derived from the common report of the people who are acquainted with him. Smith v. State, 88 Ala. 73, 7 So. 52; State v. Turn- er, 36 S. C. 534, 15 S. E. 602; Fahnestock v. State, 23 Ind. 238; State v. Parker, 96 Mo. 382, 9 S. W. 728; Sullivan v. State, 66 Ala. 48; Kimmel v. Kimmel, 3 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 337, 8 Am. Dec. 672; Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. 192, 3 Am. Dec. 122. The estimate in which an individual is generally held in the community in which he has resided. Glover v. State, 200 Ala. 384, 76 So. 300, 301; People v. Nemer, 218 Mich. 163, 187 N. W. 315, 317; Biddle v. Riley, 118 Ark. 206, 176 S. W. 134, 137, L. R. A. 1915F, 992.

Although "character" is often used in the sense of "reputation," the terms are distinguishable. State v. Taylor, 267 Mo. 41, 183 S. W. 299, 301; Commonwealth v. Webb, 252 Pa. 187, 97 A. 189, 192.

Character and reputation are not synonymous terms. Character is what a man or woman is morally, while reputation is what he or she is reputed to be. Yet reputation is the estimate which the community has of a person's character; and it is the belief that moral character is wanting in an individual that renders him unworthy of belief; that is to say, that reputation is evidence of character, and if the reputation is bad for truth, or reputation is bad in other respects affecting the moral character, then the jury may infer that the character is bad and the witness not reliable. General character has always been proved by proving general reputation. Leverich v. Frank, 6 Or. 213. See, also, Richardson v. State, 253 S. W. 273, 277, 94 Tex. Cr. R. 616; Creer v. Active Automobile Exch., 121 A. 888, 889, 99 Conn. 266.

The word "character" no doubt has an objective and subjective import, which are quite distinct. As to the object, character is its quality. As to man, it is the quality of his mind, and his affections, his capacity and temperament. But as a subjective term, certainly in the minds of others, one's character is the aggregate, or the abstract of other men's opinions of one. And in this sense when a witness speaks of the character of another witness for truth, he draws not upon his memory alone, but his judgment also. It is the conclusion of the mind of the witness, in summoning up the amount of all the reports he has heard of the man, and declaring his character for truth, as held in the minds of his neighbors and acquaintances, and in this sense character, general character, and general report or reputation are the same, as held in the books. Powers v. Leach, 26 Vt. 278.

"Character" is what a man is, and "reputation" is what he is supposed to be. Hopkins v. Tate, 99 A. 210, 211, 255 Pa. 56; State v. Pickett, 202 Iowa, 1321, 210 N. W. 782, 783. "Character" depends on attributes possessed, and "reputation" on attributes which others believe one to possess. Bills v. State, 187 Ind. 721, 119 N. E. 465. The former signifies reality and the latter merely what is accepted to be reality at present. State v. Leabo, 120 Or. 160, 249 P. 363.

CHARGE, v. To impose a burden, duty, obligation, or lien; to create a claim against property; to claim; to demand; to accuse; to instruct a jury on matters of law. To impose a tax, duty, or trust. Ex parte Horn (D. C.) 292 F. 455, 457; Ex parte Tsunetaro Machida (D. C.) 277 F. 239, 241. In commercial transactions, to bill or invoice. George M. Jones Co. v. Canadian Nat. Ry. Co. (D. C.) 14 F.(2d) 852, 855.

To load, as a firearm. People v. Limeberry, 298 Ill. 355, 131 N. E. 691, 696.

In the first sense above given, a jury in a criminal case is "charged" with the duty of trying the prisoner (or, as otherwise expressed, with his fate or his "deliverance") as soon as they are impaneled and sworn, and at this moment the prisoner's legal "jeopardy" begins. This is altogether a different matter from "charging" the jury in the sense of giving them instructions on matters of law, which is a function of the court. Tomasson v. State, 112 Tenn. 596, 79 S. W. 803. And see Keith v. Commonwealth, 197 Ky. 362, 247 S. W. 42, 44.

In Equity Practice

A paper presented to a master in chancery by a party to a cause, being a written statement of the items with which the opposite party should be debited or should account for, or of the claim of the party making it. In Common-law Practice

The final address made by a judge to the jury trying a case, before they make up their verdict, in which he sums up the case, and instructs the jury as to the rules of law which apply to its various issues, and which they must observe, in deciding upon their verdict, when they shall have determined the controverted matters of fact. The term also applies to the address of the court to a grand jury, in which the latter are instructed as to their duties.

As used in Immigration Act Feb. 5, 1917, § 19 (8 USCA § 155), one who produces a money charge on, or an expense to the public for support and care. Ex parte Kichmiriantz (D. C.) 283 F. 697, 698. As so used, the term is not limited to paupers or those liable to become such, but includes those who will not undertake honest pursuits, or who are likely to become periodically the inmates of prisons. Lam Fung Yen v. Frick (C. C. A.) 233 F. 393, 396; Ex parte Horn (D. C.) 292 F. 455, 457; Ex parte Riley (D. C.) 17 F.(2d) 646. But see Ng Fung Ho v. White (C. C. A.) 266 F. 765, 769.

Special Charge

A charge or instruction given by the court to the jury, upon some particular point or question involved in the case, and usually in response to counsel's request for such instruction.

CHARGE AND DISCHARGE. Under the former system of equity practice, this phrase was used to characterize the usual method of taking an account before a master. After the plaintiff had presented his "charge," a written statement of the items of account for which he asked credit, the defendant filed a counter-statement, called a "discharge," exhibiting any claims or demands he held against the plaintiff. These served to define the field of investigation, and constituted the basis of the report.

CHARGÉ DES AFFAIRES, or CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES. The title of a diplomatic representative of inferior rank. He has not the title or dignity of a minister, though he may be charged with the functions and offices of the latter, either as a temporary substitute for a minister or at a court to which his government does not accredit a minister. In re Baiz, 135 U. Chatterton*, 38 Minn. 335, 37 N. W. 583; Walbridge v. Walbridge, 46 Vt. 625.

CHARGEANT. Weighty; heavy; penal; expensive. Kelham.

Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. 128, 11 L. Ed. 205, appr. Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. 35; Ould v. Hospital, 95 U. S. 311, 24 L. Ed. 450; and Palmer v. Oiler, 102 Ohio St. 271, 131 N. E. 362, 363. One administering a public or private charity; an eleemosynary institution. See St. Albans Hospital v. Town of Enosburg, 96 Vt. 389, 120 A. 97, 99; Southwestern Osteopathic Sanitarium v. Davis, 115 Okl. 296, 242 P. 1033, 1034; Bishop Randall Hospital v. Hartley, 24 Wyo. 408, 160 P. 385, 386, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1172; People v. Fitch, 16 Misc. 464, 39 N. Y. S. 926; Balch v. Shaw, 174 Mass. 144, 54 N. E. 490; People v. New York Soc., etc., 162 N. Y. 429, 56 N. E. 1004; In re Vineland Historical, etc., Soc., 66 N. J. Eq. 291, 56 A. 1040.

CHARITABLE ORGANIZATION. One which has no capital stock and no provision for making dividends and profits, but derives its funds mainly from public and private charity, and holds them in trust for the objects and purposes expressed in its charter, the test being whether it exists to carry out a purpose recognized in law as charitable or whether it is maintained for gain, profit, or private advantage. Congregational Sunday School & Publishing Soc. v. Board of Review, 125 N. E. 7, 9, 290 Ill. 108.

CHARITABLE USES OR PURPOSES. Originally those enumerated in the statute 43 Eliz. c. 4, and afterwards those which, by analogy, come within its spirit and purpose. Boyle, Char. 17.

A "charitable use" is one that exists for persons uncertain, as the public at large, or some general section of it, such as the poor or the needy. In re Altman's Estate, 149 N. Y. S. 601, 604, 87 Misc. 255; Institution for Savings in Roxbury and Its Vicinity v. Roxbury Home for Aged Women, 244 Mass. 583, 139 N. E. 301, 302. The term may be applied to almost anything that tends to promote the well-doing and well-being of social man. In re Barnwell's Estate, 269 Pa. 443, 112 A. 535; Stowell v. Prentiss, 323 Ill. 309, 154 N. E. 120, 123, 50 A. L. R. 584; People v. Thomas Walters Chapter of Daughters of American Revolution, 311 Ill. 304, 142 N. E. 566, 567; Vineland Trust Co. v. Westendorf, 86 N. J. Eq. 343, 98 A. 314; Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Benedict, 41 R. I. 143, 103 A. 146, 148. It includes all gifts in trust for religious and educational purposes and for the public benefit, convenience, utility, or comfort, and open to an indefinite or vague number of persons. Camp v. Presbyterian Soc. of Sackets Harbor, 173 N. Y. S. 581, 584, 105 Misc. 139.

A gift for a "charitable use" is a gift for the benefit of persons by bringing their hearts and minds under the influence of education or religion, by relieving their bodies of disease, suffering, or constraint, by assisting to establish them for life, by erecting or maintaining public buildings, or in other ways lessening the burdens or making better the condition of the general public, or some class thereof, indefinite as to names and numbers. In re Coleman's Estate, 167 Cal. 212, 138 P. 992, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 682.

In its present usage, the term is so broad as to include almost everything which tends to promote the physical or moral welfare of man, provided only the distribution of benefits is to be free and not a source of profit.

In respect to gifts and devises, and also in respect to freedom from taxation, charitable uses and purposes may include not only the relief of poverty by alms-giving and the relief of the indigent sick and of homeless persons by means of hospitals and asylums, but also religious instruction and the support of churches, the dissemination of knowledge by means of schools and colleges, libraries, scientific academies, and museums, the special care of children and of prisoners and released convicts, the benefit of handicraftsmen, the erection of public buildings, and reclamation of criminals in penitentiaries and reformatories. Hence the word "charitable" in this connection is not to be understood as strictly equivalent to "eleemosynary," but as the synonym of "benevolent" or "philanthropic." Beckwith v. Parish, 69 Ga. 569; Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. 23; Webster v. Sughrow, 69 N. H. 380, 45 A. 139, 48 L. R. A. 100; Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen

Eq. 394, 87 A. 224, 225.

CHARITY. Subjectively, the sentiment or motive of benevolence and philanthropy; the disposition to relieve the distressed. Objectively, alms-giving; acts of benevolence; relief, assistance, or services accorded to the needy without return. Also gifts for the promotion of philanthropic and humanitarian purposes. Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.) 556; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. 127, 11 L. Ed. 205; Historical Soc. v. Academy of Science, 94 Mo. 459, 8 S. W. 346.

Charity, as used in the Massachusetts Sunday law, includes whatever proceeds from a sense of moral duty or a feeling of kindness and humanity, and is intended wholly for the purpose of the relief or comfort of another, and not for one's own benefit or pleasure. Doyle v. Railroad Co., 118 Mass. 195, 197, 19 Am. Rep. 431.

Charity, in its widest sense, denotes all the good affections men ought to bear towards each other; in a restricted and common sense, relief of the poor. Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Ves. 399.

In its legal sense, the word includes not only gifts for the benefit of the poor, but endowments for the advancement of learning, or institutions for the encouragement of science and art, and, it is said, for any other useful and public purpose. Gerke v. Purcell, 25 Ohio St. 243. It includes gifts to be applied for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons for the purpose of education, religious influence, or relief from disease, suffering, or constraint, or for the erection or maintaining of public buildings, or otherwise lessening the burden of government. Jansen v. Godair, 127 N. E. 97, 100, 292 Ill. 364; Peirce v. Attwill, 234 Mass. 389, 125 N. E. 609; In re Lawson's Estate, 264 Pa. 77, 107 A. 376, 378; Noice v. Schnell, 101 N. J. Eq. 252, 137 A. 582, 585, 52 A. L. R. 965; Buckley v. Monck (Mo. Sup.) 187 S. W. 31, 33. The term includes substantially any scheme to better the conditions of any considerable part of society, and includes any gift, not inconsistent with the law, which tends to promote science or the education, enlightenment, or the amelioration of the conditions of mankind, or which is for the public convenience. Wilson v. First Nat. Bank, 164 Iowa, 402, 145 N. W. 948, 952, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 481.

"Charity" is a gift to a general public use, which may extend to the rich as well as the poor. Ambl. 651; Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 294, 11 Am. Dec. 471; 1 Ph. Ch. 191; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. 506, 16 L. Ed. 701; Bisp. Eq. § 124; Franklin v. Armfield, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 305; Congregational Sunday School & Publishing Soc. v. Board of Review, 290 Ill. 108, 125 N. pital Trust Co. v. Metcalf, 137 A. 875, 876, 48 R. I. 411; Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Hammond, 278 F. 569, 573, 51 App. D. C. 260.

Foreign Charity

One created or endowed in a state or country foreign to that of the domicile of the benefactor. Taylor's Ex'rs v. Trustees of Bryn Maur College, 34 N. J. Eq. 101.

Public Charity

In this phrase the word "public" is used, not in the sense that it must be executed openly and in public, but in the sense of being so general and indefinite in its objects as to be deemed of common and public benefit. Each individual immediately benefited may be private, and the charity may be distributed in private and by a private hand. It is public and general in its scope and purpose, and becomes definite and private only after the individual objects have been selected. Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.) 456.

A "purely public charity" which the Legislature is authorized to exempt from taxation is a charity which is indiscriminately dispensed to some portion or group of the public without profit or gain to the donor, and two outstanding qualities are essential: First, that the ends accomplished are wholly benevolent and are accomplished without profit or gain to itself through absolute gratuity; and, second, that the beneficiaries must be saved from becoming burdens upon society and the state. City of San Antonio v. Santa Rosa Infirmary (Tex. Civ. App.) 249 S. W. 498, 503; City of Houston v. Scottish Rite Benev. Ass'n, 111 Tex. 191, 230 S. W. 978, 981.

A gift to be applied consistently with existing laws for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons, by bringing their minds under the influence of education or religion, by relieving their bodies from disease, suffering, or constraint, or by assisting them to establish themselves in life, or by erecting and maintaining public buildings or works, or otherwise lessening the burdens of government. Robinson v. Crutcher, 277 Mo. 1, 209 S. W. 104, 105; Bills v. Pease, 116 Me. 98, 100 A. 146, 147, L. R. A. 1917D, 1060. See, also, Treadwell v. Beebe, 107 Kan. 31, 190 P. 768, 771, 10 A. L. Cas. 1915D, 1117; Averill v. Lewis, 106 Conn. 582, 138 A. 815, 818.

Pure Charity

One which is entirely gratuitous, and which dispenses its benefits without any charge or pecuniary return whatever. See In re Keech's Estate (Sur.) 7 N. Y. Supp. 331; In re Lenox's Estate (Sur.) 9 N. Y. Supp. 895; Kentucky Female Orphan School v. Louis- ville, 100 Ky. 470, 36 S. W. 921, 40 L. R. A. 119.

CHART. The word "chart," as used in the copyright law, does not include sheets of paper exhibiting tabulated or methodically arranged information. Taylor v. Gilman (C. C.) 24 Fed. 632.

CHARTA.

In Old English Law

A charter or deed; an instrument written and sealed; the formal evidence of conveyances and contracts. Also any signal or token by which an estate was held.

The term came to be applied, by way of eminence, to such documents as proceeded from the sovereign, granting liberties or privileges, and either where the recipient of the grant was the whole nation, as in the case of Magna Charta, or a public body, or private individual, in which case it corresponded to the modern word "charter."

In the Civil Law

Paper, suitable for the inscription of documents or books; hence, any instrument or writing. See Dig. 32, 52, 6; Nov. 44, 2.

In General

—Charta Communis. In old English law. An indenture; a common or mutual charter or deed; one containing mutual covenants, or involving mutuality of obligation; one to which both parties might have occasion to refer, to establish their respective rights. Bract. fols. 33*b*, 34.

—Charta cyrographata (or chyrographata). In old English law. A chirographed charter; a charter executed in two parts, and cut through the middle, (scinditur per medium), where the word "cyrographum," or "chirographum," was written in large letters. Bract. fol. 34; Fleta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 3. See Chirograph.

—Charta de foresta. A collection of the laws of the forest, made in the 9th Hen. III. and said to have been originally a part of Magna Charta.

The charta de foresta was called the Great Charter of the woodland population, nobles, barons, freemen, and slaves, loyally granted by Henry III. early in his reign (A. D. 1217). Inderwick, King's Peace 159; Stubb's Charters 847. There is a difference of opinion as to the original charter of the forest similar to that which exists respecting the true and original Magna Carta (q. v.), and for the same reason, viz., that both required repeated confirmation by the kings, despite their supposed inviolability. This justifies the remark of recent historians as to the great charter that "this theoretical sanctity and this practical insecurity are shared with 'the Great Charter of Liberties' by the Charter of the Forest which was issued in 1217." 1 Poll. & Maitl. 158. It is asserted with great positiveness by Inderwick that no forest charter was ever granted by King John, but that Henry III. issued the charter of 1217 (which he puts in the third year of the reign, which, however, only commenced Oct. 28, 1216), in pursuance of the promises of his father; and Lord Coke, referring to it as a charter on which the lives and liberties of the woodland population depended, says that it was confirmed at least thirty times between the death of John and that of Henry V.; 4 Co. Inst. 303.

Webster, under the title Magna Charta, says that the name is applied to the charter granted in the 9th Hen. III. and confirmed by Edw. I. Prof. Maitland, in speaking of Magna Carta, refers to "the sister-charter which defined the forest law" as one of the four documents which, at the death of Henry III., comprised the written law of England. 1 Soc. England 410. Edward I. in 1297 confirmed "the charter made by the common consent of all the realm in the time of Henry III. to be kept in every point without breach." Inderwick, King's Peace 160; Stubb's Charters 486. The Century Dictionary refers to this latter charter of Edw. I. as the Charter of the Forest; but it was, as already shown, only a confirmation of it, and a comparison of the authorities leaves little if any doubt that the date was as above stated and the history as here given. Its provisions may be found in Stubb's Charters and they are summarized by Inderwick, in his work above cited.

—Charta de una parte. A deed-poll; a deed of one part. Formerly used to distinguish a deed poll—that is, an agreement made by one party only—from a deed inter partes. Co. Litt. 229.

—Charta partita. (Literally, a deed divided.) A charter-party. 3 Kent, Comm. 201.

Charta de non ente non valet. A deed of a thing not in being is not valid. Co. Litt. 36.

Charta non est nisi vestimentum donationis. A deed is nothing else than the vestment of a gift. Co. Litt. 36.

CHARTÆ LIBERTATUM. The charters (grants) of liberties. These are Magna Charta and Charta de Foresta.

Chartarum super fidem, mortuis testibus, ad patriam de necessitudine recurrendum est. Co. Litt. 36. The witnesses being dead, the truth of charters must of necessity be referred to the country, i. e., a jury.

CHARTE. Fr. A chart, or plan, which mariners use at sea.

CHARTE-PARTIE. Fr. In French marine law. A charter-party.

CHARTEL. A variant of "cartel" (q. v.).

CHARTER, v. In mercantile law. To hire or lease a vessel for a voyage. Thus, a "chartered" is distinguished from a "seeking" ship. 7 East, 24.

CHARTER, n. An instrument emanating from the sovereign power, in the nature of a grant, either to the whole nation, or to a class or portion of the people, or to a colony or dependency, and assuring to them certain rights, liberties, or powers. Such was the "Great Charter" or "Magna Charta," and such also were the charters granted to certain of the English colonies in America. See Story, Const. § 161; 1 Bla. Comm. 108.

A charter differs from a constitution, in that the former is granted by the sovereign, while the latter is established by the people themselves.

An act of a legislature creating a corporation, or creating and defining the franchise of a corporation. Baker v. Smith, 41 R. I. 17, 102 A. 721, 723; Merrick v. Van Santvoord, 34 N. Y. 214; Bent v. Underdown, 156 Ind. 516, 60 N. E. 307; Morris & E. R. Co. v. Com'rs, 37 N. J. Law, 237.

Also a corporation's constitution or organic law; Schultz v. City of Phoenix, 18 Ariz. 35, 156 P. 75, 76; C. J. Kubach Co. v. McGuire, 199 Cal. 215, 248 P. 676, 677; that is to say, the articles of incorporation taken in connection with the law under which the corporation was organized; Chicago Open Board of Trade v. Bldg. Co., 136 Ill. App. 606; Bentler v. Cincinnati, C. & E. Ry. Co., 180 Ky. 497, 203 S. W. 199, 201, L. R. A. 1918E, 315; Fitzgerald v. City of Cleveland, 88 Ohio St. 338, 103 N. E. 512, 513, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 106; In re Hanson's Estate, 38 S. D. 1, 159 N. W. 399, 400. The authority by virtue of which an organized body acts. Ryan v. Witt (Tex. Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 952, 959.

CHARTER-LAND. In English law. Otherwise called "book-land." Property held by deed under certain rents and free services. It, in effect, differs nothing from the free socage lands, and hence have arisen most of the freehold tenants, who hold of particular manors, and owe suit and service to the same. 2 Bl. Comm. 90.

CHARTER-PARTY. A contract by which an entire ship, or some principal part thereof, is let to a merchant for the conveyance of goods on a determined voyage to one or more places. The Harvey and Henry, 86 F. 656, 30 C. C. A. 330; The New York (D. C.) 93 F. 497; Vandewater v. The Yankee Blade, 28 Fed. Cas. 980; Spring v. Gray, 6 Pet. 151, 8 L. Ed. 352; Fish v. Sullivan, 40 La. Mer. Shipp.* 227; Parker v. Washington Tug & Barge Co., 35 Wash. 575, 148 P. 896, 898.

The contract by which a ship is let is termed a "charter-party." By it the owner may either let the capacity or burden of the ship, continuing the employment of the owner's master, crew, and equipments, or may surrender the entire ship to the charterer, who then provides them himself. The master or part owner may be a charterer. Civil Code Cal. § 1959; Civil Code Dak. § 1127.

"A charter party may be a contract for the lease of the vessel, or for a special service to be rendered by the owner of the vessel. Where, as is very frequently the case, the shipowner undertakes to carry a cargo, to be provided by the charterer, on a designated voyage, the arrangement is * * * a mere contract of affreightment." United States v. Hveslef, 35 S. Ct. 459, 460, 237 U. S. 1, 59 L. Ed. 813, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 288.

A privileged place for the preservation of deer and beasts of the forest, of a middle nature between a forest and a park. It is commonly less than a forest, and not endowed with so many liberties, as officers, laws, courts; and yet it is of larger compass than a park, having more officers and game than a park. Every forest is a chase, but every chase is not a forest. It differs from a park in that it is not inclosed, yet it must have certain metes and bounds, but it may be in other men's grounds, as well as in one's own. Manwood, 49; Termes de la Ley.

The act of acquiring possession of animals feræ naturæ by force, cunning, or address.

Common Chase

In old English law. A place where all alike were entitled to hunt wild animals.

State, 48 Ga. 288, 15 Am. Rep. 664; Andre v. State, 5 Iowa, 389, 68 Am. Dec. 708; Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 603; Boyce v. People, 55 N. Y. 644; Wilson v. State, 73 Ala. 527; People v. Weinstock, 140 N. Y. S. 453, 456, 27 N. Y. Cr. R. 53.

The name given to things which in law are deemed personal property. Chattels are divided into chattels real and chattels personal; chattels real being interests in land which devolve after the manner of personal estate, as leaseholds. As opposed to freeholds, they are regarded as personal estate. But, as being interests in real estate, they are called "chattels real," to distinguish them from movables, which are called "chattels personal." Mozley & Whitley.

Chattels personal are movables only; chattels real are such as savor only of the realty. Putnam v. Westcott, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 73; Hawkins v. Trust Co. (C. C.) 79 Fed. 50; Insurance Co. v. Haven, 95 U. S. 251, 24 L. Ed. 473; Knapp v. Jones, 143 Ill. 375, 32 N. E. 382.

The term "chattels" is a more comprehensive one than "goods," as it includes animate as well as inanimate property. 2 Chit. Bl. Comm. 383, note. In a devise, however, they may be of the same import. Shep. Touch. 447; 2 Fonbl. Eq. 335.

—Real chattels. Such as concern, or savor of, the realty, such as leasehold estates; interests issuing out of, or annexed to, real estate; such chattel interests as devolve after the manner of realty. 2 Bl. Comm. 386; Brown v. Beecher, 120 Pa. 590, 15 A. 608; State v. Welch, 16 Okl. Cr. 485, 184 P. 786, 787; Chicago Auditorium Ass'n v. Willing (C. C. A.) 20 F.(2d) 837, 840; First Nat. Bank v. Brashear, 200 Cal. 389, 253 P. 143, 145; In re Dalton's Estate, 183 Iowa, 1013, 168 N. W. 332, 334.

CHATTEL MORTGAGE. An instrument of sale of personalty conveying the title of the property to the mortgagee with terms of defeasance; and, if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then, at common law, the title becomes absolute in the mortgagee. Means v. Montgomery (C. C.) 23 F. 421; Stewart v. Slater, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 99; In re Packard Press (C. C. A.) 5 F.(2d) 633, 635. A bill of sale with a defeasance clause incorporated in it. Monongahela Ins. Co. v. Batson, 111 Ark. 167, 163 S. W. 510, 511; Bank of Dillon v. Murchison (C. C. A.) 213 F. 147, 151; Maynard v. Shaw, 246 Pa. 330, 92 A. 204, 205. Compare Owens v. Bridges, 13 Ga. App. 419, 79 S. E. 225, involving a stipulation for a reconveyance of the property rather than a defeasance clause.

An absolute pledge, to become an absolute interest if not redeemed at a fixed time. Cortelyou v. Lansing, 2 Caines, Cas. (N. Y.) 200, per Kent, Ch.

A pledge is distinguished from a chattel mortgage by the fact that in a mortgage, the title is transferred; in a pledge, the possession. Jones, Mortg. § 4; Clanton Bank v. Robinson, 195 Ala. 194, 70 So. 270; Security Trust Co. v. Edwards, 90 N. J. Law, 558, 101 A. 384, 385, L. R. A. 1917F, 273; In re German Publication Soc. (D. C.) 289 F. 509; J. H. & C. K. Eagle v. Kunkle, 278 Pa. 190, 122 A. 276, 278; Conner v. Carpenter, 28 Vt. 237; Day v. Swift, 48 Me. 368; McCoy v. Lassiter, 95 N. C. 91; Wright v. Ross, 36 Cal. 414; Thurber v. Oliver (C. C.) 26 F. 224; Thompson v. Dolliver, 132 Mass. 103; Lobban v. Garnett, 9 Dana (Ky.) 339.

The material distinction between a pledge and a mortgage of chattels is that a mortgage is a conveyance of the legal title upon condition, and it becomes absolute in law if not redeemed by a given time; a pledge is a deposit of goods, redeemable on certain terms, either with or without a fixed period for redemption. In pledge, the general property does not pass, as in the case of mortgage, and the pawnee has only a special property in the thing deposited. The pawnee must choose between two remedies,—a bill in chancery for a judicial sale under a decree of foreclosure, or a sale without judicial process, on the refusal of the debtor to redeem, after reasonable notice to do so. Evans v. Darlington, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 320.

In a conditional sale the purchaser has merely a right to purchase, and no debt or obligation exists on the part of the vendor; this distinguishes such a sale from a mortgage. Weathersly v. Weathersly, 40 Miss. 462, 90 Am. Dec. 344; Gomez v. Kamping, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 77. And see Willys-Overland Co. of California v. Chapman (Tex. Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 978, 981; Young v. Phillips, 203 Mich. 566, 169 N. W. 322.

CHAUD-MEDLEY. A homicide committed in the heat of an affray and while under the influence of passion; it is thus distinguished from chance-medley, which is the killing of a man in a casual affray in self-defense. 4 Bl. Comm. 184. It has been said, however, that the distinction is of no great importance. See 1 Russ. Crimes, 660.

CHAUFFEUR. Defined by the New York Motor Vehicle (Highway) Law as anyone operating or driving a motor vehicle as an employee or for hire. People v. Fulton, 96 Misc. 663, 162 N. Y. S. 125, 126; People ex rel. McCaul v. Loughrey (Sp. Sess.) 159 N. Y. S. 990.

Statutes elsewhere contain substantially similar definitions. See Burns' Ann. St. Ind. 1926, § 10084; Ky. St. § 2739g-1(c); Acts Tex. 35th Leg. c. 207, § 25 (Vernon's Ann. Pen. Code art. 813. See, also, American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Tex. Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534, 537.

CHAUMPERT. A kind of tenure mentioned in a patent of 35 Edw. III. Cowell; Blount.

CHAUNTRY RENTS. Money paid to the crown by the servants or purchasers of chauntry-lands. See Chantry.

CHEAT, v. To defraud. State v. Mastin, 277 Mo. 495, 211 S. W. 15, 18. It necessarily implies a fraudulent intent. Clolinger v. Callahan, 204 Ky. 33, 263 S. W. 700, 702.

The words "cheat and defraud" usually mean to induce a person to part with the possession of property by reason of intentionally false representations relied and acted upon by such person to his harm. Antonio Pepe Co. v. Apuzzo, 98 Conn. 807, 120 A. 681, 682; Cheek v. State, 14 Ga. App. 536, 81 S. E. 586. They include not only the crime of false pretenses, but also all civil frauds. Hinshaw v. State, 188 Ind. 147, 122 N. E. 418, 419.

CHEAT, n. Swindling; defrauding. "Deceitful practices in defrauding or endeavoring to defraud another of his known right, by some willful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honesty." Hawk. P. C. b. 2, c. 23, § 1. "The fraudulent obtaining the property of another by any deceitful and illegal practice or token (short of felony) which affects or may affect the public." Steph. Crim. Law, 93.

Cheats, punishable at common law, are such cheats (not amounting to felony) as are effected by deceitful or illegal symbols or tokens which may affect the public at large, and against which common prudence could not have guarded. 2 Whart. Crim. Law, § 1116; 2 East, P. C. 818; People v. Babcock, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 201, 5 Am. Dec. 256; Von Mumm v. Frash (C. C.) 56 F. 836; State v. Parker, 43 N. H. 85.

CHEATERS, or ESCHEATORS, were officers appointed to look after the king's escheats, a duty which gave them great opportunities of fraud and oppression, and in consequence many complaints were made of their misconduct. Hence it seems that a cheater came to signify a fraudulent person, and thence the verb to cheat was derived. Wharton.

CHECK, v. To control or restrain; to hold within bounds. To verify or audit; to verify, guard, or examine the work of another. Marsh v. State, 125 Ark. 282, 188 S. W. 815, 816; State v. Defined by the Negotiable Instruments Act as a bill of exchange drawn on a bank payable on demand. Commercial & Savings Bank Co. of Bellafontaine, Ohio, v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Franklin, 68 Ind. App. 417, 120 N. E. 670, 674; Casper v. Kuhne, 140 N. Y. S. 86, 87, 79 Misc. 411; Bell-Wayland Co. v. Bank of Sugden, 95 Okl. 67, 218 P. 705, 706. But see Merchants' & Planters' Bank of Camden v. New First Nat. Bank of Columbus, Ohio, 116 Ark. 1, 170 S. W. 852, 854, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 944.

A check differs from an ordinary bill of exchange in the following particulars: (1) It is drawn on a bank or bankers, and is payable immediately on presentment, without any days of grace. (2) It is payable immediately on presentment, and no acceptance as distinct from payment is required. (3) By its terms it is supposed to be drawn upon a previous deposit of funds, and is an absolute appropriation of so much money in the hands of the bankers to the holder of the check, to remain there until called for, and cannot after notice be withdrawn by the drawer. The term "check," within the ordinary meaning of that term, includes "draft," the only distinction being that in a draft the drawer is a bank, while in the ordinary check the drawer is an individual. Leach v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 211 N. W. 506, 508, 202 Iowa, 899, 50 A. L. R. 383.

In the former case, the banker on whom it is drawn must not pay the money for the check to any other than the banker named; in the latter case, he must not pay it to any other than a banker. 2 Steph. Comm. 118, note c. And see 7 Exch. 389; [1903] A. C. 240; Farmers' Bank v. Johnson, King & Co., 134 Ga. 486, 68 S. E. 85, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 697, 137 Am. St. Rep. 242.

Milton County Bank*, 34 Ga. App. 248, 129 S. E. 170.

—Memorandum check. A check given by a borrower to a lender, for the amount of a short loan, with the understanding that it is not to be presented at the bank, but will be redeemed by the maker himself when the loan falls due. This understanding is evidenced by writing the word "Mem." on the check. This is not unusual among merchants. See U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. 502, 21 L. Ed. 728; Turnbull v. Osborne, 12 Abb. Prac. (2) In the law of negligence, and in laws for the protection of children, etc., it is used as the opposite of "adult," and means the young of the human species (generally under the age of puberty or not old enough to dispense with maternal aid and care), without any reference to parentage and without distinction of sex. Miller v. Finegan, 26 Fla. 29, 7 So. 140, 6 L. R. A. 813; Falter v. Walker, 47 Okl. 527, 149 P. 1111, 1112; Bradley v. Gilliam (Tex. Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 289, 291; Hoggatt v. Clopton, 142 Tenn. 184, 217 S. W. 657, 660; Albright v. Albright, 116 Ohio St. 668, 157 N. E. 760, 763; Central of Georgia R. Co. v. Robins, 209 Ala. 6, 95 So. 367, 369, 36 A. L. R. 10; Meisner v. U. S. (D. C.) 295 F. 866, 868; State v. Gauthier, 113 Or. 297, 231 P. 141, 144.

The word "child" in statutes often means either child or children. Cunningham v. Dunn, 84 W. Va. 593, 100 S. E. 410, 411. See Children.

—Child of tender age or years. Such a child must be less than 14 years old. Barnhill's Adm'r v. Mt. Morgan Coal Co. (D. C.) 215 F. 608, 610. A minor more than 15 years of age is not included within the meaning of the term. Paulk & Fossil v. Lee, 31 Ga. App. 629, 121 S. E. 845.

—Child's part. A "child's part," which a widow, by statute in some states, is entitled to take in lieu of dower or the provision made for her by will, is a full share to which a child of the decedent would be entitled, subject to the debts of the estate and the cost of administration up to and including distribution. Benedict v. Wilmarth, 46 Fla. 535, 35 So. 84.

—Illegitimate child. A bastard (q. v.).

—Legitimate child. One born in lawful wedlock.

—Natural child. A bastard (q. v.); a child born out of lawful wedlock. But in a statute declaring that adopted shall have all the rights of "natural" children, the word "natural" was used in the sense of "legitimate." Barns v. Allen, 9 Am. Law Reg. (O. S.) 747. In Louisiana. Illegitimate children who have been acknowledged by the father. Civ. Code La. art. 202. In the civil law. A child by natural relation or procreation; a child by birth, as distinguished from a child by adoption. Inst. 1, 11, pr.; Id. 3, 1, 2; Id. 3, 8 pr. See, also, Conner v. Parsley, 192 Ky. 827, 234 S. W. 972, 974; Ransom v. New York, C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 93 Ohio St. 223, 112 N. E. 586, L. R. A. 1916E, 704; Middletown Trust Co. v. Gaffey, 96 Conn. 61, 112 A. 689, 691.

—Posthumous child. One born after the father's death.

—Quasi posthumous child. In the civil law. One who, born during the life of his grandfather, or other male ascendant, was not his heir at the time he made his testament, but who by the death of his father became his heir in his life-time. Inst. 2, 13, 2; Dig. 28, 3, 13.

CHILDREN. Offspring; progeny; the immediate descendants of a person, whether by a first or subsequent marriage. Lewis, Perp. 196; Stahl v. Emery, 147 Md. 123, 127 A. 760, 762; Widgeon v. Widgeon, 147 Va. 1068, 133 S. E. 353, 355.

Legitimate offspring; children born in wedlock. Bell v. Phyn, 7 Ves. 458; In re Silva's Estate, 32 Ariz. 573, 261 P. 40, 41.

Ordinarily, the word does not include "grandchildren." Lowrey v. Le Flore, 149 P. 1112, 1114, 48 Okl. 235, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1001; In re Alburger's Estate, 274 Pa. 10, 117 A. 450; In re Roberts' Estate, 84 Wash. 163, 146 P. 398, 400; In re Spooner's Estate, 172 Wis. 174, 177 N. W. 598, 600; Hunt v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 140 La. 524, 73 So. 667, 668; Com. St. Neb. 1911, c. 23, § 2; Noteware v. Colton, 95 Neb. 541, 145 N. W. 993; Hoggatt v. Clopton, 142 Tenn. 184, 217 S. W. 657, 660; Bailey v. Jerome, 129 S. C. 387, 125 S. E. 29.

As the term is used in deeds or wills especially, being technically a word of purchase and not of limitation, it will not be construed to mean grandchildren, unless a strong case of intention or necessary implication requires it. Greenfield v. Laurit- son, 306 Ill. 279, 137 N. E. 818, 819; Hanes v. Central Illinois Utilities Co., 262 Ill. 86, 104 N. E. 156, 157; Warne v. Sorge, 258 Mo. 162, 167 S. W. 967, 968; Carter v. Carter, 208 Ky. 291, 270 S. W. 760, 761; Mero-witz v. Whitby, 138 Md. 222, 113 A. 651, 652. For cases holding that "child" or "children" includes "grandchildren," see Holbrook v. Shepard, 245 N. Y. 618, 157 N. E. 882; Ex parte Cline, 213 Ala. 599, 105 So. 686, 688; Davis v. Thompson, 179 Ind. 539, 101 N. E. 1012, 1013. See, also, Lewis, Perp. 195, 196; 2 Crabb, Real Prop. pp. 38, 39, §§ 988, 989; 4 Kent, Comm. 345, 346, note.

"Children" is ordinarily a word of description, limited to persons standing in the same relation, and has the same effect as if all the names were given. Balcom v. Haynes, 14 Allen (Mass.) 204; Rowley v. Currie, 94 N. J. Eq. 606, 120 A. 653, 656.

"Children" is a word of purchase and not of limitation, unless the context plainly denotes otherwise. Reiff v. Pepo, 290 Pa. 508, 139 A. 144, 146; Hutchens v. Denton, 83 W. Va. 580, 98 S. E. 808, 809; Echols v. Jordan, 39 Ala. 24. On the other hand, "issue" is ordinarily used as a word of limitation. Stout v. Good, 245 Pa. 383, 91 A. 613, 615; Antley v. Antley, 132 S. C. 306, 128 S. E. 31, 33. But where the intention of the Legislature or of a testator is manifest or where a different construction would cause partial intestacy, the word "child" or "children" will be given the comprehensive meaning of "issue" or descendants. In re Tone's Will, 174 N. Y. S. 391, 393, 186 App. Div. 361; Ansonia Nat. Bank v. Kunkel, 105 Conn. 744, 136 A. 588, 590; State Bank & Trust Co. v. Nolan, 103 Conn. 308, 130 A. 483, 489; Mowatt v. Carow, 7 Paige, Ch. (N. Y.) 328, 32 Am. Dec. 641; Ruff v. Rutherford, 1 Bail. Eq. (S. C.) 7; Dickinson v. Lee, 4 Watts (Pa.) 82, 28 Am. Dec. 684.

Similarly, the word "heirs," in its natural signification, is a word of limitation, and is presumed to be used in that sense, unless a contrary intention appears. Sanders, Matter of, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 293; Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 503, 20 Am. Dec. 716. Hence, neither the term "heirs" nor "heirs of the body" is ordinarily equivalent to "children." Kaleialii v. Sullivan (C. C. A.) 242 F. 446, 450; Snowden v. Snowden, 187 N. C. 539, 122 S. E. 300, 301; Belcher v. Ramey, 173 Ky. 784, 191 S. W. 520, 523; In re Webb's Estate, 250 Pa. 179, 95 A. 419, 420; Bass v. Surls (Tex. Civ. App.) 153 S. W. 914, 916. But the words "heirs" and "heirs of the body" are often used synonymously with "children," and will be so construed in wills if necessary to carry into effect the manifest intention of the testator. Gillilan v. Gillilan, 278 Mo. 99, 212 S. W. 348, 351; Bentley v. Consolidation Coal Co., 209 Ky. 63, 272 S. W. 48, 49; Lee v. Roberson, 297 Ill. 321, 130 N. E. 774, 778; Desmond v. MacNeill, 90 Conn. 142, 96 A. 924, 925; Conover v. Cade, 184 Ind. 604, 112 N. E. 7, 12; Gibson v. Gibson, 113 S. C. 160, 101 S. E. 922; Darragh v. Bar-more (Tex. Com. App.) 242 S. W. 714, 718.

Adopted children are not included within the term "children," in the absence of a manifest intention to the contrary. Savells v. Brown's Guardian, 187 Ky. 134, 218 S. W. 462, 463; Parker v. Carpenter, 77 N. H. 453, 92 A. 955; Melek v. Curators of University of Missouri, 213 Mo. App. 572, 250 S. W. 614, 615; Casper v. Helvie, 83 Ind. App. 166, 146 N. E. 123, 125; State v. District Court of Ramsey County, 133 Minn. 265, 158 N. W. 250, 251. For cases holding that "children" includes adopted children, see Burk v. Burk, 222 Mich. 149, 192 N. W. 706, 707; Hopkins v. Gifford, 309 Ill. 363, 141 N. E. 178, 181; In re Cupples' Estate, 272 Mo. 465, 199 S. W. 556, 557; Ex parte Cline, 213 Ala. 599, 105 So. 686, 687.

Stepchildren may also be included within the meaning of the word "children." Newark Paving Co. v. Klotz, 85 N. J. Law, 432, 91 A. 91, 92; Hum- mel v. Supreme Conclave I. O. H., 256 Pa. 164, 100 A. 589.

The word "children," as in a statute, deed, or will, generally means legitimate children, unless there is something which shows a contrary intent. 31 Ch. D. 542; L. R. 7 H. L. 568; Rhodes v. Williams, 143 Ga. 342, 85 S. E. 105, 107; Hardesty v. Mitchell, 302 Ill. 369, 134 N. E. 745, 746, 24 A. L. R. 565; Wilson v. Bass, 70 Ind. App. 116, 118 N. E. 379, 380; Commonwealth v. Ray, 196 Ky. 203, 244 S. W. 415; Creisar v. State, 97 Ohio St. 16, 119 N. E. 128; Peerless Pac. Co. v. Burckhand, 90 Wash. 221, 155 P. 1037, 1038, L. R. A. 1917C, 353, Ann. Cas. 1918B, 247; Heater v. Van Auken, 14 N. J. Eq. 159; Gardner v. Heyer, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 11. Such is its meaning under various Workmen's Compensation Acts. Murrell v. Industrial Commission, 291 Ill. 334, 126 N. E. 189, 190; Broadbent's Case, 240 Mass. 449, 134 N. E. 632, 634; Bell v. Terry & Trench Co., 163 N. Y. S. 733, 735, 177 App. Div. 123; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Peters (Tex. Civ. App.) 280 S. W. 310, 312.

Sometimes, however, "children" is construed as including duly recognized illegitimate children; Hastings v. Rathbone, 194 Iowa, 177, 183 N. W. 960, 962, 23 A. L. R. 392; Selby v. Brenton, 75 Ind. App. 248, 130 N. E. 448, 449; and even illegitimate children who have not been acknowledged; Eaton v. Eaton, 88 Conn. 269, 91 A. 191, 195; Shelton v. Minnis, 107 Miss. 133, 65 So. 114, 115; Pearman v. People, 64 Colo. 26, 170 P. 192.

Chiltern Hundreds is an appointment under the hand and seal of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. May, Parl. Pr. 642.

The stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds is a nominal office in the gift of the crown, usually accepted by members of the house of commons desirous of vacating their seats. By law a member once duly elected to parliament is compelled to discharge the duties of the trust conferred upon him, and is not enabled at will to resign it. But by statute, if any member accepts any office of profit from the crown, (except officers in the army or navy accepting a new commission,) his seat is vacated. If, therefore, any member wishes to retire from the representation of the county or borough by which he was sent to parliament, he applies to the lords of the treasury for the stewardship of one of the Chiltern Hundreds, which having received, and thereby accomplished his purpose, he again resigns the office. Brown.

An instrument of gift or conveyance attested by the subscription and crosses of the witnesses, which was in Saxon times called "chirographum," and which, being somewhat changed in form and manner by the Normans, was by them styled "charta." Anciently when they made a chirograph or deed which required a counterpart, as we call it, they engrossed it twice upon one piece of parchment contrariwise, leaving a space between, in which they wrote in capital letters the word "chirograph," and then cut the parchment in two through the middle of the word, giving a part to each party. The phrase includes all personal chattels which are not in possession; 11 App. Cas. 440; and all property in action which depends entirely on contracts express or implied; Castle v. Castle (C. C. A.) 267 F. 521, 523.

The term has been held to include rights of action for tort. Sharp v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., 133 Tenn. 1, 179 S. W. 375, 376, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1212; Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Hill (Tex. Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 778, 779. It has elsewhere been said, however, that the words "chooses in action" mean nothing more and can have no broader signification than the words "rights of action," and that "rights of action" include only rights of action founded on contracts, or for injuries to property, and not rights of action for torts. Wilson v. Shradler, 73 W. Va. 105, 79 S. E. 1083, 1085, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 886.

A right to receive or recover a debt, demand, or damages on a cause of action ex contractu, or for a tort connected with contract, but which cannot be made available without recourse to an action. Comyns, Dig. Biens. Bushnell v. Kennedy, 9 Wall. 390, 19 L. Ed. 736; Turner v. State, 1 Ohio St. 426; Sheldon v. Sill, 8 How. 441, 12 L. Ed. 1147; People v. Tioga Common Pleas, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 73; Sterling v. Sims, 72 Ga. 53; Bank v. Holland, 99 Va. 495, 39 S. E. 126, 55 L. R. A. 155, 86 Am. St. Rep. 898; State v. District Court of Tenth Judicial Dist. in and for Ferguson County, 240 P. 667, 669, 74 Mont. 355; First Nat. Bank v. Montgomery Cotton Mfg. Co., 211 Ala. 551, 101 So. 186, 188; Finkelstein v. Dinnan, 221 Mich. 493, 191 N. W. 24, 25; Pioneer Coal Co. v. Asher, 210 Ky. 498, 276 S. W. 487, 490; Hammond v. Carthage Sulphite Pulp & Paper Co. (C. C. A.) 8 F.(2d) 35, 38; Realty Holding Co. v. Donaldson, 268 U. S. 398, 45 S. Ct. 521, 522, 69 L. Ed. 1014.

Personalty to which the owner has a right of possession in future, or a right of immediate possession, wrongfully withheld. Code Ga. 1882, § 2239 (Civ. Code 1910, § 3648). And see Tummy v. Mayer, 239 Ill. 458, 124 N. E. 661, 662.

A distinction should be made between the security or the evidence of the debt, and the thing due. The chose in action is the money, damages or thing owing. The bond or note is but the evidence of it. 1 Bouv. Inst. p. 191; First Nat. Bank v. Holland, 99 Va. 495, 39 S. E. 126, 55 L. R. A. 155, 86 Am. St. Rep. 898.

The phrase is sometimes used to signify a right of bringing an action, and, at others, the thing itself which forms the subject-matter of that right, or with regard to which that right is exercised; but it more properly includes the idea both of the thing itself and of the right of action as annexed to it. Thus, when it is said that a debt is a chose in action, the phrase conveys the idea, not only of the thing itself, i. e., the debt, but also of the right of action or of recovery possessed by the person to whom the debt is due. When it is said that a chose in action cannot be assigned, it means that a thing to which a right of action is annexed cannot be transferred to another, together with such right. Brown.

CHOSE IN POSSESSION. A personal thing of which one has possession. A thing in possession, as distinguished from a thing in action. Sterling v. Sims, 72 Ga. 53; Vawter

v. Griffin, 40 Ind. 601. See Chose in Action. Taxes and customs, if paid, are a chose in possession; if unpaid, a chose in action. 2 Bl. Comm. 408.

CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS. Under the municipal organization of the state of New Jersey, each county has a board of officers, called by this name, composed of representatives from the cities and townships within its limits, and charged with administering the revenues of the county. They correspond to the "county commissioners" or "supervisors" in other states.

CHOUT. In Hindu law. A fourth, a fourth part of the sum in litigation. The "Mahratta chout" is a fourth of the revenues exacted as tribute by the Mahrattas.

CIRCUMSTANCES. The particulars which accompany an act. Facts or things standing around, or about, some central fact. Salter v. State, 163 Ga. 80, 135 S. E. 408, 409.

A principal fact or event being the object of investigation, the circumstances are the related or accessory facts or occurrences which attend upon it, which closely precede or follow it, which surround and accompany it, which depend upon it, or which support or qualify it. Pfaffenback v. Railroad, 142 Ind. 246, 41 N. E. 530; Clare v. People, 9 Colo. 122, 10 P. 799; Williams v. National Fruit Exch., 95 Conn. 300, 111 A. 197, 203.

The terms "circumstance" and "fact" are, in many applications, synonymous; but the true distinction of a circumstance is its relative character. "Any fact may be a circumstance with reference to any other fact." 1 Benth. Jud. Evid. 42, note; Id. 142.

Thrift, integrity, good repute, business capacity, and stability of character, for example, are "circumstances" which may be very properly considered in determining the question of "adequate security." Martin v. Duke, 5 Redf. Sur. (N. Y.) 600.

The word "circumstances," as used in a statute providing for a suitable allowance for the wife in a divorce action, having regard to the "circumstances" of the parties, includes practically everything which has a legitimate bearing on present and prospective matters relating to the lives of both parties. Lamborn v. Lamborn, 90 Cal. App. 494, 251 P. 943, 945.

The "circumstances of the transaction itself," as used in the doctrine of dying declarations, are the circumstances or facts leading up to, causing, or attending the homicide, and are not confined to occurrences at the very time thereof. Pendleton v. Commonwealth, 131 Va. 676, 109 S. E. 201, 209.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. Evidence directed to the attending circumstances; evidence which inferentially proves the principal fact by establishing a condition of surrounding and limiting circumstances, whose existence is a premise from which the existence of the principal fact may be concluded by necessary laws of reasoning. State v. Avery, 113 Mo. 475, 21 S. W. 193; Howard v. State, 34 Ark. 433; State v. Evans, 1 Marvel (Del.) 477, 41 A. 136; Comm. v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 319, 52 Am. Dec. 711; Gardner v. Preston, 2 Day (Conn.) 205, 2 Am. Dec. 91; State v. Miller, 9 Houst. (Del.) 564, 32 A. 137.

When the existence of any fact is attested by witnesses, as having come under the cognizance of their senses, or is stated in documents, the genuineness and veracity of which there seems no reason to question, the evidence of that fact is said to be direct or positive. When, on the contrary, the existence of the principal fact is only inferred from one or more circumstances which have been established directly, the evidence is said to be circumstantial. And when the existence of the principal fact does not follow from the evidentiary facts as a necessary consequence of the law of nature, but is deduced from them by a process of probable reasoning, the evidence and proof are said to be presumptive. Best, Pres. 246; Id. 12.

All presumptive evidence is circumstantial, because necessarily derived from or made up of circumstances, but all circumstantial evidence is not presumptive, that is, it does not operate in the way of presumption, being sometimes of a higher grade, and leading to necessary conclusions, instead of probable ones. Burrill.

CITIZEN.

In General

A member of a free city or jural society, (civitas), possessing all the rights and privileges which can be enjoyed by any person under its constitution and government, and subject to the corresponding duties.

The term appears to have been used in the Roman government to designate a person who had the freedom of the city, and the right to exercise all political and civil privileges of the government. There was also, at Rome, a partial citizenship, including civil, but not political rights. Complete citizenship embraced both. Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 451; 17 L. Q. Rev. 270; 1 Sel. Essays in Anglo-Amer. L. H. 578.

One who, as a member of a nation or body politic of the sovereign state, owes allegiance to and may claim reciprocal protection from its government. Ozbolt v. Lumbermen's Indemnity Exchange (Tex. Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 252, 253.

A member of the civil state entitled to all its privileges. Cooley, Const. Lim. 77.

One of the sovereign people. A constituent member of the sovereignty synonymous with the people. Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 404, 15 L. Ed. 691.

In American Law

One who, under the constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, and by virtue of birth or naturalization within the jurisdiction, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. Ed. 588; White v. Clements, 39 Ga. 259; Amy v. Smith, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 331; State v. County Court, 90 Mo. 593, 2 S. W. 788; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. Ed. 627; U. S. v. Morris (D. C.) 125 F. 325.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. Amend. XIV, Const. U. S.; In re Look Tin Sing, 10 Sawy. 353, 21 F. 905; U. S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 18 S. Ct. 456, 42 L. Ed. 890; Prowd v. Gore, 57 Cal. App. 458, 207 P. 490, 491; Soo Hoo Yee v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 3 F.(2d) 592, 594; Louie Lit v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 238 F. 75, 76; Nyman v. Erickson, 100 Wash. 149, 170 P. 546, 547.

There is in our political system a government of each of the several states, and a government of the United States. Each is distinct from the others, and has citizens of its own, who owe it allegiance, and whose rights, within its jurisdiction, it must protect. The same person may be at the same time a citizen of the United States and a citizen of a state; but his rights of citizenship under one of these governments will be different from those he has under the other. The government of the United States, although it is, within the scope of its powers, supreme and beyond the states, can neither grant nor secure to its citizens rights or privileges which are not expressly or by implication placed under its jurisdiction. All that cannot be so granted or secured are left to the exclusive protection of the states. U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. Ed. 588.

A "citizen" ordinarily means only a natural person, and will not be construed to include a corporation, unless the general purpose and import of the statutory or constitutional provision in which the term is found seems to require it. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. State, 179 S. W. 342, 343, 120 Ark. 182, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 873; Civic Improvement League of Toledo, Iowa, v. Hanson, 181 Iowa, 327, 164 N. W. 752, 753; Wallace v. Moore, 178 N. C. 114, 100 S. E. 237, 239; Jennings v. Idaho Ry., Light & Power Co., 26 Idaho, 703, 146 P. 101, 102, L. R. A. 1915D, 115, Ann. Cas. 1916E, 359; State of Texas v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 258 U. S. 158, 42 S. Ct. 261, 262, 66 L. Ed. 531; American Fire Ins. Co. v. King Lumber & Mfg. Co., 250 U. S. 2, 39 S. Ct. 431, 433, 63 L. Ed. 810; People v. Woman's Home Missionary Soc. of M. E. Church, 303 Ill. 418, 135 N. E. 749, 750.

Similarly, "citizen," with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, does not include an association. Rife v. Lumber Underwriters (C. C. A.) 204 F. 32, 35; Coyle v. Duncan Spangler Coal Co. (D. C.) 288 F. 897, 902; Village Mills Co. v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Tex. Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 785, 788.

The term "citizen" is distinguishable from "resident" or "inhabitant." One may be a citizen of a state without being an inhabitant, or an inhabitant without being a citizen. Quinby v. Duncan, 4 Har. (Del.) 383; Harris v. Harris, 205 Iowa, 108, 215 N. W. 661, 663; Travis v. Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., 40 S. Ct. 228, 231, 252 U. S. 60, 64 L. Ed. 460; Commonwealth v. De Sarto, 62 Pa. Super. Ct. 184, 186; Levensper v. Griffin, 146 La. 584, 83 So. 839, 843; State Public Utilities Commission v. Early, 285 Ill. 469, 121 N. E. 63, 64.

The words "citizen" and "citizenship," however, usually include the idea of domicile; U. S. v. Gronich (D. C.) 211 F. 548, 550; Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co. (D. C.) 252 F. 910, 913; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Petrowsky (C. C. A.) 250 F. 554, 557; and hence in common use, "citizen" often denotes an inhabitant or resident; Jonesboro Trust Co. v. Nutt, 118 Ark. 368, 176 S. W. 322, 324; Prowd v. Gore, 57 Cal. App. 458, 207 P. 490, 491; State v. Trustees, 11 Ohio, 24; Vachikinas v. Vachikinas, 91 W. Va. 181, 112 S. E. 316, 319; Margarete Steiff v. Bing (C. C. A.) 206 F. 900.

In English Law

An inhabitant of a city. 1 Rolle, 138. The representative of a city, in parliament. 1 Bl. Comm. 174.

It will be seen that, in the English usage, the word adheres closely to its original meaning, as shown by its derivation, (civis, a free inhabitant of a city.) When it is designed to designate an inhabitant of the country, or one amenable to the laws of the nation, "subject" is the word there employed.

CITIZENSHIP. The status of being a citizen (q. v.).

Membership in a political society, implying a duty of allegiance on the part of the member and a duty of protection on the part of the society. Luria v. U. S., 231 U. S. 9, 34 S. Ct. 10, 13, 58 L. Ed. 101.

CITY.

In England

An incorporated town or borough which is or has been the see of a bishop. Co. Litt. 108; 1 Bl. Comm. 114; Cowell; 1 Steph. Comm. 115. State v. Green, 126 N. C. 1032, 35 S. E. 462.

There is said, however, to be no necessary connection between a city and a see. Oxford Dict., citing Freeman.

A large town incorporated with certain privileges. The inhabitants of a city. The citizens. Worcester.

In America

A municipal corporation of a larger class, the distinctive feature of whose organization is its government by a chief executive (usually called "mayor") and a legislative body, composed of representatives of the citizens, (usually called a "council" or "board of aldermen,") and other officers having special functions. Wight Co. v. Wolff, 112 Ga. 169, 37 S. E. 395. A political entity or subdivision for local governmental purposes. Nolan v. Jones, 215 Ky. 238, 284 S. W. 1054, 1056. A voluntary organization created for local convenience, advantage, and interest, and acting in a private as well as a public capacity. City of Golden v. Western Lumber & Pole Co., 60 Colo. 382, 154 P. 95, 96.

The fundamental distinction between town and city organization is that in the former all the qualified inhabitants meet together to deliberate and vote as individuals, each in his own right, while in the latter all municipal functions are performed by deputies; the one being direct, the other representative. In re Opinion of the Justices, 229 Mass. 601, 119 N. E. 778, 781.

The word "city," however, is often used to include an incorporated town. People v. Grover, 258 Ill. 124, 101 N. E. 216, 218, Ann. Cas. 1914B, 212; State Board of Land Com'rs v. Ririe, 56 Utah, 213, 190 P. 59, 61; Ransome-Crummey Co. v. Woodham, 29 Cal. App. 356, 156 P. 62, 63; Green v. Hutson, 139 Miss. 471, 104 So. 171, 172. It has also been held that, under statutes, the term includes all municipal corporations and corporate authorities, such as a board of park commissioners; People v. Kesner, 321 Ill. 230, 151 N. E. 481, 483; but that it does not include a village; Village of Depue v. Banschbach, 273 Ill. 574, 113 N. E. 156, 159.

In Medieval History

In the Middle Ages in Germany, fortified places in the enjoyment of market-jurisdiction.

The German as well as the French cities are a creation of the Middle Ages; there was an organic connection with the Roman town-system. Schröder, Lehrbuch des Deutschen Rechtsgeschichte 588.

CITY COUNCIL. The name of a group of municipal officers constituting primarily a legislative and administrative body, but which is often charged with judicial or quasi-judicial functions, as when sitting on charges involving the removal of an officer for cause. Rutter v. Burke, 89 Vt. 14, 93 A. 842, 849.

CITY OF LONDON COURT. A court having a local jurisdiction within the city of London. It is to all intents and purposes a county court, having the same jurisdiction and procedure.

CIUDADES. Sp. In Spanish law, cities; distinguished from towns (pueblos) and villages (villas.) Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 537.

CIVIC ENTERPRISE. A project or undertaking in which citizens of a city co-operate to promote the common good and general welfare of the people of the city. James McCord Co. v. Citizens' Hotel Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 287 S. W. 906, 908.

CIVIL. Originally, pertaining or appropriate to a member of a civitas or free political community; natural or proper to a citizen. Also, relating to the community, or to the policy and government of the citizens and subjects of a state.

The word is derived from the Latin civillis, a citizen, as distinguished from a savage or barbarian. Byers v. Sun Savings Bank, 41 Okl. 728, 139 P. 948, 949, 52 L. R. A. (N. S.) 320, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 222.

In law, the term has various significations. In contradistinction to barbarous or savage, it indicates a state of society reduced to order and regular government; thus, we speak of civil life, civil society, civil government, and civil liberty. In contradistinction to criminal, it indicates the private rights and remedies of men, as members of the community, in contrast to those which are public and relate to the government; thus, we speak of civil process and criminal process, civil jurisdiction and criminal jurisdiction.

It is also used in contradistinction to military, ecclesiastical, natural, or foreign; thus, we speak of a civil station, as opposed to a military or an ecclesiastical station; a civil death, as opposed to a natural death; a civil war, as opposed to a foreign war. Story, Const. § 791; 1 Bla. Comm. 6, 125, 251; Montesquieu, Sp. of Laws, b. 1, c. 3; Rutherford, Inst. b. 2, c. 2; id. c. 3; id. c. 8, p. 359; Heineccius, Elem. Jurisp. Nat. b. 2, ch. 6.

original owner. Baldwin Lumber Co. v. Dalferes, 138 La. 507, 70 So. 493, 499; Maison-neuve v. Dalferes, 138 La. 527, 70 So. 500, 501.

—Civil responsibility. The liability to be called upon to respond to an action at law for an injury caused by a delict or crime, as opposed to criminal responsibility, or liability to be proceeded against in a criminal tribunal.

—Civil side. When the same court has jurisdiction of both civil and criminal matters, proceedings of the first class are often said to be on the civil side; those of the second, on the criminal side.

As to civil "Commotion," "Contempt," "Corporations," "Death," "Injury," "Liberty," "Obligation," "Officer," "Remedy," "Rights," and "War," see those titles. See, also, the following titles beginning with "Civil."

CIVIL ACTION.

In the Civil Law

A personal action which is instituted to compel payment, or the doing of some other thing which is purely civil. Pothier, Introd. Gen. aux Cont. 110.

At Common Law

One which seeks the establishment, recovery, or redress of private and civil rights; —distinguished from a criminal action.

One brought to recover some civil right, or to obtain redress for some wrong not being a crime or misdemeanor. Wheeling Traction Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. (D. C.) 1 F.(2d) 478, 479.

Civil cases are those which involve disputes or contests between man and man, and which terminate only in the adjustment of the rights of plaintiffs and defendants. They include all cases which cannot legally be denominated "criminal cases." Fenstermacher v. State, 19 Or. 504, 25 P. 142. And see Grainola State Bank v. Shellenberger, 81 Okl. 204, 197 P. 436, 437; Village of Marble Hill v. Caldwell (Mo. App.) 178 S. W. 226, 227; U. S. v. Great Northern Ry. Co. (C. C. A.) 220 F. 630, 633; People v. Vaughn, 235 Ill. App. 308, 313; Ex parte Wong Wing (D. C.) 220 F. 352, 354; State v. Willis, 95 Wash. 251, 163 P. 737; State v. Flannelly, 96 Kan. 833, 154 P. 235, 236; Appeal of Slattery, 90 Conn. 48, 96 A. 178, 179.

Civil suits relate to and affect, as to the parties against whom they are brought, only individual rights which are within their individual control, and which they may part with at their pleasure. The design of such suits is the enforcement of merely private obligations and duties. Criminal prosecutions, on the other hand, involve public wrongs, or a breach and violation of public rights and duties, which affect the whole community, considered as such in its social and aggregate capacity. The end they have in view is the prevention of similar offenses, not atonement or expiation for crime committed. Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128.

"Civil cause" comprehends every conceivable cause of action whether legal or equitable, except such as are criminal in the usual sense; that is, where the judgment against the defendant may be fine, or imprisonment, or both, and in case of fine alone, imprisonment until payment. Welford v. Havard, 127 Miss. 88, 89 So. 812, 813.

In Code Practice

A proceeding in a court of justice in which one party, known as the "plaintiff," demands against another party, known as the "defendant," the enforcement or protection of a private right, or the prevention or redress of a private wrong. It may also be brought for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture. Rev. Code Iowa 1880, § 2505 (Code 1931, § 10939).

A "civil action" implies adversary parties and an issue, and is designed for the recovery or vindication of a civil right or the redress of some civil wrong. Bopst v. Williams, 287 Mo. 317, 229 S. W. 796, 798.

The distinction between actions at law and suits in equity, and the forms of all such actions and suits, heretofore existing, is abolished; and there shall be in this state, hereafter, but one form of action for the enforcement or protection of private rights and the redress of private wrongs, which shall be denominated a "civil action." Code N. Y. § 69.

"Civil action" is a generic term, and does not necessarily imply jury trial. State Board of Medical Examiners v. Macy, 92 Wash. 614, 159 P. 801, 804.

CIVIL BILL COURT. A tribunal in Ireland with a jurisdiction analogous to that of the county courts in England. The judge of it is also chairman of quarter sessions (where the jurisdiction is more extensive than in England), and performs the duty of revising barrister. Wharton.

CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS. Acts passed in many of the United States which provide an action for damages against a vendor of intoxicating liquors, (and, in some cases, against his lessor,) on behalf of the wife or family of a person who has sustained injuries by reason of his intoxication. Moran v. Goodwin, 130 Mass. 158, 39 Am. Rep. 443; Baker v. Pope, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 556; Dice v. Sherberneau, 152 Mich. 601, 116 N. W. 416, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765; Bistline v. Ney Bros., 134 Iowa, 172, 111 N. W. 422, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1158, 13 Ann. Cas. 196; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Bedore v. Newton, 54 N. H. 117; Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570; Stanton v. Simpson, 48 Vt. 628; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133; Horning v. Wendell, 57 Ind. 171.

CIVIL LAW. "Civil Law," "Roman Law" and "Roman Civil Law" are convertible phrases, meaning the same system of jurisprudence.

The word "civil," as applied to the laws in force in Louisiana, before the adoption of the Civil Code, is not used in contradistinction to the word "criminal," but must be restricted to the Roman law. It is used in contradistinction to the laws of England and those of the respective states. Jennison v. Warmack, 5 La. 493.

The system of jurisprudence held and administered in the Roman empire, particularly as set forth in the compilation of Justinian and his successors,—comprising the stitutes, Code, Digest, and Novels, and collectively denominated the "Corpus Juris Civilis,"—as distinguished from the common law of England and the canon law.

That rule of action which every particular nation, commonwealth, or city has established peculiarly for itself; more properly called "municipal" law, to distinguish it from the "law of nature," and from international law. See Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 19; Sevier v. Riley, 189 Cal. 170, 244 P. 323, 325.

That division of municipal law which is occupied with the exposition and enforcement of civil rights as distinguished from criminal law.

Comm. 591; 1 Bl. Comm. 332.

A challenge of the property or ownership of a thing which is wrongfully withheld from the possession of the claimant. Stowel v. Zouch, Plowd. 359; Robinson v. Wiley, 15 N. Y. 491; Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 14; Douglas v. Beasley, 40 Ala. 147; Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 615, 10 L. Ed. 1060; U. S. v. Rhodes (C. C.) 30 F. 433; Silliman v. Eddy, 8 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 123.

A claim is a right or title, actual or supposed, to a debt, privilege, or other thing in the possession of another; not the possession, but the means by or through which the claimant obtains the possession or enjoyment. Lawrence v. Miller, 2 N. Y. 245, 254.

A claim is, in a just, juridical sense, a demand of some matter as of right made by one person upon another, to do or to forbear to do some act or thing as a matter of duty. A more limited, but at the same time an equally expressive, definition was given by Lord Dyer, that "a claim is a challenge by a man of the propriety or ownership of a thing, which he has not in possession, but which is wrongfully detained from him." Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 615, 10 L. Ed. 1060.

"Claim" has generally been defined as a demand for a thing, the ownership of which, or an interest in which, is in the claimant, but the possession of which is wrongfully withheld by another. But a broader meaning must be accorded to it. A demand for damages for criminal conversation with plaintiff's wife is a claim; but it would be doing violence to language to say that such damages are property of plaintiff which defendant withholds. In common parlance the noun "claim" means an assertion, a pretension; and the verb is often used (not quite correctly) as a synonym for "state," "urge," "insist," or "assert." In a statute authorizing the courts to order a bill of particulars of the "claim" of either party, "claim" is co-extensive with "case," and embraces all causes of action and all grounds of defense, the pleas of both parties, and pleas in confession and avoidance, no less than complaints and counter-claims. It warrants the court in requiring a defendant who justifies in a libel suit to furnish particulars of the facts relied upon in justification. Orvis v. Jennings, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 446.

Under the mechanic's lien law of some states, a demand put on record by a mechanic or material-man against a building for work or material contributed to its erection is called a "claim."

Under the land laws of the United States, the tract of land taken up by a preemptioneer or other settler (and also his possession of it) is called a "claim." Railroad Co. v. Abink, 14 Neb. 95, 15 N. W. 317; Bowman v. Torr, 3 Iowa, 573.

In patent law, the claim is the specification by the applicant for a patent of the particular things in which he insists his invention is novel and patentable; it is the clause in the application in which the applicant defines precisely what his invention is. White v. Dunbar, 119 U. S. 47, 7 S. Ct. 72, 30 L. Ed. 303; Brammer v. Schroeder, 106 F. 930, 46 C. C. A. 41; Mergenthaler Linotype Co. v. International Typesetting Mach. Co. (D. C.) 229 F. 168, 173; Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Metropolitan Electric Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 290 F. 661, 664.

Under Workmen's Compensation Acts, a demand for compensation. Giamelli v. Rahtz, 209 App. Div. 720, 205 N. Y. S. 346, 347; Georgia Casualty Co. v. Ward (Tex. Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 380, 381. In a provision that no claim for compensation shall be assignable before payment, the word is used broadly to cover both claims and awards. Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co., 55 Cal. App. 704, 204 P. 262, 263.

—Adverse claim. A claim set up by a stranger to goods upon which the sheriff has levied an execution or attachment. Also applied to claims to real property.

—Claim and delivery. An action at law for the recovery of specific personal chattels wrongfully taken and detained, with damages which the taking or detention has caused; in substance a modern modification of the common-law action of replevin. *Fredricks v. E. 589, 590, 114 S. C. 350; Hennessy v. Wagner, 220 P. 101, 102, 69 Mont. 46; Benzler v. Van Fleet, 152 P. 736, 28 Cal. App. 389; Reed v. Mills, 154 P. 113, 114, 78 Or. 558.

—Claim in equity. In English practice. In simple cases, where there was not any great conflict as to facts, and a discovery from a defendant was not sought, but a reference to chambers was nevertheless necessary before final decree, which would be as of course, all parties being before the court, the summary proceeding by claim was sometimes adopted, thus obviating the recourse to plenary and protracted pleadings. This summary practice was created by orders 22d April, 1850, which came into operation on the 22d May following. See Smith, Ch. Pr. 664. By Consolid. Ord. 1860, viii, r. 4, claims were abolished. Wharton.

—Claim of consuance. In practice. An intervention by a third person in a suit, claiming that he has rightful jurisdiction of the cause which the plaintiff has commenced out of the claimant's court. Now obsolete. 2 Wils. 409; 3 Bl. Comm. 298.

—Claim of liberty. In English practice. A suit or petition to the queen, in the court of exchequer, to have liberties and franchises confirmed there by the attorney general.

—Claim property bond. A bond filed by a defendant in cases of replevin and of execution to procure return of goods. Snyder v. Frankenhof, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 767; Weaver v. Lawrence, 1 Dall. 156, 1 L. Ed. 79; 1 Dall. U. S. (4th Ed. by Brightly) 156, 157, note.

—Counter-claim. A claim set up and urged by the defendant in opposition to or reduction of the claim presented by the plaintiff. See, more fully, Counter-claim.

Smith*, 42 Nev. 302, 176 P. 261, 265.

CLAIMANT. In admiralty practice. A person who lays claim to property seized on a libel in rem, and is authorized and admitted to defend the action. The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 17 S. Ct. 510, 41 L. Ed. 937; Thirty Hogsheads of Sugar, Bentzon, Claimant v. Boyle, 9 Cranch, 191, 3 L. Ed. 701.

One who asserts any demand or claim or who may do so in any capacity, though sometimes "claimant" has a more restricted meaning. Croteau v. Lunn & Sweet Employees' Ass'n, 124 Me. 85, 126 A. 284, 285; Ex parte Elba Bank & Trust Co., 199 Ala. 651, 75 So. 294, 295; Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Noxubee County v. Evans, 136 Miss. 178, 99 So. 819, 821; In re Willow Creek, 74 Or. 592, 144 P. 505, 514; Reising v. Deutsche Dampfschiffahrts-Gesellschaft Hansa (C. C. A.) 15 F.(2d) 259, 261.

CLASSIFICATION. In the practice of the English chancery division, where there are several parties to an administration action, including those who have been served with notice of the decree or judgment, and it appears to the judge (or chief clerk) that any of them form a class having the same interest, (e. g., residuary legatees,) he may require them to be represented by one solicitor, in order to prevent the expense of each of them attending by separate solicitors. This is termed "classifying the interests of the parties attending," or, shortly, "classifying," or "classification." In practice the term is also applied to the directions given by the chief clerk as to which of the parties are to attend on each of the accounts and inquiries directed by the judgment. Sweet.

"Classification" is not different in law than in other departments of knowledge. It is the grouping of things in speculation or practice because they agree with one another in certain particulars and differ from other things in those particulars. Tanner v. Little, 240 U. S. 369, 36 S. Ct. 379, 383, 60 L. Ed. 691; Heisler v. Thomas Colliery Co., 260 U. S. 245, 43 S. Ct. 83, 67 L. Ed. 237, affirming decree 274 Pa. 448, 118 A. 394, 24 A. L. R. 1215; Commonwealth v. Casey, 231 Pa. 170, 80 A. 78, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 767; Director General of Railroads v. Viscose Co., 254 U. S. 498, 41 S. Ct. 151, 153, 65 L. Ed. 372.

CLASSIFICATION OF RISKS. A useless clause or disposition [one which expresses no more than the law by intendment would have supplied] is not supported by a remote presumption, [or foreign intendment of some purpose, in regard whereof it might be material,] or by a cause arising afterwards, [which may induce an operation of those idle words.] Bac. Max. 82, regula 21.

Clausulæ inconsuetæ semper inducunt suspicionem. Unusual clauses [in an instrument] always induce suspicion. 3 Coke, 81.

CLAUSUM. Lat. Close, closed up, sealed. Inclosed, as a parcel of land.

In Old English Law

Close. Closed.

A writ was either clausum (close) or aper-tum (open). Grants were said to be by literæ patentæ (open grant) or literæ clausæ (close grant); 2 Bla. Comm. 346. Occurring in the phrase quare clausum fregit (Rucker v. McNeely, 4 Blackf. One which contains nothing in the margin qualifying the words in the bill of lading itself. The Isla de Panay (C. C. A.) 292 F. 723, 730.

CLEAN HANDS. It is a rule of equity that a plaintiff must come with "clean hands," i. e., he must be free from reproach in his conduct. But there is this limitation to the rule: that his conduct can only be excepted to in respect to the subject-matter of his claim; everything else is immaterial. American Ass'n v. Innis, 109 Ky. 595, 60 S. W. 388; Harton v. Little, 188 Ala. 640, 65 So. 951, 952;

CLEAR AND CONVINCING PROOF. There are numerous variations of the phrase "clear and convincing" as applied to proof, such as "clear and distinct," "clear, distinct and satisfactory," "clear, precise and indubitable," "clear and satisfactory," "clear, cogent and convincing," etc. Generally, they mean, when applied to proof, proof beyond a reasonable, i. e., a well-founded, doubt, though, of course, the evidence may be conflicting, and absolute certainty is not required. Karr v. Pearl, 212 Ky. 387, 279 S. W. 631, 632; Jackman v. Lawrence Drilling & Development Co., 106 Kan. 59, 187 P. 258, 260; Beeler v. People, 58 Colo. 451, 146 P. 762, 764; State v. Price, 101 Ohio St. 50, 128 N. E. 173, 174. There are cases, however, that give a less rigorous, but somewhat uncertain, meaning, viz., more than a preponderance but less than is required in a criminal case. Dovich v. Chief Consolidated Mining Co., 53 Utah, 522, 174 P. 627, 630; Washam v. Beatty, 210 Ala. 635, 99 So. 163, 167; Good Milking Mach. Co. v. Galloway, 168 Iowa, 550, 150 N. W. 710, 712; Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n v. Staley (Tex. Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 814, 815; M. E. Smith & Co. v. Kimble, 38 S. D. 511, 162 N. W. 162, 163; Merrick v. Ditzler, 91 Ohio St. 256, 110 N. CLEAR EVIDENCE OR PROOF. Evidence which is positive, precise and explicit, as opposed to ambiguous, equivocal, or contradictory proof, and which tends directly to establish the point to which it is adduced, instead of leaving it a matter of conjecture or presumption, and is sufficient to make out a prima facie case. Mortgage Co. v. Pace, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 222, 56 S. W. 377; Reynolds v. Blaisdell, 23 R. I. 16, 49 A. 42; Ward v. Waterman, 85 Cal. 488, 24 P. 930; Jermyn v. McClure, 195 Pa. 245, 45 A. 938; Winston v. Burnell, 44 Kan. 367, 24 P. 477, 21 Am. St. Rep. 289; Spencer v. Colt, 89 Pa. 318; People v. Wreden, 59 Cal. 395. A "clear proof" necessarily means a clear preponderance. It may mean that which may be seen, that which is discernible, and that which may be appreciated and understood. In such sense it may not really mean more than a fair preponderance of proof. It may, however, also convey the idea, under emphasis, of certainty, and probably would to the common mind. It may be understood as meaning beyond doubt. The expression is equivocal and mischievous. It may be reasonably construed as requiring higher degree of proof than fair preponderance. Aubin v. Duluth St. Ry. Co., 169 Minn. 342, 211 N. W. 580, 583.

CLEAR TITLE. One which is not subject to any incumbrance. Roberts v. Bassett, 105 Mass. 409. For a clear deed, see Rohr v. Kindt, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 563, 39 Am. S. v. Pope*, 28 Fed. Cas. 630; Hamilton v. Menifee, 11 Tex. 751.

This word is particularly appropriate to the edge of the sea, while "shore" may be used of the margins of inland waters.

In Maritime Law

COLLISION. The act of ships or vessels striking together.

In its strict sense, collision means the impact of two vessels both moving, and is distinguished from allision, which designates the striking of a moving vessel against one that is stationary. But collision is used in a broad sense, to include allision, and perhaps other species of encounters between vessels, or a vessel and other floating, though non-navigable, objects. Wright v. Brown, 4 Ind. 97, 58 Am. Dec. 622; London Assur. Co. v. Companhia De Moagens, 68 F. 258, 15 C. C. A. 379; Towing Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 23 App. Div. 152, 48 N. Y. S. 927; *Columbia Ins. L. R. 215.

The term is not inapplicable to cases where a stationary vessel is struck by one under way, strictly termed "allision"; or where one vessel is brought into contact with another by swinging at anchor. And even an injury received by a vessel at her moorings, in consequence of being violently rubbed or pressed against by a second vessel lying alongside of her, in consequence of a collision against such second vessel by a third one under way, may be compensated for, under the general head of "collision," as well as an injury which is the direct result of a "blow," properly so called. The Moxey, Abb. Adm. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 9,894.

In Automobile Insurance Law

The term denotes the act of colliding; striking together; violent contact. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Cartmel, 87 Fla. 495, 100 So. 802, 803, 35 A. L. R. 1013. The term implies an impact or sudden contact of a moving body with an obstruction in its line of motion, whether both bodies are in motion or one stationary and the other, no matter which, in motion. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. American Compounding Co., 211 Ala. 593, 100 So. 904, 906, 35 A. L. R. 1018.

198 N. W. 864, 866, 35 A. L. R. 1003; T. C. Power Motor Car Co. v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 223 P. 112, 69 Mont. 563, 35 A. L. R. 1028; Interstate Casualty Co. v. Chatterjee, 93 Okl. 249, 219 P. 102, 103; and also denied, Fox v. Interstate Exch., 182 Wis. 28, 195 N. W. 842. Liability has also been denied where collision was with earth, after automobile had gone over an embankment, Continental Casualty Co. v. Paul, 209 Ala. 166, 95 So. 814, 815, 30 A. L. R. 802 (contra Polstein v. Pacific Fire Ins. Co., 203 N. Y. S. 362, 122 Misc. 194); and with stump after skidding off the road, *Ploe v. In pleading. Ground of action admitted to subsist in the opposite party by the pleading of one of the parties to an action, which is so set out as to be apparently valid, but which is in reality legally insufficient.

This was a term of the ancient rhetoricians, and early adopted into the language of pleading. It was an apparent or prima facie right; and the meaning of the rule that pleadings in confession and avoidance should give color was that they should confess the matter adversely alleged, to such an extent, at least, as to admit some apparent right in the opposite party, which required to be encountered and avoided by the allegation of new matter. Color was either express, i. e., inserted in the pleading, or implied, which was naturally inherent in the structure of the pleading. Steph. Pl. 233; Merten v. Bank, 5 Okl. 585, 49 P. 913.

The word also means the dark color of the skin showing the presence of negro blood; and hence it is equivalent to African descent or parentage. Johnson v. Board of Education of Wilson County, 166 N. C. 468, 82 S. E. 832, 834, L. R. A. 1915A, 828.

COLOR OF AUTHORITY. That semblance or presumption of authority sustaining the acts of a public officer which is derived from his apparent title to the office or from a writ or other process in his hands apparently valid and regular. State v. Oates, 86 Wis. 634, 57 N. W. 296, 39 Am. St. Rep. 912; Wyatt v. Monroe, 27 Tex. 268.

COLOR OF LAW. The appearance or semblance, without the substance, of legal right. McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 19 S. Ct. 644, 43 L. Ed. 936; Wilt v. Bueter, 186 Ind. 98, 111 N. E. 926, 929; Wright v. Phelps, 89 Vt. 107, 94 A. 294, 295; State v. Brechler, 185 Wis. 599, 202 N. W. 144, 148.

COLOR OF OFFICE. An act unjustly done by the countenance of an office, being grounded upon corruption, to which the office is as a shadow and color. Plow. 64.

A claim or assumption of right to do an act by virtue of an office, made by a person who is legally destitute of any such right. Feller v. Gates, 40 Or. 543, 67 P. 416, 56 L. R. A. 630, 91 Am. St. Rep. 492; State v. Fowler, 88 Md. 601, 42 A. 201, 42 L. R. A. 849, 71 Am. St. Rep. 452; Bishop v. McGillis, 80 Wis. 575, 50 N. W. 779, 27 Am. St. Rep. 63; Decker v. Judson, 16 N. Y. 439; Mason v. Crabtree, 71 Ala. 481; Morton v. Campbell, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 181; Luther v. Banks, 111 Ga. 374, 36 S. E. 826; People v. Schuyler, 4 N. Y. 187; Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Smith, 35 Ga. App. 744, 134 S. E. 801, 802; Mobile County v. Williams, 180 Ala. 639, 61 So. 963, 967. See Colore Officii.

The phrase implies, we think, some official power vested in the actor,—he must be at least officer de facto. We do not understand that an act of a mere pretender to an office, or false personator of an officer, is said to be done by color of office. And it implies an illegal claim of authority, by virtue of the office, to do the act or thing in question. Burral v. Acker, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 606, 35 Am. Dec. 582.

COLOR OF TITLE. The appearance, semblance, or simulacrum of title. Any fact, extraneous to the act or mere will of the claimant, which has the appearance, on its face, of supporting his claim of a present title to land, but which, for some defect, in reality falls short of establishing it. Wright v. Mattison, 18 How. 56, 15 L. Ed. 280; Cameron v. U. S., 148 U. S. 301, 13 S. Ct. 595, 37 L. Ed. 459; Saltmarsh v. Crommelin, 24 Ala. 352; It has been termed "apparent right." Fear v. Barwise, 93 Kan. 131, 143 P. 505, 507.

Anything in writing purporting to convey title to the land, which defines the extent of the claim, it being immaterial how defective or imperfect the writing may be, so that it is a sign, semblance, or color of title. Veal v. Robinson, 70 Ga. 809; Mullan's Adm'r v. Carper, 37 W. Va. 215, 16 S. E. 527; Theisen v. Qualley, 42 S. D. 367, 175 N. W. 556, 557. A title that is imperfect, but not so obviously so that it would be apparent to one not skilled in the law. Williamson v. Tison, 99 Ga. 792, 26 S. E. 766; Head v. Phillips, 70 Ark. 432, 68 S. W. 878; Bloom v. Straus, 70 Ark. 483, 69 S. W. 549, 72 S. W. 563; Ipock v. Gaskins, 161 N. C. 673, 77 S. E. 843, 847.

A writing upon its face professing to pass title but which does not, either through want of title in the grantor or a defective mode of conveyance. Philbin v. Carr, 75 Ind. App. 560, 129 N. E. 19, 24; Alsworth v. Richmond Cedar Works, 89 S. E. 1008, 1010, 172 N. C. 17; Morgan v. Kankey, 133 Ark. 599, 202 S. W. 844, 845; Powers v. Malavazos, 25 Ohio App. 450, 158 N. E. 654, 655.

That which the law considers prima facie a good title, but which, by reason of some defect, not appearing on its face, does not in fact amount to title. An absolute nullity, as a void deed, judgment, etc., will not constitute color of title. Bernal v. Gleim, 33 Cal. 668; Causey v. White, 143 Ga. 7, 84 S. E. 58; Stearns Coal & Lumber Co. v. Boyatt, 168 Ky. 111, 181 S. W. 962, 964; Dussart v. M. Abdo Mercantile Co., 57 Colo. 423, 140 P. 806, 808. That which is title in appearance but not in reality. Fitschen Bros. Commercial Co. v. Noyes' Estate, 76 Mont. 175, 246 P. 773, 779; Grossman v. Yip Wing, 62 Cal. App. 121, 216 P. 634, 637; Seals v. Seals, 165 N. C. 409, 81 S. E. 613, 614, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 134.

"Any instrument having a grantor and grantee, and containing a description of the lands intended to be conveyed, and apt words for their conveyance, gives color of title to the lands described. Such an instrument purports to be a conveyance of the title, and because it does not, for some reason, have that effect, it passes only color or the semblance of a title." Brooks v. Bruyn, 35 Ill. 392.

Color of title and "claim of right" or "claim of title" are not synonymous. Herbert v. Hanrick, 16 Ala. 581; Allen v. Mansfield, 108 Mo. 343, 18 S. W. 901. To constitute color of title, there must be a paper title; but claim of title may rest wholly in parol. Goulding v. Shonquist, 159 Iowa, 647, 141 N. W. 24, 25. And see Wells v. Wells, 262 Ill. 320, 104 N. E. 649, 652; Sandoval v. Perez, 26 N. M. 280, 191 P. 467.

COLORABLE. That which has or gives color. That which is in appearance only, and not in reality, what it purports to be. Counterfeit, feigned, having the appearance of truth. Ellis v. Jones, 73 Colo. 516, 216 P. 257, 258.

COLORABLE ALTERATION. One which makes no real or substantial change, but is introduced only as a subterfuge or means of evading the patent or copyright law.

COLORABLE CAUSE OR INVOCATION OF JURISDICTION. With reference to actions for malicious prosecution, a "colorable cause or invocation of jurisdiction" means that a person, apparently qualified, has appeared before a justice and made a complaint under oath and in writing, stating some facts which in connection with other facts constitute a criminal offense or bear a similitude thereto. Hotel Supply Co. v. Reid, 16 Ala. App. 563, 80 So. 137, 138.

COLORABLE CLAIM. In bankruptcy law, a claim made by one holding the property as an agent or bailee of the bankrupt; a claim in which as a matter of law, there is no adverseness. In re Blum (C. C. A.) 202 F. 883, 884; In re Western Rope & Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 298 F. 926, 927.

COLORABLE IMITATION. In the law of trade-marks, this phrase denotes such a close or ingenious imitation as to be calculated to deceive ordinary persons.

COLORABLE PLEADING. The practice of giving color in pleading.

COLORABLE TRANSACTION. One presenting an appearance which does not correspond with the reality, and, ordinarily, an appearance intended to conceal or to deceive. Osborn v. Osborn, 102 Kan. 890, 172 P. 23, 24.

COLORE OFFICII. Lat. By color of office.

Acts done "virtute officii" are those within the authority of the officer, when properly performed, but which are performed improperly; acts done "colore officii" are those which are entirely outside or beyond the authority conferred by the office. Haffner v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 207 P. 716, 717, 35 Idaho, 517; Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco v. Smith, 244 P. 1102, 1104, 42 Idaho, 224.

COLORED. By common usage in America, this term, in such phrases as "colored persons," "the colored race," "colored men," and the like, is used to designate negroes or persons of the African race, including all persons of mixed blood descended from negro ancestry. Van Camp v. Board of Education, 9 Ohio St. 411; U. S. v. La Coste, 26 Fed. Cas. 829; Jones v. Com., 80 Va. 542; Heirn v. Bridault, 37 Miss. 222; State v. Chavers, 50 N. C. 15; Johnson v. Norwich, 29 Conn. 407; Collins v. Oklahoma State Hospital, 76 Okl. 229, 184 P. 946, 949, 7 A. L. R. 895.

But where a state Constitution provided for separate schools for the white and colored races, the term "white race" was held to be limited to the Caucasian race, and the term "colored races" to embrace all other races. Rice v. Gong Lum, 139 Miss. 760, 104 So. 105, 107.

It has also been held that there is no legal technical signification to the phrase "colored person" which the courts are bound judicially to know. Pauska v. Daus, 31 Tex. 74.

COLPICES. Young poles, which, being cut down, are made levers or lifters. Blount.

COLPINDACH. In old Scotch law. A young beast or cow, of the age of one or two years; in later times called a "cowdash."

COLT. An animal of the horse species, whether male or female, not more than four years old. Russ. & R. 416; Mallory v. Berry, 16 Kan. 295; Pullen v. State, 11 Tex. App. 91.

COM. An abbreviation for "company," exactly equivalent to "Co." Keith v. Sturges, 51 Ill. 142.

COMBARONES. In old English law. Fellow-barons; fellow-citizens;—the citizens or freemen of the Cinque Ports being anciently called "barons;" the term "combarones" is used in this sense in a grant of Henry III. to the barons of the port of Pevresham. Cowell.

COMBAT. A forcible encounter between two or more persons; a battle; a duel. Trial by battle.

Mutual Combat

One into which both the parties enter willingly or voluntarily; it implies a common intent to fight, but not necessarily an exchange of blows. Aldridge v. State, 59 Miss. 250; Tate v. State, 46 Ga. 158; State v. Moss, 24 N. M. 59, 172 P. 199; Findley v. State, 125 Ga. 583, 54 S. E. 106.

COMBE. A small or narrow valley.

COMBINATION. A conspiracy, or confederation of men for unlawful or violent deeds. See Deupree v. Thornton, 97 Neb. 812, 151 N. W. 305, 307, L. R. A. 1917C, 65.

In patent law, a union of different elements. A patent may be taken out for a new combination of existing machines. Stevenson Co. v. McFassell, 90 F. 707, 33 C. C. A. 249; Moore v. Schaw (C. C.) 118 F. 602; Moody v. Fiske, 2 Mas. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 9,745.

As applied to patent law, when the elements are so united that by their reciprocal influence upon each other, or their joint action on their common object, they perform additional functions and accomplish additional results, the union is a true "combination." Benjamin Menu Card Co. v. Rand, McNally & Co. (C. C.) 210 F. 285, 287.

The distinction between a "combination" and an "aggregation" lies in the presence or absence of mutuality of action; a "combination" essentially requiring that there be some joint operation performed by its elements, producing a result due to their joint and cooperating action, while in an "aggregation" there is a mere adding together of separate contributions, each operating independently of the other. Ball v. Coker (C. C. A.) 210 F. 278, 282; Bryant Electric Co. v. Harvey Hubbell, Inc. (C. C. A.) 267 F. 572, 573; Mead Morrision Mfg. Co. v. Exeter Mach. Works (D. C.) 215 F. 731.

COMBINATION IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

A trust, pool, or other association of two or more individuals or corporations having for its object to monopolize the manufacture or traffic in a particular commodity, to regulate or control the output, restrict the sale, establish and maintain the price, stifle or exclude competition, or otherwise to interfere with the normal course of trade under conditions of free competition. Northern Securities Co. v. U. S., 193 U. S. 197, 24 S. Ct. 436, 48 L. Ed. 679; U. S. v. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, 15 S. Ct. 249, 39 L. Ed. 325; Texas Brewing Co. v. Templeman, 90 Tex. 277, 38 S. W. 27; U. S. v. Patterson (C. C.) 55 F. 605; State v. Continental Tobacco Co., 177 Mo. 1, 75 S. W. 737.

COMBUSTIO PECUNIÆ. Burning of money; the ancient method of testing mixed and corrupt money, paid into the exchequer, by melting it down.

COME. To present oneself; to appear in court. In modern practice, though such presence may be constructive only, the word is still used to indicate participation in the proceedings. Thus, a pleading may begin, "Now comes the defendant," etc. In case of a default, the technical language of the record is that the party "comes not, but makes default." Horner v. O'Laughlin, 29 Md. 472. See, also, Melfi v. Barney (R. I.) 121 A. 67, 68.

COMES, v. A word used in a pleading to indicate the defendant's presence in court. See Come.

COMES, n. Lat. A follower, companion, or attendant; a count or earl.

The county court, a court of great antiquity and of great dignity in early times. 1 Spence, Eq. Jur. 42, 66. Also, the retinue or train of a prince or high governmental official. Spelman. The retinue which accompanied a Roman proconsul to his province. Du Cange. The personal following of professional warriors. Taylor, Jurispr. 216.

COMITES. Counts or earls. Attendants or followers. Persons composing the retinue of a high functionary.

Persons who are attached to the suite of a public minister. As to their privileges, see Respublica v. De Longchamps, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 117, 1 L. Ed. 59; U. S. v. Benner, Baldw. 240, Fed. Cas. No. 14,568.

COMITES PALEYS. Counts or earls palatine; those who had the government of a county palatine.

COMITIA. In Roman law. An assembly, either (1) of the Roman curiæ, in which case it was called the "comitia curiata vel calata"; or (2) of the Roman centuries, in which case it was called the "comitia centuriata" (called also comitia majora); or (3) of the Roman tribes, in which case it was called the "comitia tributa." Only patricians were members of the first comitia, and only plebians of the last; but the comitia centuriata comprised the entire populace, patricians and plebians both, and was the great legislative assembly passing the leges, properly so called, as the senate passed the senatus consulta, and the comitia tributa passed the plebiscita.

Under the Lex Hortensia, 287 B. C., the plebiscitum acquired the force of a lex. Brown.

COMITISSA. In old English law. A countess; an earl's wife.

COMITIVA. In old English law. The dignity and office of a comes (count or earl); the same with what was afterwards called "comitatus."

Also a companion or fellow-traveler; a troop or company of robbers. Jacob.

COMITY. Courtesy; complaisance; respect; a willingness to grant a privilege, not as a matter of right, but out of deference and good will. Dow v. Lillie, 26 N. D. 512, 144 N. W. 1082, 1088, L. R. A. 1915D. 754; Woodard v. Bush, 282 Mo. 163, 220 S. W. 839, 842.

The practice by which one court follows the decision of another court on a like question, though not bound by the law of precedents to do so. Herron v. Passailaigue, 92 Fla. 818, 110 So. 539, 542.

Comity is not a rule of law, but one of practice, convenience and expediency. It is something more than mere courtesy, which implies only deference to the opinion of others, since it has a substantial value in securing uniformity of decision, and discouraging repeated litigation of the same question. But its obligation is not imperative. Comity persuades; but it does not command. It declares not how a case shall be decided, but how it may with propriety be decided. Mast, Foos & Co. v. Mfg. Co., 177 U. S. 485, 488, 20 S. Ct. 708, 44 L. Ed. 856; National Electric Signaling Co. v. Telefunken Wireless Telegraph Co. of United States (C. C. A.) 221 F. 629, 632; Lauer v. Freudenthal, 96 Wash. 294, 165 P. 98, 99.

"Comity" is a doctrine founded in necessity, meaning the rule under which one authority gives way to another, and has no application where what is done by one court is with concurrence of the other. It answers with courts and cabinets, in law and diplomacy, substantially the same purpose which personal courtesies serve in the social relations. U. S. v. Marrin (D. C.) 227 F. 314, 317.

Comity of Nations

The most appropriate phrase to express the true foundation and extent of the obligation of the laws of one nation within the territories of another. It is derived altogether from the voluntary consent of the latter; and it is inadmissible when it is contrary to its known policy, or prejudicial to its interests. In the silence of any positive rule affirming or denying or restraining the operation of foreign laws, courts of justice presume the tacit adoption of them by their own government, unless repugnant to its policy, or prejudicial to its interests. It is not the comity of the courts, but the comity of the nation, which is administered and ascertained in the same way, and guided by the same reasoning, by which all other principles of the municipal law are ascertained and guided. Story, Conf. Laws, § 38. The comity of nations (comitas gentium) is that body of rules which states observe towards one another from courtesy or mutual convenience, although they do not form part of international law. Holtz. Enc. s. v. Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 16 S. Ct. 139, 40 L. Ed. 95; Fisher v. Fielding, 67 Conn. 91, 34 A. 714, 32 L. R. A. 236, 52 Am. St. Rep. 270; People v. Martin, 175 N. Y. 315, 67 N. E. 589, 96 Am. St. Rep. 628; People v. Rushworth, 294 Ill. 455, 128 N. E. 555, 558; Second Russian Ins. Co. v. Miller (C. C. A.) 297 F. 404, 409.

"The use of the word 'comity' as expressing the basis of jurisdiction has been criticized. It is, however, a mere question of definition. The principles lying behind the word are recognized. * * * The truth remains that jurisdiction depends upon the law of the forum, and this law in turn depends upon the public policy disclosed by the acts and declarations of the political departments of the government." Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic v. Cibrario, 235 N. Y. 255, 139 N. E. 259, 260.

Judicial Comity

The principle in accordance with which the courts of one state or jurisdiction will give effect to the laws and judicial decisions of another, not as a matter of obligation, but out of deference and respect. Franzen v. Zimmer, 90 Hun, 103, 35 N. Y. S. 612; Stowe v. Bank (C. C.) 92 F. 96; Mast v. Mfg. Co., 177 U. S. 485, 20 S. Ct. 708, 44 L. Ed. 856; Conklin v. Shipbuilding Co. (C. C.) 123 F. 916; Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. William D. Mullen Co. (D. C.) 7 F.(2d) 470, 473; Frey v. Nielson, 99 N. J. Eq. 135, 132 A. 765, 766; Strawn Mercantile Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 279 S. W. 473, 474.

There is no statute or common-law rule by which one court is bound to abide by the decisions of another court of equal rank. It does so simply for what may be called comity among judges. There is no common law or statutory rule to oblige a court to bow to its own decisions; it does so on the ground of judicial comity. (1884) 9 P. D. 98, per Brett, M. R.

Of such a use of the word, however, Dicey says: "The term 'comity' * * * is open to the charge of implying that the judge, when he applies foreign law to a particular case, does so as a matter of caprice or favor."

COMMA. A point used to mark the smallest structural divisions of a sentence, or a rhetorical punctuation mark indicating the slightest possible separation in ideas or construction. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Pomerantz, 207 N. Y. S. 81, 86, 124 Misc. 250.

COMMAND. An order, imperative direction, or behest. State v. Mann, 2 N. C. 4; Barney v. Hayes, 11 Mont. 571, 29 P. 282, 28 Am. St. Rep. 495. As applied to a fortress, "command" means actual control of the garrison for military purposes. As applied to a ship, it means actual control of the crew for nautical purposes. Hamilton v. U. S. (C. C. A.) 268 F. 15, 19.

The term "instance," as used with reference to doing an act at one's instance, does not imply the same degree of obligation to obey as does "command." Feore v. Trammel, 104 So. 808, 813, 213 Ala. 293.

COMMANDEMENT. In French law. A writ served by the huissier pursuant to a judgment or to an executory notarial deed. Its object is to give notice to the debtor that if he does not pay the sum to which he has been condemned by the judgment, or which he engaged to pay by the notarial deed, his property will be seized and sold. Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 550.

COMMANDER IN CHIEF. By article 2, § 2, of the constitution it is declared that the president shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States. The term implies supreme control of military operations during the progress of a war, not only on the side of strategy and tactics, but also in reference to the political and international aspects of the war. See Fleming v. Page, 9 How. 603, 13 L. Ed. 276; Prize Cases, 2 Black, 635, 17 L. Ed. 459; Swaim v. U. S., 28 Ct. Cl. 173.

COMMANDERY. In old English law. A manor or chief messuage with lands and tenements thereto appertaining, which belonged to the priory of St. John of Jerusalem, in England; he who had the government of such a manor or house was styled the "commander," who could not dispose of it, but to the use of the priory, only taking thence his own sustenance, according to his degree. The manors and lands belonging to the priory of St. John of Jerusalem were given to Henry the Eighth by 32 Hen. VIII. c. 20, about the time of the dissolution of abbeys and monasteries; so that the name only of commanderies remains, the power being long since extinct. Wharton.

COMMANDITAIRES. Special partners; partners en commandité. See Commandité.

COMMANDITÉ. In French law. A partnership in which some furnish money, and others furnish their skill and labor in place of capital.

A special or limited partnership, where the contract is between one or more persons who are general partners, and jointly and severally responsible, and one or more other persons who merely furnish a particular fund or capital stock, and thence are called "commanditaires," or "commanditaires," or "partners en commandité;" the business being carried on under the social name or firm of the general partners only, composed of the names of the general or complementary partners, the partners in commandité being liable to losses only to the extent of the funds or capital furnished by them. Story, Partn. § 78; 3 Kent, Comm. 34. The term includes a partnership containing dormant rather than special partners. Story, Partn. § 109.

COMMANDMENT.

In Practice

But latterly the judicial committee of the privy council has supplied the place of this commission. Brown.

—Common right. A term applied to rights, privileges, and immunities appertaining to and enjoyed by all citizens equally and in common, and which have their foundation in the common law. Co. Inst. 142a; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 62 Cal. 106.

—Common seller. A common seller of any commodity (particularly under the liquor laws of many states) is one who sells it frequently, usually, customarily, or habitually; in some states, one who is shown to have made a certain number of sales, either three or five. State v. O'Conner, 49 Me. 596; State v. Nutt, 28 Vt. 598; Moundsville v. Fountain, 27 W. Va. 194; Com. v. Tubbs, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 2.

—Common sense. Sound practical judgment; that degree of intelligence and reason, as exercised upon the relations of persons and things and the ordinary affairs of life, which is possessed by the generality of mankind, and which would suffice to direct the conduct and actions of the individual in a manner to agree with the behavior of ordinary persons.

—Common service. That service in which are engaged (with reference to the fellow-servant rule) all those who enter into the service of a common master, except those who become heads of and vested with absolute control of separate departments or branches of a great and diversified business. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Marone (C. C. A.) 246 F. 916, 923. The term, in its broadest and most obvious sense, would include all activities prosecuted in the business of the master which have for their purpose the attainment of one common end; nevertheless, an employee, invested with the duty of overseeing, directing, and controlling workmen, is not a fellow servant with respect to the discharge of those duties, but is a representative of the master. Funk v. Fulton Iron Works Co., 311 Mo. 77, 277 S. W. 566, 569.

—Common thief. One who by practice and habit is a thief; or, in some states, one who has been convicted of three distinct larcenies at the same term of court. World v. State, 50 Md. 54; Com. v. Hope, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Stevens v. Com., 4 Metc. (Mass.) 364.

—Common use. This phrase, as used in an anti-trust law extending to contracts affecting the prices of articles or commodities in "common use," describes articles used by the people in general; such articles or commodities as are in general use or used to a great extent in the homes of the people; the articles which are produced to be sold to the people, to be consumed and used by the people in general, and to be found for sale in all the marts of trade. People v. Epstean, 102 Misc. 476, 170 N. Y. S. 68, 75. It suggests the opposite of casual use. Geis v. State, 126 Md. 265, 94 A. 909, 910.

—Common victualer. The keeper of a restaurant or public eating house, where the food sold is eaten on the premises. Commonwealth v. Meckel, 221 Mass. 70, 108 N. E. 917.

—Common weal. The public or common good or welfare.

—Common woman. One who is low, inferior, vulgar, or coarse; also, one who is unchaste. But the term does not necessarily impute unchastity. Daniel v. Moncure, 58 Mont. 193, 190 P. 983, 985.

As to common "Bail," "Barretor," "Carrier," "Chase," "Condit," "Council," "Counts," "Diligence," "Day," "Debtor," "Drunkard," "Error," "Fishery," "Highway," "Informer," "Inn," "Intendment," "Intent," "Jury," "Labor," "Nuisance," "Occupant," "Property," "School," "Scold," "Stock," "Seal," "Sergeant," "Traverse," "Vouchee," "Wall," see those titles.

COMMON BAR. In pleading. (Otherwise called "blank bar.") A plea to compel the plaintiff to assign the particular place where the trespass has been committed. Steph. Pl. 256.

COMMON BENCH. The ancient name for the English court of common pleas. Its original title appears to have been simply "The Bench," but it was designated "Common Bench" to distinguish it from the "King's Bench," and because in it were tried and determined the causes of common persons, i. e., causes between subject and subject, in which the crown had no interest.

COMMON LAW. As distinguished from the Roman law, the modern civil law, the canon law, and other systems, the common law is that body of law and juristic theory which was originated, developed, and formulated and is administered in England, and has obtained among most of the states and peoples of Anglo-Saxon stock. Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 P. 674.

As distinguished from law created by the enactment of legislatures, the common law comprises the body of those principles and rules of action, relating to the government and security of persons and property, which derive their authority solely from usages and customs of immemorial antiquity, or from the judgments and decrees of the courts recognizing, affirming, and enforcing such usages and customs; and, in this sense, particularly the ancient unwritten law of England. 1 Kent, Comm. 492. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Call Pub. Co., 181 U. S. 92, 21 S. Ct. 561, 45 L. Ed. 765; State v. Buchanan, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 365, 9 Am. Dec. 534; Lux v. Haggin, 69

Cal. 255, 10 P. 674; Barry v. Port Jervis, 64 App. Div. 268, 72 N. Y. S. 104; U. S. v. Miller (D. C.) 236 F. 798, 800.

As distinguished from equity law, it is a body of rules and principles, written or unwritten, which are of fixed and immutable authority, and which must be applied to controversies rigorously and in their entirety, and cannot be modified to suit the peculiarities of a specific case, or colored by any judicial discretion, and which rests confessedly upon custom or statute, as distinguished from any claim to ethical superiority. Klever v. Seawall, 65 F. 395, 12 C. C. A. 661.

As distinguished from ecclesiastical law, it is the system of jurisprudence administered by the purely secular tribunals.

As concerns its force and authority in the United States, the phrase designates that portion of the common law of England (including such acts of parliament as were applicable) which had been adopted and was in force here at the time of the Revolution. This, so far as it has not since been expressly abrogated, is recognized as an organic part of the jurisprudence of most of the United States. Browning v. Browning, 3 N. M. 371, 9 P. 677; Guardians of Poor v. Greene, 5 Bin. (Pa.) 557; U. S. v. New Bedford Bridge, 27 Fed. Cas. 107; Hageman v. Vanderdoes, 15 Ariz. 312, 138 P. 1053, 1056, L. R. A. 1915A, 491, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 1197; Industrial Acceptance Corporation v. Webb (Mo. App.) 287 S. W. 657, 660.

The "common law" of England, which is the rule of decision in all courts of Montana, in so far as it is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution or laws of that state, means that body of jurisprudence as applied and modified by the courts of this country up to the time it was adopted in Montana. Herrin v. Sutherland, 74 Mont. 587, 241 P. 328, 330, 42 A. L. R. 937. See, also, Norvell-Wilder Hardware Co. v. McCamey (Tex. Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 772, 773; Fletcher v. Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank, 182 Cal. 177, 187 P. 425, 427.

The common law of England, adopted by Pol. Code Cal. § 4468, does not refer solely to the lex non scripta, the common law unmodified by statute, but contemplates the whole body of jurisprudence as it stood, influenced by statute at the time when the Code section was adopted, and also embraces equity. Martin v. Superior Court of California in and for Alameda County, 176 Cal. 289, 168 P. 135, 136, L. R. A. 1918B, 313.

In a wider sense than any of the foregoing, the "common law" may designate all that part of the positive law, juristic theory, and ancient custom of any state or nation which is of general and universal application, thus marking off special or local rules or customs.

As a compound adjective "common-law" is understood as contrasted with or opposed to "statutory," and sometimes also to "equitable" or to "criminal." See examples below.

COMMON-LAW ACTION. A civil suit, as distinguished from a criminal prosecution or a proceeding to enforce a penalty or a police regulation; not necessarily an action which would lie at common law. Kirby v. Railroad Co. (C. C.) 106 F. 551; U. S. v. Block, 24 Fed. Cas. 1,174.

COMMON-LAW ASSIGNMENTS. Such forms of assignments for the benefit of creditors as were known to the common law, as distinguished from such as are of modern invention or authorized by statute. Ontario Bank v. Hurst, 103 F. 231, 43 C. C. A. 193.

COMMON-LAW CHEAT. The obtaining of money or property by means of a false token, symbol, or device; this being the definition of a cheat or "cheating" at common law. State v. Wilson, 72 Minn. 522, 75 N. W. 715; State v. Renick, 33 Or. 584, 56 Pac. 275, 44 L. R. A. 266, 72 Am. St. Rep. 758.

COMMON-LAW CONTEMPT. A name sometimes applied to proceedings for contempt which are criminal in their nature, as distinguished from those which are intended as purely civil remedies ordinarily arising out of the alleged violation of some order entered in the course of a chancery proceeding. People v. Samuel, 199 Ill. App. 294, 297; People v. Buconich, 199 Ill. App. 410, 412.

COMMON-LAW JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction of a court to try and decide such cases as were cognizable by the courts of law under the English common law; the jurisdiction of those courts which exercise their judicial powers according to the course of the common law. People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 644, 20 Am. Rep. 254; In re Conner, 39 Cal. 98, 2 Am. Rep. 430; U. S. v. Power, 27 Fed. Cas. 607.

COMMON-LAW LIEN. One known to or granted by the common law, as distinguished from statutory, equitable, and maritime liens; also one arising by implication of law, as distinguished from one created by the agreement of the parties. The Menominie (D. C.) 36 Fed. 197; Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Trustee, 117 Ky. 478, 78 S. W. 413, 64 L. R. A. 219.

COMMON-LAW MARRIAGE. One not solemnized in the ordinary way, but created by an agreement to marry, followed by cohabitation; a consummated agreement to marry, between a man and a woman, per verba de presenti, followed by cohabitation. Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Colo. App. 303, 50 P. 1049; Cuneo v. De Cuneo, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 436, 59 S. W. 284; Morrill v. Palmer, 68 Vt. 1, 33 A. 829, 33

L. R. A. 411; In re Medford's Estate, 197 Iowa, 76, 196 N. W. 728; Griffin v. Griffin, 225 Mich. 253, 196 N. W. 384, 385; Graham v. Graham, 211 App. Div. 580, 207 N. Y. S. 195, 198; Chaves v. Chaves, 79 Fla. 602, 84 So. 672, 676; Sims v. Sims, 122 Miss. 745, 85 So. 73, 74; Powers v. Buckey, 49 N. D. 137, 190 N. W. 312, 313; Baker v. Jack, 112 Okl. 142, 241 P. 478, 479; Jackson v. Jackson, 94 N. J. Eq. 233, 113 A. 495, 496; Estes v. Merrill, 121 Ark. 361, 181 S. W. 136, 138; Johnson v. Wolford, 117 Ohio App. 136, 157 N. E. 335, 336. There must be a public and continued recognition of such relation by the parties as distinguished from occasional or incidental recognition. State v. Burkrey (Mo. Sup.) 183 S. W. 328, 329; Whitaker v. Shenault (Tex. Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 202, 203.

COMMON-LAW MORTGAGE. One possessing the characteristics or fulfilling the requirements of a mortgage at common law; not known in Louisiana, where the civil law prevails; but such a mortgage made in another state and affecting lands in Louisiana, will be given effect there as a "conventional" mortgage, affecting third persons after due inscription. Gates v. Gaither, 46 La. Ann. 236, 15 So. 50.

COMMON-LAW PROCEDURE ACTS. Three acts of parliament, passed in the years 1852, 1854, and 1860, respectively, for the amendment of the procedure in the common-law courts. The common-law procedure act of 1852 is St. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76; that of 1854, St. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125; and that of 1860, St. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126. Mozley & Whitley.

COMMON-LAW REMEDY. This phrase, within the meaning of Judicial Code U. S. § 256 (Act March 3, 1911, c. 231, 36 Stat. 1100 [28 USCA § 371]), is not limited to remedies in the common-law courts, but embraces all methods of enforcing rights and redressing injuries known to the common or statutory law. Kennerson v. Thames Towboat Co., 89 Conn. 367, 94 A. 372, 375, L. R. A. 1916A, 436. See, also, Northern Pacific S. S. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 174 Cal. 346, 163 P. 199, 202.

The "right of a common-law remedy," saved to suitors in actions maritime in their nature arising under charter parties by Judicial Code, § 24, par. 3 (28 USCA § 41), does not include attempted changes by the states in the substantive admiralty law, but does include all means, other than proceedings in admiralty, which may be employed to enforce the right or to redress the injury involved, and includes remedies in pais, as well as proceedings in court; judicial remedies conferred by statute, as well as those existing in the common law; remedies in equity, as well as those enforceable in a court of law. Red Cross Line v. Atlantic Fruit Co., 44 S. Ct. 274, 277, 264 U. S. 109, 68 L. Ed. 582.

COMMON PLEAS, THE COURT OF. See Court of Common Pleas.

COMMON RECOVERY. In conveyancing. A species of common assurance, or mode of conveying lands by matter of record, formerly in frequent use in England. It was in the nature and form of an action at law, carried regularly through, and ending in a recovery of the lands against the tenant of the freehold; which recovery, being a supposed adjudication of the right, bound all persons, and vested a free and absolute fee-simple in the recoverer. 2 Bl. Comm. 357. Christy v. Burch, 25 Fla. 942, 2 So. 258. Common recoveries were abolished by the statutes 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74. They were resorted to when the object was to create an absolute bar of estates tail, and of the remainders and reversions expectant on the determination of such estates. 2 Bl. Comm. 357. Though it has been used in some of the states, this form of conveyance is practically obsolete, easier and less expensive modes of making conveyances having been substituted. Frost v. Cloutman, 7 N. H. 9, 26 Am. Dec. 723; Lyle v. Richards, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 322; Dow v. Warren, 6 Mass. 328.

COMMONALTY. The great body of citizens; the mass of the people, excluding the nobility.

The body of people composing a municipal corporation, excluding the corporate officers.

Squares; pleasure grounds and spaces or open places for public use or public recreation owned by towns;—in modern usage usually called "parks." Woodward v. City of Des Moines, 182 Iowa, 1102, 165 N. W. 313, 314; Jones v. City of Jackson, 104 Miss. 449, 61 So. 456, 457.

COMMONS, HOUSE OF. See House of Commons.

COMMONTY. In Scotch law. Land possessed in common by different proprietors, or by those having acquired rights of servitude. Bell.

COMMONWEALTH. The public or common weal or welfare. This cannot be regarded as a technical term of public law, though often used in political science. It generally designates, when so employed, a republican frame of government,—one in which the welfare and rights of the entire mass of people are the main consideration, rather than the privileges of a class or the will of a monarch; or it may designate the body of citizens living under such a government. Sometimes it may denote the corporate entity, or the government, of a jural society (or state) possessing powers of self-government in respect of its immediate concerns, but forming an integral part of a larger government, (or nation.) In this latter sense, it is the official title of several of the United States (as Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, and Kentucky), and would be appropriate to them all. In the former sense, the word was used to designate the English government during the protectorate of Cromwell. See Government; Nation; State. (State v. Lambert, 44 W. Va. 308, 28 S. E. 930.)

COMMORANCY. The dwelling in any place as an inhabitant; which consists in usually lying there. 4 Bl. Comm. 273. In American law it is used to denote a mere temporary residence. Ames v. Winsor, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Pullen v. Monk, 82 Me. 412, 19 A. 909; Gilman v. Inman, 85 Me. 105, 26 A. 1049.

Insurance Co., 40 Conn. 584; Grame v. Assur. Soc., 112 U. S. 273, 5 S. Ct. 150, 28 L. Ed. 716; Spruill v. Insurance Co., 46 N. C. 127.

A civil commotion is an uprising among a mass of people which occasions a serious and prolonged disturbance and infraction of civil order not attaining the status of war or an armed insurrection; it is a wild and irregular action of many persons assembled together. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., Hartford, Conn. v. War Eagle Coal Co. (C. C. A.) 295 F. 663, 665. The term refers to political disorders, not to an economic disturbance. The Poznan (D. C.) 276 F. 418, 427.

COMMUNE, n. A self-governing town or village. The name given to the committee of the people in the French revolution of 1793; and again, in the revolutionary uprising of 1871, it signified the attempt to establish absolute self-government in Paris, or the mass of those concerned in the attempt. In old French law, it signified any municipal corporation. And in old English law, the commonalty or common people. 2 Co. Inst. 540.

Reg. Orig. 187.

COMMUNIAE. In feudal law on the continent of Europe, this name was given to towns enfranchised by the crown, about the twelfth century, and formed into free corporations by grants called "charters of community."

COMMUNICATION. Information given, the sharing of knowledge by one with another; conference; consultation or bargaining preparatory to making a contract. Inter-course; connection. Also, the Masonic equivalent for the word "meeting." State v. Goodwyn, 83 W. Va. 255, 98 S. E. 577.

Something said by one person to another; —so used in a statute providing that neither a party nor his or her spouse shall be examined as a witness as to personal transactions or communications between witness and persons since deceased. Secor v. Siver, 188 Iowa, 1126, 161 N. W. 769, 772, 176 N. W. 981.

"Transactions and communications," within statute declaring inadmissible testimony of interested witness concerning transactions and communications between himself and deceased person, embrace every variety of affairs which conform to the subject of negotiation, interviews, or actions between two persons, and include every method by which one person can derive impressions or information from the conduct, condition or language of another. Bright v. Virginia & Gold Hill Water Co. (C. C. A.) 270 F. 410, 413.

North State Life Ins. Co.*, 163 N. C. 223, 79 S. E. 501, 502, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 270. In a broader sense, the word embraces all knowledge upon the part of either obtained by reason of the marriage relations, and which but for the confidence growing out of such relation would not have been known. Allcock v. Allcock, 174 Ky. 635, 192 S. W. 853, 854.

As used in a statute providing that an attorney cannot, without the consent of his client, be examined as to any communication made by the client, "communication" is not restricted to mere words but includes acts as well. Ex parte McDonough, 170 Cal. 230, 149 P. 536, 567, L. R. A. 1916C, 593, Ann. Cas. 1916E, 327.

In French Law

In General

—Confidential communications. These are certain classes of communications, passing between persons who stand in a confidential or fiduciary relation to each other, (or who, on account of their relative situation, are under a special duty of secrecy and fidelity,) which the law will not permit to be divulged, or allow them to be inquired into in a court of justice, for the sake of public policy and the good order of society. Examples of such privileged relations are those of husband and wife and attorney and client. Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 416, 25 Am. Dec. 415; Parker v. Carter, 4 Munf. (Va.) 287, 6 Am. Dec. 513; Chirac v. Reinicker, 11 Wheat. 280, 6 L. Ed. 474; Parkhurst v. Berdell, 110 N. Y. 386, 18 N. E. 123, 6 Am. St. Rep. 384.

—Privileged communication. In the law of evidence. A communication made to a counsel, solicitor, or attorney, in professional confidence, and which he is not permitted to divulge; otherwise called a "confidential communication." 1 Starkie, Ev. 185. In the law of libel and slander. A defamatory statement made to another in pursuance of a duty, political, judicial, social, or personal, so that an action for libel or slander will not lie, though the statement be false, unless in the last two cases actual malice be proved in addition. Bacon v. Railroad Co., 66 Mich. 166, 33 N. W. 181; 5 E. & B. 347. When a communication is fairly made by one in the discharge of a public or private duty, legal, moral, or social, of perfect or imperfect obligation, or in the conduct of his own affairs, to one who has a corresponding interest to receive such communication, it is "privileged," International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Edmundson (Tex. Com. App.) 222 S. W. 181, 183, if made in good faith and without actual malice, Baker v. Clark, 186 Ky. 816, 218 S. W. 280, 285. A "privileged communication" is one made in good faith, upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest, or in reference to which he has, or honestly believes he has, a duty, and which contains matter which, without the occasion upon which it is made, would be defamatory and actionable. Bland v. Lawyer-Cuff Co., 72 Okl. 128, 178 P. 885, 887; Garcia v. Sociedad de Obreros (Tex. Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 943, 944. See, also, Zanley v. Hyde, 208 Mich. 96, 175 N. W. 261, 263; Friedell v. Blakely Printing Co., 163 Minn. 226, 203 N. W. 974, 975; Alexander v. Vann, 180 N. C. 187, 104 S. E. 360, 361; Putnal v. Inman, 76 Fla. 553, 80 So. 316, 318, 3 A. L. R. 1580; Masse v. Williams (C. C. A.) 207 F. 222, 230; Peak v. Taubman, 251 Mo. 390, 158 S. W. 656, 663. In a "privileged communication" the words used, if defamatory and libelous, are excused, while in "fair comment" the words are not a defamation of plaintiff and not libelous. Van Lonkhuyzen v. Daily News Co., 203 Mich. 570, 170 N. W. 93, 99.

Privileged communications are either (1) absolutely privileged, or (2) conditionally or qualifiedly privileged. Grantham v. Wilkes, 135 Miss. 777, 100 So. 673. An "absolutely privileged communication" is one made in the interest of the public service or the due administration of justice, and is practically limited to legislative and judicial proceedings and other actions of state. Grantham v. Wilkes, 135 Miss. 777, 100 So. 673. By an "absolutely privileged" publication is not to be understood a publication for which the publisher is in no wise responsible, but it means a publication in respect of which, by reason of the occasion upon which it is made, no remedy can be had in a civil action for slander or libel, Peterson v. Cleaver, 105 Neb. 438, 181 N. W. 187, 189, 15 A. L. R. 447, even though the words are published maliciously and with knowledge of their falsity, Spencer v. Looney, 116 Va. 767, 82 S. E. 745, 747. A "qualifiedly privileged communication" is a slanderous statement uttered in good faith upon a proper occasion and from a proper motive based upon an honest belief that it is true, but, unlike communications wholly privileged, the defendant has the burden of proving want of malice or ill will. Peak v. Taubman, 251 Mo. 390, 158 S. W. 656, 665. A communication "qualifiedly privileged" is one which is prima facie privileged only, and in which the privilege may be lost by proof of malice in the publication. Spencer v. Looney, 116 Va. 767, 82 S. E. 745, 747. A communication made in good faith upon any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest or in reference to which he has a duty, either legal, moral, or social, if made to a person having a corresponding interest or duty, is "qualifiedly privileged." Peterson v. Cleaver, 105 Neb. 438, 181 N. W. 187, 189, 15 A. L. R. 447; Grantham v. Wilkes, 135 Miss. 777, 100 So. 673; Bland v. Lawyer-Cuff Co., 72 Okl. 128, 178 P. 885, 887. See, also, Finkelstein v. A.) 207 F. 222, 230; German-American Ins. Co. v. Huntley, 62 Okl. 39, 161 P. 815, 818; Privilege.

Common error sometimes passes current as law. Broom, Max. 139, 140. The term "community," as used in a statute providing that communities may be incorporated for the purpose of supplying inhabitants with water, should be construed to include all the inhabitants of a district having a community of interest in obtaining for themselves in common a water supply for domestic use. Hamilton v. Rudeen, 112 Or. 268, 224 P. 92, 93.

In connection with the rule requiring, for purposes of impeachment, a knowledge of the character of the witness in the community or neighborhood in which he resides, the term "community" means, generally, where the person is well known and has established a reputation. Craven v. State, 22 Ala. App. 39, 111 So. 767, 769.

In the Civil Law

A corporation or body politic. Dig. 3, 4.

In French Law

A species of partnership which a man and a woman contract when they are lawfully married to each other. See, also, Community Property, infra.

Conventional community is that which is formed by express agreement in the contract of marriage.

By this contract the legal community which would otherwise subsist may be modified as to the proportions which each shall take, and as to the things which shall compose it.

Legal community is that which takes place by virtue of the contract of marriage itself.

The French system of community property was known as the dotal system, and the Spanish as the ganancial system. The conquest of Mexico by the Spaniards and their acquisition of the Florida territory resulted in the introduction on American soil of the Spanish system, which now prevails, usually in a somewhat modified form, in Texas, California, Nevada, Arizona, Washington, Idaho, New Mexico, Porto Rico, and the Philippines. See Ballinger, Com. Property, § 6; Chavez v. McKnight, 1 N. M. 147. The Louisiana Code has, with slight modifications, adopted the dotal system of the Code Napoléon as regards the separate rights of husband and wife, but as to their common property, it retained the essential features of the Spanish ganancial system. See Civ. Code Cal. § 162 et seq.; Civ. Code Ariz. 1913, pars. 3848, 3850 (Rev. Code 1928, §§ 2172, 2173); Rev. Laws Nev. §§ 2155, 2160 (Comp. Laws 1929, §§ 3355, 3360); Code N. M. 1915, §§ 2757, 2758, 2766, 1840, 1841 (Comp. St. 1929, §§ 68-302, 68-303, 68-403, 38-104, 38-105); Vernon's Ann. Civ. St., art. 4619 et seq.; Rev. Codes Idaho, § 2674 et seq. (Code 1932, § 31-901 et seq.); Rem. & Bal. Code (Wash.) §§ 5915-5917 (Rem. Comp. Stat. §§ 6890-6892).

COMMUNITY DEBT. One chargeable to the community (of husband and wife) rather than to either of the parties individually. Calhoun v. Leary, 6 Wash. 17, 32 P. 1070.

COMMUNITY OF PROFITS. This term, as used in the definition of a partnership, (to which a community of profits is essential,) means a proprietorship in them as distinguished from a personal claim upon the other associate, a property right in them from the start in one associate as much as in the other. Bradley v. Ely, 24 Ind. App. 2, 56 N. E. 44, 79 Am. St. Rep. 251; Moore v. Williams, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 142, 62 S. W. 977.

COMMUNITY PROPERTY. Property owned in common by a husband and wife as a kind of marital partnership. Coleman v. Coleman (Tex. Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 695, 699. Property acquired by husband and wife, or either, during marriage, when not acquired as the separate property of either. In re Lux's Estate, 114 Cal. 73, 45 P. 1023; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 80 Tex. 101, 15 S. W. 705; Ames v. Hubby, 49 Tex. 705; Holyoke v. Jackson, 3 Wash. T. 235, 3 P. 841; Civ. Code Cal. § 687. This partnership or community consists of the profits of all the effects of which the husband has the administration and enjoyment, either of right or in fact, of the produce of the reciprocal industry and labor of both husband and wife, and of the estates which they may acquire during the marriage, either by donations made jointly to them both, or by purchase, or in any other similar way, even although the purchase be only in the name of one of the two, and not of both, because in that case the period of time when the purchase is made is alone attended to, and not the person who made the purchase. Rev. Civ. Code La. arts. 2402, 2404; Davidson v. Stuart, 10 La. 146; Brown v. Cobb, 10 La. 172;

Clark v. Norwood, 12 La. Ann. 598; Barnes v. Thompson, 154 La. 1036, 98 So. 657, 658.

COMMUTATION. Change; substitution.

In Criminal Law

The substitution of one punishment for another, after conviction of the party subject to it.

The change of a punishment from a greater to a less; as from hanging to imprisonment. People v. Jenkins, 325 Ill. 372, 156 N. E. 290, 292; Commonwealth v. Minor, 195 Ky. 103, 241 S. W. 856, 859; Williams v. Brents, 171 Ark. 367, 284 S. W. 56, 58; State v. Wolfer, 127 Minn. 102, 148 N. W. 896, 897, L. R. A. 1915B, 95; Ex parte Perovich (D. C.) 9 F.(2d) 124, 125; Duehay v. Thompson (C. C. A.) 223 F. 305, 306; Rich v. Chamberlain, 107 Mich. 381, 65 N. W. 235.

Although both a pardon and a commutation are granted by the sovereign power; Goben v. State, 32 Okl. Cr. 237, 240 P. 1085, 1087; Ex parte Janes, 1 Nev. 321; In re Victor, 31 Ohio St. 206; Lee v. Murphy, 22 Grat. (Va.) 789, 12 Am. Rep. 563; a "commutation" means merely a change of punishment, while a "pardon" avoids or terminates punishment for crime; U. S. v. Commissioner of Immigration at Port of New York (C. C. A.) 5 F.(2d) 162, 165. A pardon bears no relation to the term of punishment, and must be accepted or it is nugatory; commutation removes no stain, restores no civil privilege, and may be effected without the consent and against the will of the prisoner. In re Charles, 115 Kan. 323, 222 P. 606, 608; Chapman v. Scott (D. C.) 10 F.(2d) 156, 159.

"Commutation" is also distinguishable from a "reprieve" or "respite," meaning simply the withholding of a sentence for an interval of time, a postponement of execution, or a temporary suspension of execution. State v. District Court of Eighteenth Judicial Dist. in and for Blaine County, 73 Mont. 541, 237 P. 525, 527.

In Civil Matters

The conversion of the right to receive a variable or periodical payment into the right to receive a fixed or gross payment. Commutation may be effected by private agreement, but it is usually done under a statute.

It is considered as incorporated into all subsequent acts authorizing the execution of undertakings of a public nature by companies, unless expressly excepted by such later acts. Its purpose is declared by the preamble to be to avoid repeating provisions as to the constitution and management of the companies, and to secure greater uniformity in such provisions. Wharton.

COMPANY. A society or association of persons, in considerable number, interested in a common object, and uniting themselves for the prosecution usually of some commercial or Industrial undertaking, or other legitimate business. Mills v. State, 23 Tex. 303; Smith v. Janesville, 52 Wis. 680, 9 N. W. 789.

The proper signification of the word "company," when applied to persons engaged in trade, denotes those united for the same purpose or in a joint concern. It is so commonly used in this sense, or as indicating a partnership, that few persons accustomed to purchase goods at shops, where they are sold by retail, would misapprehend that such was its meaning. Palmer v. Pinkham, 33 Me. 32.

The term is not identical with "partnership," although every unincorporated society is, in its legal relations, a partnership. In common use a distinction is made, the name "partnership" being reserved for business associations of a limited number of persons (usually not more than four or five) trading under a name composed of their individual names set out in succession; while "company" is appropriated as the designation of a society comprising a larger number of persons, with greater capital, and engaged in more extensive enterprises, and trading under a title not disclosing the names of the individuals. See Allen v. Long, 80 Tex. 261, 16 S. W. 43, 26 Am. St. Rep. 735; Adams Exp. Co. v. Schofield, 111 Ky. 832, 64 S. W. 903; Kossakowski v. People, 177 Ill. 563, 53 N. E. 115; In re Jones, 23 Misc. Rep. 356, 59 N. Y. Supp. 983; Attorney General v. Mercantile Marine Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 525.

Sometimes the word is used to represent those members of a partnership whose names do not appear in the name of the firm. See 12 Toullier, 97.

A number of persons united for performing or carrying on anything jointly. In re Tidewater Coal Exchange (C. C. A.) 280 F. 638, 643.

Thus, the term is not necessarily limited to a trading or commercial body, but may include an unincorporated organization to promote fraternity among its members and provide mutual aid and protection through the payment of death benefits. In re Order of Sparta (D. C.) 238 F. 437.

"Company" is a generic and comprehensive word, which may include individuals, partnerships, and corporations. Asbury v. Town of Albemarle, 162 N. C. 247, 78 S. E. 146, 148, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1189; J. P. Duffy Co. v. Todebush (Sup.) 139 N. Y. S. 112, 113.

The word is sometimes applicable to a single individual. Harger v. Harger, 144 Ark. 375, 222 S. W. 736, 739. But compare Wood v. Wood, 78 Or. 181, 151 P. 969, 970, L. R. A. 1916C, 251, Ann. Cas. 1918A, 226.

Joint Stock Company

An association of individuals for purposes of profit, possessing a common capital contributed by the members composing it, such capital being commonly divided into shares of which each member possesses one or more, and which are transferable by the owner. Shelf. Jt. St. Co. 1. One having a joint stock or capital, which is divided into numerous transferable shares, or consists of transferable stock. Lindl. Partn. 6. A partnership whereof the capital is divided, or agreed to be divided, into shares so as to be transferable without the express consent of the co-partners. Pars. Part. § 435. A quasi partnership, invested by statutes in England and many of the states with some of the privileges of a corporation. See Pennsylvania v. Mining Co., 10 Wall. 556, 19 L. Ed. 998; L. R. 4 Eq. 695. It lies midway between a corporation and a copartnership. Rocky Mountain Stud Farm Co. v. Lunt, 46 Utah, 299, 151 P. 521, 527; 1 Lindl. Partn., 1st Ed. 6.

A "joint-stock company" is an entirely different organization from a "corporation," although it has many of the same characteristics and is often not improperly called a quasi corporation, especially under particular statutes, but in Kentucky it is still what it was at common law, namely, a hybrid midway between a corporation and a partnership, that is, it had directors and officers, articles of association, a common capital divided into shares which represented the interests of the members and are transferable without the consent of the other members so that the death of a member does not dissolve the company—but, on the other hand, each member was liable for the debts of the concern, so that such company had characteristics of both a corporation and a partnership. Roller v. Madison, 172 Ky. 693, 189 S. W. 914, 915.

Limited Company

A company in which the liability of each shareholder is limited by the number of shares he has taken, so that he cannot be called on to contribute beyond the amount of his shares. In England, the memorandum of association of such company may provide that the liability of the directors, manager, or managing director thereof shall be unlimited. 30 & 31 Vict. c. 131; 1 Lindl. Partn. 383; Mozley & Whitley.

Enc. Law, 367. See Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358, 3 N. E. 456; Imes v. R. Co., 105 Ill. App. 37; Railroad Co. v. Ferguson, 113 Ga. 708, 39 S. E. 306, 54 L. R. A. 802; *Sluder v. COMPEARANCE. In Scotch practice. Appearance; an appearance made for a defendant; an appearance by counsel. Bell.

COMPEL. To force. Temple Lumber Co. v. Living (Tex. Civ. App.) 289 S. W. 746, 749. To oblige. Texas Electric Ry. v. Jones (Tex. Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 823, 824.

In an allegation that plaintiff was compelled to pay license taxes, the word "compel" does not necessarily import elements of compulsory payment. Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Teasley, 198 Ala. 673, 73 So. 969, 971. Compare Ains v. Hayes, 92 Conn. 130, 101 A. 579, L. R. A. 1917F, 1086, and also Sinnott v. District Court in and for Clarke County, 201 Iowa, 292, 207 N. W. 129, 131.

As to compelling a person to testify against himself, see State v. Backstrom, 117 Kan. 111, 230 P. 306, 308; State v. Whalen, 108 Wash. 287, 183 P. 130, 131; Doyle v. Wilcockson, 184 Iowa, 757, 169 N. W. 241, 242; U. S. v. Cooper (D. C.) 288 F. 604, 609; U. S. v. Kallas (D. C.) 272 F. 742, 751.

COMPELLATIVUS. An adversary or accuser.

Compendia sunt dispendia. Co. Litt. 305. Abbreviations (or abridgments) are detriments.

COMPENDIUM. An abridgment, synopsis, or digest.

COMPENSACION. In Spanish law. Compensation; set-off. The extinction of a debt by another debt of equal dignity between persons who have mutual claims on each other.

COMPENSATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Compensation, or set-off. A proceeding resembling a set-off in the common law, being a claim on the part of the defendant to have an amount due to him from the plaintiff deducted from his demand. Dig. 16, 2; Inst. 4, 6, 30, 39; 3 Bl. Comm. 305.

COMPENSATIO CRIMINIS. (Set-off of crime or guilt.) In practice. The compensation or set-off of one crime against another; the plea of recrimination in a suit for a divorce; that is, that the complainant is guilty of the same kind of offense with which the respondent is charged. See 1 Hagg. Cons. 144; 1 Hagg. Eccl. 714; Wood v. Wood, 2 Paige, Ch. (N. Y.) 108, 2 D. & B. 64; Bishop, Marr. & D. §§ 393, 394.

COMPENSATION. Indemnification; payment of damages; making amends; making whole; giving an equivalent or substitute of equal value; that which is necessary to restore an injured party to his former position. An act which a court orders to be done, or money which a court or other tribunal orders to be paid, by a person whose acts or omissions have caused loss or injury to another, in order that thereby the person damaged may receive equal value for his loss, or be made whole in respect of his injury. Railroad Co. v. Denman, 10 Minn. 280 (Gil. 208); Jablonowski v. Modern Cap Mfg. Co., 312 Mo. 173, 279 S. W. 89, 95; Proctor v. Dillon, 235 Mass. 538, 129 N. E. 265, 269; City of Sacramento v. Industrial Accident Commission of California, 74 Cal. App. 386, 240 P. 792, 794.

"Compensation" is a misleading term, and is used merely for lack of a word more nearly expressing the thought of the law which permits recovery for an imponderable and intangible thing for which there is no money equivalent. Stutsman v. Des Moines City Ry. Co., 180 Iowa, 524, 163 N. W. 580, 585.

The word "compensation," as used in Workmen's Compensation Acts, means the money relief afforded an injured employee or his dependents according to the scale established and for the persons designated in the act, and not the compensatory damages recoverable in an action at law for a wrong done or a contract broken. Devine's Case, 236 Mass. 588, 129 N. E. 414, 416; Mosely v. Empire Gas & Fuel Co., 313 Mo. 225, 281 S. W. 762, 767, 45 A. L. R. 1223; Christensen v. Morse Dry Dock & Repair Co., 214 N. Y. S. 732, 740, 216 App. Div. 274.

As used in Workmen's Compensation Acts, "compensation" is distinguishable from "benefits"; the former applying to an allowance where the employee is only injured, and the latter applying in case of death. Industrial Commission v. Jasionowski, 24 Ohio App. 66, 156 N. E. 616, 618; Terry v. General Electric Co., 232 N. Y. 120, 133 N. E. 373, 374. The term "compensation" may include funeral benefits. Donoho v. Atlantic Basin Iron Works, 206 N. Y. S. 494, 495, 210 App. Div. 535; In re State Industrial Commission, 165 N. Y. S. 967, 968, 179 App. Div. 481; Henry v. American Enamel Co., 48 R. I. 113, 136 A. 3, 6. But see Barber v. Estey Organ Co., 100 Vt. 72, 135 A. 1, 2; Manteufel v. Industrial Commission, 172 Wis. 565, 179 N. W. 761, 762; Industrial Commission v. Hammond, 77 Colo. 414, 236 P. 1006, 1008.

Also that equivalent in money which is paid to the owners and occupiers of lands taken or injuriously affected by the exercise of the power of eminent domain.

In the constitutional provision for "just compensation" for property taken under the power of eminent domain, this term means a payment in money. Any benefit to the remaining property of the owner, arising from public works for which a part has been taken, cannot be considered as compensation. Railroad Co. v. Burkett, 42 Ala. 83.

As compared with consideration and damages, compensation, in its most careful use, seems to be between them. Consideration is amends for something given by consent, or by the owner's choice. Damages is amends exacted from a wrong-doer for a tort. Compensation is amends for something which was taken without the owner's choice, yet without commission of a tort. Thus, one should say, consideration for land sold; compensation for land taken for a railway; damages for a trespass. But such distinctions are not uniform. Land damages is a common expression for compensation for lands taken for public use. Abbott.

"Compensation" is distinguishable from "damages," inasmuch as the former may mean the sum which will remunerate an owner for land actually taken, while the latter signifies an allowance made for injury to the residue; but such distinction is not ordinarily observed. Faulkner v. City of Nashville, 154 Tenn. 145, 285 S. W. 39, 43.

The remuneration or wages given to an employee or, especially, to an officer. Salary, pay, or emolument. Christopherson v. Reeves, 44 S. D. 634, 184 N. W. 1015, 1019; State v. Luscher, 157 Minn. 192, 195 N. W. 914, 916; Higgins v. Glenn, 65 Utah, 406, 237 P. 513, 515.

The ordinary meaning of the term "compensation," as applied to officers, is remuneration, in whatever form it may be given, whether it be salaries and fees, or both combined. State v. Bland, 91 Kan. 180, 136 P. 947, 949; State v. Watkins, 88 Fla. 392, 102 So. 347, 358. It is broad enough to include other remuneration for official services; State ex rel. Emmons v. Farmer, 271 Mo. 306, 196 S. W. 1106, 1108; such as mileage or traveling expenses; Leckenby v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 65 Colo. 443, 176 P. 490, 492; and also the repayment of amounts expended; State v. Clausen, 142 Wash. 450, 253 P. 805, 807. Compare, however, People v. Chapman, 225 N. Y. 700, 122 N. E. 240; McCoy v. Handlin, 35 S. D. 487, 153 N. W. 361, 371, L. R. A. 1915E, 858, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 1046.

But the term is not necessarily synonymous with "salary." See People v. Wemple, 115 N. Y. 302, 22 N. E. 272; Com. v. Carter, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 1509, 55 S. W. 701; Crawford County v. Lindsay, 11 Ill. App. 261; Kilgore v. People, 76 Ill. 548.

A "reasonable compensation" is that which will fairly compensate the laborer when the character of the work and the effectiveness and ability entering into the service are considered. Chapman v. A. H. Averill Machinery Co., 28 Idaho, 121, 152 P. 573, 575.

Compensation is not synonymous with "pension," which is ordinarily a gratuity from the government or some of its subordinate agencies in recognition of, but not in payment for, past services. Dickey v. Jackson, 181 Iowa, 1155, 165 N. W. 387, 389.

In the Civil, Scotch, and French Law

Recoupment; set-off. The meeting of two debts due by two parties, where the debtor in the one debt is the creditor in the other; that is to say, where one person is both debtor and creditor to another, and therefore, to the extent of what is due to him, claims allowance out of the sum that he is due. Bell; 1 Kames, Eq. 395, 396.

Compensation is of three kinds,—legal, or by operation of law; compensation by way of exception; and by reconvention. Stewart v. Harper, 16 La. Ann. 181; Blanchard v. Cole, 8 La. 158; 8 Dig. 16, 2; Code, 4, 31; Inst. 4, 6, 30; Burge, Suret. b. 2, c. 6, p. 181; La. Civ. Code, arts. 2203-2208 (Civ. Code, art. 2207-2211).

Boykin* (Tex. Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 639, 640.

COMPETENCY.

In the Law of Evidence

The presence of those characteristics, or the absence of those disabilities, which render a witness legally fit and qualified to give testimony in a court of justice;—applied, in the same sense, to documents or other written evidence.

Competency differs from credibility. The former is a question which arises before considering the evidence given by the witness; the latter concerns the degree of credit to be given to his story. The former denotes the personal qualification of the witness; the latter his veracity. A witness may be competent, and yet give incredible testimony; he may be incompetent, and yet his evidence, if received, be perfectly credible. Competency is for the court; credibility for the jury. Yet in some cases the term "credible" is used as an equivalent for "competent." Thus, in a statute relating to the execution of wills, the term "credible witness" is held to mean one who is entitled to be examined and to give evidence in a court of justice; not necessarily one who is personally worthy of belief, but one who is not disqualified by imbecility, interest, crime, or other cause. 1 Jarm. Wills, 124; Smith v. Jones, 68 Vt. 132, 34 A. 424; Com. v. Holmes, 127 Mass. 424, 34 Am. Rep. 391.

In French Law

The right in a court to exercise jurisdiction in a particular case.

COMPETENT. Duly qualified; answering all requirements; able; adequate; suitable; sufficient; capable; legally fit. Levee Dist. v. Jamison, 176 Mo. 557, 75 S. W. 679; Abb. L. Dict.; United States v. Sischo (D. C.) 262 F. 1001, 1005; State v. Green, 101 W. Va. 703, 133 S. E. 379, 380; Vorbhoff v. Mesta Mach. Co., 286 Pa. 199, 133 A. 256, 258; German v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 662, 663; In re Hermann's Will, 178 App. Div. 182, 165 N. Y. S. 298, 301; In re Mathews, 174 Cal. 679, 164 P. 8, 9. See, also, Incompetency.

A testator may be said to be "competent," if he has mental capacity to understand the nature of his act, to understand and recollect the nature and situation of his property and his relations to persons having claims on his bounty and whose interests are affected by his will. In re Smith's Estate, 200 Cal. 152, 252 P. 325, 328.

When generally applied to arbitrators, the term does not mean "expert." Home Ins. Co. v. Walter (Tex. Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 723, 724.

COMPETENT AND OMITTED. In Scotch practice. A term applied to a plea which might have been urged by a party during the dependence of a cause, but which had been omitted. Bell.

COMPETENT AUTHORITY. As applied to courts and public officers, this term imports jurisdiction and due legal authority to deal with the particular matter in question. Mitchell v. U. S., 9 Pet. 735, 9 L. Ed. 283; Charles v. Charles, 41 Minn. 201, 42 N. W. 935.

COMPETENT EVIDENCE. See Evidence.

COMPETENT WITNESS. One who is legally qualified to be heard to testify in a cause. Hogan v. Sherman, 5 Mich. 60; People v. Compton, 123 Cal. 403, 56 P. 44; Com. v. Mullen, 97 Mass. 545. As used in the statute relating to the execution of wills, the term means a person who, at the time of making the attestation, could legally testify in court to the facts which he attests by subscribing his name to the will. In re Wiese's Estate, 98 Neb. 463, 153 N. W. 556, L. R. A. 1915E, 832. See Competency.

COMPETITION. Rivalry. People ex rel. Broderick v. Goldfogle, 123 Misc. 399, 205 N. Y. S. 870, 877. The play of contending forces ordinarily engendered by an honest desire for gain. U. S. v. American Linseed Oil Co., 262 U. S. 371, 43 S. Ct. 607, 611, 67 L. Ed. 1035.

As used in a statute taxing moneyed capital competing with national banks, "competition" means a condition of business rivalry which arises when moneyed capital is devoted with reasonable continuity and regularity to operations having for their primary and characteristic purpose, as distinguished from some incidental operations or details, the transaction of some branch of business which may be carried on by national banks, and it is not necessary that this employment shall bring capital into competition with all of such branches. People ex rel. Pratt v. Goldfogle, 242 N. Y. 277, 151 N. E. 452, 461. The term involves the idea of struggling to obtain the same thing. First Nat. Bank v. City of Hartford, 187 Wis. 290, 203 N. W. 721, 729. See, also, First Nat. Bank v. City of Hartford, 47 S. Ct. 462, 466, 273 U. S. 548, 71 L. Ed. 767, 59 A. L. R. 1.

Unity of object with diversity of method is the essence of competition. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co. (D. C.) 207 F. 467, 470.

In Scotch Practice

The contest among creditors claiming on their respective diligences, or creditors claiming on their securities. Bell.

Unfair Competition in Trade

See Unfair.

COMPETITORS. Persons endeavoring to do the same thing and each offering to perform the act, furnish the merchandise, or render the service better or cheaper than his rival. Continental Securities Co. v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co. (D. C.) 207 F. 467, 470.

COMPILATION. A literary production composed of the works of others and arranged in a methodical manner.

A compilation consists of selected extracts from different authors; an abridgment is a condensation of the views of one author. Story v. Holcombe, 4 McLean 306, 314, Fed. Cas. No. 13,497.

COMPILE. To copy from various authors into one work. See Compilation.

COMPILED STATUTES. A collection of the statutes existing and in force in a given state, all laws and parts of laws relating to each subject-matter being brought together under one head, and the whole arranged systematically in one book, either under an alphabetical arrangement or some other plan of classification. Such a collection of statutes differs from a code in this, that none of the laws so compiled derives any new force or undergoes any modification in its relation to other statutes in pari materia from the fact of the compilation, while a code is a re-enactment of the whole body of the positive law and is to be read and interpreted as one entire and homogeneous whole. Railway Co. v. State, 104 Ga. 831, 31 S. E. 531; Black, Interp. Laws, p. 363.

COMPLAINANT. In practice. One who applies to the courts for legal redress; one who exhibits a bill of complaint. This is the proper designation of one suing in equity, though "plaintiff" is often used in equity proceedings as well as at law. Benefit Ass'n v. Robinson, 147 Ill. 138, 35 N. E. 168.

One who instigates prosecution or who prefers accusation against suspected person. People v. Lay, 193 Mich. 476, 160 N. W. 467, 470; State v. Snyder, 93 N. J. Law, 18, 107 A. 167, 168.

COMPLAINT.

In Civil Practice

In those states having a Code of Civil Procedure, the complaint is the first or initiatory pleading on the part of the plaintiff in a civil action. It corresponds to the declaration in the common-law practice. Code N. Y. § 141; Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185, 7 P. 456; Railroad Co. v. Young, 154 Ind. 24, 55 N. E. 853; McMath v. Parsons, 26 Minn. 246, 2 N. W. 703.

The complaint shall contain: (1) The title of the cause, specifying the name of the court in which the action is brought, the name of the county in which the trial is required to be had, and the names of the parties to the action, plaintiff and defendant. (2) A plain and concise statement of the facts constituting a cause of action, without unnecessary repetition; and each material allegation shall be distinctly numbered. (3) A demand of the relief to which the plaintiff supposes himself entitled. If the recovery of money be demanded, the amount thereof must be stated. Code N. C. 1883, § 233 (C. S. § 506).

Cross-complaint. In code practice. Whenever the defendant seeks affirmative relief against any party, relating to or depending upon the contract or transaction upon which the action is brought, or affecting the property to which the action relates, he may, in addition to his answer, file at the same time, or by permission of the court subsequently, a cross-complaint. The cross-complaint must be served upon the parties affected thereby, and such parties may demur or answer thereto as to the original complaint. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 442; Standley v. Insurance Co., 95 Ind. 254; Harrison v. McCormick, 69 Cal. 616, 11 P. 456; Bank v. Ridpath, 29 Wash. 687, 70 P. 139. This is allowed when a defendant has a cause of action against a co-defendant, or a person not a party to the action, and affecting the subject-matter of the action. The only real difference between a complaint and a cross-complaint is that the first is filed by the plaintiff and the second by the defendant. Both contain a statement of the facts, and each demands affirmative relief upon the facts stated. The difference between a counter-claim and a cross-complaint is that in the former the defendant's cause of action is against the plaintiff; and the latter, against a co-defendant, or one not a party to the action; White v. Reagan, 32 Ark. 290.

In Criminal Law

A charge, preferred before a magistrate having jurisdiction, that a person named (or an unknown person) has committed a specified offense, with an offer to prove the fact, to the end that a prosecution may be instituted. It is a technical term, descriptive of proceedings before a magistrate. Hobbs v. Hill, 157 Mass. 556, 32 N. E. 862; Com. v. Davis, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 436; U. S. v. Collins (D. C.) 79 F. 66; State v.
