handfast marriage. 1. Hist. A marriage, often lacking only solemnization by clergy, characterized by the couple's joining of hands to conclude a marriage contract. 2. Hist. A betrothal with all the binding effects of a marriage, including conjugal rights and cohabitation, followed by a later formal ceremony. 3. A trial or probationary marriage wherein the couple agrees to cohabit and behave as spouses for a definite period, usu. one year, at the end of which they will mutually decide to separate or go through a permanently binding marriage. • The legal status of such a marriage is unsettled, as many such trial marriages are initiated with a ritual ceremony including an exchange of vows before a presiding officer legally empowered to perform marriages, yet the couple intends to remain free to end the relationship without legal proceedings. Cf. marriage in jest; common-law marriage. 4. A binding form of marriage practiced by some modern pagan religions. • Unlike in sense 3, such marriages are entered into with the expectation of permanent duration. — Also termed (in senses 3 and 4) handfasting.

high-test marriage. See covenant marriage.

homosexual marriage. See same-sex marriage.

informal marriage. See common-law marriage.

in-marriage. Marriage between relatives; in-breeding.

limited-purpose marriage. A marriage in which the parties agree to be married only for certain reasons. • An example is a marriage in which the parties agree to marry so that a child will not be born illegitimate but agree not to live together or to have any duties toward each other. Courts have usu. found these marriages to be binding for all purposes. Cf. sham marriage; green card-marriage.

marriage by habit and repute. Scots law. An irregular marriage created by cohabitation that implies a mutual agreement to be married. • This type of marriage is still recognized in Scotland. See Scotch marriage. [Cases: Marriage ⇨22.]

marriage in jest. A voidable marriage in which the parties lack the requisite intent to marry.

marriage of conscience. Eccles. law. See confidential marriage.

marriage of convenience. (18c) 1. A marriage entered into for social or financial advantages rather than out of mutual love. — Also termed mariage de convenance. 2. Loosely, an ill-considered marriage that, at the time, is convenient for the parties involved.

Scots law. Hist. An irregular marriage created by a promise to marry in the future followed by an act of sexual intercourse. • Originally medieval canon law, this type of marriage was recognized in Scotland until 1940. See Scotch marriage. [Cases: Marriage ⇨20(2).]

marriage per verba de praesenti. Scots law. Hist. An irregular marriage created at the time of a mutual agreement to be married. • Originally medieval canon law, this type of marriage was recognized in Scotland until 1940. See Scotch marriage. [Cases: Marriage ⇨20(2).]

morganatic marriage (mor-gə-nat-ik). Hist. A marriage between a man of superior status to a woman of inferior status, with the stipulation that the wife and her children have no claims to the husband's title or possessions. • By extension, the term later referred to the marriage of a woman of superior status to a man of inferior status. The concept is now limited to royal marriages. — Also termed left-handed marriage; marriage of the left hand; salic marriage.

occult marriage. Eccles. law. See confidential marriage.

plural marriage. (1862) A marriage in which one spouse is already married to someone else; a bigamous or polygamous union; POLYGAMY. [Cases: Bigamy ⇨1; Marriage ⇨11.]

putative marriage (pyoo-tə-tiv). A marriage in which either the husband or the wife believes in good faith that the two are married, but for some technical reason they are not formally married (as when the ceremonial official was not authorized to perform a marriage). • A putative marriage is typically treated as valid to protect the innocent spouse. The concept of a putative marriage was adopted from the Napoleonic Code in those states having a civil-law tradition, such as California, Louisiana, and Texas. This type of marriage is also recognized in the Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act. The legal rule by which putative marriages exist is sometimes referred to as the putative-spouse doctrine. — Also termed putative matrimony. [Cases: Marriage ⇨54(1).]

same-sex marriage. The ceremonial union of two people of the same sex; a marriage or marriage-like relationship between two women or two men. • The United States government and most American states do not recognize same-sex marriages, even if legally contracted in other countries such as Canada, so couples usu. do not acquire the legal status of spouses. But in some states same-sex couples have successfully challenged the laws against same-sex marriage on constitutional grounds. See Goodridge v. Dept. of Pub. Health, 798 N.E.2d 941 (Mass. 2003). Cf. Baehr v. Lewin, 852 P.2d 44 (Haw. 1993); Baehr v. Miike, 994 P.2d 566 (Haw. 1999); Baker v. State, 744 A.2d 864 (Vt. 1999). — Also termed gay marriage; homosexual marriage. Cf. CIVIL COMMITMENT (2); CIVIL UNION; DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP.

Scotch marriage. Scots law. A marriage by consensual contract, without the necessity of a formal ceremony.

• Until 1940, Scots law retained the medieval canon-law forms of marriage per verba de praesenti and per verba de futuro subsequente copula. These promises constituted irregular but valid marriages. Scots law still retains the irregular marriage by cohabitation with habit and repute. No ceremony needs to be proved but, after the death of one spouse, the surviving spouse or any child can obtain a court's confirmation that a marriage existed, based on the general belief of neighbors, friends, and family. [Cases: Marriage ↷20(1).]

sham marriage. (18c) A purported marriage in which all the formal requirements are met or seemingly met, but in which the parties go through the ceremony with no intent of living together as husband and wife. Cf. green-card marriage; fraudulent marriage; limited-purpose marriage. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↷264, 428.]

2. Roman law. A consensual agreement between a man and a woman to be married. • The consent of both parties and of any paterfamilias was necessary. Other requirements were the attainment of puberty and legal capacity (conubium). If either or both withdrew consent to be married, the marriage ended in divorce; no specific grounds were necessary. In the Christian empire, divorce without adequate grounds was penalized. 3. MARRIAGE CEREMONY. — marital, adj.

ceremonial marriage. (1876) A wedding that follows all the statutory requirements and that has been

civil marriage. (17c) A wedding ceremony conducted by an official, such as a judge, or by some other authorized person — as distinguished from one solemnized by a member of the clergy. [Cases: Marriage ↷27.]

double-proxy marriage. A wedding in which both parties to a marriage are absent but represented by stand-ins. • Only Montana allows this type of marriage.

proxy marriage. (1924) A wedding in which someone stands in for an absent bride or groom, as when one party is stationed overseas in the military. • Proxy marriages are prohibited in most states. [Cases: Marriage ↷23.]

marriage article. (1831) A premarital stipulation between spouses who intend to incorporate the stipulation in a postnuptial agreement. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷29.]

marriage bonus. Tax. The difference between the reduced income-tax liability owed by a married couple filing a joint income-tax return and the greater amount they would have owed had they been single and filed individually. — Also termed singles' penalty. Cf. MARRIAGE PENALTY.

marriage broker. One who arranges a marriage in exchange for consideration. • A marriage broker may be subject to criminal liability.

marriage-brokerage contract. An agreement under which a person, acting for compensation, procures someone for a marriage. • Traditionally, these contracts have been void as being against public policy. [Cases: Contracts ↷111.]

marriage ceremony. (17c) The religious or civil proceeding that solemnizes a marriage. — Sometimes shortened to marriage. — Also termed wedding.

marriage certificate. (1821) A document that is executed by the religious or civil official presiding at a marriage ceremony and filed with a public authority (usu. the county clerk) as evidence of the marriage. — Also termed certificate of marriage. Cf. MARRIAGE LICENSE. [Cases: Marriage ↷31.]

marriage contract. See CONTRACT.

marriage license. (17c) A document, issued by a public authority, that grants a couple permission to marry. Cf. MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE. [Cases: Marriage ↷25(2).]

marriage mill. A place that facilitates hasty, often secret, marriages by requiring few or no legal formalities. • Marriage-mill unions may be voidable but are rarely void in the absence of absolute impediments to marriage.

marriage-notice book. An English registry of marriage applications and licenses.

marriage penalty. Tax. The difference between the greater income-tax liability owed by a married couple filing a joint income-tax return and the lesser amount they would owe had they been single and filed individually. • A marriage penalty exists whenever a married couple is treated disadvantageously under a tax code in comparison with an unmarried couple. Cf. MARRIAGE BONUS.

marriage portion. See DOWRY.

marriage promise. See PROMISE.

marriage records. Government or church records containing information on prospective couples (such as a woman's maiden name and address) and on wedding services performed. [Cases: Marriage ↷32.]

married woman's separate estate in equity. Hist. At common law, a trust that a rich family could set up for a daughter so that she would not lose control of her own money and property to her husband. • The daughter could escape the severe limits of coverture by having her family establish a separate estate in equity, allowing her the benefit of income that was not controlled by her husband even if the husband was named as trustee. See COVERTURE; MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACTS. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷110.]

married women's property acts. (sometimes cap.) Statutes enacted to remove a married woman's legal disabilities; esp. statutes that abolished the common-law prohibitions against a married woman's contracting, suing and being sued, or acquiring, holding, and conveying property in her own right, free from any restrictions by her husband. • In addition, these acts abolished the spousal-unity doctrine. In actual usage, the term almost always appears in the plural form (acts, not act), except when referring to a particular statute. — Also termed married women's acts; married woman's property acts; married woman's acts; emancipation acts; married women's emancipation acts. See MERGER DOCTRINE OF HUSBAND AND WIFE; LEGAL-UNITIES DOCTRINE. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷111.]

"The women's rights movement existed throughout the nineteenth century. It succeeded in partially reducing the legal disabilities of married women during the second half of that century by bringing about the enactment in all states of Married Women's Property Acts. The purpose of these Acts was to place married women on an equal footing with their husbands with respect to contracts, earnings, the ownership of property and the right to sue or be sued, but as they were construed by the courts they frequently failed to accomplish the intended reforms." Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estlin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 8 (6th ed. 2000).

Marsden motion. A criminal defendant's request that a court dismiss or replace a court-appointed attorney on grounds that the attorney is not completely or adequately representing the defendant. People v. Marsden, 465 P.2d 44 (Cal. 1970). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷1824.] marshal, n. (13c) 1. A law-enforcement officer with duties similar to those of a sheriff. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷183.] 2. A judicial officer who provides court security, executes process, and performs other tasks for the court. [Cases: Courts ↷58.] — marshalsip, n.

United States Marshal. A federal official who carries out the orders of a federal court. • U.S. Marshals are employees of the executive branch of government. [Cases: United States Marshals ↷29.]

marshal, vb. (15c) 1. To arrange or rank in order <the brief effectively marshaled the appellant's arguments>. 2. To arrange (assets, etc.) according to their liability or availability for payment of debts. 3. To fix the order of (creditors) according to their priority.

marshaling assets, rule of. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS.

marshaling doctrine. The principle that, when a senior creditor has recourse to two or more funds to satisfy its debt, and a junior creditor has recourse to only one fund to satisfy its debt, the senior creditor must satisfy its debt out of the funds in which the junior creditor has no interest. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor ↷13.]

marshaling the evidence. (1892) 1. Arranging all of a party's evidence in the order that it will be presented at trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2011; Trial ↷59(1).] 2. The practice of formulating a jury charge so that it arranges the evidence to give more credence to a particular interpretation. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2173.1; Trial ↷204, 234(2).]

Marshal of the Queen's Bench. Hist. A custodial officer of the Queen's Bench prison. • The position was abolished by the Queen's Prison Act of 1842 (St. 5 & 6 Vict., ch. 22).

Marshalsea (mahr-shəl-see), n. [fr. Law Latin marescallia] Hist. 1. The court or seat of the marshal of the royal household. 2. A debtor's prison in London under the jurisdiction of the Court of Marshalsea. See COURT OF MARSHALSEA.

martē suo decurrere (mahr-tee s[y]oo-oh də-kər-ər-ee). [Latin] Hist. To run its course by its own force. • In the civil law, this term was applied to a suit that ran its course without obstruction.

martial law (mahr-shəl). (1933) 1. The law by which during wartime the army, instead of civil authority, governs the country because of a perceived need for military security or public safety. • The military assumes control purportedly until civil authority can be restored. 2. A body of firm, strictly enforced rules that are imposed because of a perception by the country's rulers that civil government has failed, or might fail, to function. • Martial law is usu. imposed when the rulers foresee an invasion, insurrection, economic collapse, or other breakdown of the rulers' desired social order. [Cases: War and National Emergency ↷31.]

"Martial law is the public law of necessity. Necessity calls it forth, necessity justifies its exercise, and necessity measures the extent and degree to which it may be employed. That necessity is no formal, artificial, legalistic concept but an actual and factual one: it is the necessity of taking action to safeguard the state against insurrection, riot, disorder, or public calamity. What constitutes necessity is a question of fact in each case." Frederick B. Wiener, A Practical Manual of Martial Law 16 (1940).

"[M]artial law is nothing more and nothing less than an application of the common law doctrine that force, to whatever degree necessary, may be used to repress illegal force. Martial law is the public right of self-defense against a danger threatening the order or the existence of the state. Where the ordinary civil authorities — the police — are unable to resist or subdue a disturbance, additional force, military in nature, may be applied. The extent of military force used depends in each instance upon the extent of the disturbance." Id. at 16-17.

absolute martial law. The carrying on of government functions entirely by military agencies, as a result of which the authority of civil agencies is superseded. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨ 31.]

qualified martial law. The carrying on of government functions partly by military agencies, as a result of which the authority of some civil agencies is superseded. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨ 31.]

3. The law by which the army in wartime governs foreign territory that it occupies. 4. Loosely, MILITARY LAW.

Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory. A series of books, published annually, containing a roster and ratings of lawyers and law firms in most cities of the United States, corporate legal departments, government lawyers, foreign lawyers, and lawyer-support providers, as well as a digest of the laws of the states, the District of Columbia, and territories of the United States, and a digest of the laws of many foreign jurisdictions, including Canada and its provinces.

Martinez report. A report that a court may require a prose party to file in order to clarify a vague or incomprehensible complaint. Martinez v. Aaron, 570 F.2d 317 (10th Cir. 1978). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2538, 2734.]

Martinmas. See quarter day under DAY.

Mary Carter agreement. (1972) A contract (usu. a secret one) by which one or more, but not all, codefendants settle with the plaintiff and obtain a release, along with a provision granting them a portion of any recovery from the nonparticipating codefendants. • In a Mary Carter agreement, the participating codefendants agree to remain parties to the lawsuit and, if no recovery is awarded against the nonparticipating codefendants, to pay the plaintiff a settled amount. Such an agreement is void as against public policy in some states but is valid in others if disclosed to the jury. Booth v. Mary Carter Paint Co., 202 So. 2d 8 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1967). Cf. GALLAGHER AGREEMENT. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement ⇨ 100.]

masking. n. In critical legal studies, the act or an instance of concealing something's true nature <being a critic, Max contends that the legal system is merely an elaborate masking of social injustices>. — mask, vb.

mask work. Copyright. A three-dimensional pattern of metallic insulation or semiconducting material present or removed from the layers of a computer chip. • Mark works are protected under the Semiconductor Chip Protection Act of 1984. 17 USCA §§ 902 et seq. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 10.4.]

mass meeting. See MEETING.

mass murder. See MURDER.

mass tort. See TORT.

mast. 1. Military law. A Navy disciplinary proceeding at which the commanding officer of a unit considers minor offenses charged against enlisted personnel. • The charges may be dismissed, the accused person may receive a punishment prescribed by military law, or the matter may be referred to a court-martial. The proceeding is not officially a trial, and no conviction or acquittal results. Traditionally, when a ship's captain disciplines crew members at sea, the hearing is held and the discipline announced (and sometimes carried out) at the ship's mainmast or at the mast. Depending on the rank of the presiding officer, it may be also termed a captain's mast, admiral's mast, or (for an admiral) flag mast. [Cases: Armed Services ⇨ 39.] 2. On board a ship, the usual place of assembly for a court hearing, public sale, etc. • On sailing ships, the place is the mainmast. On all other vessels, the captain designates a place as the "mast." Cf. (in sense 2) MAST SELLING.

master, n. (bef. 12c) 1. One who has personal authority over another's services; specif., a principal who employs another to perform one or more services and who controls or has the right to control the physical conduct of the other in the performance of the services;

EMPLOYER <the law of master and servant>. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻25.]

"[A] master is a species of principal. All masters are principals, but all principals are not necessarily masters. A principal becomes a master only if his control of the agent's physical conduct is sufficient." William A. Gregory, The Law of Agency and Partnership 5 (3d ed. 2001).

2. A parajudicial officer (such as a referee, an auditor, an examiner, or an assessor) specially appointed to help a court with its proceedings. • A master may take testimony, hear and rule on discovery disputes, enter temporary orders, and handle other pretrial matters, as well as computing interest, valuing annuities, investigating encumbrances on land titles, and the like — usu. with a written report to the court. Fed. R. Civ. P. 53. — Also termed special master. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1871-1908; Reference ↻35-77.]

special master. (1833) A master appointed to assist the court with a particular matter or case. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1871-1908; Reference ↻47.]

master agreement. Labor law. An agreement between a union and industry leaders, the terms of which serve as a model for agreements between the union and individual companies within the industry.

master and servant. (16c) The relation between two persons, one of whom (the master) has authority over the other (the servant), with the power to direct the time, manner, and place of the services. • This relationship is similar to that of principal and agent, but that terminology applies to employments in which the employee has some discretion, while the servant is almost completely under the control of the master. Also, an agent usu. acts for the principal in business relations with third parties, while a servant does not. See master-servant relationship under RELATIONSHIP. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻23.]

Master at Common Law. An officer of an English superior court of common law, appointed to record court proceedings, supervise the issuance of writs, and receive and account for fees paid into the court.

Master-General of the Ordnance. See MASTER OF THE ORDNANCE.

master in chancery. 1. An officer appointed by a court of equity to assist the court. 2. English law. (usu. cap.) A senior official or clerk of a court of chancery who assists the Chancellor in various duties such as inquiring into matters referred by the court, examining cases, taking oaths and affidavits, hearing testimony, and computing damages. • There were many Masters in Chancery at the same time. The office was abolished in 1897 and was replaced by the office of Master of the Supreme Court. — Also termed master of the chancery. See MASTER OF THE SUPREME COURT. [Cases: Equity ↻395.]

Master in Lunacy. Hist. A judicial officer appointed by the Lord Chancellor to conduct inquiries into the state of mind of people alleged to be lunatics incapable of handling their own affairs and to ensure in each case that the lunatic's property is properly managed for his or her benefit.

Master of Requests. Hist. A judge of the Court of Requests.

master of the chancery. See MASTER IN CHANCERY.

Master of the Crown Office. English law. A Supreme Court officer who is appointed by the Lord Chief Justice. • Formerly, the Master was the Queen's Coroner and attorney, who was originally appointed by the Lord Chancellor to prosecute criminal cases in the name of the Crown.

Master of the Faculties. Eccles. law. An officer in the province of Canterbury who heads the Court of Faculties, grants licenses, and admits or removes notaries public. — Also termed magister ad facultates. See COURT OF FACULTIES.

Master of the Horse. English law. A peer who as third officer of the royal household, next to the lord steward and lord chamberlain, attends the sovereign on state occasions. • The official was originally in charge of the royal stables, but that duty is now entrusted to the Crown Equerry.

Master of the Mint. Hist. A salaried warden who supervised all activities of the royal mint. • The office was abolished under the Coinage Act of 1870 and replaced with Master Worker and Warden of Her Majesty's Royal Mint.

Master of the Ordnance. Hist. Beginning with the reign of Henry VIII, a superior officer responsible for the royal artillery and weapons. • The more modern representative is the Master-General of the Ordnance, a military officer and member of the Army Council. — Also termed Master-General of the Ordnance.

Master of the Pells. See CLERK OF THE PELLs.

Master of the Rolls. The president of the Court of Appeal in England. • Formerly, the Master of the Rolls was an assistant judge to a court of chancery, responsible for keeping the rolls and chancery records. In recent times, the most famous Master of the Rolls was Lord Denning (who lived from 1899 to 1999).

"Since 1875, the Master of the Rolls has been president of the Court of Appeal. Until 1958 he had the general responsibility for the public records (a responsibility then transferred to the Lord Chancellor) and is still responsible for the records of the Chancery of England. He admits persons as solicitors of the Supreme Court." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 816 (1980).

Master of the Supreme Court. An official of the Queen's Bench and Chancery Divisions of the Supreme Court who fills the several positions of master in the common-law courts, the Queen's Coroner and Attorney, the Master of the Crown Office, record and writ clerks, and associates.

matrimonial res. (1893) 1. The marriage estate. 2. The state of marriage; the legal relationship between married persons, as opposed to the property and support obligations arising from the marriage.

matrimonium (ma-trə-moh-nee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. Marriage. — Also termed nuptiae (nəp-shee-ee).

matrimonium ipsum (ma-trə-moh-nee-əm ip-səm). [Latin] Hist. Marriage itself.

matrimonium non justum (ma-trə-moh-nee-əm non jəs-təm). [Latin] Roman law. A marriage between two persons one or both of whom do not have the legal capacity to wed (conubium). • Children resulting from such a marriage were legitimate but were not considered in potestas.

matrimony, n. (14c) The ceremony or state of being married; MARRIAGE (1). [Cases: Marriage ↷ 1.] — matrimonial, adj.

matrix (may-triks), n. [Latin] 1. Hist. Mother. 2. Civil law. The original legal instrument, from which all copies must be made. 3. A list of the parties to a lawsuit, including the addresses at which pleadings and notices can be served. • A matrix is commonly used to list the names and addresses of creditors and other parties in a bankruptcy case. Many bankruptcy courts have specific rules on how to prepare the matrix.

matrix ecclesia (may-triks e-klee-z[h]ee-ə). [Latin] Eccles. law. A mother church; a cathedral church in relation to parochial churches in the same diocese, or a parish church in relation to dependent chapels.

matter, n. (13c) 1. A subject under consideration, esp. involving a dispute or litigation; CASE (1) <this is the only matter on the court's docket today>. 2. Something that is to be tried or proved; an allegation forming the basis of a claim or defense <the matters raised in the plaintiff's complaint are not actionable under state law>.

matter in deed. 1. A matter that can be proved by a writing under seal. 2. See matter of fact.

matter in pais (in pay). A matter of fact that has not been recorded in writing and that must therefore be proved by parol evidence.

matter of fact. (16c) A matter involving a judicial inquiry into the truth of alleged facts. — Also termed matter in deed.

matter of form. A matter concerned only with formalities or noncritical characteristics <the objection that the motion was incorrectly titled related to a matter of form>. Cf. matter of substance.

matter of law. A matter involving a judicial inquiry into the applicable law.

matter of record. A matter that has been entered on a judicial or other public record and therefore can be proved by producing that record.

matter of substance. A matter concerning the merits or critical elements, rather than mere formalities <the party objected because the motion was based on a repealed statute that related to a matter of substance>. Cf. matter of form.

new matter. 1. A litigant's claim or defense that goes beyond the issues raised in the original litigation, either by raising a new issue with new facts to be proved or by raising a defense that does not implicate an element of the original claims. • A typical example of new matter is an affirmative defense. 2. See NEW MATTER (2).

special matter. Common-law pleading. Out-of-the-ordinary evidence that a defendant is allowed to enter, after notice to the plaintiff, under a plea of the general issue.

matter in controversy. See AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

matter of course. (17c) Something done as a part of a routine process or procedure.

mature, vb. (1861) (Of a debt or obligation) to become due <the bond matures in ten years>. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨129.] — maturity, n. — mature, adj.

mature-minor doctrine. Family law. A rule holding that an adolescent, though not having reached the age of majority, may make decisions about his or her health and welfare if the adolescent demonstrates an ability to articulate reasoned preferences on those matters. • The mature-minor doctrine was recognized as constitutionally protected in medical decisions (abortion rights) in Planned Parenthood of Cent. Missouri v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52, 96 S.Ct. 2831 (1976). Not all states recognize the common-law mature-minor doctrine. Cf. PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ⇨120.]

maturity value. The amount that is due and payable on an obligation's maturity date.

maugre (maw-gər), prep. Archaic. Despite <the witness may testify maugre counsel's objection>.

maxim (mak-sim). (16c) A traditional legal principle that has been frozen into a concise expression. • Examples are "possession is nine-tenths of the law" and caveat emptor ("let the buyer beware"). — Also termed legal maxim.

maximalist retributivism. See RETRIBUTIVISM.

maximum cure. Maritime law. The point at which a seaman who is injured or sick has stabilized, and no additional medical treatment will improve the seaman's condition. • A shipowner's obligation to provide maintenance and cure to a sick or injured seaman usu. continues until the seaman has reached maximum cure. Farrell v. United States, 336 U.S. 511, 69 S.Ct. 707 (1949); Vella v. Ford Motor Co., 421 U.S. 1, 95 S.Ct. 1381 (1975). See CURE (2); MAINTENANCE AND CURE. [Cases: Seamen ⇨11(6).]

maximum medical improvement. (1955) The point at which an injured person's condition stabilizes, and no further recovery or improvement is expected, even with additional medical intervention. • This term is most often used in the context of a workers'-compensation claim. An injured employee usu. receives temporary benefits until reaching maximum medical improvement, at which time a determination can be made about any permanent disability the employee has suffered and any corresponding benefits the employee should receive. — Abbr. MMI. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨868.]

may, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To be permitted to <the plaintiff may close>. 2. To be a possibility <we may win on appeal>. Cf. CAN. 3. Loosely, is required to; shall; must <if two or more defendants are jointly indicted, any defendant who so requests may be tried separately>. • In dozens of cases, courts have held may to be synonymous with shall or must, usu. in an effort to effectuate legislative intent. [Cases: Statutes ⇨227.]

mayhem (may-hem), n. (15c) 1. The crime of maliciously injuring a person's body, esp. to impair or destroy the victim's capacity for self-defense. • Modern statutes usu. treat this as a form of aggravated battery. See BATTERY. Cf. serious bodily injury under INJURY. [Cases: Mayhem ⇨1.]

"Mayhem, according to the English common law, is maliciously depriving another of the use of such of his members as may render him less able, in fighting, either to defend himself or to annoy his adversary. It is a felony." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 239 (3d ed. 1982).

2. Violent destruction. 3. Rowdy confusion or disruption. — maim (for sense 1), vb.

May it please the court. (17c) An introductory phrase that lawyers use when first addressing a court, esp. when presenting oral argument to an appellate court.

MBO. See management buyout under BUYOUT.

MC. abbr. MEMBER OF CONGRESS.

McCarran Act. A federal law requiring, among other things, members of the Communist party to register with the Attorney General and requiring Communist organizations to provide the government with a list of its members. • The Act was passed in 1950, during the Cold War. Over the years, the U.S. Supreme Court declared various portions of the Act unconstitutional, but it was not fully repealed until 1993. See, e.g., United States v. Spector, 343 U.S. 169, 72 S.Ct. 591 (1952); Aptheker v. Secretary of State, 378 U.S. 500, 84 S.Ct. 1659 (1964); United States v. Robel, 389 U.S. 258, 88 S.Ct. 419 (1967). — Also termed McCarran Internal Security Act; Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950.

McCarran-Ferguson Act. Insurance. A federal law allowing a state to regulate insurance companies doing business in that state, and also to levy a tax on them. 15 USCA §§ 1011–1015. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1100.]

McCarran Internal Security Act. See MCCARRAN ACT.

McClanahan presumption. The presumption that the states do not have jurisdiction to tax members of a Native American tribe who live or work on tribal land. • The presumption is not limited to tribal members who live or work on a formal reservation. Instead, it includes those who live or work on informal reservations, in dependent tribal communities, and on tribal allotments. McClanahan v. Arizona Tax Comm'n, 411 U.S. 164, 93 S.Ct. 1257 (1973). [Cases: Taxation ⇨ 2273, 3412, 3612.]

McDonnell Douglas test. Employment law. The principle for applying a shifting burden of proof in employment-discrimination cases, essentially requiring the plaintiff to come forward with evidence of discrimination and the defendant to come forward with evidence showing that the employment action complained of was taken for nondiscriminatory reasons. • Under this test, the plaintiff must first establish a prima facie case of discrimination, as by showing that the plaintiff is a member of a protected group and suffered an adverse employment action. If the plaintiff satisfies that burden, then the defendant must articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employment action complained of. If the defendant satisfies that burden, then the plaintiff must prove that the defendant's stated reason is just a pretext for discrimination and that discrimination was the real reason for the employment action. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817 (1973). Cf. burden-shifting analysis. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1118, 1536.]

mcf. Abbr. Oil & gas. One thousand cubic feet, one of the standard units for measuring natural gas.

McNabb-Mallory rule. Criminal procedure. The doctrine that a confession is inadmissible if obtained during an unreasonably long detention period between arrest and a preliminary hearing. • Because of the broader protections afforded under the Miranda rule, the McNabb-Mallory rule is rarely applied in modern cases. McNabb v. United States, 318 U.S. 332, 63 S.Ct. 608 (1943); Mallory v. United States, 354 U.S. 449, 77 S.Ct. 1356 (1957). — Often shortened to Mallory rule. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 519(8).]

McNaghten rules (mik-nawt-ən). (1917) Criminal law. The doctrine that a person is not criminally responsible for an act when a mental disability prevented the person from knowing either (1) the nature and quality of the act or (2) whether the act was right or wrong. • The federal courts and most states have adopted this test in some form. McNaghten's Case, 8 Eng. Rep. 718 (H.L. 1843). — Also spelled McNaughten rules; M'Naghten rules; M'Naughten rules. — Also termed right-and-wrong test; right-wrong test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 48; Homicide ⇨ 817.]

McNary comity. The principle that a U.S. district court should not hear a taxpayer's civil-rights challenge to the administration of a state's tax system. Fair Assessment in Real Estate Ass'n v. McNary, 454 U.S. 100, 102 S.Ct. 177 (1981). [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨ 27.]

mean, adj. (14c) 1. Of or relating to an intermediate point between two points or extremes . 2. Medium in size . 3. (Of a value, etc.) average . Cf. MEDIAN.

meander line (mee-an-dər). (1865) A survey line (not a boundary line) on a portion of land, usu. following the course of a river or stream. [Cases: Boundaries ⇨ 12.]

meaning. (14c) The sense of anything, but esp. of words; that which is conveyed (or intended to be conveyed) by a written or oral statement or other communicative act. • The word ordinarily includes a mistaken but reasonable understanding of a communication. Cf. AMBIGUITY.

objective meaning. The meaning that would be attributed to an unambiguous document (or portion of a document) by a disinterested reasonable person who is familiar with the surrounding circumstances. • A party to a contract is often held to its objective meaning, which it is considered to have had reason to know, even if the party subjectively understood or intended something else. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 147(1).]

plain meaning. The meaning attributed to a document (usu. by a court) by giving the words their ordinary sense, without referring to extrinsic indications of the means of support. See MEANS (1).

subjective meaning. The meaning that a party to a legal document attributes to it when the document is written, executed, or otherwise adopted. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 170(1).]

means-plus-function clause. Patents. An element in a patent claim, usu. in a claim for an apparatus patent, asserting that the claim element is a way to perform a given function or is a step in the process of performing a given function. • The claim will be interpreted as including the structure or means stated in the patent specification and equivalents at the time of interpretation or infringement, but not all possible means of achieving the same function. 35 USCA § 112 ¶ 6. — Also termed means-plus-function element; means-plus-function claim. See combination patent under PATENT (3). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(8).]

measure of damages. (18c) The basis for calculating damages to be awarded to someone who has suffered an injury. • For example, the measure of damages in an action on a penal bond is compensation for the actual loss, not exceeding the established penalty. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 95–126.]

measuring life. (1922) Under the rule against perpetuities, the last beneficiary to die who was alive at the testator's death and who usu. holds a preceding interest. • A measuring life is used to determine whether an interest will vest under the rule against perpetuities. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. Cf. LIFE IN BEING. [Cases: Perpetuities ⇨ 4(1).]

measuring money. Hist. An extra duty collected on cloth. • It was abolished during the reign of Henry IV.

mechanical license. See LICENSE.

mechanical rights. Copyright. The right to reproduce a song in a phonorecord form, such as audiotape or compact disc. • The right is obtained by paying a statutory royalty; it is not necessary to obtain the songwriter's express permission. See MECHANICAL ROYALTY. Cf. PERFORMANCE RIGHTS. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 48.1.]

mechanical royalty. Copyright. The payment to which a songwriter is entitled each time a mechanical-right holder reproduces a song on a phonorecord. • Mechanical-royalty rates are statutory, and payable per song or per minute (whichever is higher). If an artist is willing to pay the statutory rate, the songwriter's permission is not needed before a recording is made. If they choose to, artists and songwriters may negotiate lower royalty rates. 37 CFR § 255. — Also termed statutory rate. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 48.1.]

mechanic's lien. See LIEN.

MED. abbr. OFFICE OF MEDICAL SERVICES.

medfee (med-fee). Hist. A bribe or reward; compensation given for things exchanged of unequal value.

media concludendi (mee-dee-ə kon-kloo-den-dī). [Latin] Hist. The steps of an argument.

medial, adj. See INTERLOCUTORY.

median, adj. (15c) Located in or related to the precise midpoint in a range of values or quantities, such that half of them fall above the midpoint and half below. Cf. MEAN.

media nox (mee-dee-ə noks), n. [Latin] Hist. Midnight.

medianus homo (mee-dee-ay-nəs hoh-moh). [Latin] Hist. A man of middle fortune.

media sententia (mee-dee-ə sen-ten-shee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A middle view.

"The Procleians held that specification, by changing the form of the raw material, changed its nature, and replaced it by something quite new, and that, therefore, the maker of the new article was the owner of it, and not the person to whom belonged the material of which it was made. The Sabinians, on the other hand, were of opinion that the material retained its original nature, and continued to subsist, notwithstanding its change of form, and that, accordingly, the new article belonged to the proprietor of the material. Neither of these extreme views were adopted by Justinian, who followed a middle opinion, based on this distinction: 'If the thing made can be reduced to its former rude materials, then the owner of the materials is also considered the owner of the thing made; but if the thing cannot be so reduced, then he who made it is the owner of it.' (Just. Inst. B. 2, T. 1, § 25.)" John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 349 (4th ed. 1894).

mediate datum (mee-dee-ay-tee day-təm). [Latin] An intermediate fact whose existence implies the existence of ultimate facts.

mediate descent. See DESCENT.

mediate evidence. See secondary evidence under EVIDENCE.

mediate possession. See POSSESSION.

mediate powers (mee-dee-it). (1820) Subordinate powers incidental to primary powers, esp. as given by a principal to an agent; powers necessary to accomplish the principal task <adjusting debt is a mediate power to collecting debt>. Cf. PRIMARY POWERS.

mediate testimony. See secondary evidence under EVIDENCE.

mediation (mee-dee-ay-shən), n. (14c) 1. A method of nonbinding dispute resolution involving a neutral third party who tries to help the disputing parties reach a mutually agreeable solution; CONCILIATION. — Also termed case evaluation; facilitated negotiation. Cf. COLLABORATIVE LAW; COOPERATIVE LAW. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ↷441.] 2. Int'l law. A process whereby a neutral country helps other countries peacefully resolve disputes between them. Cf. ARBITRATION. — mediate (mee-dee-ayt), vb. — mediatory (mee-dee-ə-tor-ee), adj.

"The distinction between mediation and conciliation is widely debated among those interested in ADR, arbitration, and international diplomacy. Some suggest that conciliation is 'a nonbinding arbitration,' whereas mediation is merely 'assisted negotiation.' Others put it this way: conciliation involves a third party's trying to bring together disputing parties to help them reconcile their differences, whereas mediation goes further by allowing the third party to suggest terms on which the dispute might be resolved. Still others reject these attempts at differentiation and contend that there is no consensus about what the two words mean — that they are generally interchangeable. Though a distinction would be convenient, those who argue that usage indicates a broad synonymy are most accurate." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 554 (2d ed. 1995).

Mediation and Conciliation Service. A federal agency that tries to prevent the interruption of commerce resulting from labor disputes, by assisting parties in settling their disputes through mediation and conciliation. • The agency can intervene on its own motion or on the motion of a party to the dispute. — Also termed Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. 29 USCA §§ 172, 173.

mediator (mee-dee-ay-tər), n. (14c) A neutral person who tries to help disputing parties reach an agreement. Cf. ARBITRATOR. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ↷470.]

mediators of questions. Hist. Six persons authorized by 27 Edw. 3, St. 2, ch. 24 to settle disputes between merchants.

Medicaid. (1966) A cooperative federal–state program that pays for medical expenses for qualifying individuals who cannot afford private medical services. • The program is authorized under the Social Security Act. — Also termed Medical Assistance; (in California) MediCal. Cf. MEDICARE. [Cases: Health ↷460–512.]

Medicare. (1953) A federal program — established under the Social Security Act — that provides health insurance for the elderly and the disabled. Cf. MEDICAID; MEDIGAP INSURANCE. [Cases: Health ↷520–554.]

"The Medicare Program is really three programs, Parts A, B, and C. Part A, the Hospital Insurance program, covers inpatient hospital, skilled nursing, home health, and hospice services. . . . Part B (Supplemental Medical Insurance) benefits help pay for physician's services, outpatient hospital services, renal dialysis, speech and physical therapy, ambulatory surgery, home health services, durable medical equipment, rural health clinic services, comprehensive outpatient rehabilitation facility services, and some diagnostic tests. . . . Part C, the Medicare + Choice managed care program, was established by the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Under the Medicare + Choice program, Medicare contracts with a wide variety of prepaid health plans on a risk basis to provide care to its beneficiaries." Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 11-1, at 538 (2d ed. 2000).

medicolegal (med-i-koh-lee-gəl), adj. (1835) Involving the application of medical science to law <the coroner's medicolegal functions>. See FORENSIC MEDICINE.

medietas linguae (mi-dī-ə-tas ling-gwee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Half-tongue. • The term was applied to a jury equally divided between natives and aliens. See DE MEDIETATE LINGVAE.

meeting, n. (14c) Parliamentary law. The gathering of people to discuss or act on matters in which they have a common interest; esp. the convening of a deliberative assembly to transact business. • A deliberative assembly’s meeting begins with a call to order and continues until the assembly adjourns. See call to order under CALL (1); ADJOURN (2). Cf. SESSION. — meet, vb.

“The distinction should be noted between the assembly (that is, the body of people who assemble) and the meeting (which is the event of their being assembled to transact business).” Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised § 1, at 2 (10th ed. 2000).

adjourned meeting. 1. See continued meeting. 2. A meeting that has adjourned. • These two senses are opposite in meaning, so the term “continued meeting” is preferable for sense 1.

annual meeting. A yearly meeting to elect or install officers or directors and to conduct other routine organizational business. • An organization’s governing documents usu. specify the time and place of such a meeting. [Cases: Corporations ↷193.]

business meeting. A formal meeting called for considering business, as opposed to a purely educational or social event. • A business meeting may fall within a program that also includes social and informational events. See PROGRAM (1).

called meeting. See special meeting.

continued meeting. A meeting that will be or has been resumed after a recess (or a so-called adjournment, which may last for several days but is still technically a recess, since it does not end the meeting). • A continued meeting is technically not an “adjourned meeting,” and an “adjourned meeting” may also mean a meeting that has adjourned, so the term “continued meeting” is preferable. — Also loosely termed adjourned meeting. See RECESS (2).

creditors’ meeting. Bankruptcy. The first meeting of a debtor’s creditors and equity security holders, presided over by the U.S. Trustee and at which a bankruptcy trustee may be elected and the debtor may be examined under oath. 11 USCA § 341. — Also termed meeting of creditors; 341 meeting; first meeting of creditors. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷3024.]

mass meeting. A meeting of an unorganized body called to discuss a particular issue or to organize for a particular purpose and usu. open to anyone interested in that issue or purpose.

organizational meeting. 1. A mass meeting that establishes a permanent or ongoing organization. 2. A meeting that begins an ongoing organization’s proceedings under its regular order, such as adopting governing documents and electing officers, usu. following a mass meeting and an interval when the organization operates under provisional officers while its governing documents are drafted. • If the organizational meeting is for a corporation and the articles of incorporation name the initial directors, the directors hold the meeting. Otherwise, the incorporator holds the meeting. [Cases: Corporations ↷24.] 3. The first meeting after a dissolution, at which a newly reconstituted deliberative assembly — such as a legislative body or a convention whose members are assuming the seats to which they have been elected or re-elected for a new term — elects officers, adopts rules, and otherwise organizes for the new session.

regular meeting. A periodic meeting held at a time set in an organization’s governing documents or under a standing rule or schedule that the deliberative assembly has adopted. — Also termed stated meeting. Cf. special meeting.

special meeting. A meeting that is not a regular meeting; a meeting called for a particular purpose, usu. between regular meetings. — Also termed called meeting. Cf. regular meeting. [Cases: Corporations ↷194, 298(3).] stated meeting. See regular meeting.

341 meeting. See creditors’ meeting.

meeting-competition defense. Antitrust. A defense to a charge of price discrimination whereby the defendant shows that the lower price was a good-faith attempt to match what it believed to be a competitor’s equally low offer.

meeting of the minds. (1830) Contracts. Actual assent by both parties to the formation of a contract, meaning that they agree on the same terms, conditions, and subject matter. • This was required under the traditional subjective theory of assent, but modern contract doctrine requires only objective manifestations of assent. — Also termed mutuality of assent; aggregatio mentium; assensio mentium. See mutual assent. under ASSENT. [Cases: Contracts ↻15.]

megalopolis (meg-ə-lɒp-ə-lis). A heavily populated, continuous urban area that is one vast city or composed of several cities and towns.

Megan's law (meg-ənz or may-gənz). (1994) A statute that requires sex offenders who are released from prison to register with a local board and that provides the means to disseminate information about the registrants to the community in which they dwell. • Although many of these statutes were enacted in the late 1980s, they took their popular name from Megan Kanka of New Jersey, a seven-year-old who in 1994 was raped and murdered by a twice-convicted sex offender who lived across the street from her house. All states have these laws, but only some require community notification (as by publishing offenders' pictures in local newspapers); in others, people must call a state hotline or submit names of persons they suspect. The federal version of Megan's law may be found at 42 USCA § 14071. — Also termed registration and community-notification law; community-notification law. Cf. JACOB WETTERLING CRIMES AGAINST CHILDREN AND SEXUALLY VIOLENT OFFENDER REGISTRATION ACT. [Cases: Mental Health ↻452, 469.] meigne (mayn), n. [Law French] Hist. See MEINY.

meindre age (min-dər əj or əz), n. [Law French] Hist. Lesser age; minority. See MINORITY (1).

meiny (may-nee), n. [Law French] Hist. A family, esp. a royal household. — Also spelled meine; meinie; meigne.

melior (mee-lee-ər), adj. [Latin] Better; the better, as in melior res ("the better thing or chattel").

meliorations (meel-yə-ray-shənz). 1. Scots law. Improvements — other than repairs — made to an estate by a tenant or liferenter. • The cost of meliorations is not recoverable from the landlord or fiar. 2. Lasting improvements.

melioribus damnis. See DE MELIORIBUS DAMNIS.

melius inquirendum (mee-lee-əs in-kwə-ren-dəm), n. [Law Latin "to be better inquired into"] Hist. A writ ordering the escheator to investigate a matter further, as by inquiring who is the next heir of a party who died seised of lands.

Melson formula. Family law. A method of calculating a noncustodial parent's child-support obligation to ensure that (1) neither parent falls below the poverty level in meeting child-support obligations, and (2) a child of a wealthier noncustodial parent shares in that parent's higher standard of living. • Named for Judge Elwood F. Melson of Delaware Family Court, the formula has been adopted in several states, such as Delaware, Hawaii, Montana, and West Virginia. The formula works as follows. A self-support reserve is first deducted from the parent-obligor's net income. Next, a primary support amount per child is calculated at an established subsistence level, added to actual work-related child-care expenses, and allocated between the parents. After deducting the support obligor's self-support reserve and pro rata share of the child's adjusted primary support amount, a percentage of the obligor's remaining income is allocated to additional child support as a cost-of-living adjustment. Total child support is determined by adding together the noncustodial parent's share of primary support and the standard-of-living allowance. [Cases: Child Support ↻89, 90, 146.]

member. (14c) 1. Parliamentary law. One of the individuals of whom an organization or a deliberative assembly consists, and who enjoys the full rights of participating in the organization — including the rights of making, debating, and voting on motions — except to the extent that the organization reserves those rights to certain classes of membership.

charter member. A member who was a member when the charter was granted or adopted; a founder.

full member. See voting member.

informational member. See nonvoting member.

limited member. See nonvoting member.

member ex officio. A member who serves (on a board or committee) by virtue of holding an office, and whose membership will therefore pass with the office to his or her successor. — Also termed ex officio member. See EX OFFICIO.

nonvoting member. A member whose rights do not include the right of voting on the organization's or assembly's business. — Also termed informational member.

voting member. A fully enfranchised member, as distinguished from a nonvoting member. — Also termed full member.

2. Military law. A person assigned to a court-martial to determine guilt and punishment. [Cases: Military Justice ↻870–871, 879.]

member firm. Securities. A brokerage firm with at least one director, officer, or general partner who holds a seat in an organized securities exchange. — Also termed (if organized as a corporation) member corporation. [Cases: Exchanges ↻5–9.]

member of a crew. See SEAMAN.

member of Congress. An elected official who sits in either the U.S. Senate or the House of Representatives.

• The official may be appointed to fill an unexpired term. — Abbr. MC. [Cases: United States ↻7.1.]

member of Parliament. A person with the right to sit in one of the two houses of Parliament. — Abbr. MP.

membership committee. See COMMITTEE.

members' scheme of arrangement. See SCHEME OF ARRANGEMENT.

membrana (mem-bray-nə), n. [Latin “parchment”] Hist. 1. A skin of parchment. 2. A notebook of leaves of parchment. • The English rolls were made of several types of parchment and the term membrana was used in referring to them.

membrum (mem-brəm), n. [Latin “limb”] A division of something, esp. a slip or small piece of land.

memorandum. (15c) 1. An informal written note or record outlining the terms of a transaction or contract <the memorandum indicated the developer’s intent to buy the property at its appraised value>. • To satisfy the statute of frauds, a memorandum can be written in any form, but it must (1) identify the parties to the contract, (2) indicate the contract’s subject matter, (3) contain the contract’s essential terms, and (4) contain the signature of the party against whom enforcement is sought. — Also termed memorial; note. See STATUTE OF FRAUDS. [Cases: Contracts ⇨32; Frauds, Statute Of ⇨103, 105.] 2. An informal written communication used esp. in offices <the firm sent a memorandum reminding all lawyers to turn in their timesheets>. — Often shortened to memo. 3. A party’s written statement of its legal arguments presented to the court, usu. in the form of a brief <memorandum of law>. Pl. memoranda, memorandums.

closed memorandum. A memorandum prepared by a law student using only given facts and the materials, usu. a collection of cases, in a packet provided to the student. — Also termed closed memo; closed-universe memo.

open memorandum. A memorandum prepared by a law student based on a given set of facts and using any available resources for research. — Also termed open memo.

persuasive memorandum. A memorandum written to sway the reader to accept the writer’s position on a stated problem.

research memorandum. A memorandum whose purpose is analyze a legal issue and inform the reader about possible approaches and outcomes. • This type of memorandum is usu. an in-house document. — Also termed analytical memorandum.

memorandum articles. Marine insurance. Goods described in the memorandum clause. See MEMORANDUM CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2235, 2241.]

memorandum clause. A marine-insurance clause protecting underwriters from liability for injury to goods that are particularly perishable, or for minor damages. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2235, 2241.]

“This clause was first introduced into the English [marine-insurance] policies about the year 1749. Before that time the insurer was liable for every injury, however small, that happened to the thing insured. . . . The memorandum clause . . . usually declares that the enumerated articles, and any other articles that are perishable in their own nature, shall be free from average under a given rate, unless general, or the ship be stranded. In consequence of this exception, all small partial losses, however inconsiderable, are to be borne by a general average, provided they were incurred in a case proper for such an average. . . .”

3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *294-95 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

memorandum decision. See memorandum opinion under OPINION (1).

memorandum in error. A document alleging a factual error, usu. accompanied by an affidavit of proof.

memorandum of alteration. English law. A patentee’s disclaimer of certain rights — such as rights to part of an invention that is not new and useful — to avoid losing the whole patent. • Until the mid-19th century, if a single patent was granted for two inventions, one of which was not new and useful, the entire patent would be defective.

memorandum of association. English law. A legal document setting up a corporation — either with or without limited liability — and including the company’s name, purpose, and duration. See ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

memorandum of intent. See LETTER OF INTENT.

memorandum of understanding. See LETTER OF INTENT. — Abbr. MOU.

memorandum opinion. See OPINION (1).

memorial, n. (17c) 1. An abstract of a legal record, esp. a deed; MEMORANDUM (1). [Cases: Records ⇨1.] 2. A written statement of facts presented to a legislature or executive as a petition.

memoriter (mə-mor-ə-tər), adv. [Latin “with an accurate memory”] From memory; by recollection. • Memoriter proof of a written instrument is furnished by the recollection of a witness who knew the instrument.

menacing, n. (14c) An attempt to commit common-law assault. • The term is used esp. in jurisdictions that have defined assault to include battery. See ASSAULT. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨61; Extortion and Threats ⇨25.1.]

mendacity (men-das-ə-tee), n. (16c) 1. The quality of being untruthful. 2. A lie; falsehood. — mendacious (men-day-shəs), adj.

mendicatorie (men-di-kə-tor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. As a supplicant or beggar.

mend-the-hold doctrine. The principle that a non-performing party’s defense in a breach-of-contract action must be raised before the close of evidence. • A minority of courts limit a defendant to the first defense raised after litigation begins, unless the defendant can show a good-faith basis for a new defense. Most courts allow the defendant to raise several defenses as long as each defense is based on the reason given for nonperformance when the breach occurred. The term comes from 19-century wrestling jargon, "mend the hold" meaning "get a better grip on your opponent." [Cases: Estoppel ⇨ 68(2).]

men of straw. Hist. False witnesses who wandered around courts and were paid to give untrue testimony.

• They stuffed straw into their shoes so that advocates could recognize them. See STRAW MAN (4).

mens (menz), n. [Latin] Mind; intention; will.

mensa et thoro (men-sə et thor-oh). [Latin] Bed and board. See A MENSA ET THORO; divorce a mensa et thoro under DIVORCE.

mensalia (men-say-lee-ə), n. [fr. Latin mensa "a table"] Parsonages; spiritual livings. — Also termed mensal benefices.

mensis (men-sis), n. [Latin] Roman law. A month.

mens legis (menz lee-jis). [Latin "the mind of the law"] The spirit or purpose of a law.

mens legislatoris (menz lej-is-lə-tor-is). [Latin "the intention of the lawmaker"] Legislative intent.

mentor (men-sor), n. [fr. Latin metiri "to measure"] Roman law. A measurer of land; a surveyor.

mens rea (menz ree-ə). [Law Latin "guilty mind"] (1861) The state of mind that the prosecution, to secure a conviction, must prove that a defendant had when committing a crime; criminal intent or recklessness <the mens rea for theft is the intent to deprive the rightful owner of the property>. • Mens rea is the second of two essential elements of every crime at common law, the other being the actus reus. — Also termed mental element; criminal intent; guilty mind. Pl. mentes reae (men-teez ree-ee). Cf. ACTUS REUS. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 20.]

"There are only two states of mind which constitute mens rea, and they are intention, and recklessness." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 29-30 (16th ed. 1952).

"Most English lawyers would however now agree with Sir James Fitzjames Stephen that the expression mens rea is unfortunate, though too firmly established to be expelled, just because it misleadingly suggests that, in general, moral culpability is essential to a crime, and they would assent to the criticism expressed by a later judge that the true translation of mens rea is 'an intention to do the act which is made penal by statute or by the common law.' [Allard v. Selfridge, (1925) 1 K.B. at 137 (per Shearman, J).]" H.L.A. Hart, "Legal Responsibility and Excuses," in Punishment and Responsibility 28, 36 (1968).

mensularius (men-sə-lair-ee-əs), n. [fr. Latin mensa "a table"] Roman law. A dealer in money; a money-changer; a banker.

mensura (men-s[y]oor-ə), n. [Latin] Hist. A measure.

mensura domini regis (men-s[y]oor-ə dom-ə-ni ree-jis). [Law Latin "the measure of our lord the king"] Hist. The standard weights and measures established under Richard I, in his Parliament at Westminster in 1197.

"Thus, under king Richard I, in his parliament holden at Westminster, A.D. 1197, it was ordained that there shall be only one weight and one measure throughout the kingdom, and that the custody of the assise or standard of weights and measures shall be committed to certain persons in every city and borough In king John's time this ordinance of king Richard was frequently dispensed with for money which occasioned a provision to be made for enforcing it These original standards were called pondus regis, and mensura domini regis; and are directed by a variety of subsequent statutes to be kept in the exchequer, and all weights and measures to be made conformable thereto." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 265-66 (1765).

mental abuse. See emotional abuse under ABUSE.

mental anguish. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS.

mental capacity. See CAPACITY (3).

mental examination. See PSYCHIATRIC EXAMINATION.

mental illness. (1847) 1. A disorder in thought or mood so substantial that it impairs judgment, behavior, perceptions of reality, or the ability to cope with the ordinary demands of life. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 3.] 2. Mental disease that is severe enough to necessitate care and treatment for the afflicted person's own welfare or the welfare of others in the community.

mental incompetence. See INCOMPETENCY.

mental-process privilege. See DELIBERATIVE-PROCESS PRIVILEGE.

mental reservation. (17c) One party's silent understanding or exception to the meaning of a contractual provision. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 14, 15.]

mental suffering. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS.

mente captus (men-tee kap-təs). [Latin "captured in mind"] Persons who are habitually insane.

mentes reae (men-teez ree-ee). pl. MENS REA.

mentiri (men-ti-ri), vb. [Latin] To lie.

mentition (men-tish-ən), n. [fr. Latin mentitio "lying"] (17c) The act of lying.

mentor judge. See JUDGE.

MEPA. abbr. MULTIETHNIC-PLACEMENT ACT OF 1994.

mera facta quae in meris faciendi finibus consistunt (meer-ə fak-tə kwee in meer-is fay-shee-en-di fin-ə-bæs kæn-sis-tənt). [Latin] Hist. Mere acts consisting in bare performance.

mera noctis (meer-ə nok-tis), n. [Latin “middle of the night”] Midnight.

mercantile (mər-kæn-teel or -tl or -til), adj. (17c) Of or relating to merchants or trading; commercial <the mercantile system>.

mercantile law. See COMMERCIAL LAW (1).

Mercantile Law Amendment Acts. The Mercantile Law Amendment Act of 1856 (19 & 20 Vict., chs. 60, 97) and the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (Scotland) of 1856, passed primarily to reconcile parts of the mercantile laws of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

mercantile paper. See commercial paper (1) under PAPER.

mercative (mər-kay-tiv), adj. [fr. Latin mercatum “a market”] Scots law. Belonging to trade.

mercatum (mər-kay-təm), n. [Law Latin] A market; a contract of sale; a bargain.

mercedary (mər-sə-der-ee), n. [Latin] An employer; one who hires.

mercenarius (mər-sə-nair-ee-əs), n. [Latin] 1. An employee; a servant. 2. A soldier of fortune. — Also spelled mercennarius.

mercenary (mər-sə-ner-ee). (14c) Int'l law. A professional soldier hired by someone other than his or her own government to fight in a foreign country.

mercenlage (mər-sən-law). [fr. Saxon myrcnalag] The law of the Mercians. • This was one of the three principal legal systems prevailing in England at the beginning of the 11th century. It was observed in many midland counties and those bordering on Wales. — Also spelled merchenlage (mər-shən-law). — Also termed lex merciorum (leks mər-shee-or-əm); Mercian law (mər-shee-ən or mər-shən). See DANELAW; WEST SAXON LAW.

[A]bout the beginning of the eleventh century there were three principal systems of laws prevailing in different districts . . . The Mercen-Lage, or Mercian laws, which were observed in many of the midland counties, and those bordering on the principality of Wales; the retreat of the ancient Britons; and therefore very probably intermixed with the British or Druidical customs.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 65 (1765).

merces (mər-seez), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. An agreed payment for a thing or services specifically contracted for; rent, hire.

a series of periodical payments.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 289–90 (2d ed. 1939).

2. A reward, esp. for a gratuitous service. Cf. HONORARIUM.

“A recompense paid for any kind of services, without a preceding agreement (e.g., for saving one’s life) is also called merces.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 581 (1953).

merchandise (mər-chən-dīz also -dīs). (13c) 1. In general, a movable object involved in trade or traffic; that which is passed from one person to another by purchase and sale. 2. In particular, that which is dealt in by merchants; an article of trading or the class of objects in which trade is carried on by physical transfer; collectively, mercantile goods, wares or commodities, or any subjects of regular trade, animate as well as inanimate. • This definition generally excludes real estate, ships, intangibles such as software, and the like, and does not apply to money, stocks, bonds, notes, or other mere representatives or measures of actual commodities or values. — Also termed (in senses 1 and 2) article of merchandise. 3. Purchase and sale; trade; traffic, dealing, or advantage from dealing.

merchandise broker. See BROKER.

Merchandise Marks Acts. Hist. An 1887 statute (50 & 51 Vict., ch. 28) making it a misdemeanor to fraudulently mark merchandise for sale or to sell merchandise so marked. • This statute was repealed in 1968.

merchant. (13c) One whose business is buying and selling goods for profit; esp. a person or entity that holds itself out as having expertise peculiar to the goods in which it deals and is therefore held by the law to a higher standard of expertise than that of a nonmerchant. • Because the term relates solely to goods, a supplier of services is not considered a merchant. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 15.1.]

merchantable (mər-chənt-ə-bəl), adj. (15c) Fit for sale in the usual course of trade at the usual selling prices; MARKETABLE. — Also termed salable. See implied warranty of merchantability under WARRANTY (2). [Cases: Sales ⇨ 272.] — merchantability, n.

merchantable title. See marketable title under TITLE (2).

merchant appraiser. An expert appointed by a customs officer to reexamine and revalue imported goods for customs purposes. • The appraiser is usu. an experienced merchant who deals in or has dealt in goods of the character and quality of those at issue. An appraiser is appointed only when an importer requests one. [Cases: Customs Duties ↷59.]

merchant exception. (1973) Contracts. In a sale of goods, an exemption from the statute of frauds whereby a contract between merchants is enforceable if, within a reasonable time after they reach an oral agreement, a written confirmation of the terms is sent, to which the recipient does not object within ten days of receiving it. • The only effect of failing to object to the written confirmation is that the recipient will be precluded from relying on the statute of frauds — or the lack of a formal, written agreement — as a defense to a breach-of-contract claim. The party seeking to enforce an agreement must still prove that an agreement was reached. UCC § 2-201. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of ↷127.]

merchantman. Archaic. A vessel employed in foreign or interstate commerce or in the merchant service.

merchant's accounts. Current, mutual accounts between merchants showing debits and credits for merchandise.

merchant's defense. (1972) The principle that a store owner will not be held liable for reasonably detaining a suspected shoplifter, to facilitate an investigation by a law-enforcement officer, if probable cause exists to suspect the detained person of wrongfully removing merchandise from the store. [Cases: False Imprisonment ↷11, 13.]

merchant seaman. See SEAMAN.

merchant's firm offer. See irrevocable offer under OFFER.

Merchant Shipping Acts. English statutes to improve shipping conditions by, among other things, vesting the supervision of merchant shipping in the board of trade.

merchet (mər-chet). See MARCHET.

mercheta. See MARCHET.

merchetum. See MARCHET.

merciament (mər-see-ə-mənt). Archaic. See AMERCEMENT.

Mercian law. See MERCENLAGE.

Mercimoniatus Angliae (mər-sə-moh-nee-ay-təs ang-lee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. English customs duties on merchandise brought into the country.

Mercosur. A common market of South American nations created to facilitate free trade among members. • The entity was created by the Treaty of Asunción in 1991. The charter nations were Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, and Uruguay. — Also termed Southern Common Market.

mercy. (13c) Compassionate treatment, as of criminal offenders or of those in distress; esp. imprisonment, rather than death, imposed as punishment for capital murder. See CLEMENCY.

mercy rule. (1981) Evidence. The principle that a defendant is entitled to offer character evidence as a defense to a criminal charge. • This type of evidence is often offered by the defendant's friends and relatives. Fed. R. Evid. 404(a)(1). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷377.]

mere (mair or mer), n. [Law French] Mother, as in the phrase en ventre sa mere ("in its mother's womb").

mere-continuation doctrine. A principle under which a successor corporation will be held liable for the acts of a predecessor corporation, if only one corporation remains after the transfer of assets, and both corporations share an identity of stock, shareholders, and directors. — Also termed continuity-of-entity doctrine. Cf. SUBSTANTIAL-CONTINUITY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Corporations ↷445.1.]

mere license. See bare license under LICENSE.

mere licensee. See bare licensee under LICENSEE.

mere motu. See EX MERE MOTU.

mere right. An abstract right in property, without possession or even the right of possession. — Also termed jus merum; merum jus; meer dreit.

"The mere right of property, the jus proprietatis, without either possession or even the right of possession. This is frequently spoken of in our books under the name of the mere right, jus merum; and the estate of the owner is in such cases said to be totally divested, and put to a right. A person in this situation may have the true ultimate property of the lands in himself: but by the intervention of certain circumstances, either by his own negligence, the solemn act of his ancestor, or the determination of a court of justice, the presumptive evidence of that right is strongly in favour of his antagonist; who has thereby obtained the absolute right of possession . . . The heir therefore in this case has only a mere right, and must be strictly held to the proof of it, in order to recover the lands." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 197-98 (1766).

merestone (meer-stohn). Archaic. A stone that marks land boundaries. — Also spelled mearstone.

meretricious (mer-ə-trish-əs), adj. (17c) 1. Involving prostitution . 2. (Of a romantic relationship) involving either unlawful sexual connection or lack of capacity on the part of one party . 3. Superficially attractive but fake nonetheless; alluring by false show <meretricious advertising claims>.

meretricious relationship. Archaic. A stable, marriage-like relationship in which the parties cohabit knowing that a lawful marriage between them does not exist. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 54(1).] mergee (mər-jee). A participant in a corporate merger.

merger. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of combining or uniting. 2. Contracts. The substitution of a superior form of contract for an inferior form, as when a written contract supersedes all oral agreements and prior understandings. See INTEGRATION (2). [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 245.]

"Where two parties have made a simple contract for any purpose, and afterwards have entered into an identical engagement by deed, the simple contract is merged in the deed and becomes extinct. This extinction of a lesser in a higher security, like the extinction of a lesser in a greater interest in lands, is called merger." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 85 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3. Contracts. The replacement of a contractual duty or of a duty to compensate with a new duty between the same parties, based on different operative facts, for the same performance or for a performance differing only in liquidating a duty that was previously unliquidated. 4. Property. The absorption of a lesser estate into a greater estate when both become the same person's property. Cf. SURRENDER (3). [Cases: Estates in Property ⇨ 10.]

"[I]t would be absurd to allow a person to have two distinct estates, immediately expectant on each other, while one of them includes the time of both There would be an absolute incompatibility in a person filling, at the same time, the characters of tenant and reversioner in one and the same estate; and hence the reasonableness, and even necessity, of the doctrine of merger." 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *99 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

bust-up merger. A merger in which the acquiring corporation sells off lines of business owned by the cash merger. A merger in which shareholders of the target company must accept cash for their shares. — Also termed cash-out merger; freeze-out merger. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 584.]

conglomerate merger. A merger between unrelated businesses that are neither competitors nor customers or suppliers of each other. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 769.]

"A merger which is neither vertical nor horizontal is a conglomerate merger. A pure conglomerate merger is one in which there are no economic relationships between the acquiring and the acquired firm. Mixed conglomerate mergers involve horizontal or vertical relationships, such as the acquisition of a firm producing the same product as the acquirer but selling it in a different geographical market, which is not a horizontal merger because the merging companies are not competitors" 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 169, at 226 (1996).

de facto merger (di fak-toh). A transaction that has the economic effect of a statutory merger but that is cast in the form of an acquisition or sale of assets or voting stock. • Although such a transaction does not meet the statutory requirements for a merger, a court will generally treat it as a statutory merger for purposes of the appraisal remedy. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 445.1.]

downstream merger. A merger of a parent corporation into its subsidiary.

forward triangular merger. See triangular merger.

freeze-out merger. See cash merger.

horizontal merger. A merger between two or more businesses that are on the same market level because they manufacture similar products in the same geographic region; a merger of direct competitors. — Also termed horizontal integration.

product-extension merger. A merger in which the products of the acquired company are complementary to those of the acquiring company and may be produced with similar facilities, marketed through the same channels, and advertised by the same media.

reverse triangular merger. A merger in which the acquiring corporation's subsidiary is absorbed into the target corporation, which becomes a new subsidiary of the acquiring corporation. — Also termed reverse subsidiary merger.

short-form merger. A statutory merger that is less expensive and time-consuming than an ordinary statutory merger, usu. permitted when a subsidiary merges into a parent that already owns most of the subsidiary's shares. • Such a merger is generally accomplished when the parent adopts a merger resolution, mails a copy of the plan to the subsidiary's record shareholders, and files the executed articles of merger with the secretary of state, who issues a certificate of merger.

statutory merger. A merger provided by and conducted according to statutory requirements.

stock merger. A merger involving one company's purchase of another company's capital stock.

triangular merger. A merger in which the target corporation is absorbed into the acquiring corporation's subsidiary, with the target's shareholders receiving stock in the parent corporation. — Also termed subsidiary merger; forward triangular merger.

upstream merger. A merger of a subsidiary corporation into its parent.

vertical merger. A merger between businesses occupying different levels of operation for the same product, such as between a manufacturer and a retailer; a merger of buyer and seller.

9. The merger of rights and duties in the same person, resulting in the extinction of obligations; esp. the blending of the rights of a creditor and debtor, resulting in the extinguishment of the creditor's right to collect the debt. • As originally developed in Roman law, a merger resulted from the marriage of a debtor and creditor, or when a debtor became the creditor's heir. — Also termed confusion; confusion of debts; confusion of rights. Cf. CONFUSION OF TITLES. 10. The absorption of a contract into a court order, so that an agreement between the parties (often a marital agreement incident to a divorce or separation) loses its separate identity as an enforceable contract when it is incorporated into a court order.

meritorious (mer-ə-tor-ee-əs), adj. (15c) 1. (Of an act, etc.) meriting esteem or reward <meritorious trial performance>. 2. (Of a case, etc.) meriting a legal victory; having legal worth <meritorious claim>.

meritorious consideration. See good consideration under CONSIDERATION (1).

meritorious defense. See DEFENSE (1).

merit regulation. Under state blue-sky laws, the practice of requiring securities offerings not only to be accompanied by a full and adequate disclosure but also to be substantively fair, just, and equitable.

merits brief. See brief on the merits under BRIEF.

merits discovery. See DISCOVERY.

merit system. (1879) The practice of hiring and promoting employees, esp. government employees, based on their competence rather than political favoritism. Cf. SPOILS SYSTEM. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻11.]

Merit Systems Protection Board. The independent federal agency that oversees personnel practices of the federal government and hears and decides appeals from adverse personnel actions taken against federal employees. • It has five regional offices and five field offices. Its functions were transferred from the former Civil Service Commission under Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978. — Abbr. MSPB. See CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻72.20.]

MERP. abbr. Medical-expense reimbursement plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

Merrill doctrine. The principle that the government cannot be estopped from disavowing an agent's unauthorized act. Federal Crop Ins. Corp. v. Merrill, 332 U.S. 380, 68 S.Ct. 1 (1947). [Cases: Estoppel ↻62; United States ↻60.]

merum (meer-əm). [Latin] Hist. Mere; naked.

merum jus (meer-əm jās). See MERE RIGHT.

merx (mærks). [Latin] Hist. Trade articles; merchandise.

merx et pretium (mærks et pree-shee-əm). [Law Latin] Roman & Scots law. Goods and a price. • These components are two essential items for a sales contract.

mescreaunt (mes-kree-awnt or mis-kree-ənt). [Law French] Hist. MISCREANT. — Also termed mescroyant.

mesne (meez or mees), n. [Law French] Hist. A house. — Also spelled mees; meas.

mesnalty (meen-əl-tee), n. [fr. Law French and English mesné "middle"] Hist. 1. The estate or manor held by a mesne lord. 2. The right of the mesne; the tenure of the mesne lord. — Also spelled mesnality. See MESNE LORD.

mesne (meen), adj. (16c) 1. Occupying a middle position; intermediate or intervening, esp. in time of occurrence or performance <the mesne encumbrance has priority over the third mortgage, but is subordinate to the first mortgage>. 2. Hist. Of or relating to a lord who holds land of a superior while himself having a tenant.

mesne, writ of. See DE MEDIO.

mesne agreement. A transfer of intellectual-property rights through an intermediary, usu. an assignee, rather than directly from the property's creator.

mesne assignment. See ASSIGNMENT (2).

mesne conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

mesne encumbrance. See ENCUMBRANCE.

mesne lord. Hist. A feudal lord who stood between a tenant and the chief lord, and held land from a superior lord. See LORD (3).

mesne process. See PROCESS.

mesne profits. See PROFIT (1).

mesonomic (mes-ə-nom-ik also mee-zə), adj. Of, relating to, or involving an act that, although it does not affect a person's physical freedom, has legal consequences in its evolution. • This term was coined by the philosopher Albert Kocourek in his book Jural Relations (1927). Cf. ZYGNOMIC.

message. (14c) A written or oral communication, often sent through a messenger or other agent, or electronically (e.g., through e-mail or voicemail).

annual message. A message from the President or a governor given at the opening of an annual legislative session.

Presidential message. A communication from the President to the U.S. Congress on matters pertaining to the state of the union, esp. of matters requiring legislative consideration. U.S. Const. art. II, § 3. — Also termed State of the Union. [Cases: United States ⇨ 26.]

special message. A message from the President or a governor relating to a particular matter.

veto message. See VETO MESSAGE.

message from the Crown. An official communication from the sovereign to Parliament.

messarius (mə-sair-ee-əs), n. [fr. Latin messis] Hist. A chief servant; a bailiff; an overseer of the harvest.

messenger. (14c) 1. One who conveys a communication; esp. one employed to deliver telegrams or other communications. 2. Hist. An officer who performs certain ministerial duties, such as taking temporary charge of assets of an insolvent estate.

messuage (mes-wij). (14c) A dwelling house together with the curtilage, including any outbuildings. See CURTILAGE.

meta (mee-tə), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The mark where a racecourse ends or around which chariots turn; by extension, a limit in space or time. 2. Hist. A boundary; a border.

metadata. Secondary data that organize, manage, and facilitate the use and understanding of primary data. • Metadata are evaluated when conducting and responding to electronic discovery. If privileged documents or final versions of computer files may contain metadata, they might be "scrubbed" before release. See Fed. R.

Civ. P. 26(b)(2)(B). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1581.]

metalaw (met-ə-law). (1956) A hypothetical set of legal principles based on the rules of existing legal systems and designed to provide a framework of agreement for these different systems.

"[T]he Constitution controls the deployment of governmental power and defines the rules for how such power may be structured and applied. The Constitution, therefore, is not a body of rules about ordinary private actions, but a collection of rules about the rules and uses of law: in a word, metalaw." Laurence H. Tribe, Constitutional Choices 246 (1985).

metallum (mə-tal-əm), n. Roman law. 1. Metal; a mine. 2. Labor in the mines as punishment for a crime. • This was one of the most severe punishments short of death.

metatag. A word or phrase in HTML computer code that usu. identifies the subject of a web page and acts as a hidden keyword for Internet search engines. • A person who uses a trademark as a metatag without permission may infringe on the trademark owner's rights.

metatus (mə-tay-təs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A dwelling; quarters; a seat.

metayer system (me-tay-yər or met-ə-yay). An agricultural system in which land is divided into small farms among single families who pay a landlord a fixed portion — usu. half — of the produce and the landlord provides the stock. • The system was formerly prevalent in parts of France and Italy, and in the southern part of the United States. — Also written métayer system.

metecorn (meet-korn). Archaic. A portion of grain a lord pays a tenant for labor.

metegavel (meet-gav-əl). Archaic. A rent or tribute paid in supplies of food.

metelotage (me-te-loh-tahzh). [French] 1. French law. The leasing of a ship. 2. A seaman's wages.

mete out, vb. (bef. 15c) To dispense or measure out (justice, punishment, etc.) <shortly after the jury returned its verdict, the judge meted out an appropriate punishment>.

meter. 1. A metric unit of length equal to 39.368 inches. 2. An instrument of measurement used to measure use or consumption, esp. used by a utility company to measure utility consumption   .

meter rate. A rate that a utility company applies to determine a charge for service <meter rate based on kilowatt-hours of electricity>.

metes and bounds (meets). (15c) The territorial limits of real property as measured by distances and angles from designated landmarks and in relation to adjoining properties. • Metes and bounds are usu. described in deeds and surveys to establish the boundary lines of land. — Also termed running description; butts and bounds; lines and corners. See CALL (5). [Cases: Boundaries ⇨ 6–8.] metewand (meet-wahnd). Archaic. A measuring staff of varying lengths.

meteyard (meet-yahrd). Archaic. A metewand that is one yard long.

method. (15c) A mode of organizing, operating, or performing something, esp. to achieve a goal <method of election> <method of performing a job>.

metric system. (1864) A decimal system for measuring length, weight, area, or volume, based on the meter as a unit length and the kilogram as a unit mass.

metropolitan, adj. (14c) Of or relating to a city or metropolis.

metropolitan, n. Eccles. law. An archbishop; the head of a province <the Archbishop of Canterbury is a metropolitan>.

metropolitan council. An official or quasi-official body appointed or elected by voters of a metropolitan area to provide for the unified administration of services (such as sewage disposal or public transportation) to the cities and towns within the metropolitan area. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨39.]

metropolitan magistrate. See metropolitan stipendiary magistrate under MAGISTRATE.

metteshep (meet-shəp). Hist. 1. An acknowledgment paid in a measure of corn. 2. A penalty imposed on a tenant for neglect of duty, such as failing to cut the lord's corn. — Also spelled mettenschep.

metus (mee-təs), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Fear of imminent danger; apprehension of serious danger, esp. in the form of duress to force a person to do something; the use of threats to bring about some end. • Metus was more comprehensive than duress is in Anglo-American law. It included fear of any evil that was serious enough to affect a reasonable person.

"Fear (metus) had the same effect as fraud as regards the avoidance of the contract. It might be set up by way of defence (exceptio metus) or be the ground of restitutio in integrum, or give rise to an action (actio metus) . . . It was not any kind of fear which grounded this action. The evil threatened must be of a serious character . . ." R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 352 (4th ed. 1956).

2. A threat that diminishes the value of another's property. • In both senses, a victim was allowed to seek fourfold damages against the perpetrator. Cf. DOLUS.

metus perjurii (mee-təs pər-juur-ee-i). [Law Latin] Scots law. The fear of perjury.

"On this ground the evidence of the parties to a cause, and that of their relatives, was formerly excluded. It was feared that their own, or their relatives', interest in the result of the cause might lead them to give false evidence, in order to bring about a favourable decision. This, however, is no longer law. The desire to obtain all the light possible on the facts in dispute, has overcome the metus perjurii." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 353-54 (4th ed. 1894).

meubles (muu-bəl or myoo-blə), n. [Law French] Movables, such as household utensils. See MOVABLE.

Mexican divorce. See DIVORCE.

MFN. abbr. MOST FAVORED NATION.

MFN clause. See MOST-FAVORED-NATION CLAUSE.

MFN treatment. abbr. MOST-FAVORED-NATION TREATMENT.

Michaelmas. See quarter day under DAY.

Michaelmas sittings (mik-əl-məs). In England, a term of court running from November 2 to November 25. • Until 1875, this was also called the Michaelmas term. The division of the legal year into terms was abolished by the Judicature Act of 1873. — Also termed Michaelmas term. Cf. EASTER SITTINGS; HILARY SITTINGS; TRINITY SITTINGS.

miche (mich), vb. Hist. To hide; to sneak; to play truant. — Also spelled mitch.

michery (mich-ər-ee). Hist. Theft; cheating.

Midcal test. Antitrust. The doctrine that the anticompetitive acts of a private party will be considered state acts — and thereby protected from liability under the antitrust laws — if the acts are within a clearly articulated and affirmatively expressed policy of the state, and if the conduct is actively supervised by the state. California Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Midcal Aluminum, Inc., 445 U.S. 97, 100 S.Ct. 937 (1980). See STATE-ACTION DOCTRINE; ACTIVE SUPERVISION. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨904.]

mid-channel. See MIDDLE LINE OF MAIN CHANNEL.

middle burden of proof. See BURDEN OF PROOF.

middle-level scrutiny. See INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY.

middle line of main channel. The equidistant point in the main channel of the river between the well-defined banks on either shore; the middle thread of a river's current. — Also termed mid-channel; middle of the river.

middleman. (17c) An intermediary or agent between two parties; esp. a dealer (such as a wholesaler) who buys from producers and sells to retailers or consumers.

middle management. See MANAGEMENT.

middle of the river. See MIDDLE LINE OF MAIN CHANNEL.

middle-of-the-road test. See HYDRAFLOW TEST.

middle thread. The center line of something; esp. an imaginary line drawn lengthwise through the middle of a stream's current.

midnight deadline. A time limit for doing something, ending at midnight on a particular day. • For a bank, the midnight deadline is midnight on the next banking day following the day on which the bank receives the relevant item or from which the time for taking action begins to run, whichever is later. UCC § 4-104(a)(10). [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨140(3), 171(5).]

midnight judge. Hist. A federal judicial nominee appointed by President John Adams just before his term expired, in an effort to pack the judiciary with Federalist Party sympathizers. • The Judiciary Act of 1801, passed and signed into law a few weeks before Adams's term expired, led to the appointment of 84 federal judges and countless marshals, clerks, attorneys, registers of wills, and justices of the peace, all of whom were affiliated with the Federalists. The Senate approved nominations and granted commissions up until its final adjournment just before Thomas Jefferson's inauguration. More than half of the commissions had not been delivered by the end of inauguration day. Secretary of State James Madison, acting at Jefferson's direction, barred their delivery and treated them as void. This led William Marbury to seek a federal court order to compel Madison to deliver Marbury's commission as justice of the peace. See Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803).

midshipman. (17c) A naval cadet; a student at the U.S. Naval Academy. [Cases: Armed Services ↻16.]

midway. See THALWEG.

Midwest Piping rule. Labor law. The doctrine that an employer may not recognize multiple unions during a period in which there are conflicting claims of representation. Midwest Piping & Supply Co., 63 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 1060 (1945).

migrant worker. 1. Int'l law. A person who works seasonally as an agricultural laborer in a foreign country, esp. in agricultural labor. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻2700.] 2. A person who works seasonally as a laborer in a different part of his or her own country.

migration. (17c) Movement (of people or animals) from one country or region to another.

migratory corporation. See CORPORATION.

migratory divorce. See DIVORCE.

Mike O'Connor rule. Labor law. The doctrine that unilateral changes that an employer makes after a union victory in an initial-representation election — but before the employer's objections have been resolved — are automatic violations of the National Labor Relations Act if the employer's objections are rejected. • If the employer's objections are sustained, any failure-to-bargain charge will be dismissed because the employer had no duty to bargain. But if the employer's objections are rejected, the employer is considered to have been under a duty to bargain as of the date of the election, which is why the unilateral changes are automatic violations of the Act. Mike O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick-GMC Co., 209 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 701 (1974).

mild exigency. (1984) A circumstance that justifies a law-enforcement officer's departure from the knock-and-announce rule, such as the likelihood that the building's occupants will try to escape, resist arrest, or destroy evidence. See KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE.

mile. (bef. 12c) 1. A measure of distance equal to 5,280 feet. — Also termed statute mile. 2. NAUTICAL MILE.

mileage. (18c) 1. The distance in miles between two points. 2. The distance a vehicle has traveled as reflected by an odometer. 3. An allowance paid for travel expenses, as of a witness or public employee. [Cases: Witnesses ↻29.] miles (mī-leez), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A soldier. 2. Hist. A knight.

militare (mil-ə-tair-ee), vb. [Latin] 1. Roman law. To serve as a soldier. • This verb later referred to serving in public office, civil or military. 2. Hist. To be knighted.

military, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to the armed forces <military base>. 2. Of or relating to war <military action>.

military, n. (18c) The armed forces.

military allotment. Family law. A child-support deduction from the salary of an obligor parent on active duty in the United States military and paid to the obligee parent. See attachment of wages under ATTACHMENT (1).

military board. A group of persons appointed to act as a fact-finding agency or as an advisory body to the appointing military authority.

military bounty land. Land offered to members of the military as a reward for services. See donation land, bounty land under LAND; BOUNTY-LAND WARRANT. [Cases: Bounties ↻1.]

military commission. A court, usu. composed of both civilians and military officers, that is modeled after a court-martial and that tries and decides cases concerning martial-law violations. See COURT-MARTIAL.

military-contractor defense. See GOVERNMENT-CONTRACTOR DEFENSE.

military court. See COURT.

military draft. See DRAFT (2).

military government. Int'l law. The control of all or most public functions within a country, or the assumption and exercise of governmental functions, by military forces or individual members of those forces; government exercised by a military commander under the direction of the executive or sovereign, either externally during a foreign war or internally during a civil war. • A military government's actions supersede all local law. See MARTIAL LAW.

military judge. See JUDGE.

military judge alone. Military law. A court-martial presided over by a single judge with no other court-martial members present. [Cases: Military Justice ↻874.]

military jurisdiction. The three types of governmental power given the military by the U.S. Constitution — specifi., jurisdiction under military law, jurisdiction under military government, and jurisdiction under martial law. [Cases: Armed Services ↷ 1-5, 44; Military Justice ↷ 514, 893.]

military justice. A structure of punitive measures designed to foster order, morale, and discipline within the military. See MILITARY LAW. [Cases: Armed Services ↷ 42; Military Justice ↷ 500-510.]

military law. The branch of public law governing military discipline and other rules regarding service in the armed forces. • It is exercised both in peacetime and in war, is recognized by civil courts, and includes rules far broader than for the punishment of offenders. — Also termed military justice. — Sometimes loosely termed martial law. Cf. MARTIAL LAW.

"Military Law . . . is largely, but not exclusively, statutory in character, and prescribes the rights of, and imposes duties and obligations upon, the several classes of persons composing its military establishment; it creates military tribunals, endows them with appropriate jurisdiction and regulates their procedure; it also defines military offenses and, by the imposition of adequate penalties, endeavors to prevent their occurrence." George B. Davis, A Treatise on the Military Law of the United States 1 (3d ed. 1915).

military leave. A policy contained in employment policies or collective-bargaining agreements allowing a long-term leave of absence — without an accompanying loss of benefits — for a person in active service in the U.S. armed forces.

military necessity. Int'l law. A principle of warfare allowing coercive force to achieve a desired end, as long as the force used is not more than is called for by the situation. • This principle dates from the Hague Convention on Laws and Customs of War on Land of October 18, 1907, which prohibits the destruction or seizure of enemy property "unless such destruction or seizure be imperatively demanded by the necessities of war." [Cases: War and National Emergency ↷ 9.]

military objective. Int'l law. An object that by its nature, location, or use contributes to military action, and is thus susceptible to attack. • Under Geneva Convention Protocol 1 (1977), only military — rather than civilian — objects are proper targets.

military offense. An offense, such as desertion, that lies within the jurisdiction of a military court. See COURT-MARTIAL. [Cases: Armed Services ↷ 35; Military Justice ↷ 550-789.]

military officer. See OFFICER (2).

Military Rules of Evidence. The rules of evidence applicable to military law and courts-martial. — Abbr. MRE. [Cases: Military Justice ↷ 1020-1152.]

military testament. See soldier's will under WILL.

militate (mil-ə-tayt), vb. (16c) To exert a strong influence <the evidence of police impropriety militates against a conviction>. Cf. MITIGATE.

milites (mil-ə-teez), n. 1. Roman law. Members of the military; soldiers. 2. Hist. Knights who are part of the royal army, by virtue of feudal tenure.

"[Knights] are also called in our law milites, because they formed a part of the royal army, in virtue of their feudal tenures; one condition of which was, that every one who held a knight's fee immediately under the crown . . . was obliged to be knighted and attend the king in his wars, or fine for his non-compliance." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 404 (1765).

3. Scots law. Freeholders holding estates from barons for military service.

militia (mə-lish-ə), n. (16c) 1. A body of citizens armed and trained, esp. by a state, for military service apart from the regular armed forces. • The Constitution recognizes a state's right to form a "well-regulated militia" but also grants Congress the power to activate, organize, and govern a federal militia. U.S. Const. amend. II; U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 15-16. See NATIONAL GUARD. [Cases: Militia ↷ 1-3; Weapons ↷ 1.]

reserve militia. All persons who are not exempt from military service and not actively serving in the armed forces or national guard.

2. Roman law. Military service.

Militia Clause. (1918) One of two clauses of the U.S. Constitution giving Congress the power to call forth, arm, and maintain a military force to enforce compliance with its laws, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cls. 15 and 16. [Cases: Armed Services ↷ 1, 5; Militia ↷ 1.]

mill. (bef. 12c) 1. A machine that grinds corn, grain, or other substances, esp. using a wheel and circular motion. • The substance ground in a mill is sometimes called grist, esp. when it is a grain. Courts sometimes refer to the grinding process as a metaphor for the judicial process <suits to collect on promissory notes are grist for the summary-judgment mill because the material facts in such cases are often undisputed>. [Cases: Manufactures ↷ 2.] 2. The building in which the grinding is performed, along with the site, dam, or other items connected with the mill. 3. A monetary unit equal to one-tenth of a cent. • Mills are a money of account used in the United States and Canada, esp. to reckon tax rates.

millage rate. See MILL RATE.

Miller Act. A federal law requiring the posting of performance and payment bonds before an award is made for a contract for construction, alteration, or repair of a public work or building. 40 USCA §§ 270a-270d-1. [Cases: United States ↷ 67.]

Miller trust. See TRUST.

Miller-Tydings Act. A federal law, enacted in 1937 as an amendment to the Sherman Act, exempting fair-trade laws from the application of the Sherman Act and legalizing resale-price-maintenance agreements between producers and retailers of products. • The Act was repealed by the Consumer Goods Pricing Act of 1975.

Miller v. Shugart agreement. A settlement in which an insured consents to a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, on the condition that the plaintiff will satisfy the judgment only out of proceeds from the insured's policy, and will not seek recovery against the insured personally. • Although the phrase takes its name from a Minnesota case, it is used in other jurisdictions as well. Miller v. Shugart, 316 N.W.2d 729 (Minn. 1982). [Cases: Insurance ↷3366.]

milling in transit. An arrangement in which a shipment is temporarily detained at an intermediate point, usu. for the application of some manufacturing process, with or without an increase of a freight charge by the carrier. [Cases: Carriers ↷12(2), 13(2).]

mill power. A unit of water power used in defining quantities and weights of water available to a lessee. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ↷285.]

mill privilege. The right of a mill-site owner to construct a mill and to use power from a stream to operate it, with due regard to the rights of other owners along the stream's path. [Cases: Manufactures ↷2.]

mill rate. A tax applied to real property whereby each mill represents $1 of tax assessment per $1,000 of the property's assessed value <the mill rate for taxes in this county is 10 mills, so for a home valued at $100,000, the owner will pay $1,000 in property taxes>. — Also termed millage rate. [Cases: Taxation ↷2428.]

mill site. 1. A small tract of land on or contiguous to a watercourse, suitable for the erection and operation of a mill. [Cases: Manufactures ↷2.] 2. Mining law. A small parcel of nonmineral public land (not exceeding five acres) claimed and occupied by an owner of a mining claim because the extra space is needed for mining or ore-reduction operations. 30 USCA § 42.

Mimms order. (1993) A police officer's command for a motorist to get out of the vehicle. • A Mimms order need not be independently justified if the initial stop was lawful. Pennsylvania v. Mimms, 434 U.S. 106, 98 S.Ct. 330 (1977). [Cases: Automobiles ↷349(16).]

mina (mī-nə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A measure of grain or corn.

minage (mī-nij), n. [Law French] Hist. A toll for selling grain or corn by the mina.

minare (mī-nair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To mine.

mind. (bef. 12c) 1. The source of thought and intellect; the seat of mental faculties. 2. The ability to will, direct, or assent. — Also termed sound mind. 3. Memory.

mind and memory. Archaic. A testator's mental capacity to make a will <she argued that her uncle was not of sound mind and memory when executing the will because he had Alzheimer's disease>. • This phrase was generally used as part of the phrase of sound mind and memory, referring to the capacity of a testator to make a will. See BONA MEMORIA; CAPACITY (2).

mine. (14c) 1. An underground excavation used to obtain minerals, ores, or other substances. 2. A mineral deposit; a place containing a mineral deposit.

mineral, n. (15c) 1. Any natural inorganic matter that has a definite chemical composition and specific physical properties that give it value <most minerals are crystalline solids>. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷48.] 2. A subsurface material that is explored for, mined, and exploited for its useful properties and commercial value. 3. Any natural material that is defined as a mineral by statute or caselaw.

mineral acre. Oil & gas. The full mineral interest in one acre of land. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷47.]

mineral deed. See DEED.

mineral district. See DISTRICT.

mineral entry. (1882) The right of entry on public land to mine valuable mineral deposits. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷9–38.]

"It is the policy of the United States, as expressed in Acts of Congress, to make public lands available to the people for the purpose of mining valuable mineral deposits, and to encourage exploration for, and development of, mineral resources on public lands. Accordingly, the United States has reserved all lands 'valuable for minerals' . . . from disposition under the nonmineral statutes, and has made them open to entry for mining purposes, under regulations prescribed by law . . . In other words . . . where statute authorizes the Federal Government to acquire lands, without indicating that lands are to be acquired for a particular purpose, lands so acquired are public lands subject to mineral entry." 53A Am. Jur. 2d Mines and Minerals § 23, at 274 (1996).

mineral interest. Oil & gas. The right to search for, develop, and remove minerals from land or to receive a royalty based on the production of minerals. • Mineral interests are granted by an oil-and-gas lease. — Also termed mineral right. See FEE INTEREST; SUBSURFACE INTEREST; SURFACE INTEREST. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷47, 62.1, 73.1.] mineral land. See LAND.

mineral lease. See LEASE.

mineral lode. (1870) A mineral bed of rock with definite boundaries in a general mass of a mountain; any belt of mineralized rock lying within boundaries that clearly separate it from neighboring rock. — Also termed lode.

"Typically, a lode is a concentration of valuable mineral with boundaries sufficiently distinct to import such a definite trend, continuity, and apartness to the formation that it can be traced through the enclosing mass of rock." 1 American Law of Mining § 32.02(2), at 32-7 (2d ed. 1998).

mineral right. See MINERAL INTEREST.

mineral royalty. See ROYALTY (2).

mineral servitude. See SERVITUDE (2).

Minerals Management Service. A unit in the U.S. Department of the Interior responsible for entering into and managing leases for the recovery of minerals on the outer continental shelf and for collecting and distributing royalty and other payments due the U.S. and Indian tribes from mineral production. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷5.1(1).]

minerator (mīn-ər-ay-tər). [Law Latin] A miner.

miner's inch. A measurement of water discharge, equaling nine-gallons per minute from a one-inch square pipe. • The precise measurement of a miner's inch varies in different localities.

Mine Safety and Health Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for preventing mine accidents and occupational diseases in the nation's mining industry. • It sets mandatory safety and health standards, assesses fines for their violation, and investigates mine accidents. Its programs are operated through regional administrators located in the nation's mining regions. — Abbr. MSHA. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻2634.]

minimal contacts. See MINIMUM CONTACTS.

minimal participant. (1987) Criminal law. Under the federal sentencing guidelines, a defendant who is among the least culpable of a group of criminal actors, as when the defendant does not understand the scope or structure of the criminal enterprise or the actions of the other members of the group. • The offense level for a crime of a minimal participant can be decreased by four levels. U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 3B1.2(a). Cf. MINOR PARTICIPANT. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻764.]

minimal scrutiny. See RATIONAL-BASIS TEST.

mini-maxi, n. An underwriting arrangement for a securities transaction, whereby a broker is required to sell the minimum number of securities on an all-or-none basis and the balance on a best-efforts basis. See UNDERWRITING (2).

miniment (min-ə-mənt). See MUNIMENT.

mini-Miranda requirement. Debtor-creditor law. A debt collector's obligation when communicating with a debtor to inform the debtor that (1) the communication is from a debt collector seeking to collect a debt and (2) any information received will be used for that purpose. • This disclosure is required by the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻214.]

minimization requirement. (1972) Criminal law. The mandate that police officers acting under an eavesdropping warrant must use the wiretap in a way that will intercept the fewest possible conversations that are not subject to the warrant. [Cases: Telecommunications ↻1473.]

minimum, adj. (17c) Of, relating to, or constituting the smallest acceptable or possible quantity in a given case <minimum charge to a customer of a public utility>.

minimum contacts. (1945) A nonresident defendant's forum-state connections, such as business activity or actions foreseeably leading to business activity, that are substantial enough to bring the defendant within the forum-state court's personal jurisdiction without offending traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S.Ct. 154 (1945). — Also termed minimal contacts. [Cases: Corporations ↻665(1); Courts ↻12(2.5); Federal Courts ↻76.5, 79.]

minimum-fee schedule. Hist. A list of the lowest fees that a lawyer may charge, set by a state bar association.

• The courts held that minimum-fee schedules, now defunct, violated antitrust laws.

minimum-royalty clause. Patents. A royalty-agreement provision that prescribes a fixed payment by the licensee to the patentee, regardless of whether the invention is actually used. [Cases: Patents ↻218(1), (5).]

minimum sale. See EXHIBITION VALUE.

minimum scrutiny. See RATIONAL-BASIS TEST.

minimum sentence. See SENTENCE.

minimum tax. See alternative minimum tax under TAX.

minimum wage. See WAGE.

mining. The process of extracting ore or minerals from the ground; the working of a mine. • This term also encompasses oil and gas drilling.

mining claim. A parcel of land that contains precious metal in its soil or rock and that is appropriated by a person according to established rules and customs known as the process of location. See LOCATION (4), (5). [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻13, 28.]

lode claim. A mining claim (on public land) to a well-defined vein embedded in rock; a mining claim to a mineral lode. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻16, 28.]

placer claim. A mining claim that is not a lode claim; a claim where the minerals are not located in veins or lodes within rock, but are usu. in softer ground near the earth's surface. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻16, 28.]

mining partnership. An association of persons to jointly share a mining business, including the profits, expenses, and losses. • The partnership has features of both a tenancy in common and an ordinary commercial partnership. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻96.]

"It has generally been held that the law governing ordinary commercial or trading partnerships applies, with a few exceptions, to mining partnerships. The principal exception and the main distinction between mining partnerships and commercial partnerships generally is based on the fact that the principle of delectus personae, meaning the right of a partner to exercise choice and preference as to the admission of any new members to the firm, and as to the persons to be so admitted, does not apply to mining partnerships . . ." 58 C.J.S. Mines and Minerals § 387, at 380 (1998).

mining rent. Consideration given for a mining lease, whether the lease creates a tenancy, conveys a fee, or grants a mere license or incorporeal right. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨70, 79.]

minister, n. (14c) 1. A person acting under another's authority; an agent. 2. A prominent government officer appointed to manage an executive or administrative department. 3. A diplomatic representative, esp. one ranking below an ambassador. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ⇨1-5.]

foreign minister. 1. A minister of foreign affairs, who in many countries is equivalent to the U.S. Secretary of State. 2. An ambassador, minister, or envoy from a foreign government. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ⇨1-5.]

minister plenipotentiary (plen-ə-pə-ten-shee-er-ee). A minister ranking below an ambassador but possessing full power and authority as a governmental representative, esp. as an envoy of a sovereign ruler. • This officer is often regarded as the personal representative of a head of state.

public minister. A high diplomatic representative such as an ambassador, envoy, or resident, but not including a commercial representative such as a consul. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ⇨4.]

4. A person authorized by a Christian church to perform religious functions. [Cases: Religious Societies ⇨27.]

ministerial, adj. (16c) Of or relating to an act that involves obedience to instructions or laws instead of discretion, judgment, or skill <the court clerk's ministerial duties include recording judgments on the docket>. [Cases: Judges ⇨33.]

ministerial-function test. (1990) The principle that the First Amendment bars judicial resolution of a Title VII employment-discrimination claim based on a religious preference, if the employee's responsibilities are religious in nature, as in spreading faith, supervising a religious order, and the like. 42 USCA § 2000e-1(a). See TITLE VII OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨1114, 1163.]

ministerial officer. See OFFICER (1).

ministerial trust. See passive trust under TRUST.

ministrant (min-ə-strənt). 1. One who ministers; a dispenser. 2. Hist. Eccles. law. A party who cross-examines a witness.

ministri regis (mi-nis-tri ree-jis). [Latin] Hist. Ministers of the king. • This term was applied to judges and ministerial officers.

minitrial. (1990) A private, voluntary, and informal form of dispute resolution in which each party's attorney presents an abbreviated version of its case to a neutral third party and to the opponent's representatives, who have settlement authority. • The third party may render an advisory opinion on the anticipated outcome of litigation. Cf. summary jury trial under TRIAL.

"The idea behind the minitrial is that the parties can resolve a dispute on their own more efficiently if litigant representatives with settling authority are educated about the strengths and weaknesses of each side, giving summary presentations of their best cases under the eye of a jointly selected neutral advisor. After each case is presented, the parties meet privately to negotiate an agreement. The minitrial is confidential and nonbinding. Usually, no transcript is made of the proceeding. Minitrials have had some success in saving both time and money." Alfred C. Aman Jr. & William T. Mayton, Administrative Law 291 (2d ed. 2001).

minor, n. (16c) 1. A person who has not reached full legal age; a child or juvenile. — Also termed infant. Cf. ADULT. [Cases: Infants ⇨1.] emancipated minor. (1817) A minor who is self-supporting and independent of parental control, usu. as a result of a court order. See EMANCIPATION. [Cases: Child Support ⇨389; Parent and Child ⇨16.]

minor in need of supervision. See child in need of supervision under CHILD. — Abbr. MINS.

2. Roman law. A person who is past puberty but less than 25 years old. — Also termed minor quam 25 annis.

minor aetas (mi-nər ee-tas). [Latin] Hist. Lesser age; minority; infancy.

minora regalia (mi-nor-ə ri-gay-lee-ə). See regalia minora under REGALIA.

minor crime. See MISDEMEANOR.

minor dispute. See DISPUTE.

minority. (15c) 1. The state or condition of being under legal age. • In Scots law, legal minority begins at the end of puberty; until then, a person is a pupil. — Also termed infancy; nonage; immaturity. Cf. MAJORITY (1). [Cases: Infants ⇨1.] 2. A group having fewer than a controlling number of votes. Cf. MAJORITY (2). [Cases: Corporations ⇨182.3.] 3. A group that is different in some respect (such as race or religious belief) from the majority and that is sometimes treated differently as a result; a member of such a group. • Some courts have held that the term minority, in this sense, is not limited to a group that is outnumbered. It may also be applied to a group that has been traditionally discriminated against or socially suppressed, even if its members are in the numerical majority in an area. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨1007.]

Minority Business Development Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for developing and coordinating a national program for minority business enterprise. — Abbr. MBDA.

minority discount. A reduction in the value of a closely held business's shares that are owned by someone who has only a minority interest in the business. • The concept underlying a minority discount is recognition that controlling shares — those owned by someone who can control the business — are worth more in the market than noncontrolling shares. But when dissenting shareholders object to a corporate act, such as a merger, and become entitled to have their shares appraised and bought by the corporation, many courts hold that incorporating a minority discount into the valuation of the dissenters' shares is inequitable and is not permitted. See APPRAISAL REMEDY. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 182.4(5), 584.]

minority report. See REPORT (1).

minority shareholder. See SHAREHOLDER.

minor participant. (1960) Criminal law. Under the federal sentencing guidelines, a defendant who is less culpable for a crime than the other members of the group committing the crime, but who has more culpability than a minimal participant. • A defendant who is a minor participant can have the offense level for the crime decreased by two levels. U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 3B1.2(b). Cf. MINIMAL PARTICIPANT. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 764.]

minor quam 25 annis (mī-nər kwam 25 an-is). [Latin]. See MINOR (2).

minor's trust. See 2503(c) trust under TRUST.

MINS. abbr. Minor in need of supervision. See child in need of supervision under CHILD.

mint, n. (15c) 1. A government-authorized place for coining money. [Cases: United States ⇨ 34.] 2. A large supply, esp. of money.

mintage. (16c) 1. The mint's charge for coining money. 2. The product of minting; money.

mint-mark. An authorized mark on a coin showing where it was minted.

minuend (mīn-yoo-end). (18c) In a mathematical equation, the number from which another number (the subtrahend) is subtracted to arrive at a remainder or balance. • The term is used in law in a variety of accounting and mathematical contexts. Cf. SUBTRAHEND.

minus (mī-nəs), adj. & adv. [Latin] Roman law. Less; less than; not at all. • A debt remaining wholly unpaid was called minus solutum.

minus Latium. See LATIUM MINUS.

minute book. (16c) 1. A book in which a court clerk enters minutes of court proceedings. [Cases: Clerks of Courts ⇨ 67.] 2. A record of the subjects discussed and actions taken at a corporate directors' or shareholders' meeting. — Also termed minutes book.

minutes. (15c) 1. Memoranda or notes of a transaction, proceeding, or meeting. 2. Parliamentary law. The formal record of a deliberative assembly's proceedings, approved (as corrected, if necessary) by the assembly. — Also termed journal; records; report. See DISPENSE WITH THE READING OF THE MINUTES; SPREAD UPON THE MINUTES.

"The minutes of an organization include a record of all official actions taken, the presiding officer, the presence of a quorum, and information showing that the meeting was duly called and thus legal. The other contents of the minutes will depend upon the degree of detail desired. . . . The minutes should be an official record of actions taken by the organization, not a transcript of what individuals say in meetings." Ray E. Keeseey, Modern Parliamentary Procedure 84 (1994).

"The record of the proceedings of a deliberative assembly is usually called the minutes, or sometimes — particularly in legislative bodies — the journal. In an ordinary society, unless the minutes are to be published, they should contain mainly a record of what was done at the meeting, not what was said by the members. The minutes should never reflect the secretary's opinion, favorable or otherwise, on anything said or done." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 48, at 451 (10th ed. 2000).

3. Scots law. Written forms for preserving evidence.

"When it is necessary to preserve evidence of any incidental judicial act or statement, this is done in the Court of Session, and also in the inferior courts, by a minute. Thus, where the pursuer restricts his libel, or makes a reference to the defender's oath . . . this is done by a minute. Strictly speaking, those minutes ought to be prepared by the clerk of court, as their form imports. They commence with the name of the counsel . . . and purport to be a statement made by him . . ." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 721 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

minutio (mī-n[y]oo-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A lessening or reduction. See DEMINUTIO.

Miranda hearing (mə-ran-də). (1966) A pretrial proceeding held to determine whether the Miranda rule has been followed and thus whether the prosecutor may introduce into evidence the defendant's statements to the police made after arrest. See MIRANDA RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 414.]

Miranda rule. (1966) The doctrine that a criminal suspect in police custody must be informed of certain constitutional rights before being interrogated. • The suspect must be advised of the right to remain silent, the right to have an attorney present during questioning, and the right to have an attorney appointed if the suspect cannot afford one. If the suspect is not advised of these rights or does not validly waive them, any evidence obtained during the interrogation cannot be used against the suspect at trial (except for impeachment purposes). Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602 (1966). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 412.2(3), 517.2(3), 518.]

Miranda warning. See MIRANDA RULE.

Mirandize (mə-ran-dīz), vb. (1971) Slang. To read or recite (to an arrestee) rights under the Miranda rule <the suspect was arrested, Mirandized, and

mirror-image rule. (1972) Contracts. The doctrine that the acceptance of a contractual offer must be positive, unconditional, unequivocal, and unambiguous, and must not change, add to, or qualify the terms of the offer; the common-law principle that for a contract to be formed, the terms of an acceptance must correspond exactly with those of the offer. • In modern commercial contexts, the mirror-image rule has been replaced by a UCC provision that allows parties to enforce their agreement despite minor discrepancies between the offer and the acceptance. The rule still applies to international sales contracts governed by the UN Convention on Contracts for the International Sales of Goods (article 19). — Also termed ribbon-matching rule. See BATTLE OF THE FORMS. [Cases: Contracts ↷24.]

"If an offeree purports to accept an offer but in doing so adds various conditions and qualifications of his own, is the acceptance binding on the offeror, at least in part? Generally speaking, the answer is no: the common law rule, reflected in Restatement Section 59, is that a statement of acceptance is effective only if it is a mirror image of the offer and expresses unconditional assent to all of the terms and conditions imposed by the offeror." Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 54 (1990).

misa (mi-zə). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. The issue in a writ of right; a mise. 2. An agreement; a compromise.

misadministration. See MALADMINISTRATION.

misadventure. (13c) 1. A mishap or misfortune. 2. Homicide committed accidentally by a person doing a lawful act and having no intent to injure; ACCIDENTAL KILLING. [Cases: Homicide ↷762.]

misallege, vb. To erroneously assert (a fact, a claim, etc.).

misapplication, n. (17c) The improper or illegal use of funds or property lawfully held. — misapply, vb.

"The doctrine of 'misappropriation,' which is a distinct branch of unfair competition, . . . has been applied to a variety of situations in which the courts have sensed that one party was dealing 'unfairly' with another, but which were not covered by the three established statutory systems protecting intellectual property: copyright, patent, and trademark/deception as to origin." U.S. Golf Ass'n v. St. Andrews Systems, Data-Max, Inc. 749 F.2d 1028, 1034-35 (3d Cir. 1984) (Becker, J.). misappropriation theory. Securities. The doctrine that a person who wrongfully uses confidential information to buy or sell securities in violation of a duty owed to the one who is the information source is guilty of securities fraud. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↷60.28(2.1).]

misbranding, n. The act or an instance of labeling one's product falsely or in a misleading way. • Misbranding is prohibited by federal and state law. [Cases: Food ↷15; Health ↷311; Products Liability ↷225.] — misbrand, vb.

miscarriage of justice. (1862) A grossly unfair outcome in a judicial proceeding, as when a defendant is convicted despite a lack of evidence on an essential element of the crime. — Also termed failure of justice.

miscegenation (mi-sej-ə-nay-shən). (1863) A marriage between persons of different races, formerly considered illegal in some jurisdictions. • In 1967, the U.S. Supreme Court held that laws banning interracial marriages are unconstitutional. Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1817 (1967). But for years, such laws technically remained on the books in some states. The last remaining state-law ban on interracial marriages was a provision in the Alabama constitution. The Alabama legislature voted to repeal the ban, subject to a vote of the state's citizens, in 1999; the repeal became effective in 2000. — Also termed mixed marriage; interracial marriage. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷45.45.]

mischarge. (1939) An erroneous jury instruction that may be grounds for reversing a verdict. — Also termed misdirection.

mischief (mis-chəf). (14c) 1. A condition in which a person suffers a wrong or is under some hardship, esp. one that a statute seeks to remove or for which equity provides a remedy <this legislation seeks to eliminate the mischief of racially restrictive deed covenants>. 2. Injury or damage caused by a specific person or thing <the vandals were convicted of criminal mischief>. 3. The act causing such injury or damage <their mischief damaged the abbey>.

mischief rule. (1974) In statutory construction, the doctrine that a statute should be interpreted by first identifying the problem (or "mischief") that the statute was designed to remedy and then adopting a construction that will suppress the problem and advance the remedy. — Also termed rule in Heydon's Case; purpose approach. Cf. GOLDEN RULE; PLAIN-MEANING RULE;

affirmative misconduct. (1897) 1. An affirmative act of misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact; intentional wrongful behavior. • Some courts hold that there must be an ongoing pattern of misrepresentation or false promises, as opposed to an isolated act of providing misinformation. 2. With respect to a claim of estoppel against the federal government, a misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact by a government employee — beyond a merely innocent or negligent misrepresentation. [Cases: Estoppel ↷ 62.2(3, 4).]

juror misconduct. (1954) A juror's violation of the court's charge or the law, committed either during trial or in deliberations after trial, such as (1) communicating about the case with outsiders, witnesses, attorneys, bailiffs, or judges, (2) bringing into the jury room information relating to the case but not in evidence, and (3) conducting experiments regarding theories of the case outside the court's presence. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 855; Federal Courts ↷ 1974; Trial ↷ 304–311.]

official misconduct. (1830) A public officer's corrupt violation of assigned duties by malfeasance, misfeasance, or nonfeasance. — Also termed misconduct in office; misbehavior in office; malconduct in office; misdemeanor in office; corruption in office; official corruption; political corruption. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷ 121.]

willful and wanton misconduct. (1866) Conduct committed with an intentional or reckless disregard for the safety of others, as by failing to exercise ordinary care to prevent a known danger or to discover a danger. — Also termed willful indifference to the safety of others. [Cases: Automobiles ↷ 181(1); Negligence ↷ 275.]

willful misconduct. (1804) Misconduct committed voluntarily and intentionally. [Cases: Carriers ↷ 307(6.1); Negligence ↷ 275; Unemployment Compensation ↷ 65.]

"This term of art [willful misconduct] has defied definition, but it is clear that it means something more than negligence. Two classic examples of misconduct which will defeat the seaman's claim are intoxication and venereal disease." Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 185–86 (3d ed. 1996).

willful misconduct of an employee. (1884) The deliberate disregard by an employee of the employer's interests, including its work rules and standards of conduct, justifying a denial of unemployment compensation if the employee is terminated for the misconduct. [Cases: Unemployment Compensation ↷ 65.]

2. An attorney's dishonesty or attempt to persuade a court or jury by using deceptive or reprehensible methods. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 1980–2210; Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 1970; Trial ↷ 113.]

miscontinuance. (16c) A continuance erroneously ordered by a court.

misdate. (16c) To erroneously date (a document, etc.).

misdelivery. (1867) Delivery not according to contractual specifications; esp. delivery to the wrong person or delivery of goods in a damaged condition. • This concept applies to contracts of carriage and contracts of sale, lease, etc., requiring delivery in some form. [Cases: Carriers ↷ 93; Shipping ↷ 117.]

misdemeanant (mis-də-mee-nənt), n. (1819) A person who has been convicted of a misdemeanor.

misdemeanor (mis-di-mee-nər). (16c) 1. A crime that is less serious than a felony and is usu. punishable by fine, penalty, forfeiture, or confinement (usu. for a brief term) in a place other than prison (such as a county jail). — Also termed minor crime; summary offense. Cf. FELONY (1). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 27.]

high misdemeanor. 1. Hist. English law. A crime that ranked just below high treason in seriousness. • In English law, the term was essentially synonymous with crime. Examples of crimes called high misdemeanors are riot and conspiracy. In early American law, the term had the same meaning as in English law and was used in defining crimes such as sedition. 2. See gross misdemeanor. 3. See serious misdemeanor.

serious misdemeanor. (1893) One of a class of misdemeanors having more severe penalties than most other misdemeanors. • Conduct rising to the level of a serious misdemeanor can, in some jurisdictions, be charged as either a felony or a misdemeanor. — Also termed high misdemeanor; indictable misdemeanor; penitentiary misdemeanor; aggravated misdemeanor.

treasonable misdemeanor. See TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR.

2. Archaic. Any crime, including a felony.

"A crime, or misdemeanor, is an act committed, or omitted, in violation of a public law, either forbidding or commanding it. This general definition comprehends both crimes and misdemeanors; which, properly speaking, are mere synonymous terms: though, in common usage, the word, 'crimes,' is made to denote such offences as are of a deeper and more atrocious dye; while smaller faults, and omissions of less consequence, are comprised under the gentler names of 'misdemeanors' only." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 5 (1769).

misdemeanor manslaughter. See MANSLAUGHTER.

misdemeanor-manslaughter rule. (1967) The doctrine that a death occurring during the commission of a misdemeanor (or sometimes a nondangerous felony) is involuntary manslaughter. • Many states and the Model Penal Code have abolished this rule. Cf. FELONY-MURDER RULE. [Cases: Homicide ⇨620–652.]

"Companion to the felony-murder rule is the so-called misdemeanor-manslaughter rule[...] Homicide resulting from the perpetration or attempted perpetration of an unlawful act, less than a dangerous felony, is manslaughter if the unlawful act is malum in se." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 108 (3d ed. 1982).

misdescription. (1848) 1. A contractual error or falsity that deceives, injures, or materially misleads one of the contracting parties. 2. A bailee's inaccurate identification, in a document of title, of goods received from the bailor. 3. An inaccurate legal description of land in a deed. [Cases: Deeds ⇨37.]

mise (meez or miz), n. [Law French] Hist. 1. Expenses incurred in litigation. 2. The general issue in a writ of right. • When a tenant pleads superior title to the plaintiff, the tenant is said to join the mise on the mere right. 3. A settlement; a compromise, as in the Mise of Lewes between Henry III and the rebelling barons.

mise money. Hist. Money paid by contract to purchase a privilege.

miserabile depositum (miz-ə-rab-ə-lee di-poz-ə-təm). [Law Latin "a pitiful deposit"] Civil law. A deposit or bailment made in an emergency, as in a shipwreck, fire, or insurrection.

miserere (miz-ə-reer-ee). [Latin] Hist. Have mercy. • This is the first phrase of the 51st psalm, used to test a person claiming benefit of clergy. See NECK VERSE.

misericordia (miz-ə-ri-kor-dee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Mercy. 2. An arbitrary fine as a punishment. 3. An exemption from a fine.

misericordia communis (miz-ə-ri-kor-dee-ə kə-myoo-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. A fine levied on a whole county.

misfeasance (mis-fee-zənts), n. (16c) 1. A lawful act performed in a wrongful manner. [Cases: Negligence ⇨200.] 2. More broadly, a transgression or trespass;

MALFEASANCE. Cf. NONFEASANCE. — misfeasant, adj. — misfeasor, n.

misfeasance in public office. (1880) The tort of excessive, malicious, or negligent exercise of statutory powers by a public officer. — Also termed malfeasance. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨116.]

mishering. See MISKERING.

mishersing. See MISKERING.

misjoinder (mis-joyn-dər). (18c) 1. The improper union of parties in a civil case. See JOINDER. Cf. DISJOINDER; NONJOINDER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨387; Parties ⇨85, 89.] 2. The improper union of offenses in a criminal case. [Cases: Indictment and Information ⇨126.]

miskenning (mis-ken-ing). [fr. French misw "wrong" + Saxon cennan "to declare"] 1. A wrongful summons. 2. A pleading mistake or irregularity.

"But every defeated plaintiff could be amerced 'for a false claim.' Incidentally too any falsehood . . . that is, any fraudulent misuse of the machinery of the law, would be punished by imprisonment. Then again every default in appearance brought an amercement on the defaulter and his pledges. Every mistake in pleading, every miskenning . . . brought an amercement on the pleader if the mistake was to be retrieved. A litigant who hoped to get to the end of his suit without an amercement must have been a sanguine man; for he was playing a game of forfeits." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 519 (2d ed. 1899).

miskering (mis-kər-ing). Hist. Freedom or immunity from amercement. — Also termed abishering; abishersing; mishering; mishersing.

mislaid property. See PROPERTY.

mislay, vb. (15c) To deposit (property, etc.) in a place not afterwards recollected; to lose (property, etc.) by forgetting where it was placed. See mislaid property under PROPERTY.

misleading, adj. (16c) (Of an instruction, direction, etc.) delusive; calculated to be misunderstood. [Cases: Fraud ⇨13(1).]

misnomer (mis-noh-mər). (15c) A mistake in naming a person, place, or thing, esp. in a legal instrument. • In federal pleading — as well as in most states — misnomer of a party can be corrected by an amendment, which will relate back to the date of the original pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c)(3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨382; Limitation of Actions ⇨121(2); Parties ⇨94, 95(3).]

misperformance. (17c) A faulty attempt to discharge an obligation (esp. a contractual one). Cf. PERFORMANCE; NONPERFORMANCE.

mispleading. (16c) Pleading incorrectly. • A party who realizes that its pleading is incorrect can usu. amend the pleading, as a matter of right, within a certain period, and can thereafter amend with the court's permission.

misprision (mis-prizh-ən). (15c) 1. Concealment or non-disclosure of a serious crime by one who did not participate in the crime. [Cases: Compounding Offenses ↷1.]

clerical misprison. (18c) A court clerk's mistake or fraud that is apparent from the record.

misprison of felony. (16c) Concealment or nondisclosure of someone else's felony. See 18 USCA § 4. [Cases: Compounding Offenses ↷1.1.]

"In fact, whatever the law may be, it is not the general custom to prosecute for misprison of felony, even where a person who knows of a felony is questioned by the police and refuses to make a statement. Indeed, Stephen, writing in the nineteenth century, regarded the offence as 'practically obsolete'; and American courts have refused to recognise it as subsisting. But there have been four successful prosecutions in England during the last quarter-century . . ." Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 424 (2d ed. 1961).

misprison of treason. (16c) Concealment or nondisclosure of someone else's treason. [Cases: Treason ↷8.]

negative misprison. (18c) The wrongful concealment of something that should be revealed <misprison of treason>.

positive misprison. (18c) The active commission of a wrongful act <seditionary conduct against the government is positive misprison>.

2. Seditious conduct against the government. 3. An official's failure to perform the duties of public office. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷121.] 4. Misunderstanding; mistake.

"The word 'misprison' has been employed with different meanings. While Blackstone thought of it as referring to a grave misdemeanor, it seems to have been used earlier to indicate the entire field of crime below the grade of treason or felony before the word 'misdemeanor' became the generally accepted label for this purpose. More recently it has been said: 'Misprison is nothing more than a word used to describe a misdemeanor which does not possess a specific name.' [United States v. Perlstein, 126 F.2d 789, 798 (3d Cir. 1942).] It has been associated with two specific offenses, and only these, from the earliest times. They are misprison of treason and misprison of felony, which consist of the criminal default of one in regard to the crime of another." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 572 (3d ed. 1982).

misprisor (mis-prī-zər). One who commits misprison of felony.

misreading. An act of fraud in which a person incorrectly reads the contents of an instrument to an illiterate or blind person with the intent to deceitfully obtain that person's signature. [Cases: Fraud ↷4.5.]

misrecital. (16c) An incorrect statement of a factual matter in a contract, deed, pleading, or other instrument.

misrepresentation, n. (17c) 1. The act of making a false or misleading assertion about something, usu. with the intent to deceive. • The word denotes not just written or spoken words but also any other conduct that amounts to a false assertion. [Cases: Fraud ↷9.] 2. The assertion so made; an assertion that does not accord with the facts. — Also termed false representation; (redundantly) false misrepresentation. Cf. REPRESENTATION (1). — misrepresent, vb.

fraudulent misrepresentation. (18c) A false statement that is known to be false or is made recklessly — without knowing or caring whether it is true or false — and that is intended to induce a party to detrimentally rely on it. — Also termed fraudulent representation; deceit. [Cases: Fraud ↷8.]

"A misrepresentation is fraudulent if the maker intends his assertion to induce a party to manifest his assent and the maker (a) knows or believes that the assertion is not in accord with the facts, or (b) does not have the confidence that he states or implies in the truth of the assertion, or (c) knows that he does not have the basis that he states or implies for the assertion." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 162(1) (1979).

innocent misrepresentation. (1809) A false statement that the speaker or writer does not know is false; a misrepresentation that, though false, was not made fraudulently. [Cases: Fraud ↷13(2).]

material misrepresentation. (18c) 1. Contracts. A false statement that is likely to induce a reasonable person to assent or that the maker knows is likely to induce the recipient to assent. [Cases: Contracts ↷94.] 2. Torts. A false statement to which a reasonable person would attach importance in deciding how to act in the transaction in question or to which the maker knows or has reason to know that the recipient attaches some importance. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 538 (1979). [Cases: Fraud ↷18.]

"The materiality of a misrepresentation is determined from the viewpoint of the maker, while the justification of reliance is determined from the viewpoint of the recipient. . . . The requirement of materiality may be met in either of two ways. First, a misrepresentation is material if it would be likely to induce a reasonable person to manifest his assent. Second, it is material if the maker knows that for some special reason it is likely to induce the particular recipient to manifest his assent. There may be personal considerations that the recipient regards as important even though they would not be expected to affect others in his situation, and if the maker is aware of this the misrepresentation may be material even though it would not be expected to induce a reasonable person to make the proposed contract. One who preys upon another's known idiosyncrasies cannot complain if the contract is held voidable when he succeeds in what he is endeavoring to accomplish. . . . Although a nonfraudulent misrepresentation that is not material does not make the contract voidable under the rules stated in this Chapter, the recipient may have a claim to relief under other rules, such as those relating to breach of warranty." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 162 cmt. c (1979).

negligent misrepresentation. (1888) A careless or inadvertent false statement in circumstances where care should have been taken. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 13(3).]

misrepresentee. A person to whom a fact has been misrepresented.

misrepresenter. A person who misrepresents a fact to another. — Also spelled misrepresentor.

Missile Defense Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for developing and deploying a missile-defense system capable of protecting the United States, its armed forces, and others from missile attack. — Abbr. MDA.

missilia (mi-sī-lee-ə), n. pl. [fr. Latin mittere “to throw”] Roman law. Money that the praetors, consuls, or wealthy individuals throw as gifts to people on the street; largesse.

missing-evidence rule. (1981) The doctrine that, when a party fails at trial to present evidence that the party controls and that would have been proper to present, the jury is entitled to infer that the evidence would have been unfavorable to that party. [Cases: Evidence ⇨ 74.]

missing person. 1. Someone whose whereabouts are unknown and, after a reasonable time, seem to be unascertainable. 2. Someone whose continuous and unexplained absence entitles the heirs to petition a court to declare the person dead and to divide up the person's property. See SEVEN-YEARS'-ABSENCE RULE. Cf. DISAPPEARED PERSON. [Cases: Death ⇨ 2.]

missing ship. Maritime law. A vessel that has been gone for an unreasonably long time, leading to the presumption that it is lost at sea; esp. a vessel that has been gone longer than the average time it takes a vessel to make a similar voyage in the same season.

missing-witness rule. (1961) The doctrine that, when a party fails at trial to present a witness who is available only to that party and whose testimony would have been admissible, the jury is entitled to infer that the witness's testimony would have been unfavorable to that party. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 317; Evidence ⇨ 77; Trial ⇨ 211.]

missio in bona (mis[h]-ee-oh in boh-nə). [Latin] Roman law. 1. A praetor's grant to a creditor of individual items of the judgment debtor's property already in the creditor's possession. 2. A praetor's grant to a creditor in possession of the debtor's whole estate, as a form of execution of judgment.

missio in possessionem (mis[h]-ee-oh in pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nəm). [Latin] Roman law. A praetor's grant to a creditor of the debtor's entire estate as a form of execution of judgment.

mistake, n. (17c) 1. An error, misconception, or misunderstanding; an erroneous belief. See ERROR. 2. Contracts. The situation in which either (1) the parties to a contract did not mean the same thing, or (2) at least one party had a belief that did not correspond to the facts or law. • As a result, the contract may be voidable. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 93.]

“In this Restatement the word ‘mistake’ is used to refer to an erroneous belief. A party's erroneous belief is therefore said to be a ‘mistake’ of that party. The belief need not be an articulated one, and a party may have a belief as to a fact when he merely makes an assumption with respect to it, without being aware of alternatives. The word ‘mistake’ is not used here, as it is sometimes used in common speech, to refer to an improvident act, including the making of a contract, that is the result of such an erroneous belief. This usage is avoided here for the sake of clarity and consistency. Furthermore, the erroneous belief must relate to the facts as they exist at the time of the making of the contract. A party's prediction or judgment as to events to occur in the future, even if erroneous, is not a ‘mistake’ as that word is defined here. An erroneous belief as to the contents or effect of a writing that expresses the agreement is, however, a mistake. Mistake alone, in the sense in which the word is used here, has no legal consequences. The legal consequences of mistake in connection with the creation of contractual liability are determined by [substantive rules].” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 151 cmt. a (1979).

basic mistake. A mistake of fact or of law constituting the basis on which a transaction rests.

bilateral mistake. See mutual mistake (1).

essential mistake. (1818) Contracts. A mistake serious enough that no real consent could have existed, so that there was no real agreement. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 93.]

mistake of fact. (1808) 1. A mistake about a fact that is material to a transaction; any mistake other than a mistake of law. — Also termed error in fact; error of fact. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 93.] 2. The defense asserting that a criminal defendant acted from an innocent misunderstanding of fact rather than from a criminal purpose.

mistake of law. (18c) 1. A mistake about the legal effect of a known fact or situation. — Also termed error in law; error of law. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 93(4).] 2. The defense asserting that a defendant did not understand the criminal consequences of certain conduct. • This defense is generally not as effective as a mistake of fact.

mutual mistake. (18c) 1. A mistake in which each party misunderstands the other's intent. — Also termed bilateral mistake. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 93(5).] 2. A mistake that is shared and relied on by both parties to a contract. • A court will often revise or nullify a contract based on a mutual mistake about a material term. — Also termed (in sense 2) common mistake. [Cases: Contracts ⇨93(5); Reformation of Instruments ⇨19.]

"The term 'common mistake' is more usually, but less grammatically, referred to as 'mutual mistake'. Cheshire and Fifoot on Contract have made a heroic effort to introduce and establish the more correct term, and it does seem to be gaining ground. However, the beginner is warned that the term 'mutual mistake' is nearly always used by the Courts to mean what we here call 'common mistake'." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 190 n.7 (3d ed. 1981).

nonessential mistake. See unessential mistake.

unessential mistake. (1928) Contracts. A mistake that does not relate to the nature of the contents of an agreement, but only to some external circumstance, so that the mistake has no effect on the validity of the agreement. — Also termed inessential mistake; nonessential mistake; collateral mistake. [Cases: Contracts ⇨93.]

unilateral mistake. (1885) A mistake by only one party to a contract. • A unilateral mistake is generally not as likely to be a ground for voiding the contract as is a mutual mistake. [Cases: Contracts ⇨93.]

mistakenly induced revocation. See DEPENDENT RELATIVE REVOCATION.

mistery (mis-tər-ee). Hist. A business; a trade. — Also spelled mystery.

mistrial. (17c) 1. A trial that the judge brings to an end, without a determination on the merits, because of a procedural error or serious misconduct occurring during the proceedings. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨867; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨1951; Trial ⇨18, 133.1, 304.] 2. A trial that ends inconclusively because the jury cannot agree on a verdict. — Also termed abortive trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨867.]

misunderstanding. (13c) 1. A flawed interpretation of meaning or significance. 2. A situation in which the words or acts of two people suggest assent, but one or both of them in fact intend something different from what the words or acts express. 3. A quarrel; an instance of usual, mild wrangling.

misuse, n. (14c) 1. Products liability. A defense alleging that the plaintiff used the product in an improper, unintended, or unforeseeable manner. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨182.] 2. Patents. The use of a patent either to improperly extend the granted monopoly to non-patented goods or to violate antitrust laws. [Cases: Patents ⇨283(1).] misuser. (17c) An abuse of a right or office, as a result of which the person having the right might lose it <it is an act of misuser to accept a bribe>. Cf. USER. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨64.]

mitigate (mit-ə-gayt), vb. (15c) To make less severe or intense <the fired employee mitigated her damages for wrongful termination by accepting a new job>. Cf.

mitigating circumstance. See CIRCUMSTANCE.

mitigation-of-damages doctrine. (1978) The principle requiring a plaintiff, after an injury or breach of contract, to make reasonable efforts to alleviate the effects of the injury or breach. • If the defendant can show that the plaintiff failed to mitigate damages, the plaintiff's recovery may be reduced. — Also termed avoidable-consequences doctrine. Cf. DOCTRINE OF CONSTRUCTIVE SERVICE (2). [Cases: Damages ⇨62.]

mitigation of punishment. (18c) Criminal law. A reduction in punishment due to mitigating circumstances that reduce the criminal's level of culpability, such as the existence of no prior convictions. See mitigating circumstance under CIRCUMSTANCE.

mitigator. A factor tending to show that a criminal defendant, though guilty, is less culpable than the act alone would indicate <the fact that he was coerced into taking part in the robbery may have been a mitigator in the minds of the jurors>. Cf. AGGRAVATOR. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨54.]

mitter avant (mit-ər ə-vant), vb. [Law French] Hist. To present or produce (evidence, etc.) to a court.

mittimus (mit-ə-məs). [Law Latin "we send"] Hist. 1. A court order or warrant directing a jailer to detain a person until ordered otherwise; COMMITMENT (4). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨462, 463.] 2. A certified transcript of a prisoner's conviction or sentencing proceedings. 3. A writ directing the transfer of records from one court to another. Pl. mittimuses.

mixed question. (18c) 1. MIXED QUESTION OF LAW AND FACT. 2. An issue involving conflicts of foreign and domestic law.

mixed question of law and fact. (1805) An issue that is neither a pure question of fact nor a pure question of law. • Mixed questions of law and fact are typically resolved by juries. — Often shortened to mixed question. — Also termed mixed question of fact and law. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻781; Appeal and Error ↻842(9); Criminal Law ↻735; Federal Courts ↻754; Trial ↻137.]

mixtum imperium (miks-təm im-peer-ee-əm). [Latin] Hist. Mixed authority; mixed jurisdiction. • This term refers to the power of subordinate civil magistrates.

MJOA. abbr. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT OF ACQUITTAL.

MLA. abbr. MOTION FOR LEAVE TO APPEAL.

MMBtu. Abbr. Oil & gas. One million British thermal units, one of the standard units for measuring natural gas.

MMI. abbr. MAXIMUM MEDICAL IMPROVEMENT.

M'Naghten rules. See MCNAGHTEN RULES.

M'Naughten rules. See MCNAGHTEN RULES.

M.O. abbr. MODUS OPERANDI.

mobile goods. See GOODS.

Mobile-Sierra doctrine. The principle that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission may not grant a rate increase to a natural-gas producer unless the producer's contract authorizes a rate increase, or unless the existing rate is so low that it may adversely affect the public interest (as by threatening the continued viability of the public utility to continue its service). United mobilia (moh-bil-ee-ə), n. pl. [Latin "movables"] Roman law. Movable things. • The term primarily refers to inanimate objects but sometimes also refers to slaves and animals.

mobilia sequuntur personam (moh-bil-ee-ə si-kwən-tər pər-sōh-nəm). [Latin] Int'l law. Movables follow the person — i.e., the law of the person. • This is the general principle that rights of ownership and transfer of movable property are determined by the law of the owner's domicile. [Cases: Property ↻6; Taxation ↻2211.]

"The maxim mobilia sequuntur personam is the exception rather than the rule, and is probably to be confined to certain special classes of general assignments such as marriage settlements and devolutions on death and bankruptcy." Handel v. Slatford, 1953 Q.B. 248, 257 (Eng. C.A.).

"Under the influence of Savigny many Continental systems in the mid-nineteenth century led the way for Anglo-American law in limiting the operation of the doctrine of mobilia sequuntur personam to universal assignments of movables, adopting for particular assignments the single principle of the lex situs of the movable." R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 457 (7th ed. 1974).

mock trial. (18c) 1. A fictitious trial organized to allow law students, or sometimes lawyers, to practice the techniques of trial advocacy. 2. A fictitious trial, arranged by a litigant's attorney, to assess trial strategy, to estimate the case's value or risk, and to evaluate the case's strengths and weaknesses. • In this procedure, people from the relevant jury pool are hired to sit as mock jurors who, after a condensed presentation of both sides, deliberate and reach a verdict (often while being observed by the participants behind a one-way glass). The jurors may later be asked specific questions about various arguments, techniques, and other issues. Because the mock jurors usu. do not know which side has hired them, their candid views are thought to be helpful in formulating trial strategies. Cf. MOOT COURT.

mode. (17c) A manner of doing something <mode of proceeding> <mode of process>.

model act. (1931) A statute drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and proposed as guideline legislation for the states to borrow from or adapt to suit their individual needs. • Examples of model acts include the Model Employment Termination Act and the Model Punitive Damages Act. Cf. UNIFORM LAW; UNIFORM ACT.

Model Code of Professional Responsibility. A set of guidelines for lawyers, organized in the form of canons, disciplinary rules, and ethical considerations. • Published by the ABA in 1969, this code has been replaced in most states by the Model Rules of Professional Conduct as the ethical standards by which lawyers are regulated and disciplined, although the Model Code continues to be used to interpret and apply the Model Rules. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷ 32(2).]

model jury charge. See model jury instruction under JURY INSTRUCTION.

model jury instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

Model Marriage and Divorce Act. See UNIFORM MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE ACT.

Model Penal Code. A proposed criminal code drafted by the American Law Institute and used as the basis for criminal-law revision by many states. — Abbr. MPC.

Model Penal Code test. See SUBSTANTIAL-CAPACITY TEST.

Model Putative Fathers Act. See UNIFORM PUTATIVE AND UNKNOWN FATHERS ACT.

Model Rules of Professional Conduct. A set of ethical guidelines for lawyers, organized in the form of 52 rules — some mandatory, some discretionary — together with explanatory comments. • Published by the ABA in 1983, these rules have generally replaced the Model Code of Professional Responsibility and have been adopted as law, sometimes with modifications, by most states. The Model Code of Professional Responsibility is sometimes used to interpret and apply the Model Rules. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷ 32(2).]

Model State Trademark Bill. A proposed statute intended to standardize trademark laws among the states. • The bill was first promulgated by the International Trademark Association (then called the United States Trademark Association) in 1949. — Abbr. MSTB.

model statute. See uniform statute under STATUTE.

moderamen inculpatæ tutelæ (moh-də-ray-mən in-kəl-pay-tee t[y]oo-tee-lee). 1. [Law Latin] Hist. The degree of force justified in self-defense. 2. A plea of justifiable self-defense. — Also termed inculpatæ tutelæ moderatio (mod-ə-ray-shee-oh).

moderate castigavit (mod-ə-ray-tee kas-tə-gay-vit). [Latin “he moderately chastised”] Hist. A plea justifying a trespass because it is really a chastisement that the defendant is legally entitled to inflict on the plaintiff because of their relationship.

moderate force. See nondeadly force under FORCE.

moderator. (16c) 1. One who presides at a meeting or assembly. See CHAIR (1). 2. Scots law. The person who presides in a public assembly; specif., the elected chair of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland or another Presbyterian church, of a presbytery, or of a kirk session.

modiatio (moh-dee-ay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Hist. A duty paid for every tierce of wine. See PRISAGE.

modica differentia (mod-i-kə dif-ə-ren-shee-ə). [Latin] Scots law. A moderate difference, esp. in price.

modification. (17c) 1. A change to something; an alteration . [Cases: Contracts ↷ 236.] 2. A qualification or limitation of something . 3. Parliamentary law. A change in a motion that its mover initiates or accepts, usu. before the chair has stated the motion.

• The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question, after which the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot modify it without the assembly’s permission. See request for permission to modify a motion under REQUEST.

modification order. Family law. A post-divorce order that changes the terms of child support, custody, visitation, or alimony. • A modification order may be agreed to by the parties or may be ordered by the court. The party wishing to modify an existing order must show a material change in circumstances from the time when the order sought to be modified was entered. See CHANGE IN CIRCUMSTANCES. [Cases: Child Custody ↷ 661; Child Support ↷ 342; Divorce ↷ 245(3).]

Modified Accelerated Cost Recovery System. See ACCELERATED COST RECOVERY SYSTEM.

modified-comparative-negligence doctrine. See 50-PERCENT RULE.

modius (moh-dee-əs), n. [Latin “a measure”] Hist. 1. A bushel. 2. An uncertain measure, as of land.

modo et forma (moh-doh et for-mə). [Latin] In manner and form. • In common-law pleading, this phrase began the conclusion of a traverse. Its object was to put the burden on the party whose pleading was being traversed not only to prove the allegations of fact but also to establish as correct the manner and form of the pleading. — Also termed manner and form.

modus (moh-dəs), n. [Latin “mode”] 1. Criminal procedure. The part of a charging instrument describing the manner in which an offense was committed. 2. Roman & civil law. Mode; manner; consideration, esp. the manner in which a gift, bequest, servitude, etc. is to be employed. 3. Eccles. law. See DE MODO DECIMANDI. Cf. MODUS OPERANDI.

modus decimandi (moh-dəs des-ə-man-dī). See DE MODO DECIMANDI.

modus habilis (moh-dəs hab-ə-lis). [Latin] A valid manner (in proving a debt, etc.).

modus operandi (moh-dəs op-ə-ran-dī or -dee). [Latin “a manner of operating”] (17c) A method of operating or a manner of procedure; esp. a pattern of criminal behavior so distinctive that investigators attribute it to the work of the same person <staging a fight at the train station was part of the pickpocket’s modus operandi>. — Abbr. M.O. Pl. modi operandi.

modus tenendi (moh-dəs tə-nen-dī). [Latin] Hist. The manner of holding. • This phrase referred to the different types of tenures by which estates were held.

Modus Tenendi Parliamentum (moh-dəs tə-nen-dī pahr-lə-men-təm). [Law Latin “the manner of holding Parliament”] Hist. A 14th-century writing on the powers of Parliament, translated in the 17th century and edited by T.D. Hardy in 1846.

modus transferendi (moh-dəs trans-fə-ren-dī). [Law Latin] Hist. The manner of transferring. — Also spelled modus transferendi. Cf. TITULUS TRANSFERENDI.

modus vacandi (moh-dəs vā-kan-dī). [Law Latin] Hist. The manner of vacating. • This term was often used in determining the circumstances under which a vassal surrendered an estate to a lord.

modus vivendi (moh-dəs vi-ven-dī or -dee). [Latin “means of living (together)”] Int’l law. A temporary, provisional arrangement concluded between subjects of international law and giving rise to binding obligations on the parties.

“[Modus vivendi] is an instrument of toleration looking towards a settlement, by preparing for or laying down the basis of a method of living together with a problem or by bridging over some difficulty pending a permanent settlement. Normally it is used for provisional and interim arrangements which ultimately are to be replaced by a formal agreement of a more permanent and detailed character. There is no clear distinction of a modus vivendi from other treaties. The most distinguishing feature is its provisional character; nevertheless a modus vivendi may be exercised for an indefinite period of time if it is prolonged sine die or if a definitive solution to the problem cannot be reached by treaty. Some ‘temporary’ arrangements have actually turned out to be quite durable.” Walter Rudolf, “Modus Vivendi,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 443 (1997).

meuble (myoo-bəl), adj. [Law French] Hist. Movable, as in the phrase biens meubles (“movable goods”).

moiety (moy-ə-tee). (15c) 1. A half of something (such as an estate). — Also termed mediety. 2. A portion less than half; a small segment. 3. In federal customs law, a payment made to an informant who assists in the seizure of contraband, the payment being no more than 25% of the contraband’s net value (up to a maximum of $250,000). 19 USCA § 1619.

moiety act. (1875) Criminal law. A law providing that a portion (such as half) of an imposed fine will inure to the benefit of the informant. [Cases: Fines ⇨ 21.]

mole. (1922) A person who uses a long affiliation with an organization to gain access to and betray confidential information.

molestation. (15c) 1. The persecution or harassment of someone <molestation of a witness>. 2. The act of making unwanted and indecent advances to or on someone, esp. for sexual gratification <sexual molestation>. — molest, vb. — molester, n.

child molestation. (1951) Any indecent or sexual activity on, involving, or surrounding a child, usu. under the age of 14. See Fed. R. Evid. 414(d). [Cases: Infants ⇨ 13.]

Molineux rule. New York law. The principle that evidence of prior crimes is inadmissible when offered to prove the defendant’s bad character and to show that the defendant is therefore more likely than not to have committed the crime charged. • The evidence is admissible if offered to prove something other than criminal propensity, such as motive, identity, absence of mistake or accident, intent, or the existence of a common scheme or plan. The rule was first handed down in People v. Molineux, 61 N.E. 286 (N.Y. 1901). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 369, 371.]

moluturae (mol-i-t[y]uur-ee or -chuur-ee). [Law Latin] Scots law. Tolls for grinding grain; multures. See CUM ASTRICITIS MULTURIS.

molliter manus imposuit (mol-ə-tər man-əs im-poz-[y]ə-wit). [Latin] Hist. He gently laid hands upon. • This phrase was used in actions of trespass and assault to justify a defendant’s use of force as reasonable, as when it was necessary to keep the peace.

monarchy. (14c) A government in which a single person rules, with powers varying from absolute dictatorship to the merely ceremonial.

limited monarchy. A monarchical form of government in which the monarch’s power is subject to constitutional or other restraints. — Also termed constitutional monarchy.

moneta (mə-nee-tə), n. [Latin] Money.

monetarium (mon-ə-tay-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin “mintage”] Hist. 1. The right to coin money; mintage. 2. A tribute paid by a tenant to persuade a lord not to change coinage.

monetarism (mon-i-tə-riz-əm). An economic theory claiming that the money supply is the basic influence on the economy. • The theory was originated by Milton Friedman in the late 1960s.

monetary, adj. 1. Of or relating to money <monetary value> <monetary damages>. 2. Financial <monetary services> <monetary investments>.

monetary bequest. See pecuniary bequest under BEQUEST.

money. (14c) 1. The medium of exchange authorized or adopted by a government as part of its currency; esp. domestic currency <coins and currency are money>. UCC § 1-201(24). 2. Assets that can be easily converted to cash <demand deposits are money>. 3. Capital that is invested or traded as a commodity <the money market>. 4. (pl.) Funds; sums of money <investment moneys>. — Also spelled (in sense 4) monies. See MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE; LEGAL TENDER.

current money. Money that circulates throughout a country; currency.

e-money. Money or a money substitute that is transformed into information stored on a computer or computer chip so that it can be transferred over information systems such as the Internet. Cf. e-check under CHECK. — Also termed digital cash; electronic cash; electronic currency; Internet scrip; on-line scrip.

fiat money. Paper currency not backed by gold or silver. — Also termed flat money.

hard money. 1. Coined money, in contrast to paper currency. 2. Cash.

- lawful money. Money that is legal tender for the payment of debts.
- paper money. Paper documents that circulate as currency; bills drawn by a government against its own credit.
- real money. 1. Money that has metallic or other intrinsic value, as distinguished from paper currency, checks, and drafts. 2. Current cash, as opposed to money on account.
- money bequest. See pecuniary bequest under BEQUEST.
- money bill. See revenue bill under BILL (3).
- money broker. See BROKER.
- money changer. One whose primary business is exchanging currencies.
- money claim. Hist. Under the English Judicature Act of 1875, money claimed as damages, as for breaches of contract and rent arrearages.
- money count. See COUNT.
- money demand. (1821) A claim for a fixed, liquidated sum, as opposed to a damage claim that must be assessed by a jury. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 200.]
- moneyed capital. See CAPITAL.
- moneyed corporation. See CORPORATION.
- money had and received. See action for money had and received under ACTION (4).
- money judgment. See JUDGMENT.
- money land. Money held in a trust providing for its conversion into land.
- money-laundering, n. (1974) The act of transferring illegally obtained money through legitimate people or accounts so that its original source cannot be traced. • Money-laundering is a federal crime. 18 USCA § 1956. It is also addressed by state governments, e.g., through the Uniform Money Services Act. Because some money-laundering is conducted across national borders, enforcement of money-laundering laws often requires international cooperation, fostered by organizations such as Interpol. [Cases: United States ⇨ 34.]
- money made. A sheriff's return on a writ of execution signifying that the sum stated on the writ was collected. [Cases: Execution ⇨ 335.]
- money market. See MARKET.
- money-market account. An interest-bearing account at a bank or other financial institution. • Such an account usu. pays interest competitive with money-market funds but allows a limited number of transactions per month. See money market under MARKET.
- money-market fund. See MUTUAL FUND.
- money order. (1802) A negotiable draft issued by an authorized entity (such as a bank, telegraph company, post office, etc.) to a purchaser, in lieu of a check to be used to pay a debt or otherwise transmit funds upon the credit of the issuer. [Cases: Postal Service ⇨ 18.]
- money paid. See action for money paid under ACTION (4).
- money-purchase plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.
- money scrivener. A money broker; one who obtains money for mortgages or other loans.
- money service business, n. A nonbank entity that provides mechanisms for people to make payments or to obtain currency or cash in exchange for payment instruments. • Money service businesses do not accept deposits or make loans. They include money transmitters, payment instrument sellers, stored-value providers, check cashers, and currency exchangers. — Also termed nonbank financial institution; nondepository provider of financial services.
- money supply. The total amount of money in circulation in the economy. See M1; M2; M3.
- monger (mɒŋ-gər). Archaic. A seller of goods; a dealer <moneymonger>.
- monier (moh-nyair or mən-ee-ər), n. [fr. Law Latin monetarius "a moneyer"] Hist. 1. A minister of the mint. 2. A banker; a dealer in money. — Also spelled moneyer.
- monies. See MONEY (4).
- moniment. Archaic. A memorial; a monument.
- monition (mə-nish-ən), n. (14c) 1. Generally, a warning or caution; ADMONITION. 2. Civil & maritime law. A summons to appear in court as a defendant or to answer contempt charges. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 44, 46; Contempt ⇨ 55.] 3. Eccles. law. A formal notice from a bishop demanding that an offense within the clergy be corrected or avoided. — monish (mon-ish), vb. — monitory (mon-ə-tor-ee), adj.
- monitory letter. Eccles. law. Admonitory communications sent from an ecclesiastical judge to staff members in response to reported abuses or scandals.
- monocracy (mə-nok-rə-see). A government by one person.
- monocrat (mon-ə-krat). A monarch who governs alone.
- monogamy (mə-nog-ə-mee), n. (18c) 1. The custom prevalent in most modern cultures restricting a person to one spouse at a time. 2. The fact of being married to only one spouse. Cf. BIGAMY; POLYGAMY. — monogamous, adj. — monogamist, n.
- monomachy (mə-nom-ə-kee). Hist. See DUEL (2).
- monomania (mon-ə-may-nee-ə). (1823) Insanity about some particular subject or class of subjects, usu. manifested by a single insane delusion. • A will made by someone suffering from this condition is usu. held valid unless the evidence shows that particular provisions in the will were influenced by the insane delusion. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 3.1.] — monomaniacal, adj. — monomaniac, n.
- monopolist (mə-nop-ə-list), n. 1. One who has a monopoly; specif., a seller or combination of sellers who can alter the price of a product in the market by changing the quantity sold. • By reducing output, a monopolist can raise the price above the cost of supplying the market. 2. A proponent of a monopoly.

monopolium (mon-ə-poh-lee-əm). [Latin fr. Greek monopolion "a selling alone"] Hist. The sole power of sale; a monopoly.

monopolization, n. (18c) The act or process of obtaining a monopoly. • In federal antitrust law, monopolization is an offense with two elements: (1) the possession of monopoly power — that is, the power to fix prices and exclude competitors — within the relevant market, and (2) the willful acquisition or maintenance of that power, as distinguished from growth or development as a consequence of a superior product, business acumen, or historical accident. United States v. Grinnell Corp., 384 U.S. 563, 86 S.Ct. 1698 (1966). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨619.] — monopolize, vb.

attempted monopolization. The effort to monopolize any part of interstate or foreign commerce, consisting in (1) a specific intent to control prices or destroy competition in the relevant market, (2) predatory or anticompetitive conduct, and (3) a "dangerous probability" of success in achieving monopoly in the relevant market.

monopoly, n. (16c) 1. Control or advantage obtained by one supplier or producer over the commercial market within a given region. Cf. OLIGOPOLY. 2. The market condition existing when only one economic entity produces a particular product or provides a particular service. • The term is now commonly applied also to situations that approach but do not strictly meet this definition. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨619.] — monopolistic, adj. — monopolist, n.

"[Ninety per cent] is enough to constitute a monopoly; it is doubtful whether sixty or sixty-four per cent is enough; and certainly thirty-three per cent is not." United States v. Aluminum Co. of Am., 148 F.2d 416, 424 (2d Cir. 1945) (Hand, J.).

bilateral monopoly. A hypothetical market condition in which there is only one buyer and one seller, resulting in transactional delays because either party can hold out for a better deal without fearing that the other party will turn to a third party.

legal monopoly. The exclusive right granted by government to business to provide utility services that are, natural monopoly. A monopoly resulting from a circumstance over which the monopolist has no power, as when the market for a product is so limited that only one plant is needed to meet demand.

3. Patents. The exclusive right of a patentee to make, use, sell, offer for sale, or import an invention for a certain period of time, subject to the rights of the owners of other patents that would be infringed. [Cases: Patents ⇨185.]

"[T]he statute of monopolies, 21 Jac. 1. c. 3, allows a royal patent of privilege to be granted for fourteen years to any inventor of a new manufacture, for the sole working or making of the same; by virtue whereof a temporary property becomes vested in the patentee." William Blackstone, 2 Commentaries on the Laws of England 407 (1766).

monopoly leveraging. A theory of liability holding that a party violates the antitrust laws when it exploits its monopoly power in one market to gain a competitive advantage in another market.

monopoly power. The power to control prices or to exclude competition. • The size of the market share is a primary determinant of whether monopoly power exists. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨641.]

monopsony (mə-nop-sə-nee), n. (1933) A market situation in which one buyer controls the market. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨641.] — monopsonistic, adj.

"Monopsony is often thought of as the flip side of monopoly. A monopolist is a seller with no rivals; a monopsonist is a buyer with no rivals. A monopolist has power over price exercised by limiting output. A monopsonist also has power over price, but this power is exercised by limiting aggregate purchases. Monopsony injures efficient allocation by reducing the quantity of the input product or service below the efficient level." Lawrence A. Sullivan & Warren S. Grimes, The Law of Antitrust: An Integrated Handbook 137-38 (2000).

Monroe Doctrine. The principle that the United States will allow no intervention or domination in the Western Hemisphere by any non-American nation. • This principle, which has some recognition in international law (though not as a formal doctrine), was first announced by President James Monroe in 1823.

"The Monroe doctrine is a policy which the United States has followed in her own interest more or less consistently for more than a century, and in itself is not contrary to international law, though possible applications of it might easily be so. But it certainly is not a rule of international law. It is comparable to policies such as the 'balance of power' in Europe, or the British policies of maintaining the independence of Belgium or the security of our sea-routes to the East, or the former Japanese claim to something like a paramount influence over developments in the Far East. Apart from other objections, it is impossible to regard as a rule of law a doctrine which the United States claims the sole right to interpret, which she interprets in different senses at different times, and which she applies only as and when she chooses. Nor is the doctrine, as Article 21 of the Covenant described it, a 'regional understanding', for the other states of the region concerned, that is to say, the Continent of America, have never been parties to it and indeed have often resented it." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 314 (5th ed. 1955).

monstrans de droit (mon-strənz də droyt). [Law French] Hist. A manifestation of right as a method of obtaining restitution from the Crown. • It was replaced by the writ of right. Currently, restitution is obtained by an ordinary action against the government.

monstrans de faits (mon-strənz də fay[ts]). [Law French] Hist. A showing of deeds; a profert.

monstraverunt (mon-strə-veer-ənt). [Latin "they have showed"] Hist. A writ of relief for tenants of ancient demesne who were distrained by their lord to do more than the tenure required. — Also termed writ of monstraverunt.

"The little writ serves the turn of a man who claims land according to the custom of the manor; but the tenants of whom we are speaking are protected, and protected collectively, against any increase of their services. This is very plain when the manor is in the hands of a mesne lord. If he attempts to increase the customary services, some of the tenants, acting on behalf of all, will go to the royal chancery and obtain a writ against him. Such a writ begins with the word Monstraverunt. The king addresses the lord: — 'A, B and C, men of your manor of X, which is of the ancient demesne of the crown of England, have shown us that you exact from them other customs and services than those which they owe, and which their ancestors did in the time when that manor was in the hands of our predecessors, kings of England; therefore we command you to cease from such exactions, otherwise we shall order our sheriff to interfere.'" 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 388 (2d ed. 1898).

montes pietatis (mon-teez pi-ə-tay-tis). [Latin "mountains of piety"] Hist. Institutions established to lend money upon pledges of goods.

Montevideo Treaty. Copyright. An 1889 copyright treaty among Western Hemisphere nations, based on the Berne Convention but affording less copyright protection.

month. (18c) (bef. 12c) 1. One of the twelve periods of time in which the calendar is divided <the month of March>. — Also termed calendar month; civil month. [Cases: Time ↻5.] 2. Any time period approximating 30 days <due one month from today>. 3. At common law, a period of 28 days; the period of one revolution of the moon . — Also termed lunar month. 4. One-twelfth of a tropical year; the time it takes the sun to pass through one sign of the zodiac, usu. approximating 30 days  — Also termed solar month.

month-to-month lease. See LEASE.

month-to-month tenancy. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

Montreal Agreement. A private agreement, signed by most international airlines, waiving both the Warsaw Convention's limitation on liability for death and personal-injury cases (currently about $20,000) and the airline's due-care defenses, raising the liability limit per passenger to $75,000, and providing for absolute liability on the part of the carrier (in the absence of passenger negligence) for all flights originating, stopping, or terminating in the United States. • The Montreal Agreement was the result of negotiations in 1965 and 1966 following the United States' denunciation of the Warsaw Convention, based primarily on its low liability limits. — Also termed Agreement Relating to Liability Limitation of the Warsaw Convention and the Hague Protocol. [Cases: Carriers ↻307; Treaties ↻8.]

monument, n. (15c) 1. A written document or record, esp. a legal one. 2. Any natural or artificial object that is fixed permanently in land and referred to in a legal description of the land. [Cases: Boundaries ↻4, 5.] — monumental, adj.

mural monument. A monument set into or otherwise made part of a wall.

natural monument. A nonartificial permanent thing on land, such as a tree, river, or beach. — Also termed natural object. [Cases: Boundaries ↻4.]

Moody's Investor's Service. An investment-analysis and advisory service. • Moody's rates the financial strength of businesses from Aaa (strongest) to Aa, A, Baa, and so on to C. The grade may also be modified with a 1, 2, or 3 according to the business's relative strength among similar companies. — Often shortened to Moody's.

moonlighting. (1957) The fact or practice of working at a second job after the hours of a regular job. — Also termed dual employment; multiple job-holding.

moonshine. (18c) Slang. A distilled alcoholic beverage, esp. whiskey, that is illegally manufactured. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ↻137.]

moorage. 1. An act of mooring a vessel at a wharf. 2. A mooring charge. [Cases: Wharves ↻15.]

moored in safety. Marine insurance. (Of a vessel) located in a usual place for landing or loading cargo, free from any imminent peril insured against. [Cases: Insurance ↻2214.]

moot, adj. (16c) 1. Archaic. Open to argument; debatable. 2. Having no practical significance; hypothetical or academic <the question on appeal became moot once the parties settled their case>. — mootness, n.

moot, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. Archaic. To raise or bring forward (a point or question) for discussion. 2. To render (a question) moot or of no practical significance.

moot case. A matter in which a controversy no longer exists; a case that presents only an abstract question that does not arise from existing facts or rights. [Cases: Action ↻6; Federal Courts ↻12.1.]

moot court. (18c) 1. A fictitious court held usu. in law schools to argue moot or hypothetical cases, esp. at the appellate level. 2. A practice session for an appellate argument in which a lawyer presents the argument to other lawyers, who first act as judges by asking questions and who later provide criticism on the argument. — Also termed practice court. Cf. MOCK TRIAL.

moot man. Hist. A person who argued cases in the Inns of Court.

mootness doctrine. (1963) The principle that American courts will not decide moot cases — that is, cases in which there is no longer any actual controversy. Cf. RIPENESS. [Cases: Action ⇨ 6; Appeal and Error ⇨ 781; Federal Courts ⇨ 12.1.]

mora (mor-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. Willful delay or default in fulfilling a legal obligation. • A creditor or debtor in mora could be required to pay interest on any money owed.

"The word mora means delay or default. In its technical sense it means a culpable delay in making or accepting performance. . . . The definition includes both mora debitoris and mora creditoris. In French law and other civil law systems mora debitoris seems (sometimes, if not always) to occur as a mean term between failure to perform a duty timeously and liability for breach. . . . Mora usually attaches to a debtor, but it may also attach to a creditor who fails to accept performance duly tendered. . . ." R.W. Lee, An Introduction to Roman-Dutch Law 445 (4th ed. 1946).

"Mora. This was wrongful failure to discharge a legal obligation on demand made at a fitting time and place. It must be wilful: failure to appear, by mistake, or in a bona fide belief that there was no obligatio, or doubt about it, or by mishap, did not suffice to put a debtor in mora." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 338 (2d ed. 1939).

mora (mor-ə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A moor; unprofitable ground.

moral absolutism. The view that a person's action can always properly be seen as right or wrong, regardless of the situation or the consequences. — Also termed ethical absolutism; objective ethics. Cf. MORAL RELATIVISM.

moral certainty. (17c) Absolute certainty. • Moral certainty is not required to sustain a criminal conviction. See REASONABLE DOUBT; proof beyond a reasonable doubt under PROOF. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 561(1).]

moral consideration. See good consideration (1) under CONSIDERATION (1).

moral depravity. See MORAL TURPITUDE (1).

moral duty. See DUTY (1).

moral evidence. See EVIDENCE.

moral fraud. See actual fraud under FRAUD.

moral hazard. See HAZARD (2).

morality. (14c) 1. Conformity with recognized rules of correct conduct. 2. The character of being virtuous, esp. in sexual matters.

"[T]he terms 'morality' and 'immorality' . . . are understood to have a sexual connotation. In fact, the terms 'ethics' and 'morals' are no longer interchangeable in everyday speech. A governmental official arraigned on a 'morals charge' will be accused of something quite different from one accused of an 'ethics violation.'" William P. Golding, Philosophy of Law 55 (1975).

3. A system of duties; ethics.

private morality. (18c) A person's ideals, character, and private conduct, which are not valid governmental concerns if the individual is to be considered sovereign over body and mind and if the need to protect the individual's physical or moral well-being is insufficient to justify governmental intrusion. • In his essay On Liberty (1859), John Stuart Mill distinguished between conduct or ideals that affect only the individual from conduct that may do harm to others. Mill argued that governmental intrusion is justified only to prevent harm to others, not to influence a person's private morality.

public morality. (18c) 1. The ideals or general moral beliefs of a society. 2. The ideals or actions of an individual to the extent that they affect others.

moral law. (15c) A collection of principles defining right and wrong conduct; a standard to which an action must conform to be right or virtuous.

"It quite often happens that the moral law disapproves of something which the secular permits as a concession to human frailty." Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 78 (1968).

moral necessity. See NECESSITY.

moral person. See artificial person under PERSON (3).

moral relativism. The view that there are no absolute or constant standards of right and wrong. — Also termed ethical relativism; subjective ethics. Cf. MORAL ABSOLUTISM.

moral right. (usu. pl.) Copyright. The right of an author or artist, based on natural-law principles, to guarantee the integrity of a creation despite any copyright or property-law right of its owner. • Moral rights include rights of (1) attribution (also termed "paternity"): the right to be given credit and to claim credit for a work, and to deny credit if the work is changed; (2) integrity: the right to ensure that the work is not changed without the artist's consent; (3) publication: the right not to reveal a work before its creator is satisfied with it; and (4) retraction: the right to renounce a work and withdraw it from sale or display. Moral rights are recognized by law in much of Europe. Limited moral rights are recognized in the United States in 17 USCA § 106A. Cf. INTEGRITY RIGHT; ATTRIBUTION RIGHT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 101.]

"The recognition of moral rights is founded in the notion that works of art belong to their creators in a way that transcends the sale or transfer of the work to a new owner, because the artist has imbued the work with her personality." Eric M. Brooks, "Titled" Justice: Site-Specific Art and Moral Rights After U.S. Adherence to the Berne Convention, 77 Cal. L. Rev. 1431, 1434 (1989).

"Moral rights protect an author's non-pecuniary or non-economic interests. The 1988 [Copyright] Act provides authors and directors with the right to be named when a work is copied or communicated (the right of attribution), the right not to be named as the author of a work which one did not create (the right to object against false attribution), and the right to control the form of the work (the right of integrity)." Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 233 (2001).

moral turpitude. (17c) 1. Conduct that is contrary to justice, honesty, or morality. • In the area of legal ethics, offenses involving moral turpitude — such as fraud or breach of trust — traditionally make a person unfit to practice law. — Also termed moral depravity. 2. Military law. Any conduct for which the applicable punishment is a dishonorable discharge or confinement not less than one year.

moral-wrong doctrine. (1962) The doctrine that if a wrongdoer acts on a mistaken understanding of the facts, the law will not exempt the wrongdoer from culpability when, if the facts had been as the actor believed them to be, his or her conduct would nevertheless be immoral. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷33.]

morandae solutionis causa (mə-ran-dee sə-loo-shee-oh-nis kaw-zə). [Latin] Hist. For the purpose of delaying payment.

moratorium (mɔr-ə-tor-ee-əm). (1875) 1. An authorized postponement, usu. a lengthy one, in the deadline for paying a debt or performing an obligation. 2. The period of this delay. 3. The suspension of a specific activity. Pl. moratoriums, moratoria.

moratory (mɔr-ə-tor-ee), adj. (1891) Of or relating to a delay; esp. of or relating to a moratorium.

moratory damages. See DAMAGES.

moratory interest. See prejudgment interest under INTEREST (3).

more burgi (mɔr-ee bər-jī). [Law Latin] Hist. According to the custom in burgage-tenure. See BURGAGE-TENURE (2).

more or less. (Of a quantity) larger or smaller. • This phrase often appears in deeds <the property contains 120 acres, more or less> and sometimes in contracts <seller's wheat field will produce 50 bushels per acre, more or less>. It qualifies a good-faith representation of quantity. By using the phrase, the parties mutually acknowledge that the true circumstances may differ from what the parties believe they are when the contract is made, and accept a risk that the true quantity will be slightly different. When the qualifying phrase is present, neither party can recover for a surplus or deficiency. [Cases: Deeds ↷38(1); Sales ↷71; Vendor and Purchaser ↷65.]

morgangiva (mɔr-gan-jə-və), n. [Law Latin “morning gift” from Old Norse] Hist. A gift made to the bride on the morning after the wedding; a type of dowry. — Also spelled morgangina.

Morgan Nick Alert. See AMBER ALERT.

Morgan presumption. (1948) A presumption that shifts the burden of proof by requiring the person against whom it operates to produce sufficient evidence to outweigh the evidence that supports the presumed fact, as in requiring a criminal defendant who was arrested while in possession of an illegal substance — and is thereby presumed to have knowingly possessed it — to produce sufficient evidence to entitle the jury to find that the defendant's evidence outweighs the evidence of knowing possession. See Edmund M. Morgan, Instructing the Jury Upon Presumptions and Burdens of Proof, 47 Harv. L. Rev. 59, 82–83 (1933). Cf. THAYER PRESUMPTION. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷68; Criminal Law ↷324; Evidence ↷85.]

mors (morz), n. [Latin “death”] Roman law. 1. Death. 2. The punishment of death.

morsellum terrae (mɔr-sel-əm ter-ee). [Law Latin “a morsel of earth”] Hist. A small parcel of land.

morsel of execration. See ordeal of the morsel under ORDEAL.

mors naturalis (mɔrz nach-ə-ray-lis). See natural death under DEATH.

mortality factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, an estimate of the average number of deaths that will occur each year at each specific age, calculated by using an actuarial table. • The mortality factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See ACTUARIAL TABLE; PREMIUM RATE. Cf. INTEREST FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance ↷1542(1).]

mortality table. See ACTUARIAL TABLE.

mort d'ancestor (mɔr[t] dan-ses-tər). [Law French “death of an ancestor”] Hist. An assize founded on the death of an ancestor. — Also termed (in Scots law) brieve of mortancestry.

“Another of the petty assizes was that of mort d'ancestor, founded on the Assize of Northampton 1176. The question in this assize was whether the plaintiff's father (or other close ancestor) had been seised in fee — that is, of an inheritable estate — on the day he died, and whether the plaintiff was his next heir; if both questions were answered in the affirmative, the plaintiff was entitled to be put in seisin.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 267–68 (3d ed. 1990).

mortgage (mɔr-gij), n. (15c) 1. A conveyance of title to property that is given as security for the payment of a debt or the performance of a duty and that will become void upon payment or performance according to the stipulated terms. — Also termed (archaically) dead pledge. [Cases: Mortgages ↷1.] 2. A lien against property that is granted to secure an obligation (such as a debt) and that is extinguished upon payment or performance according to stipulated terms. [Cases: Mortgages ↷145.] 3. An instrument (such as a deed or contract) specifying the terms of such a transaction. 4. Loosely, the loan on which such a transaction is based. 5. The mortgagee's rights conferred by such a transaction. 6. Loosely, any real-property security transaction, including a deed of trust. — Abbr. M. — mortgage, vb.

"The chief distinction between a mortgage and a pledge is that by a mortgage the general title is transferred to the mortgagee, subject to be revested by performance of the condition; while by a pledge the pledgor retains the general title in himself, and parts with the possession for a special purpose. By a mortgage the title is transferred; by a pledge, the possession." Leonard A. Jones, A Treatise on the Law of Mortgages § 4, at 5-6 (5th ed. 1908).

adjustable-rate mortgage. A mortgage in which the lender can periodically adjust the mortgage's interest rate in accordance with fluctuations in some external market index. — Abbr. ARM. — Also termed variable-rate mortgage; flexible-rate mortgage. Cf. exploding adjustable-rate mortgage.

all-inclusive mortgage. See wraparound mortgage.

amortized mortgage. A mortgage in which the mortgagor pays the interest as well as a portion of the principal in the periodic payment. • At maturity, the periodic payments will have completely repaid the loan. — Also termed self-liquidating mortgage. See AMORTIZATION (1). Cf. straight mortgage.

balloon-payment mortgage. A mortgage requiring periodic payments for a specified time and a lump-sum payment of the outstanding balance at maturity.

blanket mortgage. A mortgage covering two or more properties that are pledged to support a debt.

bulk mortgage. 1. A mortgage of personal property in bulk; a pledge of an aggregate of goods in one location. 2. A mortgage of more than one real-estate parcel.

chattel mortgage (chat-əl). A mortgage on goods purchased on installment, whereby the seller transfers title to the buyer but retains a lien securing the unpaid balance. • Chattel mortgages have generally been replaced by security agreements, which are governed by Article 9 of the UCC. Cf. retail installment contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Chattel Mortgages ↪ 1.]

closed-end mortgage. A mortgage that does not permit either prepayment or additional borrowing against the collateral. Cf. open-end mortgage. — Also termed closed mortgage.

closed mortgage. See closed-end mortgage.

collateral mortgage. Civil law. A mortgage securing a promissory note pledged as collateral security for a principal obligation.

common-law mortgage. See deed of trust under DEED.

consolidated mortgage. A mortgage created by combining two or more mortgages.

construction mortgage. A mortgage used to finance a construction project.

contingent-interest mortgage. A mortgage whose interest rate is directly related to the economic performance of the pledged property.

conventional mortgage. A mortgage, not backed by government insurance, by which the borrower transfers a lien or title to the lending bank or other financial institution. • These mortgages, which feature a fixed periodic payment of principal and interest throughout the mortgage term, are typically used for home financing. — Also termed conventional loan.

direct-reduction mortgage. An amortized mortgage in which the principal and interest payments are paid at the same time — usu. monthly in equal amounts — with interest being computed on the remaining balance. — Abbr. DRM.

dry mortgage. A mortgage that creates a lien on property but does not impose on the mortgagor any personal liability for any amount that exceeds the value of the premises.

equitable mortgage. A transaction that has the intent but not the form of a mortgage, and that a court of equity will treat as a mortgage. Cf. technical mortgage.

"Courts of equity are not governed by the same principles as courts of law in determining whether a mortgage has been created, and generally, whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security, or an offer or attempt to pledge land as security for a debtor liability, equity will treat it as a mortgage, without regard to the form it may assume, or the name the parties may choose to give it. The threshold issue in an action seeking imposition of an equitable mortgage is whether the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law. In applying the doctrine of equitable mortgages doubts are resolved in favor of the transaction being a mortgage." 59 C.J.S. Mortgages § 12, at 62 (1998).

exploding adjustable-rate mortgage. An adjustable-rate mortgage for which the lender resets the interest rate so high that the borrower can no longer make payments. — Sometimes shortened to exploding ARM. Cf. adjustable-rate mortgage.

extended first mortgage. See wraparound mortgage.

FHA mortgage. A mortgage that is insured fully or partially by the Federal Housing Administration.

first mortgage. A mortgage that is senior to all other mortgages on the same property. [Cases: Mortgages ↪ 151.]

fixed-rate mortgage. A mortgage with an interest rate that remains the same over the life of the mortgage regardless of market conditions. — Abbr. FRM.

flexible-rate mortgage. 1. See adjustable-rate mortgage. 2. See renegotiable-rate mortgage.

flip mortgage. A graduated-payment mortgage allowing the borrower to place all or some of the down payment in a savings account and to use the principal and interest to supplement lower mortgage payments in the loan's early years.

future-advances mortgage. A mortgage in which part of the loan proceeds will not be paid until a future date. [Cases: Mortgages ↪ 16, 116.]

general mortgage. Civil law. A blanket mortgage against all the mortgagor's present and future property. La. Civ. Code art. 3285.

graduated mortgage. See graduated-payment mortgage.

graduated-payment adjustable-rate mortgage. A mortgage combining features of the graduated-payment mortgage and the adjustable-rate mortgage. — Abbr. GPARM. — Also termed graduated mortgage.

graduated-payment mortgage. A mortgage whose initial payments are lower than its later payments. ● The payments are intended to gradually increase, as the borrower's income increases over time.

growing-equity mortgage. A mortgage that is fully amortized over a significantly shorter term than the traditional 25- to 30-year mortgage, with increasing payments each year. — Abbr. GEM.

indemnity mortgage. See deed of trust under DEED.

interest-only mortgage. A balloon-payment mortgage on which the borrower must at first make only interest payments, but must make a lump-sum payment of the full principal at maturity. — Abbr. IO mortgage. — Also termed standing mortgage; straight-term mortgage.

joint mortgage. A mortgage given to two or more mortgagees jointly.

judicial mortgage. Civil law. A judgment lien created by a recorded legal judgment. [Cases: Judgment ⇨ 752-766.]

jumbo mortgage. A mortgage loan in a principal amount that exceeds the dollar limits for a government guarantee.

junior mortgage. A mortgage that is subordinate to another mortgage on the same property. — Also termed puisne mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 151.]

leasehold mortgage. A mortgage secured by a lessee's leasehold interest.

legal mortgage. Civil law. A creditor's mortgage arising by operation of law on the debtor's property. — Also termed tacit mortgage.

open-end mortgage. A mortgage that allows the mortgagor to borrow additional funds against the same property. Cf. closed-end mortgage.

package mortgage. A mortgage that includes both real and incidental personal property, such as a refrigerator or stove.

participation mortgage. 1. A mortgage that permits the lender to receive profits of the venture in addition to the normal interest payments. 2. A mortgage held by more than one lender.

price-level-adjusted mortgage. A mortgage with a fixed interest rate but the principal balance of which is adjusted to reflect inflation. — Abbr. PLAM.

puisne mortgage. See junior mortgage.

purchase-money mortgage. A mortgage that a buyer gives the seller, when the property is conveyed, to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price. — Abbr. PMM. See SECURITY AGREEMENT. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 1, 115.]

renegotiable-rate mortgage. A government-sponsored mortgage that requires the mortgagee to renegotiate its terms every three to five years, based on market conditions. — Also termed flexible-rate mortgage; rollover mortgage.

reverse annuity mortgage. A mortgage in which the lender disburses money over a long period to provide regular income to the (usu. elderly) borrower, and in which the loan is repaid in a lump sum when the borrower dies or when the property is sold. — Abbr. RAM. — Also termed reverse mortgage.

rollover mortgage. See renegotiable-rate mortgage.

second mortgage. A mortgage that is junior to a first mortgage on the same property, but that is senior to any later mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 151.]

"A landowner who already holds land subject to a mortgage may wish to hypothecate his equity. He does this by taking out a 'second mortgage.' Should the mortgagee default in his obligation on the first mortgage, the first mortgagee may foreclose. If there is a deficiency upon sale, the second mortgagee loses his security in the equity because there is no equity. If the mortgagee does not default on the first mortgage, but does on the second, the second mortgagee can foreclose on the mortgagor's equity. Such a foreclosure would not affect the first mortgagee's rights." Edward H. Rabin, Fundamentals of Modern Real Property Law 1087 (1974).

self-liquidating mortgage. See amortized mortgage.

senior mortgage. A mortgage that has priority over another mortgage (a junior mortgage) on the same property. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 151.]

shared-appreciation mortgage. A mortgage giving the lender the right to recover (as contingent interest) an agreed percentage of the property's appreciation in value when it is sold or at some other specified, future date. — Abbr. SAM.

shared-equity mortgage. A mortgage in which the lender shares in the profits from the property's resale. ● The lender must usu. first purchase a portion of the property's equity by providing a portion of the down payment.

special mortgage. Civil law. A mortgage burdening only particular, specified property of the mortgagor. La. Civ. Code art. 3285.

standing mortgage. See interest-only mortgage.

straight mortgage. A mortgage in which the mortgagor is obligated to pay interest during the mortgage term along with a final payment of principal at the end of the term. Cf. amortized mortgage.

straight-term mortgage. See interest-only mortgage.

submortgage. A mortgage created when a person holding a mortgage as security for a loan procures another loan from a third party and pledges the mortgage as security; a loan to a mortgagee who puts up the mortgage as collateral or security for the loan.

tacit mortgage. See legal mortgage.

technical mortgage. A traditional, formal mortgage, as distinguished from an instrument having the character of an equitable mortgage. Cf. equitable mortgage.

VA mortgage. A veteran's mortgage that is guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.

variable-rate mortgage. See adjustable-rate mortgage.

Welsh mortgage. A type of mortgage, formerly common in Wales and Ireland, by which the mortgagor, without promising to pay the debt, transfers title and possession of the property to the mortgagee, who takes the rents and profits and applies them to the interest, often with a stipulation that any surplus will reduce the principal. • The mortgagee cannot compel the mortgagor to redeem, and cannot foreclose the right to redeem, because no time is fixed for payment. The mortgagor is never in default, but may redeem at any time.

wraparound mortgage. A second mortgage issued when a lender assumes the payments on the borrower's low-interest first mortgage (usu. issued through a different lender) and lends additional funds. • Such a mortgage covers both the outstanding balance of the first mortgage and the additional funds loaned. 12 CFR § 226.17 cmt. 6. — Also termed extended first mortgage; all-inclusive mortgage.

zero-rate mortgage. A mortgage with a large down payment but no interest payments, with the balance paid in equal installments.

mortgage-backed security. See SECURITY.

mortgage banker. An individual or organization that originates real-estate loans for a fee, resells them to other parties, and services the monthly payments.

mortgage bond. See BOND (3).

mortgage certificate. (1843) A document evidencing part ownership of a mortgage.

mortgage clause. An insurance-policy provision that protects the rights of a mortgagee when the insured property is subject to a mortgage. • Such a clause usu. provides that any insurance proceeds must be allocated between the named insured and the mortgagee "as their interests may appear." — Also termed mortgagee clause. See LOSS-PAYABLE CLAUSE; ATIMA. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 201.]

open mortgage clause. A mortgage clause that does not protect the mortgagee if the insured mortgagor does something to invalidate the policy (such as committing fraud). • This type of clause has been largely superseded by the mortgage-loss clause, which affords the mortgagee more protection. — Also termed simple mortgage clause. Cf. MORTGAGE-LOSS CLAUSE.

standard mortgage clause. A mortgage clause that protects the mortgagee's interest even if the insured mortgagor does something to invalidate the policy. • In effect, this clause creates a separate contract between the insurer and the mortgagee. — Also termed union mortgage clause.

mortgage commitment. (1939) A lender's written agreement with a borrower stating the terms on which it will lend money for the purchase of specified real property, usu. with a time limitation. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 211.]

mortgage company. A company that makes mortgage loans and then sells or assigns them to investors.

mortgage-contingency clause. (1965) A real-estate-sale provision that conditions the buyer's performance on obtaining a mortgage loan. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 79.]

mortgage discount. (1928) The difference between the mortgage principal and the amount the mortgage actually sells for; the up-front charge by a lender at a real-estate closing for the costs of financing. • Although usu. paid by the buyer, the discount is sometimes paid by the seller when required by law, as with a VA mortgage. — Also termed point; mortgage point; loan-brokerage fee; new-loan fee.

mortgagee (mor-gə-jeĕ). (16c) One to whom property is mortgaged; the mortgage creditor, or lender. — Also termed mortgage-holder. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 23.]

mortgagee in possession. (18c) A mortgagee who takes control of mortgaged land by agreement with the mortgagor, usu. upon default of the loan secured by the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 187.]

mortgagee clause. See MORTGAGE CLAUSE.

mortgagee policy. A title-insurance policy that covers only the mortgagee's title and not the owner's title. Cf. OWNER'S POLICY. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 201.]

mortgage foreclosure. See FORECLOSURE.

mortgage-guarantee insurance. Insurance provided by the Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Company to mortgage lenders that grant mortgages to parties having less than a 20% down payment. • The cost of the insurance is included in the closing costs. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 201.]

mortgage insurance. See INSURANCE.

mortgage lien. See LIEN.

mortgage loan. See LOAN.

mortgage-loss clause. A mortgage clause providing that title insurance will not be invalidated by the mortgagor's acts. • Thus, even if the mortgagor does an act that would otherwise make the policy void, the act merely voids the policy as against the mortgagor, but it remains in full force for the benefit of the mortgagee. — Also termed New York standard clause; union-loss clause. Cf.

open mortgage clause under MORTGAGE CLAUSE. [Cases: Mortgages ↷201.]

mortgage market. The conditions that provide the demand for new mortgage loans and the later resale of those loans in the secondary mortgage market.

primary mortgage market. The national market in which mortgages are originated.

secondary mortgage market. The national market in which existing mortgages are bought and sold, usu. on a package basis.

mortgage point. 1. See POINT (3). 2. See MORTGAGE DISCOUNT.

mortgager. See MORTGAGOR.

mortgage servicing. The administration of a mortgage loan, including the collection of payments, release of liens, and payment of property insurance and taxes. • Servicing is usu. performed by the lender or the lender's agent, for a fee. [Cases: Mortgages ↷211.]

mortgage warehousing. An arrangement in which a mortgage company holds loans for later resale at a discount.

mortgaging out. The purchase of real property by financing 100% of the purchase price.

mortgagor (mor-gə-jor or mor-gə-jər). One who mortgages property; the mortgage-debtor, or borrower. — Also spelled mortgager; mortgageor. [Cases: Mortgages ↷23.]

mortification. (14c) The act of disposing of or contributing property for religious, charitable, or public purposes.

mortis causa (mor-tis kaw-zə). See gift causa mortis under GIFT.

mortmain (mort-mayn). [French “deadhand”] (15c) The condition of lands or tenements held in perpetuity by an ecclesiastical or other corporation. • Land alienated in mortmain is not inalienable, but it will never escheat or pass by inheritance (and thus no inheritance taxes will ever be paid) because a corporation does not die. See AMORTIZE (3); DEADHAND CONTROL. [Cases: Corporations ↷435; Religious Societies ↷15.]

mortmain statute. (1839) A law that limits gifts and other dispositions of land to corporations (esp. charitable ones) and that prohibits corporations from holding land in perpetuity. • In England, laws such as the Provisions of Westminster and Magna Carta essentially required the Crown's authorization before land could vest in a corporation. The object was to prevent lands from being held by religious corporations in perpetuity. Although this type of restriction was not generally part of the common law in the United States, it influenced the enactment of certain state laws restricting the amount of property that a corporation could hold for religious or charitable purposes. — Also termed mortmain act; statute of mortmain. [Cases: Corporations ↷434.]

mortuary. (16c) 1. A place where cadavers are prepared for burial; a place where dead bodies are held before burial. [Cases: Dead Bodies ↷2.] 2. A burial place. 3. Hist. A customary gift left by a deceased to a parish church for past tithes owed. — Also termed (in sense 3) soul scot.

mortuary table. See ACTUARIAL TABLE.

mortuum vadium (mor-choo-əm vay-dee-əm). See vadium mortuum under VADIUM.

mortuus (mor-choo-əs), adj. [Latin] Hist. 1. Dead. 2. A sheriff's return that the named party is dead.

mortuus civiliter (mor-choo-əs sə-vil-ə-tər). [Latin “civilly dead”] A person civilly dead, deprived of civil rights. See civil death under DEATH.

mortuus sine prole (mor-choo-əs si-nee proh-lee). [Latin] Dead without issue. — Abbr. m.s.p.

most favored nation. A treaty status granted to a nation, usu. in international trade, allowing it to enjoy the privileges that the other party accords to other nations under similar circumstances. • The primary effect of most-favored-nation status is lower trade tariffs. — Sometimes shortened to favored nation. Abbr. MFN. — Also termed most-favored-nation status. [Cases: Treaties ↷8.]

most-favored-nation clause. 1. A clause in an agreement between two nations providing that each will treat the other as well as it treats any other nation that is given preferential treatment. [Cases: Treaties ↷8.] 2. By extension, such a clause in any contract, but esp. an oil-and-gas contract. — Often shortened to favored-nation clause; MFN clause. — Also termed most-favored-nations clause. Cf. preferential tariff under TARIFF (2).

most-favored-nation status. See MOST FAVORED NATION.

most-favored-nation treatment. Intellectual property. The practice or policy of automatically and unconditionally granting any intellectual-property protection, advantage, favor, privilege, or immunity that by treaty is extended to nationals of any member country to the nationals of all member countries. • This treatment is incorporated into the TRIPs agreement. — Abbr. MFN treatment.

most-favored-tenant clause. (1962) A commercial-lease provision ensuring that the tenant will be given the benefit of any negotiating concessions given to other tenants.

most-significant-contacts test. See MOST-SIGNIFICANT-RELATIONSHIPS TEST.

most-significant-relationship test. (1968) Conflict of laws. The doctrine that, to determine the state law to apply to a dispute, the court should determine which state has the most substantial connection to the occurrence and the parties. • For example, in a tort case, the court should consider where the injury occurred, where the conduct that caused the injury occurred, the residence, place of business, or place of incorporation of the parties, and the place where the relationship between the parties, if any, is centered. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 145 (1971). In a case involving a contract, the court should consider where the contract was made, where the contract was negotiated, where the contract was to be performed, and the domicile, place of business, or place of incorporation of the parties. Id. § 188. — Also termed most-significant-contacts test. [Cases: Action ↷17.]

most suitable use. See highest and best use under USE (1).

most-suitable-use value. See optimal-use value under VALUE (2).

moteer (moh-ter). Hist. A customary payment or service made at the lord's court.

mother. (bef. 12c) A woman who has given birth to, provided the egg for, or legally adopted a child. • The term is sometimes interpreted as including a pregnant woman who has not yet given birth. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷1.] adoptive mother. See adoptive parent under PARENT.

biological mother. (1965) The woman who provides the egg that develops into an embryo. • With today's genetic-engineering techniques, the biological mother may not be the birth mother, but she is usu. the legal mother. — Also termed genetic mother; natural mother. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↷1.]

birth mother. (1958) The woman who carries an embryo during the gestational period and who delivers the child. • When a child is conceived through artificial insemination, the birth mother may not be the genetic or biological mother. And she may not be the legal mother. — Also termed gestational mother. See surrogate mother; natural mother; biological mother. [Cases: Child Custody ↷274.5; Child Support ↷63; Children Out-of-Wedlock ↷15; Parent and Child ↷20.]

de facto mother. See de facto parent under PARENT.

foster mother. See foster parent under PARENT.

genetic mother. See biological mother.

gestational mother. See birth mother.

godmother. See GODPARENT.

intentional mother. See intentional parent under PARENT.

natural mother. 1. See birth mother. 2. See biological mother.

psychological mother. See psychological parent under PARENT.

stepmother. (bef. 12c) The wife of one's father by a later marriage. [Cases: Child Custody ↷272; Parent and Child ↷14.]

surrogate mother. (1914) 1. A woman who carries out the gestational function and gives birth to a child

mother country. A colonizing nation; a colonial power. See COLONY.

Mother Hubbard clause. (1939) 1. A clause stating that a mortgage secures all the debts that the mortgagor may at any time owe to the mortgagee. — Also termed anaconda clause; dragnet clause. [Cases: Mortgages ↷14, 114, 121.] 2. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease protecting the lessee against errors in the description of the property by providing that the lease covers all the land owned by the lessor in the area. • A Mother Hubbard clause is sometimes combined with an after-acquired-title clause. — Also termed cover-all clause. 3. A court's written declaration that any relief not expressly granted in a specific ruling or judgment is denied. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷55, 73.1.] mother-in-law. (14c) The mother of a person's spouse.

motion. (18c) 1. A written or oral application requesting a court to make a specified ruling or order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷921–928; Motions ↷1.]

calendar motion. (1930) A motion relating to the time of a court appearance • Examples include motions to continue, motions to advance, and motions to reset. [Cases: Trial ↷9–16.]

contradictory motion. Civil law. A motion that is likely to be contested or that the nonmoving side should have an opportunity to contest. Cf. contradictory judgment under JUDGMENT.

cross-motion. A competing request for relief or orders similar to that requested by another party against the cross-moving party, such as a motion for summary judgment or for sanctions.

dilatory motion (dil-ə-tor-ee). (18c) 1. A motion made solely for the purpose of delay or obstruction. 2. A motion that delays the proceedings.

enumerated motion. Archaic. A motion directly related to the proceeding or the merits of the case.

ex parte motion (eks pahr-tee). (1831) A motion made to the court without notice to the adverse party; a motion that a court considers and rules on without hearing from all sides. — Also termed ex parte application. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷921; Motions ↷19.]

motion for reduction. Family law. A motion to lessen the amount of child-support payments. • This is a motion for resettlement. A request to clarify or correct the form of an order or judgment that does not correctly state the court's decision. • The motion cannot be used to request a substantial change to or amplification of the court's decision. [Cases: Motions ⇨ 49.]

motion of course. A party's request that the court may grant as a matter of routine, without investigating or inquiring further. [Cases: Motions ⇨ 19, 36.]

motion to modify. A post-final-decree motion asking the court to change one of its earlier orders; esp. a request to change child support or visitation. — Also termed complaint for modification; motion for modification. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨ 609; Child Support ⇨ 331; Divorce ⇨ 245; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 921; Motions ⇨ 58.]

omnibus motion. (1889) A motion that makes several requests or asks for multiple forms of relief. [Cases: Motions ⇨ 5.]

posttrial motion. (1889) A motion made after judgment is entered, such as a motion for new trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2368, 2605; New Trial ⇨ 124.]

show-cause motion. A motion filed with the court requesting that a litigant be required to appear and explain why that litigant has failed to comply with a legal requirement.

speaking motion. (1935) A motion that addresses matters not raised in the pleadings. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1834; Motions ⇨ 1, 2.]

special motion. (16c) A motion specifically requiring the court's discretion upon hearing, as distinguished from one granted as a matter of course. [Cases: Motions ⇨ 36.]

2. Parliamentary law. A proposal made in a meeting, in a form suitable for its consideration and action, that the meeting (or the organization for which the meeting is acting) take a certain action or view. • A motion may be a main motion or a secondary motion. A motion technically becomes a "question" when the chair states it for the meeting's consideration. But for most purposes, the parliamentary terms "motion" and "question" are interchangeable. Cf. REQUEST.

coexisting motion. Parliamentary law. A main motion, such as one raising a question of privilege, that is pending at the same time as another main motion of lower precedence.

immediately pending motion. The pending motion directly under consideration; the pending motion last stated by the chair and next in line for a vote. See pending motion; PRECEDENCE (4).

improper motion. A motion that is out of order. See OUT OF ORDER.

incidental main motion. A main motion that relates to a procedural rather than a substantive matter; an otherwise secondary motion, made when no main motion is pending.— Also termed procedural main motion; quasi-main motion; specific main motion. See main motion. Cf. original main motion.

incidental motion. A secondary motion that relates to the procedure under which other business is considered. See secondary motion.

main motion. A motion that brings business before a meeting. • A main motion may be an original main motion or an incidental main motion. — Also termed principal motion; proposition.

ordinary main motion. See original main motion.

original main motion. A main motion that relates to a substantive rather than a procedural matter; a main motion that is not an incidental main motion. — Also termed ordinary main motion; substantive main motion; substantive motion. See main motion. Cf. incidental main motion.

parliamentary motion. 1. Any motion that is not an original main motion — that is, any motion that is either a secondary motion or an incidental main motion. 2. A motion under parliamentary law; MOTION (2).

pending motion. A motion under consideration, even though other pending motions of higher rank may have taken precedence over it. Cf. immediately pending motion.

principal motion. See main motion.

privileged motion. A secondary motion that does not relate to other business, but rather to the organization, the meeting, its members, and their rights and privileges, and is thus entitled to prompt attention in preference over other pending business. See secondary motion; PRIVILEGE (6).

procedural main motion. See incidental main motion.

procedural motion. A motion that relates to the manner in which a meeting conducts its business, rather than to the business itself. • A procedural motion may be either an incidental motion (including an incidental main motion) or a privileged motion.

quasi-main motion. See incidental main motion.

restorative motion. A motion that renews consideration of a question already disposed of. — Also termed restoratory motion.

restoratory motion. See restorative motion.

secondary motion. A motion that does not itself bring business before the meeting, and is therefore in order when a main motion is pending. • A secondary motion may be either an incidental motion (although not an incidental main motion), a privileged motion, or a subsidiary motion. Cf. main motion.

specific main motion. See incidental main motion.

subsidiary motion. A secondary motion that directly affects the main motion's form or consideration. See secondary motion.

substantive main motion. See original main motion.

substantive motion. See original main motion.

motion for a directed verdict. See MOTION FOR DIRECTED VERDICT.

motion for a more definite statement. See MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT.

motion for a new trial. See MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

motion for a protective order. See MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER.

motion for directed verdict. (1904) A party's request that the court enter judgment in its favor before submitting the case to the jury because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary foundation on which a reasonable jury could find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the equivalent court paper is known as a motion for judgment as a matter of law. — Abbr. MDV. — Also termed motion for a directed verdict. See MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW; directed verdict under VERDICT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2121; Trial ↻167.]

motion for judgment as a matter of law. (1956) A party's request that the court enter a judgment in its favor before the case is submitted to the jury, or after a contrary jury verdict, because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis on which a jury could find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party may move for judgment as a matter of law anytime before the case has been submitted to the jury. This kind of motion was formerly known as a motion for directed verdict (and still is in many jurisdictions). If the motion is denied and the case is submitted to the jury, resulting in an unfavorable verdict, the motion may be renewed within ten days after entry of the judgment. This aspect of the motion replaces the court paper formerly known as a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2121, 2605; Judgment ↻199; Trial ↻167.]

motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. (1822) A party's request that the court enter a judgment in its favor despite the jury's contrary verdict because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a jury to find for the other party. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, this procedure has been replaced by the provision for a motion for judgment as a matter of law, which must be presented before the case has been submitted to the jury but can be reasserted if it is denied and the jury returns an unfavorable verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. — Also termed motion for j.n.o.v. See MOTION FOR JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2605; Judgment ↻199.]

motion for judgment of acquittal. (1923) A criminal defendant's request, at the close of the government's case or the close of all evidence, to be acquitted because there is no legally sufficient evidentiary basis on which

motion for judgment on the pleadings. (1923) A party's request that the court rule in its favor based on the pleadings on file, without accepting evidence, as when the outcome of the case rests on the court's interpretation of the law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1052; Pleading ↻342.]

motion for leave to appeal. (1874) A request that an appellate court review an interlocutory order that meets the standards of the collateral-order doctrine. — Abbr. MLA. See COLLATERAL-ORDER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↻358; Federal Courts ↻660.30.]

motion for more definite statement. (1904) A party's request that the court require an opponent to amend a vague or ambiguous pleading to which the party cannot reasonably be required to respond. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e). — Also termed motion for a more definite statement. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻957; Pleading ↻367.]

motion for new trial. (18c) A party's postjudgment request that the court vacate the judgment and order a new trial for such reasons as factually insufficient evidence, newly discovered evidence, and jury misconduct. • In many jurisdictions, this motion is required before a party can raise such a matter on appeal. — Also termed motion for a new trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻948; Federal Civil Procedure ↻2368; New Trial ↻124(1).]

motion for protective order. (1948) A party's request that the court protect it from potentially abusive action by the other party, usu. relating to discovery, as when one party seeks discovery of the other party's trade secrets. • A court will sometimes craft a protective order to protect one party's trade secrets by ordering that any secret information exchanged in discovery be used only for purposes of the pending suit and not be publicized. — Also termed motion for a protective

motion for relief from stay. See MOTION TO LIFT THE STAY.

motion for relief from the judgment. (1867) A party's request that the court correct a clerical mistake in the judgment — that is, a mistake that results in the judgment's incorrectly reflecting the court's intentions — or relieve the party from the judgment because of such matters as (1) inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, (2) newly discovered evidence that could not have been discovered through diligence in time for a motion for new trial, (3) the judgment's being the result of fraud, misrepresentation, or misconduct by the other party, or (4) the judgment's being void or having been satisfied or released. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60. Cf. MOTION TO ALTER OR AMEND THE JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2659; Judgment ↷336–402.]

motion for repleader. (18c) Common-law pleading. An unsuccessful party's posttrial motion asking that the pleadings begin anew because the issue was joined on an immaterial point. • The court never awards a repleader to the party who tendered the immaterial issue. Cf. REPLEADER. [Cases: Pleading ↷286.]

motion for summary judgment. (1842) A request that the court enter judgment without a trial because there is no genuine issue of material fact to be decided by a factfinder — that is, because the evidence is legally insufficient to support a verdict in the nonmovant's favor. • In federal court and in most state courts, the movant-defendant must point out in its motion the absence of evidence on an essential element of the plaintiff's claim, after which the burden shifts to the nonmovant-plaintiff to produce evidence raising a genuine fact issue. But if a party moves for summary judgment on its own claim or defense, then it must establish each element of the claim or defense as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. — Abbr. MSJ. — Also termed summary-judgment motion; motion for summary disposition. See SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2533; Judgment ↷181(2), 183.]

motion in arrest of judgment. (17c) 1. A defendant's motion claiming that a substantial error appearing on the face of the record vitiates the whole proceeding and the judgment. 2. A postjudgment motion in a criminal case claiming that the indictment is insufficient to sustain a judgment or that the verdict is somehow insufficient. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷966–976.]

motion in limine (in lim-ə-nee). (18c) A pretrial request that certain inadmissible evidence not be referred to or offered at trial. • Typically, a party makes this motion when it believes that mere mention of the evidence during trial would be highly prejudicial and could not be remedied by an instruction to disregard. If, after the motion is granted, the opposing party mentions or attempts to offer the evidence in the jury's presence, a mistrial may be ordered. A ruling on a motion in limine does not always preserve evidentiary error for appellate purposes. To raise such an error on appeal, a party may be required to formally object when the evidence is actually admitted or excluded during trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷632(4); Federal Civil Procedure ↷927.5; Pretrial Procedure ↷3.]

motion to alter or amend the judgment. (1950) A party's request that the court correct a substantive error in the judgment, such as a manifest error of law or fact. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a motion to alter or amend the judgment must be filed within ten days after the judgment is entered. It should not ordinarily be used to correct clerical errors in a judgment. Those types of errors — that is, errors that result in the judgment not reflecting the court's intention — may be brought in a motion for relief from the judgment, which does not have the ten-day deadline. A motion to alter or amend the judgment is usu. directed to substantive issues regarding the judgment, such as an intervening change in the law or newly discovered evidence that was not available at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 59(e). Cf. MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM THE JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2659; Judgment ↷294–333.]

motion to compel discovery. (1960) A party's request that the court force the party's opponent to respond to the party's discovery request (as to answer interrogatories or produce documents). Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a). — Often shortened to motion to compel. — Also termed motion to enforce discovery. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1278; Pretrial Procedure ↷44, 310, 434.]

motion to correct inventorship. Patents. A request in an interference proceeding to add one or more unnamed coinventors to the patent application. • The motion will be granted unless the unnamed coinventor acted with the intent to deceive. [Cases: Patents ↷106(1).]

motion to dismiss. (18c) A request that the court dismiss the case because of settlement, voluntary withdrawal, or a procedural defect. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss the case (under Rule 41(a)) or the defendant may ask the court to dismiss the case, usu. based on one of the defenses listed in Rule 12(b). These defenses include lack of personal or subject-matter jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, the plaintiff's failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted, and the failure to join an indispensable party. A defendant will frequently file a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, which is governed by Rule 12(b)(6), claiming that even if all the plaintiff's allegations are true, they would not be legally sufficient to state a claim on which relief might be granted. — Abbr. MTD. See DEMURRER. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷303.5–303.35; Federal Civil Procedure ↷1707, 1825; Pretrial Procedure ↷511, 675.]

motion to dissolve interference. Patents. A request by the senior party to dismiss challenges to its priority as the first inventor. [Cases: Patents ↷106(5).]

motion to enforce discovery. See MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY.

motion to lift the stay. (1969) Bankruptcy. A party's request that the bankruptcy court alter the automatic bankruptcy stay to allow the movant to act against the debtor or the debtor's property, as when a creditor seeks permission to foreclose on a lien because its security interest is not adequately protected. — Also termed motion for relief from stay; motion to modify the stay. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2435.]

motion to modify. See MOTION (1).

motion to modify the stay. See MOTION TO LIFT THE STAY.

motion to quash (kwahsh). (18c) A party's request that the court nullify process or an act instituted by the other party, as in seeking to nullify a subpoena. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 9, 16.]

motion to remand. (1816) In a case that has been removed from state court to federal court, a party's request that the federal court return the case to state court, usu. because the federal court lacks jurisdiction or because the procedures for removal were not properly followed. 28 USCA § 1447(c). [Cases: Removal of Cases ⇨ 107.]

motion to strike. (1806) 1. Civil procedure. A party's request that the court delete insufficient defenses or immaterial, redundant, impertinent, or scandalous statements from an opponent's pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1144; Pleading ⇨ 351, 361.] 2. Evidence. A request that inadmissible evidence be deleted from the record and that the jury be instructed to disregard it. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2018; Trial ⇨ 88.]

motion to suppress. (18c) A request that the court prohibit the introduction of illegally obtained evidence at a criminal trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 394.6.]

motion to transfer venue. (1934) A request that the court transfer the case to another district or county, usu. because the original venue is improper under the applicable venue rules or because of local prejudice. See VENUE; CHANGE OF VENUE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 115–144; Federal Courts ⇨ 141; Venue ⇨ 58.]

motion to withdraw. 1. An attorney's request for a court's permission to cease representing a client in a lawsuit. 2. A defendant's formal request for a court's permission to change the defendant's plea or strike an admission. — Also termed (in sense 2) motion to withdraw a plea. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨ 76(1); Criminal Law ⇨ 1831.]

motive. (14c) Something, esp. willful desire, that leads one to act. — Also termed ulterior intent. Cf. INTENT.

"The term 'motive' is unfortunately ambiguous. That feeling which internally urges or pushes a person to do or refrain from doing an act is an emotion, and is of course evidential towards his doing or not doing the act. But when that evidential fact comes in turn to be evidenced, we must rely on two sorts of data, (a) the person's own expressions of that emotion, e.g., 'I hate M,' or 'I wish I owned that necklace'; and (b) external circumstances likely in human experience to arouse the emotion, e.g., a slander on D may be evidence that D became angry; a purse of money left in sight of D may be evidence that D's desire to have it was aroused. Now this second sort of evidential circumstance (b) is loosely referred to as 'motive,' — though in reality it is only evidential of the emotion, which itself is evidential of the act." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 76 (1935).

bad motive. (18c) A person's knowledge that an act is wrongful while the person commits the act.

malicious motive. (18c) A motive for bringing a prosecution, other than to do justice. [Cases: Malicious Prosecution ⇨ 30.]

Motor Carrier Act. A federal statute, originally enacted in 1935 (49 USCA §§ 502–507), subjecting commercial motor carriers of freight and passengers in interstate commerce to the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission, now the U.S. Department of Transportation. • The Act was repealed in the 1980s. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 60.]

MOU. abbr. MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.

"Movables and immovables. The main distinction drawn in later Roman law and modern systems based thereon between kinds of things subject to ownership and possession. While basically the distinction corresponds to everyday conceptions, assigning animals and vehicles to the former and land and buildings to the latter category, particular things may be assigned to one category rather than the other for reasons of convenience. Thus, in French law, farm implements and animals are immovables. The distinction is also important in international private law, more so than that between real and personal . . . Thus, land held on lease is personal property by English law for historical reason, but in international private law it is a right in immovable property." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 858 (1980).

intangible movable. A physical thing that can be moved but that cannot be touched in the usual sense.

• Examples are light and electricity.

"'Intangible movables' is a term of art in the common law which has been applied more widely than its meaning literally justifies, which is merely to those things that have physical existence and can be moved, though cannot be touched in the normal sense, such as light, electricity and radioactive waves. In English law the term has been generally applied to interests created by law which have only a legal, not a physical, existence, and are accordingly capable only of legal, not physical, movement. It is convenient, however, to retain a term which is generally accepted and understood in this special legal meaning." R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 470 (7th ed. 1974).

2. Scots law. A nonhereditary right. — Also spelled (in BrE) moveable. Cf. IMMOVABLE. — movable, adj.

"Moveables are, in the phraseology of the law of Scotland, opposed to heritage; so that every species of property, and every right a person can hold, is by that law either heritable or moveable. Hence, moveables are not merely corporeal subjects capable of being moved, but every species of property, corporeal or incorporeal, which does not descend to the heir in heritage." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 662 (George Watson ed., 1882).

movable estate. See personal property (1) under PROPERTY.

movable fixture. See tenant's fixture under FIXTURE.

movable freehold. See FREEHOLD.

movant (moov-ənt). (1875) One who makes a motion to the court or a deliberative body. — Formerly also spelled movent. — Also termed moving party; mover. — Also termed moving party; mover. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻921; Motions ↻11.]

move, vb. (15c) 1. To make an application (to a court) for a ruling, order, or some other judicial action <the appellant moved the court for a new trial>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻921; Motions ↻1.] 2. To make a motion <the senator moved that a vote be taken>. See MOTION (2).

moveable. See MOVABLE.

movent. See MOVANT.

mover, n. 1. Slang. A stock that experiences spectacular market price changes; a very unstable stock. 2. MOVANT.

moving expense. See EXPENSE.

moving papers. The papers that constitute or support a motion in a court proceeding. — Also termed motion papers. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻921; Motions ↻25.]

moving part. Patents. A separate component of an apparatus that works together with another to produce the intended useful result. • Moving parts and a rule of operation generally distinguish an apparatus from an article of manufacture.

moving violation. (1954) An infraction of a traffic law while the vehicle is in motion. [Cases: Automobiles ↻144.1(3), 349.]

mug book. (1947) A collection of mug shots of criminal suspects maintained by law-enforcement agencies (such as the FBI and police departments) to be used in identifying criminal offenders.

mug shot. (1950) A photograph of a person's face taken after the person has been arrested and booked.

mulct (mækt), n. (16c) A fine or penalty.

mulct, vb. (17c) 1. To punish by a fine. 2. To deprive or divest of, esp. fraudulently.

mulct law. Hist. An Iowa law that allowed some saloons to pay the state a sum of money and continue to operate despite a statewide prohibition against alcohol sales. • While the money paid was called a mulct, it was effectively a licensing tax rather than a criminal penalty because continuing violations of the liquor law were not prosecuted.

mule. Slang. A person hired to smuggle contraband, esp. a controlled substance, and deliver it to the distributor at a destination point. • For example, a drug mule might carry cocaine through a security checkpoint by concealing it beneath a suitcase's false bottom.

mulier (myoo-lee-ər), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A woman. • This term at various times referred to a marriageable virgin, a woman not a virgin, a wife, or a mistress. 2. Hist. & Scots law. A legitimate son; the son of a mulier ("lawful wife").

mulieratus filius (myoo-lee-ər-ə-tas fil-ee-əs), Hist. & Scots law. A legitimate son or daughter; the son of a mulier ("lawful wife").

mulier puisne (myoo-lee-ər pyoo-nee), [Law Latin] Hist. The younger lawful son, usu. distinguished from the bastard eigné ("the elder bastard son").

"The common law developed one exception to its harsh doctrine of bastardy. Where the eldest son was born out of wedlock (the bastard eigné) and the next son was born to the same parents after the marriage (the mulier puisné), and upon the ancestor's death the bastard eigné entered as heir and remained in undisturbed possession until his own death, the bastard eigné was treated as if he had been legitimate with respect to the inheritance of that land. The reason given by Littleton was that a person who was legitimate by the Canon law could not be bastardised posthumously, when he no longer had the opportunity to contest the issue." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 559 (3d ed. 1990).

mulierty (myoo-lee-ər-tee), Hist. The condition of a legitimate child, as distinguished from a bastard.

multa (məl-tə), n. [Latin "a fine"] Hist. Eccles. law. A fine the bishops paid to the king so that they could make and probate wills and administer estates. — Also termed multura episcopi (məl-t[y]oor-ə i-pis-kə-pi).

multicraft union. See UNION.

multidisciplinary practice. A fee-sharing association of lawyers and nonlawyers in a firm that delivers both legal and nonlegal services. • Rule 5.4 of the Model Rules of Professional Conduct effectively bars multidisciplinary practice. Under this rule, a lawyer cannot (1) share legal fees with nonlawyers, (2) form a partnership involving the practice of law with nonlawyers, (3) form a law firm in which a nonlawyer has an interest, or (4) allow a nonlawyer to direct the lawyer's professional judgment. — Abbr. MDP. — Sometimes termed multidisciplinary practice of law. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨ 10.]

multidistrict litigation. (1966) Civil procedure. Federal-court litigation in which civil actions pending in different districts and involving common fact questions are transferred to a single district for coordinated pretrial proceedings, after which the actions are returned to their original districts for trial. • Multidistrict litigation is governed by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation, which is composed of seven circuit and district judges appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States. 28 USCA § 1407. — Abbr. MDL. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 9; Federal Courts ⇨ 151–157.]

Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994. A model statute intended to (1) decrease the length of time that a child awaits adoption, (2) identify and recruit adoptive and foster parents who can meet the needs of available children, and (3) eliminate adoption discrimination based on race, color, or national origin of the child or the adoptive parents. — Abbr. MEPA.

multifarious (məl-tə-fair-ee-əs), adj. (16c) 1. (Of a single pleading) improperly joining distinct matters or causes of action, and thereby confounding them. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 676; Pleading ⇨ 50, 64.] 2. Improperly joining parties in a lawsuit. 3. Diverse; many and various. — multifariousness, n.

multilateral, adj. (1827) Involving more than two parties .

multilateral advance pricing agreement. See ADVANCE PRICING AGREEMENT.

multilevel-distribution program. See PYRAMID SCHEME.

multimaturity bond. See put bond under BOND (3).

multimodal shipping. The transportation of freight using more means of carriage and usu. more than one carrier. • For example, a cargo may be carried first by air or sea, then by rail or truck to its destination. — Also termed intermodal transport; multimodal carriage.

multinational corporation. See CORPORATION.

multiplicity (məl-tə-plis-i-tee), n. Criminal procedure. The improper charging of the same offense in more than one count of a single indictment or information. • Multiplicity violates the Fifth Amendment protection against double jeopardy. [Cases: Indictment and Information ⇨ 126.] — multiplicitous (məl-tə-plis-i-təs), adj.

multiplicity of actions. (17c) The existence of two or more lawsuits litigating the same issue against the same defendant. — Also termed multiplicity of suits; multiplicity of proceedings. See PIECEMEAL LITIGATION. [Cases: Action ⇨ 53.]

multiplicity of claims. See AGGREGATION OF CLAIMS.

multiplied damages. See multiple damages under DAMAGES.

Multistate Bar Examination. See BAR EXAMINATION.

multistate corporation. See CORPORATION.

multital (məl-ti-təl), adj. (1917) 1. Of or relating to legal relations that exist among three or more people, esp. a multitude of people. Cf. UNITAL.

"Tort and breach of contract are alike breaches of duty, but in the case of tort the pre-existing duty of the wrongdoer was one that was shared by every other member of society; and the injured party whose right was violated had not merely one right, he had a multitude of rights. His rights and the correlative duties of others were 'multital.' The secondary right and duty, however, arising from the tort, are relations that exist between the two persons only. They are 'unital.' In the case of a breach of contract, both the primary right and duty and the secondary right and duty are 'unital.'" William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 11 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. Rare. See IN REM.

multure. Hist. 1. A quantity of grain that was paid to a mill's owner or tenant in exchange for grinding the remaining grain. 2. A miller's right to payment in grain for milling services rendered.

Munchausen syndrome by proxy (mən-choʊ-zən). A condition in which a caregiver, usu. a parent, fabricates or induces a child's medical condition and seeks medical treatment for the child on the basis of the fabrications or induced condition. • This syndrome is a kind of child abuse, esp. when the victim is subjected to repeated medical examinations and treatment, often of an invasive nature, and sometimes even to physical injuries that induce symptoms consistent with the falsified medical condition. The parent is usu. emotionally deprived and fabricates or causes the child's illness or medical condition as an attention-getting device. [Cases: Infants ↻156, 158.]

mund (mænd or muund). [Old English "hand"] Hist. A right to protection or guardianship; a guardian. Cf. MANUS (1).

"Once more we see prerogative rights growing, while feudal claims fall into the background; and in the case of lunacy we see a guardianship, a mund, which is not profitable to the guardian, and this at present is a novel and noteworthy thing." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 481 (2d ed. 1898).

mundium (mən-dee-əm). [Law Latin] The legal protection and representation granted to a person who is socially and physically weak.

"In a society of persons in which the authority to maintain the law was in the hands of its members, and of which the membership rested on the ability to bear arms and defend oneself ('weer'), those who, for want of strength or some other reason, were unable to do so, could not play an active part, and were necessarily placed under the authority of those whose protection they needed. Originally, mundium was not limited to family law. Gradually it lost its wider meaning, and in its restricted sense it received different applications, as family relations became classified into separate groups, and the conception of mundium appeared under different forms, with special rules and special names — e.g., marital power, parental power, guardianship, and curatorship." Alexander Wood Renton & George Grenville Phillimore, The Comparative Law of Marriage and Divorce 10 (1910).

munera (myoo-nər-ə), n. [Law Latin "graces"] Hist. Tenancies at will; tenancies made at the grantor's pleasure.

munera publica (myoo-nər-ə pəb-li-kə). [Latin] Roman law. Public duties, such as performing the offices of tutor and curator, and of index privatus. Sing. munus publicum.

actings and intromissions." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 364 (4th ed. 1894).

municeps (myoo-nə-seps), n. [fr. Latin munus "office" + capere "to take"] Roman law. 1. A citizen of a municipality (municipium). 2. A member of the council of a municipium. Pl. municipes (myoo-ni-sip-eez).

municipal, adj. (16c) 1. Of or relating to a city, town, or local governmental unit. 2. Of or relating to the internal government of a state or nation (as contrasted with international).

municipal, n. See municipal bond under BOND (3).

municipal action. Any authorized exercise of governmental power by a municipal officer, board, agency, or other municipal body. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻61.]

municipal affairs. The matters relating to the local government of a municipality. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻65.]

municipal aid. Financial or other assistance provided by a municipality to a private business, usu. to encourage it to relocate to the municipality. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻872.] municipal attorney. See CITY ATTORNEY.

municipal bond. See BOND (3).

municipal charter. See CHARTER (2).

municipal corporation. A city, town, or other local political entity formed by charter from the state and having the autonomous authority to administer the state's local affairs; esp., a public corporation created for political purposes and endowed with political powers to be exercised for the public good in the administration of local civil government. — Also termed municipality. Cf. quasi-corporation under CORPORATION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻1.1.]

municipal corporation de facto. A corporation recognized to exist, although it has not fully complied with statutory requirements, when there is (1) a valid law authorizing its incorporation, (2) a colorable and bona fide attempt to organize under that law, and (3) an assumption of powers conferred under that law. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻17.]

municipium (myoo-nə-sip-ee-əm), n. [Latin "free town"] Roman law. A self-governing town; specif., any community allied with or conquered by Rome and allowed to maintain certain privileges (such as maintaining separate laws called leges municipales). • The members of a municipium were also Roman citizens. Pl. municipia (myoo-ni-sip-ee-ə).

muniment (myoo-nə-mənt). (15c) A document (such as a deed or charter) evidencing the rights or privileges of a person, family, or corporation. — Also termed (archaically) miniment. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 94.]

muniment house. Hist. A place (such as a room in a castle or cathedral) where titles, deeds, and other evidences of title are stored.

muniment of title. (1806) Documentary evidence of title, such as a deed or a judgment regarding the ownership of property. — Also termed common assurance. See CHAIN OF TITLE. [Cases: Property ⇨ 9.]

murder, n. (bef. 12c) The killing of a human being with malice aforethought. • At common law, the crime of murder was not subdivided, but many state statutes have adopted the degree structure outlined below, though the Model Penal Code has not. Model Penal Code § 210.2. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 520.] — murder, vb. — murderous, adj.

"The word 'murder' has . . . had a devious history. Its original sense is the particularly heinous crime of secret slaying. After the conquest it was observed that Normans were frequently found dead under mysterious circumstances, and so William I enacted that if anyone were found slain and the slayer were not caught, then the hundred should pay a fine; this fine is a murdrum. The practice soon grew up to taking inquests and if it were presented that the dead man was English, then the fine was not due. In 1267 it was enacted that accidental deaths should not give rise to murdrum, and finally in 1340 presentment of Englishry and murdrum were abolished. Henceforth the word slowly tends to get linked up with 'malice aforethought' and so we get the classical formulae describing the crime of murder." Theodore F.T. Plucknett, A Concise History of the Common Law 445 (5th ed. 1956).

depraved-heart murder. (1975) A murder resulting from an act so reckless and careless of the safety of others that it demonstrates the perpetrator's complete lack of regard for human life. — Also termed

felony murder. (1926) Murder that occurs during the commission of a dangerous felony (often limited to rape, kidnapping, robbery, burglary, and arson). — Also termed unintentional murder; (in English law) constructive murder. See FELONY-MURDER RULE. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 580.]

first-degree murder. (1895) Murder that is willful, deliberate, or premeditated, or that is committed during the course of another dangerous felony. • All murder perpetrated by poisoning or by lying in wait is considered first-degree murder. All types of murder not involving willful, deliberate, and premeditated killing are usu. considered second-degree murder. — Also termed murder of the first degree; murder one. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 539.]

mass murder. (1917) A murderous act or series of acts by which a criminal kills many victims at or near the same time, usu. as part of one act or plan. Cf. serial murder.

murder by torture. (1901) A murder preceded by the intentional infliction of pain and suffering on the victim.

"In some jurisdictions, a murder by torture may constitute murder in the first degree. It occurs when a defendant intentionally inflicts pain and suffering upon his victim for the purpose of revenge, extortion, or persuasion." 2 Charles E. Torcia, Wharton's Criminal Law § 144, at 281 (15th ed. 1994).

murder of the first degree. See first-degree murder.

murder of the second degree. See second-degree murder.

murder of the third degree. See third-degree murder.

murder one. See first-degree murder.

murder three. See third-degree murder.

murder two. See second-degree murder.

second-degree murder. (1909) Murder that is not aggravated by any of the circumstances of first-degree murder. — Also termed murder of the second degree; murder two. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 544.]

serial murder. (1977) A murder in which a criminal kills one of many victims over time, often as part of a pattern in which the criminal targets victims who have some similar characteristics. Cf. mass murder.

third-degree murder. (1933) A wrong that did not constitute murder at common law. • Only a few states have added to their murder statutes a third degree of murder. The other states classify all murders in two degrees. Manslaughter is not a degree of the crime of murder, but instead is a distinct offense. — Also termed murder of the third degree; murder three. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 548.]

unintentional murder. 1. A killing for which malice is implied because the person acted with intent to cause serious physical injury or knew that the conduct was substantially certain to cause death or serious physical injury. • In some jurisdictions, this term is applied generally to several grades of killings without express intent. 2. See depraved-heart murder. 3. See felony murder. 4. See voluntary manslaughter under MANSLAUGHTER.

willful murder. (16c) The unlawful and intentional killing of another without excuse or mitigating circumstances.

murder clause. A contract provision that imposes onerous — often unreasonable — obligations on one party. • Murder clauses are usu. found in construction contracts.

murdrum (mər-drəm). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. The secret killing of someone. 2. A fine against the tithing where the secret and unsolved homicide took place.

"The readiness with which the Norman administrators seized on this Anglo-Saxon system was probably due to its effectiveness in collecting the murdrum, the murder fine. In ordinary cases of homicide, the whole district — except the kin of the suspect — would be zealous to bring the malefactor to justice. But we can readily see that, if the person killed was a Norman, every effort would be made to shield the murderer. The Norman rulers had recourse to the device . . . of imposing a group responsibility. The tithing within which the murdered Norman was found was compelled to pay a fine or to discover and surrender the homicide. The word murdrum is a word of uncertain etymology, and has given us our term for willful homicide." Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 175-76 (1936).

3. Murder; specif., murder with malice aforethought. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

murorum operatio (myuur-ør-əm op-ə-ray-shee-oh). [Latin] Hist. Repair work to the fortifications of buildings, cities, or castles, performed by their inhabitants.

muster, vb. (14c) Military law. 1. To assemble together (troops) for inspection or service. 2. To assemble together (potential troops) for enlistment. [Cases: Armed Services ⇨18.]

muster roll. Maritime law. A shipmaster's account listing the name, age, national character, and quality of every employee on the ship. • In wartime, it is used in ascertaining a ship's neutrality. [Cases: Shipping ⇨67.]

must-pass bill. See BILL (3).

mutation, n. A significant and basic alteration; esp. in property law, the alteration of a thing's status, such as from separate property to community property. — mutate, vb. — mutational, adj.

mutation of libel. Maritime law. An amendment to a complaint. See LIBEL (3).

mutatio nominis (myoo-tay-shee-oh nom-ə-nis). [Latin] Roman law. Change of name. • It was allowed provided that no prejudice was thereby caused to others. The related phrase mutato nomine (myoo-tay-toh nom-ə-nee) means "the name having been changed."

mutatis mutandis (myoo-tay-tis myoo-tan-dis). [Latin] (16c) All necessary changes having been made; with the necessary changes <what was said regarding the first

mute, n. (17c) 1. A person who cannot speak. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨229.] 2. A person (esp. a prisoner) who stands silent when required to answer or plead. • Formerly, if a prisoner stood mute, a jury was empaneled to determine whether the prisoner was intentionally mute or mute by an act of God. By the Criminal Law Act of 1827 (7 & 8 Geo. 4, ch. 28), if a prisoner was mute by malice, the officer automatically entered a plea of not guilty and the trial proceeded. If adjudicated to be insane, the prisoner was kept in custody until the Crown determined what should be done. — Also termed (in sense 2) standing mute.

mutilation, n. (16c) 1. The act or an instance of rendering a document legally ineffective by subtracting or altering — but not completely destroying — an essential part through cutting, tearing, burning, or erasing. [Cases: Alteration of Instruments ⇨2.] 2. Criminal law. The act of cutting off or permanently damaging a body part, esp. an essential one. [Cases: Mayhem ⇨1.] See MAYHEM. — mutilate, vb. — mutilator, n.

mutiny (myoo-tə-nee), n. (16c) 1. An insubordination or insurrection of armed forces, esp. sailors, against the authority of their commanders; a forcible revolt by members of the military against constituted authority, usu. their commanding officers. [Cases: Armed Services ⇨37; Military Justice ⇨680, 790.]

"Both mutiny and failure to prevent, suppress, or report a mutiny are capital offenses. . . . The elements of mutiny are (1) creation of any violence or disturbance or acting in concert with others to refuse to obey orders (2) with the intent to usurp or override lawful military authority. One fails to prevent, suppress, or report mutiny when he does not take all reasonable means to overcome or report mutiny. Concert of action is not required for mutiny when the accused creates violence or disturbance." Charles A. Shanor & L. Lynn Hogue, Military Law in a Nutshell 197-98 (2d ed. 1996).

2. Loosely, any uprising against authority. — Also termed (in both senses) inciting revolt. — mutinous, adj.

Mutiny Act. Hist. An English statute enacted annually from 1689 to 1879 to provide for a standing army and to punish mutiny, desertion, and other military offenses. • It was merged into the Army Discipline and Regulation Act of 1879 (ch. 33).

mutual, adj. (16c) 1. Generally, directed by each toward the other or others; reciprocal. [Cases: Contracts ⇨55.] 2. (Of a condition, credit covenant, promise, etc.) reciprocally given, received, or exchanged. 3. (Of a right, etc.) belonging to two parties; common. [Cases: Contracts ⇨10.] — mutuality, n.

mutual affray. See MUTUAL COMBAT.

mutual-agreement program. (1978) A prisoner-rehabilitation plan in which the prisoner agrees to take part in certain self-improvement activities to receive a definite parole date.

mutual assent. See ASSENT.

mutual association. A mutually owned, cooperative savings and loan association, with the deposits being shares of the association. ● A mutual association is not allowed to issue stock and is usu. regulated by the Office of Thrift Supervision, an agency of the U.S. Treasury Department. — See SAVINGS-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations ⇨ 1.]

mutual-benefit association. A fraternal or social organization that provides benefits for its members, usu. on an assessment basis. [Cases: Beneficial Associations ⇨ 1; Insurance ⇨ 1237.]

"In the absence of . . . statutory definition, the question of the extent to which mutual benefit, fraternal beneficiary, and like associations or societies, are within the meaning of the insurance laws must depend upon the terms of the different statutes, and the various circumstances of each particular case Broadly speaking, when a company, society, or association, either voluntary or incorporated, and whether known as a relief, benevolent, or benefit society, or by some similar name, contracts for a consideration to pay a sum of money upon the happening of a certain contingency, and the prevalent purpose and nature of the organization is that of insurance, it will be regarded as an insurance company and its contracts as insurance contracts . . ." 2A George J. Couch, Couch on Insurance § 20:2, at 11 (rev. 2d ed. 1984).

mutual-benefit insurance. Benefits provided by a mutual-benefit association upon the occurrence of a loss. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1001, 1237.]

mutual combat. (17c) A consensual fight on equal terms — arising from a moment of passion but not in self-defense — between two persons armed with deadly weapons. ● A murder charge may be reduced to voluntary manslaughter if death occurred by mutual combat. — Also termed mutual affray. Cf. DUEL. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 45.15; Homicide ⇨ 537.]

mutual contract. See bilateral contract under CONTRACT.

mutual demands. (17c) Countering demands between two parties at the same time . [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim ⇨ 41.]

mutual fund. (1934) 1. An investment company that invests its shareholders' money in a usu. diversified selection of securities. — Often shortened to fund. 2. Loosely, a share in such a company.

balanced fund. A mutual fund that maintains a balanced investment in stocks and bonds, investing a certain percentage in senior securities.

bond fund. A mutual fund that invests primarily in specialized corporate bonds or municipal bonds.

closed-end fund. A mutual fund having a fixed number of shares that are traded on a major securities exchange or an over-the-counter market.

common-stock fund. A mutual fund that invests only in common stock.

dual fund. A closed-end mutual fund that invests in two classes of stock — stock that pays dividends and stock that increases in investment value without dividends. ● A dual fund combines characteristics of an income fund and a growth fund. — Also termed dual-purpose fund; leverage fund; split fund.

fully managed fund. A mutual fund whose policy allows reasonable discretion in trading securities in combination or quantity.

global fund. A mutual fund that invests in stocks and bonds throughout the world, including the U.S. — Also termed world fund. Cf. single-country fund; international fund.

growth fund. A mutual fund that typically invests in well-established companies whose earnings are expected to increase. ● Growth funds usu. pay small dividends but offer the potential for large share-price increases.

hedge fund. See HEDGE FUND.

income fund. A mutual fund that typically invests in securities that consistently produce a steady income, such as bonds or dividend-paying stocks.

index fund. A mutual fund that invests in the stock of companies constituting a specific market index, such as Standard & Poor's 500 stocks, and thereby tracks the stock average.

international fund. A mutual fund that invests in stocks and bonds of companies outside the U.S., but not those within. Cf. global fund; single-country fund.

leverage fund. See dual fund.

load fund. A mutual fund that charges a commission, usu. ranging from 4 to 9%, either when shares are purchased (a front-end load) or when they are redeemed (a back-end load).

money-market fund. A mutual fund that invests in low-risk government securities and short-term notes.

no-load fund. A mutual fund that does not charge any sales commission (although it may charge fees to cover operating costs).

open-end fund. A mutual fund that continually offers new shares and buys back existing shares on demand. ● An open-end fund will continue to grow as more shareholders invest because it does not have a fixed number of shares outstanding.

performance fund. A mutual fund characterized by an aggressive purchase of stocks expected to show near-term growth.

regional fund. A mutual fund that concentrates its investments in a specific geographic area or a particular economic area.

single-country fund. A mutual fund that invests in an individual nation outside the U.S. Cf. global fund; international fund.

split fund. See dual fund.

utility fund. A mutual fund that invests only in public-utility securities.

value fund. A mutual fund that invests in stocks that its manager believes to be priced below their true market value.

vulture fund. An investment company that purchases bankrupt or insolvent companies to reorganize them in hopes of reselling them at a profit.

mutuality. (16c) The state of sharing or exchanging something; a reciprocation; an interchange <mutuality of obligation>. [Cases: Contracts ⇨10.]

mutuality doctrine. (1926) The collateral-estoppel requirement that, to bar a party from relitigating an issue determined against that party in an earlier action, both parties must have been in privity with one another in the earlier proceeding. — Also termed mutuality of parties. [Cases: Judgment ⇨666, 678.]

mutuality of assent. See MEETING OF THE MINDS.

mutuality of benefits. See RECIPROCITY (2).

mutuality of contract. See MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION.

mutuality of debts. Bankruptcy. For purposes of setoff, the condition in which debts are owed between parties acting in the same capacity, even though the debts are not of the same character and did not arise out of the same transaction. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨2674.]

mutuality of estoppel. (1852) The collateral-estoppel principle that a judgment is not conclusively in favor of someone unless the opposite decision would also be conclusively against that person. [Cases: Judgment ⇨625, 666.]

mutuality of obligation. (1838) The agreement of both parties to a contract to be bound in some way. — Also termed mutuality of contract. See mutual assent under ASSENT. [Cases: Contracts ⇨10.]

"[The] so-called doctrine of 'mutuality of obligation' in bilateral contracts . . . unfortunately has been the cause of no little confusion. This confusion is evident from the fact that, while it is commonly admitted there is such a doctrine, there is a lack of unanimity, both in the statement of it and in regard to its application. The most common mode of statement is: 'In a bilateral agreement both promises must be binding or neither is binding.' This statement is obviously ambiguous, since it does not indicate in what sense the promises must be binding. The fact is that it has been variously interpreted and applied by the courts with results that have sometimes been inconsistent with other well settled principles of the law of consideration. Usually it has been held to mean that a promise that is not legally obligatory cannot be consideration in spite of the fact that it may satisfy all the usual requirements of consideration. However, at times it has in effect been held to involve the requirement that the undertaking of the promise relied upon as a consideration must be reasonably commensurate with, or equivalent to, the undertaking of the promise which it supports, before it can constitute consideration — a kind of doctrine of mutuality of undertaking." John Edward Murray Jr., Murray on Contracts § 90, at 190-91 (2d ed. 1974).

"The doctrine of mutuality of obligation is commonly expressed in the phrase that in a bilateral contract 'both parties must be bound or neither is bound.' But this phrase is over-generalization because the doctrine is not one of mutuality of obligation but rather one of mutuality of consideration. Phrasing the rule in terms of mutuality of obligation rather than in terms of consideration has led to so-called exceptions and judicial circumventions . . . It has been suggested that the term 'mutuality of obligation' should be abandoned and we must agree in the light of the confusion that this term has engendered." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 4-12, at 226 (3d ed. 1987).

mutuality of parties. See MUTUALITY DOCTRINE.

mutuality of remedy. (1819) The availability of a remedy, esp. equitable relief, to both parties to a transaction, sometimes required before either party can be granted specific performance. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Specific Performance ⇨6.]

mutuant (myoo-choo-ənt). The provider of property in a mutuum. See MUTUUM. Cf. MUTUARY.

mutua petitio (myoo-choo-ə pə-tish-ee-oh). [Latin] Scots law. A counterclaim. See COUNTERCLAIM. Pl. mutuae petitiones.

mutuari (myoo-choo-air-i), vb. [Latin] To borrow.

mutuary (myoo-choo-er-ee). (1839) The recipient of property in a mutuum. See MUTUUM. Cf. MUTUANT. [Cases: Bailment ⇨2, 7.]

mutuatus (myoo-choo-ay-təs), n. [Latin] A borrowing; a loan of money.

mutui datio (myoo-choo-i day-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The lending of objects that could be weighed, measured, or counted (such as bullion, corn, wine, oil, and coined money), on the understanding that the borrower would repay by restoring an equal amount of the object borrowed. See MUTUUM (2).

mutus et surdus (myoo-təs et sər-dəs). [Latin] Hist. Deaf and dumb.

mutuum (myoo-choo-əm), n. (15c) 1. A transaction (sometimes referred to as a bailment) in which goods are delivered but, instead of being returned, are replaced by other goods of the same kind. • At common law such a transaction is regarded as a sale or exchange, not as a bailment, because the particular goods are not returned. [Cases: Bailment ⇨2, 7.] 2. Roman law. A real contract in which money or fungible goods were delivered from the lender to the borrower, who was strictly liable to return an equivalent amount.

● Because the contract was gratuitous, any interest had to be demanded by stipulation. This was one of the real contracts, along with the loan for use (commodatum (kom-ə-day-təm)) and deposit and pledge (pignoratō (pig-nə-ray-shee-oh)). See MUTUI DATIO.

mysterious disappearance. A loss of property under unknown or baffling circumstances that are difficult to understand or explain. ● The term is used in insurance policies covering theft. [Cases: Insurance ↪ 2152.]

"Under a policy insuring against loss of property by 'mysterious disappearance' recovery is generally allowed where the article disappears from the place the insured left it, while recovery is ordinarily disallowed where the insured has no recollection of when he last had possession of the article and cannot say when or from what place it disappeared. Thus the addition of the words 'mysterious disappearance' to a theft policy does not transform it to an 'all loss' policy covering lost or mislaid articles, but it remains a theft policy." 43 Am. Jur. 2d Insurance § 501, at 575-76 (1982).

narcoanalysis (nahr-koh-ə-nal-ə-sis). (1936) The process of injecting a "truth-serum" drug into a patient to induce semiconsciousness, and then interrogating the patient. • This process has been utilized to enhance the memory of a witness. [Cases: Witnesses ↷257.10.]

narcotic, n. (14c) 1. An addictive drug, esp. an opiate, that dulls the senses and induces sleep. 2. (usu. pl.) A drug that is controlled or prohibited by law. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷9.] — narcotic, adj.

narr. abbr. NARRATIO.

narr-and-cognovit law (nahr-and-kahg-noh-vit). [Latin narratio "declaration" and cognovit "the person has conceded"] Hist. A law providing that a plaintiff will be granted judgment on a note through an attorney's confession that the amount shown on the note, together with interest and costs, constitutes a legal and just claim. Cf. cognovit judgment under JUDGMENT; CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT. [Cases: Judgment ↷29, 54.]

narratio (nə-ray-shee-oh), n. [Latin "narrative"] Hist. A declaration, complaint, or petition in which the plaintiff sets out the facts of a case; an oral narrative by the plaintiff of the facts and legal arguments on which the claim is based. • The term has also been called the "conte" or "tale." — Abbr. narr.

"[T]he making of the count, in Latin the narratio, was the very centre of the legal process. We do not know how it came about that the litigant was allowed to speak through the mouth of another, though it has been suggested that it was not to prevent mistakes being made but to prevent them being fatal. Certainly the litigant could disavow what was said on his behalf; and perhaps it was only 'said' by him when he formally adopted it. If this is right, our modern barrister began as one who could harmlessly blunder." S.F.C. Milsom, Historical Foundations of the Common Law 28 (1969).

narrative recital. See RECITAL.

narrator (na-ray-tor or na-ray-tər), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A pleader or counter; a person who prepares pleadings (i.e., narrs). • For example, a serjeant-at-law was also known as serviens narrator. Pl. narratores (na-rə-tor-ez).

"The Latin narrator and its French equivalent contour became technical terms. If an English term was in use, it was perhaps forspeaker." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 215 n.1 (2d ed. 1898).

narrow certiorari. See CERTIORARI.

narrow-channel rule. The navigational requirement that a vessel traveling down a slim fairway must keep as near to the fairway wall on the vessel's starboard side as is safe and practicable. 33 USCA § 2009(a)(i). [Cases: Collision ↻90.]

narrowly tailored, adj. (1972) (Of a content-neutral restriction on the time, place, or manner of speech in a designated public forum) being only as broad as is reasonably necessary to promote a substantial governmental interest that would be achieved less effectively without the restriction; no broader than absolutely necessary. See designated public forum under PUBLIC FORUM. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1505, 1747.]

narrow sea. (often pl.) A sea running between two coasts that are close to each another. • The English Channel, for example, is a narrow sea.

natale (nə-tay-lee), n. [Latin "of or belonging to birth"] Hist. The status a person acquires by birth. • For example, if one or both parents of a child were serfs, the child was generally regarded as a serf, and a child born free rarely became a serf. See NATIVUS.

nati et nascituri (nay-tī et nas-ə-t[y]oor-ī or -t[y]ər-ī), n. pl. [Latin "born and to be born"] Hist. A person's heirs, near and remote.

natio (nay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. A nation. 2. A group of students. 3. A native place.

nation, n. (14c) 1. A large group of people having a common origin, language, and tradition and usu. constituting a political entity. • When a nation is coincident with a state, the term nation-state is often used. — Also termed nationality.

"The nearest we can get to a definition is to say that a nation is a group of people bound together by common history, common sentiment and traditions, and, usually (though not always, as, for example, Belgium or Switzerland) by common heritage. A state, on the other hand, is a society of men united under one government. These two forms of society are not necessarily coincident. A single nation may be divided into several states, and conversely a single state may comprise several nations or parts of nations." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 136 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

2. A community of people inhabiting a defined territory and organized under an independent government; a sovereign political state. Cf. STATE.

National Agricultural Statistics Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for compiling statistical information and estimating agricultural production, supply, price, chemical use, and other related statistics. • Most of the data come from farmers, ranchers, and agribusinesses. — Abbr. NASS.

national airspace. See AIRSPACE.

National Archives and Records Administration. An independent federal agency that sets procedures for preserving governmental records that are important for legal and historical reasons; helps federal agencies manage their records; provides record-storage access; and manages the Presidential Libraries system. • The agency, run by the Archivist of the United States, retains only a small percentage of the federal records produced each year. It publishes the United States Statutes at Large, the Federal Register, the Code of Federal Regulations, the weekly Compilation of Presidential Documents, the annual Public Papers of the President, and the United States Government Manual. It is a successor to the National Archives Establishment, created in 1934, that was made a unit of the General Services Administration in 1949. It became an independent agency in 1984. — Abbr. NARA. See FEDERAL REGISTER. [Cases: Records ↻13.]

National Capital Planning Commission. A 12-member federal commission that plans the development of federal lands and facilities in the National Capital region, an area that includes the District of Columbia and six nearby counties — two in Maryland and four in Virginia. • The Commission was originally established as the National Capital Park Commission, a park-planning agency, in 1924. — Abbr. NCPC.

National Capital Region. The District of Columbia and six nearby counties: Montgomery and Prince George's in Maryland, and Fairfax, Loudoun, Prince William, and Arlington in Virginia. — Abbr. NCR.

National Cemetery Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs responsible for operating national cemeteries, providing headstones for unmarked graves of veterans worldwide, and making grants to states for establishing and caring for veterans' cemeteries. — Abbr. NCA.

National Conference of Black Lawyers. An organization of African American attorneys formed in 1969, active esp. in civil rights. — Abbr. NCBL.

National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. An organization that drafts and proposes statutes for adoption by individual states, with the goal of making the laws on various subjects uniform among the states. • Founded in 1892 and composed of representatives from all 50 states, the Conference has drafted more than 200 uniform laws, including the Uniform Commercial Code. — Abbr. NCCUSL. — Also termed Uniform Law Commissioners. See UNIFORM ACT; MODEL ACT; UNIFORM LAW.

National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges. An organization of judges and hearing officers who exercise jurisdiction over abuse, neglect, divorce, custody and visitation, support, domestic-violence, and other family-law cases. • Founded in 1937, the Council has an educational and support facility located near Reno, Nevada. It provides training, technical support, and professional assistance in improving courtroom operations.

National Credit Union Administration. An independent federal agency that charters, insures, supervises, and examines federal credit unions; administers the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund and the Community Development Revolving Loan Fund; and manages the Central Liquidity Facility, a separate mixed-ownership government corporation that supplies emergency loans to member credit unions. • The agency was established in 1970 and reorganized in 1978. — Abbr. NCUA. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations ↷2.1.]

national currency. See CURRENCY.

National Daily Quotation Service. See PINK SHEET.

national debt. (18c) The total financial obligation of the federal government, including such instruments as Treasury bills, notes, and bonds, as well as foreign debt. [Cases: United States ↷79.]

National Endowment for the Arts. An independent federal agency that promotes involvement in the arts by making grants to organizations, honoring artists for their achievements, expanding artistic resources, preserving cultural heritage, and funding projects that educate children and adults in the arts. — Abbr. NEA. See NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES.

National Endowment for the Humanities. An independent federal agency that supports research, education, and public programs in the humanities through grants to individuals, groups, and institutions. — Abbr. NEH. See NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES.

National Environmental Policy Act. A 1969 federal statute establishing U.S. environmental policy. • The statute requires federal agencies to submit an environmental-impact statement with every proposal for a program or law that would affect the environment. 42 USCA §§ 4321-4347 — Abbr. NEPA. See

ENVIRONMENTAL-IMPACT STATEMENT. [Cases: Environmental Law ↷571–615.]

"One should not assume that NEPA's emphasis upon procedural consideration of environmental consequences somehow diminishes its stature. To the contrary, NEPA is the key environmental statute to be reckoned with in lawsuits challenging agency action on NEPA grounds. As a result of the popularity of NEPA in court, federal agencies have become extremely sensitive to NEPA's procedural commands. They have not only sought to articulate the environmental impacts of their decisions before-the-fact, they have also either abandoned projects or mitigated their adverse environmental consequences after performing NEPA studies." Jan G. Laitos, Natural Resources Law § 4.01, at 119 (2002).

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service. See NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION.

National Firearms Act. A 1934 federal statute that governs the manufacture, possession, and transfer of certain types of firearms and other weapons. • In its original form, the act banned gangster-type weapons, such as machine guns and sawn-off shotguns. It has been expanded by amendments to cover most rifles and handguns, and also "destructive devices" such as grenades and land mines. 26 USCA §§ 5801 et seq. [Cases: Explosives ↷4; Weapons ↷4.]

National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities. An independent federal foundation that encourages and supports progress in the humanities and the arts by supporting the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Institute of Museum and Library Services. • The agency was created by act of Congress in 1965. See NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS; NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES; INSTITUTE OF MUSEUM AND LIBRARY SERVICES.

national government. The government of an entire country, as distinguished from that of a province, state, subdivision, or territory of the country and as distinguished from an international organization. See federal government (2) under GOVERNMENT.

National Guard. The U.S. militia, which is maintained as a reserve for the U.S. Army and Air Force. • Its members are volunteers, recruited and trained on a statewide basis and equipped by the federal government. A state may request the National Guard's assistance in quelling disturbances, and the federal government may order the National Guard into active service in times of war or other national emergency. See MILITIA. [Cases: Armed Services ↷5; Militia ↷1–22.]

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for regulating the safety of motor vehicles and their equipment. • The agency's work focuses on matters such as theft prevention, speed limits, truthful odometer readings, and fuel consumption. It was established by the Highway Safety Act of 1970. 23 USCA §§ 101 et seq. — Abbr. NHTSA.

National Imaging and Mapping Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for providing the armed forces and intelligence officers with up-to-date and accurate geospatial information, esp. in the form of photographs, maps, and charts. — Abbr. NIMA.

National Institute for Literacy. A federally aided institute that leads national efforts to achieve universal literacy. — Abbr. NIFL.

National Institute of Corrections. A federal organization (established within the Bureau of Prisons) whose responsibilities include helping federal, state, and local authorities improve correctional programs, conducting research on correctional issues such as crime prevention, and conducting workshops for law-enforcement personnel, social workers, judges, and others involved in treating and rehabilitating offenders. 18 USCA §§ 4351–4353. See BUREAU OF PRISONS.

National Institute of Standards and Technology. See TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION.

nationality. (17c) 1. NATION (1). 2. The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. • This term is often used synonymously with citizenship. See CITIZENSHIP. 3. The formal relationship between a ship and the nation under whose flag the ship sails. See FLAG STATE. [Cases: Shipping ↷2.]

"Nationality' is a term which has long been used to define the legal relationship between a state and a ship which is authorized by the state to fly its flag. . . . Discussions in the International Law Commission in 1951 reflected concern that the use of the term 'nationality' in reference to ships was misleading as it implied similarity to the term's use in defining the legal relationship between a state and its citizen. Nonetheless, the term has continued to be the one most often employed in describing the relationship between a ship and its flag state. It is important to realize, however, that in spite of their common names, the legal relationship ascribed to the nationality of ships does differ from that arising from the nationality of natural or juridical persons." Louis B. Sohn & Kristen Gustafson, The Law of the Sea in a Nutshell 1–2 (1984).

Nationality Act. See IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT.

nationality theory. The jurisdictional principle that citizens are subject to the laws of their country, no matter where the citizens are. [Cases: International Law ↷7.]

nationalization, n. (1847) 1. The act of bringing an industry under governmental control or ownership. [Cases: International Law ↷10.16.] 2. The act of giving a person the status of a citizen. See NATURALIZATION. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↷689–728.]

NTID.

National Telecommunications and Information Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for advising the President on telecommunications and information policy; conducting research through its Institute for Telecommunications Sciences; and making grants to support advanced infrastructures and to increase ownership by women and minorities. — Abbr. NTIA.

National Transportation Safety Board. An independent five-member federal board that investigates air, rail, water, highway, pipeline, and hazardous-waste accidents; conducts studies; and makes recommendations to government agencies, the transportation industry, and others on safety measures and practices. • The agency was created in 1966. 49 USCA §§ 1101-1155. — Abbr. NTSB. [Cases: Aviation ↷31.]

national treatment. Intellectual property. The policy or practice of a country that accords the citizens of other countries the same intellectual-property protection as it gives its own citizens, with no formal treaty of reciprocity required. • The principle of national treatment underlay the first international intellectual-property treaties in the 19th century, the Paris and Berne Conventions, and is also embodied in the TRIPs Agreement. Cf. RECIPROCITY; UNIVERSALITY.

"The beauty of the principle of national treatment is that it allows countries the autonomy to develop and enforce their own laws, while meeting the demands for international protection. Effectively, national treatment is a mechanism of international protection without harmonization." Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 5 (2001).

national-treatment clause. A provision contained in some treaties, usu. commercial ones, according foreigners the same rights, in certain respects, as those accorded to nationals. [Cases: Treaties ↷8.]

national union. See UNION.

nativitas (nə-tiv-ə-tas), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The servitude or bondage of serfs.

nativo habendo (nə-ti-voh hə-ben-doh), n. DE NATIVO HABENDO.

nativus (nə-ti-vəs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A person who is born a villein or serf.

"Having seen what serfdom means, we may ask how men become serfs. The answer is that almost always the serf is a born serf; nativus and villanus were commonly used as interchangeable terms . . ." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 422 (2d ed. 1898).

natural, adj. (14c) 1. In accord with the regular course of things in the universe and without accidental or purposeful interference . 2. Normal; proceeding from the regular character of a person or thing <it is natural for a duck to fly south in the winter>. 3. Brought about by nature as opposed to artificial means . 4. Inherent; not acquired or assumed <natural talent>. 5. Indigenous; native <the original or natural inhabitants of a country>. 6. Of or relating to birth <natural child as distinguished from adopted child>. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨ 1.] 7. Untouched by civilization; wild <only a small part of the forest remains in its natural state>. — naturally, adv.

natural, n. (16c) 1. A person who is native to a place. See NATIVE; natural-born citizen under CITIZEN. 2. A person or thing well suited for a particular endeavor.

natural-accumulation doctrine. The rule that a governmental entity or other landowner is not required to remove naturally occurring ice or snow from public property, such as a highway, unless the entity has, by taking some affirmative action (such as highway construction), increased the travel hazard to the public. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 262; Municipal Corporations ⇨ 773.]

natural affection. (16c) The love naturally existing between close relatives, such as parent and child. ● Natural affection is not consideration for a contract. See CONSIDERATION (1); executory contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 77.]

naturalization. (16c) The granting of citizenship to a foreign-born person under statutory authority.

Naturalization Clause. (1849) The constitutional provision stating that every person born or naturalized in the United States is a citizen of the United States and of the state of residence. U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1. See JUS SOLI. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⇨ 652, 678.]

naturalization court. A court having jurisdiction to hear and decide naturalization petitions. ● Naturalization courts were abolished as a result of the Immigration Act of 1990. Under current U.S. law, the Attorney General has the sole authority to naturalize citizens. But after a hearing before an immigration officer, an applicant may seek review of the denial of an application for naturalization in the federal district court for the district in which the applicant resides. If an applicant is certified to be eligible for naturalization, the oath of allegiance may be administered by the Attorney General, a federal district court, or a state court of record. See oath of allegiance under OATH. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⇨ 715.]

naturalize, vb. (16c) To grant the rights, privileges, and duties of citizenship to (one previously a noncitizen); to make (a noncitizen) a citizen under statutory authority. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↷ 689–728.] — naturalization, n.

naturalized citizen. See CITIZEN.

natural law. (15c) 1. A physical law of nature <gravitation is a natural law>. 2. A philosophical system of legal and moral principles purportedly deriving from a universalized conception of human nature or divine justice rather than from legislative or judicial action; moral law embodied in principles of right and wrong <many ethical teachings are based on natural law>. — Also termed law of nature; natural justice; lex aeterna; eternal law; lex naturae; lex naturalae; divine law; jus divinum; jus naturale; jus naturae; (in sense 2) normative jurisprudence; jure naturae. Cf. FUNDAMENTAL LAW; POSITIVE LAW; DIVINE LAW.

"Natural law, as it is revived today, seeks to organize the ideal element in law, to furnish a critique of old received ideals and give a basis for formulating new ones, and to yield a reasoned canon of values and a technique of applying it. I should prefer to call it philosophical jurisprudence. But one can well sympathize with those who would salvage the good will of the old name as an asset of the science of law." Roscoe Pound, The Formative Era of American Law 29 (1938).

"It is true that when medieval writers spoke of natural law as being discoverable by reason, they meant that the best human reasoning could discover it, and not, of course, that the results to which any and every individual's reasoning led him was natural law. The foolish criticism of Jeremy Bentham: 'a great multitude of people are continually talking of the law of nature; and then they go on giving you their sentiments about what is right and what is wrong; and these sentiments, you are to understand, are so many chapters and sections of the law of nature', merely showed a contempt for a great conception which Bentham had not taken the trouble to understand." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 20–21 (5th ed. 1955).

"[N]atural law is often an idealization of the opposite to that which prevails. Where inequality or privilege exists, natural law demands its abolition." Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 96 (1961).

natural life. (15c) A person's physical life span.

natura negotii (nə-tyoor-ə ni-goh-shee-ī). [Latin] Hist. The nature of the transaction.

nature. (14c) 1. A fundamental quality that distinguishes one thing from another; the essence of something. 2. A wild condition, untouched by civilization. 3. A disposition or personality of someone or something. 4. Something pure or true as distinguished from something artificial or contrived. 5. The basic instincts or impulses of someone or something. 6. The elements of the universe, such as mountains, plants, planets, and stars.

natus (nay-təs), adj. [Latin] Born; (of a child) alive.

naulerus (naw-kleer-əs), n. [Latin fr. Greek naus "ship" + klēros "allotment"] Roman law. A shipmaster; a skipper.

naulage (naw-lij), n. [Old French fr. Law Latin naulagium "passage money"] The fare for passengers or goods traveling by ship. See NAULUM.

naulum (naw-ləm), n. [Latin fr. Greek] Roman law. Fare; freights; a shipowner's fee for carrying people or goods from one place to another.

nauta (naw-tə), n. [Latin fr. Greek naus "ship"] Roman law. A sailor.

nautae, caupones, stabularii (naw-tee, kaw-poh-nee-z, stab-yə-lair-ee-ī). [Latin] Roman law. Carriers by sea, innkeepers, stablers. • The phrase was used in an edict holding shippers, innkeepers, and stablers liable for damages to goods entrusted to them for safekeeping (receptum). Members of this group were also vicariously liable for the torts of their employees and slaves.

"The edict is in these terms: 'NAUTAE, CAUPONES, STABULARII, QUOD CUJUSQUE SALVUM FORE RECEPERINT, NISI RESTITUENT, IN EOS JUDICIUM DABO.' This rule, from its expediency, has been, with some variations, received into the law of Scotland. Persons of this description are liable for their servants, or even for the acts of guests and passengers; and the extent of the damage may be proved by the oath of the claimant." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 737 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

nautical, adj. (16c) Of or relating to ships or shipping, carriage by sea, or navigation.

nautical assessor. A person skilled in maritime matters who is summoned in an admiralty case to assist the judge on points requiring special expertise.

nautical mile. (1834) A measure of distance for air and sea navigation, equal to one minute of arc of a great circle of the earth. • Different measures have been used by different countries because the earth is not a perfect sphere. Since 1959, however, the United States has used an international measure for a nautical mile, set by the Hydrographic Bureau, equal to 6,076.11549 feet, or 1,852 meters.

nauticum fenus (naw-ti-kəm fee-nəs), n. [Greek nautikon "nautical" + Latin fenus "interest"] Roman & civil law. A loan to finance the transport of goods by sea; specif., a loan on bottomry made to a transporter of merchandise by ship. • The loan is subject to an extremely high rate of interest because it does not have to be repaid unless the ship safely reaches its destination. The nauticum fenus is both a loan and marine insurance. The rate, originally unlimited because of the risks of sea travel, was eventually fixed at 12%. The money loaned is pecunia trajecticia (money conveyed overseas). — Also spelled nauticum foenus. — Also termed fenus nauticum; nautica pecunia; foenus nauticum.

NAV. abbr. NET ASSET VALUE.

navagium (na-vay-jee-əm), n. [Latin "ship; voyage"] Hist. A tenant's duty to transport the lord's goods by ship.

naval, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to ships or shipping. 2. Of or relating to a navy. See NAVY.

naval law. A system of regulations governing naval forces. See CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE. [Cases: Armed Services ↻2; Military Justice ↻507.]

navarch (nay-vahrk), n. [fr. Greek naus "ship" + archos "chief"] Hist. A master of an armed ship. — Also termed navarchus. Cf. NAVICULARIUS.

navicularius (nə-vik-yə-lair-ee-əs), n. [Latin "ship-owner"] Hist. A person engaged in the shipping business.

navigable (nav-i-gə-bəl), adj. (15c) 1. Capable of allowing vessels or vehicles to pass, and thereby usable for travel or commerce <the channel was barely navigable because it was so narrow>. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↻1.]

navigable in fact, adj. Naturally usable for travel or commerce in the present condition. • A stream is navigable in fact if, in its natural and ordinary state, it can be used for travel or commerce. For admiralty jurisdiction, the water must be capable of being used as a route in interstate or international commerce in customary modes of travel. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↻1.]

navigable airspace. See AIRSPACE.

navigable sea. Int'l law. The ocean waters divided into three zones of control among nations: (1) the inland waters, which are near a nation's shores and over which a nation has complete sovereignty; (2) territorial waters, which are measured from the seaward edge of the inland waters, over which a nation has extensive control but over which innocent parties must be allowed to travel to other nations; and (3) the high seas, which are international waters not subject to the domain of any single nation. [Cases: International Law ↻7.]

navigable water. 1. At early common law, any body of water affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. • This test was first adopted in England because most of England's in-fact navigable waters are influenced by the tide, unlike the large inland rivers that are capable of supporting commerce in the United States. — Also termed boatable water. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↻1.]

"In addition to its bearing on admiralty jurisdictional inquiries, the navigable waters issue comes up in cases involving the scope of Congress's regulatory authority under the commerce clause; the validity and interpretation of a variety of statutes and regulations administered by the Coast Guard; the powers of the Corps of Engineers over waterways, dams, marinas, etc., under the Rivers & Harbors Act and other statutes; the Federal Power Commission's authority to inspect and license electricity-generating dams; the existence and exercise of a servitude of navigation, which affects both public access to waterways on private land and governmental regulatory authority over such waters; and disputes over the ownership of stream beds. The foregoing is not an exhaustive listing. Well over a thousand federal statutes use the term 'navigable waters.'" David W. Robertson, Steven F. Friedell & Michael F. Sturley, Admiralty and Maritime Law in the United States 53 n.1 (2001).

2. (usu. pl.) A body of water that is used, or typically can be used, as a highway for commerce with ordinary modes of trade and travel on water. • Under the Commerce Clause, Congress has broad jurisdiction over all navigable waters of the United States. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↻1.] navigable water of the United States. Navigable water that alone — or in combination with other waters — forms a continuous highway for commerce with other states or foreign countries.

navigate, vb. (16c) 1. To travel or sail in a vessel on water <to navigate from New York to Bermuda>. [Cases: Collision ↻3, 90, 103.] 2. To steer <to navigate the plane>. 3. To make way through, on, or about something <the plaintiff was unable to navigate the stairs in the dark>.

navigation. (16c) 1. The act of sailing vessels on water. 2. The process and business of directing the course of a vessel from one place to another. See RULES OF NAVIGATION.

navigation easement. See EASEMENT.

ne admittas (nee ad-mit-əs), n. [Latin “that you admit not”] Eccles. law. A writ prohibiting a bishop, usu.

in a quare impedit action, from admitting the other party's clerk to be a parson of a church. • After a party institutes a quare impedit action to enforce a right to propose a clerk to the position of parson of a vacant church (right of advowson), that party can resort to the ne admittas writ if it is believed that the bishop will admit another person's proposed clerk before the quare impedit action concludes. See QUARE IMPEDIT.

near, adv. & adj. (13c) 1. Close to; not far away, as a measure of distance <the neighbors' houses are near one another>. 2. Almost; close in degree . 3. Closely tied by blood <my brother is a near relative>. 4. Familiar; intimate .

nearly closed-ended claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

near money. See current asset under ASSET.

neat, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Clean; pure. 2. Free from extraneous matter.

neat weight. See net weight under WEIGHT.

ne baila pas (nə bay-lə pah), n. [Law French “he or she did not deliver”] In an action for detinue, a defendant's plea denying the receipt of the property in question.

neccation (ni-kay-shən), n. [fr. Latin necare “to kill”] Hist. The act of killing.

necessaries. (14c) 1. Things that are indispensable to living <an infant's necessities include food, shelter, and clothing>. • Necessaries include whatever food, medicine, clothing, shelter, and personal services are usu. considered reasonably essential for the preservation and enjoyment of life, to the extent that a person having a duty of protection must furnish them. — Also termed necessities; necessities of life. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↻19.] 2. Things that are essential to maintaining the lifestyle to which one is accustomed . • The term includes whatever is reasonably needed for subsistence, health, comfort, and education, considering the person's age, station in life, and medical condition, but it excludes (1) anything purely ornamental, (2) anything solely for pleasure, (3) what the person is already supplied with, (4) anything that concerns someone's estate or business as opposed to personal needs, and (5) borrowed money. Under the common law, a husband was required to pay debts incurred by his wife or children for necessities. Beginning in the late 1960s, most states began to change their statutes regarding the obligation to provide necessities to include both husband and wife. See DOCTRINE OF NECESSARIES; FAMILY-EXPENSE STATUTE. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↻19.]

and diet required by an invalid would be unnecessary to one in ordinary health. It does not follow therefore that because a thing is of a useful class, a judge is bound to allow a jury to say whether or no it is a necessary." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 172 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3. Maritime law. Supplies and services needed for the maintenance and operation of a vessel, including repairs, tow fees, and the costs of loading and unloading. • Authorized provision of necessities automatically confers a maritime lien to the provider under the Federal Maritime Lien Act, 42 USCA § 971-93. [Cases: Maritime Liens ↻7-12, 23-25.]

"The case law is clear that 'necessaries' does not mean absolutely indispensable; rather, the term refers to what is reasonably needed in the ship's business." Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law 256 (1987).

necessarily included offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE (1).

necessarius (nə-sə-sair-ee-əs), adj. [Latin] 1. Necessary; essential. 2. Unavoidable; obligatory; compelling.

necessary and proper, adj. (16c) Being appropriate and well adapted to fulfilling an objective.

Necessary and Proper Clause. (1926) The clause of the U.S. Constitution permitting Congress to make laws "necessary and proper" for the execution of its enumerated powers. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 18. • The Supreme Court has broadly interpreted this clause to grant Congress the implied power to enact any law reasonably designed to achieve an express constitutional power. McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U.S. (4 Wheat.) 316 (1819). — Also termed Basket Clause; Coefficient Clause; Elastic Clause; Sweeping Clause. [Cases: United States ↻22.] necessary damages. See general damages under DAMAGES.

necessary deposit. See DEPOSIT (5).

necessary diligence. See DILIGENCE.

necessary domicile. See DOMICILE.

necessary implication. See IMPLICATION.

necessary improvement. See IMPROVEMENT.

necessary inference. (17c) A conclusion that is unavoidable if the premise on which it is based is taken to be true.

necessary intromission. See INTROMISSION.

necessary party. See PARTY (2).

necessary repair. (16c) An improvement to property that is both needed to prevent deterioration and proper under the circumstances.

necessary way. See easement by necessity under EASEMENT.

necessitas (nə-ses-i-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Necessity. 2. A force or influence that compels an unwilling person to act. • The term refers to a lack of free will to do a legal act, as opposed to libera voluntas ("free will").

necessitas culpabilis (nə-ses-i-tas kəl-pay-bə-lis). [Latin "culpable necessity"] Hist. An unfortunate necessity that, while essentially excusing the act done under its compulsion, does not necessarily relieve the actor from blame.

"And as to the necessity which excuses a man who kills another se defendendo lord Bacon entitles it necessitas culpabilis For the law intends that the quarrel or assault arose from some unknown wrong . . . and since in quarrels both parties may be, and usually are, in some fault; and it scarce can be tried who was originally in the wrong; the law will not hold the survivor entirely guiltless. But it is clear, in the other case, that where I kill a thief that breaks into my house, the original default can never be upon my side." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 186-87 (1769).

necessitate juris (nə-ses-i-tay-tee joor-is). [Latin] Hist. By necessity of law. • That phrase appeared in reference to acts necessarily arising from the effect of a legal rule.

necessities. (14c) 1. Indispensable things of any kind. 2. NECESSARIES (1).

necessities of life. See NECESSARIES (1). necessitous, adj. (17c) Living in a state of extreme want; hard up.

necessitous circumstances. (17c) The situation of one who is very poor; extreme want.

necessitudo (nə-ses-i-t[yo]-doh), n. [Latin "need"] Hist. 1. An obligation. 2. A close connection or relationship between persons, such as a family relationship.

necessity. 1. Criminal law. A justification defense for a person who acts in an emergency that he or she did not create and who commits a harm that is less severe than the harm that would have occurred but for the person's actions. • For example, a mountain climber lost in a blizzard can assert necessity as a defense to theft of food and blankets from another's cabin. — Also termed choice of evils; duress of circumstances; lesser-evils defense. See lesser-evils defense under DEFENSE (1). [Cases: Criminal Law ↻38.] 2. Torts. A privilege that may relieve a person from liability for trespass or conversion if that person, having no alternative, harms another's property in an effort to protect life or health.

"In some cases even damage intentionally done may not involve the defendant in liability when he is acting under necessity to prevent a greater evil. The precise limits of the defence are not clear, for it has affinities with certain other defences, such as act of God, self-help, duress, or inevitable accident. It is distinguishable from self-defence on the ground that this presupposes that the plaintiff is prima facie a wrongdoer: the defence of necessity contemplates the infliction of harm on an innocent plaintiff. The defence, if it exists, enables a defendant to escape liability for the intentional interference with the security of another's person or property on the ground that the acts complained of were necessary to prevent greater damage to the commonwealth or to another or to the defendant himself, or to their or his property. The use of the term necessity serves to conceal the fact that the defendant always has a choice between two evils. This is what distinguishes the defence of necessity from that of impossibility." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 493 (17th ed. 1977).

manifest necessity. (17c) A sudden and overwhelming emergency, beyond the court's and parties' control, that makes conducting a trial or reaching a fair result impossible and that therefore authorizes the granting of a mistrial. • The standard of manifest necessity must be met to preclude a defendant from successfully raising a plea of former jeopardy after a mistrial. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ⇨ 99.]

moral necessity. (17c) A necessity arising from a duty incumbent on a person to act in a particular way.

physical necessity. (17c) A necessity involving an actual, tangible force that compels a person to act in a particular way.

private necessity. (16c) Torts. A necessity that involves only the defendant's personal interest and thus provides only a limited privilege. • For example, if the defendant harms the plaintiff's dock by keeping a boat moored to the dock during a hurricane, the defendant can assert private necessity but must compensate the plaintiff for the dock's damage. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 510(3).]

public necessity. (16c) Torts. A necessity that involves the public interest and thus completely excuses the defendant's liability. • For example, if the defendant destroys the plaintiff's house to stop the spread of a fire that threatens the town, the defendant can assert public necessity.

3. RULE OF NECESSITY.

necessity defense. See JUSTIFICATION (2).

neck verse. Hist. A verse, usu. consisting of the opening verse of Psalm 51 (Miserere mei, Deus "Have mercy on me, O God"), which was used as a literacy test for an accused who claimed benefit of clergy. • An accused who read the passage satisfactorily would not receive the maximum sentence (the person's neck would be saved). Although judges could assign any passage, they usu. chose Psalm 51, so that for many years criminals memorized this verse and pretended to read it. Still, the records show that many accused persons failed the test. The reading of the neck verse was abolished in 1707. See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

"During the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries the judges' attitudes to benefit of clergy changed completely, and they came to see it as a regular means of escape from the mandatory death penalty. Physical appearance was disregarded, and reading became the sole test of clerical status. When a man was convicted of a felony, he would fall on his knees and 'pray the book'; he would then be tendered a passage from the psalter, known as the neck-verse, and if he could read or recite it satisfactorily his clergy was taken to be proved. . . . Strictly speaking, the decision whether the convict read 'as a clerk' was for the ordinary; but he was subject to the control of the judges, and could be fined for refusing to accept someone. By the end of the sixteenth century as many as half of all men convicted of felony were recorded as having successfully claimed benefit of clergy." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 587 (3d ed. 1990).

nec manifestum (nek man-i-fes-təm). [Latin] Civil law. Not manifest. • The phrase usu. referred to a theft in which the thief was not caught in the act.

ne conjuges mutuo amore se invicem spoliēt (nee kən-joo-jeez myoo-choo-oh ə-mor-ee see in-vi-səm spoh-lee-ənt). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Lest spouses through their mutual love should impoverish one another. • The phrase appeared in reference to the rationale for holding that donations between husband and wife were invalid. A similar phrase, ne mutuato amore invicem spoliarentur ("lest they should be impoverished by each other through their mutual affection"), was also used.

necropsy (nek-rɒp-see). See AUTOPSY (1).

ne disturba pas (nə di-stər-bə pah), n. [Law French "did not disturb"] Eccles. law. A defendant's general denial (plea of the general issue) in a quare impedit action. See QUARE IMPEDIT.

ne dominia rerum sint incerta, neve lites sint perpetuae (nee də-min-ee-ə reer-əm sint in-sər-tə, nee-vee li-teez sint pər-pech-oo-ee). [Latin] Hist. Lest the ownership of things should remain uncertain or lawsuits never come to an end. • The phrase appeared in reference to the principle on which all actions prescribed after (usu.) 30 years. See PRESCRIPTION.

ne dona pas (nə doh-nə pah), n. [Law French "did not give"] Hist. A defendant's general denial (plea of the general issue) in a formedon action, alleging that the plaintiff was given the right to land under a gift of tail. — Also termed non dedit. See FORMEDON.

née (nay), adj. [French] (17c) (Of a woman) born. • This term is sometimes used after a married woman's name to indicate her maiden name <Mrs. Robert Jones, née Thatcher>. The masculine form (not common in English) is né. — Also spelled nee.

needy, adj. (12c) 1. Needful; necessary. 2. Indigent; very poor. • Needy implies a more permanent and less urgent condition than neccituous. See NECESSITOUS.

ne exeat (nee ek-see-ət [or ek-see-at]). [Latin "that he not depart"]. 1. A writ restraining a person from leaving the republic; specif., an equitable writ ordering the person to whom it is addressed not to leave the jurisdiction of the court or the state. • Ne exeat writs are usu. issued to ensure the satisfaction of a claim against the defendant. The full phrase is ne exeat republica (nee ek-see-ət [or ek-see-at] ri-pəb-li-kəh) [Latin "let him not go out of the republic"]. 2. Family law. An equitable writ restraining a person from leaving, or removing a child or property from, the jurisdiction. • A ne exeat is often issued to prohibit a person from removing a child or property from the jurisdiction — and sometimes from leaving the jurisdiction. — Also termed writ of ne exeat; ne exeat republica; ne exeat regno. [Cases: Ne Exeat ⇨ 1.]

"The district courts of the United States . . . shall have such jurisdiction to make and issue in civil actions, writs and orders of injunction, and of ne exeat republica, orders appointing receivers, and such other orders and processes . . . as may be necessary or appropriate for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws." IRC (26 USCA) § 7402(a).

"Such a writ [ne exeat] might be issued upon the commencement of the suit for equitable relief, during the pendency of the suit, or upon issuance of the final decree to secure its enforcement. But such writ related primarily to the person of the defendant and issued only upon satisfactory proof that he planned or intended to remove himself beyond the court's jurisdiction so that he might escape obedience to such command as might be or had been laid upon him. The writ has been frequently termed an equitable bail. It involves taking and keeping the defendant in custody until he gives bail or bond in a designated amount, conditioned upon his keeping himself amenable to the effective processes of the court." William Q. de Funiak, Handbook of Modern Equity 21 (2d ed. 1956).

ne exeat regno. See NE EXEAT.

ne exeat republica. See NE EXEAT.

nefas (nee-fas), n. [Latin ne "not" + fas "right"] 1. Roman law. Something that the gods forbid. 2. Roman law. Something against the law or custom. 3. Hist. Something that is wicked. Cf. FAS.

nefastus (ni-fas-təs), n. [Latin ne "not" + fastus "lawful for public business"] Roman law. A day when it is unlawful to open the courts, administer justice, or hold public assemblies. ● The priests in charge of supervising the laws and religious observances established an official calendar, on which certain days, marked "nefasti," were to be devoted to religious or public ceremonies. — Also termed dies nefasti. Cf. dies fasti under DIES.

negate, vb. (17c) 1. To deny. 2. To nullify; to render ineffective.

negative, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to something bad; not positive . 2. Of or relating to refusal of consent; not affirmative .

negative, n. (16c) 1. A word or phrase of denial or refusal <"no" and "not" are negatives>. 2. A word expressing the opposite of the positive <two negatives and one positive>. 3. The original plate or film of a photograph, on which light and shadows are the opposite of the positive images later created and printed <not only the pictures, but also the negatives, were required to be returned>. 4. Archaic. The power of veto <the king's negative has eroded>.

negative, vb. (18c) To negate; to deny, nullify, or render ineffective <the jury negated fraud>.

negative act. See ACT.

negative amortization. See AMORTIZATION.

negative averment. See AVERMENT.

negative cash flow. See CASH FLOW.

negative causation. See CAUSATION.

Negative Commerce Clause. See Dormant Commerce Clause under COMMERCE CLAUSE.

negative condition. See CONDITION (2).

negative contingent fee. See reverse contingent fee under CONTINGENT FEE.

negative covenant. See COVENANT (1).

negative defense. See DEFENSE (1).

negative disinheritance. See DISINHERITANCE.

negative duty. See DUTY (1).

negative easement. See EASEMENT.

negative equity. See EQUITY (7).

negative evidence. See EVIDENCE.

negative externality. See EXTERNALITY.

negative limitation. Patents. In a patent application, a claim that describes what the element is not or does not do, rather than what it is or does. ● Although older caselaw held that a negative limitation rendered a claim indefinite, more recent decisions allow those that define a clear alternative as long as the claim is not overbroad. [Cases: Patents ⇄ 101(3).]

negative-pledge clause. (1935) 1. A provision requiring a borrower, who borrows funds without giving security, to refrain from giving future lenders any security without the consent of the first lender. 2. A provision, usu. in a bond indenture, stating that the issuing entity will not pledge its assets if it will result in less security to the bondholders under the indenture agreement.

negative pregnant. (17c) A denial implying its affirmative opposite by seeming to deny only a qualification of the allegation and not the allegation itself. ● An example is the statement, "I didn't steal the money last Tuesday," the implication being that the theft might have happened on another day. — Also termed negative pregnant with an affirmative. Cf. AFFIRMATIVE PREGNANT. [Cases: Pleading ⇄ 126.]

negative proof. See PROOF.

negative reprisal. See REPRISAL.

negative servitude. See SERVITUDE (2).

negative statute. See STATUTE.

negative testimony. See negative evidence under EVIDENCE.

negative veto. See qualified veto under VETO.

neglect, n. (16c) 1. The omission of proper attention to a person or thing, whether inadvertent, negligent, or willful; the act or condition of disregarding. 2. The failure to give proper attention, supervision, or necessities, esp. to a child, to such an extent that harm results or is likely to result. Cf. ABUSE. — neglect, vb. — neglectful, adj.

"'Neglect' is not the same thing as 'negligence'. In the present connection the word 'neglect' indicates, as a purely objective fact, that a person has not done that which it was his duty to do; it does not indicate the reason for this failure. 'Negligence,' on the other hand, is a subjective state of mind, and it indicates a particular reason why the man has failed to do his duty, namely because he has not kept the performance of the duty in his mind as he ought to have done. A man can 'neglect' his duty either intentionally or negligently." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 108 n.1 (16th ed. 1952).

child neglect. (1930) The failure of a person responsible for a minor to care for the minor's emotional or physical needs. • Child neglect is a form of child abuse. Local child-welfare departments investigate reports of child neglect. In a severe case, criminal charges may be filed against a person suspected of child neglect. [Cases: Infants ⇨156.]

culpable neglect. (18c) Censurable or blameworthy neglect; neglect that is less than gross carelessness but more than the failure to use ordinary care.

developmental neglect. Failure to provide necessary emotional nurturing and physical or cognitive stimulation, as a result of which a child could suffer from serious developmental delays. [Cases: Infants ⇨156.]

educational neglect. Failure to ensure that a child attends school in accordance with state law. [Cases: Infants ⇨159.]

excusable neglect. (1855) A failure — which the law will excuse — to take some proper step at the proper time (esp. in neglecting to answer a lawsuit) not because of the party's own carelessness, inattention, or willful disregard of the court's process, but because of some unexpected or unavoidable hindrance or accident or because of reliance on the care and vigilance of the party's counsel or on a promise made by the adverse party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2448, 2656; Judgment ⇨143, 362.]

inexcusable neglect. (18c) Unjustifiable neglect; neglect that implies more than unintentional inadvertence. • A finding of inexcusable neglect in, for example, failing to file an answer to a complaint will prevent the setting aside of a default judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2448, 2656; Judgment ⇨143, 362.]

medical neglect. Failure to provide medical, dental, or psychiatric care that is necessary to prevent or to treat serious physical or emotional injury or illness. • In determining whether a parent's refusal to consent to medical treatment is neglectful, courts use any of three approaches: (1) an ad hoc test, (2) a best-interests-of-the-child test, or (3) a balancing test that weighs the interests of the parents, the child, and the state. Cf. FAITH-HEALING EXEMPTION. [Cases: Infants ⇨159.]

physical neglect. Failure to provide necessities, the lack of which has caused or could cause serious injury or illness. [Cases: Infants ⇨156.]

willful neglect. (18c) Intentional or reckless failure to carry out a legal duty, esp. in caring for a child. [Cases: Infants ⇨156.]

neglected child. See CHILD.

neglect hearing. See HEARING.

neglegentia (neg-li-jen-shee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. Carelessness; inattentive omission. • Neglegentia can be of varying degrees, which may or may not result in actionable liability. — Also spelled negligentia. See CULPA. Cf. DILIGENTIA.

"In the sources negligentia is tantamount to culpa, and similarly graduated (magna, lata negligentia). Precision in terminology is no more to be found here than in the field of culpa. One text declares . . . 'gross negligence (magna negligentia) is culpa, magna culpa is dolus'; another says: 'gross negligence (dissoluta negligentia) is near to dolus (prope dolum).' In the saying 'lata culpa is exorbitant (extreme) negligence, i.e., not to understand (intelligere) what all understand' . . . negligentia is identified with ignorance." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 593 (1953).

lata negligentia (lay-tə neg-li-jen-shee-ə). Extreme negligence resulting from an unawareness of something that the actor should have known.

magna neglegentia (mag-nə neg-li-jen-shee-ə). See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

negligence, n. (14c) 1. The failure to exercise the standard of care that a reasonably prudent person would have exercised in a similar situation; any conduct that falls below the legal standard established to protect others against unreasonable risk of harm, except for conduct that is intentionally, wantonly, or willfully disregarding of others' rights. • The term denotes culpable carelessness. The Roman-law equivalents are culpa and neglegentia, as contrasted with dolus (wrongful intention). — Also termed actionable negligence; ordinary negligence; simple negligence. [Cases: Negligence ⇨201, 233, 250.] 2. A tort grounded in this failure, usu. expressed in terms of the following elements: duty, breach of duty, causation, and damages. [Cases: Negligence ⇨202.]

"Negligence in law ranges from inadvertence that is hardly more than accidental to sinful disregard of the safety of others." Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 36 (1968).

"During the first half of the nineteenth century, negligence began to gain recognition as a separate and independent basis of tort liability. Its rise coincided in a marked degree with the Industrial Revolution; and it very probably was stimulated by the rapid increase in the number of accidents caused by industrial machinery, and in particular by the invention of railways. It was greatly encouraged by the disintegration of the old forms of action, and the disappearance of the distinction between direct and indirect injuries, found in trespass and case . . . Intentional injuries, whether direct or indirect, began to be grouped as a distinct field of liability, and negligence remained as the main basis for unintended torts. Negligence thus developed into the dominant cause of action for accidental injury in this nation today." W. Page Keeton et al., The Law of Torts § 28, at 161 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

"Negligence is a matter of risk — that is to say, of recognizable danger of injury . . . In most instances, it is caused by heedlessness or inadvertence, by which the negligent party is unaware of the results which may follow from his act. But it may also arise where the negligent party has considered the possible consequences carefully, and has exercised his own best judgment. The almost universal use of the phrase 'due care' to describe conduct which is not negligent should not obscure the fact that the essence of negligence is not necessarily the absence of solicitude for those who may be adversely affected by one's actions but is instead behavior which should be recognized as involving unreasonable danger to others." Id., at 169.

active negligence. (1875) Negligence resulting from an affirmative or positive act, such as driving through a barrier. Cf. passive negligence.

advertent negligence. (1909) Negligence in which the actor is aware of the unreasonable risk that he or she is creating; RECKLESSNESS. — Also termed willful negligence; supine negligence.

casual negligence. A plaintiff's failure to (1) pay reasonable attention to his or her surroundings, so as to discover the danger created by the defendant's negligence, (2) exercise reasonable competence, care, diligence, and skill to avoid the danger once it is perceived, or (3) prepare as a reasonable person would to avoid future dangers.

collateral negligence. An independent contractor's negligence, for which the employer is generally not liable. See COLLATERAL-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE.

comparative negligence. (1862) A plaintiff's own negligence that proportionally reduces the damages recoverable from a defendant. — Also termed comparative fault. See COMPARATIVE-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ↷549.]

concurrent negligence. (1831) The negligence of two or more parties acting independently but causing the same damage. Cf. joint negligence.

contributory negligence. (1822) 1. A plaintiff's own negligence that played a part in causing the plaintiff's injury and that is significant enough (in a few jurisdictions) to bar the plaintiff from recovering damages. • In most jurisdictions, this defense has been superseded by comparative negligence. See CONTRIBUTORY-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE; DISTRACTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ↷547.] 2. Rare. The negligence of a third party — neither the plaintiff nor the defendant — whose act or omission played a part in causing the plaintiff's injury. [Cases: Negligence ↷540.]

"The contributory negligence of a third party is no excuse for the negligence of the defendant." Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 154 (13th ed. 1924).

criminal negligence. (1838) Gross negligence so extreme that it is punishable as a crime. • For example, involuntary manslaughter or other negligent homicide can be based on criminal negligence, as when an extremely careless automobile driver kills someone. — Also termed culpable negligence; gross negligence. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷23; Negligence ↷1800–1802.]

"Though the legislatures and the courts have often made it clear that criminal liability generally requires more fault than the ordinary negligence which will do for tort liability, they have not so often made it plain just what is required in addition to tort negligence — greater risk, subjective awareness of the risk, or both. Statutes are sometimes worded in terms of 'gross negligence' or 'culpable negligence' or 'criminal negligence,' without any further definition of these terms. . . . The courts thus have had to do their

culpable negligence. (17c) 1. Negligent conduct that, while not intentional, involves a disregard of the consequences likely to result from one's actions. 2. See criminal negligence.

"'Culpable negligence,' while variously defined, has been held incapable of exact definition; it means something more than negligence. . . . In connection with negligence, the word 'culpable' is sometimes used in the sense of 'blamable,' and it has been regarded as expressing the thought of a breach of a duty or the commission of a fault; but culpable negligence has been held to amount to more than 'blameworthy' conduct. . . . It does not involve the element of intent. . . . On the other hand, it has been said to be intentional conduct which the actor may not intend to be harmful but which an ordinary and reasonably prudent man would recognize as involving a strong probability of injury to others." 65 C.J.S. Negligence § 1(13) (1966).

gross negligence. (16c) 1. A lack of slight diligence or care. [Cases: Negligence ↷273.] 2. A conscious, voluntary act or omission in reckless disregard of a legal duty and of the consequences to another party, who may typically recover exemplary damages. — Also termed reckless negligence; wanton negligence; willful negligence; willful and wanton negligence; hazardous negligence; magna negligentia. [Cases: Damages ↷91.5(1); Negligence ↷273.] 3. See criminal negligence.

"Negligence is gross if the precautions to be taken against harm are very simple, such as persons who are but poorly endowed with physical and mental capacities can easily take." H.L.A. Hart, "Negligence, Mens Rea and Criminal Responsibility," in Punishment and Responsibility 136, 149 (1968).

"Gross Negligence. As it originally appeared, this was very great negligence, or the want of even slight or scant care. It has been described as a failure to exercise even that care which a careless person would use. Several courts, however, dissatisfied with a term so nebulous. . . . have construed gross negligence as requiring willful, wanton, or reckless misconduct, or such utter lack of all care as will be evidence thereof. . . . But it is still true that most courts consider that 'gross negligence' falls short of a reckless disregard of the consequences, and differs from ordinary negligence only in degree, and not in kind." Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 34, at 211–12 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

hazardous negligence. 1. Careless or reckless conduct that exposes someone to extreme danger of injury or to imminent peril. 2. See gross negligence (2).

imputed negligence. (18c) Negligence of one person charged to another; negligence resulting from a party's special relationship with another party who is originally negligent — so that, for example, a parent might be held responsible for some acts of a child. [Cases: Negligence ↷483, 575; Parent and Child ↷13.5(2), 13.5(4).]

inadvertent negligence. (18c) Negligence in which the actor is not aware of the unreasonable risk that he or she is creating, but should have foreseen and avoided it. — Also termed simple negligence.

joint negligence. (18c) The negligence of two or more persons acting together to cause an accident. Cf. concurrent negligence.

legal negligence. See negligence per se.

negligence in law. Failure to observe a duty imposed by law. See negligence per se; legal negligence.

negligence per se. (1841) Negligence established as a matter of law, so that breach of the duty is not a jury question. • Negligence per se usu. arises from a statutory violation. — Also termed legal negligence. [Cases: Negligence ↻ 259.]

ordinary negligence. (16c) 1. Lack of ordinary diligence; the failure to use ordinary care. • The term is most commonly used to differentiate between negligence and gross negligence. [Cases: Negligence ↻ 232.] 2. NEGLIGENCE (1). passive negligence. (18c) Negligence resulting from a person's failure or omission in acting, such as failing to remove hazardous conditions from public property. Cf. active negligence.

professional negligence. See MALPRACTICE.

reckless negligence. See gross negligence.

simple negligence. 1. See inadvertent negligence. 2. See NEGLIGENCE (1).

slight negligence. (18c) The failure to exercise the great care of an extraordinarily prudent person, resulting in liability in special circumstances (esp. those involving bailments or carriers) in which lack of ordinary care would not result in liability; lack of great diligence.

subsequent negligence. (1827) The negligence of the defendant when, after the defendant's initial negligence and the plaintiff's contributory negligence, the defendant discovers — or should have discovered — that the plaintiff was in a position of danger and fails to exercise due care in preventing the plaintiff's injuries. — Also termed supervening negligence. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ↻ 530.]

supine negligence. See advertent negligence.

tax negligence. Negligence arising out of the disregard of tax-payment laws, for which the Internal Revenue Service may impose a penalty — 5% of the amount underpaid. IRC (26 USCA) § 6651(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻ 5219.]

wanton negligence. See gross negligence.

willful and wanton negligence. See gross negligence.

willful negligence. 1. See advertent negligence. 2. See gross negligence.

negligence rule. (1914) Commercial law. The principle that if a party's negligence contributes to an unauthorized signing or a material alteration in a negotiable instrument, that party is estopped from raising this issue against later parties who transfer or pay the instrument in good faith. • Examples of negligence include leaving blanks or spaces on the amount line of the instrument, erroneously mailing the instrument to negligent, adj. (14c) Characterized by a person's failure to exercise the degree of care that someone of ordinary prudence would have exercised in the same circumstance <the negligent driver went through the stop sign> <negligent construction caused the bridge to collapse>. [Cases: Automobiles ↻ 146; Negligence ↻ 200, 232.] — negligently, adv.

negligent entrustment. (1944) The act of leaving a dangerous article (such as a gun or car) with a person who the lender knows, or should know, is likely to use it in an unreasonably risky manner. [Cases: Automobiles ↻ 192(11); Negligence ↻ 351-355; Weapons ↻ 18.]

negligent hiring. Torts. An employer's lack of care in selecting an employee who the employer knew or should have known was unfit for the position, thereby creating an unreasonable risk that another person would be harmed.

negligent homicide. See HOMICIDE.

negligentia (neg-li-jen-shee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. See NEGLEGENTIA.

negligent infliction of emotional distress. (1970) The tort of causing another severe emotional distress through one's negligent conduct. • Most courts will allow a plaintiff to recover damages for emotional distress if the defendant's conduct results in physical contact with the plaintiff or, when no contact occurs, if the plaintiff is in the zone of danger. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS; ZONE-OF-DANGER RULE. — Abbr. NIED. Cf. INTENTIONAL INFLECTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. [Cases: Damages ↻ 57.13.]

negligent manslaughter. See involuntary manslaughter under MANSLAUGHTER.

negligent misrepresentation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

negligent offense. See OFFENSE (1).

negligent tort. See TORT.

négoce (ni-gohs), n. [French] Trade; business.

negotiability. (18c) The capability of commercial paper to have its title transferred by indorsement and delivery, or by delivery alone, so that the transferee has a rightful claim on it. • Negotiability (which pertains to commercial paper) differs from assignability (which pertains to contracts in general) because an assignee traditionally takes title subject to all equities, and an assignment is not complete without notice to the debtor, whereas an indorsee takes free of all equities and without any notice to the debtor. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 144–175.]

negotiable, adj. (18c) 1. (Of a written instrument) capable of being transferred by delivery or indorsement when the transferee takes the instrument for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 144.] 2. (Of a deal, agreement, etc.) capable of being accomplished. 3. (Of a price or deal) subject to further bargaining and possible change. Cf. NONNEGOTIABLE; ASSIGNABLE.

"The term 'negotiable,' in its enlarged signification, is used to describe any written security which may be transferred by indorsement and delivery, or by delivery merely, so as to vest in the indorsee the legal title, and thus enable him to bring a suit thereon in his own name. But in a strictly commercial classification, and as the term is technically used, it applies only to those instruments which, like bills of exchange, not only carry the legal title with them by indorsement, or delivery, but carry as well, when transferred before maturity, the right of the transferee to demand the full amounts which their faces call for. 'Assignable' is the more appropriate term to describe bonds, and ordinary notes, or notes of hand as they are most commonly called, as 'negotiable' is the more fitting term to describe the peculiar instruments of commerce." 1 John W. Daniel, A Treatise on the Law of Negotiable Instruments § 2, at 3 (Thomas H. Calvert ed., 7th ed. 1933).

negotiable bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

negotiable bond. See BOND (2). negotiable certificate of deposit. See CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT.

negotiable document of title. See DOCUMENT OF TITLE.

negotiable instrument. (18c) A written instrument that (1) is signed by the maker or drawer, (2) includes an unconditional promise or order to pay a specified sum of money, (3) is payable on demand or at a definite time, and (4) is payable to order or to bearer. UCC § 3-104(a). — Also termed negotiable paper; negotiable note. • Among the various types of negotiable instruments are bills of exchange, promissory notes, bank checks, certificates of deposit, and other negotiable securities. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 5, 144–175.]

"What are called 'negotiable instruments,' or 'paper to bearer,' such as bills of exchange, or promissory notes, do really pass from hand to hand, either by delivery or indorsement, giving to each successive recipient a right against the debtor, to which no notice to the debtor is essential, and which, if the paper is held bona fide and for value, is unaffected by flaws in the title of intermediate assignors." Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 315–16 (13th ed. 1924).

"One must first understand that a negotiable instrument is a peculiar animal and that many animals calling for the payment of money and others loosely called 'commercial paper' are not negotiable instruments and not subject to the rules of Article 3." James J. White & Robert S. Summers, 2 Uniform Commercial Code § 16-1, at 70 (4th ed. 1995).

negotiable order of withdrawal. A negotiable instrument (such as a check) payable on demand and issued against funds deposited with a financial institution. — Abbr. NOW.

negotiable paper. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

negotiable words. (1819) The terms and phrases that make a document a negotiable instrument. — Also termed words of negotiability. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 147.]

negotiate, vb. (16c) 1. To communicate with another party for the purpose of reaching an understanding <they negotiated with their counterparts for weeks on end>. 2. To bring about by discussion or bargaining <she negotiated a software license agreement>. 3. To transfer (an instrument) by delivery or indorsement, whereby the transferee takes the instrument for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses <Jones negotiated the check at the neighborhood bank>. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 176, 208.] negotiated agreement. A settlement that disputing parties reach between themselves, usu. with the help of their attorneys, but without benefit of formal mediation. — Also termed negotiated settlement. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement ⇨ 2.]

negotiated market. See MARKET.

negotiated offering. See OFFERING.

negotiated plea. See PLEA (1).

negotiation, n. (16c) 1. A consensual bargaining process in which the parties attempt to reach agreement on a disputed or potentially disputed matter. • Negotiation usu. involves complete autonomy for the parties involved, without the intervention of third parties. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 25.]

"Negotiation, we may say, ought strictly to be viewed simply as a means to an end; it is the road the parties must travel to arrive at their goal of mutually satisfactory settlement. But like other means, negotiation is easily converted into an end in itself; it readily becomes a game played for its own sake and a game played with so little reserve by those taken up with it that they will sacrifice their own ultimate interests in order to win it." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 128 (1968).

2. (usu. pl.) Dealings conducted between two or more parties for the purpose of reaching an understanding.

3. The transfer of an instrument by delivery or indorsement whereby the transferee takes it for value, in good faith, and without notice of conflicting title claims or defenses. See HOLDER IN DUE COURSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻ 176, 208.] — negotiate, vb. — negotiable, adj. — negotiability, n.

due negotiation. The transfer of a negotiable document of title so that the transferee takes it free of certain claims enforceable against the transferor. • This is the good-faith-purchase exception to the doctrine of derivative title. UCC §§ 7-501(4); 7-502(1). [Cases: Warehousemen ↻ 15.]

negotiorum gestio (ni-goh-shee-or-əm jes-chee-oh), n. [Latin “management of another’s affairs”] Roman & civil law. A quasi-contractual situation in which an actor (negotiorum gestor) manages or interferes in the business transaction of another person (dominus negotii) in that person’s absence, without authority but out of concern or friendship. La. Civ. Code art. 2292. • By such conduct, the actor is bound to conduct the matter to a conclusion and to deliver the transaction’s proceeds to the person, who likewise must reimburse the actor for any expenses incurred. La. Civ. Code art. 2297. A negotiorum gestio does not exist if the gestor acted self-interestedly or if the owner expressly forbade the gestor from acting on the owner’s behalf. See actio negotiorum gestorum under ACTIO. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ↻ 2.1; Principal and Agent ↻ 149(2).]

“The negotiorum gestio, according to the civilians, is a species of spontaneous agency, or an interference by one in the affairs of another, in his absence, from benevolence or friendship, and without authority. The negotiorum gestor acquires no right of property by means of the interference, and he is strictly bound not only to good faith, but to ordinary care and diligence; and in some cases he is held responsible for the slightest neglect.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *616 n.(c) (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

negotiorum gestor (ni-goh-shee-or-əm jes-tor), n. [Latin “a manager of another’s affairs”] Roman & civil law. A person who acts without authority to protect another person’s interests, in the reasonable belief that the owner would approve the action if made aware of the circumstances. La. Civ. Code art. 2292. • The actor has a claim to be compensated by the owner for the trouble taken, and the owner has a claim for any loss that results from the negotiorum gestor’s fault. — Sometimes shortened to gestor. See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO. Pl. negotiorum gestores.

negotium (ni-goh-shee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A matter; an affair, as in negotium absentis, a matter concerning an absent person. 2. A transaction; an agreement. 3. A trade; a business. 4. A civil or criminal trial. Pl. negotia.

NEH. abbr. NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES.

n.e.i. abbr. NON EST INVENTUS.

neife (neef), n. [Law French] Hist. A person born into bondage or serfdom; specif., a female serf. — Also spelled naif; neif; niefe.

“For the children of villeins were also in the same state of bondage with their parents; whence they were called in Latin, nativi, which gave rise to the female appellation of a villein, who was called a neife.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 93-94 (1766).

neighbor, n. (bef. 12c) 1. A person who lives near another <Jensen’s neighbor spotted the fire>. 2. A person or thing situated near something <Canada is the United States’ neighbor to the north>. 3. A person in relation to humankind <love thy neighbor>.

neighborhood. (15c) 1. The immediate vicinity; the area near or next to a specified place. 2. People living in a particular vicinity, usu. forming a community within a larger group and having similar economic statuses and social interests. 3. The condition of being close together.

neighborhood effect. See EXTERNALITY.

neighboring right. (usu. pl.) Copyright. An intellectual-property right of a performer or of an entrepreneur such as a publisher, broadcaster, or producer, as distinguished from a moral right belonging to an author or artist as the work’s creator. • In civil-law systems, neighboring rights and moral rights are typically protected by different laws, while in common-law systems both are typically protected by the same copyright laws. — Also termed related right; entrepreneurial right; (in French) droit voisins; (in German) Leistungsschutzrecht; (in Italian) diritto connessi. Cf MORAL RIGHTS. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 41(3).]

“Civil law countries have generally, but not consistently, consigned protection of collaborative technological productions to regimes of neighboring rights. Common law countries, with their utilitarian emphasis on the products rather than the processes of creative work, have generally, but not consistently, included these productions in the subject matter of copyright, alongside such traditional objects as novels and musical works.” Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 157 (2001).

neighbor principle. (1963) The doctrine that one must take reasonable care to avoid acts or omissions that one can reasonably foresee will be likely to injure one’s neighbor. • According to this principle, neighbor includes all persons who are so closely and directly affected by the act that the actor should reasonably think of them when engaging in the act or omission in question.

ne injuste vexes (nee in-jəs-tee vek-seez), n. [Law Latin “do not trouble unjustly”] Hist. A writ prohibiting a lord from demanding more services from a tenant than the tenure allowed.

“The writ of ne injuste vexes . . . which prohibits distresses for greater services than are really due to the lord; being itself of the prohibitory kind, and yet in the nature of a writ of right. It lies, where the tenant in fee-simple and his ancestors have held of the lord by certain services; and the lord hath obtained seisin of more or greater services, by the inadvertent payment or performance of them by the tenant himself. Here the tenant cannot . . . avoid the lord's possessory right, because of the seisin given by his own hands; but is driven to this writ, to divest the lord's possession, and establish the mere right of property, by ascertaining the services, and reducing them to their proper standard." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 234 (1768).

neither party. A docket entry reflecting the parties' agreement not to continue to appear to prosecute and defend a lawsuit. • This entry is equivalent to a dismissal.

ne luminibus officatur (nee loo-min-i-bəs ə-fish-ee-ay-tər). [Latin "that lights be not impeded"] Roman law. An urban praedial servitude restraining a homeowner from constructing anything that blocks light to an adjoining house.

nem. con. abbr. NEMINE CONTRADICENTE.

nemine contradicente (nem-i-nee kahn-trə-di-sen-tee). [fr. Latin nemo "nobody" + contradicere "contradict"] Without opposition or dissent. • This phrase expresses the lack of opposition by members of a court, legislative body, or other group to a resolution or vote <the motion passed nemine contradicente>. It is used in the British House of Commons. — Abbr. nem. con.; n.c.d. — Also termed nemine dissentiente. Cf. NEMINE DISSENTIENTE.

nem. dis. abbr. NEMINE DISSENTIENTE.

nephew. (14c) 1. The son of a person's brother or sister; sometimes understood to include the son of a person's brother-in-law or sister-in-law. • This term is extended in some wills to include a grandnephew. Cf. NIECE. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷32.]

half nephew. The son of one's half brother or half sister.

2. Hist. A grandchild. 3. Hist. A descendant.

"[N]ephew . . . a son's or daughter's son, a grandson (also . . . a granddaughter), later also a brother's or sister's son, a nephew, in general a descendant . . . The application, as with all other terms denoting relationship beyond the first degree, formerly varied ('grandson,' 'nephew,' 'cousin,' 'kinsman,' etc.); its final exclusive use for 'nephew' instead of 'grandson' is prob. due in part to the fact that, by reason of the great difference in age, a person has comparatively little to do with his grandsons, if he has any, while nephews are proverbially present and attentive, if their uncle is of any importance." 5 The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia 3968 (1895).

nepos (nep-ohs), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A grandson. 2. Hist. A nephew. • The term nepos later became neveu and then "nephew." See NEPHEW.

neutral, n. (15c) 1. A person or country taking no side in a dispute; esp., a country that is at peace and is committed to aid neither of two or more belligerents. Cf. BELLIGERENT.

"The rights of neutrals have grown up to be an important part of international law in modern times. . . . Now, when a war arises between two states, the interests of all neutrals are more affected than formerly; or, in other words, neutral power has increased more than war power, and the tendency is more and more towards such alterations of the code of war as will favor neutral commerce. . . ." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 163, at 276 (5th ed. 1878).

2. A nonpartisan arbitrator typically selected by two other arbitrators — one of whom has been selected by each side in the dispute. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ↻240.]

neutrality, n. (15c) 1. The state or quality of being impartial or unbiased. 2. The condition of a nation that in time of war takes no part in the dispute but continues peaceful dealings with the belligerents. — neutral, adj.

armed neutrality. A condition of neutrality that the neutral state is willing to maintain by military force.

neutrality law. Int'l law. An act that prohibits a nation from militarily aiding either of two or more belligerent powers with which the nation is at peace; esp., a federal statute forbidding acts — such as the equipping of armed vessels or the enlisting of troops — designed to assist either of two belligerents that are at peace with the United States. 22 USCA §§ 441–457. [Cases: Neutrality Laws ↻1–5.]

neutrality proclamation. Int'l law. At the outbreak of a war between two nations, an announcement by the President that the United States is neutral and that its

neutralization. (1817) 1. The act of making something ineffective. 2. Int'l law. The process by which a country's integrity has been permanently guaranteed by international treaty, conditionally on its maintaining a perpetual neutrality except in its own defense. • Switzerland is the only remaining example, having been neutralized by the Treaty of Vienna in 1815 — a provision reaffirmed by the Treaty of Versailles in 1919. 3. The act of declaring certain persons or property neutral and safe from capture. See NEUTRAL PROPERTY. 4. Evidence. The cancellation of unexpected harmful testimony from a witness by showing, usu. by cross-examination, that the witness has made conflicting statements. • For example, a prosecutor may attempt to neutralize testimony of a state witness who offers unexpected adverse testimony. See IMPEACHMENT (2).

neutral principles. (1959) Constitutional law. Rules grounded in law, as opposed to rules based on personal interests or beliefs. • In this context, the phrase was popularized by Herbert Wechsler. See Toward Neutral Principles of Constitutional Law, 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1 (1959).

neutral property. Things belonging to citizens of a country that is not a party to a war, as long as the things are properly used and labeled. • For example, harmless neutral property aboard a captured belligerent ship would not normally be subject to seizure. But the hiding of explosives in otherwise neutral property could allow the property to be seized as contraband.

neutron-activation analysis. (1951) A method of identifying and analyzing physical evidence by measuring gamma rays emitted by a sample of material after that material has been bombarded with neutrons in a nuclear reactor. • This technique can be used, for example, to detect gunshot residue on the hand of someone who recently fired a gun. The analysis is usu. expensive to perform, but most courts allow the results into evidence. — Abbr. NAA. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻388.2.]

ne varietur (nee vair-ee-ee-tər), n. [Latin "it must not be altered"] A notation of identity that a person, usu. a notary, places on documents or translations of documents. • In Louisiana, this notation is typically placed on a collateral mortgage note to bind and identify the note with the collateral mortgage.

never indebted, plea of. (1880) A common-law traverse — or denial — by which the defendant in an action on a contract debt denies that an express or implied contract existed. — Also termed non debit. See TRAVERSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻474; Contracts ↻339.]

new, adj. 1. (Of a person, animal or thing) recently come into being <the new car was shipped from the factory this morning>. 2. (Of any thing) recently discovered . 3. (Of a person or condition) changed from the former state <she has a new state of mind>. 4. Unfamiliar; unaccustomed <she asked for directions because she was new to the area>. 5. Beginning afresh .

new acquisition. See ACQUISITION.

new and useful. Patents. Two of the requirements for an invention to be patentable — namely, that the invention be novel and that it have practical utility. 35 USCA § 101. See PATENT (3). [Cases: Patents ⇨37, 46.]

new asset. See ASSET.

new assignment. See ASSIGNMENT (7).

newborn-kidnapping by cesarean section. See kidnapping by cesarean under KIDNAPPING.

new business. See BUSINESS.

new-business rule. The principle precluding an award of damages for lost profits to a business with no recent record of profitability, because the damages would be too speculative. [Cases: Damages ⇨40(1), 190.]

new cause of action. See CAUSE OF ACTION.

new-contract dispute. See major dispute under DISPUTE.

new court commitment. See COMMITMENT.

new debtor. See DEBTOR.

new-debtor syndrome. Conduct showing a debtor's bad faith in filing for bankruptcy, as a result of which the court may dismiss the bankruptcy petition. • An example is the debtor's formation of a corporation, immediately before the bankruptcy filing, solely to take advantage of the bankruptcy laws. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨2252.1, 3503.]

new drug. See DRUG.

new-for-old. 1. Marine insurance. In adjusting a partial marine-insurance loss, the principle that old materials apply toward payment of the new, so that the old material's value is deducted from the total repair expenses, and then from that balance one-third of the cost of repairs (one-third of the new materials for the old on the balance) is deducted and charged against the insured shipowner. — Also termed deduction for new. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2244.] 2. The principle that a party whose property has been damaged is entitled to recover only the amount necessary to restore the property to the condition it was in before the damage, instead of acquiring a new item to replace one that was old and depreciated. [Cases: Damages ⇨103.]

New Inn. Hist. English law. One of the Inns of Chancery (collegiate houses) in which law students were placed before entering the Inns of Court. • This practice continued until approximately 1650, when the buildings began to be used only by barristers and solicitors. See INNS OF CHANCERY. Cf. INNS OF COURT.

new issue. See ISSUE (2).

new-loan fee. See MORTGAGE DISCOUNT.

newly discovered evidence. See EVIDENCE.

new matter. 1. See MATTER. 2. Patents. Additional information in an amended patent application that adds to the original disclosure. • Since the new matter was reduced to practice after the application was filed, it cannot carry the same filing date. Rather, it must be included in a continuation-in-part application. — Also termed disconformity. [Cases: Patents ⇨109.]

new-matter rejection. See REJECTION.

new-rule principle. (1989) Criminal procedure. A doctrine barring federal courts from granting habeas corpus relief to a state prisoner because of a rule, not dictated by existing precedent, announced after the prisoner's conviction and sentence became final. — Also termed nonretroactivity principle. See HABEAS CORPUS. [Cases: Courts ⇨100(1).]

new ruling. (1931) Criminal procedure. A Supreme Court ruling not dictated by precedent existing when the defendant's conviction became final and thus not applicable retroactively to habeas cases. • For example, when the Court in Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 106 S.Ct. 2595 (1986), ruled that the Eighth Amendment prohibits execution of insane prisoners, this new ruling was nonretroactive because it departed so widely from prior doctrine. Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 109 S.Ct. 1060 (1989). See HABEAS CORPUS. [Cases: Courts ⇨100(1).]

New Rules. See HILARY RULES.

new series. See N.S.

newsman's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1) under PRIVILEGE (3).

newspaper. (17c) A publication for general circulation, usu. in sheet form, appearing at regular intervals, usu. daily or weekly, and containing matters of general public interest, such as current events.

daily newspaper. A newspaper customarily published five to seven days every week. — Often shortened to daily.

legal newspaper. A newspaper containing matters of legal interest including summaries of cases, legal advertisements, legislative or regulatory changes, and local bankruptcy notices. [Cases: Newspapers ⇨1-7.]

newspaper of general circulation. (1838) A newspaper that contains news and information of interest to the general public, rather than to a particular segment, and that is available to the public within a certain geographic area. • Legal notices (such as a class-action notice) are often required by law to be published in a newspaper of general circulation. [Cases: Newspapers ⇨3(5).]

"The phrase 'newspaper of general circulation' is a term of art in most states and does not necessarily mean the newspaper best calculated to reach interested persons." Ann Taylor Schwing, Open Meeting Laws § 5.28, at 190-91 (2d ed. 2000).

official newspaper. A newspaper designated to contain all the public notices, resolves, acts, and advertisements of a state or municipal legislative body. [Cases: Newspapers ↻1-7.] newspaper prospectus. See PROSPECTUS.

new style. The modern system for ordering time according to the Gregorian method, introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582 and adopted in England and the American colonies in 1752. • Because the Julian calendar year was slightly longer than the astronomical year, the vernal equinox over time had been displaced by ten days. Pope Gregory reformed the calendar by announcing that October 5, 1582 would be called October 15. And, while generally retaining a leap year for years divisible by 4, he skipped leap years in years divisible by 100 (such as 1800 and 1900), but retained leap years for years divisible by 400 (such as 2000). Thus, the years 2000, 2004, 2008, etc. are leap years, but 2100 is not. — Abbr. n.s. — Also termed Gregorian calendar. Cf. OLD STYLE.

new trial. See TRIAL.

new-use claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

new-use invention. See INVENTION.

new value. See VALUE (2).

new-value defense. See DEFENSE (1).

new works. See WORKS.

New York interest. See Boston interest under INTEREST (3).

New York standard clause. See MORTGAGE-LOSS CLAUSE.

New York Stock Exchange. An association of member firms that handle the purchase and sale of securities both for themselves and for customers. • This exchange, the dominant one in the United States, trades in only large companies having at least one million outstanding shares. — Abbr. NYSE. [Cases: Exchanges ↻1-15; Securities Regulation ↻40.10-40.16.]

New York Supplement. A set of regional lawbooks, part of the West Group's National Reporter System, containing every published appellate decision from intermediate and lower courts of record in New York, from 1888 to date. • The first series ran from 1888 to 1937; the second series is the current one. — Abbr. N.Y.S.; N.Y.S.2d.

New York Times malice. See actual malice (2) under MALICE.

New York Times rule. A commonsense rule of ethical conduct holding that one should not do anything arguably newsworthy — in public or in private — that one would mind having reported on the front page of a major newspaper. • In various communities, a local newspaper is substituted for the Times. — Also termed New York Times test; New York Times v. Sullivan rule. See actual malice (2) under MALICE.

nexi (nek-sī), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Debtors given in bondage to creditors until their debts have been paid. See NEXUM.

next devisee. See DEVISEE.

next eventual estate. See ESTATE (1).

next friend. (16c) A person who appears in a lawsuit to act for the benefit of an incompetent or minor plaintiff, but who is not a party to the lawsuit and is not appointed as a guardian. — Also termed prochein ami. Cf. guardian ad litem under GUARDIAN. [Cases: Infants ↻76; Mental Health ↻485.]

next-in, first-out. A method of inventory valuation (but not a generally accepted accounting principle) whereby the cost of goods is based on their replacement cost rather than their actual cost. — Abbr. NIFO. Cf. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT; LAST-IN, FIRST-OUT.

next of kin. (18c) 1. The person or persons most closely related to a decedent by blood or affinity. Cf. RELATIVE. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻20-43; Wills ↻508.] 2. An intestate's heirs — that is, the person or persons entitled to inherit personal property from a decedent who has not left a will. See HEIR.

next presentation. See PRESENTATION.

nexum (nek-sam), n. [Latin] Roman law. A transaction or practice of early Roman law under which a debtor, upon a failure to repay the debt, could be seized and held in bondage until the debt was repaid. • This practice was allowed in very early Roman law.

"Nexum. This highly controversial matter will be briefly dealt with as nexum had long been obsolete in classical law. Little is really known of it: it has been doubted whether there ever was such an institution. No text tells us that there was a contract called nexum . . . But we have texts which speak of nexum as creative of obligation . . . and many literary texts dealing with debtors who were nexi, so that it may be taken as certain that there was such a transaction . . . which in some way reduced debtors to a sort of slavery, that great hardships resulted and that a l. Poetelia . . . practically ended this state of things, presumably by requiring an actual judgment before seizure. The effect was not to abolish nexum, but, by depriving it of its chief value, the power of seizure . . . to leave it with no advantages to counterbalance its clumsiness, so that it went out of use." W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 429-30 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

nexus, n. (17c) 1. A connection or link, often a causal one <cigarette packages must inform consumers of the nexus between smoking and lung cancer>. Pl. nexuses; nexus. 2. Roman law. (ital.) In very early times, a debtor given in bondage to creditors until the debts have been paid. Pl. nexi. See NEXUM.

nexus realis (nek-sæs ree-ay-lis). [Latin "a real fetter"] Scots law. An encumbrance to property, such as a servitude.

nexus test. (1975) The standard by which a private person's act is considered state action — and may give rise to liability for violating someone's constitutional rights — if the conduct is so closely related to the government's conduct that the choice to undertake it may fairly be said to be that of the state. • While similar to the symbiotic-relationship test, the nexus test focuses on the particular act complained of, instead of on the overall relationship of the parties. Still, some courts use the terms and analyses interchangeably. — Also termed close-nexus test. Cf. SYMBIOTIC-RELATIONSHIP TEST. See JOINT PARTICIPATION; STATE-COMPULSION TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1326(4, 7).]

NGO. abbr. NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATION.

NGRI. See not guilty by reason of insanity under NOT GUILTY.

NHTSA. abbr. NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION.

nichil (nich-əl), n. [Old French nichil fr. Latin nihil “nothing”] Hist. English law. A debt owed to the Exchequer’s office but nighed by sheriffs as nonleviable. • Once a year, an officer of the Clerk of Nichils enrolled these amounts and sent them to the treasurer’s remembrancer’s office from which process was issued for their recovery. Both offices were abolished in 1833. — Also spelled nichill; nichel.

nichil, vb. (Of a sheriff) to make return that a debt is worthless, because the debtor either cannot be found or is unable to pay.

Nickerson letter. In New York City, a document issued by the Board of Education offering to pay the tuition of a disabled child who has been admitted to a state-approved private school and whose educational needs cannot be met in a public school. • Nickerson letters are named for Judge Eugene P. Nickerson, who presided over the class-action suit that led to their creation. See Jose P. v. Ambach, 669 F.2d 865 (2d Cir. 1982); see also Jose P. v. Ambach, 557 F. Supp. 1230 (E.D.N.Y. 1983). [Cases: Schools ⇨ 148(2.1), 155.5(1).]

nickname, n. (15c) 1. A shortened version of a person’s name <“Bill” is William’s nickname>. [Cases: Names ⇨ 7.] 2. A descriptive or alternative name, in addition to or instead of the actual name <David Smith’s nickname is “Red”>.

niece. (14c) The daughter of a person’s brother or sister; sometimes understood to include the daughter of a person’s brother-in-law or sister-in-law. • This term is extended in some wills to include a grandniece. Cf. NEPHEW.

half niece. The daughter of one’s half brother or half sister.

NIED. abbr. NEGLIGENCE INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS.

nient (nee-ent). [Law French] Not; nothing.

nient culpable (nee-ent kəl-pə-bəl), n. [Law French] Hist. A general plea of “not guilty” in a tort or criminal action.

“When the prisoner hath thus pleaded not guilty, non culpabilis, or nient culpable; which was formerly used to be abbreviated upon the minutes, thus, ‘non (or nient) cul.’ the clerk of the assise, or clerk of the arraigns, on behalf of the crown replies, that the prisoner is guilty, and that he is ready to prove him so.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 333 (1769).

nient dedire (nee-ent də-deer), vb. [Law French] Hist. To deny nothing; to be subject to a default judgment.

nient le fait (nee-ent læ fay). [Law French] Hist. Not the deed. • This term was the earlier version of non est factum. See NON EST FACTUM.

nient seisi (nee-ent see-zee), n. [Law French “not seised”] Hist. The general denial in a writ to recover an annuity.

NIFL. abbr. NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR LITERACY.

NIFO (ni-foh). abbr. NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT.

night. (bef. 12c) 1. The time from sunset to sunrise. 2. Darkness; the time when a person’s face is not discernible. • This definition was used in the common-law definition of certain offenses, such as burglary. [Cases: Burglary ⇨ 8.]

3. Thirty minutes after sunset and thirty minutes before sunrise, or a similar definition as set forth by statute, as in a statute requiring specific authorization for night searches. 4. Evening. — Also termed nighttime. Cf. DAY.

nightwalker. 1. Hist. A person who suspiciously wanders about at night and who might disturb the peace. • Nightwalking was an example of a “common” offense requiring no specific facts to be asserted in the indictment. 2. A prostitute who walks the streets at night; streetwalker. [Cases: Prostitution ⇨ 10.] 3. A sleep-walker.

nihil. See NIHIL EST.

nihil capiat per breve (nī-hil kap-ee-at pār bree-vee or breev), n. [Latin "Let him take nothing by his writ"] A judgment against the plaintiff in an action at bar or in abatement. — Also termed nihil capiat per billam ("let him take nothing by his bill").

nihil dicit (nī-hil dī-sit), n. [Latin "he says nothing"] 1. The failure of a defendant to answer a lawsuit. [Cases: Judgment ↻106.] 2. See nil dicit default judgment under DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

nihil dicit default judgment. See nil dicit default judgment under DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

nihil est (nī-hil est). [Latin "there is nothing"] A form of return by a sheriff or constable who was unable to serve a writ because nothing was found to levy on. — Often shortened to nihil. Cf. NULLA BONA.

nihil habet (nī-hil hay-bət). [Latin "he has nothing"] A form of return by a sheriff or constable who was unable to serve a scire facias or other writ on the defendant. See SCIRE FACIAS.

nihilism (nī-əl-iz-əm or nee-). (1812) 1. A doctrine maintaining that there is no rational justification for moral principles and that there is no objective truth. 2. The view that traditional beliefs are unfounded and that life is meaningless and useless. 3. A theory that the existing economic, social, or political institutions should be destroyed, regardless of the result, because of the basic undesirability of those institutions. • This theory, featured by Ivan Turgenev in his 1861 novel Fathers and Sons, was popular among Russian extremists until the collapse of the czarist government.

nihilist, n. A person who advocates nihilism. See NIHILISM.

nihil novit (nī-hil noh-vit). [Law Latin] Scots law. He knew nothing. • The phrase appeared in reference to a defendant's oath denying any knowledge of the matter in issue.

nikah. Islamic law. A prenuptial contract, witnessed by at least two men, recording the parties' mutual agreement to marry, the husband's promise to give his wife a certain sum of money or property, and possibly other terms about the parties' rights in and expectations from the marriage. • The contract may be enforceable under general contract-law principles. — Also termed nikah nama. Cf. MAHR.

nil (nil). [Latin] (16c) Nothing. • This word is a contracted form of nihil. See NIHIL EST.

nil debet (nil deb-ət). [Latin "he owes nothing"] Hist. A general denial in a debt action on a simple contract.

"The proper general issue in debt on simple contracts and statutes is 'nil debet,' which is a formal denial of the debt. It denies not only the existence of any contract, but under it any matters in excuse or in discharge may also be shown." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 184, at 327 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

nil dicit default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

nil habuit in tenementis (nil hab-yoo-it in ten-ə-men-tis), n. [Law Latin "he has nothing in the tenements"] Hist. In an action to recover rent on a lease, the defendant's plea that the landlord has no title or interest in the property at issue.

nil ligatum (nil li-gay-təm). [Latin "nothing is bound"] No obligation has been incurred.

NIMA. abbr. NATIONAL IMAGING AND MAPPING AGENCY.

1934 Act. See SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934.

ninety-day letter. (1933) Statutory notice of a tax deficiency sent by the IRS to a taxpayer. • During the 90 days after receiving the notice, the taxpayer must pay the taxes (and, if desired, seek a refund) or challenge the deficiency in tax court. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 6212, 6213. — Also written 90-day letter. — Also termed notice of deficiency; deficiency notice; tax-deficiency notice. Cf. THIRTY-DAY LETTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻4542.]

NINJA loan. See LOAN.

Ninth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, providing that rights listed in the Constitution must not be construed in a way that denies or disparages unlisted rights, which are retained by the people. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1070.]

nisi (nī-sī), adj. [Latin "unless"] (18c) (Of a court's ex parte ruling or grant of relief) having validity unless the adversely affected party appears and shows cause why it should be withdrawn . See decree nisi under DECREE. [Cases: Motions ↻24.]

nisi aliud convenerit (nī-sī ay-lee-əd kən-ven-ər-it). [Latin] Hist. Unless it has been otherwise agreed; unless something else has been agreed to.

nisi decree. See decree nisi under DECREE.

nisi feceris (nī-sī fee-sə-ris), n. [Law Latin "unless you have done so"] Hist. A clause in a manorial writ providing that the king's court or officer will do justice if the lords fail. • This provision allowed royal courts to usurp the jurisdiction of manorial courts.

nisi malitia suppleat aetatem (ni-si mə-lish-ee-ə səp-lee-at ee-tay-təm). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Unless malice supplies want of age. • A child under the age of puberty was presumed to lack the necessary intent to commit a crime unless an evil intent was specifically shown.

nisi prius (ni-si pri-əs). [Latin "unless before then"] (16c) A civil trial court in which, unlike in an appellate court, issues are tried before a jury. • The term is obsolete in the United States except in New York and Oklahoma. — Abbr. n.p. — Also termed nisi prius court.

nisi prius clause. An entry to the record authorizing a jury trial in the designated county. See NISI PRIUS.

nisi prius court. See NISI PRIUS.

nisi prius record. A civil-trial record. See RECORD (4).

nisi prius roll. The transcript of a case at nisi prius. — Also termed nisi prius record.

NIST. abbr. NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF STANDARDS AND TECHNOLOGY. See TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION.

nitroglycerine charge. See ALLEN CHARGE.

nixie. [fr. German nichts "nothing"] 1. A piece of mail that cannot be delivered, usu. because the addressee is fictitious or the address is incorrect. 2. Hist. An undeliverable piece of mail created by a postal inspector for the purpose of discovering interference with mail processing and delivery. — Also termed nix; nixey.

n.l. abbr. NON LIQUET.

NLRB. abbr. NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD.

NMB. abbr. NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD.

NMFS. abbr. NATIONAL MARINE FISHERIES SERVICE.

NMI. abbr. No middle initial.

NMN. abbr. No middle name.

NOA. abbr. Slang. 1. No oral argument. • This notation is used esp. in an appellate case in which oral argument is not granted <since the case was NOA, the court relied exclusively on the briefs>. 2. See NOTICE OF APPEARANCE.

NOAA. abbr. NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION.

no-action clause. An insurance-policy provision that bars suit against the insurer until the liability of the insured has been determined by a judgment. [Cases: Insurance ↻3549(4).]

no-action letter. (1959) A letter from the staff of a governmental agency stating that if the facts are as represented in a person's request for an agency ruling, the staff will advise the agency not to take action against the person. • Typically, a no-action letter is requested from the SEC on such matters as shareholder proposals, resales of stock, and marketing techniques. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻81.]

no actus reus (noh ak-təs ree-əs). A plea in which a criminal defendant either denies involvement with a crime or asserts that the harm suffered is too remote from the criminal act to be imputable to the defendant.

no-answer default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

no arrival, no sale. A delivery term, included in some sales contracts, by which the seller assumes the duty to deliver the goods to a specified place, and assumes the risk of loss for the goods while they are in transit. • If the goods arrive damaged or late, the buyer can either avoid the contract or accept the goods at a discount. [Cases: Sales ↻201(2).]

no award. In an action to enforce an award, the defendant's plea denying that an award was made.

nobile officium (noh-bə-lee ə-fish-ee-əm), n. [Latin "noble office or privilege"] Scots law. The power of a superior court, the Court of Session, or the High Court to give equitable relief when none is possible under law.

nobility, n. pl. (14c) 1. Persons of social or political pre-eminence, usu. derived by inheritance or from the sovereign. • In English law, there are various degrees of nobility, or peerage, such as dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons, and their female counterparts. Nobility is generally created either by a writ of summons to sit in Parliament or by a royal grant through letters patent, and was once usu. accompanied by a large land grant. Nobility by writ descended to a person's bodily heirs. The modern practice is to grant nobility by letters patent, which provide limitations as to future heirs. The U.S. Constitution prohibits granting a title of nobility. U.S. Const. art. I, § 9, cl. 8.

"In England nobility is apt to be confounded with the peculiar institution of the British peerage. Yet nobility, in some shape or another, has existed in most places and times or the world's history, while the British peerage is an institution purely local, and one which has actually hindered the existence of a nobility in the sense which the word bears in most other countries. . . . Nobility, then, in the strict sense of the word, is the hereditary handing on from generation to generation of some acknowledged pre-eminence, a pre-eminence founded on hereditary succession, and on nothing else. . . . The pre-eminence so handed on may be of any kind, from substantial political power to mere social respect and precedence." 17 Encyclopaedia Britannica 538 (9th ed. 1907).

2. Persons of high or noble character. 3. The collective body of persons making up the noble class.

no bill, n. (18c) A grand jury's notation that insufficient evidence exists for an indictment on a criminal charge <the grand jury returned a no bill instead of the indictment the prosecutors expected>. <the grand jury no-billed three of the charges>. Cf. TRUE BILL. [Cases: Grand Jury ↻42.] — no-bill, vb.

no-bonus clause. Landlord-tenant law. A lease provision that takes effect upon governmental condemnation, limiting the lessee's damages to the value of any improvements to the property and preventing the lessee from recovering the difference between the lease's fixed rent and the property's market rental value. See CONDEMNATION. [Cases: Eminent Domain ↷147.]

no cause of action. See take-nothing judgment under JUDGMENT.

nocent (noh-sənt), adj. [fr. Latin nocere "harm"] Archaic. 1. Injurious; harmful. 2. Guilty; criminal. • This word is the little-used antonym of innocent.

nocent (noh-sənt), n. [fr. Latin nocere "harm"] Hist. A person who is guilty.

no-claim, n. The lack of a claim. • Legal philosophers devised this term to denote the opposite of a claim. As one jurist said apologetically, "there is no word in English which expresses the lack of a claim and therefore the rather barbarous 'no-claim' has been suggested." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 291 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

no-confidence vote. (1840) The formal legal method by which a legislative body, by a majority vote, forces the resignation of a cabinet or ministry. — Also termed vote of no confidence.

no-contact order. See STAY-AWAY ORDER.

no contest. (1931) A criminal defendant's plea that, while not admitting guilt, the defendant will not dispute the charge. • This plea is often preferable to a guilty plea, which can be used against the defendant in a later civil lawsuit. — Also termed no-contest plea; nolo contendere; non vult contendere. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷275.]

no-contest clause. (1929) A provision designed to threaten one into action or inaction; esp., a testamentary provision that threatens to dispossess any beneficiary who challenges the terms of the will. — Also termed in terrorem clause; noncontest clause; terrorem clause; anticontest clause; forfeiture clause. [Cases: Wills ↷651, 656.]

noctanter (nok-tan-tər), n. [Latin "by night"] Hist. A chancery writ issued to a sheriff as a first step in the recovery of damages for destroying a ditch or hedge. • The neighboring villagers (vills) were held liable for the damages unless they indicted the offender.

noctem de firma (nok-təm dee fər-mə), n. [Law Latin "night of duty (payable)"] Hist. The duty or custom of providing entertainment or provisions for a night. • At the time of the Norman Conquest, this was the duty or custom of entertaining the king for one night. — Also termed noctes; firma noctis.

nocumentum (nok-yə-men-təm). [fr. Latin nocere "to harm"] Hist. A nuisance. • There was no remedy at law for a nuisance causing only property damage, but there was a remedy for a nuisance causing injury.

no cure, no pay. Maritime law. The common-law principle that compensation for salvage must come from the material salvaged, and that if no material is salvaged there can be no compensation. • By contrast, civil-law tradition awards compensation even for a failed effort. Cf. ASSISTANCE. [Cases: Salvage ↷36.]

no-doc loan. See LOAN.

no-duty, n. Liberty not to do an act. — Also termed liberty not.

no-duty doctrine. (1966) Torts. 1. The rule that a defendant who owes no duty to the plaintiff is not liable for the plaintiff's injury. 2. The rule that the owner or possessor of property has no duty to warn or protect an invitee from known or obvious hazards. [Cases: Negligence ↷1037(4).]

Noerr-Pennington doctrine. (1967) The principle that the First Amendment shields from liability (esp. under antitrust laws) companies that join together to lobby the government. • The doctrine derives from a line of Supreme Court cases beginning with Eastern R.R. Presidents Conference v. Noerr Motor Freight, Inc., 365 U.S. 127, 81 S.Ct. 523 (1961), and United Mine Workers v. Pennington, 381 U.S. 657, 85 S.Ct. 1585 (1965). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷905; Civil Rights ↷1374; Constitutional Law ↷1437.]

no evidence. (15c) 1. The lack of a legally sufficient evidentiary basis for a reasonable fact-finder to rule in favor of the party who bears the burden of proof <there is no evidence in the record about his whereabouts at midnight>. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party can move for judgment as a matter of law to claim that the other party — who bears the burden of proof — has been fully heard and has not offered sufficient evidence to prove one or more essential elements of the suit or defense. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. Though such a contention is usu. referred to as a no-evidence motion, the issue is not whether there was actually no evidence, but rather whether the evidence was sufficient for the fact-finder to be able to reasonably rule in favor of the other party. [Cases: Evidence ↷597; Federal Civil Procedure ↷2142.1.]

"Since judgment as a matter of law deprives the party opposing the motion of a determination of the facts by a jury, it should be granted cautiously and sparingly. Nevertheless, the federal courts do not follow the rule that a scintilla of evidence is enough to create an issue for the jury. The question is not whether there is literally no evidence upon which the jury properly could find a verdict for that party." 9A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2524, at 252-54 (2d ed. 1995).

2. Evidence that has no value in an attempt to prove a matter in issue <that testimony is no evidence of an alibi>.

no-eyewitness rule. (1956) Torts. The largely defunct principle that if no direct evidence shows what a dead person did to avoid an accident, the jury may infer that the person acted with ordinary care for his or her own safety. • In a jurisdiction where the rule persists, a plaintiff in a survival or wrongful-death action can assert the rule to counter a defense of contributory negligence. [Cases: Death ↷58(1).]

no-fault, adj. (1967) Of or relating to a claim that is adjudicated without any determination that a party is blameworthy <no-fault divorce>. [Cases: Divorce ↷ 12.]

no-fault auto insurance. See INSURANCE.

no-fault divorce. See DIVORCE.

no funds. An indorsement marked on a check when there are insufficient funds in the account to cover the check.

no-further-representation clause. A contractual provision, usu. in a settlement agreement, prohibiting the plaintiff's attorney from representing future clients who have the same or a similar claim against the defendant. • Such a clause is thought to be void as against public policy.

"If your standard settlement papers include a clause prohibiting opposing counsel from representing future clients with the same claim, you're violating ethics rules. Typically a defendant's tool, this provision — known as a no-further-representation clause — is popular in class action and mass product-liability settlements. But a little-known ethics rule prohibits lawyers from agreeing, or even offering to agree, to a restriction on an attorney's right to practice law." Leslie A. Gordon, Prohibited Provisions: No-Further-Representation Clauses May Be Advantageous, but They're Also Unethical, 91 ABA J. 18, 18 (Apr. 2005).

no goods. See NULLA BONA.

NOIBN. abbr. NOT OTHERWISE INDEXED BY NAME.

no-knock search. See SEARCH.

no-knock search warrant. See SEARCH WARRANT.

NOL. See net operating loss under LOSS.

Nolan Act. Hist. Patents. A statute, passed after World War I, that extended the U.S. patenting deadlines for citizens of former enemy nations. • A similar measure, the Boykin Act, was passed after World War II.

nolens volens (noh-len-z voh-len-z), adv. & adj. [Latin] (16c) Willing or unwilling <nolens volens, the school district must comply with the court's injunction>.

no-limit order. See ORDER (8).

nolissement (nə-lis-mahn), n. [French] French law. The chartering of a ship; AFFREIGHTMENT.

nolition (noh-lish-ən). (17c) The absence of volition; unwillingness.

nolle prosequi (nah-ee prahs-ə-kwi), n. [Latin "not to wish to prosecute"] (17c) 1. A legal notice that a lawsuit or prosecution has been abandoned. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure ↷ 511.] 2. A docket entry showing that the plaintiff or the prosecution has abandoned the action. — Often shortened to nolle. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 303.5-303.35.]

"In America the term [nolle prosequi] bears the same meaning as in England, with one exception. The attorney-general has not the same discretion with which English law invests him. Although in some States the prosecuting officer may enter a nolle prosequi at his discretion, in others the leave of the court must be obtained." 17 Encyclopaedia Britannica 546 (9th ed. 1907).

"Nolle prosequi is a formal entry on the record by the prosecuting officer by which he declares that he will not prosecute the case further, either as to some of the counts of the indictment, or as to part of a divisible count, or as to some of the persons accused, or altogether. It is a judicial determination in favor of accused and against his conviction, but it is not an acquittal, nor is it equivalent to a pardon." 22A C.J.S. Criminal Law § 419, at 1 (1989).

nolle prosequi (nah-ee prahs-ə-kwi), vb. (1875) To abandon (a suit or prosecution); to have (a case) dismissed by a nolle prosequi <the state nolle prosequed the charges against Johnson>. — Often shortened to nolle pros; nol-pros; nol-pro. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 303.5-303.35; Pretrial Procedure ↷ 501.]

no-load fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

nolo contendere (noh-loh kən-ten-də-ree). [Latin "I do not wish to contend"] (1829) NO CONTEST. — Often shortened to nolo. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 275.]

nolo plea. See PLEA (1).

no man's land. Labor law. The lack of clear jurisdiction between a state government and the federal government over labor disputes. • This term was common in the 1950s, but its use has declined as later laws have clarified jurisdictional issues.

NOM clause. abbr. NO-ORAL-MODIFICATION CLAUSE.

nomen (noh-men or -mən), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A personal name. • A Roman citizen generally had three names: a praenomen ("first name"), a nomen ("the name of the family group"), and cognomen ("a surname"). 2. Hist. A person's first name. 3. More broadly, any name. Pl. nomina. See AGNOMEN.

nomen collectivum (noh-men kol-ək-ti-vəm). [Latin] A collective name; a name of a class of things.

nomen generale (noh-men jen-ə-ray-lee). [Latin] A general name; a genus.

nomen generalissimum (noh-men jen-ə-rə-lis-i-məm). [Law Latin] A name with the most general meaning.

"Nomen generalissimum. A very general name: a comprehensive term. Such are the terms crime, demand, draft, estate, goods, grant, heir, house, instrument, interest, land, merchandise, obligation, offense." William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 711 (1889).

nomen juris (noh-men joor-is). [Latin] A legal name or designation.

nomen universitatis (noh-men yoo-ni-vər-sə-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. The name of the whole together.

"Thus the name Barony is, in our law, a nomen universitatis, for it includes not only the lands over which the rights of barony extend, but also the rights competent to the owner of the barony themselves." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 390 (4th ed. 1894).

nomen transcripticium (noh-men tran-skip-tish-ee-əm). [Latin "entry (in an account) transferred"] Roman law. A creditor's entry of a money debt into a new account (expensilatio) after closing another account, thereby creating, with the debtor's permission, a literal contract from an existing obligation, which may or may not have been enforceable. Pl. nomina transcripticia.

"The subject will, perhaps, become clearer by examples: . . . A has in the past had dealings by way of sale, exchange, etc., with B, of which an account appears in his codex showing a balance against B for 500 aurei. A, with B's consent, closes this account by a statement on the opposite page (contrary to fact) that B has paid the aurei . . . and opens a new account with the statement (contrary to strict fact) that he has advanced to B the sum of 500 aurei. Hence the expensilatio represents a nomen transcripticium; a nomen (debt) has been transferred from one account to another In effect the old contracts between A and B have been novated, i.e. extinguished, one single obligation having been substituted in their place; obviously a course which offered many advantages to both parties, as it simplified the accounts, and saved disputes about the previous transactions." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 317-18 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

no-merit brief. See Anders brief under BRIEF.

nomina debitorum (nahm-ə-nə deb-i-tor-əm). [Latin "entries (in a ledger) of names of debtors"] Roman law. Records of debt. See NOMEN TRANSCRIPTICIUM.

nominal (nahm-ə-nəl), adj. (17c) 1. Existing in name only <he was the nominal leader but had no real authority>. 2. (Of a price or amount) trifling, esp. as compared to what would be expected <the lamp sold for a nominal price of ten cents>. 3. Of or relating to a name or term . — nominally, adv.

nominal director. See dummy director under DIRECTOR.

nominal partner. See PARTNER.

nominal party. See PARTY (2).

nominal-payee rule. Commercial law. The rule that validates any person's indorsement of an instrument (such as a check) when the instrument's drawer intended for the payee to have no interest in the instrument. UCC § 3-404(b). [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 147, 174; Bills and Notes ⇨ 182, 279.]

nominal plaintiff. See nominal party under PARTY (2).

nominal rate. See INTEREST RATE.

nominal sentence. See SENTENCE.

nominal trust. See passive trust under TRUST.

nominal value. See PAR VALUE.

nominal yield. See coupon yield under YIELD.

nominandus (nahm-ə-nan-dəs). [Latin] Scots law. To be named. • The phrase usu. referred to an heir whom the entailor had the right to name if that right was reserved in the deed of entail. See ENTAIL.

nominate (nom-ə-nət), adj. Civil law. Classified; having a special name or designation. See nominate contract under CONTRACT.

nominate, vb. (16c) 1. To propose (a person) for election or appointment <Steven nominated Jane for president>. [Cases: Elections ⇨ 122-147; Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 8.] 2. To name or designate (a person) for a position <the testator nominated an executor, who later withdrew because he couldn't perform his duties>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ⇨ 14, 17(7).]

nominate contract. See CONTRACT.

nominatim (nah-mi-nay-təm), adv. [fr. Latin nomen "name"] Roman law. By name. • This term refers to mentioning someone or something expressly by name or by specific description, so that (for example) to disinherit persons nominatim means that there is no doubt who is meant to be excluded.

nominating and reducing. Hist. A method used, esp. in London, to obtain special jurors from which to select a jury panel. • Under this method, a number representing each person on a sheriff's list is drawn from a box until 48 unchallenged people have been nominated. Each party then strikes 12 people and the remaining 24 constitute the panel.

nominating committee. See COMMITTEE.

nominatio auctoris (nah-mi-nay-shee-oh awk-tor-is). [Latin "naming of the originator (or seller)"] 1. In an action for the recovery of something, such as real estate, the defendant's plea that the property is actually owned by another party. • The true owner is then required to defend the action. 2. Roman law. In an action alleging ownership of an item, the defendant's plea naming the seller, who then must assist in the defense of the action against the plaintiff. — Also termed laudare auctorem.

nomination. (15c) 1. The act of proposing a person for election or appointment. [Cases: Elections ⇨ 122-140.] 2. The act of naming or designating a person for an office, membership, award, or like title or status. • Under parliamentary law, each nomination is effectively a proposal for filling the blank in the question, "Resolved, That ——— is elected." See BLANK (2). See CLOSE NOMINATIONS; OPEN NOMINATIONS.

nomination paper. (usu. pl.) A document filed by an independent political group — usu. one not qualifying as a political party or able to hold primary elections — to place one or more nominees on a general-election ballot. [Cases: Elections ⇨ 144.]

nomination to a living. Eccles. law. The right of an advowson owner to present a clerk to the bishop for induction to a benefice. • The owner of an advowson can grant the right to another but is then bound to present whomever the grantee chooses.

nominativus pendens (nahm-ə-nə-ti-vəs pen-denz), n. [Latin "nominative hanging"] In a sentence, a nominative phrase that is not grammatically connected with the rest of the sentence. — Also termed nominative absolute.

"Nominativus pendens . . . The opening words in the form of a deed inter partes ('This deed,' etc., down to 'whereas'), though an intelligible and convenient part of the deed, having regard to the predicate 'witnesseth' or 'nor this deed witnesseth,' are sometimes of this kind." William A. Jowitt, The Dictionary of English Law 1230 (1959).

nomina villarum (nahm-ə-nə vi-lair-əm), n. [Latin "names of the villages"] Hist. In the reign of Edward II, a list compiled by sheriffs of the names of the villages and possessors in their respective counties.

nomine (nahm-ə-nee), adv. [fr. Latin nomen "name"] Roman law. 1. By name; under the name of, as in sine nomine edere librum ("to publish [a book] anonymously"). 2. On behalf of, as in proprio (suo) nomine ("on one's own behalf").

nomine albae firmae (nahm-ə-nee al-bee fər-mee), adv. [Law Latin] Scots law. In name of blench farm. • The phrase appeared in reference to one of the tenures by which lands were held for only a nominal sum (such as a penny) from the superior.

nomine damni (nahm-ə-nee dam-ni), adv. [Latin] Scots law. By way of damage. • A person was required to pay interest nomine damni.

nomine dotis (nahm-ə-nee doh-tis), adv. [Latin] Scots law. By way of dowry.

nominee (nom-i-nee), n. (17c) 1. A person who is proposed for an office, membership, award, or like title or status. • An individual seeking nomination, election, or appointment is a candidate. A candidate for election becomes a nominee after being formally nominated. See CANDIDATE. 2. A person designated to act in place of another, usu. in a very limited way. 3. A party who holds bare legal title for the benefit of others or who receives and distributes funds for the benefit of others.

nominee account. See ACCOUNT.

nominee trust. See TRUST.

nomine feudifirmae (nahm-ə-nee fyoo-di-fər-mee). [Law Latin] Scots law. In name of feu-farm; on account of lands held in feu. See FEU.

nomine poenae (nahm-ə-nee pee-nee), n. [Latin "in the name of penalty"] 1. Civil law. A clause in a testament requiring the heir to do something by way of penalty. 2. At common law, a penalty for nonperformance, such as additional rent to be paid by a tenant to a landlord for failing to perform certain conditions in a lease.

nominis receptio (nahm-ə-nis ri-sep-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A presiding judge's registering of an accused person's name in the rolls of a criminal court. • This registration was essential for the case to be tried. The day fixed for a criminal trial was ordinarily ten days after the nominis receptio.

nomocanon (nə-mok-ə-non or noh-mə-kan-ən). (1908) 1. A collection of canon and imperial laws applicable to ecclesiastical matters in the orthodox churches. • The first nomocanon is falsely ascribed to Johannes Scholasticus, patriarch of Constantinople, in 553. Later canons consist primarily of the canons of the Quinisext and the ecclesiastical laws of Justinian. 2. A collection of the ancient canons of the apostles, councils, and fathers, without regard to imperial constitutions.

nomographer (nə-mog-rə-fər). (17c) 1. A person who drafts laws. 2. A person skilled in nomography.

nomography (nə-mog-rə-fee). (1832) 1. The art of drafting laws. 2. A treatise on the drafting of laws.

nomoscopy. See COMPARATIVE NOMOSCOPY.

nomothete (noh-mə-theet), n. [fr. Greek nomos "law" + thetes "a person who prescribes"] Hist. A lawgiver. — Also spelled nomotheta.

"It was [in ancient Greek law] provided that all motions to repeal or amend an existing law should be brought before the ecclesia or general meeting of citizens, at the beginning of the year. They might be then and there rejected; but if a motion was received favorably, the ecclesia appointed a body of nomothetes, sometimes as many as a thousand in number, before whom the proposal was put on trial according to the regular forms of Athenian judicial procedure. A majority vote of the nomothetes was decisive for acceptance or rejection." 5 Century Dictionary and Cyclopaedia 4011 (1895).

nomothetics. See COMPARATIVE NOMOTHETICS.

non (non). [Latin] (14c) Not; no. • This term negates, sometimes as a separate word and sometimes as a prefix.

nonability. (17c) 1. The lack of legal capacity, esp. to sue on one's own behalf. 2. A plea or exception raising a lack of legal capacity.

nonacceptance. (17c) 1. The refusal or rejection of something, such as a contract offer; REJECTION (1). 2. A buyer's rejection of goods because they fail to conform to contractual specifications. See UCC § 2-601(a). [Cases: Sales ⇨ 119, 179(6).] 3. A drawee's failure or refusal to receive and pay a negotiable instrument. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 24.]

non acceptavit (non ak-sep-tay-vit). [Latin "he did not accept"] In an assumpsit action against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, the defendant's plea denying acceptance of the bill.

nonaccess. Family law. (17c) Absence of opportunity for sexual intercourse. • Nonaccess is often used as a defense by the alleged father in paternity cases. Cf. multiple access under ACCESS. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨ 43, 46, 50, 53.]

non accrevit infra sex annos (non ə-kree-vit in-frə seks an-ohs), n. [Latin "it did not accrue in six years"] Hist. The general pleading form for the statute-of-limitations defense.

nonacquiescence (non-ak-wee-es-ənts). Administrative law. An agency's policy of declining to be bound by lower-court precedent that is contrary to the agency's interpretation of its organic statute, but only until the Supreme Court has ruled on the issue.

"Too much nonacquiescence, however, would interfere with the courts' ability to prevent an agency from violating its statutory mandate. The practice is generally upheld, but is considered questionable when an agency adheres to its legal position in a case that could only be reviewed in a circuit that has already rejected the agency's stance. When the Social Security Administration made frequent use of the latter kind of nonacquiescence in the administration of its disability benefits program in the 1980's, it was widely criticized." Ernest Gellhorn & Ronald M. Levin, Administrative Law and Process in a Nutshell 98 n.2 (4th ed. 1997).

nonactuarially sound retirement system. A retirement plan that uses current contributions and assets to pay current benefit obligations, instead of investing contributions to pay future benefits. Cf. ACTUARIALY SOUND RETIREMENT SYSTEM.

nonadmission. (16c) 1. The failure to acknowledge something. 2. The refusal to allow something, such as evidence in a legal proceeding.

nonadmitted asset. See ASSET.

nonae et decimae (noh-nee et des-ə-mee), n. pl. [Latin "ninth and tenths"] Hist. Two payments that church-farm tenants make to the church, the first being rent for the land and the second being a tithe.

nonage (non-ij). 1. MINORITY (1). 2. NONAGIUM.

nonaggression pact. Int'l law. A treaty in which two or more countries agree not to engage in aggressive military operations against one another. — Also termed nonaggression treaty.

nonagium (noh-nay-jee-əm). [Latin "a ninth"] Hist. The ninth part of a decedent's personal property, sometimes payable to the parish clergy for pious uses. — Also termed nonage.

nonaligned state. Int'l law. A (usu. less developed) country that has banded together with other similarly situated countries to enhance its political and economic position in the world. • The movement of nonaligned states formally began at a summit in 1961, and during the Cold War these countries declared their independence from both the western and the Soviet blocs.

nonancestral estate. See ESTATE (1).

nonancestral property. See nonancestral estate under ESTATE (1).

nonapparent easement. See discontinuous easement under EASEMENT.

nonapparent servitude. See SERVITUDE (2).

nonappearance. (15c) The failure to appear in court, esp. to prosecute or defend a lawsuit. See DEFAULT; NONSUIT.

nonapportionment rule. Oil & gas. The majority doctrine that royalties accrued under a mineral lease on land that is later subdivided during the lease term are not shared by the owners of the subdivisions, but belong exclusively to the owner of the land where the producing well is located. • For example, if Grey granted a lease to Wainwright, then sold one-half of the land to Svenson, and a well on Wainwright's half began producing minerals, only Wainwright would be entitled to the royalty. Cf. APPORTIONMENT RULE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 79.1(3).]

nonart rejection. See formal rejection under REJECTION.

nonassertion letter. Patents. A patentee's written declaration that the holder does not intend to enforce the right to exclude others from practicing specified claims of a patent. • The patentee may choose to waive the right entirely or specify a time limit for the waiver. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 82.]

nonassertive conduct. See CONDUCT.

nonassessable insurance. See INSURANCE.

nonassessable stock. See STOCK.

non assumpsit (non ə-səm[p]-sit). [Latin "he did not undertake"] Hist. A general denial in an action of assumpsit. See ASSUMPSIT. [Cases: Assumpsit, Action of ⇨ 20.]

"Non assumpsit' is the general issue in assumpsit, whether special or general, and is in effect a formal denial of liability on the promise or contract alleged. It denies not only the inducement or statement of the plaintiff's right, but also the breach, and allows any defense tending to show that there was no debt or cause of action at the time of commencing suit." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 182, at 322 (Henry Winthrop Balantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

non assumpsit infra sex annos (non ə-səm[p]-sit in-frə-seks an-ohs), n. [Latin "he did not undertake within six years"] Hist. The specific pleading form for the statute-of-limitations defense in an action of assumpsit.

nonbailable, adj. (1811) 1. (Of a person) not entitled to bail <the defendant was nonbailable because of a charge of first-degree murder>. [Cases: Bail ⇨ 43.] 2. (Of an offense) not admitting of bail <murder is a nonbailable offense>.

nonbank, adj. Of, relating to, or being an entity other than a bank  .

nonbank bank. See BANK.

nonbank financial institution. See MONEY SERVICE BUSINESS.

nonbillable time. (1947) An attorney's or paralegal's time that is not chargeable to a client. Cf. BILLABLE TIME.

nonmarketable security. See SECURITY.

nonmedical policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

nonmember bank. See BANK.

non memini (non mem-ə-ni). [Law Latin] Scots law. I do not remember. • The phrase appeared in reference to an oath in which one person swore no remembrance of a transaction.

“Where a party to whose oath the resting-owing of a debt, or a payment, is referred, swears that he does not remember receiving the goods charged for, or of his incurring the debt, or of receiving the alleged payment, such oath, as not being evidence of the point referred, may result in decree of absolvitor in his favour, where the whole circumstances tend to the conclusion that the non memini is not only an honest answer, but a reasonable one. But if the fact referred is so recent that the deponent cannot be believed to be ignorant of it, or to have forgotten it, he is considered as concealing the truth, and will be decerned against in the same manner as if he had refused to depone.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 397 (4th ed. 1894).

non merchandizanda victualia (non mār-chən-di-zan-də vik-choo-ay-lee-ə), n. [Law Latin “not to merchandise victuals”] Hist. A writ directing justices of nonoperating income. See INCOME.

nonoperative performance bond. See PERFORMANCE BOND.

nonoriginal bill. See BILL (2).

nonownership theory. Oil & gas. A characterization of oil-and-gas rights used in a minority of jurisdictions, holding that the owner of a severed mineral interest does not have a present right to possess the oil and gas in place, but only to search for, develop, and produce it. • Because there is no right to present possession, the interest of such an owner in a nonownership-theory state is akin to a profit a prendre: a right to use the land and remove items of value from it. This theory is used in California, Wyoming, Louisiana, and Oklahoma. Cf. OWNERSHIP-IN-PLACE THEORY. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻73.1(2), 73.1(4).]

non pars substantiae sive fundi, sed accidens (non parz səb-stan-shee-ee si-vee fən-di, sed ək-si-denz). [Law Latin] Scots law. Not a part of the substance or the land, but an accident. • The phrase appeared in reference to servitudes, among other things.

nonparticipating, adj. (1859) Of or relating to not taking part in something; specif., not sharing or having the right to share in profits or surpluses. — Often shortened to nonpar.

nonsuit, n. (15c) 1. A plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of a case or of a defendant, without a decision on the merits.

non sum informatus (non sǎm in-fǎr-may-tǎs), n. [Latin “I am not informed”] Hist. A type of default judgment based on a defense attorney's statement that the client gave no instructions to answer the lawsuit.

nonsupport. (1909) Family law. The failure to support a person for whom one is legally obliged to provide, such as a child, spouse, or other dependent. • Nonsupport is a crime in most states. — Also termed criminal nonsupport; criminal neglect of family; abandonment of minor children; abandonment of children. Cf. SUPPORT. [Cases: Child Support ↷652.]

nontariff barrier. An official policy, other than a tariff, that restricts international trade, esp. by limiting imports or exports. — Abbr. NTB. Cf. NONTARIFF MEASURE.

nontariff measure. An official policy, other than a tariff, that affects international-trade conditions, including a policy that increases trade as well as one that restricts it. — Abbr. NTM. Cf. NONTARIFF BARRIER.

no recourse. 1. The lack of means by which to obtain reimbursement from, or a judgment against, a person or entity <the bank had no recourse against the individual executive for collection of the corporation’s debts>. 2. A notation indicating that such means are lacking <the bill was indorsed “no recourse”>. See nonrecourse loan under LOAN; WITHOUT RECOURSE.

No Religious Test Clause. See RELIGIOUS TEST CLAUSE.

no-retreat rule. (1973) Criminal law. The doctrine that the victim of a murderous assault may use deadly force in self-defense if there is no reasonable alternative to avoid the assailant’s threatened harm. • A majority of American jurisdictions have adopted this rule. Cf. RETREAT RULE. [Cases: Homicide ↻798.]

no-right, n. (1913) The absence of right against another in some particular respect. • A no-right is the correlative of a privilege. — Also termed liability.

“A says to B, ‘If you will agree to pay me $100 for this horse you may have him and you may indicate your agreement by taking him.’ This is a physical fact, called an offer, consisting of certain muscular acts of A having certain physical results in B. The legal relations immediately following are (in part) as follows: B now has the privilege of taking the horse and A has no-right that he shall not . . .” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 321 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“‘No-right’ is sometimes derided as being a purely negative concept. If a no-right is something that is not a right, the class of no-rights must, it is said, include elephants. The answer is that negative terms are often useful as alternative ways of stating propositions involving negatives. For instance, the terms ‘alien,’ ‘cold,’ and ‘dark’ are all negative or privative, because their meaning includes the idea of the absence of something else. The proposition that A is an alien means that A is not a British subject; in the one mode of statement the negative is incorporated in the noun, whereas in the other it is expressed as a separate word. Similarly the word ‘liberty’ is negative, and critics who attack the concept of no-right should logically attack the concept of liberty also. . . . [L]iberty means ‘no-duty not.’ . . . [F]or the sake of clear thinking it is necessary to give each of the four meanings [of right] a separate name. Words like ‘no-right’ and ‘no-duty’ may seem uncouth at first sight, but it is surely a clear and useful statement to say that ‘right’ sometimes means ‘no-duty not.’” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 240–41 n.(u) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

norm. (1821) 1. A model or standard accepted (voluntarily or involuntarily) by society or other large group, against which society judges someone or something. • An example of a norm is the standard for right or wrong behavior. 2. An actual or set standard determined by the typical or most frequent behavior of a group.

basic norm. In the legal theory of Hans Kelsen, the law from which all the other laws in a society derive. • Kelsen's "pure theory of law" maintains that laws are norms. Therefore, a society's legal system is made up of its norms, and each legal norm derives its validity from other legal norms. Ultimately, the validity of all laws is tested against the "basic norm," which may be as simple as the concept that all pronouncements of the monarch are to be obeyed. Or it may be an elaborate system of lawmaking, such as a constitution. — Also termed grundnorm. See PURE THEORY.

normal, adj. (15c) 1. According to a regular pattern; natural <it is normal to be nervous in court>. • The term describes not just forces that are constantly and habitually operating but also forces that operate periodically or with some degree of frequency. In this sense, its common antonyms are unusual and extraordinary. 2. According to an established rule or norm <it is not normal to deface statues>. 3. Setting a standard or norm .

normal school. A training school for public-school teachers. • Normal schools first appeared in the United States in the 1800s and were two-year post-high-school training programs for elementary-school teachers. At the turn of the century, normal schools expanded into four-year teaching colleges. Most of these institutions have developed into liberal arts colleges offering a wider variety of education and teaching programs. — Also termed normal college. [Cases: Colleges and Universities ↻1.]

Norman French. A language that was spoken by the Normans and became the official language of English courts after the Norman Conquest in 1066. • The language deteriorated into Law French and continued to be used until the late 17th century. English became the official language of the courts in 1731.

normative, adj. (1852) Establishing or conforming to a norm or standard <Rawls's theory describes normative principles of justice>.

normative jurisprudence. See NATURAL LAW.

Norris-La Guardia Act (nor-is læ-gwahr-dee-ə). A 1932 federal law that forbids federal courts from ruling on labor policy and that severely limits their power to issue injunctions in labor disputes. • The statute was passed to curb federal-court abuses of the injunctive process, to declare the government's neutrality on labor policy, to curtail employers' widespread use of injunctions to thwart union activity, and to promote the use of collective bargaining to resolve disputes. 29 USCA §§ 101–115. — Also termed Labor Disputes Act; Anti-Injunction Act.

Norroy (nor-oy). English law. The third of the three Kings at Arms (and the chief herald), whose province lies on the north side of the river Trent. • The Norroy's duties have included the supervision of weddings and funerals of nobility. See HERALD.

North American Free Trade Agreement. A 1994 agreement between the United States, Canada, and Mexico, designed to phase out all tariffs and eliminate many nontariff barriers (such as quotas) inhibiting the free trade of goods between the participating nations. • Among other provisions, it set minimum standards for intellectual-property protection afforded other members' citizens. Negotiated at the same time as the GATT talks that produced TRIPs, NAFTA borrowed from many TRIPs provisions on intellectual-property protection, as by as protecting computer software and databases by copyright. While NAFTA incorporates by reference the Berne Convention standards of intellectual-property rights, it exempts the U.S. from recognizing Berne's moral rights. — Abbr. NAFTA. [Cases: Treaties ↻8.]

North Eastern Reporter. A set of regional lawbooks, part of the West Group's National Reporter System, containing every published appellate decision from Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, and Ohio, from 1885 to date. • The first series ran from 1885 to 1936; the second series is the current one. — Abbr. N.E.; N.E.2d.

North Western Reporter. A set of regional lawbooks, part of the West Group's National Reporter System, containing every published appellate decision from Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin, from 1879 to date. • The first series ran from 1879 to 1941; the second series is the current one. — Abbr. N.W.; N.W.2d.

Northwest Territory. Hist. The first possession of the United States, being the geographical region south of the Great Lakes, north of the Ohio River, and east of the Mississippi River, as designated by the Continental Congress in the late 1700s. • This area includes the present states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and the eastern part of Minnesota.

NOS. abbr. National Ocean Service. See NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION.

noscitur a sociis (nos-ə-tər ay [or ah] soh-shee-is). [Latin "it is known by its associates"] (18c) A canon of construction holding that the meaning of an unclear word or phrase should be determined by the words immediately surrounding it. Cf. EJUSDEM GENERIS; EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS; RULE OF RANK. [Cases: Statutes ↷193.]

"The ejusdem generis rule is an example of a broader linguistic rule or practice to which reference is made by the Latin tag noscitur a sociis. Words, even if they are not general words like 'whatsoever' or 'otherwise' preceded by specific words, are liable to be affected by other words with which they are associated." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 118 (1976).

notary public (noh-tə-ree), n. (16c) A person authorized by a state to administer oaths, certify documents, attest to the authenticity of signatures, and perform official acts in commercial matters, such as protesting negotiable instruments. — Often shortened to notary. — Abbr. n.p. Cf. NOTARIO PUBLICO. [Cases: Notaries ↷1.] Pl. notaries public. — notarize, vb. — notarial, adj.

"A notary public is an officer long known to the civil law, and designated as registrarius, actuarius, or scrivarius." John Proffatt, A Treatise on the Law Relating to the Office and Duties of Notaries Public § 1, at 1 (John F. Tyler & John J. Stephens eds., 2d ed. 1892).

"The notary public, or notary, is an official known in nearly all civilized countries. The office is of ancient origin. In Rome, during the republic, it existed, the title being tabelliones forenses, or personae publicae; and there are records of the appointment of notaries by the Frankish kings and the Popes as early as the ninth century. They were chiefly employed in drawing up legal documents; as scribes or scriveners they took minutes and made short drafts of writings, either of a public or a private nature. In modern times their more characteristic duty is to attest the genuineness of any deeds or writings, in order to render the same available as evidence of the facts therein contained." Benjamin F. Rex, The Notaries' Manual § 1, at 1-2 (J.H. McMillan ed., 6th ed. 1913).

"In jurisdictions where the civilian law prevails, such as in the countries of continental Europe, a notary public is a public official who serves as a public witness of facts transacted by private parties . . . and also serves as impartial legal advisor for the parties involved. . . . In colonial Louisiana, the notary public had the same rank and dignity as his continental civilian ancestor. . . . Although notaries still constitute a protected profession in present-day Louisiana, holding office for life provided they renew their bonds periodically in compliance with the governing statute, the importance of their function has diminished over the years to the point that it has been said that a Louisiana notary is no longer a truly civilian notary. Indeed, the trained lawyer is nowadays the Louisiana, and American, counterpart of the continental civilian notary." Saul Litvinoff, 5 Louisiana Civil Law Treatise: The Law of Obligations 296-97 (2d ed. 2001).

notary record book. See JOURNAL OF NOTARIAL ACTS.

notary's certificate. A notary's signed and sealed or stamped statement attesting to the time and place that the specified acts and documents were authenticated. [Cases: Notaries ↷9.]

notary seal. (18c) 1. The imprint or embossment made by a notary public's seal. [Cases: Notaries ↷8.] 2. A device, usu. a stamp or embosser, that makes an

embossed seal. (1959) 1. A notary seal that is impressed onto a document, raising the impression above the surface. • An embossed seal clearly identifies the original document because the seal is only faintly reproducible. For this reason, this type of seal is required in some states and on some documents notarized for federal purposes. [Cases: Notaries ↻8.] 2. The embossment made by this seal.

rubber-stamp seal. (1948) 1. In most states, a notary public's official seal, which is ink-stamped onto documents and is therefore photographically reproducible. • It typically includes the notary's name, the state seal, the words "Notary Public," the name of the county where the notary's bond is filed, and the expiration date of the notary's commission. [Cases: Notaries ↻8.] 2. The imprint made by this seal.

notation credit. (1956) A letter of credit specifying that anyone purchasing or paying a draft or demand for payment made under it must note the amount of the draft or demand on the letter. See LETTER OF CREDIT. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↻191.20.]

note, n. (17c) 1. A written promise by one party (the maker) to pay money to another party (the payee) or to bearer. • A note is a two-party negotiable instrument, unlike a draft (which is a three-party instrument). — Also termed promissory note. Cf. DRAFT (1). [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻28.]

accommodation note. A note that an accommodating party has signed and thereby assumed secondary liability for; ACCOMMODATION PAPER. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻49, 122.]

approved indorsed note. A note indorsed by a person other than the maker to provide additional security.

balloon note. A note requiring small periodic payments but a very large final payment. • The periodic payments usu. cover only interest, while the final payment (the balloon payment) represents the entire principal.

banker's note. A promissory note given by a private banker or an unincorporated banking institution.

banknote. See BANKNOTE.

blue note. A note that maintains a life-insurance policy in effect until the note becomes due. [Cases: Insurance ↻2020, 2027.]

circular note. See LETTER OF CREDIT.

coal note. Hist. A promissory note written according to a statute that required payment for coal out of any vessel in the port of London to be in cash or by promissory note containing the words "value received in coal." • Noncompliance with the statute resulted in a fine of £100.

cognovit note. See COGNOVIT NOTE.

collateral note. See secured note.

coupon note. A note with attached interest coupons that the holder may present for payment as each coupon matures.

demand note. A note payable whenever the creditor wants to be paid. See call loan under LOAN. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻129(3).] executed note. A note that has been signed and delivered. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻54–62.]

floating-rate note. A note carrying a variable interest rate that is periodically adjusted within a predetermined range, usu. every six months, in relation to an index, such as Treasury bill rates. — Also termed floater. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻125; Interest ↻32.]

hand note. A note that is secured by a collateral note.

installment note. A note payable at regular intervals. — Also termed serial note.

inverse-floating-rate note. A note structured in such a way that its interest rate moves in the opposite direction from the underlying index (such as the London Interbank Offer Rate). • Many such notes are risky investments because if interest rates rise, the securities lose their value and their coupon earnings fall. — Also termed inverse floater. [Cases: Interest ↻32.]

joint and several note. A note for which multiple makers are jointly and severally liable for repayment, meaning that the payee may legally look to all the makers, or any one of them, for payment of the entire debt. See joint and several liability under LIABILITY. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻120.]

joint note. A note for which multiple makers are jointly, but not severally, liable for repayment, meaning that the payee must legally look to all the makers together for payment of the debt. See joint liability under LIABILITY. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻120.]

mortgage note. A note evidencing a loan for which real property has been offered as security. [Cases: Mortgages ↻14.]

negotiable note. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT.

nonrecourse note. A note that may be satisfied upon default only by means of the collateral securing the note, not by the debtor's other assets. Cf. recourse note. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻44; Secured Transactions ↻227, 240.]

note of hand. See promissory note.

post note. See time note.

premium note. A promissory note given by an insured to an insurance company for part or all of the premium.

promissory note. (18c) An unconditional written promise, signed by the maker, to pay absolutely and in any event a certain sum of money either to, or to the order of, the bearer or a designated person. — Also termed note of hand. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻ 28–53.]

recourse note. A note that may be satisfied upon default by pursuing the debtor's other assets in addition to the collateral securing the note. Cf. nonrecourse note. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↻ 227, 240.]

reissuable note. A note that may again be put into circulation after having once been paid.

renewal note. A note that continues an obligation that was due under a prior note. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻ 138, 141.]

sale note. A broker's memorandum on the terms of a sale, given to the buyer and seller.

savings note. A short-term, interest-bearing paper issued by a bank or the U.S. government.

secured note. A note backed by a pledge of real or personal property as collateral. — Also termed collateral note.

self-canceling installment note. A debt obligation that is automatically extinguished at the creditor's death. • Any remaining balance on the note becomes uncollectible. Self-canceling notes are typically used in estate planning. — Abbr. SCIN. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻ 4159(7).]

serial note. See installment note.

sold note. A written memorandum of sale delivered to the seller by the broker responsible for the sale, and usu. outlining the terms of the sale. See CONFIRMATION SLIP.

stock note. A note that is secured by securities, such as stocks or bonds.

tax-anticipation note. A short-term obligation issued by state or local governments to finance current expenditures and that usu. matures once the local government receives individual and corporate tax payments. — Abbr. TAN. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻ 908.]

time note. A note payable only at a specified time and not on demand. — Also termed post note. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻ 129.]

treasury note. See TREASURY NOTE.

unsecured note. A note not backed by collateral.

2. A scholarly legal essay shorter than an article and restricted in scope, explaining or criticizing a particular set of cases or a general area of the law, and usu. written by a law student for publication in a law review. — Also termed comment; lawnote. Cf. ANNOTATION. 3. A minute or memorandum intended for later reference; MEMORANDUM (1).

broker's note. A memorandum, usu. one authorizing a broker to act as a principal's agent, that is prepared by the broker and a copy given to the principal. [Cases: Brokers ↻ 7, 12.]

note, vb. (13c) 1. To observe carefully or with particularity <the defendant noted that the plaintiff seemed nervous>. 2. To put down in writing <the court reporter noted the objection in the record>. 3. Archaic. To brand <as punishment, the criminal was noted>. See NOTA.

note broker. See BROKER.

note of a fine. Hist. English law. A step in the judicial process for conveying land, consisting of a chirographer's brief of the proceedings before the documents of conveyance are engrossed. — Also termed abstract of a fine. See FINE (1).

note of allowance. English law. A master's note, upon receiving a party's memorandum of an error of law in a case, allowing error to be asserted.

note of hand. See promissory note under NOTE (1). Pl. notes of hand.

note of protest. A notary's preliminary memo, to be formalized at a later time, stating that a negotiable instrument was neither paid nor accepted upon presentment. See PROTEST. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻ 408.]

note payable. See account payable under ACCOUNT.

note receivable. See account receivable under ACCOUNT.

no-term lease. Oil & gas. A mineral lease with a drilling-delay rental clause that allows the lessee to extend the primary term indefinitely by paying delay rentals. • No-term leases were common at the end of the 19th century. Some courts refused to enforce them on the ground that they created a mere estate at will, terminable at the will of either the lessor or the lessee. Other courts upheld them, but with the stipulation that the lessee had an obligation to either test or release the lease within a reasonable time. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻ 73.5, 78.1(3).]

note verbal (noht vər-bəl). Int'l law. An unsigned diplomatic note, usu. written in the third person, that sometimes accompanies a diplomatic message or note of protest to further explain the country's position or to request certain action. — Also spelled note verbale (vair-bahl).

not-for-profit corporation. See nonprofit corporation under CORPORATION.

not found. Words placed on a bill of indictment, meaning that the grand jury has insufficient evidence to support a true bill. See IGNORAMUS; NO BILL. Cf. TRUE BILL.

not guilty. (15c) 1. A defendant's plea denying the crime charged. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 299.] 2. A jury verdict acquitting the defendant because the prosecution failed to prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Cf. INNOCENT.

not guilty by reason of insanity. (1844) 1. A not-guilty verdict, based on mental illness, that usu. does not release the defendant but instead results in commitment to a mental institution. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 47; Homicide ↻ 817.] 2. A criminal defendant's plea of not guilty that is based on the insanity defense. — Abbr. NGRI. — Also termed not guilty on the ground of insanity. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 286.5.]

3. Common-law pleading. A defendant's plea denying both an act of trespass alleged in a plaintiff's declaration and the plaintiff's right to possess the property at issue.

"In trespass, whether to person or property, the general issue is 'not guilty.' It operates in the first place as a denial that the defendant committed the act of trespass alleged, to wit, the application of force to the plaintiff's person, the entry on his land, or the taking or damages of his goods. It also denies the plaintiff's possession, title, or right of possession of the land or goods." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 170, at 307-08 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

not guilty by statute. Hist. Under certain acts of Parliament, the pleading form for a defendant's general denial in a civil action. • This pleading form allowed a public officer to indicate action under a statute. The officer had to write the words "by statute" in the margin along with the year, chapter, and section of the applicable statute, and the defendant could not file any other defense without leave of court. The right to plead "not guilty by statute" was essentially removed by the Public Authorities Protection Act of 1893.

4. A general denial in an ejectment action. [Cases: Ejectment ⇨68.]

"The general issue in ejectment is not guilty. This plea operates as follows: (1) As a denial of the unlawfulness of the withholding; i.e., of the plaintiff's title and right of possession. (2) All defenses in excuse or discharge, including the statute of limitations, are available under the general issue in ejectment." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 188, at 333 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

nothous (noh-thəs), adj. Archaic. Spurious; illegitimate.

nothus (noh-thəs), n. [Latin fr. Greek nothos "false"] Roman law. An illegitimate child; one of base birth. • If the child's mother was a Roman citizen, the child was also a Roman citizen. — Also termed spurius.

notice, n. (16c) 1. Legal notification required by law or agreement, or imparted by operation of law as a result of some fact (such as the recording of an instrument); definite legal cognizance, actual or constructive, of an existing right or title <under the lease, the tenant must give the landlord written notice 30 days before vacating the premises>. • A person has notice of a fact or condition if that person (1) has actual knowledge of it; (2) has received information about it; (3) has reason to know about it; (4) knows about a related fact; or (5) is considered as having been able to ascertain it by checking an official filing or recording. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨251.6, 309; Notice ⇨1.] 2. The condition of being so notified, whether or not actual awareness exists <all prospective buyers were on notice of the judgment lien>. Cf. KNOWLEDGE. [Cases: Sales ⇨235; Vendor and Purchaser ⇨225.] 3. A written or printed announcement <the notice of sale was posted on the courthouse bulletin board>.

actual notice. (18c) 1. Notice given directly to, or received personally by, a party. — Also termed express notice. [Cases: Notice ⇨1.5.] 2. Property. Notice given by open possession and occupancy of real property. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨232.] adequate notice. See due notice.

commercial-law notice. Under the UCC, notice of a fact arising either as a result of actual knowledge or notification of the fact, or as a result of circumstances under which a person would have reason to know of the fact. UCC § 1-201(25). [Cases: Sales ⇨235.]

constructive notice. (18c) Notice arising by presumption of law from the existence of facts and circumstances that a party had a duty to take notice of, such as a registered deed or a pending lawsuit; notice presumed by law to have been acquired by a person and thus imputed to that person. — Also termed legal notice. [Cases: Notice ⇨4; Vendor and Purchaser ⇨229.]

direct notice. (17c) Actual notice of a fact that is brought directly to a party's attention. — Also termed positive notice.

due notice. (17c) Sufficient and proper notice that is intended to and likely to reach a particular person or the public; notice that is legally adequate given the particular circumstance. — Also termed adequate notice; legal notice.

express notice. (18c) Actual knowledge or notice given to a party directly, not arising from any inference, duty, or inquiry. See actual notice. [Cases: Notice ⇨2.] fair notice. (17c) 1. Sufficient notice apprising a litigant of the opposing party's claim. 2. The requirement that a pleading adequately apprise the opposing party of a claim. • A pleading must be drafted so that an opposing attorney of reasonable competence would be able to ascertain the nature and basic issues of the controversy and the evidence probably relevant to those issues. 3. FAIR WARNING. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨673; Pleading ⇨48.]

immediate notice. 1. Notice given as soon as possible. 2. More commonly, and esp. on notice of an insurance claim, notice that is reasonable under the circumstances. [Cases: Insurance ⇨3154.]

implied notice. (18c) Notice that is inferred from facts that a person had a means of knowing and that is thus imputed to that person; actual notice of facts or circumstances that, if properly followed up, would have led to a knowledge of the particular fact in question. — Also termed indirect notice; presumptive notice. [Cases: Notice ⇨3.]

imputed notice. (1831) Information attributed to a person whose agent, having received actual notice of the information, has a duty to disclose it to that person. • For example, notice of a hearing may be imputed to a witness because it was actually disclosed to that witness's attorney of record. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨177(1).] indirect notice. See implied notice.

inquiry notice. (1945) Notice attributed to a person when the information would lead an ordinarily prudent person to investigate the matter further; esp., the time at which the victim of an alleged securities fraud became aware of facts that would have prompted a reasonable person to investigate. [Cases: Notice ↷6; Vendor and Purchaser ↷229.]

judicial notice. See JUDICIAL NOTICE.

legal notice. 1. See constructive notice. 2. See due notice.

notice by publication. See public notice.

personal notice. (17c) Oral or written notice, according to the circumstances, given directly to the affected person.

positive notice. See direct notice.

presumptive notice. See implied notice.

public notice. (16c) Notice given to the public or persons affected, usu. by publishing in a newspaper of general circulation. • This notice is usu. required, for example, in matters of public concern. — Also termed notice by publication. [Cases: Notice ↷11.]

reasonable notice. Notice that is fairly to be expected or required under the particular circumstances.

record notice. (1855) Constructive notice of the contents of an instrument, such as a deed or mortgage, that has been properly recorded. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷231.]

short notice. Notice that is inadequate or not timely under the circumstances.

4. Intellectual property. A formal sign attached to items that embody or reproduce an intellectual property right. • Notice of patent is made by placing the word "patent" (or its abbreviation, "pat.") and the item's patent number on an item made by a patentee or licensee. There are three statutory notice forms for U.S. trademark and servicemark registration. The most common is the symbol with the letter R (*) but "Reg. U.S. Pat. & Tm. Off." or "Registered in U.S. Patent and Trademark Office" affords the same legal protection. A copyright notice also takes several forms. The first part may be the symbol with the letter C in a circle (©), or the word "Copr." or "Copyright." It must be followed by the copyright owner's name and the year that the work was first published. Informal signs, such as "Brand," "TM," "Trademark," "SM," and "Service Mark," adjacent to words or other symbols considered to be protectable marks are not legal notices of exclusive rights. [Cases: Patents ↷222; Trademarks ↷1250.]

5. Parliamentary law. A meeting's published call. See call of a meeting under CALL (1). 6. Parliamentary law. A formal statement that certain business may come before a meeting, usu. made at an earlier meeting or published with the call of the meeting that will consider the business, and made as a prerequisite to the business's consideration. See call of a meeting under CALL (1). — Also termed previous notice.

notice, vb. (15c) 1. To give legal notice to or of <the plaintiff's lawyer noticed depositions of all the experts that the defendant listed>. 2. To realize or give attention to <the lawyer noticed that the witness was leaving>.

notice act. See NOTICE STATUTE.

notice-and-comment period. Administrative law. The statutory time frame during which an administrative agency publishes a proposed regulation and receives public comment on the regulation. • The regulation cannot take effect until after this period expires. — Often shortened to comment period. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↷394, 395.]

notice-and-comment rulemaking. See informal rulemaking under RULEMAKING.

notice-based quorum. See QUORUM.

notice by publication. See public notice under NOTICE.

notice doctrine. (1924) The equitable doctrine that when a new owner takes an estate with notice that someone else had a claim on it at the time of the transfer, that claim may still be asserted against the new owner even if it might have been disregarded at law. — Also termed doctrine of notice.

notice filing. The perfection of a security interest under Article 9 of the UCC by filing only a financing statement, as opposed to a copy or abstract of the security agreement. • The financing statement must contain (1) the debtor's signature, (2) the secured party's name and address, (3) the debtor's name and mailing address, and (4) a description of the types of, or items of, collateral. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷92.]

notice-of-alibi rule. (1969) The principle that, upon written demand from the government, a criminal defendant who intends to call an alibi witness at trial must give notice of who that witness is and where the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense. • The government is, in turn, obligated to give notice to the defendant of any witness it intends to call to rebut the alibi testimony. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 12.1. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷629(9).] notice of allowability. Patents. Notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that at least one claim in a patent application has been approved on their merits. • This notice is followed by the Notice of Allowance. The notice may also be issued if at least one claim is allowable but the application is under a secrecy order.

It may include examiner's amendments incorporating some formal changes. [Cases: Patents ↻104.]

notice of allowance. 1. Patents. The formal notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a patent application has been approved and that a patent can be issued. • The patent itself is not issued until the applicant has paid the issue fee. [Cases: Patents ↻104.] 2. Trademarks. The formal notification from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a trademark may be placed on the Principal Register if it is actually used in commerce.

notice of appeal. (18c) A document filed with a court and served on the other parties, stating an intention to appeal a trial court's judgment or order. • In most jurisdictions, filing a notice of appeal is the act by which the appeal is perfected. For instance, the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure provide that an appeal is taken by filing a notice of appeal with the clerk of the district court from which the appeal is taken, and that the clerk is to send copies of the notice to all the other parties' attorneys, as well as the court of appeals. Fed. R. App. P. 3(a), (d). — Also termed claim of appeal. See APPEAL. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↻396-430; Criminal Law ↻1081; Federal Courts ↻665.1.]

notice of appearance. (1844) 1. Procedure. A party's written notice filed with the court or oral announcement on the record informing the court and the other parties that the party wants to participate in the case. [Cases: Appearance ↻6; Federal Civil Procedure ↻561.] 2. Bankruptcy. A written notice filed with the court or oral announcement in open court by a person who wants to receive all pleadings in a particular case. • This notice is usu. filed by an attorney for a creditor who wants to be added to the official service list. 3. A pleading filed by an attorney to notify the court and the other parties that he or she represents one or more parties in the lawsuit. — Abbr. NOA.

notice of completion. Construction law. A written and recorded announcement that a building project is finished, thereby limiting the time for filing mechanic's liens against the property. • The time for filing a lien begins to run when the notice of completion is filed. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens ↻132(4).] notice of copyright. See COPYRIGHT NOTICE.

notice of deficiency. See NINETY-DAY LETTER.

notice of dishonor. (1804) Notice to the indorser of an instrument that acceptance or payment has been refused. • This notice — along with presentment and actual dishonor — is a condition of an indorser's secondary liability. UCC § 3-503(a). — Also termed certificate of protest; certificate of dishonor. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻393, 411.]

notice of incomplete application. Patents. A notice sent to the applicant by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office when a patent application lacks a required document or the filing fee. • The applicant generally has two months to complete the application, with an extension avail-

notice of motion. (18c) Written certification that a party to a lawsuit has filed a motion or that a motion will be heard or considered by the court at a particular time. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the requirement that a motion be made in writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing on the motion. Also, the courts in most jurisdictions require all motions to include a certificate, usu. referred to as a certificate of service, indicating that the other parties to the suit have been given notice of the motion's filing. Notice of any hearing or other submission of the motion must usu. be provided to all parties by the party requesting the hearing or submission. Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d), 7(b)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. Form 19. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻921; Motions ↻18.1.]

notice of nonresponsibility. Construction law. A written disclaimer that, if posted conspicuously and recorded, relieves a property owner from liability for work or materials used on the property without the owner's authorization. • It protects an owner against mechanic's liens that could arise when repairs or improvements are made by a tenant or other person in possession. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens ↻78.]

notice of orders or judgments. (1854) Written notice of the entry of an order or judgment, provided by the court clerk or one of the parties. • Notice of a judgment is usu. provided by the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered. If the court does not provide notice, a party is usu. required to provide it. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the clerk is required to provide immediate notice of any order or judgment to any party to the case who is not in default. Fed. R. Civ. P. 77(d); Fed. R. Crim. P. 49(c). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2628; Judgment ↻276; Motions ↻57.]

notice of prior-art references. Patents. Notification from a patent examiner of the previously issued patents used in rejecting one or more of the applicant's claims. [Cases: Patents ↻108.]

notice of protest. 1. A statement, given usu. by a notary public to a drawer or indorser of a negotiable instrument, that the instrument was neither paid nor accepted; information provided to the drawer or indorser that protest was made for nonacceptance or nonpayment of a note or bill. See PROTEST (2). [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻408.] 2. A shipowner's or crew's declaration under oath that damages to their vessel or cargo were the result of perils of the sea and that the shipowner is not liable for the damages. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

notice of removal. (1892) The pleading by which the defendant removes a case from state court to federal court. • A notice of removal is filed in the federal district court in the district and division in which the suit is pending. The notice must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds for removal and must include a copy of all process, pleadings, and orders that have been served on the removing party while the case has been pending. The removing party must also notify the state court and other parties to the suit that the notice of removal has been filed. A notice of removal must be filed, if at all, within 30 days after the defendant is served with process in the suit. 28 USCA § 1446; Murphy Bros., Inc. v. Michetti Pipe Stringing, Inc., 526 U.S. 344, 119 S.Ct. 1322 (1999). [Cases: Removal of Cases ↷86, 87.]

notice of trial. (17c) A document issued by a court informing the parties of the date on which the lawsuit is set for trial. • While the court typically provides the notice to all parties, it may instead instruct one party to send the notice to all the others. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1966; Trial ↷6.]

notice-prejudice rule. A doctrine barring an insurer from using late notice as a reason to deny an insured's claim unless the insurer can show that it was prejudiced by the untimely notice. [Cases: Insurance ↷3168.]

notice-race statute. See RACE-NOTICE STATUTE.

notice statute. (1864) A recording act providing that the person with the most recent valid claim, and who purchased without notice of an earlier, unrecorded claim, has priority. • About half the states have notice statutes. — Also termed notice act. Cf. RACE STATUTE; RACE-NOTICE STATUTE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷231.]

notice to admit. See REQUEST FOR ADMISSION.

notice to all the world. A general public announcement regarding a lawsuit, esp. to persons within the jurisdiction where a lawsuit is pending.

notice to appear. (17c) A summons or writ by which a person is cited to appear in court. • This is an informal phrase sometimes used to refer to the summons or other initial process by which a person is notified of a lawsuit. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require the summons to state that the defendant must appear and defend within a given time and that failure to do so will result in a default judgment. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(a). See PROCESS; SUMMONS; DEFAULT JUDGMENT; NOTICE TO PLEAD.

notice to creditors. Bankruptcy. A formal notice to creditors that a creditors' meeting will be held, that proofs of claim must be filed, or that an order for relief has been granted. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷2131.]

notice to pay rent or quit. See NOTICE TO QUIT.

notice to plead. (18c) A warning to a defendant, stating that failure to file a responsive pleading within a prescribed time will result in a default judgment. • The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require the summons to notify the defendant that failure to appear and defend within a prescribed time will result in a default judgment. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(a). See PROCESS; SUMMONS;

DEFAULT JUDGMENT; NOTICE TO APPEAR. [Cases: Pleading ↷83; Process ↷33.]

notice to produce. See REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION.

notice to quit. (18c) 1. A landlord's written notice demanding that a tenant surrender and vacate the leased property, thereby terminating the tenancy. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↷94, 116(2), 116(5), 120(2).] 2. A landlord's notice to a tenant to pay any back rent within a specified period (often seven days) or else vacate the leased premises. — Also termed notice to pay rent or quit.

notify, vb. (14c) 1. To inform (a person or group) in writing or by any method that is understood <I notified the court of the change in address>. 2. Archaic. To give notice of; to make known <to notify the lawsuit to all the defendants>. See NOTICE.

notio (noh-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin noscere "to know"] 1. Roman law. An investigation of a case by a magistrate. 2. Hist. The authority of a judge to try a case. Pl. notiones (noh-shee-oh-nee-z).

notitia (noh-tish-ee-ə), n. [Latin "knowledge"] 1. Roman law. Knowledge; information. • This term carried over for a time into English practice. 2. Roman law. A list; register; catalogue. • The Notitia Dignitatum (dig-ni-tay-təm) was a list of the high offices in the Eastern and Western parts of the empire, compiled in the late fourth or early fifth century A.D. 3. Hist. Notice. 4. A list of ecclesiastical sees.

not law. A judicial decision regarded as wrong by the legal profession.

"Even when it is not possible to point out any decision that affects the point in question in any one of the ways enumerated, it sometimes happens that the profession has grown to ignore the old decision as wrong or obsolete; and though this does not happen often, when it does happen, the old decision is very likely not to be followed in case the point is squarely raised again. This is one of the instances in which lawyers rather mystically, though soundly, say that a decision is 'not law.'" William M. Lille et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 329 (3d ed. 1914).

notoriety. (16c) 1. The state of being generally, and often unfavorably, known and spoken of <the company executive achieved notoriety when she fled the country to avoid paying taxes>. 2. A person in such a state <the notoriety gave a rare interview>.

notorious, adj. (15c) 1. Generally known and spoken of, usu. unfavorably. 2. (Of the possession of property) so conspicuous as to impute notice to the true owner. — Also termed (in sense 2) open and notorious. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession ↷ 30.]

notorious insolvency. Scots law. A bankruptcy; the stage of insolvency in which the debtor has publicly acknowledged insolvency under the statute. • This stage is usu. followed by sequestration, which is notorious insolvency coupled with the appointment of a trustee for creditors. — Also termed notour bankruptcy.

notorious possession. See POSSESSION.

not otherwise indexed by name. A phrase used in shipping and tariff construction, usu. to show a classification of something generally rather than specifically. • For example, a shipment of aircraft and boat engines merely labeled "other articles" is not otherwise indexed by name. — Abbr. NOIBN. [Cases: Carriers ↷ 189.]

not possessed. Common-law pleading. In an action in trover, the defendant's plea denying possession of the articles allegedly converted. See TROVER.

not proven. An archaic jury verdict — now used only in Scots criminal law — equivalent in result to not guilty, but carrying with it a strong suspicion of guilt not fully proved. — Also termed Scotch verdict.

not satisfied. A form of return by a sheriff or constable, on a writ of execution, indicating only that the amount due on a judgment was not paid. • A general return of this type is usu. viewed as technically deficient because it does not state why the writ was not satisfied. Cf. NULLA BONA. [Cases: Execution ↷ 334.]

not sufficient funds. (1845) The notation of dishonor (of a check) indicating that the drawer's account does not contain enough money to cover payment. — Abbr. NSF. — Also termed insufficient funds.

notwithstanding, prep. (15c) Despite; in spite of <notwithstanding the conditions listed above, the landlord can terminate the lease if the tenant defaults>.

n.o.v. abbr. NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

nova causa interveniens. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

nova causa obligationis (noh-və kaw-zə ahb-li-gay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. A new ground of obligation.

nova custuma (noh-və kəs-t[y]ə-mə), n. [Law Latin "new custom"] Hist. A tax; an imposition. Cf. ANTIQUA CUSTUMA.

nova debita (noh-və deb-i-tə). [Latin] Scots law. New debts, as distinguished from preexisting ones.

"A security granted by a debtor within sixty days of his bankruptcy for a debt contracted before that period is reducible as a fraudulent preference. But security or payment granted in consideration of a novum debitum — a debt presently contracted — is not reducible although granted within the sixty days." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 402 (4th ed. 1894).

novae narrationes (noh-vee nə-ray-shee-oh-nee-z), n. [Law Latin "new counts or tales"] Hist. A collection of pleading forms published during the reign of Edward III.

novalia (noh-vay-lee-ə). [Law Latin "new lands" or "newly tilled land"] Scots law. Land newly cultivated.

• Exemptions from paying teinds, or tithes, were sometimes granted for novalia.

nova statuta (noh-və stə-t[y]oo-tə), n. pl. [Law Latin] Hist. New statutes. • This term refers to the statutes passed beginning with the reign of Edward III. Cf. VETERA STATUTA.

novation (noh-vay-shən), n. (16c) 1. The act of substituting for an old obligation a new one that either replaces an existing obligation with a new obligation or replaces an original party with a new party. • A novation may substitute (1) a new obligation between the same parties, (2) a new debtor, or (3) a new creditor. 2. A contract that (1) immediately discharges either a previous contractual duty or a duty to make compensation, (2) creates a new contractual duty, and (3) includes as a party one who neither owed the previous duty nor was entitled to its performance. — Also termed substituted agreement; (Scots law) innovation; (Roman law) novatio (noh-vay-shee-oh). See STIPULATIO AQUILIANA; substituted contract under CONTRACT; ACCORD (2). [Cases: Novation ↷ 1.] — novate (noh-vayt or noh-vayt), vb. — novatory (noh-və-tor-ee), adj.

"Novation is the emerging and transfer of a prior debt into another obligation either civil or natural, that is, the constitution of a new obligation in such a way as to destroy a prior one." Ulpian, D. 46.2.1 pr.

"The only way in which it is possible to transfer contractual duties to a third party is by the process of novation, which requires the consent of the other party to the contract. In fact novation really amounts to the extinction of the old obligation, and the creation of a new one, rather than to the transfer of the obligation from one person to another. Thus if B owes A £100, and C owes B the same amount, B cannot transfer to C the legal duty of paying his debt to A without A's consent. But if A agrees to accept C as a debtor in place of B, and if C agrees to accept A as his creditor in place of B, the three parties may make a tripartite agreement to this effect, known as novation. The effect of this is to extinguish B's liability to A and create a new liability on the part of C." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 283 (3d ed. 1981).

"The word 'novation' is used in a variety of senses. Courts frequently use it as synonymous with 'substituted contract.' Most academic writers and both contracts restatements, however, restrict its use to describe a substituted contract involving at least one obligor or obligee who was not a party to the original contract. . . . The development of a separate category under the rubric 'novation' is doubtless traceable to problems of consideration formerly thought to be present in such contracts because of the former common law rule that consideration must be supplied by the promisee. This rule has long been laid to rest almost everywhere." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 11-8, at 444-45 (3d ed. 1987).

objective novation. Civil law. A novation involving the substitution of a new obligation for an old one. [Cases: Novation ⇨4.]

subjective novation. Civil law. A novation involving the substitution of a new obligor for a previous obligor who has been discharged by the obligee.

novel assignment. See new assignment under ASSIGNMENT (7).

novel disseisin (nov-əl dis-see-zin), n. A recent disseisin. See DISSEISIN; assize of novel disseisin under ASSIZE (8).

Novellae (nə-vel-ee). See NOVELS.

Novellae Constitutiones. See NOVELS.

Novellae Leonis (nə-vel-ee lee-oh-nis), n. [Latin "novels of Leo"] A collection of 113 ordinances issued by Emperor Leo from A.D. 887-893.

Novels. A collection of 168 constitutions issued by the Roman emperor Justinian and his immediate successors. • Taken together, the Novels make up one of four component parts of the Corpus Juris Civilis. — Also termed Novellae; Novellae Constitutiones. See CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS.

novelty. (14c) 1. Trade secrets. The newness of information that is generally unused or unknown and that gives its owner a competitive advantage in a business field. • In the law of trade secrets, novelty does not require independent conception or even originality. A rediscovered technique with marketable applications can qualify as a novelty and be protected as a trade secret. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨413.] 2. Patents. Newness of an invention both in form and in function or performance; the strict statutory requirement that this originality be demonstrated before an invention is patentable. • Proving novelty is one purpose of the rigorous and expensive examination process. If the invention has been previously patented, described in a publication, known or used by others, or sold, it is not novel. 35 USCA § 102. Cf. NONOBVIOUSNESS. [Cases: Patents ⇨37.]

"Although the statute uses the words 'not known,' these are not to be taken literally. Novelty consists primarily in the invention not having been used by others in the United States or patented or described in any printed publication in this or any foreign country." Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 36-37 (3d ed. 1950).

absolute novelty. Patents. The rule in most countries, but not in the United States, that an inventor must always file a patent application before the invention is publicly used, placed on sale, or disclosed. • Under U.S. law, an inventor is given a one-year grace period — beginning on the date of any public use, sale, offer of sale, or publication by the inventor or the inventor's agent — in which to file a patent application. After that, the patent is barred. Canada and Mexico also give the first inventor or the inventor's assignees a one-year grace period for filing, but they bar a patent for the first inventor if the invention is independently developed and disclosed by someone else during that time. — Also termed absolute-novelty requirement. Cf. BAR DATE.

noverca (nə-vər-kə), n. [Latin] A stepmother.

noverint universi per praesentes (noh-və-rənt yoo-ni-vər-si pər pri-zen-teez). [Latin] Know all men by these presents. • This is a formal phrase once found at the beginning of deeds of release. In translation, the phrase still sometimes appears on various types of legal documents. See KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS; PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRAESENTES.

novigild (noh-və-gild), n. [fr. Latin novem "nine" + Anglo-Saxon gid or geld "a payment"] Hist. The money a person must pay for damaging another person's property, the amount equaling nine times the purchase price of the property damaged.

novi operis nuntiatio (noh-vi əhp-ə-ris nən-shee-ay-shee-oh). [Latin "new work protest"] Roman law. A protest against an opus novum ("new work"). • A person whose rights were impaired by the building of a new structure could protest to the praetor. The praetor could order the builder to give the protestor a security against any loss caused by the construction (edictum de novi operis nuntiatione). If the builder refused, the praetor could prohibit further construction with a prohibitory interdict (interdictum de novi operis nuntiatione). — Also written operis novi nuntiatio. Cf. JACTUS LAPILLI.

noviter perventa (noh-və-tər pər-ven-tə), n. pl. [Law Latin "newly known"] Eccles. law. Newly discovered facts, which are usu. allowed to be introduced in a case even after the pleadings are closed.

novodamus (noh-və-day-məs), n. [Latin novo damus "we grant anew"] Scots law. 1. A clause in a charter that progressively grants certain rights anew. • The phrase appeared in reference to any charter by which a superior renewed a previous land grant to a vassal. 2. A charter containing such a clause.

"This clause is subjoined to the dispositive clause; and by it the superior, whether the Crown or a subject, grants de novo the subjects, rights, or privileges therein described. Such a clause is usually inserted where the vassal is sensible of some defect or flaw in the former right This was also the correct form of proceeding . . . when the vassal wished to get free of burdens chargeable upon the subject for casualties due to the superior; for a charter of novodamus is accounted in law an original right, which imports a discharge of all prior burdens." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 747 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

novus actus interveniens (noh-vəs ək-təs in-tər-vee-nee-ənz). See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

novus homo (noh-vəs hoh-moh), n. [Latin "new man"] Hist. A man who has been pardoned for a crime.

NOW. abbr. 1. NEGOTIABLE ORDER OF WITHDRAWAL. 2. National Organization for Women.

noxā (nok-sə), n. [Latin “injury”] Hist. 1. Roman law. A harm done or an offense committed such as injury to a person or property, esp. by a slave or son. • This gave rise to noxal liability. 2. Roman law. The obligation to pay for damage committed by a son, slave, or animal. • The father or owner generally had to pay damages or else surrender the tortfeasor offending person or animal to the injured party (noxal surrender). — Also termed noxal liability. See NOXAL ACTION. 3. An offense, generally. 4. The punishment for an offense. 5. Something that exerts a harmful effect on the body.

noxal (nok-səl), adj. Archaic. Of or relating to a claim against a father or owner for damage done by a son, a slave, or an animal.

noxal action. [fr. Latin actio noxalis “injurious action”] 1. Roman law. The claim against an owner or father for a tort committed by a son, a slave, or an animal. • The head of the family could be sued either to pay a penalty due or to surrender the tortfeasor to the injured party. Roman law also provided for the surrender of animals that caused damage under the actio de pauperie. See actio de pauperie under ACTIO. 2. Hist. A person’s claim to recover for damages committed by a person’s son, slave, or animal.

noxious (nok-shəs), adj. (15c) 1. Harmful to health; injurious. 2. Unwholesome; corruptive. 3. Archaic. Guilty.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission. An independent federal agency that licenses and regulates civilian use of nuclear energy. • The agency was created by the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974. Executive Order 11834 of 1975 gave it additional functions previously performed by the Atomic Energy Commission. — Abbr. NRC. [Cases: Environmental Law ↻481, 484, 485, 487, 492.]

nuda detentio (n[y]oo-də di-ten-shee-oh). [Latin] See possessio naturalis under POSSESSIO.

nuda patientia (n[y]oo-də pash-ee-en-shee-ə). [Latin] Mere sufferance. • In a servitude, the servient estate owner’s obligation is one of mere sufferance because, while the owner has to submit to the dominant estate, the owner does not have to take any positive steps (such as fixing a sidewalk) to enhance the exercise of the dominant servitude.

nuda possessio (n[y]oo-də pə-zes[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] Mere possession.

nude, adj. (15c) 1. Naked; unclothed. 2. Lacking in consideration or in some essential particular. See NUDUM PACTUM. 3. Mere; lacking in description or specification.

nude contract. See NUDUM PACTUM.

nude matter. A mere allegation.

“[N]ude matter is not of so high nature, as either a mater of Record or a speciality, otherwise there called mater in deede; which maketh mee to thinke, that nude mater is a naked allegation of a thing done, to be proved only by witnesses, and not either by Record, or other speciality in writing vnder seale.” John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

nude pact. See NUDUM PACTUM.

nudum dominium (n[y]oo-dəm də-min-ee-əm). See DOMINIUM.

nudum officium (n[y]oo-dəm ə-fish-ee-əm). [Latin] Scots law. The bare office, without the usual emoluments. Pl. nuda officia.

nudum pactum (n[y]oo-dəm pak-təm). [Latin “bare agreement”] (17c) 1. Roman law. An informal agreement that is not legally enforceable, because it does not fall within the specific classes of agreements that can support a legal action. • But a pactum could create an exception to or modification of an existing obligation. 2. An agreement that is unenforceable as a contract because it is not “clothed” with consideration. — Also termed naked contract; nude contract; nude pact. [Cases: Contracts ⇨47, 54(1).] nugatory (n[y]oo-gə-tor-ee), adj. (17c) Of no force or effect; useless; invalid <the Supreme Court rendered the statute nugatory by declaring it unconstitutional>.

nuisance. (14c) 1. A condition, activity, or situation (such as a loud noise or foul odor) that interferes with the use or enjoyment of property; esp., a nontransitory condition or persistent activity that either injures the physical condition of adjacent land or interferes with its use or with the enjoyment of easements on the land or of public highways. • Liability might or might not arise from the condition or situation. — Formerly also termed annoyance. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨1–4.]

“A nuisance may be merely a right thing in the wrong place, like a pig in the parlor instead of the barnyard.” Village of Euclid v. Amber Realty Co., 272 U.S. 365, 388, 47 S.Ct. 114, 118 (1926).

“A ‘nuisance’ is a state of affairs. To conduct a nuisance is a tort. In torts, the word ‘nuisance’ has had an extremely elastic meaning; sometimes it is little more than a pejorative term, a weasel word used as a substitute for reasoning. . . . The general distinction between a nuisance and a trespass is that the trespass flows from a physical invasion and the nuisance does not.” Roger A. Cunningham et al., The Law of Property § 7.2, at 417 (2d ed. 1993).

2. Loosely, an act or failure to act resulting in an interference with the use or enjoyment of property. • In this sense, the term denotes the action causing the interference, rather than the resulting condition <the Slocums’ playing electric guitars in their yard constituted a nuisance to their neighbors>. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨3, 61.]

“There is perhaps no more impenetrable jungle in the entire law than that which surrounds the word ‘nuisance.’ It has meant all things to all people, and has been applied indiscriminately to everything from an alarming advertisement to a cockroach baked in a pie.” Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 86, at 616 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

3. The class of torts arising from such conditions, acts, or failures to act when they occur unreasonably. — Also termed actionable nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨3, 61.]

“Nuisance is really a field of tortious liability rather than a single type of tortious conduct: the feature which gives it unity is the interest invaded — that of the use and enjoyment of land. The tort emphasises the harm to the plaintiff rather than the conduct of the defendant.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 50–51 (17th ed. 1977).

abatable nuisance. (1871) 1. A nuisance so easily removable that the aggrieved party may lawfully cure the problem without notice to the liable party, such as overhanging tree branches. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨19.]

2. A nuisance that reasonable persons would regard as being removable by reasonable means.

absolute nuisance. (18c) 1. Interference with a property right that a court considers fixed or invariable, such as a riparian owner’s right to use a stream in its natural condition. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨1–7.] 2. See nuisance per se. 3. Interference in a place where it does not reasonably belong, even if the interfering party is careful. 4. Interference for which a defendant is held strictly liable for resulting harm, esp. in the nature of pollution. Cf. qualified nuisance.

Sense (4) has been disapproved: “[T]he use of the term ‘nuisance’ to describe the tort liability that sometimes results from accidental invasions produces too much confusion.” Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 89, at 637 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

anticipatory nuisance. A condition that, although not yet at the level of a nuisance, is very likely to become one, so that a party may obtain an injunction prohibiting the condition. — Also termed prospective nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨1.]

attractive nuisance. (1901) A dangerous condition that may attract children onto land, thereby causing a risk to their safety. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE. Cf. ALLUREMENT; dangerous condition (2) under CONDITION (4). [Cases: Negligence ⇨1172, 1175.]

“[T]he doctrine acquired the unfortunate misnomer ‘attractive nuisance,’ a label which persists to this day. It cannot be taken literally, since the courts have now largely rejected the notion that the child must be attracted by that which injures him, and whether or not the condition is in fact a ‘nuisance’ has nothing at all to do with defendant’s liability to the child.” Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 89 (2d ed. 1992).

cognate nuisance. Rare. Interference with an easement.

“The term nuisance is applied to torts of two distinct groups, first, acts of wrongful user by an owner or possessor of land resulting in an unreasonable interference with the rights of enjoyment of the owner or possessor of neighboring land, and, second, wrongful interferences with easements or other incorporeal rights.” William F. Walsh, A Treatise on Equity 170 (1930).

“When an easement was interfered with, an action on the case lay as a matter of course. . . . Such an interference is sometimes called ‘cognate nuisance’ to distinguish it from interferences with the personal enjoyment of the incidents of occupying the land.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 486 (3d ed. 1990).

common nuisance. See public nuisance.

continuing nuisance. (1837) A nuisance that is either uninterrupted or frequently recurring. • It need not be constant or unceasing, but it must occur often enough that it is almost continuous. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨4, 19.]

legalized nuisance. A nuisance sanctioned by legislative, executive, or other official action and therefore immune from liability, such as a city park.

mixed nuisance. (1894) A condition that is both a private nuisance and a public nuisance, so that it is dangerous to the community at large but also causes particular harm to private individuals. [Cases: Nuisance ↷72.]

nuisance at law. See nuisance per se.

nuisance dependent on negligence. See qualified nuisance.

nuisance in fact. (1855) A nuisance existing because of the circumstances of the use or the particular location. ● For example, a machine emitting high-frequency sound may be a nuisance only if a person's dog lives near enough to the noise to be disturbed by it. — Also termed nuisance per accidens.

nuisance per se (pər say). (186) Interference so severe that it would constitute a nuisance under any circumstances; a nuisance regardless of location or circumstances of use, such as a leaky nuclear-waste storage facility. — Also termed nuisance at law; absolute nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ↷4.]

permanent nuisance. (18c) A nuisance that cannot readily be abated at reasonable expense. Cf. temporary nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ↷1, 4.]

private nuisance. (18c) A condition that interferes with a person's enjoyment of property; esp., a structure or other condition erected or put on nearby land, creating or continuing an invasion of the actor's land and amounting to a trespass to it. ● The condition constitutes a tort for which the adversely affected person may recover damages or obtain an injunction. [Cases: Nuisance ↷1.]

"Trespass and private nuisance are alike in that each is a field of tort liability rather than a single type of tortious conduct. In each, liability may arise from an intentional or an unintentional invasion. For an intentional trespass, there is liability without harm; for a private nuisance, there is no liability without significant harm. . . . In private nuisance an intentional interference with the plaintiff's use or enjoyment is not of itself a tort, and unreasonableness of the interference is necessary for liability." Restatement (Second) of Torts § 821D cmt. d (1979).

"The different ways and combinations of ways in which the interest in the use or enjoyment of land may be invaded are infinitely variable. A private nuisance may consist of an interference with the physical condition of the land itself, as by vibration or blasting which damages a house, the destruction of crops, flooding, raising the water table, or the pollution of a stream or of an underground water supply." W. Page Keeton et al., Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 87, at 619 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

prospective nuisance. See anticipatory nuisance.

public nuisance. (17c) An unreasonable interference with a right common to the general public, such as a condition dangerous to health, offensive to community moral standards, or unlawfully obstructing the public in the free use of public property. ● Such a nuisance may lead to a civil injunction or criminal prosecution. — Also termed common nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ↷59–96.]

"Public and private nuisances are not in reality two species of the same genus at all. There is no generic conception which includes the crime of keeping a common gaming-house and the tort of allowing one's trees to overhang the land of a neighbour. A public nuisance falls within the law of torts only in so far as it may in the particular case constitute some form of tort also. Thus the obstruction of a highway is a public nuisance; but if it causes any special and peculiar damage to an individual, it is also a tort actionable at his suit." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 49–50 (17th ed. 1977).

"[P]ublic nuisance . . . is an amorphous and unsatisfactory area of the law covering an ill-assorted collection of wrongs, some of which have little or no association with tort and only appear to fill a gap in criminal law. Others cover what could be generally described as 'noisy trade,' which could be dealt with under some form of statutory nuisance. Yet a third group deals with what we would generally describe as 'abuses of the highway' . . ." R.W.M. Dias & B.S. Markesinis, Tort Law 254 (1984).

qualified nuisance. (1944) A condition that, though lawful in itself, is so negligently permitted to exist that it creates an unreasonable risk of harm and, in due course, actually results in injury to another. ● It involves neither an intentional act nor a hazardous activity. — Also termed nuisance dependent on negligence. Cf. absolute nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ↷1, 6, 59.]

recurrent nuisance. A nuisance that occurs from time to time with distinct intervals between occurrences, rather than being continuous or only briefly interrupted.

temporary nuisance. (1879) A nuisance that can be corrected by a reasonable expenditure of money or labor. Cf. permanent nuisance. [Cases: Nuisance ↷4, 19.]

nuisance money. See nuisance settlement under SETTLEMENT (2).

nuisance per accidens. See nuisance in fact under NUISANCE.

nuisance prior art. See ART.

nuisance settlement. See SETTLEMENT (2).

nuke. Slang. See DENIAL-OF-SERVICE ATTACK.

nul (nəl). [Law French] No; none. ● This negative particle begins many phrases, such as nul tiel.

nul agard (nəl ə-gahrd), n. [Law French "no award"] In an action to enforce an arbitration award on an arbitration bond, a plea denying the existence of the award. Cf. AGARD.

nul disseisin (nəl dis-see-zin). [Law French "no disseisin"] In a real action, a defendant's plea that the plaintiff was not deprived of the possession of any land and tenements. See DISSEISIN.

nul fait agard (nəl fay ə-gahrd). [Law French] No award was made. Cf. AGARD.

null, adj. (16c) Having no legal effect; without binding force; VOID <the contract was declared null and void>. ● The phrase null and void is a common redundancy. [Cases: Contracts ↷98, 135.]

nulla bona (nəl-ə boh-nə). [Latin "no goods"] (18c) A form of return by a sheriff or constable upon an execution when the judgment debtor has no seizable property within the jurisdiction. Cf. NIHIL EST. [Cases: Execution ↷334.]

nulla persona (nəl-ə pər-soh-nə). [Latin] Hist. No person.

• The phrase appeared in reference to the status of one who essentially has no legal rights usu. because of that person's actions, such as committing a crime, or that person's status, such as being a minor.

nulla poena sine lege (nəl-ə pee-nə si-nee lee-jee or sin-ay lay-gay). [Latin] No punishment without a law authorizing it.

nulla sasina, nulla terra (nəl-ə say-si-nə [or say-zi-], nəl-ə ter-ə). [Law Latin] Scots law. No seisin (or enfeoffment), no land. • The phrase appeared in reference to the principle that there could be no indefeasible right in land until an enfeoffment was taken.

nullification (nəl-i-fi-kay-shən), n. (18c) 1. The act of making something void; specif., the action of a state in abrogating a federal law, on the basis of state sovereignty. [Cases: States ↻4.1(1).] 2. The state or condition of being void. See JURY NULLIFICATION.

nullification doctrine. The theory — espoused by southern states before the Civil War — advocating a state's right to declare a federal law unconstitutional and therefore void.

nullify, vb. To make void; to render invalid.

nullity (nəl-ə-tee). (16c) 1. Something that is legally void <the forged commercial transfer is a nullity>. [Cases: Contracts ↻98, 135.] 2. The fact of being legally void <she filed a petition for nullity of marriage>.

absolute nullity. Civil law. 1. An act that is void because it is against public policy, law, or order. • The nullity is incurable. It may be invoked by any party or by the court. See La. Civ. Code arts 7, 2030. 2. The state of such a nullity. See NULLITY OF MARRIAGE.

relative nullity. Civil law. 1. A legal nullity that can be cured by confirmation because the object of the nullity is valid. • The nullity may be invoked only by those parties for whose interest it was established. See La. Civ. Code art. 2031. 2. The state of such a nullity.

nullity of marriage. 1. The invalidity of a presumed or supposed marriage because it is void on its face or has been voided by court order. • A void marriage, such as an incestuous marriage, is invalid on its face and requires no formality to end. See void marriage under MARRIAGE (1). [Cases: Marriage ↻11, 54(1), 58.]

"The declaration of nullity is appropriate if the marriage is relatively null or absolutely null yet one or both spouses were in good faith. If the marriage is relatively null, civil effects flow until the declaration of nullity. On the other hand, the marriage that is absolutely null generally produces civil effects only if one or both of the spouses were in good faith and only so long as good faith lasts." 16 Katherine S. Spaht & W. Lee Hargrave, Louisiana Civil Law Treatise: Matrimonial Regimes § 7.6, at 348 (2d ed. 1997).

2. A suit brought to nullify a marriage. — Also termed nullity suit. See ANNULMENT. [Cases: Marriage ↻56.]

nullius filius (nə-lī-əs fil-ee-əs), n. [Latin "son of no one"] An illegitimate child. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻1, 84–89.]

nullius in bonis (nə-lī-əs in boh-nis), adj. [Latin "among the property of no person"] Hist. Belonging to no one. • Wild animals were considered to be nullius in bonis. — Also termed in nullius bonis.

nullius juris (nə-lī-əs joor-is). [Latin] Hist. Of no legal force.

nullum arbitrium (nəl-əm ahr-bi-tree-əm), n. [Law Latin "no decision"] Hist. In an action to enforce an arbitration bond, a plea denying the existence of an arbitration award.

nullum est erratum (nəl-əm est ə-ray-təm), n. [Latin "there is no error in the record"] In response to an assignment of error, the common plea that there is no error in the record. • The effect of the plea is essentially to admit well-pleaded facts.

nullum fecerunt arbitrium (nəl-əm fə-see-rənt ahr-bi-tree-əm). [Latin "they never submitted to arbitration"] Hist. In an action to enforce an arbitration award, the defendant's plea denying that there had been an arbitration.

Nullum Tempus Act (nəl-əm tem-pəs akt), n. [Latin] Hist. English law. The Crown Suits Act of 1769 (amended in 1862) that limited the Crown's time to sue, in land and other specified matters, to 60 years. • The statute altered the common-law rule of nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi ("no time or place affects the Crown"), which was based on the idea that the Crown was too busy with governmental affairs to timely attend to its legal affairs.

nullum tempus occurrit reipublicae (nəl-əm tem-pəs ə-kər-it ree-ī-pəb-lə-see), n. [Latin "no time runs against the state"] The principle that a statute of limitations does not apply to a commonwealth or state unless a statute specifically provides that it does. • The purpose of the rule is to fully protect public rights and property from injury. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ↻11.]

nul tiel (nəl teel). [Law Latin] No such. • This phrase typically denotes a plea that denies the existence of something.

nul tiel corporation, n. [Law French "no such corporation exists"] A plea denying the existence of an alleged corporation. • The defense of nul tiel corporation must usu. be affirmatively pleaded by a defendant before a plaintiff is required to prove its corporate existence. [Cases: Corporations ↻514.]

nul tiel record, n. [Law French "no such record"] A plea denying the existence of the record on which the plaintiff bases a claim. • Evidence may generally be introduced to invalidate the record only, not the statements in the record. See trial by record under TRIAL. [Cases: Judgment ↻914.]

"The proper general issue in debt on judgments is 'nul tiel record,' which denies the existence of the record alleged. Nul tiel record sets up: (1) the defense either that there is no record at all in existence; or (2) one different from that which the defendant has declared of; or (3) that the judgment is void on the face of the record." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 186, at 330 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

nul tort (nəl tort), n. [Law French "no wrong"] Hist. A type of general denial in an action to recover lands and tenements, by which the defendant claims that no wrong was done. See NUL DISSEISIN.

"The general issue, or general plea, is what traverses, thwarts, and denies at once the whole declaration; without offering any special matter whereby to evade it [] n real actions, nul tort, no wrong done; nul disseisin, no disseisin; and in a writ of right, that the tenant has more right to hold than the demandant has to demand. These pleas are called the general issue, because, by importing an absolute and general denial of what is alleged in the declaration, they amount at once to an issue; by which we mean a fact affirmed on one side and denied on the other." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 305 (1768).

nul waste (nəl wayst), n. [Law French "no waste"] Hist. The defendant's general denial in an action to recover damages for the destruction of lands and tenements. See NUL TORT.

numbers game. A type of lottery in which a person bets that on a given day a certain series of numbers will appear from some arbitrarily chosen source, such as stock-market indexes or the U.S. Treasury balance. ● The game creates a fund from which the winner's share is drawn and is subject to regulation as a lottery. Cf. NUMBERS RACKET. [Cases: Lotteries ↷ 3.]

numbers racket. An illegal lottery in which the players typically choose a series of numbers and win if their chosen numbers match a series of randomly drawn numbers. ● Numbers rackets have historically been operated in poor neighborhoods and have permitted players to bet small amounts or even to bet on credit. An additional element of their historical attraction was the players' avoidance of paying income tax on winnings. Numbers rackets are often associated with organized crime, and because of their odds (about 1:1,000), they are noted for being rigged and making large profits for racketeers. Cf. NUMBERS GAME. [Cases: Lotteries ↷ 25.]

numerosity (n[y]oo-mər-ahs-ə-tee). (1958) The requirement in U.S. district courts that, for a case to be certified as a class action, the party applying for certification must show, among other things, that the class of potential plaintiffs is so large that the joinder of all of them into the suit is impracticable. See CLASS ACTION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 163.]

nummata (nə-may-tə), n. [Law Latin "money"] The monetary price of something.

nummata terrae (nə-may-tə ter-ee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. An acre of land.

nummi pupillares (nəm-ɪ pyoo-pə-lair-eez). [Latin] Scots law. Money belonging to a pupil.

nunciato (nən-shee-ay-toh). See NUNTIATIO.

nuncio (nən-shee-oh), n. [Italian, fr. Latin nunciare "to announce"] 1. A papal ambassador to a foreign court or government; a representative of the Vatican in a country that maintains diplomatic relations with it. — Also termed nuncius; nuntio. Cf. legatus a latere under LEGATUS; INTERNUNCIO (3); LEGATE (3). 2. Archaic. A messenger.

nunc pro tunc (nəŋk proh təŋk or nuŋk proh tuŋk). [Latin "now for then"] Having retroactive legal effect through a court's inherent power <the court entered a nunc pro tunc order to correct a clerical error in the record>. [Cases: Judgment ↷ 273, 326; Motions ↷ 54.]

"When an order is signed 'nunc pro tunc' as of a specified date, it means that a thing is now done which should have been done on the specified date." 35A C.J.S. Federal Civil Procedure § 370, at 556 (1960).

nunc pro tunc amendment. See AMENDMENT (2).

nunc pro tunc judgment. See JUDGMENT.

nuncupare (nəŋg-kyoo-pair-ee), vb. [Latin "call by name"] Hist. To name or pronounce orally. ● Nuncupare heredem means to name an heir before public witnesses.

nuncupate (nəŋg-kyə-payt), vb. [fr. Latin nuncupare "call by name"] 1. Hist. To designate or name. 2. To vow or declare publicly and solemnly. 3. To declare orally, as a will. 4. To dedicate or inscribe (a work).

nuncupative (nəŋg-kyə-pay-tiv or nəŋg-kyoo-pə-tiv), adj. [fr. Latin nuncupare "to name"] (15c) Stated by spoken word; declared orally.

nuncupative testament by public act. See nuncupative will by public act under WILL.

nuncupative will. See WILL.

nuncupative will by public act. See WILL.

nunc valent et quantum valuerunt tempore pacis (nəŋk vay-lent et kwon-təm val-yoo-er-ənt tem-pə-ree pay-sis). [Latin] Scots law. The value (of the lands) now, and their value in time of peace. ● This was the object of an inquiry formerly made in an inquest to assess the value of lands for taxation purposes.

nundinae (nən-də-nee), n. [fr. Latin novem "nine" + dies "day"] 1. Roman law. A fair or market. 2. Roman law. The period between two consecutive markets (usu. eight days), including the market days. ● This period was often fixed for the payment of debts.

nundination (nən-di-nay-shən), n. [fr. Latin nundinatio "the holding of a market or fair"] Hist. The act of buying or selling at a fair.

numquam indebitatus (nən[g]-kwam in-deb-i-tay-təs), n. [Latin "never indebted"] Hist. A defensive plea in a debt action, by which the defendant denies any indebtedness to the plaintiff. Cf. CONCESSIT SOLVERE.

nuntiatio (nən-shee-ay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “a declaration”] Hist. A formal declaration or protest. • A nuntiatio novi operis was an injunction placed on the construction of a new building by the person protesting the construction. — Also spelled nunciato.

nuntio. See NUNCIO.

nuntius (nən-shee-əs), n. [Latin “bearer of news”] 1. Roman law. A messenger. • Declarations through a messenger were usu. as valid as those by letter. 2. Hist. A messenger sent to make an excuse for a party’s absence in court. 3. Hist. An officer of the court. — Also termed summoner; beadle. 4. Eccles. law. NUNCIO (1).

nuper obiit (n[y]oo-pər oh-bee-it), n. [Latin “lately died”] Hist. A writ available to an heir to establish the equal division of land when, on the death of an ancestor who held the estate in fee simple, a coheir took the land and prevented the other heirs from possessing it. The writ was abolished in 1833. See COPARCENER.

nuptiae (nəp-shee-ee). See MATRIMONIUM.

nuptiae secundae (nəp-shee-ee sə-kən-dee), n. [Latin] Eccles. law. A second or subsequent marriage. • In canon law, second or subsequent marriages were frowned upon, and priests would not officiate at those ceremonies.

nuptial (nəp-shəl), adj. (15c) Of or relating to marriage. [Cases: Marriage ↻23, 26.]

nuptiales tabulae (nəp-shee-ay-leez tab-yə-lee). [Latin] Roman law. Marriage tablets — i.e., documents recording a marriage and the terms on which it was entered into. • These writings were not essential to the validity of a marriage.

Nuremberg defense (n[y]ər-əm-bərg). The defense asserted by a member of the military who has been

nurture, vb. (14c) 1. To supply with nourishment. 2. To train, educate, or develop.

nurturing-parent doctrine. Family law. The principle that, although a court deciding on child support generally disregards a parent’s motive in failing to maximize earning capacity, the court will not impute income to a custodial parent who remains at home or works less than full-time in order to provide a better environment for a child. • The doctrine is fact-specific; courts apply it case by case. [Cases: Child Support ↻88, 90.]

nurus (n[y]oor-əs), n. [Latin] A daughter-in-law.

NVOCC. abbr. See non-vessel-operating common carrier under CARRIER.

N.W. abbr. NORTH WESTERN REPORTER.

NWS. abbr. National Weather Service. See NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION.

nycthemeron (nik-thee-mər-ahn), n. [Greek] An entire day and night; a 24-hour period.

NYS. abbr. NEW YORK SUPPLEMENT.

NYSE. abbr. NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

nystagmus (ni-stag-məs). A rapid, involuntary jerking or twitching of the eyes, sometimes caused by ingesting drugs or alcohol. See HORIZONTAL-GAZE NYSTAGMUS TEST.

OAR. abbr. Office of Oceanic and Atmospheric Research. See NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION.

OASDHI. abbr. Old Age, Survivors, Disability, and Health Insurance. See OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS' INSURANCE.

OASDI. abbr. Old Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance. See OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS' INSURANCE.

OASI. abbr. OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS' INSURANCE.

oath. (bef. 12c) 1. A solemn declaration, accompanied by a swearing to God or a revered person or thing, that one's statement is true or that one will be bound to a promise. • The person making the oath implicitly invites punishment if the statement is untrue or the promise is broken. The legal effect of an oath is to subject the person to penalties for perjury if the testimony is false. [Cases: Oath ↷ 1; Witnesses ↷ 227.] 2. A statement or promise made by such a declaration. 3. A form of words used for such a declaration. 4. A formal declaration made solemn without a swearing to God or a revered person or thing; AFFIRMATION. Cf. PLEDGE (1).

"The word 'oath' (apart from its use to indicate a profane expression) has two very different meanings: (1) a solemn appeal to God in attestation of the truth of a statement or the binding character of such a promise; (2) a statement or promise made under the sanction of such an appeal." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 515 (3d ed. 1982).

assertory oath (ə-sər-tə-ree). (18c) An oath by which one attests to some factual matter, rather than making a promise about one's future conduct. • A courtroom witness typically takes such an oath.

corporal oath (kɔr-pər-əl). (16c) An oath made solemn by touching a sacred object, esp. the Bible. — Also termed solemn oath; corporale sacramentum.

"Oath (Juramentum) is a calling Almighty God to witness that the Testimony is true; therefore it is aptly termed Sacramentum, a Holy Band, a Sacred Tye, or Godly Vow. And it is called a Corporal Oath, because the party when he swears, toucheth with his right hand the Holy Evangelists or Book of the New Testament." Thomas Blount, Nomolexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

decisive oath. Civil law. An oath by a party in a lawsuit, used to decide the case because the party's adversary, not being able to furnish adequate proof, offered to refer the decision of the case to the party. — Also termed decisory oath.

extrajudicial oath. (17c) An oath that, although formally sworn, is taken outside a legal proceeding or outside the authority of law. — Also termed nonjudicial oath.

false oath. See PERJURY.

judicial oath. (17c) An oath taken in the course of a judicial proceeding, esp. in open court. [Cases: Witnesses ↷ 227.]

loyalty oath. See oath of allegiance.

nonjudicial oath. 1. An oath taken out of court, esp. before an officer ex parte. — Also termed voluntary oath. 2. See extrajudicial oath.

oath de calumnia. See oath of calumny.

oath ex officio (eks ə-fish-ee-oh). Hist. At common law, an oath under which a person accused of a crime swore to answer questions before an ecclesiastical court.

oath in litem (li-tem or -təm). Civil law. An oath taken by a plaintiff in testifying to the value of the thing in dispute when there is no evidence of value or when the defendant has fraudulently suppressed evidence of value.

oath of abjuration. Hist. English law. An oath renouncing any and all right of descendants of a pretender to the Crown.

oath of allegiance. An oath by which one promises to maintain fidelity to a particular sovereign or government. • This oath is most often administered to a high public officer, to a soldier or sailor, or to an alien applying for naturalization. — Also termed loyalty oath; test oath.

oath of calumny (kal-əm-nee). (17c) Hist. An oath that a plaintiff or defendant took to attest to that party's good faith and to the party's belief that there was a bona fide claim. — Also termed oath de calumnia. See CALUMNY.

oath of office. (16c) An oath taken by a person about to enter into the duties of public office, by which the person promises to perform the duties of that office in good faith. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷ 36(1).]

oath of supremacy. Hist. English law. An oath required of those taking office, along with the oaths of allegiance and abjuration, declaring that the sovereign is superior to the church in ecclesiastical matters.

oath purgatory. See purgatory oath.

oath suppletory. See suppletory oath.

pauper's oath. (1844) An affidavit or verification of poverty by a person requesting public funds or services. See poverty affidavit under AFFIDAVIT; IN FORMA PAUPERIS. [Cases: Costs ↷ 132(6); Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 2734.]

promissory oath. (15c) An oath that binds the party to observe a specified course of conduct in the future. •

Both the oath of office and the oath of allegiance are types of promissory oaths. [Cases: Oath ↷1.]

purgatory oath. An oath taken to clear oneself of a charge or suspicion. — Also termed oath purgatory.

solemn oath. See corporal oath.

suppletory oath (səp-lə-tor-ee). 1. Civil law. An oath administered to a party, rather than a witness, in a case in which a fact has been proved by only one witness. • In a civil-law case, two witnesses are needed to constitute full proof. See HALF-PROOF. 2. An oath administered to a party to authenticate or support some piece of documentary evidence offered by the party. — Also termed oath suppletory. [Cases: Evidence ↷354, 376.] test oath. See oath of allegiance.

voluntary oath. See nonjudicial oath (1).

oath against an oath. See SWEARING MATCH.

oath-helper. See COMPURGATOR.

oath of abjuration. See ABJURATION.

Oath or Affirmation Clause. (1974) The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring members of Congress and the state legislatures, and all members of the executive or judicial branches — state or local — to pledge by oath or affirmation to support the Constitution. U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 3. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷36(1).]

oath-rite. The form or ceremony used when taking an oath.

oathworthy, adj. Legally capable of making an oath.

obaeratus (oh-bə-ray-təs), adj. & n. [Latin] Roman law.
1. Adj. Burdened with debt. 2. n. A debtor.

ob continentiam delicti (ob kon-tə-nen-shee-əm də-lik-ti). [Latin] On account of contiguity to the offense; being contaminated by association with something illegal.

ob contingentiam (ob kon-tin-jen-shee-əm). [Latin] Hist.
1. On account of connection; by reason of similarity. • This phrase appeared when there was a close enough connection between two or more lawsuits to consolidate them. 2. In case of contingency.

ob defectum haeredis (ob di-fek-təm hə-ree-dis). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of a failure of heirs.

obedience. Compliance with a law, command, or authority.

obediential obligation. See OBLIGATION.

ob favorem mercatorum (ob fə-vor-əm mər-kə-tor-əm). [Latin] In favor of merchants.

obiit (oh-bee-it). [Latin] He died; she died.

obiit sine prole (oh-bee-it si-nee proh-lee also sin-ay prohl). [Latin] He died without issue. — Abbr. o.s.p.

obit. (14c) 1. Archaic. A memorial service on the anniversary of a person's death. 2. A record or notice of a person's death; an obituary.

obiter (oh-bit-ər), adv. [Latin “by the way”] (16c) Incidentally; in passing <the judge said, obiter, that a nominal sentence would be inappropriate>.

obiter, n. See OBITER DICTUM.

obiter dictum (ob-i-tər dik-təm). [Latin “something said in passing”] (18c) A judicial comment made while delivering a judicial opinion, but one that is unnecessary to the decision in the case and therefore not precedential (although it may be considered persuasive). — Often shortened to dictum or, less commonly, obiter. Pl. obiter dicta. See DICTIONUM. Cf. HOLDING (1); RATIO DECIDENDI. [Cases: Courts ↷92.]

obiter ex post facto (ob-i-tər eks post fak-toh). A court's holding that, according to a later court, was expressed in unnecessarily broad terms. • Some authorities suggest that this is not, properly speaking, a type of obiter dictum at all.

object (ob-jekt), n. (15c) 1. A person or thing to which thought, feeling, or action is directed <the natural object of one's bounty>. See NATURAL OBJECT.

object of a power. A person appointable by a donee. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT. [Cases: Powers ↷7.]

2. Something sought to be attained or accomplished; an end, goal, or purpose <the financial objects of the joint venture>.

object of an action. The legal relief that a plaintiff seeks; the remedy demanded or relief sought in a lawsuit. Cf. SUBJECT OF AN ACTION. [Cases: Action ↷1.]

object of a statute. The aim or purpose of legislation; the end or design that a statute is meant to accomplish. [Cases: Statutes ↷184.]

object (əb-jekt), vb. (15c) 1. To state in opposition; to put forward as an objection <the prosecution objected that the defendant's discovery requests were untimely>. 2. To state or put forward an objection, esp. to something in a judicial proceeding <the defense objected to the testimony on the ground that it was privileged>. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷690–698; Federal Civil Procedure ↷2017; Trial ↷31, 77, 131.] — objector, n.

objectant. See CONTESTANT (1).

object code. Copyright. The machine-readable language compiled from a computer programmer's source code.

• Object code is difficult to reverse-engineer, so publicly available software is always in this form. Object code is protected by copyright law and may also be protected by patent law. Because people cannot read or understand it, object code is deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office more often than source code. Cf. SOURCE

objection, n. (1837) 1. A formal statement opposing something that has occurred, or is about to occur, in court and seeking the judge's immediate ruling on the point. • The party objecting must usu. state the basis for the objection to preserve the right to appeal an adverse ruling. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨690–698, 1043; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2017; Trial ⇨31, 77, 131.]

continuing objection. (1940) A single objection to all the questions in a given line of questioning. • A judge may allow a lawyer to make a continuing objection when the judge has overruled an objection applicable to many questions, and the lawyer wants to preserve the objection for the appellate record. — Also termed running objection. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨694; Trial ⇨79.]

general objection. (18c) An objection made without specifying any grounds in support of the objection. • A general objection preserves only the issue of relevancy. — Also termed broadside objection. [Cases: Pleading ⇨232; Criminal Law ⇨695(2), 1043(2); Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2017.1; Trial ⇨82.]

speaking objection. (1958) An objection that contains more information (often in the form of argument) than needed by the judge to sustain or overrule it. • Many judges prohibit lawyers from using speaking objections, and sometimes even from stating the grounds for objections, because of the potential for influencing the jury.

specific objection. (1894) An objection that is accompanied by a statement of one or more grounds in support of the objection. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨695(2); Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2017.1; Trial ⇨82, 83.]

2. Parliamentary law. A motion that suppresses a main motion, esp. one that will or may inflame controversy, immediately and without debate. • The motion, because it disposes of the main motion without any debate, usu. requires a supermajority. — Also termed question of consideration; objection to consideration of a question.

"Objection to the consideration of a question is used when an original main motion is of a delicate or personal nature, or is contentious or inflammatory (such as sectarian, political, racial, etc.), or is irrelevant, unprofitable, or otherwise objectionable or discriminatory. The motion can be avoided altogether by instantly objecting to the consideration of the question." George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 141 (1969).

3. Parliamentary law. A negative vote, esp. one that defeats a request for general consent. 4. Patents. An examiner's action identifying a defect in the form of a patent application, usu. in the specification or a drawing. • An objection does not raise questions about the merit of the claims. An examiner might object, for instance, to a defective oath or to a trademark appearing on the drawings. Cf. REJECTION (4). [Cases: Patents ⇨104.]

objectionable, adj. (18c) Open to opposition, esp. adverse reason or contrary argument. — Also termed exceptionable.

objection in point of law. (17c) A defensive pleading by which the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff but objects that they do not make out a legal claim. [Cases: Pleading ⇨341, 351.]

objective, adj. (17c) 1. Of, relating to, or based on externally verifiable phenomena, as opposed to an individual's perceptions, feelings, or intentions <the objective facts>. 2. Without bias or prejudice; disinterested <because her son was involved, she felt she could not be objective>. Cf. SUBJECTIVE.

objective but-for test. See BUT-FOR MATERIALITY.

objective entrapment. See ENTRAPMENT.

objective ethics. See MORAL ABSOLUTISM.

objective impossibility. See IMPOSSIBILITY.

objective meaning. See MEANING.

objective method. See HYPOTHETICAL-PERSON DEFENSE.

objective novation. See NOVATION.

objective standard. See STANDARD.

objective theory of contract. (1904) The doctrine that a contract is not an agreement in the sense of a subjective meeting of the minds but is instead a series of external acts giving the objective semblance of agreement. — Often shortened to objective theory. Cf. SUBJECTIVE THEORY OF CONTRACT; MEETING OF THE MINDS. [Cases: Contracts ⇨15, 147(1).]

object of a power. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

object of a right. (1880) The thing in respect of which a right exists; the subject matter of a right. — Also termed subject of a right. See SUBJECT OF A RIGHT.

object offense. See OFFENSE (1).

object of the power. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

object of the power of appointment. See permissible appointee under APPOINTEE.

objurgatrix (ob-jər-gay-triks). Hist. A common scold. See SCOLD.

oblatio (ah-blay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A tender of payment or performance due. Pl. oblationes (ah-blay-shee-oh-nee-z).

oblation (ah-blay-shən). (15c) An offering or sacrifice, esp. one in a religious or ritualistic ceremony. — obligatory, adj.

obligant (ob-lə-gənt). Scots law. A debtor in an obligation; OBLIGOR.

obligate, vb. (16c) 1. To bind by legal or moral duty. 2. To commit (funds, property, etc.) to meet or secure an obligation.

obligatio (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An obligation; a legal bond. Pl. obligationes (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh-nee-z).

obligatio civilis (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh sə-vī-lis). [Latin "civil obligation"] Roman law. 1. An obligation recognized under jus civile as opposed to one recognized only under jus honorarium. 2. A legally enforceable obligation, such as one by contract.

obligatio ex contractu (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh eks kən-trak-t[y]oo). Roman law. [Latin "contractual obligation"] A contractual obligation.

obligatio ex delicto (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh eks də-lik-toh). [Latin "tortious obligation"] Roman law. An obligation arising from a wrongdoing against the person or property of another; an obligation enforceable in tort. — Also termed obligatio ex maleficio (mal-ə-fish-ee-oh).

obligatio honoraria (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh [h]on-ə-rair-ee-ə). Roman law. An obligation that the praetor or an aedile declares actionable.

obligatio litteris (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh lit-ər-is). [Latin "written obligation"] 1. Hist. A written contract. — Also termed obligatio litterarum. 2. Scots law. A contract that must be constituted in formal writing. — Also spelled obligatio literis. 3. Roman law. Literal contract, strictly comprising only the nomen transcripticium. See NOMEN TRANSCRIPTICIUM.

obligatio naturalis (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh nach-ə-ray-lis). [Latin "natural obligation"] Roman law. An obligation that is not legally enforceable, although it may produce legal effects; an obligation deriving only from the law of nature.

obligatio quasi ex contractu (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh kway-sī [or -zī] eks kən-trak-t[y]oo). [Latin "obligation from quasi-contract"] Roman law. An obligation arising between two persons who have not contracted with each other but have formed a relationship similar to a contractual one, or where a payment is made in error; a quasi-contractual obligation. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT.

obligatio quasi ex delicto (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh kway-sī [or -zī] eks də-lik-toh). [Latin "obligation from something resembling a tort"] Roman law. An obligation arising from a wrong that is not covered by an obligatio ex delicto but that nonetheless creates liability. — Also termed obligatio quasi ex maleficio (mal-ə-fish-ee-oh).

obligatio verborum (ah-blə-gay-shee-oh vər-bor-əm). [Latin "a verbal obligation"] Roman law. An obligation arising from a solemn question and answer using specific words.

obligation, n. (18c) 1. A legal or moral duty to do or not do something. • The word has many wide and varied meanings. It may refer to anything that a person is bound to do or forbear from doing, whether the duty is imposed by law, contract, promise, social relations, courtesy, kindness, or morality. 2. A formal, binding agreement or acknowledgment of a liability to pay a certain amount or to do a certain thing for a particular person or set of persons; esp., a duty arising by contract. — Also termed (in sense 2) civil obligation. See DUTY (1); LIABILITY (1). [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 1.] 3. Civil law. A legal relationship in which one person, the obligor, is bound to render a performance in favor of another, the obligee. La. Civ. Code art. 1756.

"[I]n English-speaking countries an unfortunate habit has arisen of using 'obligation' in a lax manner as co-extensive with duties of every kind." Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 82 (1896).

"Obligation in its popular sense is merely a synonym for duty. Its legal sense, derived from Roman law, differs from this in several respects. In the first place, obligations are merely one class of duties, namely, those which are the correlatives of rights in personam. An obligation is the vinculum juris, or bond of legal necessity, which binds together two or more determinate individuals. . . . Secondly, the term obligatio is in law the name, not merely of the duty, but also of the correlative right. It denotes the legal relation or vinculum juris in its entirety, including the right of the one party, no less than the liability of the other. Looked at from the point of view of the person entitled, an obligation is a right; looked at from the point of view of the person bound, it is a duty. . . . An obligation, therefore, may be defined as a proprietary right in personam or a duty which corresponds to such a right." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 460 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"[I]n its more general acceptance, the word 'obligation' means something that the law or morals command a person to do, a command that is made effective by the imposition of a sanction if the person fails to obey or comply. When given that reference, the word 'obligation' is made synonymous with the word 'duty.' In that sense it is said, for example, that all citizens of a certain age are under an obligation to fulfill their military duties "In another sense, the word 'obligation' means an instrument in writing, however informal, whereby one party contracts with another for the payment of a sum of money. In commercial law, for example, the word 'obligation' may mean a negotiable instrument absolute obligation. (17c) An obligation requiring strict fulfillment according to the terms of the engagement, without any alternatives to the obligor.

"In the technical terminology of the civil codes, however, the word 'obligation' means a legal bond that binds two persons in such a way that one of them, the creditor or obligee, is entitled to demand from the other, the debtor or obligor, a certain performance." Saul Litvinoff, 5 Louisiana Civil Law Treatise: The Law of Obligations 1-2 (2d ed. 2001).

accessory obligation. (17c) 1. An obligation that is incidental to another obligation. • For example, a mortgage to secure payment of a bond is an accessory obligation. The primary obligation is to pay the bond itself. Cf. primary obligation (1). 2. See secondary obligation.

alternative obligation. (18c) An obligation that can be satisfied in at least two different ways, at the choice of the obligor. — Also termed disjunctive obligation.

bifactoral obligation (bi-fak-tər-əl). An obligation created by two parties.

civil obligation. 1. See conventional obligation. 2. OBLIGATION (2).

community obligation. A debt or other obligation incurred by either spouse after marriage in a community-property state. • Such an obligation is presumed to be an obligation of the community and not of the individual spouse. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷ 268.]

conditional obligation. (17c) An obligation that depends on an uncertain event. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 218.]

conjunctive obligation. An obligation composed of multiple performances that can be separately rendered or enforced; esp., an obligation in which several objects are connected by and (not or) or are in some other way clearly meant to be separately included in the contract. • For example, a loan agreement's conjunctive obligation may require payment of four loan installments and delivery of a deed of trust. Each loan installment and the deed's delivery is a separate, enforceable performance.

contractual obligation. An obligation arising from a contract or agreement. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 1.]

conventional obligation. (18c) An obligation that results from agreement of the parties; a contractual obligation. — Also termed express obligation; civil obligation. Cf. obediential obligation.

correal obligation (kor-ee-əl or kə-ree-əl). Roman & civil law. A joint and several obligation.

"A correal obligation means a plurality of obligations based on a community of obligation; a joint liability in respect of the whole of the same debt or a joint right in respect of the whole of the same claim." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 361 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

current obligation. (18c) An obligation that is presently enforceable, but not past due.

determinate obligation. An obligation that has a specific thing as its object. • For example, an obligation to deliver the 1491 Venice edition of Vocabularium Iuris that once belonged to H.L.A. Hart can be discharged only by delivering the specified book. Cf. indeterminate obligation.

disjunctive obligation. See alternative obligation.

divisible obligation. An obligation that can be divided without the consent of the parties. • Either the performing party or the receiving party may unilaterally divide the obligation.

express obligation. See conventional obligation.

heritable obligation. (18c) An obligation that may be enforced by a successor of the creditor or against a successor of the debtor. — Also termed inheritable obligation. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷ 8.]

imperfect obligation. See moral obligation.

implied obligation. See obediential obligation.

indeterminate obligation. 1. An obligation by which the obligor is bound to deliver one of a certain species of items. • For example, an obligation to deliver a pre-1509 edition of Vocabularium Iuris can be discharged by delivering any edition published before that date. 2. An obligation that is not specific in amount or form, or is subject to being changed by a third party. Cf. determinate obligation.

inheritable obligation. See heritable obligation.

joint obligation. (18c) 1. An obligation that binds two or more debtors to a single performance for one creditor. 2. An obligation that binds one debtor to a single performance for two or more creditors.

moral obligation. (18c) A duty that is based only on one's conscience and that is not legally enforceable; an obligation with a purely moral basis, as opposed to a legal one. • In contract law, moral obligation may support a promise in the absence of traditional consideration, but only if the promisor has previously received some actual benefit from the promisee. — Also termed imperfect obligation; natural obligation. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 76.]

natural obligation. 1. Civil law. A moral duty that is not enforceable by judicial action. • Natural obligations are recognized in civil-law jurisdictions. While they are not enforceable by judicial action, something that has been performed under a natural obligation may not be reclaimed. For example, if an indigent patient in a hospital has no legal obligation to pay for the treatment but does so anyway, that person cannot later reclaim the payments voluntarily made. — Also termed obligatio naturalis. 2. See moral obligation.

obediential obligation (ə-bee-dee-en-shəl). (18c) An obligation imposed on a person because of a situation or relationship, such as an obligation of parents to care for their children. — Also termed implied obligation. Cf. conventional obligation.

perfect obligation. A legally enforceable obligation; one that is recognized and sanctioned by positive law.

personal obligation. 1. An obligation performable only by the obligor, not by the obligor's heirs or representatives. 2. An obligation in which the obligor is bound to perform without encumbering his or her property for its performance.

primary obligation. (17c) 1. An obligation that arises from the essential purpose of the transaction between the parties. Cf. accessory obligation (1). 2. A fundamental contractual term imposing a requirement on a contracting party from which other obligations may arise. — Also termed principal obligation.

primitive obligation. The obligation designated as the first to be satisfied.

principal obligation. See primary obligation (2).

pure obligation. Scots law. An absolute obligation already due and immediately enforceable. — Also termed pure debt.

secondary obligation. (17c) A duty, promise, or undertaking that is incident to a primary obligation; esp., a duty to make reparation upon a breach of contract. — Also termed accessory obligation.

several obligation. 1. An obligation that binds two or more debtors to separate performances for one creditor. 2. An obligation that binds one debtor to separate performances for two or more creditors.

simple obligation. (17c) An obligation that does not depend on an outside event; an unconditional obligation.

single obligation. (17c) An obligation with no penalty attached for nonperformance, as when one party simply promises to pay 20 dollars to another.

solidary obligation (sol-ə-der-ee). Roman & civil law. An obligation that binds each of two or more debtors for the entire performance at the option of the creditor. • Solidary obligations are analogous to common-law joint and several obligations.

statutory obligation. (18c) An obligation — whether to pay money, perform certain acts, or discharge duties — that is created by or arises out of a statute, rather than based on an independent contractual or legal relationship.

substitute obligation. Civil law. An obligation that takes the place of an extinguished obligation by novation. See NOVATION. [Cases: Novation ◊4.]

unifactoral obligation (yoo-nə-fak-tər-əl). An obligation created by one party.

obligation, mutuality of. See MUTUALITY OF OBLIGATION.

obligational. See OBLIGATORY.

obligatio naturalis. See OBLIGATIO.

obligation bond. See general obligation bond under BOND (3).

obligationes innominati. See INNOMINATE OBLIGATIONS.

Obligation of Contracts Clause. See CONTRACTS CLAUSE.

obligations, law of. See LAW OF OBLIGATIONS.

obligatio quasi ex contractu. See OBLIGATIO.

obligatio quasi ex delicto. See OBLIGATIO.

obligatio quasi ex maleficio. See obligatio quasi ex delicto under OBLIGATIO.

obligatory (ə-blig-ə-tor-ee), adj. (14c) 1. Legally or morally binding <an obligatory promise>. 2. Required; mandatory <attendance is not obligatory>. 3. Creating or recording an obligation . — Also termed (rarely) obligational.

oblige (ə-blɪj), vb. (14c) 1. To bind by legal or moral duty; OBLIGATE. 2. To bind by doing a favor or service.

obligee (ob-lə-jee). (16c) 1. One to whom an obligation is owed; a promisee, creditor, or donor beneficiary. 2. Under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, any person to whom a duty of support is owed. 3. Archaic. One who is obliged to do something; OBLIGOR (1).

"Several dictionaries, such as The Random House College Dictionary (rev. ed. 1988) and Webster's New World Dictionary (1979), define obligee in its etymological sense ['obliged'], as if it were synonymous with obligor. Random House, for example, defines obligee as 'a person who is under obligation,' but that meaning ought to be reserved for obligor. An obligee, in modern usage, is one to whom an obligation is owed." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 609 (2d ed. 1995).

obligor (ob-lə-gor or ob-lə-gor). (16c) 1. One who has undertaken an obligation; a promisor or debtor. UCC § 9-102(a)(59). 2. Under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, any person who owes a duty of support. 3. Archaic. One who obliges another to do something; OBLIGEE (1).

principal obligor. A person who is under a duty of indemnity.

oblique (oh-bleek or ə-bleek), adj. (15c) 1. Not direct in descent; collateral <an oblique heir>. 2. Indirect; circumstantial <oblique evidence>.

oblique evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1) under EVIDENCE.

obliquus (ob-lɪ-kwəs). [Latin "oblique"] Hist. (Of a line of descent) collateral; indirect. Cf. RECTUS.

obliterate, vb. (16c) 1. To wipe out, rub off, or erase (a writing or other markings). 2. To remove from existence; to destroy all traces of. — obliteration, n.

obliterated corner. See CORNER.

oblivion. (14c) 1. The act or fact of forgetting or having forgotten <the oblivion of sleep>. 2. The state of being completely forgotten or unknown . 3. An official disregard of an offense; pardon; amnesty <an act of oblivion by Parliament>.

obloquy (ob-lə-kwee). (15c) 1. Abusive or defamatory language; CALUMNY. 2. The state or condition of being ill spoken of; disgrace or bad repute.

ob majorem cautelam (ob mə-jor-əm kaw-tee-ləm). [Law Latin] Hist. For greater security.

ob metum perjurii (ob mee-təm pər-juur-ee-ɪ). [Law Latin] Scots law. On account of the fear of perjury. See METUS PERJURII.

ob non solutum canonem (ob non sə-loo-təm kə-noh-nəm). [Law Latin] Scots law. On account of unpaid canon or feu duty. • A vassal could forfeit land if the vassal failed to pay the feu duty for two (later five) years. See FEU.

obnoxious, adj. (16c) 1. Offensive; objectionable <obnoxious behavior>. 2. Contrary; opposed . 3. Archaic. Exposed to harm; liable to something undesirable <actions obnoxious to criticism>.

ob pias causas (ob pī-əs kaw-zəs). [Latin] Hist. On account of religious or charitable reasons; for dutiful considerations.

"Provisions made by a son to his father ob pias causas are those which proceed from the affectionate regard and natural duty which the son is bound morally to render to his father." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 412 (4th ed. 1894).

ob poenam negligentiae (ob pēe-nām neg-li-jen-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of punishment for negligence. • The law punished those who were negligent in protecting their own interests.

ob publicam utilitatem (ob pāb-li-kām yoo-til-ə-tay-tām). [Latin] Hist. On account of public utility; for the public advantage.

obreption (ob-rep-shān). (15c) The fraudulent obtaining of a gift or dispensation, esp. from a sovereign or ecclesiastical authority. Cf. SUBREPTION.

obreptione (ob-rep-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. By surprise; by deceit.

ob reverentiam personae et metum perjurii (ob rev-ə-ren-shee-əm pār-soh-nee et mee-tām pār-juur-ee-ī). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of reverence to the person and the fear of perjury. • On this basis, certain witnesses could be excluded or could decline to answer certain questions that might cause them to commit perjury rather than admit to some act. This principle is essentially the forerunner to the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. See METUS PERJURII.

obrogate (ob-rə-gayt), vb. (17c) Civil law. To modify or repeal (a law) in whole or in part by passing a new law. Cf. ABROGATE. — obrogation, n.

obscene, adj. (16c) Extremely offensive under contemporary community standards of morality and decency; grossly repugnant to the generally accepted notions of what is appropriate. • Under the Supreme Court's three-part test, material is legally obscene — and therefore not protected under the First Amendment — if, taken as a whole, the material (1) appeals to the prurient interest in sex, as determined by the average person applying contemporary community standards; (2) portrays sexual conduct, as specifically defined by the applicable state law, in a patently offensive way; and (3) lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 93 S.Ct. 2607 (1973). [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻ 1174, 2189; Obscenity ↻ 1.]

"If there be no abstract definition, . . . should not the word 'obscene' be allowed to indicate the present critical point in the compromise between candor and shame at which the community may have arrived here and now?" United States v. Kennerley, 209 F. 119, 121 (S.D.N.Y. 1913) (per Hand, J.).

obscenity, n. (16c) 1. The characteristic or state of being morally abhorrent or socially taboo, esp. as a result of referring to or depicting sexual or excretory functions. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻ 82(10), 90.4; Obscenity ↻ 1.] 2. Something (such as an expression or act) that has this characteristic. See CONTEMPORARY COMMUNITY STANDARDS. Cf. INDECENCY.

"Obscenity is not deemed to be protected by the First Amendment, and the operative legal tests for obscenity are spongy and leave much to the vagaries of juries asked to evaluate expert testimony on literary merit, offensiveness, and other unmeasurables." Richard A. Posner, Law and Literature: A Misunderstood Relation 329 (1988).

commercialized obscenity. (1956) Obscenity produced and marketed for sale to the public.

observe, vb. (14c) To adhere to or abide by (a law, rule, or custom) .

observer. Int'l law. (1925) A representative of a country or international organization who attends meetings of an international body (such as the United Nations) to which the observer's country does not belong. • Observers do not vote or sign documents, but they are sometimes allowed to participate in discussions. [Cases: International Law ↻ 10.45.]

obses (ob-seez), n. [Latin] A hostage in wartime. Pl. obsides.

obsignare (ob-sig-nair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To seal up, as with money that has been tendered and refused.

obsignation, n. A formal ratification or confirmation, esp. by an official seal. — obsignatory (ob-sig-nā-tor-ee), adj.

obsignator (ahb-sig-nay-tor or -tər), n. [Latin] Roman law. One who affixes a seal, esp. as a witness, to a will or other document. Pl. obsignatores (ahb-sig-nā-tor-eez).

obsolescence (ob-sə-les-ənts). (1832) 1. The process or state of falling into disuse or becoming obsolete. 2. A diminution in the value or usefulness of property, esp. as a result of technological advances. • For tax purposes, obsolescence is usu. distinguished from physical deterioration. Cf. DEPRECIATION. [Cases: Taxation ↻ 2516.]

economic obsolescence. Obsolescence that results from external economic factors, such as decreased demand or changed governmental regulations. — Also termed external obsolescence. Cf. functional obsolescence.

external obsolescence. See economic obsolescence.

functional obsolescence. Obsolescence that results either from inherent deficiencies in the property, such as inadequate equipment or design, or from technological improvements available after the use began. Cf. economic obsolescence.

planned obsolescence. A system or policy of deliberately producing consumer goods that will wear out or become outdated after limited use, thus inducing consumers to buy new items more frequently. — Also termed built-in obsolescence.

obsolescent, adj. (18c) Going out of use; becoming obsolete.

obsolete, adj. (17c) No longer in general use; out-of-date.

obstacle preemption. See PREEMPTION.

obstante (ob-stan-tee or əb-). [Latin] Withstanding; hindering. See NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

obsta principiis (ob-sta prin-sip-ee-is). [Latin] Withstand beginnings; resist the first approaches or encroachments.

obstinate desertion. See DESERTION.

obstrict (əb-strikt), vb. To coerce. — obstrictive, adj. — obstrictiveness, n.

"The element of coercion or obstrictiveness. The contrast here is between voluntary and obstricted (or coerced) conduct. The coercion need not be actual (objective), but may be merely potential (subjective) by fear of the possible force; as, when the faithful canine, Towser, susceptible to the sight of a feline enemy, is tempted to pursue, but upon his owner's stern voice and a shake of the stick, Towser turns humbly back and crushes his impulse." John Henry Wigmore, Problems of Law 7-8 (1920).

obstriction. Archaic. Obligation; bond.

obstructing process. See OBSTRUCTION OF PROCESS.

obstruction. (16c) 1. Something that impedes or hinders, as in a street, river, or design; an obstacle. 2. The act of impeding or hindering something; interference. 3. Oil & gas. A common-law doctrine that suspends the running of time under an oil-and-gas lease or extends the lease for a reasonable period of time if rights granted under the lease are interfered with by the lessor or someone claiming through the lessor. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷78.1(10).]

obstruction of justice. (1854) Interference with the orderly administration of law and justice, as by giving false information to or withholding evidence from a police officer or prosecutor, or by harming or intimidating a witness or juror. • Obstruction of justice is a crime in most jurisdictions. — Also termed obstructing justice; obstructing public justice. [Cases: Obstructing Justice ↷1; Sentencing and Punishment ↷761.]

"The goal, — to proscribe every wilful act of corruption, intimidation or force which tends in any way to distort or impede the administration of law either civil or criminal — has been very largely attained, partly by aid of legislation. And any punishable misdeed of such a nature which is not recognized as a distinct crime, is usually called 'obstruction of justice,' or 'obstructing justice,' — a common-law misdemeanor." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 552 (3d ed. 1982).

obstruction of process. Interference of any kind with the lawful service or execution of a writ, warrant, or other process. • Most jurisdictions make this offense a crime. — Also termed obstructing process; resisting process. [Cases: Obstructing Justice ↷3.]

obtain the floor. Parliamentary law. To receive recognition from the chair after claiming the floor.

obtest (ob- or əb-test), vb. (16c) 1. To call to or invoke as a witness. 2. To ask for earnestly; beseech; implore. 3. To protest.

obtoro collo (ob-tor-toh kah-loh). [Latin] Roman law. Dragged by the neck. • Because a plaintiff could not sue an absent defendant, the plaintiff was sometimes said to have to drag a defendant obtoro collo to court.

obtulit se (ob-t[y]ə-lit see). [Latin] Offered himself. • In old English practice, these words were entered on the record when one party appeared ("offered himself") in court against an opposing party who did not appear.

ob turpem causam (ob tər-pəm [or -pem] kaw-zəm). [Latin] For an immoral consideration; on account of disgraceful consideration. • An obligation ob turpem causam (i.e., founded on what was termed turpis causa) could not be enforced.

obvention (ob- or əb-ven-shən). Eccles. law. An incoming fee or revenue, esp. one that comes occasionally or incidentally.

obviate (ob-vee-ayt), vb. (16c) 1. To dispose of or do away with (a thing); to anticipate and prevent from arising <they obviated the growing problem through legislation>. 2. To make unnecessary <the movant obviated the all-night drafting session by getting the opponent to agree to an extension>. — obviation, n. — obviator, n.

obvious error. A standard of review that applies to unobjected-to actions and omissions at trial that are so seriously prejudicial as to result in manifest injustice. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷181; Criminal Law ↷1030(1); Federal Courts ↷611.]

obviousness, n. (1921) Patents. The quality or state of being easily apparent to a person with ordinary skill in a given art, considering the scope and content of the prior art, so that the person could reasonably believe that, at the time it was conceived, the invention was to be expected. • An invention that is determined to be obvious cannot be patented. Although an obviousness inquiry is rife with questions of fact, the ultimate conclusion is a question of law. See 35 USCA 5103. Cf. NONOBVIOUSNESS. [Cases: Patents ↷16.] — obvious, adj.

obviousness double patenting. See DOUBLE PATENTING.

obviousness-type double patenting. 1. DOUBLE PATENTING. 2. See judicially created double patenting under DOUBLE PATENTING (2).

obviousness-type double-patenting rejection. See judicially created double-patenting rejection under REJECTION.

o.c. abbr. 1. OPE CONSILIO. 2. Orphan's court. See probate court under COURT.

OCC. abbr. OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY.

occasio (ə-kay-zhee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A tax that a lord imposed on his vassals or tenants for his necessity. 2. Hindrance or trouble; esp., vexatious litigation.

occasional sale. See SALE.

occision (ok-sizh-ən), n. Hist. A slaying, esp. of more than one person.

occultatio thesauri inventi (ok-əl-tay-shee-oh thə-saw-rī in-ven-tī). [Law Latin] Hist. The concealment of found treasure.

occult marriage. See confidential marriage under MARRIAGE (1).

occupancy. (16c) 1. The act, state, or condition of holding, possessing, or residing in or on something; actual possession, residence, or tenancy, esp. of a dwelling or land. • In this sense, the term denotes whatever acts are done on the land to manifest a claim of exclusive control and to indicate to the public that the actor has appropriated the land. Hence, erecting and maintaining a substantial enclosure around a tract of land usu. constitutes occupancy of the whole tract.

constructive occupancy. A manifest intent to occupy property physically, followed within a reasonable time by actual occupancy.

2. The act of taking possession of something that has no owner (such as abandoned property) so as to acquire legal ownership. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. 3. The period or term during which one owns, rents, or otherwise occupies property. 4. The state or condition of being occupied. 5. The use to which property is put.

occupant. (16c) 1. One who has possessory rights in, or control over, certain property or premises. 2. One who acquires title by occupancy.

general occupant. (18c) A person who occupies land in the interim arising after the death of a pur autre vie tenant but before the death of the person who serves as the measuring life for the estate. • The pur autre vie tenant does not state who may occupy the land after the death of the first tenant; the land can be occupied by the first possessor of the land. — Also termed common occupant. Cf. CESTUI QUE VIE.

special occupant. (18c) A person specifically designated in a conveyance as being entitled to a life estate if the conveyee dies before the end of the life estate; specifi., a pur autre vie tenant's heir who occupies land in the interim between the death of the tenant and the death of the person who serves as the measuring life for the estate. • A special occupancy can arise when the grant to the pur autre vie tenant provides that possession is for the life of the tenant, then to the tenant's heirs.

occupare (ok-yə-pair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To seize or take possession of (property); to enter (land) upon a vacant possession.

occupatible (ok-yə-pə-tīl). Hist. Property that has been left by its rightful owner and is now possessed by another.

occupatio (ok-yə-pay-shee-oh), n. Roman law. A mode of acquisition by which a person obtains absolute title by first possessing a thing that previously belonged to no one, such as a wild bird or pearls on the shore. Cf. RULE OF CAPTURE (2).

occupation. (14c) 1. An activity or pursuit in which a person is engaged; esp., a person's usual or principal work or business.

dangerous occupation. An occupation that involves an appreciable risk of death or serious bodily injury.

2. The possession, control, or use of real property; OCCUPANCY. 3. The seizure and control of a territory by military force; the condition of territory that has been placed under the authority of a hostile army. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨ 30(1).] 4. The period during which territory seized by military force is held.

occupational crime. See CRIME.

occupational-disability insurance. See INSURANCE.

occupational disease. (1901) A disease that is contracted as a result of exposure to debilitating conditions or substances in the course of employment. • Employees who suffer from occupational diseases are eligible for workers' compensation. Courts have construed the term to include a variety of ailments, including lung conditions (such as asbestosis or black lung), hearing loss, and carpal tunnel syndrome. — Also termed industrial disease. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 547-551.]

"Certain diseases and infirmities which develop gradually and imperceptibly as a result of engaging in particular employments and which are generally known and understood to be usual incidents or hazards thereof, are distinguished from those having a traumatic origin, or otherwise developing suddenly and unexpectedly, by the terms 'occupational,' and 'industrial.'" 82 Am. Jur. 2d Workers' Compensation § 326 (1992).

Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. A federal statute that requires employers to (1) keep the workplace free from recognized hazards that cause or are likely to cause death or serious physical harm to employees, and (2) comply with standards promulgated by the Secretary of Labor. 29 USCA §§ 651-678. — Abbr. OSHA (oh-shə). [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 2553.]

"Although OSHA has been one of the most controversial pieces of protective legislation ever enacted, Congress has not passed any substantive amendments to the Act. There have been, however, some limitations on OSHA enforcement activity attached to appropriations bills. In addition, OSHA has been affected by newer laws such as the Criminal Fine Enforcement Act, the Equal Access to Justice Act, and the Surface Transportation Assistance Act. . . . The Act covers employment in every state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and all American territories, an estimated 5 million workplaces and 75 million employees." Mark A. Rothstein, Occupational Safety and Health Law 7 (1990).

Occupational Safety and Health Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for setting and enforcing workplace safety and health standards and for helping employers comply with them. • It was created under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. There are ten regional offices. — Abbr. OSHA. [Cases: Labor Relations ⇨ 9.6, 27.1.]

Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. An independent, quasi-judicial commission that resolves allegations of unsafe or unhealthy working conditions. • It was established by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. — Abbr. OSHRC. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻2571.] occupational tax. See occupation tax under TAX.

occupation tax. See TAX.

occupavit (ok-yə-pay-vit). [Law Latin] Hist. A writ to regain possession to land or a tenement from which one was ejected in time of war.

occupying claimant. (1801) A person who claims the right under a statute to recover for the cost of improvements done to land that is later found not to belong to the person. [Cases: Improvements ↻4.] occupying-claimant act. See BETTERMENT ACT.

occurrence. (1978) Something that happens or takes place; specif., an accident, event, or continuing condition that results in personal injury or property damage that is neither expected nor intended from the standpoint of an insured party. • This specific sense is the standard definition of the term under most liability policies. [Cases: Insurance ↻2101, 2275.]

occurrence-based liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

occurrence policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

occurrence rule. Civil procedure. The rule that a limitations period begins to run when the alleged wrongful act or omission occurs, rather than when the plaintiff discovers the injury. • This rule applies, for example, to most breach-of-contract claims. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Cf. DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ↻43.]

ocean. (14c) 1. The continuous body of salt water that covers more than 70% of the earth's surface; the high seas; the open sea. Cf. SEA. 2. Any of the principal geographic divisions of this body. • There are generally considered to be five oceans: Atlantic, Pacific, Indian, Arctic, and Antarctic.

ocean bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

ocean marine insurance. See INSURANCE.

OCHAMPUS. abbr. OFFICE OF CIVILIAN HEALTH AND MEDICAL PROGRAMS OF THE UNIFORMED SERVICES.

ochlocracy (ah-klah-krə-see). Government by the lowest classes; mob-rule.

octo tales (ok-toh tay-leez or taylz). [Latin "eight such"] 1. A supply of eight additional jurors for a trial. 2. A writ commanding a sheriff to summon eight more jurors for a trial. See TALES. [Cases: Jury ↻72.]

octroi (ok-troy or ahk-trwah), n. [French] 1. Hist. A grant or privilege of a charter by a sovereign. 2. A local tax levied on certain goods that are brought into a city (esp. in some European countries). 3. The place where such a tax is collected. 4. The agency for collecting such a tax.

octroy (ok-troy), vb. (Of a sovereign) to grant or concede as a privilege.

o/d. abbr. 1. OVERDRAFT (1). 2. OVERDRAFT (2).

OD. abbr. 1. Overdose. 2. OVERDRAFT (1). 3. OVERDRAFT (2). 4. See ordinary seaman under SEAMAN.

odal (oh-dəl), n. Hist. Land not subject to feudal duties or burdens; ALLODIUM. — Also termed odel; odhal; odhall. — odal, adj. <an odal right>.

odd lot. See LOT (3).

odd-lot, adj. Of, relating to, or designating a worker who is so substantially disabled as to be unable to find stable employment in the ordinary labor market, and thus is considered totally disabled and entitled to workers' compensation benefits under the odd-lot doctrine <an odd-lot worker who could find only sporadic employment>. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↻847.]

odd-lot doctrine. Workers' compensation. The doctrine that permits a finding of total disability for an injured claimant who, though able to work sporadically, cannot obtain regular employment and steady income and is thus considered an "odd lot" in the labor market. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↻847.]

odel. See ODAL.

odhal. See ODAL.

odhall. See ODAL.

odio et atia. See DE ODIIO ET ATIA.

odium (oh-dee-əm). (17c) 1. The state or fact of being hated. 2. A state of disgrace, usu. resulting from detestable conduct. 3. Hatred or strong aversion accompanied by loathing or contempt. — odious, adj.

ODP. abbr. OFFICE OF DOMESTIC PREPAREDNESS.

oeconomicus (ee-kə-nom-ə-kəs). [Law Latin fr. Greek] Hist. An executor of a will.

oeconomus (ee-kon-ə-məs). [Latin fr. Greek] Civil law. A manager or administrator.

OEQ. abbr. OFFICE OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY.

OES. abbr. BUREAU OF OCEANS AND INTERNATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL AND SCIENTIFIC AFFAIRS.

OFCCP. abbr. OFFICE OF FEDERAL CONTRACT COMPLIANCE PROGRAMS.

of counsel. See COUNSEL.

of course. (16c) 1. Following the ordinary procedure <the writ was issued as a matter of course>. 2. Naturally; obviously; clearly <we'll appeal that ruling, of course>.

off-board, adj. Outside a major exchange; over-the-counter or between private parties <an off-board securities transaction>. — Also termed off-the-board. See OVER-THE-COUNTER.

offender. (15c) A person who has committed a crime.

adult offender. (1831) 1. A person who has committed a crime after reaching the age of majority. 2. A person who, having committed a crime while a minor, has been convicted after reaching the age of majority. 3.

A juvenile who has committed a crime and is tried as an adult rather than as a juvenile. [Cases: Infants ↻68.5.]

career offender. (1965) Under the federal-sentencing guidelines, an adult who, after being convicted of two violent felonies or controlled-substance felonies, commits another such felony. U.S. Sentencing Guidelines Manual § 4B1.1. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻1200–1426.]

first offender. (1884) A person who authorities believe has committed a crime but who has never before been convicted of a crime. • First offenders are often treated leniently at sentencing or in plea negotiations. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻273.1(2); Sentencing and Punishment ↻102, 868, 1871, 2066.]

habitual offender. 1. A person who commits the same or a similar offense a certain number of times in a certain period, as set by statute, and is therefore eligible for an enhanced sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻1200–1426.] 2. RECIDIVIST.

prior and persistent offender. Missouri law. See RECIDIVIST.

repeat offender. (1956) A person who has been convicted of a crime more than once; RECIDIVIST. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻1202.]

situational offender. (1945) A first-time offender who is unlikely to commit future crimes.

status offender. (1967) A youth who engages in conduct that — though not criminal by adult standards — is considered inappropriate enough to bring a charge against the youth in juvenile court; a juvenile who commits a status offense. Cf. youthful offender; JUVENILE DELINQUENT. [Cases: Infants ↻153.]

youthful offender. (1885) 1. A person in late adolescence or early adulthood who has been convicted of a crime. • A youthful offender is often eligible for special programs not available to older offenders, including community supervision, the successful completion of which may lead to erasing the conviction from the offender's record. [Cases: Infants ↻69(3).] 2. JUVENILE DELINQUENT. — Also termed young offender; youth offender. Cf. status offender.

offense (ə-fents). (14c) 1. A violation of the law; a crime, often a minor one. See CRIME. — Also termed criminal offense. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻1.]

"The terms 'crime,' 'offense,' and 'criminal offense' are all said to be synonymous, and ordinarily used interchangeably. 'Offense' may comprehend every crime and misdemeanor, or may be used in a specific sense as synonymous with 'felony' or with 'misdemeanor,' as the case may be, or as signifying a crime of lesser grade, or an act not indictable, but punishable summarily or by the forfeiture of a penalty." 22 C.J.S. Criminal Law § 3, at 4 (1989).

acquisitive offense. (1981) An offense characterized by the unlawful appropriation of another's property. • This is a generic term that refers to a variety of crimes (such as larceny) rather than a particular one.

allied offense. (1896) A crime with elements so similar to those of another that the commission of the one is automatically the commission of the other. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻29.]

anticipatory offense. See inchoate offense.

arrestable offense. English law. An offense for which the punishment is fixed by law or for which a statute authorizes imprisonment for five years, or an attempt to commit such an offense. • This statutory category, created in 1967, abolished the traditional distinction between felonies and misdemeanors. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) arrestable offence.

bailable offense. (18c) A criminal charge for which a defendant may be released from custody after providing proper security <misdemeanor theft is a bailable offense>. [Cases: Bail ↻43.]

capital offense. (16c) A crime for which the death penalty may be imposed. — Also termed capital crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻1666.]

civil offense. See public tort under TORT.

cognate offense. (1866) A lesser offense that is related to the greater offense because it shares several of the elements of the greater offense and is of the same class or category. • For example, shoplifting is a cognate offense of larceny because both crimes require the element of taking property with the intent to deprive the rightful owner of that property. Cf. lesser included offense. [Cases: Indictment and Information ↻191.]

compound offense. An offense composed of one or more separate offenses. • For example, robbery is a compound offense composed of larceny and assault.

continuing offense. (18c) A crime (such as a conspiracy) that is committed over a period of time, so that the last act of the crime controls when the statute of limitations begins to run. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻150.]

cumulative offense. (1833) An offense committed by repeating the same act at different times.

divisible offense. (1847) A crime that includes one or more crimes of lesser grade. • For example, murder is a divisible offense comprising assault, battery, and assault with intent to kill.

extraneous offense. (1881) An offense beyond or unrelated to the offense for which a defendant is on trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻369–374.]

graded offense. (1891) A crime that is divided into various degrees of severity with corresponding levels of punishment, such as murder (first-degree and second-degree) or assault (simple and aggravated). See DEGREE (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↻28.]

impeachable offense. See IMPEACHABLE OFFENSE.

inchoate offense. (1809) A step toward the commission of another crime, the step in itself being serious enough to merit punishment. • The three inchoate offenses are attempt, conspiracy, and solicitation. The term is sometimes criticized (see quot. below). — Also termed anticipatory offense; inchoate crime; preliminary crime. [Cases: Conspiracy ↷ 23.1; Criminal Law ↷ 44, 45.]

"These preliminary crimes have sometimes been erroneously described as 'inchoate' offences. This is misleading because the word 'inchoate' connotes something which is not yet completed, and it is therefore not accurately used to denote something which is itself complete, even though it be a link in a chain of events leading to some object which is not yet attained. The offence of incitement is fully performed even though the person incited immediately repudiates the suggested deed, a conspiracy is committed although the conspirators have not yet moved to execute their purposed crime, and the performance of a criminal attempt must always have been reached before the end is gained. In all these instances it is the ultimate crime which is inchoate and not the preliminary crime, the position indeed being just the same as in the example imagined above of a man who stole a revolver and committed other crimes in order to effect his purpose of murder. There the murder was inchoate, but the larceny and other crimes (including the attempt) were completed." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 77 (16th ed. 1952).

included offense. See lesser included offense.

index offense. (1980) One of eight classes of crimes reported annually by the FBI in the Uniform Crime Report. • The eight classes are murder (and nonnegligent homicide), rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny-theft, arson, and auto theft. — Also termed index crime.

indictable offense. (18c) A crime that can be prosecuted only by indictment. • In federal court, such an offense is one punishable by death or by imprisonment for more than one year or at hard labor. Fed. R. Crim. P. 7(a). See INDICTMENT. [Cases: Indictment and Information ↷ 3.]

joint offense. (18c) An offense (such as conspiracy) committed by the participation of two or more persons.

lesser included offense. (1908) A crime that is composed of some, but not all, of the elements of a more serious crime and that is necessarily committed in carrying out the greater crime <battery is a lesser included offense of murder>. • For double-jeopardy purposes, a lesser included offense is considered the "same offense" as the greater offense, so that acquittal or conviction of either offense precludes a separate trial for the other. — Also termed included offense; necessarily included offense; predicate offense; predicate act. Cf. cognate offense. [Cases: Indictment and Information ↷ 189, 191.]

liquor offense. Any crime involving the inappropriate use or sale of intoxicating liquor. See DRAM-SHOP LIABILITY; DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ↷ 131-176.]

major offense. An offense the commission of which involves one or more lesser included offenses, as murder may include assault and battery. [Cases: Indictment and Information ↷ 191.]

military offense. See MILITARY OFFENSE.

multiple offense. (1908) An offense that violates more than one law but that may require different proof so that an acquittal or conviction under one statute does not exempt the defendant from prosecution under another. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ↷ 134.]

necessarily included offense. See lesser included offense.

negligent offense. A violation of law arising from a defective discharge of duty or from criminal negligence. See criminal negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

object offense. The crime that is the object of the defendant's attempt, solicitation, conspiracy, or complicity. • For example, murder is the object offense in a charge of attempted murder. — Also termed target offense.

offense against property. (1837) A crime against another's personal property. • The common-law offenses against property were larceny, embezzlement, cheating, cheating by false pretenses, robbery, receiving stolen goods, malicious mischief, forgery, and uttering forged instruments. Although the term crimes against property, a common term in modern usage, includes crimes against real property, the term offense against property is traditionally restricted to personal property. Cf. CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY.

offense against public justice and authority. A crime that impairs the administration of justice. • The common-law offenses of this type were obstruction of justice, barratry, maintenance, champerty, embracery, escape, prison breach, rescue, misprision of felony, compounding a crime, subornation of perjury, bribery, and misconduct in office.

offense against the habitation. (1849) A crime against another's house — traditionally either arson or burglary.

offense against the person. (1854) A crime against the body of another human being. • The common-law offenses against the person were murder, manslaughter, mayhem, rape, assault, battery, robbery, false imprisonment, abortion, seduction, kidnapping, and abduction. Cf. CRIMES AGAINST PERSONS.

offense against the public health, safety, comfort, and morals. A crime traditionally viewed as endangering the whole of society. • The common-law offenses of this type were nuisance, bigamy, adultery, fornication, lewdness, illicit cohabitation, incest, miscegenation, sodomy, bestiality, buggery, abortion, and seduction.

offense against the public peace. (18c) A crime that tends to disturb the peace. • The common-law offenses of this type were riot, unlawful assembly, dueling, rout, affray, forcible entry and detainer, and libel on a private person. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 45.15; Disorderly Conduct ↷ 105, 128; Riot ↷ 1; Unlawful Assembly ↷ 1.] petty offense. (17c) A minor or insignificant crime. 18 USCA § 19. Cf. serious offense.

"[W]e find . . . an apparent implication that a 'petty offense' is not a 'crime.' Much could be said for such a position but it is not the law at the present time. In the federal penal code, for example, it is provided that any misdemeanor 'the penalty for which does not exceed imprisonment for a period of six months or a fine of not more than $500, or both, is a petty offense.'" Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 22 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 18 USCA § 1(3)).

political offense. See POLITICAL OFFENSE.

predicate offense. 1. An earlier offense that can be used to enhance a sentence levied for a later conviction. • Predicate offences are defined by statute and are not uniform from state to state. 2. See lesser included offense. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 1286–1309.]

public offense. (16c) An act or omission forbidden by law.

public-welfare offense. (1933) A minor offense that does not involve moral delinquency and is prohibited only to secure the effective regulation of conduct in the interest of the community. • An example is driving a car with one brake-light missing. — Also termed regulatory offense; contravention.

regulatory offense. 1. A statutory crime, as opposed to a common-law crime. 2. See public-welfare offense.

same offense. 1. For double-jeopardy purposes, the same criminal act, omission, or transaction for which the person has already stood trial. See DOUBLE JEOPARDY. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ↷ 132.1.] 2. For sentencing and enhancement-of-punishment purposes, an offense that is quite similar to a previous one.

second offense. An offense committed after conviction for a first offense. • The previous conviction, not the indictment, forms the basis of the charge of a second offense.

separate offense. (18c) 1. An offense arising out of the same event as another offense but containing some differences in elements of proof. • A person may be tried, convicted, and sentenced for each separate offense. 2. An offense arising out of a different event entirely from another offense under consideration.

serious offense. (18c) An offense not classified as a petty offense and usu. carrying at least a six-month sentence. — Also termed serious crime. Cf. petty offense.

sexual offense. (1885) An offense involving unlawful sexual conduct, such as prostitution, indecent exposure, incest, pederasty, and bestiality.

status offense. (1960) 1. See status crime under CRIME. 2. A minor's violation of the juvenile code by doing some act that would not be considered illegal if an adult did it, but that indicates that the minor is beyond parental control. • Examples include running away from home, truancy, and incorrigibility. See JUVENILE DELINQUENCY.

strict-liability offense. An offense for which the action alone is enough to warrant a conviction, with no need to prove a mental state. • For example, illegal parking is a strict-liability offense. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 21.]

substantive offense (səb-stən-tiv). (18c) A crime that is complete in itself and is not dependent on another crime for one of its elements. — Also termed substantive crime; substantive felony.

summary offense. (1928) An offense (such as a petty misdemeanor) that can be prosecuted without an indictment. Cf. indictable offense.

target offense. See object offense.

unrelated offense. (1896) A crime that is independent from the charged offense.

violent offense. (1965) A crime characterized by extreme physical force, such as murder, forcible rape, and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. — Also termed violent felony. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 781, 793, 1243, 1261, 1283.]

2. Civil law. An intentional unlawful act that causes injury or loss to another and that gives rise to a claim for damages. La. Civ. Code art. 2315. • This sense of offense is essentially the same as the common-law intentional tort. [Cases: Torts ↷ 101.]

quasi-offense. Civil law. A negligent unlawful act that causes injury or loss to another and that gives rise to a claim for damages. • This is equivalent to the common-law tort of negligence. — Also termed quasi-delict. [Cases: Negligence ↷ 200.]

3. Parliamentary law. A breach of order or other misconduct for which the applicable rules subject a member to a penalty.

offensive (ə-fen-siv), adj. (16c) 1. Of or for attack <an offensive weapon>. 2. Unpleasant or disagreeable to the senses; obnoxious <an offensive odor>. 3. Causing displeasure, anger, or resentment; esp., repugnant to the prevailing sense of what is decent or moral <patently offensive language and photographs>. See OBSCENE.

offensive and defensive league. Int'l law. A league binding the parties not only to aid one another when attacked but also to support one another when attacking in offensive warfare.

offensive collateral estoppel. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

offensive lockout. See LOCKOUT.

offensive strike. See STRIKE.

offensive-use waiver. (1993) An exemption from the attorney-client privilege, whereby a litigant is considered to have waived the privilege by seeking affirmative relief, if the claim relies on privileged information that would be outcome-determinative and that the opposing party has no other way to obtain. Cf. AT-ISSUE WAIVER. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↷ 111, 168.]

offer, n. (15c) 1. The act or an instance of presenting something for acceptance <the prosecutor's offer of immunity>. 2. A promise to do or refrain from doing some specified thing in the future, conditioned on an act, forbearance, or return promise being given in exchange for the promise or its performance; a display of willingness to enter into a contract on specified terms, made in a way that would lead a reasonable person to understand that an acceptance, having been sought, will result in a binding contract <she accepted the $750 offer on the Victorian armoire>. Cf. ACCEPTANCE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 16; Sales ⇨ 22(5), 23(5); Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 16(1), 17.]

"[A]n offer is, in effect, a promise by the offeror to do or abstain from doing something, provided that the offeree will accept the offer and pay or promise to pay the 'price' of the offer. The price, of course, need not be a monetary one. In fact, in bilateral contracts, as we explained earlier, the mere promise of payment of the price suffices to conclude the contract, while in a unilateral contract it is the actual payment of the price which is required." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 44 (3d ed. 1981).

irrevocable offer (i-REV-ə-kə-bəl). (1885) An offer that includes a promise to keep it open for a specified period, during which the offer cannot be withdrawn without the offeror's becoming subject to liability for breach of contract. • Traditionally, this type of promise must be supported by consideration to be enforceable, but under UCC § 2-205, a merchant's signed, written offer giving assurances that it will be held open — but lacking consideration — is nonetheless irrevocable for the stated period (or, if not stated, for a reasonable time not exceeding three months). — Also termed (in the UCC) firm offer; (specif.) merchant's firm offer. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 16; Sales ⇨ 22; Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 18(5).]

"It has sometimes been asserted that an irrevocable offer is 'a legal impossibility.' See Langdell, Summary of the Law of Contracts, § 178, also § 4; Wormser, 'The True Conception of Unilateral Contracts,' 26 Yale Law Journal, 137, note; Lee, Title Contracts, in Jenks' Dig. of Eng. Civ. Law, § 195; Ashley, Contracts, § 13. A close analysis shows that there is nothing impossible either in the conception itself or in its application. If we define 'offer' as an act on the part of the offeror . . . , then no offer can ever be revoked, for it is of yesterday — it is indeed factum. But if we mean by 'offer' the legal relation that results from the offeror's act, the power then given to the offeree of creating contractual relations by doing certain voluntary acts on his part, then the offer may be either revocable or irrevocable according to the circumstances. The idea of an irrevocable power is not at all an unfamiliar one." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 53-54 n.3 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

offer to all the world. (1861) An offer, by way of advertisement, of a reward for the rendering of specified services, addressed to the public at large. • As soon as someone renders the services, a contract is made. — Also termed public offer.

offer to chaffer. See INVITATION TO NEGOTIATE.

public-exchange offer. A takeover attempt in which the bidder corporation offers to exchange some of its securities for a specified number of the target corporation's voting shares. Cf. TENDER OFFER.

public offer. See offer to all the world.

standing offer. (1842) An offer that is in effect a whole series of offers, each of which is capable of being converted into a contract by a distinct acceptance.

tender offer. See TENDER OFFER.

two-tier offer. See TWO-TIER OFFER.

3. A price at which one is ready to buy or sell; BID <she lowered her offer to $200>. 4. ATTEMPT (2) <an offer to commit battery>. — offer, vb. — offeror, n.

"Where criminal assault has been given this dual scope, a definition in terms of 'an attempt or offer' to commit a battery is assumed to represent both grounds. The word 'offer,' it is said, signifies a threat that places the other in reasonable apprehension of receiving an immediate battery. It would be a mistake, however, to assume that the word carried any such significance when it first appeared in the definition of this offense. In one of its meanings, 'offer' is a synonym of 'attempt.'" Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 163 (3d ed. 1982).

offeree (ah-fər-ee). (1882) One to whom an offer is made.

offer for sale by tender. See Dutch auction (4) under AUCTION.

offer in compromise. See OFFER OF COMPROMISE.

offering, n. (15c) 1. The act of making an offer; something offered for sale. 2. The sale of an issue of securities. — Also termed (in BrE) flotation. See ISSUE (2). [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 11.11.]

all-or-none offering. An offering that allows the issuer to terminate the distribution if the entire block of offered securities is not sold.

initial public offering. A company's first public sale of stock; the first offering of an issuer's equity securities to the public through a registration statement. — Abbr. IPO. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 25.17.]

negotiated offering. A securities offering in which the terms (including the underwriters' compensation) have been negotiated between the issuer and the underwriters.

primary offering. An offering of newly issued securities.

private offering. An offering made only to a small group of interested buyers. — Also termed private placement. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 18.11.]

public offering. An offering made to the general public.

registered offering. A public offering of securities registered with the SEC and with appropriate state securities commissions. — Also termed registered public offering. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 25.17.]

rights offering. An issue of stock-purchase rights allowing shareholders to buy newly issued stock at a fixed price, usu. below market value, and in proportion to the number of shares they already own. — Also termed privileged subscription. Cf. PREEMPTIVE RIGHT.

secondary offering. 1. Any offering by an issuer of securities after its initial public offering. 2. An offering of previously issued securities by persons other than the issuer. See secondary distribution (1) under DISTRIBUTION.

special offering. An offering of a large block of stock that, because of its size and the market in the particular issue, is specially handled on the floor of the stock exchange.

undigested offering. A public offering of securities that remain unsold because there is insufficient demand at the offered price.

offering circular. A document, similar to a prospectus, that provides information about a private securities offering. — Also termed offering statement. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨25.50–25.75.]

offering statement. See OFFERING CIRCULAR.

offer of compromise. (18c) An offer by one party to settle a dispute amicably (usu. by paying money) to avoid or end a lawsuit or other legal action. • An offer of compromise is usu. not admissible at trial as evidence of the offering party's liability but may be admissible for other purposes. — Also termed offer in compromise; offer of settlement. [Cases: Evidence ⇨212.]

offer of judgment. (1971) A settlement offer by one party to allow a specified judgment to be taken against the party. • In federal procedure (and in many states), if the adverse party rejects the offer, and if a judgment finally obtained by that party is not more favorable than the offer, then that party must pay the costs incurred after the offer was made. Fed. R. Civ. P. 68. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2396.5, 2725; Judgment ⇨74.]

offer of performance. (18c) Contracts. One party's reasonable assurance to the other, through words or conduct, of a present ability to fulfill contractual obligations. • When performances are to be exchanged simultaneously, each party is entitled to refuse to proceed with the exchange until the other party makes an appropriate offer of performance. Cf. TENDER (1). [Cases: Contracts ⇨279; Sales ⇨153, 185.]

"The requirement of an offer of performance is to be applied in the light of what is reasonably to be expected by the parties in view of the practical difficulties of absolute simultaneity and is subject to the agreement of the parties, as supplemented or qualified by usage and course of dealing." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 238 cmt. b (1979).

offer of proof. (17c) Procedure. A presentation of evidence for the record (but outside the jury's presence) usu. made after the judge has sustained an objection to the admissibility of that evidence, so that the evidence can be preserved on the record for an appeal of the judge's ruling. • An offer of proof, which may also be used to persuade the court to admit the evidence, consists of three parts: (1) the evidence itself, (2) an explanation of the purpose for which it is offered (its relevance), and (3) an argument supporting admissibility. Such an offer may include tangible evidence or testimony (through questions and answers, a lawyer's narrative description, or an affidavit). Fed. R. Evid. 103(a)(2). — Also termed avowal. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨670; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2013; Trial ⇨44.]

offer of settlement. See OFFER OF COMPROMISE.

off-premises license. See off-sale license under LICENSE (2).

off-sale license. See LICENSE (2).

offset, n. (18c) Something (such as an amount or claim) that balances or compensates for something else; SETOFF.

offset, vb. (17c) To balance or calculate against; to compensate for <the gains offset the losses>.

off-year election. See ELECTION (3).

OFHEO. abbr. OFFICE OF FEDERAL HOUSING ENTERPRISE OVERSIGHT.

OFR. abbr. Office of Federal Register. See FEDERAL REGISTER.

old combination. See COMBINATION.

old-combination rejection. See REJECTION.

Old Natura Brevium (nə-t[y]oor-ə bree-vee-əm). Hist. A treatise on the writs in use during the reign of Edward III. — Abbr. O.N.B. See BREVE.

old-soldier's rule. See EGGSHELL-SKULL RULE.

old style. The system of ordering time according to the Julian method, introduced by Julius Caesar in 46 B.C., by which all years have 365 days except the years divisible by 4, which have 366 days. • This differs from the modern calendar in that it assumes that there are exactly 365.25 days in a year. But there are actually slightly less than 365.25 days in a solar year, so the old-style calendar adds too many days over time. The Julian calendar was reformed by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582. — Abbr. o.s. — Also termed Julian calendar. Cf. NEW STYLE.

Oléron, laws of (oh-lə-ron or aw-lay-ron). See LAWS OF OLÉRON.

oligarchy (ol-ə-gahr-kee), n. (16c) A government in which a small group of persons exercises control; the persons who constitute such a government. — oligarchic, oligarchical, adj.

oligopolistic price coordination. See CONSCIOUS PARALLELISM.

oligopoly (ol-ə-gop-ə-lee), n. (1895) Control or domination of a market by a few large sellers, creating high prices and low output similar to those found in a monopoly. Cf. MONOPOLY. — oligopolistic, adj. — oligopolist, n.

"One reason for the difficulty in describing and delimiting oligopoly power is the large number of variables that confront any theorist building an oligopoly model. Pure monopoly is akin to a single player game, such as solitaire, but the oligopoly model may be more like a multihand poker game. . . . Unlike poker, where for any hand one player will win all of the money bet, the players in an oligopolistic market can actually increase the returns that all of them receive through disciplined pricing." Lawrence A. Sullivan & Warren S. Grimes, The Law of Antitrust: An Integrated Handbook 38–39 (2000).

oligopsony (ol-ə-gop-sə-nee), n. Control or domination of a market by a few large buyers or customers. — oligopsonistic, adj. — oligopsonist, n.

olograph, n. See HOLOGRAPH. — olographic, adj.

olographic will. See holographic will under WILL.

OMB. abbr. OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET.

ombudsman (om-bədz-mən). (1872) 1. An official appointed to receive, investigate, and report on private citizens' complaints about the government. 2. A similar appointee in a nongovernmental organization (such as a company or university). — Often shortened to ombuds.

"An ombudsman serves as an alternative to the adversary system for resolving disputes, especially between citizens and government agencies An ombudsman is . . . (1) an independent and nonpartisan officer of the legislature who supervises the administration; (2) one who deals with specific complaints from the public against administrative injustice and maladministration; and (3) one who has the power to investigate, criticize and publicize, but not to reverse administration action." 4 Am. Jur. 2d Alternative Dispute Resolution § 23 (1995).

omissa et male appretiatā (ə-mis-ə et mal-ee ə-pree-shee-ay-tə). [Law Latin] Hist. Things omitted and erroneously valued.

"When an executor confirms and omits in the inventory part of the defunct's effects, he may have the mistake corrected. But if he do not take steps for this purpose, any one interested in the succession may apply, either to have the executor compelled to confirm the omission, or himself to confirm it. Ordinary executors ad omissa et male appretiatā ought to call the principal executor to their confirmation, or it will be null; but this rule does not hold in the case of executors-creditors." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 753 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

omission, n. (14c) 1. A failure to do something; esp., a neglect of duty <the complaint alleged that the driver had committed various negligent acts and omissions>. 2. The act of leaving something out <the contractor's omission of the sales price rendered the contract void>. 3. The state of having been left out or of not having been done <his omission from the roster caused no harm>. 4. Something that is left out, left undone, or otherwise neglected <the many omissions from the list were unintentional>. — Formerly also termed omittance. — omit, vb. — omissive, omissible, adj.

on all fours. (Of a law case) squarely on point (with a precedent) on both facts and law; nearly identical in all material ways <our client's case is on all fours with the Supreme Court's most recent opinion>. Cf. WHITEHORSE CASE.

"The courts, nowadays, are governed largely by precedent, and this imposes on the advocate the necessity of supporting his client's cause by concrete authorities — cases 'on all fours' with, or at least analogous to, the case at bar." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 98 (3d ed. 1914).

O.N.B. abbr. OLD NATURA BREVIVM.

onboard bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

ONDCP. See OFFICE OF NATIONAL DRUG CONTROL POLICY.

on demand. (17c) When presented or upon request for payment <this note is payable on demand>. — Also termed on call. See PAYABLE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 129(3).]

one-action rule. In debtor-creditor law, the principle that when a debt is secured by real property, the creditor must foreclose on the collateral before proceeding against the debtor's unsecured assets. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 218.4, 337, 411.]

one-book rule. The requirement or practice that only one version of the Sentencing Guidelines be used to calculate all aspects of a defendant's sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 653.]

one-court-of-justice doctrine. A principle in some states holding that there is but a single court in the state and that this court is composed of several divisions, such as the supreme court, the courts of appeals, and district courts, probate courts, and any other legislatively created courts. • Michigan, for example, has embodied this doctrine in its constitution (art. VI, § 1). — Also termed one court of justice. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 1.]

one-day, one-trial method. (1976) A system of summoning and using jurors whereby a person answers a jury summons and participates in the venire for one day only, unless the person is actually empaneled for a trial, in which event the juror's service lasts for the entire length of the trial. • This system, which is used in several states, reduces the average term of service and expands the number of individual jurors called. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 76.]

one-half plus one. See HALF PLUS ONE.

180-day rule. Criminal procedure. 1. A rule that, in some jurisdictions, allows a person charged with a felony to be released on personal recognizance if the person has been in jail for 180 days without being brought to trial, and if the delay has not resulted from the defendant's own actions. [Cases: Bail ⇨40.] 2. A rule requiring all pending charges against a prison inmate to be brought to trial in 180 days or to be dismissed with prejudice. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨577.5.]

one-month liquidation. See LIQUIDATION.

one-party consent rule. The principle that one party to a telephone or other conversation may secretly record the conversation. • This principle applies in most but not all states. [Cases: Telecommunications ⇨1440.]

one-person, one-vote rule. (1965) Constitutional law. The principle that the Equal Protection Clause requires legislative voting districts to have about the same population. Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 84 S.Ct. 1362 (1964). — Also termed one-man, one-vote rule. See APPOINTMENT. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨3656.]

onerando pro rata portione. See DE ONERANDO PRO RATA PORTIONE.

onerare (on-ə-rair-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To burden or load.

onera realia (on-ər-ə ree-ay-lee-ə). [Law Latin] Scots law. Real burdens.

"Onera realia . . . are burdens or encumbrances affecting land, and exigible from it. They are distinguished from personal burdens, which only affect and are exigible from the person upon whom they lie. A single example may illustrate the nature of both. It is a common enough practice, when lands are sold, for the seller not to insist on payment of the full price at the time of the sale, but to allow a part of the price to remain on the lands as a burden. If the balance so left be declared . . . to be a real lien . . . it is a burden for which the lands may be attached and sold, into whose possession soever they may come. But if the burden of payment of the remainder of the price be laid upon the purchaser alone, and not upon the lands, then the burden is personal, and a subsequent purchaser from him incurs no liability therefor, the lands not being affected. John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 423 (4th ed. 1894).

onerari non (on-ə-rair-I non). [Law Latin] Hist. Ought not to be charged. • In pleading, these words were used by a defendant to begin a plea in a debt action. Cf. ACTIO NON.

oneratio (on-ə-ray-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. A cargo or lading.

oneris ferendi (on-ə-ris fə-ren-dī). [Latin] Roman law. Of bearing a weight or burden. See servitus oneris ferendi under SERVITUS; JUS ONERIS FERENDI; PARIES ONERI FERENDO, UTI NUNC EST, ITA SIT.

onerous (oh-nər-əs or on-ər-əs), adj. (14c) 1. Excessively burdensome or troublesome; causing hardship <onerous discovery requests>. 2. Having or involving obligations that outweigh the advantages <onerous property>. 3. Civil law. Done or given in return for something of equivalent value; supported by consideration <an onerous contract>. Cf. GRATUITOUS (1). — onerousness, n.

onerous title. See TITLE (2).

one-satisfaction rule. (1965) The principle that a plaintiff is only entitled to only one recovery for a particular harm, and that the plaintiff must elect a single remedy if the jury has awarded more than one. • This rule is, for example, one of the foundations of a defendant's right to have a jury verdict reduced by the amount of any settlements the plaintiff has received from other entities for the same injury. — Also termed single-recovery rule. [Cases: Damages ⇨15.]

one-subject rule. The principle that a statute should embrace only one topic, which should be stated in its title. [Cases: Statutes ⇨107.]

one-time charge. See special charge under CHARGE.

one-way ratchet theory. See RATCHET THEORY.

one-year rule. Patents. The statutory requirement that a patent application must be filed within one year after any publication, public use, sale, or offer for sale of the invention. • If an inventor waits longer than a year, the patent is blocked by this "statutory bar." 35 USCA §§ 102(b). [Cases: Patents ⇨80.]

OPIC. abbr. OVERSEAS PRIVATE INVESTMENT CORPORATION.

opinio juris sive necessitatis (ə-pin-ee-oh joor-is si-vee nə-sēs-i-tay-tis). [Latin "opinion that an act is necessary by rule of law"] Int'l law. The principle that for conduct or a practice to become a rule of customary international law, it must be shown that nations believe that international law (rather than moral obligation) mandates the conduct or practice. — Also termed opinio juris.

opinion. (14c) 1. A court's written statement explaining its decision in a given case, usu. including the statement of facts, points of law, rationale, and dicta. — Abbr. op. — Also termed judicial opinion. See DECISION. Cf. JUDGMENT (1); RULING(1). [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103.]

advisory opinion. (1837) 1. A nonbinding statement by a court of its interpretation of the law on a matter submitted for that purpose. • Federal courts are constitutionally prohibited from issuing advisory opinions by the case-or-controversy requirement, but other courts, such as the International Court of Justice, render them routinely. See CASE-OR-CONTROVERSY REQUIREMENT. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 2600–2609.] 2. A written statement, issued only by an administrator of an employee benefit plan, that interprets ERISA and applies it to a specific factual situation. • Only the parties named in the request for the opinion can rely on it, and its reliability depends on the accuracy and completeness of all material facts.

depublished opinion. An intermediate appellate court's opinion that has been struck from the official reports, esp. by the highest court. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 107.]

dissenting opinion. (1817) An opinion by one or more judges who disagree with the decision reached by the majority. — Often shortened to dissent. — Also termed minority opinion.

extrajudicial opinion. 1. An opinion that is beyond the court's authority to render. • Such opinions are void. 2. A judge's personal or scholarly opinion expressed in a medium other than a judicial opinion.

majority opinion. (1882) An opinion joined in by more than half the judges considering a given case. — Also termed main opinion.

memorandum opinion. (1912) A unanimous appellate opinion that succinctly states the decision of the court; an opinion that briefly reports the court's conclusion, usu. without elaboration because the decision follows a well-established legal principle or does not relate to any point of law. — Also termed memorandum decision; memorandum disposition; (slang) memdispo. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103, 107.]

minority opinion. See dissenting opinion.

per curiam opinion (pər kyoor-ee-əm). (1860) An opinion handed down by an appellate court without identifying the individual judge who wrote the opinion. — Sometimes shortened to per curiam. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103, 107.]

"The most controversial form of summary disposition is a per curiam opinion that simultaneously grants certiorari and disposes of the merits at some length, discussing both the facts and the issues involved. The result is usually a reversal of the judgment below The parties are given no opportunity to file briefs on the merits or to argue orally before the Court. Indeed, they are given no formal notice whatever of the Court's intention to dispose of the certiorari papers in this manner" Robert L. Stern et al., Supreme Court Practice 320 (8th ed. 2002).

plurality opinion. (1908) An opinion lacking enough judges' votes to constitute a majority, but receiving more votes than any other opinion. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 90(2), 102.]

seriatim opinions (seer-ee-ay-tim). (1832) A series of opinions written individually by each judge on the bench, as opposed to a single opinion speaking for the court as a whole.

slip opinion. 1. A court opinion that is published individually after being rendered and then collectively in advance sheets before being released for publication in a reporter. • Unlike an unpublished opinion, a slip opinion can usu. be cited as authority. — Also termed slipsheet. Cf. ADVANCE SHEETS. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 107.] 2. Archaic. A preliminary draft of a court opinion not yet ready for publication. — Also termed slip decision. Cf. unpublished opinion.

unpublished opinion. (1849) An opinion that the court has specifically designated as not for publication. • Court rules usu. prohibit citing an unpublished opinion as authority. Such an opinion is considered binding only on the parties to the particular case in which it is issued. Cf. slip opinion. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 107.]

2. A formal expression of judgment or advice based on an expert's special knowledge; esp., a document, usu. prepared at a client's request, containing a lawyer's understanding of the law that applies to a particular case. — Also termed opinion letter.

"The essence of a lawyer's job is to obtain the facts and the law with due diligence and then to give advice. But, strangely, no controlling definition has evolved for what is an 'opinion.' The lack of a definition is not crucial for some purposes. On the other hand, a definition is vital in other areas; for example, to determine within a law firm when peer review is necessary . . ." 8 Arnold S. Jacobs, Opinion Letters in Securities Matters § 3, at Intro-12 (1998).

adverse opinion. An outside auditor's opinion that a company's financial statements do not conform with generally accepted accounting principles or do not accurately reflect the company's financial position.

audit opinion. A certified public accountant's opinion regarding the audited financial statements of an entity.

comfort opinion. Securities. An attorney's written opinion that there is no reason to believe that the registration statement contains any material misrepresentations or omissions that would violate section 11 of the Securities Act of 1933. • The attorney usu. participates in the registration statement's preparation and confers with the securities issuer's representatives, underwriters, and public accountants before writing the opinion. The comfort opinion's purpose is to reassure the parties that the registration statement complies with securities laws; it is not part of the statement and is usu. not included.

coverage opinion. A lawyer's opinion on whether a particular event is covered by a given insurance policy.

infringement opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's opinion about the probable outcome of an infringement hearing or trial on whether a particular product or process infringes one or more claims of another's patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 227.]

legal opinion. (18c) A written document in which an attorney provides his or her understanding of the law as applied to assumed facts. • The attorney may be a private attorney or attorney representing the state or other governmental entity. Private attorneys frequently render legal opinions on the ownership of real estate or minerals, insurance coverage, and corporate transactions. A party may be entitled to rely on a legal opinion, depending on factors such as the identity of the parties to whom the opinion was addressed, the nature of the opinion, and the law governing the opinion. See coverage opinion.

patentability opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's or patent agent's opinion on the patent office's probable holding about the allowability of a patent application's claims. • The opinion is almost a mini-examination report because it is based on consideration of the invention's subject matter, prior art, etc.

title opinion. (1927) A lawyer's or title company's opinion on the state of title for a given piece of real property, usu. describing whether the title is clear and marketable or whether it is encumbered. See TITLE SEARCH.

unqualified opinion. An audit opinion given by an accountant who is satisfied that the financial statements reviewed were fairly presented and consistent with the previous year, and that the audit was performed in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.

validity opinion. Patents. A patent attorney's opinion about the likelihood that a patent or patent claim will be invalidated in light of evidence suggesting obviousness, lack of invention, unenforceability, etc.

3. A person's thought, belief, or inference, esp. a witness's view about a facts in dispute, as opposed to personal knowledge of the facts themselves. — Also termed (in sense 3) conclusion. See opinion evidence under EVIDENCE.

expert opinion. An opinion offered by a witness whose knowledge, skill, experience, training, and education qualify the witness to help a fact-finder understand the evidence or decide a factual dispute. See expert witness under WITNESS.

fixed opinion. (1807) A bias or prejudice that disqualifies a potential juror. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 99.4.]

opinion letter. See OPINION (2).

opinion rule. (1896) Evidence. The principle that a witness should testify to facts, not opinions, and that a nonexpert witness's opinions are often excludable from evidence. • Traditionally, this principle is regarded as one of the important exclusionary rules in evidence law. It is based on the idea that a witness who has observed data should provide the most factual evidence possible, leaving the jury to draw inferences and conclusions from the evidence. Under this system, the witness's opinion is unnecessary. Today, opinions are admissible if rationally based on a witness's perceptions and helpful to the fact-finder. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻448; Evidence ↻471, 505.]

"This rule [the opinion rule] is an historical blunder, for the early cases excluding 'opinion' meant a belief by a person who had personally seen and known nothing, and was therefore not qualified to speak; whereas the modern rule applies it to witnesses who have had personal observation as a basis for their inference. Moreover, it is a senseless rule, for not once in a thousand times can the observed data be exactly and fully reproduced in words. Still further, no harm could be done by letting the witness offer his inference, except perhaps the waste of a moment's time, whereas the application of the rule wastes vastly more time. And finally the rule is so pedantically applied by most courts that it excludes the most valuable testimony, such as would be used in all affairs of life outside a court room." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 156 (1935).

"The [opinion] rule in its stark simplicity might be interpreted as excluding all value judgments, that is to say all statements not being factual propositions susceptible of some sort of empirical proof or disproof. The rule, if it is to be given any purely logical meaning at all, must be interpreted as excluding at least all inferences drawn from perceived data. Even if value judgments are saved by construing the rule as having application only to factual propositions, the rule would seem to purport to exclude all such propositions in the formulation of which inference by the witness has played some part." Zelman Cowen, Essays on the Law of Evidence 162 (1956).

opinion testimony. See TESTIMONY.

opinion work product. See WORK PRODUCT.

OPM. abbr. OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT.

oppignorate (ə-pig-nə-rayt), vb. Archaic. To pawn or pledge. — Also spelled oppignorate. Cf. PIGNORATE.

opponent. (16c) 1. An adverse party in a contested matter. 2. A party that is challenging the admissibility of evidence. • In this sense, the word is an antonym of proponent. 3. Parliamentary law. A member who speaks against a pending motion. Cf. PROPONENT (3).

opportunity. The fact that the alleged doer of an act was present at the time and place of the act.

opportunity to be heard. (17c) The chance to appear in a court or other tribunal and present evidence and argument before being deprived of a right by governmental authority. • The opportunity to be heard is a fundamental requirement of procedural due process. It ordinarily includes the right to receive fair notice of the hearing, to secure the assistance of counsel, and to cross-examine adverse witnesses. See procedural due process under DUE PROCESS. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻3879.]

opposer. 1. Intellectual property. One who formally seeks to prevent the grant of a patent or the registration of a trademark. [Cases: Patents ↻104; Trademarks ↻1294.] 2. Hist. APPOSER.

opposition. 1. Patents. An action or procedure by which a third party can request a patent application's refusal or an issued patent's annulment. • Most countries allow opposition in some form. [Cases: Patents ↻104.] 2.

Trademarks. A procedure by which a third party can contest a trademark after it has been approved but before it has been placed on the Principal Register. Cf. CANCELLATION. [Cases: Trademarks ↻1290.]

oppression. (14c) 1. The act or an instance of unjustly exercising authority or power. 2. An offense consisting in the abuse of discretionary authority by a public officer who has an improper motive, as a result of which a person is injured. • This offense does not include extortion, which is typically a more serious crime. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻121.] 3. Contracts. Coercion to enter into an illegal contract. • Oppression is grounds for the recovery of money paid or property transferred under an illegal contract. See DURESS; UNCONSCIONABILITY. [Cases: Contracts ↻138(3), 139.] 4. Corporations. Unfair treatment of minority shareholders (esp. in a close corporation) by the directors or those in control of the corporation. — Also termed (in sense 4) shareholder oppression. See FREEZE-OUT. [Cases: Corporations ↻182.3, 597.] — oppress, vb. — oppressive, adj.

oppressive child labor. See CHILD LABOR.

oppressor. (14c) A public official who unlawfully or wrongfully exercises power under color of authority in a way that causes a person harm; one who commits oppression. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻121.]

OPRA. abbr. OPTIONS PRICE REPORTING AUTHORITY.

optima fide (op-ti-mə fi-dee). [Latin] Hist. In the best faith.

optimal-use value. See VALUE (2).

opt in, vb. (1966) To choose to participate in (something) <when the choice of settling or not settling came, the Joneses opted in, hoping to avoid a lengthy trial>.

option, n. (17c) 1. The right or power to choose; something that may be chosen <the lawyer was running out of options for settlement>. 2. An offer that is included in a formal or informal contract; esp., a contractual obligation to keep an offer open for a specified period, so that the offeror cannot revoke the offer during that period <the option is valid because it is supported by consideration>. — Also termed option contract; (redundantly) time option. See irrevocable offer under OFFER; OPTION AGREEMENT. [Cases: Contracts ↻16.5; Vendor and Purchaser ↻18.] 3. The right conveyed by such a contract <Pitts declined to exercise his option to buy the house>. 4. The right (but not the obligation) to buy or sell a given quantity of securities, commodities, or other assets at a fixed price within a specified time <trading stock options is a speculative business>. Cf. FUTURES CONTRACT. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↻10; Corporations ↻116; Securities Regulation ↻5.25(3).]

American option. An option that can be exercised on any day, including its expiration date. — Also termed American-style option. Cf. European option.

call option. An option to buy something (esp. securities) at a fixed price even if the market rises; the right to require another to sell. — Often shortened to call. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↷ 10; Securities Regulation ↷ 5.25(3).]

cash-value option. The right of a life-insurance policyholder to surrender the policy for its cash value at a specified time or at any time. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1950, 2037.]

commodity option. An option to buy or sell a commodity. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↷ 10.]

European option. An option that can be exercised only on its expiration date. — Also termed European-style option. Cf. American option.

futures option. An option to buy or sell a futures contract. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↷ 10.]

lease option. In a contract for rental property, a clause that gives the renter the right to buy the property at a fixed price, usu. at or after a fixed time. — Also termed lease with an option to purchase. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↷ 92.]

naked option. A call option that grants another the right to buy stock even though the option-giver does not own the stock to back up that commitment. — Also termed uncovered option.

nonforfeiture option. A policyholder's option, upon the lapse of premium payments, to continue an insurance policy for a shorter period than the original term, to surrender the policy for its cash value, to continue the policy for a reduced amount, or to take some other action rather than forfeit the policy. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 2037.]

option to purchase real property. A contract by which an owner of realty enters an agreement with another allowing the latter to buy the property at a specified price within a specified time, or within a reasonable time in the future, but without imposing an obligation to purchase upon the person to whom it is given. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 18.]

put option. An option to sell something (esp. securities) at a fixed price even if the market declines; the right to require another to buy. — Often shortened to put. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↷ 10; Corporations ↷ 116; Securities Regulation ↷ 5.25(3).] Cf. put bond under BOND (3).

seller's option. A special stock-exchange transaction that gives the seller the right to deliver the security within a specified period, usu. 5 to 60 days.

settlement option. Insurance. A life-insurance-policy clause providing choices in the method of paying benefits to a beneficiary, as by lump-sum payment or periodic installments. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 2443, 3402.]

stock option. See STOCK OPTION.

uncovered option. See naked option.

5. Hist. Eccles. law. The requirement that a newly elected bishop convey to the archbishop the right to fill the next vacant ecclesiastical benefice in the new bishop's see.

option, vb. (1888) To grant or take an option on (something) <Ward optioned his first screenplay to the studio for $50,000>.

option agreement. Corporations. A share-transfer restriction that commits the shareholder to sell, but not the corporation or other shareholders to buy, the shareholder's shares at a fixed price when a specified event occurs. Cf. BUY-SELL AGREEMENT (2); OPTION (2). [Cases: Corporations ↷ 116.]

optional bond. See BOND (3).

optional completeness, rule of. See RULE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS.

optional-completeness doctrine. See RULE OF OPTIONAL COMPLETENESS.

optional writ. See WRIT.

option contract. See OPTION (2).

optionee (op-shə-nee). One who receives an option from another. — Also termed option-holder.

optionor (op-shə-nər or op-shə-nor). One who grants an option to another. — Also spelled optioner. — Also termed option-giver.

option premium. See PREMIUM (4).

option spread. Securities. The difference between the option price and the market price of the underlying stock when the option is exercised. See SPREAD.

Options Price Reporting Authority. A national market-system plan approved by the SEC for collecting and disseminating last-sale and quotation information on options traded on a five-member exchange consisting of the American Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board of Options Exchange, the New York Stock Exchange, the Pacific Stock Exchange, and the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. — Abbr. OPRA.

option tender bond. See put bond under BOND (3).

option to purchase real property. See OPTION.

opt out, vb. (1922) To choose not to participate in (something) <with so many plaintiffs opting out of the class, the defendant braced itself for multiplicitous lawsuits>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 180; Parties ↷ 35.51.]

opt-out statute. Bankruptcy. A state law that limits the exemptions that a debtor who has filed for bankruptcy can claim to those provided by state and local bankruptcy laws, and nonbankruptcy federal law. • The federal bankruptcy code includes an "opt-out" provision that allows states to choose not to adopt the federal exemptions. 11 U.S.C. § 522(b). — Also termed opt-out legislation. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2764.]

opt (oh-pəs), n. [Latin "work"] (18c) A product of work or labor; esp., an artistic, literary, or musical work or composition. Pl. opuses, opera (ah-pə-rə or oh-pə-rə).

opus manufactum (oh-pəs man-yə-fak-təm). [Latin] Civil law. An artifact; an artificial work, as distinguished from what is natural. Pl. opera manufacta.

opus novum (oh-pəs noh-vəm). [Latin "new work"] Civil law. A structure newly built on land. Pl. opera nova. See NOVI OPERIS NUNTIATIO.

Orange Book. Patents. A list of patents on drugs or drug products for which generic-drug applications may be submitted to the Food and Drug Administration. • The expiration dates of the patents are also listed. An applicant may submit a generic-drug application at any time, but the applicant must either accept deferral of FDA approval until the patent expires or contest the validity of the patent. The Orange Book's official title is Approved Drug Products With Therapeutic Equivalence Evaluations. [Cases: Health ⇨319.]

orator (or-ə-tər), n. (15c) 1. Roman law. (ital.) An advocate or pleader. 2. Hist. A plaintiff or petitioner in an action in chancery.

oratrix (or-ə-triks). Hist. A female orator.

orbatation (or-bay-shən). Hist. Bereavement or deprivation of one's parents or children.

ordeal. (bef. 12c) Hist. A primitive form of trial in which an accused person was subjected to a usu. dangerous or painful physical test, the result being considered a divine revelation of the person's guilt or innocence.

• The participants believed that God would reveal a person's culpability by protecting an innocent person from some or all consequences of the ordeal. The ordeal was commonly used in Europe until the 13th century, but only sporadically after 1215, when the Fourth Lateran Council forbade the clergy from participating in ordeals. — Also termed trial by ordeal; judicium Dei ("judgment of God"); vulgaris purgatio. Cf. CANFARA.

"Ordeals involved an appeal to God to reveal the truth in human disputes, and they required priestly participation to achieve this rapport with the Deity. Several forms of ordeal were recognised by the early Christian Church, but in England they usually took the form of fire or water. In the former, a piece of iron was put into a fire and then in the party's hand; the hand was bound, and inspected a few days later: if the burn had festered, God was taken to have decided against the party. The ordeal of cold water required the party to be trussed and lowered into a pond; if he sank, the water was deemed to have 'received him' with God's blessing, and so he was quickly fished out. . . . In 1215, the Lateran Council . . . took the decisive step of forbidding clergy to participate any more in ordeals. This led in England to the introduction of the criminal trial jury." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 5-6 (3d ed. 1990).

bread-and-cheese ordeal. See ordeal of the morsel.

ordeal by fire. An ordeal in which the accused person was forced to hold a piece of hot metal or to walk barefoot across a hot surface, the judgment of guilt or innocence depending on how quickly and cleanly the person's hands or feet healed. • Typically the person's hand was bandaged and, upon the bandage's removal three days later, was examined for festers (indicating guilt). — Also termed fire ordeal; ordeal by hot iron; ordeal of fire.

"Such evidence as we have seems to show that the ordeal of hot iron was so arranged as to give the accused a considerable chance of escape." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 599 (2d ed. 1899).

ordeal by hot iron. See ordeal by fire.

ordeal by water. 1. An ordeal in which guilt or innocence depended on whether the accused person floated or sank after being submerged in cold water. • A priest would first consecrate the pool of water, adjuring it to receive the innocent but reject the guilty. An accused who sank was declared innocent; one who floated was adjudged guilty because floating revealed the water's (and therefore God's) rejection of the person. This type of ordeal was used esp. in witchcraft trials. — Also termed ordeal by cold water; cold-water ordeal; ordeal of cold water; (in ecclesiastical law) aquae frigidae judicium. 2. An ordeal in which guilt or innocence was determined by how quickly the accused person's arm healed after being placed in boiling water. • Often the person was forced to retrieve a stone from the bottom of a pot of boiling water. The person's hand and arm were then bandaged and, upon the bandage's removal three days later, were examined for festers (indicating guilt). — Also termed (in sense 2) ordeal by hot water; hot-water ordeal; ordeal of hot water; (in both senses) water ordeal; ordeal of water; (in ecclesiastical law) aquae ferventis iudicium; aenum.

"The ordeal of water was a very singular institution. Sinking was the sign of innocence, floating the sign of guilt. As any one would sink unless he understood how to float, and intentionally did so, it is difficult to see how any one could ever be convicted by this means. Is it possible that this ordeal may have been an honourable form of suicide, like the Japanese happy despatch? In nearly every case the accused would sink. This would prove his innocence, indeed, but there would be no need to take him out. He would thus die honourably. If by any accident he floated, he would be put to death disgracefully." 1 James Fitz-james Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 73 (1883).

ordeal of the morsel. An ordeal in which the person who was to make the proof was given a one-ounce piece of bread or cheese that a priest had solemnly charged to stick in the throat of the guilty. • A person who choked was declared guilty; a person who did not was declared innocent. — Also termed corsnaed; corsned; trial by corsnaed; judicial morsel; morsel of execration.

single ordeal. An ordeal prescribed for someone accused of a less serious crime and involving less risk or torture than a triple ordeal. • For example, a single ordeal by fire required the accused to pick up a red-hot piece of iron weighing one pound, while a triple ordeal involved a piece of iron weighing three pounds.

triple ordeal. An ordeal prescribed for someone accused of a more serious crime and involving more risk or torture than a single ordeal. • For example, a triple ordeal by water required the accused to submerge an arm into boiling water up to the elbow, while a single ordeal required the arm to be submerged only to the wrist. — Also termed threefold ordeal.

ordelf (or-delf). See OREDELF.

ordels (or-deelz). Hist. English law. The right to conduct trials by ordeal within a given jurisdiction.

order, n. (16c) 1. A command, direction, or instruction. See MANDATE (1). 2. A written direction or command delivered by a court or judge. • The word generally embraces final decrees as well as interlocutory directions or commands. — Also termed court order; judicial order. See MANDAMUS. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨928; Motions ⇨46.]

"An order is the mandate or determination of the court upon some subsidiary or collateral matter arising in an action, not disposing of the merits, but adjudicating a preliminary point or directing some step in the proceedings." 1 Henry Campbell Black, A Treatise on the Law of Judgments § 1, at 5 (2d ed. 1902).

"While an order may under some circumstances amount to a judgment, they must be distinguished, owing to the different consequences flowing from them, not only in the matter of enforcement and appeal but in other respects, as, for instance, the time within which proceedings to annul them must be taken. Rulings on motions are ordinarily orders rather than judgments. The class of judgments and of decrees formerly called interlocutory is included in the definition given in [modern codes] of the word 'order.'" 1 administrative order. 1. An order issued by a government agency after an adjudicatory hearing. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨489.] 2. An agency regulation that interprets or applies a statutory provision. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨381.]

affiliation order. See filiation order.

alternative order. An order commanding the person to whom it is directed either to do a specific thing or to show cause why the court should not order it to be done.

antiharassment order. A type of restraining order available to victims of harassment or stalking, usu. forbidding a person to contact, surveil, or approach the victim.

blanket order. See BLANKET ORDER (1).

common order. See conditional judgment under JUDGMENT.

decretal order (di-kree-təl). A court of chancery's interlocutory order that is issued on motion of a party and has the effect of a final decree. See decree nisi under DECREE. [Cases: Equity ⇨421–430.]

dismissal order. A court order ending a lawsuit without a decision on the merits. — Also termed order of dismissal.

docket order. A court order memorialized only as an entry on the docket sheet.

ex parte order (eks pahr-tee). (18c) An order made by the court upon the application of one party to an action without notice to the other.

filiation order. Family law. A court's determination of paternity, usu. including a direction to pay child support. • Governments usu. seek filiation orders so that some or all of the public funds spent on the child's welfare can be recovered from a nonmarital child's father. Until the early 20th century, municipalities, not the state, had the legal duty to support the poor, including unwed mothers and their children. In some states, two judges had to determine who an unacknowledged child's father was before the municipality could recover its expenditures. — Also termed affiliation order; order of filiation. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨63.]

final order. (16c) An order that is dispositive of the entire case. See final judgment under JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨928; Motions ⇨51.] foreign support order. See SUPPORT ORDER.

health-insurance order. See HEALTH-INSURANCE ORDER.

income-withholding order. See INCOME-WITHHOLDING ORDER.

interim order. 1. A temporary court decree that remains in effect for a specified time or until a specified event occurs. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷928; Motions ↷51.] 2. See interlocutory order.

interlocutory order (in-tər-lək-yə-tər-ee). (17c) An order that relates to some intermediate matter in the case; any order other than a final order. • Most interlocutory orders are not appealable until the case is fully resolved. But by rule or statute, most jurisdictions allow some types of interlocutory orders (such as preliminary injunctions and class-certification orders) to be immediately appealed. — Also termed interlocutory decision; interim order; intermediate order. See appealable decision under DECISION; COLLATERAL-ORDER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷67; Federal Civil Procedure ↷928; Federal Courts ↷572, 576; Motions ↷51.]

minute order. 1. An order recorded in the minutes of the court rather than directly on a case docket. • Although practice varies, traditionally when a trial judge is sitting officially, with or without a court reporter, a clerk or deputy clerk keeps minutes. When the judge makes an oral order, the only record of that order may be in the minutes. It is therefore referred to as a minute order. — Also termed minute entry. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷123; Courts ↷107.] 2. A court order not directly relating to a case, such as an order adopting a local rule of court. • In this sense, the court is not a single judge acting in an adjudicatory capacity, but a chief judge, or a group of two or more judges, acting for a court in an administrative or some other nonadjudicatory capacity. [Cases: Motions ↷56(1).]

order of dismissal. See dismissal order.

order to pay. 1. Commercial law. A written order to a person to deliver money, usu. out of funds on deposit with that person, to a third party on demand. 2. A court order directing a person to deliver money that the person owes or for which the person is responsible.

preclusion order. (1921) An order barring a litigant from presenting or opposing certain claims or defenses for failing to comply with a discovery order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1278; Pretrial Procedure ↷44.1.]

pretrial order. See PRETRIAL ORDER.

protective order. See PROTECTIVE ORDER.

qualified domestic-relations order. See QUALIFIED DOMESTIC-RELATIONS ORDER.

receiving order. A court's direction to a bankruptcy receiver to take some action.

restraining order. See RESTRAINING ORDER.

separation order. A court order granting a married person's request for a legal separation. See SEPARATION AGREEMENT (1). [Cases: Divorce ↷155.]

show-cause order. (1925) An order directing a party to appear in court and explain why the party took (or failed to take) some action or why the court should or should not grant some relief. — Also termed order to show cause; rule to show cause; show-cause rule. [Cases: Motions ↷24.]

standing order. A forward-looking order that applies to all cases pending before a court. • Some individual judges issue a standing order on a subject when there is no local rule bearing on it, often because a rule would not be acceptable to other judges on the court. Standing orders are frequently criticized because they undermine uniformity of procedural rules, esp. at the local level. Cf. standing rule under RULE (3).

supervision order. Family law. A court's order placing a child or young person under the supervision of a child-welfare agency or a probation officer in a case of neglect, abuse, or delinquency. [Cases: Infants ↷225, 226.]

support order. See SUPPORT ORDER.

temporary order. A court order issued during the pendency of a suit, before the final order or judgment has been entered.

temporary restraining order. See TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

turnover order. An order by which the court commands a judgment debtor to surrender certain property to a judgment creditor, or to the sheriff or constable on the creditor's behalf. • Such an order is usu. directed to property that is difficult to acquire by the ordinary judgment-collection process, such as share certificates and accounts receivable. [Cases: Execution ↷402.]

visitation order. See VISITATION ORDER.

3. Parliamentary law. The principles and practices of parliamentary law; the conduct of business according to those principles and practices; DECORUM. See IN ORDER; OUT OF ORDER. 4. Parliamentary law. An item of business, or an agenda or series of such items <call for the orders of the day>. See AGENDA.

general order. An order of the day other than a special order. See order of the day (1). Cf. special order.

order of business. 1. AGENDA. 2. The sequence in which a meeting considers its business.

"A settled order of business is, however, necessary for the government of the presiding person, and to restrain individual members from calling up favorite measures, or matters under their special patronage, out of their just turn. It is useful also for directing the discretion of the house, when they are moved to take up a particular matter, to the prejudice of others having priority of right to their attention in the general order of business." Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 30 (1801).

order of the day. 1. An item of business scheduled for consideration at a certain upcoming meeting, at a certain time, or in a certain order. • An order of the day is either a general order or a special order. 2. The daily order of business. See order of business.

special order. An order of the day scheduled for consideration at a certain time, and which outranks and interrupts any other business except another special order scheduled earlier for the same time. See TIME CERTAIN.

5. Parliamentary law. A vote that assigns a duty to an officer, employee, or other agent, customarily in the form, "Ordered, That . . ." 6. Parliamentary law. RULE (3). 7. Commercial law. The words in a draft (such as a check) directing one person to pay money to or deliver something to a designated person. • An order should appear to be the demand of a right as opposed to the request for a favor. See order paper under PAPER. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 4.] 8. Securities. A customer's instructions to a broker about how and when to buy or sell securities.

all-or-none order. An order to buy a security to be executed either in its entirety or not at all.

alternative order. An order to buy a security by either of two alternatives (e.g., buy a stock at a limited price or buy on a stop order). — Also termed either-or order.

buy order. An investor's instruction to purchase stock.

day order. An order to buy or sell on one particular day only. Cf. open order.

discretionary order. An order to buy or sell at any price acceptable to the broker.

either-or order. See alternative order.

fill-or-kill order. An order that must be executed as soon as it reaches the trading floor. • If the order is not filled immediately, it is canceled.

limit order. An order to buy or sell at a specified price, regardless of market price. Cf. no-limit order.

market order. An order to buy or sell at the best price immediately available on the market. — Also termed order at the market.

matched order. An order to buy and sell the same security, at about the same time, in about the same quantity, and at about the same price.

no-limit order. An order to buy or sell securities with no limits on price. Cf. limit order.

open order. An order that remains in effect until filled by the broker or canceled by the customer. Cf. day order.

order at the market. See market order.

percentage order. An order to buy or sell a stated amount of a certain stock after a fixed number of shares of the stock have traded.

scale order. An order to buy or sell a security at varying price ranges.

sell order. An investor's instruction to sell stock.

split order. An order directing a broker to sell some stock at one price and some stock at another price.

stop order. An order to buy or sell when the security's price reaches a specified level (the stop price) on the market. • By fixing the price beforehand, the investor is cushioned against stock fluctuations. — Also termed stop-loss order; stop-limit order. [Cases: Brokers ⇨ 24(1).]

time order. An order that becomes a market or limited-price order at a specified time.

order absolute. See decree absolute under DECREE.

order assigning residue. A probate court's order naming the persons entitled to receive parts of an estate and allotting that share to each.

order at the market. See market order under ORDER (8).

order bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

order document. See order paper under PAPER.

ordered, adjudged, and decreed. (17c) The traditional words used to introduce a court decision <It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed that Martin must return the overpayment to Hurley>.

"The usual style of a decree is 'it is ordered, adjudged, and decreed'; and of an order or rule, 'it is ordered,' etc." 1 Henry Campbell Black, A Treatise on the Law of Judgments § 2, at 6-7 (2d ed. 1902).

order instrument. See order paper under PAPER.

orderly officer. See officer of the day under OFFICER (2).

order nisi. See decree nisi under DECREE.

order of business. See ORDER (4).

order of dismissal. See dismissal order under ORDER.

order of filiation. See filiation order under ORDER (2).

Order of the Coif (koyf). 1. Formerly, the order of serjeants-at-law, the highest order of counsel at the English Bar. • The last serjeant was appointed to the Order in 1875. 2. An honorary legal organization whose members are selected on the basis of their law-school grades. See COIF.

order of the day. See ORDER (4).

order paper. See PAPER.

order to pay. See ORDER (2).

Order, Resolution, or Vote Clause. U.S. Const., art. I, § 7, cl. 3.

ordinance (or-də-nənts). (14c) An authoritative law or decree; esp., a municipal regulation. • Municipal governments can pass ordinances on matters that the state government allows to be regulated at the local level. A municipal ordinance carries the state's authority and has the same effect within the municipality's limits as a state statute. — Also termed bylaw; municipal ordinance. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨ 105.]

"An ordinance . . . may be purely administrative in nature, establishing offices, prescribing duties, or setting salaries; it may have to do with the routine or procedure of the governing body. Or it may be a governmental exercise of the power to control the conduct of the public — establishing rules which must be complied with, or prohibiting certain actions or conduct. In any event it is the determination of the sovereign power of the state as delegated to the municipality. It is a legislative enactment, within its sphere, as much as an act of the state legislature." 1 Judith O'Gallagher, Municipal Ordinances § 1A.01, at 3 (2d ed. 1998).

ordinandi lex (or-də-nan-dī leks). [Latin] The law of procedure, as distinguished from substantive law.

ordinarily prudent person. See REASONABLE PERSON.

ordinary, adj. (15c) 1. Occurring in the regular course of events; normal; usual. Cf. EXTRAORDINARY. 2. (Of a judge) having jurisdiction by right of office rather than by delegation. 3. (Of jurisdiction) original or immediate, as opposed to delegated.

ordinary, n. 1. Eccles. law. A high-ranking official who has immediate jurisdiction over a specified territory, such as an archbishop over a province or a bishop over a diocese. 2. Civil law. A judge having jurisdiction by right of office rather than by delegation. 3. A probate judge. • The term is used in this sense only in some U.S. states.

originalia (ə-rĭj-ə-nay-lee-ə or -nayl-yə). Hist. Records compiled in the Chancery and transmitted to the Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer. • These records were kept from 1236 to 1837. Cf. RECORDA.

original intent. See INTENT (2).

originalism. (1980) Constitutional law. The theory that the U.S. Constitution should be interpreted according to the intent of those who drafted and adopted it. Cf. INTERPRETIVISM; NONINTERPRETIVISM.

original issue. See ISSUE (2).

original-issue discount. The difference between a bond's face value and the price at which it is initially sold. — Abbr. OID.

originality. (18c) Copyright. 1. The quality or state of being the product of independent creation and having a minimum degree of creativity. • Originality is a requirement for copyright protection. But this is a lesser standard than that of novelty in patent law: to be original, a work does not have to be novel or unique. Cf. NOVELTY. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨12(1).] 2. The degree to which a product claimed for copyright is the result of an author's independent efforts. Cf. CREATIVITY. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨12(1).]

"Original" in reference to a copyrighted work means that the particular work 'owes its origin' to the 'author.' No large measure of novelty is necessary." Alfred Bell & Co. v. Catalda Fine Arts, Inc., 191 F.2d 99, 102 (2d Cir. 1951) (Frank, J.). outcome-determinative test. (1959) Civil procedure. A test used to determine whether an issue is substantive for purposes of the Erie doctrine by examining the issue's potential effect on the outcome of the litigation. See ERIE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷373.]

outcome responsibility. The view that those who cause harm are responsible for it even in the absence of fault. Cf. strict liability under LIABILITY.

"Outcome responsibility serves to foster a sense of identity because it does not stretch indefinitely into the future but enables each of us to claim for ourselves, or to share with a few others, outcomes of limited extent, whether successes or failures. Yet outcome responsibility for harm to another does not by itself create a duty to compensate. The form that our responsibility for an outcome should take remains an open question. An apology or telephone call will often be enough. But outcome responsibility is a basis on which the law can erect a duty to compensate if there is reason to do so. There will be some reason to do so if the conduct in question is socially undesirable and if there is also reason to treat the harm suffered as the infringement of a right." Tony Honoré, Responsibility and Fault 77-78 (1999).

outer bar. English law. A group of junior barristers who sit outside the dividing bar in the court. • These barristers rank below the King's Counsel or Queen's Counsel. — Also termed utter bar. Cf. INNER BAR.

outer barrister. See BARRISTER.

Outer House. Scots law. The first-instance jurisdiction of the Court of Session. See COURT OF SESSION (1).

outer space. (1842) 1. The known and unknown areas of the universe beyond airspace. • The boundary between airspace and outer space is not fixed or precise. Cf. AIRSPACE. 2. Int'l law. The space surrounding the planet that by United Nations treaty is not subject to claim of appropriation by any national sovereignty. • The treaty does not expressly define outer space. See OUTER SPACE TREATY.

Outer Space Treaty. Int'l law. The short title of the United Nations Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, Including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, 18 U.S.T. pt. 3, at 2410 (Jan. 27, 1967). • This treaty stipulates that, because space exploration is in the interest of all humanity, no nation may claim territory, establish military bases, or station weapons on any other planet or a moon. The treaty also declares that international law and the United Nations charter apply in space. See OUTER SPACE.

outfangthief (owt-fang-theef). [fr. Old English ut “out” + fangan “taken” + theof “thief”] Hist. The right of a lord of a manor to pursue a thief outside the manor's jurisdiction and to bring the thief back for trial and punishment; a lord's right to punish all thefts committed within his territories, wherever the thief might be caught. — Also spelled outfangthef; utfangthief; utfangthef; outfangthef. Cf. INFANGTHIEF.

outlaw, n. (bef. 12c) 1. A person who has been deprived of the benefit and protection of the law; a person under a sentence of outlawry. 2. A lawless person or habitual criminal; esp., a fugitive from the law. 3. Int'l law. A person, organization, or nation under a ban or restriction because it is considered to be in violation of international law or custom.

outlaw, vb. (18c) 1. To deprive (someone) of the benefit and protection of the law; to declare an outlaw <outlaw the fugitive>. 2. To make illegal <outlaw fireworks within city limits>. 3. To remove from legal jurisdiction or enforcement; to deprive of legal force <outlaw a claim under the statute>.

out-of-home placement. Family law. The placing of a child in a living arrangement outside the child's home (as in foster care or institutional care), usu. as the result of abuse or neglect; specif., in a child-abuse or child-neglect case, state action that removes a child from a parent's or custodian's home and places the child in foster care or with a relative, either temporarily or for an extended period. Cf. FOSTER-CARE PLACEMENT. [Cases: Infants ⇄ 226.]

out of order. (18c) 1. (Of a motion) not in order <the motion is out of order because it conflicts with the bylaws>. See IN ORDER. • A motion may be “out of order” because it is inherently inappropriate for the deliberative assembly's consideration at any time (e.g., because it proposes an unlawful action). A motion that is not appropriate simply because it is brought before the meeting at the wrong time but that may be appropriate for consideration at another time is more precisely referred to as “not in order.”

2. (Of a person) guilty of a breach of decorum or other misconduct during a meeting <the member is out of order>.

over, adj. (bef. 12c) (Of a property interest) intended to take effect after the failure or termination of a prior estate; preceded by some other possessory interest  .

overage, n. (1909) 1. An excess or surplus, esp. of goods or merchandise. 2. A percentage of retail sales paid to a store's landlord in addition to fixed rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨200.3.]

overbreadth doctrine. (1970) Constitutional law. The doctrine holding that if a statute is so broadly written that it deters free expression, then it can be struck down on its face because of its chilling effect — even if it also prohibits acts that may legitimately be forbidden. • The Supreme Court has used this doctrine to invalidate a number of laws, including those that would disallow peaceful picketing or require loyalty oaths. Cf. VAGUENESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨1519.]

overdraft. (1843) 1. A withdrawal of money from a bank in excess of the balance on deposit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨150.] 2. The amount of money so withdrawn. — Abbr. (in senses 1 & 2) OD; o/d. 3. A line of credit extended by a bank to a customer (esp. an established or institutional customer) who might overdraw on an account.

overdraw, vb. (18c) To draw on (an account) in excess of the balance on deposit; to make an overdraft.

overhead, n. (1907) Business expenses (such as rent, utilities, or support-staff salaries) that cannot be allocated to a particular product or service; fixed or ordinary operating costs. — Also termed administrative expense; office expense. [Cases: Damages ⇨42, 45.]

overreaching, n. (16c) 1. The act or an instance of taking unfair commercial advantage of another, esp. by fraudulent means. [Cases: Contracts ⇨1; Sales ⇨1(1).] 2. The act or an instance of defeating one's own purpose by going too far. — overreach, vb.

overridden veto. See VETO.

override (oh-vər-rid), vb. (14c) To prevail over; to nullify or set aside <Congress mustered enough votes to override the President's veto>.

override (oh-vər-rid), n. (1931) 1. A commission paid to a manager on a sale made by a subordinate. 2. A commission paid to a real-estate broker who listed a property when, within a reasonable amount of time after the expiration of the listing, the owner sells that property directly to a buyer with whom the broker had negotiated during the term of the listing. [Cases: Brokers ⇨56(3).] 3. ROYALTY (2).

overrule, vb. (16c) 1. To rule against; to reject <the judge overruled all of the defendant's objections>. 2. (Of a court) to overturn or set aside (a precedent) by expressly deciding that it should no longer be controlling law <in Brown v. Board of Education, the Supreme Court overruled Plessy v. Ferguson>. Cf. VACATE (1). [Cases: Courts ⇨100(1).]

"If a decision is not a recent one, and especially if it seems to be very poor, it should not be relied upon without ascertaining whether it may not have been expressly or impliedly overruled by some subsequent one; that is, whether the court may not have laid down a contrary principle in a later case." Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 94 (1922).

"Overruling is an act of superior jurisdiction. A precedent overruled is definitely and formally deprived of all authority. It becomes null and void, like a repealed statute, and a new principle is authoritatively substituted for the old." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 189 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

overseas bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

Overseas Private Investment Corporation. A federally chartered corporation that promotes private investment in developing countries by making or guaranteeing loans; supporting private funds that invest in foreign nations; insuring investments against political risks; and engaging in outreach activities. • It was established as an independent agency by the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998. The agency is self-sustaining. — Abbr. OPIC. [Cases: United States ↷53(6.1).]

oversman. See UMPIRE.

oversubscription. A situation in which there are more subscribers to a new issue of securities than there are securities available for purchase. [Cases: Corporations ↷86.]

overt, adj. (14c) Open and observable; not concealed or secret <the conspirators' overt acts>.

overt act. (17c) Criminal law. 1. An act that indicates an intent to kill or seriously harm another person and thus gives that person a justification to use self-defense. [Cases: Assault and Battery ↷5, 51; Homicide ↷767.] 2. An outward act, however innocent in itself, done in furtherance of a conspiracy, treason, or criminal attempt. • An overt act is usu. a required element of these crimes. [Cases: Conspiracy ↷27; Criminal Law ↷44.] 3. See ACTUS REUS. — Also termed positive act.

over-the-counter, adj. 1. Not listed or traded on an organized securities exchange; traded between brokers and dealers who negotiate directly <over-the-counter stocks>. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↷35.13.] 2. (Of drugs) sold legally without a doctor's prescription <over-the-counter cough medicine>. — Abbr. OTC. [Cases: Health ↷303, 305.]

over-the-counter market. The market for securities that are not traded on an organized exchange. • Over-the-counter (OTC) trading usu. occurs through telephone or computer negotiations between buyers and sellers. Many of the more actively traded OTC stocks are listed on NASDAQ. — Abbr. OTC market. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↷35.13.]

overtime. 1. The hours worked by an employee in excess of a standard day or week. • Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, employers must pay extra wages (usu. 1½ times the regular hourly rate) to certain employees (usu. nonsalaried ones) for each hour worked in excess of 40 hours per week. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷2305.] 2. The extra wages paid for excess hours worked.

overtry, vb. (1911) (Of a trial lawyer) to try a lawsuit by expending excessive time, effort, and other resources to explore minutiae, esp. to present more evidence than the fact-trier can assimilate, the result often being that the adversary gains arguing points by disputing the minutiae.

overturn, vb. (1842) To overrule or reverse <the court overturned a long-established precedent>. [Cases: Courts ↷100(1).]

owelty (oh-əl-tee). (16c) 1. Equality as achieved by a compensatory sum of money given after an exchange of parcels of land having different values or after an unequal partition of real property. [Cases: Partition ↷84.] 2. The sum of money so paid.

OWI. abbr. Operating while intoxicated. See DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE. [Cases: Automobiles ↷332.]

owing, adj. (15c) That is yet to be paid; owed; due .

owling. Hist. The smuggling of wool or sheep out of England. • The term usu. refers to nighttime smuggling.

own, vb. (bef. 12c) To rightfully have or possess as property; to have legal title to.

owner. (bef. 12c) One who has the right to possess, use, and convey something; a person in whom one or more interests are vested. • An owner may have complete property in the thing or may have parted with some interests in it (as by granting an easement or making a lease). See OWNERSHIP.

adjoining owner. (18c) A person who owns land abutting another's; ABUTTER. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners ↷1.]

beneficial owner. (18c) 1. One recognized in equity as the owner of something because use and title belong to that person, even though legal title may belong to someone else; esp., one for whom property is held in trust. — Also termed equitable owner. [Cases: Trusts ↷139.] 2. A corporate shareholder who has the power to buy or sell the shares, but who is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner. [Cases: Corporations ↷135.] 3. Intellectual property. A person or entity who is entitled to enjoy the rights in a patent, trademark, or copyright even though legal title is vested in someone else. • The beneficial owner has standing to sue for infringement. A corporation is typically a beneficial owner if it has a contractual right to the assignment of the patent but the employee who owns the patent has failed to assign it. Similarly, a patent or copyright owner who has transferred title as collateral to secure a loan would be a beneficial owner entitled to sue for infringement.

copyright owner. See COPYRIGHT OWNER.

equitable owner. See beneficial owner (1).

general owner. (18c) One who has the primary or residuary title to property; one who has the ultimate ownership of property. Cf. special owner.

legal owner. (17c) One recognized by law as the owner of something; esp., one who holds legal title to property for the benefit of another. See TRUSTEE (1). [Cases: Trusts ↷133.]

limited owner. (1836) A tenant for life; the owner of a life estate. See life estate under ESTATE (1). [Cases: Life Estates ↷1.]

naked owner. Civil law. A person whose property is burdened by a usufruct. • The naked owner has the right to dispose of the property subject to the usufruct, but not to derive its fruits. See USUFRUCT. [Cases: Estates in Property ↷1.]

owner of record. See record owner.

owner pro hac vice (proh hahk vee-chay). See bareboat charter under CHARTER (8).

record owner. (1863) 1. A property owner in whose name the title appears in the public records. 2. STOCKHOLDER OF RECORD.

sole and unconditional owner. (1871) Insurance. The owner who has full equitable title to, and exclusive interest in, the insured property. [Cases: Insurance ↻2992(2).]

special owner. (18c) One (such as a bailee) with a qualified interest in property. Cf. general owner.

owners' association. (1968) 1. The basic governing entity for a condominium or planned unit developments. • It is usu. an unincorporated association or a nonprofit corporation. [Cases: Associations ↻1; Condominium ↻8.] — Also termed homeowners' association. 2. See homeowners' association under ASSOCIATION.

owners' equity. (1935) The aggregate of the owners' financial interests in the assets of a business entity; the capital contributed by the owners plus any retained earnings. • Owners' equity is calculated as the difference in value between a business entity's assets and its liabilities. — Also termed owner's equity; book value; net book value; (in a corporation) shareholders' equity; stockholders' equity. [Cases: Taxation ↻2545.]

"Owner's equity is the residual claim of the owners of the business on its assets after recognition of the liabilities of the business. Owner's equity represents the amounts contributed by the owners to the business, plus the accumulated income of the business since its formation, less any amounts that have been distributed to the owners." Charles H. Meyer, Accounting and Finance for Lawyers in a Nutshell 4 (1995).

ownership. (16c) The bundle of rights allowing one to use, manage, and enjoy property, including the right to convey it to others. • Ownership implies the right to possess a thing, regardless of any actual or constructive control. Ownership rights are general, permanent, and heritable. Cf. POSSESSION; TITLE (1). [Cases: Property ↻7, 11.]

"Ownership does not always mean absolute dominion. The more an owner, for his advantage, opens up his property for use by the public in general, the more do his rights become circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional powers of those who use it." Marsh v. Alabama, 326 U.S. 501, 506, 66 S.Ct. 276, 278 (1946) (Black, J.).

"Possession is the de facto exercise of a claim; ownership is the de jure recognition of one. A thing is owned by me when my claim to it is maintained by the will of the state as expressed in the law; it is possessed by me, when my claim to it is maintained by my own self-assertive will. Ownership is the guarantee of the law; possession is the guarantee of the facts. It is well to have both forms if possible; and indeed they normally co-exist." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 311 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

bare ownership. See trust ownership.

beneficial ownership. (18c) 1. A beneficiary's interest in trust property. — Also termed equitable ownership. [Cases: Trusts ↻139.] 2. A corporate shareholder's power to buy or sell the shares, though the shareholder is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner.

bonitary ownership (bahn-ə-tair-ee). Roman law. A type of equitable ownership recognized by the praetor when the property was conveyed by an informal transfer, or by a formal transfer by one not the true owner. — Also termed bonitarian ownership; in bonis habere.

complete ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

contingent ownership. (1886) Ownership in which title is imperfect but is capable of becoming perfect on the fulfillment of some condition; conditional ownership.

corporeal ownership. (1894) The actual ownership of land or chattels.

equitable ownership. See beneficial ownership (1).

full ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

imperfect ownership. Louisiana law. Ownership of property subject to a usufruct interest held by another. See La. Civ. Code art. 478. — Also termed naked ownership.

incorporeal ownership. (1931) The ownership of rights in land or chattels.

joint ownership. (18c) Undivided ownership shared by two or more persons. • Typically, an owner's interest, at death, passes to the surviving owner or owners by virtue of the right of survivorship. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↻1.] naked ownership. Louisiana law. See imperfect ownership.

ownership in common. (1838) Ownership shared by two or more persons whose interests are divisible. • Typically their interests, at death, pass to the dead owner's heirs or successors. [Cases: Tenancy in Common ↻1.]

perfect ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. The complete bundle of rights to use, enjoy, and dispose of property without limitation. — Also termed full ownership; complete ownership. [Cases: Property ↻7, 11.]

qualified ownership. (18c) Ownership that is shared, restricted to a particular use, or limited in the extent of its enjoyment.

trust ownership. (1893) A trustee's interest in trust property. — Also termed bare ownership. [Cases: Trusts ↻133.] unqualified ownership. Absolute ownership. [Cases: Property ↻7.]

vested ownership. (1867) Ownership in which title is perfect; absolute ownership.

ownership-in-place theory. Oil & gas. A characterization of oil-and-gas rights used in a majority of jurisdictions, holding that the owner has the right to present possession of the oil and gas in place as well as the right to use the land surface to search, develop, and produce from the property, but that the interest in the minerals terminates if the oil and gas flows out from under the owner's land. • This theory is used in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Mississippi, and other major producing states. The rights of a severed-mineral-interest owner to oil and gas in these states are often described as an estate in fee simple absolute, but ownership of specific oil-and-gas molecules is subject to the rule of capture. See also NONOWNERSHIP THEORY. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷47, 55, 62.1, 73.1(6).]

owner's policy. Real estate. A title-insurance policy covering the owner's title as well as the mortgagee's interest. Cf. MORTGAGEE POLICY. [Cases: Insurance ↷2610; Mortgages ↷201.]

own-product exclusion. See EXCLUSION (3).

own-work exclusion. See EXCLUSION (3).

oxfild (oks-fild). Hist. A restitution made by a county or hundred for a wrong done by someone within that region.

oxgang (oks-gang). Hist. An amount of land equal to what an ox plows in one year, usu. 12 to 15 acres. • An oxgang, equaling one-eighth of a carucate, was used to assess land for tax purposes. — Also termed oxgate; bovata terrae. Cf. CARUCATE.

oyer (oy-ər or oh-yər). [fr. Old French oïr "to hear"] (15c) Hist. 1. A criminal trial held under a commission of oyer and terminer. See COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER. 2. The reading in open court of a document (esp. a deed) that is demanded by one party and read by the other. 3. Common-law pleading. A prayer to the court by a party opposing a profert, asking to have the instrument on which the opponent relies read aloud. • Oyer can be demanded only when a profert has been properly made, but it is disallowed for a private writing under seal. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↷488; Pleading ↷306.]

"A party having a right to demand oyer is yet not obliged, in all cases, to exercise that right; nor is he obliged, in all cases, after demanding it, to notice it in the pleading he afterwards files or delivers. Sometimes, however, he is obliged to do both, namely, where he has occasion to found his answer upon any matter contained in the deed of which profert is made, and not set forth by his adversary. In these cases the only admissible method of making such matter appear to the court is to demand oyer, and, from the copy given, set forth the whole deed verbatim in his pleading." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 289, at 483 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

oyer, demand of. See DEMAND OF OYER.

oyer and terminer (oy-ər an[d] tər-mə-nər). [Law French oyer et terminer "to hear and determine"] (15c) 1. See COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER. 2. COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER (2).

oyez (oh-yes or oh-yez or oh-yay). [Law French] (15c) Hear ye. • The utterance oyez, oyez, oyez is usu. used in court by the public crier to call the courtroom to order when a session begins or when a proclamation is about to be made.

P

P. abbr. PACIFIC REPORTER.

P.A. abbr. See professional association under ASSOCIATION.

paage (pay-ij). See PEDAGE.

PAC (pak). abbr. POLITICAL-ACTION COMMITTEE.

pacare (pə-kair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To pay.

PACER. abbr. PUBLIC ACCESS TO COURT ELECTRONIC RECORDS.

pacification (pas-ə-fi-kay-shən), n. (15c) Int'l law. The act of making peace between two belligerent nations. — pacify (pas-ə-fi), vb.

pacific blockade. See BLOCKADE.

pacifist. See PACIFIST.

Pacific Reporter. A set of regional lawbooks, part of the West Group's National Reporter System, containing every officially published appellate decision from Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming, from 1883 to date. • The first series ran from 1883 to 1931; the second series ran until 2000; the third series is the current one. — Abbr. P.; P.2d; P.3d.

pacifism (pas-ə-fiz-əm). (1902) Int'l law. The advocacy of peaceful methods rather than war as a means of solving disputes.

pacifist (pas-ə-fist), n. (1906) A person who is opposed to war; a person who believes in pacifism. — Also termed pacifist. Cf. CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR.

pack, vb. (16c) To choose or arrange (a tribunal, jurors, etc.) to accomplish a desired result <pack a jury>.

package mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

package policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

packing, n. A gerrymandering technique in which a dominant political or racial group minimizes minority representation by concentrating the minority into as few districts as possible. Cf. CRACKING; STACKING (2). [Cases: Elections ↻12(6).]

packing a jury. See JURY-PACKING.

Pac-Man defense (pak-man). An aggressive antitakeover defense by which the target company attempts to take over the bidder company by making a cash tender offer for the bidder company's shares. • The name derives from a video game popular in the 1980s, the object of which was to gobble up the enemy. This defense is seldom used today. Cf. CROWN-JEWEL DEFENSE; SCORCHED-EARTH DEFENSE.

pact. (15c) An agreement between two or more parties; esp., an agreement (such as a treaty) between two or more nations or governmental entities.

"Popular understanding notwithstanding, there is no legal difference between various kinds of international instruments because of the name they are given. In other words, 'treaties,' 'pacts,' 'protocols,' 'conventions,' 'covenants,' and 'declarations' are all terms to convey international agreements. Some of these terms may connote more or less solemnity or formality, but it does not matter for purposes of characterizing an accord as an international agreement, binding under international law." David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 25 (2001).

pacta sunt servanda (pak-tə sənt sər-van-də). [Latin "agreements must be kept"] The rule that agreements and stipulations, esp. those contained in treaties, must be observed <the Quebec courts have been faithful to the pacta sunt servanda principle>. [Cases: Contracts ↻1.]

pact de non alienando (pakt dee non ay-lee-ə-nan-doh). [Latin] Civil law. An agreement not to alienate encumbered (esp. mortgaged) property. • This stipulation will not void a sale to a third party, but it does allow the mortgagee to proceed directly against the mortgaged property without notice to the purchaser.

pactio (pak-shee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. 1. The negotiating process that results in a pactum. 2. The pactum arrived at; an agreement. Pl. pactiones.

paction (pak-shən). 1. PACTIO. 2. Int'l law. An agreement between two nations to be performed by a single act.

pactional, adj. Relating to or generating an agreement. — pactionally, adv.

Pact of Paris. See KELLOGG-BRIAND PACT.

pactum (pak-təm), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. An agreement or convention, usu. falling short of a contract; a pact. — Also termed pactum conventum. Pl. pacta.

pactum constitutae pecuniae (pak-təm kon-stə-t[y]oo-tee pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Latin "agreement for a fixed sum of money"] See pactum de consituto.

pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis (pak-təm kor-vi-nəm dee hə-red-i-tay-tee vi-ven-tis). [Latin "a raven-like contract on the inheritance of the living"] An agreement concerning the succession of one still living. — Also termed pactum de successione viventis; pactum super hereditate viventis.

"It is supposed that the Romans called this a corvine agreement (pactum corvinum) on account of the eager rapacity of ravens, which prompts them to attack and commence to devour animals weakened and dying before death has actually taken place." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 429 (4th ed. 1894).

pactum de constituto (pak-təm dee kon-sti-t[y]oo-toh). [Latin "an agreement"] An informal agreement to pay an existing debt, one's own or another's, at a fixed time. • The agreement was enforceable by a praetor. Justinian extended the pactum de constituto from money to debts of any kind. The pactum could also be used to give security; it differs from fidejussio mainly in its informality. — Also termed pactum constitutae pecuniae. See CONSTITUTUM. Cf. FIDEJUSSIO.

pactum de non petendo (pak-təm dee non pə-ten-doh). [Latin “agreement not to sue”] An agreement in which a creditor promises not to enforce the debt.

pactum de quota litis (pak-təm dee kwoh-tə lī-tis). [Latin “agreement about a portion of the amount in issue”] An agreement in which a creditor promises to pay a portion of a difficult-to-collect debt to a person attempting to collect it; an agreement to share the proceeds of a litigation.

pactum de retrovendendo (pak-təm dee re-troh-ven-den-doh). [Latin] An agreement concerning the selling back of an object. • This agreement gave the seller the right to repurchase the item sold within a certain period and at a fixed price.

pactum de successione viventis (pak-təm dee sək-ses[h]-ee-oh-nee vi-ven-tis). [Latin] See pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis.

pactum displicentiae (pak-təm dis-plicen-shee-i). Roman law. A sale on approval. • The buyer had the property on trial and could reject it.

pactum donationis (pak-təm doh-nay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] An agreement to make a gift. • Justinian made such agreements enforceable. If informal, the agreement would be valid up to a fixed sum (500 solidi).

pactum illicitum (pak-təm i-lis-ə-təm). [Latin] An illegal agreement.

pactum legis commissoriae (pak-təm lee-jis kom-i-sor-ee-ee). [Latin] An agreement under which the seller received the benefit of the lex commissoria. See LEX COMMISSORIA.

pactum legis commissoriae in pignoribus (pak-təm lee-jis kom-i-sor-ee-ee in pig-nor-ə-bəs). [Law Latin] An agreement giving the pledgee the benefit of a forfeiture clause. See LEX COMMISSORIA.

pactum liberatorium (pak-təm lib-ər-ə-tor-ee-əm). [Law Latin “a liberating agreement”] An agreement liberating parties from honoring a real right. • This type of agreement appears to have been long defunct.

pactum super hereditate viventis (pak-təm s[y]oo-pər hə-red-i-tay-tee vi-ven-tis). [Law Latin] See pactum corvinum de hereditate viventis.

pad, vb. (1831) Slang. (Of a lawyer, paralegal, etc.) to overstate the number of (billable hours worked). See BILLABLE HOUR. — padding, n.

pains and penalties, bill of. See BILL OF PAINS AND PENALTIES.

pair. Parliamentary law. Two voters, usu. legislators, on opposite sides of an issue who agree that they will abstain if either cannot vote on the issue. • A pair is usu. announced and recorded.

“In a legislative body it is a rule that no member can vote who is not present when the question is put, but ‘pairing,’ which is a type of absentee voting by which a member agrees with a member who would have voted opposite to the first member not to vote, has long been used in Congress and some of the states and has been recognized by the courts. Each house of the legislature, under the authority to make rules for its own governance, has power to recognize what are called ‘pairs.’” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 538, at 385 (2000).

pais (pay or pays). See IN PAIS.

Palace Court. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over all personal actions arising within 12 miles of Whitehall. • This court was created by James I in response to complaints about the inconvenience of using the itinerant Court of the Marshalsea; its jurisdiction was similar to that of the Marshalsea, but the court remained in Whitehall. It was abolished along with the Court of the Marshalsea in 1849. — Formerly also termed curia palatii. See COURT OF THE MARSHALSEA.

“The court of the marshalsea, and the palace court at Westminster, though two distinct courts, are frequently confounded together. The former was originally holden before the steward and marshal of the king's house, and was instituted to administer justice between the king's domestic servants, that they might not be drawn into other courts, and thereby the king lose their service. . . .

But this court being ambulatory, and obliged to follow the king in all his progresses, so that by the removal of the household, actions were frequently discontinued, and doubts having arisen as to the extent of its jurisdiction . . . [the king] erected a new court of record, called the curia palatii, or palace-court, to be held before the steward of the household and knight marshal, and the steward of the court, or his deputy; with jurisdiction to hold plea of all manner of personal actions whatsoever, which shall arise between any parties within twelve miles of his majesty's palace at Whitehall." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 76 (1768).

palimony (pal-ə-moh-nee). [Portmanteau word from pal + alimony] (1977) 1. A court's award of post-relationship support or compensation for services, money, and goods contributed during a long-term nonmarital relationship, esp. where a common-law marriage cannot be established. • Though not recognized under most state statutes, caselaw in some jurisdictions authorizes palimony claims. The term originated in the press coverage of Marvin v. Marvin, 557 P.2d 106 (Cal. 1976). Cf. ALIMONY. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 54.] 2. Loosely, child support. • This sense is esp. common in the United Kingdom.

pallio cooperire (pal-ee-oh koh-öp-ə-rī-ree). [Latin "to cover with a pallium"] Hist. A marriage of persons who have already had a child together. • The pallium was a veil or cover over the bride, which was extended to cover the bastard child. Its removal at the wedding was deemed to legitimate the child.

Palmer's Act. An English statute, enacted in 1856, giving a person accused of a crime falling outside the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court the right to have the case tried in that court. St. 19 & 20 Vict., ch. 16. — Also termed Central Criminal Court Act. See CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

palming off. See PASSING OFF.

Palsgraf rule (pawlz-graf). (1932) Torts. The principle that negligent conduct resulting in injury will lead to liability only if the actor could have reasonably foreseen that the conduct would cause the injury. • In Palsgraf v. Long Island R.R., 162 N.E. 99 (N.Y. 1928), two railroad attendants negligently dislodged a package of fireworks from a man they were helping board a train. The package exploded on impact and knocked over some scales that fell on Mrs. Palsgraf. The New York Court of Appeals, in a 4–3 majority opinion written by Chief Justice Benjamin Cardozo, held that the attendants could not have foreseen the possibility of injury to Palsgraf and therefore did not breach any duty to her. In the dissenting opinion, Justice William S. Andrews asserted that the duty to exercise care is owed to all, and thus a negligent act will subject the actor to liability to all persons proximately harmed by it, whether or not the harm is foreseeable. Both opinions have been widely cited to support the two views expressed in them. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 213.]

Pan-American Convention. Copyright. One of a series of copyright conventions held among Western Hemisphere countries to negotiate treaties patterned after the Berne Convention. • The first Convention was held in 1902, the last in 1946. The largest was the 1910 Pan American Convention in Buenos Aires.

pan-dect (pan-dekt). 1. A complete legal code, esp. of a nation or a system of law, together with commentary. 2. (cap. & pl.) The 50 books constituting Justinian's Digest (one of the four works making up the Corpus Juris Civilis), first published in A.D. 533. • The substance of 2,000 treatises was distilled into this abridgment. One estimate is that 3 million lines were reduced to 150,000. This prodigious amount of work was carried out in three short years (A.D. 530–533) by a commission of 17 jurists headed by Tribonian. — Also termed (in sense 2) Digest. — Also spelled (in reference to German law) pandekt. Pl. pan-dects, pan-dectae. See CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS.

pander, n. (15c) One who engages in pandering. — Also termed panderer. See PIMP.

pandering (pan-dər-ing), n. (17c) 1. The act or offense of recruiting a prostitute, finding a place of business for a prostitute, or soliciting customers for a prostitute. — Also termed promoting prostitution. [Cases: Prostitution ⇨ 17.] 2. The act or offense of selling or distributing textual or visual material (such as magazines or videotapes) openly advertised to appeal to the recipient's sexual interest. • Although the concept of pandering was invoked by the U.S. Supreme Court in Ginzburg v. United States, 383 U.S. 463, 86 S.Ct. 942 (1966), it has seldom been discussed by the Court since then. — pander, vb.

Panduit test. Patents. A four-factor test for measuring profits lost because of patent infringement. • The patentee must prove (1) that there was a demand for the product; (2) that the patentee had the manufacturing and marketing capacity to meet that demand; (3) that there were no acceptable noninfringing alternatives on the market; and (4) how much was lost in profits. Panduit Corp. v. Stahl Bros. Fibre Works, Inc., 575 F.2d 1152 (6th Cir. 1978). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 318.]

panel. (14c) 1. A list of persons summoned as potential jurors; VENIRE. 2. A group of persons selected to serve on a jury; JURY. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 66, 78.] 3. A set of judges selected from a complete court to decide a specific case; esp., a group of three judges designated to sit for an appellate court. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 70.] 4. Scots law. A person indicted in a crime; the accused. — Also spelled (in sense 4) pannel.

panelation (pan-al-ay-shan). (2003) The act of empaneling a jury. — Also spelled panellation.

panel attorney. See ATTORNEY.

panel-shopping. (1974) The practice of choosing the most favorable group of judges to hear an appeal.

panhandling. The act or practice of approaching or stopping strangers and begging for money or food. [Cases: Vagrancy ⇨ 1.] — panhandler, n. — pan-handle, vb.

pannage (pan-ij). Hist. 1. The right to feed animals, esp. swine, on the windfallen nuts, etc. in a forest. 2. The payment made to a forest's owner in exchange for the right.

papal law (pay-pəl). See CANON LAW.

paper. (14c) 1. Any written or printed document or instrument. 2. A negotiable document or instrument evidencing a debt; esp., commercial documents or negotiable instruments considered as a group. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. 3. (pl.) COURT PAPERS.

accommodation paper. See ACCOMMODATION PAPER.

bankable paper. Notes, checks, bank bills, drafts, and other instruments received as cash by banks.

bearer paper. An instrument payable to the person who holds it rather than to the order of a specific person.

• Bearer paper is negotiated simply by delivering the instrument to a transferee. — Also termed bearer document; bearer instrument. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨210.]

chattel paper (chat-əl). See CHATTEL PAPER.

commercial paper. 1. An instrument, other than cash, for the payment of money. • Commercial paper — typically existing in the form of a draft (such as a check) or a note (such as a certificate of deposit) — is governed by Article 3 of the UCC. But even though the UCC uses the term commercial paper when referring to negotiable instruments of a particular kind (drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, and notes as defined by Article 3), the term long predates the UCC as a business and legal term in common use. Before the UCC, it was generally viewed as synonymous with negotiable paper or bills and notes. It was sometimes applied even to nonnegotiable instruments. — Also termed mercantile paper; company's paper. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨1.]

"Commercial paper' is rather a popular than a technical expression, often used, however, both in statutes and in decisions of courts, to designate those simple forms of contract long recognized in the world's commerce and governed by the law merchant." 1 Joseph F. Randolph, A Treatise on the Law of Commercial Paper § 1, at 1 (2d ed. 1899).

"Defined most broadly, commercial paper refers to any writing embodying rights that are customarily conveyed by transferring the writing. A large subset of commercial paper consists of such writings that are negotiable, which means that the law enables a transferee to acquire the embodied rights free of claims and defenses against the transferor." Richard E. Speidel, Negotiable Instruments and Check Collection in a Nutshell 1 (4th ed. 1993).

2. Such instruments collectively. — Also termed bills and notes. 3. Loosely, a short-term unsecured promissory note, usu. issued and sold by one company to meet another company's immediate cash needs.

commodity paper. An instrument representing a loan secured by a bill of lading or warehouse receipt.

order paper. An instrument payable to a specific payee or to any person that the payee designates. — Also termed order document; order instrument. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨208.]

paper loss. See LOSS.

paper market. See derivative market under MARKET.

paper money. See MONEY.

paper patent. See PATENT (3).

paper profit. See PROFIT (1).

papers. See COURT PAPERS.

paper standard. A monetary system based entirely on paper; a system of currency that is not convertible into gold or other precious metal. Cf. GOLD STANDARD.

paper street. See STREET.

paper title. See record title under TITLE (2).

Papian law. See LEX PAPIA POPPEA.

par. See PAR VALUE.

parade-of-horrors objection. See WEDGE PRINCIPLE.

parage (par-ij), n. [Law French] (13c) Hist. Equality of condition, blood, or dignity; esp., the equal tenure in land existing among the nobility who inherit from a common ancestor. — Also termed paragium. Cf. DISPARAGARE (2).

paragium (pə-ray-jee-əm). [Law Latin] PARAGE.

parajudge. See UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

paralegal, n. (1967) 1. A person who has some education in law and assists a lawyer in duties related to the practice of law but who is not a licensed attorney. — Also termed legal assistant; legal analyst. 2. Canadian law. A nonlawyer who is legally qualified through experience or special training and is licensed to provide limited legal services in certain fields. • Paralegals may assist in representing clients in both civil and criminal matters. — Also termed (in sense 2) law clerk. — paralegal, adj.

paralegalize, vb. Slang. To proofread, cite-check, and otherwise double-check the details in (a legal document).

parallel citation. See CITATION (3).

parallel imports. Goods bearing valid trademarks that are manufactured abroad and imported into the United States to compete with domestically manufactured goods bearing the same valid trademarks. • Domestic parties commonly complain that parallel imports compete unfairly in the U.S. market. But U.S. trademark law does not prohibit the sale of most parallel imports. — Also termed gray-market goods. See gray market under MARKET.

parallel parenting. See PARENTING.

parallel research. Intellectual property. The coincident but independent development of similar information or ideas by more than one person. • Parallel research may be offered to establish an independent-conception defense. If more than one person independently reaches the same result, each may protect the product as a trade secret.

paramount title. See TITLE (2).

paraph (par-əf), n. 1. Hist. A flourish that follows a signature, intended as a safeguard against forgery. 2. Civil law. A signature itself; esp., a notary public's signature on a document, followed by the date, names of the parties, and seal.

paraph (par-əf), vb. Civil law. To add a paraph to <paraphed the contract>.

parapherna (par-ə-fər-nə), n. [Greek "things brought on the side"] 1. Roman law. Property of a wife not forming part of her dowry. See DOS (1). 2. Scots law. A married woman's personal property, such as clothing, jewelry, and intimate possessions, which a husband did not acquire by virtue of marriage. See JUS MARITI.

paraphernalia (par-ə-fər-nay-lee-ə). (17c) Hist. Property that a wife was allowed to keep, in addition to her dowry, on the death of her husband.

"[I]n one particular instance the wife may acquire a property in some of her husband's goods: which shall remain to her after his death and not go to the executors. These are called her paraphernalia, which is a term borrowed from the civil law . . . signifying something over and above her dower." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 435-36 (1765).

paraphernal property. See extradotal property under PROPERTY.

Paraphrase of Theophilus. See INSTITUTE (4).

parata executio (pə-ray-tə ek-sə-kyoo-shee-oh). [Law Latin "a prepared diligence"] Scots law. A creditor's completed diligence allowing the creditor to proceed to obtain payment of a debt.

paratitla (par-ə-tit-lə), n. pl. [Law Latin "next to the title"] Roman & civil law. Notes or abstracts prefixed to titles of law, giving a summary of their contents.

paratum habeo (pə-ray-təm hay-bee-oh). [Law Latin "I have him in readiness"] Hist. A sheriff's return of a capias ad respondendum, signifying that the defendant is ready to be brought to court.

paratus est verificare (pə-ray-təs est ver-ə-fi-kair-ee). [Law Latin] He is ready to verify. • This phrase formerly concluded a verified pleading.

paravail (par-ə-vayl or par-ə-vayl), adj. [Law French "at the bottom"] Hist. (Of a tenant) holding of another tenant.

parcel, n. (15c) 1. A small package or bundle. 2. A tract of land; esp., a continuous tract or plot of land in one possession, no part of which is separated from the rest by intervening land in another's possession.

parcel, vb. (15c) To divide and distribute (goods, land, etc.) • This verb is often used with out <the land is parceled out in allotments> or, rarely, off <the father arranged to have a 10.474-acre tract of his farm parceled off and retitled to his children as joint tenants>.

parcenary (pahr-sə-ner-ee). See COPARCENARY.

parcener (pahr-sə-nər). See COPARCENER.

parco fracto (pahr-koh frak-toh). See DE PARCO FRACTO.

par delictum (pahr di-lik-təm). [Latin] Equal guilt; equal wrong.

pardon, n. (14c) The act or an instance of officially nullifying punishment or other legal consequences of a crime. • A pardon is usu. granted by the chief executive of a government. The President has the sole power to issue pardons for federal offenses, and state governors have the power to issue pardons for state crimes. — Also termed executive pardon. See CLEMENCY. Cf. COMMUTATION (2); REPRIEVE. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨23.] — pardon, vb.

"The term pardon is first found in early French law and derives from the Late Latin perdonare ("to grant freely"), suggesting a gift bestowed by the sovereign. It has thus come to be associated with a somewhat personal concession by a head of state to the perpetrator of an offense, in mitigation or remission of the full punishment that he has merited." Leslie Sebba, "Amnesty and Pardon," in Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 59, 59 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

absolute pardon. A pardon that releases the wrongdoer from punishment and restores the offender's civil rights without qualification. — Also termed full pardon; unconditional pardon. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨23.]

conditional pardon. A pardon that does not become effective until the wrongdoer satisfies a prerequisite or that will be revoked upon the occurrence of some specified act. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨23.]

faultless pardon. A pardon granted because the act for which the person was convicted was not a crime. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨23.]

general pardon. See AMNESTY.

partial pardon. A pardon that exonerates the offender from some but not all of the punishment or legal consequences of a crime. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨23.]

unconditional pardon. See absolute pardon.

pardon attorney. A Justice Department lawyer who considers applications for federal pardons and forwards those of promising candidates for review by the President.

parens binubus (par-enz bi-n[y]oo-bəs). [Latin "twice-married parent"] Roman law. A parent who has remarried.

parens patriae (par-enz pay-tree-ee or pa-tree-i). [Latin "parent of his or her country"] (18c) 1. Roman law. The emperor as the embodiment of the state. 2. The state regarded as a sovereign; the state in its capacity as provider of protection to those unable to care for themselves <the attorney general acted as parens patriae in the administrative hearing>. [Cases: States ⇨1.] 3. A doctrine by which a government has standing to prosecute a lawsuit on behalf of a citizen, esp. on behalf of someone who is under a legal disability to prosecute the suit <parens patriae allowed the state to institute proceedings>. • The state ordinarily has no standing to sue on behalf of its citizens, unless a separate, sovereign interest will be served by the suit. — Also termed doctrine of parens patriae. [Cases: Infants ⇨2; States ⇨190.]

parent. (15c) 1. The lawful father or mother of someone. ● In ordinary usage, the term denotes more than responsibility for conception and birth. The term commonly includes (1) either the natural father or the natural mother of a child, (2) either the adoptive father or the adoptive mother of a child, (3) a child's putative blood parent who has expressly acknowledged paternity, and (4) an individual or agency whose status as guardian has been established by judicial decree. In law, parental status based on any criterion may be terminated by judicial decree. In other words, a person ceases to be a legal parent if that person's status as a parent has been terminated in a legal proceeding. — Also termed legal parent. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇄ 1.] absent parent. See noncustodial parent.

adoptive parent. (18c) A parent by virtue of legal adoption. See ADOPTION (1). [Cases: Adoption ⇄ 4, 20.]

biological parent. The woman who provides the egg or the man who provides the sperm to form the zygote that grows into an embryo. — Also termed genetic parent. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇄ 1.]

birth parent. Either the biological father or the mother who gives birth to a child. — Sometimes written birthparent.

constructive parent. See equitable parent.

custodial parent. The parent awarded physical custody of a child in a divorce. See PHYSICAL CUSTODY (2). Cf. noncustodial parent. [Cases: Child Custody ⇄ 209.]

de facto parent. An adult who (1) is not the child's legal parent, (2) has, with consent of the child's legal parent, resided with the child for a significant period, and (3) has routinely performed a share of the caretaking functions at least as great as that of the parent who has been the child's primary caregiver without any expectation of compensation for this care. ● Because the status of de facto parent is subordinate to that of legal parent, a person who expects to be afforded the status of parent should, if possible, adopt the child. The primary function of this conceptual status is to provide courts with a means for maintaining a relationship between a child and an adult who has functioned as a parent when that adult is prohibited from legally adopting the child. The status is usu. limited to a person who has assumed the role of parent with the knowledge and consent, either express or implied, of the legal parent. But it may also arise when there is a total failure or inability of the legal parent to perform parental duties. Cf. equitable parent; psychological parent.

Disneyland parent. A noncustodial parent who indulges his or her child with gifts and good times during visitation and leaves most or all disciplinary responsibilities to the other parent; esp., a noncustodial parent who provides luxuries that the custodial parent cannot afford but performs no disciplinary duties, in an effort to gain or retain the child's affection. See LOLLIPOP SYNDROME.

domiciliary parent. A parent with whom a child lives. [Cases: Child Custody ⇄ 147.]

dual-residential parent. A parent who shares primary residential responsibility for a child with the other parent when each provides a residence that is substantially a primary residence. ● In many jurisdictions, dual residence is referred to as joint physical custody. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY; CUSTODY (2). Cf. residential parent.

equitable parent. 1. A husband who, though not the biological father, is treated by the court as the father in an action for custody or visitation, usu. when the husband (1) has treated the child as his own while married to the child's mother, (2) is the only father the child has ever known, and (3) seeks the rights of fatherhood. 2. A mother or father, not by blood or adoption, but by virtue of the close parent-like relationship that exists between that person and a child. ● The status of equitable parent is a legal fiction that is used as an equitable remedy. Most commonly, the status of equitable parent arises when a person, living with the child and one of his or her legal or natural parents, forms a close bond with the child and assumes the duties and responsibilities of a parent. — Also termed constructive parent. See adoption by estoppel under ADOPTION. Cf. psychological parent; de facto parent. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇄ 14.]

foster parent. (17c) An adult who, though without blood ties or legal ties, cares for and rears a child, esp. an orphaned or neglected child who might otherwise be deprived of nurture, usu. under the auspices and direction of an agency and for some compensation or benefit. ● Foster parents sometimes give care and support temporarily until a child is legally adopted by others. See FOSTER CARE. Cf. foster child under CHILD. [Cases: Infants ⇄ 226.] genetic parent. See biological parent.

godparent. See GODPARENT.

intended parent. See intentional parent.

intentional parent. The person whose idea it is to have and raise a child and who (1) enters into a surrogacy contract with a surrogate mother, and (2) is the legal parent of the child regardless of any genetic link to the child. — Also termed intended parent. See intended child under CHILD.

noncustodial parent. In the child-custody laws of some states, a parent without the primary custody rights of a child; esp., the parent not awarded physical custody of a child in a divorce. ● The noncustodial parent is typically awarded visitation with the child. — Also termed nonresidential parent; possessory conservator; absent parent. See PHYSICAL CUSTODY (2). Cf. custodial parent. [Cases: Child Custody ⇄ 20–231.]

nonresidential parent. See noncustodial parent.

parent by estoppel. A man who, though not a child's legal father, is estopped from denying liability for child support. • This estoppel usu. arises when the man (1) has lived with the child for at least two years, (2) has believed in good faith that he was the child's father, (3) has accepted parental responsibilities, and (4) has entered into a coparenting agreement with the child's mother — and when the court finds that recognition of the status of parent is in the child's best interests. See ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨14.]

primary domiciliary parent. In a joint-custody arrangement, the parent who exercises primary physical custody. See joint custody under CUSTODY (2). [Cases: Child Custody ⇨147.]

psychological parent. A person who, on a continuing and regular basis, provides for a child's emotional and physical needs. • The psychological parent may be the biological parent, a foster parent, a guardian, a common-law parent, or some other person unrelated to the child.

residential parent. A parent who has primary residential responsibility for a child and who is not a dual-residential parent. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY. Cf. dual-residential parent. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨147, 209.]

stepparent. (1840) The spouse of one's mother or father by a later marriage. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨272; Parent and Child ⇨14.]

surrogate parent. (1972) 1. A person who carries out the role of a parent by court appointment or the voluntary assumption of parental responsibilities. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨15.] 2. See surrogate mother (2) under MOTHER.

2. See parent corporation under CORPORATION.

parentage (pair-ən-tij or par-). (15c) The state or condition of being a parent; kindred in the direct ascending line. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨1.]

parentage action. See PATERNITY SUIT.

parental access. See VISITATION (2).

parental-alienation syndrome. See PARENT-ALIENATION SYNDROME.

parental-autonomy doctrine. The principle that a parent has a fundamental right to raise his or her child and to make all decisions regarding that child free from governmental intervention, unless (1) the child's health and welfare are jeopardized by the parent's decisions, or (2) public health, welfare, safety, and order are threatened by the parent's decisions. • The Supreme Court first recognized the doctrine of parental autonomy over the family in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625 (1923). — Also termed family-autonomy doctrine. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Infants ⇨154.1; Parent and Child ⇨1.]

parental-consent statute. A statute that requires a minor to obtain his or her parent's consent before receiving elective medical treatment, such as an abortion. • Without parental consent, a physician or other medical professional commits a battery upon a child when giving nonemergency medical treatment. To pass constitutional muster, a parental-consent statute must include a judicial-bypass provision. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 112 S. Ct. 2791 (1992). — Also termed parental-consent treatment statute. See JUDICIAL-BYPASS PROVISION. Cf. PARENTAL-NOTIFICATION STATUTE; MATURE-MINOR DOCTRINE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ⇨116.]

parental consortium. See CONSORTIUM.

parental-discipline privilege. A parent's right to use reasonable force or to impose reasonable punishment on a child in a way that is necessary to control, train, and educate. • Several factors are used to determine the reasonableness of the action, including whether the actor is the parent; the child's age, sex, and physical and mental state; the severity and foreseeable consequences of the punishment; and the nature of the misconduct. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨2.5.]

parental functions. See PARENTING FUNCTIONS.

parent-alienation syndrome. A situation in which one parent has manipulated a child to fear or hate the other parent; a condition resulting from a parent's actions that are designed to poison a child's relationship with the other parent. • Some mental-health specialists deny that this phenomenon amounts to a "psychological syndrome." — Also termed parental-alienation syndrome. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨57, 569.]

parental immunity. See IMMUNITY (2).

parental-immunity doctrine. See parental immunity (1) under IMMUNITY (2).

parental kidnapping. See KIDNAPPING.

Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. A federal law, enacted in 1980, providing a penalty for child-kidnapping by a noncustodial parent and requiring states to recognize and enforce a child-custody order rendered by a court of another state. 28 USCA § 1738A; 42 USCA §§ 654, 655, 663. — Abbr. PKPA. Cf. UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT; FEDERAL KIDNAPPING ACT. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨723, 738.]

parental-liability statute. (1963) A law obliging parents to pay damages for torts (esp. intentional ones) committed by their minor children. • All states have these laws, but most limit the parents' monetary liability to about $3,000 per tort. Parents can also be held criminally liable for the acts of their children. One group of laws is aimed at contributing to the delinquency and endangering the welfare of a minor. More recently, the laws have been directed at improper supervision and failure to supervise. The first law aimed at punishing parents for the acts of their children was enacted in Colorado in 1903. By 1961 all but two states had enacted similar laws. At least five states make it a felony for a parent to intentionally, knowingly, and recklessly provide a firearm to a child, or permit the child to handle a firearm, when the parent is aware of a substantial risk that the child will use the weapon to commit a crime. — Also termed parental-responsibility statute; failure-to-supervise statute. Cf. PARENTAL-RESPONSIBILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷13.5.] parent-notification statute. A law that requires a physician to notify a minor's parent of her intention to have an abortion. Cf. PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ↷117.]

parental-preference doctrine. (1974) The principle that custody of a minor child should ordinarily be granted to a fit parent rather than another person. • The preference can be rebutted by proof that the child's best interests are to the contrary. — Also termed parental-rights doctrine; parental-superior-rights doctrine; parental-presumption rule. Cf. BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILD. [Cases: Child Custody ↷42, 460.]

parental-privilege doctrine. The parent's right to discipline his or her child reasonably, to use reasonable child-rearing practices free of governmental interference, and to exercise decision-making authority over the child. Cf. PARENTAL-AUTONOMY DOCTRINE; PARENTAL-DISCIPLINE PRIVILEGE. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷1, 2.5.]

parental-responsibility statute. (1956) 1. A law imposing criminal sanctions (such as fines) on parents whose minor children commit crimes as a result of the parents' failure to exercise sufficient control over them. — Also termed control-your-kid law. 2. PARENTAL-LIABILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷13.5(2, 4).]

parental rights. (18c) A parent's rights to make all decisions concerning his or her child, including the right to determine the child's care and custody, the right to educate and discipline the child, and the right to control the child's earnings and property. See TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷1-8.]

parental-rights doctrine. See PARENTAL-PREFERENCE DOCTRINE.

parental-superior-rights doctrine. See PARENTAL-PREFERENCE DOCTRINE.

parentela (par-ən-tee-lə), n. pl. [Law Latin] (15c) Persons who can trace descent from a common ancestor.

parentelic method (par-ən-tee-lik or -tel-ik). (1935) A scheme of computation used to determine the paternal or maternal collaterals entitled to inherit when a childless intestate decedent is not survived by parents or their issue. • Under this method, the estate passes to grandparents and their issue; if there are none, to great-grandparents and their issue; and so on down each line until an heir is found. The Uniform Probate Code uses a limited parentelic system: it looks first to the grandparents and their issue, but if no heir is found in that line, the search ends and the estate escheats to the state. See DEGREE (5). Cf. GRADUAL METHOD.

parent filing date. See effective filing date under DATE.

parenticide (pə-ren-tə-sid). (17c) 1. The act of murdering one's parent. 2. A person who murders his or her parent. — parenticidal, adj.

parenting, n. 1. Performance of the functions of a parent. 2. One or more methods of child-rearing.

parallel parenting. A situation in which divorced parents, although disagreeing on some aspects of child-rearing, allow each other to handle discipline and daily regimens in their own individual ways when with the child.

shared parenting. Cooperation between divorced parents in child-rearing. [Cases: Child Custody ↷120-155.]

parenting agreement. See PARENTING PLAN.

parenting function. A task that serves the direct or day-to-day needs of a child or of a child's family. • Parenting functions include providing necessities, making decisions about the child's welfare, and maintaining the family residence. Cf. CARETAKING FUNCTIONS.

parenting plan. A plan that allocates custodial responsibility and decision-making authority for what serves the child's best interests and that provides a mechanism for resolving any later disputes between parents. — Also termed parenting agreement. See CUSTODY (2); CUSTODIAL RESPONSIBILITY; DECISION-MAKING RESPONSIBILITY. [Cases: Child Custody ↷209.]

parenting time. See VISITATION.

parent-subsidiary freezeout. See FREEZEOUT.

pares curiae (par-eez kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin "peers of the court"] Hist. A lord's tenants who sat in judgment of a fellow tenant.

pares curtis (par-eez kər-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. The peers of the court. — Also termed pares curiae.

"The lord was, in early times, the legislator and judge over all his feudatories: and therefore the vassals of the inferior lords were bound by their fealty to attend their domestic courts baron, (which were instituted in every manor or barony, for doing speedy and effectual justice to all the tenants) in order as well to answer such complaints as might be alleged against themselves, as to form a jury or homage for the trial of their fellow-tenants; and upon this account, in all the feudal institutions both here and on the continent, they are distinguished by the appellation of the peers of the court; pares curtis, or pares curiae." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 54 (1766).

pares regni (par-eez reg-ni). [Law Latin] Hist. Peers of the realm.

Pareto optimality (pə-ray-toh or pə-ret-oh), n. An economic situation in which no person can be made better off without making someone else worse off. • The term derives from the work of Vilfredo Pareto (1848–1923), an Italian economist and sociologist. — Pareto-optimal, adj.

Pareto superiority, n. An economic situation in which an exchange can be made that benefits someone and injures no one. • When such an exchange can no longer be made, the situation becomes one of Pareto optimality. — Pareto-superior, adj.

pari causa, in. See IN PARI CAUSA.

pari delicto, in. See IN PARI DELICTO.

paries communis (pair-ee-eez kə-myoo-nis). [Latin] A common wall; a party wall.

paries oneri ferendo, uti nunc est, ita sit (pair-ee-eez on-ər-i fə-ren-doh, yoo-ti nəngk est, i-tə sit). [Latin] Roman law. The wall for bearing the burden, as it now is, so let it be. • The phrase constituted the urban servitude oneris ferendi. See ONERIS FERENDI; JUS ONERIS FERENDI; servitus oneris ferendi under SERVITUS.

pari materia, in. See IN PARI MATERIA.

parimutuel betting (par-i-myoo-choo-əl). A system of gambling in which bets placed on a race are pooled and then paid (less a management fee and taxes) to those holding winning tickets. [Cases: Gaming ↻6.]

pari passu (pahr-ee pahs-oo or pair-i, pair-ee, or par-ee pas-[y]oo). [Latin "by equal step"] Proportionally; at an equal pace; without preference <creditors of a bankrupt estate will receive distributions pari passu>.

pari racione (pair-i ray-shee-oh-nee or rash-ee-oh-nee). [Latin] Roman & civil law. For the like reason; by like mode of reasoning.

Paris Additional Act. Copyright. An 1896 amendment to the Berne Convention extending copyright protection to photographs as derivative works.

Paris Convention. See PARIS CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY.

Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property. A treaty designed to unify and streamline patent prosecutions and trademark applications among the signatories. • The Convention eased the harsh effects of the first-to-file priority rule by allowing an applicant in any member country one year in which to apply in other member countries while maintaining the application's original priority date. It also banned patent-protection discrimination against residents of other member nations. Now administered by the World Intellectual Property Organization, an agency of the United Nations, the Convention was first signed in 1883, revised most recently in 1967, and amended in 1970. — Also termed Paris Industrial Property Convention. — Often shortened to Paris Convention.

"The 1883 Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property is the cornerstone of the international patent granting system. It represents the first efforts of several countries to adopt a common approach to industrial property. The fundamental principles of 'right of priority' and 'national treatment' set out by the Convention have been of capital importance to the internationalization of intellectual property rights over the last century." Marta Pertegas Sender, Cross-Border Enforcement of Patent Rights 4 (2002).

parish. (14c) 1. In Louisiana, a governmental subdivision analogous to a county in other U.S. states. [Cases: Counties ↻1.] 2. Eccles. law. A division of a town or district, subject to the ministry of one pastor.

district parish. Eccles. law. A geographical division of an English parish made by the Crown's commissioners for the building of new churches for worship, celebration of marriages, christenings, and burials.

par item. See ITEM.

parium judicium (pair-ee-əm joo-dish-ee-əm). [Law Latin] The judgment of peers; trial by a jury of one's peers or equals.

Parker doctrine. See STATE-ACTION DOCTRINE.

parking. (1983) 1. The sale of securities subject to an agreement that the seller will buy them back at a later time for a similar price. • Parking is illegal if done to circumvent securities regulations or tax laws. It is often a method of evading the net-capital requirements of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), which requires a brokerage firm to discount the value of any stock it holds in its own account when it files its monthly report about its net-capital condition. To reach technical compliance with the NASD's net-capital requirements, a brokerage firm "sells" stock from its own account to a customer at market price, thereby avoiding the discount for reporting purposes. Having filed its report, it can then "buy" the shares back from the customer, usu. at the same price at which it "sold" the stock, plus interest. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻40.14.] 2. The placement of assets in a safe, short-term investment while other investment opportunities are being considered. — Also termed (in sense 1) stock-parking.

parking-lot rule. The principle that workers' compensation insurance covers the injuries suffered by an employee on the employer's premises when the employee is arriving at or leaving work. — Also termed premises rule. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↻750.]

parliament. (12c) The supreme legislative body of some nations; esp. (cap.), in the United Kingdom, the national legislature consisting of the monarch, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons.

parliamentarian. (17c) Parliamentary law. A consultant trained in parliamentary law who advises the chair and others on matters of parliamentary law and procedure.

- The parliamentarian, who is often a professional, only advises and never “rules” on procedural issues. See parliamentary law under PARLIAMENTARY (2); parliamentary procedure under PARLIAMENTARY (2).

“The parliamentarian is a consultant, commonly a professional, who advises the president and other officers, committees, and members on matters of parliamentary procedure. The parliamentarian’s role during a meeting is purely an advisory and consultative one — since parliamentary law gives to the chair alone the power to rule on questions of order or to answer parliamentary inquiries. . . . After the parliamentarian has expressed an opinion on a point, the chair has the duty to make the final ruling and, in doing so, has the right to follow the advice of the parliamentarian or to disregard it.” Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised § 47, at 449–50 (10th ed. 2002).

parliamentary, adj. (17c) 1. Of or relating to a parliament. 2. Parliamentary law. Of or relating to rules of order for the conduct of business in deliberative assemblies.

parliamentary authority. A parliamentary manual that an organization has adopted for its deliberations, and whose provisions govern the organization in every case to which they apply, as long as they are consistent with law and with the organization’s governing documents. See PARLIAMENTARY MANUAL.

parliamentary diplomacy. See DIPLOMACY.

parliamentary divorce. See legislative divorce under DIVORCE.

parliamentary inquiry. See INQUIRY.

parliamentary intent. See LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

parliamentary law. The body of rules and precedents governing the proceedings of legislative bodies and other deliberative assemblies. — Also termed parliamentary procedure. [Cases: Parliamentary Law ↪1.]

“Thomas Jefferson speaks of ‘the Parliamentary branch of the law.’ From this country’s beginning, it has been an underlying assumption of our culture that what has been authoritatively established as parliamentary law is law — in the sense of being binding within all assemblies except as they may adopt special rules varying from the general parliamentary law.” Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised xxvi (10th ed. 2000).

common parliamentary law. 1. See general parliamentary law. 2. The common law as applied to parliamentary law; parliamentary law as it is found in judicial decisions.

general parliamentary law. The basic principles and practices of parliamentary law, as commonly understood among a meeting’s members based on their experience in other deliberative assemblies, that apply in the absence of adopted rules of order. • A parliamentary manual is evidence of the general parliamentary law. — Also termed common parliamentary law.

parliamentary manual. A code or reference, usu. a commercially published book, that contains parliamentary rules and is offered for adoption by organizations as their parliamentary authority. • The leading parliamentary manuals in print in the United States are Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised for nonlegislative bodies, and Mason’s Manual of Legislative Procedure for state legislatures. Cf. PARLIAMENTARY AUTHORITY.

parliamentary motion. See MOTION (2).

parliamentary practice. See PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE.

parliamentary privilege. See PRIVILEGE (1).

parliamentary procedure. 1. PARLIAMENTARY LAW. 2. Parliamentary law as applied in a particular organization, including the parliamentary authority and other rules that the organization adopts. — Also termed parliamentary practice.

parliamentary will. See WILL.

Parliament House. Scots law. The building in Edinburgh that is the site of the Court of Session, the High Court of Justiciary, the attendant offices of both courts, and the library of the Faculty of Advocates.

parliamentum insanum. See MAD PARLIAMENT.

parody. (16c) Intellectual property. A transformative use of a well-known work for purposes of satirizing, ridiculing, critiquing, or commenting on the original work, as opposed to merely alluding to the original to draw attention to the later work. • In constitutional law, a parody is protected as free speech. In copyright law, a work must meet the definition of a parody and be a fair use of the copyrighted material, or else it may constitute infringement. See FAIR USE. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↪53.2.]

“Trademark parodies, even when offensive, do convey a message. The message may be simply that business and product images need not always be taken too seriously; a trademark parody reminds us that we are free to laugh at the images and associations linked with the mark.” L.L. Bean, Inc. v. Drake Publishers, Inc., 811 F.2d 26, 34 (1st Cir. 1987) (per Bownes, J.).

“We do not, of course, suggest that a parody may not harm the market at all, but when a parody, like a scathing theater review, kills demand for the original, it does not produce a harm cognizable under the Copyright Act. Because ‘parody may quite legitimately aim at garroting the original, destroying it commercially as well as artistically,’ the role of the courts is to distinguish between 'biting criticism [that merely] suppresses demand [and] copyright infringement[, which] usurps it.'" Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, Inc. 510 U.S. 569, 591, 114 S.Ct. 1164, 1178 (1994) (Souter, J.) (citations omitted).

par of exchange. The recognized standard value of one country's currency expressed in terms of that of another.

parol (pə-rohl or par-əl), adj. (16c) 1. Oral; unwritten <parol evidence>. [Cases: Evidence ↷397.] 2. Not under seal <parol contract>. [Cases: Contracts ↷36, 239.]

parol (pə-rohl or par-əl), n. (15c) 1. An oral statement or declaration. 2. Hist. The oral pleadings in a case.

"Anciently pleadings were conducted in court orally, and the whole pleadings were called the parol: but for centuries the pleadings in civil actions have been required to be in writing." Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 178-79 (2d ed. 1899).

parol agreement. See parol contract (1) under CONTRACT.

parol arrest. See ARREST.

parol contract. See CONTRACT.

parol demurrer. See DEMURRER.

parole (pə-rohl), n. (17c) The conditional release of a prisoner from imprisonment before the full sentence has been served. • Although not available under some sentences, parole is usu. granted for good behavior on the condition that the parolee regularly report to a supervising officer for a specified period. Cf. PARDON; PROBATION (1). [Cases: Pardon and Parole ↷41.] — parole, vb.

"The essence of parole is release from prison, before completion of the sentence, on condition that the prisoner abide by certain rules during the balance of the sentence. Parole is not freedom." 59 Am. Jur. 2d Pardon and Parole § 6 (1987).

bench parole. See bench probation under PROBATION.

juvenile parole. The conditional release of a juvenile offender from confinement. — Also termed aftercare. [Cases: Infants ↷281.]

parole board. (1898) A governmental body that decides whether prisoners may be released from prison before completing their sentences. — Also termed board of parole; parole commission. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ↷55.]

parolee (pə-roh-lee). (1903) A prisoner who is released on parole.

parole revocation. (1930) The administrative or judicial act of returning a parolee to prison because of the parolee's failure to abide by the conditions of parole (as by committing a new offense). [Cases: Pardon and Parole ↷69.]

parol evidence. See EVIDENCE.

parol-evidence rule. (1893) Contracts. The common-law principle that a writing intended by the parties to be a final embodiment of their agreement cannot be modified by evidence of earlier or contemporaneous agreements that might add to, vary, or contradict the writing. • This rule usu. operates to prevent a party from introducing extrinsic evidence of negotiations that occurred before or while the agreement was being reduced to its final written form. See INTEGRATION (2); MERGER (2). Cf. FOUR-CORNERS RULE. [Cases: Evidence ↷397.]

"The basic principle is often called the 'parol evidence rule', and according to this rule evidence is not admissible to contradict or qualify a complete written contract. The rule is usually stated in the form of a rule of evidence, but it is probably best regarded as a rule of substantive law. The question is not really whether evidence can be admitted which might vary the written document, but whether, if the evidence is admitted, it will have the legal effect of varying the document." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 161-62 (3d ed. 1981).

"The parol evidence rule assumes that the formal writing reflects the parties' minds at a point of maximum resolution and, hence, that duties and restrictions that do not appear in the written document, even though apparently accepted at an earlier stage, were not intended by the parties to survive. In addition, and quite apart from the survival of matters discarded in the course of negotiations, there is the obvious danger of outright fraud." Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 82-83 (1990).

parol lease. See LEASE.

parols de ley (pə-rohlz də lay). [Law French] Words of law; technical words.

parol trust. See oral trust (1) under TRUST.

Parratt-Hudson doctrine. (1986) The principle that a state actor's random, unauthorized deprivation of someone's property does not amount to a due-process violation if the state provides an adequate postdeprivation remedy. Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 101 S.Ct. 1908 (1984); Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 104 S.Ct. 3194 (1984). [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷3912.]

parricide (par-ə-sid), n. (16c) 1. The act of killing a close relative, esp. a parent. 2. One who kills such a relative. Cf. PATRICIDE. — parricidal, adj.

parricidium (par-ə-sid-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The murder of a near relative, esp. a parent. 2. Perhaps in ancient law, the murder of any free citizen. • This ancient, broad sense of parricidium gave way in pre-Imperial law to homicidium (homicide), which extended to the killing of a slave.

pars (pahrz). [Latin] Hist. A party to an action.

pars contractus (pahrz kən-trak-təs). [Law Latin] Hist. Part of the contract.

"Verbal consensual contracts are binding upon the contracting parties immediately upon their consents being interchanged, and neither of them can afterwards resile from the transaction But if it be agreed that their contract shall be reduced to writing, such agreement being pars contractus, the contract is not finally entered into, nor does it become binding, until the writing has been executed." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 436 (4th ed. 1894).

pars ejusdem negotii (pahrz ee-jəs-dəm ni-goh-shee-i). [Latin] Hist. Part of the same transaction. • The phrase refers, for example, to an obligation attached to a condition, both of which must be considered together to constitute one transaction.

pars enitia (pahrz i-ni-shee-ə). [Law Latin “oldest’s part”] Hist. An oldest child’s portion of lands divided by lot.

pars fundi (pahrz fən-dī). [Latin] Hist. Part of the ground.

pars judicis (pahrz joo-di-sis). [Latin] Hist. The part of the judge. • The phrase par judicis referred to the judge’s obligation to perform the duties of the office.

parson. See RECTOR (1).

pars rationabilis (pahrz rah-shee-ohn-ay-bil-is) See YORK, CUSTOM OF.

pars rea (pahrz ree-ə). A party defendant.

pars viscerum matris (pahrz vis-ər-əm may-tris). [Latin] Hist. Scots law. Part of the mother’s body. • The phrase appeared in reference to a fetus.

part and pertinent. Scots law. See APPURTENANT.

parte inaudita (pah-tee in-aw-dy-tə or in-aw-di-tə). [Latin “one side being unheard”] Of or relating to action taken ex parte.

parte non comparente (pah-tee non kom-pə-ren-tee). Hist. The party not having appeared. • In civil cases, a party’s failure to appear usu. resulted in a default judgment against the defendant. But in criminal cases, the accused’s failure to appear raised no presumption of guilt; still, the offender was cited for contempt and made an outlaw. See OUTLAW.

partes beneficii (pah-teez ben-ə-fish-ee-i). [Law Latin] Hist. Parts of a benefice.

partes finis nihil habuerunt (pah-teez fr-nis nr-hil hab-yoo-eer-ənt). [Law Latin “the parties to the fine had nothing”] Hist. A plea to set aside a conveyance of land on grounds that the transferor did not have a sufficient ownership interest in the property to alienate it.

“Yet where a stranger . . . officiously interferes in an estate which in nowise belongs to him, his fine is of no effect; and may at any time be set aside . . . by pleading that ‘partes finis nihil habuerunt.’” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 356–57 (1765).

partarius (pah-shee-air-ee-əs), n. & adj. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A legatee entitled to a portion of an inheritance along with the appointed heirs. 2. A tenant who is bound to hand over a portion of the crop in lieu of rent.

particeps (pah-tə-seps), n. [Latin] 1. A participant. 2. A part owner.

particeps criminis (pah-tə-seps krim-ə-nis), n. [Latin “partner in crime”] (17c) 1. An accomplice or accessory. See ACCESSORY. Pl. participes criminis (pah-tis-ə-pee-z). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 59, 68, 74.]

“Even in felonies but little practical importance now attaches to the distinctions between the first three of these four classes of ‘accomplices’ — a term which the law applies to all the participes criminis, whatever their degree of ‘complicity’ in the offence, though popular use generally limits it to those who take only a minor part. For the maximum punishment prescribed for any given crime is the same in the case of all three classes.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny’s Outlines of Criminal Law 90 (16th ed. 1952).

2. The doctrine that one participant in an unlawful activity cannot recover in a civil action against another participant in the activity. • This is a civil doctrine only, having nothing to do with criminal responsibility. Cf. IN PARI DELICTO DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 138.]

particeps fraudis (pah-r-tə-seps fraw-dis). [Latin “an accomplice in the fraud”] Roman law. One who participates in a fraud, esp. by helping to deceive a debtor’s creditors. — Also termed consciūs fraudis.

general partner. (1804) A partner who ordinarily takes part in the daily operations of the business, shares in the profits and losses, and is personally responsible for the partnership’s debts and other liabilities. — Also termed full partner. [Cases: Partnership ↷ 1, 353, 366.]

junior partner. (18c) A partner whose participation is limited with respect to both profits and management.

limited partner. (1822) A partner who receives profits from the business but does not take part in managing the business and is not liable for any amount greater than his or her original investment. — Also termed special partner; (in civil law) partner in commendam. See limited partnership under PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Partnership ↷ 353, 366, 371.]

liquidating partner. (1825) The partner appointed to settle the accounts, collect the assets, adjust the claims, and pay the debts of a dissolving or insolvent firm. [Cases: Partnership ↷ 280.]

name partner. (1945) A partner whose name appears in the name of the partnership <Mr. Tibbs is a name partner in the accounting firm of Gibbs & Tibbs>. — Also termed named partner; title member.

nominal partner. (18c) A person who is held out as a partner in a firm or business but who has no actual interest in the partnership. — Also termed ostensible partner; partner by estoppel.

ostensible partner. See nominal partner.

partner by estoppel. See nominal partner.

partner in commendam (in kə-men-dəm). See limited partner.

quasi-partner. (1809) A person who joins others in an enterprise that appears to be, but is not, a partnership.
• A joint venturer, for example, is a quasi-partner.

secret partner. (18c) A partner whose connection with the firm is concealed from the public. — Also termed sleeping partner.

senior partner. (18c) A high-ranking partner, as in a law firm.

silent partner. (18c) A partner who shares in the profits but who has no active voice in management of the firm and whose existence is often not publicly disclosed. — Also termed dormant partner. [Cases: Partnership ↻90.]

"It is worth emphasizing that control does not necessarily mean active involvement. One of the most interesting figures in partnership law, in fact, is the 'silent' partner — typically a person who has invested in a business in return for a profit share, and who reserves the right to, and to some extent may in fact, participate in routine management decisions, may participate in no decisions at all, and may even be unaware of what is happening in the business for long periods of time. The fact of the person's financial interest in the partnership may be a secret from everyone except the other partners (indeed, such secrecy may be vital). Such a person is nonetheless a partner like any other for purposes, among other things, of personal liability for the debts of the partnership. The law simply does not distinguish between active and passive partners." William A. Klein & John C. Coffee Jr., Business Organization and Finance 64 (2002).

sleeping partner. See secret partner.

special partner. See limited partner.

surviving partner. (17c) The partner who, upon the partnership's dissolution because of another partner's death, serves as a trustee to administer the firm's remaining affairs. [Cases: Partnership ↻280.]

partnership. (16c) A voluntary association of two or more persons who jointly own and carry on a business for profit. • Under the Uniform Partnership Act, a partnership is presumed to exist if the persons agree to share proportionally the business's profits or losses. Cf. JOINT VENTURE; STRATEGIC ALLIANCE. [Cases: Partnership ↻1.]

collapsible partnership. (1962) Tax. A partnership formed by partners who intend to dissolve it before they realize any income. • Any partner's gain resulting from unrealized receivables or inventory that has increased substantially in value will be treated by the IRS as ordinary income rather than as capital gain. IRC (26 USCA) § 751. Cf. collapsible corporation under CORPORATION. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3931, 3935.]

commercial partnership. See trading partnership.

family partnership. (1902) A business partnership in which the partners are related. IRC (26 USCA) § 704(e). • In this phrase, the term family includes a person's spouse, ancestors, lineal descendants, siblings, and any trusts established primarily for the benefit of those persons. See FAMILY-PARTNERSHIP RULES.

general partnership. (18c) A partnership in which all partners participate fully in running the business and share equally in profits and losses (though the partners' monetary contributions may vary). [Cases: Partnership ↻79, 86, 87.]

implied partnership. See partnership by estoppel.

limited-liability partnership. (1910) A partnership in which a partner is not liable for a negligent act committed by another partner or by an employee not under the partner's supervision. • All states have enacted statutes that allow a business (typically a law firm or accounting firm) to register as this type of partnership. — Abbr. L.L.P. [Cases: Partnership ↻371.]

limited partnership. (18c) A partnership composed of one or more persons who control the business and are personally liable for the partnership's debts (called general partners), and one or more persons who contribute capital and share profits but who cannot manage the business and are liable only for the amount of their contribution (called limited partners). • The chief purpose of a limited partnership is to enable persons to invest their money in a business without taking an active part in managing the business, and without risking more than the sum originally contributed, while securing the cooperation of others who have ability and integrity but insufficient money. — Abbr. L.P. — Also termed special partnership; (in civil law) partnership in commendam. [Cases: Partnership ↻349–376.]

"Unknown at common law, the limited partnership was derived from the commenda or societe en commandite of continental Europe to permit a person to invest and share in the profits of a partnership business and yet limit one's liability to one's investment. It was first recognized in the United States by a New York statute of 1822. It is now recognized by statute in all American jurisdictions." Henry G. Henn & John R. Alexander, Laws of Corporations § 28, at 86 (3d ed. 1983).

"[T]he two primary characteristics of a limited partnership [are] liability of limited partners only for their agreed contributions, and a hierarchical structure with management in one or more general partners and very little power or authority in the limited partners. Thus, limited partners are typically — although not necessarily — passive contributors of capital. . . . In this respect they resemble shareholders in a corporation, but, depending on the details of the organizational documents, they may have greater or lesser rights." 3 Alan R. Bromberg & Larry E. Ribstein, Bromberg and Ribstein on Partnerships § 12.01, at 12:5–12:6 (1999).

master limited partnership. See publicly traded partnership.

nontrading partnership. A partnership that does not buy and sell but instead is a partnership of employment or occupation. — Also termed noncommercial partnership. • This type of partnership offers services rather than goods.

particular partnership. A partnership in which the members unite to share the benefits of a single transaction or enterprise.

partnership at will. (1849) A partnership that any partner may dissolve at any time without thereby incurring liability. Cf. partnership for a term. [Cases: Partnership ↷259.5.]

partnership by estoppel. (1872) A partnership implied by law when one or more persons represent themselves as partners to a third party who relies on that representation. • A person who is deemed a partner by estoppel becomes liable for any credit extended to the partnership by the third party. — Also termed implied partnership. [Cases: Partnership ↷24.]

partnership for a term. A partnership that exists for a specified duration or until a specified event occurs. • Such a partnership can be prematurely dissolved by any partner, but that partner may be held liable for breach of the partnership agreement. Cf. partnership at will.

partnership in commendam. See limited partnership.

publicly traded partnership. A partnership whose interests are traded either over-the-counter or on a securities exchange. • These partnerships may be treated as corporations for income-tax purposes. IRC (26 USCA) § 7704(a). — Abbr. PTP. — Also termed master limited partnership.

special partnership. 1. See limited partnership. 2. A partnership formed only for a single venture.

subpartnership. An arrangement between a firm's partner and a nonpartner to share the partner's profits and losses in the firm's business, but without forming a legal partnership between the partner and the nonpartner.

tiered partnership. An ownership arrangement consisting of one parent partnership that is a partner in one or more subsidiary partnerships.

trading partnership. A partnership whose usual business involves buying and selling. — Also termed commercial partnership.

umbrella limited partnership. A limited partnership used by a real-estate investment trust to acquire investment properties in exchange for shares in the partnership. See umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust under REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

universal partnership. A partnership formed by persons who agree to contribute all their individually owned property — and to devote all their skill, labor, and services — to the partnership. [Cases: Partnership ↷22.]

partnership agreement. (1802) A contract defining the partners' rights and duties toward one another — not the partners' relationship with third parties. — Also termed articles of partnership. [Cases: Partnership ↷22, 71.]

partnership association. (1812) A business organization that combines the features of a limited partnership and a close corporation. • Partnership associations are statutorily authorized in only a few states. — Also termed statutory partnership association; limited partnership association. [Cases: Partnership ↷349–376.]

partnership at will. See PARTNERSHIP.

partnership certificate. A document that evidences the participation of the partners in a partnership. • The certificate is often furnished to financial institutions when the partnership borrows money.

partnership distribution. See DISTRIBUTION.

partnership insurance. See INSURANCE.

partner's lien. (1870) A partner's right to have the partnership property applied in payment of the partnership's debts and to have whatever is due the firm from fellow partners deducted from what would otherwise be payable to them for their shares. [Cases: Partnership ↷89.]

partnership life insurance. See partnership insurance (1) under INSURANCE.

part payment. See PAYMENT.

part performance. 1. See PERFORMANCE. 2. See PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE.

part-performance doctrine. (1935) The equitable principle by which a failure to comply with the statute of frauds is overcome by a party's execution, in reliance on an opposing party's oral promise, of a substantial portion of an oral contract's requirements. — Sometimes shortened to part performance. See part performance under PERFORMANCE. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of ↷129.]

"Part performance is not an accurate designation of such acts as taking possession and making improvements when the contract does not provide for such acts, but such acts regularly bring the doctrine into play. The doctrine is contrary to the words of the Statute of Frauds, but it was established by English courts of equity soon after the enactment of the Statute. Payment of purchase-money, without more, was once thought sufficient to justify specific enforcement, but a contrary view now prevails, since in such cases restitution is an adequate remedy. English decisions treated a transfer of possession of the land as sufficient, if unequivocally referable to the oral agreement, apparently on the ground that the promise to transfer had been executed by a common-law conveyance. Such decisions are not generally followed in the United States. Enforcement has instead been justified on the ground that repudiation after 'part performance' amounts to a 'virtual fraud.' A more accurate statement is that courts with equitable powers are vested by tradition with what in substance is a dispensing power based on the promisee's reliance, a discretion to be exercised with caution in the light of all the circumstances." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 129 cmt. a (1979).

part-sovereign state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

party. (13c) 1. One who takes part in a transaction . [Cases: Contracts ↷177.]

"Note, that if an Indenture be made between two as Parties thereto in the Beginning, and in the Deed one of them grants or lets a Thing to another who is not named in the Beginning, he is not Party to the Deed, nor shall take any thing thereby." John Rastell, Les Termes de la Ley 471 (26th ed. 1721).

"A person who takes part in a legal transaction or proceeding is said to be a party to it. Thus, if an agreement, conveyance, lease, or the like, is entered into between A. and B., they are said to be parties to it; and the same expression is often, though not very correctly, applied to the persons named as the grantors or releasors in a deed-poll." 2 Stewart Rapalje & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 930 (1883).

party of the first part. (18c) Archaic. The party named first in a contract; esp., the owner or seller.

party of the second part. (18c) Archaic. The party named second in a contract; esp., the buyer.

2. One by or against whom a lawsuit is brought . • For purposes of res judicata, a party to a lawsuit is a person who has been named as a party and has a right to control the lawsuit either personally, or, if not fully competent, through someone appointed to protect the person's interests. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 101.]

adverse party. (15c) A party whose interests are opposed to the interests of another party to the action. Cf. hostile witness under WITNESS.

aggrieved party. (17c) A party entitled to a remedy; esp., a party whose personal, pecuniary, or property rights have been adversely affected by another person's actions or by a court's decree or judgment. — Also termed party aggrieved; person aggrieved. [Cases: Action ⇨ 13; Appeal and Error ⇨ 151; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 103.2.]

coparty. See COPARTY.

fictitious party. A person who is named in a writ, complaint, or record as a party in a suit, but who does not actually exist, or a person who is named as a plaintiff but is unaware of the suit and did not consent to be named. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 101; Parties ⇨ 73.]

formal party. See nominal party.

indispensable party. (1821) A party who, having interests that would inevitably be affected by a court's judgment, must be included in the case. • If such a party is not included, the case must be dismissed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b). Cf. necessary party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 203; Parties ⇨ 18, 29.]

innocent party. (16c) A party who did not consciously or intentionally participate in an event or transaction.

interested party. (17c) A party who has a recognizable stake (and therefore standing) in a matter. — Abbr. IP. [Cases: Action ⇨ 13; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 103.2.]

necessary party. (18c) A party who, being closely connected to a lawsuit, should be included in the case if feasible, but whose absence will not require dismissal of the proceedings. See compulsory joinder under nominal party. (18c) A party to an action who has no control over it and no financial interest in its outcome; esp., a party who has some immaterial interest in the subject matter of a lawsuit and who will not be affected by any judgment, but who is nonetheless joined in the lawsuit to avoid procedural defects. • An example is the disinterested stakeholder in a garnishment action. — Also termed formal party. Cf. real party in interest. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 102; Parties ⇨ 4.] party aggrieved. See aggrieved party.

party cast. The losing party in a lawsuit.

party in interest. See real party in interest.

party opponent. (18c) An adversary in a legal proceeding. — Sometimes written party-opponent.

party to be charged. (1923) A defendant in an action to enforce a contract falling within the statute of frauds.

prevailing party. (17c) A party in whose favor a judgment is rendered, regardless of the amount of damages awarded <in certain cases, the court will award attorney's fees to the prevailing party>. — Also termed successful party. See Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 603, 121 S.Ct. 1835, 1839 (2001) (relying on the seventh edition of Black's Law Dictionary [1999]). [Cases: Costs ⇨ 32, 194.14; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2727, 2737.1.] proper party. (1823) A party who may be joined in a case for reasons of judicial economy but whose presence is not essential to the proceeding. See permissive joinder under JOINDER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 241; Parties ⇨ 14, 25.]

real party in interest. (1804) A person entitled under the substantive law to enforce the right sued upon and who generally, but not necessarily, benefits from the action's final outcome. — Also termed party in interest; (archaically) interessee. Cf. nominal party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 131; Parties ⇨ 6(2).]

"[T]he 'real party in interest' is the party who, by the substantive law, possesses the right sought to be enforced, and not necessarily the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery. . . . The concept of real party in interest should not be confused with the concept of standing. The standing question arises in the realm of public law, when governmental action is attacked on the ground that it violates private rights or some constitutional principle. . . . Unfortunately, . . . confusion between standing on the one hand and real party in interest or capacity on the other has been increasing." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 70, at 490 & n.2 (5th ed. 1994).

successful party. See prevailing party.

third party. See THIRD PARTY.

3. POLITICAL PARTY.

party-column ballot. See BALLOT (4).

parum cavisse videtur (par-əm kə-vis-ee v1-dee-tər). [Latin] Hist. He seems to have taken too little care; he seems to have been incautious. • This expression was used by a judge when pronouncing a death sentence.

par value. The value of an instrument or security as shown on its face; esp., the arbitrary dollar amount assigned to a stock share by the corporate charter, or the principal of a bond at maturity. — Often shortened to par. — Also termed face value; nominal value; stated value. [Cases: Corporations ⇨99(3).]

"At one time par value had considerable importance because it was widely viewed as the amount for which the shares would be issued: shares with a par value of one hundred dollars could be subscribed for at one hundred dollars per share with confidence that all other identical shares would also be issued for $100. This practice, however, long ago fell into disuse. Today, par value serves only a minor function and is in no way an indication of the price at which the shares are issued, with this one exception: The one basic rule about setting the price for shares of common stock with a par value is that the price must be equal to or greater than par value." Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 109 (3d ed. 1991).

par-value stock. See STOCK.

parvis (pahr-vis). [fr. Old Fr. pareis "paradise," fr. Late Latin paradus "garden"] Hist. An academic exercise, such as a moot court. — Also spelled pervise; parvise.

pass, vb. (14c) 1. To pronounce or render an opinion, ruling, sentence, or judgment <the court refused to pass on the constitutional issue, deciding the case instead on procedural grounds>. 2. To transfer or be transferred <the woman's will passes title to the house to her nephew, much to her husband's surprise>. 3. To enact (a legislative bill or resolution); to adopt <Congress has debated whether to pass a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution>. See ADOPTION (5). 4. To approve or certify (something) as meeting specified requirements <the mechanic informed her that the car had passed inspection>. 5. To publish, transfer, or circulate (a thing, often a forgery) <he was found guilty of passing counterfeit bills>. 6. To forgo or proceed beyond <the case was passed on the court's trial docket because the judge was presiding over a criminal trial>. 7. ABSTAIN (1).

passage, n. 1. ADOPTION (5); esp., the passing of a legislative measure into law. [Cases: Statutes ⇨17.] 2. A right, privilege, or permission to cross land or water; an easement to travel through another's property. 3. The process of traveling, esp. in transit <safe passage>. 4. The act of coming and going <right of passage>.

pass-along, adj. See PASS-THROUGH.

passbook. A depositor's book in which a bank records all the transactions on an account. — Also termed bankbook.

passed dividend. See DIVIDEND.

passim (pas-im), adv. [Latin] (17c) Here and there; throughout (the cited work). • In modern legal writing, the citation signal see generally is preferred to passim as a general reference, although passim can be useful in a brief's index of authorities to show that a given authority is cited throughout the brief.

passing off, n. (1900) Intellectual property. The act or an instance of falsely representing one's own product as that of another in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. • Passing off is actionable in tort under the law of unfair competition. It may also be actionable as trademark infringement. — Also termed palming off; misrepresentation of source. Cf. MISAPPROPRIATION. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨41; Trademarks ⇨1428(1).] — pass off, vb.

reverse passing off. The act or an instance of falsely representing another's product as one's own in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. — Also termed reverse palming off. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2727, 2737.1.]

passive, adj. Not involving active participation; esp., of or relating to a business enterprise in which an investor does not have immediate control over the activity that produces income.

passive activity. (1962) Tax. A business activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate and therefore does not have immediate control over the income. • A typical example is the ownership and rental of real property by someone not in the real-property business. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3418.]

passive adoption-registry statute. See ADOPTION-REGISTRY STATUTE.

passive bond. See BOND (3).

passive breach of contract. See BREACH OF CONTRACT.

passive concealment. See CONCEALMENT.

passive conduct. See CONDUCT.

passive debt. See DEBT.

passive duty. See negative duty under DUTY (1). passive euthanasia. See EUTHANASIA.

passive income. See INCOME.

passive investment income. See INCOME.

passive loss. See LOSS.

passive mercy killing. See DYATHANASIA.

passive negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

passive trust. See TRUST.

pass-on defense. See DEFENSE (1).

passport. 1. A formal document certifying a person's identity and citizenship so that the person may travel to and from a foreign country. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⇨674.] 2. SEA LETTER. 3. SAFE CONDUCT.

"A passport is the universally accepted evidence of a person's identity and nationality. It does not give its bearer the right to travel in another country, but it does request that other governments permit him to travel in their territories or within their jurisdictions. It also entitles him to the protection and assistance of his own diplomatic and consular officers abroad." Burdick H. Brittin, International Law for Seagoing Officers 183 (4th ed. 1981).

Passport Office. See BUREAU OF CONSULAR AFFAIRS.

pass the witness. See TAKE THE WITNESS.

pass-through, adj. (1951) (Of a seller's or lessor's costs) chargeable to the buyer or lessee. — Also termed pass-along.

pass-through security. See SECURITY.

pass-through taxation. See TAXATION.

past consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

past recollection recorded. Evidence. A document concerning events that a witness once knew about but can no longer remember. • The document itself is evidence and, despite being hearsay, may be admitted and read into the record if it was prepared or adopted by the witness when the events were fresh in the witness's memory. Fed. R. Evid. 803(5). — Also termed recorded recollection; past recorded recollection. Cf. PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 435; Evidence ⇨ 355(6).]

Pasula-Robinette test. The principle that if a miner establishes a prima facie case of retaliation for filing a claim under the Mine Safety and Health Act, the mine operator can still prevail by proving, as an affirmative defense, that (1) the miner did not engage in a protected activity, (2) the adverse action was based on the miner's unprotected activity, and (3) the mine operator would have taken the same action based solely on the unprotected activity. • To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, the evidence must show that the miner engaged in a protected activity and that an adverse employment action occurred based at least in part on that activity. 30 USCA § 815(c); Secretary ex rel. Pasula v. Consolidation Coal Co., 2 FMSHRC 2786 (1980); Secretary ex rel. Robinette v. United Coal Co., 3 FMSHRC 802 (1981).

pat-down, n. See FRISK.

pateat universis per praesentes (pat-ee-at yoo-nə-vər-sis pār pri-zen-teez). [Law Latin] Let it be open to all men by these presents. Cf. KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS; NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES.

Pate hearing. A proceeding in which the trial court seeks to determine whether a criminal defendant is competent to stand trial. Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 86 S.Ct. 836 (1966); 18 USCA § 4241. — Also termed competency hearing; incompetency hearing. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 625.10–625.35.]

patent (pay-tənt), adj. (14c) Obvious; apparent . Cf. LATENT. [Cases: Evidence ⇨ 451.]

patent (pat-ənt), n. (14c) 1. The governmental grant of a right, privilege, or authority. 2. The official document so granting. — Also termed public grant. See LETTERS PATENT.

call patent. A land patent in which the corners have been staked but the boundary lines have not been run out at the time of the grant.

escheat patent. See escheat grant under GRANT.

land patent. An instrument by which the government conveys a grant of public land to a private person. [Cases: Public Lands ⇨ 114(1).]

lapse patent. A land patent substituting for an earlier patent to the same land that lapsed because the previous patentee did not claim it.

3. The right to exclude others from making, using, marketing, selling, offering for sale, or importing an invention for a specified period (20 years from the date of filing), granted by the federal government to the inventor if the device or process is novel, useful, and nonobvious. 35 USCA §§ 101–103. • The holding of a patent alone does not by itself grant any right to make, use, or sell anything if that activity would infringe another's blocking patent. — Also termed patent right; patent grant. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 1.]

"The franchise which the patent grants consists altogether in the right to exclude everyone from making, using or vending the patented article, without the permission of the patentee. This is all he obtains by the patent." Bloomer v. McQuewan, 55 U.S. 539, 549 (1852).

"What, exactly, is a patent and how does it operate to foster the 'progress of the useful arts'? In its simplest terms a patent is an agreement between an inventor and the public, represented by the federal government: in return for a full public disclosure of the invention the inventor is granted the right for a fixed period of time to exclude others from making, using, or selling the defined invention in the United States. It is a limited monopoly, designed not primarily to reward the inventor (this may or may not follow), but to encourage a public disclosure of inventions so that after the monopoly expires, the public is free to take unrestricted advantage of the invention." Earl W. Kintner & Jack L. Lahr, An Intellectual Property Law Primer 7–11 (2d ed. 1982).

basic patent. See pioneer patent.

blocking patent. One of two patents, neither of which can be effectively practiced without infringing the other. • For example, if A patents an improvement of B's patented invention, A cannot practice the improvement without infringing B's patent. Nor can B use the improvement without infringing A's patent. Owners of blocking patents often cross-license each other. See fencing patent; DOMINATION.

broadened reissue patent. Patents. A patent that is issued again, having broader claims than the original, surrendered patent. • Under 35 USCA § 251, a patent may be reissued, under certain circumstances, with broader claims than the original patent if the reissue application is filed within two years of the grant of the original patent. See INTERVENING RIGHTS. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 141(3).]

business-method patent. A U.S. patent that describes and claims a series of process steps that, as a whole, constitutes a method of doing business. • Until 1998, methods for doing business were not expressly recognized as being patentable. In that year, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held in State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998), that business methods are subject to the same legal requirements for patentability as any other process or method. — Also termed cyberpatent. [Cases: Patents ⇨7.14.]

combination patent. A patent granted for an invention that unites existing components in a novel and nonobvious way. [Cases: Patents ⇨26.]

Community patent. An international patent issued by the European Patent Office. • Community patents are good for 20 years from the application date. They may be registered in any nation in the European Union and other EPC signatories.

copending patent. A patent whose application is being prosecuted at or near the same time as another, similar patent. • Continuing applications must be copending with an existing patent application. A copending patent may affect another patent's validity if it discloses the same invention, or discloses some part of the invention that, combined with other prior art, results in anticipation (esp. if the copending patent is issued before the affected patent). A copending patent may be shown to be an unpatentable improvement on another copending patent's invention. 35 USCA § 102(e). See COPENDING. [Cases: Patents ⇨110, 7.] cyberpatent. 1. See business-method patent. 2. See Internet patent.

design patent. A patent granted for a new, original, and ornamental design for an article of manufacture; a patent that protects a product's appearance or non-functional aspects. • Design patents — which, unlike utility patents, have a term of only 14 years from the date the patent is granted — are similar to copyrights. 36 USCA § 171. [Cases: Patents ⇨15.]

dominating patent. See fencing patent.

fencing patent. A patent procured for some aspect of an invention that the inventor does not intend to produce but that the inventor wants to prevent competitors from using in making improvements. • By making a claim whose only purpose is to protect other claims, the inventor seeks to "fence in" any such competing improvements. Courts disfavor fencing claims. — Also termed dominating patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨121.]

improvement patent. A patent having claims directed to an improvement on a preexisting invention. • If the preexisting invention is patented by another, the owner of the improvement patent may need a license to practice the invention covered by the claims of the improvement patent. Similarly, the owner of the preexisting invention's patent may need a license to practice the invention in the improvement patent. Cf. pioneer patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨9.]

in-force patent. A patent that has not expired or been ruled invalid.

Internet patent. A type of utility patent granted on an invention that combines business methods and software programs for Internet applications. — Also termed cyberpatent.

method patent. A patent having method or process claims that define a series of actions leading to a tangible physical result. — Also termed process patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨7.]

paper patent. A patent granted for a discovery or invention that has never been used commercially. • A paper patent may receive less protection under the law than a patent granted for a device that is actually used in industry. As a prior-art reference, a paper patent may carry less weight with examiners than one for an invention that has been commercially exploited, because it may suggest that the invention did not work as claimed. [Cases: Patents ⇨172.]

pioneer patent. A patent covering a function or a major technological advance never before performed, a wholly novel device, or subject matter of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, as distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before. • Under U.S. law, the claims of a pioneer patent are entitled to broader interpretation and to be given a broader range of equivalents. A pioneer patent is usu. the first one documented by a patent-tracking service, although it may not be the first patent published by a national registry, such as the PTO. — Cf. improvement patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨173.]

"To what liberality of construction these claims are entitled depends to a certain extent upon the character of the invention, and whether it is what is termed on ordinary parlance a 'pioneer.' This word, although used somewhat loosely, is commonly understood to denote a patent covering a function never before performed, a wholly novel device, or one of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before" Westinghouse v. Boyden Power Brake Co., 170 U.S. 537, 561-62, 18 S.Ct. 707, 718 (1898).

plant patent. A patent granted for the invention or discovery of a new and distinct variety of asexually reproducing plant. 36 USCA § 161. [Cases: Patents ⇨14.]

process patent. A patent for a method of treating specified materials to produce a certain result; a patent outlining a means of producing a physical result independently of the producing mechanism. • The result might be brought about by chemical action, by applying some element or power of nature, by mixing certain substances together, or by heating a substance to a certain temperature. See method patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨7.]

reissue patent. A patent that is issued to correct unintentional or unavoidable errors in an original patent, such as to revise the specification or to fix an invalid claim. • A reissue may correct patent defects that might call the validity of the patent into question. It is also used, although rarely, to make the claims broader or narrower. The patentee risks the possibility that previously allowed claims may be rejected. It does not change the term of the patent. 35 USCA § 251. — Sometimes shortened to reissue. [Cases: Patents ⇨135.]

submarine patent. Slang. A patent that is delayed in prosecution by the applicant in order to let an infringing user continue to develop its business, with the intention of taking in later-invented technology once the patent finally “surfaces” from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • Typically, the patent applicant is aware of the developments and consciously delays the PTO’s issuance of a patent, so that the invention’s unwitting users will be forced to pay license fees. As of 29 November 2000, most patent applications must be published within 18 months of filing, so submarine patents are relatively rare now. See CONTINUATION-APPLICATION LACHES DOCTRINE.

utility-model patent. See UTILITY MODEL.

utility patent. A patent granted for one of the following types of inventions: a process, a machine, a manufacture, or a composition of matter (such as a new chemical). • Utility patents are the most commonly issued patents. 35 USCA § 101. [Cases: Patents ↷ 1.]

patentability opinion. See OPINION (2).

patentability search. An inventor’s research into a field’s state of the art to determine whether an invention will qualify for patent protection. Cf. INFRINGEMENT SEARCH; VALIDITY SEARCH.

patentable, adj. Capable of being patented <patentable processes>.

patentable combination. A series of process steps, mechanical elements, or a mixture of materials that produce a desirable result or effect that is not obvious from the qualities of the individual components or steps. [Cases: Patents ↷ 7.10.]

patentable subject matter. Things that by law can be patented; any machine, process, manufacture, or material composition, or an improvement to such things, that (1) is discovered or invented, (2) is new and useful, and (3) meets the statutory conditions and requirements to qualify for a patent. • Patents may be issued for “any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof.” 35 USCA § 101. Patents may not be issued for laws of nature, naturally occurring materials, physical phenomena, or abstract ideas and formulas. But if a naturally occurring material is processed in a way that gives it a new use, that process may be patentable. — Often shortened to subject matter. — Also termed statutory subject matter. [Cases: Patents ↷ 1.]

Patent Act. The current federal statute governing patent registrations and rights, enacted in 1952. 35 USCA §§ 1 et seq. • The Act reversed several Supreme Court doctrines of patentability by eliminating the synergism and “flash of genius” requirements for combination patents (§ 103), making “means-plus-function” claims valid once again (§ 112), and narrowing the patent-misuse doctrine of contributory infringement (§ 271). — Also termed Patent Act of 1952.

Patent Act of 1790. Hist. The first U.S. patent statute, establishing a board to examine patent applications, specifications, and drawings to determine whether the invention is “sufficiently useful and important” to justify the granting of a patent. • The examining board, comprising the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, and the Attorney General, was abolished three years later in favor of a simple registration system.

Patent Act of 1793. Hist. An early U.S. patent law that (1) abandoned the examination process in favor of simple registration (2) established the infringement defenses of invalidity for lack of novelty or public use; and (3) articulated the four categories of patentable subject matter as machine, manufacture, composition of matter, and art (now called process). • The State Department handled the registration of patents, and their question of their validity was left up to the courts.

Patent Act of 1836. Hist. The U.S. statute that charged the Patent Office with examining patent applications for novelty and utility, and that first required claims in patent applications.

Patent Act of 1870. A U.S. statute that shifted the burden of disclosing the exact nature of an invention to the patent applicant by requiring a rigorous listing of distinct claims. • Before the Act was passed, patent claims were less important than the description and drawings, and the scope of the patent grant was often ambiguous.

Patent Act of 1952. See PATENT ACT.

patent agent. See AGENT (2).

patent ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.

Patent and Copyright Clause. (1929) The constitutional provision granting Congress the authority to promote the advancement of science and the arts by establishing a national system for patents and copyrights. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8. [Cases: Patents ↷ 3.]

Patent and Trademark Depository Library. A library that has been designated by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office as an official repository for information to aid in a patent or trademark search. — Abbr. PTDL.

Patent and Trademark Law Amendments Act. See BAYH-DOLE ACT.

Patent and Trademark Office. The Department of Commerce agency that examines patent and trademark applications, issues patents, registers trademarks, and furnishes patent and trademark information and services to the public. — Abbr. PTO. [Cases: Patents ↷ 97.]

patent application. An inventor’s request for a patent, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and accompanied by a specification (ending with at least one claim), drawings, the filing fee, and (except for a provisional patent application) an oath or a declaration. [Cases: Patents ↷ 98.]

allowed application. A patent application for which the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office examiner has determined that at least one pending claim meets the conditions for patentability. • When an application is allowed, the PTO notifies the applicant through a Notice of Allowability and a Notice of Allowance. Once a patent application is allowed, a patent normally issues after the applicant has paid the required issue fee. [Cases: Patents ⇨104.]

application for a reissue patent. An application by a patentee to change the scope of a patent that has already been issued, or to correct clerical or technological errors in the issued patent. • The scope of the claims can be broadened only if the application is made within two years of the date the patent was issued. See reissue patent under PATENT (3). Cf. certificate of correction. [Cases: Patents ⇨104.]

child application. A later-filed application in a chain of continuing applications filed during the pendency of an earlier application and sharing common subject matter. • The first-filed application is called the parent application. Cf. parent application. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

continued-prosecution application. A request to abandon a patent application after final rejection and reopen a new case with the same file wrapper as the parent application. • CPAs are authorized in 37 CFR § 1.53(d). — Abbr. CPA. — Also termed Rule 1.53(d) application. Cf. REQUEST FOR CONTINUED EXAMINATION. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

continuing application. A patent application that is filed while the parent application is pending and that carries on prosecution of some or all of the original application. • Continuation, continuation-in-part, divisional, and reissue applications are all forms of continuing applications. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

Convention application. A patent application filed in accordance with the terms of an international patent treaty such as the Paris Convention or the Patent Cooperation Treaty.

divisional application. A patent application based on the same disclosure as the original application but claiming a different invention. • If an examiner finds that a disclosure reveals two or more distinct inventions, the applicant must restrict the original application to claiming one of the inventions. A divisional application can then be filed on any nonelected invention, and it will keep the same filing date as the parent application. — Often shortened to divisional. — Also termed restriction application. [Cases: Patents ⇨109.]

file-wrapper continuation application. 1. See CONTINUATION. 2. See CONTINUATION-IN-PART.

grandparent application. The first-filed application in a chain of at least three continuation or continuation-in-part patent applications. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

informal application. A patent application that is not in the correct form as required by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • According to the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure, an application is informal if it is printed on both sides of the paper, or is not permanent, legible, or reproducible. An informal application may be corrected and still retain the original filing date. [Cases: Patents ⇨98.]

international application. An application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty for patent protection in specified member nations. • A PCT filing may be added as long as 31 months after the initial filing in a national patent office. It allows for simultaneous patent searches and examinations in multiple countries. — Also termed PCT application; PCT filing. See PATENT COOPERATION TREATY.

international application designating the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty and specifically seeks patent protection in the United States. • The application may be filed in any nation, including the U.S., that is a party to the treaty.

international application originating in the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty. • Under the treaty, the PTO acts as a receiving office for international applications. The applicant may or may not be seeking patent protection in the U.S. [Cases: Patents ⇨97.]

parent application. The first-filed application in a chain of later-filed continuation or continuation-in-part applications. • An application becomes the parent application when another type of application (such as continuation, divisional, or substitute) is filed. The term “parent” is generally not used to refer to a provisional application. Cf. child application. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

provisional application. An application that can be filed up to a year before the patent application itself, in order to establish a date for prior art and constructive reduction to practice. • The PPA must include a full description of the invention, but claims, drawings and prior-art disclosures are not required. — Also termed provisional patent application. — Abbr. PPA. [Cases: Patents ⇨98.]

restriction application. See divisional application.

Rule 1.53 application. See continued-prosecution application.

substitute application. A duplicate application filed after the response period for a first office action has expired and the first application has been deemed abandoned. • A substitute application carries some danger for the applicant: the original filing date is lost, and any developments since that date become prior art that the examiner must consider before granting the patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨110.]

patent-application amendment. A modification to a patent application, usu. narrowing or eliminating some claims in response to an examiner's rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨109.]

amendment after allowance. An amendment submitted to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office after the PTO has mailed notice of a patent application's approval. • Once a notice of allowance has been mailed, prosecution of the application is closed on the merits, and the entry of any amendment is within the discretion of the patent examiner. Amendments after allowance commonly address such matters as an amendment to the specification or claims, a change in the drawings or the list of inventors, and the submission of prior art. Amendments that merely correct formal matters in the specification or drawings, change the claims without changing their scope, or cancel a claim are typically approved by the Office. Amendments of greater significance require approval of the supervisory examiner under policies established by the group director. CFR § 1.312. — Also termed 312 amendment; Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after payment of issue fee. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.] amendment after appeal. An amendment made after an appeal is taken from a patent application's final rejection. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is frequently allowed if it puts the case in better form for consideration on appeal or helps implement an examiner's recommendation. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.]

amendment after final action. An amendment made after final rejection of the patent application. • The amendment may drop claims but not add them. To be entered, it may make changes in form, but may not raise new issues for the examiner. CFR § 1.116. — Also termed Rule 116 amendment. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.]

amendment after payment of issue fee. An amendment made by the applicant after the application has been allowed and the issue fee paid. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is governed by 37 CFR § 1.312. It must be accompanied by a petition to the Commissioner showing good and sufficient reasons why the amendment was not presented earlier. See amendment after allowance. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.]

amendment in excess of filing fee. An amendment to a patent application that increases the number of claims in the original application and requires payment of an additional fee.

preliminary amendment. An amendment filed before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office issues an office action on a patent application. • Amendments that are not filed with the original application are not considered part of the original disclosure. — Also termed amendment before first action. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.]

Rule 116 amendment. See amendment after final action.

Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after allowance.

312 amendment. See amendment after allowance.

patent attorney. A lawyer who drafts and prosecutes patent applications, and who represents inventors in infringement suits and interference hearings. • In addition to a law license, a patent attorney must have a scientific or technical background, pass the patent bar examination, and be licensed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 97.]

patent claim. A formal statement describing the novel features of an invention and defining the scope of the patent's protection <claim #3 of the patent describes an electrical means for driving a metal pin>. Cf. SPECIFICATION (3). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101.]

"[The patent] application concludes with one or more 'claims,' which are summaries of the points of novelty of the invention disclosed by the specification, said claims also following certain fixed forms. If they are broad and in general terms, the patentee will be well protected, and will be the possessor of a worth while patent; but if, on the other hand, the claims are limited in scope, if they recite a multiplicity of exactly stated and unimportant elements, or if they are bad in any one of a number of other ways, the chances of success are small, the patent will be full of loopholes of which infringers will be prompt to take advantage, the inventor will not have received all he is entitled to, nor all he has paid for, and, if the claims are very limited, it is more than likely that he will have obtained a patent not worth the paper upon which it is printed." Richard B. Owen, Patents, Trademarks, Copyrights, Departmental Practice 14 (1925).

apparatus claim. A patent claim on a mechanical device, explaining how the components are connected and function together. • The preamble of an apparatus claim typically states the function of the machine; the body explains its elements and how they work together.

appendant claim. See dependent claim.

closed-ended claim. A patent claim that expressly limits its scope to a list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase "consisting of." Cf. nearly closed-ended claim; open-ended claim. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(3).]

coined-name claim. A chemical-patent claim consisting only of the name of the new material. • A coined-name claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only on the rare occasion when the name is established in the field before the patent is applied for. The chemical composition, its physical properties, and the process for making it must still be disclosed in the specification.

dependent claim. A patent claim that refers to and further limits another claim or set of claims in the same patent application. — Also termed appendant claim. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 165(5).]

design claim. The single claim allowed in an application for a design patent, incorporating by reference the drawing and other specifications. • The brief claim typically starts with "an ornamental design for" and

fingerprint claim. A chemical-patent claim that differentiates the material from prior art in terms of some physical feature, such as melting point or spectrum, rather than its chemical composition. • Fingerprint claims are allowed only when the chemical composition cannot be determined or cannot be distinguished from prior art.

generic claim. A claim that encompasses a class of elements, any of which could function as equivalents. • For a generic claim to be valid, the specific elements it encompasses must have a definable feature in common that makes them fit for the purpose. — Also termed genus claim. Cf. species claim. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(5).] improvement claim. See Jepson claim.

independent claim. A patent claim that does not refer to any other claim.

Jepson claim. An improvement-patent claim characterized by a preamble setting forth the current state of the art, followed by the phrase "the improvement comprising" and a description of the claimed patentable improvement. • The name comes from Ex parte Jepson, 1917 C.D. 62, 243 O.G. 526 (Ass't Comm'r Pat. 1917), in which this type of claim was first approved and sanctioned by the Commissioner of Patents. — Also termed improvement claim.

Markush claim. A patent claim that includes elements listing alternative chemicals, materials, or steps in a process. • A Markush claim typically has language such as "selected from the group consisting of." The alternatives must all give the same result, rather than patentably distinct products. The name derives from Ex parte Markush, 1925 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 126. See MARKUSH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(7).]

means-combination claim. A type of claim in a patent application that includes multiple limitations, at least one of which is in means-plus-function or step-plus-function form. • Means-combination claims are acceptable to examiners. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(10).]

means-plus-function claim. See MEANS-PLUS-FUNCTION CLAUSE.

method claim. A patent claim that describes what is done to a workpiece in order to achieve the useful result claimed. • A method claim is the same thing as a process claim, but "method" is used more often in applications for mechanical and electrical devices. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(11).]

multiple-dependent claim. A dependent claim that refers to more than one other preceding claim.

nearly closed-ended claim. A patent claim that limits its scope to a list of elements but does not expressly exclude close analogues. The claim is typically introduced by a phrase such as "consisting essentially of." Cf. closed-ended claim; open-ended claim.

new-use claim. A method claim for a new way of using an existing invention. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 27(1).]

nonelected claim. A claim that has been withdrawn from consideration based on the examiner's finding that the application claims more than one invention. • The applicant must elect to prosecute one invention. Other claims may either be abandoned or else be prosecuted separately under a divisional application. See RESTRICTION (4).

nonstatutory claim. See omnibus claim.

omnibus claim. A claim in a patent application that does not distinctly narrate a means to carry out a function but rather refers to the drawings or description with phrases such as "as described and shown." • Omnibus claims are rejected in the United States but are accepted elsewhere. — Also termed nonstatutory claim. Cf. design claim.

open-ended claim. A patent claim that contains a nonexclusive list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase "consisting of." • A later patent applicant cannot avoid infringement by merely adding an analogue to the list. Cf. closed-ended claim; nearly closed-ended claim.

plant-patent claim. The single claim in a plant-patent application, describing the principal distinguishing characteristics of the plant.

process claim. A patent claim that describes by steps what is done to the subject matter, usu. a substance, in order to achieve a useful result. • A process claim is the same thing as a method claim, but "process" is used more often in applications for chemical patents. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(11).]

product-by-process claim. A patent claim defining a product through the process by which it is made. • The product-by-process claim is most often used to define new chemical compounds, such as drugs. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(11).]

product claim. A patent claim that covers the structure, apparatus, or composition of a product.

single-means claim. A type of claim in a patent application that indicates a process, result, or function but does not describe the method of reaching that end . • Where no other method is obvious, such an assertion claims rights to all possible ways of achieving the result — ways not specified in the application and even ways that have not yet been invented. Single-means claims are rejected as too broad. — Also termed single-element means claim. Cf. MEANS-PLUS-FUNCTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(8).] species claim. A claim that is limited to a single apparatus, process, composition of matter, or article of manufacture, rather than to a range of similar and related items. Cf. generic claim.

Squires claim. A utility-patent claim that incorporates a drawing or table by reference. • This claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only if there is no practical way to define the invention in words, but the invention is simple to illustrate with the drawing or table. See SQUIRES DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ↷101(4).]

subcombination claim. A patent claim, usu. on a device, describing a subsystem of a larger combination. • A subcombination may be patented separately if it has its own utility. [Cases: Patents ↷101(10).]

Patent Cooperation Treaty. A 1970 treaty that streamlined the process of securing patents in multiple countries by establishing a single filing date and providing for a single preliminary patent search. • An inventor who wants to qualify for patents from several member countries files a standard application in one country, thus preserving the priority date, then submits a PCT filing that designates which other countries' patents are being applied for. WIPO, the United Nations' World Intellectual Property Organization, administers the treaty. — Often shortened to PCT. See international application under PATENT APPLICATION. [Cases: Patents ↷97.] patent danger. See apparent danger (1) under DANGER.

patent deed. See LETTERS PATENT (2).

patent defect. See DEFECT.

patent disclaimer. See statutory disclaimer under DISCLAIMER.

patentee (pat-ən-tee). One who either has been granted a patent or has succeeded in title to a patent. • Although it might seem helpful to distinguish a patentee as a person to whom a patent is issued and a patent-holder as the owner of a patent, including the original grantee's assigns, the Patent Act explicitly includes all title-holders under the term "patentee." 35 USCA § 100(d). — Also termed patent-holder; patent-owner. [Cases: Patents ↷90, 117.]

patent-exhaustion doctrine. Patents. The rule that the unconditioned sale of a patented article ends the patentee's monopoly right to control its use. • That control may still be exercised by limitations in a contract or license, as long as it does not amount to anticompetitive patent misuse. Adams v. Burke, 84 U.S. (17 Wall.) 453 (1874). See FIRST-SALE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ↷191.]

patent-holder. See PATENTEE.

patent infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

patent insurance. See INSURANCE.

patent marking. The incorporation or affixation of a patent number to a patented article's surface or surrounding packaging. • Affixing the patent number to a product gives constructive notice of patent rights to infringers. Without the number in place, a patentee can not recover losses that occur before the infringer has actual notice of the patent. 35 USCA § 287. See PATENT NUMBER. [Cases: Patents ↷222.]

patent medicine. A packaged drug that is protected by trademark and is available without prescription. [Cases: Health ↷302-308.]

patent-misuse doctrine. An equitable rule that patentees should not be allowed to use their patent to effectively broaden the scope of their monopoly in restraint of trade or otherwise against the public interest. • Two common examples of anticompetitive broadening are (1) using a patent to restrain competition from an unpatented product or process, and (2) employing the patent beyond its lifespan to exclude others from gaining commercial advantages by using the product or process. The practical effect of finding patent misuse is the loss of patent protection. The doctrine operates independently of antitrust law but overlaps it in many ways and arose in the same era, at the turn of the 20th century. It has been described as an application of the equitable rule of "unclean hands." See nonmetered license under LICENSE. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷587(3), 682, 732.]

patent number. Patents. The unique eight-character number assigned by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to a patent upon issuance. See PATENT MARKING.

Patent Office. See UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

Patent Office Reports. Hist. The former official publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • It was replaced in 1872 by the Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office.

patent of precedence. Hist. A royal grant to a person by letters patent of a higher social or professional rank than the person would ordinarily hold or be entitled to. • In the 19th and early 20th centuries, the patent was most often used to give certain barristers more rights and privileges. For example, a King's Counsel could not represent a party against the Crown without a patent of precedence. See PREAUDIENCE.

patentor (pat-ən-tər or pat-ən-tor). One who grants a patent.

patent-owner. See PATENTEE.

patent pending. (1917) The designation given to an invention while the Patent and Trademark Office is processing the patent application. • No protection against infringement exists, however, unless an actual patent is granted. — Abbr. pat. pend. [Cases: Patents ↷104.]

patent pooling. The cross-licensing of patents among patentees. • Patent pooling does not violate antitrust laws unless it is done to suppress competition or control an industry. [Cases: Monopolies ↷12(15).]

patent-right dealer. A person who buys and sells or brokers the sale or purchase of patent rights.

Patent Roll. Hist. A list of the letters patent issued in the United Kingdom in any given year. • The first Patent Roll was issued in England in 1201. The Rolls

- were originally used to grant offices, lands, licenses, peerages, and pensions. In later centuries, they included grants of patents for inventions.
- patent search. 1. See INFRINGEMENT SEARCH. 2. See PATENTABILITY SEARCH. 3. See VALIDITY SEARCH.
- patent solicitor. See patent agent under AGENT (2).
- patent suppression. The deliberate nonuse of a patent, esp. in order to deny the public or competitors the benefit of the invention. • Patent suppression is a rich source of urban legend, such as the rumor of oil companies sitting on inventions that would greatly improve gas mileage, or pantyhose companies suppressing a patent on no-run nylon. But the stories are not always fictional: in 1942 Standard Oil admitted trying to delay synthetic-rubber technology in order to protect its market in natural rubber.
- patent term. The period during which a patent is in force. [Cases: Patents ↻131.]
- patent-term adjustment. A compulsory extension of the time a utility or plant patent remains in force, following administrative delays in prosecuting the application. • A provision of the American Inventors' Protection Act of 1999, the extension is available for new applications, continuation applications, and divisional applications filed since May 29, 2000. — Abbr. PTA. Cf. PATENT-TERM EXTENSION. [Cases: Patents ↻133.]
- patent-term extension. A lengthening of the time a patent remains in force, given to compensate inventors for time lost because of administrative delays such as interferences, secrecy orders, or appeals. • The extension applies to original utility and plant patents issued after June 7, 1995 and before May 29, 2000. Its maximum length is five years. Cf. PATENT-TERM ADJUSTMENT. [Cases: Patents ↻133.]
- patent-term guarantee. An inventor's statutory right to extend the term of a patent if the application was delayed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • The term can be extended up to five years if the application was delayed because of an interference proceeding or appellate review, or if the PTO missed a statutory deadline for certain steps in the prosecution, or failed to grant the patent within three years of the filing date. The guarantee took effect May 29, 2000. [Cases: Patents ↻133.]
- patent watch. A system for continually monitoring published patent applications and newly issued patents in a particular scientific or technological field to detect or ensure against infringements.
- patent writ. See WRIT.
- pater (pay-tər), n. [Latin] Father.
- paterfamilias (pay-tər-fə-mil-ee-əs or pah-tər-), n. [Latin] Roman law. The male head of a family or household, the senior ascendant male; esp., one invested with potestas (power) over another. — Also termed homo sui juris. See patria potestas under POTESTAS.
- paternal, adj. (15c) Of, relating to, or coming from one's father <paternal property>. Cf. MATERNAL.
- paternalism, n. (1873) A government's policy or practice of taking responsibility for the individual affairs of its citizens, esp. by supplying their needs or regulating their conduct in a heavyhanded manner. — paternalistic, adj.
- paternal line. See LINE.
- paternal-line descent. See DESCENT.
- paternal property. See PROPERTY.
- paterna paternis (pə-tər-nə pə-tər-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. Goods acquired through the father descend to those connected with him. • The phrase invoked the distinction between the succession of consanguinean half-brothers and uterine half-brothers. Cf. MATERNA MATERNIS.
- paternity (pə-tər-ni-tee). (15c) 1. The state or condition of being a father, esp. a biological one; fatherhood. Cf. FILIATION. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻1.] 2. ATTRIBUTION RIGHT.
- paternity action. See PATERNITY SUIT.
- paternity presumption. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.
- paternity suit. (1945) A court proceeding to determine whether a person is the father of a child (esp. one born out of wedlock), usu. initiated by the mother in an effort to obtain child support. — Also termed paternity action; parentage action; bastardy proceeding; bastardy process. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻30.]
- paternity test. (1926) A test, usu. involving DNA identification or tissue-typing, for determining whether a given man is the biological father of a particular child. See DNA IDENTIFICATION; HUMAN-LEUKOCYTE ANTIGEN TEST; BLOOD-GROUPING TEST. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻45, 58.]
- pater patriae (pay-tər pay-tree-ee or pa-tree-ee). [Latin] Father of the country. See PARENS PATRIAE.
- pathological intoxication. See INTOXICATION.
- pathology (pə-thol-ə-gee), n. (17c) The branch of medical study that examines the origins, symptoms, and nature of diseases. — pathological (path-ə-loj-i-kəl), adj. — pathologist (pə-thol-ə-jist), n.
- patiens (pay-shee-enz), n. [Latin] A person who suffers or permits; the passive party in a transaction. Cf. AGENS (1).
- patient, n. A person under medical or psychiatric care. [Cases: Health ↻576.]

- patient's bill of rights. (1973) A general statement of patient rights voluntarily adopted by a healthcare provider or mandated by statute, covering such matters as access to care, patient dignity and confidentiality, personal safety, consent to treatment, and explanation of charges. [Cases: Health ↻582.]

pat. pend. abbr. PATENT PENDING.

patria (pay-tree-ə or pa-tree-ə), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The fatherland; a person's home area. 2. Hist. The country or the area within it, such as a county or neighborhood. 3. Hist. A jury, as when a defendant "puts himself upon the country" (ponit se super patriam). See CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY; GOING TO THE COUNTRY; PAYS.

"Though our Latin uses patria, our French uses pays, which descends from Latin pagus. The 'country' of this formula is not our father-land but 'the country-side.'" 2 Frederic Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 624 n.1 (2d ed. 1899).

patria potestas. See POTESTAS.

patriation. Canadian law. The process of transferring constitution-related legislation or documents from a former colonial power to a nation that was once a dependency of that power.

"The word 'patriation' is a Canadian neologism that describes the bringing of the Canadian Constitution to Canada. Although this may sound strange to non-Canadian readers, Canada's formal Constitution was, before 1982, to be found in a U.K. statute. Therefore, only the U.K. Parliament was competent to amend it and to formally terminate its authority over future constitutional amendments. As a U.K. statute, the Canadian Constitution had never been in Canada. Therefore, it could not be 'repatriated.' Hence the use of the word 'patriation.'" Jean-Francois Gaudreault-Desbiens, The Quebec Secession Reference and the Judicial Arbitration of Conflicting Narratives About Law, Democracy, and Identity, 23 Vt. L. Rev. 793, 807 n.43 (1999).

patrician (pə-trish-ən), n. Roman law. One of a privileged class of Roman citizens, as contrasted with plebeians. • Originally probably the rank was only by birth. They monopolized all the priesthoods and probably their class was defined by religious prerogatives, but membership in the senate was not confined to patricians. They lost their monopolies by B.C. 300, but one consul continued to be a patrician, and they held at least half the priestly offices. Emperors could and did confer patrician status on favored individuals. The hereditary patricians disappeared in the third century A.D., but later emperors revived the title as a personal honor for faithful service.

patricide (pa-trə-sid), n. (16c) 1. The act of killing one's own father. 2. One who kills his or her father. Cf. PAR-RICIDE. — patricidal, adj.

pattern of racketeering activity. (1972) Two or more related criminal acts that amount to, or pose a threat of, continued criminal activity. • This phrase derives from the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. See RACKETEERING. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↻24, 104.]

pattern-or-practice case. A lawsuit, often a class action, in which the plaintiff attempts to show that the defendant has systematically engaged in discriminatory activities, esp. by means of policies and procedures. • Typically, such a case involves employment discrimination, housing discrimination, or school segregation. A plaintiff must usu. show that a defendant's behavior forms a pattern of actions or is embedded in routine practices but inferences of executive or official complicity may be drawn from a consistent failure to respond to complaints or implement corrective measures. [Cases: Civil Rights ↻1033(1), 1074, 1139.] pattern similarity. See comprehensive nonliteral similarity under SIMILARITY.

paucital (paw-si-təl), adj. Rare. See IN PERSONAM.

Pauline privilege. Eccles. law. The doctrine that a baptized person's marriage to a never-baptized person may be dissolved under certain circumstances, when dissolution is beneficial to the Roman Catholic Church.

- The privilege is ordinarily exercised when (1) the marriage was valid, (2) the baptized spouse now wishes to marry a Catholic, and (3) at the time of the marriage, both parties were unbaptized in any faith. Before the privilege can be exercised, (1) the unbaptized spouse must have deserted the baptized spouse without just cause, (2) the unbaptized spouse must still be unbaptized, (3) the baptized spouse must make the proper appeals to the Church, and (4) the Church must rule that the privilege is exercisable. There is uncertainty about the extent of the privilege. Cf. PETRINE PRIVILEGE.

pauper. (16c) A very poor person, esp. one who receives aid from charity or public funds; INDIGENT. See IN FORMA PAUPERIS. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇨3.]

peculatus (pek-yə-lay-təs), n. [Latin] Roman law. The offense of stealing or embezzling public funds; peculation. Cf. FURTUM (1).

peculiar, adj. Special; particular <peculiar benefit>.

peculiar, n. Hist. Eccles. law. A district, parish, chapel, or church that was not subject to a bishop's jurisdiction. • Peculiars were created, usu. under papal authority, to limit a bishop's power. There were several types, including royal peculiars (e.g., the Chapel Royal at St. James's Palace or St. George's in Windsor), peculiars of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and peculiars of bishops and deans. The jurisdiction and privileges of the peculiars were abolished by various statutes in the 19th century.

peculiar benefit. See special benefit under BENEFIT.

peculiar-risk doctrine. (1958) The principle that an employer will be liable for injury caused by an independent contractor if the employer failed to take reasonable precautions against a risk that is peculiar to the contractor's work and that the employer should have recognized. — Also termed peculiar-risk exception. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 3156.]

peculium (pi-kyoo-lee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. Property or money given by the head of a household to a son or slave, to be used at that person's discretion for living expenses or business transactions; property at the disposal of the slave or son-in-power.

pedophile. One who engages in pedophilia.

pedophilia. (1906) 1. A sexual disorder consisting in the desire for sexual gratification by molesting children, esp. prepubescent children. 2. An adult's act of child molestation. • Pedophilia can but does not necessarily involve intercourse. The American Psychiatric Association applies both senses to perpetrators who are at least 16 years old and at least five years older than their victims. Cf. PEDERASTY.

Peeping Tom. (18c) A person who spies on another (as through a window), usu. for sexual pleasure; VOYEUR. — Also termed peeper. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct ↻123.]

peer, n. 1. A person who is of equal status, rank, or character with another.

"The commonalty, like the nobility, are divided into several degrees; and, as the lords, though different in rank, yet all of them are peers in respect of their nobility, so the commoners, though some are greatly superior to others, yet all are in law peers, in respect of their want of nobility . . ." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 391 (1765).

2. A member of the British nobility (such as a duchess, marquis, earl, viscount, or baroness). — peerage (peer-ij), n.

"The Crown has power to create any number of peers and of any degree. In modern practice the power is exercised on the advice of the Prime Minister and the honour is most commonly a reward for political services. Peerages can be, and have been, conferred for party political reasons; 12 were created in 1712 to save the government, and 16 to help pass the Reform Bill in 1832. In 1832 and 1911 the Opposition of the House of Lords was overcome by the threat to create enough peers to secure a majority. . . . The main privilege of a peer is to sit and vote in the House of Lords." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 942 (1980).

peer-reviewed journal. (1980) A publication whose practice is to forward submitted articles to disinterested experts who screen them for scholarly or scientific reliability so that articles actually published have already withstood expert scrutiny and comment.

peine forte et dure (pen for tay door or payn fort ay dyoor). [French "strong and hard punishment"] Hist. The punishment of an alleged felon who refused to plead, consisting of pressing or crushing the person's body under heavy weights until the accused either pleaded or died.

"In all other felonies, however, the punishment of peine forte et dure was, until lately, denounced as the consequence of an obstinate silence. The greatest caution and deliberation were indeed to be exercised before it was resorted to; and the prisoner was not only to have 'trina admonitio,' but a respite of a few hours, and the sentence was to be distinctly read to him, that he might be fully aware of the penalty he was incurring." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 425-26 (2d ed. 1826).

"In old English law, a person charged with felony who, refusing to accept jury trial, was pressed to death (peine forte et dure), was not regarded as committing suicide, so that he did not forfeit his property." Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 270 n.4 (1957).

pell. See CLERK OF THE PELLs.

pellex (pel-eks), n. [Latin] Roman law. A concubine.

penal (pee-nəl), adj. (15c) Of, relating to, or being a penalty or punishment, esp. for a crime.

"The general rule is that penal statutes are to be construed strictly. By the word 'penal' in this connection is meant not only such statutes as in terms impose a fine, or corporal punishment, or forfeiture as a consequence of violating laws, but also all acts which impose by way of punishment damages beyond compensation for the benefit of the injured party, or which impose any special burden, or take away or impair any privilege or right." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 344 (3d ed. 1914).

"The word penal connotes some form of punishment imposed on an individual by the authority of the state.

Where the primary purpose of a statute is expressly enforceable by fine, imprisonment, or similar punishment the statute is always construed as penal." 3 Norman J. Singer, Sutherland Statutes and Statutory Construction § 59.01, at 1 (4th ed. 1986).

penal action. See ACTION (4).

penal bill. See penal bond under BOND (2).

penal servitude. Confinement in prison with hard labor. See HARD LABOR. Cf. IMPRISONMENT.

penal statute. See STATUTE.

penal sum. (17c) The monetary amount specified as a penalty in a penal bond. See penal bond under BOND (2).

penalty. (15c) 1. Punishment imposed on a wrongdoer, usu. in the form of imprisonment or fine; esp., a sum of money exacted as punishment for either a wrong to the state or a civil wrong (as distinguished from compensation for the injured party's loss). • Though usu. for crimes, penalties are also sometimes imposed for civil wrongs. [Cases: Penalties ⇨ 1.]

civil penalty. (17c) A fine assessed for a violation of a statute or regulation <the EPA levied a civil penalty of $10,000 on the manufacturer for exceeding its pollution limits>.

statutory penalty. (18c) A penalty imposed for a statutory violation; esp., a penalty imposing automatic liability on a wrongdoer for violation of a statute's terms without reference to any actual damages suffered. [Cases: Penalties ⇨ 1.]

2. An extra charge against a party who violates a contractual provision.

prepayment penalty. (1948) A charge assessed against a borrower who elects to pay off a loan before it is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 429; Mortgages ⇨ 298(1); Usury ⇨ 61.]

3. Excessive stipulated damages that a contract purports to impose on a party that breaches. • If the damages are excessive enough to be considered a penalty, a court will usu. not enforce that particular provision of the contract. Some contracts specify that a given sum of damages is intended "as liquidated damages and not as a penalty" — but even that language is not foolproof. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 80.] 4. PENALTY CLAUSE.

"A penalty is a sum which a party . . . agrees to pay or forfeit in the event of a breach, but which is fixed, not as a pre-estimate of probable actual damages, but as a punishment, the threat of which is designed to prevent the breach, or as security, where the sum is deposited or the covenant to pay is joined in by one or more sureties, to insure that the person injured shall collect his actual damages. Penalties . . . are not recoverable or retainable as such by the person in whose favor they are framed . . ." Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 146, at 600 (1935).

penalty clause. (1843) A contractual provision that assesses against a defaulting party an excessive monetary charge unrelated to actual harm. • Penalty clauses are generally unenforceable. — Often shortened to penalty. — Also termed penal clause. Cf. LIQUIDATED-DAMAGES CLAUSE; LIMITATION-OF-REMEDIES CLAUSE. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 76, 80.]

"It not infrequently happens that contracts provide for what is to happen in the event of a breach by the parties, or by one of them. Such provisions may be perfectly simple attempts to avoid future disputes, and to quantify the probable amount of any loss. That is unobjectionable. But sometimes clauses of this kind are not designed to quantify the amount of the probable loss, but are designed to terrorize, or frighten, the party into performance. For example, a contract may provide that the promisor is to pay £5 on a certain event, but if he fails to do so, he must then pay £500. Now a clause of that kind is called a penalty clause by lawyers, and for several hundred years it has been the law that such promises cannot be enforced. The standard justification for the law here is that it is unfair and unconscionable to enforce clauses which are designed to act in terrorem." P.S. Atiyah, Promises, Morals, and Law 57-58 (1981).

penalty phase. (1959) The part of a criminal trial in which the fact-finder determines the punishment for a defendant who has been found guilty. — Also termed sentencing phase. Cf. GUILT PHASE. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 325, 1774.]

penalty point. A punishment levied for a traffic offense and accumulated on the driver's record. • If a driver receives a statutorily set number of points, the driver's license may be restricted, suspended, or terminated. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 144.1(3).]

penance. Eccles. law. A punishment assessed by an ecclesiastical court for some spiritual offense.

pend, vb. (18c) (Of a lawsuit) to be awaiting decision or settlement.

pendency (pen-dən-see), n. (17c) The state or condition of being pending or continuing undecided.

pendens. See LIS PENDENS.

pendent (pen-dənt), adj. (18c) 1. Not yet decided; pending . 2. Of or relating to pendent jurisdiction or pendent-party jurisdiction

<pendent parties>. [Cases: Federal Courts ↻14.1.]
3. Contingent; dependent <pendent upon a different claim>.

pendent-claim jurisdiction. See pendent jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

pendente lite (pen-den-tee li-tee), adv. [Latin “while the action is pending?”] During the proceeding or litigation; in a manner contingent on the outcome of litigation. — Also termed lite pendente. Cf. LIS PENDENS.

pendente lite administration. See administration pendente lite under ADMINISTRATION.

pendente processu (pen-den-tee prə-sēs-[y]oo). [Law Latin] Hist. During the pendency of the process.

pendentes fructus (pen-den-teez [frək-təs]). [Latin] Hist. Hanging fruits. • These fruits — as distinguished from fruits that have been gathered — must be restored to a real owner who defeats the claims of a bona fide possessor. — Sometimes shortened to pendentes.

pendente tutela (pen-den-tee [y]oo-tee-lə). [Latin] Hist. During the tutory.

pendent jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

pendent-party jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

pendent-venue doctrine. The principle that once venue is established for a federal claim, proof of venue for additional federal claims, cross-claims, and counter-claims is unnecessary. [Cases: Federal Courts ↻71.]

pending, prep. (17c) 1. Throughout the continuance of; during <in escrow pending arbitration>. 2. While awaiting; until <the injunction was in force pending trial>.

pending, adj. (17c) 1. Remaining undecided; awaiting decision . 2. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) under consideration; moved by a member and stated by the chair as a question for the meeting’s consideration. See CONSIDERATION (2); ON THE FLOOR. • A motion may be immediately pending, meaning that it is directly under consideration, being the last motion stated by the chair and next in line for a vote; or it may be pending subject to other motions of higher rank that have taken precedence over it. See immediately pending motion and pending motion under MOTION (2).

pending-ordinance doctrine. The principle that a municipality may properly deny an application for a property use that, although it would satisfy existing law, would violate a law that is pending when the application is made. • This doctrine was judicially created, mainly to short-circuit landowners’ attempts to circumvent a new ordinance by applying for a nonconforming use on the eve of its approval. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↻376.]

penetration, n. 1. Criminal law. The entry of the penis or some other part of the body or a foreign object into the vagina or other bodily orifice. • This is the typical meaning today in statutes defining sexual offenses. — Also termed intromission. See RAPE (1). [Cases: Rape penetration pricing. Pricing of a new product below its anticipated market price to enter a market and capture market share by breaking down existing brand loyalties.

penitentiary (pen-ə-ten-shə-ree), n. (1807) A correctional facility or other place of long-term confinement for convicted criminals; PRISON. [Cases: Prisons ↻213.] — penitentiary, adj.

penitentiary misdemeanor. See serious misdemeanor under MISDEMEANOR.

Pennoyer rule (pə-noy-ər). (1968) The principle that a court may not issue a personal judgment against a defendant over whom it has no personal jurisdiction. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 (1877). [Cases: Judgment ↻16.]

Pennsylvania rule. Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who violates a statute in the process of causing an injury has the burden of showing that the violation did not cause the injury. The Pennsylvania, 86 U.S. (19 Wall.) 125, 136 (1874). [Cases: Collision ↻123; Shipping ↻86(2.3).]

penny stock. See STOCK.

penology (pee-nol-ə-jee), n. (1838) The study of penal institutions, crime prevention, and the punishment and rehabilitation of criminals, including the art of fitting the right treatment to an offender. Cf. CRIMINOLOGY. — penological (pee-nə-loj-i-kəl), adj. — penologist (pee-nol-ə-jist), n.

pen register. (1953) A mechanical device that logs dialed telephone numbers by monitoring electrical impulses. • Because a pen register does not record the telephone conversation, it may not constitute a Fourth Amendment search requiring a search warrant (though it does need a court order). Some states, however, do consider the use of a pen register invasive enough to require a search warrant. Cf. WIRETAPPING. [Cases: Telecommunications ↻1465] pensio (pen-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A payment for the use of a thing, such as rent for the use of another’s house.

pension. (16c) A fixed sum paid regularly to a person (or to the person’s beneficiaries), esp. by an employer as a retirement benefit. Cf. ANNUITY (3). [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻419.]

vested pension. A pension in which an employee (or employee’s estate) has rights to benefits purchased with the employer’s contributions to the plan, even if the employee is no longer employed by this employer at the time of retirement. • The vesting of qualified pension plans is governed by ERISA. See EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻548.]

Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor that was responsible for regulating employee pension plans under the Employees Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and for enforcing the Act through its field offices. • It has been replaced by the Employee Benefits Security Administration. — Abbr. PWBA. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻408.]

Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. A self-financing federal corporation that guarantees payment of pension benefits in covered benefit pension plans. — Abbr. PBGC. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻522.]

pensioner. A recipient or beneficiary of a pension plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻534.]

pension plan. 1. Under ERISA, any plan, fund, or program established or maintained by an employer or an employee organization that provides retirement income to employees or results in a deferral of income by employees extending to the termination of employment or beyond. 29 USCA § 1002(2)(A). [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻419.] 2. Under the Internal Revenue Code, an employer's plan established and maintained primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to employees over a period of years, usu. for life, after retirement. See EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. Cf. EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

contributory pension plan. A pension plan funded by both employer and employee contributions. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻419.] defined-benefit pension plan. A pension plan in which an employer commits to paying an employee a specific benefit for life beginning at retirement. • The amount of the benefit is based on factors such as age, earnings, and years of service. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻422.]

defined-contribution pension plan. See defined-contribution plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

defined pension plan. A pension plan in which the employer promises specific benefits to each employee. — Also termed fixed-benefit plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻422.]

noncontributory pension plan. A pension plan funded solely by the employer's contributions. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻419.]

nonqualified pension plan. A deferred-compensation plan in which an executive increases retirement benefits by annual additional contributions to the company's basic plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻430.]

qualified pension plan. A pension plan that complies with federal law (ERISA) and thus allows the employee to receive tax benefits for contributions and tax-deferred investment growth. — Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻419, 430.]

top-hat pension plan. An unfunded pension plan that is maintained by an employer primarily for the purpose of providing deferred compensation for a select group of managers or highly paid employees. • Top-hat plans are generally not subject to the broad remedial provisions of ERISA because Congress recognized that certain individuals, by virtue of position or compensation level, can substantially influence the design or operation of their deferred-compensation plans. — Often shortened to top-hat plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻432.] pension trust. See TRUST.

Pentagon Force Protection Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for operating the Pentagon police force and providing basic law enforcement and security for the Pentagon and other military installations in the Washington, D.C. area. • The Agency was formed after the Pentagon was attacked on 11 September 2001. — Abbr. PFFA.

penumbra (pi-nəm-brə), n. (18c) A surrounding area or periphery of uncertain extent. • In constitutional law, the Supreme Court has ruled that the specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights have penumbras containing implied rights, esp. the right of privacy. Pl. penumbras, penumbrae (pi-nəm-bree). — penumbral (pi-nəm-brəl), adj.

"Problems of fringe meaning are sometimes spoken of as 'problems of the penumbra', the point being that, in the case of a great many words, there is no doubt about the hard core of their meanings, but different views may well be taken on the question whether the words are applicable to things or situations outside that hard core." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 57 (1976).

penuria peritorum (pə-nyoor-ee-ə per-i-tor-əm). [Latin] Hist. A scarcity of (legally) skilled men. • The phrase appeared in reference to the grantor's lack of proper assistance in preparing and executing a conveyance.

penuria testium (pə-nyoor-ee-ə tes-tee-əm). [Latin] Hist. A scarcity of witnesses.

"The disqualifications formerly attaching to witnesses, and especially that of relationship, were sometimes disregarded in occult or private facts, where there must, from the nature of the case, be a scarcity of unexceptionable witnesses. . . . It was not enough in this sense, to constitute a penuria testium, to prove that the other evidence was scanty and defective; it had to be shown farther that the penuria was necessarily occasioned by the very nature of the question at issue." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 798 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

peonage (pee-ə-nij), n. (1844) Illegal and involuntary servitude in satisfaction of a debt. [Cases: Slaves ↻24.] — peon, n.

"Peonage, which is a term descriptive of a condition that existed in Spanish America, and especially in Mexico, and in the territory of New Mexico, and which may be defined as the status or condition of compulsory service based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master, the basic fact being the indebtedness, is abolished and prohibited by an act of Congress which further declares that any statute, resolution, regulation, ordinance, or usage of any territory or state designed or operating to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service or labor of any persons as peons, in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, shall be null and void [42 USCA § 1994].” 45 Am. Jur. 2d Involuntary Servitude and Peonage § 10, at 935-36 (1969).

people. (usu. cap.) (1801) The citizens of a state as represented by the prosecution in a criminal case <People v. Snyder>.

people's court. (1912) 1. A court in which individuals can resolve small disputes. See small-claims court under COURT. [Cases: Courts ↷174.1.] [Cases: Courts ↷174.] 2. Hist. (cap.) In Nazi Germany, a tribunal that dealt with political offenses. • In German, Volksgerichtshof.

people-smuggling. The crime of helping a person enter a country illegally in return for a fee. Cf. human trafficking under TRAFFICKING; SMUGGLING. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↷776.]

peppercorn. A small or insignificant thing or amount; nominal consideration <the contract was upheld despite involving mere peppercorn>. See nominal consideration under CONSIDERATION; peppercorn rent under RENT. [Cases: Contracts ↷54.]

per (pər), prep. [Latin] (14c) 1. Through; by <the dissent, per Justice Thomas>. 2. For each; for every <55 miles per hour>. 3. In accordance with the terms of; according to <per the contract>.

per aequipollens (pər ee-kwi-pol-enz). [Latin] Hist. By an equivalent.

per aes et libram (pər ees et li-brəm). [Latin] Roman law. By bronze (or copper) and scales. • The phrase typically referred to the fictitious sale in a mancipation during which the purchaser struck the scales with a piece of bronze or copper and then gave it to the seller as a symbol of the price. See MANCIPATION.

per alium stetit (pər ay-ee-əm stet-it). [Latin] Hist. It was owing to (something done by) another.

per ambages (pər am-bay-jeez). [Latin] Hist. Indirectly; evasively.

perambulation. The act or custom of walking around the boundaries of a piece of land, either to confirm the boundaries or to preserve evidence of them.

perambulatione facienda. See DE PERAMBULATIONE FACIENDA.

per annum (pər an-əm), adv. [Latin] (16c) By, for, or in each year; annually <interest of eight percent per annum>.

P/E ratio. abbr. PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

per autre vie. See PUR AUTRE VIE.

per aversionem (pər ə-vər-zhee-oh-nəm). [Latin “for a lump sum”] Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a sale in which goods are taken in bulk or land is bought by estimation of the number of acres. • This type of sale is so called because the buyer “turns away” from a careful scrutiny of the things purchased.

“It is a fundamental principle, pervading everywhere the doctrine of sales of chattels, that if the goods of different value be sold in bulk, and not separately, and for a single price, or per aversionem, in the language of the civilians, the sale is perfect, and the risk with the buyer; but if they be sold by number, weight, or measure, the sale is incomplete, and the risk continues with the seller, until the specific property be separated and identified.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *496 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

per bouche (pər boosh). [Law French] By the mouth; orally.

per capita (pər kap-i-tə), adj. [Latin “by the head”] (17c) 1. Divided equally among all individuals, usu. in the same class <the court will distribute the property to the descendants on a per capita basis>. Cf. PER STIRPES. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷43; Wills ↷530.]

per capita with representation. (1935) Divided equally among all members of a class of takers, including those who have predeceased the testator, so that no family stocks are cut off by the prior death of a taker. • For example, if T (the testator) has three children — A, B, and C — and C has two children but predeceases T, C’s children will still take C’s share when T’s estate is distributed.

2. Allocated to each person; possessed by each individual <the average annual per capita income has increased over the last two years>. — per capita, adv.

per capita tax. See poll tax under TAX.

percentage depletion. Oil & gas. A method of allowing a taxpayer who owns an economic interest in a producing oil or gas well to deduct a specified percentage of the gross income from the well in lieu of depleting the actual basis. 26 USCA § 611. Cf. COST DEPLETION. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3493.]

percentage game. See GAME.

percentage lease. See LEASE.

percentage-of-completion method. See ACCOUNTING METHOD.

percentage order. See ORDER (8).

perception. 1. An observation, awareness, or realization, usu. based on physical sensation or experience; appreciation or cognition. • The term includes both the actor’s knowledge of the actual circumstances and the actor’s erroneous but reasonable belief in the existence of nonexistent circumstances. 2. Roman & civil law. The act of taking into possession (as rents, profits, etc.), esp. by a bona fide possessor or usufructuary. — Also termed (in Roman law) perceptio (pər-sep-shee-oh).

percepti sed non consumpti (pər-sep-ti sed non kən-səmp-ti). [Latin] Hist. Fruits gathered but not consumed.

percipient witness. See WITNESS.

percolating water. See WATER.

per collationem bonorum (pər kə-lay-shee-oh-nəm bə-nor-əm). [Latin] Scots law. By bringing goods received into account (collation). • When heirs-at-law, or heirs who had received from a deceased ancestor during the ancestor's lifetime, wished to share in the legitim fund, they had to bring in (to collate) what they had received before the legitim could be shared out. See COLLATION (2).

per consequens (pər kən-sə-kwenz). [Latin] By consequence; consequently.

per considerationem curiae (pər kən-sid-ə-ray-shee-oh-nəm kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] By the consideration of the court.

per contra (pər kən-trə). [Latin] (16c) On the other hand; to the contrary; by contrast.

per cur. abbr. Per curiam. See per curiam opinion under OPINION (1).

per curiam (pər kyoor-ee-əm), adv. & adj. [Latin] (15c) By the court as a whole. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 107.]

per curiam, n. See per curiam opinion under OPINION (1).

per curiam opinion. See OPINION (1).

per diem (pər dī-əm or dee-əm), adv. [Latin] (15c) By the day; for each day. Cf. IN DIEM.

per diem, adj. (18c) Based on or calculated by the day <per diem interest>.

per diem, n. (1812) 1. A monetary daily allowance, usu. to cover expenses. 2. A daily fee.

perdonatio utlagariae (pər-də-nay-shee-oh ət-lə-gair-ee-ee). [Law Latin "pardon of outlawry"] Hist. A pardon given to a person outlawed for failing to obey a court's summons. • A person who voluntarily surrendered was eligible for this type of pardon.

perduellio (pər-d[y]oo-el-ee-oh), n. [Latin "treason"] Roman law. The crime of hostility to one's native country; treasonous conduct, such as joining the enemy or deserting the battlefield. • This term corresponds to the English phrase high treason. In the Roman republic, several acts might constitute perduellio, such as assuming regal power; trying to subvert, by violence, the established form of government, esp. by fomenting internal rebellion; and promoting the designs of external foes. Perduellio was later absorbed into a broader category of crimes against the state, the crimen laesae majestatis. — Also termed (in English) perduellion (pər-d[y]oo-el-yən). See CRIMEN MAJESTATIS.

perdurable (pər-d[y]uur-ə-bəl), adj. (15c) (Of an estate in land) lasting or enduring; durable; permanent.

peregrinus (per-i-grī-nəs), n. Roman law. A free person who was not a Roman citizen; a free foreigner. Pl. pergrini.

perempt (pər-empt), vb. 1. Civil law. To quash, do away with, or extinguish. 2. Slang. To exercise a peremptory challenge.

peremption (pər-emp-shən), n. Civil law. A period of time fixed by statute for the existence of a right. • If the right is not exercised during this period, it is extinguished. Whereas prescription simply bars a specific remedy, peremption bars the action itself. Cf. PRESCRIPTION (1). See STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 1, 165.]

peremptoria litis et causae (pər-emp-tor-ee-ə li-tis et kaw-zee). [Law Latin] Hist. Decisive of the suit and cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to peremptory defenses, to which there could be no reply.

peremptory (pər-emp-tə-ree), adj. (15c) 1. Final; absolute; conclusive; incontrovertible <the king's peremptory order>. 2. Not requiring any shown cause; arbitrary <peremptory challenges>.

peremptory, n. See peremptory challenge under CHALLENGE (2). peremptory challenge. See CHALLENGE (2).

peremptory day. See DAY.

peremptory defense. See DEFENSE (1).

peremptory exception. See EXCEPTION (1).

peremptory instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

peremptory mandamus. See MANDAMUS.

peremptory norm. See JUS COGENS (2).

peremptory plea. See PLEA (3).

peremptory rule. See RULE (1).

peremptory strike. See peremptory challenge under CHALLENGE (2).

peremptory writ. See WRIT.

per eundem (pər ee-ən-dəm). [Latin] By the same. • This term often appears in the phrase per eundem in eadem ("by the same judge in the same case").

per expressum (pər ek-spres-əm). [Latin] Hist. Expressly; explicitly.

per fas aut nefas (pər fas awt nee-fas). [Latin] Hist. By lawful or unlawful means.

perfect (pər-fekt), vb. (14c) To take all legal steps needed to complete, secure, or record (a claim, right, or interest); to provide necessary public notice in final conformity with the law <perfect a security interest> <perfect the title>. [Cases: Secured Transactions ⇨ 81.]

perfect attestation clause. (1875) A testamentary provision asserting that all actions required to make a valid testamentary disposition have been performed. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 113, 289, 302(5).]

perfect competition. See COMPETITION.

perfect defense. See DEFENSE (1).

perfect duty. See DUTY (1).

perfected security interest. See SECURITY INTEREST.

perfect equity. See EQUITY.

perfect grant. See GRANT.

perfecting amendment. See AMENDMENT (3).

perfect instrument. See INSTRUMENT (3).

perfection. Validation of a security interest as against other creditors, usu. by filing a statement with some public office or by taking possession of the collateral. Cf. ATTACHMENT (4). [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷ 81-96, 138-145.]

automatic perfection. The self-operative perfection of a purchase-money security interest without filing or without possession of the collateral. • The security interest is perfected simply by the attachment of the security interest, without any additional steps. See purchase-money security interest under SECURITY INTEREST. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷ 83, 146.]

temporary perfection. The continuous perfection of a security interest for a limited period. • For example, a security interest in proceeds from the original collateral is perfected for ten days after the debtor receives the proceeds; the interest will become unperfected after this ten-day period unless certain statutory requirements are met. On most instruments, a secured party who advances new value under a written security agreement obtains a 21-day perfection period, even if the secured party does not file a financing statement and the collateral remains with the debtor. UCC § 9-304(4). [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷ 135, 168.] perfect obligation. See OBLIGATION.

perfect ownership. See OWNERSHIP.

perfect self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE.

perfect tender. See TENDER (3).

perfect-tender rule. (1970) Commercial law. The principle that a buyer may reject a seller's goods if the quality, quantity, or delivery of the goods fails to conform precisely to the contract. • Although the perfect-tender rule was adopted by the UCC (§ 2-601), other Code provisions — such as the seller's right to cure after rejection — have softened the rule's impact. Cf. SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Sales ↷ 177.]

"At common law, a buyer of goods possessed a legal right to insist upon 'perfect tender' by the seller. If the goods failed to conform exactly to the description in the contract — whether as to quality, quantity or manner of delivery — the buyer could reject the goods and rescind the contract, which meant that the parties would be returned to the positions they occupied before the contract was entered into." Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 112 (1990).

perfect title. See TITLE (2).

perfect trial. See TRIAL.

perfect usufruct. See USUFRUCT.

perfect war. See WAR.

per feloniam (pər fə-loh-nee-əm). [Latin] Hist. With criminal intent.

perficere susceptum munus (pər-fis-ər-ee sə-sep-təm myoo-nəs). [Latin] Scots law. To perform the duties of an office undertaken. • One assuming an office could not then capriciously resign from the office. See REBUS INTEGRIS.

perfidy (pər-fə-dee). Int'l law. A combatant's conduct that creates the impression that an adversary is entitled to, or is obliged to accord, protection under international law, when in fact the conduct is a ruse to gain an advantage. • Acts of perfidy include feigning an intent to negotiate under a flag of truce, or feigning protected status by using signs, emblems, or uniforms of the United Nations or of a neutral country.

per formam doni (pər fɔr-məm dōh-ni). [Law Latin] By the form of the gift; by the designation of the giver rather than by operation of law.

performance, n. (16c) 1. The successful completion of a contractual duty, usu. resulting in the performer's release from any past or future liability; EXECUTION (2). — Also termed full performance. Cf. NONPERFORMANCE; MISPERFORMANCE. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 275.]

defective performance. (1832) A performance that, whether partial or full, does not wholly comply with the contract. • One example is late performance. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 280(1), 302.]

future performance. (17c) Performance in the future of an obligation that will become due under a contract.

misperformance. See MISPERFORMANCE.

nonperformance. See NONPERFORMANCE.

part performance. (18c) 1. The accomplishment of some but not all of one's contractual obligations. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 319.] 2. A party's execution, in reliance on an opposing party's oral promise, of enough of an oral contract's requirements that a court may hold the statute of frauds not to apply. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of ↷ 129.] 3. PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE.

specific performance. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

substantial performance. (18c) Performance of the primary, necessary terms of an agreement. See SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 293.]

vicarious performance. Performance carried by an employee, agent, or other nominee.

"It is necessary . . . to distinguish between assignment of a contractual liability and vicarious performance of a contract. Normally a person who contracts to do something must do it himself. But in the case of a duty of performance which involves no personal element, so that it does not matter to the other party who does the promised act, so long as it is done in accordance with the contract, the party liable may do it by a servant or agent or other nominee. This is not an assignment of the contractual liability, for the original contractor remains liable and if the deputy has done the work badly it is not the deputy but the contractor himself who is answerable to the other party." 2 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 76-77 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

2. The equitable doctrine by which acts consistent with an intention to fulfill an obligation are construed to be in fulfillment of that obligation, even if the party was silent on the point. 3. A company's earnings. 4. The ability of a corporation to maintain or increase earnings.

performance bond. 1. A bond given by a surety to ensure the timely performance of a contract. • In major international agreements, performance bonds are typically issued by banks, but sometimes also by insurance companies. The face amount of the bond is typically 2% of the value of performance, but occasionally as much as 5%. [Cases: Principal and Surety ⇨ 59-87; Public Contracts ⇨ 45.] 2. A third party's agreement to guarantee the completion of a construction contract upon the default of the general contractor. — Also termed completion bond; surety bond; contract bond. Cf. common-law bond under BOND (2). [Cases: Principal and Surety ⇨ 82.]

nonoperative performance bond. A performance bond that is not currently in effect but is activated upon the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other approved financing.

operative performance bond. A performance bond that has been activated by the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other approved financing. [Cases: Public Contracts ⇨ 45.]

revolving performance bond. A performance bond that is in effect on a continuing basis for the duration of the contract, usu. plus an additional number of days (often 45).

up-front performance bond. A performance bond given before the issuance of the buyer's letter of credit or other financing.

performance bonus. See BONUS.

performance contract. See CONTRACT.

performance fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

performance plan. A bonus compensation plan in which executives are paid according to the company's growth.

performance right. A copyright holder's exclusive right to recite, play, act, show, or otherwise render the protected work publicly, whether directly or by technological means (as by broadcasting the work on television). • Every public performance of a copyrighted work requires authorization from the copyright owner or its representative, unless a statutory ephemeral-recording exemption applies. — Also termed public-performance right. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 36.]

performance shares. Stock given to an executive when the corporation meets a performance objective.

performance specification. See STATEMENT OF WORK.

performance stock. See glamour stock under STOCK.

per fraudem (pər fraw-dəm), adv. [Latin] By fraud; fraudulently.

periculo petentis (pə-rik-yə-loh pə-ten-tis). [Latin] Hist. At the risk of the person seeking. • A private person was liable in damages for a judicial warrant wrongfully issued at that person's insistence.

"[A] creditor seeking a warrant for the apprehension of his debtor as in meditatione fugae, obtains it periculo petentis, and he, not the judge, will be liable in damages if the debtor can show that the obtaining of the warrant and the using of it were illegal." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 454 (4th ed. 1894).

periculosus (pər-ik-yə-loh-səs), adj. [Latin] Dangerous; perilous.

periculum (pə-rik-yə-ləm), n. [Latin] Civil law. Peril; danger; risk. Pl. pericula.

peril. (13c) 1. Exposure to the risk of injury, damage, or loss <the perils of litigation>.

inescapable peril. (1933) A danger that one cannot avoid without another's help. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 530(1).]

2. Insurance. The cause of a risk of loss to person or property; esp., the cause of a risk such as fire, accident, theft, forgery, earthquake, flood, or illness <insured against all perils>. Cf. RISK (3). [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2140, 2219.]

peril of the sea. An action of the elements at sea of such force as to overcome the strength of a well-founded ship and the normal precautions of good marine practice. • A peril of the sea may relieve a carrier from liability for the resulting losses. — Also termed danger of navigation; danger of river; marine peril; marine risk; (in regard to the Great Lakes) perils of the lakes; danger of the sea. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2220; Shipping ⇨ 120.]

"Of the marine perils, by far the most important are those 'of the seas'. What is covered is not any loss that may happen on the sea, but fortuitous losses occurring through extraordinary action of the elements at sea, or any accident or mishap in navigation. By far the greatest number of claims for marine loss, and of the insurance problems connected with other topics treated in this book arise under this clause. Extraordinary action of the wind and waves is a sea peril. Collision, foundering, stranding, striking on rocks and icebergs, are all covered under these words. Even a swell from a passing ship may be a 'peril of the sea'. On the other hand, ordinary wear and tear are not included under the coverage of this or any other phrase in the clause, nor are losses which are anticipatable as regular incidents of sea carriage in general or of navigation in a particular part of the world." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-9, at 72-73 (2d ed. 1975).

perimere causam (pə-rim-ə-ree kaw-zəm). [Latin] Hist. To put an end to the cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to the legal effect of a preemptory defense. See preemptory defense under DEFENSE (1).

perinatal (per-i-nayt-əl), adj. Of or relating to the period from about the 12th week of gestation through the 28th day of life. Cf. NEONATAL.

per incuriam (pər in-kyoor-ee-əm), adj. (Of a judicial decision) wrongly decided, usu. because the judge or judges were ill-informed about the applicable law.

"There is at least one exception to the rule of stare decisis. I refer to judgments rendered per incuriam. A judgment per incuriam is one which has been rendered inadvertently. Two examples come to mind: first, where the judge has forgotten to take account of a previous decision to which the doctrine of stare decisis applies. For all the care with which attorneys and judges may comb the case law, errare humanum est, and sometimes a judgment which clarifies a point to be settled is somehow not indexed, and is forgotten. It is in cases such as these that a judgment rendered in contradiction to a previous judgment that should have been considered binding, and in ignorance of that judgment, with no mention of it, must be deemed rendered per incuriam; thus, it has no authority. . . . The same applies to judgments rendered in ignorance of legislation of which they should have taken account. For a judgment to be deemed per incuriam, that judgment must show that the legislation was not invoked." Louis-Philippe Pigeon, Drafting and Interpreting Legislation 60 (1988).

"As a general rule the only cases in which decisions should be held to have been given per incuriam are those of decisions given in ignorance or forgetfulness of some inconsistent statutory provision or of some authority binding on the court concerned, so that in such cases some features of the decision or some step in the reasoning on which it is based is found on that account to be demonstrably wrong. This definition is not necessarily exhaustive, but cases not strictly within it which can properly be held to have been decided per incuriam, must in our judgment, consistently with the stare decisis rule which is an essential part of our law, be of the rarest occurrence." Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 149 (4th ed. 1991).

perinde est ac si scriptum non esset (pər-in-dee est ak si skrip-təm non es-et). [Latin] Scots law. It is the same as if it had not been written. • A deed that failed to convey the grantor's meaning adequately could not be supplemented by extrinsic evidence and would be void for uncertainty.

per infortunium (pər in-for-t[y]oo-nee-əm), adj. or adv. [Latin] By misadventure. • At common law, when one person killed another per infortunium, a conviction and royal pardon were necessary even when there was no fault. See homicide per infortunium under HOMICIDE.

"It may seem strange to modern minds that for centuries it was a rule of our law that a man who killed another either by misadventure (per infortunium) or in reasonable self-defence (against an attack not itself felonious), although he did not commit a felony, must yet be held guilty of unlawful homicide and require the King's pardon if he were to escape punishment, and even if granted pardon would still be liable to suffer forfeiture of his property; and that he was exposed to claims for compensation from the family of the deceased." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 113 (16th ed. 1952).

per insidias et industriam (pər in-sid-ee-əs et in-dəs-tree-əm). [Latin] Hist. By stratagem and on purpose; intentionally.

periodic alimony. See permanent alimony under ALIMONY.

periodic audit. See AUDIT.

periodic estate. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

periodic payment. See PAYMENT.

periodic-payment-plan certificate. See STOCK CERTIFICATE.

periodic tenancy. See TENANCY.

period of prescription. The period fixed by local law as sufficient for obtaining or extinguishing a right through lapse of time. • In addition to a fixed number of years, the period includes whatever further time is allowed by local law because of infancy, insanity, coverture, and other like circumstances. See PRESCRIPTIVE RIGHT; PRESCRIPTION (3), (4), (5).

periphrasis (pə-rif-rə-sis), n. (16c) A roundabout way of writing or speaking; circumlocution. — periphrastic (pər-ə-fras-tik), adj.

perishable-food-disparagement act. See AGRICULTURAL-DISPARAGEMENT LAW.

perjury (pər-jər-ee), n. (14c) The act or an instance of a person's deliberately making material false or misleading statements while under oath. — Also termed false swearing; false oath; (archaically) forswearing. [Cases: Perjury ⇨ 1-12.] — perjure (pər-jər), vb. — perjured (pər-jərd), perjurious (pər-juur-ee-əs), adj. — perjurer (pər-jər-ər), n.

perjury-trap doctrine. (1989) The principle that a perjury indictment against a person must be dismissed if the prosecution secures it by calling that person as a grand-jury witness in an effort to obtain evidence for a perjury charge, esp. when the person's testimony does not relate to issues material to the grand-jury's ongoing investigation. [Cases: Perjury ⇨ 10, 15.]

per legem terrae (pər lee-jəm ter-ee). [Law Latin] By the law of the land; by due process of law.

Perlman doctrine. The principle that a discovery order directed at a disinterested third party is immediately appealable on the theory that the third party will not risk contempt by refusing to comply. • The doctrine originated in Perlman v. United States, 247 U.S. 7, 13, 38 S.Ct. 417, 420 (1918). The Court reasoned that the third party's ability to protect his or her rights would be thwarted if the party could not appeal immediately. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 1023(3); Federal Courts ⇨ 574.] permanency hearing. See HEARING.

permanency plan. A proposed written strategy for the eventual permanent placement of a child who has been removed from his or her parents. • A permanency plan, ideally, provides either for the child's safe return to one or both parents or for the child's adoption. If neither of these alternatives is possible, then the plan will provide for long-term foster care, relative care, or guardianship. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the choice of last resort. — Also termed permanent plan. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 222, 226.] permanency-planning hearing. See permanency hearing under HEARING.

permanent abode. See DOMICILE (1).

permanent alimony. See ALIMONY.

permanent allegiance. See ALLEGIANCE.

permanent chargé d'affaires. See CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES.

per membra curiae (pər mem-brə kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. By members of the court.

per metas et bundas (pər mee-təs et bən-dəs). [Law Latin] By metes and bounds.

per minas. See duress per minas under DURESS.

permissible appointee. See APPOINTEE.

permissible-repair doctrine. See REPAIR DOCTRINE.

permission. (15c) 1. The act of permitting. 2. A license or liberty to do something; authorization.

express permission. Permission that is clearly and unmistakably granted by actions or words, oral or written.

implied permission. 1. Permission that is inferred from words or actions. 2. See implied consent under CONSENT.

3. Conduct that justifies others in believing that the possessor of property is willing to have them enter if they want to do so. Cf. INVITATION.

permissive abstention. See ABSTENTION.

permissive counterclaim. See COUNTERCLAIM.

permissive inference. See permissive presumption under PRESUMPTION.

permissive joinder. See JOINDER.

permissive presumption. See PRESUMPTION.

permissive statute. See STATUTE.

permissive subject of bargaining. Labor law. An employment or collective-bargaining issue, other than a basic employment issue, that is not required to be the subject of collective bargaining but that cannot be implemented by management without union approval. • For example, altering the scope of the bargaining unit does not affect a term or condition of employment, so it is a permissive, instead of mandatory, subject of bargaining. Disagreement on a permissive subject of bargaining cannot be used as the basis for an impasse in negotiating a collective-bargaining agreement, unlike a mandatory subject of bargaining. — Often shortened to permissive subject. Cf. MANDATORY SUBJECT OF BARGAINING. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 1126.] permissive tenant. See tenant at sufferance under TENANT.

permissive use. See USE (4).

permissive waste. See WASTE (1).

permit (pər-mit), n. (17c) A certificate evidencing permission; a license .

permit (pər-mit), vb. (15c) 1. To consent to formally <permit the inspection to be carried out>. 2. To give opportunity for <lax security permitted the escape>. 3. To allow or admit of <if the law so permits>.

permit bond. See license bond under BOND (2).

permit card. Labor law. A document issued by a union to a nonunion member to allow the person to work on a job covered by a union contract.

permittee (pər-mi-tee). One who has permission to do something.

subpermittee. A person who receives permission to act from a permittee.

per mitter le droit (pər mit-ər lə droyt). [Law French] Hist. By passing the right. • This described how releases became effective, as when a person disseised of land released the estate to the disseisor, at which time the right and possession combined to give the disseisor the entire estate.

per mitter l'estate (pər mit-ər lə-stayt). [Law French] Hist. By passing the estate. • This described the manner in which a joint tenant's right to an entire estate arose when the tenant received the remaining estate from the other joint tenant.

per modum exceptionis (pər moh-dəm ek-sep-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. By way of exception.

per modum gratiae (pər moh-dəm gray-shee-ee). [Latin] Hist. By way of favor.

per modum justitiae (pər moh-dəm jās-tish-ee-ee). [Latin] Hist. By way of justice.

per modum poenae (pər moh-dəm pee-nee). [Latin] Hist. By way of penalty.

per modum simplicis querelae (pər moh-dəm sim-pli-sis kwə-ree-lee). [Law Latin] Scots law. By way of simple complaint. • Some actions could be brought by a complaint unaccompanied by formal summons.

permutatio (pər-myoo-tay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “exchange”] Roman law. An agreement for barter or exchange. • The agreement became binding as soon as one party had transferred ownership of his thing to the other. Pl. permutationes (pər-myoo-tay-shee-oh-nee-z).

permutation. Civil law. Barter; exchange.

per my et per tout (pər mee ay pər too[t]). [Law French] By the half and by the whole. • This phrase described the estate held by joint tenants: by the half for purposes of survivorship, by the whole for purposes of alienation. Cf. PER TOUT ET NON PER MY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⇨ 1.]

pernancy (pər-nən-see). Hist. A taking or reception, as of the profits of an estate.

pernor of profits (pər-nər or -nor). Hist. A person who receives the profits of property; one who has the pernancy of the profits.

perp (pərp), n. Slang. Perpetrator <the police brought in the perp for questioning>. See PERPETRATOR.

perpars (pər-pahrz). [Law Latin, fr. Latin per partes “by parts”] See PURPART.

perparts. See PURPART.

perpetrate, vb. (16c) To commit or carry out (an act, esp. a crime) <find whoever perpetrated this heinous deed>. — perpetration, n.

perpetrator. (16c) A person who commits a crime or offense.

perpetua (pər-pech-oo-ə). See exceptio peremptoria under EXCEPTIO.

perpetual trust. See TRUST.

perpetuation of testimony. The means or procedure for preserving for future use witness testimony that might otherwise be unavailable at trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1291; Pretrial Procedure ⇨ 61.]

perpetuities, rule against. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES.

perpetuity (pər-pə-t[y]oo-ə-tee). 1. The state of continuing forever. 2. Hist. An unbarrable entail. 3. Hist. An inalienable interest. 4. An interest that does not take effect or vest within the period prescribed by law. • In reference to the rule against perpetuities, only sense 4 is now current. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. [Cases: Perpetuities ⇨ 4.]

“A perpetuity is a thing odious in law, and destructive of the Commonwealth; it would put a stop to commerce and prevent the circulation of the riches of the Kingdom, and therefore is not to be countenanced in equity. If in equity you could come nearer to a perpetuity than the rules of Common Law would admit, all men being desirous to continue their estates in their families, would settle their estates by way of trust, which might indeed make well for the jurisdiction of the court, but would be destructive of the commonwealth.” (1683) 1 Vern. 163 (per Lord North) (as quoted in George W. Keeton, English Law: The Judicial Contribution 118 (1974)).

perpetuity of the king or queen. A fiction of English law that for political purposes the king or queen is immortal; that is, a monarch dies, but the office is never vacant.

per procuracionem (pər prək-yə-ray-shee-oh-nəm). [Latin] By proxy. — Abbr. per pro.; p. proc.; p. pro.; p.p. — Also termed per procuracion.

perp walk. Slang. The act of making a suspect in custody walk before an audience, esp. members of the media. • Perp is short for perpetrator.

per quae servitia (pər kwēe sər-vish-ee-ə). [Latin “by which services”] Hist. A real action by which the grantee of a landed estate could compel the tenants of the grantor to attorn to him. • This action was abolished in the 19th century.

perquisite (pər-kwi-zit). (16c) A privilege or benefit given in addition to one’s salary or regular wages. — Often shortened to perk. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 99.]

perquisitor (pər-kwiz-ə-tər). [Latin “a seeker out”] Hist. A purchaser; esp., one who first acquires an estate by sale or gift.

per quod (pər kwod), adv. & adj. [Latin “whereby”] (17c) Requiring reference to additional facts; (of libel or slander) actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. See actionable per quod under ACTIONABLE; libel per quod under LIBEL; slander per quod under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 1, 33.]

per quod consortium amisit (pər kwod kən-sor-shee-əm ə-mī-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the company (of his wife). • This phrase was used in a trespass declaration to describe the loss suffered by a husband whose wife had been beaten or otherwise abused. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⇨ 209(3).]

per quod servitium amisit (pər kwod sər-vish-ee-əm ə-mī-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the services (of his servant). • This phrase was used in a trespass declaration to describe the loss suffered by a master whose servant had been injured by another. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 127.]

per rescriptum principis (pər ri-skrip-təm prin-si-pis). [Latin] Roman law. By the prince's rescript; by an imperial written reply to a petition.

Perringer release. See Pierringer release under RELEASE (2).

per saltum (pər sal-təm). [Latin] Hist. By a leap; without an intermediate step.

per se (pər say), adv. & adj. [Latin] (16c) 1. Of, in, or by itself; standing alone, without reference to additional facts. See actionable per se under ACTIONABLE; libel per se under LIBEL; slander per se under SLANDER. 2. As a matter of law.

persecutio (pər-sə-kyoo-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A lawsuit or civil claim under cognitio extraordinaria. See COGNITIO EXTRAORDINARIA. Pl. persecutiones (pər-sə-kyoo-shee-oh-nee-z).

persecution, n. Violent, cruel, and oppressive treatment directed toward a person or group of persons because of their race, religion, sexual orientation, politics, or other beliefs. See hate crime under CRIME. — persecute, vb.

per se deadly weapon. See deadly weapon per se under WEAPON.

persequi (pər-sə-kwi), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To claim through a judicial proceeding.

per se rule. Antitrust. The judicial principle that a trade practice violates the Sherman Act simply if the practice is a restraint of trade, regardless of whether it actually harms anyone. See SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT. Cf. RULE OF REASON.

per se violation. Antitrust. A trade practice (such as price-fixing) that is considered inherently anticompetitive and injurious to the public without any need to determine whether it has actually injured market competition.

persistent price discrimination. See PRICE DISCRIMINATION.

person. (13c) 1. A human being. — Also termed natural person.

absent person. Louisiana law. A person who has no representative in the state and whose whereabouts are not known and cannot be ascertained by diligent effort. La. Civ. Code art. 47. [Cases: Absentees ⇨2.]

adult disabled person. A child over the age of 18 for whom a parent continues to have a duty of support.

associated person. See ASSOCIATED PERSON.

disabled person. (1872) A person who has a mental or physical impairment. See DISABILITY.

disappeared person. See DISAPPEARED PERSON.

displaced person. A person who remains within an internationally recognized state border after being forced to flee a home or place of habitual residence because of armed conflict, internal strife, the government's systematic violations of human rights, or a natural or man-made disaster. — Also termed inter- nally displaced person. Cf. EVACUEE; REFUGEE. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⇨504.]

interested person. (1844) A person having a property right in or claim against a thing, such as a trust or decedent's estate. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as a business that is a creditor of a decedent. — Abbr. IP.

person in loco parentis (in loh-koh pə-ren-tis). (1827) A person who acts in place of a parent, either temporarily (as a schoolteacher does) or indefinitely (as a stepparent does); a person who has assumed the obligations of a parent without formally adopting the child. See IN LOCO PARENTIS. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨15.]

person not deceased. A person who is either living or has not yet been born.

person of incidence. (1880) The person against whom a right is enforceable; a person who owes a legal duty. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as an insurance company.

person of inherence (in-heer-ənts). (1909) The person in whom a legal right is vested; the owner of a right. • The meaning may expand to include an entity.

person of interest. A person who is the subject of a police investigation but who has not been identified by investigators as being suspected of committing the crime itself.

private person. 1. A person who does not hold public office or serve in the military. 2. Civil law. An entity such as a corporation or partnership that is governed by private law.

protected person. 1. A person for whom a conservator has been appointed or other protective order has been made. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⇨9.5, 17; Mental Health ⇨104.] 2. Int'l law. A person who is protected by a rule of international law; esp., one who is in the hands of an occupying force during a conflict. • Protected persons are entitled to a standard of treatment (including a prohibition on coercion and corporal punishment) under the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (1949). 3. English law. An inhabitant of a protectorate of the United Kingdom. • Though not a British subject, such a person is given diplomatic protection by the Crown.

2. The living body of a human being <contraband found on the smuggler's person>. 3. An entity (such as a corporation) that is recognized by law as having most of the rights and duties of a human being. • In this sense, the term includes partnerships and other associations, whether incorporated or unincorporated.

artificial person. (17c) An entity, such as a corporation, created by law and given certain legal rights and duties of a human being; a being, real or imaginary, who for the purpose of legal reasoning is treated more or less as a human being. • An entity is a person for purposes of the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses but is not a citizen for purposes of the Privileges and Immunities Clauses in Article IV § 2 and in the Fourteenth Amendment. — Also termed fictional person; juristic person; juridical person; legal person; moral person. Cf. LEGAL ENTITY. [Cases: Corporations ↻ 1.1(2).]

fictional person. See artificial person.

private person. See private person (2) under PERSON (1).

persona (pər-soh-nə), n. [Latin] Roman law. A person; an individual human being.

persona designata (pər-soh-nə dez-ig-nay-tə). [Latin] A person considered as an individual (esp. in a legal action) rather than as a member of a class.

persona dignior (pər-soh-nə dig-nee-or). [Latin] Hist. The more worthy or respectable person; the more fitting person.

persona ficta (pər-soh-nə fik-tə). [Latin "false mask"] Hist. A fictional person, such as a corporation.

"But units other than individual men can be thought of as capable of acts, or of rights and liabilities: such are Corporations and even Hereditates lacentes. Accordingly the way is clear to apply the name of person to these also. The mediaeval lawyers did so, but as they regarded Corporations as endowed with personality by a sort of creative act of the State, and received from the Roman lawyers the conception of the hereditas lacens as representing the persona of the deceased rather than as itself being a person, they called these things Personae Fictae, an expression not used by the Romans." W.W. Buckland, Elementary Principles of the Roman Private Law 16 (1912).

persona grata. See PERSONA GRATA.

persona illustris (pər-soh-nə i-ləs-tris). [Latin] Hist. A person of distinction.

persona miserabilis (pər-soh-nə miz-ə-rab-ə-lis). [Latin "a pitiable person"] Roman law. An unfortunate person, esp. because of age, illness, or status. • persona moralis (pər-soh-nə mə-ray-lis). [Latin] A collective entity that, by law or custom, is recognized as an artificial person (e.g., a church or corporation). See artificial person under PERSON (2).

A persona miserabilis received certain privileges in litigation.

persona nasciturus (pər-soh-nə nas-ə-t[y]oor-əs or -t[y]ər-əs). [fr. Latin nascor "to be born"] Roman law. An unborn child. — Sometimes shortened to nasciturus.

persona non grata. See PERSONA NON GRATA.

persona praedilecta (pər-soh-nə pree-də-lek-tə). [Law Latin] Scots law. A preferred person.

"This phrase signifies one person who, among others appointed with him as colleagues in some office, enjoys the confidence and esteem of the person appointing, more than those appointed with him. Thus a testator not unfrequently appoints among his trustees one who shall be a sine qua non — that is, one whose concurrence and consent shall be indispensable to every act of administration under the trust. Such a trustee falls within the description of a persona praedilecta." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 456 (4th ed. 1894).

persona standi in iudicio. See PERSONA STANDI IN IUDICIO.

personable, adj. (16c) Having the status of a legal person (and thus the right to plead in court, enter into contracts, etc.) .

person aggrieved. See aggrieved party under PARTY (2).

persona grata (pər-soh-nə gray-tə or grah-tə or grat-ə), n. [Latin] An acceptable person; esp., a diplomat who is acceptable to a host country. Pl. personae graetae (pər-soh-nee gray-tee or grah-tee or grat-ee). Cf. PERSONA NON GRATA.

personal, adj. (14c) 1. Of or affecting a person <personal injury>. 2. Of or constituting personal property <personal belongings>. See IN PERSONAM.

personal action. See ACTION (4).

personal asset. See ASSET.

personal bond. See BOND (2).

personal-capacity suit. See SUIT.

personal chattel. See chattel personal under CHATTEL.

personal check. See CHECK.

personal-comfort doctrine. The principle that the course of employment is not interrupted by certain acts relating to the employee's personal comfort, typically short breaks for eating, drinking, using the restroom, and the like. — Also termed personal-comfort rule.

personal-condition crime. See status crime under CRIME.

personal contract. See CONTRACT.

personal covenant. See COVENANT (4).

personal holding company. See COMPANY.

personal-holding-company tax. See holding-company tax under TAX.

personal exceptione (pər-sə-nay-lī ek-sep-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. By personal exception; by an exception based on personal reasons. — Also termed personal objectione (əb-jek-shee-oh-nee).

personal income. See INCOME.

personal indignity. See INDIGNITY.

personal injury. See INJURY.

personalis actio (pər-sə-nay-lis ak-shee-oh). [Latin] Hist. A personal action; an action in personam.

personaliter (pər-sə-nay-lə-tər), adv. [Latin] Personally; in person.

personality. (1870) 1. The legal status of one regarded by the law as a person; the legal conception by which the law regards a human being or an artificial entity as a person. — Also termed legal personality.

"Legal personality . . . refers to the particular device by which the law creates or recognizes units to which it ascribes certain powers and capacities." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 393 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

2. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) An improper reference to a member by name or in his or her personal capacity.

"No person in speaking, is to mention a member then present by his name; but to describe him by his seat in the house, or who spoke last, or on the other side of the question, nor to digress from the matter to fall upon the person, by speaking, reviling, nipping, or unmannerly words against a particular member. The consequences of a measure may be reprobated in strong terms; but to arraign the motives of those who propose or advocate it, is a personality, and against order." Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 36-37 (1801) (citations omitted).

personality theory. Intellectual property. A rationalization of intellectual-property laws, esp. copyright, drawing on the philosophy of G.W.F. Hegel, holding that personal expression is a form of self-actualization that gives the creator inalienable moral rights in the creations. • As a way of analyzing intellectual-property rights, personality theory takes the point of view of the individual inventor, author, or artist rather than that of society as a whole. Cf. LOCKEAN LABOR THEORY; UTILITARIANISM.

personal judgment. See JUDGMENT.

personal jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

personal justice. See JUSTICE (1).

personal knowledge. See KNOWLEDGE.

personal law. (18c) The law that governs a person's family matters, usu. regardless of where the person goes. • In common-law systems, personal law refers to the law of the person's domicile. In civil-law systems, it refers to the law of the individual's nationality (and so is sometimes called lex patriae). Cf. TERRITORIAL LAW.

"The idea of the personal law is based on the conception of man as a social being, so that those transactions of his daily life which affect him most closely in a personal sense, such as marriage, divorce, legitimacy, many kinds of capacity, and succession, may be governed universally by that system of law deemed most suitable and adequate for the purpose . . . [A]lthough the law of the domicile is the chief criterion adopted by English courts for the personal law, it lies within the power of any man of full age and capacity to establish his domicile in any country he chooses, and thereby automatically to make the law of that country his personal law." R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 188 (7th ed. 1974).

Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act. A 1996 federal law that overhauled the welfare system, as well as requiring states to provide a means for collecting child support by (1) imposing liens on a child-support obligor's assets, and (2) facilitating income-withholding. • The Act did away with Aid to Families with Dependent Children in favor of Temporary Assistance to Needy Families. It also limited the length of time that persons could receive welfare and tied states' receipt of federal child-support funds to their implementing enhanced paternity-establishment services. — Also termed Welfare Reform Act. See AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN; TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE TO NEEDY FAMILIES. — Abbr. PRWORA. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇨4, 194.]

personal security. See SECURITY.

personal service. (16c) 1. Actual delivery of the notice or process to the person to whom it is directed. — Also termed actual service. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻413; Process ↻48, 64.] 2. An act done personally by an individual. • In this sense, a personal service is an economic service involving either the intellectual or manual personal effort of an individual, as opposed to the salable product of the person's skill.

personal servitude. See SERVITUDE (2).

persona praedilecta. See PERSONA.

persona proposita. See PROPOSITUS.

persona standi in judicio (pər-soh-nə stan-di in joo-dish-ee-oh). [Law Latin] 1. Capacity of standing in judgment; the right to appear in court. 2. One with personal standing to vindicate a legal right.

"What persona standi is, may be more easily learned by considering the loss of it by civil death or outlawry . . . But there are others besides outlaws who have no persona standi. A pupil cannot pursue or defend; that must be done by his tutor in his name. And companies, as such, have not a persona standi . . . Persona standi applies to the status of the person, as qualified to pursue or defend in actions generally; title to pursue applies to particular actions, and requires, in addition to a persona standi, that the party have a proper legal interest in the particular action pursued or defended." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 800 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

personation. See IMPERSONATION.

person-endangering state of mind. (1990) An intent to kill, inflict great bodily injury, act in wanton disregard of an unreasonable risk to others, or perpetrate a dangerous felony. — Also termed man-endangering state of mind.

person in loco parentis. See PERSON (1).

person in need of supervision. See child in need of supervision under CHILD. — Abbr. PINS.

person of incidence. See PERSON (1).

person of inherence. See PERSON (1).

person of interest. See PERSON (1).

person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. See POSSLQ.

person with ordinary skill in the art. Patents. A fictional construct of the patent laws, denoting someone who has reasonably developed abilities in the field of the invention at issue. • The patent application must be clear and complete enough to teach a person skilled in the art how to make and use the invention without undue experimentation. [Cases: Patents ↻16(3).]

"The term 'person skilled in the art . . .' has been interpreted to mean a person having ordinary or fair information in that particular line, not necessarily a person of high scientific attainments. The skill or knowledge to be imputed to such a person will vary with the complexity of the art to which the invention relates." Archie R. McCrady, Patent Office Practice 61 (2d ed. 1946).

per stirpes (pər stər-pee-z), adv. & adj. [Latin "by roots or stocks"] (17c) Proportionately divided between beneficiaries according to their deceased ancestor's share. — Also termed in stirpes; per stirpem. Cf. PER CAPITA. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻43; Wills ↻530.]

persuade, vb. To induce (another) to do something <Steve persuaded his neighbor to sign the release after the accident>.

persuaded confession. See CONFESSION.

persuasion. (14c) The act of influencing or attempting to influence others by reasoned argument; the act of persuading.

fair persuasion. Argument, exhortation, or persuasion that does not involve harassment, threats, or misrepresentations.

persuasion burden. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION.

persuasive authority. See AUTHORITY (4).

persuasive memorandum. See MEMORANDUM.

persuasive precedent. See PRECEDENT.

per subsequens matrimonium (pər səb-sə-kwenz ma-trə-moh-nee-əm). [Latin] Roman & civil law. By subsequent marriage. • The phrase often referred to a child's legitimation by the later marriage of the child's parents.

per tacitam reconventionem (pər tas-ə-təm ree-kən-ven-shee-oh-nəm). [Latin] Hist. By a tacit renewal of the contract.

per tacitam relocationem (pər tas-ə-təm ree-loh-kay-shee-oh-nəm). [Latin] Hist. By tacit relocation. See TACIT RELOCATION.

pertain, vb. To relate to; to concern.

pertinent, adj. (15c) Pertaining to the issue at hand; relevant <pertinent testimony>.

pertinent art. 1. See analogous art under ART. 2. See relevant art under ART.

per totam curiam (pər tōh-təm kyoor-ee-əm). [Law Latin] By the whole court.

per tout et non per my (pər too[t] ay non pər mee). [Law French] By the whole and not by the half. • This phrase described the estate given to a husband and wife — both are seised of the entire estate. Cf. PER MY ET PER TOUT.

perturbator (pər-tər-bay-tər). [Law Latin] Hist. A person, esp. a man, who disturbs the peace.

perturbatrix (pər-tər-bay-triks), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A woman who disturbs the peace.

per venditionis, donationis, cessionis, vel commutationis titulum (pər ven-dish-ee-oh-nis, doh-nay-shee-oh-nis, sesh-ee-oh-nis, vel kom-yə-tay-shee-oh-nis tich-[y] ə-ləm). [Law Latin] Hist. By the title of sale, donation, cession, or barter.

"Per venditionis, donationis, cessionis, vel commutationis titulum . . . These terms were used in the older forms of conveyancing, to distinguish lands so acquired from lands acquired either by inheritance or feudal grant. They signify what is now known by the name of a singular title." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 452 (4th ed. 1894).

per verba de futuro. By words in the future tense.

per verba de futuro cum copula. [Latin] A promise of marriage in the future given to a person with whom the promisor is currently engaged in a sexual relationship. • A few states recognize the formation of a common-law marriage under these circumstances. See common-law marriage under MARRIAGE (1). [Cases: Marriage ↻20(2).] per verba de praesenti. By words in the present tense.

perverse verdict. See VERDICT.

per vim legis (pər vim lec-jis). [Latin] Hist. By force of law. • The phrase generally referred to persons who succeeded by intestacy to an estate.

pervise. See PARVIS.

per vivam vocem (pər vī-vəm voh-səm). [Law Latin] By the living voice.

per voluntatem hominis (pər vol-ən-tay-təm hom-ə-nis). [Latin] Hist. By the will of man. • The phrase appeared in reference to an act done by the testator's intention.

pessima fides (pes-ə-mə fi-deez). [Latin] Hist. The worst faith. • The phrase appeared in reference to moral dishonesty.

pessimi exempli (pes-ə-mī eg-zem-plī). [Latin] Hist. Of the worst example.

"Thus, to acquit a man of a crime because he had committed it under the influence of drink, or to allow any one to take benefit under a contract induced by his fraud, would be pessimi exempli, as tending to lead others to be dishonest or unfair in their dealings, or to be careless of their habits or their acts." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 457 (4th ed. 1894).

petens (pet-enz). [Latin] Hist. A demandant; a plaintiff in a real action.

peter-pence. Hist. A tax levied on each house in England and paid to the Pope, so called because it was collected on St. Peter's Day. — Also termed hearth money.

petit (pet-ee or pet-it), adj. [Law French "minor, small"] (15c) See PETTY.

petit cape. See cape parvum under CAPE.

petite assize. See ASSIZE (5).

Petite policy. The Department of Justice rule forbidding a federal prosecution after a previous state or federal prosecution based on the same acts unless (1) an Assistant Attorney General has approved the prosecution, (2) a substantial federal interest supports the prosecution, (3) the previous prosecution failed to vindicate the federal interest, and (4) there is sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction. United States Attorneys' Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997); Petite v. United States, 361 U.S. 529, 80 S.Ct. 450 (1960). [Cases: Criminal Law ↻29.]

"('Petite Policy') . . . The purpose of this policy is to vindicate substantial federal interests through appropriate federal prosecutions, to protect persons charged with criminal conduct from the burdens associated with multiple prosecutions and punishments for substantially the same act(s) or transaction(s), to promote efficient utilization of Department resources, and to promote coordination and cooperation between federal and state prosecutors." United States Attorneys' Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997).

"In response to the Court's continuing sensitivity to the fairness implications of the multiple prosecution power, the Justice Department adopted the policy of refusing to bring a federal prosecution following a state prosecution except when necessary to advance compelling interests of federal law enforcement. The Petite policy was designed to limit the exercise of the power to bring successive prosecutions for the same offense to situations comporting with the rationale for the existence of that power. Although not constitutionally mandated, this Executive policy serves to protect interests which, but for the 'dual sovereignty' principle inherent in our federal system, would be embraced by the Double Jeopardy Clause. In light of the parallel purposes of the Government's Petite policy and the fundamental constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, the federal courts should be receptive, not circumspect, when the Government seeks leave to implement that policy." Rinaldi v. United States, 434 U.S. 22, 28-29, 98 S.Ct. 81, 85 (1977) (citation omitted).

petitio (pə-tish-ee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Civil law. A plaintiff's suit, esp. in an action in rem. 2. Hist. A petition or demand; esp., a count in a real action.

petition, n. (15c) 1. A formal written request presented to a court or other official body.

petition for access. Patents. Application to inspect a patent application, made by someone who does not usu. have the authority to do so. • The petition must demonstrate a special need for access, and show that the applicant has been notified of the petition. The patent applicant is entitled to a hearing before access is granted. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 97.]

petition in bankruptcy. A formal written request, presented to a bankruptcy court, seeking protection for an insolvent debtor. • The debtor (in a voluntary bankruptcy) or the debtor's creditors (in an involuntary bankruptcy) can file such a petition to initiate a bankruptcy proceeding. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2257, 2290.]

petition of right. 1. (cap.) One of the four great charters of English liberty (3 Car. I (1628)), establishing that "no man be compelled to make or yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax, or such like charge, without common consent by act of parliament." • The other three great charters are Magna Carta, the Habeas Corpus Act (31 Car. 2 (1679)), and the Bill of Rights (1 W. & M. (1689)). 2. Hist. A proceeding in chancery by which a subject claims that a debt is owed by the Crown or that the Crown has broken a contract or wrongfully detained the subject's property. • Although the petition is addressed directly to the Crown, the courts adjudicate the claim just as in an action between private parties. — Also termed petition de droit.

petition to make special. Patents. A petition asking the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to expedite a patent prosecution. • Special processing is available, for example, in favored areas of science (such as cancer research and energy conservation), where the inventor is sick or elderly, and where infringement is already taking place. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 104.]

piercing the corporate veil. (1928) The judicial act of imposing personal liability on otherwise immune corporate officers, directors, or shareholders for the corporation's wrongful acts. — Also termed disregarding the corporate entity; veil-piercing. See CORPORATE VEIL. [Cases: Corporations ↷1.4(1).]

"[C]ourts sometimes apply common law principles to 'pierce the corporate veil' and hold shareholders personally liable for corporate debts or obligations. Unfortunately, despite the enormous volume of litigation in this area, the case law fails to articulate any sensible rationale or policy that explains when corporate existence should be disregarded. Indeed, courts are remarkably prone to rely on labels or characterizations of relationships (such as 'alter ego,' 'instrumentality,' or 'sham') and the decisions offer little in the way of predictability or rational explanation of why enumerated factors should be decisive." Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 5-4, at 182 (2d ed. 2000).

pigneratitia actio. See ACTIO.

pignorate (pig-nə-rayt), vb. (17c) 1. To give over as a pledge; to pawn. 2. To take in pawn. Cf. OPPIGNORATE. — pignorative, adj.

pignoratio (pig-nə-ray-shee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The real contract (pignus) under which the a debtor handed something over to a creditor as security; the act of depositing as a pledge. — Also spelled pigneratio. 2. Civil law. The impounding of another's cattle (or other animals) that have damaged property until the cattle's owner pays for the damage. Pl. pignorationes (pig-nə-ray-shee-oh-nee-z).

pignoratitia actio (pig-nə-rə-tish-ee-ə ak-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. An action founded on a pledge, either by the debtor (an action directa) or by a creditor (an action contraria). Cf. cautio pignoratitia under CAUTIO.

pignorative contract. See CONTRACT.

pignoris capio (pig-nə-ris kap-ee-oh). [Latin "taking a pledge"] Roman law. A form of extrajudicial execution by which a creditor took a pledge from a debtor's property.

pignus (pig-nəs), n. [Latin "pledge"] 1. Roman & civil law. (ital.) A bailment in which goods are delivered to secure the payment of a debt or performance of an engagement, accompanied by a power of sale in case of default. • This type of bailment is for the benefit of both parties. — Also termed pawn; pledge. See PIGNORATIO. 2. A lien. Pl. pignora or pignera.

pignus judiciale (pig-nəs joo-dish-ee-ay-lee). [Latin] Civil law. The lien that a judgment creditor has on the property of the judgment debtor.

pignus legale (pig-nəs lə-gay-lee). [Latin] Civil law. A lien arising by operation of law, such as a landlord's lien on the tenant's property.

pignus praetorium (pig-nəs pri-tor-ee-əm). [Latin "a magisterial pledge"] Roman law. A pledge given to a creditor by order of a magistrate.

PIH. abbr. OFFICE OF PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING.

pilferage (pil-fər-ij), n. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of stealing. 2. The item or items stolen. See LARCENY; THEFT. — pilfer (pil-fər), vb.

pill. See POISON PILL.

pillage (pil-ij), n. 1. The forcible seizure of another's property, esp. in war; esp., the wartime plundering of a city or territory. 2. The property so seized or plundered; BOOTY. — Also termed plunder. [Cases: War and National Emergency ↷21.] — pillage, vb.

pillory (pil-ə-ree), n. Hist. A punishment instrument consisting of a wooden framework with holes through which an offender's head and hands are placed and secured. • A person put in a pillory usu. had to stand rather than sit (as with the stocks). Cf. STOCKS.

finger pillory. Hist. Eccles. law. A miniature stock used to confine the fingers of a person who misbehaved during church services.

pilot. 1. A person in control of an airplane. 2. Maritime law. A person in control of a vessel.

bar pilot. See BRANCH PILOT.

branch pilot. A pilot, esp. one who is trained and licensed to navigate rivers and their tributaries. • The term originated in England when pilots were licensed to navigate the River Thames and its tributaries. — Also termed bar pilot. See TRINITY HOUSE. [Cases: Pilots ↷5.]

compulsory pilot. A ship pilot entitled by law to guide a ship for a particular purpose, such as piloting the ship into harbor. • The compulsory nature of the appointment relieves the vessel's owner of personal liability if the pilot causes a collision. Cf. voluntary pilot. [Cases: Pilots ↷7.]

"The compulsory pilot presents a special problem. Statutes that impose a fine or imprisonment for the failure to take a pilot obviously create compulsory pilotage. Some statutes, however, allow the ship to refuse the pilot provided she pays his fee or half of it ('half-pilotage'). The Supreme Court has indicated that it does not regard the tendering of this alternative as amounting to compulsion. It makes a difference, because it is pretty well settled that if the pilotage is 'compulsory' the respondet superior nexus is broken, and the shipowner cannot be held personally liable for the fault of the pilot resulting in collision. The ship's liability in rem, however, is unaffected by the fact that the pilotage is compulsory. This is one of the more striking consequences of the endowment of the ship with a juristic personality independent of that of her owner." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 7-16, at 520-21 (2d ed. 1975).

voluntary pilot. A ship pilot who controls a ship with the permission of the vessel's owner. • The vessel's owner is personally liable for damage resulting from a collision caused by a voluntary pilot. Cf. compulsory pilot.

"If a vessel is in the hands of a harbor pilot at the time of the collision, the question arises whether the fault of the pilot is imputed to the vessel owner or operator. American law draws an unwarranted distinction between the 'voluntary pilot,' who is taken on voluntarily, and the 'compulsory pilot,' who is mandated by a statute or local regulation. The voluntary pilot is considered to be the same as any crew member, and his fault is fully attributable to the vessel owner. A compulsory pilot's fault, however, cannot be imputed to the shipowner personally; the doctrine of respondet superior does not apply. At most, the vessel is liable in rem since the compulsory pilot's negligence is attributable to the ship. The distinction makes little sense in that it throws the loss upon potentially innocent parties and ignores the fact that the vessel owner commonly carries insurance against this liability. In any collision case, therefore, care should be taken to assert a maritime lien and to sue the vessel in rem if a compulsory pilot may be involved." Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law § 13-1, at 450-51 (1987).

pilotage (pi-lə-tij). 1. The navigating of vessels; the business of navigating vessels. [Cases: Pilots ↷14.]

2. Compensation that a pilot receives for navigating a vessel, esp. into and out of harbor or through a channel or passage. [Cases: Pilots ↷9.]

compulsory pilotage. A requirement, imposed by law in some jurisdictions, that vessels approaching or leaving a harbor must take on a licensed pilot to guide the vessel into or out of the harbor. [Cases: Pilots ↷7.]

half-pilotage. Compensation equaling half the value of services that a pilot has offered to perform. • Shipowners can avoid compulsory pilotage in some jurisdictions by payment of half-pilotage. [Cases: Pilots ↷11.]

pimp, n. (17c) A person who solicits customers for a prostitute, usu. in return for a share of the prostitute's earnings. See PANDERING (1). Cf. BAWD. [Cases: Prostitution ↷17.] — pimp, vb. — pimping, n.

pincite. See pinpoint citation under CITATION (3).

pinkerton. Slang. A private detective or security guard, usu. one who is armed. • The name comes from the Pinkerton Detective Agency, the first private detective agency in the United States, established in 1852.

Pinkerton rule. (1979) Criminal law. The doctrine imposing liability on a conspirator for all offenses committed in furtherance of the conspiracy, even if those offenses are actually performed by coconspirators. Pinkerton v. United States, 328 U.S. 640, 66 S.Ct. 1180 (1946). [Cases: Conspiracy ↷41.]

pink sheet. A daily publication listing over-the-counter stocks, their market-makers, and their prices. • Printed on pink paper, pink sheets are published by the National Quotation Bureau, a private company. — Also termed National Daily Quotation Service.

pink slip. Slang. A notice of employment termination given to an employee by an employer.

pinpoint citation. See CITATION (3).

PINS. abbr. PERSON IN NEED OF SUPERVISION.

pious gift. See charitable gift under GIFT.

pious use. See USE (1).

Pipe Rolls. Hist. The Exchequer's records of royal revenue, including revenue from feudal holdings, judicial fees, and tax revenue collected by the sheriffs. • The Pipe Rolls comprise 676 rolls, covering the years 1131 and 1156 to 1833 (except for gaps in 1216 and 1403). — Also termed Great Rolls of the Exchequer.

"The Pipe rolls (so called possibly because of their pipe-like appearance when rolled up and stacked) were the rolls of the Exchequer and consist of parchment skins sewn together. Roger of Salisbury, Henry I's Treasurer, had established a rudimentary national financial system and the Pipe roll recording financial details at the end of Henry's reign is in existence . . . The rolls contain much information concerning royal debtors, administration, and personnel of the King's government." L.B. Curzon, English Legal History 64–65 (2d ed. 1979).

PIR. abbr. PRESENTENCE INVESTIGATION REPORT.

piracy, n. (16c) 1. Robbery, kidnapping, or other criminal violence committed at sea. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 45.50.] 2. A similar crime committed aboard a plane or other vehicle. 3. HIJACKING. [Cases: Aviation ↻ 16.]

air piracy. (1948) The crime of using force or threat to seize control of an aircraft; the hijacking of an aircraft, esp. one in flight. — Also termed aircraft piracy. [Cases: Aviation ↻ 16.]

4. The unauthorized and illegal reproduction or distribution of materials protected by copyright, patent, or trademark law. See INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 53; Patents ↻ 226; Trademarks ↻ 1418.] — pirate, vb. — piratical (pi-rat-ə-kəl), adj. — pirate, n.

"[T]he test of piracy [is] not whether the identical language, the same words, are used, but whether the substance of the production is unlawfully appropriated." Eaton S. Drone, A Treatise on the Law of Property in Intellectual Productions 97 (1879).

"[I]n some countries the problem is what might be called the 'cycle of piracy' — legitimate copyright owners refuse to sell in the country because of the piracy problem, which means that the only way the public can obtain the goods it wants is to turn to piracy. This in turn only strengthens the resolve of copyright owners not to do business in the country." Intellectual Property in the New Technological Age 514 (Robert P. Merges et al. eds., 1997).

video piracy. The illegal copying and sale or rental of copyrighted motion pictures.

pirate recording. Copyright. An unauthorized copy of the sounds on a copyright-protected recording, including digital duplication made available over the Internet. — Sometimes also termed bootleg recording. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 67.2.]

piscary. 1. See FISHERY (1). 2. See common of piscary under COMMON (1).

pit and gallows. Hist. Scots law. An ancient form of capital punishment for theft by which a condemned woman was drowned in a pit and a condemned man was hanged on a gallows.

PITI. abbr. Principal, interest, taxes, and insurance — the components of a monthly mortgage payment.

P.J. See presiding judge under JUDGE.

placer claim. See MINING CLAIM.

placita (plas-ə-tə), n. [Latin] pl. PLACITUM.

placitabile (plas-ə-tay-bə-lee), adj. [Law Latin] That may be pleaded; pleadable.

placita communia (plas-ə-tə kə-myoo-nee-ə). [Latin] Common pleas; civil actions between subject and subject.

placita coronae (plas-ə-tə kə-roh-nee). [Latin] Pleas of the Crown; criminal actions.

placita juris (plas-ə-tə joor-is). [Law Latin "pleas of law"] Hist. Positive statements or guiding principles of the law, in contrast to legal conclusions or maxims.

placitare (plas-ə-tair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] To plead; to bring an action in a court of law.

placitory (plas-ə-tor-ee), adj. [Law Latin] Of or relating to pleas or pleading.

placitum (plas-ə-təm), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. Roman law. An imperial constitution. 2. A judicial decision. 3. A court; a judicial tribunal. 4. A judicial proceeding; a trial. 5. A fine, mulct, or pecuniary punishment. 6. A pleading or plea. 7. A paragraph or section of a title or page where the point decided in a case is set forth separately. — Abbr. (in sense 7) pl. Pl. placita.

placitum et conventio. See consensus ad idem under CONSENSUS.

placitum fractum (plas-ə-təm frak-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. A day past or lost to the defendant.

placitum nominatum (plas-ə-təm nom-ə-nay-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. The day appointed for a defendant to appear and plead.

placuit regi et concilio suo (plak-yoo-it ree-ji et kən-sil-ee-oh s[yoo-oh]). [Law Latin] Hist. It has pleased the king and his council.

plagiarism. (17c) The deliberate and knowing presentation of another person's original ideas or creative expressions as one's own. • Generally, plagiarism is immoral but not illegal. If the expression's creator gives unrestricted permission for its use and the user claims the expression as original, the user commits plagiarism but does not violate copyright laws. If the original expression is copied without permission, the plagiarist may violate copyright laws, even if credit goes to the creator. And if the plagiarism results in material gain, it may be deemed a passing-off activity that violates the Lanham Act. It can also be a criminal act under 17 USCA § 5-6. Cf. INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 53(1).] — plagiarize (play-jə-rīz), vb. — plagiarist (play-jə-rīst), n.

"Plagiarism, which many people commonly think has to do with copyright, is not in fact a legal doctrine. True plagiarism is an ethical, not a legal, offense and is enforceable by academic authorities, not courts. Plagiarism occurs when someone — a hurried student, a neglectful professor, an unscrupulous writer — falsely claims someone else's words, whether copyrighted or not, as his own. Of course, if the plagiarized work is protected by copyright, the unauthorized reproduction is also a copyright infringement." Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 12 (1994).

"That the supporting evidence for the accusation of plagiarism may on occasion be elusive, insufficient, or uncertain, is not the same as thinking that the definition of plagiarism is uncertain. The gray areas may remain resistant to adjudication without being resistant to definition. It may be perfectly clear what constitutes plagiarism ('using the work of another with an intent to deceive') without its being clear that what faces us is truly a case of this." Christopher Ricks, "Plagiarism," 97 Proceedings of the British Academy 149, 151 (1998).

plagiarius (play-jee-air-ee-əs), n. [Latin] Roman law. A kidnapper.

plagium (play-jee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. The act of kidnapping, esp. a slave or child, which included harboring another's slave. — Also termed crimen plagii.

plaideur (play- or ple-dər), n. [Law French "pleader"] Archaic. An attorney at law; an advocate.

plaidoyer (ple-dwah-yay), n. [French] Hist. An advocate's plea.

plain bond. See DEBENTURE (3).

plain error. See ERROR (2).

plain-feel doctrine. (1984) Criminal procedure. The principle that a police officer, while conducting a legal pat-down search, may seize any contraband that the officer can immediately and clearly identify, by touch but not by manipulation, as being illegal or incriminating. — Also termed plain-touch doctrine. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ⇨ 47.1.]

plain-language law. (1978) Legislation requiring nontechnical, readily comprehensible language in consumer contracts such as residential leases or insurance policies. • Many of these laws have genuinely simplified the needlessly obscure language in which consumer contracts have traditionally been couched. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 126; Insurance ⇨ 1773.]

plain-language movement. (1978) 1. The loosely organized campaign to encourage legal writers and business writers to write clearly and concisely — without legalese — while preserving accuracy and precision. 2. The body of persons involved in this campaign.

plain meaning. See MEANING.

plain-meaning rule. (1937) 1. The rule that if a writing, or a provision in a writing, appears to be unambiguous on its face, its meaning must be determined from the writing itself without resort to any extrinsic evidence. • Though often applied, this rule is often condemned as simplistic because the meaning of words varies with the verbal context and the surrounding circumstances, not to mention the linguistic ability of the users and readers (including judges). Cf. GOLDEN RULE; MISCHIEF RULE; EQUITY-OF-THE-STATUTE RULE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 143, 152; Statutes ⇨ 188.]

"On its positive side, the plain meaning rule states a tautology: Words should be read as saying what they say. The rule tells us to respect meaning but it does so without disclosing what the specific meaning is. At best, it reaffirms the preeminence of the statute over materials extrinsic to it. In its negative aspect, on the other hand, the rule has sometimes been used to read ineptly expressed language out of its proper context, in violation of established principles of meaning and communication. To this extent it is an impediment to interpretation." Reed Dickerson, The Interpretation and Application of Statutes 229 (1975).

2. ORDINARY-MEANING RULE.

plain-sight rule. See PLAIN-VIEW DOCTRINE.

plaint. 1. Archaic. A complaint, esp. one filed in a replevin action. See COMPLAINT (1). 2. Civil law. A complaint or petition, esp. one intended to set aside an allegedly invalid testament.

plaintiff. (14c) The party who brings a civil suit in a court of law. — Abbr. pltf. Cf. DEFENDANT.

involuntary plaintiff. A plaintiff who is joined in a lawsuit by court order when the party's joinder is imperative for the litigation and the party is subject to the court's jurisdiction but refuses to join the suit voluntarily. • Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19(a), a party is usu. joined as a defendant but may be joined as an involuntary plaintiff in “a proper case.” [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷201; Parties ↷18.]

use plaintiff. See USE PLAINTIFF.

plaintiff in error. (17c) Archaic. 1. See APPELLANT. 2. See PETITIONER.

plaintiff’s-viewpoint rule. The principle that courts should measure the amount in controversy in a case by analyzing only the amount of damages claimed by the plaintiff. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷339.]

plain-touch doctrine. See PLAIN-FEEL DOCTRINE.

plain-vanilla swap. See INTEREST-RATE SWAP.

plain-view doctrine. (1963) Criminal procedure. The rule permitting a police officer’s warrantless seizure and use as evidence of an item seen in plain view from a lawful position or during a legal search when the officer has probable cause to believe that the item is evidence of a crime. — Also termed clear-view doctrine; plain-sight rule. Cf. OPEN-FIELDS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷106, 115, 131; Searches and Seizures ↷47.]

PLAM. See price-level-adjusted mortgage under MORTGAGE.

plan, n. 1. BANKRUPTCY PLAN. 2. EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

planned obsolescence. See OBSOLESCENCE.

planned-unit development. A land area zoned for a single-community subdivision with flexible restrictions on residential, commercial, and public uses. — Abbr. PUD. Cf. RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↷245.]

“A PUD is primarily an alternative to traditional zoning since it provides a mixing of uses. The location and identification of the permitted uses are provided on the PUD map or plat, which closely resembles a subdivision plat. Development approval is generally granted for the PUD at one time rather than on a lot by lot basis and in that way closely tracks the subdivision approval process.” Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 7.15, at 288 (2003).

planning board. A local government body responsible for approving or rejecting proposed building projects.

• In most jurisdictions, the planning board’s decisions are subject to the review of the city council. — Also termed planning commission. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↷351.]

plan of arrangement. Bankruptcy. An insolvent debtor’s written proposal for partially or completely settling outstanding debts. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷3661.101.]

plan of rehabilitation. See BANKRUPTCY PLAN.

plan of reorganization. See BANKRUPTCY PLAN.

plan-of-the-convention doctrine. The principle that each U.S. state, by ratifying the U.S. Constitution, has consented to the possibility of being sued by each of the other states, and has no immunity from such a suit under the 11th Amendment. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷273.]

plant patent. See PATENT (3).

Plant Patent Act. Patents. The 1930 federal law that extended patent protection for developing “any distinct and new” varieties of asexually reproducing plants. • Before passage of the Act, plant patents were rejected because the subject matter was considered naturally occurring and therefore unpatentable. 35 USCA §§ 161–164. — Abbr. PPA. [Cases: Patents ↷14.]

plant-patent claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

Plant Variety Protection Act. Patents. The 1970 federal law that extended patent-like protection for developing new and distinct varieties of seed-producing plants. • A Certificate of Plant Variety Protection gives the holder exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, and develop further hybrids from the plant. 7 USCA §§ 2321–2582. — Abbr. PVPA. [Cases: Patents ↷14.]

plat. (15c) 1. A small piece of land; PLOT (1). 2. A map describing a piece of land and its features, such as boundaries, lots, roads, and easements. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↷245.]

platform. A statement of principles and policies adopted by a political party as the basis of the party’s appeal for public support. [Cases: Elections ↷121(1).]

platform committee. See COMMITTEE.

plat map. (1941) A document that gives the legal descriptions of pieces of land by lot, street, and block number. • A plat map is usu. drawn after the property has been described by some other means, such as a government survey. Once a plat map is prepared, property descriptions are defined by referring to the map. Plat maps are usu. recorded by a government agency.

plea, n. (13c) 1. An accused person’s formal response of “guilty,” “not guilty,” or “no contest” to a criminal charge. — Also termed criminal plea. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷267–275.]

blind plea. (1972) A guilty plea made without the promise of a concession from either the judge or the prosecutor. Cf. negotiated plea.

conditional plea. A plea of guilty or nolo contendere entered with the court’s approval and the government’s consent, the defendant reserving the right to appeal any adverse determinations on one or more pretrial motions. • If an appeal is successful, the plea is withdrawn and a new one entered. Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(a)(2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷273(4.1), 275.3.]

guilty plea. (1942) An accused person’s formal admission in court of having committed the charged offense. • A guilty plea must be made voluntarily and only after the accused has been informed of and understands his or her rights. It ordinarily has the same effect as a guilty verdict and conviction after a trial on the merits. A guilty plea is usu. part of a plea bargain. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷273–274.]

insanity plea. See INSANITY DEFENSE.

negotiated plea. (1956) The plea agreed to by a criminal defendant and the prosecutor in a plea bargain. See PLEA BARGAIN. Cf. blind plea. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨273.1(2).]

no-contest plea. See NO CONTEST.

nolo plea. A plea by which the defendant does not contest or admit guilt. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(b); NOLO CONTENDERE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨275.]

not-guilty plea. (1912) An accused person's formal denial in court of having committed the charged offense. • The prosecution must then prove all elements of the charged offense beyond a reasonable doubt if the defendant is to be convicted. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨299.]

provident plea. Military law. A plea that is entered knowingly, intelligently, and consciously, and is legally and factually consistent and accurate. [Cases: Military Justice ⇨986.]

affirmative plea. See pure plea.

anomalous plea. (1851) An equitable plea in which a party states new facts and negates some of the opponent's stated facts. • Partly confession and avoidance and partly traverse, the plea is appropriate when the plaintiff, in the bill, has anticipated the plea, and the defendant then traverses the anticipatory matters. — Also termed plea not pure. Cf. pure plea.

common plea. (17c) 1. A common-law plea in a civil action as opposed to a criminal prosecution. — Also termed common cause; common suit. 2. Hist. A plea made by a commoner.

"By 'common pleas' Magna Carta meant no more than ordinary pleas between commoners." Alan Harding, A Social History of English Law 51 (1966).

dilatory plea (dīl-ə-tor-ee). (16c) A plea that does not challenge the merits of a case but that seeks to delay or defeat the action on procedural grounds. [Cases: Pleading ⇨101–111.49.]

"Dilatory pleas are those which do not answer the general right of the plaintiff, either by denial or in confession and avoidance, but assert matter tending to defeat the particular action by resisting the plaintiff's present right of recovery. They may be divided into two main classes: (1) Pleas to the jurisdiction and venue. (2) Pleas in abatement. A minor class, sometimes recognized, is pleas in suspension of the action." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 220, at 382 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

double plea. (16c) A plea consisting in two or more distinct grounds of complaint or defense for the same issue. Cf. alternative pleading under PLEADING (2); DUPLICITY (2).

general plea. See general denial under DENIAL.

issuable plea. (17c) A plea on the merits presenting a cognizable complaint to the court. Cf. issuable defense under DEFENSE (1).

jurisdictional plea. (1900) A plea asserting that the court lacks jurisdiction either over the defendant or over the subject matter of the case. — Also termed plea to the jurisdiction. [Cases: Pleading ⇨104.]

negative plea. (16c) A plea that traverses some material fact or facts stated in the bill. — Also termed plea to the action.

nonissuable plea. (1841) A plea on which a court ruling will not decide the case on the merits, such as a plea in abatement.

peremptory plea. (18c) A plea that responds to the merits of the plaintiff's claim.

plea in abatement. (17c) A plea that objects to the place, time, or method of asserting the plaintiff's claim but does not dispute the claim's merits. • A defendant who successfully asserts a plea in abatement leaves the claim open for continuation in the current action or reassertion in a later action if the defect is cured. — Also termed abater. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨740; Pleading ⇨106.]

plea in bar. See PLEA IN BAR.

plea in confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea in discharge. (18c) A plea that the defendant has previously satisfied and discharged the plaintiff's claim.

plea in equity. (17c) A special defense relying on one or more reasons why the suit should be dismissed, delayed, or barred. • The various kinds are (1) pleas to the jurisdiction, (2) pleas to the person, (3) pleas to the form of the bill, and (4) pleas in bar of the bill. Pleas in equity generally fall into two classes: pure pleas and anomalous pleas.

plea in estoppel. (1831) Common-law pleading. A plea that neither confesses nor avoids but rather pleads a previous inconsistent act, allegation, or denial on the part of the adverse party to preclude that party from maintaining an action or defense.

plea in reconvention. Civil law. A plea that sets up a new matter, not as a defense, but as a cross-complaint, setoff, or counterclaim. [Cases: Pleading ⇨143.]

plea in suspension. (1875) A plea that shows some ground for not proceeding in the suit at the present time and prays that the proceedings be stayed until that ground is removed, such as a party's being a minor or the plaintiff's being an alien enemy. [Cases: Pleading ⇨105.]

plea not pure. See anomalous plea.

plea of confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea of privilege. (17c) A plea that raises an objection to the venue of an action. See CHANGE OF VENUE. [Cases: Venue ⇨52.5, 69.]

plea of release. (18c) A plea that admits the claim but sets forth a written discharge executed by a party authorized to release the claim. See RELEASE (2).

plea puis darrein continuance (pwis dar-ayn kən-tin-yoo-ənts). [Law French “plea since the last continuance”] (18c) A plea that alleges new defensive matter that has arisen during a continuance of the case and that did not exist at the time of the defendant’s last pleading. [Cases: Pleading ⇨272.]

plea to further maintenance to the action. Hist. A defensive plea asserting that events occurring after the commencement of the action necessitate its dismissal. • The plea is obsolete because of the pleading requirements in federal and state rules of civil procedure.

plea to the action. See negative plea.

plea to the declaration. (1820) A plea in abatement that objects to the declaration and applies immediately to it. — Also termed plea to the count.

plea to the jurisdiction. See jurisdictional plea.

plea to the person of the defendant. (1872) A plea in abatement alleging that the defendant has a legal disability to be sued.

plea to the person of the plaintiff. (1821) A plea in abatement alleging that the plaintiff has a legal disability to sue.

plea to the writ. (17c) A plea in abatement that objects to the writ (summons) and applies (1) to the form of the writ for a matter either apparent on the writ’s face or outside the writ, or (2) to the way in which the writ was executed or acted on.

pure plea. (18c) An equitable plea that affirmatively alleges new matters that are outside the bill. • If proved, the effect is to end the controversy by dismissing, delaying, or barring the suit. A pure plea must track the allegations of the bill, not evade it or mistake its purpose. Originally, this was the only plea known in equity. — Also termed affirmative plea. Cf. anomalous plea.

rolled-up plea. (1929) Defamation. A defendant’s plea claiming that the statements complained of are factual and that, to the extent that they consist of comment, they are fair comment on a matter of public interest. See FAIR COMMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨48(1), 93, 94.]

special plea. (16c) A plea alleging one or more new facts rather than merely disputing the legal grounds of the action or charge. • All pleas other than general issues are special pleas. See general issue under ISSUE (1).

plea bargain, n. (1963) A negotiated agreement between a prosecutor and a criminal defendant whereby the defendant pleads guilty to a lesser offense or to one of multiple charges in exchange for some concession by the prosecutor, usu. a more lenient sentence or a dismissal of the other charges. — Also termed plea agreement; negotiated plea; sentence bargain. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨273.1(2).] — plea-bargain, vb. — plea-bargaining, n.

charge bargain. (1890) A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to drop some of the counts or reduce the charge to a less serious offense in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨273.1(2), 275.4(2).]

sentence bargain. (1973) A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to recommend a lighter sentence in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨273.1(2), 275.4(2).]

plead, vb. (13c) 1. To make a specific plea, esp. in response to a criminal charge <he pleaded not guilty>. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨267–301.] 2. To assert or allege in a pleading <fraud claims must be pleaded with particularity>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨621, 636; Pleading ⇨1, 18.] 3. To file or deliver a pleading <the plaintiff hasn’t pleaded yet>.

pleader. (13c) 1. A party who asserts a particular pleading. 2. A person who pleads in court on behalf of another. 3. Hist. At common law, a person who (though not an attorney) specialized in preparing pleadings for others. — Also termed special pleader. 4. Hist. NARRATOR.

pleading, n. (16c) 1. A formal document in which a party to a legal proceeding (esp. a civil lawsuit) sets forth or responds to allegations, claims, denials, or defenses. • In federal civil procedure, the main pleadings are the plaintiff’s complaint and the defendant’s answer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨621; Pleading ⇨1.]

accusatory pleading. (1908) An indictment, information, or complaint by which the government begins a criminal prosecution.

amended pleading. (1809) A pleading that replaces an earlier pleading and that contains matters omitted from or not known at the time of the earlier pleading. Cf. supplemental pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨821–852.1; Pleading ⇨229–271.]

anomalous pleading. (1845) A pleading that is partly affirmative and partly negative in its allegations.

argumentative pleading. A pleading that states allegations rather than facts, and thus forces the court to infer or hunt for supporting facts. • Conclusory statements in court papers are a form of argumentative pleading. — Also termed inferential pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻641; Pleading ↻8, 17.]

articulated pleading. (1953) A pleading that states each allegation in a separately numbered paragraph. [Cases: Pleading ↻52.]

defective pleading. (17c) A pleading that fails to meet minimum standards of sufficiency or accuracy in form or substance.

hypothetical pleading. A pleading asserting that if a certain fact is true, then a certain result must follow.
• Hypothetical pleadings are generally improper. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻675.1.]

inferential pleading. See argumentative pleading.

pleading to the merits. A responsive pleading that addresses the plaintiff's cause of action, in whole or in part.

responsive pleading. (1833) A pleading that replies to an opponent's earlier pleading. See ANSWER. [Cases: Pleading ↻76.]

sham pleading. (1825) An obviously frivolous or absurd pleading that is made only for purposes of vexation or delay. — Also termed sham plea; false plea; (archaically) deceitful plea. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1139; Pleading ↻359, 362(3).]

shotgun pleading. (1964) A pleading that encompasses a wide range of contentions, usu. supported by vague factual allegations.

supplemental pleading. (1841) A pleading that either corrects a defect in an earlier pleading or addresses facts arising since the earlier pleading was filed.
• Unlike an amended pleading, a supplemental pleading merely adds to the earlier pleading and does not replace it. Cf. amended pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻861–871; Pleading ↻273.]

2. A system of defining and narrowing the issues in a lawsuit whereby the parties file formal documents alleging their respective positions.

alternative pleading. (1868) A form of pleading whereby the pleader alleges two or more independent claims or defenses that are not necessarily consistent with each other, such as alleging both intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent infliction of emotional distress based on the same conduct. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2). — Also termed pleading in the alternative. Cf. duplicitous (2); double plea under PLEA (3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻675; Pleading ↻20, 50–53, 89.]

artful pleading. (1950) A plaintiff's disguised phrasing of a federal claim as solely a state-law claim in order to prevent a defendant from removing the case from state court to federal court. [Cases: Removal of Cases ↻25(1).]

code pleading. (1860) A procedural system requiring that the pleader allege merely the facts of the case giving rise to the claim or defense, not the legal conclusions necessary to sustain the claim or establish the defense. — Also termed fact pleading. Cf. issue pleading. [Cases: Pleading ↻8, 9, 48.]

common-law pleading. The system of pleading historically used in the three common-law courts of England (the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, and the Exchequer) up to 1873.

equity pleading. (18c) The system of pleading used in courts of equity. • In most jurisdictions, rules unique to equity practice have been largely supplanted by one set of rules of court, esp. where law courts and equity courts have merged. [Cases: Equity ↻128–335.]

fact pleading. See code pleading.

issue pleading. (1916) The common-law method of pleading, the main purpose of which was to frame an issue. Cf. code pleading. [Cases: Pleading ↻1, 16, 48.]

notice pleading. (1918) A procedural system requiring that the pleader give only a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, and not a complete detailing of all the facts. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻673; Pleading ↻16, 48.]

pleading in the alternative. See alternative pleading.

special pleading. See SPECIAL PLEADING.

3. The legal rules regulating the statement of the plaintiff's claims and the defendant's defenses <today, pleading is a much simpler subject than it was in former years>.

pleading the baby act. See BABY ACT, PLEADING THE.

pleading the Fifth. (1953) The act or an instance of asserting one's right against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment. — Also termed taking the Fifth. See RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION. [Cases: Witnesses ↻297.]

plead (one's) belly. Hist. Slang. (Of a female defendant) to claim pregnancy as a defense, usu. to postpone or avoid a court's sentence of capital punishment or transportation. • A woman who pleaded that she was pregnant was treated with suspicion. The judge would appoint a jury of matrons (often consisting of 12 married mothers) to examine the claimant (under the writ de ventre inspiciendo). If the woman was declared to be "quick with child" (in an advanced state of pregnancy rather than "barely with child" or only newly or just possibly pregnant), she enjoyed a reprieve from execution or transportation until after the child's birth (or miscarriage). Because juries of matrons often declared barren defendants to be pregnant, a court would keep track of a reprieved woman to see if the delay was justified or if she should be made to suffer the sentence ("called down") at the next session. Although the plea and the special jury are no longer in use, the prohibition against executing a pregnant woman persists in modern law. 18 USCA § 3596(b).

plead over, vb. (17c) 1. To fail to notice a defective allegation in an opponent's pleading before responding to the pleading. [Cases: Pleading ↻406(3), 409(3).] 2.

Hist. To plead the general issue after a defendant has had a dilatory plea overruled. See AIDER BY PLEADING OVER.

plead the Fifth. See TAKE THE FIFTH.

plea in abatement. See PLEA (3).

plea in avoidance. See affirmative defense under DEFENSE (1).

plea in bar. (17c) A plea that seeks to defeat the plaintiff's or prosecutor's action completely and permanently.

general plea in bar. (18c) A criminal defendant's plea of not guilty by which the defendant denies every fact and circumstance necessary to be convicted of the crime charged. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻299.]

special plea in bar. (17c) A plea that, rather than addressing the merits and denying the facts alleged, sets up some extrinsic fact showing why a criminal defendant cannot be tried for the offense charged. • Examples include the plea of autrefois acquit and the plea of pardon. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻286.]

plea in confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea in discharge. See PLEA (3).

plea in equity. See PLEA (3).

plea in estoppel. See PLEA (3).

plea in justification. See affirmative defense under DEFENSE (1).

plea in reconvention. See PLEA (3).

plea in suspension. See PLEA (3).

plea not pure. See anomalous plea under PLEA (3).

plea of confession and avoidance. See CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE.

plea of pregnancy. Hist. A plea of a woman convicted of a capital crime to stay her execution until she gives birth. See PLEAD (ONE'S) BELLY.

plea of privilege. See PLEA (3).

plea of release. See PLEA (3).

plea of sanctuary. See DECLINATORY PLEA.

plea of tender. (18c) At common law, a pleading asserting that the defendant has consistently been willing to pay the debt demanded, has offered it to the plaintiff, and has brought the money into court ready to pay the plaintiff. See TENDER.

plea puis darrein continuance. See PLEA (3).

pleasure appointment. See APPOINTMENT (1).

plea to further maintenance to the action. See PLEA (3).

plea to the action. See negative plea under PLEA (3).

plea to the count. See plea to the declaration under PLEA (3).

plea to the declaration. See PLEA (3).

plea to the jurisdiction. See jurisdictional plea under PLEA (3).

plea to the person of the defendant. See PLEA (3).

plea to the person of the plaintiff. See PLEA (3).

plea to the writ. See PLEA (3).

plebeian (pli-bee-ən), n. Roman law. A member of the Roman plebs; an ordinary citizen, not a member of the upper class (patricians).

plebiscite (pleb-ə-sit or pleb-ə-sit), n. (1860) 1. A binding or nonbinding referendum on a proposed law, constitutional amendment, or significant public issue. Cf. REFERENDUM; INITIATIVE. 2. Int'l law. A direct vote of a country's electorate to decide a question of public importance, such as union with another country or a proposed change to the constitution. — plebiscitary (plə-bi-sə-ter-ee), adj.

plebiscitum (pleb-ə-si-təm), n. [Latin] Roman law. An enactment passed at the request of a tribune by the assembly of the common people (the concilium plebis). See CONCILIUM PLEBIS. Pl. plebiscita.

plebs (plebz), n. [Latin] Roman law. The common people in ancient Rome; the general body of citizens, excluding the patricians. Pl. plebes (plee-beez).

pledge, n. (14c) 1. A formal promise or undertaking. Cf. OATH. 2. The act of providing something as security for a debt or obligation. [Cases: Pledges ↻1.] 3. A bailment or other deposit of personal property to a creditor as security for a debt or obligation; PAWN (2). See contract to pledge under CONTRACT. Cf. LIEN (1). 4. The item of personal property so deposited; PAWN (1). 5. The thing so provided. — Formerly also termed safe-pledge. 6. A security interest in personal property represented by an indispensable instrument, the interest being created by a bailment or other deposit of personal property for the purpose of securing the payment of a debt or the performance of some other duty. 7. Hist. A person who acts as a surety for the prosecution of a lawsuit. • In early practice, pledges were listed at the end of the declaration. Over time the listing of pledges became a formality, and fictitious names (such as "John Doe" or "Richard Roe") were allowed. — pledge, vb. — pledgeable, adj.

"A pledge is something more than a mere lien and something less than a mortgage." Leonard A. Jones, A Treatise on the Law of Collateral Securities and Pledges § 2, at 4 (Edward M. White rev., 3d ed. 1912).

"A pledge is a bailment of personal property to secure an obligation of the bailor. If the purpose of the transaction is to transfer property for security only, then the courts will hold the transaction a pledge, even though in form it may be a sale or other out-and-out transfer." Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 128, at 622 (2d ed. 1936).

"The pledge is as old as recorded history and is still in use, as the presence of pawnbrokers attests. In this transaction the debtor borrows money by physically transferring to a secured party the possession of the property to be used as security, and the property will be returned if the debt is repaid. Since the debtor does not retain the use of pledged goods, this security device has obvious disadvantages from the debtor's point of view." Ray D. Henson, Secured Transactions § 3-1, at 17 (3d ed. 1983).

pledged account. See ACCOUNT.

pledgee. One with whom a pledge is deposited. [Cases: Pledges ⇨8.] pledger. Archaic. See SURETYSHIP (1).

pledgor. One who gives a pledge to another. — Also spelled pledger. [Cases: Pledges ⇨8.]

plegiis acquietandis. See DE PLEGIIS ACQUIETANDIS.

plena aetas (plee-nə ee-tas). [Latin] Full age. See AGE OF MAJORITY.

plena forisfactura (plee-nə for-is-fak-chər-ə). [Latin “complete forfeiture”] A forfeiture of all that one possesses. [Cases: Forfeitures ⇨1.]

plena probatio. See probatio plena under PROBATIO.

plenarty (plee-nər-tee or plen-ər-tee), n. Hist. The condition of being full or occupied; esp., the state of a benefice that is lawfully occupied by an incumbent.

plenary (plee-nə-ree or plen-ə-ree), adj. (15c) 1. Full; complete; entire <plenary authority>. 2. (Of an assembly) intended to have the attendance of all members or participants <plenary session>.

plenary confession. See CONFESSION.

plenary guardianship. See GUARDIANSHIP.

plenary jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

plenary power. See POWER (3).

plenary review. See JUDICIAL REVIEW.

plenary session. See SESSION (1).

plenary suit. See SUIT.

plene (plee-nee), adv. [Latin] Fully; completely; sufficiently.

plene administravit (plee-nee ad-min-ə-stray-vit). [Law Latin “he has fully administered”] Hist. A defensive plea in which an executor or administrator asserts that no assets remain in the estate to satisfy the plaintiff’s demand.

plene administravit praeter (plee-nee ad-min-ə-stray-vit pree-tər). [Law Latin “he has fully administered, except”] Hist. A defensive plea in which an executor or administrator asserts that no assets remain in the estate, except a stated few that are insufficient to satisfy the plaintiff’s demand.

plene computavit (plee-nee kom-pyoo-tay-vit). [Law Latin “he has fully accounted”] Hist. A plea in an action of account render, alleging that the defendant has fully accounted. See ACCOUNTING (3).

plenipotentiary (plen-ə-pə-ten-shee-er-ee). A person who has full power to do a thing; a person fully commissioned to act for another. See minister plenipotentiary under MINISTER.

pleno jure (plee-noh joor-ee). [Latin] Hist. With full right. • The phrase usu. referred to a conveyance of the full rights to property.

plenum dominium. See dominium plenum under DOMINIUM.

plevin (plev-in), n. Archaic. An assurance or warrant; a pledge.

Plimsoll marks. See LOAD LINE (2).

PLL, abbr. See product-liability loss under LOSS.

plot, n. (bef. 12c) 1. A measured piece of land; LOT (1). Cf. PLAT (1). 2. A plan forming the basis of a conspiracy. [Cases: Conspiracy ⇨1.1, 24(1).]

plot plan. (1925) A plan that shows a proposed or present use of a plot of land, esp. of a residential area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ⇨245.]

plottage. (1916) The increase in value achieved by combining small, undeveloped tracts of land into larger tracts.

plow back, vb. To reinvest earnings and profits into a business instead of paying them out as dividends or withdrawals. [Cases: Corporations ⇨152.]

plowbote. See BOTE (1).

plowland. See CARUCATE.

plowman’s fee. See FEE (2).

PLR, abbr. PUBLIC-LENDING RIGHT.

pltf, abbr. PLAINTIFF.

plunder. See PILLAGE.

plunderage. Maritime law. The embezzling of goods on a ship.

plurality. (1803) The greatest number (esp. of votes), regardless of whether it is a simple or an absolute majority . — Also termed plural majority. Cf. MAJORITY (2).

plurality opinion. See OPINION (1).

plurality vote. See PLURALITY.

plurality voting. 1. See PLURALITY. 2. See VOTING.

plural majority. See PLURALITY.

plural marriage. 1. See MARRIAGE (1). 2. See POLYGAMY.

plural wife. See WIFE.

pluries (pluur-ee-eez), n. [Latin “many times”] (15c) A third or subsequent writ issued when the previous writs have been ineffective; a writ issued after an alias writ. — Also termed pluries writ. [Cases: Process ⇨45.]

plurinational administrative institution. Int’l law. An entity designed to perform transnational administrative activities when politically oriented international organizations and traditional international agreements are unsuitable. • These institutions usu. arise in fields where transnational arrangements are necessary (such as natural-resource management, transportation, or utilities), and they are often organized as international corporations, national agencies, or private corporations.

plurium defense. See MULTIPLE ACCESS.

plus factor. A fact that supports finding that a specified legal test has been satisfied.

plus petere tempore (pləs pə-ten-dī tem-pə-ree). [Latin “to overclaim in point of time”] Roman law. To claim before payment was due.

plus petitio (pləs-pə-tish-ee-oh). [Latin “overclaim” or “claiming too much”] Roman law. A claim for more than is due; esp., the mistake of claiming more in one’s pleadings than is due. • This was fatal to the action under classical law. Under cognitio extraordinaria, however, a claimant could continue the action, but could be liable for treble damages to any person injured by the overstated claim. — Also spelled (erroneously) pluspetitio. — Also termed pluris petitio.

“A plaintiff may overclaim . . . in substance (re) when he claims a bigger amount than is due to him; in time (tempore) when he claims before the payment is due; in place (loco), when he claims at a place (in a city) other than that where the payment had to be performed . . . or in cause (causa) when he claims a certain thing although the debtor had the right to choose between two or more things . . . After the abolition of the formula-regime the pluspetitio lost its actuality. Imperial legislation modified the severe provisions against overclaims . . . In Justinian’s law the plaintiff lost the case only if he maliciously persisted during the whole trial in his overclaim.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 633 (1953).

plus quam tolerabile (pləs kwam tol-ə-rab-ə-lee). [Latin] Hist. More than can be endured. • The phrase appeared in reference to damage to crops from unavoidable causes (vis major).

p.m. abbr. POST MERIDIEM.

PM. abbr. 1. POSTMASTER. 2. PRIME MINISTER. 3. BUREAU OF POLITICAL-MILITARY AFFAIRS.

PMI. abbr. Private mortgage insurance. See mortgage insurance under INSURANCE.

PMM. See purchase-money mortgage under MORTGAGE.

PMRT. See purchase-money resulting trust under TRUST.

PSMI. See purchase-money security interest under SECURITY INTEREST.

pneumoconiosis. Chronic lung disease and related conditions characterized by respiratory and pulmonary impairments and caused or aggravated by coal-dust exposure during coal-mine employment. • The disease is usu. latent and often does not manifest until after coal-dust exposure has ended. 20 CFR § 718.201. — Also termed black-lung disease. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨2680, 2689.]

clinical pneumoconiosis. Any medically recognized condition caused by coal-dust exposure while working in a coal mine and characterized by large, permanent deposits of particulate matter in the lungs, coupled with the lung tissue’s fibrotic reaction. • Some examples of clinical pneumoconioses are silicosis or silicotuberculosis, massive pulmonary fibrosis, and anthrosilicosis. Cf. legal pneumoconiosis. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨2680, 2689.]

legal pneumoconiosis. Any chronic restrictive or obstructive pulmonary disease or impairment and related conditions arising out of coal-mine employment. Cf. clinical pneumoconiosis. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨2680, 2689.]

P.O. abbr. 1. Post office. 2. PURCHASE ORDER.

pocket money. See HAT MONEY.

pocket part. (1931) A supplemental pamphlet inserted usu. into the back inside cover of a lawbook, esp. a treatise or code, to update the material in the main text until the publisher issues a new edition of the entire work. • Legal publishers frequently leave a little extra room inside their hardcover books so that pocket parts may later be added. — Also termed cumulative supplement.

pocket veto. See VETO.

P.O.D. abbr. Pay on delivery.

POD account. See pay-on-death account under ACCOUNT.

poena (pee-nə). [Latin] (1859) Punishment; penalty.

poena corporalis (pee-nə kor-pə-ray-lis). [Latin] Hist. Corporal punishment.

poena ordinaria (pee-nə or-di-nair-ee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. Ordinary punishment; punishment fixed by law.

poena pecuniary. A fine.

poenae secundarum nuptiarum (pee-nee sek-ən-dair-əm nəp-shee-air-əm). [Latin “penalties of second marriages”] Roman law. Disabilities that, for the protection of children of a first marriage, are imposed on a parent who remarries.

“If either parent re-married, the interests of the children of the first marriage were protected (in the later Roman Empire) by a number of legal rules the effect of which was to confer certain benefits on the children and to impose certain disabilities — the so-called poenae secundarum nuptiarum — on the parens binubus. The most important of these rules was that which declared that all the property which the parens binubus had acquired gratuitously from his or her deceased spouse, whether by way of gift, dos, donatio propter nuptias, or testamentary disposition — the so-called lucra nuptialia — should become ipso jure the property of the children of the first marriage at the moment of the conclusion of the second marriage, and that only a usufruct should be reserved for the parens binubus.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 477 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

poenalis (pi-nay-lis), adj. [Latin] Roman law. Imposing a penalty; penal.

poena pilloralis (pee-nə pil-ə-ray-lis). [Latin] Hist. Punishment of the pillory.

poenitentia (pee-nə-ten-shee-ə or pen-ə), n. [Latin "repentance"] Roman law. Reconsideration; changing one's mind.

pointing (pin-ding), n. Scots law. A judgment creditor's seizing of a debtor's corporeal movable property to satisfy the debt. — point, vb.

point, n. (13c) 1. A pertinent and distinct legal proposition, issue, or argument <point of error>. 2. Parliamentary law. Any of several kinds of requests made in a deliberative body. See REQUEST.

point of clarification. A question about procedure or substance.

point of information. An inquiry asking a question about a motion's merits or effect. • A point of information can be made only to seek information, not to volunteer information. It may request an objective fact or an expert opinion, but may not request anyone — including the chair or the mover — to speculate about how he or she expects or intends that the present or future leadership will interpret or apply a motion. See INQUIRY (2). — Also termed question of information.

point of order. A request suggesting that the meeting or a member is not following the applicable rules and asking the chair enforce the rules. • Some organizations use the term "point of order" as a generic term that also includes a parliamentary inquiry and a question of privilege. — Also termed question of order. See parliamentary inquiry under INQUIRY; question of privilege under QUESTION (3).

point of privilege. A motion that raises a question of privilege. See question of privilege under QUESTION (3); RAISE A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

procedural point. A request that raises a personal privilege relating to a member's ability to participate effectively in the meeting, such as the member's ability to see or hear the proceedings. See personal privilege under PRIVILEGE (5).

3. One percent of the face value of a loan (esp. a mortgage loan), paid up front to the lender as a service charge or placement fee <the borrower hoped for only a two-point fee on the mortgage>. — Also termed mortgage point. See MORTGAGE DISCOUNT. 4. A unit used for quoting stock, bond, or commodity prices <the stock closed up a few points today>. 5. A payment to secure a loan, stated as a percentage of the loan's face amount.

point-and-click agreement. (2000) An electronic version of a shrink-wrap license in which a computer user agrees to the terms of an electronically displayed agreement by pointing the cursor to a particular location on the screen and then clicking. • Point-and-click agreements usu. require express acceptance only once but may include a clause providing for a user's ongoing-acceptance of any changes to the agreement's terms, whether or not the user is notified of the changes. polygamy (pə-lig-ə-mee), n. (16c) 1. The state or practice of having more than one spouse simultaneously. — Also termed simultaneous polygamy; plural marriage. [Cases: Bigamy ⇨ 1; Marriage ⇨ 11.] 2. Hist. The fact or practice of having more than one spouse during one's lifetime, though never simultaneously. • Until the third century, polygamy included remarriage after a spouse's death because a valid marriage bond was considered indissoluble. — Also termed successive polygamy; serial polygamy; sequential marriage. Cf. BIGAMY; MONOGAMY. — polygamous, adj. — polygamist, n.

"Polygamy (many marriages) is employed at times as a synonym of bigamy and at other times to indicate the simultaneous marriage of two or more spouses." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 458 (3d ed. 1982).

"[T]his one-marriage-at-a-time rule behind which the legal systems of the West have seemingly thrown so much weight is not what a sociologist would call a general prohibition of polygamy. Polygamy can be simultaneous (if more than one spouse is simultaneously present) or successive (if spouses are married one after the other). Only simultaneous polygamy is prohibited by the laws with which we are here concerned. These statutes reserve the use of the word polygamy for that kind which is not very common among us. They do not affect the serial form, which is so very popular in the United States and Western Europe that . . . the law is fast changing to adapt to it." Mary Ann Glendon, The Transformation of Family Law 52 (1989).

polygarchy. See POLYARCHY.

polygraph, n. (1923) A device used to evaluate truthfulness by measuring and recording involuntary physiological changes in the human body during interrogation. • Polygraph results are inadmissible as evidence in most states but are commonly used by the police as an investigative tool. — Also termed lie detector. had control of religion in Rome. — Also termed pontiff. Pl. pontifices (pon-tif-i-seez).

pontiff, 1. Roman law. A member of the council of priests in ancient Rome. — Also termed pontifex.

"The specialists who interpreted the Twelve Tables and the unwritten part of the law were called pontiffs. At first they dealt with both sacred law (how to appease the gods) and secular law (how to secure peace among men). Some of them later confined themselves to secular law. As an example of how they interpreted the law, the Twelve Tables said that if a father sells his son three times (into bondage, to pay off debts) the son is to be free from his father's power. The Twelve Tables said nothing about a daughter. The pontiffs held that if a father sold his daughter once, she was free." Tony Honoré, About Law 13 (1995).

2. The leader of the Catholic Church; the Pope. See PONTIFEX.

pony homestead. See constitutional homestead under HOMESTEAD.

Ponzi scheme (pon-zee). (1920) A fraudulent investment scheme in which money contributed by later investors generates artificially high dividends or returns for the original investors, whose example attracts even larger investments. • Money from the new investors is used directly to repay or pay interest to earlier investors, usu. without any operation or revenue-producing activity other than the continual raising of new funds. This scheme takes its name from Charles Ponzi, who in the late 1920s was convicted for fraudulent schemes he conducted in Boston. See GIFTING CLUB. Cf. PYRAMID SCHEME. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻ 231.]

pool, n. (1868) 1. An association of individuals or entities who share resources and funds to promote their joint undertaking; esp., an association of persons engaged in buying or selling commodities. • If such an association is formed to eliminate competition throughout a single industry, it is a restraint of trade that violates federal antitrust laws. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻ 537.8.] 2. A gambling scheme in which numerous persons contribute stakes for betting on a particular event (such as a sporting event). [Cases: Gaming ↻ 5, 73.] posse comitatus (pos-ee kom-ə-tay-təs), n. [Latin “power of the county”] (16c) A group of citizens who are called together to help the sheriff keep the peace or conduct rescue operations. — Often shortened to posse. [Cases: Armed Services ⇨ 3; Sheriffs and Constables ⇨ 27.]

Posse Comitatus Act. A federal law that, with a few exceptions, prohibits the Army or Air Force from directly participating in civilian law-enforcement operations, as by making arrests, conducting searches, or seizing evidence. • The Act was originally enacted in 1878. It does not usu. apply to members of the Navy, the National Guard, or the Coast Guard. 18 USCA § 1385. — Abbr. PCA. [Cases: Armed Services ⇨ 3(2).]

possess, vb. (14c) To have in one’s actual control; to have possession of.

possessio (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh), n. [Latin] The de facto control of a thing that the holder intends to control.

pedis possessio (pee-dis or ped-is pə-zes[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] A foothold; an actual possession of real property, implying either actual occupancy or enclosure or use. See PEDIS POSSESSIO DOCTRINE. — Also termed substantial possession; possessio pedis.

possessio bona fide (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh boh-nə fr-dee). [Latin] Possession in good faith. Cf. possessio mala fide.

possessio bonorum (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh bə-nor-əm). [Latin] Roman law. Possession of goods.

possessio civilis (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh sə-vi-lis). [Latin] Roman law. Legal possession; that is, possession accompanied by an intent to hold it as one’s own. — Also termed possession in law. See possessory interdict under INTERDICT (1); USUCAPIO; possession in law under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio naturalis.

possessio corporis. See corporeal possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fictitia. See constructive possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fratris (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh fray-tris or fra-tris). [Latin] Hist. The possession or seisin of a brother; that is, a possession of an estate by a brother that would entitle his full sister to succeed him as heir, to the exclusion of a half-brother.

possessio juris. See incorporeal possession under POSSESSION.

possessio mala fide (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh mal-ə fr-dee). [Latin] Possession in bad faith, as by a thief. Cf. possessio bona fide.

possessio naturalis (pə-zes[h]-ee-oh nach-ə-ray-lis). [Latin “natural possession”] Roman law. The simple holding of a thing, often under a contract, with no intent of keeping it permanently. • This type of possession exists when the possessor’s holding of the object is limited by a recognition of another person’s outstanding right. The holder may be a usufructuary, a bailee, or a servant. — Also termed naturalis possessio; nuda detentio; detentio; possession in fact. See natural possession under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio civilis.

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio.

possession. (14c) 1. The fact of having or holding property in one’s power; the exercise of dominion over property. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.] 2. The right under which one may exercise control over something to the exclusion of all others; the continuing exercise of a claim to the exclusive use of a material object. 3. Civil law. The detention or use of a physical thing with the intent to hold it as one’s own. La. Civ. Code art. 3421(1). 4. (usu. pl.) Something that a person owns or controls; PROPERTY (2). Cf. OWNERSHIP; TITLE (1). 5. A territorial dominion of a state or nation.

“[A]s the name of Possession is . . . one of the most important in our books, so it is one of the most ambiguous. Its legal senses (for they are several) overlap the popular sense, and even the popular sense includes the assumption of matters of fact which are not always easy to verify. In common speech a man is said to possess or to be in possession of anything of which he has the apparent control, or from the use of which he has the apparent power of excluding others. . . . [A]ny of the usual outward marks of ownership may suffice, in the absence of manifest power in some one else, to denote as having possession the person to whom they attach. Law takes this popular conception as a provisional groundwork, and builds up on it the notion of possession in a technical sense, as a definite legal relation to something capable of having an owner, which relation is distinct and separable both from real and from apparent ownership, though often concurrent with one or both of them.” Frederick Pollock & Robert Samuel Wright, An Essay on Possession in the Common Law 1-2 (1888).

“In the whole range of legal theory there is no conception more difficult than that of possession. The Roman lawyers brought their usual acumen to the analysis of it, and since their day the problem has formed the subject of a voluminous literature, while it still continues to tax the ingenuity of jurists. Nor is the question one of mere curiosity or scientific interest, for its practical importance is not less than its difficulty. The legal consequences which flow from the acquisition and loss of possession are many and serious. Possession, for example, is evidence of ownership; the possessor of a thing is presumed to be the owner of it, and may put all other claimants to proof of their title." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 285 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

actual possession. (16c) Physical occupancy or control over property. Cf. constructive possession. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.]

adverse possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION.

bona fide possession. (1815) Possession of property by a person who in good faith does not know that the property's ownership is disputed. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 220.]

civil possession. 1. Civil law. Possession existing by virtue of a person's intent to own property even though the person no longer occupies or has physical control of it. 2. Louisiana law. The continuation of possession through the possessor's presumed intent to continue holding the thing as his or her own, after the possessor ceases to possess the thing corporeally. La. Civ. Code arts. 3431–32. • Civil possession may be evidenced by such things as paying taxes on the property or granting rights of interest in it. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.]

constructive possession. (18c) 1. Control or dominion over a property without actual possession or custody of it. — Also termed effective possession. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.] 2. Civil law. Possession by operation of law of an entirety by virtue of corporeal possession of a part. • When a possessor holds title to a property and physically possesses part of it, the law will deem the possessor to hold constructive possession of the rest of the property described in the title. La. Civ. Code art. 3426. — Also termed possessio fictitia; possession in law. Cf. actual possession.

corporeal possession. Possession of a material object, such as a farm or a coin. — Also termed natural possession; possessio corporis; (Ger.) Sachenbesitz. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.]

criminal possession. (1811) The unlawful possession of certain prohibited articles, such as illegal drugs or drug paraphernalia, firearms, or stolen property. [Cases: Controlled Substances ⇨ 24; Receiving Stolen Goods ⇨ 1; Weapons ⇨ 4.]

derivative possession. (1851) Lawful possession by one (such as a tenant) who does not hold title.

direct possession. See immediate possession.

double possession. The doctrine that, in a bailment, both the bailor and the bailee have possession of the item that has been bailed. • This doctrine does not apply in most Anglo-American jurisdictions.

"It has been suggested that the essence of bailment is that the bailee secures possession and therefore that the bailor loses possession. This elementary proposition is sometimes obscured by the fact that some dicta treat the possession of the bailee as the possession of the bailor. The theoretical justification for this is the doctrine of 'double possession' — a principal may have possession through the possession of an agent. This view is in accord with some foreign systems, but it does not suit the basic principles of English law which treats possession as exclusive." G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 6 (1952).

effective possession. See constructive possession.

exclusive possession. (18c) The exercise of exclusive dominion over property, including the use and benefit of the property.

hostile possession. (1812) Possession asserted against the claims of all others, esp. the record owner. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⇨ 58–85.]

immediate possession. (17c) Possession that is acquired or retained directly or personally. — Also termed direct possession.

immemorial possession. Possession that began so long ago that no one still living witnessed its beginning.

incorporeal possession. (1964) Possession of something other than a material object, such as an easement over a neighbor's land, or the access of light to the windows of a house. — Also termed possessio juris; quasi-possession.

"It is a question much debated whether incorporeal possession is in reality true possession at all. Some are of opinion that all genuine possession is corporeal, and that the other is related to it by way of analogy merely. They maintain that there is no single generic conception which includes possessio corporis and possessio juris as its two specific forms. The Roman lawyers speak with hesitation and even inconsistency on the point. They sometimes include both forms under the title of possessio, while at other times they are careful to qualify incorporeal possession as quasi possessio — something which is not true possession, but is analogous to it. The question is one of no little difficulty, but the opinion here accepted is that the two forms do in truth belong to a single genus. The true idea of possession is wider than that of corporeal possession, just as the true idea of ownership is wider than that of corporeal ownership." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 288–89 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

indirect possession. See mediate possession.

insular possession. An island territory of the United States, such as Guam. [Cases: Territories ⇨ 7.] joint possession. Possession shared by two or more persons.

mediate possession (mee-dee-it). Possession of a thing through someone else, such as an agent. • In every instance of mediate possession, there is a direct possessor (such as an agent) as well as a mediate possessor (the principal). — Also termed indirect possession.

"If I go myself to purchase a book, I acquire direct possession of it; but if I send my servant to buy it for me, I acquire mediate possession of it through him, until he has brought it to me, when my possession becomes immediate." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 300 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

naked possession. (16c) The mere possession of something, esp. real estate, without any apparent right or colorable title to it. [Cases: Estates in Property ⇨ 1; Property ⇨ 10.] natural possession. Civil law. The exercise of physical detention or control over a thing, as by occupying a building or cultivating farmland. • Natural possession may be had without title, and may give rise to a claim of unlawful possession or a claim of ownership by acquisitive prescription. The term “natural possession” has been replaced by the term “corporeal possession” in the Louisiana Civil Code, by virtue of a 1982 revision. La. Civ. Code Ann. art. 3425. See corporeal possession; PRESCRIPTION (2). Cf. possessio naturalis under POSSESSIO. [Cases: Adverse Possession ↻14; Property ↻10.]

notorious possession. (18c) Possession or control that is evident to others; possession of property that, because it is generally known by people in the area where the property is located, gives rise to a presumption that the actual owner has notice of it. • Notorious possession is one element of adverse possession. — Also termed open possession; open and notorious possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession ↻28–33.]

open and notorious possession. See notorious possession.

open possession. See notorious possession.

peaceable possession. (16c) Possession (as of real property) not disturbed by another's hostile or legal attempts to recover possession; esp., wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has appeared to tolerate. Cf. scrambling possession (1); ADVERSE POSSESSION.

pedal possession. (1839) Actual possession, as by living on the land or by improving it. • This term usu. appears in adverse-possession contexts.

possession animo domini. Civil law. Possession with the intent to own a thing, movable or immovable; possession as an owner. See La. Civ. Code art. 3427.

possession by relation of law. A person's legally recognized possession of land despite the person's not having actual possession after being improperly or unlawfully dispossessed by another.

possession in fact. (17c) Actual possession that may or may not be recognized by law. • For example, an employee's possession of an employer's property is for some purposes not legally considered possession, the term detention or custody being used instead. — Also termed possessio naturalis.

possession in law. (16c) 1. Possession that is recognized by the law either because it is a specific type of possession in fact or because the law for some special reason attributes the advantages and results of possession to someone who does not in fact possess. 2. See constructive possession. — Also termed possessio civilis.

“There is no conception which will include all that amounts to possession in law, and will include nothing else, and it is impossible to frame any definition from which the concrete law of possession can be logically deduced.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 287 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

possession of a right. (17c) The continuing exercise and enjoyment of a right. • This type of possession is often unrelated to an ownership interest in property. For example, a criminal defendant possesses the right to demand a trial by jury. — Also termed possessio juris; (Ger.) Rechtsbesitz.

precarious possession. Civil law. Detention of property by someone other than the owner or possessor on behalf of or with permission of the owner or possessor. • A lessee has precarious possession of the leased property.

“[Article 3437 of the Louisiana Civil Code defines precarious possession as] ‘exercise of possession over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of the owner or possessor.’ The definition indicates the difference between possession in the proper sense of the word and precarious possession, that is, detention. A possessor is one who possesses as owner, whereas a precarious possessor or detainer is one who exercises factual authority over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of another person.” A.N. Yianopoulos, Civil Law Property § 319, at 629 (4th ed. 2001).

quasi-possession. See incorporeal possession.

scrambling possession. (1823) 1. A wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has not appeared to tolerate. Cf. peaceable possession. 2. Possession that is uncertain because it is in dispute. • With scrambling possession, the dispute is over who actually has possession — not over whether a party's possession is lawful.

substantial possession. See pedis possessio under POSSESSIO.

possession unity. See unity of possession under UNITY.

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio under POSSESSIO.

possessor. (15c) One who has possession of real or personal property; esp., a person who is in occupancy of land with the intent to control it or has been but no longer is in that position, but no one else has gained occupancy or has a right to gain it. — possessorial (pos-ə-sor-ee-əl), adj.

legal possessor. (17c) One with the legal right to possess property, such as a buyer under a conditional sales contract, as contrasted with the legal owner who holds legal title. See legal owner under OWNER.

possessor bona fide (boh-nə fr-dee). A possessor who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession.

possessor mala fide (mal-ə fr-dee). A possessor who knows that someone else has a better right to the possession.

possessorium (pos-ə-sor-ee-əm). See possessory action under ACTION (4).

possessory (pə-zes-ə-ree), adj. Of, relating to, or having possession.

possessory action. See ACTION (4).

possessory claim. (1833) Title to public land held by a claimant who has filed a declaratory statement but has not paid for the land. [Cases: Public Lands ↻31.]

possessory conservator. See noncustodial parent under PARENT.

possessory estate. See ESTATE (1).

possessory garageman's lien. See LIEN.

possessory interdict. See INTERDICT (1).

possessory interest. (18c) 1. The present right to control property, including the right to exclude others, by a person who is not necessarily the owner. [Cases: Property ⇨ 10.] 2. A present or future right to the exclusive use and possession of property.

"We shall use the term 'possessory interest' to include both present and future interests, and to exclude such interests as easements and profits. The reader should note that the Restatement of Property uses the term 'possessory' to refer only to interests that entitle the owner to present possession. See Restatement, Property §§ 7, 9, 153 (1936)." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 19-20 n.1 (2d ed. 1984).

possessory lien. See LIEN.

possessory warrant. See WARRANT (1).

possibilitas (pos-ə-bil-ə-tas). [Latin] Possibility; a possibility.

possibility. (14c) 1. An event that may or may not happen. 2. A contingent interest in real or personal property.

bare possibility. See naked possibility.

naked possibility. (18c) A mere chance or expectation that a person will acquire future property. • A conveyance of a naked possibility is usu. void for lack of subject matter, as in a deed conveying all rights to a future estate not yet in existence. — Also termed bare possibility; naked expectancy. [Cases: Assignments ⇨ 8.]

possibility coupled with an interest. (18c) An expectation recognized in law as an estate or interest, as occurs in an executory devise or in a shifting or springing use. • This type of possibility may be sold or assigned. See shifting use, springing use under USE. [Cases: Assignments ⇨ 9.]

remote possibility. (17c) A limitation dependent on two or more facts or events that are contingent and uncertain; a double possibility. — Also termed possibility on a possibility.

possibility of reverter. (18c) A reversionary interest that is subject to a condition precedent; specif., a future interest retained by a grantor after conveying a fee simple determinable, so that the grantee's estate terminates automatically and reverts to the grantor if the terminating event ever occurs. • In this type of interest, the grantor transfers an estate whose maximum potential duration equals that of the grantor's own estate and attaches a special limitation that operates in the grantor's favor. — Often shortened to reverter. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE. Cf. REMAINDER (1); REVERSION.

"Most treatise-writers define the possibility of reverter as the interest a transferor keeps when he transfers a fee simple determinable or a fee simple conditional. See, e.g.,

1 American Law of Property § 4.12; Simes & Smith § 281. Although this definition is all right as far as it goes, it fails to provide for interests less than the fee simple that are granted on special limitation. . . . Although we call the possibility of reverter an 'estate,' the courts of an earlier era would probably have called it a 'possibility of becoming an estate.'" Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 58 n.5 (2d ed. 1984).

possibility on a possibility. See remote possibility under POSSIBILITY.

possidere (pos-ə-dee-ree). [Latin fr. potis "having power" + sedere "to sit"] Hist. To possess (a thing), esp. as a person with an interest protected by law (e.g., an owner or mortgagee) rather than a mere custodian.

"A distinction was made in the civil law, and adopted by Bracton, between possidere, (to possess,) and esse in possessione, (to be in possession.) . . . Thus, a guardian, holding in demesne though not in fee, was said to be in possession, though he did not possess. The same language was applied to a bailiff, . . . a domestic, . . . a fermor or lessee, . . . and a tenant at will from day to day, and from year to year." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 314 (2d ed. 1867).

POSSLQ (pahs-əl-kyoo). abbr. A person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. • Although this term (which is used by the Census Bureau) is intended to include only a person's roommate of the opposite sex to whom the person is not married, the phrase literally includes those who are married. This overbreadth has occasionally been criticized. See CUPOS.

"In the 1980 census, the United States Census Bureau — recognizing a societal change with numerous persons living together without being 'officially' married — counted not only persons who were 'Single' and 'Married,' but also 'Persons of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters.' The acronym is POSSLQ — and, of course, is pronounced possle-kew. It has been suggested that, although the source was stunningly unlikely, it was the Very Word that society has been looking for to describe these relationships: POSSLQ. Precise, businesslike, nonjudgmental. And, in its own way, sort of poetic, too . . ." Fischer v. Dallas Federal Savings and Loan Ass'n, 106 F.R.D. 465 (N.D. Tex. 1985).

post. [Latin] (14c) After. Cf. ANTE.

post, vb. (17c) 1. To publicize or announce by affixing a notice in a public place <foreclosure notice was posted at the county courthouse>. 2. To transfer (accounting entries) from an original record to a ledger <post debits and credits>. 3. To place in the mail <post a letter>. [Cases: Postal Service ⇨ 19.] 4. To make a payment or deposit; to put up <post bail>.

postal currency. See CURRENCY.

Postal Rate Commission. An independent federal agency that recommends changes in postage rates, fees, and mail classifications to the governors of the United States Postal Service. • It was created by the Postal Reorganization Act. 39 USCA §§ 3601-04. — Abbr. PRC. [Cases: Postal Service ⇨ 15.]

post-answer default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

post audit. See AUDIT.

post bail, vb. See GIVE BAIL.

post causam cognitam (pohst kaw-zəm kog-ni-təm). [Latin] Hist. After investigation. Cf. CAUSA COGNITA.

post contractum debitum (pohst kən-trak-təm deb-i-təm). [Latin] Hist. After debt has been contracted.

postconviction-relief proceeding. (1964) A state or federal procedure for a prisoner to request a court to vacate or correct a conviction or sentence. — Also termed postconviction-remedy proceeding; PCR action; postconviction proceeding. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 1400–1669.]

postdate, vb. (17c) To put a date on (an instrument, such as a check) that is later than the actual date. Cf. ANTEDATE; BACKDATE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 8.]

postdated check. See CHECK.

post diem (pohst di-əm). [Latin] After the day. • A plea of payment post diem is made after the day when the money becomes due.

post disseisina. See DE POST DISSEISINA.

postea (poh-stee-ə), n. [Latin “afterwards”] Hist. A formal statement, endorsed on the trial record, giving an account of the proceedings at trial; a record of what occurred at nisi prius after the issue had been joined.

“With the verdict of the jury [in the 15th–18th centuries] . . . the proceedings at nisi prius closed, and the case was sent back to the court at Westminster from which it issued for judgment, after a statement of the holding of the trial and of the verdict had been added to the record. This statement, from the fact that it began with the Latin word ‘postea,’ or ‘afterwards,’ was known as the ‘postea’ and was in fact drafted by the party in whose favour the verdict had gone, whence the phrase ‘postea to the plaintiff’ or ‘the defendant,’ which is found in the old reports.” Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 185 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

posted water. See WATER.

posteriores (pah-steer-ee-or-eez), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Descendants in a direct line beyond the sixth degree.

posteriority (pah-steer-ee-or-ə-tee). The condition or state of being subsequent. • This word was formerly used to describe the relationships existing between a tenant and the two or more lords the tenant held of; the tenant held the older tenancy “by priority” and the more recent one “by posteriority.”

posterity, n. (14c) 1. Future generations collectively. 2. All the descendants of a person to the furthest generation.

post-expiration-sales theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy by which compensation is sought for sales lost after a patent expired, on the basis that infringement gave the competitor a head start on entering the market. — Also termed accelerated reentry theory. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 318(3).]

post facto (pohst fak-toh). [Latin] After the fact. See EX POST FACTO.

post-factum (pohst-fak-təm). [Latin] An after-act; an act done afterwards. — Also termed postfactum.

post-fine. See KING’S SILVER.

postglossators (pohst-glah-say-tərz), n. pl. (often cap.) A group of mainly Italian juriconsults who were active during the 14th and 15th centuries writing commentaries and treatises that related Roman law to feudal and Germanic law, canon law, and other contemporary bodies of law. • The postglossators constituted the second wave of Roman-law study after its revival in the 11th century, the first being that of the glossators. — Also termed commentators. See GLOSSATORS.

post hoc (pohst hok). [Latin fr. post hoc, ergo propter hoc “after this, therefore because of this”] (1844) 1. adv. After this; subsequently. 2. adj. Of or relating to the fallacy of assuming causality from temporal sequence; confusing sequence with consequence.

posthumous (pos-chə-məs), adj. Occurring or existing after death; esp., (of a child) born after the father’s death.

posthumous adoption. See ADOPTION.

posthumous child. See CHILD.

posthumous work. See WORK (2).

posting. (17c) 1. Accounting. The act of transferring an original entry to a ledger. 2. The act of mailing a letter. 3. A method of substituted service of process by displaying the process in a prominent place (such as the courthouse door) when other forms of service have failed. See SERVICE (1). [Cases: Process ⇨ 81.] 4. A publication method, as by displaying municipal ordinances in designated localities. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨ 110.] 5. The act of providing legal notice, as by affixing notices of judicial sales at or on the courthouse door. [Cases: Judicial Sales ⇨ 11.] 6. The procedure for processing a check, including one or more of the following steps: (1) verifying any signature, (2) ascertaining that sufficient funds are available, (3) affixing a “paid” or other stamp, (4) entering a charge or entry to a customer’s account, and (5) correcting or reversing an entry or erroneous action concerning the check. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 137.]

post-issue activity. Patents. Any acts done during a patent’s term, including making, using, or selling a patented invention or process, esp. without authorization.

postjudgment discovery. See DISCOVERY.

postliminium (pohst-lə-min-ee-əm), n. [fr. Latin post “after” + limen “threshold”] 1. Roman & civil law. The reentering of one’s residence. 2. Roman & civil law. The doctrine that a restoration of a person’s lost rights or status relates back to the time of the original loss or deprivation, esp. in regard to the restoration of the status of a prisoner of war.

“[A] person who is taken captive and comes back within the limits of the Empire is correctly described as returning by postliminium. By ‘limen’ (threshold) we mean the frontier of a house, and the old lawyers applied the word to the frontier of the Roman State; so that the word postliminium conveys the idea of recrossing the frontier. If a prisoner is recovered from a beaten foe he is deemed to have come back by postliminium.” R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 85–86 (4th ed. 1956).

3. Int'l law. The act of invalidating all of an occupying force's illegal acts, and the post-occupation revival of all illegitimately modified legal relations to their former condition, esp. the restoration of property to its rightful owner. — Also termed postliminy; jus postliminii.

post litem motam (pohst li-təm moh-təm). [Law Latin] After suit commenced. • Depositions held after litigation had begun were formerly sometimes so called.

postman (pohst-mən). Hist. A barrister in the Court of Exchequer who had precedence in motions. • The postman was so called because of the post he stood next to when making motions. Cf. TUBMAN.

"The postman was an experienced member of the junior Bar who had a place in the Court of Exchequer by the post anciently used as a measure of length in excise cases. He had precedence in motions over all other juniors . . ." Sir Robert Megarry, A Second Miscellany-at-Law 122 (1973).

postmarital, adj. 1. Of, relating to, or occurring after marriage. Cf. PREMARITAL. 2. Of, relating to, or occurring after divorce.

postmark. An official mark put by the post office on an item of mail to cancel the stamp and to indicate the place and date of sending or receipt. [Cases: Postal Service ↷15.]

postmaster. A U.S. Postal Service official responsible for a local branch of the post office. — Abbr. PM. [Cases: Postal Service ↷7.]

Postmaster General. The head of the U.S. Postal Service. [Cases: Postal Service ↷4.]

post meridiem (pohst mə-rid-ee-əm). [Latin] After noon. — Abbr. p.m.; PM.

postmortem, adj. (1824) Done or occurring after death .

postmortem, n. See AUTOPSY (1).

postnatus (pohst nay-təs). [Latin] A person born after a certain political event that affected the person's political rights; esp., a person born after the Declaration of Independence. Cf. ANTENATUS. Pl. postnati.

post note. A banknote payable at a future time rather than on demand. See time note under NOTE (1).

postnup, n. Slang. See POSTNUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

postnuptial (pohst-nəp-shəl), adj. (1807) Made or occurring during marriage . Cf. PRENUPTIAL. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷30.]

postnuptial agreement (pohst-nəp-shəl). (1834) An agreement entered into during marriage to define each spouse's property rights in the event of death or divorce. • The term commonly refers to an agreement between spouses during the marriage at a time when separation or divorce is not imminent. When dissolution is intended as the result, it is more properly called a property settlement or marital agreement. — Often shortened to postnup. — Also termed postnuptial settlement. Cf. PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷30, 31.]

postnuptial settlement. See POSTNUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

postnuptial will. See WILL.

post-obit agreement. See BOND (3).

post-obit bond. See BOND (3).

postpone, vb. (15c) 1. To put off to a later time. 2. To place lower in precedence or importance; esp., to subordinate (a lien) to a later one. 3. Parliamentary law. To temporarily or permanently suppress a main motion. — postponement, n.

postpone definitely. To delay a main motion's consideration to a specified time or until a specified condition occurs, usu. by the next meeting — or to the next meeting as unfinished business. — Also termed postpone to a certain time; postpone to a definite time; postpone to a time certain. See TIME CERTAIN.

postpone indefinitely. To dispose of a main motion without taking a view on its merits while preventing its further consideration during the same session. • This motion's ancient form in the English Parliament was to postpone consideration until "this day six months" (or "three months") — that is, some time beyond the current session, sufficiently remote that the body expected not to consider the matter again. — Also termed indefinite postponement.

postpone temporarily. See TABLE.

postpone to a certain time. See postpone definitely.

potentate (poh-tən-tayt). A ruler who possesses great power or sway; a monarch.

potentia (pə-ten-shee-ə). [Latin] Possibility; power.

potential, adj. Capable of coming into being; possible <things having a potential existence may be the subject of mortgage, assignment, or sale>.

potentially responsible party. Environmental law. A person or entity that may be required to clean up a polluted site because the person or entity (1) owns or operates on the site, (2) arranged for the disposal of a hazardous substance on the site, (3) transported a hazardous substance to the site, or (4) contributed in any other way to contaminate the site. — Abbr. PRP. See SUPERFUND.

potential Pareto superiority. See WEALTH MAXIMIZATION.

potentia propinqua (pə-ten-shee-ə prə-ping-kwə). [Latin] Common possibility.

potestas (pə-tes-təs or -tas), n. [Latin “power”] Roman law. Authority or power, such as the power of a magistrate to enforce the law, or the authority of an owner over a slave.

patria potestas (pay-tree-ə or pa-tree-ə). [Latin “paternal power”] The authority held by the male head of a family (the senior ascendant male) over his legitimate and adopted children, as well as further descendants in the male line, unless emancipated. • Initially, the father had extensive powers over the family, including the power of life and death; until Justinian’s time, the father alone in his familia had proprietary capacity but he could give a son or slave a peculium. Over time, the broad nature of the patria potestas gradually became more in the nature of a responsibility to support and maintain family members. But except in early Roman history, a wife did not fall into her husband’s power but remained in her father’s until she became sui juris by his death. — Also termed fatherly power.

“The power of the father continued ordinarily to the close of his life, and included not only his own children, but also the children of his sons, and those of his sons’ sons, if any such were born during his lifetime. . . . Originally and for a long time the patria potestas had a terribly despotic character. Not only was the father entitled to all the service and all the acquisitions of his child, as much as to those of a slave, but he had the same absolute control over his person. He could inflict upon him any punishment however severe. . . . Consider now that the patria potestas had this character and extent down to the Christian era: that, in general, every citizen of the republic who had a living father was in this condition, unable to hold property, unable to acquire any thing for himself, wholly dependent on his father in property and person . . . without help or vindication from the law. . . . The reason which caused the Romans to accept and uphold the patria potestas, to maintain it with singular tenacity against the influence of other systems with which they came in contact, must have been the profound impression of family unity, the conviction that every family was, and of right ought to be, one body, with one will and one executive.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 119-21 (1881).

“Nature and Extent of Patria Potestas. — From the most remote ages the power of a Roman father over his children, including those by adoption as well as by blood, was unlimited. A father might, without violating any law, scourge or imprison his son, or sell him for a slave, or put him to death, even after that son had risen to the highest honours in the state. This jurisdiction was not merely nominal, but, in early times, was not infrequently exercised to its full extent, and was confirmed by the laws of the XII Tables. . . . By degrees the right of putting a child to death (ius vitae et necis) fell into desuetude; and long before the close of the republic, the execution of a son by order of his father, although not forbidden by any positive statute, was regarded as something strange, and, unless under extraordinary circumstances, monstrous. But the right continued to exist in theory . . . after the establishment of the empire. [In the Christian empire, these extreme punishments were forbidden and disciplinary powers were reduced to those of reasonable chastisement. — Ed.]” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 291-92 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

potestas gladii (pə-tes-təs [or -tas] glad-ee-ī). [Latin “the power of the sword”] Roman law. See JUS GLADIUM.

potestas maritalis (pə-tes-təs [or -tas] mar-ə-tay-lis). [Latin] Hist. The marital power. • In Roman law, this was an institution, one that was decaying by the end of the Republic.

potestative condition. See CONDITION (2).

power. (13c) 1. The ability to act or not act; esp., a person’s capacity for acting in such a manner as to control someone else’s responses. 2. Dominance, control, or influence over another; control over one’s subordinates. 3. The legal right or authorization to act or not act; a person’s or organization’s ability to alter, by an act of will, the rights, duties, liabilities, or other legal relations either of that person or of another.

“A power is the capacity to change a legal relationship. In this terminology the offeree has, before the contract is made, a power to create a contract by means of acceptance.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 3.4, at 114 n.3 (3d ed. 1999).

agent’s power. The ability of an agent or apparent agent to act on behalf of the principal in matters connected with the agency or apparent agency. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨49, 91–126.]

concurrent power. (1812) A political power independently exercisable by both federal and state governments in the same field of legislation.

congressional power. The authority vested in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives to enact laws and take other constitutionally permitted actions. U.S. Const. art. I. [Cases: United States ⇨22.]

delegated power. Power normally exercised by an authority that has temporarily conferred the power on a lower authority. [Cases: Powers ⇨1.]

derivative power. Power that arises only from a grant of authority. • Power may be derived, for example, by an agent from a principal, or by a head of state from constitutional or statutory provisions. [Cases: Powers ⇨1.]

discretionary power. A power that a person may choose to exercise or not, based on the person’s judgment.

enumerated power. (1805) A political power specifically delegated to a governmental branch by a constitution. — Also termed express power. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨635–639.]

fatherly power. See patria potestas under POTESTAS.

implied power. (1807) A political power that is not enumerated but that nonetheless exists because it is needed to carry out an express power. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨325; Powers ⇨1.]

incident power. (17c) A power that, although not expressly granted, must exist because it is necessary to the accomplishment of an express purpose. — Also termed incidental power.

inherent power. (17c) A power that necessarily derives from an office, position, or status.

institorial power (in-stä-tor-ee-äl). Civil law. The power given by a business owner to an agent to act in the owner’s behalf.

investigatory power (in-ves-tä-gä-tor-ee). (usu. pl.) The authority conferred on a governmental agency to inspect and compel disclosure of facts germane to an investigation. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨346.]

judicial power. See JUDICIAL POWER.

mediate powers. See MEDIATE POWERS.

naked power. (18c) The power to exercise rights over something (such as a trust) without having a corresponding interest in that thing. Cf. power coupled with an interest.

particular power. See special power.

plenary power (plee-nä-ree or plen-ä-ree). (16c) Power that is broadly construed; esp., a court’s power to dispose of any matter properly before it. [Cases: Courts ⇨1, 26, 30, 207.1.]

police power. See POLICE POWER.

power coupled with an interest. (18c) A power to do some act, conveyed along with an interest in the subject matter of the power. • A power coupled with an interest is not held for the benefit of the principal, and it is irrevocable due to the agent’s interest in the subject property. For this reason, some authorities assert that it is not a true agency power. — Also termed power given as security; proprietary power. See irrevocable power of attorney under POWER OF ATTORNEY. Cf. naked power. [Cases: Powers ⇨27.]

power given as security. See power coupled with an interest.

power of acceptance. An offeree's power to bind an offeror to a contract by accepting the offer. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 16, 22(1).]

power of revocation (rev-ə-kay-shən). (17c) A power that a person reserves in an instrument (such as a trust) to revoke the legal relationship that the person has created. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 217; Powers ↷ 19; Trusts ↷ 59.]

power of sale. A power granted to sell the property that the power relates to. • The power's exercise is often conditioned on the occurrence of a specific event, such as the nonpayment of a debt. [Cases: Powers ↷ 20.]

power over oneself. See CAPACITY (2).

power over other persons. See AUTHORITY (1).

primary powers. See PRIMARY POWERS.

private power. A power vested in a person to be exercised for personal ends and not as an agent for the state.

proprietary power. See power coupled with an interest.

public power. A power vested in a person as an agent or instrument of the functions of the state. • Public powers comprise the various forms of legislative, judicial, and executive authority. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷ 103.]

quasi-judicial power. (152) An administrative agency's power to adjudicate the rights of those who appear before it. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↷ 108.]

quasi-legislative power. (1864) An administrative agency's power to engage in rulemaking. 5 USCA § 553. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↷ 106, 385.]

reserved power. (1831) A political power that is not enumerated or prohibited by a constitution, but instead is reserved by the constitution for a specified political authority, such as a state government. See TENTH AMENDMENT.

restraining power. A power to restrict the acts of others.

resulting power. A political power derived from the aggregate powers expressly or impliedly granted by a constitution.

special power. (18c) 1. An agent's limited authority to perform only specific acts or to perform under specific restrictions. — Also termed particular power. [Cases: Powers ↷ 19.] 2. See limited power of appointment under POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

spending power. (1923) The power granted to a governmental body to spend public funds; esp., the congressional power to spend money for the payment of debt and provision of the common defense and general welfare of the United States. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. [Cases: United States ↷ 82.]

taxing power. (18c) The power granted to a governmental body to levy a tax; esp., the congressional power to levy and collect taxes as a means of effectuating Congress's delegated powers. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. See SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3001–3008; [Cases: Taxation ↷ 2003–2007.]

trust power. See beneficial power.

visitatorial power. The power to inspect or make decisions about an entity's operations. — Also termed visitatorial power.

4. A document granting legal authorization. See AUTHORITY. 5. An authority to affect an estate in land by (1) creating some estate independently of any estate that the holder of the authority possesses, (2) imposing a charge on the estate, or (3) revoking an existing estate. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT; PERMIT. [Cases: Powers ↷ 1.]

"The word 'power' is normally used in the sense of an authority given to a person to dispose of property which is not his. The person giving the power is called the donor and the person to whom it is given the donee." Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 253 (4th ed. 1969).

appendant power (ə-pen-dənt). (17c) 1. A power that gives the donee a right to appoint estates that attach to the donee's own interest. 2. A power held by a donee who owns the property interest in the assets subject to the power, and whose interest can be divested by the exercise of the power. • The appendant power is generally viewed as adding nothing to the ownership and thus is not now generally recognized as a true power. — Also termed power appendant; power appurtenant. [Cases: Powers ↷ 23.]

avoiding power. Bankruptcy. The power of a bankruptcy trustee or debtor in possession to void certain transfers made or obligations incurred by a debtor, including fraudulent conveyances, preferences transferred to creditors, unperfected security interests in personal property, and unrecorded mortgages. 11 USCA §§ 544–53. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2703, 2704.]

beneficial power. (18c) A power that is executed for the benefit of the power's donee, as distinguished from a trust power, which is executed for the benefit of someone other than the power's donee (i.e., a trust beneficiary). [Cases: Powers ↷ 25.]

collateral power. A power created when the donee has no estate in the land, but simply the authority to appoint. [Cases: Powers ↷ 25.]

general power. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

limited power. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

mandatory power. A power that the donee must exercise and must do so only as instructed, without discretion.

power appendant. See appendant power.

power appurtenant. See appendant power.

power collateral. See power in gross.

power in gross. (18c) A power held by a donee who has an interest in the assets subject to the power but whose interest cannot be affected by the exercise of the power. • An example is a life tenant with a power over the remainder. — Also termed power collateral. [Cases: Powers ⇨23.]

power of appointment. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

relative power. A power that relates directly to land, as distinguished from a collateral power.

testamentary power. See POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

6. Physical strength. 7. Moral or intellectual force. 8. A person of influence . 9. One of the great nations of the world <one of the world's two great powers>. See PROTECTING POWER. 10. The military or unit of it, such as a troop of soldiers.

power-delegating law. See LAW OF COMPETENCE.

power given as security. See power coupled with an interest under POWER (3).

power of alienation. (16c) The capacity to sell, transfer, assign, or otherwise dispose of property.

power of appointment. (18c) A power created or reserved by a person having property subject to disposition, enabling the donee of the power to designate transferees of the property or shares in which it will be received; esp., a power conferred on a donee by will or deed to select and determine one or more recipients of the donor's estate or income. • If the power is exercisable before the donee's death, it is exercisable wholly in favor of the donee. If the power is testamentary, it is exercisable wholly in favor of the donee's estate. — Often shortened to power. — Also termed enabling power. [Cases: Powers ⇨19; Wills ⇨589.]

general power of appointment. (18c) A power of appointment by which the donee can appoint — that is, dispose of the donor's property — in favor of anyone at all, including oneself or one's own estate; esp., a power that authorizes the alienation of a fee to any alienee. — Often shortened to general power. [Cases: Powers ⇨19; Wills ⇨589.] limited power of appointment. (1830) A power of appointment that either does not allow the entire estate to be conveyed or restricts to whom the estate may be conveyed; esp., a power by which the donee can appoint to only the person or class specified in the instrument creating the power, but cannot appoint to oneself or one's own estate. — Often shortened to limited power. — Also termed special power of appointment. [Cases: Powers ⇨19; Wills ⇨589.]

special power of appointment. See limited power of appointment.

testamentary power of appointment (tes-tə-men-tə-ree or -tree). (1858) A power of appointment created by a will. — Often shortened to testamentary power. [Cases: Wills ⇨589.]

power-of-appointment trust. See TRUST.

power of attorney. (18c) 1. An instrument granting someone authority to act as agent or attorney-in-fact for the grantor. • An ordinary power of attorney is revocable and automatically terminates upon the death or incapacity of the principal. — Also termed letter of attorney; warrant of attorney. See ATTORNEY (1). [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨51.] 2. The authority so granted; specif., the legal ability to produce a change in legal relations by doing whatever acts are authorized. Pl. powers of attorney.

durable power of attorney. (1980) A power of attorney that remains in effect during the grantor's incompetency. • Such instruments commonly allow an agent to make healthcare decisions for a patient who has become incompetent. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨51.]

general power of attorney. (18c) A power of attorney that authorizes an agent to transact business for the principal. Cf. special power of attorney. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨97.]

irrevocable power of attorney (i-rev-ə-kə-bəl). (18c) A power of attorney that the principal cannot revoke. — Also termed power of attorney coupled with an interest. See power coupled with an interest under POWER (3). [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨37.]

power of attorney coupled with an interest. See irrevocable power of attorney.

power of attorney for healthcare. See ADVANCE DIRECTIVE (1).

special power of attorney. (18c) A power of attorney that limits the agent's authority to only a specified matter. Cf. general power of attorney.

springing power of attorney. A power of attorney that becomes effective only when needed, at some future date or upon some future occurrence, usu. upon the principal's incapacity. — Also termed springing durable power of attorney. See durable power of attorney; ADVANCE DIRECTIVE.

power of revocation (rev-ə-kay-shən). See POWER (3).

power of sale. See POWER (3).

power-of-sale clause. (1883) A provision in a mortgage or deed of trust permitting the mortgagee or trustee to sell the property without court authority if the payments are not made. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨21.]

power-of-sale foreclosure. See FORECLOSURE.

power of termination. (1919) A future interest retained by a grantor after conveying a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, so that the grantee's estate terminates (upon breach of the condition) only if the grantor exercises the right to retake it. — Also termed right of entry; right of reentry; right of entry for breach of condition; right of entry for condition broken. See fee simple subject to a condition subsequent under FEE SIMPLE. Cf. POSSIBILITY OF REVERTER. [Cases: Deeds ⇨159.]

power over other persons. See AUTHORITY (1).

power politics. Int'l law. An approach to foreign policy that encourages a nation to use its economic and military strength to enlarge its own power as an end in itself; a system in which a country is willing to bring its economic and (esp.) military strength to bear in an effort to increase its own power.

power to inspect. Patents. The authority of a third party to review a patent application. • The power may be given by the applicant or an assignee, often to a potential buyer. It must specify which application the person is authorized to see, and it becomes part of the record of the application. See ACCESS (4), (5). [Cases: Patents ⇨97.]

p.p. abbr. 1. PER PROCURATIONEM. 2. PROPRIA PERSONA.

PPA. abbr. 1. See provisional application under PATENT APPLICATION. 2. PLANT PATENT ACT.

PPI. abbr. POLICY PROOF OF INTEREST.

PPO. abbr. 1. PREFERRED-PROVIDER ORGANIZATION. 2. See permanent protective order under PROTECTIVE ORDER.

p. pro. abbr. PER PROCURATIONEM.

p. proc. abbr. PER PROCURATIONEM.

PR. abbr. PUBLIC RELATIONS.

practicable, adj. (16c) (Of a thing) reasonably capable of being accomplished; feasible.

practicably irrigable acreage. Land that is susceptible to prolonged irrigation, at reasonable cost.

practical construction. See contemporaneous construction under CONSTRUCTION.

practical finality. The situation in which a court order directs immediate delivery of physical property, subjecting the losing party to irreparable harm if an immediate appeal were not possible. • Practical finality provides an exception to the usual rule that interlocutory orders are not appealable. See FINALITY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨572.1.]

practical interpretation. See contemporaneous construction under CONSTRUCTION.

practically avoidable. See AVOIDABLE.

practice, n. (15c) 1. The procedural methods and rules used in a court of law <local practice requires that an extra copy of each motion be filed with the clerk>. 2. PRACTICE OF LAW <where is your practice?>. [Cases: Patents ⇨90(5).]

practice, vb. Patents. 1. To make and use (a patented invention) <the employer had a shop right to practice the patent, but not to sell it>. 2. To build a physical embodiment of an invention. See REDUCTION TO PRACTICE.

practice act. (1881) A statute governing practice and procedure in courts. • Practice acts are usu. supplemented with court rules such as the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

practice book. (1873) A volume devoted to the procedures in a particular court or category of courts, usu. including court rules, court forms, and practice directions.

practice court. 1. MOOT COURT. 2. (cap.) BAIL COURT.

practice goodwill. See GOODWILL.

practice guide. A written explanation of how to proceed in a particular area of law or in a particular court or locality.

practice of law. (17c) The professional work of a duly licensed lawyer, encompassing a broad range of services such as conducting cases in court, preparing papers necessary to bring about various transactions from conveying land to effecting corporate mergers, preparing legal opinions on various points of law, drafting wills and other estate-planning documents, and advising clients on legal questions. • The term also includes activities that comparatively few lawyers engage in but that require legal expertise, such as drafting legislation and court rules. — Also termed legal practice. Cf. LAW PRACTICE. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨11.] multidisciplinary practice of law. See MULTIDISCIPLINARY PRACTICE.

unauthorized practice of law. (1928) The practice of law by a person, typically a nonlawyer, who has not been licensed or admitted to practice law in a given jurisdiction. — Abbr. UPL. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨11.]

"The definitions and tests employed by courts to delineate unauthorized practice by non-lawyers have been vague or conclusory, while jurisdictions have differed significantly in describing what constitutes unauthorized practice in particular areas.

"Certain activities, such as the representation of another person in litigation, are generally proscribed. Even in that area, many jurisdictions recognize exceptions for such matters as small-claims and landlord-tenant tribunals and certain proceedings in administrative agencies. Moreover, many jurisdictions have authorized law students and others not locally admitted to represent indigent persons or others as part of clinical legal education programs.

"Controversy has surrounded many out-of-court activities such as advising on estate planning by bank trust officers, advising on estate planning by insurance agents, stock brokers, or benefit-plan and similar consultants, filling out or providing guidance on forms for property transactions by real estate agents, title companies, and closing-service companies, and selling books or individual forms containing instructions on self-help legal services accompanied by personal, non-lawyer assistance on filling them out in connection with legal procedures such as obtaining a marriage dissolution. The position of bar associations has traditionally been that non-lawyer provisions of such services denies the person served the benefit of such legal measures as the attorney-client privilege, the benefits of such extraordinary duties as that of confidentiality of client information and the protection against conflicts of interest, and the protection of such measures as those regulating lawyer trust accounts and requiring lawyers to supervise non-lawyer personnel. Several jurisdictions recognize that many such services can be provided by non-lawyers without significant risk of incompetent service, that actual experience in several states with extensive non-lawyer provision of traditional legal services indicates no significant risk of harm to consumers of such services, that persons in need of legal services may be significantly aided in obtaining assistance at a much lower price than would be entailed by segregating out a portion of a transaction to be handled by a lawyer for a fee, and that many persons can ill afford, and most persons are at least inconvenienced by, the typically higher cost of lawyer services." Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 4 cmt. c (1998).

practicks (prak-tiks). Hist. Scots law. (usu. pl.) An old collection of notes about points of practice, decisions of the Court of Sessions, statutes, and forms, compiled by members of the court. • An example is Balfour's Practicks (1469–1579). A precursor of law reports, the notes remain historical legal literature of some authority.

practitioner. (16c) A person engaged in the practice of a profession, esp. law or medicine.

praebentes causam mortis (pri-ben-teez kaw-zəm mor-tis). [Latin] Hist. (Persons) occasioning the cause of death.

praecipio haereditatis (pri-sep-shee-oh hæ-red-i-tay-tis). [Law Latin] Scots law. A taking of the inheritance in advance. — Also termed lucrative succession.

"Praecipio haereditatis . . . This is one of the passive titles known in law, which, if incurred by the heir, renders him in some measure liable for his ancestor's debts. It was introduced to prevent an heir from receiving and enjoying, under a gratuitous disposition inter vivos from his ancestor, that heritable estate to which he would be entitled to succeed on the ancestor's death, and of thus avoiding responsibility for his ancestor's debts and other obligations." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 466–67 (4th ed. 1894).

praepiores (pree-sep-tor-eez). [Law Latin "masters"] Hist. The chief clerks of Chancery, responsible for preparing remedial writs.

praecipe (pree-sə-pee or pres-ə-pee), n. [Latin "command"] (15c) 1. At common law, a writ ordering a defendant to do some act or to explain why inaction is appropriate. — Also termed writ of praecipe. 2. A written motion or request seeking some court action, esp. a trial setting or an entry of judgment. — Also spelled precipe. — praecipe, vb.

praecipe quod reddat (pree-sə-pee or pres-ə-pee kwod red-at). [Latin "command that he render"] Hist. A writ directing the defendant to return certain property. • An action for common recovery was often begun with this writ. When the writ was brought to recover land, it was termed ingressu. See COMMON RECOVERY.

"The praecipe quod reddat was the proper writ when the plaintiff's action was for a specific thing; as for the recovery of a debt certain, or for the restoration of such a chattel, or for giving up such a house, or so much land, specifying the nature and quantity of it. By this writ the sheriff was commanded to summon the tenant or defendant to appear at Westminster, at such a day in term." 1 George Crompton, Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xxxix (3d ed. 1787).

praecipitium (pree-sə-pish-ee-əm or pres-ə-), n. [Latin "headlong fall"] Roman law. The punishment of casting a criminal from the Tarpeian rock.

praecipuum (pri-sip-yoo-əm), n. [Latin] Hist. The estate portion that is not subject to rules of division; the part of an estate that one claimant (usu. the eldest heir-portioner) receives to the exclusion of all others.

praeco (pree-koh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A herald or crier.

praedia (pree-dee-ə), n. [Latin] The plural of praedium (land; an estate). See PRÆDIUM.

praedia bellica (pree-dee-ə bel-ə-kə). [Latin] Property seized in war; booty.

praedia stipendiaria (pree-dee-ə sti-pen-dee-air-ee-ə). [Latin] Provincial lands belonging to the res publicae; the senatorial provinces.

praedia tributaria (pree-dee-ə trib-yoo-tair-ee-ə). [Latin] Provincial lands belonging to the emperor; the imperial provinces.

praedial (pree-dee-əl), adj. See PREDIAL.

praedial tithe. See predial tithe under TITHE.

praedictus (pri-dik-təs), adj. [Law Latin] Hist. Aforesaid.

• In pleading, praedictus usu. referred to a defendant, a town, or lands, idem to a plaintiff, and praefatus to a person other than a party. Cf. PRÆFATUS.

praedium (pree-dee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. Land; an estate. Pl. praedia.

praedium dominans (pree-dee-əm dom-ə-nanz). [Latin] A dominant estate; an estate benefiting from a servitude. See SERVITUDE. Cf. dominant estate under ESTATE (4).

praedium rusticum (pree-dee-əm rəs-ti-kəm). [Latin] An estate used for agricultural purposes. Cf. rural servitude under SERVITUDE (2).

praedium serviens (pree-dee-əm sər-vee-enz). [Latin] An estate burdened by a servitude; a servient estate. See SERVITUDE. Cf. servient estate under ESTATE (4).

praedium urbanum (pree-dee-əm ər-bay-nəm). [Latin] An estate used for business or for dwelling; any estate other than a praedium rusticum. See urban servitude (2) under SERVITUDE (2).

praedo (pree-doh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A robber. Pl. praedones.

praefectura (pri-fek-chər-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The office of prefect. 2. A town or territory administered by a prefect.

praefectus urbi (pri-fek-təs ər-bi). [Latin "prefect of the city"] Roman law. A senator charged with keeping law and order in the city of Rome. • This duty originated in the early Empire. The praefectus had both criminal and civil jurisdiction; the latter was gradually taken over from the praetor, although the praefectus's civil jurisdiction was always cognitio. — Also termed urban prefect; prefect of the city.

"Praefectus urbi. The prefect of the city was originally a mere delegate appointed in case of the temporary absence of the emperor, but the office became a permanency owing to Tiberius' continued residence away from Rome in the latter part of his reign, and under subsequent emperors the praefect remained in office even when the emperor was present. His duties included generally the maintenance of order in the city, and he had under his command the urban cohorts, in effect a police force numbering between 4,000 and 6,000 men. He early assumed criminal jurisdiction, and in the end became the chief criminal court not only for Rome but for the district within 100 miles." H.F. Jolowicz, Historical Introduction to the Study of Roman Law 345-46 (1952).

praefectus vigilum (pri-fek-təs vi-jil-əm). [Latin "praefect of the watch"] Roman law. An officer, immediately subordinate to the praefectus urbi, with police and fire-prevention duties. • This officer had the authority to punish offenses relating to the public peace. See PRAELECTUS URBI.

praefectus villae (pri-fek-təs vil-ee). [Latin] Hist. The mayor of a town.

praefine (pree-fin). See PRIMER FINE.

praejuramentum (pree-juur-ə-men-təm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A preparatory oath.

praelegatum (pree-lə-gay-təm), n. [Latin] Roman law. A legacy to one of several heirs whereby the legatee was entitled to the legacy before the estate was divided. • This was similar to an advancement.

praelibatio matrimonii (pree-li-bay-shee-oh ma-trə-moh-nee-ī). [Law Latin] Hist. A foretaste of marriage.

praematura diligentia (pree-mə-t[y]uur-ə [or -chuur-ə] dil-ə-jen-shee-ə). [Law Latin] Scots law. Premature execution of a judgment.

praemium emancipationis (pree-mee-əm i-man-sə-pay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin "reward for emancipation"] Roman law. A compensation allowed by Constantine to a father on the emancipation of his child, consisting of one-third of the property that came to the child from his mother's side. • Justinian replaced this with the usufruct of half the child's separate property.

praemium pudicitiae (pree-mee-əm pyoo-də-sish-ee-ee). [Latin "the price of chastity"] Hist. Compensation paid by a man who seduced a chaste woman. — Also written premium pudicitiae. — Also termed praemium pudoris.

praemunire (pree-myoo-ni-ree), n. [Latin praemoneri "to be forewarned"] Hist. The criminal offense of obeying an authority other than the king. • Praemunire stems from the efforts of Edward I (1272-1307) to counter papal influence in England, and takes its name from the writ's initial words: praemunire facias ("that you cause to be forewarned"). One type of praemunire was to appeal to the pope rather than the monarch. Another was to bring a suit in a temporal court instead of a royal court, in part because the monarch wanted all fines levied as punishment to go to the royal coffers, not those of the church.

praenomen (pree-noh-mən), n. [Latin] Roman law. The first of a person's three names, given to distinguish the person from family members.

praeposita negotiis vel rebus domesticis (pri-poz-ə-tə ni-goh-shee-is vel ree-bəs də-mes-ti-sis). [Latin] Hist.

Set over domestic affairs. • The phrase usu. referred to a wife's status.

praepositor (pri-poz-ə-tər or -tor), n. [Law Latin "supervisor, reeve"] Hist. One who delegates duties (esp. of a business's management) to another; one who places (another) in a position over others.

praepositura (pri-poz-ə-t[y]uur-ə), n. [Latin "management" or "supervisory office"] Hist. 1. One to whom management duties are delegated. 2. The area of responsibility delegated to a person to manage, esp. a wife's authority to manage the household.

praepositus (pree-poz-ə-təs), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. An officer next in authority to the alderman of a hundred. 2. A steward or bailiff of an estate.

praepositus negotiis (pri-poz-ə-təs ni-goh-shee-is). [Latin] Hist. Put in charge of another's business.

praepositus negotiis societatis (pri-poz-ə-təs ni-goh-shee-is sə-si-ə-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. Put in charge of a partnership's business.

praepositus villae (pree-poz-ə-təs vil-ee). [Latin] Hist. A constable of a town; a petty constable.

praerogativa regis (pree-rog-ə-ti-və ree-jis). [Law Latin "of the Crown's prerogative"] Hist. A declaration made at the time of Edward I (1272-1307) defining certain feudal and political rights of the Crown, including the right to wardship of an idiot's lands to protect the idiot's heirs from disinheritance or alienation. — Also termed de praerogativa regis (dee pree-rog-ə-ti-və ree-jis).

"The king's right is distinctly stated in the document known as praerogativa Regis, which we believe to come from the early years of Edward I. The same document seems to be the oldest that gives us any clear information about a wardship of lunatics. The king is to provide that the lunatic and his family are properly maintained out of the income of his estate, and the residue is to be handed over to him upon his restoration to sanity, or, should he die without having recovered his wits, is to be administered by the ordinary for the good of his soul; but the king is to take nothing to his own use." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 481 (2d ed. 1898).

praescriptio (pri-skrip-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A preliminary portion of a formula that defines the scope of action. 2. A defensive plea in an action to recover land by which the defendant asserts ownership based on continuous possession for a prescribed time. — Also termed (in sense 2) praescriptio longi temporis. Pl. praescriptiones (pri-skrip-shee-oh-nee-z).

praescriptio fori (pri-skrip-shee-oh for-i). [Latin] Roman law. An objection on the ground that the person objecting is not subject to the court's jurisdiction.

praescriptis verbis (pri-skrip-tis vər-bis). [Latin "in the words before written"] 1. Roman law. An action on a bilateral agreement under which one party had performed and required the other to perform in turn. 2. Roman law. The grounds given for the existence of a contract that falls into the class later described as innominate. • Innominate contracts were developed and recognized late in classical law.

See innominate contract under CONTRACT. 3. Hist. (Of a clause) restricted in scope by introductory words — esp., in a pleading, words defining the issue.

praeses (pree-seez), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A governor of a province. 2. The president of a college or university.

praestare (pree-stair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. 1. To perform an obligation. 2. To undertake liability.

praestatio culpa levis (pri-stay-shee-oh kəl-pee lee-vis). [Law Latin] Hist. An obligation for the middle degree of diligence — that is, the diligence and care required by a person of ordinary prudence. • This phrase was a forerunner of the modern terms reasonable care and reasonable person.

praesumitur pro negante (pri-zyoo-mə-tər proh ni-gantee). [Latin] It is presumed for the negative. • This is the rule of the House of Lords when the votes are equal on a motion.

praesumptio (pri-zəmp-shee-oh), n. [Latin] A presumption. Pl. praesumptiones (pri-zəmp-shee-oh-nee-z).

praesumptio fortior (pri-zəmp-shee-oh for-shee-ər or -or). [Latin] A strong presumption (of fact); a presumption strong enough to shift the burden of proof to the opposing party.

praesumptio hominis (pri-zəmp-shee-oh hom-ə-nis). [Latin] The presumption of an individual; that is, a natural presumption unfettered by rules.

praesumptio juris (pri-zəmp-shee-oh joor-is). [Latin] A presumption of law; that is, one in which the law assumes the existence of something until it is disproved. See presumption of law and rebuttable presumption under PRESUMPTION.

praesumptio Muciana (pri-zəmp-shee-oh myoo-shee-ay-nə). [Latin] Roman law. The rebuttable presumption that in case of doubt a thing possessed by a married woman had been given to her by her husband. • The presumption was named after the jurist Quintus Mucius.

praeter dotem (pree-tər doh-təm or -tem). [Latin] Hist. Over and above the dowry.

praeteritio (pree-tə- or pret-ə-rish-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A testator's exclusion of an heir by passing the heir over. • In Roman law, passing over sui heredes usu. invalidated the will. See SUI HEREDES.

praeter legem. See EQUITY PRAETER LEGEM.

praetor (pree-tər), n. [Latin] Roman law. The magistrate responsible for identifying and framing the legal issues in a case and for ordering a lay judge (judex) to hear evidence and decide the case in accordance with the formula. See FORMULA (1).

praetor fideicommissarius (pree-tər fi-dee-i-kom-ə-sair-ee-əs). A special praetor having jurisdiction over cases involving trusts.

praetorian edict. See edictum praetoris under EDICTUM.

praevaricatio (pri-var-ə-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “collusion with an opponent”] Roman law. An accuser's colluding with the defense in such a way that the accused will be acquitted. • An accuser might do this in various ways, as by deemphasizing the most important charges, refraining from calling the most important witnesses, or refraining from exercising peremptory challenges against jurors who would tend to favor the accused. See CALUMNIA. Cf. TERGIVERSATIO.

praevaricator (pree-var-ə-kay-tər). See PREVARICATOR.

praevento termino (pri-ven-toh tər-mə-noh). [Law Latin “by anticipating the term”] Scots law. An action in the Court of Session to prevent a delay in a suspension or an appeal. See SUSPENSION (6).

pratique (pra-teek or prat-ik). Maritime law. A license allowing a vessel to trade in a particular country or port after complying with quarantine requirements or presenting a clean bill of health.

praxis (prak-sis). [Greek “doing; action”] (1933) In critical legal studies, practical action; the practice of living the ethical life in conjunction and in cooperation with others.

prayer conference. See CHARGE CONFERENCE.

prayer for relief. (18c) A request addressed to the court and appearing at the end of a pleading; esp., a request for specific relief or damages. — Often shortened to prayer. — Also termed demand for relief; request for relief. See AD DAMNUM CLAUSE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨680; Pleading ⇨72.]

general prayer. (18c) A prayer for additional unspecified relief, traditionally using language such as, “Plaintiff additionally prays for such other and further relief to which she may show herself to be justly entitled.” • The general prayer typically follows a special prayer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2585; Judgment ⇨252; Pleading ⇨72.]

special prayer. (18c) A prayer for the particular relief to which a plaintiff claims to be entitled. [Cases: Judgment ⇨252; Pleading ⇨72.]

prayer in aid. See AID PRAYER.

prayer of process. (18c) A conclusion in a bill in equity requesting the issuance of a subpoena if the defendant fails to answer the bill. [Cases: Equity ⇨139.]

PRC. abbr. POSTAL RATE COMMISSION.

preamble (pree-am-bəl), n. (14c) 1. An introductory statement in a constitution, statute, or other document explaining the document's basis and objective; esp., a statutory recital of the inconveniences for which the statute is designed to provide a remedy. • A preamble often consists of a series of clauses introduced by the conjunction whereas. Such a preamble is sometimes called the whereas clauses. [Cases: Statutes ↷210.]

"The preamble cannot control the enacting part of the statute, in cases where the enacting part is expressed in clear, unambiguous terms; but in case any doubt arises on the enacting part, the preamble may be resorted to to explain it, and show the intention of the law maker." Den v. Urison, 2 N.J.L. 212 (1807).

2. Patents. The first words of a patent claim, often a single phrase indicating the field of art. • The preamble is typically nonlimiting unless it "breathes life and meaning into the claims." Corning Glass Works v. Sumitomo Elec. U.S.A., Inc., 868 F.2d 1251, 1257 (Fed. Cir. 1989). Elements, the later parts of the claim, narrow this broad identification more and more specifically. Cf. BODY OF A CLAIM; TRANSITION PHRASE. [Cases: Patents ↷165(4).] — preambulary (pree-am-byə-ler-ee), preambular (pree-am-byə-lər), adj.

preappointed evidence. See EVIDENCE.

preargument-conference attorney. See CIRCUIT MEDIATOR.

preaudience. English law. The right of a senior barrister to be heard in court before other barristers.

prebankruptcy, adj. Occurring before the filing of a bankruptcy petition <prebankruptcy transactions>.

prebend (preb-ənd), n. 1. A stipend granted in a cathedral church for the support of the members of the chapter. 2. The property from which the stipend comes.

prebendary (preb-ən-der-ee). A person serving on the staff of a cathedral who receives a stipend from the cathedral's endowment.

prebut (pree-bət), vb. Slang. To rebut an argument in advance of an opponent's making it; to engage in anticipatory refutation.

precariae (pri-kair-ee-ee). [Law Latin "favors"] Hist. Day labor that tenants of certain manors were bound to give their lords at harvest time. — Also termed preces.

precarious, adj. (17c) Dependent on the will or pleasure of another; uncertain.

precarious loan. See LOAN.

precarious possession. See POSSESSION.

precarious trade. See TRADE.

precarium (pri-kair-ee-əm), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The gratuitous grant of the enjoyment of property, revocable at will. 2. The property so granted. 3. Hist. An estate or tenure arising from a precarious grant, and usu. characterized by uncertainty or arduous conditions of tenure.

precatory (prek-ə-tor-ee), adj. (17c) (Of words) requesting, recommending, or expressing a desire for action, but usu. in a nonbinding way. • An example of preca-tory language is "it is my wish and desire to . . ." [Cases: Trusts ↷29; Wills ↷467.]

precatory trust. See TRUST.

precautionary appeal. See protective appeal under APPEAL.

precedence (pres-ə-dənts or prə-seed-ənts), n. (16c) 1. The order or priority in place or time observed by or for persons of different statuses (such as political dignitaries) on the basis of rank during ceremonial events. 2. Generally, the act or state of going before something else according to some system of priorities. 3. Parliamentary law. The ranked priority that determines whether a motion is in order while another motion is pending, or whether a pending motion yields to another motion.

"There is a principle that determines the precedence of motions. The closer a motion is to final disposition of the matter under consideration, the lower it is in the order of precedence. The further removed the motion is from final disposition of the matter, the higher it is in the order of precedence." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure 6 (2000).

4. Parliamentary law. The priority in which a member is entitled to the floor. — Also termed precedence in recognition; preference in being recognized. 5. The order in which persons may claim the right to administer an intestate's estate. • The traditional order is (1) surviving spouse, (2) next of kin, (3) creditors, and (4) public administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↷17.]

precedent (prə-seed-ənt also pres-ə-dənt), adj. (14c) Preceding in time or order <condition precedent>.

precedent (pres-ə-dənt), n. (16c) 1. The making of law by a court in recognizing and applying new rules while administering justice. [Cases: Courts ↷87.] 2. A decided case that furnishes a basis for determining later cases involving similar facts or issues. See STARE DECISIS. [Cases: Courts ↷88.] — precedential, adj.

"In law a precedent is an adjudged case or decision of a court of justice, considered as furnishing a rule or authority for the determination of an identical or similar case afterwards arising, or of a similar question of law. The only theory on which it is possible for one decision to be an authority for another is that the facts are alike, or, if the facts are different, that the principle which governed the first case is applicable to the variant facts." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 288 (3d ed. 1914).

"A precedent . . . is a judicial decision which contains in itself a principle. The underlying principle which thus forms its authoritative element is often termed the ratio decidendi. The concrete decision is binding between the parties to it, but it is the abstract ratio decidendi which alone has the force of law as regards the world at large." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 191 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"One may say, roughly, that a case becomes a precedent only for such a general rule as is necessary to the actual decision reached, when shorn of unessential circumstances." † James Parker Hall, Introduction, American Law and Procedure xlviii (1952).

"One may often accord respect to a precedent not by embracing it with a frozen logic but by drawing from its thought the elements of a new pattern of decision." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 151 (1968).

binding precedent. (17c) A precedent that a court must follow. • For example, a lower court is bound by an applicable holding of a higher court in the same jurisdiction. — Also termed authoritative precedent; binding authority. Cf. imperative authority under AUTHORITY (4). [Cases: Courts ⇨88, 107.]

declaratory precedent. (1900) A precedent that is merely the application of an already existing legal rule.

original precedent. (17c) A precedent that creates and applies a new legal rule.

persuasive precedent. (1905) A precedent that is not binding on a court, but that is entitled to respect and careful consideration. • For example, if the case was decided in a neighboring jurisdiction, the court might evaluate the earlier court's reasoning without being bound to decide the same way. [Cases: Courts ⇨88.]

precedent sub silentio (səb sə-len-shee-oh). (1825) A legal question that was neither argued nor explicitly discussed in a judicial decision but that seems to have been silently ruled on and might therefore be treated as a precedent.

superprecedent. 1. A precedent that defines the law and its requirements so effectively that it prevents divergent holdings in later legal decisions on similar facts or induces disputants to settle their claims without litigation. • This sense was posited by W. Landes and Richard Posner in Legal Precedent: A Theoretical and Empirical Analysis, 19 J. Law & Econ. 249, 251 (1976). 2. A precedent that has become so established in the law by a long line of reaffirmations that it is very difficult to overturn it; specif., a precedent that has been reaffirmed many times and whose rationale has been extended to cover cases in which the facts are dissimilar, even wholly unrelated, to those of the precedent. • For example, Roe v. Wade has been called a superprecedent because it has survived more than three dozen attempts to overturn it and has been relied on in decisions protecting gay rights and the right to die. Cf. super stare decisis under STARE DECISIS.

3. DOCTRINE OF PRECEDENT. 4. A form of pleading or property-conveyancing instrument. • Precedents are often compiled in book form and used by lawyers as guides for preparing similar documents.

"Collections of Precedents have existed from very early times. In this connection precedents must not be confused with judicial precedents or case law. We refer here simply to common-form instruments compiled for use in practice, whereby the lawyer can be more or less certain that he is using the correct phraseology for the particular case before him. They were used both in conveyancing and litigation. . . . It is interesting to note that these precedents were apparently among the first legal works to be published after printing was introduced. Collections of conveyancing precedents continued to be brought up to date or new volumes issued . . ." A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter's Outlines of English Legal History 42–43 (5th ed. 1958).

prece partium (pree-see pah-r-shee-əm). [Law Latin] On the prayer of the parties.

precept (pree-sept). (14c) 1. A standard or rule of conduct; a command or principle <several legal precepts govern here>. [Cases: Courts ⇨87–100.] 2. A writ or warrant issued by an authorized person demanding another's action, such as a judge's order to an officer to bring a party before the court <the sheriff executed the precept immediately>.

preceptive statute. See STATUTE.

preceptum amissionis superioritatis (pri-sep-təm ə-mis[h]-ee-oh-nis suu-peer-ee-or-ə-tay-tis). [Law Latin "a precept of a lost superiority"] Hist. A precept to force a superior to give a vassal's disponsee entry to the land.

preces (pree-seez), n. [Latin "prayers"] Roman law. A petition, esp. one addressed to the emperor by a private person. Cf. RESCRIPT (3).

preces primariae (pree-seez pri-mair-ee-ee). [Latin] Hist. The right of the sovereign to appoint a person to fill a vacant prebendary office after the sovereign's accession. • This right was exercised during the reign of Edward I. — Also termed primae preces. See PREBENDARY.

precinct. A geographical unit of government, such as an election district, a police district, or a judicial district. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨40.]

magisterial precinct. (1894) A county subdivision that defines the territorial jurisdiction of a magistrate, constable, or justice of the peace. — Also termed magisterial district. [Cases: Justices of the Peace ⇨52.]

precipe (pre-sə-pee). See PRAECIPE.

précis (pray-see or pray-see), n. [French] (18c) A concise summary of a text's essential points; an abstract. Pl. précis (pray-seez or pray-seez).

precludi non debet (pri-kloo-di non dee-bet or deb-et). [Latin "he ought not to be barred"] Hist. The beginning of a plaintiff's reply to a plea in bar in which the plaintiff objects to being barred from maintaining the action. — Sometimes shortened to precludi non.

preclusion order. See ORDER (2).

precognition (pree-kog-nish-ən). Scots law. 1. A preliminary examination under oath of persons believed to have knowledge about the facts of a case, esp., in a criminal case, to determine whether there is sufficient evidence for a trial. 2. The written record of the statement that a prospective witness can give as evidence.

precompounded prescription drug. See DRUG.

preconceived malice. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

precondition. See CONDITION (1).

precontract. See CONTRACT.

predate, vb. See ANTEDATE.

predation. See PREDATORY PRICING.

predator. See SEXUAL PREDATOR.

predatory crime. See CRIME.

predatory intent. See INTENT (1).

predatory pricing. Unlawful below-cost pricing intended to eliminate specific competitors and reduce overall competition; pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competitors in the short run and reducing competition in the long run. — Also termed predation. See ANTITRUST. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻832.]

"In its most orthodox form, 'predatory pricing' refers to a practice of driving rivals out of business by selling at a price below cost. The predator's intent — and the only intent that can make predatory pricing rational, profit-maximizing behavior — is to charge monopoly prices after rivals have been dispatched or disciplined. Predatory pricing is analyzed under the antitrust laws as illegal monopolization or attempt to monopolize under § 2 of the Sherman Act, or sometimes as a violation of the Clayton Act § 2, generally called the Robinson-Patman Act." Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 335 (2d ed. 1999).

predecease, vb. To die before (another) <she predeceased her husband>.

predecessor. 1. One who precedes another in an office or position. 2. An ancestor.

predecisional, adj. Of, relating to, or occurring during the time before a decision.

predial (pree-dee-əl), adj. (15c) Of, consisting of, relating to, or attached to land <predial servitude>. — Also spelled praedial.

predial servitude. See servitude appurtenant under SERVITUDE (2).

predial tithe. See TITHE.

predicate act. (1977) 1. See predicate offense under OFFENSE (1). 2. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE (1). 3. Under RICO, one of two or more related acts of racketeering necessary to establish a pattern. See RACKETEER INFLUENCED AND CORRUPT ORGANIZATIONS ACT. 4. See predicate act under ACT (2). [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↻5, 103.]

predicate fact. See FACT.

predicate offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE (1).

prediction theory. 1. See BAD-MAN THEORY. 2. See PREDICTIVE THEORY OF LAW.

predictive theory of law. (1956) The view that the law is nothing more than a set of predictions about what the courts will decide in given circumstances. • This theory is embodied in Holmes's famous pronouncement, "The prophecies of what the courts will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law." Oliver Wendell Holmes, The Path of the Law, 10 Harv. L. Rev. 457, 460–61 (1897). — Also termed prediction theory. Cf. BAD-MAN THEORY.

pre disposition. (17c) A person's inclination to engage in a particular activity; esp., an inclination that vitiates a criminal defendant's claim of entrapment. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻37(4).] predominant-aspect test. See PREDOMINANT-PURPOSE TEST.

predominant-purpose test. An assessment of whether Article 2 of the UCC applies to an exchange, conducted by considering whether the exchange's chief aspect, viewed in light of all the circumstances, is the sale of goods. • If goods account for most of the exchange's value, it is probably a sale; if services account for most of the value, it probably is not. The leading case is Bonbrake v. Cox, 499 F.2d 951, 960 (8th Cir. 1974). — Also termed predominant-aspect test. [Cases: Sales ↻3.]

preemption (pree-emp-shən), n. (18c) 1. The right to buy before others. See RIGHT OF PREEMPTION. [Cases: Contracts ↻16.5; Sales ↻24; Vendor and Purchaser ↻18(5).] 2. The purchase of something under this right. 3. An earlier seizure or appropriation. 4. The occupation of public land so as to establish a preemptive title. [Cases: Public Lands ↻34.] 5. Constitutional law. The principle (derived from the Supremacy Clause) that a federal law can supersede or supplant any inconsistent state law or regulation. — Also termed (in sense 5) federal preemption. See COMPLETE-PREEMPTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: States ↻18.3.] — preempt, vb. — preemptive, adj.

conflict preemption. See obstacle preemption.

Garmon preemption. Labor law. A doctrine prohibiting state and local regulation of activities that are actually or arguably (1) protected by the National Labor Relations Act's rules relating to the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively, or (2) prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act's provision that governs unfair labor practices. San Diego Bldg. Trades Council v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236, 79 S.Ct. 773 (1959). — Also termed Garmon doctrine. See COLLECTIVE BARGAINING; UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻968, 1670; States ↻18, 46.]

Machinists preemption. Labor law. The doctrine prohibiting state regulation of an area of labor activity or management-union relations that Congress has intentionally left unregulated. Lodge 76, Int'l Ass'n of Machinists v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Comm'n, 427 U.S. 132, 96 S.Ct. 2548 (1976). [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻968.]

obstacle preemption. The principle that federal or state law can supersede or supplant state or local law that stands as an obstacle to accomplishing the full purposes and objectives of the overriding federal or state law. — Also termed conflict preemption. [Cases: States ↻18.5.]

preemption claimant. (1824) One who has settled on land subject to preemption, intending in good faith to acquire title to it.

preemption right. (18c) The privilege to take priority over others in claiming land subject to preemption. • The privilege arises from the holder's actual settlement of the land. See PREEMPTION (3).

preemptive right. A shareholder's privilege to purchase newly issued stock — before the shares are offered to the public — in an amount proportionate to the shareholder's current holdings in order to prevent dilution of the shareholder's ownership interest. • This right must be exercised within a fixed period, usu. 30 to 60 days. — Also termed subscription privilege. See SUBSCRIPTION RIGHT. Cf. rights offering under OFFERING. [Cases: Corporations ↻158.]

preexisting condition. See CONDITION (2).

preexisting duty. See DUTY (1).

preexisting-duty rule. (1990) Contracts. The rule that if a party does or promises to do what the party is already legally obligated to do — or refrains or promises to refrain from doing what the party is already legally obligated to refrain from doing — the party has not incurred detriment. • This rule's result is that the promise does not constitute adequate consideration for contractual purposes. For example, if a builder agrees to construct a building for a specified price but later threatens to walk off the job unless the owner promises to pay an additional sum, the owner's new promise is not enforceable because, under the preexisting-duty rule, there is no consideration for that promise. — Also termed preexisting-legal-duty rule. [Cases: Contracts ↻75.] prefect (pree-fekt), n. 1. A high official or magistrate put in charge of a particular command, department, or region. 2. In New Mexico, a probate judge.

prefect of the city. See PRAEFECTUS URBI.

prefer, vb. (14c) 1. To put forward or present for consideration; esp. (of a grand jury), to bring (a charge or indictment) against a criminal suspect <the defendant claimed he was innocent of the charges preferred against him>. 2. To give priority to, such as to one creditor over another <the statute prefers creditors who are first to file their claims>.

preference. 1. The act of favoring one person or thing over another; the person or thing so favored. 2. Priority of payment given to one or more creditors by a debtor; a creditor's right to receive such priority. 3. Bankruptcy. PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

insider preference. A transfer of property by a bankruptcy debtor to an insider more than 90 days before but within one year after the filing of the bankruptcy petition. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻2608(2).]

liquidation preference. A preferred shareholder's right, once the corporation is liquidated, to receive a specified distribution before common shareholders receive anything. [Cases: Corporations ↻629.]

voidable preference. See PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

preference case. See preferred cause under CAUSE (3).

preference cause. See preferred cause under CAUSE (3).

preference in being recognized. See PRECEDENCE (4).

preference shares. See preferred stock under STOCK.

preferential assignment. See PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER.

preferential ballot. See preferential vote under VOTE (1).

preferential debt. See DEBT.

preferential nonunion shop. See SHOP.

preferential rule. (1959) Evidence. A rule that prefers one kind of evidence to another. • It may work provisionally, as when a tribunal refuses to consider one kind of evidence until another kind (presumably better) is shown to be unavailable, or it may work absolutely, as when the tribunal refuses to consider anything but the better kind of evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻398.]

"There are only three or four . . . sets of [preferential] rules. There is a rule preferring the production of the original of a document, in preference to a copy. There is a rule requiring the attesting witness to a will to be summoned to evidence its execution. And there is a rule preferring the magistrate's official report of testimony taken before him. Then there are a few miscellaneous rules, such as the officially certified enrollment of a statute, etc." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 219 (1935).

preferential shop. See preferential union shop under SHOP.

preferential tariff. See TARIFF (2).

preferential union shop. See SHOP.

preferential vote. See VOTE (1).

preferential voting. See VOTING.

preferred, adj. Possessing or accorded a priority or privilege .

preferred cause. See CAUSE (3).

preferred creditor. See CREDITOR.

preferred dividend. See DIVIDEND.

preferred docket. See DOCKET (2).

preferred-provider organization. (1984) A group of healthcare providers (such as doctors, hospitals, and pharmacies) that agree to provide medical services at a discounted cost to covered persons in a given geographic area. — Abbr. PPO. Cf. HEALTH-MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATION; MANAGED-CARE ORGANIZATION. [Cases: Health ↻294; Insurance ↻1259, 2501.]

preferred stock. See STOCK.

preferring of charges. Military law. The formal completion of a charge sheet, which includes signing and swearing to the charges and specifications. • Only a person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice can prefer charges. Cf. INITIATION OF CHARGES. [Cases: Military Justice ⇨951.]

prefiled bill. See BILL (3).

Pregnancy-Discrimination Act. A federal statute that prohibits workplace discrimination against a pregnant woman or against a woman affected by childbirth or a related medical condition. 42 USCA § 2000. • The Pregnancy-Discrimination Act is part of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. — Abbr. PDA. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨1176.]

pregnant chad. See dimpled chad under CHAD.

prehearing conference. (1946) An optional conference for the discussion of procedural and substantive matters on appeal, usu. held in complex civil, criminal, tax, and agency cases. • Those attending are typically the attorneys involved in the case as well as a court representative such as a judge, staff attorney, or deputy clerk. Fed. R. App. P. 33. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨808; Criminal Law ⇨632(5); Federal Courts ⇨741.]

"The prehearing conference, if held, generally is scheduled after the time for appeal and cross-appeal has passed, and as soon as it becomes apparent that the case is complex due to the legal issues, the length of the record, or the number of parties. In a complex or multiparty case, the conference provides a forum in which to discuss briefing responsibilities, timing, and handling the record and joint appendix. There may be some discussion of the amount of oral argument the parties desire and how that argument will be divided . . ." Michael E. Tigar, Federal Appeals: Jurisdiction and Practice § 8.06, at 309-10 (2d ed. 1993).

prehire agreement. An employment contract between a union and an employer, in which the employer agrees to hire union members. See closed shop under SHOP.

prejudgment interest. See INTEREST (3).

prejudice, n. (14c) 1. Damage or detriment to one's legal rights or claims. See dismissal with prejudice and dismissal without prejudice under DISMISSAL.

legal prejudice. (18c) A condition that, if shown by a party, will usu. defeat the opposing party's action; esp., a condition that, if shown by the defendant, will defeat a plaintiff's motion to dismiss a case without prejudice. • The defendant may show that dismissal will deprive the defendant of a substantive property right or preclude the defendant from raising a defense that will be unavailable or endangered in a second suit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨1700; Pretrial Procedure ⇨510.]

undue prejudice. (17c) The harm resulting from a fact-trier's being exposed to evidence that is persuasive but inadmissible (such as evidence of prior criminal conduct) or that so arouses the emotions that calm and logical reasoning is abandoned.

2. A preconceived judgment formed with little or no factual basis; a strong bias. [Cases: Judges ⇨49.] — prejudice, vb. — prejudicial, adj.

prejudicial error. See reversible error under ERROR (2).

prejudicial publicity. (1935) Extensive media attention devoted to an upcoming civil or criminal trial. • Under the Due Process Clause, extensive coverage of a criminal trial may deprive the defendant of a fair trial. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨633(1); Federal Civil Procedure ⇨1951; Trial ⇨20.]

preliminary, adj. Coming before and usu. leading up to the main part of something <preliminary negotiations>.

preliminary amendment. See PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT.

preliminary availability search. Trademarks. A cursory or moderate search of registered trademarks and common-law uses of proposed-trademark names or phrases, done to narrow the list of names phrases before conducting a thorough search.

preliminary complaint. See COMPLAINT.

preliminary crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE (1).

preliminary evidence. See EVIDENCE.

preliminary examination. 1. See EXAMINATION (3). 2. See PRELIMINARY HEARING.

preliminary hearing. A criminal hearing (usu. conducted by a magistrate) to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to prosecute an accused person. • If sufficient evidence exists, the case will be set for trial or bound over for grand-jury review, or an information will be filed in the trial court. — Also termed preliminary examination; probable-cause hearing; bindover hearing; examining trial. Cf. ARRAIGNMENT. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨222-238.]

preliminary injunction. See INJUNCTION.

preliminary inquiry. Military law. The initial investigation of a reported or suspected violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Cf. PRETRIAL INVESTIGATION.

preliminary-inquiry officer. See OFFICER (2).

preliminary letter. See INVITATION TO NEGOTIATE.

preliminary objection. Int'l law. In a case before an international tribunal, an objection that, if upheld, would render further proceedings before the tribunal impossible or unnecessary. • An objection to the court's jurisdiction is an example of a preliminary objection.

preliminary proof. See PROOF.

preliminary prospectus. See PROSPECTUS.

preliminary protective hearing. See shelter hearing under HEARING.

preliminary statement. (1834) The introductory part of a brief or memorandum in support of a motion, in which the advocate summarizes the essence of what follows. • In at least two jurisdictions, New York and

New Jersey, the preliminary statement is a standard part of court papers. In many other jurisdictions, advocates do not routinely include it. But preliminary statements are typically allowed, even welcomed, though not required. — Also termed summary of argument.

preliminary warrant. See WARRANT (1). premarital, adj. Of, relating to, or occurring before marriage. Cf. POSTMARITAL.

premarital agreement. See PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

premarital asset. See ASSET.

prematurity. 1. The circumstance existing when the facts underlying a plaintiff's complaint do not yet create a live claim. Cf. RIPENESS. [Cases: Action ⇨6, 62; Federal Courts ⇨12.1.] 2. The affirmative defense based on this circumstance.

premeditated, adj. (16c) Done with willful deliberation and planning; consciously considered beforehand . [Cases: Homicide ⇨535; Sentencing and Punishment ⇨1676.]

premeditated malice. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

premeditation, n. (15c) Conscious consideration and planning that precedes some act (such as committing a crime). [Cases: Homicide ⇨535; Sentencing and Punishment ⇨1676.] — premeditate, vb.

premier serjeant. See SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

premise (prem-is), n. (14c) A previous statement or contention from which a conclusion is deduced. — Also spelled (in BrE) premiss. — premise (prem-is or priz), vb.

premises (prem-ə-siz), (15c) 1. Matters (usu. preliminary facts or statements) previously referred to in the same instrument <wherefore, premises considered, the plaintiff prays for the following relief>. 2. The part of a deed that describes the land being conveyed, as well as naming the parties and identifying relevant facts or explaining the reasons for the deed. 3. A house or building, along with its grounds <smoking is not allowed on these premises>.

"Premises (= a house or building) has a curious history in legal usage. Originally, in the sense of things mentioned previously, it denoted the part of a deed that sets forth the names of the grantor and grantee, as well as the things granted and the consideration. Then, through hypallage in the early 18th century, it was extended to refer to the subject of a conveyance or bequest as specified in the premises of the deed. Finally, it was extended to refer to a house or building along with its grounds. In short, someone who says, "No alcohol is allowed on these premises," is engaging unconsciously in a popularized legal technicality." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 685 (2d ed. 1995).

demised premises. Leased property. — Also termed premises demised.

premises liability. (1950) A landowner's or landholder's tort liability for conditions or activities on the premises. [Cases: Negligence ⇨1000, 1001.]

premises rule. See PARKING-LOT RULE.

premium, n. 1. The periodic payment required to keep an insurance policy in effect. — Also termed insurance premium. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2000.]

advance premium. A payment made before the start of the period covered by the insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1760.]

earned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has already expired. • For example, if the total premium for a one-year insurance policy is $1,200, the earned premium after three months is $300. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2000.]

gross premium. 1. The net premium plus expenses (i.e., the loading), less the interest factor. See LOADING; INTEREST FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1127, 2005.] 2. The premium for participating life insurance. See participating insurance under INSURANCE. natural premium. The actual cost of life insurance based solely on mortality rates. • This amount will be less than a net premium. See net premium.

net level annual premium. A net premium that stays the same each year.

net premium. 1. Generally, the premium amount for an insurance policy less agent commissions. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1652, 2000.] 2. The portion of the premium that covers the estimated cost of claims. 3. The money needed to provide benefits under an insurance policy. • The net premium in a life-insurance policy is calculated by using an assumed interest and mortality-table rate; it does not include additional expense amounts that will be charged to the policyholder. — Also termed net valuation premium.

net single premium. The money that must be collected from a policyholder at one time to guarantee enough money to pay claims made on an insurance policy. • This amount assumes that interest accrues at an expected rate and is based on a prediction of the likelihood of certain claims. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2037.]

net valuation premium. See net premium.

unearned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has not yet occurred. • In the same example as above under earned premium, the unearned premium after three months is $900. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1371, 1930, 2046.]

2. A sum of money paid in addition to a regular price, salary, or other amount; a bonus. 3. The amount by which a security's market value exceeds its face value. — Also termed (specif.) bond premium. Cf. DISCOUNT (3).

control premium. A premium paid for shares carrying the power to control a corporation. • The control premium is often computed by comparing the aggregate value of the controlling block of shares with the cost that would be incurred if the shares could be acquired at the going market price per share. [Cases: Corporations ↷174.]

4. The amount paid to buy a securities option. — Also termed (in sense 4) option premium.

premium bond. See BOND (3).

premium loan. See LOAN.

premium note. See NOTE (1).

premium on capital stock. See paid-in surplus under SURPLUS.

premium pudoris. See PRAEMIUM PUDICITIAE.

premium rate. Insurance. The price per unit of life insurance. • It is usu. expressed as a cost per thousands of dollars of coverage. Life insurers use three factors — the interest factor, the mortality factor, and the risk factor — to calculate premium rates. — Sometimes shortened to rate. See INTEREST FACTOR; MORTALITY FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance ↷1541-1546.]

premium stock. See STOCK.

premium tax. See TAX.

prenatal injury. Harm to a fetus or an embryo. Cf. BIRTH INJURY.

prenatal tort. See TORT.

prender. The right to take a thing before it is offered. — Also spelled prendré.

prender de baron (pren-dər də bər-ən). [Law French “a taking of husband”] Hist. A plea asserting that the former wife of a murder victim should not be allowed to appeal a murder case against the alleged killer because she has since remarried.

prendré. See PRENDER.

preup, n. Slang. See PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

prenuptial (pree-nəp-shəl), adj. (1857) Made or occurring before marriage; premarital. — Also termed antenuptial (an-tee-nəp-shəl). Cf. POSTNUPTIAL.

prenuptial agreement. (1882) An agreement made before marriage usu. to resolve issues of support and property division if the marriage ends in divorce or by the death of a spouse. — Also termed antenuptial agreement; antenuptial contract; premarital agreement; premarital contract; marriage settlement. — Sometimes shortened to preup. Cf. POSTNUPTIAL AGREEMENT; COHABITATION AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷29, 31.]

prenuptial gift. See GIFT.

prenuptial will. See WILL.

prepaid card. See STORED-VALUE CARD.

prepaid expense. See EXPENSE.

prepaid income. See INCOME.

prepaid interest. See INTEREST (3).

prepaid legal services. (1963) An arrangement — usu. serving as an employee benefit — that enables a person to make advance payments for future legal services. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷137.]

preparation. Criminal law. The act or process of devising the means necessary to commit a crime. Cf. ATTEMPT.

prepayment clause. (1935) A loan-document provision that permits a borrower to satisfy a debt before its due date. • Although any interest not yet due is waived, the lender may impose a penalty for prepayment. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↷129, 429.]

prepayment penalty. See PENALTY (2).

prepsense (pree-pens), adj. Rare. Planned; deliberate <malice prepsense>.

prepetition (pree-pə-tish-ən), adj. (1938) Occurring before the filing of a petition (esp. in bankruptcy) <prepetition debts>.

preponderance (pri-pon-dər-ənts), n. (17c) Superiority in weight, importance, or influence. — preponderate (pri-pon-dər-əyt), vb. — preponderant (pri-pon-dər-ənt), adj.

preponderance of the evidence. (18c) The greater weight of the evidence, not necessarily established by the greater number of witnesses testifying to a fact but by evidence that has the most convincing force; superior evidentiary weight that, though not sufficient to free the mind wholly from all reasonable doubt, is still sufficient to incline a fair and impartial mind to one side of the issue rather than the other. • This is the burden of proof in most civil trials, in which the jury is instructed to find for the party that, on the whole, has the stronger evidence, however slight the edge may be. — Also termed preponderance of proof; balance of probability. See REASONABLE DOUBT. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Evidence ↷598.] prerogative (pri-rog-ə-tiv), n. (15c) An exclusive right, power, privilege, or immunity, usu. acquired by virtue of office. — prerogative, adj.

prerogative of mercy. The discretionary power of a supreme authority, such as a state governor, national president, or sovereign, to commute a death sentence, change the method of execution, or issue a pardon.

prerogative court. See COURT.

prerogative of mercy. The limited right of a chief executive to commute a death sentence or to pardon a convicted person, esp. one convicted of a capital crime.

prerogative writ. See extraordinary writ under WRIT.

pres (pray). [Law French] Near. See CY PRES.

presale. The sale of real property (such as condominium units) before construction has begun. [Cases: Condominium ⇨ 4.]

prescribable (pri-skrīb-ə-bəl), adj. (1890) (Of a right) that can be acquired or extinguished by prescription.

prescribe, vb. 1. To dictate, ordain, or direct; to establish authoritatively (as a rule or guideline). 2. To claim ownership through prescription. 3. To invalidate or otherwise make unenforceable through prescription. 4. To become invalid or otherwise unenforceable through prescription. [Cases: Holidays ⇨ 1; Limitation of Actions ⇨ 1.]

prescript, adj. Having the nature of a rule or command.

prescript, n. Archaic. A rule, law, command, or ordinance; PRESCRIPTION (2). • A general term, prescript may also apply to an edict, a regulation, or any instructive guideline.

prescription, n. (15c) 1. The act of establishing authoritative rules. Cf. PROSCRIPTION. 2. A rule so established. — Also termed (archaically) prescript. 3. The effect of the lapse of time in creating and destroying rights. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 1.] 4. The extinction of a title or right by failure to claim or exercise it over a long period. — Also termed negative prescription; extinctive prescription. 5. The acquisition of title to a thing (esp. an intangible thing such as the use of real property) by open and continuous possession over a statutory period. — Also termed positive prescription; acquisitive prescription. Cf. ADVERSE POSSESSION. See (for senses 3–5) PERIOD OF PRESCRIPTION. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⇨ 1–95.] 6. Int'l law. The acquisition of a territory through a continuous and undisputed exercise of sovereignty over it. 7. Oil & gas. A Louisiana doctrine that extinguishes unused mineral servitudes after ten years if there is no effort to discover or produce on the land or the land pooled with it. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 78.2.]

acquisitive prescription (ə-kwiz-ə-tiv). 1. PRESCRIPTION (5). 2. Civil law. A mode of acquiring ownership or other legal rights through possession for a specified period of time. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⇨ 1.] liberative prescription (lib-ə-rə-tiv). Civil law. A bar to a lawsuit resulting from its untimely filing. La. Civ. Code art. 3447. • This term is essentially the civil-law equivalent of a statute of limitations. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 1.]

prescription in a que estate (ah kee). [Law French “prescription in whose estate”] A claim of prescription based on the immemorial enjoyment of the right by the claimant and the former owners whose estate the claimant has succeeded to.

prescription of nonuse. Civil law. A mode of extinction of a real right other than ownership (such as a servitude) as a result of failure to exercise the right for a specified period of time. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⇨ 109; Easements ⇨ 30.]

prescriptive easement. See EASEMENT.

prescriptive right. (17c) A right obtained by prescription <after a nuisance has been continuously in existence for 20 years, a prescriptive right to continue it is acquired as an easement appurtenant to the land on which it exists>. [Cases: Nuisance ⇨ 11–17.]

presence, n. 1. The state or fact of being in a particular place and time <his presence at the scene saved two lives>. 2. Close physical proximity coupled with awareness <the agent was in the presence of the principal>.

constructive presence. 1. Criminal law. Legal imputation of having been at a crime scene, based on having been close enough to the scene to have aided and abetted the crime’s commission. See CONSPIRACY. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 59(3).] 2. Wills & estates. Legal imputation of a witness’s having been in the room when a will was signed, based on the fact that the testator and the witness were able to see each other at the time of the signing. • This principle was commonly employed until the 20th century, when the presence-of-the-testator rule became dominant. See PRESENCE-OF-THE-TESTATOR RULE. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 123(5).] presence-of-defendant rule. The principle that a felony defendant is entitled to be present at every major stage of the criminal proceeding. Fed. R. Crim. P. 43. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 636.] presence of the court. (18c) The company or proximity of the judge or other courtroom official. • For purposes of contempt, an action is in the presence of the court if it is committed within the view of the judge or other person in court and is intended to disrupt the court’s business.

presence-of-the-testator rule. The principle that a testator must be aware (through sight or other sense) that the witnesses are signing the will. • Many jurisdictions interpret this requirement liberally, and the Uniform Probate Code has dispensed with it. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 117.]

present, adj. (14c) 1. Now existing; at hand . 2. Being considered; now under discussion <the present appeal does not deal with that issue>. 3. In attendance; not elsewhere <all present voted for him>.

present ability. See ABILITY.

present and voting. Parliamentary law. (Of a member) casting a vote. • The result of a vote is ordinarily determined with reference to the members voting (often termed, somewhat redundantly, as “present and voting"). An answer of "present" when casting a vote amounts to an abstention because the voter is indicating that he or she is present but not voting. See ABSTAIN (1).

presentation. (15c) 1. The delivery of a document to an issuer or named person for the purpose of initiating action under a letter of credit; PRESENTMENT (3). [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 191.] 2. Hist. Eccles. law. A benefice patron's nomination of a person to fill a vacant benefice. • If the bishop rejected the appointee, the patron could enforce the right to fill the vacancy by writ of quare impedit in the Court of Common Pleas. See QUARE IMPEDIT. Cf. ADVOWSON; INSTITUTION (5).

next presentation. Hist. Eccles. law. In the law of advowsons, the right to present to the bishop a clerk to fill the first vacancy that arises in a church or other ecclesiastical office.

present case. See case at bar under CASE.

present conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

present covenant. See COVENANT (4).

presentence hearing. (1940) A proceeding at which a judge or jury receives and examines all relevant information regarding a convicted criminal and the related offense before passing sentence. — Also termed sentencing hearing. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 325.]

presentence-investigation report. (1943) A probation officer's detailed account of a convicted defendant's educational, criminal, family, and social background, conducted at the court's request as an aid in passing sentence. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 32(c). — Abbr. PSI; PIR. — Often shortened to presentence report. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 275–301.]

present enjoyment. See ENJOYMENT.

presenter. Commercial law. Any person presenting a document (such as a draft) to an issuer for honor. UCC § 5-102.

present estate. 1. ESTATE (1). 2. See present interest under INTEREST (2).

presenting bank. See BANK.

presenting jury. See GRAND JURY.

present interest. See INTEREST (2).

presentment (pri-zent-mənt). (15c) 1. The act of presenting or laying before a court or other tribunal a formal statement about a matter to be dealt with legally. 2. Criminal procedure. A formal written accusation returned by a grand jury on its own initiative, without a prosecutor's previous indictment request. • Presentments are obsolete in the federal courts. [Cases: Grand Jury ⇨ 42.]

"A grand jury has only two functions, either to indict or to return a 'no bill.' The Constitution speaks also of a 'presentment,' but this is a term with a distinct historical meaning now not well understood. Historically presentment was the process by which a grand jury initiated an independent investigation and asked that a charge be drawn to cover the facts should they constitute a crime. With United States attorneys now always available to advise grand juries, proceeding by presentment is an outmoded practice." 1 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 110, at 459 (3d ed. 1999).

3. The formal production of a negotiable instrument for acceptance or payment. — Also termed (in sense 3) presentation. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 385–407.]

"Presentment and dishonor occur, for instance, when the holder of a check attempts to cash it at the drawee bank, but payment is refused because the drawer lacks sufficient funds on deposit. The demand for payment is presentment. The bank's refusal to pay is dishonor." 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-8, at 100 (4th ed. 1995).

presentment for acceptance. (18c) Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for acceptance. • This type of presentment may be made anytime before maturity, except that with bills payable at sight, after demand, or after sight, presentment must be made within a reasonable time. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 388.]

presentment for payment. (18c) Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for payment. • This type of presentment must be made on the date when the instrument is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 399.]

presentment of Englishry. Hist. The offering of proof that a slain person was English rather than (before the Conquest) a Dane or (after the Conquest) a Norman. • This requirement was issued first by the conquering Danes and then by the Normans to protect these groups from the English by the threat of a village- or hundred-wide amercement if the inhabitants failed to prove that a dead person found among them was English.

presentment warranty. See WARRANTY (2).

present recollection refreshed. (1908) Evidence. A witness's memory that has been enhanced by showing the witness a document that describes the relevant events. • The document itself is merely a memory stimulus and is not admitted in evidence. Fed. R. Evid. 612. — Also termed refreshing recollection; refreshing memory; present recollection revived. Cf. PAST RECOLLECTION RECORDED. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 253.]

resents, n. pl. (14c) Archaic. The instrument under consideration. • This is usu. part of the phrase these presents, which is part of the longer phrase know all men by these presents (itself a loan translation from the Latin noverint universi per praesentes). See KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS.

present sale. See SALE.

present sense impression. (1942) Evidence. One's perception of an event or condition, formed during or immediately after the fact. • A statement containing a present sense impression is admissible even if it is hearsay. Fed. R. Evid. 803(1). Cf. EXCITED UTTERANCE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 419(2.15); Evidence ⇨ 120.]

present use. See USE (4).

present value. The sum of money that, with compound interest, would amount to a specified sum at a specified future date; future value discounted to its value today. — Also termed present worth.

adjusted present value. An asset's value determined by adding together its present value and the value added by capital-structure effects. — Abbr. APV.

net present value. The present value of net cash flow from a project, discounted by the cost of capital. • This value is used to evaluate the project's investment potential. — Abbr. NPV.

preservation order. A direction to a property owner to maintain a historic building or conserve a natural habitat.

preside, vb. (15c) 1. To occupy the place of authority, esp. as a judge during a hearing or trial <preside over the proceedings>. 2. To exercise management or control <preside over the estate>.

president, n. 1. The chief political executive of a government; the head of state. [Cases: United States ↻26.] 2. The chief executive officer of a corporation or other organization. 3. CHAIR (1). 4. CHAIR (3). See (in senses 3 & 4) presiding officer (3) under OFFICER (2). — presidential, adj.

immediate past president. The last president who held office before the incumbent. See EMERITUS.

president-elect. An officer who automatically succeeds to the presidency when the incumbent president's term expires. • If the organization's governing documents so provide, the president-elect may act as president in the incumbent president's absence, or may assume the presidency early if the incumbent does not finish the term.

president emeritus. See EMERITUS.

presidential elector. See ELECTOR (1).

Presidential message. See MESSAGE.

president judge. See presiding judge under JUDGE.

president of a court-martial. Military law. The senior member in rank present at a court-martial trial. [Cases: Military Justice ↻870.]

President of the United States. The highest executive officer of the federal government of the United States. • The President is elected to a four-year term by a majority of the presidential electors chosen by popular vote from each of the states. The President must be a natural citizen, must be at least 35 years old, and must have been a resident for 14 years within the United States. U.S. Const. art. II, § 1. [Cases: United States ↻26.] presiding judge. See JUDGE.

presiding juror. See JUROR.

presiding officer. See OFFICER (2).

press, n. 1. The news media; print and broadcast news organizations collectively. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻90(2).]

"The Constitution specifically selected the press, which includes not only newspapers, books, and magazines, but also humble leaflets and circulars, to play an important role in the discussion of public affairs." Mills v. Alabama, 384 U.S. 214, 219, 86 S.Ct. 1434, 1437 (1966).

"'Press' could refer to one or more subsets of media, defined either by function or form. To the extent that existing law defines 'the press' at all, it does so mostly in terms of specific media forms. The Supreme Court has addressed the matter only obliquely. . . . [I]t has never had to decide whether a particular litigant was 'press.' In most cases the question does not arise because the claimed right would be protected as fully by the Speech Clause as by the Press Clause. The cases in which the Court seems to rely on the Press Clause have involved newspapers or magazines whose status as press was unquestioned. The Court on other occasions has mentioned 'publishers and broadcasters,' 'the media,' 'editorial judgment,' 'editorial control,' 'journalistic discretion,' and 'newsgathering' as possible objects of protection. The most famous discussion of the meaning of the Press Clause, a 1974 speech by Justice Stewart, identified its beneficiaries as 'the daily newspapers and other established media,' or 'newspapers, television, and magazines.'" David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 436 (2002).

2. Hist. A piece of parchment, as one sewed together to make up a roll or record of judicial proceedings.

Press Clause. The First Amendment provision that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom . . . of the press." U.S. Const. amend I. — Also termed Freedom of the Press Clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻2070–2081.]

prest (prest). Hist. A duty to be paid by the sheriff upon his account in the Exchequer or for money remaining in his custody.

prestable (pres-tə-bəl), adj. Scots law. 1. Payable. 2. Enforceable; exigible. • This term appears generally in reference to a debt. Cf. EXIGIBLE.

prestation (pre-stay-shən). Hist. 1. A payment (or presting) of money. 2. The rendering of a service.

prest money. Hist. A monetary payment made to a soldier or sailor on enlistment.

presume, vb. To assume beforehand; to suppose to be true in the absence of proof.

presumed bias. See implied bias under BIAS.

presumed crime. See constructive crime under CRIME.

presumed fact. See FACT.

presumed father. See FATHER.

presumed-seller test. A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the manufacturer, having full knowledge of the product's dangerous propensities, would be negligent in placing the product on the market.

presumption. (15c) A legal inference or assumption that a fact exists, based on the known or proven existence of some other fact or group of facts. • Most presumptions are rules of evidence calling for a certain result in a given case unless the adversely affected party overcomes it with other evidence. A presumption shifts the burden of production or persuasion to the opposing party, who can then attempt to overcome the presumption. See BURDEN OF PRODUCTION. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻305; Evidence ↻53–89.]

"A presumption may be defined to be an inference as to the existence of one fact from the existence of some other fact founded upon a previous experience of their connection." William P. Richardson, The Law of Evidence § 53, at 25 (3d ed. 1928).

absolute presumption. See conclusive presumption.

adverse presumption. See adverse inference under INFERENCE.

artificial presumption. See presumption of law.

conclusive presumption. (18c) A presumption that cannot be overcome by any additional evidence or argument <it is a conclusive presumption that a child under the age of seven is incapable of committing a felony>. — Also termed absolute presumption; irrebuttable presumption; mandatory presumption; presumption juris et de jure. Cf. rebuttable presumption. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 253(5); Evidence ⇨ 53–89.]

"Conclusive presumptions' or 'irrebuttable presumptions' are usually mere fictions, to disguise a rule of substantive law (e.g., the conclusive presumption of malice from an unexcused defamation); and when they are not fictions, they are usually repudiated by modern courts." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 454 (1935).

"Conclusive presumptions, sometimes called irrebuttable presumptions of law, are really rules of law. Thus it is said that a child under the age of fourteen years is conclusively presumed to be incapable of committing rape. This is only another way of saying that such a child cannot be found guilty of rape." Richard Eggleston, Evidence, Proof and Probability 92 (1978).

conditional presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

conflicting presumption. (1830) One of two or more presumptions that would lead to opposite results. — Also termed inconsistent presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 325; Evidence ⇨ 88.]

"Conflicting presumptions' are simply two ordinary presumptions that would give opposite results; usually they are really successive presumptions. E.g., where A proves himself to be the son of N, wife of M, but M and N were already separated, and later M married P, and had a son B, the later marriage of M might presume a prior divorce from N before separation to make it valid, and yet the birth of A from a married mother might be presumed legitimate, and thus the question whether A or B was the legitimate son would be attended by opposing presumptions. But in this aspect the doctrine of presumptions is clouded with difficulties and leads to much vain speculation and logical unrealism." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 454 (1935).

disputable presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

dry presumption. A presumption that has no probative value unless the party with the burden of proof presents evidence to support the presumption. [Cases: Evidence ⇨ 53.]

factual presumption. See presumption of fact.

heeding presumption. (1990) A rebuttable presumption that an injured product user would have followed a warning label had the product manufacturer provided one. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 351(2).] inconsistent presumption. See conflicting presumption.

irrebuttable presumption. See conclusive presumption.

legal presumption. See presumption of law.

mandatory presumption. See conclusive presumption.

McClanahan presumption. See MCCLANAHAN PRESUMPTION.

mixed presumption. (1838) A presumption containing elements of both law and fact.

Morgan presumption. See MORGAN PRESUMPTION.

natural presumption. (16c) A deduction of one fact from another, based on common experience. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 305.1; Evidence ⇨ 53.]

permissive presumption. (1827) A presumption that a trier of fact is free to accept or reject from a given set of facts. — Also termed permissive inference. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 306, 324; Evidence ⇨ 53, 87.]

presumption juris et de jure. See conclusive presumption.

presumption of a quorum. Parliamentary law. The presumption that a quorum, once established, is present until the chair or a member notices otherwise.

presumption of fact. A type of rebuttable presumption that may be, but as a matter of law need not be, drawn from another established fact or group of facts <the possessor of recently stolen goods is, by presumption of fact, considered the thief>. — Also termed factual presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 306; Evidence ⇨ 53, 87.]

presumption of general application. A presumption that applies across the board to all legislation, as a result of which lawmakers need not list each such presumption in all bills. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 305; Evidence ⇨ 53–89.]

"One function of the word 'presumption' in the context of statutory interpretation is to state the result of this legislative reliance (real or assumed) on firmly established legal principles. There is a 'presumption' that mens rea is required in the case of statutory crimes, and a 'presumption' that statutory powers must be exercised reasonably. These presumptions apply although there is no question of linguistic ambiguity in the statutory wording under construction, and they may be described as 'presumptions of general application.' At the level of interpretation, their function is the promotion of brevity on the part of the draftsman. Statutes make dreary enough reading as it is, and it would be ridiculous to insist in each instance upon an enumeration of the general principles taken for granted." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 142–43 (1976).

presumption of innocence. See PRESUMPTION OF INNOCENCE.

presumption of intent. (18c) A permissive presumption that a criminal defendant who intended to commit an act did so. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 312.]

presumption of law. (16c) A legal assumption that a court is required to make if certain facts are established and no contradictory evidence is produced <by presumption of law, a criminal defendant is considered innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. — Also termed legal presumption; artificial presumption; praesumptio juris; pseudopresumption of law. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻305; Evidence ↻86.]

presumption of maternity. See PRESUMPTION OF MATERNITY.

presumption of natural and probable consequences. See PRESUMPTION OF NATURAL AND PROBABLE CONSEQUENCES.

presumption of paternity. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

presumption of survivorship. See PRESUMPTION OF SURVIVORSHIP.

presumption of validity. See PRESUMPTION OF VALIDITY.

prima facie presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

procedural presumption. A presumption that may be rebutted by credible evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻305; Evidence ↻53.]

pseudopresumption of law. See presumption of law.

rebuttable presumption. (1852) An inference drawn from certain facts that establish a prima facie case, which may be overcome by the introduction of contrary evidence. — Also termed prima facie presumption; disputable presumption; conditional presumption; praesumptio juris. Cf. conclusive presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻324; Evidence ↻89.]

statutory presumption. (1819) A rebuttable or conclusive presumption that is created by statute. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻305; Evidence ↻53.]

Thayer presumption. See THAYER PRESUMPTION.

presumption of death. (18c) A presumption that arises on the unexpected disappearance and continued absence of a person for an extended period, commonly seven years. [Cases: Damages ↻2.] presumption-of-fertility rule. See FERTILE-OCTOGENARIAN RULE.

presumption-of-identity rule. The common-law rule that unless there is a specific, applicable statute in another state, a court will presume that the common law has developed elsewhere identically with how it has developed in the court's own state, so that the court may apply its own state's law. • Today this rule applies primarily in Georgia. See Shorewood Packaging Corp. v. Commercial Union Ins., 865 F. Supp. 1577 (N.D. Ga. 1994). [Cases: Criminal Law ↻320; Evidence ↻80.]

presumption of innocence. (18c) Criminal law. The fundamental principle that a person may not be convicted of a crime unless the government proves guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, without any burden placed on the presumption of maternity. Family law. The presumption that the woman who has given birth to a child is both the genetic mother and the legal mother of the child. — Also termed maternity presumption. Cf. PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

presumption of legitimacy. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

presumption of natural and probable consequences. (1980) Criminal law. The presumption that mens rea may be derived from proof of the defendant's conduct. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻312.]

presumption of paternity. (1829) Family law. The presumption that the father of a child is the man who (1) is married to the child's mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) welcomed the child into his home and later held out the child as his own. — Also termed paternity presumption; presumption of legitimacy; legitimacy presumption. See presumed father under FATHER. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻3.] presumption of survivorship. (1844) The presumption that one of two or more victims of a common disaster survived the others, based on the supposed survivor's youth, good health, or other reason rendering survivorship likely. [Cases: Death ↻5.]

presumption of validity. Patents. The doctrine that the holder of a patent is entitled to a statutory presumption that the patent is valid and that the burden is on a challenger to prove invalidity. See BORN VALID. [Cases: Patents ↻112.1.]

presumptive (pri-zəmp-tiv), adj. (15c) 1. Giving reasonable grounds for belief or presumption. 2. Based on a presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻305.1; Evidence ↻53.] — presumptively, adv.

presumptive authority. See implied authority under AUTHORITY (1).

presumptive damages. See punitive damages under DAMAGES.

presumptive death. See DEATH.

presumptive evidence. See EVIDENCE.

presumptive heir. See heir presumptive under HEIR.

presumptive notice. See implied notice under NOTICE.

presumptive proof. See conditional proof under PROOF.

presumptive sentence. See SENTENCE.

presumptive sentencing. See SENTENCING.

presumptive taker. See TAKER.

presumptive title. See TITLE (2).

presumptive trust. See resulting trust under TRUST.

pret a usage. Civil law. A gratuitous loan for use.

pretax, adj. Existing or occurring before the assessment or deduction of taxes <pretax income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3110; Taxation ↻3446.] pretax earnings. See EARNINGS.

prête-nom (pret-nohm). [French] One who lends his name.

pretensive joinder. See JOINER.

preterlegal (pree-tər-lee-gəl), adj. Rare. Beyond the range of what is legal; not according to law <preterlegal customs>.

pretermisison (pree-tər-mish-ən). (18c) 1. The condition of one who is pretermitted, as an heir of a testator. 2. The act of omitting an heir from a will. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻47.]

pretermisison statute. See PRETERMITTED-HEIR STATUTE.

pretermitt (pree-tər-mit), vb. (15c) 1. To ignore or disregard purposely <the court pretermitted the constitutional question by deciding the case on procedural grounds>. 2. To neglect, overlook, or omit accidentally <the third child was pretermitted in the will>. • Although in ordinary usage sense 1 prevails, in legal contexts (esp. involving heirs) sense 2 is usual. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻47.]

pretermitted child. See pretermitted heir under HEIR.

pretermitted defense. See DEFENSE (1).

pretermitted heir. See HEIR.

pretermitted-heir statute. (1955) A state law that, under certain circumstances, grants an omitted heir the right to inherit a share of the testator's estate, usu. by treating the heir as though the testator had died intestate. • Most states have a pretermitted-heir statute, under which an omitted child or spouse receives the same share of the estate as if the testator had died intestate, unless the omission was intentional. The majority rule, and that found in the Uniform Probate Code, is that only afterborn children — that is, children born after the execution of a will — receive protection as pretermitted heirs. Under that circumstance, an inference arises that their omission was inadvertent rather than purposeful. — Also termed pretermisison statute. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻47.] pretermitted spouse. See pretermitted heir under HEIR.

pretext (pree-tekst), n. (16c) A false or weak reason or motive advanced to hide the actual or strong reason or motive. [Cases: Civil Rights ↻1033(1), 1137.] — pretextual (pree-tekst-choo-əl), adj.

pretextual arrest. See ARREST.

pretextus (pree-tekst-təs). [Latin] A pretext.

pretium (pree-shee-əm). [Latin] Price; value; worth.

pretium affectionis (pree-shee-əm ə-fek-shee-oh-nis). An enhanced value placed on a thing by the fancy of its owner, growing out of an attachment for the specific article and its associations; sentimental value.

• This value is not taken as a basis for measuring damages.

pretium periculi (pree-shee-əm pə-rik-yə-lī). The price of the risk, such as the premium paid on an insurance policy.

pretorial court (pri-tor-ee-əl). See COURT.

pretrial conference. (1938) An informal meeting at which opposing attorneys confer, usu. with the judge, to work toward the disposition of the case by discussing matters of evidence and narrowing the issues that will be tried. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16; Fed. R. Crim. P. 17.1.

• The conference takes place shortly before trial and ordinarily results in a pretrial order. — Often shortened to pretrial. — Also termed pretrial hearing. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1921; Pretrial Procedure ↻741.] pretrial detention. See DETENTION.

pretrial discovery. See DISCOVERY.

pretrial diversion. See DIVERSION PROGRAM (1).

pretrial hearing. See PRETRIAL CONFERENCE.

pretrial intervention. 1. DIVERSION PROGRAM (1). 2. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

pretrial investigation. Military law. An investigation to decide whether a case should be recommended for forwarding to a general court-martial. [Cases: Military Justice ↻921.]

pretrial order. (1939) A court order setting out the claims and defenses to be tried, the stipulations of the parties, and the case's procedural rules, as agreed to by the parties or mandated by the court at a pretrial conference. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e). • In federal court, a pretrial order supersedes the pleadings. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1935; Pretrial Procedure ↻747.]

prevail, vb. (17c) 1. To obtain the relief sought in an action; to win a lawsuit <the plaintiff prevailed in the Supreme Court>. 2. To be commonly accepted or predominant <it's unclear which line of precedent will prevail>.

prevarication (pri-var-ə-kay-shən), n. (16c) The act or an instance of lying or avoiding the truth; equivocation. — prevaricate (pri-var-ə-kayt), vb.

prevaricator (pri-var-ə-kay-tər), n. [Latin] 1. A liar; an equivocator. 2. Roman law. One who betrays another's trust, such as an advocate who aids the opposing party by betraying the client. — Also spelled (in sense 2) praevaricator.

prevent, vb. To hinder or impede .

preventative law. See PREVENTIVE LAW.

prevention. Civil law. The right of one of several judges having concurrent jurisdiction to exercise that jurisdiction over a case that the judge is first to hear.

prevention doctrine. (1979) Contracts. The principle that each contracting party has an implied duty to not do anything that prevents the other party from performing its obligation. — Also termed prevention-of-performance doctrine. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 168, 303(4).] preventive custody. See CUSTODY (1).

preventive detention. See DETENTION.

preventive injunction. See INJUNCTION.

preventive justice. See JUSTICE (1).

preventive law. A practice of law that seeks to minimize a client's risk of litigation or secure more certainty with regard to the client's legal rights and duties. • Emphasizing planning, counseling, and the nonadversarial resolution of disputes, preventive law focuses on the lawyer's role as adviser and negotiator. — Also termed (less correctly) preventative law.

preventive punishment. See PUNISHMENT.

previously taxed income. See INCOME.

previous notice. See NOTICE (6).

previous question. See CLOSE DEBATE.

price. The amount of money or other consideration asked for or given in exchange for something else; the cost at which something is bought or sold. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 229(1); Sales ⇨ 74.1.]

agreed price. The price for a sale, esp. of goods, arrived at by mutual agreement. Cf. open price. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 75.]

arm's-length price. The price at which two unrelated, unaffiliated, and nondesperate parties would freely agree to do business. See arm's-length transaction under TRANSACTION; fair market value under VALUE.

asked price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell a security at a given time. See SPREAD (2).

asking price. The price at which a seller lists property for sale, often implying a willingness to sell for less. — Also termed ask price; offering price.

at-the-market price. A retail price that store owners in the same vicinity generally charge.

bid price. The highest price that a prospective buyer is willing to pay for a security at a given time. See SPREAD (2).

call price. 1. The price at which a bond may be retired before its maturity. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 468.1.] 2. See strike price.

ceiling price. 1. The highest price at which a buyer is willing to buy. 2. The highest price allowed by a government agency or by some other regulatory institution. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨ 108.]

closing price. The price of a security at the end of a given trading day. — Also termed close.

exercise price. See strike price.

ex-works price. The price of goods as they leave the factory. See EX WORKS.

fixed price. A price that is agreed upon by a wholesaler and a retailer for the later sale or resale of an item. • floor price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell.

Agreements to fix prices are generally prohibited by state and federal statutes.

liquidating price. See redemption price.

liquidation price. A price that is paid for property sold to liquidate a debt. • Liquidation price is usu. below market price. — Also termed liquidation value.

list price. A published or advertised price of goods; retail price.

market price. The prevailing price at which something is sold in a specific market. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

mean trading price. Securities. The average of the daily trading price of a security determined at the close of the market each day during a 90-day period.

net price. The price of something, after deducting cash discounts.

offering price. See asking price.

open price. The price for a sale, esp. of goods, that has not been settled at the time of a sale's conclusion. UCC § 2-305. Cf. agreed price. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 78.]

predatory price. See PREDATORY PRICING.

put price. See strike price.

redemption price. 1. The price of a bond that has not reached maturity, purchased at the issuer's option. 2. The price of shares when a mutual-fund shareholder sells shares back to the fund. — Also termed liquidating price; repurchase price. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 468.1.]

reserve price. In an auction, the amount that a seller of goods stipulates as the lowest acceptable offer. • The reserve price may or may not be announced. See WITH RESERVE; WITHOUT RESERVE.

sales price. The total amount for which property is sold, often including the costs of any services that are a part of the sale. • Under sales-tax statutes, the amount is typically valued in money even if the value is not received in money. — Also termed selling price.

spot price. The amount for which a commodity is sold in a spot market.

strike price. Securities. The price for which a security will be bought or sold under an option contract if the option is exercised. — Also termed striking price; exercise price; call price; put price. See OPTION.

subscription price. See SUBSCRIPTION PRICE.

suggested retail price. The sales price recommended to a retailer by a manufacturer of the product.

support price. A minimum price set by the federal government for a particular agricultural commodity. [Cases: Agriculture ⇨ 3.5.]

target price. A price set by the federal government for particular agricultural commodities. • If the market price falls below the target price, farmers receive a subsidy from the government for the difference. [Cases: Agriculture ↷3.5.]

trade price. The price at which a manufacturer or wholesaler sells to others in the same business or industry.

transfer price. The price charged by one segment of an organization for a product or service supplied to another segment of the same organization; esp., the charge assigned to an exchange of goods or services between a corporation's organizational units.

unit price. A price of a food product expressed in a well-known measure such as ounces or pounds.

upset price. The lowest amount that a seller is willing to accept for property or goods sold at auction. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers ↷7.]

wholesale price. The price that a retailer pays for goods purchased (usu. in bulk) from a wholesaler for resale to consumers at a higher price.

price amendment. Securities. A change in a registration statement, prospectus, or prospectus supplement affecting the offering price, the underwriting and selling discounts or commissions, the amount of proceeds, the conversion rates, the call prices, or some other matter relating to the offering price.

price/cost analysis. A technique of determining, for antitrust purposes, whether predatory pricing has occurred by examining the relationship between a defendant's prices and either its average variable cost or its average total cost.

price discrimination. (1915) The practice of offering identical or similar goods to different buyers at different prices when the costs of producing the goods are the same. • Price discrimination can violate antitrust laws if it reduces competition. It may be either direct, as when a seller charges different prices to different buyers, or indirect, as when a seller offers special concessions (such as favorable credit terms) to some but not all buyers. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷839.] persistent price discrimination. A monopolist's systematic policy of obtaining different rates of return from different sales groupings.

price-earnings ratio. The ratio between a stock's current share price and the corporation's earnings per share for the last year. • Some investors avoid stocks with high price-earnings ratios because those stocks may be overpriced. — Abbr. P/E ratio. Cf. earnings yield under YIELD.

price-erosion theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy that measures the difference between what an item could have sold for with patent protection and what it actually sold for while having to compete against an infringing item. [Cases: Patents ↷318(3).]

price expectancy. See EXHIBITION VALUE.

price-fixing. (1889) The artificial setting or maintenance of prices at a certain level, contrary to the workings of the free market. • Price-fixing is usu. illegal per se under antitrust law. See FIX (3). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷821.]

"Price-fixing agreements may or may not be aimed at complete elimination of price competition. The group making those agreements may or may not have the power to control the market. But the fact that the group cannot control the market prices does not necessarily mean that the agreement as to prices has no utility to the members of the combination. The effectiveness of price-fixing agreements is dependent on many factors, such as competitive tactics, position in the industry, the formula underlying price policies. Whatever economic justification particular price-fixing agreements may be thought to have, the law does not permit an inquiry into their reasonableness. They are all banned because of their actual or potential threat to the central nervous system of the economy." United States v. Socalny-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 225-26 n.59, 60 S.Ct. 811, 845 n.59 (1940).

horizontal price-fixing. (1935) Price-fixing among competitors on the same level, such as retailers throughout an industry. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷822.]

vertical price-fixing. (1936) Price-fixing among parties in the same chain of distribution, such as manufacturers and retailers attempting to control an item's resale price. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷821.]

price index. An index of average prices as a percentage of the average prevailing at some other time (such as a base year). See CONSUMER PRICE INDEX; PRODUCER PRICE INDEX.

price leadership. (1942) A market condition in which an industry leader establishes a price that others in the field adopt as their own. • Price leadership alone does not violate antitrust laws without other evidence of an intent to create a monopoly.

price-level-adjusted mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

price memorandum. Securities. A document created by an underwriter to explain how securities are priced for a public offering and, typically, to show estimates and appraisals that are not allowed as part of the offering documents.

price-renegotiation clause. Oil & gas. A provision in a gas contract allowing for price renegotiation from time to time or upon election of one of the parties.

price squeeze. Antitrust. Discriminatory pricing practiced by a manufacturer or distributor who also supplies materials or products to a competitor, and charges a high wholesale price in an attempt to reduce or eliminate a competitor's ability to make a retail profit. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷811.]

price support. (1927) The artificial maintenance of prices (as of a particular commodity) at a certain level, esp. by governmental action (as by subsidy). [Cases: Agriculture ↷3.5.]

price war. (1895) A period of sustained or repeated price-cutting in an industry (esp. among retailers), designed to undersell competitors or force them out of business.

priest-penitent privilege. See PRIVILEGE (3).

prima impressionis (pri-mee im-pres[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] Of the first impression. See case of first impression under CASE.

prima preces. See PRECES PRIMARIAE.

prima facie (pri-mə fay-shə or fay-shee), adv. [Latin] (15c) At first sight; on first appearance but subject to further evidence or information <the agreement is prima facie valid>. [Cases: Evidence ↻53, 85, 584(1).]

prima facie, adj. (18c) Sufficient to establish a fact or raise a presumption unless disproved or rebutted .

prima facie case. (1805) 1. The establishment of a legally required rebuttable presumption. [Cases: Evidence ↻53, 85.] 2. A party's production of enough evidence to allow the fact-trier to infer the fact at issue and rule in the party's favor. [Cases: Evidence ↻584(1).]

prima facie evidence. See EVIDENCE.

prima facie presumption. See rebuttable presumption under PRESUMPTION.

prima facie privilege. See qualified immunity under IMMUNITY (1).

prima facie tort. See TORT.

primage (pri-mij). See HAT MONEY.

primary, n. See primary election under ELECTION (3).

primary activity. Labor law. Concerted action (such as a strike or picketing) directed against an employer with which a union has a dispute. Cf. SECONDARY ACTIVITY.

primary agent. See AGENT (2).

primary allegation. See ALLEGATION.

primary amendment. See AMENDMENT (3).

primary assumption of the risk. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK.

primary authority. See AUTHORITY (4).

primary beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

primary boycott. See BOYCOTT.

primary caregiver. Family law. 1. The parent who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. See TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE; PRIMARY-CAREGIVER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Child Custody ↻44, 459.] 2. The person (including a nonparent) who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. — Also termed primary caretaker.

primary-caregiver doctrine. Family law. The presumption that, in a custody dispute, the parent who is a child's main caregiver will be the child's custodian, assuming that he or she is a fit parent. • This doctrine includes the quality and the quantity of care that a parent gives a child — but excludes supervisory care by others while the child is in the parent's custody. Under this doctrine, courts sometimes divide children into three age groups: those under the age of 6, those 6 to 14, and those 14 and older. For children under the age of 6, an absolute presumption exists in favor of the primary caretaker as custodian. For those 6 to 14, the trial court may hear the child's preference on the record but without the parents being present. For those 14 and older, the child may be allowed to choose which parent will be the custodian, assuming that both parents are fit. — Also termed primary-caretaker doctrine; primary-caregiver presumption; primary-caretaker presumption; primary-caregiver preference. Cf. MATERNAL-PREFERENCE PRESUMPTION; TENDER-YEARS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Child Custody ↻44, 459.]

primary caretaker. See PRIMARY CAREGIVER.

primary cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE (1).

primary committee. Bankruptcy. A group of creditors organized to help the debtor draw up a reorganization plan. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻3024.]

primary conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

primary devise. See DEVISE.

primary domiciliary parent. See PARENT.

primary-duty doctrine. Maritime law. The principle that a seaman cannot recover damages if the injury arose from an unseaworthy condition created by the seaman's breach of duty. [Cases: Seamen ↻29(4).] primary election. See ELECTION (3).

primary evidence. See best evidence under EVIDENCE.

primary fact. See FACT.

primary insurance. See INSURANCE.

primary insured. See INSURED.

primary insurer. See INSURER.

primary jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

primary-jurisdiction doctrine. A judicial doctrine whereby a court tends to favor allowing an agency an initial opportunity to decide an issue in a case in which the court and the agency have concurrent jurisdiction. See primary jurisdiction under JURISDICTION. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻228.1.]

primary lease. See HEADLEASE.

primary liability. See LIABILITY.

primary-line competition. See horizontal competition under COMPETITION.

primary-line injury. Antitrust. Under the price-discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act, the practice of charging below-cost, predatory prices in an attempt to eliminate the seller's competition in the market. 15 USCA § 13(a). • A primary-line injury, which hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's competitors, is distinguishable from a secondary-line injury, which refers to discriminatory pricing that hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's customers, by favoring one customer over another in the prices the seller charges. Cf. SECONDARY-LINE INJURY.

"Liggett contends that Brown & Williamson's discriminatory volume rebates to wholesalers threatened substantial competitive injury by furthering a predatory pricing scheme designed to purge competition from the economy segment of the cigarette market. This type of injury, which harms direct competitors of the discriminating seller, is known as a primary-line injury." Brooke Group Ltd. v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 509 U.S. 209, 220, 113 S.Ct. 2578, 2586 (1993).

primary market. See MARKET.

primary mortgage market. See MORTGAGE MARKET.

primary obligation. See OBLIGATION.

primary offering. See OFFERING.

primary officer. See principal officer under OFFICER (1).

primary plea. See primary allegation under ALLEGATION.

primary powers. (1864) The chief powers given by a principal to an agent to accomplish the agent's tasks. Cf. MEDIATE POWERS.

primary purpose or effect. Copyright. The main reason for or consequence of using a product, as a test for whether its sale amounts to contributory infringement. • The Supreme Court rejected the test in a landmark copyright case, but four justices said that if the primary purpose or effect of the product's sale or use infringes the copyrights of others, its manufacturer could be enjoined from selling the product or required to pay a reasonable royalty to the copyright owners. Sony Corp. of Am. v. Universal City Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 457–500, 104 S.Ct. 774, 796–818 (1984) (Blackmun, J., dissenting). Cf. COMMERCIALLY SIGNIFICANT NON-INFRINGEMENT USE.

primary receiver. See principal receiver under RECEIVER.

primary reserve ratio. See RESERVE RATIO.

primary residential responsibility. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY.

primary term. Oil & gas. The option period — set by the habendum clause in an oil-and-gas lease — during which the lessee has the right to search, develop, and produce from the property. • The primary term should be long enough to allow the lessee to evaluate the property and make arrangements to drill. In practice, the primary term may extend for 24 hours or 25 years, depending on how much competition there is for leases in the area. See HABENDUM CLAUSE. Cf. SECONDARY TERM. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻73.5, 78.1(9).] primate (pri-mit). A chief ecclesiastic; an archbishop or bishop having jurisdiction over other bishops within a province.

prime, n. See prime rate under INTEREST RATE.

prime, vb. To take priority over <Watson's preferred mortgage primed Moriarty's lien>.

prime contractor. See general contractor under CONTRACTOR.

prime cost. See COST (1).

prime lending rate. See prime rate under INTEREST RATE.

prime maker. See MAKER.

prime minister. (often cap.) The chief executive of a parliamentary government; the head of a cabinet. — Abbr. PM.

primer (prim-ər or pri-mər). [Law French] First; primary <primer seisin>.

prime rate. See INTEREST RATE.

primer election. A first choice; esp., the eldest coparcener's pick of land on division of the estate. See ELECTION.

primer fine (prim-ər or pri-mər fīn). [Latin] Hist. A fee payable to the Crown on the suing out of a writ of praecipe to begin a conveyance by fine. See FINE (1). — Also termed praefine.

primer seisin. See SEISIN.

prime serjeant. See premier serjeant under SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

prime tenant. See TENANT.

primitiae (pri-mish-ee-ee). [fr. Latin primus "first"] See FIRST FRUITS (2). — primitial (pri-mish-əl), adj.

primitive obligation. See OBLIGATION.

primo fronte (pri-moh fron-tee). [Latin] Hist. At first sight.

primogeniture (pri-mə-jen-ə-chər). (15c) 1. The state of being the firstborn child among siblings. 2. The common-law right of the firstborn son to inherit his ancestor's estate, usu. to the exclusion of younger siblings. — Also termed (in sense 2) primogenitureship. See BOROUGH ENGLISH. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻7.]

"If by primogeniture we only mean 'that the male issue shall be admitted before the female, and that, when there are two or more males in equal degrees, the eldest only shall inherit, but the females "all together"' [Blackstone's definition], then ancient records may indeed contain but scant references. But primogeniture embraces all the cases of single inheritance, and may indeed be defined as the prerogative enjoyed by an eldest son or occasionally an eldest daughter, through law or custom, to succeed to their ancestor's inheritance in preference to younger children. Nay, we might even make it more comprehensive, extending it to all cases of single succession depending upon priority in birth." Radhabinod Pal, The History of the Law of Primogeniture 11 (1929).

"We might note here, parenthetically, that the English preference for single-file male descent — that is, the system of descent known as primogeniture — was never cordially received in this country. Our statutes of descent and distribution uniformly provide for sons' and daughters' sharing the inheritance equally. Although this seems a fairer method than primogeniture, which was finally abolished in Britain with the 1925 reforms, the descent of property to an ever-expanding group of heirs can seriously complicate the clearing of old titles." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 9 (2d ed. 1984).

primogenitureship. See PRIMOGENITURE (2).

primo loco (pri-moh loh-koh). [Latin] Hist. In the first place.

primo venienti (pri-moh ven-ee-en-ti). [Latin] To the one first coming. • This refers to the former practice by estate executors of paying debts as they were presented without regard to whether the estate had enough assets to pay all the debts.

primum decretum (pri-məm di-kree-təm). [Latin “first decree”] 1. Hist. Eccles. law. A preliminary decree granted in favor of the plaintiff on the nonappearance of a defendant. 2. Maritime law. A provisional decree.

princeps (prin-seps), n. [Latin] Roman law. A leading person, esp. the emperor.

principal, adj. Chief; primary; most important.

principal, n. (14c) 1. One who authorizes another to act on his or her behalf as an agent. Cf. AGENT (2). [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨1, 130.]

apparent principal. A person who, by outward manifestations, has made it reasonably appear to a third person that another is authorized to act as the person’s agent. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨99.]

disclosed principal. (1858) A principal whose identity is revealed by the agent to a third party. • A disclosed principal is always liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal’s authority, but the agent is usu. not liable. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨92–137.]

partially disclosed principal. (1934) A principal whose existence — but not actual identity — is revealed by the agent to a third party. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨138–146.]

undisclosed principal. (1835) A principal whose identity is kept secret by the agent; a principal for whom the other party has no notice that the agent is acting. • An undisclosed principal and the agent are both liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal’s authority. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨138–146.]

2. One who commits or participates in a crime. Cf. ACCESSORY (2); ACCOMPLICE (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨59–67.]

principal in the first degree. (18c) The perpetrator of a crime. — Also termed first-degree principal. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨61, 78.]

“By a principal in the first degree, we mean the actual offender — the man in whose guilty mind lay the latest blamable mental cause of the criminal act. Almost always, of course, he will be the man by whom this act itself was done. But occasionally this will not be so; for the felony may have been committed by the hand of an innocent agent who, having no blamable intentions in what he did, incurred no criminal liability by doing it. In such a case the man who instigates this agent is the real offender; his was the last mens rea that preceded the crime, though it did not cause it immediately but mediately.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny’s Outlines of Criminal Law 85–86 (16th ed. 1952).

principal in the second degree. (18c) One who helped the perpetrator at the time of the crime. — Also termed accessory at the fact; second-degree principal. See ABETTOR. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨63, 78.]

“The distinction between principals in the first and second degrees is a distinction without a difference except in those rare instances in which some unusual statute has provided a different penalty for one of these than for the other. A principal in the first degree is the immediate perpetrator of the crime while a principal in the second degree is one who did not commit the crime with his own hands but was present and abetting the principal. It may be added, in the words of Mr. Justice Miller, that one may perpetrate a crime, not only with his own hands, but ‘through the agency of mechanical or chemical means, as by instruments, poison or powder, or by an animal, child, or other innocent agent’ acting under his direction.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 736 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting Beausoliel v. United States, 107 F.2d 292, 297 (D.C. Cir. 1939)).

3. One who has primary responsibility on an obligation, as opposed to a surety or indorser. 4. The corpus of an estate or trust. [Cases: Trusts ⇨1.] 5. The amount of a debt, investment, or other fund, not including interest, earnings, or profits.

principle, n. A basic rule, law, or doctrine.

principle of finality. See FINALITY DOCTRINE.

principle of legality. See LEGALITY (2).

principle of nonintervention. See NONINTERVENTION.

principle of retribution. See LEX TALIONIS.

print, 1. Copyright. The impression made in a material by a die, mold, stamp, or the like; a distinctive stamped or printed mark or design. 2. FINGERPRINT.

printed-matter doctrine. Patents. The rule that printed matter may not be patented unless it is a physical part of a patentable invention. • For example, the doctrine has been used to deny patents for systems of representing sheet music and for methods of compiling directories. But it cannot be used to deny a patent for computer software. [Cases: Patents ↻ 5.]

Printers Ink Statute. A model statute drafted in 1911 and adopted in a number of states making it a misdemeanor to print an advertisement that contains a false or deceptive statement.

prior, adj. (17c) 1. Preceding in time or order <under this court's prior order>. 2. Taking precedence .

prior, n. (1919) Criminal law. Slang. A previous conviction <because the defendant had two priors, the judge automatically enhanced his sentence>.

prior-acts coverage. Insurance. A claims-made professional-liability policy indorsement that makes the effective date retroactive and extends the policy's protection to claims made and lawsuits filed during the policy period for negligent acts that occurred before the policy was actually purchased. — Also termed nose coverage. Cf. TAIL COVERAGE. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2266.]

prior and persistent offender. See RECIDIVIST.

prior-appropriation doctrine. (1959) The rule that, among the persons whose properties border on a waterway, the earliest users of the water have the right to take all they can use before anyone else has a right to it. Cf. RIPARIAN-RIGHTS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ↻ 140.]

prior art. See ART.

prior-claim rule. The principle that before suing for a tax refund or abatement, a taxpayer must first assert the claim to the Internal Revenue Service. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻ 5003.]

prior consistent statement. See STATEMENT.

prior creditor. See CREDITOR.

prior-exclusive-jurisdiction doctrine. The rule that a court will not assume in rem jurisdiction over property that is already under the jurisdiction of another court of concurrent jurisdiction.

prior inconsistent statement. See STATEMENT.

priori petenti (PRI-OR-I PĀ-TĒN-ti). [Latin "to the first person applying"] Wills & estates. The principle that when two or more persons are equally entitled to administer an estate, the court will appoint the person who applies first.

priority. (15c) 1. The status of being earlier in time or higher in degree or rank; precedence. 2. Commercial law. An established right to such precedence; esp., a creditor's right to have a claim paid before other creditors of the same debtor receive payment. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↻ 138-145.] 3. The doctrine that, as between two courts, jurisdiction should be accorded the court in which proceedings are first begun. [Cases: Courts ↻ 475, 493, 514; Federal Courts ↻ 1145.] 4. Patents & Trademarks. The status of being first to invent something (and therefore be potentially eligible for patent protection) or to use a mark in trade (and therefore be potentially eligible for trademark registration). [Cases: Patents ↻ 90; Trademarks ↻ 1137] priority of adoption. Trademarks. Priority in designing or creating a trademark. • Priority of adoption does not in itself confer the right to exclusive use of a mark if someone else was first to use it in commerce. — Also termed priority of appropriation; priority of invention. Cf. priority of use. [Cases: Trademarks ↻ 1131.] priority of appropriation. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of invention. 1. Patents. The determination that one among several patent applications, for substantially the same invention, should receive the patent when the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office has declared interference. • This determination depends on the date of conception, the date of reduction to practice, and diligence. [Cases: Patents ↻ 90, 106.] 2. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of use. Trademarks. Priority in using a mark in actual commerce. • The priority of use, not the priority of adoption, determines who has the right to protection. Cf. priority of adoption. [Cases: Trademarks ↻ 1137.]

priority award. Patents. A final judgment by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office designating one party in an interference contest as the first inventor. — Also termed award in interference.

priority claim. See CLAIM (5).

priority contest. See INTERFERENCE (3).

priority date. See DATE.

priority-jurisdiction rule. See FIRST-TO-FILE RULE.

priority lien. See prior lien under LIEN.

priority of liens. The ranking of liens in the order in which they are perfected.

prior laesit (PRI-OR LĒE-sit). [Law Latin] Scots law. He (or she) first injured. • The phrase usu. referred to the provocation for an assault.

prior lien. See LIEN.

prior petens (PRI-ər pet-enz). [Latin] The person first applying.

prior preferred stock. See STOCK.

prior publication. Patents. Public disclosure of the basis for or existence of an invention, made before filing a patent application for the invention. • If the publication was made more than a year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. Publication occurs when the information is made available to any member of the general public. See limited publication under PUBLICATION. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 67.]

prior-relationship rape. See relationship rape under RAPE.

prior restraint. (1833) A governmental restriction on speech or publication before its actual expression. • Prior restraints violate the First Amendment unless the speech is obscene, is defamatory, or creates a clear and present danger to society. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 1525.]

"The legal doctrine of prior restraint (or formal censorship before publication) is probably the oldest form of press control. Certainly it is one of the most efficient, since one censor, working in the watershed, can create a drought of information and ideas long before they reach the fertile plain of people's minds. In the United States, the doctrine of prior restraint has been firmly opposed by the First Amendment to the Constitution, and by the Supreme Court, perhaps most notably in the case of Near v. Minnesota, decided in 1931. But the philosophy behind that doctrine lives zestfully on, and shows no signs of infirmities of age." David G. Clark & Earl R. Hutchinson, Mass Media and the Law 11 (1970).

prior sale. Patents. Sale or offer of sale of an invention before a patent is applied for. • If the sale occurred more than one year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. 35 USCA § 102(b). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 76.] prior sentence. See SENTENCE.

prior-use bar. See PUBLIC-USE BAR.

prior-use doctrine. (1856) The principle that, without legislative authorization, a government agency may not appropriate property already devoted to a public use. [Cases: Eminent Domain ⇨ 47.]

prior-user right. Patents. The right of a first inventor to continue using an invention after someone else has patented it. • This right protects first inventors in most countries from the harsh effects of a first-to-file system. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 90(1).]

prisage (PRI-zij). Hist. A royal duty on wine imported into England. • Prisage was replaced by butlerage in the reign of Edward I. Cf. BUTLERAGE.

prisel en auter lieu (PRI-zəl awn oh-tayl-yoo). [Law French "a taking in another place"] A plea in abatement in a replevin action.

prison. (bef. 12c) A state or federal facility of confinement for convicted criminals, esp. felons. — Also termed penitentiary; penal institution; adult correctional institution. Cf. JAIL. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 213.]

private prison. (1865) A prison that is managed by a private company, not by a governmental agency. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 12.]

prison breach. (17c) A prisoner's forcible breaking and departure from a place of lawful confinement; the offense of escaping from confinement in a prison or jail. • Prison breach has traditionally been distinguished from escape by the presence of force, but some jurisdictions have abandoned this distinction. — Also termed prison breaking; breach of prison. Cf. ESCAPE (2). [Cases: Escape ⇨ 4.]

"Breach of prison by the offender himself, when committed for any cause, was felony at the common law; or even conspiring to break it. But this severity is mitigated by the statute de frangentibus prisonam, 1 Edw. II, which enacts that no person shall have judgment of life or member, for breaking prison, unless committed for some capital offence. So that to break prison, when lawfully committed for any treason or felony, remains still a felony as at the common law; and to break prison, when lawfully confined upon any other inferior charge, is still punishable as a high misdemeanor by fine and imprisonment." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 130-31 (1769).

prison camp. (1864) A usu. minimum-security camp for the detention of trustworthy prisoners who are often employed on government projects.

prisoner. 1. A person who is serving time in prison. 2. A person who has been apprehended by a law-enforcement officer and is in custody, regardless of whether the person has yet been put in prison. Cf. CAPTIVE (1).

"While breach of prison, or prison breach, means breaking out of or away from prison, it is important to have clearly in mind the meaning of the word 'prison.' If an officer arrests an offender and takes him to jail the layman does not think of the offender as being 'in prison' until he is safely behind locked doors, but no one hesitates to speak of him as a 'prisoner' from the moment of apprehension. He is a prisoner because he is 'in prison . . . whether he were actually in the walls of a prison, or only in the stocks, or in the custody of any person who had lawfully arrested him . . .'" Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 566 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 2 Hawk. P.C. ch. 18, § 1 (6th ed. 1788)).

prisoner at the bar. (16c) Archaic. An accused person who is on trial.

prisoner of conscience. Human-rights law. A person who is imprisoned because of his or her beliefs, race, sex, ethnic origin, language, or religion. • The range of "beliefs" that fall within this definition is not settled but may include political ideologies and objections to military service, esp. in wartime.

prisoner of war. A person, usu. a soldier, who is captured by or surrenders to the enemy in wartime. — Also termed captive. — Abbr. POW. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨ 11.]

prisoner's dilemma. A logic problem — often used by law-and-economics scholars to illustrate the effect of cooperative behavior — involving two prisoners who are being separately questioned about their participation in a crime: (1) if both confess, they will each receive a 5-year sentence; (2) if neither confesses, they will each receive a 3-year sentence; and (3) if one confesses but the other does not, the confessing prisoner will receive a 1-year sentence while the silent prisoner will receive a 10-year sentence. See EXTERNALITY.

Prison Litigation Reform Act. A federal statute designed to reduce the number of frivolous lawsuits and petitions filed by prisoners and to reduce the power of federal courts over state prison systems. 110 Stat. 1321-66-1321-77 (1996).

prist (prist). [Law French] Hist. Ready. • In oral pleading, this term was used to express a joinder of issue.

privacy. The condition or state of being free from public attention to intrusion into or interference with one's acts or decisions.

autonomy privacy. An individual's right to control his or her personal activities or intimate personal decisions without outside interference, observation, or intrusion. • If the individual's interest in an activity or decision is fundamental, the state must show a compelling public interest before the private interest can be overcome. If the individual's interest is acknowledged to be less than fundamental or is disputed, then a court must apply a balancing test. Hill v. NCAA, 865 P.2d 633, 653, 654 (Cal. 1994). [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 1210-1275.]

informational privacy. Tort. A private person's right to choose to determine whether, how, and to what extent information about oneself is communicated to others, esp. sensitive and confidential information. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 1227.]

Privacy Act of 1974. An act that regulates the government's creation, collection, use, and dissemination of records that can identify an individual by name, as well as other personal information. 18 USCA § 552a. [Cases: Records ↷ 31.]

privacy law. (1936) 1. A federal or state statute that protects a person's right to be left alone or that restricts public access to personal information such as tax returns and medical records. — Also termed privacy act. [Cases: Records ↷ 31.] 2. The area of legal studies dealing with a person's right to be left alone and with restricting public access to personal information such as tax returns and medical records.

privacy privilege. See PRIVILEGE (3).

privata delicta (pri-vay-tə di-lik-tə). [Latin] Roman law. Private wrongs; torts. See DELICT. Cf. PUBLICA DELICTA.

privatae leges (pri-vay-tee lee-jeez). [Law Latin] Scots law. Personal laws. • These were laws, such as a pardon, that affected a single individual, not a class of people.

private, adj. (14c) 1. Relating or belonging to an individual, as opposed to the public or the government. 2. (Of a company) not having shares that are freely available on an open market. 3. Confidential; secret.

private annuity. See ANNUITY.

private attorney. See ATTORNEY (1).

private-attorney-general doctrine. The equitable principle that allows the recovery of attorney's fees to a party who brings a lawsuit that benefits a significant number of people, requires private enforcement, and is important to society as a whole. [Cases: Costs ↷ 194.42; Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 2737.2.]

private bank. See BANK.

private benefit. Tax. The use of a tax-exempt organization's assets primarily to further the interests of a private individual or entity, rather than for a public interest. • Under most circumstances, this type of benefit is prohibited. See IRC (26 USCA) § 501(c)(3). Cf. private inurement under INUREMENT.

qualitatively incidental private benefit. A permissible private benefit arising from circumstances under which a benefit to the public cannot be achieved without necessarily also benefiting a private interest.

quantitatively incidental private benefit. A permissible private benefit that is a necessary but insubstantial concomitant to a public benefit.

private inurement. See INUREMENT.

private judging. (1979) A type of alternative dispute resolution whereby the parties hire a private individual to hear and decide a case. • This process may occur as a matter of contract between the parties or in connection with a statute authorizing such a process. — Also termed rent-a-judging.

"In contrast [to arbitration], private judging is a less contractual, less privatized process. Party agreement, usually formed post-dispute, does send a case to private judging. And the parties have the freedom of contract to determine the time and place of trial, as well as the identity of the judge. Unlike arbitration, however, privately judged trials may . . . be: (1) required to use the same rules of procedure and evidence used in ordinary litigation, (2) exposed to public view by court order, (3) adjudicated only by a former judge, and (4) subject to appeal in the same manner as other trial verdicts. In sum, private judging is essentially an ordinary bench trial except that the parties select, and pay for, the judge." Stephen J. Ware, Alternative Dispute Resolution § 2.54, at 113 (2001).

private land grant. See LAND GRANT.

private law. (18c) 1. The body of law dealing with private persons and their property and relationships. Cf. PUBLIC LAW (1). 2. See special law under LAW.

privation (PRI-VAY-shən). (15c) 1. The act of taking away or withdrawing. 2. The condition of being deprived.

privatization (PRI-VƏ-tə-zay-shən), n. (1942) The act or process of converting a business or industry from governmental ownership or control to private enterprise. Cf. DENATIONALIZATION (2). — privatize, vb.

privatum (PRI-VAY-təm). [Latin] Private. • This term appeared in phrases such as jus privatum ("private law").

privies (PRIV-eez). See PRIVY.

privigna (PRI-VIG-nə), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A daughter of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage; a stepdaughter.

privignus (PRI-VIG-nəs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A son of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage; a stepson.

privilege. (bef. 12c) 1. A special legal right, exemption, or immunity granted to a person or class of persons; an exception to a duty. • A privilege grants someone the legal freedom to do or not to do a given act. It immunizes conduct that, under ordinary circumstances, would subject the actor to liability.

absolute privilege. (18c) A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit, no matter how wrongful the action might be, and even though it is done with an improper motive. Cf. qualified privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 36; Torts ⇨ 121.]

audit privilege. See AUDIT PRIVILEGE.

conditional privilege. See qualified privilege.

courtroom privilege. See judicial privilege.

defamation privilege. See litigation privilege.

deliberative-process privilege. (1977) A privilege permitting the government to withhold documents relating to policy formulation to encourage open and independent discussion among those who develop government policy. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 361.]

judicial privilege. (1845) Defamation. 1. The privilege protecting any statement made in the course of and with reference to a judicial proceeding by any judge, juror, party, witness, or advocate. 2. See litigation privilege. — Also termed courtroom privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 38.]

judicial-proceedings privilege. See litigation privilege.

legislative privilege. (1941) Defamation. The privilege protecting (1) any statement made in a legislature by one of its members, and (2) any paper published as part of legislative business. — Also termed (in a parliamentary system) parliamentary privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 37.]

litigation privilege. A privilege protecting the attorneys and parties in a lawsuit against tort claims based on certain acts done and statements made when related to the litigation. • The privilege is most often applied to defamation claims but may be extended to encompass other torts, such as invasion of privacy and disclosure of trade secrets. The facts of each case determine whether the privilege applies and whether it is qualified or absolute. — Also termed judicial-proceedings privilege; judicial privilege; defamation privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 38.]

official privilege. (1927) The privilege immunizing from a defamation lawsuit any statement made by one state officer to another in the course of official duty. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 39, 42.] parliamentary privilege. 1. See legislative privilege. 2. PRIVILEGE (5).

privilege from arrest. (1840) An exemption from arrest, as that enjoyed by members of Congress during legislative sessions. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. [Cases: Arrest ⇨ 60.]

qualified privilege. (1865) A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit only when the privilege is properly exercised in the performance of a legal or moral duty. — Also termed conditional privilege. Cf. absolute privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 41; Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 114; Torts ⇨ 121.]

"Qualified privilege . . . is an intermediate case between total absence of privilege and the presence of absolute privilege." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 165 (17th ed. 1977).

special privilege. (17c) 1. A privilege granted to a person or class of persons to the exclusion of others and in derogation of the common right. 2. See personal privilege under PRIVILEGE (5).

testimonial privilege. (1907) A right not to testify based on a claim of privilege; a privilege that overrides a witness's duty to disclose matters within the witness's knowledge, whether at trial or by deposition. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 297.]

viatorial privilege (vī-ə-tor-ee-əl). (1904) A privilege that overrides a person's duty to attend court in person and to testify.

work-product privilege. See WORK-PRODUCT RULE.

2. An affirmative defense by which a defendant acknowledges at least part of the conduct complained of but asserts that the defendant's conduct was authorized or sanctioned by law; esp., in tort law, a circumstance justifying or excusing an intentional tort. See JUSTIFICATION (2). Cf. IMMUNITY (2). [Cases: Torts ⇨ 121.] 3. An evidentiary rule that gives a witness the option to not disclose the fact asked for, even though it might be relevant; the right to prevent disclosure of certain information in court, esp. when the information was originally communicated in a professional or confidential relationship. • Assertion of an evidentiary privilege can be overcome by proof that an otherwise privileged communication was made in the presence of a third party to whom the privilege would not apply. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 1, 17.]

accountant-client privilege. (1956) The protection afforded to a client from an accountant's unauthorized disclosure of materials submitted to or prepared by the accountant. • The privilege is not widely recognized. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 405.] antimarital-facts privilege. See marital privilege (2).

attorney-client privilege. (1934) The client's right to refuse to disclose and to prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications between the client and the attorney. • The privilege is not widely recognized. — Also termed lawyer-client privilege; client's privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 102.]

"There are a number of ways to organize the essential elements of the attorney-client privilege to provide for an orderly analysis. One of the most popular is Wigmore's schema: '(1) Where legal advice of any kind is sought (2) from a professional legal adviser in his capacity as such, (3) the communications relating to that purpose (4) made in confidence (5) by the client (6) are at his instance permanently protected (7) from disclosure by himself or by the legal adviser, (8) except the privilege be waived.' Though this organization has its virtues, there is some question as to whether it completely states the modern privilege." 24 Charles Alan Wright & Kenneth W. Graham Jr., Federal Practice and Procedure § 5473, at 103-04 (1986) (quoting 8 John Henry Wigmore, Evidence § 2292, at 554 (John T. McNaughton rev., 1961)).

"At the present time it seems most realistic to portray the attorney-client privilege as supported in part by its traditional utilitarian justification, and in part by the integral role it is perceived to play in the adversary system itself. Our system of litigation casts the lawyer in the role of fighter for the party whom he represents. A strong tradition of loyalty attaches to the relationship of attorney and client, and this tradition would be outraged by routine examination of the lawyer as to the client's confidential disclosures regarding professional business. To the extent that the evidentiary privilege, then, is integrally related to an entire code of professional conduct, it is futile to envision drastic curtailment of the privilege without substantial modification of the underlying ethical system to which the privilege is merely ancillary." John W. Strong, McCormick on Evidence § 87, at 121-22 (4th ed. 1992).

clergyman-penitent privilege. See priest-penitent privilege.

client's privilege. See attorney-client privilege.

doctor-patient privilege. (1954) The right to exclude from discovery and evidence in a legal proceeding any confidential communication that a patient makes to a physician for the purpose of diagnosis or treatment, unless the patient consents to the disclosure. — Also termed patient-physician privilege; physician-patient privilege; physician-client privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨202.]

editorial privilege. See journalist's privilege (2).

executive privilege. (1909) A privilege, based on the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers, that exempts the executive branch of the federal government from usual disclosure requirements when the matter to be disclosed involves national security or foreign policy. Cf. executive immunity under IMMUNITY (1). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨353.]

husband-wife privilege. See marital privilege.

informant's privilege. (1962) The qualified privilege that a government can invoke to prevent disclosure of the identity and communications of its informants. • In exercising its power to formulate evidentiary rules for federal criminal cases, the U.S. Supreme Court has consistently declined to hold that the government must disclose the identity of informants in a preliminary hearing or in a criminal trial. McCray v. Illinois, 386 U.S. 300, 312, 87 S.Ct. 1056, 1063 (1967). A party can, however, usu. overcome the privilege by demonstrating that the need for the information outweighs the public interest in maintaining the privilege. — Also termed informers' privilege. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨627.6; Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨374.]

joint-defense privilege. (1975) The rule that a defendant can assert the attorney-client privilege to protect a confidential communication made to a codefendant's lawyer if the communication was related to the defense of both defendants. — Also termed common-interest doctrine; common-interest privilege; common-interest exception. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨122.]

journalist's privilege. (1970) 1. A reporter's protection, under constitutional or statutory law, from being compelled to testify about confidential information or sources. — Also termed reporter's privilege; newsmen's privilege. See SHIELD LAW (1). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨404.] 2. A publisher's protection against defamation lawsuits when the publication makes fair comment on the actions of public officials in matters of public concern. — Also termed editorial privilege; common-interest privilege; common-interest exception. See FAIR COMMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨49.]

lawyer-client privilege. See attorney-client privilege.

marital privilege. (1902) 1. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify, and to prevent another person from testifying, about confidential communications between the spouses during the marriage. — Also termed marital-communications privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨60.] 2. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify in a criminal case as an adverse witness against the other spouse, regardless of the subject matter of the testimony. — Also termed (in sense 2) privilege against adverse spousal testimony; antimarital-facts privilege. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨51.] 3. The privilege immunizing from a defamation lawsuit any statement made between husband and wife. — Also termed (in all senses) spousal privilege; husband-wife privilege.

national-security privilege. See state-secrets privilege.

newsmen's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1).

patient-physician privilege. See doctor-patient privilege.

peer-review privilege. (1979) A privilege that protects from disclosure the proceedings and reports of a medical facility's peer-review committee, which reviews and oversees the patient care and medical services provided by the staff. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨422.]

physician-client privilege. See doctor-patient privilege.

political-vote privilege. A privilege to protect from compulsory disclosure a vote cast in an election by secret ballot. [Cases: Elections ⇨28.]

priest-penitent privilege. (1958) The privilege barring a clergy member from testifying about a confessor's communications. — Also termed clergyman-penitent privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨403.]

privacy privilege. A defendant's right not to disclose private information unless the plaintiff can show that (1) the information is directly relevant to the case, and (2) the plaintiff's need for the information outweighs the defendant's need for nondisclosure. • This privilege is recognized in California but in few other jurisdictions. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨184(1).] privilege against adverse spousal testimony. See marital privilege (2).

privilege against self-incrimination. Criminal law. 1. RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION. 2. A criminal defendant's right not to be asked any questions by the judge or prosecution unless the defendant chooses to testify. — Also termed right not to be questioned. [Cases: Witnesses ↻299.]

"According to the rule, neither the judge nor the prosecution is entitled at any stage to question the accused unless he chooses to give evidence. . . . This rule may be called the accused's right not to be questioned; in America it is termed the privilege against self-incrimination. The latter expression is more apt as the name for another rule, the privilege of any witness to refuse to answer an incriminating question; this is different from the rule under discussion, which, applying only to persons accused of crime, prevents the question from being asked. The person charged with crime has not merely the liberty to refuse to answer a question incriminating himself; he is freed even from the embarrassment of being asked the question." Glanville Williams, The Proof of Guilt 37-38 (3d ed. 1963).

psychotherapist-patient privilege. (1968) A privilege that a person can invoke to prevent the disclosure of a confidential communication made in the course of diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional condition by or at the direction of a psychotherapist. • The privilege can be overcome under certain conditions, as when the examination is ordered by a court. — Also termed psychotherapist-client privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↻312.] reporter's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1).

self-critical-analysis privilege. (1982) A privilege protecting individuals and entities from divulging the results of candid assessments of their compliance with laws and regulations, to the extent that the assessments are internal, the results were intended from the outset to be confidential, and the information is of a type that would be curtailed if it were forced to be disclosed. • This privilege is founded on the public policy that it is beneficial to permit individuals and entities to confidentially evaluate their compliance with the law, so that they will monitor and improve their compliance with it. — Also termed self-policing privilege; self-evaluation privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↻418.] spousal privilege. See marital privilege.

state-secrets privilege. (1959) A privilege that the government may invoke against the discovery of a material that, if divulged, could compromise national security. — Also termed national-security privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↻360.]

tax-return privilege. A privilege to refuse to divulge the contents of a tax return or certain related documents. • The privilege is founded on the public policy of encouraging honest tax returns. [Cases: Witnesses ↻216(2).]

4. Civil law. A creditor's right, arising from the nature of the debt, to priority over the debtor's other creditors. 5. Parliamentary law. The status of a motion as outranking other business because of its relationship to the meeting's or a member's rights. — Also termed parliamentary privilege. See question of privilege under QUESTION (3).

general privilege. A privilege that concerns the deliberative assembly as a body, rather than any particular member or members. — Also termed privilege of the assembly; privilege of the house. Cf. personal privilege.

parliamentary privilege. 1. A privilege under parliamentary law. 2. See legislative privilege under PRIVILEGE (1).

personal privilege. A privilege that concerns an individual member or members (e.g., a member's reputation or physical ability to hear the proceedings) rather than the deliberative assembly generally. — Also termed special privilege. See procedural point under POINT. Cf. general privilege.

privilege of the assembly. See general privilege.

privilege of the floor. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) The right of entering, passing through, and sitting on the floor during a meeting. See FLOOR (1).

"The expression 'privileges of the floor,' sometimes used in legislative bodies or conventions, has nothing to do with having the floor, but means merely that a person is permitted to enter the hall. It carries no right to speak or any other right of membership, except as may be determined by rules or action of the body." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 3, at 28 n. (10th ed. 2000).

privilege of the house. See general privilege.

special privilege. See personal privilege.

privilege from arrest. See PRIVILEGE (1).

privilege of palace. The exemption of a dwelling that is used as a royal residence from the execution of legal process within its precincts. • The monarch does not have to be in residence at the time but must intend to retain the power to take up personal residence in the dwelling at will. Not all palaces are royal residences; England's Westminster Palace, for example, is occupied by the Parliament of the United Kingdom, not the queen, who relinquished all control of the palace in 1965.

Privileges and Immunities Clause. (1911) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 1) prohibiting a state from favoring its own citizens by discriminating against other states' citizens who come within its borders. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 2935–2963.]

Privileges or Immunities Clause. (1918) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1) prohibiting state laws that abridge the privileges or immunities of U.S. citizens. • The clause was effectively nullified by the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36 (1873). Cf. DUE PROCESS CLAUSE; EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 2910–2932.] privilege tax. See TAX.

privilegium (priv-ə-lee-jee-əm), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A law passed against or in favor of a specific individual. 2. Roman law. A special right, esp. one giving priority to a creditor. 3. Civil law. Every right or favor that is granted by the law but is contrary to the usual rule.

privilegium clericale (priv-ə-lee-jee-əm kler-ə-kay-lee). [Law Latin] See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

privity (priv-ə-tee). (16c) 1. The connection or relationship between two parties, each having a legally recognized interest in the same subject matter (such as a transaction, proceeding, or piece of property); mutuality of interest <privity of contract>. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 186; Judgment ⇨ 678(2).]

horizontal privity. (1968) Commercial law. The legal relationship between a party and a nonparty who is related to the party (such as a buyer and a member of the buyer's family). [Cases: Sales ⇨ 255.]

privity of blood. (16c) 1. Privity between an heir and an ancestor. 2. Privity between coparceners.

privity of contract. (17c) The relationship between the parties to a contract, allowing them to sue each other but preventing a third party from doing so. • The requirement of privity has been relaxed under modern laws and doctrines of implied warranty and strict liability, which allow a third-party beneficiary or other foreseeable user to sue the seller of a defective product. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 186; Sales ⇨ 255.]

"To many students and practitioners of the common law privity of contract became a fetish. As such, it operated to deprive many a claimant of a remedy in cases where according to the mores of the time the claim was just. It has made many learned men believe that a chose in action could not be assigned. Even now, it is gravely asserted that a man cannot be made the debtor of another against his will. But the common law was gradually influenced by equity and by the law merchant, so that by assignment a debtor could become bound to pay a perfect stranger to himself, although until the legislature stepped in, the common-law courts characteristically made use of a fiction and pretended that they were not doing that which they really were doing." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 335 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"It is an elementary principle of English law — known as the doctrine of 'Privity of Contract' — that contractual rights and duties only affect the parties to a contract, and this principle is the distinguishing feature between the law of contract and the law of property. True proprietary rights are 'binding on the world' in the lawyer's traditional phrase. Contractual rights, on the other hand, are only binding on, and enforceable by, the immediate parties to the contract. But this distinction, fundamental though it be, wears a little thin at times. On the one hand, there has been a constant tendency for contractual rights to be extended in their scope so as to affect more and more persons who cannot be regarded as parties to the transaction. On the other hand, few proprietary rights are literally 'binding on the world'." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 265 (3d ed. 1981).

"The doctrine of privity means that a person cannot acquire rights or be subject to liabilities arising under a contract to which he is not a party. It does not mean that a contract between A and B cannot affect the legal rights of C indirectly." G.H. Treitel, The Law of Contract 538 (8th ed. 1991).

privity of estate. (17c) A mutual or successive relationship to the same right in property, as between grantor and grantee or landlord and tenant. — Also termed privity of title; privity in estate. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨ 20, 53.]

privity of possession. (1818) Privity between parties in successive possession of real property. • The existence of this type of privity is often at issue in adverse-possession claims. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⇨ 43.]

privity of title. See privity of estate.

vertical privity. (1968) 1. Commercial law. The legal relationship between parties in a product's chain of distribution (such as a manufacturer and a seller). [Cases: Sales ⇨ 255.] 2. Privity between one who signs a contract containing a restrictive covenant and one who acquires the property burdened by it.

2. Joint knowledge or awareness of something private or secret, esp. as implying concurrence or consent <privity to a crime>.

privity (priv-ee), n. pl. (15c) A person having a legal interest of privity in any action, matter, or property; a person who is in privity with another. • Traditionally, there were six types of privies: (1) privies in blood, such as an heir and an ancestor; (2) privies in representation, such as an executor and a testator or an administrator and an intestate person; (3) privies in estate, such as grantor and grantee or lessor and lessee; (4) privies in respect to a contract — the parties to a contract; (5) privies in respect of estate and contract, such as a lessor and lessee where the lessee assigns an interest, but the contract between lessor and lessee continues because the lessor does not accept the assignee; and (6) privies in law, such as husband and wife. The term also appears in the context of litigation. In this sense, it includes someone who controls a lawsuit though not a party to it; someone whose interests are represented by a party to the lawsuit; and a successor in interest to anyone having a derivative claim. Pl. privies.

Privy Council. In Britain, the principal council of the sovereign, composed of the cabinet ministers and other persons chosen by royal appointment to serve as privy councillors. • The functions of the Privy Council are now mostly ceremonial. See JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

Privy Councillor. A member of the Privy Council. — Abbr. P.C.

privy purse. English law. The income set apart for the sovereign's personal use.

privy seal. 1. A seal used in making out grants or letters patent before they are passed under the great seal. 2. (cap.) LORD PRIVY SEAL.

privy signet. Hist. The signet or seal used by the sovereign in making out grants and private letters.

privy verdict. See VERDICT.

prize. 1. Something of value awarded in recognition of a person's achievement. 2. A vessel or cargo captured at sea or seized in port by the forces of a nation at war, and therefore liable to being condemned or appropriated as enemy property. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨28.]

prize court. See COURT.

prize fighting. Fighting for a reward or prize; esp., professional boxing. [Cases: Public Amusement and Entertainment ⇨27.]

"Prize fighting . . . was not looked upon with favor by the common law as was a friendly boxing match or wrestling match. On the other hand it was not punishable by the common law unless it was fought in a public place, or for some other reason constituted a breach of the peace." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 480 (3d ed. 1982).

prize goods. See GOODS.

prize law. The system of laws applicable to the capture of prize at sea, dealing with such matters as the rights of captors and the distribution of the proceeds. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨28.]

prize money. 1. A dividend from the proceeds of a captured vessel, paid to the captors. 2. Money offered as an award.

PRO. abbr. PEER-REVIEW ORGANIZATION.

pro (proh). [Latin] (15c) For.

proamita (proh-am-ə-tə). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-great aunt; the sister of one's great-grandfather.

proamita magna (proh-am-ə-tə mag-nə). [Latin] Civil law. A great-great-great-aunt.

proavia (proh-ay-vee-ə). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-grandmother.

proavunculus (proh-ə-vəŋk-yə-ləs). [Latin] Civil law. A great-grandmother's brother.

proavus. Civil law. A great-grandfather.

probabilis causa (prə-bay-bə-lis kaw-zə). [Latin] Probable cause.

probabilis causa litigandi (prə-bab-ə-lis kaw-zə lit-i-gan-dī). [Law Latin] Scots law. A probable cause of action. • A person applying for legal aid has to show a reasonable basis for the proposed legal action.

probable cause. (16c) 1. Criminal law. A reasonable ground to suspect that a person has committed or is committing a crime or that a place contains specific items connected with a crime. • Under the Fourth Amendment, probable cause — which amounts to more than a bare suspicion but less than evidence that would justify a conviction — must be shown before an arrest warrant or search warrant may be issued. — Also termed reasonable cause; sufficient cause; reasonable grounds; reasonable excuse Cf. reasonable suspicion under SUSPICION. [Cases: Arrest ⇨63.4(2).]

"Probable cause may not be established simply by showing that the officer who made the challenged arrest or search subjectively believed he had grounds for his action. As emphasized in Beck v. Ohio [379 U.S. 89, 85 S.Ct. 223 (1964)]: 'If subjective good faith alone were the test, the protection of the Fourth Amendment would evaporate, and the people would be "secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects" only in the discretion of the police.' The probable cause test, then, is an objective one: for there to be probable cause, the facts must be such as would warrant a belief by a reasonable man." Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.3, at 140 (2d ed. 1992).

2. Torts. A reasonable belief in the existence of facts on which a claim is based and in the legal validity of the claim itself. • In this sense, probable cause is usu. assessed as of the time when the claimant brings the claim (as by filing suit). 3. A reasonable basis to support issuance of an administrative warrant based on either (1) specific evidence of an existing violation of administrative rules, or (2) evidence showing that a particular business meets the legislative or administrative standards permitting an inspection of the business premises. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ⇨129.] probable-cause hearing. 1. See PRELIMINARY HEARING. 2. See shelter hearing under HEARING.

probable consequence. (16c) An effect or result that is more likely than not to follow its supposed cause. [Cases: Negligence ⇨386.]

probable-desistance test. (1974) Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, focusing on whether the defendant has exhibited dangerous behavior indicating a likelihood of committing the crime. See ATTEMPT (2).

probable evidence. See presumptive evidence under EVIDENCE.

probandum (proh-ban-dəm), n. A fact to be proved. See fact in issue under FACT. Pl. probanda.

probata (proh-bay-tə). [Latin] pl. PROBATUM.

probate (proh-bayt), n. (15c) 1. The judicial procedure by which a testamentary document is established to be a valid will; the proving of a will to the satisfaction of the court. • Unless set aside, the probate of a will is conclusive upon the parties to the proceedings (and others who had notice of them) on all questions of testamentary capacity, the absence of fraud or undue influence, and due execution of the will. But probate does not preclude inquiry into the validity of the will's provisions or on their proper construction or legal effect. — Also termed proof of will. [Cases: Wills ↷ 203–434.]

independent probate. See informal probate.

informal probate. (1974) Probate designed to operate with minimal input and supervision of the probate court. • Most modern probate codes encourage this type of administration, with an independent personal representative. — Also termed independent probate. Cf. independent executor under EXECUTOR. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↷ 3(1).]

probate in common form. Probate granted in the registry, without any formal procedure in court, on the executor's ex parte application. • The judgment is subject to being reopened by a party who has not been given notice. [Cases: Wills ↷ 213.]

probate in solemn form. Probate granted in open court, as a final decree, when all interested parties have been given notice. • The judgment is final for all parties who have had notice of the proceeding, unless a later will is discovered. [Cases: Wills ↷ 214.]

small-estate probate. (2004) An informal procedure for administering small estates, less structured than the normal process and usu. not requiring the assistance of an attorney.

2. Loosely, a personal representative's actions in handling a decedent's estate. 3. Loosely, all the subjects over which probate courts have jurisdiction. 4. Archaic. A nonresident plaintiff's proof of a debt by swearing before a notary public or other officer that the debt is correct, just, and due, and by having the notary attach a jurat.

probate, vb. (18c) 1. To admit (a will) to proof. 2. To administer (a decedent's estate). 3. To grant probation to (a criminal); to reduce (a sentence) by means of probation.

probate asset. See legal asset under ASSET.

probate bond. See BOND (2).

probate code. (1931) A collection of statutes setting forth the law (substantive and procedural) of decedents' estates and trusts. [Cases: Wills ↷ 204.]

probate court. See COURT.

probate distribution. See DISTRIBUTION.

probate duty. See DUTY (4).

probate estate. (1930) A decedent's property subject to administration by a personal representative. • The probate estate comprises property owned by the decedent at the time of death and property acquired by the decedent's estate at or after the time of death. — Also termed probate property. See decedent's estate under ESTATE (3). [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↷ 38–61; Wills ↷ 4.]

net probate estate. The probate estate after the following deductions: (1) family allowances, (2) exempt property, (3) homestead allowances, (4) claims against the estate, and (5) taxes for which the estate is liable. — Also termed net estate. Cf. adjusted gross estate (1) under ESTATE (3). [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 4149–4185; Taxation ↷ 3351.]

probate fee. See FEE (1).

probate homestead. See HOMESTEAD.

probate in common form. See PROBATE.

probate in solemn form. See PROBATE.

probate judge. See JUDGE.

probate jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

probate law. The body of statutes, rules, cases, etc. governing all subjects over which a probate court has jurisdiction.

probate property. See PROBATE ESTATE.

probate register. See REGISTER.

probatio (prə-bay-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Proof.

plena probatio. See probatio plena.

probatio diabolica (prə-bay-shee-oh dī-ə-bol-i-kə). [Latin “devil's proof”] Civil law. The (usu. difficult) proof of ownership of an immovable thing by tracing its title back to the sovereign.

probatio mortua (prə-bay-shee-oh mor-choo-ə). [Latin] Dead proof; proof by an inanimate object such as a deed or other instrument.

probatio plena (prə-bay-shee-oh plee-nə). [Latin] Civil law. Full proof; proof by two witnesses or a public instrument. — Also termed plena probatio.

probatio probata (prə-bay-shee-oh prə-bay-tə). [Law Latin] A proven proof; evidence that could not be contradicted.

probatio prout de jure (proh-bay-shee-oh proh-ət dee [or dī] joor-ee). [Law Latin] A proof according to any of the legal modes of proof applicable to the circumstance.

probatio semi-plena (prə-bay-shee-oh sem-i-plee-nə). [Latin] Civil law. Half-full proof; half-proof; proof by one witness or a private instrument.

probatio viva (prə-bay-shee-oh vi-və). [Latin] Living proof; that is, proof by the mouth of a witness.

probation. (16c) 1. A court-imposed criminal sentence that, subject to stated conditions, releases a convicted person into the community instead of sending the criminal to jail or prison. Cf. PAROLE. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 1811.] — probationary, adj.

bench probation. (1966) Probation in which the offender agrees to certain conditions or restrictions and reports only to the sentencing judge rather than a probation officer. — Also termed bench parole; court probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 1969.]

deferred-adjudication probation. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

shock probation. (1972) Probation that is granted after a brief stay in jail or prison. • Shock probation is intended to awaken the defendant to the reality of confinement for failure to abide by the conditions of probation. This type of probation is discretionary with the sentencing judge and is usu. granted within 180 days of the original sentence. — Also termed splut sentence. Cf. shock incarceration under INCARCERATION. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 1936.]

2. The act of judicially proving a will. See PROBATE. — probate, adj.

probationary employee. See EMPLOYEE.

probation before judgment. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

probationer. A convicted criminal who is on probation.

probation officer. See OFFICER (1).

probation termination. (1970) The ending of a person's status as a probationer by (1) the routine expiration of the probationary period, (2) early termination by court order, or (3) probation revocation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 1948, 1953, 2000–2041.] probation-violation warrant. See violation warrant under WARRANT (1).

probation without judgment. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

probatio plena. See PROBATIO.

probatio semi-plena. See PROBATIO.

probatio viva. See PROBATIO.

probative (proh-bə-tiv), adj. (17c) Tending to prove or disprove. • Courts can exclude relevant evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Fed. R. Evid. 403. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 338(1), 338(7); Evidence ↻ 99, 146.] — probativeness, probativity, n.

probative evidence. See EVIDENCE.

probative fact. See FACT.

probative similarity. See substantial similarity under SIMILARITY.

probator (proh-bay-tər), n. Hist. An accused person who confesses to a crime but asserts that another also participated in the crime. • The probator had to undertake to prove the supposed accomplice's guilt.

probatory term. See term probatory (2) under TERM (5).

probatum (proh-bay-təm), n. [Latin] Something conclusively established or proved; proof. Pl. probata. Cf. ALLEGATUM.

problem-oriented policing. (1986) A method that law-enforcement officers use to reduce crime by identifying and remedying the underlying causes of criminal incidents rather than merely seeking basic information (such as the identity of the perpetrator) about the crime being investigated.

problem-solving court. See COURT.

pro bono (proh boh-noh), adv. & adj. [Latin pro bono publico "for the public good"] (1966) Being or involving uncompensated legal services performed esp. for the public good <took the case pro bono> <50 hours of pro bono work each year>. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻ 23, 132.]

"The bar in this country has a long-standing tradition of service pro bono publico — legal services 'for the public good,' provided at no cost or a reduced fee. This concept encompasses a wide range of activities, including law reform efforts, participation in bar associations and civic organizations, and individual or group representation. Clients who receive such assistance also span a broad range including: poor people, nonprofit organizations, ideological or political causes, and friends, relatives, or employees of the lawyer." Deborah L. Rhode & Geoffrey C. Hazard, Professional Responsibility 162 (2002).

pro bono et malo (proh boh-noh et mal-oh). [Latin] For good and ill. See DE BONO ET MALO.

pro bono publico (proh boh-noh pəb-li-koh or poo-bli-koh). [Latin] Hist. For the public good. Cf. PRO PRIVATO COMMODO.

probus et legalis homo (proh-bəs et læ-gay-lis hoh-moh). [Law Latin] A good and lawful man. • This phrase referred to a juror who was legally competent to serve on a jury. Pl. probi et legales homines.

procedendo (proh-sə-den-doh). [Latin] A higher court's order directing a lower court to determine and enter a judgment in a previously removed case.

procedendo ad iudicium. See DE PROCEDENDO AD IUDICIUM.

procedural consolidation. See JOINT ADMINISTRATION.

procedural-default doctrine. (1980) The principle that a federal court lacks jurisdiction to review the merits of a habeas corpus petition if a state court has refused to review the complaint because the petitioner failed to follow reasonable state-court procedures. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻ 313–431.]

procedural due process. See DUE PROCESS.

procedural law. (1896) The rules that prescribe the steps for having a right or duty judicially enforced, as opposed to the law that defines the specific rights or duties themselves. — Also termed adjective law. Cf. SUBSTANTIVE LAW. [Cases: Statutes ↻ 242.]

procedural main motion. See incidental main motion under MOTION (2).

procedural motion. See MOTION (2).

procedural point. See POINT.

procedural presumption. See PRESUMPTION.

procedure. (16c) 1. A specific method or course of action. 2. The judicial rule or manner for carrying on a civil lawsuit or criminal prosecution. — Also termed proceeding. (16c) 1. The regular and orderly progression of a lawsuit, including all acts and events between the time of commencement and the entry of judgment. 2. Any procedural means for seeking redress from a tribunal or agency. 3. An act or step that is part of a larger action. 4. The business conducted by a court or other official body; a hearing. 5. Bankruptcy. A particular dispute or matter arising within a pending case — as opposed to the case as a whole. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2156.]

“‘Proceeding’ is a word much used to express the business done in courts. A proceeding in court is an act done by the authority or direction of the court, express or implied. It is more comprehensive than the word ‘action,’ but it may include in its general sense all the steps taken or measures adopted in the prosecution or defense of an action, including the pleadings and judgment. As applied to actions, the term ‘proceeding’ may include—(1) the institution of the action; (2) the appearance of the defendant; (3) all ancillary or provisional steps, such as arrest, attachment of property, garnishment, injunction, writ of ne exeat; (4) the pleadings; (5) the taking of testimony before trial; (6) all motions made in the action; (7) the trial; (8) the judgment; (9) the execution; (10) proceedings supplementary to execution, in code practice; (11) the taking of the appeal or writ of error; (12) the remittitur, or sending back of the record to the lower court from the appellate or reviewing court; (13) the enforcement of the judgment, or a new trial, as may be directed by the court of last resort.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 3-4 (2d ed. 1899).

adjudicatory proceeding. See adjudication hearing under HEARING.

administrative proceeding. See ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

collateral proceeding. (18c) A proceeding brought to address an issue incidental to the principal proceeding.

competency proceeding. (1925) A proceeding to assess a person’s mental capacity. • A competency hearing may be held either in a criminal context to determine a defendant’s competency to stand trial or as a civil proceeding to assess whether a person should be committed to a mental-health facility or should have a guardian appointed to manage the person’s affairs.

contempt proceeding. (1859) A judicial or quasi-judicial hearing conducted to determine whether a person has committed contempt. [Cases: Contempt ⇨ 40.]

core proceeding. See CORE PROCEEDING.

criminal proceeding. (16c) A proceeding instituted to determine a person’s guilt or innocence or to set a convicted person’s punishment; a criminal hearing or trial.

ex parte proceeding (eks pahr-tee). (18c) A proceeding in which not all parties are present or given the opportunity to be heard. — Also termed ex parte hearing.

in camera proceeding (in kam-ə-rə). (1958) A proceeding held in a judge’s chambers or other private place.

[Cases: Pretrial Procedure ⇨ 411; Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 31.]

informal proceeding. (18c) A trial conducted in a more relaxed manner than a typical court trial, such as an administrative hearing or a trial in small-claims court. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨ 469; Courts ⇨ 176.]

involuntary proceeding. See involuntary bankruptcy under BANKRUPTCY.

judicial proceeding. (16c) Any court proceeding; any proceeding initiated to procure an order or decree, whether in law or in equity.

noncore proceeding. See RELATED PROCEEDING.

posttrial proceeding. Action on a case that occurs after the trial is completed.

proceeding in rem. A proceeding brought to affect all persons’ interests in a thing that is subject to the power of a state. [Cases: Action ⇨ 16.]

proceeding quasi in rem. A proceeding brought to affect particular persons’ interests in a thing. [Cases: Action ⇨ 16.]

quasi-criminal proceeding. Procedure. A civil proceeding that is conducted in conformity with the rules of a criminal proceeding because a penalty analogous to a criminal penalty may apply, as in some juvenile proceedings. • For example, juvenile delinquency is classified as a civil offense. But like a defendant in a criminal trial, an accused juvenile faces a potential loss of liberty. So criminal procedure rules apply. [Cases: Action ⇨ 18; Infants ⇨ 194.1, 195.]

related proceeding. See RELATED PROCEEDING.

special proceeding. (18c) 1. A proceeding that can be commenced independently of a pending action and from which a final order may be appealed immediately. 2. A proceeding involving statutory or civil remedies or rules rather than the rules or remedies ordinarily available under rules of procedure; a proceeding providing extraordinary relief. [Cases: Action ⇨ 20.]

summary proceeding. (17c) A nonjury proceeding that settles a controversy or disposes of a case in a relatively prompt and simple manner. — Also termed summary trial. Cf. plenary action under ACTION (4).

“Summary proceedings were such as were directed by Act of Parliament, there was no jury, and the person accused was acquitted or sentenced only by such person as statute had appointed for his judge. The common law was wholly a stranger to summary proceedings.” A.H. Manchester, Modern Legal History of England and Wales, 1750-1950 160 (1980).

supplementary proceeding. (17c) 1. A proceeding held in connection with the enforcement of a judgment, for the purpose of identifying and locating the debtor’s assets available to satisfy the judgment. 2. A proceeding that in some way supplements another. [Cases: Execution ⇨ 358; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2707.]

proceeds (proh-seedz), n. (13c) 1. The value of land, goods, or investments when converted into money; the amount of money received from a sale <the proceeds are subject to attachment>. 2. Something received upon selling, exchanging, collecting, or otherwise disposing of collateral. UCC § 9-102(a)(67). • Proceeds differ from other types of collateral because they constitute any collateral that has changed in form. For example, if a farmer borrows money and gives the creditor a security interest in the harvest, the harvested wheat is collateral. If the farmer then exchanges the harvest for a tractor, the tractor becomes the proceeds of the wheat. [Cases: Secured Transactions ⇨164.]

net proceeds. (18c) The amount received in a transaction minus the costs of the transaction (such as expenses and commissions). — Also termed net balance.

proceeds and avails. The cash-surrender value of a life-insurance policy, together with values built up since the policy's issue date and the benefits payable on maturity and at the death of the insured. [Cases: Exemptions ⇨50(1); Insurance ⇨3487.]

process, n. (14c) 1. The proceedings in any action or prosecution <due process of law>. 2. A summons or writ, esp. to appear or respond in court <service of process>. — Also termed judicial process; legal process. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨401; Process ⇨1, 3.]

"Process is so denominated because it proceeds or issues forth in order to bring the defendant into court, to answer the charge preferred against him, and signifies the writs or judicial means by which he is brought to answer." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 338 (2d ed. 1826).

"The term 'process' is not limited to 'summons.' In its broadest sense it is equivalent to, or synonymous with, 'procedure,' or 'proceeding.' Sometimes the term is also broadly defined as the means whereby a court compels a compliance with its demands.

"'Process' and 'writ' or 'writs' are synonymous, in the sense that every writ is a process, and in a narrow sense of the term 'process' is limited to judicial writs in an action, or at least to writs or writings issued from or out of a court, under the seal thereof and returnable thereto; but it is not always necessary to construe the term so strictly as to limit it to a writ issued by a court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction." 72 CJS Process § 2, at 589 (1987).

alias process. A process issued after an earlier process has failed for some reason. • Among the types of alias process are alias execution, alias subpoena, alias summons, and alias writ. [Cases: Process ⇨45.]

bailable process. A process instructing an officer to take bail after arresting a defendant. • The defendant's discharge is required by law after the tender of suitable security.

civil process. A process that issues in a civil lawsuit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨401; Process ⇨1.]

compulsory process. A process, with a warrant to arrest or attach included, that compels a person to appear in court as a witness. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨2.]

criminal process. A process (such as an arrest warrant) that issues to compel a person to answer for a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨216.]

defective process. Void or voidable process. See void process; voidable process.

final process. A process issued at the conclusion of a judicial proceeding; esp., a writ of execution. [Cases: Execution ⇨1.]

irregular process. A process not issued in accordance with prescribed practice. • Whether the process is void or merely voidable depends on the type of irregularity. Cf. regular process.

legal process. Process validly issued. — Also termed lawful process.

mesne process (meen). 1. A process issued between the commencement of a lawsuit and the final judgment or determination. 2. The procedure by which a contumacious defendant is compelled to plead. — Also termed writ of mesne process; writ of mesne.

original process. A process issued at the beginning of a judicial proceeding. [Cases: Process ⇨1.]

"Original process is any writ or notice by which a defendant is called upon to appear and answer the plaintiff's declaration. The commencement of the suit at common law was formerly by original writ. Judicial process was by summons, attachment, arrest and outlawry." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 3, at 17 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

regular process. A process that issues lawfully according to prescribed practice. Cf. irregular process.

summary process. 1. An immediate process, issuing and taking effect without intermediate applications or delays. 2. A legal procedure used to resolve a controversy more efficiently and expeditiously than ordinary methods. 3. The legal documents achieving such a result. 4. A procedure for repossessing real property from a tenant upon default. See summary eviction under EVICTION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨293.] 5. SHOW-CAUSE PROCEEDING.

trust process. In some states (particularly in New England), garnishment or foreign attachment. [Cases: Garnishment ⇨1.]

voidable process. A defective process with a curable defect. [Cases: Process ⇨151-167.]

void process. Legal process that, in some material way, does not comply with the required form.

3. Patents. A method, operation, or series of actions intended to achieve some new and useful end or result by changing a material's chemical or physical characteristics. • Process is a statutory category of patentable invention. Cf. MACHINE; MANUFACTURE. [Cases: Patents ⇨7.]

"A process is a way of doing something. If it is a patentable process, it must be a new, useful, and nonobvious way of doing something. If the process is patentable, the result of that process — the something getting done — need not of itself be new, useful, or nonobvious. In other words, the result of an inventive process need not be an invention itself.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 24 (2d ed. 1990).

process, abuse of. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

process agent. See AGENT (2).

process by foreign attachment. See FACTORIZING PROCESS.

process claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

processioning. The survey and inspection of land boundaries, performed esp. in the former English colonies along the southeastern seaboard, and analogous to the English perambulation.

process patent. See PATENT (3).

process server. (17c) A person authorized by law or by a court to formally deliver process to a defendant or respondent. See SERVICE (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻418; Process ↻50.]

processum continuando (prə-sēs-əm kən-tin-yoo-an-doh). [Latin “for continuing process”] Hist. A writ for the continuation of process after the death of a justice authorized to review cases by a commission of oyer and terminer.

procès-verbal (proh-say-vair-bahl). [French “official record of oral proceedings”] Civil & int’l law. A detailed, authenticated written report of a proceeding, esp. of an international conference; PROTOCOL (3). ● A procès-verbal may be cast in various forms, according to the style a country prefers.

prochein ami (proh-shen ə-mee). [Law French] See NEXT FRIEND.

proclaim, vb. To declare formally or officially.

proclamation. A formal public announcement made by the government.

proclamation by lord of manor. Hist. A proclamation (repeated three times) made by the lord of a manor requiring an heir or devisee of a deceased copyholder to pay a fine and be admitted to the estate, failing which the lord could seize the lands provisionally.

production payment. Oil & gas. A share of oil-and-gas production from property, free of the costs of production, ending when an agreed sum has been paid. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 79.1(2).]

productio sectae (prə-dək-shee-oh sek-tee). [Latin] See PRODUCTION OF SUIT.

product liability. See PRODUCTS LIABILITY.

product-liability loss. See LOSS.

product-line exception. An exception from the usual rule that a successor corporation is not liable for the acts of its predecessor, arising when the successor acquired all the predecessor's assets, held itself out as a continuation of the predecessor by producing the same product line under the same or a similar name, and benefited from the predecessor's goodwill.

product mark. See product trademark under TRADE-MARK.

product market. See MARKET.

product rule. A means of calculating the likelihood that a series of independent events will occur jointly, done by multiplying together the probability of each event. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 388.2.]

products liability, n. (1925) 1. A manufacturer's or seller's tort liability for any damages or injuries suffered by a buyer, user, or bystander as a result of a defective product. • Products liability can be based on a theory of negligence, strict liability, or breach of warranty. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 111.] 2. The legal theory by which liability is imposed on the manufacturer or seller of a defective product. 3. The field of law dealing with this theory. — Also termed product liability; (specif.) manufacturer's liability. See LIABILITY. — products-liability, adj.

"The law of products liability is that body of common and statutory law permitting money reparation for substandard conduct of others resulting in product-related injury to the injured party's person or property. Resistance to the description of products liability as a doctrine having receded, there is today a guiding tenet in the law of product-related injury that is the distillate of seventy years of decisional law. The birth of the doctrine can be dated at 1916, the publication of the immensely influential decision in MacPherson v. Buick Motor Co., [217 N.Y. 382, 111 N.E. 1050 (1916)], in which the New York Court of Appeals held that the manufacturer of any product capable of serious harm if incautiously made owed a duty of care in the design, inspection, and fabrication of the product, a duty owed not only to the immediate purchaser but to all persons who might foreseeably come into contact with the product. Following MacPherson, the doctrine as formed by decisions of the ensuing decades is that a buyer, user, consumer or bystander in proximity to an unreasonably dangerous product, and who is injured in person or in property by its dangerous propensities, may recover in damages from the manufacturer or intermediate seller." 1 M. Stuart Madden, Products Liability § 1.1, at 1–2 (2d ed. 1988).

strict products liability. (1964) Products liability arising when the buyer proves that the goods were unreasonably dangerous and that (1) the seller was in the business of selling goods, (2) the goods were defective when they were in the seller's hands, (3) the defect caused the plaintiff's injury, and (4) the product was expected to and did reach the consumer without substantial change in condition. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 113.]

products-liability action. A lawsuit brought against a manufacturer, seller, or lessor of a product — regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the lawsuit is brought — for personal injury, death, or property damage caused by the manufacture, construction, design, formulation, installation, preparation, or assembly of a product. — Also termed product-liability action. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 110; Sales ⇨ 425.]

products-liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

product test. See DURHAM RULE.

product trademark. See TRADEMARK.

pro emptore (proh emp-tor-ee). [Latin] Civil law. As a purchaser; by the title of a purchaser. See USUCAPIO.

pro et durante. For and during.

pro facto (proh fak-toh). [Latin] For the fact; considered or held as fact.

pro falso clamore suo (proh fal-soh [or fawl-soh] klām-or-ee s[y]oo-oh). [Latin "for his false claim"] A nominal amercement of a plaintiff for a false allegation, inserted in a judgment for the defendant.

profane, adj. (Of speech or conduct) irreverent to something held sacred.

profanity. Obscene, vulgar, or insulting language; BLASPHEMY. • Profanity is distinguished from mere vulgarity and obscenity by the additional element of irreverence toward or mistreatment of something sacred. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨45.20.]

paper profit. A profit that is anticipated but not yet realized. • Gains from stock holdings, for example, are paper profits until the stock is actually sold at a price higher than its original purchase price. — Also

short-swing profits. See SHORT-SWING PROFITS.

surplus profit. Corporations. The excess of revenue over expenditures. • Some jurisdictions prohibit the declaration of a dividend from sources other than surplus profit. [Cases: Corporations ☞ 151.] undistributed profit. See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

undivided profit. See accumulated profit.

unrealized profit. See paper profit.

2. A servitude that gives the right to pasture cattle, dig for minerals, or otherwise take away some part of the soil; PROFIT À PRENDRE. • A profit may be either appurtenant or in gross. See SERVITUDE (1). [Cases: Licenses ☞ 43.]

profit appendant (ə-pen-dənt). A profit annexed to land by operation of law; esp., a common of pasture. See common appendant under COMMON.

profit appurtenant (ə-pərt-ən-ənt). A profit, whether several or in common, attached to land, for the benefit of certain other identified land, by the act of the parties (as by grant or by prescription). See common appurtenant under COMMON.

profit in gross (in grohs). A profit exercisable by the owner independently of his or her ownership of land. See common in gross under COMMON.

"[A] right to take fish from a canal without stint (i.e., without limit) can exist as a profit in gross, but not, as already seen, as a profit appurtenant. A profit in gross is an interest in land which will pass under the owner's will or intestacy or can be sold or dealt with in any of the usual ways." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 377 (6th ed. 1993).

profit pur cause de vicinage (pər kawz də vis-ə-nij). profit-and-loss statement. See INCOME STATEMENT.

profit à prendre (a prawn-drə or ah prahn-dər). [Law French "profit to take"] (usu. pl.) (17c) A right or privilege to go on another's land and take away something of value from its soil or from the products of its soil (as by mining, logging, or hunting). — Also termed right of common. Pl. profits à prendre. Cf. EASEMENT. [Cases: Licenses ☞ 43.]

"A profit à prendre has been described as 'a right to take something off another person's land.' This is too wide; the thing taken must be something taken out of the soil, i.e., it must be either the soil, the natural produce thereof, or the wild animals existing on it; and the thing taken must at the time of taking be susceptible of ownership. A right to 'hawk, hunt, fish, and fowl' may thus exist as a profit, for this gives the right to take creatures living on the soil which, when killed, are capable of being owned. But a right to take water from a spring or a pump, or the right to water cattle at a pond, may be an easement but cannot be a profit; for the water, when taken, was not owned by anyone nor was it part of the soil." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 375-76 (6th ed. 1993).

profiteering, n. (1814) The taking advantage of unusual or exceptional circumstances to make excessive profits, as in the selling of scarce goods at inflated prices during war. [Cases: War and National Emergency ☞ 59.] — profiteer, vb.

profit insurance. See INSURANCE.

profit margin. 1. The difference between the cost of something and the price for which it is sold. 2. The ratio, expressed as a percentage, between this difference and the selling price. • For example, a widget costing a retailer $10 and selling for $15 has a profit margin of 33% ($5 difference divided by $15 selling price). — Often shortened to margin.

profit-sharing plan. An employee benefit plan that allows an employee to share in the company's profits. • ERISA governs the administration of many profit-sharing plans, which provide for discretionary employer contributions and provide a definite predetermination formula for allocating the contributions to the plan among the participants. Contributions are frequently allocated in proportion to each participant's compensation. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN; EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 491.]

qualified profit-sharing plan. A plan in which an employer's contributions are not taxed to the employee until distribution. • The employer is allowed to deduct the contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 401(a). — Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 3578.]

pro forma (proh for-mə), adj. [Latin "for form"] (16c) 1. Made or done as a formality. 2. (Of an invoice or financial statement) provided in advance to describe items, predict results, or secure approval.

prohibition. (15c) 1. A law or order that forbids a certain action. 2. An extraordinary writ issued by an appellate court to prevent a lower court from exceeding its jurisdiction or to prevent a nonjudicial officer or entity from exercising a power. — Also termed (in sense 2) writ of prohibition; inhibition; (in Scots law) inhibition. Cf. WRIT OF CONSULTATION. [Cases: Prohibition ⇨ 1.]

"Prohibition is a kind of common-law injunction to prevent an unlawful assumption of jurisdiction. . . . It is a common-law injunction against governmental usurpation, as where one is called coram non iudice (before a judge unauthorized to take cognizance of the affair), to answer in a tribunal that has no legal cognizance of the cause. It arrests the proceedings of any tribunal, board, or person exercising judicial functions in a manner or by means not within its jurisdiction or discretion." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 341, at 542 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

3. (cap.) The period from 1920 to 1933, when the manufacture, transport, and sale of alcoholic beverages in the United States was forbidden by the 18th Amendment to the Constitution. • The 18th Amendment was repealed by the 21st Amendment. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ⇨ 17.]

proletariat (proh-lə-tair-ee-ət). The working class; those without capital who sell their labor to survive.

proletarius (proh-lə-tair-ee-əs), n. [Latin] Roman law. One of the common people; a member of a lower class who owned little or no property.

prolicide (proh-lə-sid). (1826) 1. The killing of offspring; esp., the crime of killing a child shortly before or after birth. 2. One who kills a child shortly before or after birth. Cf. INFANTICIDE. — prolicidal, adj.

prolixity (proh-lik-sə-tee). (14c) The unnecessary and superfluous stating of facts and legal arguments in pleading or evidence.

prolixity rejection. See REJECTION.

pro loco et tempore (proh loh-koh et tem-pə-ree). [Latin] Hist. For the place and time.

prolocutor (proh-lok-yə-tər). 1. Eccles. law. The president or chair of a convocation. 2. Hist. The speaker of the British House of Lords. • This office now belongs to the Lord Chancellor. — Also termed (in sense 2) forspeca.

pro majori cautela (proh mə-jor-i kaw-tee-lə). [Latin] For greater caution; by way of additional security. • This phrase usu. applies to an act done or to a clause put in an instrument as a precaution.

promatertera (proh-mə-tər-tər-ə). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-great-aunt; the sister of one's great-grandmother.

promatertera magna (proh-mə-tər-tər-ə mag-nə). [Latin] Civil law. A great-great-great-aunt.

promise, n. (15c) 1. The manifestation of an intention to act or refrain from acting in a specified manner, conveyed in such a way that another is justified in understanding that a commitment has been made; a person's assurance that the person will or will not do something. • A binding promise — one that the law will enforce — is the essence of a contract. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 1.]

"By common usage, a promise is an expression leading another person justifiably to expect certain conduct on the part of the promisor. Such an expression is a promise, whether enforceable at law or not. It is indeed an essential element in every contract. Society does not guarantee the fulfillment of all expectations so induced." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 6 n.3 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"[Promise] means not only the physical manifestations of assurance by words or conduct, but also the moral duty to make good the assurance by performance. If by reason of other operative facts the promise is recognized as creating a legal duty, the promise is a contract." Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 4 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

"It is well to make clear two points at the outset . . . The first is that I do not believe that all promises are morally binding; accordingly, I use the term 'promise' without prejudging the question whether the promise creates an obligation. The second is that, where a promise does create an obligation, the reason for that may depend upon whether the promise was explicit or implied. There is thus, in my view, a fundamental distinction between explicit and implied promises, and when I use the word 'promise' without qualification, I normally mean an explicit promise." P.S. Atiyah, Promises, Morals, and Law 8 (1981).

2. The words in a promissory note expressing the maker's intention to pay a debt. • A mere written acknowledgment that a debt is due is insufficient to constitute a promise. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 30.] — promise, vb.

aleatory promise (ay-lee-ə-tor-ee). A promise conditional on the happening of a fortuitous event, or on an event that the parties believe is fortuitous. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 218.]

alternative promise. (17c) A contractual promise to do one of two or more things, any one of which qualifies as consideration.

bare promise. See gratuitous promise.

collateral promise. A promise to guarantee the debt of another, made primarily without benefit to the party making the promise. • Unlike an original promise, a collateral promise must be in writing to be enforceable. See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE. [Cases: Guaranty ⇨ 1.]

conditional promise. (16c) A promise that is conditioned on the occurrence of an event other than the lapse of time <she made a conditional promise to sell the gold on April 2 unless the price fell below $300 an ounce before that time>. • A conditional promise is not illusory as long as the condition is not entirely within the promisor's control. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 58, 218.]

corresponding promise. A mutual promise calling for the performance of an act substantially similar to the act called for by the other mutual promise, both acts being in pursuit of a common purpose.

counterpromise. See COUNTERPROMISE.

dependent promise. (1829) A promise to be performed by a party only when another obligation has first been performed by another party. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 173, 278(1).]

divisible promises. Promises that are capable of being divided into independent parts.

false promise. A promise made with no intention of carrying it out. Cf. promissory fraud under FRAUD.

fictitious promise. See implied promise.

gratuitous promise. (17c) A promise made in exchange for nothing; a promise not supported by consideration. • A gratuitous promise is not ordinarily legally enforceable. — Also termed bare promise; naked promise. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 47.]

illusory promise. (1841) A promise that appears on its face to be so insubstantial as to impose no obligation on the promisor; an expression cloaked in promissory terms but actually containing no commitment by the promisor. • An illusory promise typically, by its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor. For example, if a guarantor promises to make good on the principal debtor's obligation "as long as I think it's in my commercial interest," the promisor is not really bound. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 10(1).]

"An apparent promise which, according to its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor no matter what may happen, or no matter what course of conduct in other respects he may pursue, is in fact no promise. Such an expression is often called an illusory promise." Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 5 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

implied promise. (18c) A promise created by law to render a person liable on a contract so as to avoid fraud or unjust enrichment. — Also termed fictitious promise. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ⇨ 1.]

independent promise. See unconditional promise.

marriage promise. Family law. A betrothal; an engagement to be married. — Also termed agreement to marry; promise to marry; promise of marriage. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise ⇨1.]

mutual promises. (16c) Promises given simultaneously by two parties, each promise serving as consideration for the other. See bilateral contract under CONTRACT.

naked promise. See gratuitous promise.

new promise. A previously unenforceable promise that a promisor revives and agrees to fulfill, as when a debtor agrees to pay a creditor an amount discharged in the debtor's bankruptcy.

original promise. A promise to guarantee the debt of another, made primarily for the benefit of the party making the promise. • An original promise need not be in writing to be enforceable. See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of ⇨23.]

promise implied in fact. (1909) A promise existing by inference from the circumstances or actions of the parties. See implied promise. [Cases: Contracts ⇨27.]

promise in consideration of marriage. A promise for which the actual performance of the marriage is the consideration, as when a man agrees to transfer property to a woman if she will marry him. • A promise to marry, however, is not considered a promise in consideration of marriage. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise ⇨5.]

promise in restraint of trade. A promise whose performance would limit competition in any business or restrict the promisor in the exercise of a gainful occupation. • Such a promise is usu. unenforceable. [Cases: Contracts ⇨116.]

remedial promise. A seller's promise to repair or replace goods or to refund the price if the goods (1) do not conform to the contract or to a representation at the time of the delivery of the goods, (2) conform at the time of delivery but later fail to perform as agreed, or (3) contain a defect. UCC § 2-102(a)(31).

unconditional promise. (1802) A promise that either is unqualified or requires nothing but the lapse of time to make the promise presently enforceable. • A party who makes an unconditional promise must perform that promise even though the other party has not performed according to the bargain. — Also termed independent promise. [Cases: Contracts ⇨218.]

voidable promise. A promise that one party may, under the law, declare void by reason of that party's incapacity or mistake, or by reason of the fraud, breach, or other fault of the other party. [Cases: Contracts ⇨98.]

promisee (prom-is-ee). (18c) One to whom a promise is made.

promise not to compete. See noncompetition covenant under COVENANT (1).

promise of marriage. See marriage promise under PROMISE.

promise to marry. See marriage promise under PROMISE.

promisor (prom-is-or). (17c) One who makes a promise; esp., one who undertakes a contractual obligation.

promissor (prom-is-ər). [Latin] Civil law. 1. A promisor; specif., a party who undertakes to do a thing in response to the interrogation of the other party (the stipulator). 2. See REUS PROMITTENDI.

promissory, adj. (15c) Containing or consisting of a promise <the agreement's promissory terms>.

promissory condition. See CONDITION (2).

promissory estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

promissory fraud. See FRAUD.

promissory note. See NOTE (1).

promissory oath. See OATH.

promissory representation. See REPRESENTATION (1).

promissory restraint. An attempt by an otherwise effective conveyance or contract to discourage a later conveyance by imposing contractual liability on anyone who makes a later conveyance. [Cases: Perpetuities ⇨6(1).]

promissory warranty. See WARRANTY (3).

pro modo admissi (proh moh-doh ad-mis-i). [Latin] Hist. According to the measure of the offense.

promoter. (14c) 1. A person who encourages or incites. 2. A founder or organizer of a corporation or business venture; one who takes the entrepreneurial initiative in founding or organizing a business or enterprise. — Formerly also termed projector. [Cases: Corporations ⇨30.]

"The complete judicial acceptance of the term 'promoter' is a matter of comparatively recent date. In some of the early cases, persons engaged in the formation of a corporation are spoken of as 'projectors.' Other cases of about the same period, though recognizing the obligations flowing therefrom, do not give any name to the relation in which such persons stand to the contemplated company. The word promoter, while undoubtedly employed in common parlance before that time, does not seem to have been used in any reported decision until after it had been used, and for the purposes of the act defined, in the Joint Stock Companies Act of 1844. . . . [A] person may be said to be a promoter of a corporation if before its organization, he directly or indirectly solicits subscriptions to its stock, or assumes to act in its behalf in the purchase of property, or in the securing of its charter, or otherwise assists in its organization." Manfred W. Ehrich, The Law of Promoters § 1, at 2-3; § 13, at 15 (1916).

"A promoter is a person who takes the initiative in developing and organizing a new business venture. A promoter may act either alone or with co-promoters. The term 'promoter' is not one of opprobrium; indeed, the promoter is often an aggressive, imaginative entrepreneur who fulfills the essential economic function of taking an idea and creating a profitable business to capitalize on the idea." Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 64 (3d ed. 1991).

promoting prostitution. See PANDERING (1).

prompt, vb. To incite, esp. to immediate action.

promulgare (proh-məl-gair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To promulgate; to make (a law) publicly known after its enactment.

promulgate (prə-məl-gayt or prom-əl-gayt), vb. (16c) 1. To declare or announce publicly; to proclaim. 2. To put (a law or decree) into force or effect. 3. (Of an administrative agency) to carry out the formal process of rulemaking by publishing the proposed regulation, inviting public comments, and approving or rejecting the proposal. — promulgation (prom-əl-gay-shən or proh-məl-), n.

promulgation (prom-əl-gay-shən or proh-məl-). The official publication of a new law or regulation, by which it is put into effect.

promutuum (proh-myoo-choo-əm). [Latin “as if lent”] Civil law. A quasi-contract in which a person who received money or property in error agrees to return what was received to the person who paid it.

pronepos (proh-nep-ohs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-grandson. Pl. pronepotes.

proneptis (proh-nep-tis). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-granddaughter. Pl. proneptes.

pro non adjecto (proh non ə-jek-toh). [Latin] Hist. As not added. • For example, a nonessential deed provision might be treated pro non adjecto.

pro non scripto (proh non skrip-toh). [Latin] As not written; as though it had not been written. • The phrase usu. referred to testamentary conditions that a court would disregard because the conditions were impossible, illegal, or meaningless.

pronotary (proh-noh-tə-ree), n. First notary.

pronounce, vb. (14c) To announce formally <pronounce judgment>.

pronunciation (prə-nən-see-ay-shən). Archaic. A sentence or decree.

pronurus (proh-nə-rəs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The wife of a grandson or great-grandson. Pl. pronurus.

proof, n. (13c) 1. The establishment or refutation of an alleged fact by evidence; the persuasive effect of evidence in the mind of a fact-finder. [Cases: Evidence ⇨584.] 2. Evidence that determines the judgment of a court. 3. An attested document that constitutes legal evidence.

affirmative proof. (18c) Evidence establishing the fact in dispute by a preponderance of the evidence. [Cases: Evidence ⇨99.]

conditional proof. (1931) A fact that amounts to proof as long as there is no other fact amounting to disproof. — Also termed presumptive proof.

double proof. (1955) 1. Bankruptcy. Proof of claims by two or more creditors against the same debt. • This violates the general rule that there can be only one claim with respect to a single debt. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨2891.] 2. Evidence. Corroborating government evidence (usu. by two witnesses) required to sustain certain convictions.

full proof. 1. Civil law. Proof by two witnesses or by public instrument. 2. Evidence that satisfies the minds of the jury of the truth of the fact in dispute beyond a reasonable doubt. [Cases: Evidence ⇨584.]

literal proof. Civil law. Written evidence. Cf. testimonial proof.

negative proof. (16c) Proof that establishes a fact by showing that its opposite is not or cannot be true. Cf. positive proof. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨551; Evidence ⇨586.]

positive proof. (17c) Direct or affirmative proof. Cf. negative proof. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨551; Evidence ⇨586.]

preliminary proof. Insurance. The first proof offered of a loss occurring under a policy, usu. sent in to the underwriters with a notification of the claim. [Cases: Insurance ⇨3164.] presumptive proof. See conditional proof.

proof beyond a reasonable doubt. (1834) Proof that precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support. See REASONABLE DOUBT.

• Formerly, this standard required evidence to “establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty” and “proof to a moral certainty as distinguished from an absolute certainty.” Moral certainty is no longer a synonym for proof beyond a reasonable doubt. See Victor v. Nebraska, 511 U.S. 1, 8, 12, 114 S.Ct. 1239, 1244, 1246 (1994). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨561.]

testimonial proof. Civil law. Proof by the evidence of witnesses, rather than proof by written instrument. Cf. literal proof.

4. Scots law. A bench trial.

proof, burden of. See BURDEN OF PROOF.

proof brief. See BRIEF.

proof of acknowledgment. (18c) An authorized officer's certification — based on a third party's testimony — that the signature of a person (who usu. does not appear before the notary) is genuine and was freely made. — Also termed certificate of proof. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT (5). [Cases: Acknowledgment ⇨8–39.]

proof of claim. Bankruptcy. A creditor's written statement that is submitted to show the basis and amount of the creditor's claim. Pl. proofs of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨2891–2904.]

informal proof of claim. A proof of claim stating a creditor's demand for payment and intent to hold the debtor's bankruptcy estate liable, but that does not comply with the Bankruptcy Code's form for proofs of claim. • A late-filed proof of claim may be given effect if the creditor had timely filed an informal proof of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨2902.]

proof of debt. The establishment by a creditor of a debt in some prescribed manner (as by affidavit) as a first step in recovering the debt from an estate or property; PROOF OF CLAIM.

proof of loss. An insured's formal statement of loss required by an insurance company before it will determine whether the policy covers the loss. [Cases: Insurance ↷3164.]

proof of service. (18c) 1. A document filed (as by a sheriff) in court as evidence that process has been successfully served on a party. — Also termed return of service; return of process. See SERVICE (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷511–518; Process ↷127–150.] 2. CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE.

proof of will. See PROBATE (1).

pro omni alio onere (proh om-ni [also -nee] ay-lee-oh on-ər-ee). [Law Latin “for all other burdens”] Hist. A portion of a charter clause restricting the vassal's duties to those explicitly named in the charter.

pro opere et labore (proh op-ə-ree et lə-bor-ee). [Latin] For work and labor.

propaganda. Int'l law. 1. The systematic dissemination of doctrine, rumor, or selected information to promote or injure a particular doctrine, view, or cause. 2. The ideas or information so disseminated. • The word propaganda originated as an abbreviated form of Congregatio de propaganda fide, a committee (of cardinals) for propagating the (Christian) faith.

defamatory propaganda. Propaganda used to promote dissatisfaction among a nation's citizens and undermine government authority. • Defamatory propaganda is common in wartime but is also used in peacetime as a means of incitement.

hostile propaganda. Propaganda employed by a nation to manipulate the people of another nation to support or oppose their government. — Also termed ideological aggression. See subversive propaganda.

subversive propaganda. Propaganda calculated to incite a civil war or revolution. • When the instigator is another nation, it is termed hostile propaganda or ideological aggression.

war-mongering propaganda. Propaganda calculated to produce national support for a war and to encourage the government to declare or join in a war regardless of any legal constraints.

pro parte (proh pahr-tee). [Latin] Hist. Partly; in part.

pro parte legitimus, pro parte illegitimus (proh pahr-tee lə-jit-ə-məs, proh pahr-tee il-lə-jit-ə-məs). [Law Latin] Hist. Partly legitimate, partly illegitimate. • In Roman and civil law, an illegitimate child could be later legitimated through the marriage of the child's parents. But England did not fully recognize this legitimate status.

pro parte virili (proh pahr-tee vər-ri-li). [Latin “for the share per man”] Hist. In equal shares; for one's own proportion.

pro partibus liberandis (proh pahr-ti-bəs lib-ə-ran-dis). [Latin “to free the portions”] Hist. A writ for the partition of lands among coheirs.

propatruus (proh-pay-troo-əs or -pa-troo-əs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-grandfather's brother.

propatruus magnus (proh-pay-troo-əs [or -pa-troo-əs] mag-nəs). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A great-great-great-uncle on the father's side.

pro per., adv. & adj. See PRO PERSONA.

pro per., n. 1. See PRO SE. 2. See PROPRIA PERSONA.

proper care. See reasonable care under CARE.

proper evidence. See admissible evidence under EVIDENCE.

proper feud. See FEUD (1).

proper improbation. See IMPROBATION.

proper independent advice. See INDEPENDENT ADVICE.

proper law. Conflict of laws. The substantive law that, under the principles of conflict of laws, governs a transaction. [Cases: Action ↷17.]

proper lookout, n. (1842) The duty of a vehicle operator to exercise caution to avoid collisions with pedestrians or other vehicles. [Cases: Automobiles ↷150.]

proper means. Trade secrets. Any method of discovering trade secrets that does not violate property-protection statutes or standards of commercial ethics. • Proper means include independent invention, reverse engineering, observing the product in public, and studying published literature. RESTATEMENT OF TORTS § 757 cmt. f (1977). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷414.]

“Trade secrets are protected . . . in a manner akin to private property, but only when they are disclosed or used through improper means. Trade secrets do not enjoy the absolute monopoly afforded patented processes, for example, and trade secrets will lose their character as private property when the owner divulges them or when they are discovered through proper means. . . . Thus, it is the employment of improper means to produce the trade secret, rather than mere copy or use, which is the basis of liability” Chicago Lock Co. v. Fanberg, 676 F.2d 400, 404 (9th Cir. 1982).

proper party. See PARTY (2).

pro persona (proh pər-soh-nə), adv. & adj. [Latin] For one's own person; on one's own behalf . — Sometimes shortened to pro per. See PRO SE.

property. (14c) 1. The right to possess, use, and enjoy a determinate thing (either a tract of land or a chattel); the right of ownership <the institution of private property is protected from undue governmental interference>. — Also termed bundle of rights. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷277; Property ↷1.] 2. Any external thing over which the rights of possession, use, and enjoyment are exercised <the airport is city property>. [Cases: Property ↷1.]

"In its widest sense, property includes all a person's legal rights, of whatever description. A man's property is all that is his in law. This usage, however, is obsolete at the present day, though it is common enough in the older books. . . . In a second and narrower sense, property includes not all a person's rights, but only his proprietary as opposed to his personal rights. The former constitute his estate or property, while the latter constitute his status or personal condition. In this sense a man's land, chattels, shares, and the debts due to him are his property; but not his life or liberty or reputation. . . . In a third application, which is that adopted [here], the term includes not even all proprietary rights, but only those which are both proprietary and in rem. The law of property is the law of proprietary rights in rem, the law of proprietary rights in personam being distinguished from it as the law of obligations. According to this usage a freehold or leasehold estate in land, or a patent or copyright, is property; but a debt or the benefit of a contract is not. . . . Finally, in the narrowest use of the term, it includes nothing more than corporeal property — that is to say, the right of ownership in a material object, or that object itself." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 423-24 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

abandoned property. (1841) Property that the owner voluntarily surrenders, relinquishes, or disclaims. Cf. lost property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property ↷1.] absolute property. Property that one has full and complete title to and control over.

adventitious property. 1. Roman law. Property coming to a son or daughter from anyone other than the paterfamilias. — Also termed peculium adventitium. 2. Hist. Property coming to one from a stranger or collateral relative.

appointive property. A property interest that is subject to a power of appointment. [Cases: Powers ↷4.]

common property. (17c) 1. Real property that is held by two or more persons with no right of survivorship. Cf. joint property. [Cases: Common Lands ↷1.] 2. COMMON AREA.

community property. See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

complete property. The entirety of the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that it is legally possible for a person to have with regard to land or any other thing, apart from those that all other members of society have in the land or thing.

corporeal property. 1. The right of ownership in material things. 2. Property that can be perceived, as opposed to incorporeal property; tangible property. [Cases: Property ↷1, 2.]

distressed property. (1927) Property that must be sold because of mortgage foreclosure or because it is part of an insolvent estate. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷3067.1.]

domestic-partnership property. Property that would be marital property if the domestic partners were married to each other. See DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP; DOMESTIC-PARTNERSHIP PERIOD. [Cases: Marriage ↷54.]

dotal property. Civil law. Separate property that the wife brings to the marriage to assist the husband with the marriage expenses. Cf. extradotal property. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ↷10.]

exempt property. See EXEMPT PROPERTY.

extradotal property (ek-strə-doh-təl). Civil law. 1. That portion of a wife's property over which she has complete control. 2. All of a wife's effects that have not been settled on her as dowry; any property that a wife owns apart from her dowry. • In Louisiana, after January 1, 1980, all property acquired by the wife that is not community is neither dotal nor extradotal; it is simply her separate property, as has always been true of the husband. La. Civ. Code art. 2341. — Also termed paraphernal property. Cf. dotal property.

general property. Property belonging to a general owner. See general owner under OWNER.

income property. Property that produces income, such as rental property.

incorporeal property. (18c) 1. An in rem proprietary right that is not classified as corporeal property. • Incorporeal property is traditionally broken down into two classes: (1) jura in re aliena (encumbrances), whether over material or immaterial things, examples being leases, mortgages, and servitudes; and (2) jura in re propria (full ownership over immaterial things), examples being patents, copyrights, and trademarks. 2. A legal right in property having no physical existence. • Patent rights, for example, are incorporeal property. — Also termed incorporeal chattel; incorporeal thing.

intangible property. (1843) Property that lacks a physical existence. • Examples include stock options and business goodwill. Cf. tangible property. [Cases: Property ↷1, 2.]

intellectual property. See INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY.

joint property. Real or personal property held by two or more persons with a right of survivorship. Cf. common property. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↷1.] limited-market property. See special-purpose property.

literary property. See LITERARY PROPERTY.

lost property. (1810) Property that the owner no longer possesses because of accident, negligence, or carelessness, and that cannot be located by an ordinary, diligent search. Cf. abandoned property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property ↷10.]

marital property. (1855) Property that is acquired during marriage and that is subject to distribution or division at the time of marital dissolution. • Generally, it is property acquired after the date of the marriage and before a spouse files for separation or divorce. The phrase marital property is used in equitable-distribution states and is roughly equivalent to community property. — Also termed marital estate. See COMMUmaternal property. Property that comes from the mother of a party or other ascendants of the maternal stock.

mislaid property. (1915) Property that has been voluntarily relinquished by the owner with an intent to recover it later — but that cannot now be found. Cf. abandoned property; lost property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property ↷ 1, 10.]

"A distinction is drawn between lost property and mislaid property. An article is 'mislaid' if it is intentionally put in a certain place for a temporary purpose and then inadvertently left there when the owner goes away. A typical case is the package left on the patron's table in a bank lobby by a depositor who put the package there for a moment while he wrote a check and then departed without remembering to take it with him. There is always a 'clue' to the ownership of property which is obviously mislaid rather than lost, because of the strong probability that the owner will know where to return for his chattel when he realizes he has gone away without it." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 310-11 (3d ed. 1982).

mixed property. (18c) Property with characteristics of both real property and personal property — such as heirlooms and fixtures. [Cases: Property ↷ 4.] movable property. See MOVABLE (1).

neutral property. See NEUTRAL PROPERTY.

nonancestral property. See nonancestral estate under ESTATE (1).

nonexempt property. See NONEXEMPT PROPERTY.

paraphernal property. See extradotal property.

paternal property. Property that comes from the father of a party or other ascendants of the paternal stock.

personal property. (18c) 1. Any movable or intangible thing that is subject to ownership and not classified as real property. — Also termed personalty; personal estate; movable estate; (in plural) things personal. Cf. real property. [Cases: Property ↷ 4.] 2. Tax. Property not used in a taxpayer's trade or business or held for income production or collection. [Cases: Taxation ↷ 2176.]

private property. (17c) Property — protected from public appropriation — over which the owner has exclusive and absolute rights.

public property. (17c) State- or community-owned property not restricted to any one individual's use or possession. [Cases: States ↷ 88.]

qualified property. A temporary or special interest in a thing (such as a right to possess it), subject to being totally extinguished by the occurrence of a specified contingency over which the qualified owner has no control.

qualified-terminable-interest property. (1982) Property that passes by a QTIP trust from a deceased spouse to the surviving spouse and that (if the executor so elects) qualifies for the marital deduction provided that the surviving spouse is entitled to receive all income in payments made at least annually for life and that no one has the power to appoint the property to anyone other than the surviving spouse.

• The purpose of the marital deduction is to permit deferral of estate taxes until the death of the surviving spouse. But this property is included in the surviving spouse's estate at death, where it is subject to the federal estate tax. — Abbr. QTIP. See QTIP trust under TRUST. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 4169(4).] quasi-community property. See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

real property. (18c) Land and anything growing on, attached to, or erected on it, excluding anything that may be severed without injury to the land. • Real property can be either corporeal (soil and buildings) or incorporeal (easements). — Also termed realty; real estate. Cf. personal property (1). [Cases: Property ↷ 4.]

"Historically, the line between real and personal property stems from the types of assets administered on death respectively, in the king's and in the church's courts. The king's courts, concerned with the preservation of the feudal structure, dealt with fees simple, fees tail and life estates. Estates for years, gradually evolving out of contracts made by feudally unimportant persons, clearly became interests in land but never fully attained the historical dignity of being 'real property.' The early economic unimportance of money, goods and things other than land permitted the church courts to take over the handling of all such assets on the death of the owner. When the development of trade and of capitalism caused assets of these types to assume great, and sometimes paramount, importance we found ourselves with the two important categories of property, namely 'real' and 'personal' property, each with its set of rules evolved from a different matrix. The pressure of modern society has been strongly for assimilation and the resultant elimination of this line, but this movement is far from complete attainment of its goal." 1 Richard R. Powell, Powell on Real Property § 5.04, at 5-7 to 5-8 (Patrick J. Rohan ed., rev. ed. 1998).

scheduled property. Insurance. Property itemized on a list (usu. attached to an insurance policy) that records property values, which provide the basis for insurance payments in the event of a loss under an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 2169.] separate property. See SEPARATE PROPERTY.

special-design property. See special-purpose property.

special property. Property that the holder has only a qualified, temporary, or limited interest in, such as (from a bailee's standpoint) bailed property.

special-purpose property. Property that has a unique design or layout, incorporates special construction materials, or has other features that limit the property's utility for purposes other than the one for which it was built. • Because of the property's specialized nature, the market for the property may be quite limited. — Also termed limited-market property; special-design property. [Cases: Eminent Domain ↷ 134; Taxation ↷ 2514.]

specialty property. See SPECIALTY (3).

tangible personal property. (1843) Corporeal personal property of any kind; personal property that can be seen, weighed, measured, felt, or touched, or is in any other way perceptible to the senses, such as furniture, cooking utensils, and books.

tangible property. (1802) Property that has physical form and characteristics. Cf. intangible property. [Cases: Property ↷ 1, 2.]

terminable property. Property (such as a leasehold) whose duration is not perpetual or indefinite but is limited in time or is liable to termination upon the occurrence of some specified event.

wasting property. (1853) 1. Property that is consumed in its normal use, such as a wasting asset, a leasehold interest, or a patent right. 2. A right to or an interest in such property.

property, law of. See LAW OF PROPERTY.

property crimes. See CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY.

property-damage insurance. See property insurance under INSURANCE.

property dividend. See asset dividend under DIVIDEND.

property division. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT (1).

property insurance. See INSURANCE.

property of the debtor. Bankruptcy. Property that is owned or (in some instances) possessed by the debtor, including property that is exempted from the bankruptcy estate. 11 USCA § 541(b). — Also termed debtor's property. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2531-2559.]

property of the estate. Bankruptcy. The debtor's tangible and intangible property interests (including both legal and equitable interests) that fall under the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction because they were owned or held by the debtor when the bankruptcy petition was filed. 11 USCA § 541. — Also termed estate's property. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2491-2559.]

property razione privilegii (ray-shee-oh-nee priv-i-lee-gee-i). Hist. A common-law right, granted by a royal franchise, to take wild animals on another's land. • This principle made its way into American law. See, e.g., Hanson v. Fergus Falls Nat'l Bank, 65 N.W.2d 857, 862 (Minn. 1954). Cf. PROPERTY RATIONE SOLI.

"Property Ratione privilegii is the right which, by a peculiar franchise anciently granted by the Crown in virtue of its prerogative, one man had of killing and taking animals Ferae naturae on the land of another; and in like manner the game, when killed or taken by virtue of the privilege, became the absolute property of the owner of the franchise, just as in the other case it becomes the absolute property of the owner of the soil." Blades v. Higgs, 11 Eng. Rep. 1474, 1479 (H.L. 1865).

property razione soli (ray-shee-oh-nee soh-li). The common-law right to take wild animals found on one's own land. Cf. PROPERTY RATIONE PRIVILEGII.

"The exclusive common law right of a landowner to take game on his land, known as property razione soli . . . has been recognized throughout the history of common law, with one exception: Following the Norman Conquest the King contended that he was lord paramount of the field, possessed of the right to the universal soil and of the exclusive right to take the game, but the irate landowners, vehemently objecting, quickly and decisively recaptured their rights and re-established the common law." Alford v. Finch, 155 So.2d 790, 792 (Fla. 1963).

property settlement. 1. A judgment in a divorce case determining the distribution of the marital property between the divorcing parties. • A property settlement includes a division of the marital debts as well as assets. — Also termed property division; division of property. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷ 248.] 2. A contract that divides up the assets of divorcing spouses and is incorporated into a divorce decree. — Also termed integrated property settlement; property settlement agreement. Cf. DIVORCE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷ 277.] 3. MARITAL AGREEMENT.

property settlement agreement. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT (2).

property tax. See TAX.

property tort. See TORT.

prophylactic (proh-fə-lak-tik), adj. (16c) Formulated to prevent something . — prophylaxis (proh-fə-lak-sis), prophylactic, n.

prophylactic cost. See COST (1).

propinquity (prə-ping-kwə-tee). (15c) The state of being near; specif., kindred or parentage <degrees of propinquity>.

propior sobrina (proh-pee-ər sə-brī-nə), n. [Latin] Civil law. The daughter of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal.

propior sobrino (proh-pee-ər sə-brī-noh), n. [Latin] Civil law. The son of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal.

propone (prə-pohn), vb. To put forward for consideration or adjudication <propone a will for probate>.

proponent, n. (16c) 1. A person who puts forward a legal instrument for consideration or acceptance; esp., one who offers a will for probate. — Also termed propounder. [Cases: Wills ↷ 211, 219.] 2. A person who puts forward a proposal; one who argues in favor of something . 3. Parliamentary law. A member who speaks in favor of a pending motion. Cf. OPPONENT (3).

proportionality. Int'l law. The principle that the use of force should be in proportion to the threat or grievance provoking the use of force.

proportionality review. (1976) Criminal law. An appellate court's analysis of whether a death sentence is arbitrary, capricious, or excessive by comparing the case in which it was imposed with similar cases in which the death penalty was approved or disapproved. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 1788(6).] proportional quorum. See QUORUM.

proportional representation. 1. An electoral system that allocates legislative seats to each political group in proportion to its popular voting strength. 2. See proportional voting under VOTING. • The term refers to two related but distinguishable concepts: proportional outcome (having members of a group elected in proportion to their numbers in the electorate) and proportional involvement (more precisely termed proportional voting and denoting the electoral system also known as single transferable voting).

proportional tax. See flat tax under TAX.

proportional voting. See VOTING.

proportionate-reduction clause. See LESSER-INTEREST CLAUSE.

proposal. Something offered for consideration or acceptance.

proposed agenda. See AGENDA.

propositus (proh-poz-ə-təs). [Law Latin] Civil law. 1. A person from whom descent is to be traced. 2. The person whose rights or obligations are in issue. — Also termed persona proposita. Pl. propositi.

pro possessore (proh-pōs-ə-sor-ee). [Latin] As a possessor; by title of a possessor; by virtue of possession alone.

pro posse suo (proh-pōs-ee s[y]oo-oh). [Latin] To the extent of one's power or ability.

propound (prə-pownd), vb. (16c) 1. To offer for consideration or discussion. 2. To make a proposal. 3. To put forward (a will) as authentic.

propounder. An executor or administrator who offers a will or other testamentary document for admission to probate; PROPONENT.

prop. reg. abbr. See proposed regulation under REGULATION.

propria persona (proh-pree-ə-pər-soh-nə), adj. & adv. [Latin] In his own person; PRO SE. — Sometimes shortened to pro per. — Abbr. p.p. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨62.]

proprietary (prə-pri-ə-ter-ee), adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to a proprietor <the licensee's proprietary rights>. 2. Of, relating to, or holding as property <the software designer sought to protect its proprietary data>.

proprietary act. See PROPRIETARY FUNCTION.

proprietary article. See ARTICLE.

proprietary capacity. See CAPACITY (1).

proprietary capital. See CAPITAL.

proprietary drug. See DRUG.

proprietary duty. See DUTY (2).

proprietary function. (1902) Torts. A municipality's conduct that is performed for the profit or benefit of the municipality, rather than for the benefit of the general public. • Generally, a municipality is not immune from tort liability for proprietary acts. But the distinction between proprietary acts and governmental functions has been abrogated by statute in many states. — Also termed proprietary act. Cf. GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨725.]

proprietary government. See GOVERNMENT.

proprietary information. Information in which the owner has a protectable interest. See TRADE SECRET. [Cases: Contracts ⇨118.]

proprietary interest. See INTEREST (2).

proprietary lease. See LEASE.

proprietary license. See LICENSE.

proprietary name. See NAME.

proprietary power. See power coupled with an interest under POWER (3).

proprietary software. Software that cannot be used, redistributed, or modified without permission. • Proprietary software is usu. sold for profit, consists only of machine-readable code, and carries a limited license that restricts copying, modification, and redistribution. A user may usu. make a backup copy for personal use; but if the software is sold or given away, any backup copies must be passed on to the new user or destroyed. Cf. FREWARE; SHAREWARE; SEMI-FREE SOFTWARE.

proprietary technology. Intellectual property. A body of knowledge or know-how that is owned or controlled by a person whose authorization is required before any other party may use that know-how or knowledge for commercial purposes. See TRADE SECRET.

proprietas (prə-pri-ə-tas). [Latin] Hist. Ownership.

proprietas nuda (prə-pri-ə-tas n[y]oo-də). Naked ownership; the mere title to property, without the usufruct.

proprietas plena (prə-pri-ə-tas plee-nə). Full ownership, including both the title and the usufruct.

proprietate probanda (prə-pri-ə-tay-tee prə-ban-də). See DE PROPRIETATE PROBANDA.

proprietor, n. (16c) An owner, esp. one who runs a business. See SOLE PROPRIETORSHIP. — proprietorship, n.

propriety. Hist. Privately owned possessions; property.

propriis manibus (proh-pree-is man-ə-bəs). [Latin] Hist. By one's own hands.

proprio jure (proh-pree-oh joor-ee). [Latin] Hist. By one's own property right.

proprio nomine (proh-pree-oh nahm-ə-nee). [Latin] Hist. In one's own name.

proprio vigore (proh-pree-oh vi-gor-ee). [Latin] By its own strength.

proprium negotium (proh-pree-əm ni-goh-shee-əm). [Latin] Hist. One's own business.

pro privato commodo (proh-pri-vay-toh kom-ə-doh). [Law Latin] Hist. For private convenience. • The phrase sometimes appeared in reference to a private road as distinguished from a public highway. Cf. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

propter (prop-tər). [Latin] For; on account of.

propter affectum (prop-tər ə-fək-təm). See challenge propter affectum under CHALLENGE (2).

propter commodum curiae (prop-tər kəm-ə-dəm kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. For the advantage of the court.

propter curam et culturam (prop-tər kyoor-əm et kəl-t[y]oor-əm). [Latin] Hist. For care and cultivation.

propter defectum (prop-tər də-fək-təm). See challenge propter defectum under CHALLENGE (2).

propter defectum sanguinis (prop-tər də-fək-təm sang-gwi-nis). [Latin] On account of failure of blood.

propter delectum personae (prop-tər də-lek-təm pər-soh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of the selection of persons. • For example, a person could not delegate the principal duties of an office when that person had been specifically chosen to perform those duties.

propter delictum (prop-tər də-lik-təm). See challenge propter delictum under CHALLENGE.

propter honoris respectum (prop-tər hə-nor-is ri-spek-təm). [Latin] On account of respect of honor or rank.

propter impotentiam (prop-tər im-pə-ten-shee-əm). [Latin] On account of helplessness. • This was formerly given as a ground for gaining a property interest in a wild animal, based on the animal's inability to escape (as where, for example, a young bird could not yet fly away).

propter ingratitudinem (prop-tər in-grat-ə-t[y]oo-də-nəm). [Latin] Hist. On account of ingratitude. • In some instances, a superior could revoke a gift based on the vassal's ingratitude, and a slave-owner could revoke the manumission of a slave.

propter majorem securitatem (prop-tər mə-jor-əm si-kyoor-ə-tay-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. For greater security.

propter negligentiam haereditis jus suum non prosequentis (prop-tər neg-li-jen-shee-əm hə-ree-dis jās s[y]oo-əm non prahs-ə-kwen-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of the negligence of the heir in not following up the heir's right. • If a vassal's heir failed, for a year and a day, to enter the estate, then the heir forfeited the right to the land.

propter privilegium (prop-tər priv-ə-lee-jee-əm). [Latin] On the account of privilege. • This describes a way of acquiring a property interest in a wild animal, based on the claimant's exclusive right to hunt in a particular park or preserve.

propter quod fecerunt per alium (prop-tər kwod fi-seer-ent pər ay-lee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of what they have done by another. • The phrase usu. referred to an agent's actions.

propter rem ipsam non habitam (prop-tər rem ip-səm non hab-ə-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of not having had possession of the thing itself. • The phrase appeared in reference to damages suffered by a party who failed to receive a thing for which he had contracted.

pro quantitate haereditatis et temporis (proh kwon-ti-tay-tee hə-red-i-tay-tis et tem-pə-ris). [Law Latin] Hist. According to the extent of the succession.

pro quer. abbr. PRO QUERENTE.

pro querente (proh kwə-ren-tee). [Latin] For the plaintiff. • In old law reports, the plaintiff's advocate is designated pro querente and the opposing advocate contra. — Abbr. pro quer. Cf. PRO DEFENDENTE.

pro rata (proh ray-tə or rah-tə or ra-tə), adv. (16c) Proportionately; according to an exact rate, measure, or interest <the liability will be assessed pro rata between the defendants>. See RATABLE. — pro rata, adj.

pro rata clause. An insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the "other insurance" section of the policy — that limits the insurer's liability to payment of the portion of the loss that the face amount of the policy bears to the total insurance available on the risk. — Also termed pro rata distribution clause. Cf. ESCAPE CLAUSE; EXCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance ↻2112.]

pro rata itineris (proh ray-tə i-tin-ə-ris). [Latin] Scots law. For the proportion of the journey.

"Where a ship, chartered to convey a cargo to a certain port . . . is prevented from completing the voyage . . . the master of the ship may transship the goods, and thus conveying them to their destination, earn his full freight. But if, when the ship has been prevented from proceeding on her voyage, the freighter himself transships the cargo, the master is entitled to freight pro rata itineris, for the proportion of the voyage which he has accomplished." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 486 (4th ed. 1894).

prorate (proh-rayt or proh-rayt), vb. (1858) To divide, assess, or distribute proportionately <prorate taxes between the buyer and the seller>. — proration, n.

pro re nata (proh ree nay-tə). [Latin "in the light of what has arisen"] Hist. By reason of emergency; arising from exigent circumstances. • The phrase appeared, for example, in reference to a meeting called to address an emergency.

"So far as may be, the state leaves the rule of right to be declared and constituted by the agreement of those concerned with it. So far as possible, it contents itself with executing the rules which its subjects have made for themselves. And in so doing it acts wisely. For, in the first place, the administration of justice is enabled in this manner to escape in a degree not otherwise attainable the disadvantages inherent in the recognition of rigid principles of law. Such principles we must have; but if they are established pro re nata by the parties themselves, they will possess a measure of adaptability to individual cases which is unattainable by the more general legislation of the state itself." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 352 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

prorogated jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

prorogatio de loco in locum (proh-roh-gay-shee-oh dee loh-koh in loh-kəm). [Law Latin] Hist. Prorogation (of jurisdiction) from one place to another.

prorogatio de tempore in tempus (proh-roh-gay-shee-oh dee tem-pə-ree in tem-pəs). [Law Latin] Hist. Prorogation (esp. of jurisdiction) from one time to another.

prorogation (proh-rə-gay-shən). (14c) 1. The act of putting off to another day; esp., the discontinuance of a legislative session until its next term. [Cases: States ↷32.] 2. Civil law. The extension of a court's or judge's jurisdiction by consent of the parties to a case that it would otherwise be incompetent to hear. — prorogative, adj.

tacit prorogation. Civil law. Consent to jurisdiction that arises when a party does not request recusal despite awareness that the judge is not qualified to try the case. Cf. prorogated jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

prorogue (proh-rohg or prə-), vb. (15c) 1. To postpone or defer. 2. To discontinue a session of (a legislative assembly, esp. the British Parliament) without dissolution. 3. To suspend or discontinue a legislative session. [Cases: States ↷32.] proscribe, vb. (15c) 1. To outlaw or prohibit; to forbid. 2. Roman & civil law. To post or publish the name of (a person) as condemned to death and forfeiture of property.

proscription, n. (14c) 1. The act of prohibiting; the state of being prohibited. 2. A prohibition or restriction. Cf. PRESCRIPTION (1). — proscriptive, adj.

pro se (proh say or see), adv. & adj. [Latin] (1817) For oneself; on one's own behalf; without a lawyer <the defendant proceeded pro se> . — Also termed pro persona; in propria persona; propria persona; pro per. See PROPRIA PERSONA. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷62; Criminal Law ↷1750.]

pro se, n. (1857) One who represents oneself in a court proceeding without the assistance of a lawyer <the third case on the court's docket involving a pro se>. — Also termed pro per; self-represented litigant; (rarely) pro se-er. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷62; Criminal Law ↷1750] prosecutable, adj. (Of a crime or person) subject to prosecution; capable of being prosecuted.

prosecute, vb. (15c) 1. To commence and carry out a legal action <because the plaintiff failed to prosecute its contractual claims, the court dismissed the suit>. 2. To institute and pursue a criminal action against (a person) <the notorious felon has been prosecuted in seven states>. 3. To engage in; carry on <the company prosecuted its business for 12 years before going bankrupt>. — prosecutory, adj.

prosecuting attorney. See DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

prosecuting witness. See WITNESS.

prosecution. (16c) 1. The commencement and carrying out of any action or scheme <the prosecution of a long, bloody war>. 2. A criminal proceeding in which an accused person is tried <the conspiracy trial involved the prosecution of seven defendants>. — Also termed criminal prosecution.

deferred prosecution. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

private prosecution. Hist. A criminal prosecution initiated by a privately employed attorney or by a layperson or private organization, rather than a district attorney or other government-employed prosecutor. ● Until the 19th century, victims often had the burden of directly prosecuting criminals who had harmed them. With the rise of public-prosecution services, the need for private prosecutions declined. Though uncommon, they are still sometimes permitted in England. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷1704.]

sham prosecution. (1903) A prosecution that seeks to circumvent a defendant's double-jeopardy protection by appearing to be prosecuted by another sovereignty, when it is in fact controlled by the sovereignty that already prosecuted the defendant for the same crime.

● A sham prosecution is, in essence, a misuse of the dual-sovereignty doctrine. Under that doctrine, a defendant's protection against double jeopardy does not provide protection against a prosecution by a different sovereignty. For example, if the defendant was first tried in federal court and acquitted, that fact would not forbid the state authorities from prosecuting the defendant in state court. But a sham prosecution — for example, a later state-court prosecution that is completely dominated or manipulated by the federal authorities that already prosecuted the defendant, so that the state-court proceeding is merely a tool of the federal authorities — will not withstand a double-jeopardy challenge. See DUAL-SOVEREIGNTY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ↷53.]

vindictive prosecution. (1834) A prosecution in which a person is singled out under a law or regulation because the person has exercised a constitutionally protected right. Cf. SELECTIVE ENFORCEMENT. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷37.15.]

3. The government attorneys who initiate and maintain a criminal action against an accused defendant <the prosecution rests>. 4. Patents. The process of applying for a patent through the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and negotiating with the patent examiner. — Also termed patent-prosecution process. [Cases: Patents ↷104.]

prosecution-laches doctrine. See CONTINUATION-APPLICATION LACHES DOCTRINE.

prosecutor, n. (16c) 1. A legal officer who represents the state or federal government in criminal proceedings. See DISTRICT ATTORNEY; UNITED STATES ATTORNEY; ATTORNEY GENERAL. — Also termed public prosecutor; state's attorney; public commissioner.

public prosecutor. 1. See PROSECUTOR (1). 2. See DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

special prosecutor. (1859) A lawyer appointed to investigate and, if justified, seek indictments in a particular case. See independent counsel under COUNSEL.

2. A private person who institutes and carries on a legal action, esp. a criminal action. — Also termed (in sense 2) private prosecutor. — prosecutorial, adj.

prosecutorial discretion. See DISCRETION (4).

prosecutorial immunity. See IMMUNITY.

prosecutorial misconduct. (1963) Criminal law. A prosecutor's improper or illegal act (or failure to act), esp. involving an attempt to avoid required disclosure or to persuade the jury to wrongly convict a defendant or assess an unjustified punishment. • If prosecutorial misconduct results in a mistrial, a later prosecution may be barred under the Double Jeopardy Clause. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻1980–1986.]

prosecutorial vindictiveness. Criminal law. The act or an instance of intentionally charging a more serious crime or seeking a more severe penalty in retaliation for a defendant's lawful exercise of a constitutional right. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻37.15; Sentencing and Punishment ↻115.]

prosecutrix (pros-ə-kyoo-triks). Archaic. A female prosecutor.

prosequi (prahs-ə-kwi), vb. [Latin] To follow up or pursue; to sue or prosecute. See NOLLE PROSEQUI.

prosequitur (prə-sek-wə-tər or proh-). [Latin] He follows or pursues; he prosecutes.

pro servitio burgali (proh sər-vish-ee-oh bər-gay-li). [Law Latin] Hist. For burghal service. See BURGAGE-TENURE (2).

prosocer (proh-sə-sər). [Latin] Civil law. A father-in-law's father; a spouse's grandfather.

prosocerus (prə-sos-ə-rəs). [Latin] Civil law. A wife's or husband's grandmother.

pro socio (proh soh-shee-oh). [Latin] As a partner. • This was the name of an action on behalf of a partner.

pro solido (proh sol-ə-doh). [Latin] For the whole; without division.

prospectant evidence. See EVIDENCE.

prospective, adj. (18c) 1. Effective or operative in the future <prospective application of the new statute>. Cf. RETROACTIVE. 2. Anticipated or expected; likely to come about <prospective clients>.

prospective damages. See DAMAGES.

prospective heir. See HEIR.

prospective law. See prospective statute under STATUTE.

prospective nuisance. See anticipatory nuisance under NUISANCE.

prospective statute. See STATUTE.

prospective waiver. See WAIVER (1).

prospect theory. See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

prospectus (prə-spek-təs). A printed document that describes the main features of an enterprise (esp. a corporation's business) and that is distributed to prospective buyers or investors; esp., a written description of a securities offering. • Under SEC regulations, a publicly traded corporation must provide a prospectus before offering to sell stock in the corporation. Pl. prospectuses. See REGISTRATION STATEMENT. Cf. TOMBSTONE. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻25.50–25.75.]

newspaper prospectus. A summary prospectus that the SEC allows to be disseminated through advertisements in newspapers, magazines, or other periodicals sent through the mails as second-class matter (though not distributed by the advertiser), when the securities involved are issued by a foreign national government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations.

preliminary prospectus. A prospectus for a stock issue that has been filed but not yet approved by the SEC.

• The SEC requires such a prospectus to contain a notice — printed in distinctive red lettering — that the document is not complete or final. That notice, which is usu. stamped or printed in red ink, typically reads as follows: "The information here given is subject to completion or amendment. A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. These securities cannot be sold — and offers to buy cannot be accepted — until the registration statement becomes effective. This prospectus does not constitute an offer to buy. And these securities cannot be sold in any state where the offer, solicitation, or sale would be unlawful before registration or qualification under the securities laws of that state." — Also termed red-herring prospectus; red herring. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻25.51.]

prostitute, n. (16c) A person who engages in sexual acts in exchange for money or anything else of value.

child prostitute. A child who is offered or used for sex acts in exchange for money. • Some people object to this phrase because the term "prostitute" suggests a degree of voluntariness or choice on the child's part, which is often not true. An alternative without those connotations is prostituted child. [Cases: Infants ↻13.]

prostituted child. See child prostitute under PROSTITUTE.

prostitution, n. (16c) 1. The act or practice of engaging in sexual activity for money or its equivalent; commercialized sex. [Cases: Prostitution ↻1.]

"Prostitution is not itself a crime in England or Scotland, although certain activities of prostitutes and those who profit from prostitution are prohibited, such as soliciting in a public place, procuring, letting premises for the purpose of prostitution and so forth. On the other hand, prostitution was, at least at one time, prohibited in all American jurisdictions." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 470 (3d ed. 1982).

child prostitution. The act or practice of offering or using a minor for sex acts in exchange for money. See child prostitute under PROSTITUTE.

2. The act of debasing. — prostitute, vb. — prostitute, n.

pro tanto (proh tan-toh), adv. & adj. [Latin] (17c) To that extent; for so much; as far as it goes <the debt is pro tanto discharged> .

protected activity. (1918) Conduct that is permitted or encouraged by a statute or constitutional provision, and for which the actor may not legally be retaliated against. • For example, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act prohibits an employer from retaliating against an employee who opposes a discriminatory employment practice or helps in investigating an allegedly discriminatory employment practice. An employee who is retaliated against for engaging in one of those activities has a claim against the employer. 42 USCA § 2000e-3(a). [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1244; Labor and Employment ⇨ 772.]

protected person. See PERSON (1).

protecting power. Int'l law. A country responsible for protecting another country's citizens and interests during a conflict or a suspension of diplomatic ties between the citizens' country and a third party. • After a protecting power is accepted by both belligerents, it works to ensure the proper treatment of nationals who are in a belligerent's territory, esp. prisoners of war. If the parties cannot agree on a protecting power, the International Committee of the Red Cross is often appointed to this position.

protection, n. (14c) 1. The act of protecting. 2. PROTECTIONISM. 3. COVERAGE (1). 4. A document given by a notary public to sailors and other persons who travel abroad, certifying that the bearer is a U.S. citizen. — protect, vb.

Protection and Advocacy for Individuals with Mental Illness Act. A 1986 federal statute that provides funding for the state-level establishment of independent organizations dedicated to monitoring and protecting the rights of mentally ill citizens. 42 U.S.C. §§ 10801–10851. • Formerly titled the Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act, this statute was renamed in the Children's Health Act of 2000 (114 Stat. 1101).

Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act. See PROTECTION AND ADVOCACY FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH MENTAL ILLNESS ACT.

protection covenant. Oil & gas. The implied promise in an oil-and-gas lease that the lessee will protect the property against the loss of oil and gas by drainage from the producing reservoir by drilling one or more offsetting wells. • The covenant applies only if a reasonably prudent operator would drill the additional wells. — Also termed covenant to protect against drainage. See protectionism. (1844) The protection of domestic businesses and industries against foreign competition by imposing high tariffs and restricting imports. — protectionist, adj.

protection money. (18c) 1. A bribe paid to an officer as an inducement not to interfere with the criminal activities of the briber. • Examples include payments to an officer in exchange for the officer's releasing an arrestee, removing records of traffic violations from a court's files, and refraining from making a proper arrest. [Cases: Bribery ⇨ 1(1).] 2. Money extorted from a business owner by one who promises to "protect" the business premises, with the implied threat that if the owner does not pay, the person requesting the payment will harm the owner or damage the premises.

protection order. See RESTRAINING ORDER (1).

protective appeal. See APPEAL.

protective committee. A group of security holders or preferred stockholders appointed to protect the interests of their group when the corporation is liquidated or reorganized.

protective custody. See CUSTODY (1).

protective order. (1884) 1. A court order prohibiting or restricting a party from engaging in conduct (esp. a legal procedure such as discovery) that unduly annoys or burdens the opposing party or a third-party witness. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1271.5; Pretrial Procedure ⇨ 41.] 2. RESTRAINING ORDER (1).

blanket protective order. A protective order that covers a broad subject or class. — Often shortened to blanket order. — Also termed umbrella protective order.

emergency protective order. A temporary protective order granted on an expedited basis, usu. after an ex parte hearing (without notice to the other side), most commonly to provide injunctive relief from an abuser in a domestic-violence case; esp., a short-term restraining order that is issued at the request of a law-enforcement officer in response to a domestic-violence complaint from a victim who is in immediate danger. • A victim of domestic violence can obtain an EPO only through a law-enforcement officer. There is no notice requirement, but the abuser must be served with the order. The duration of an EPO varies from three to seven days, depending on state law. — Abbr. EPO. Cf. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. [Cases: Breach of the Peace ⇨ 20.]

permanent protective order. A protective order of indefinite duration granted after a hearing with notice to both sides; esp., a court order that prohibits an abuser from contacting or approaching the protected person for a long period, usu. years. Despite the name, permanent orders often have expiration dates set by state law. An order may also require the abuser to perform certain acts such as attending counseling or providing financial support for the protected person. — Abbr. PPO. [Cases: Breach of the Peace ↻20.]

protective principle. Int'l law. The doctrine that a sovereign state has the power to assert jurisdiction over a person whose conduct outside its boundaries threatens its security or could interfere with the operation of its government functions. [Cases: International Law ↻7.] protective search. See SEARCH.

protective sweep. (1973) A police officer's quick and limited search — conducted after the officer has lawfully entered the premises — based on a reasonable belief that such a search is necessary to protect the officer or others from harm.

protective tariff. See TARIFF (2).

protective trust. See TRUST.

protector. 1. An unrelated, disinterested overseer of a trust who possesses broader authority than a trustee. ● Protectors are usu. appointed to manage offshore trusts, but the concept is slowly being applied to domestic trusts. Protectors often possess broad powers to act for the benefit of the trust, as by removing trustees and clarifying or modifying trust terms to promote the settlor's objectives. For these reasons, a protector is generally not a trustee or beneficiary of the trust. Cf. TRUSTEE. 2. A person who, having been named in an instrument creating a fee tail, has the responsibility of exercising discretion over whether the tenant in tail may bar the entail. — Also termed protector of the settlement.

"The only additional restriction imposed upon the alienation of an estate tail is that the consent of the person who is called the Protector of the settlement is necessary to its being effectually barred. Alienation by tenant in tail without this consent binds his own issue, but not remaindermen or reversioners, and creates what is called a 'base fee.' The Protector of the settlement is usually the tenant for life in possession; but the settlor of the lands may appoint in his place any number of persons not exceeding three to be together Protector during the continuance of the estates preceding the estate tail." Kenelm E. Digby, An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property 255 (5th ed. 1897).

protectorate (prə-tek-tə-rət). 1. Int'l law. The relationship between a weaker nation and a stronger one when the weaker nation has transferred the management of its more important international affairs to the stronger nation. 2. Int'l law. The weaker or dependent nation within such a relationship. 3. (usu. cap.) The period in British history — from 1653 to 1659 — during which Oliver Cromwell and Richard Cromwell governed. 4. The British government in the period from 1653 to 1659.

protégé. 1. A person protected by or under the care or training of another person or an entity, esp. one who is established or influential. 2. International law. A nation that is under the protection of another nation. 3. International law. A person who is a citizen of a protected nation or otherwise recognized by treaty as a protected person.

pro tem. abbr. PRO TEMPORE.

pro tempore (proh tem-pə-ree), adv. & adj. [Latin] (15c) For the time being; appointed to occupy a position temporarily . — Abbr. pro tem. [Cases: Judges ↻15.]

protest, n. (15c) 1. A formal statement or action expressing dissent or disapproval. ● Under some circumstances, a protest is lodged to preserve a claim or right. 2. A notary public's written statement that, upon presentment, a negotiable instrument was neither paid nor accepted. — Also termed initial protest; noting protest. Cf. NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻408.]

"Noting or initial protest is a memorandum made on [a dishonored] instrument, with the notary's initials, date, and the amount of noting charges, together with a statement of the cause of dishonor, such as 'no effects,' 'not advice,' or 'no account.' This is done to charge the memory of the notary, and should be done on the day of dishonor." Frederick M. Hinch, John's American Notary and Commission of Deeds Manual § 442, at 281 (3d ed. 1922).

protestando (proh-tə-stan-doh). [Law Latin] Protesting. ● This emphatic word was used in a protestation to allege or deny something in an oblique manner.

protestant. Patents. A person who files a protest petition with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office challenging the patentability of an invention. See PROTEST. [Cases: Patents ↻104.]

protestatio contraria facto (proh-tes-tay-shee-oh kən-trair-ee-ə fak-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. Protestation inconsistent with one's conduct while protesting.

protestation (prot-ə-stay-shən). (14c) 1. Common-law pleading. A declaration by which a party makes an oblique allegation or denial of some fact, claiming that it does or does not exist or is or is not legally sufficient, while not directly affirming or denying the fact. [Cases: Pleading ↻128.]

"The practice of protestation of facts not denied arose where the pleader, wishing to avail himself of the right to contest in a future action some traversable fact in the pending action, passes it by without traverse, but at the same time makes a declaration collateral or incidental to his main pleading, importing that the fact so passed over is untrue. The necessity for this arose from the rule that pleadings must not be double, and that every pleading is taken to admit such matters as it does not traverse. Such being its only purpose, it is wholly without effect in the action in which it occurs" Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 207, at 358 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

2. Scots law. A defendant's act in a civil case to compel a pursuer (plaintiff) who has failed to take the necessary procedural steps either to proceed or to allow the action to fall.

protest certificate. A notarial certificate declaring (1) that a holder in due course has recruited the notary public to present a previously refused or dishonored negotiable instrument, (2) that the notary has presented the instrument to the person responsible for payment or acceptance (the drawee), (3) that the instrument was presented at a given time and place, and (4) that the drawee refused or dishonored the instrument. • In former practice, the notary would issue a protest certificate, which could then be presented to the drawee and any other liable parties as notice that the holder could seek damages for the dishonored negotiable instrument. — Also termed notarial protest certificate. See NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 408.] protest fee. A fee charged by a bank or other financial institution when an item (such as a check) is presented but cannot be collected.

prothonotary (prə-thon-ə-ter-ee or proh-thə-noh-tə-ree), n. A chief clerk in certain courts of law. — Also termed protonotary. [Cases: Clerks of Courts ⇨ 1.] — prothonotarial, adj.

protocol. 1. A summary of a document or treaty. 2. A treaty amending and supplementing another treaty. [Cases: Treaties ⇨ 8.] 3. The formal record of the proceedings of a conference or congress. — Also termed procès-verbal. 4. The minutes of a meeting, usu. initiated by all participants after confirming accuracy. 5. The rules of diplomatic etiquette; the practices that nations observe in the course of their contacts with one another.

protonotary. See PROTHONOTARY.

pro tribunali (proh trib-yə-nay-lī). [Latin] Hist. Before the court.

protutor (proh-t[y]oo-tər). Civil law. A person who, though not legally appointed as a guardian, administers another's affairs.

prout de lege (proh-ət dee [or di] lee-jee). [Law Latin] According to law. • Proof prout de lege is proof by any legal means, as distinct from proof limited to writing. — Also termed prout de jure (proh-ət dee [or di] joor-ee).

"A proof prout de jure is a proof by all the legal means of probation — viz.: writ, witnesses, and oath of party; although, in practice, the phrase is usually applied to a proof of facts and circumstances by parole, in contradistinction to a proof limited to writ or oath of party." William prout patet per recordum (proh-ət pay-tet pər ri-kor-dəm). [Latin] As appears by the record.

Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 871 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

publicanus (pəb-li-kay-nəs). [Latin] Hist. Roman law. A tax collector. • A publicanus was described as “a farmer of the public revenue,” although the publicanus reaped only the money from that sown by the labor of others. — Often shortened to publican.

public appointment. See APPOINTMENT (1).

publication, n. (14c) 1. Generally, the act of declaring or announcing to the public. 2. Copyright. The offering or distribution of copies of a work to the public. • At common law, publication marked the dividing line between state and federal protection, but the Copyright Act of 1976 superseded most of common-law copyright and thereby diminished the significance of publication. Under the Act, an original work is considered published only when it is first made publicly available without restriction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷31.]

“The concept of publication was of immense importance under the 1909 Act. It became a legal word of art, denoting a process much more esoteric than is suggested by the lay definition of the term. That it thus evolved was due largely to the American dichotomy between common law and statutory copyright, wherein the act of publication constituted the dividing line between the two systems of protection [state and federal].” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 4.01, at 4-3 (Supp. 1997).

divestitive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to divest the author of any claim to state common-law copyright protection. • The Copyright Act of 1976 preempted most common-law copyright. — Sometimes (erroneously) written divestive publication.

general publication. Distribution of an author's work to the public, as opposed to a selected group, whether or not restrictions are placed on the use of the work. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976, a general publication was generally held to divest common-law rights in a work. Rather, the author was deemed to have dedicated the work to the public. Cf. limited publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷31.]

investitive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to qualify for federal statutory copyright protection. • Since 1976 copyright has protected works since their creation, rather than their publication.

limited publication. Distribution of copies of an author's work to a selected group for a limited purpose and with no permission to copy the work, at a time when copies are not available to the general public. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976 made publication irrelevant, courts distinguished between limited publication and general publication to decide whether federal copyright laws applied. Under that Act, a work published before January 1, 1978 without proper copyright notice entered the public domain unless the publication was limited. — Also termed private publication. Cf. general publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷31.] private publication. See limited publication.

3. Defamation. The communication of defamatory words to someone other than the person defamed. • The communication may be in any form, verbal or non-verbal. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷23.]

“The publication of a libel might be in the form of a book, pamphlet or newspaper, but nothing of that nature is required. A letter sent to a single individual is sufficient.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 489 (3d ed. 1982).

4. Wills & estates. The formal declaration made by a testator when signing the will that it is the testator's will. • There is no requirement that the provisions of the will or the identities of the beneficiaries be revealed to the witnesses.

publication-quality drawings. Patents. Illustrations or drawings filed with a patent application and capable of being scanned. [Cases: Patents ↷100.]

publication right. Copyright. The right of an author or artist to decide when to reveal or display a creative work. • Publication is one of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries and much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. — Also termed right of disclosure. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷36.]

public attorney. See ATTORNEY (2).

public authority. See AUTHORITY (3).

public-authority justification. See JUSTIFICATION.

publica vindicta (pəb-li-kə vin-dik-tə). [Latin] Hist. The protection of the public interest.

public domain. (17c) 1. Government-owned land. 2. Hist. Government lands that are open to entry and settlement. • Today virtually all federal lands are off-limits to traditional entry and settlement. 3. Intellectual property. The universe of inventions and creative works that are not protected by intellectual-property rights and are therefore available for anyone to use without charge. • When copyright, trademark, patent, or trade-secret rights are lost or expire, the intellectual property they had protected becomes part of the public domain and can be appropriated by anyone without liability for infringement. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷40.]

"[P]ublic domain is the status of an invention, creative work, commercial symbol, or any other creation that is not protected by any form of intellectual property. Public domain is the rule: intellectual property is the exception." 1 J. Thomas McCarthy, McCarthy on Trademarks and Unfair Competition § 1.01[2], at 1-3 (3d ed. 1996).

public-duty doctrine. (1976) Torts. The rule that a governmental entity (such as a state or municipality) cannot be held liable for an individual plaintiff's injury resulting from a governmental officer's or employee's breach of a duty owed to the general public rather than to the individual plaintiff. — Also termed public-duty rule. See SPECIAL-DUTY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷723.]

public figure. (1871) A person who has achieved fame or notoriety or who has voluntarily become involved in a public controversy. • A public figure (or public official) suing for defamation must prove that the defendant acted with actual malice. New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254, 84 S.Ct. 710 (1964). — Also termed public character. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷48(1).]

all-purpose public figure. A person who achieves such pervasive fame or notoriety that he or she becomes a public figure for all purposes and in all contexts. • For example, a person who occupies a position with great persuasive power and influence may become an all-purpose public figure whether or not the person actively seeks attention. Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 345, 94 S.Ct. 2997, 3009 (1974). [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷48(1).]

limited-purpose public figure. (1979) A person who, having become involved in a particular public issue, has achieved fame or notoriety only in relation to that particular issue. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷48(1).]

public forum. (1935) Constitutional law. A public place where people traditionally gather to express ideas and exchange views. • To be constitutional, the government's regulation of a public forum must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest and must usu. be limited to time-place-or-manner restrictions. — Also termed open forum. See TIME-PLACE-OR-MANNER RESTRICTION. Cf. NONPUBLIC FORUM. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1732.]

"[T]raditional public fora are open for expressive activity regardless of the government's intent. The objective characteristics of these properties require the government to accommodate private speakers. The government is free to open additional properties for expressive use by the general public or by a particular class of speakers, thereby creating designated public fora. Where the property is not a traditional public forum, the property is either a nonpublic forum or not a forum at all." Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes, 523 U.S. 666, 678, 118 S.Ct. 1633, 1641 (1998).

designated public forum. (1985) Public property that has not traditionally been open for public assembly and debate but that the government has opened for use by the public as a place for expressive activity, such as a public-university facility or a publicly owned theater. • Unlike a traditional public forum, the government does not have to retain the open character of a designated public forum. Also, the subject matter of the expression permitted in a designated public forum may be limited to accord with the character of the forum; reasonable, content-neutral time, place, and manner restrictions are generally permissible. But any prohibition based on the content of the expression must be narrowly drawn to effectuate a compelling state interest, as with a traditional public forum. — Also termed limited public forum; nontraditional public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1744.]

traditional public forum. (1973) Public property that has by long tradition — as opposed to governmental designation — been used by the public for assembly and expression, such as a public street, public sidewalk, or public park. • To be constitutional, the government's content-neutral restrictions of the time, place, or manner of expression must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest, and leave open ample alternative channels of communication. Any government regulation of expression that is based on the content of the expression must meet the much higher test of being necessary to serve a compelling state interest. — Also termed quintessential public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1736] public-function doctrine. See PUBLIC-FUNCTION TEST.

public-function rationale. See GOVERNMENTAL-FUNCTION THEORY.

public-function test. (1966) In a suit under 42 USCA § 1983, the doctrine that a private person's actions constitute state action if the private person performs functions that are traditionally reserved to the state. — Also termed public-function doctrine; public-function theory. [Cases: Civil Rights ↻1326(4, 7).]

public fund. See FUND (1).

public grant. See PATENT (2).

public ground. See public land under LAND.

public health. See HEALTH.

Public Health Service. The combined offices and units of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services responsible for promoting the physical and mental health of American citizens.

public highway. See HIGHWAY.

public house. 1. Archaic. An inn. 2. A tavern where alcoholic beverages may be bought and consumed on the premises. • The British term pub is an abbreviation of public house. — Also termed (in sense 2) tippling house.

publici juris (pəb-li-si joor-is), adj. [Latin] Of public right; of importance to or available to the public  <words that are in general or common use and that are merely descriptive are publici juris and cannot be appropriated as a trademark>.

public improvement. See IMPROVEMENT.

public injury. See INJURY.

public institution. See INSTITUTION (3).

public instrument. See PUBLIC WRITING.

public interest. (16c) 1. The general welfare of the public that warrants recognition and protection. 2. Something in which the public as a whole has a stake; esp., an interest that justifies governmental regulation.

public-interest exception. (1957) The principle that an appellate court may consider and decide a moot case — although such decisions are generally prohibited — if (1) the case involves a question of considerable public importance, (2) the question is likely to arise in the future, and (3) the question has evaded appellate review. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↻781(1); Federal Courts ↻723.]

public-interest law. Legal practice that advances social justice or other causes for the public good, such as environmental protection. • Although public-interest law primarily encompasses private not-for-profit work, the term is sometimes used to include the work of government agencies such as public-defender offices. Cf. CAUSE LAWYERING; social justice under JUSTICE.

public-interest lawyer. See LAWYER.

public international law. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

public intoxication. See INTOXICATION.

public invitee. See INVITEE.

publicist. 1. A public-relations specialist. 2. An international-law scholar. • The term applies to scholars of both public and private international law.

public-key encryption. See KEY ENCRYPTION.

public land. See LAND.

public law. (16c) 1. The body of law dealing with the relations between private individuals and the government, and with the structure and operation of the government itself; constitutional law, criminal law, and administrative law taken together. Cf. PRIVATE LAW (1). 2. A statute affecting the general public. • Federal public laws are first published in Statutes at Large and are eventually collected by subject in the U.S. Code. — Abbr. Pub. L.; P.L. — Also termed public statute (abbr. P.S.); general statute; (esp. in BrE) public act. Cf. general law (1) under LAW; general act and public act under ACT (3). [Cases: Statutes ↷68.] 3. Constitutional law.

public-lending right. Copyright. In the U.K. and some other countries, the right of an author to a royalty for works that are lent out by a public library.

public official. See OFFICIAL (1).

public passage. A right held by the public to pass over a body of water, whether the underlying land is publicly or privately owned. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↷15.]

public-performance right. See PERFORMANCE RIGHTS.

public person. A sovereign government, or a body or person delegated authority under it.

public place. Any location that the local, state, or national government maintains for the use of the public, such as a highway, park, or public building. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷721; States ↷88; United States ↷57.]

public policy. (16c) 1. Broadly, principles and standards regarded by the legislature or by the courts as being of fundamental concern to the state and the whole of society. • Courts sometimes use the term to justify their decisions, as when declaring a contract void because it is "contrary to public policy." — Also termed policy of the law. [Cases: Contracts ↷108.]

"The policy of the law, or public policy, is a phrase of common use in estimating the validity of contracts. Its history is obscure; it is most likely that agreements which tended to restrain trade or to promote litigation were the first to elicit the principle that the courts would look to the interests of the public in giving efficacy to contracts. Wagers, while they continued to be legal, were a frequent provocative of judicial ingenuity on this point, as is sufficiently shown by the case of Gilbert v. Sykes [16 East 150 (1812)]. . . . but it does not seem probable that the doctrine of public policy began in the endeavor to elude their binding force. Whatever may have been its origin, it was applied very frequently, and not always with the happiest results, during the latter part of the eighteenth and the commencement of the nineteenth century. Modern decisions, however, while maintaining the duty of the courts to consider the public advantage, have tended more and more to limit the sphere within which this duty may be exercised." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 286 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. More narrowly, the principle that a person should not be allowed to do anything that would tend to injure the public at large.

public-policy limitation. (1961) Tax. A judicially developed principle that a person should not be allowed to deduct expenses related to an activity that is contrary to the public welfare. • This principle is reflected in the Internal Revenue Code's specific disallowance provisions (such as for kickbacks and bribes). [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3368.]

public-use bar. Patents. A statutory bar that prevents the granting of a patent for an invention that was publicly used or sold in the United States more than one year before the application date. 35 USCA § 102(b). • The doctrine can be invoked for any public use, any commercial use, any sale or offer of sale, or any private transfer made without a pledge of secrecy. Cf. PRIVATE-USE EXCEPTION. — Also termed prior-use bar. [Cases: Patents ↷75.]

public-use proceeding. Patents. An investigation into whether a patent is barred because the invention was publicly used or sold more than a year before the application was filed. • Rarely used, this procedure is instituted upon a petition by someone protesting the application. If the petition and supporting documents make out a prima facie case, the examiner will hold a hearing and issue a final decision, which is not reviewable. 37 CFR 1.292. — Abbr. PUP. Cf. PROTEST. public writing. 1. The written acts or records of a government (or its constituent units) that are not constitutionally or statutorily protected from disclosure. • Laws and judicial records, for example, are public writings. A private writing that becomes part of a public record may be a public writing in some circumstances. [Cases: Records ↷54.] 2. Rare. A document prepared by a notary public in the presence of the parties who sign it before witnesses. — Also termed (in both senses) public instrument; (in sense 2) escritura publica.

public wrong. See WRONG.

publish, vb. (14c) 1. To distribute copies (of a work) to the public. 2. To communicate (defamatory words) to someone other than the person defamed. See INTENT TO PUBLISH. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷23.] 3. To declare (a will) to be the true expression of one's testamentary intent. [Cases: Wills ↷119.] 4. To make (evidence) available to a jury during trial. See PUBLICATION.

PUC. abbr. Public Utilities Commission.

PUD. abbr. 1. PLANNED-UNIT DEVELOPMENT. 2. See municipal utility district under DISTRICT.

puzdeld. See WOOD-GELD.

pueblo (pweb-loh). [Spanish] A town or village, esp. in the southwestern United States.

puer (pyoo-ər), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A child, esp. a boy. 2. A male slave. Pl. pueri (pyoor-i).

puerility (pyoo-ə-ril-ə-tee or pyuu-ril-ə-tee). Civil law. A child's status between infancy and puberty.

pueritia (pyoo-ə-rish-ee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. Childhood, esp. up to the age of 17, the minimum age for pleading before a magistrate. Cf. AETAS INFANTIAE PROXIMA; AETAS PUBERTATI PROXIMA.

puffer. See BY-BIDDER.

puffing. (18c) 1. The expression of an exaggerated opinion — as opposed to a factual misrepresentation — with the intent to sell a good or service. • Puffing involves expressing opinions, not asserting something as a fact. Although there is some leeway in puffing goods, a seller may not misrepresent them or say that they have attributes that they do not possess. — Also termed puffery; sales puffery; dealer's talk. [Cases: Contracts ↻94(7); Sales ↻38(3), 261(5).]

"Dealer's puffing,' so long as it remains in the realm of opinion or belief, will not support a conviction of false pretenses however extravagant the statements." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 369 (3d ed. 1982).

2. Secret bidding at an auction by or on behalf of a seller; BY-BIDDING.

Pugh clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease modifying the effect of most lease-pooling clauses by severing pooled portions of the lease from unpooled portions of the lease. • Drilling or production on a pooled portion will not maintain the lease for the unpooled portions. The clause is named for Lawrence G. Pugh, an attorney from Cowley, Louisiana, who drafted the first version in 1947. In Texas it is termed a Freestone rider. See POOLING. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻78.1(7).]

PUHCA. abbr. PUBLIC UTILITY HOLDING COMPANY ACT.

puis (pwis or pwee). [French] Afterwards; since.

puis darrein continuance (pwis dar-ayn kən-tin-yoo-ənts). [Law French "since the last continuance"] See plea puis darrein continuance under PLEA (3).

puisne judge. See JUDGE.

puisne mortgage. See junior mortgage under MORTGAGE.

Pullman abstention. See ABSTENTION.

pulsare (pəl-sair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To accuse or charge; to proceed against at law.

pulsator (pəl-say-tər). Civil law. A plaintiff or actor.

pumping unit. Oil & gas. Equipment used to pump oil to the surface when the pressure difference between the formation and the borehole is not strong enough to cause oil to rise to the surface. — Also termed pumpjack; horsehead.

pumpjack. See PUMPING UNIT.

punctum temporis (pəngk-təm tem-pə-ris). [Latin] A point of time; an instant.

punies (pyoo-nee). Slang. Punitive damages. See punitive damages under DAMAGES.

punishable, adj. (15c) 1. (Of a person) subject to a punishment <there is no dispute that Jackson remains punishable for these offenses>. 2. (Of a crime or tort) giving rise to a specified punishment . — punishability, n.

punishment, n. (15c) 1. A sanction — such as a fine, penalty, confinement, or loss of property, right, or privilege — assessed against a person who has violated the law. See SENTENCE.

"Punishment in all its forms is a loss of rights or advantages consequent on a breach of law. When it loses this quality it degenerates into an arbitrary act of violence that can produce nothing but bad social effects." Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 575 (2d ed. 1961).

"In the treatment of offenders there is a clear and unmistakable line of division between the function of the judge and that of the penologist. I should modify that: the law is clear only if it is first made clear in what sense the word 'treatment' is being used. For in this context the word can be used in two senses, one wide and the other narrow. Let me take the wide meaning first. The object of a sentence is to impose punishment. For 'punishment', a word which to many connotes nothing but retribution, the softer word 'treatment' is now frequently substituted; this is the wider meaning. The substitution is made, I suppose, partly as a concession to the school which holds that crime is caused by mental sickness, but more justifiably as a reminder that there are other methods of dealing with criminal tendencies besides making the consequences of crime unpleasant." Patrick Devlin, The Judge 32-33 (1979).

capital punishment. See CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

collective punishment. See COLLECTIVE PUNISHMENT.

corporal punishment. (16c) Physical punishment; punishment that is inflicted upon the body (including imprisonment). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻1524, 1525.]

"Past forms of corporal punishment included branding, blinding, mutilation, amputation, and the use of the pillory and the stocks. It was also an element in such violent modes of execution as drowning, stoning, burning, hanging, and drawing and quartering . . . In most parts of Europe and in the United States, such savage penalties were replaced by imprisonment during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, although capital punishment itself remained. Physical chastisement became less frequent until, in the twentieth century, corporal punishment was either eliminated as a legal penalty or restricted to beating with a birch rod, cane, whip, or other scourge. In ordinary usage the term now refers to such penal flagellation." Gordon Hawkins, "Corporal Punishment," in 1 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 251, 251 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

cruel and unusual punishment. (17c) Punishment that is torturous, degrading, inhuman, grossly disproportionate to the crime in question, or otherwise shocking to the moral sense of the community. • Cruel and unusual punishment is prohibited by the Eighth Amendment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 1430–1607.] cumulative punishment. (1842) Punishment that increases in severity when a person is convicted of the same offense more than once.

deterrent punishment. (1896) 1. Criminal law. Punishment intended to deter the offender and others from committing crimes and to make an example of the offender so that like-minded people are warned of the consequences of crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 41.] 2. Torts. Punishment intended to deter a tortfeasor from repeating a behavior or failing to remove a hazard that led to an injury. • Punitive damages are usu. awarded as a deterrent punishment.

excessive punishment. (17c) Punishment that is not justified by the gravity of the offense or the defendant's criminal record. See excessive fine (1) under FINE (5). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 32.]

infamous punishment. (16c) Punishment by imprisonment, usu. in a penitentiary. See infamous crime under CRIME.

nonjudicial punishment. Military law. A procedure under which a commanding officer levies punishment against a minor offender who is subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. • In the Navy and Coast Guard, nonjudicial punishment is termed captain's mast; in the Marine Corps, it is termed office hours; and in the Army and Air Force, it is referred to as Article 15. Nonjudicial punishment is not a court-martial. [Cases: Armed Services ↻ 39; Military Justice ↻ 525.]

preventive punishment. (1893) Punishment intended to prevent a repetition of wrongdoing by disabling the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 42.]

reformatory punishment. (1919) Punishment intended to change the character of the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 45.]

retributive punishment. (1887) Punishment intended to satisfy the community's retaliatory sense of indignation that is provoked by injustice. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻ 44.]

"The fact that it is natural to hate a criminal does not prove that retributive punishment is justified." Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 60 (1957).

2. Family law. A negative disciplinary action administered to a minor child by a parent. [Cases: Parent and Child ↻ 2.5.] punitive, adj. (16c) Involving or inflicting punishment. — Also termed punitory.

punitive articles. Articles 77–134 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. • These articles list the crimes in the military-justice system. [Cases: Armed Services ↻ 35; Military Justice ↻ 550–789.] pure risk. See RISK.

pure speech. See SPEECH.

pure theory. The philosophy of Hans Kelsen, in which he contends that a legal system must be "pure" — that is, self-supporting and not dependent on extralegal values. • Kelsen's theory, set out in such works as General Theory of Law and the State (1945) and The Pure Theory of Law (1934), maintains that laws are norms handed down by the state. Laws are not defined in terms of history, ethics, sociology, or other external factors. Rather, a legal system is an interconnected system of norms, in which coercive techniques are used to secure compliance. The validity of each law, or legal norm, is traced to another legal norm. Ultimately, all laws must find their validity in the society's basic norm (grundnorm), which may be as simple as the concept that the constitution was validly enacted. See basic norm under NORM.

pure trademark. See technical trademark under TRADE-MARK.

pure villeinage. See VILLEINAGE.

purgation (pər-gay-shən). Hist. The act of cleansing or exonerating oneself of a crime or accusation by an oath or ordeal.

purview (pär-vyoo). (15c) 1. Scope; area of application. 2. The body of a statute following the preamble.

"The word 'purview' appears sometimes to be confined to so much of the body of the statute as would be left by omitting the exceptions, provisos, and savings clauses; and as the word is ambiguous, and not very useful at best, a wise course may be not to use it at all." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 336 (3d ed. 1914).

pusher. A person who sells illicit drugs. [Cases: Controlled Substances ⇨ 32.]

Pushman doctrine. Archaic. The rule that transfer of an unpublished work transfers the common-law copyright to the work along with the work itself. • The name derives from Pushman v. New York Graphic Soc'y, Inc., 39 N.E.2d (N.Y. 1942). The doctrine was rejected by § 202 of the Copyright Act of 1976, but it remains in effect for transfers completed before the provision's effective date of January 1, 1978.

"[A]n outright sale of a material object, such as a book, canvas, or master tape of a musical work, does not transfer copyright. One possible exception to this rule is the Pushman doctrine under which an author or artist who has sold an unpublished work of art or a manuscript is presumed to have transferred his common law copyright, unless the copyright has been specifically reserved." Marshall A. Leaffer, Understanding Copyright Law 211 (3d ed. 1999).

qualifying event. Any one of several specified occasions that, but for the continuation-of-coverage provisions under the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (COBRA), would result in a loss of benefits to a covered employee under a qualified benefit plan. • These occasions include employment termination, a reduction in work hours, the employee's separation or divorce, the employee's death, and the employer's bankruptcy. IRC (26 USCA) § 4980B(f)(3). [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷568.]

qualifying share. See SHARE (2).

qualitatively incidental private benefit. See PRIVATE BENEFIT.

quality. 1. The particular character or properties of a person, thing, or act, often essential for a particular result <she has leadership quality> <greed is a negative quality>. 2. The character or degree of excellence of a person or substance, esp. in comparison with others <the quality of work performed under the contract>.

quality of estate. (18c) 1. The period when the right of enjoying an estate is conferred upon the owner, whether at present or in the future. 2. The manner in which the owner's right of enjoyment of an estate is to be exercised, whether solely, jointly, in common, or in coparcenary.

quality-of-products legislation. See LEMON LAW (2).

quamdiu (kwam-dee-yoo). [Latin] Hist. As long as; so long as. • This was a word of limitation formerly used in conveyances.

quamdiu bene se gesserint (kwam-dee-yoo bee-nee see jes-ər-int). [Law Latin] As long as they shall conduct themselves properly. • This term refers to the holding of an office, specif. the Act of Settlement, 1700, ch. 2, which provided that a judge's tenure was no longer at the king's pleasure, but could continue until death or improper conduct. This protected judges against arbitrary dismissal. The singular form is quamdiu se bene gesserit "as long as he behaves himself properly." — Also written quamdiu se bene gesserint. Cf. GOOD BEHAVIOR; DURANTE BENE PLACITO.

"But at present, by the long and uniform usage of many ages, our kings have delegated their whole judicial power to the judges of their several courts . . . And, in order to maintain both the dignity and independence of the judges in the superior courts, it is enacted by the statute 13 W. III. c.2 that their commissions shall be made (not as formerly, durante bene placito, but) quamdiu bene se gesserint, and their salaries ascertained and established; but that it may be lawful to remove them on the address of both houses of parliament." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 267 (1765).

quamdiu se bene gesserint. [Latin "as long as they behave themselves properly"] • The singular form is quamdiu se bene gesserit "as long as he behaves himself properly." The plural form appears in the Act of Settlement (1701 to protect judges against arbitrary dismissal. Cf. DUM SE BENE GESSERIT.

quamdiu sustinuit istam furiositatem (kwam-dee-yoo sas-tin-[y]oo-it is-tam fyoor-ee-ahs-ə-tay-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. How long he has labored under that insanity.

quamprimum (kwam-pri-məm). [Latin] Hist. As soon as possible.

quamvis non potuerit dare (kwam-vis non pah-tyoo-air-it [or pah-choo-] dair-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Although he had not been able to give or administer it.

quando acciderent (kwahn-doh ak-si-deer-ənt). [Latin] A judgment entered against a decedent's personal representative, to be satisfied by the estate out of assets that the representative receives after judgment.

quandocunque (kwahn-doh-kəng-kwee). [Latin] Hist. At any time.

quandocunque decederit (kwahn-doh-kəng-kwee di-see-dər-it). [Latin] Hist. Whenever he died.

quango (kwang-goh). See QUASI-AUTONOMOUS NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATION.

quanti minoris (kwon-ti mi-nor-is). [Latin "how much less"] Civil law. An action brought by a purchaser of an article to reduce the purchase price due to the article's defects. [Cases: Sales ↷188; Vendor and Purchaser ↷174, 334(1).] quantitatively incidental private benefit. See PRIVATE BENEFIT.

quantitative rule. (1919) An evidentiary rule requiring that a given type of evidence is insufficient unless accompanied by additional evidence before the case is closed. • Such a rule exists because of the known danger or weakness of certain types of evidence. — Also termed synthetic rule.

quantity discount. See volume discount under DISCOUNT.

quantum (kwon-təm). [Latin "an amount"] The required, desired, or allowed amount; portion or share . Pl. quanta (kwon-tə).

quantum damnificatus (kwon-təm dam-nə-fi-kay-təs). [Latin "how much damnified"] Hist. The issue of damages submitted by a court of equity to the jury.

quantum et quale? (kwon-təm et kway-lee or kwah-lee). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. How much and of what kind?

"It is not unusual for parties to a submission to agree that, in the event of no final decree-arbitral being pronounced, the proof taken in the course of the submission shall be received as legal probation quantum et quale (i.e., to the same extent and as of the same quality or effect) in any after-submission or process at law between the same parties regarding the same matter." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 505 (4th ed. 1894).

quantum meruit (kwon-təm mer-oo-it). [Latin "as much as he has deserved"] (17c) 1. The reasonable value of services; damages awarded in an amount considered reasonable to compensate a person who has rendered services in a quasi-contractual relationship. 2. A claim or right of action for the reasonable value of services rendered. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ⇨ 30.] 3. At common law, a count in an assumpsit action to recover payment for services rendered to another person. • Quantum meruit is still used today as an equitable remedy to provide restitution for unjust enrichment. It is often pleaded as an alternative claim in a breach-of-contract case so that the plaintiff can recover even if the contract is unenforceable. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT.

quantum nunc valent (kwon-təm nəŋk vay-lent). [Law Latin] Hist. How much they (the lands) are now worth. Cf. ANTIQUUS ET NOVUS EXTENTUS; QUANTUM VALUERUNT TEMPORE PACIS.

quantum valebant (kwon-təm və-lee-bant or -bənt). [Latin “as much as they were worth”] (18c) 1. The reasonable value of goods and materials. 2. At common law, a count in an assumpsit action to recover payment for goods sold and delivered to another. • Quantum valebant — although less common than quantum meruit — is still used today as an equitable remedy to provide restitution for another’s unjust enrichment. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ⇨ 31.]

quantum valuerunt tempore pacis (kwon-təm val-yoo-air-ənt tem-pə-ree pay-sis). [Law Latin] Hist. How much they (the lands) were worth in peacetime. Cf. ANTIQUUS ET NOVUS EXTENTUS; QUANTUM NUNC VALENT.

quarantina habenda. See DE QUARANTINA HABENDA.

quarantine. (17c) 1. The isolation of a person or animal afflicted with a communicable disease or the prevention of such a person or animal from coming into a particular area, the purpose being to prevent the spread of disease. • Federal, state, and local authorities are required to cooperate in the enforcement of quarantine laws. 42 USCA § 243(a).

“Power to make quarantine regulations is one of the most frequent powers conferred on boards of health. Such regulations constitute a proper exercise of the police power, provided they are not in conflict with federal regulations on the subject or that legislation by Congress is absent, and that they do not abridge rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment.” 39 Am. Jur. 2d Health § 59, at 529-30 (1999).

2. A place where a quarantine is in force. 3. Hist. A period of 40 days, esp. for the isolation and detention of ships containing persons or animals suspected of having or carrying a dangerous communicable disease, in order to prevent the spread of the disease.

“Quarantine . . . The name is drawn from the fact that the period was formerly commonly 40 (Ital. quaranta) days. In 1423 Venice established a lazaretto or quarantine station on an island to check the growth of disease brought in by ships. In the sixteenth century quarantine became widespread and there developed the system of bills of health, certificates that the last port was free from disease; a clean bill entitled a ship to use the port without subjection to quarantine.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1022 (1980).

4. Hist. A widow’s privilege to remain in her husband’s house for 40 days after his death while her dower is being assigned. • This right was enforced by a writ de quarantina habenda. See DE QUARANTINA HABENDA. — Also spelled quarentine; quarentene. — quarantine, vb.

quare (kwair-ee). [Latin] Why; for what reason; on what account. • This was used in various common-law writs, esp. writs in trespass.

quare clausum fregit (kwair-ee klaw-zəm free-jit). [Latin] Why he broke the close. — Abbr. qu. cl. fr.; q.c.f. See TRESPASS QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT. [Cases: Trespass ⇨ 10, 16.]

quare clausum querentis fregit. See trespass quare clausum fregit under TRESPASS.

quare ejecit infra terminum (kwair-ee i-jee-sit in-frə tər-mə-nəm), n. [Law Latin “why he ejected within the term”] Hist. A writ for a lessee who was prematurely ejected, when the ejector was not actually in possession but one claiming under the ejector was.

“For this injury the law has provided him with two remedies . . . the writ of ejectione firmæ; . . . and the writ of quare ejecit infra terminum; which lies not against the wrongdoer or ejector himself, but his feoffee or other person claiming under him. These are mixed actions, somewhat between real and personal; for therein are two things recovered, as well restitution of the term of years, as damages for the ouster or wrong.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1768).

quare executionem non. [Latin] Why execution should not be issued. — Abbr. QEN.

quare impedit (kwair-ee im-pə-dit). [Latin “why he hinders”] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ or action to enforce a patron’s right to present a person to fill a vacant benefice. — Also termed writ of quare impedit. See PRESENTATION (2); ADVOWSON.

“The writ of quare impedit commands the disturbers, the bishop, the pseudo-patron, and his clerk, to permit the plaintiff to present a proper person (without specifying the particular clerk) to such a vacant church, which pertains to his patronage; and which the defendants, as he alleges, do obstruct: and unless they so do, then that they appear in court to shew the reason why they hinder him.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 248 (1768).

quare incumbavit (kwair-ee in-kəm-bray-vit), n. [Law Latin “why he incumbered”] Hist. A writ or action to compel a bishop to explain why he encumbered the church when, within six months after the vacation of a benefice and after a ne admittas was received, the bishop conferred the benefice on his clerk while other clerks were contending for the right of presentation in a quare impedit action. • The writ was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act of 1833, ch. 27.

quare intrusit (kwair-ee in-troo-sit), n. [Law Latin "why he thrust in"] Hist. A writ allowing a lord to recover the value of a marriage, when the lord offered a suitable marriage to a ward but the ward rejected it and married someone else. • It was abolished by the Tenures Abolition Act, 1660, ch. 24.

quare non permittit (kwair-ee non pār-mit-it), n. [Law Latin "why he does not permit"] Hist. A writ for one who has a right to present to a church, against the proprietor.

quarentena terrae (kwahr-en-tee-nā ter-ee), n. [Law Latin "a quantity of land"] Hist. A furlong.

quarentine. See QUARANTINE.

quare obstruxit (kwair-ee əb-strəx-sit), n. [Law Latin "why he obstructed"] Hist. A writ for one who could not enjoy a privilege to pass through a neighbor's land because the neighbor had obstructed the path.

quarrel, n. 1. An altercation or angry dispute; an exchange of recriminations, taunts, threats, or accusations between two persons. — quarrel, vb. 2. Archaic. A complaint; a legal action.

"Quarrels is derived from querendo, and extends not only to actions as well real as personal, but also to the causes of actions and suits: so that by the release of all quarrels, not only actions depending in suit, but causes of action and suit also are released; and quarrels, controversies and debates, are words of one sense, and of one and the same signification, Coke, lib. 8, fol. 153." Termes de la Ley 330 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

quarta divi Pii (kwor-tə dī-vī pī-ī). [Latin "quarter of the deified Pius"] Roman law. The quarter portion of a testator's estate required to be left to an adrogated child who had been unjustly emancipated or disinherited.

quarta Falcidiana (kwor-tə fal-sid-ee-ə). [Latin "Falcidian fourth"] See FALCIDIAN PORTION.

quarta Trebellianica (kwor-tə trə-bel-ee-an-ə-kə). [Latin "the quarter due under Trebellianus's senatus consultum"] Hist. The fourth portion that an heir could retain from a succession after transferring the succession as directed by the testator under a fideicommissum. — Also termed quarta Trebelliana (trə-bel-ee-ay-nə or -an-ə). Cf. FALCIDIAN PORTION.

quarter, n. 1. In the law of war, the act of showing mercy to a defeated enemy by sparing lives and accepting a surrender <to give no quarter>. 2. See quarter section under SECTION.

quarter day. See DAY.

quartering, n. Hist. 1. The dividing of a criminal's body into quarters after execution, esp. as part of the punishment for a crime such as high treason. See HANGED, DRAWN, AND QUARTERED. 2. The furnishing of living quarters to members of the military. • In the United States, a homeowner's consent is required before soldiers may be quartered in a private home during peacetime.

During wartime, soldiers may be quartered in private homes only as prescribed by law. The Third Amendment generally protects U.S. citizens from being forced to use their homes to quarter soldiers. U.S. Const. amend. III. 3. The dividing of a shield into four parts to show four different coats of arms. — quarter, vb.

quarto die post (kwor-toh dī-ee pohst), n. [Law Latin "on the fourth day after"] The defendant's appearance day, being four days (inclusive) from the return of the writ.

quash (kwahsh), vb. (13c) 1. To annul or make void; to terminate <quash an indictment> <quash proceedings>. 2. To suppress or subdue; to crush <quash a rebellion>.

quashal (kwahsh-əl), n. The act of quashing something <quashal of the subpoena>. [Cases: Witnesses ◊ 16.]

quasi (kway-sī or kway-zī also kwah-zee). [Latin "as if"] (15c) Seemingly but not actually; in some sense or degree; resembling; nearly.

"QUASI. A Latin word frequently used in the civil law, and often prefixed to English words. It is not a very definite word. It marks the resemblance, and supposes a little difference, between two objects, and in legal phraseology the term is used to indicate that one subject resembles another, with which it is compared, in certain characteristics, but that there are also intrinsic and material differences between them. It negatives the idea of identity, but implies a strong superficial analogy, and points out that the conceptions are sufficiently similar for one to be classed as the equal of the other." 74 C.J.S. Quasi, at 2 (1951).

quasi-admission. See ADMISSION (1).

quasi-affinity. See AFFINITY.

quasi-autonomous nongovernmental organization. A semipublic administrative body (esp. in the United Kingdom) having some members appointed and financed by, but not answerable to, the government, such as a tourist authority, a university-grants commission, a price-and-wage commission, a prison or parole board, or a medical-health advisory panel. • This term is more commonly written as an acronym, quango (kwang-goh), without capital letters.

quasi-judicial, adj. (1820) Of, relating to, or involving an executive or administrative official's adjudicative acts. • Quasi-judicial acts, which are valid if there is no abuse of discretion, often determine the fundamental rights of citizens. They are subject to review by courts. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻108.]

"Quasi-judicial is a term that is . . . not easily definable. In the United States, the phrase often covers judicial decisions taken by an administrative agency — the test is the nature of the tribunal rather than what it is doing. In England quasi-judicial belongs to the administrative category and is used to cover situations where the administrator is bound by the law to observe certain forms and possibly hold a public hearing but where he is a free agent in reaching the final decision. If the rules are broken, the determination may be set aside, but it is not sufficient to show that the administration is biased in favour of a certain policy, or that the evidence points to a different conclusion." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 336 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

quasi-judicial act. (1840) 1. A judicial act performed by an official who is not a judge. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻110.] 2. An act performed by a judge who is not acting entirely in a judicial capacity. See judicial act under ACT.

quasi-judicial duty. See DUTY (1).

quasi-judicial function. See FUNCTION.

quasi-judicial power. See POWER (3).

quasi-legislative, adj. (1934) (Of an act, function, etc.) not purely legislative in nature <the administrative agency's rulemaking, being partly adjudicative, is not entirely legislative — that is, it is quasi-legislative>. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻106, 381.]

quasi traditio (kway-sī [or -zī] trə-dish-ee-oh). [Latin "as if transfer"] Roman law. A party's acquisition of a servitude by using it with the informal permission or acquiescence of the owner.

"According to the civil law again a servitude — that is, a limited right of user in respect of a thing not one's own, e.g. a usufruct or a right of way — could only be created by means of certain definite legal forms. The praetorian law, on the other hand, allowed a servitude to be created by a so-called quasi traditio servitutis; that is, it was satisfied if one party gave the other, without any form, permission to exercise the right of user in question." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 82 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

quasi-trustee. See TRUSTEE (1).

quasi-usufruct. See USUFRUCT.

quator tempora jejunii. See EMBER DAYS.

quatuor pedibus currit (kwah-too-or ped-ə-bās kār-it).

[Law Latin] It runs upon four feet; it runs upon all fours. • The term commonly described a precedent that was extremely close to a point being decided. See ON ALL FOURS.

quayage (kee-əj). A toll or fee charged for lading or unloading goods on a quay or wharf. — Also written keyage.

Quayle action. Patents. An office action telling the patent applicant that the claims are allowable on the merits but that the form of the application still needs to be amended. Ex parte Quayle, 25 USPQ (BNA) 74, 1935 C.D. 11, 453 O.G. 213 (Comm'r Pat. 1935). • The applicant generally has two months to respond. A Quayle action ends the prosecution on the merits, and amendments that affect the merits will be treated in a manner similar to amendments after final rejection. [Cases: Patents ↻109.]

qu. cl. fr. abbr. QUARE CLAUSUM FREGIT.

queen. 1. A woman who possesses, in her own right, the sovereignty and royal power in a monarchy. • Among the most famous English queens are Queen Mary I, Queen Elizabeth I, Queen Victoria, and Queen Elizabeth II. — Also termed queen regnant. 2. The wife of a reigning king. • She has some royal prerogatives (such as having her own officers), but is in many ways legally no different from the rest of the king's subjects. — Also termed queen consort. 3. A woman who rules in place of the actual sovereign (e.g., if the sovereign is a child). — Also termed queen regent. 4. DOWAGER-QUEEN.

Queen Anne's Bounty. See FIRST FRUITS.

queen dowager. See DOWAGER-QUEEN.

queen mother. A queen who has children; esp., a dowager-queen whose child is the reigning monarch. See DOWAGER-QUEEN.

Queen's Bench. Historically, the highest common-law court in England, presided over by the reigning monarch. • The jurisdiction of this court now lies with the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice; when a king begins to reign, the name automatically changes to King's Bench. — Abbr. Q.B. — Also termed Court of Queen's Bench. Cf. KING'S BENCH.

Queen's Bench Division. The English court, formerly known as the Queen's Bench or King's Bench, that presides over tort and contract actions, applications for judicial review, and some magistrate-court appeals. — Abbr. Q.B.D.

Queen's Counsel. In the United Kingdom, Canada, and territories that have retained the rank, an elite, senior-level barrister or advocate. • Originally, a Queen's Counsel was appointed to serve as counsel to the reigning monarch. — Also termed senior counsel. — Abbr. Q.C. Cf. KING'S COUNSEL.

Queen's evidence. See EVIDENCE.

Queen's prison. A prison established in 1842 in Southwark, to be used for debtors and criminals confined under authority of the superior courts at Westminster, the highest court of admiralty, and the bankruptcy laws. • It replaced the Queen's Bench Prison, Fleet Prison, and Marshalsea Prison but was closed in 1862.

Queen's proctor. A solicitor who represents the Crown in domestic-relations, probate, and admiralty cases. • For example, in a suit for divorce or nullity of marriage, the Queen's proctor might intervene to prove collusion between the parties. — Also termed (when a king reigns) King's proctor.

que est le mesme (kyoo ay lə mem). [Law French] See QUAE EST EADEM.

quem nuptiae demonstrant (kwem nāp-shee-ee di-mon-strant). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Whom the marriage indicates. • The phrase refers to the rebuttable presumption that a husband is the father of a child that his wife gives birth to. See presumed father and putative father under FATHER.

quem redditum reddit (kwem red-ə-təm red-it), n. [Law Latin "which return he made"] Hist. A writ for a grantee of a rent (not a rent service) to force the tenant to consent to the transfer.

querela (kwə-ree-lə), n. [Law Latin fr. Latin queri "to complain"] Hist. 1. A complaint founding an action; the plaintiff's count or declaration. 2. A cause of action. 3. An action.

querela coram rege a concilio discutienda et terminanda (kwə-ree-lə kor-əm ree-jee ay kən-sil-ee-oh dis-kə-shee-en-də et tər-mə-nan-də), n. [Law Latin "a dispute to be discussed and resolved by the council in front of the king"] Hist. A writ ordering someone to appear before the king to answer to a trespass.

querela inofficiosi testamenti (kwə-ree-lə in-ə-fish-ee-oh-sī tes-tə-men-ti). [Latin "complaint of an undutiful will"] Roman law. An action allowing a descendant, ascendant, or sibling who was unjustly disinherited or passed over by a parent's will to have the will set aside as undutifully made.

"By far the most important is due to the querela inofficiosi testamenti. By this procedure, though the forms had been complied with, near relatives with obvious claims (the classes of those entitled having been gradually widened) might attack the will as contrary to natural duty (inofficiosum) and get it set aside." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 199 (2d ed. 1953).

querens (kweer-enz), n. [Latin fr. queri "to complain"] Hist. A plaintiff; the complaining party.

questa (kwes-tə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A quest; an inquest or inquiry upon the oaths of an impaneled jury.

- question-and-answer. (17c) 1. The portion of a deposition or trial transcript in which evidence is developed through a series of questions asked by the lawyer and answered by the witness. — Abbr. Q-and-A. 2. The method for developing evidence during a deposition or at trial, requiring the witness to answer the examining lawyer's questions, without offering unsolicited information. [Cases: Witnesses ↻ 236, 247.] 3. The method of instruction used in many law-school classes, in which the professor asks questions of one or more students and then follows up each answer with another question. — Also termed Socratic method. See SOCRATIC METHOD; QUESTION-AND-ANSWER METHOD.
- question of consideration. See OBJECTION (2).
- question of fact. (17c) 1. An issue that has not been predetermined and authoritatively answered by the law. • An example is whether a particular criminal defendant is guilty of an offense or whether a contractor has delayed unreasonably in constructing a building. 2. An issue that does not involve what the law is on a given point. 3. A disputed issue to be resolved by the jury in a jury trial or by the judge in a bench trial. — Also termed fact question. See FACT-FINDER. 4. An issue capable of being answered by way of demonstration, as opposed to a question of unverifiable opinion.
- question of law. (17c) 1. An issue to be decided by the judge, concerning the application or interpretation of the law . 2. A question that the law itself has authoritatively answered, so that the court may not answer it as a matter of discretion <the enforceability of an arbitration clause is a question of law>. 3. An issue about what the law is on a particular point; an issue in which parties argue about, and the court must decide, what the true rule of law is <both parties appealed on the question of law>. 4. An issue that, although it may turn on a factual point, is reserved for the court and excluded from the jury; an issue that is exclusively within the province of the judge and not the jury <whether a contractual ambiguity exists is a question of law>. — Also termed legal question; law question.
- question of privilege. See QUESTION (3).
- questman. Hist. 1. An instigator of a lawsuit or prosecution. 2. A person who was chosen to inquire into abuses, esp. those relating to weights and measures. 3. A churchwarden; SIDESMAN. — Also termed questmonger.
- questus est nobis (kwes-tas est noh-bis), n. [Law Latin "hath complained to us"] Hist. By 1287, a writ against someone who continued a nuisance that existed before inheritance or purchase. • The former law provided recovery only against the party who had first caused the nuisance.
- quia (kwī-ə or kwee-ə). [Latin] Hist. Because; whereas. • This term was used to point out the consideration in a conveyance.
- quia alimenta liberis non debentur nisi in subsidium (kwī-ə or kwee-ə al-i-men-tə lib-ər-is non di-ben-tər ni-si in səb-sid-ee-əm). [Law Latin] Scots law. Because aliment (alimony) is not due to children except in aid. • A parent was not required to support a child for whom another source, such as a separate estate, provided.
- Quia Emptores (kwī-ə or kwee-ə emp-tor-eez). [Latin "since purchasers"] Hist. A statute giving fee-simple tenants (other than those holding directly of the Crown) the power to alienate their land and bind the transferee to perform the same services for the lord as the transferor had been obliged to perform. • The statute, enacted in 1290, tended to concentrate feudal lordships in the Crown by eliminating multiple layers of fealty. 18 Edw., ch. 1. — Also termed Quia Emptores Terrarum.

"Edward I and his lords wished, for political reasons, to prevent the growth of subinfeudation, and in 1290 the Statute Quia Emptores was enacted. It took its name from the beginning of its preamble — 'Since purchasers . . .'" L.B. Curzon, English Legal History 300 (2d ed. 1979).

quia erronee emanavit (kwī-ə i-roh-nə-see em-ə-nay-vit). [Law Latin] Hist. Because it issued erroneously.

quia timet (kwī-ə ti-mət or kwee-ə tim-et). [Latin "because he fears"] (17c) A legal doctrine that allows a person to seek equitable relief from future probable harm to a specific right or interest. [Cases: Equity ⇨ 17.]

"A second class of cases where equity courts act to prevent injury are known as 'quia timet' cases. The name comes from the two Latin words, once used when asking relief in this class of cases; the words mean, 'whereas he fears' that some injury will be inflicted in the future unless the court of equity assists him in advance, the plaintiff asks the assistance of the court to do this, that, or the other thing with respect to the defendant." Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 648 (2d ed. 1952).

"Quia timet is the right to be protected against anticipated future injury that cannot be prevented by the present action. The doctrine of 'quia timet' permits equitable relief based on a concern over future probable injury to certain rights or interests, where anticipated future injury cannot be prevented by a present action at law, such as where there is a danger that a defense at law might be prejudiced or lost if not tried immediately." 27A Am. Jur. 2d Equity § 93, at 581 (1996).

quia-timet injunction. See INJUNCTION.

quibus deficientibus (kwīb-əs di-fish-ee-en-ti-bəs). [Latin] Hist. Scots law. Who failing. • In a disposition, this phrase appeared in reference to one or more who succeeded to an estate and then died. Cf. QUIBUS NON EXISTENTIBUS.

quominus (kwoh-mə-nəs or kwoh-MI-nəs). [Latin quo minus “by which the less”] Hist. A 14th-century Exchequer writ alleging that the plaintiff had lent the defendant a sum of money and that the plaintiff was unable to repay a debt of similar amount to the Crown because of the debt to the defendant. • In effect, the plaintiff pleaded the fiction that he was a debtor of the king who could not repay that debt because of the defendant’s failure to repay him. — Also termed writ of quominus.

“[W]hat in the beginning had been permitted as a means of collecting the royal revenue came in the end to be nothing more or less than permitting any citizen to sue in the court of the king in order to collect a private debt. The old pretense that the matter concerned the royal revenue had to be kept up, and accordingly A had to allege that he was ‘less able’ to pay the king when his debtors would not pay him. But everyone, even the court itself, recognized this as a mere fiction, and that since the suit was in fact between A and B, B was not permitted to bring in other matters, such for example as a defense on the ground that A did not actually owe any taxes to the crown. This fiction came to be known as the ‘quo minus’ fiction, because these were the Latin words used in the litigation, which meant that A was ‘less able’ to pay the king.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 265–66 (2d ed. 1952).

quomodo constat (kwoh-mə-doh kon-stat). [Latin] Hist. As it appears (from the record, the pleadings, etc.).

quo warranto (kwoh wə-ran-toh also kwoh wahr-ən-toh). [Law Latin "by what authority"] (15c) 1. A common-law writ used to inquire into the authority by which a public office is held or a franchise is claimed. — Also termed writ of quo warranto. [Cases: Quo Warranto ↻9.] 2. An action by which the state seeks to revoke a corporation's charter. • The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are applicable to proceedings for quo warranto "to the extent that the practice in such proceedings is not set forth in statutes of the United States and has therefore conformed to the practice in civil actions." Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(2). [Cases: Quo Warranto ↻15.]

"There are two modes of proceeding judicially to ascertain and enforce the forfeiture of a charter for default or abuse of power. The one is by scire facias; and that process is proper where there is a legal existing body, capable of acting, but who have abused their power. The other mode is by information in the nature of a quo warranto; which is in form a criminal, and in its nature a civil remedy; and that proceeding applies where there is a body corporate de facto only, but who take upon themselves to act, though, from some defect in their constitution, they cannot legally exercise their powers. Both these modes of proceeding are at the instance of and on behalf of the government. The state must be a party to the prosecution, for the judgment is that the parties be ousted, and the franchises seized into the hands of the government." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *313 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

"Quo warranto means 'by what warrant?' — or authority? — and was a proceeding to inquire whether authority existed to justify or authorize certain acts of a public character or interest. Originally the proceeding of quo warranto was a criminal one instituted by the crown, the purpose of which was to find out, in the course of a formal inquiry, whether or not persons or corporations were exercising a privilege or franchise illegally, or if persons who had no right to do so were occupying some public office. If it were found that the person or corporation was in fact illegally interfering with the prerogative power of the crown, or was in fact doing some other illegal act, it was ousted from the illegal practice or office. Accordingly, it can be seen at once that the proceeding on quo warranto was not one to be used by private parties in the conduct of ordinary litigation." Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 662 (2d ed. 1952).

R. abbr. 1. REX. 2. REGINA. 3. RANGE. 4. Trademarks. When contained in a circle (and often superscripted), the symbol indicating that a trademark or servicemark is registered in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. See registered trademark under TRADEMARK; SERVICE-MARK.

rabbicular trust. See TRUST (3).

rabbinical divorce. See DIVORCE.

rabbi trust. See TRUST (3).

race act. See RACE STATUTE.

race-notice statute. (1968) A recording law providing that the person who records first, without notice of prior unrecorded claims, has priority. • About half the states have race-notice statutes. — Also termed race-notice act; notice-race statute. Cf. RACE STATUTE; NOTICE STATUTE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 231(11).]

race of diligence. Bankruptcy. A first-come, first-served disposition of assets. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 3442.]

race statute. (1944) A recording act providing that the person who records first, regardless of notice, has priority. • Only Louisiana and North Carolina have race statutes. — Also termed pure race statute; race act. Cf. NOTICE STATUTE; RACE-NOTICE STATUTE. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 231(11).]

race to the courthouse. (1961) 1. Bankruptcy. The competition among creditors to make claims on assets, usu. motivated by the advantages to be gained by those who act first in preference to other creditors. • Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, as well as various other provisions, is intended to prevent a race to the courthouse and instead to promote equality among creditors. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2022, 2391, 2601, 3501.] 2. Civil procedure. The competition between disputing parties, both of whom know that litigation is inevitable, to prepare and file a lawsuit in a favorable or convenient forum before the other side files in one that is less favorable or less convenient. • A race to the courthouse may result after one party informally accuses another of breach of contract or intellectual-property infringement. When informal negotiations break down, both want to resolve the matter quickly, usu. to avoid further business disruption. While the accuser races to sue for breach of contract or infringement, the accused seeks a declaratory judgment that no breach or infringement has occurred. See ANTICIPATORY FILING.

rachat (rah-shah), n. [French] 1. Repurchase; redemption. 2. Ransom.

racheter (rah-shə-tay), vb. [French] 1. To repurchase or buy back. 2. To ransom.

racial discrimination. See DISCRIMINATION.

racial profiling. The law-enforcement practice of using race, national origin, or ethnicity as a salient basis for suspicion of criminal activity. • Originally, the term referred to the practice of stopping a disproportionate number of male African-American drivers on the assumption that they had a heightened likelihood of being involved in criminal activity. After the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the term was frequently used in reference to searching and interrogating Middle Eastern men at airports. — Also termed ethnic profiling; profiling. Cf. LINGUISTIC PROFILING. [Cases: Arrest ↷ 63.5(4); Civil Rights ↷ 1088(4).]

rack, n. Hist. An instrument of torture on which a person was slowly stretched, formerly used to interrogate someone charged with a crime.

racket, n. (1819) 1. An organized criminal activity; esp., the extortion of money by threat or violence. 2. A dishonest or fraudulent scheme, business, or activity. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↷ 50, 107.]

racketeer, n. (1924) A person who engages in racketeering. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↷ 4, 103.] — racketeer, vb.

Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. A law designed to attack organized criminal activity and preserve marketplace integrity by investigating, controlling, and prosecuting persons who participate or conspire to participate in racketeering. 18 USCA §§ 1961–1968. • Enacted in 1970, the federal RICO statute applies only to activity involving interstate or foreign commerce. Since then, many states have adopted laws (sometimes called “little RICO” acts) based on the federal statute. The federal and most state RICO acts provide for enforcement not only by criminal prosecution but also by civil lawsuit, in which the plaintiff can sue for treble damages. — Abbr. RICO. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↷ 2, 101.]

“Before criminal or civil liability can attach under RICO, it must be shown that the two or more acts of racketeering alleged in the criminal indictment or civil complaint constitute a pattern of racketeering activity on the part of the culpable person. The statutory definition of pattern ‘requires at least two’ predicate acts occurring within ten years of each other, with one of them occurring after October 15, 1970. More broadly put, the pattern of racketeering activity is a scheme of unlawful conduct with a nexus to both the culpable person and the enterprise.” David R. McCormack, Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations § 1.04, at 1-20 (1998).

racketeering, n. (1897) 1. A system of organized crime traditionally involving the extortion of money from businesses by intimidation, violence, or other illegal methods. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↷ 4, 103.] 2. A pattern of illegal activity

(such as bribery, extortion, fraud, and murder) carried out as part of an enterprise (such as a crime syndicate) that is owned or controlled by those engaged in the illegal activity. • The modern sense (sense 2) derives from the federal RICO statute, which greatly broadened the term's original sense to include such activities as mail fraud, securities fraud, and the collection of illegal gambling debts. See 18 USCA §§ 1951–1960. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ↷3, 102.]

rack rent, n. Rent equal to or nearly equal to the full annual value of the property; excessively or unreasonably high rent. — rack-rent, vb. — rack-renter, n.

railroad company. See railroad corporation under CORPORATION.

railroad corporation. See CORPORATION.

Railroad Retirement Board. A three-member federal board that administers the program providing retirement, unemployment, and sickness benefits to retired railroad employees and their families. • The Board was established by the Railroad Retirement Act of 1934. — Abbr. RRB. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ↷161; Unemployment Compensation ↷231.]

Railway Labor Act. A 1926 federal law giving transportation employees the right to organize without management interference and establishing guidelines for the resolution of labor disputes in the transportation industry. • In 1934, the law was amended to include the airline industry and to establish the National Mediation Board. 45 USCA §§ 151–188. See NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD.

rainmaker, n. A lawyer who generates a large amount of business for a law firm, usu. through wide contacts within the business community <the law firm fell on hard times when the rainmaker left and took his clients with him>. — rainmaking, n.

raise, vb. (12c) 1. To increase in amount or value <the industry raised prices>. 2. To gather or collect <the charity raised funds>. 3. To bring up for discussion or consideration; to introduce or put forward <the party raised the issue in its pleading>. 4. To create or establish <the person's silence raised an inference of consent>. 5. To increase the stated amount of (a negotiable instrument) by fraudulent alteration <the indorser raised the check>.

raise a question of privilege. To offer a question of privilege to be considered by the meeting or ruled on by the chair. See question of privilege under QUESTION (3).

raised check. See CHECK.

raising an instrument. The act of fraudulently altering a negotiable instrument, esp. a check, to increase the amount stated as payable. See raised check under CHECK. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↷147.]

rake-off, n. (1887) A percentage or share taken, esp. from an illegal transaction; an illegal bribe, payoff, or skimming of profits. — rake off, vb.

rally, n. A sharp rise in price or trading (as of stocks) after a declining market.

RAM. See reverse annuity mortgage under MORTGAGE.

Rambo lawyer. Slang. A lawyer, esp. a litigator, who uses aggressive, unethical, or illegal tactics in representing a client and who lacks courtesy and professionalism in dealing with other lawyers. — Often shortened to Rambo.

ram raid. Slang. The smashing of a shop window or other commercial premises with a vehicle in order to break in and steal cash or goods. • The term is most common in Britain, Ireland, and Australia. — Also termed crash-and-dash. Cf. SMASH-AND-GRAB.

Ramseyer rule. A rule of the U.S. House of Representatives requiring any committee reporting a bill that amends legislation in force to show in its report what wording the bill would strike from or insert into the current law. • The rule is named for Representative C. William Ramseyer (1875–1943) of Iowa, who proposed it. The analogous rule in the U.S. Senate is the Cordon rule. See CORDON RULE.

R and D. abbr. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.

range, n. Land law. In U.S. government surveys, a strip of public land running due north to south, consisting of a row of townships, at six-mile intervals. — Abbr. R. [Cases: Public Lands ↷25.]

ranger. 1. Hist. In England, an officer or keeper of a royal forest, appointed to patrol the forest, drive out stray animals, and prevent trespassing. 2. An officer or warden who patrols and supervises the care and preservation of a public park or forest. [Cases: Woods and Forests ↷7.] 3. One of a group of soldiers who patrol a given region; esp., in the U.S. military, a soldier specially trained for surprise raids and close combat. 4. A member of a special state police force.

rank, n. 1. A social or official position or standing, as in the armed forces <the rank of captain>. [Cases: Armed Services ↷8.] 2. Parliamentary law. A motion's relative precedence. See PRECEDENCE (3).

rank and file. 1. The enlisted soldiers of an armed force, as distinguished from the officers. 2. The general membership of a union.

rank-order voting. See preferential voting under VOTING.

ransom, n. (13c) 1. Money or other consideration demanded or paid for the release of a captured person or property. See KIDNAPPING. 2. The release of a captured person or property in exchange for payment of a demanded price. [Cases: Kidnapping ↷19.]

ransom, vb. (14c) 1. To obtain the release of (a captive) by paying a demanded price. 2. To release (a captive) upon receiving such a payment. 3. To hold and demand payment for the release of (a captive).

ransom bill. Int'l law. A contract by which a vessel or other property captured at sea during wartime is ransomed in exchange for release and safe conduct to a friendly destination. — Also termed ransom bond.

ransom factor. Slang. The costliness of litigation considered as a disincentive to vindicate one's rights in court. • The term is used mostly in England.

rap, n. (1903) Slang. 1. Legal responsibility for a criminal act <he took the rap for his accomplices>. 2. A criminal charge . 3. A criminal conviction; esp., a prison sentence .

rape, n. (15c) 1. At common law, unlawful sexual intercourse committed by a man with a woman not his wife through force and against her will. • The common-law crime of rape required at least a slight penetration of the penis into the vagina. Also at common law, a husband could not be convicted of raping his wife. — Formerly termed rapture; ravishment. [Cases: Rape ↷1.] 2. Unlawful sexual activity (esp. intercourse) with a person (usu. a female) without consent and usu. by force or threat of injury. • Most modern state statutes have broadened the definition along these lines. Rape includes unlawful sexual intercourse without consent after the perpetrator has substantially impaired his victim by administering, without the victim's knowledge or consent, drugs or intoxicants for the purpose of preventing resistance. It also includes unlawful sexual intercourse with a person who is unconscious. Marital status is now usu. irrelevant, and sometimes so is the victim's gender. — Also termed (in some statutes) unlawful sexual intercourse; sexual assault; sexual battery; sexual abuse; (in Latin) crimen raptus. Cf. sexual assault under ASSAULT; sexual battery under BATTERY.

"[Another] offence, against the female part also of his majesty's subjects, but attended with greater aggravations than that of forcible marriage, is the crime of rape, raptus mulierum, or the carnal knowledge of a woman forcibly and against her will." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 210 (1769).

"If force is to be declared an element of the crime [of rape] it becomes necessary to resort to the fiction of 'constructive force' to take care of those cases in which no force is needed beyond what is involved in the very act of intercourse itself. A better analysis is to recognize that the requirement of force is simply a means of demonstrating that the unlawful violation of the woman was without her consent and against her will. Therefore, evidence of serious force need not be shown in many cases. Hence the better view is that 'force' is not truly speaking an element of the crime itself, but if great force was not needed to accomplish the act the necessary lack of consent has been disproved in other than exceptional situations. The courts today frequently state the position that a woman's resistance need not be 'more than her age, strength, the surrounding facts, and all attending circumstances' make reasonable." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 211-12 (3d ed. 1982).

acquaintance rape. (1980) Rape committed by someone known to the victim, esp. by the victim's social companion. Cf. date rape; relationship rape.

command rape. Coerced or forced sexual contact between a superior member and subordinate member of the armed forces.

date rape. (1975) Rape committed by a person who is escorting the victim on a social occasion. • Loosely, date rape also sometimes refers to what is more accurately called acquaintance rape or relationship rape. [Cases: Rape ↷4.]

marital rape. (1936) A husband's sexual intercourse with his wife by force or without her consent. • Marital rape was not a crime at common law, but under modern statutes the marital exemption no longer applies, and in most jurisdictions a husband can be prosecuted for raping his wife. — Also termed spousal rape. [Cases: Rape ↷4.] prior-relationship rape. See relationship rape.

rape by means of fraud. An instance of sexual intercourse that has been induced by fraud. • Authorities are divided on the question whether rape can occur when a woman is induced by fraudulent statements to have sexual intercourse. But the term rape by means of fraud is not uncommon in legal literature. [Cases: Justices of the Peace ↷10.]

rape under age. See statutory rape.

relationship rape. (1999) Rape committed by someone with whom the victim has had a significant association, often (though not always) of a romantic nature. • This term encompasses all types of relationships, including family, friends, dates, cohabitants, and spouses, in which the victim has had more than brief or perfunctory interaction with the other person. Thus it does not extend to those with whom the victim has had only brief encounters or a nodding acquaintance. — Also termed prior-relationship rape. Cf. date rape; acquaintance rape.

spousal rape. See marital rape.

statutory rape. (1873) Unlawful sexual intercourse with a person under the age of consent (as defined by statute), regardless of whether it is against that person's will. • Generally, only an adult may be convicted of this crime. A person under the age of consent cannot be convicted. — Also termed rape under age. See age of consent under AGE. [Cases: Rape ↷13.]

"Carnal knowledge of a child is frequently declared to be rape by statute and where this is true the offense is popularly known as 'statutory rape,' although not so designated in the statute." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 198 (3d ed. 1982).

3. Archaic. The act of seizing and carrying off a person (esp. a woman) by force; abduction. 4. The act of plundering or despoiling a place. 5. Hist. One of the six administrative districts into which Sussex, England was divided, being smaller than a shire and larger than a hundred.

rape, vb. 1. To commit rape against. 2. Archaic. To seize and carry off by force; abduct. 3. To plunder or despoil. — rapist, raper, n.

rape shield statute. See SHIELD LAW (2).

rape under age. See statutory rape under RAPE.

rapina (rə-pɪ-nə). [Latin "robbery, pillage"] Roman & civil law. The forcible taking of another's movable property with the intent to appropriate it to one's own use.

"Rapina is the taking away of a thing by violent means. It gives rise to the praetorian actio vi bonorum raptorum . . ." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 419 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

rapine (rap-in). 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another's property; pillage or plunder. 2. Archaic. Rape.

rapport à succession (ra-por ah sook-ses-syawn), n. [French "return to succession"] Civil law. The restoration to an estate of property that an heir received in advance from the decedent, so that an even distribution may be made among all the heirs. Cf. HOТCHPOT.

rappporteur (ra-por-tuur or -tør), n. [French] An official who makes a report of committee proceedings for a larger body (esp. a legislature).

rapprochement (ra-prosh-mahn). [French] The establishment or restoration of cordial relations between two or more nations. — Also spelled rapprochment.

rap sheet. (1960) Slang. A person's criminal record.

raptu haeredis (rap-t[y]oo hə-ree-dis), n. [Latin] Hist. A writ for taking away an heir held in socage. See SOCAGE.

rapture. Archaic. 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another person (esp. a woman); abduction. 2. RAPE (1).

raptu virginum (rap-t[y]oo vər-ji-nəm). See DE RAPTU VIRGINUM.

rapuit (rap-yoo-it). [Latin] Hist. Ravished. • The term was formerly used in indictments for rape. See RAVISHMENT.

RAR. abbr. REVENUE AGENT'S REPORT.

rasure (ray-zhər). 1. The scraping or shaving of a document's surface to remove the writing from it; erasure. 2. Obliteration. — rase, vb.

rat. Slang. See STOOL PIGEON (1).

ratable (ray-tə-bəl), adj. (16c) 1. Proportionate <ratable distribution>. 2. Capable of being estimated, appraised, or apportioned <because hundreds of angry fans ran onto the field at the same time, blame for the goalpost's destruction is not ratable>. 3. Taxable <the government assessed the widow's ratable estate>. See PRO RATA.

ratchet theory. (1977) Constitutional law. The principle that Congress, in exercising its enforcement power under the 14th Amendment, can increase but not dilute the scope of 14th Amendment guarantees as previously defined by the Supreme Court. • The thought underlying the term is that the enabling clause works in only one direction, like a ratchet. The theory was stated by Justice Brennan in Katzenbach v. Morgan, 384 U.S. 641, 86 S.Ct. 1717 (1966), but was repudiated by the Supreme Court in City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 117 S.Ct.2157 (1997). — Also termed one-way ratchet theory.

rate, n. (15c) 1. Proportional or relative value; the proportion by which quantity or value is adjusted <rate of inflation>. 2. An amount paid or charged for a good or service <the rate for a business-class fare is $550>.

class rate. A single rate applying to the transportation of several articles of the same general character. [Cases: Carriers ⇨ 189.]

confiscatory rate. A utility rate set so low by the government that the utility company cannot realize a reasonable return on its investment. [Cases: Public Utilities ⇨ 129.]

freight rate. A rate charged by a carrier for the transportation of cargo, usu. based on the weight, volume, or quantity of goods but sometimes also on the goods' value or the mileage. [Cases: Carriers ⇨ 12, 189.]

joint rate. A single rate charged by two or more carriers to cover a shipment of goods over a single route. [Cases: Carriers ⇨ 26, 193.]

union rate. The wage scale set by a union as a minimum wage to be paid and usu. expressed as an hourly rate or piecework rate.

3. INTEREST RATE <the rate on the loan increases by 2% after five years>. 4. PREMIUM RATE. 5. English law. A sum assessed or payable to the local government in the place where a ratepayer dwells or has property. See RATEPAYER. — rate, vb.

rate base. The investment amount or property value on which a company, esp. a public utility, is allowed to earn a particular rate of return. [Cases: Public Utilities ⇨ 124.]

rate-base value. See net book cost under COST (1).

rate of interest. See INTEREST RATE.

rate of return. The annual income from an investment, expressed as a percentage of the investment. See RETURN (5).

fair rate of return. The amount of profit that a public utility is permitted to earn, as determined by a public utility commission. [Cases: Public Utilities ⇨ 129.]

internal rate of return. Accounting. A discounted-cash-flow method of evaluating a long-term project, used to determine the actual return on an investment. — Abbr. IRR.

ratepayer. English law. A person who pays local taxes; a person liable to pay rates. See RATE (4).

ratification, n. (15c) 1. Adoption or enactment, esp. where the act is the last in a series of necessary steps or consents <The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same>. • In this sense, ratification runs the gamut of a formal approval of a constitutional amendment to rank-and-file approval of a labor union's collective-bargaining agreement with management. See ADOPTION (5). Cf. SANCTION (1). 2. Confirmation and acceptance of a previous act, thereby making the act valid from the moment it was done <the board of directors' ratification of the president's resolution>. • This sense includes action taken by the legislature to make binding a treaty negotiated by the executive. [Cases: Estoppel ⇨ 90(1).] 3. Contracts. A person's binding adoption of an act already completed but either not done in a way that originally produced a legal obligation or done by a third party having at the time no authority to act as the person's agent <an adult's ratification of a contract signed during childhood is necessary to make the contract enforceable>. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 97(2); Infants ⇨ 57; Principal and Agent ⇨ 163–176.]

"Ratification may take place by express words indicating an intention to confirm the contract. These words may consist of a new express promise, or such words as 'I do ratify and confirm.' A mere acknowledgment that the contract was in fact made and that it has not been performed is not sufficient as a ratification. It is sometimes said that a ratification is ineffective unless made with knowledge of the possession of a legal power to disaffirm, but the cases holding the contrary seem to have the better reason." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 179–80 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

4. Int'l law. The final establishment of consent by the parties to a treaty to be bound by it, usu. including the exchange or deposit of instruments of ratification <the ratification of the nuclear-weapons treaty>. See INSTRUMENT OF RATIFICATION. Cf. CONFIRMATION. [Cases: Treaties ⇨ 3.] — ratify, vb. — ratifiable, adj.

ratihabitio (rat-ə-hə-bish-ee-oh), n. [Latin fr. ratum habere "to hold ratified"] Civil law. Ratification or approval, esp. by a principal of an agent's transaction. Pl. ratihabitiones.

rating, 1. Marine insurance. The determination of a vessel's state or condition as a factor of insurability. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1515, 1540.] 2. INSURANCE RATING.

ratio. See RATIO DECIDENDI.

ratiocination (rash-ee-os-ə-nay-shən), n. (16c) The process or an act of reasoning. — ratiocinative (rash-ee-os-ə-nay-tiv), adj. — ratiocinate (rash-ee-os-ə-nayt), vb.

ratio decidendi (ray-shee-oh des-ə-den-dī), n. [Latin "the reason for deciding"] (18c) 1. The principle or rule of law on which a court's decision is founded <many poorly written judicial opinions do not contain a clearly ascertainable ratio decidendi>. 2. The rule of law on which a later court thinks that a previous court founded its decision; a general rule without which a case must have been decided otherwise <this opinion recognizes the Supreme Court's ratio decidendi in the school desegregation cases>. — Often shortened to ratio. Pl. rationes decidendi (ray-shee-oh-nee-z des-ə-den-dī). Cf. OBITER DICTUM; HOLDING (1).

"The phrase 'the ratio decidendi of a case' is slightly ambiguous. It may mean either (1) the rule that the judge who decided the case intended to lay down and apply to the facts, or (2) the rule that a later court concedes him to have had the power to lay down." Glanville Williams, Learning the Law 75 (11th ed. 1982).

"There are . . . two steps involved in the ascertainment of the ratio decidendi. . . First, it is necessary to determine all the facts of the case as seen by the judge; secondly, it is necessary to discover which of those facts were treated as material by the judge." Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 65–66 (4th ed. 1991).

ratio legis (ray-shee-oh lee-jəs), n. [Latin] The reason or purpose for making a law <the Senator argued that the rapid spread of violent crime was a compelling ratio legis for the gun-control statute>. — Also termed ratio juris.

rationabile estoverium (rash-[ee]-ə-nay-bə-lee es-tə-veer-ee-əm), n. [Law Latin "reasonable necessities"] Hist. Alimony.

rationabilibus divisis. See DE RATIONABILIBUS DIVISIS.

rationabili parte bonorum. See DE RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM.

rational-basis test. (1947) Constitutional law. The criterion for judicial analysis of a statute that does not implicate a fundamental right or a suspect or quasi-suspect classification under the Due Process or Equal Protection Clause, whereby the court will uphold a law if it bears a reasonable relationship to the attainment of a legitimate governmental objective. • Rational basis is the most deferential of the standards of review that courts use in due-process and equal-protection analysis. — Also termed rational-purpose test; rational-relationship test; minimum scrutiny; minimal scrutiny. Cf. STRICT SCRUTINY; INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3052, 3877.]

rational-choice theory. (1979) The theory that behavioral choices, including the choice to engage in criminal activity, are based on purposeful decisions that the potential benefits outweigh the risks. Cf. CONTROL THEORY; ROUTINE-ACTIVITIES THEORY; STRAIN THEORY.

rational doubt. See REASONABLE DOUBT.

rational interpretation. See logical interpretation under INTERPRETATION.

rational-purpose test. See RATIONAL-BASIS TEST.

rational-relationship test. See RATIONAL-BASIS TEST.

ratione (ray-shee-oh-nee or rash-ee-oh-nee). [Latin] By reason; on account.

ratione bonorum (bə-nor-əm). By reason of property.

ratione causae (kaw-zee). By reason of the nature of the case.

ratione contractus (kən-trak-təs). By reason of the contract.

"By entering into a contract, the contracting parties may . . . render themselves amenable to the jurisdiction of a judge to whose jurisdiction they would not have been amenable had the contract not been entered into. Thus, a foreigner, for the time being domiciled in Scotland, entering into a contract there with a Scotchman . . . renders himself amenable to the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts in any question arising out of the contract, for the parties . . . are presumed to have had the law and the courts of Scotland in view as the forum . . . and a jurisdiction thus founded is said to arise ratione contractus." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 540 (4th ed. 1894).

ratione delicti (di-lik-ti). On account of the delict.

ratione domicilii (dom-ə-sil-ee-i). By reason of domicile; on account of residence. • The phrase appeared in reference to the foundation of jurisdiction in many civil cases.

ratione habita (hab-i-tə). Regard being had (of particular factors or circumstances).

ratione impotentiae (im-pə-ten-shee-ee). By reason of inability. • This was the basis for a property right in young wild animals that were unable to run or fly. See FERAE NATURAE.

ratione incidentiae (in-si-den-shee-ee). By reason of the incident.

ratione loci (loh-si). By reason of place. • This was the basis for a property right in rabbits and hares.

ratione materiae (mə-teer-ee-ee). By reason of the matter involved.

ratione originis (ə-rij-ə-nis). By reason of one's origin.

ratione personae (pər-soh-nee). By reason of the person concerned.

ratione privilegii (priv-ə-lee-jee-i). By reason of privilege. • This was the basis for a property right in animals of warren. See WARREN.

ratione rei sitae (ree-i-si-tee). By reason of the situation of a thing.

ratione soli (soh-li). By reason of the soil. • This was the basis for a property right in bees.

ratione subjectae materiae (səb-jek-tee mə-teer-ee-ee). On account of the subject matter.

ratione suspecti iudicis (sə-spek-ti joo-di-sis). On account of the judge being suspected. • This referred to a judge's recusal in a case.

ratione temporis (tem-por-is), adv. By reason of time or the times. See RATIONE.

ratione tenurae (ten-yə-ree). By reason of tenure.

rationes (ray-shee-oh-nee or rash-ee-oh-nee), n. [Latin "reasons"] Hist. The pleadings in a suit.

ratio pertinens. A pertinent reason (for a question).

ratio scientiae (ray-shee-oh si-en-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. The ground of knowledge; esp., the basis for a witness's testimony.

ratio scripta (ray-shee-oh skrip-tə). [Latin] Roman law. Written reason.

rattening (rat-ning). Hist. The practice of taking away tools, destroying machinery, and the like in an attempt either to compel a worker to join a union or to enforce a company's compliance with union rules. • Rattening was formerly a common labor-union tactic in England, and it was a criminal offense.

ravishment, n. Archaic. 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another person (esp. a woman); abduction. 2. RAPE (1). • In this sense the term is widely considered inappropriate for modern usage, given its romantic connotations (in other contexts) of ecstasy and delight. In the Restatement (First) of Torts § 65a, the word was defined as including not just rape but any carnal intercourse of a criminal nature. See RAPUIT. — ravish, vb.

RBS. abbr. RURAL BUSINESS-COOPERATIVE SERVICE.

RCE. abbr. REQUEST FOR CONTINUED EXAMINATION.

rDNA. abbr. RECOMBINANT DNA TECHNOLOGY.

re (ree or ray), prep. (18c) Regarding; in the matter of. • In the title of a case, it usu. signifies a legal proceeding regarding the disposition of real or personal property or a change in legal status. In American caselaw, the abbreviation commonly used is in re <In re Estate of Kirk>. In business correspondence, the term signals the subject matter <re: Board Meeting>. See IN RE.

REA. abbr. RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION.

rea (ree-ə), n. [Latin] In civil and canon law, a defendant. Pl. reae.

reacquired stock. See treasury stock under STOCK.

reading. Parliamentary law. The recitation aloud of a bill or other main motion, sometimes by title only, usu. in a series of three such recitations necessary before a legislative body can pass a bill. See reading clerk under CLERK (7).

reading clerk. See CLERK (7).

read into, vb. See READ ON.

readjustment, n. (18c) Voluntary reorganization of a financially troubled corporation by the shareholders themselves, without a trustee's or a receiver's intervention. — readjust, vb.

read law. 1. To prepare for a legal career by working in a lawyer's office as a clerk while studying legal texts on one's own time. • Most American lawyers in the 18th and 19th centuries obtained their legal educations solely by reading law. Today, few American states allow applicants to take the bar exam without attending law school. 2. To study law at a law school.

read on, vb. Patents. 1. (Of a patent claim) to contain all the same features of (a prior-art reference). • If the patent claim reads on the prior art, the claim has been anticipated and the patent will be denied. See ANTICIPATED. [Cases: Patents ⇨72(1).] 2. (Of a patent claim) to describe an infringing product or process. • If all the patent claims read on the other product, that product infringes the patent. [Cases: Patents ⇨226.6.]

ready, willing, and able. (1829) (Of a prospective buyer) legally and financially capable of consummating a purchase. [Cases: Brokers ⇨54; Specific Performance ⇨87.]

“‘READY, WILLING, AND ABLE’ — A phrase referring to a prospective buyer of property who is legally capable and financially able to consummate the deal. Traditionally, the broker earns a commission upon procuring a ‘ready, willing, and able’ buyer on the listing terms, regardless of whether the seller actually goes through with the sale. The ‘ready and willing’ means, generally, that the broker must in fact produce a buyer who indicates that he or she is prepared to accept the terms of the seller and is willing to enter into a contract for sale. The buyer is not ‘ready and willing’ when he or she enters into an option with the seller, but the buyer is ‘ready and willing’ when the option is exercised. The buyer is not ‘ready and willing’ when the offer is subject to any new conditions, such as making the closing date an unreasonably long period, for example, one year from the offer. . . . The ‘able’ requires that the buyer be financially able to comply with the terms of the sale in both initial cash payment and any necessary financing. The broker is not required to show that the purchaser has actual cash or assets to pay off the mortgage. But the broker is required to reveal the identity of the buyer if requested by the seller.” John W. Reilly, The Language of Real Estate 326 (4th ed. 1993).

reaffirmation, n. (1857) 1. Approval of something previously decided or agreed to; renewal <the Supreme Court’s reaffirmation of this principle is long overdue>. 2. Bankruptcy. An agreement between the debtor and a creditor by which the debtor promises to repay a prepetition debt that would otherwise be discharged at the conclusion of the bankruptcy <the debtor negotiated a reaffirmation so that he could keep the collateral>. • There are two main requirements for a reaffirmation to be enforceable: (1) the agreement must contain a clear and conspicuous provision stating that the debtor may rescind the reaffirmation agreement anytime before discharge or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court; and (2) for a debtor who is not represented by counsel, the court must determine that the reaffirmation is in the debtor’s best interest and does not impose an undue hardship. 11 USCA § 524(c). — Also termed (in sense 2) reaffirmation agreement. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨3415.] — reaffirm, vb.

reaffirmation hearing. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the debtor and a creditor present a reaffirmation of a dischargeable debt for the court’s approval. • The reaffirmation hearing is usu. held simultaneously with the discharge hearing. See DISCHARGE HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨3417.]

real, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to things (such as lands and buildings) that are fixed or immovable <real property> . 2. Civil law. Of, relating to, or attached to a thing (whether movable or immovable) rather than a person . 3. Actual: genuine; true <real authority>. 4. (Of money, income, etc.) measured in terms of purchasing power rather than nominal value; adjusted for inflation <real wages>.

real account. See ACCOUNT.

real action. See ACTION (4).

real asset. See ASSET.

real authority. See actual authority under AUTHORITY (1).

real burden. See BURDEN (4).

real chattel. See chattel real under CHATTEL.

real contract. See CONTRACT.

real covenant. See covenant running with the land under COVENANT (4).

real damages. See actual damages under DAMAGES.

real defense. See DEFENSE (4).

real earnings. See EARNINGS.

real estate. See real property under PROPERTY.

real-estate agent. See AGENT (2).

real-estate broker. See BROKER.

real-estate investment trust. A company that invests in and manages a portfolio of real estate, with the majority of the trust’s income distributed to its shareholders. • Such a trust may qualify for special income-tax treatment if it distributes 95% of its income to its shareholders. — Abbr. REIT. See investment company under COMPANY. Cf. REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3997.]

umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust. A REIT that controls and holds most of its properties through an umbrella limited partnership, as a result of which the trust can acquire properties in exchange for the limited-partnership interests in the umbrella while triggering no immediate tax obligations for certain sellers. • This is a structure that many REITs now use. — Abbr. UPREIT. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3997.]

real-estate-mortgage investment conduit. An entity that holds a fixed pool of mortgages or mortgage-backed securities (such as collateralized mortgage obligations), issues interests in itself to investors, and receives favorable tax treatment by passing its income through to those investors. • Real-estate-mortgage investment conduits were created by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. They can be organized as corporations, partnerships, or trusts. To qualify for tax-exempt status, the entity must meet two requirements: (1) almost all the entity’s assets must be real-estate mortgages (though a few other cash-flow-maintaining assets are allowed); and (2) all interests in the entity must be classified as either regular interests (which entitle the holder to principal and interest income through debt or equity) or residual interests (which provide contingent income). — Abbr. REMIC.

real-estate mortgage trust. A real-estate investment trust that buys and sells the mortgages on real property rather than the real property itself. — Abbr. REMT. Cf. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

real estate owned. Property acquired by a lender, usu. through foreclosure, in satisfaction of a debt. — Abbr. REO. [Cases: Mortgages ↷534.]

Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. A federal law that requires lenders to provide home buyers with information about known or estimated settlement costs. 12 USCA §§ 2601–2617. — Abbr. RESPA. See REGULATION x. [Cases: Consumer Credit ↷30.]

real-estate syndicate. A group of investors who pool their money to buy and sell real property. • Most real-estate syndicates operate as limited partnerships or real-estate investment trusts.

real evidence. See EVIDENCE.

realignment (ree-ə-līn-mənt), n. The process by which a court, usu. in determining diversity jurisdiction, identifies and rearranges the parties as plaintiffs and defendants according to their ultimate interests. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷101; Federal Courts ↷304.] — realign, vb.

real income. See INCOME.

realization, n. (18c) 1. Conversion of noncash assets into cash assets. 2. Tax. An event or transaction, such as the sale or exchange of property, that substantially changes a taxpayer's economic position so that income tax may be imposed or a tax allowance granted. Cf. RECOGNITION (4). [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3115, 3178; Taxation ↷3466.] — realize, vb.

realized gain. See GAIN (3).

realized loss. See LOSS (2).

real law. The law of real property; real-estate law.

real money. See MONEY.

real party in interest. See PARTY (2).

real-party-in-interest rule. The principle that the person entitled by law to enforce a substantive right should be the one under whose name the action is prosecuted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷131; Parties ↷6.]

real property. See PROPERTY.

real rate. See INTEREST RATE.

real security. See SECURITY.

real servitude. See servitude appurtenant under SERVITUDE (2).

real statute. See STATUTE.

real subrogation. See SUBROGATION.

real suretyship. See SURETYSHIP.

real things. (18c) Property that is fixed and immovable, such as lands and buildings; real property. — Also termed things real. See real property under PROPERTY.

Cf. chattel real under CHATTEL. [Cases: Property ↷4.]

realtor (reel-tər). 1. (cap.) Servicemark. A real-estate agent who is a member of the National Association of Realtors. [Cases: Brokers ↷3.] 2. Loosely, any real-estate agent or broker. [Cases: Brokers ↷2.]

real treaty. See TREATY (1).

realty. Land and anything growing on, attached to, or erected on it, that cannot be removed without injury to the land. — Also termed real property.

quasi-realty. Hist. Things that the law treats as fixed to realty, but are themselves movable, such as title deeds.

realty trust. See nominee trust (2) under TRUST.

real wages. See WAGE.

real warrantice. See WARRANTICE.

real wrong. See WRONG.

reapportionment, n. (1874) Realignment of a legislative district's boundaries to reflect changes in population and ensure proportionate representation by elected officials. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 2, cl. 3. — Also termed redistricting. Cf. GERRYMANDERING. [Cases: Elections ↷12(6); States ↷27.] — reapportion, vb.

reargument, n. (18c) The presentation of additional arguments, which often suggest that a controlling legal principle has been overlooked, to a court (usu. an appellate court) that has already heard initial arguments. Cf. REHEARING. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷828; Federal Civil Procedure ↷928; Federal Courts ↷744; Motions ↷39.] — reargue, vb.

rearrest. See ARREST.

reasonable, adj. (14c) 1. Fair, proper, or moderate under the circumstances <reasonable pay>. 2. According to reason <your argument is reasonable but not convincing>.

"It is extremely difficult to state what lawyers mean when they speak of 'reasonableness.' In part the expression refers to ordinary ideas of natural law or natural justice, in part to logical thought, working upon the basis of the rules of law." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 183 n.(u) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"In one sense the word [reasonable] describes the proper use of the reasoning power, and in another it is no more than a word of assessment. Reasoning does not help much in fixing a reasonable or fair price or a reasonable or moderate length of time, or in estimating the size of a doubt. Lawyers say a reasonable doubt, meaning a substantial one; the Court of Appeal has frowned upon the description of a reasonable doubt as one for which reasons could be given." Patrick Devlin, The Judge 134 (1979).

3. (Of a person) having the faculty of reason . 4. Archaic. Human <criminal homicide is traditionally called the unlawful killing of a "reasonable person">. — reasonableness, n.

reasonable accommodation. See ACCOMMODATION.

reasonable-apprehension test. Patents. A judicial analysis to decide whether there is a justiciable controversy between a patentee and an alleged infringer.

• The test has two elements: (1) the patent owner must make an explicit threat or take other action that makes another person reasonably believe that an infringement suit is likely, and (2) the other person must be engaged in an activity that could constitute infringement or must be intentionally preparing to engage in possibly infringing activity. If either element is prospective or uncertain, the court will not consider the complaint. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment ↷234.]

reasonable care. See CARE.

reasonable cause. See PROBABLE CAUSE (1).

reasonable-consumer test. The prevailing test for determining whether advertisement is deceptive, determined by asking whether the reasonable consumer would believe that the claim is true. Cf. FOOL'S TEST. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷22.]

reasonable-development covenant. Oil & gas. The implied promise in an oil-and-gas lease that once production is obtained the lessee will continue to develop the property as would a reasonably prudent operator, as opposed to merely holding the lease by the production already obtained. See FURTHER-EXPLORATION COVENANT. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷78.1(4), 78.1(8).]

reasonable deviation. See DEVIATION.

reasonable diligence. See DILIGENCE.

reasonable doubt. (18c) The doubt that prevents one from being firmly convinced of a defendant's guilt, or the belief that there is a real possibility that a defendant is not guilty. • "Beyond a reasonable doubt" is the standard used by a jury to determine whether a criminal defendant is guilty. See Model Penal Code § 1.12. In deciding whether guilt has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, the jury must begin with the presumption that the defendant is innocent. — Also termed rational doubt. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under EVIDENCE; PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷266(7); Criminal Law ↷561.]

"Reasonable doubt . . . is a term often used, probably pretty well understood, but not easily defined. It is not a mere possible doubt; because every thing relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case, which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge." Commonwealth v. Webster, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 295, 320 (1850) (per Lemuel Shaw, J.).

"The gravamen of Lord Goddard's objection to the formula of 'reasonable doubt' seems to have been the muddle occasionally created by an impromptu effort to explain to a jury the meaning of this phrase. A simple solution would be to refrain from explaining it, relying on the common sense of the jury. As Barton J. said in an Australian case, 'one embarks on a dangerous sea if he attempts to define with precision a term which is in ordinary use with reference to this subject-matter, and which is usually stated to a jury without embellishment as a well understood expression.' However, some modes of embellishment seem to be unobjectionable. There is probably no harm in telling the jury, as some judges do, that a reasonable doubt is one for which a sensible reason can be supplied." Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 873 (2d ed. 1961).

reasonable excuse. See PROBABLE CAUSE.

reasonable-expectations doctrine. The principle that an ambiguous or inconspicuous term in a contract should be interpreted to favor the weaker party's objectively reasonable expectations from the contract, even though the explicit language of the terms may not support those expectations. • This principle is most often applied when interpreting insurance policies, consumer contracts, and other types of adhesion contracts. — Also written reasonable-expectation doctrine. [Cases: Insurance ↷1817.]

reasonable force. See FORCE.

reasonable grounds. See PROBABLE CAUSE (1).

reasonable-inference rule. (1945) An evidentiary principle providing that a jury, in deciding a case, may properly consider any reasonable inference drawn from the evidence presented at trial. Cf. PYRAMIDING INFERENCES, RULE AGAINST. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷559; Evidence ↷595.]

reasonable man. See REASONABLE PERSON.

reasonable medical probability. (1949) In proving the cause of an injury, a standard requiring a showing that the injury was more likely than not caused by a particular stimulus, based on the general consensus of recognized medical thought. — Also termed reasonable medical certainty. [Cases: Damages ↷185(1); Evidence ↷547.5.] reasonable notice. See NOTICE.

reasonable person. 1. A hypothetical person used as a legal standard, esp. to determine whether someone acted with negligence; specif., a person who exercises the degree of attention, knowledge, intelligence, and judgment that society requires of its members for the protection of their own and of others' interests. • The reasonable person acts sensibly, does things without serious delay, and takes proper but not excessive precautions. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 283(b). — Also termed reasonable man; prudent person; ordinarily prudent person; reasonably prudent person; highly prudent person. See reasonable care under CARE. [Cases: Negligence ↷233.]

"The reasonable man connotes a person whose notions and standards of behaviour and responsibility correspond with those generally obtained among ordinary people in our society at the present time, who seldom allows his emotions to overbear his reason and whose habits are moderate and whose disposition is equable. He is not necessarily the same as the average man — a term which implies an amalgamation of counter-balancing extremes." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 56 (17th ed. 1977).

2. Archaic. A human being.

"In the antique phraseology which has been repeated since the time of Lord Coke the actus reus of murder (and therefore of any criminal homicide) was declared to be unlawfully killing a reasonable person who is in being and under the King's peace, the death following within a year and a day. In this sentence the word 'reasonable' does not mean 'sane', but 'human'. In criminal law, a lunatic is a persona for all purposes of protection, even when not so treated for the assessment of liability." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 102 (16th ed. 1952).

reasonable provocation. See adequate provocation under PROVOCATION.

reasonable royalty. See ROYALTY (1).

reasonable skill. See SKILL.

reasonable support. 1. See SUPPORT (1). 2. See SUPPORT (2).

reasonable suspicion. See SUSPICION.

reasonable time. (1951) 1. Contracts. The time needed to do what a contract requires to be done, based on subjective circumstances. • If the contracting parties do not fix a time for performance, the law will usu. presume a reasonable time. [Cases: Contracts ⇨212.] 2. Commercial law. The time during which the UCC permits a party to accept an offer, inspect goods, substitute conforming goods for rejected goods, and the like. [Cases: Sales ⇨22(5), 23(5), 166(1), 168(2), 179(6).] reasonable use. See USE (1).

reasonable-use theory. (1933) Property. The principle that owners of riparian land may make reasonable use of their water if this use does not affect the water available to lower riparian owners. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ⇨41.]

reasonably believe. See BELIEVE.

reasonably-prudent-operator standard. Oil & gas. The test generally applied to determine a lessee's compliance with implied lease covenants by considering what a reasonable, competent operator in the oil-and-gas industry would do under the circumstances, acting in good faith and with economic motivation, and taking into account the lessor's interests as well as that of the operator. — Also termed reasonable-prudent-operator standard; prudent-operator standard. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨78.1(2).]

reasonably prudent person. See REASONABLE PERSON.

reasonably suspect. See SUSPECT.

reasons for allowance. See RULE 109 STATEMENT.

reason to know. Information from which a person of ordinary intelligence — or of the superior intelligence that the person may have — would infer that the fact in question exists or that there is a substantial enough chance of its existence that, if the person exercises reasonable care, the person can assume the fact exists.

reassurance. See REINSURANCE.

rebate, n. A return of part of a payment, serving as a discount or reduction. — rebate, vb.

rebellion. 1. Open, organized, and armed resistance to an established government or ruler. 2. Open resistance or opposition to an authority or tradition. 3. Hist. Disobedience of a legal command or summons.

rebus integris (ree-bās in-tō-gris). [Latin] Scots law. Matters being complete; no performance having taken place. • For example, a contract could be rescinded if nothing had been done toward performance.

rebus ipsis et factis (ree-bās ip-sis et fak-tis). [Latin] Scots law. By the facts and circumstances themselves. • A marital contract was sometimes inferred rebus ipsis et factis.

rebus sic stantibus (ree-bās sik stan-ti-bās). [Latin] "matters so standing" Civil law & Int'l law. The principle that all agreements are concluded with the implied condition that they are binding only as long as there are no major changes in the circumstances. See CLAUSA REBUS SIC STANTIBUS. [Cases: Treaties ⇨5.]

rebut, vb. (14c) To refute, oppose, or counteract (something) by evidence, argument, or contrary proof <rebut the opponent's expert testimony> <rebut a presumption of negligence>.

rebuttable presumption. See PRESUMPTION.

rebuttal, n. (1830) 1. In-court contradiction of an adverse party's evidence. 2. The time given to a party to present contradictory evidence or arguments. Cf. CASE-IN-CHIEF. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨683; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2015; Trial ⇨62.]

"Rebuttal is the hardest argument to make in any court. In the Supreme Court and in most courts of appeals, petitioner has to work hard to save any time at all for rebuttal. In the Supreme Court, rebuttal time comes directly out of the 30 minutes allotted to petitioner's side and, if the justices keep asking questions that use up petitioner's time, the case is submitted without rebuttal. Many courts of appeals permit counsel to reserve time for rebuttal, either through the clerk in advance of the argument or at the beginning of the argument itself. It is the rare court of appeals panel that does not permit counsel at least one minute of rebuttal, even when counsel's time has expired." David C. Frederick, Supreme Court and Appellate Advocacy § 7.3, at 178 (2003) (dealing only with oral rebuttals on appeal).

3. The arguments contained in a reply brief. See reply brief under BRIEF. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨762; Criminal Law ⇨1130(6); Federal Courts ⇨714.] rebuttal evidence. See EVIDENCE.

rebuttal witness. See WITNESS.

rebutter. (16c) 1. Common-law pleading. The defendant's answer to a plaintiff's surrejoinder; the pleading that followed the rejoinder and surrejoinder, and that might in turn be answered by the surrebutter. [Cases: Pleading ⇨185.] 2. One who rebuts.

rebutting evidence. See rebuttal evidence under EVIDENCE.

recall, n. (1902) 1. Removal of a public official from office by popular vote. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨70.7.] 2. A manufacturer's request to consumers for the return of defective products for repair or replacement. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2278(24); Products Liability ⇨144.] 3. Revocation of a judgment for factual or legal reasons. — recall, vb.

recall election. See ELECTION (3).

recall exclusion. See sistership exclusion under EXCLUSION (3).

recall of mandate. The extraordinary action by an appellate court of withdrawing the order it issued to the trial court upon deciding an appeal, usu. after the deadline has passed for the losing party to seek a rehearing. • Because this action can interfere with trial-court proceedings on remand, and also because it clouds the waters that repose (the finality of a judgment) is meant to clear, courts are reluctant to use the power. But they will use it to correct clerical errors or to remedy a fraud on the court during the appeal. It has also been used when the original mandate would result in a grave injustice. See MANDATE (1). [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 1218; Criminal Law ⇨ 1193; Federal Courts ⇨ 956.1.] recant (ri-kant), vb. (16c) 1. To withdraw or renounce (prior statements or testimony) formally or publicly <the prosecution hoped the eyewitness wouldn't recant her corroborating testimony on the stand>. 2. To withdraw or renounce prior statements or testimony formally or publicly <under grueling cross-examination, the witness recanted>. — recantation, n.

recapitalization, n. An adjustment or recasting of a corporation's capital structure — that is, its stocks, bonds, or other securities — through amendment of the articles of incorporation or merger with a parent or subsidiary. • An example of recapitalization is the elimination of unpaid preferred dividends and the creation of a new class of senior securities. Cf. REORGANIZATION (2). [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 575, 576.] — recapitalize, vb.

leveraged recapitalization. Recapitalization whereby the corporation substitutes debt for equity in the capital structure, usu. to make the corporation less attractive as a target for a hostile takeover. — Also termed leveraging up.

reception. (17c) 1. At common law, lawful seizure of another's property for a second time to secure the performance of a duty; a second distress. See DISTRESS. 2. Peaceful retaking, without legal process, of one's own property that has been wrongfully taken.

recapture, n. 1. The act or an instance of retaking or reacquiring; recovery. 2. The lawful taking by the government of earnings or profits exceeding a specified amount; esp., the government's recovery of a tax benefit (such as a deduction or credit) by taxing income or property that no longer qualifies for the benefit. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 3089, 3138, 3531.] 3. Int'l law. The retaking of a prize or booty so that the property is legally restored to its original owner. See POSTLIMINIUM (2). — recapture, vb.

"Upon recapture from pirates, the property is to be restored to the owner, on the allowance of a reasonable compensation to the retaker, in the nature of salvage; for it is a principle of the law of nations, that a capture by pirates does not, like a capture by an enemy in solemn war, change the title, or divest the original owner of his right to the property, and it does not require the doctrine of postliminy

recapture clause. 1. A contract provision that limits prices or allows for the recovery of goods if market conditions greatly differ from what the contract anticipated. 2. A commercial-lease provision that grants the landlord both a percentage of the tenant's profits above a fixed amount of rent and the right to terminate the lease — and thus recapture the property — if those profits are too low.

recapture rule. Patents. The doctrine that a patentee cannot regain, in a reissue patent, a claim that the patentee previously abandoned in order to gain allowance of the patent application. • The rule provides a defense in an infringement action by allowing the defendant to attack the validity of a reissue patent. An attempt to recapture a strategically abandoned claim cannot meet the statutory requirement that the error be made without deceptive intent. 35 USCA § 251. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 141(6).] recede, vb. (Of a house in a bicameral legislature) to withdraw from an amendment in which the other house has not concurred. See CONCUR (3). [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 16, 23.]

"A vote to recede from amendments constitutes a final passage of the bill without the amendments from which the house has receded, since both houses have then agreed to the bill in its form prior to amendment." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 767, at 555 (2000).

receding market. See bear market under MARKET.

receipt, n. (14c) 1. The act of receiving something <my receipt of the document was delayed by two days>. 2. A written acknowledgment that something has been received <keep the receipt for the gift>.

accountable receipt. A receipt in which a person admits that goods or money were delivered to the person and that the person is obliged to deliver all or part of the goods or money to a third person.

interim receipt. The written acknowledgment of a premium paid on an insurance policy that is pending final approval. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1746.]

warehouse receipt. See WAREHOUSE RECEIPT.

3. (usu. pl.) Something received; INCOME <post the daily receipts in the ledger>.

receipt, vb. (18c) 1. To acknowledge in writing the receipt of (something, esp. money) <the bill must be receipted>. 2. To give a receipt for (something, esp. money) <the bookkeeper receipted the payments>.

receipt clause. In a conveyancing document, a clause that acts as a receipt for the consideration given. • This clause typically appears to avoid the necessity of a separate receipt.

receiptor (ri-see-tər). (1814) A person who receives from a sheriff another's property seized in garnishment and agrees to return the property upon demand or execution. [Cases: Execution ⇨ 150.]

receivable, adj. 1. Capable of being admitted or accepted <receivable evidence>. 2. Awaiting receipt of payment <accounts receivable>. 3. Subject to a call for payment .

receivable, n. (14c) An amount owed, esp. by a business's customer. See account receivable under ACCOUNT.

unrealized receivable. (1957) An amount earned but not yet received. • Unrealized receivables have no income-tax basis for cash-basis taxpayers. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 3931, 3935.]

receiver. (18c) 1. A disinterested person appointed by a court, or by a corporation or other person, for the protection or collection of property that is the subject of diverse claims (for example, because it belongs to a bankrupt or is otherwise being litigated). Cf. LIQUIDATOR. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 552, 621(.5); Receivers ⇨ 1, 81.]

ancillary receiver. One who is appointed as a receiver in a particular area to help a foreign receiver collect the assets of an insolvent corporation or other entity. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 686.]

"An ancillary receiver of a corporation or unincorporated association may be appointed (a) by a competent court of a state in which there are assets of the corporation or unincorporated association at the time of the commencement of the action for the appointment of such receiver, or (b) in the case of a corporation, by a competent court of the state of incorporation. . . . The purpose of such an ancillary receivership is to aid the foreign primary receivership in the collection and taking charge of assets of the estate being administered." 66 Am. Jur. 2d Receivers § 436, at 239 (1973).

general receiver. See principal receiver.

judgment receiver. A receiver who collects or diverts funds from a judgment debtor to the creditor. • A judgment receiver is usu. appointed when it is difficult to enforce a judgment in any other manner. — Also termed receiver in aid of execution. [Cases: Execution ⇨ 404.]

local receiver. Conflict of laws. A receiver appointed in the state where property is located or where an act is done. [Cases: Receivers ⇨ 206.]

principal receiver. A receiver who is primarily responsible for the receivership estate. • A principal receiver may ordinarily (1) act outside the state of appointment, (2) sue in a foreign court, (3) exercise broad powers of assignment, and (4) handle all distributions. — Also termed primary receiver; general receiver; original receiver. [Cases: Receivers ⇨ 205–210.]

receiver in aid of execution. See judgment receiver.

statutory receiver. A receiver whose appointment is provided for in a statute.

2. Hist. An officer in the royal household who collected revenues and disbursed them in a lump sum to the treasurer, and who also acted as an attorney with the power to appear in any court in England. • The monarch and his or her consort each had a receiver, thus the full title was King's Receiver or Queen's Receiver.

receiver general. A public official in charge of a government's receipts and treasury. Pl. receivers general.

receiver's certificate. Bankruptcy. An instrument issued by a receiver as evidence that the holder is entitled to receive payment from funds controlled by the bankruptcy court. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 3025.1, 3035.1.]

receivership. (15c) 1. The state or condition of being in the control of a receiver. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 552, 621(.5); Receivers ⇨ 1.] 2. The position or function of being a receiver appointed by a court or under a statute. 3. A proceeding in which a court appoints a receiver.

ancillary receivership. A receivership in which a further administrative proceeding is appointed in another state to help the principal receivership. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 686; Receivers ⇨ 206.]

dry receivership. A receivership in which there is no equity available to pay general creditors. [Cases: Receivers ⇨ 151, 163.]

receivership estate. The totality of the interests that the receivers of an association in one or more states are appointed to protect.

receiving, n. See RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

receiving order. See ORDER (2).

receiving state. See STATE.

receiving stolen property. (1847) The criminal offense of acquiring or controlling property known to have been stolen by another person. • Some jurisdictions require the additional element of wrongful intent. In some jurisdictions it is a felony, but in others it is either a felony or a misdemeanor depending on the value of the property. See Model Penal Code §§ 223.1, 223.6. — Sometimes shortened to receiving. — Also termed receiving stolen goods. See FENCE (1). [Cases: Receiving Stolen Goods ⇨ 1.] recens insecutio (ree-senz in-sə-kyoo-shee-oh). [Latin "fresh pursuit"] Hist. Pursuit of a thief immediately after discovery of the theft. See FRESH PURSUIT.

receptator (ree-sep-tay-tor or -tər). [Latin fr. receptare "to harbor (a criminal or the proceeds of crime)"] Scots law. 1. A harbinger of a felon. 2. A receiver of stolen property.

reception. (1931) The adoption in whole or in part of the law of one jurisdiction by another jurisdiction. • In the legal idiom, it is most common to speak of the reception of Roman law.

"In many parts of Europe monarchs encouraged a 'reception' of Roman law at the expense of medieval customary systems. On the continent—in France, Holland, and Germany—the results of the reception of Roman law have tended to be permanent; the continental jurist in the twentieth century studies Roman law to grasp the jurisprudence underlying modern codes. And in the British Isles, the law of Scotland now contains so much borrowing from Roman law that there, too the road to legal practice leads through study of the corpus of Roman civil law compiled at Justinian's direction. But a reception of Roman law never occurred in England." Arthur R. Hogue, Origins of the Common Law 242 (1966).

receptitious (ree-sep-tish-əs), adj. Roman law. 1. (Of a dowry) returnable by agreement to the donor upon the dissolution of the marriage. 2. (Of property) retained by the wife and not included in the dowry.

receptus (ri-sep-təs). [Latin “(a person) having been received”] Civil law. An arbitrator. • The term takes its name from the idea that the arbitrator is “received” by the parties to settle their dispute.

recess (ree-ses), n. (17c) 1. A brief break in judicial proceedings <the court granted a fifteen-minute recess so the attorney and plaintiff could confer>. Cf. CONTINUANCE (3). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 649; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1951; Trial ⇨ 26.] 2. Parliamentary law. A motion that suspends but does not end a meeting, and that usu. provides for resumption of the meeting <the meeting had a 15-minute recess>. • The motion to recess, which merely suspends the meeting, differs from the motion to adjourn, which ends the meeting. Cf. ADJOURN. [Cases: United States ⇨ 18.] 3. Parliamentary law. The interval between such a motion’s adoption and the meeting’s reconvening <Congress took a monthlong recess>. — recess (ri-ses), vb.

recess appointment. See APPOINTMENT.

recession. (1929) A period characterized by a sharp slowdown in economic activity, declining employment, and a decrease in investment and consumer spending. Cf. DEPRESSION.

recessus maris (ri-ses-əs mair-əs). [Latin] A going back or retreat of the sea. See RELICTION.

recharacterization. A court’s determination that an insider’s loan to an entity in liquidation (such as a corporation or partnership) should be treated as a capital contribution, not as a loan, thereby entitling the insider to only part of the liquidation proceeds payable after all the business’s debts have been discharged. • Factors influencing this determination include the amount of capital initially available, the ability of the entity to obtain loans from outside sources, how long the entity has existed, the treatment of the loan in the entity’s business records, and past treatment of similar transactions made to that entity by an insider. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 60.]

Recht (rekt). [German “right”] 1. Law generally. 2. A body of law. 3. A right or claim.

Rechtsbesitz (rekts-be-zitz). See possession of a right under POSSESSION.

Rechtsphilosophie (rekts-fə-los-ə-fee). See ethical jurisprudence under JURISPRUDENCE.

recidivate (ri-sid-ə-vayt), vb. To return to a habit of criminal behavior; to relapse into crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 1202.]

recidivation. Archaic. See RECIDIVISM.

recidivism (ri-sid-ə-viz-əm), n. (1886) A tendency to relapse into a habit of criminal activity or behavior. — Also termed (archaically) recidivation. — recidivous, recidivist, adj.

recidivist (ri-sid-ə-vist), n. (1880) One who has been convicted of multiple criminal offenses, usu. similar in nature; a repeat offender <proponents of prison reform argue that prisons don’t cure the recidivist>. — Also termed habitual offender; habitual criminal; repeater; career criminal; prior and persistent offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 1200.]

reciprocal (ri-sip-rə-kəl), adj. (16c) 1. Directed by each toward the other or others; MUTUAL <reciprocal trusts>. 2. BILATERAL . 3. Corresponding; equivalent <reciprocal discovery>.

reciprocal contract. See bilateral contract under CONTRACT.

reciprocal dealing. A business arrangement in which a buyer having greater economic power than a seller agrees to buy something from the seller only if the seller buys something in return. • Reciprocal dealing usu. violates antitrust laws. — Also termed reciprocal-dealing arrangement. Cf. TYING ARRANGEMENT.

reciprocal discovery. See reverse Jencks material under JENCKS MATERIAL.

reciprocal exchange. An association whose members exchange contracts and pay premiums through an attorney-in-fact for the purpose of insuring themselves and each other. • A reciprocal exchange can consist of individuals, partnerships, trustees, or corporations, but the exchange itself is unincorporated. — Also termed interinsurance exchange; reciprocal insurance exchange; reciprocal interinsurance exchange. See reciprocal insurance under INSURANCE; EXCHANGE (5). [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1204.]

reciprocal insurance. See INSURANCE.

reciprocal insurance exchange. See RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE.

reciprocal interinsurance exchange. See RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE.

reciprocal negative easement. See EASEMENT.

reciprocal trade agreement. An agreement between two countries providing for the exchange of goods between them at lower tariffs and better terms than exist between one of the countries and other countries.

reciprocal trust. See TRUST.

reciprocal will. See mutual will under WILL.

reciprocity (res-ə-pros-i-tee). (18c) 1. Mutual or bilateral action <the Arthurs stopped receiving social invitations from friends because of their lack of reciprocity>. 2. The mutual concession of advantages or privileges for purposes of commercial or diplomatic relations <Texas and Louisiana grant reciprocity to each other’s citizens in qualifying for in-state tuition rates>. — Also termed mutuality of benefits; quid pro quo; equivalence of advantages. [Cases: Colleges and Universities ⇨ 9.20(2).] 3. Intellectual property. The recognition by one country of a foreign national’s intellectual-property rights only if and only to the extent that the other nation would recognize those same rights for the first country’s citizens. • Reciprocity is the most restrictive approach to international intellectual-property law rights. Cf. NATIONAL TREATMENT; UNIVERSALITY.

"It has become common when introducing new categories of rights for them to be granted on the basis of reciprocity. The advantages of reciprocity are twofold. First, reciprocity benefits rights owners by providing incentives for non-conforming countries to change their laws. Secondly, it saves users in one country (A) from paying royalties for foreign authors from countries that do not pay royalties to the authors of country A." Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 101 (2001).

recision. See RESCISSION.

recission. See RESCISSION.

recital. (16c) 1. An account or description of some fact or thing <the recital of the events leading up to the accident>. 2. A preliminary statement in a contract or deed explaining the reasons for entering into it or the background of the transaction, or showing the existence of particular facts <the recitals in the settlement agreement should describe the underlying dispute>. • Traditionally, each recital begins with the word whereas. — Also termed (in sense 2) whereas clause. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 160; Deeds ⇨ 34, 35, 96.] — recite, vb.

"The parties may wish to begin the agreement with a statement of their intentions. Often they do this through recitals, which were traditionally introduced by 'whereas,' but can simply state the background without this formality." Scott J. Burnham, Contract Drafting Guidebook § 8.4, at 158 (2d ed. 1992).

introductory recital. (usu. pl.) A recital explaining how and why the existing state of affairs is to be altered.

narrative recital. (usu. pl.) A recital dealing with matters such as how the buyer and the seller came together.

particular recital. A recital that states a fact definitely.

recite, vb. See READ ON.

reckless, adj. (bef. 12c) Characterized by the creation of a substantial and unjustifiable risk of harm to others and by a conscious (and sometimes deliberate) disregard for or indifference to that risk; heedless; rash. • Reckless conduct is much more than mere negligence: it is a gross deviation from what a reasonable person would do. See RECKLESSNESS. Cf. CARELESS; WANTON. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 330; Negligence ⇨ 274.] — recklessly, adv.

"Intention cannot exist without foresight, but foresight can exist without intention. For a man may foresee the possible or even probable consequences of his conduct and yet not desire them to occur; none the less if he persists on his course he knowingly runs the risk of bringing about the unwished result. To describe this state of mind the word 'reckless' is the most appropriate. The words 'rash' and 'rashness' have also been used to indicate this same attitude." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 28 (16th ed. 1952).

reckless disregard. See DISREGARD.

reckless driving. (1902) The criminal offense of operating a motor vehicle in a manner that shows conscious indifference to the safety of others. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 330.] reckless endangerment. (1968) The criminal offense of putting another person at substantial risk of death or serious injury. • This is a statutory, not a common-law, offense. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 48.]

reckless homicide. See HOMICIDE.

reckless indifference. See deliberate indifference under INDIFFERENCE.

reckless knowledge. See KNOWLEDGE.

reckless negligence. See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

recklessness, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Conduct whereby the actor does not desire harmful consequence but nonetheless foresees the possibility and consciously takes the risk. • Recklessness involves a greater degree of fault than negligence but a lesser degree of fault than intentional wrongdoing. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 274.] 2. The state of mind in which a person does not care about the consequences of his or her actions. — Also termed heedlessness. Cf. WANTONNESS. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 274.]

"The ordinary meaning of the word [recklessness] is a high degree of carelessness. It is the doing of something which in fact involves a grave risk to others, whether the doer realises it or not. The test is therefore objective and not subjective." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 194 (17th ed. 1977).

"An abiding difficulty in discussing the legal meaning of recklessness is that the term has been given several different shades of meaning by the courts over the years. In the law of manslaughter, 'reckless' was long regarded as the most appropriate adjective to express the degree of negligence needed for a conviction: in this sense, it meant a high degree of carelessness. In the late 1950s the courts adopted a different meaning of recklessness in the context of mens rea, referring to D's actual awareness of the risk of the prohibited consequence occurring: we shall call this 'common-law recklessness.' Controversy was introduced into this area in the early 1980s, when the House of Lords purported to broaden the meaning of recklessness so as to include those who failed to give thought to an obvious risk that the consequence would occur. . . ." Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 154 (1991).

reclamation (rek-lə-may-shən), n. (1848) 1. The act or an instance of improving the value of economically useless land by physically changing the land, such as irrigating a desert. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ⇨ 222.] 2. Commercial law. A seller's limited right to retrieve goods delivered to a buyer when the buyer is insolvent. UCC § 2-702(2). See STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 316.] 3. The act or an instance of obtaining valuable materials from waste materials. — reclaim, vb.

reclusion (ri-kloo-zhən). Civil law. Incarceration as punishment for a crime; esp. solitary confinement or confinement at hard labor in a penitentiary.

recognition, n. (16c) 1. Confirmation that an act done by another person was authorized. See RATIFICATION. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨ 170(2).] 2. The formal admission that a person, entity, or thing has a particular status; esp. a nation's act in formally acknowledging the existence of another nation or national government. 3. Parliamentary law. The chair's acknowledgment that a member is entitled to the floor <the chair recognizes the delegate from Minnesota>. See PRECEDENCE (4).

"When any member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the house, that person should rise and respectfully address the presiding officer. When the presiding officer recognizes the member by calling the member by name or by indicating recognition, that person is entitled to the floor and may address the body or present a matter of business, but may not yield the floor to any other member." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 91, at 76-77 (2000).

4. Tax. The act or an instance of accounting for a taxpayer's realized gain or loss for the purpose of income-tax reporting. Cf. NONRECOGNITION PROVISION; REALIZATION (2). [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3115, 3178; Taxation ↷3466.] 5. An employer's acknowledgment that a union has the right to act as a bargaining agent for employees. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷1160.] 6. Int'l law. Official action by a country acknowledging, expressly or by implication, de jure or de facto, the existence of a government or a country, or a situation such as a change of territorial sovereignty. [Cases: International Law ↷4.] 7. RULE OF RECOGNITION. — recognize, vb.

recognition clause. Real estate. A clause providing that, when a tract of land has been subdivided for development, the ultimate buyers of individual lots are protected if the developer defaults on the mortgage. • Such a clause is typically found in a blanket mortgage or a contract for deed.

recognition picketing. See organizational picketing under PICKETING.

recognition strike. See STRIKE.

recognitor (ri-kog-nə-tər), n. 1. Hist. A member of a jury impaneled on an assize or inquest. See RECOGNITION (1), (2). 2. Rare. RECOGNIZOR.

recognizance (ri-kog-nə-zənts). (14c) 1. A bond or obligation, made in court, by which a person promises to perform some act or observe some condition, such as to appear when called, to pay a debt, or to keep the peace; specif., an in-court acknowledgment of an obligation in a penal sum, conditioned on the performance or non-performance of a particular act. • Most commonly, a recognizance takes the form of a bail bond that guarantees an unjailed criminal defendant's return for a court date <the defendant was released on his own recognizance>. See RELEASE ON RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail ↷54, 63; Recognizances ↷1.]

"Recognizances are aptly described as 'contracts made with the Crown in its judicial capacity.' A recognizance is a writing acknowledged by the party to it before a judge or officer having authority for the purpose, and enrolled in a court of record. It usually takes the form of a promise, with penalties for the breach of it, to keep the peace, to be of good behavior, or to appear at the assizes." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 80-81 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"A recognizance is an acknowledgment of an obligation in court by the recognizor binding him to make a certain payment subject to the condition that on the performance of a specified act the obligation shall be discharged." 1 Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 6, at 18 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

personal recognizance. (18c) The release of a defendant in a criminal case in which the court takes the defendant's word that he or she will appear for a scheduled matter or when told to appear. • This type of release dispenses with the necessity of the person's posting money or having a surety sign a bond with the court. [Cases: Bail ↷40.]

2. See bail bond under BOND (2).

recognized gain. See GAIN (3).

recognized loss. See LOSS.

recognized market. See MARKET.

recognizee (ri-kog-nə-zee). (16c) A person in whose favor a recognizance is made; one to whom someone is bound by a recognizance.

recognizor (ri-kog-nə-zor). (16c) A person who is obligated under a recognizance; one who is bound by a recognizance. — Also termed recognitor.

"A recognizance is an acknowledgment upon record of a former debt, and he who so acknowledges such debt to be due is termed the recognizor, and he to whom or for whose benefit he makes such acknowledgment is termed the recognizee." John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 8 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

recollection, n. (17c) 1. The action of recalling something to the mind, esp. through conscious effort. 2. Something recalled to the mind. See PAST RECOLLECTION RECORDED; PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED. — recollect, vb.

recombinant (ri-kom-bə-nənt), adj. Patents. Of, relating to, or describing the introduction of DNA from one living organism into another.

recombinant DNA technology. Patents. The science of mutating organisms by splicing sections of one organism's DNA onto that of another. — Abbr. rDNA.

recommit. Parliamentary law. To refer (a motion) back to a committee that has considered it. • The motion is called "recommit" rather than "re-refer" for the sake of euphony. See REFER. Cf. re-refer under REFER. — recommit, n.

recompensable. See COMPENSABLE.

recompensation. Scots law. In an action for debt, a plaintiff's allegation that money owed to a defendant has already been paid and should not be considered as a setoff against an award to the plaintiff.

recompense (rek-əm-pents), n. (15c) Repayment, compensation, or retribution for something, esp. an injury or loss. — recompense, vb.

reconciliation (rek-ən-sil-ee-ay-shən), n. (14c) 1. Restoration of harmony between persons or things that had been in conflict . 2. Family law. Voluntary resumption, after a separation, of full marital relations between spouses <the court dismissed the divorce petition after the parties' reconciliation>. Cf. CONDONATION (2). [Cases: Divorce ↷ 48; Husband and Wife ↷ 279(3).] 3. Accounting. An adjustment of accounts so that they agree, esp. by allowing for outstanding items <reconciliation of the checking account and the bank statement>. — reconcile (rek-ən-sil), vb.

reconciliation agreement. Family law. A contract between spouses who have had marital difficulties but who now wish to save the marital relationship, usu. by specifying certain economic actions that might ameliorate pressures on the marriage. • This type of agreement serves a limited purpose. In fact, many states have statutes prohibiting enforcement of contracts for domestic services, so if the agreement governs anything other than economic behavior, it may be unenforceable. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷ 30.]

reconciliation statement. An accounting or financial statement in which discrepancies are adjusted.

reconduction, n. 1. Civil law. The renewal of a lease. — Also termed relocation. See TACIT RELOCATION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↷ 90.] 2. Int'l law. The forcible return of aliens (esp. illegal aliens, destitute or diseased aliens, or alien criminals who have served their punishment) to their country of origin. — Also termed (in sense 2) renvoi. — reconduct, vb.

reconsider, vb. To discuss or take up (a matter) again <legislators voted to reconsider the bill>. • Under parliamentary law, a motion to reconsider sets aside a certain vote already taken and restores the motion on which the vote is being reconsidered to its status immediately before the vote occurred. Making a motion to reconsider suspends a vote already taken until the assembly decides whether to reconsider it. — reconsideration, n.

"The motion to reconsider is a distinctively American motion (it was first made the subject of a rule in the U. S. House of Representatives in 1802).

"This motion was unknown to the early British Parliament. When Parliament (the British Congress) passed an act, that act then stood as the judgment of the body until another law or supplementary act was afterward passed explaining or amending the previous act — a slow-moving and time-consuming process in the estimation of American lawmakers.

"Consequently, the American love for celerity invented the motion to reconsider, and cleverly made it a mere procedural or restoratory motion. As a result, the motion to reconsider now makes possible immediate reconsideration of a question, even on the same day." George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 154 (1969).

reconsider and enter on the minutes. Parliamentary law. To make a motion to reconsider for the purpose of suspending a vote already taken and bringing it back up at the next meeting. — Also termed reconsider and enter; reconsider and have it entered on the minutes.

reconsignment. (16c) A change in the terms of a consignment while the goods are in transit. See CONSIGNMENT. [Cases: Carriers ↷ 73, 178.]

reconstruction. 1. The act or process of rebuilding, recreating, or reorganizing something <an expert in accident reconstruction>. 2. Patents. A rebuilding of a broken, worn-out, or otherwise inoperative patented article in such a way that a new article is created, thus resulting in an infringement <the replacement of the machine's essential parts was an infringing reconstruction rather than a permissible repair>. Cf. REPAIR DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ↷ 255.] 3. (cap.) The process by which the Southern states that had seceded during the Civil War were readmitted into the Union during the years following the war (i.e., from 1865 to 1877) <the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution are a lasting legacy of Reconstruction>.

recontinuance. (16c) Hist. 1. Resumption or renewal. 2. The recovery of an incorporeal hereditament that had been wrongfully deprived.

reconvention. Civil law. The act or process of making a counterclaim. See COUNTERCLAIM. [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim ↷ 6.]

reconventional demand. See DEMAND (1).

reconventionone (ree-kən-ven-shee-oh-nee). [Law Latin] Hist. By reconvention. See RECONVENTION.

reconversion. The notional or imaginary process by which an earlier constructive conversion (a change of personal into real property or vice versa) is annulled and the converted property restored to its original character. See equitable conversion under CONVERSION (1). [Cases: Conversion ↷ 22.]

reconveyance, n. (16c) The restoration or return of something (esp. an estate or title) to a former owner or holder. — reconvey, vb.

defective record. (18c) 1. A trial record that fails to conform to requirements of appellate rules. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷ 634-645; Criminal Law ↷ 1109; Federal Courts ↷ 698.] 2. A flawed real-estate title resulting from a defect on the property's record in the registry of deeds. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 231(6).] public record. (16c) A record that a governmental unit is required by law to keep, such as land deeds kept at a county courthouse. • Public records are generally open to view by the public. Cf. public document under DOCUMENT. [Cases: Records ↷ 1, 30, 54.]

- reporter's record. In some jurisdictions, a trial transcript. — Also termed stenographer's record.
- silent record. Criminal procedure. A record that fails to disclose that a defendant voluntarily and knowingly entered a plea, waived a right to counsel, or took any other action affecting his or her rights. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻1144.1–1144.20.]
- stenographer's record. See reporter's record.
- record, vb. To deposit (an original or authentic official copy of a document) with an authority <she recorded the deed in the county property office>. [Cases: Records ↻7.]
- recorda (ri-kor-də). Hist. In England, records that contained the judgments and pleadings in actions tried before the barons of the Exchequer. Cf. ORIGINALIA.
- record agent. See INSURANCE AGENT.
- recordal. See RECORDATION.
- recordare (ree-kor-dair-ee), n. [Law Latin] See RECORDARI.
- recordari (ree-kor-dair-i). A writ to bring up for review, as a substitute for an appeal, a judgment of a justice of the peace or other court not of record. • Writs of recordari are most common in North Carolina but are used infrequently in other states. — Also spelled recordare. [Cases: Justices of the Peace ↻164(5).]
- recordari facias loquelam (ree-kor-dair-i fay-shee-əs lə-kwee-ləm), n. [Law Latin “you cause the plaintiff to be recorded”] Hist. In England, a writ by which a suit or plaint in replevin could be removed from a county court to a superior court (esp. to one of the courts of Westminster Hall). — Abbr. re. fa. lo. See PLAINT (1).
- recordation (rek-ər-day-shən), n. The act or process of recording an instrument, such as a deed or mortgage, in a public registry. • Recordation generally perfects a person's interest in the property against later purchasers (including later mortgagees), but the effect of recordation depends on the type of recording act in effect. — Also termed recordal. [Cases: Records ↻6.]
- recordatur (ri-kor-də-tuur). Hist. An order to record the verdict returned in a nisi prius case.
- record date. See DATE.

recta gubernatio (rek-tə g[y]oo-bər-nay-shee-oh), n. [Latin "right government"] A government in which the highest power, however strong and unified, is neither arbitrary nor irresponsible, and derives from a law that is superior to itself. — Also termed legitima gubernatio.

rectification (rek-tə-fi-kay-shən), n. (18c) 1. A court's equitable correction of a contractual term that is misstated; the judicial alteration of a written contract to make it conform to the true intention of the parties when, in its original form, it did not reflect this intention. • As an equitable remedy, the court alters the terms as written so as to express the true intention of the parties. The court might do this when the rent is wrongly recorded in a lease or when the area of land is incorrectly cited in a deed. [Cases: Reformation of Instruments ↷ 1.] 2. A court's slight modification of words of a statute as a means of carrying out what the court is convinced must have been the legislative intent. • For example, courts engage in rectification when they read and as or or shall as may, as they frequently must do because of unfastidious drafting. See REFORMATION. — rectify, vb.

rectification of boundaries. Hist. An action to determine or correct the boundaries between two adjoining pieces of land. [Cases: Boundaries ↷ 27.]

rectification of register. Hist. A process by which a person whose name was wrongly entered in or omitted from a record can compel the recorder to correct the error.

reduction improbation. See IMPROBATION.

reduction in force. See LAYOFF.

reduction to practice. Patents. The embodiment of the concept of an invention, either by physical construction and operation or by filing a patent application with a disclosure adequate to teach a person reasonably skilled in the art how to make and work the invention without undue experimentation. • The date of reduction to practice is critical in determining priority between inventors competing for a patent on the same invention. See INVENTION. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 90(5).]

actual reduction to practice. The empirical demonstration that an invention performs its intended purpose and is therefore complete for patent purposes; the use of an idea or invention — as by testing it — to establish that the idea or invention will perform its intended purpose. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995).

constructive reduction to practice. The documented demonstration that an invention will perform its intended purpose, contained in a patent application that provides enough detail that a person skilled in the art could make and test the invention; the filing of a patent application for an invention or design. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 90(5).]

vicarious reduction to practice. A doctrine that treats one party's actual reduction to practice of an invention as the opposing (usu. complaining) party's actual reduction to practice. • In a two-party interference, proof of derivation is usu. sufficient; showing an actual reduction to practice is unnecessary. The doctrine is more important in a three-party interference. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 90(5).]

reenactment rule. (1941) In statutory construction, the principle that when reenacting a law, the legislature implicitly adopts well-settled judicial or administrative interpretations of the law. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 223.5.] reentry, n. (15c) 1. The act or an instance of retaking possession of land by someone who formerly held the land and who reserved the right to retake it when the new holder let it go. 2. A landlord's resumption of possession of leased premises upon the tenant's default under the lease. See POWER OF TERMINATION — reenter, vb.

reeve (reev). Hist. 1. A ministerial officer of high rank having local jurisdiction; the chief magistrate of a hundred. • The reeve executed process, kept the peace, and enforced the law by holding court within the hundred. 2. A minor officer serving the Crown at the hundred level; a bailiff or deputy-sheriff. 3. An overseer of a manor, parish, or the like. — Also spelled reve. — Also termed greve.

"All the freeholders, unless relieved by special exemption, 'owed suit' at the hundred-moot, and the reeve of the hundred presided over it. In Anglo-Saxon times, the reeve was an independent official, and the hundred-moot was not a preliminary stage to the shire-moot at all. . . . But after the Conquest the hundred assembly, now called a court as all the others were, lost its importance very quickly. Pleas of land were taken from it, and its criminal jurisdiction limited to one of holding suspects in temporary detention. The reeve of the hundred became the deputy of the sheriff, and the chief purpose of holding the hundred court was to enable the sheriff to hold his tourn and to permit a 'view of frankpledge,' i.e., an inspection of the person who ought to belong to the frankpledge system." Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 174-75 (1936).

borough reeve. Hist. In England, the head of an unincorporated municipality.

shire-reeve. The reeve of a shire. • The shire-reeve was a forerunner of the sheriff. — Also spelled shire-reve. — Also termed shire-gerefa.

reexamination, n. (17c) 1. REDIRECT EXAMINATION <the attorney focused on the defendant's alibi during reexamination>. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 285.] 2. Patents. A proceeding by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine whether prior art renders one or more claims of an already-issued patent invalid; specif., an administrative procedure by which a party can seek review of a patent on the basis of prior art by the PTO <the alleged infringer, hoping to avoid liability, sought reexamination of the patent to narrow its scope>. • A reexamination may be sought by anyone, even the patentee or an anonymous informant, at any time during the life of a patent. Only patents and publications may be considered as prior art. 35 USCA §§ 301-05. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 134, 140.] — reexamine, vb.

ex parte reexamination. A reexamination procedure, created in the early 1980s, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art and responding to a patentee's statements regarding the new prior art, but that excludes the challenger from further participation in the examination process. • Ex parte reexamination does not employ discovery mechanisms and witnesses are not examined. The challenger also has no right to participate in an appeal. See 35 USCA §§ 302–07. Cf. inter partes reexamination. [Cases: Patents ↻140.] inter partes reexamination. A reexamination procedure, created in 1999, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art, to respond to a patentee's statements regarding the new prior art, to address the patentee's responses to any office actions, and to request a hearing. • Both parties must serve each other with documents filed in the proceeding, but there is no discovery and witnesses are not examined. Either party may appeal the PTO's final decision on patentability. Inter partes reexamination is available to patents that issue from original applications that were filed on or after November 29, 1999. See 35 USCA §§ 311–318. Cf. ex parte reexamination. [Cases: Patents ↻140.]

reexamination certificate. Patents. A certificate issued by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office at the conclusion of a reexamination proceeding, confirming that a patent has been reexamined and the claims have been found to be patentable, confirming that claims determined to be unpatentable have been canceled, or incorporating into the patent any amended or new claims determined to be patentable. 35 USCA § 307. [Cases: Patents ↻140.]

reexchange, n. 1. A second or new exchange. 2. The process of recovering the expenses that resulted from the dishonor of a bill of exchange in a foreign country. 3. The expenses themselves.

reexecution. (18c) The equitable remedy by which a lost or destroyed deed or other instrument is replaced. • Equity compels the party or parties to execute a new deed or instrument if a claimant properly proves a right under one that has been lost or destroyed. [Cases: Lost Instruments ↻12.]

reexport, n. 1. The act of exporting again something imported. 2. A good or commodity that is exported again. — reexport, vb.

reextent. Hist. A second extent made upon complaint that the earlier extent was improper. See EXTENT.

referee. (17c) 1. A type of master appointed by a court to assist with certain proceedings. • In some jurisdictions, referees take testimony before reporting to the court. See MASTER (2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1890; Reference ↻35–77.] 2. See judicial officer (3) under OFFICER.

referee in bankruptcy. A federal judicial officer who administers bankruptcy proceedings. • Abolished by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, these referees were replaced by bankruptcy judges. — Also termed register in bankruptcy. See bankruptcy judge under JUDGE. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻2123.]

reference, n. (16c) 1. The act of sending or directing to another for information, service, consideration, or decision; specif., the act of sending a case to a master or referee for information or decision. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1871; Reference ↻1.]

general reference. (18c) A court's reference of a case to a referee, usu. with all parties' consent, to decide all issues of fact and law. • The referee's decision stands as the judgment of the court. [Cases: Reference ↻1.]

special reference. (1831) A court's reference of a case to a referee for decisions on specific questions of fact. • The special referee makes findings and reports them to the trial judge, who treats them as advisory only and not as binding decisions. [Cases: Reference ↻1.]

2. An order sending a case to a master or referee for information or decision. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1888; Reference ↻29.] 3. Mention or citation of one document or source in another document or source. [Cases: Contracts ↻166.] 4. Patents. Information — such as that contained in a publication, another patent, or another patent application — that a patent examiner considers to be anticipatory prior art or proof of unpredictability in the art that forms a basis for one or more of an applicant's claims to be rejected. See CITATION (4). [Cases: Patents ↻57.1.] — refer, vb.

referendo singula singulis. See REDDENDO SINGULA SINGULIS.

referendum. (1847) 1. The process of referring a state legislative act, a state constitutional amendment, or an important public issue to the people for final approval by popular vote. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷540–574; Statutes ↷341–367.] 2. A vote taken by this method. 3. Int'l law. An ambassador's request for instructions on subject matter that the ambassador does not have sufficient power to address. Pl. referendums, referenda. Cf. INITIATIVE; PLEBISCITE.

referral. (1927) The act or an instance of sending or directing to another for information, service, consideration, or decision <referral of the client to an employment-law specialist> <referral of the question to the board of directors>.

referral sales contract. A dual agreement consisting of an agreement by the consumer to purchase goods or services (usu. at an inflated price) and an agreement by the seller to compensate the consumer for each customer (or potential customer) referred to the seller. — Also termed referral sales agreement. Cf. PYRAMID SCHEME. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↷231.]

"The problem inherent in a referral sales contract is the problem inherent in a chain letter — the success of the arrangement depends on an inexhaustible supply of customers. For example, if each buyer submits 25 names and each of these 'referrals' becomes a buyer under a similar agreement, the completion of the seventh round of referrals requires 6.1 trillion persons. . . . Both courts and legislatures have acted against referral sales. . . . The Uniform Consumer Credit Code prohibits the use of referral sales schemes in which the rebate is conditioned on 'the occurrence of an event after the time the consumer agrees to buy or lease.' In other words, a referral scheme keyed to the consumer merely furnishing names is not affected; a referral scheme keyed to the consumer furnishing names of people who actually become customers is prohibited." David G. Epstein & Steve H. Nickles, Consumer Law in a Nutshell 39 (2d ed. 1981).

refinancing, n. An exchange of an old debt for a new debt, as by negotiating a different interest rate or term or by repaying the existing loan with money acquired from a new loan. — refinance, vb.

reformation (ref-ər-may-shən), n. (1829) An equitable remedy by which a court will modify a written agreement to reflect the actual intent of the parties, usu. to correct fraud or mutual mistake in the writing, such as an incomplete property description in a deed. ● In cases of mutual mistake, the actual intended agreement must usu. be established by clear and convincing evidence. In cases of fraud, there must be clear evidence of what the agreement would have been but for the fraud. See RECTIFICATION. [Cases: Reformation of Instruments ↷1.] — reform, vb.

"The standard explanation of reformation is that the parties had an actual agreement, and that the writing does not reflect that agreement. . . . If the parties made a mistake about the premises of their agreement, about some fact in the world outside their word-processing machines, reformation is not a solution. The court cannot reform the contract because it cannot know what the parties would have agreed to but for the mistake." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 39 (3d ed. 2002).

reformation condition. See conditional bequest under BEQUEST.

reformatory punishment. See PUNISHMENT.

reformatory, n. (1834) A penal institution in which young offenders, esp. minors, are disciplined and trained or educated. — Also termed reform school. [Cases: Infants ↷271.]

Reg. FD. See REGULATION FAIR DISCLOSURE.

reg. gen. abbr. REGULA GENERALIS.

Regiam Majestatem (ree-jee-əm maj-ə-stay-təm). [Latin "the (books of the) Royal Majesty"] Scots law. An ancient collection of Scottish laws, so called from its opening words. • The four-book collection is generally believed to be genuine, although its origins are widely disputed. It was partly copied from Glanville's treatise De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliae, as appears from the works' similarities and the fact that the Glanville treatise opens with the words Regiam potestatem. It was at one time believed to have been compiled by David I, but this supposition is unfounded. Still others believed that Edward I was responsible for the compilation as part of his efforts to take over Scotland and assimilate the laws of that country and England, but modern scholars reject this view. It was probably compiled by an unknown cleric shortly before 1320.

regicide (rej-ə-sid). 1. The killing or murder of a king. 2. One who kills or murders a king, esp. to whom one is subject. — regicidal, adj.

2. Securities. The complete process of preparing to sell a newly issued security to the public <the security is currently in registration>. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻11.10-11.50.] — register, vb.

shelf registration. Registration with the SEC of securities to be sold over time, the purpose being to avoid the delays and market uncertainties of individual registration.

"It is generally contemplated that the entire allotment of securities covered by a registered offering will be made available for purchase on the effective date. This is not always the case, however. For example, insiders, promoters or underwriters might receive securities directly from the issuer with an intent to resell at a later date. . . . [I]t may be desirable to get a debt offering all ready to go but wait for a propitious moment to release it. These and other delayed offerings have led to what is known as shelf registration. In a shelf registration the registration statement is filed but the securities are put on the shelf until the manner and date of the offering are determined." Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 3.8, at 119 (2d ed. 1994).

registration and community-notification law. See MEGAN'S LAW.

reinscription, n. Civil law. A second or renewed recording of a mortgage or other title document. [Cases: Mortgages ↻ 96.] — reinscribe, vb.

reinstatement, vb. To place again in a former state or position; to restore <the judge reinstated the judgment that had been vacated>. — reinstatement, n.

reinsurance. Insurance of all or part of one insurer's risk by a second insurer, who accepts the risk in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed reassurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3593.]

“The laying off of risk by means of reinsurance traditionally serves three basic purposes. First, reinsurance can increase the capacity of the insurer to accept risk. The insurer may be enabled to take on larger individual risks, or a large number of smaller risks, or a combination of both. . . . Secondly, reinsurance can promote financial stability by ameliorating the adverse consequences of an unexpected accumulation of losses or of single catastrophic losses, because these will, at least in part, be absorbed by reinsurers. Thirdly, reinsurance can strengthen the solvency of an insurer from the point of view of any regulations under which the insurer must operate which provide for a minimum ‘solvency margin,’ generally expressed as a ratio of net premium income over capital and free reserves.” P.T. O'Neill & J.W. Woloniecki, The Law of Reinsurance in England and Bermuda 4 (1998).

excess reinsurance. Reinsurance in which a reinsurer assumes liability only for an amount of insurance that exceeds a specified sum. See excess insurance under INSURANCE.

facultative reinsurance. Reinsurance of an individual risk at the option (the “faculty”) of the reinsurer. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3593.]

flat reinsurance. Reinsurance (esp. of marine insurance) that cannot be canceled or modified.

treaty reinsurance. Reinsurance under a broad agreement of all risks in a given class as soon as they are insured by the direct insurer. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3593.]

reinsurance treaty. A contract of reinsurance (usu. long-term) covering different classes or lines of business of the reinsured (such as professional liability, property, etc.) and obligating the reinsurer in advance to accept the cession of covered risks. • Rather than receive individual notice of each specific claim covered, the treaty reinsurer will generally receive periodic reports providing basic information on the losses paid. — Also termed treaty of reinsurance. See BORDEREAU. Cf. FACULTATIVE CERTIFICATE. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3593.]

reinsured, n. An insurer that transfers all or part of a risk it underwrites to a reinsurer, usu. along with a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed cedent; cedant. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3593.]

reinsurer. An insurer that assumes all or part of a risk underwritten by another insurer, usu. in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. [Cases: Insurance ↷3593.]

reinvested dividend. See DIVIDEND.

reinvestment. 1. The addition of interest earned on a monetary investment to the principal sum. 2. A second, additional, or repeated investment; esp., the application of dividends or other distributions toward the purchase of additional shares (as of a stock or a mutual fund).

reissuable error. Patents. A type of nondeceptive mistake in a patent that may be corrected in a reissue patent. 35 USCA § 252. [Cases: Patents ↷136.]

reissuable note. See NOTE (1).

reissue. 1. An abstractor's certificate attesting to the correctness of an abstract. • A reissue is an important precaution when the abstract comprises an original abstract brought down to a certain date and then several later continuations or extensions. [Cases: Abstracts of Title ↷3.] 2. See reissue patent under PATENT (3).

reissue patent. See PATENT (3).

rei suae providus (ree-1 s[ə]oo-ee prə-vi-dəs). [Latin] Hist. Careful of one's property.

"Interdiction, whether voluntary or judicial, can only be recalled or removed by an interlocutor of Court, and it affords a good ground on which to apply for the removal of the restraint imposed by interdiction that the interdicted has become rei suae providus." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 546-47 (4th ed. 1894).

REIT (reet). abbr. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

reject, assume or. See ASSUME OR REJECT.

rejecting, n. A parent's or caregiver's pattern of refusing to acknowledge a child's worth or legitimate needs. Cf. ISOLATING; IGNORING.

rejection. (16c) 1. A refusal to accept a contractual offer. [Cases: Contracts ↷21.] 2. A refusal to accept tendered goods as contractual performance. • Under the UCC, a buyer's rejection of nonconforming goods must be made within a reasonable time after tender or delivery, and notice of the rejection must be given to the seller. [Cases: Sales ↷168(4), 179(6).] Cf. REPUDIATION (2); RESCISSION; REVOCATION (1). 3. Parliamentary law. Failure of adoption or ratification. See LOST (3). 4. Patents. A patent examiner's finding in an office action that a claim in an application is unpatentable. Cf. OBJECTION (4); RESTRICTION (4). [Cases: Patents ↷108.] — reject, vb.

aggregation rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is a list of unrelated elements that, taken together, do not assert a claim. [Cases: Patents ↷25.] alternativeness rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a broad monopoly on the invention as disclosed and on other unspecified variations. • For example, a claim using a phrase such as "and similar materials" would probably be too broad to be allowed. [Cases: Patents ↷124.]

duplicate-claiming rejection. The nonart rejection of a patent claim because it is not substantially different from another claim.

exhausted-combination rejection. See old-combination rejection.

failure-to-disclose-best-mode rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the inventor has not disclosed the best way to use the invention. • To warrant rejection, the examiner must find deliberate concealment or a description so poorly drafted as to amount to concealment. [Cases: Patents ↷98.]

final rejection. A patent examiner's finding, in a second or subsequent office action, that a claim in an application is unpatentable on the merits. • A final rejection is made in the final office action. Despite the misleading name, a final rejection need not end the prosecution. The rejection can be appealed, or the application can be reexamined or continued in another application. A rejection may also be appealed to the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences. A decision of that Board may be reviewed by the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia or appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. 35 USCA §§ 141-45. [Cases: Patents ↷108.]

formal rejection. Rejection of a patent claim because of an error in format rather than substance. • A formal rejection is actually an objection rather than a rejection, since it requires no substantive change in the claim. — Also termed nonart rejection. [Cases: Patents ↷104.] functional rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the grounds that it broadly claims a function but does not disclose enough structure to account for achieving that function. Cf. FUNCTIONAL LIMITATION. [Cases: Patents ↷101(8).]

inaccuracy rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is not consistent with the description.

incompleteness rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that an element of the device or a step in the process has been left out.

interference-estoppel rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant failed to bring the claim into a previous interference contest where its priority could have been determined. [Cases: Patents ↷112.4.]

judicially-created-double-patenting rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is an obvious variation of another patented invention by the same inventor. — Also termed obviousness-type double-patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents ↷120.]

lack-of-antecedent-basis rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that a reference either in the specification or in the claim is missing.

lack-of-enablement rejection. See nonenablement rejection.

lack-of-utility rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the invention is inoperative, frivolous, fraudulent, or against the public interest. • The classic examples are perpetual-motion machines (inoperative), cures for the common cold (frivolous because believed impossible, and also probably fraudulent), and gambling devices (formerly seen as against the public interest). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 46.]

new-matter rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that an amendment contains new matter. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 109.]

nonart rejection. See formal rejection.

nonenablement rejection. Rejection of a patent application claim on the ground that its specification does not teach enough to enable a person skilled in the art to make and use the invention. — Also termed lack-of-enablement rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 99.]

obviousness-type double-patenting rejection. See judicially created double-patenting rejection.

old-combination rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that, despite the fact that one or more elements perform in a different way, all the elements perform the same function as a previously patented invention. • The improved element may be patentable, but the combination may not be. — Also termed exhausted-combination rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 26(1.1).]

prolixity rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the language is so wordy and tedious that it tends more to hide than to disclose the invention.

rejection on issues of interference. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant has lost a final judgment of priority regarding the claim in an interference contest. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 112.4.]

same-invention double patenting rejection. See statutory double patenting rejection.

Section 101 rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it is based on nonstatutory subject matter. 35 USCA § 101.

Section 102 rejection. Rejection of a patent application for lack of novelty. 35 USCA § 102. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 37.]

Section 103 rejection. Rejection of a patent application for obviousness. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 16.1.]

Section 112 rejection. See vague-and-indefinite rejection.

shotgun rejection. Slang. Denial of all or almost all claims in a patent application by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, esp. in the first office action.

statutory double patenting rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is the same subject matter as an already-patented invention by the same inventor. • This rejection is based on

35 USCA § 101. — Also termed same-invention double patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 120.]

undue-breadth rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a patent monopoly on more than the invention. • For instance, a functional claim is too broad if it purports to include every other possible way of accomplishing that function. A claim on a chemical is more likely to be rejected for undue breadth than a claim on a machine, because future discoveries are less predictable. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 124.]

undue-multiplicity-of-claims rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it makes an unreasonable number of claims. See AGGREGATION OF CLAIMS. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 124.]

vague-and-indefinite rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that a person of ordinary skill in the art could not clearly understand it. • For example, terms used in more than one sense could make the meaning unclear. — Also termed Section 112 rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 101(6).]

rejoinder, n. (15c) Common-law pleading. The defendant's answer to the plaintiff's reply (or replication). [Cases: Pleading ⇨ 183.] — rejoin, vb.

related good. Trademarks. A good that infringes a trademark because it appears to come from the same source as the marked good, despite not competing with the marked good. • For example, a cutting tool named "McKnife" might infringe the "McDonald's" trademark as a related good.

related proceeding. Bankruptcy. A proceeding that involves a claim that will affect the administration of the debtor's estate (such as a tort action between the debtor and a third party), but that does not arise under bankruptcy law and could be adjudicated in a state court. • A related proceeding must be adjudicated in federal district court unless the parties consent to bankruptcy-court jurisdiction or unless the district court refers the matter to the bankruptcy court or to state court. — Also termed noncore proceeding. Cf. CORE PROCEEDING (1). [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2043–2063.]

relation back, n. (18c) 1. The doctrine that an act done at a later time is, under certain circumstances, treated as though it occurred at an earlier time. • In federal civil procedure, an amended pleading may relate back, for purposes of the statute of limitations, to the time when the original pleading was filed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c). [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 127.] 2. A judicial application of that doctrine. — Also termed doctrine of relation back. Cf. NUNC PRO TUNC. — relate back, vb.

relationship. The nature of the association between two or more people; esp., a legally recognized association that makes a difference in the participants' legal rights and duties of care.

attorney–client relationship. The formal legal representation of a person by a lawyer. • An attorney–client relationship may be found, for disciplinary purposes, without any formal agreement. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨64.]

confidential relationship. 1. See fiduciary relationship. 2. Trade secrets. A relationship in which one person has a duty to the other not to disclose proprietary information. • A confidential relationship can be expressly established, as by the terms of an employment contract. It can also be implied when one person knows or should know that the information is confidential, and the other person reasonably believes that the first person has consented to keep the information confidential. A confidential relationship might be implied, for instance, between two people negotiating the sale of a business. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨418; Labor and Employment ⇨304.]

doctor–patient relationship. The association between a medical provider and one who is being diagnosed or treated. • The relationship imposes a duty on the doctor to ensure that the patient gives informed consent for treatment. [Cases: Health ⇨576, 615.]

employer–employee relationship. The association between a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another, who in turn has the right to control the person's physical conduct in the course of that service. • At common law, the relationship was termed "master–servant." That term is still used often, but "employer–employee" dominates in modern legal usage. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨23.]

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship.

fiduciary relationship. (1846) A relationship in which one person is under a duty to act for the benefit of another on matters within the scope of the relationship. • Fiduciary relationships — such as trustee–beneficiary, guardian–ward, principal–agent, and attorney–client — require an unusually high degree of care. Fiduciary relationships usu. arise in one of four situations: (1) when one person places trust in the faithful integrity of another, who as a result gains superiority or influence over the first, (2) when one person assumes control and responsibility over another, (3) when one person has a duty to act for or give advice to another on matters falling within the scope of the relationship, or (4) when there is a specific relationship that has traditionally been recognized as involving fiduciary duties, as with a lawyer and a client or a stockbroker and a customer. — Also termed fiduciary relation; confidential relationship. Cf. special relationship. [Cases: Fraud ⇨7.]

master–servant relationship. The association between one in authority and a subordinate, esp. between an employer and an employee. • At common law, this term also designated the husband–wife relationship for purposes of analyzing loss of consortium, but that usage is now obsolete. — Also termed employer– employee relationship. See MASTER AND SERVANT. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨23.]

parent–child relationship. The association between an adult and a minor in the adult's care, esp. an offspring or an adoptee. • The relationship imposes a high duty of care on the adult, including the duties to support, to rescue, to supervise and control, and to educate. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨1.]

professional relationship. An association that involves one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. • Examples include one's relationship with a lawyer, doctor, insurer, banker, and the like.

special relationship. A nonfiduciary relationship having an element of trust, arising esp. when one person trusts another to exercise a reasonable degree of care and the other knows or ought to know about the reliance. Cf. fiduciary relationship. [Cases: Negligence ⇨214, 220.]

trust relationship. An association based on one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. — Also termed fiducial relationship. [Cases: Fraud ⇨7.]

relationship rape. See RAPE.

relative, n. (14c) A person connected with another by blood or affinity; a person who is kin with another. — Also termed relation; kinsman. Cf. NEXT OF KIN (1).

blood relative. (1863) One who shares an ancestor with another.

collateral relative. (18c) A relative who is not in the direct line of descent, such as a cousin. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ⇨32–41.]

relative by affinity. (1821) A person who is related solely as the result of a marriage and not by blood or adoption. • A person is a relative by affinity (1) to any blood or adopted relative of his or her spouse, and (2) to any spouse of his or her blood and adopted relatives. Based on the theory that marriage makes two people one, the relatives of each spouse become the other spouse's relatives by affinity. See AFFINITY. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ⇨21; Wills ⇨502.]

relative of the half blood. A collateral relative who shares one common ancestor. • A half brother, for example, is a relative of the half blood. See half blood under BLOOD. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ⇨35; Wills ⇨506(2).]

relative confession. See CONFESSION.

relative-convenience doctrine. The principle that an injunction or other equitable relief may be denied if granting it would cause one party great inconvenience but denying it would cause the other party little or no inconvenience. [Cases: Injunction ⇨12, 23, 138.15.]

relative fact. See FACT.

relative nullity. See NULLITY.

relative power. See POWER (5).

relative-responsibility statute. A law requiring adult children to support or provide basic necessities for their indigent elderly parents. [Cases: Parent and Child ⇨ 4.]

relator. (17c) 1. The real party in interest in whose name a state or an attorney general brings a lawsuit. See EX REL. [Cases: Attorney General ⇨ 9.] 2. The applicant for a writ, esp. a writ of mandamus, prohibition, or quo warranto. [Cases: Mandamus ⇨ 144; Prohibition ⇨ 19; Quo Warranto ⇨ 30.] 3. A person who furnishes information on which a civil or criminal case is based; an informer.

relatrix (ri-lay-triks). Archaic. A female relator.

relaxatio (ree-lak-say-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. An instrument by which one relinquishes a right or claim to another; a release.

release, n. (14c) 1. Liberation from an obligation, duty, or demand; the act of giving up a right or claim to the person against whom it could have been enforced <the employee asked for a release from the noncompete agreement>. — Also termed discharge; surrender. 2. The relinquishment or concession of a right, title, or claim <Benson's effective release of the claim against Thompson's estate precluded his filing a lawsuit>. [Cases: Release ⇨ 1.] 3. A written discharge, acquittance, or receipt; specif., a writing — either under seal or supported by sufficient consideration — stating that one or more of the worker's contractual or compensatory rights are discharged <Jones signed the release before accepting the cash from Hawkins>. • Beneficiaries of an estate are routinely required to sign a release discharging the estate from further liability before the executor or administrator distributes the property. 4. A written authorization or permission for publication <the newspaper obtained a release from the witness before printing his picture on the front page>. 5. The act of conveying an estate or right to another, or of legally disposing of it <the release of the easement on February 14>. 6. A deed or document effecting a conveyance <the legal description in the release was defective>. See deed of release under DEED. [Cases: Deeds ⇨ 23.] 7. The action of freeing or the fact of being freed from restraint or confinement <he became a model citizen after his release from prison>. 8. A document giving formal discharge from custody <after the sheriff signed the release, the prisoner was free to go>. — release, vb.

conditional release. (18c) 1. A discharge from an obligation based on some condition, the failure of which defeats the release. 2. An early discharge of a prison inmate, who is then subject to the rules and regulations of parole. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 248.]

marginal release. Property. An entry made in the margin of a property record by the recorder of deeds to show that a claim against the property has been satisfied.

mutual release. A simultaneous exchange of releases of legal claims held by two or more parties against each other. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 14.]

partial release. (1837) A release of a portion of a creditor's claims against property; esp., a mortgagee's release of specified parcels covered by a blanket mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 310.]

Pierringer release. A release that allows a defendant in a negligence suit to settle with the plaintiff for a share of the damages and insulates the settling defendant against contribution claims by nonsettling defendants. • This type of release was first described in Pierringer v. Hoyer, 124 N.W.2d 106, 110–11 (Wis. 1963). It is used in some jurisdictions that do not have contribution statutes. — Also spelled (incorrectly) Perringer release. [Cases: Release ⇨ 29(4).]

study release. (1970) A program that allows a prisoner to be released for a few hours at a time to attend classes at a nearby college or technical institution. — Also termed study furlough. [Cases: Convicts ⇨ 2.]

unconditional release. (1871) The final discharge of a prison inmate from custody. [Cases: Release ⇨ 14.]

9. Environmental law. The injection of contaminants or pollutants into the environment as a side effect of operations such as manufacturing, mining, or farming.

release clause. Real estate. 1. A blanket-mortgage provision that enables the mortgagor to obtain a release from the mortgage of a specific portion of the property upon paying a specific (usu. more than pro rata) portion of the loan. • Mortgagees commonly include a clause that disallows a partial release if the mortgagor is in default on any part of the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 310.] 2. A purchase-agreement provision that allows a seller who has accepted an offer containing a contingency to continue to market the property and accept other offers. • If the seller accepts another buyer's offer, the original buyer typically has a specified time (such as 72 hours) to waive the contingency (such as the sale of the buyer's present house) or to release the seller from the agreement. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 79.] release deed. See DEED.

releasee. 1. One who is released, either physically or by contractual discharge. [Cases: Release ⇨ 26.] 2. One to whom an estate is released.

release of mortgage. A written document that discharges a mortgage upon full payment by the borrower and that is publicly recorded to show that the borrower has full equity in the property. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 309, 314.]

release on recognizance. (1913) The pretrial release of an arrested person who promises, usu. in writing but without supplying a surety or posting bond, to appear for trial at a later date. — Abbr. ROR. — Also termed release on own recognizance. See RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail ⇨ 40.]

releaser. See RELEASOR.

release to uses. (1830) Conveyance of property, by deed of release, by one party to another for the benefit of the grantor or a third party. See deed of release under DEED; STATUTE OF USES; USE (4). [Cases: Deeds ⇨23.]

releasor. (17c) One who releases property or a claim to another. — Also spelled releaser. [Cases: Release ⇨1.]

relegatio (rel-ə-gay-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin relegare “to send away”] Roman law. Temporary or permanent banishment of a condemned criminal from Rome and the criminal’s native province, without loss of citizenship or forfeiture of all the criminal’s property. Cf. DEPORTATIO.

“Relegatio. The expulsion of a citizen ordered either by an administrative act of a magistrate or by judgment in a criminal trial. In the latter case the relegatio was sometimes combined with additional punishments, such as confiscation of the whole or of a part of the property of the condemned person, loss of Roman citizenship, confinement in a certain place. A milder form of relegatio was the exclusion of the wrongdoer from residence in a specified territory. Illicit return was punished with the death penalty.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 673 (1953).

relegation, n. (16c) 1. Banishment or exile, esp. a temporary one. 2. Assignment or delegation. — relegate, vb.

relevance. The fact, quality, or state of being relevant; relation or pertinence to the issue at hand. — Also termed relevancy. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨338; Evidence ⇨99.]

relevancy. See RELEVANCE.

relevant, adj. (16c) Logically connected and tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue; having appreciable probative value — that is, rationally tending to persuade people of the probability or possibility of some alleged fact. Cf. MATERIAL (2), (3). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨338; Evidence ⇨99.]

“The word ‘relevant’ means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other.” James Fitzjames Stephen, A Digest of the Law of Evidence 2 (4th ed. 1881).

relevant art. See ART.

relevant evidence. See EVIDENCE.

relevant market. See MARKET.

reliance, n. (17c) Dependence or trust by a person, esp. when combined with action based on that dependence or trust. — rely, vb.

detrimental reliance. (1941) Reliance by one party on the acts or representations of another, causing a worsening of the first party’s position. • Detrimental reliance may serve as a substitute for consideration and thus make a promise enforceable as a contract. See promissory estoppel under ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel ⇨55, 85, 87.]

reliance damages. See DAMAGES.

reliance interest. See INTEREST (2).

reliance-loss damages. See DAMAGES.

reliance materials. See EXPERT-RELIANCE MATERIALS.

relict (rel-ikt). Archaic. A surviving spouse; esp., a widow.

relicta verificatione (ri-lik-tə ver-ə-fi-kay-shee-oh-nee). [Latin “his pleading being abandoned”] Hist. A confession of judgment accompanied by a withdrawal of the plea. See COGNOVIT ACTIONEM.

reliction (ri-lik-shən). (17c) 1. A process by which a river or stream shifts its location, causing the recession of water from its bank. [Cases: Navigable Waters ⇨44; Waters and Water Courses ⇨93.] 2. The alteration of a boundary line because of the gradual removal of land by a river or stream. See ACCRETION; DERELICTION (2). [Cases: Navigable Waters ⇨44; Waters and Water Courses ⇨93.]

relief. (14c) 1. A payment made by an heir of a feudal tenant to the feudal lord for the privilege of succeeding to the ancestor’s tenancy.

“A mesne lord could, upon the death of his tenant, accept the tenant’s heir as tenant; but he was not required to do so. When he did accept his deceased tenant’s heir as tenant, it was typically because the heir had paid the mesne lord a substantial sum (known as a relief) for the re-grant of the tenancy.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 8 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Aid or assistance given to those in need, esp., financial aid provided by the state. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇨4.] 3. The redress or benefit, esp. equitable in nature (such as an injunction or specific performance), that a party asks of a court. — Also termed remedy. Cf. REMEDY.

affirmative relief. (1842) The relief sought by a defendant by raising a counterclaim or cross-claim that could have been maintained independently of the plaintiff’s action.

alternative relief. (1851) Judicial relief that is mutually exclusive with another form of judicial relief. • In pleading, a party may request alternative relief, as by asking for both specific performance and damages that would be averted by specific performance. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). Cf. ELECTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Specific Performance ⇨127.]

coercive relief. (1886) Judicial relief, either legal or equitable, in the form of a personal command to the defendant that is enforceable by physical restraint.

declaratory relief. A unilateral request to a court to determine the legal status or ownership of a thing. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment ⇨385.]

extraordinary relief. Judicial relief that exceeds what is typically or customarily granted but is warranted by the unique or extreme circumstances of a situation. • The types of extraordinary relief most frequently sought are injunctions and extraordinary writs, esp. mandamus. See INJUNCTION; MANDAMUS. Cf. extraordinary writ under WRIT. [Cases: Courts ⇨207.]

interim relief. (1886) Relief that is granted on a preliminary basis before an order finally disposing of a request for relief.

therapeutic relief. (1889) The relief, esp. in a settlement, that requires the defendant to take remedial measures as opposed to paying damages. • An example is a defendant-corporation (in an employment-discrimination suit) that agrees to undergo sensitivity training. — Often shortened to therapeutics.

religion. A system of faith and worship usu. involving belief in a supreme being and usu. containing a moral or ethical code; esp., such a system recognized and practiced by a particular church, sect, or denomination. • In construing the protections under the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, courts have interpreted the term religion quite broadly to include a wide variety of theistic and nontheistic beliefs. [Cases: Religious Societies ↷ 1.]

state religion. A religion promoted, taught, or enforced by a government's acts to the exclusion of other religions.

religion, freedom of. See FREEDOM OF RELIGION.

Religion Clause. In the Bill of Rights, the provision stating that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." U.S. Const. amend. I. • Some writers use the plural form, "Religion Clauses," to mean both the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, thus emphasizing the asserted common purpose of the two provisions. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 1290-1428.]

religious-affinity fraud. See FRAUD.

religious corporation. See CORPORATION.

religious-exemption statute. See FAITH-HEALING EXEMPTION.

religious liberty. See LIBERTY.

Religious Test Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution that prohibits the use of a religious test as a qualification to serve in any office or public trust. U.S. Const. art. VI, par. 3, cl. 2. — Also termed No Religious Test Clause.

relinquishment, n. (15c) The abandonment of a right or thing. — relinquish, vb.

reliqua (rel-ə-kwə). [Latin] Civil law. The remainder of a debt after balancing or liquidating an account; money left unpaid.

relitigate, vb. (1826) To litigate (a case or matter) again or anew <relitigate the issue in federal court>. — relitigation, n.

relocatio (ree-loh-kay-shee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. The renewal of a lease; RECONDUCTION (1).

relocation. 1. Removal and establishment of someone or something in a new place. 2. Mining law. Appropriation of a new tract of land for a mining claim, as by an owner who wishes to change the boundaries of the original tract or by a stranger who wishes to claim an abandoned or forfeited tract. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷ 26.] 3. Civil law. RECONDUCTION (1).

remainder. (15c) Property. 1. A future interest arising in a third person — that is, someone other than the estate's creator, its initial holder, or the heirs of either — who is intended to take after the natural termination of the preceding estate. • For example, if a grant is "to A for life, and then to B," B's future interest is a remainder. If there is only one preceding estate and the remainder vests on that estate's expiration, the remainder is also termed an executed estate. — Also termed remainder estate; estate in remainder. Cf. EXECUTORY INTEREST; REVERSION; POSSIBILITY OF REVERTER. [Cases: Remainders ↷ 1.]

"Whether a remainder is vested or contingent depends upon the language employed. If the conditional element is incorporated into the description of, or the gift to the remainder-man, then the remainder is contingent; but if, after words giving a vested interest, a clause is added divesting it, the remainder is vested. Thus, on a devise to A. for life, remainder to his children, but if any child dies in the lifetime of A. his share to go to those who survive, the share of each child is vested, subject to be divested by his death. But on a devise to A. for life, remainder to such of his children as survive him, the remainder is contingent." John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities 66 (1886).

"Under the names of 'remainders' and 'executory limitations,' various classes of interests in land could be created in expectancy, either at the Common Law or under the Statute of Uses. The differences between the two classes were highly technical; and the learning involved in acquiring a knowledge of the rules of determining them [is] quite out of proportion to the value obtained." Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 263 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

accelerated remainder. (1901) A remainder that has passed to the remainderman, as when the gift to the preceding beneficiary fails. [Cases: Remainders ↷ 5.]

alternative remainder. (1830) A remainder in which the disposition of property is to take effect only if another disposition does not take effect.

charitable remainder. (1932) A remainder, usu. from a life estate, that is given to a charity; for example, "to Jane for life, and then to the American Red Cross. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 4172(3); Taxation ↷ 3328.]

contingent remainder. (18c) A remainder that is either given to an unascertained person or made subject to a condition precedent. • An example is "to A for life, and then, if B has married before A dies, to B." — Also termed executory remainder; remainder subject to a condition precedent. [Cases: Remainders ↷ 1, 4.]

"Unlike a vested remainder, a contingent remainder is either subject to a condition precedent (in addition to the natural expiration of a prior estate), or owned by unascertainable persons, or both. But the contingent remainder, like the vested remainder, 'waits patiently' for possession. It is so created that it can become a present estate (if ever it does) immediately upon, and no sooner than, the natural expiration of particular estates that stand in front of it and were created simultaneously with it." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 73 (2d ed. 1984).

cross-remainder. (18c) A future interest that results when particular estates are given to two or more persons in different parcels of land, or in the same land in undivided shares, and the remainders of all the estates are made to vest in the survivor or survivors. • Two examples of devises giving rise to cross-remainders are (1) “to A and B for life, with the remainder to the survivor and her heirs,” and (2) “Blackacre to A and Whiteacre to B, with the remainder of A’s estate to B on A’s failure of issue, and the remainder of B’s estate to A on B’s failure of issue.” • If no tenants or issue survive, the remainder vests in a third party (sometimes known as the ulterior remainderman). Each tenant in common has a reciprocal, or cross, remainder in the share of the others. This type of remainder could not be created by deed unless expressly stated. It could, however, be implied in a will. [Cases: Remainders ⇨1.]

“By a will also an estate may pass by mere implication, without any express words to direct its course. . . . So also, where a devise of black-acre to A and of white-acre to B in tail, and if they both die without issue, then to C in fee: here A and B have cross remainders by implication, and on the failure of either’s issue, the other or his issue shall take the whole, and C’s remainder over shall be postponed till the issue of both shall fail.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 381 (1766).

defeasible remainder. (18c) A vested remainder that will be destroyed if a condition subsequent occurs. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B, but if B ever sells liquor on the land, then to C.” — Also termed remainder subject to divestment. [Cases: Remainders ⇨10.]

executed remainder. See vested remainder.

executory remainder. See contingent remainder.

indefeasible remainder. (1898) A vested remainder that is not subject to a condition subsequent; specif., a remainder in which the remainderman is certain to acquire a present interest sometime in the future and will be entitled to retain the interest permanently. — Also termed indefeasibly vested remainder; remainder indefeasibly vested.

remainder subject to a condition precedent. See contingent remainder.

remainder subject to divestment. See defeasible remainder.

remainder subject to open. (1838) A vested remainder that is given to a class of persons whose numbers may change over time and that is to be shared equally by each member of the class. • An example is “to A for life, and then equally to all of B’s children.” The class must have at least one member, but more can be added over time. — Also termed remainder subject to partial divestment; remainder vested subject to open.

vested remainder. (18c) A remainder that is given to an ascertained person and that is not subject to a condition precedent. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B.” — Also termed executed remainder. [Cases: Remainders ⇨1.]

2. The property in a decedent’s estate that is not otherwise specifically devised or bequeathed in a will. See residuary estate under ESTATE (3). [Cases: Wills ⇨586.]

remainder bequest. See residuary bequest under BEQUEST.

remainderer. See REMAINDERMAN.

remainder estate. See REMAINDER (1).

remainder indefeasibly vested. See indefeasible remainder under REMAINDER.

remainder interest. (1815) The property that passes to a beneficiary after the expiration of an intervening income interest. • For example, if a grantor places real estate in trust with income to A for life and remainder to B upon A’s death, then B has a remainder interest.

remainderman. (18c) A person who holds or is entitled to receive a remainder. — Also termed remainderer; remainderperson; remainor. [Cases: Remainders ⇨1.]

ulterior remainderman. A third party whose future interest in a property vests only if all the preceding reciprocal interests expire. See cross-remainder under REMAINDER.

remainder subject to partial divestment. See remainder subject to open under REMAINDER.

remainder vested subject to open. See remainder subject to open under REMAINDER.

remainor, n. See REMAINDERMAN.

remake rights. Copyright. The rights to produce one or more additional movies or screenplays based on what is substantially the same story as is contained in the original movie or screenplay for which the rights have been granted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨38.]

remancipate, vb. To mancipate (a thing or person) again.

remand (ri-mand also ree-mand), n. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of sending something (such as a case, claim, or person) back for further action. 2. An order remanding a case, claim, or person.

fourth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court’s decision affirming, reversing, or modifying the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security. • This type of remand is called a fourth-sentence remand because it is based on the fourth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): “The court shall have power to enter, upon the pleadings and transcript of the record, a judgment affirming, modifying, or reversing the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security, with or without remanding the cause for a rehearing.” See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇨149.] sixth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court’s decision that the claim should be reheard by the Commissioner of Social Security because new evidence is available, which was not available before, that might change the outcome of the proceeding. • This type of remand is called a sixth-sentence remand because it is based on the sixth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): "The court may, on motion of the Commissioner of Social Security made for good cause shown before the Commissioner files the Commissioner's answer, remand the case to the Commissioner of Social Security for further action by the Commissioner of Social Security, and it may at any time order additional evidence to be taken before the Commissioner of Social Security, but only upon a showing that there is new evidence which is material and that there is good cause for the failure to incorporate such evidence into the record in a prior proceeding . . ." See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇨149.]

remand (ri-mand), vb. (15c) 1. To send (a case or claim) back to the court or tribunal from which it came for some further action <the appellate court reversed the trial court's opinion and remanded the case for new trial>. Cf. REMOVAL (2). [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨817; Appeal and Error ⇨1106, 1178, 1186; Criminal Law ⇨1181.5; Federal Courts ⇨937, 943; Removal of Cases ⇨107(8).] 2. To recommit (an accused person) to custody after a preliminary examination <the magistrate, after denying bail, remanded the defendant to custody>.

remanentia (rem-ə-nen-shee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. A remainder or perpetuity.

remanent pro defectu emptorum (rem-ə-nənt proh difek-t[y]oo emp-tor-əm). [Latin] Hist. Remains unsold for want of buyers. • This language was used in a return of a writ of execution when the sheriff could not sell the seized property. [Cases: Execution ⇨334.]

remanet (rem-ə-net). (16c) 1. A case or proceeding whose hearing has been postponed. 2. A remainder or remnant.

remargining, n. Securities. The act or process of depositing additional cash or collateral with a broker when the equity in a margin account falls to an insufficient level. See margin account under ACCOUNT. — remargin, vb.

remarry, vb. To marry a second or later time, after a divorce or the death of one's spouse. [Cases: Divorce ⇨319.]

remediable, adj. (15c) Capable of being remedied, esp. by law <remediable wrongs>. — remediability, n.

remedial, adj. (17c) 1. Affording or providing a remedy; providing the means of obtaining redress . 2. Intended to correct, remove, or lessen a wrong, fault, or defect . 3. Of or relating to a means of enforcing an existing substantive right .

remedial action. 1. Environmental law. An action intended to bring about or restore long-term environmental quality; esp., under CERCLA, a measure intended to permanently alleviate pollution when a hazardous substance has been released or might be released into the environment, so as to prevent or minimize any further release of hazardous substances and thereby minimize the risk to public health or to the environment. 42 USCA § 9601(24); 40 CFR § 300.6. — Also termed remedy. See CERCLA. Cf. REMOVAL ACTION. [Cases: Environmental Law ⇨439.] 2. See personal action (1) under ACTION (4).

remedial enforcement. See secondary right under RIGHT.

remedial law. (17c) 1. A law providing a means to enforce rights or redress injuries. 2. A law that corrects or modifies an existing law; esp., a law providing a new or different remedy when the existing remedy, if any, is inadequate. [Cases: Statutes ⇨236.]

remedial liability. See LIABILITY.

remedial promise. See PROMISE.

remedial statute. See STATUTE.

remedial trust. See constructive trust under TRUST.

remediation. Environmental law. The restoration of polluted land, water, or air to its former state, or as nearly so as is practical. [Cases: Environmental Law ⇨366, 439.]

remedies, n. The field of law dealing with the means of enforcing rights and redressing wrongs.

remediis praetoriis (ri-mee-dee-is pri-tor-ee-is). [Latin] Hist. By praetorian remedies.

remedium extraordinarium (ri-mee-dee-əm ek-stror-di-nair-ee-əm or ek-strə-or-). [Latin] Hist. An extraordinary remedy.

remedy, n. (13c) 1. The means of enforcing a right or preventing or redressing a wrong; legal or equitable relief. — Also termed civil remedy. 2. REMEDIAL ACTION. Cf. RELIEF. — Also termed (in both senses) law of remedy. — remedy, vb.

"A remedy is anything a court can do for a litigant who has been wronged or is about to be wronged. The two most common remedies are judgments that plaintiffs are entitled to collect sums of money from defendants and orders to defendants to refrain from their wrongful conduct or to undo its consequences. The court decides whether the litigant has been wronged under the substantive law; it conducts its inquiry in accordance with the procedural law. The law of remedies falls somewhere between substance and procedure, distinct from both but overlapping with both." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 1 (3d ed. 2002).

adequate remedy at law. (18c) A legal remedy (such as an award of damages) that provides sufficient relief to the petitioning party, thus preventing the party from obtaining equitable relief. See IRREPARABLE INJURY RULE. [Cases: Equity ⇨45; Specific Performance ⇨5.] administrative remedy. (1880) A nonjudicial remedy provided by an administrative agency. • Ordinarily, if an administrative remedy is available, it must be exhausted before a court will hear the case. See EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻229.]

civil remedy. See REMEDY (1).

concurrent remedy. (18c) One of two or more legal or equitable actions available to redress a wrong.

cumulative remedy. (18c) A remedy available to a party in addition to another remedy that still remains in force.

equitable remedy. (18c) A remedy, usu. a nonmonetary one such as an injunction or specific performance, obtained when available legal remedies, usu. monetary damages, cannot adequately redress the injury. • Historically, an equitable remedy was available only from a court of equity. — Also termed equitable relief. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction ↻15, 138.9; Specific Performance ↻1.]

extrajudicial remedy. A remedy not obtained from a court, such as repossession. — Also termed self-help remedy.

extraordinary remedy. (16c) A remedy — such as a writ of mandamus or habeas corpus — not available to a party unless necessary to preserve a right that cannot be protected by a standard legal or equitable remedy. • Because there is no agreed list of extraordinary remedies, some standard remedies — such as preliminary and permanent injunctions — are sometimes described as extraordinary. [Cases: Injunction ↻1, 132; Mandamus ↻3(1)–3(2.1).] judicial remedy. (18c) A remedy granted by a court.

legal remedy. (17c) A remedy historically available in a court of law, as distinguished from a remedy historically available only in equity. • After the merger of law and equity, this distinction remained relevant in some ways, such as in determining the right to jury trial and the choice between alternate remedies. [Cases: Action ↻21.]

provisional remedy. (18c) A temporary remedy awarded before judgment and pending the action's disposition, such as a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, a prejudgment receivership, or an attachment. • Such a remedy is intended to maintain the status quo by protecting a person's safety or preserving property. [Cases: Attachment ↻1; Injunction ↻132, 138.3, 150.]

remedy over. (18c) A remedy that arises from a right of indemnification or subrogation. • For example, if a city is liable for injuries caused by a defect in a street, the city has a "remedy over" against the person whose act or negligence caused the defect. [Cases: Indemnity ↻20, 91; Subrogation ↻1.] self-help remedy. See extrajudicial remedy.

specific remedy. (18c) A remedy whereby the injured party is awarded the very performance that was contractually promised or whereby the injury threatened or caused by a tort is prevented or repaired. • A court awards a specific remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to deliver the specified goods to the buyer (as opposed to paying damages). [Cases: Specific Performance ↻126.]

speedy remedy. (18c) A remedy that, under the circumstances, can be pursued expeditiously before the aggrieved party has incurred substantial detriment.

• "Speedy remedy" is an informal expression with no fixed meaning — that is, what is considered speedy in one context may not be considered speedy in other contexts. For example, the Federal Tax Injunction Act requires a "plain, speedy, and efficient remedy" in state courts. But the Act does not require preliminary or injunctive relief — or even interest for delay.

"'Speedy' is perforce a relative concept, and we must assess the 2-year delay against the usual time for similar litigation." Rosewell v. LaSalle Nat'l Bank, 450 U.S. 503, 518 (1981).

substitutional remedy. (1987) A remedy intended to give the promisee something as a replacement for the promised performance or to give the plaintiff something in lieu of preventing or repairing an injury. • A court awards a substitutional remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to pay the buyer damages (as opposed to delivering the promised goods). — Also termed substitutionary remedy. [Cases: Contracts ↻324(1).]

"With substitutionary remedies, plaintiff suffers harm and receives a sum of money. Specific remedies seek to avoid this exchange. They seek to prevent harm, or undo it, rather than let it happen and compensate for it. . . . [Money damages] are substitutionary both in the sense that the sum of money is substituted for plaintiff's original entitlement, and in the less obvious sense that the fact finder's valuation of the loss is substituted for plaintiff's valuation. Specific relief seeks to avoid both these substitutions, giving plaintiff the very thing he lost if that is what he wants." Douglas Laycock, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule 13 (1991).

remedy, mutuality of. See MUTUALITY OF REMEDY.

réméré (ray-may-ray), n. [French] The right of repurchase.

REMIC (rem-ik or ree-mik). abbr. REAL-ESTATE-MORTGAGE INVESTMENT CONDUIT.

remise (ri-miz), vb. (15c) To give up, surrender, or release (a right, interest, etc.) <the quitclaim deed provides that the grantor remises any rights in the property>.

remissio injuriae (ri-mis[h]-ee-oh in-joor-ee-ee). [Latin] Hist. Forgiveness of the offense.

remission. (13c) 1. A cancellation or extinguishment of all or part of a financial obligation; a release of a debt or claim. [Cases: Release ↻1.] conventional remission. Civil law. A remission expressly granted to a debtor by a creditor having capacity to alienate. La. Civ. Code art. 1840.

tacit remission. Civil law. A remission arising by operation of law, as when a creditor surrenders an original title to the debtor. La. Civ. Code art. 1888.

2. A pardon granted for an offense. 3. Relief from a forfeiture or penalty. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↻

189; Forfeitures ↻9; Penalties ↻11.] 4. A diminution or abatement of the symptoms of a disease.

remit, vb. (14c) 1. To pardon or forgive <the wife could not remit her husband's infidelity>. 2. To abate or slacken; to mitigate <the receipt of money damages remitted the embarrassment of being fired>. 3. To refer (a matter for decision) to some authority, esp. to send back (a case) to a lower court <the appellate court remitted the case to the trial court for further factual determinations>. See REMAND. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻817; Appeal and Error ↻1106, 1178; Criminal Law ↻1181.5; Federal Courts ↻943.1.] 4. To send or put back to a previous condition or position . 5. To transmit (as money) <upon receiving the demand letter, she promptly remitted the amount due>. — remissible (for senses 1–4), adj. — remittable (for sense 5), adj.

remittance. (18c) 1. A sum of money sent to another as payment for goods or services. 2. An instrument (such as a check) used for sending money. 3. The action or process of sending money to another person or place.

remittance advice. See ADVICE.

remittee. (18c) One to whom payment is sent.

remitter. (16c) 1. The principle by which a person having two titles to an estate, and entering on it by the later or more defective title, is deemed to hold the estate by the earlier or more valid title. 2. The act of sending back a case to a lower court. 3. One who sends payment to someone else. — Also spelled (in sense 3) remittor.

remitting bank. See BANK.

remittit damna (ri-mit-it dam-nə). [Latin] Hist. An entry on the record by which a plaintiff declares that he or she remits part of the damages that have been awarded. — Also termed remittitur damna; remittitur damnium.

remittitur (ri-mit-i-tər). (18c) 1. An order awarding a new trial, or a damages amount lower than that awarded by the jury, and requiring the plaintiff to choose between those alternatives <the defendant sought a remittitur of the $100 million judgment>. 2. The process by which a court requires either that the case be retried, or that the damages awarded by the jury be reduced. Cf. ADDITUR. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2377; Federal Courts ↻945; New Trial ↻162.] remittitur damna. See REMITTIT DAMNA.

remittitur damnium. See REMITTIT DAMNA.

remittitur of record. (1848) The action of sending the transcript of a case back from an appellate court to a trial court; the notice for doing so.

remittor. See REMITTER (3).

remnants and surpluses. Maritime law. The proceeds remaining from the sale of a ship after claims for seamen's wages, bottomry bonds, salvage services, and supplies have been paid. [Cases: Admiralty ↻101.]

remonetization, n. The restoration of a precious metal (such as gold or silver) to its former use as legal tender. — remonetize, vb.

remonstrance (ri-mon-strənts), n. (16c) 1. A presentation of reasons for opposition or grievance. 2. A formal document stating reasons for opposition or grievance. 3. A formal protest against governmental policy, actions, or officials. — remonstrate (ri-mon-strayt), vb.

remote, adj. (15c) 1. Far removed or separated in time, space, or relation. 2. Slight. 3. Property. Beyond the 21 years after some life in being by which a devise must vest. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. [Cases: Perpetuities ↻4(3).]

remote cause. See CAUSE (1).

remote damages. See speculative damages (1) under DAMAGES.

remoteness of consequence. Torts. The lack of proximate causation with respect to an alleged act by a defendant. ● Even if the plaintiff proves every other element for tortious liability, the defendant will not be liable if the harm suffered by the plaintiff is too far removed from the defendant's conduct. — Also termed remoteness of damage.

remote possibility. See POSSIBILITY.

remotis testibus (ri-moh-tis tes-ti-bəs). [Latin] Hist. The witnesses being absent.

removal, n. (16c) 1. The transfer or moving of a person or thing from one location, position, or residence to another. 2. The transfer of an action from state to federal court. ● In removing a case to federal court, a litigant must timely file the removal papers and must show a valid basis for federal-court jurisdiction. 28 USCA § 1441. Cf. REMAND (1). [Cases: Removal of Cases ↻16.] — remove, vb.

civil-rights removal. (1964) Removal of a case from state to federal court because a person: (1) has been denied or cannot enforce a civil right in the state court, (2) is being sued for performing an act under color of authority derived from a law providing for equal rights, or (3) is being sued for refusing to perform an act that would be inconsistent with equal rights. [Cases: Removal of Cases ↻70.]

removal action. Environmental law. An action, esp. under CERCLA, intended to bring about the short-term abatement and cleanup of pollution (as by removing and disposing of toxic materials). See CERCLA. Cf. REMEDIAL ACTION. [Cases: Environmental Law ↻439, 441.]

removal bond. See BOND (2).

rem pupilli salvam fore (rem pyoo-pil-i sal-vəm for-ee). [Latin] Roman law. The guarantee required of a guardian that the estate of the person under puberty will be safe.

crop rent. The portion of a harvest given by a sharecropper to a landlord as rent. • Specific crop names, such as grain rent and potato rent, are commonly used. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨215.]

double rent. Twice the amount of rent agreed to; specif., a penalty of twice the amount of rent against a tenant who holds possession of the leased property after the date provided in the tenant's notice to quit. • The penalty was provided by the Distress for Rent Act, 1737, 11 Geo. 2., ch. 19, § 13. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨216.]

dry rent. 1. Rent reserved without a distress clause allowing the rent to be collected by distress; rent that can be collected only by an ordinary legal action. — Formerly also termed rent seck. 2. See rent seck under RENT (2).

economic rent. See ECONOMIC RENT.

ground rent. 1. Rent paid by a tenant under a long-term lease for the use of undeveloped land, usu. for the construction of a commercial building. — Also termed redeemable ground rent. See ground lease under LEASE. 2. A heritable interest, in rental income from land, reserved by a grantor who conveys the land in fee simple. • This type of ground rent is found primarily in Maryland and Pennsylvania. — Also termed (in Scots law) irredeemable ground rent; ground annual. [Cases: Estates in Property ⇨13.]

guild rent. Hist. Rent payable to the Crown by a guild. — Also spelled gild-rent.

net rent. The rental price for property after payment of expenses, such as repairs, utilities, and taxes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨201, 210.]

rack-rent. See RACK-RENT.

redeemable ground rent. See ground rent (1).

2. Hist. A compensation or return made periodically by a tenant or occupant for the possession and use of lands or corporeal hereditaments; money, chattels, or services issuing usu. annually out of lands and tenements as payment for use.

peppercorn rent. A nominal rent that is far below the market rate. • The rent may be a mere token payment. Historically in English law, some lease agreements called for a token annual rent payment of a single dried berry of black pepper. See PEPPERCORN.

quit rent. See QUIT RENT.

rent charge. The right to receive an annual sum from the income of land, usu. in perpetuity, and to retake possession if the payments are in arrears. — Also spelled rent-charge; rentcharge. — Also termed fee-farm rent.

"Rent-charge is a rent with liberty to distrain. As when a man seised of land granteth by a deed poll, or by indenture, a yearly rent going out of the same land to another in fee or fee-tail, or for a term of life, etc. with clause of distress, or maketh a feoffment in fee by indenture, reserving to himself a certain yearly rent, with clause of distress." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 155 (1759).

"A rentcharge is an annual or periodic payment charged upon, and payable by the owner of, land. Unlike a rent service, in the case of a rentcharge there is no tenure or privity of estate between the parties. The owner of a rentcharge has no tenurial relationship with the land upon which it is charged. A rentcharge is a species of incorporeal property, but, unlike an easement, is incorporeal property in gross, being enjoyed by the owner personally and not in the capacity of proprietor of land." Peter Butt, Land Law 330 (2d ed. 1988).

rent seck. Hist. A rent reserved by deed but without any clause of distress. — Also spelled rent-seck; rent-sec. — Also termed dry rent. Pl. rents seck.

"But rents-seck have long ceased to exist, because the inability of their owners to distrain was abolished by the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730 (4 George II), which enacted that the owners of rents-seck, rents of assize and chief rents should have the same remedy by distress as existed in the case of rent reserved upon lease." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 199 (3d ed. 1933).

"At common law, the relationship of lord and tenant carried with it an automatic right of distress for any rent. If no such relationship existed, there was no common law right of distress, and consequently an express clause of distress was frequently inserted when reserving the rent. A rent supported by no right of distress was known as a rent seck (from the Latin siccus, dry, barren) . . . Rent seck ceased to exist many years ago, for by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730, the owners of rents seck were given the same rights of distress as a landlord has against his tenant under a lease, namely, a right to distrain as soon as the rent is in arrear." Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 409 (4th ed. 1969).

rent service. A rent with some corporeal service incident to it (as by fealty) and with a right of distress. — Also written rent-service.

"[R]ent-service exists only where the relation of landlord and tenant is found, and in such a relation derives its name from the fact that it was given as a substitute for the services to which the land was originally liable." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 198 (3d ed. 1933).

rentage. (17c) Rent or rental.

rent-a-judging. See PRIVATE JUDGING.

rental, n. (14c) 1. The amount received as rent.

crecendo rental. A rent payment that gradually increases at fixed periods during the lease term.

delay rental. Oil & gas. A periodic payment made by an oil-and-gas lessee to postpone exploration during the primary lease term. See DRILLING-DELAY RENTAL CLAUSE; "or" lease, "unless" lease under LEASE; PAID-UP LEASE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 78.1(3).]

net rental. The amount remaining after deducting all expenses from the gross rental income.

2. The income received from rent. 3. A record of payments received from rent. — rental, adj.

rent, vb. 1. To pay for the use of another's property. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨ 181.] 2. Hist. Slang. EXTORT (2).

Rental and Related Rights Directive. See DIRECTIVE ON RENTAL, LENDING AND CERTAIN NEIGHBORING RIGHTS.

Rental Directive. See DIRECTIVE ON RENTAL, LENDING AND CERTAIN NEIGHBORING RIGHTS.

rental division order. Oil & gas. A stipulation signed by those entitled to delay rentals, stating what interest each owns and how much rental each is to receive. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 79.1(3).]

rental right. Copyright. The power of a copyright owner to control the use of copies of the work beyond the first sale, when that use involves offering the copy to the public for temporary use for a fee (as at a store renting DVDs and videotapes) or some other commercial advantage (as at a hotel offering the loan of DVDs or videotapes). • Rental rights are recognized among members of the European Commission and under TRIPS. The right also applies to the rental of computer software. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 38.5.]

rentcharge. The right to receive an annual sum from the income of land, usu. in perpetuity, and to retake possession if the payments are in arrears. — Also spelled rent-charge; rent charge. — Also termed fee-farm rent.

"Rent-charge is a rent with liberty to distrain. As when a man seised of land granteth by a deed poll, or by indenture, a yearly rent going out of the same land to another in fee or fee-tail, or for a term of life, etc. with clause of distress, or maketh a feoffment in fee by indenture, reserving to himself a certain yearly rent, with clause of distress." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 155 (1759).

"A rentcharge is an annual or periodic payment charged upon, and payable by the owner of, land. Unlike a rent service, in the case of a rentcharge there is no tenure or privity of estate between the parties. The owner of a rentcharge has no tenurial relationship with the land upon which it is charged. A rentcharge is a species of incorporeal property, but, unlike an easement, is incorporeal property in gross, being enjoyed by the owner personally and not in the capacity of proprietor of land." Peter Butt, Land Law 330 (2d ed. 1988).

ecclesiastical-tithe rentcharge. Hist. English law. A rentcharge attached to a benefice or ecclesiastical corporation. • Under the Tithe Act 1925, a landowner liable for an ecclesiastical-tithe rentcharge could redeem the land and discharge the tithe obligation by making an annual sinking-fund payment to Queen Anne's Bounty. The tithe was due for 81.5 years if the rentcharge was attached to a corporation or 85 years if the rentcharge was attached to a benefice. The law was repealed in 1998. See QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY; BENEFICE.

rent control. (1931) A restriction imposed, usu. by municipal legislation, on the maximum rent that a landlord may charge for rental property, and often on a landlord's power of eviction. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨200.10–200.83, 278.1.]

rente (rawnt), n. [French "income, rent"] French law. 1. Annual income or rent.

rente foncière (fawn-syair) [French "ground rent"] A rent that is payable for the use of land and is perpetual.

rente viagère (vee-ah-zhair). [French "life rent"] A rent charge or annuity that is payable for life; a life interest or annuity.

2. (usu. pl.) Interest paid annually by the French government on the public debt; a government stock, bond, or annuity.

rentee. Rare. A tenant.

rente foncière. See RENTE.

rente viagère. See RENTE.

rentier (rawn-tyay). [French] 1. A person who owns or holds rentes. See RENTE. 2. A person who makes or lives off an income from property or investment; a stockholder or annuitant.

rent of lands. See RENT (3).

rent-seeking, n. Economic behavior motivated by an incentive to overproduce goods that will yield a return greater than the cost of production. • The term is often used in the field of law and economics. See RENT (4).

rent service. See RENT (2).

rents, issues, and profits. (17c) The total income or profit arising from the ownership or possession of property.

rent strike. (1964) A refusal by a group of tenants to pay rent until grievances with the landlord are heard or settled.

renunciation (ri-nən-see-ay-shən), n. (14c) 1. The express or tacit abandonment of a right without transferring it to another. 2. Wills & estates. The act of waiving a right under a will. • At one time, one renounced an inheritance by intestacy and disclaimed a gift by will. Today disclaim is common in both situations. — Also termed (in sense 2) disclaimer. See RIGHT OF ELECTION. Cf. DISCLAIMER. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ⇨72; Wills ⇨717.] 3. Criminal law. Complete and voluntary abandonment of criminal purpose — sometimes coupled with an attempt to thwart the activity's success — before a crime is committed. • Renunciation can be an affirmative defense to attempt, conspiracy, and the like. Model Penal Code § 5.01(4). — Also termed withdrawal; abandonment. [Cases: Conspiracy ⇨40.4.] 4. See anticipatory repudiation under REPUDIATION. — renunciative, renunciatory, adj. — renounce, vb.

renvoi (ren-voy), n. [French "sending back"] 1. The doctrine under which a court in resorting to foreign law adopts as well the foreign law's conflict-of-laws principles, which may in turn refer the court back to the law of the forum. [Cases: Action ⇨17.] 2. The problem arising when one state's rule on conflict of laws refers a case to the law of another state, and that second state's conflict-of-law rule refers the case either back to the law of the first state or to a third state. See CONFLICT OF LAWS. 3. RECONDUCTION (2).

REO. abbr. REAL ESTATE OWNED.

reo absente (ree-oh ab-sten-tee). [Latin] The defendant being absent; the absence of the defendant.

reopen. (Of a court) to review (an otherwise final and nonappealable judgment) for the purpose of possibly granting or modifying relief. • A court will reopen a judgment or case only in highly unusual circumstances. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2641; Judgment ⇨336.]

reo praesente (ree-oh pri-zen-tee). [Latin] Hist. The defendant being present; the presence of the defendant.

reorganization, n. 1. Bankruptcy. A financial restructuring of a corporation, esp. in the repayment of debts, under a plan created by a trustee and approved by a court. See CHAPTER 11. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨3501.]

haircut reorganization. A restructuring that reduces the principal amount of indebtedness owed to creditors. • The more common usage is simply haircut <we took a haircut on that deal>.

2. Tax. A restructuring of a corporation, as by a merger or recapitalization, in order to improve its tax treatment under the Internal Revenue Code. • The Code classifies the various types of reorganizations with different letters. IRC (26 USCA) § 368(a)(1). Cf. RECAPITALIZATION.

- A reorganization. A reorganization involving a merger or consolidation under a specific state statute. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3668.]
- B reorganization. A reorganization in which one corporation exchanges its voting shares for another corporation's voting shares. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3669.]
- C reorganization. A reorganization in which one corporation exchanges its voting shares for substantially all the assets of another corporation. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3670.]
- D reorganization. A reorganization in which the corporation transfers some or all of its assets to another corporation that is controlled by the transferor or its shareholders, and then the stock of the transferee corporation is distributed. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3670.]
- E reorganization. A reorganization involving a recapitalization. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3671.]
- F reorganization. A reorganization involving a mere change in a corporation's identity, form, or place of organization. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3672.]
- G reorganization. A reorganization involving a transfer of all or part of the corporation's assets to another corporation in a bankruptcy or similar proceeding. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3673.]
- reorganization bond. See adjustment bond under BOND (3).
- reorganization plan. Bankruptcy. A plan of restructuring submitted by a corporation for approval by the court in a Chapter 11 case. See CHAPTER 11. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 3531–3570.]
- rep. abbr. 1. REPORT. 2. REPORTER. 3. REPRESENTATIVE. 4. REPUBLIC.
- repair-and-replace provision. A contractual clause providing that a product's defect will be remedied by repairing or replacing the defective part or product. [Cases: Sales ↷ 286, 418(6).]
- repair doctrine. Patents. The rule that a licensee who is authorized to produce, use, or distribute a patented device also has the right to repair and replace unpatented components. — Also termed permissible-repair doctrine. Cf. RECONSTRUCTION. [Cases: Patents ↷ 255.]
- reparable injury. See INJURY.
- reparation (rep-ə-ray-shən). (14c) 1. The act of making amends for a wrong. 2. (usu. pl.) Compensation for an injury or wrong, esp. for wartime damages or breach of an international obligation.
- reparatione facienda. See DE REPARATIONE FACIENDA.
- reparative injunction. See INJUNCTION.
- reparole. (1916) A second release from prison on parole, served under the same sentence for which the parolee served the first term of parole. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ↷ 72.1.]
- repeal, n. (16c) RESCIND (3); esp., abrogation of an existing law by legislative act. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 149–170, 232.] — repeal, vb.
- express repeal. (17c) Repeal by specific declaration in a new statute or main motion. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 151.]
- implied repeal. (18c) Repeal by irreconcilable conflict between an old law or main motion and a more recent law or motion. — Also termed repeal by implication. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 159.]
- repeal by implication. See implied repeal.
- repealer. 1. A legislative act abrogating an earlier law. — Also termed repealing act. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 149–170, 232.] 2. One who repeals.
- repealing clause. (17c) A statutory provision that repeals an earlier statute.
- repealing statute. See STATUTE.
- repeater. See RECIDIVIST.
- repeat offender. See OFFENDER.
- repetition. Civil law. A demand or action for restitution or repayment. See SOLUTIO INDEBITI.
- repetitum namium (ri-pet-ə-təm nay-mee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. A second, repeated, or reciprocal distress; WITHERNAM.
- repetundae (rep-ə-tən-dee). [Latin “things or money claimed back”] Roman law. See RES REPETUNDÆ.
- replacement cost. See COST (1).
- replacement-cost depreciation method. See DEPRECIATION METHOD.
- replacement insurance. See INSURANCE.
- replead, vb. (16c) 1. To plead again or anew; to file a new pleading, esp. to correct a defect in an earlier pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 1838; Pretrial Procedure ↷ 695.] 2. To make a repleader.
- repleader (ree-plee-dər). (17c) Common-law pleading. A court order or judgment — issued on the motion of a party who suffered an adverse judgment — requiring the parties to file new pleadings because of some defect in the original pleadings. — Also termed judgment of repleader. See MOTION FOR REPLEADER. [Cases: Pleading ↷ 286.]
- replegiare (ri-plee-jee-air-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To take back on pledge or surety; to replevy.
- repleviable (ri-plev-ee-ə-bəl), adj. (16c) Capable of being replevied; recoverable by replevin <repleviable property>. — Also spelled replevisable (ri-plev-ə-sə-bəl). Cf. IRREPLEVIABLE. [Cases: Replevin ↷ 3.]
- replevin (ri-plev-in), n. (17c) 1. An action for the repossession of personal property wrongfully taken or detained by the defendant, whereby the plaintiff gives security for and holds the property until the court decides who owns it. — Also termed claim and delivery. [Cases: Replevin ↷ 1.] 2. A writ obtained from a court authorizing the retaking of personal property wrongfully taken or detained. — Also termed (in sense 2) writ of replevin. Cf. DETINUE; TROVER. [Cases: Replevin ↪34.]

"The action of replevin lies, where specific personal property has been wrongfully taken and is wrongfully detained, to recover possession of the property, together with damages for its detention. To support the action it is necessary: (a) That the property shall be personal. (b) That the plaintiff, at the time of suit, shall be entitled to the immediate possession. (c) That (at common law) the defendant shall have wrongfully taken the property (replevin in the cepit). But, by statute in most states, the action will now also lie where the property is wrongfully detained, though it was lawfully obtained in the first instance (replevin in the detinet). (d) That the property shall be wrongfully detained by the defendant at the time of suit." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 49, at 120 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

"In rare cases, the plaintiff might seek equitable relief to secure return of a chattel. More commonly, the claim for recovery of the chattel was pursued at common law under forms of action such as Detinue or Replevin. American statutes or court rules tracked the common law generally, referring to the recovery variously as replevin, detinue, claim-and-delivery, or sequestration. The statutes usually allowed the plaintiff to recover the disputed chattel before trial, though this is now subject to constitutional limits which have led to procedural revisions in many of the statutes." 1 Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 5.17(1), at 917 (2d ed. 1993).

personal replevin. (1844) At common law, an action to replevy a person out of prison or out of another's custody. • Personal replevin has been largely superseded by the writ of habeas corpus as a means of investigating the legality of an imprisonment. See HABEAS CORPUS.

replevin in cepit (in see-pit). (18c) An action for the repossession of property that is both wrongfully taken and wrongfully detained. [Cases: Replevin ↪9.]

replevin in detinet (in det-i-net). (18c) An action for the repossession of property that is rightfully taken but wrongfully detained. [Cases: Replevin ↪9.]

replevin, vb. Archaic. REPLEVY.

replevin bond. See BOND (2).

replevisable. See REPLEVIABLE.

replevisor (ri-plev-ə-sər). The plaintiff in a replevin action.

replevy (ri-plev-ee), n. Archaic. REPLEVIN.

replevy, vb. (16c) 1. To recover possession of (goods) by a writ of replevin. [Cases: Replevin ↪1.] 2. To recover (goods) by replevin. 3. Archaic. To bail (a prisoner).

replevy bond. See replevin bond under BOND (2).

replicant (ri-pli-ənt). (16c) A party who makes a replication (i.e., a common-law reply). — Also termed replicant.

replicare (rep-lə-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To reply; to answer a defendant's plea.

replicatio (rep-li-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A plaintiff's rejection of what a defendant asserted in an exceptio; a counterexception. Pl. replicationes (rep-li-kay-shee-oh-nee-z). Cf. TRIPLICATIO; QUADRUPPLICATIO.

replication (rep-lə-kay-shən). (15c) A plaintiff's or complainant's reply to a defendant's plea or answer; REPLY (2). [Cases: Pleading ↪162.]

anticipatory replication. Equity pleading. In an original bill, the denial of defensive matters that the defendant might assert. • A defendant who relies on the anticipated defense must traverse the anticipatory matter in addition to setting up the defense. [Cases: Equity ↪133.]

general replication. Equity pleading. A replication consisting of a general denial of the defendant's plea or answer and an assertion of the truth and sufficiency of the bill. [Cases: Equity ↪207.]

replication de injuria. Common-law pleading. A traverse occurring only in the replication whereby the plaintiff is permitted to traverse the whole substance of a plea consisting merely of legal excuse, when the matter does not involve a title or interest in land, authority of law, authority of fact derived from the opposing party, or any matter of record. — Also termed replication de injuria sua propria, absque tali causa. [Cases: Pleading ↪179.]

replication per fraudem. Common-law pleading. A replication asserting that the discharge pleaded by the defendant was obtained by fraud.

special replication. Equity pleading. A replication that puts in issue a new fact to counter a new matter raised in the defendant's plea or answer. [Cases: Equity ↪209.]

reply, n. (18c) 1. Civil procedure. In federal practice, the plaintiff's response to the defendant's counterclaim (or, by court order, to the defendant's or a third party's answer). Fed. R. Civ. P. 7(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↪801–815.] 2. Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's response to the defendant's plea or answer. • The reply is the plaintiff's second pleading, and it is followed by the defendant's rejoinder. — Also termed (in sense 2) replication. [Cases: Pleading ↪162, 164.] — reply, vb.

reply brief. See BRIEF.

repo (ree-poh). 1. REPOSSESSION. 2. REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.

report, n. (14c) 1. A formal oral or written presentation of facts or a recommendation for action <according to the treasurer's report, there is $300 in the bank>.

committee report. Parliamentary law. A report from a committee to a deliberative assembly on business referred to the committee or on a matter otherwise under its charge.

informational report. Parliamentary law. A report without a recommendation for action.

insider report. Securities. A monthly report that must be filed with the SEC when more than 10% of a company's stock is traded.

majority report. Parliamentary law. A committee report, as distinguished from a minority report. See committee report. Cf. minority report.

minority report. Parliamentary law. A report by a member or members who dissent from a committee report, setting forth their views, and sometimes proposing an alternative recommendation. • Some organizations require that a minority must reach a certain size (or obtain permission) before it can file a report. A typical minimum is one-fourth of the committee's members, which guarantees that not more than one minority report will result.

officer's report. Parliamentary law. A report from an officer to an organization or deliberative assembly on business relating to the officer's duties or on a matter otherwise under the officer's charge.

report with recommendation. Parliamentary law. A report accompanied by a recommendation for action.

2. A written account of a court proceeding and judicial decision <the law clerk sent the court's report to counsel for both sides>. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103.] 3. (usu. pl.) A published volume of judicial decisions by a particular court or group of courts <U.S. Reports>. • Generally, these decisions are first printed in temporary paperback volumes, and then printed in hardbound reporter volumes. Law reports may be either official (published by a government entity) or unofficial (published by a private publisher). Court citations frequently include the names of both the official and unofficial reports. — Also termed reporter; law report; law reporter. Cf. ADVANCE SHEETS. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103; Reports ⇨ 3.]

official report. (usu. pl.) The governmentally approved set of reported cases within a given jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103; Reports ⇨ 1.]

"[I]t may justly be said that all reports are in a sense 'official,' or that to use the term 'official reports' as referring to any particular series of reports is a misnomer, for it is certainly misleading. The mere fact that each state authorizes or requires publication of reports of its Supreme Court decisions, and, to insure such publication, agrees to purchase a stated number of each volume of the reports, cannot be said to give such a series pre-eminence as an 'official' publication." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 33 (3d ed. 1914).

4. (usu. pl.) A collection of administrative decisions by one or more administrative agencies. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨ 507.] 5. MINUTES (2). — Abbr. rep. — report, vb.

report agenda. See report calendar under CALENDAR (4).

report calendar. See CALENDAR (4).

reporter. (14c) 1. A person responsible for making and publishing a report; esp., a lawyer-consultant who prepares drafts of official or semi-official writings such as court rules or Restatements <the reporter to the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules explained the various amendments>. [Cases: Reports ⇨ 3.] 2. REPORTER OF DECISIONS. 3. REPORT (3) <Supreme Court Reporter>. — Abbr. rep.; rpt.

"It may not come amiss to remark that the National Report System is usually spoken of as the 'Reporters,' and one of the component parts of that system is in like manner spoken of as a 'Reporter.' Wherever, in this or the succeeding chapters of this work, the word is used with a capital, it refers to one or more of the parts of the National Reporter System. When the word 'reporter' is used without capitalization, it refers to the person who reports or edits the cases in any series of reports to which reference is being made." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 37 (3d ed. 1914).

reporter of decisions. (1839) The person responsible for publishing a court's opinions. • The position began historically — in the years before systematic reporting of decisions was introduced — when lawyers attended the sessions of particular courts, were accredited to them by the judges, and reported the decisions of that court. Today, the reporter of decisions holds an administrative post as a court employee. The reporter often has duties that include verifying citations, correcting spelling and punctuation, and suggesting minor editorial improvements before judicial opinions are released or published. — Often shortened to reporter. — Also termed court reporter. See COURT REPORTER. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 103; Reports ⇨ 3.] reporter's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1) under PRIVILEGE (3).

reporter's record. 1. See RECORD. 2. See TRANSCRIPT.

reporter's syllabus. See HEADNOTE.

reporting company. See COMPANY.

report of proceedings. See TRANSCRIPT.

reports, n. See REPORT.

Reports, The. A series of 13 volumes of caselaw published in the 17th century by Sir Edward Coke.

report with recommendation. See REPORT (1).

repose (ri-pohz), n. (16c) 1. Cessation of activity; temporary rest. 2. A statutory period after which an action cannot be brought in court, even if it expires before the plaintiff suffers any injury. See STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 1, 165.]

repository (ri-poz-a-tor-ee). (15c) A place where something is deposited or stored; a warehouse or storehouse.

repossession, n. (15c) The act or an instance of retaking property; esp., a seller's retaking of goods sold on credit when the buyer has failed to pay for them. — Often shortened to repo. Cf. FORECLOSURE; RESCUE (3). [Cases: Secured Transactions ⇨ 228.] — repossess, vb.

representation, n. (16c) 1. A presentation of fact — either by words or by conduct — made to induce someone to act, esp. to enter into a contract; esp., the manifestation to another that a fact, including a state of mind, exists <the buyer relied on the seller's representation that the roof did not leak>. Cf. MISREPRESENTATION. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 9.]

"Representation . . . may introduce terms into a contract and affect performance; or it may induce a contract and so affect the intention of one of the parties, and the formation of the contract. . . . At common law, . . . if a representation did not afterwards become a substantive part of the contract, its untruth (save in certain excepted cases and apart always from fraud) was immaterial. But if it did, it might be one of two things: (1) it might be regarded by the parties as a vital term going to the root of the contract (when it is usually called a 'condition'); and in this case its untruth entitles the injured party to repudiate the whole contract; or (2) it might be a term in the nature only of an independent subsidiary promise (when it is usually called a 'warranty'), which is indeed a part of the contract, but does not go to the root of it; in this case its untruth only gives rise to an action ex contractu for damages, and does not entitle the injured party to repudiate the whole contract." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 218, 222 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

affirmative representation. (1842) A representation asserting the existence of certain facts pertaining to a given subject matter. [Cases: Contracts ↷205.5; Fraud ↷9.] false representation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

material representation. (18c) A representation to which a reasonable person would attach importance in deciding his or her course of action in a transaction. • Material representation is a necessary element of an action for fraud. [Cases: Contracts ↷94(2); Fraud ↷18.]

promissory representation. (1842) A representation about what one will do in the future; esp., a representation made by an insured about what will happen during the time of coverage, stated as a matter of expectation and amounting to an enforceable promise. [Cases: Fraud ↷12; Insurance ↷3035.]

2. The act or an instance of standing for or acting on behalf of another, esp. by a lawyer on behalf of a client <Clarence Darrow's representation of John Scopes>. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷77-101.]

concurrent representation. The simultaneous representation of more than one person in the same matter. See CONFLICT OF INTEREST (2).

3. The fact of a litigant's having such a close alignment of interests with another person that the other is considered as having been present in the litigation <the named plaintiff provided adequate representation for the absent class members>.

adequate representation. (1939) A close alignment of interests between actual parties and potential parties in a lawsuit, so that the interests of potential parties are sufficiently protected by the actual parties. • The concept of adequate representation is often used in procedural contexts. For example, if a case is to be certified as a class action, there must be adequate representation by the named plaintiffs of all the potential class members. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4). And if a nonparty is to intervene in a lawsuit, there must not already be adequate representation of the nonparty by an existing party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷164, 316; Parties ↷35.13, 41.]

virtual representation. (1934) A party's maintenance of an action on behalf of others with a similar interest, as a class representative does in a class action. See

VIRTUAL-REPRESENTATION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷103.2, 163; Judgment ↷677; Parties ↷35.3.]

4. The assumption by an heir of the rights of his or her predecessor <each child takes a share by representation>. See PER STIRPES. [Cases: Wills ↷550.] 5. (usu. pl.) Int'l law. A friendly but firm statement of a perceived wrong. • This is the mildest form of complaint that one nation can make to another. — Also termed diplomatic representation. — represent, vb.

"Representations are in the nature of vigorous arguments employed in the hope of securing a modification of the action complained of without implying necessarily or expressly an intention ultimately to seek redress by more vigorous means." Ellery C. Stowell, International Law: A Restatement of Principles in Conformity with Actual Practice 427 (1931).

representation, estoppel by. See estoppel by representation under ESTOPPEL.

representation election. See ELECTION (3).

representative, n. (17c) 1. One who stands for or acts on behalf of another <the owner was the football team's representative at the labor negotiations>. See AGENT (2). [Cases: Principal and Agent ↷1.]

accredited representative. (1846) A person with designated authority to act on behalf of another person, group, or organization, usu. by being granted that authority by law or by the rules of the group or organization <as an officer of the union, she was the accredited representative of the employees in the wage dispute>.

class representative. (1942) A person who sues on behalf of a group of plaintiffs in a class action. — Also termed named plaintiff. See CLASS ACTION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷164; Parties ↷35.13.] independent personal representative. See personal representative.

lawful representative. (17c) 1. A legal heir. 2. An executor, administrator, or other legal representative. — Also termed legal representative. See personal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↷14-18.]

legal-personal representative. (18c) 1. When used by a testator referring to personal property, an executor or administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↷14-18.] 2. When used by a testator referring to real property, one to whom the real estate passes immediately upon the testator's death. 3. When used concerning the death of a mariner at sea, the public administrator, executor, or appointed administrator in the seaman's state of residence.

legal representative. 1. See lawful representative. 2. See personal representative.

personal representative. (18c) A person who manages the legal affairs of another because of incapacity or death, such as the executor of an estate. • Technically, an executor is a personal representative named in a will, while an administrator is a personal representative not named in a will. — Also termed independent personal representative; legal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻ 14–18.]

registered representative. (1945) A person approved by the SEC and stock exchanges to sell securities to the public. — Formerly also termed customer's man; customer's person. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻ 40.12–40.14.]

2. A member of a legislature, esp. of the lower house <one senator and one representative attended the rally>. [Cases: States ↻ 28.] — Abbr. rep.

representative action. (1911) 1. CLASS ACTION. 2. DERIVATIVE ACTION (1).

representative capacity. See CAPACITY (1).

representee. One to whom a representation is made.

"First, where the representor can show that he was not negligent, he will not be liable under the 1967 Act; and secondly, where the representee wants to claim damages at the contractual rate, for loss of his bargain, it may be that the Misrepresentation Act will not suffice." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 165 (3d ed. 1981).

representor. One who makes a representation.

"[I]t is arguable that even where a contracting party does not intend to guarantee the accuracy of what he says, the other party is at least entitled to assume that due care has been taken by the representor." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 309 (3d ed. 1981).

repressed-memory syndrome. A memory disorder characterized by an intermittent and extensive inability to recall important personal information, usu. following or concerning a traumatic or highly stressful occurrence, when the memory lapses cannot be dismissed as normal forgetfulness. • The theoretical basis for this syndrome was proposed by Sigmund Freud in 1895. The American Psychiatric Association has recognized the syndrome officially by the medical term dissociative amnesia. Although the APA has affirmed that some people suffering partial or total dissociative amnesia may later recover some or all of the memory of the traumatic or stressful event, the existence of the syndrome is controversial. Some studies indicate that "repressed" memories, at least in some patients, may be a product of suggestions made by mental-health therapists rather than of any actual experience. — Abbr. RMS. — Also termed recovered-memory syndrome; dissociative amnesia. Cf. FALSE-MEMORY SYNDROME.

repressive tax. See sin tax under TAX.

reprieve (ri-preev), n. (16c) Temporary postponement of the carrying out of a criminal sentence, esp. a death sentence. Cf. COMMUTATION (2); PARDON. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ↻ 27.] — reprieve, vb.

"The term reprieve is derived from reprendre, to keep back, and signifies the withdrawing of the sentence for an interval of time, and operates in delay of execution." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 757 (2d ed. 1826).

reprimand, n. (17c) In professional responsibility, a form of disciplinary action — imposed after trial or formal charges — that declares the lawyer's conduct improper but does not limit his or her right to practice law; a mild form of lawyer discipline that does not restrict the lawyer's ability to practice law. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻ 59.7, 59.8.] — reprimand, vb.

private reprimand. An unpublished communication between a disciplinary agency and a wrongdoing attorney, admonishing the attorney about the improper conduct. • Sometimes a published reprimand that does not identify the lawyer by name is considered a private reprimand. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻ 59.7.]

public reprimand. A published notice, appearing usu. in a legal newspaper or bar journal, admonishing the attorney about improper conduct and describing the impropriety for the benefit of other members of the legal profession. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻ 59.8.]

reprisal (ri-pri-zəl). 1. (often pl.) Int'l law. The use of force, short of war, against another country to redress an injury caused by that country. [Cases: War and National Emergency ↻ 12.]

"Reprisals' is a word with a long history, and modern writers are not agreed on the meaning which should be given to it today. Literally and historically it denotes the seizing of property or persons by way of retaliation . . . Reprisals when they are taken today are taken by a state, but some writers would still limit the word to acts of taking or withholding the property of a foreign state or its nationals, for example by an embargo, whilst others would abandon the historical associations and use it to denote any kind of coercive action not amounting to war whereby a state attempts to secure satisfaction from another for some wrong which the latter has committed against it." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 321–22 (5th ed. 1955).

general reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation directs all its military officers and citizens to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is a command to seize the property of the offending nation wherever it is found.

negative reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation refuses to perform an obligation to another nation, such as the fulfillment of a treaty.

positive reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation forcibly seizes another nation's property or persons.

special reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation authorizes an aggrieved private citizen to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is an authorization for a private citizen to seize a particular vessel of the offending nation. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

2. (often pl.) Int'l law. An act of forceful retaliation for injury or attack by another country; formerly, in war, the killing of prisoners in response to an enemy's war crimes (now unlawful). Cf. RETORSION. 3. Any act or instance of retaliation, as by an employer against a complaining employee. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻ 771.]

reprise (ri-priz), n. An annual deduction, duty, or payment out of a manor or estate, such as an annuity.

reprobation (rep-rə-bay-shən). The act of raising an objection or exception, as to the competency of a witness or the sufficiency of evidence. — reprobationary (rep-rə-bay-shə-ner-ee), reprobative (rep-rə-bay-tiv), adj. — reprobate (rep-rə-bayt), vb.

reprobator (rep-rə-bay-tər). Scots law. Hist. A challenge to disqualify a witness or to invalidate the testimony of an objectionable witness. — Also termed action of reprobator.

reproduction right. Copyright. A copyright holder's exclusive right to make copies or phonorecords of the protected work. • Unauthorized copying constitutes infringement. — Also termed right of reproduction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 36.]

reproductive rights. A person's constitutionally protected rights relating to the control of his or her procreative activities; specif., the cluster of civil liberties relating to pregnancy, abortion, and sterilization, esp. the personal bodily rights of a woman in her decision whether to become pregnant or bear a child. • The phrase includes the idea of being able to make reproductive decisions free from discrimination, coercion, or violence. Human-rights scholars increasingly consider many reproductive rights to be protected by international human-rights law. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1029.]

republic, n. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. • It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king or dictator) or of an elite group (such as an oligarchy, aristocracy, or junta). — Abbr. rep. Cf. DEMOCRACY. — republican, adj.

"A republic is a government which (a) derives all of its powers directly or indirectly from the great body of the people and (b) is administered by persons holding their office during pleasure, for a limited period, or during good behavior." Robert A. Dahl, A Preface to Democratic Theory 10 (1956).

republican government. See GOVERNMENT.

republication, n. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of publishing again or anew. 2. Wills & estates. Reestablishment of the validity of a previously revoked will by repeating the formalities of execution or by using a codicil. • The result is to make the old will effective from the date of republication. — Also termed revalidation. Cf. REVIVAL (2). [Cases: Wills ⇨ 196–202.] 3. Defamation. The act or an instance of repeating or spreading more widely a defamatory statement. — republish, vb.

repudiate, vb. (16c) 1. To reject or renounce (a duty or obligation); esp., to indicate an intention not to perform (a contract). [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313.] 2. Hist. To divorce or disown (one's wife).

repudiatee (ri-pyoo-dee-ə-tee). A party to a contract that has been repudiated by the other party. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313.]

repudiation (ri-pyoo-dee-ay-shən), n. (16c) 1. Eccles. law. Rare. A person's refusal to accept a benefice. 2. A contracting party's words or actions that indicate an intention not to perform the contract in the future; a threatened breach of contract. Cf. REJECTION (1), (2); RESCISSION; REVOCAION (1). [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313(2).] — repudiatory (ri-pyoo-dee-ə-tor-ee), repudiable (ri-pyoo-dee-ə-bəl), adj.

"A repudiation is (a) a statement by the obligor to the obligee indicating that the obligor will commit a breach that would of itself give the obligee a claim for damages for total breach . . . , or (b) a voluntary affirmative act which renders the obligor unable or apparently unable to perform without such a breach." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 250 (1979).

"In order to constitute a repudiation, a party's language must be sufficiently positive to be reasonably interpreted to mean that the party will not or cannot perform. Mere expression of doubt as to his willingness or ability to perform is not enough to constitute a repudiation, although such an expression may give an obligee reasonable grounds to believe that the obligor will commit a serious breach and may ultimately result in a repudiation However, language that under a fair reading 'amounts to a statement of intention not to perform except on conditions which go beyond the contract' constitutes a repudiation." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 250, cmt. b (1979).

anticipatory repudiation. (1913) Repudiation of a contractual duty before the time for performance, giving the injured party an immediate right to damages for total breach, as well as discharging the injured party's remaining duties of performance. • This type of repudiation occurs when the promisor unequivocally disavows any intention to perform when the time for performance comes. Once the repudiation occurs, the nonrepudiating party has three options: (1) treat the repudiation as an immediate breach and sue for damages; (2) ignore the repudiation, urge the repudiator to perform, wait for the specified time of performance, and sue if the repudiating party does not perform; or (3) cancel the contract. — Also termed renunciation. See anticipatory breach under BREACH OF CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313.]

The Restatement lists three actions that constitute anticipatory repudiation: "(a) a positive statement to the promisee or other person having a right under the contract, indicating that the promisor will not or cannot substantially perform his contractual duties; (b) transferring or contracting to transfer to a third person an interest in specific land, goods, or in any other thing essential for the substantial performance of his contractual duties; (c) any voluntary affirmative act which renders substantial performance of his contractual duties impossible, or apparently impossible." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 318 (1979).

total repudiation. (1859) An unconditional refusal by a party to perform the acts required by a contract. • This type of repudiation justifies the other party in refraining from performance. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313.]

repudiator (ri-pyoo-dee-ay-tər). One who repudiates; esp., a party who repudiates a contract. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 313.]

repudium (ri-pyoo-dee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. The revocation of betrothal or marriage by either the man or the woman. • After Augustus, it was necessary to send the other spouse a letter of repudiation in order to terminate the marriage. Cf. DIVORTIUM.

repugnancy (ri-pəg-nən-see). (1865) An inconsistency or contradiction between two or more parts of a legal instrument (such as a contract or statute). [Cases: Contracts ↻162; Statutes ↻207.]

repugnant (ri-pəg-nənt), adj. (14c) Inconsistent or irreconcilable with; contrary or contradictory to <the court's interpretation was repugnant to the express wording of the statute>.

repugnant verdict. See VERDICT.

repurchase, n. The act or an instance of buying something back or again; esp., a corporation's buying back of some or all of its stock at market price. See REDEMPTION. [Cases: Corporations ↻82, 120.] — repurchase, vb.

repurchase agreement. A short-term loan agreement by which one party sells a security to another party but promises to buy back the security on a specified date at a specified price. — Often shortened to repo. [Cases: Corporations ↻82, 120.]

repurchase price. See redemption price under PRICE.

reputation, n. (14c) The esteem in which a person is held by others. • Evidence of reputation may be introduced as proof of character whenever character evidence is admissible. Fed. R. Evid. 405. — Also termed personal reputation. See character evidence under CHARACTER. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻375; Evidence ↻106; Witnesses ↻338.] — reputational, adj.

reputational evidence. See reputation evidence under EVIDENCE.

reputation evidence. See EVIDENCE.

reputed manor. See MANOR.

request, n. Parliamentary law. A motion by which a member invokes a right, seeks permission for the exercise of a privilege, or asks a question. Cf. MOTION (2); DEMAND (2); INQUIRY (2); POINT (2).

request for leave to modify a motion. See request for permission to modify a motion.

request for leave to withdraw a motion. See request for permission to withdraw a motion.

request for permission to modify a motion. A motion by which the mover seeks an amendment to his or her own motion after the chair has stated the motion. • The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question. After that, the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot modify it without the assembly's permission. See friendly amendment under AMENDMENT (3). — Also termed request for leave to modify a motion.

request for permission to modify a motion. — Also termed request for leave to withdraw a motion.

request to be excused from a duty. A motion seeking relief from a duty that an officer or other member has been charged with.

request to read papers. 1. A motion asking permission to read aloud from printed matter. • Reading aloud is generally not allowed without permission. 2. A motion asking that the chair or secretary read aloud a document for the mover's or the assembly's information.

request for admission. (1939) Civil procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written factual statement served on another party who must admit, deny, or object to the substance of the statement. • Ordinarily, many requests for admission appear in one document. The admitted statements, along with any statements not denied or objected to, will be treated by the court as established and therefore do not have to be proved at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36. — Abbr. RFA. — Also termed request for admissions; request to admit; notice to admit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1671; Pretrial Procedure ↻471.]

request for continued examination. Patents. A means of negating the final action on a patent so that the applicant can file amendments, new claims, etc. to show that the invention is patentable as of the original application date. • Unlike a continuation application, a request for continued examination keeps a patent alive as if no final decision had been made. It allows prosecution of claims that have been rejected in a final office action to continue. — Abbr. RCE. Cf. CONTINUATION. [Cases: Patents ↻104.]

request for instructions. (1942) Procedure. During trial, a party's written request that the court instruct the jury on the law as set forth in the request. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 51. — Abbr. RFI. — Also termed request to charge. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2176; Trial ↻259.]

request for leave to withdraw a motion. See REQUEST.

request for leave to modify a motion. See REQUEST.

request for permission to withdraw a motion. See REQUEST.

request for permission to modify a motion. See REQUEST.

request for production. (1944) Procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written request that another party provide specified documents or other tangible things for inspection and copying. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34. — Abbr. RFP. — Also termed document request; request for production of documents; notice to produce; demand for document inspection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1551; Pretrial Procedure ↻331.]

request for proposal. An invitation to prospective suppliers or contractors to submit proposals or bids to provide goods or services. • Unlike most invitations for bids, an RFP requires bidders to give more information than the proposed price. For instance, bidders may have to provide evidence of good financial condition, acceptable technical capability, stock availability, and customer satisfaction. — Abbr. RFP. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨ 238; Public Contracts ⇨ 7; States ⇨ 98; United States ⇨ 64.25.]

request for reconsideration. Patents. An applicant's submission of further arguments after a patent claim's rejection. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 104.]

request for reexamination. Patents. A formal process of asking the Patent and Trademark Office to review an in-force patent's validity in light of prior-art references. • Anyone, including the patent owner or an infringer, may request a patent's reexamination. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 140.]

request for relief. See PRAYER FOR RELIEF.

request to admit. See REQUEST FOR ADMISSION.

request to be excused from a duty. See REQUEST.

request to charge. See REQUEST FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

request to read papers. See REQUEST.

required-records doctrine. (1945) The principle that the privilege against self-incrimination does not apply when one is being compelled to produce business records that are kept in accordance with government regulations and that involve public aspects. • Some courts have held that certain medical records and tax forms fall within this doctrine and are thus not protected by the privilege against self-incrimination. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 298.]

required-request law. A law mandating that hospital personnel discuss with a deceased patient's relatives the possibility of an anatomical gift. • The Uniform Anatomical Gift Act (not in effect in some states) mandates a required-request law. [Cases: Dead Bodies ⇨ 1.]

required reserve. See RESERVE.

requirement for division. See RESTRICTION (4).

requirement for restriction. See RESTRICTION (4).

requirements contract. See CONTRACT.

requirements testing. See ACCEPTANCE TESTING.

requisition (rek-wə-zish-ən), n. 1. An authoritative, formal demand . [Cases: Extradition and Detainers ⇨ 34.] 2. A governmental seizure of property <the state's requisition of the shopping center during the weather emergency>. See TAKING (2). — requisition, *vb.

requisitionist. One who makes a formal demand (as for the performance of an obligation or the return of a fugitive). See REQUISITION (1).

requisitory letter. See LETTER OF REQUEST.

rere-county (reer-kown-tee). Hist. A subsidiary English county court held by the sheriff on the day after the regular county court. — Also spelled rere county; rier county.

re-refer. See REFER.

res (rays or reez or rez), n. [Latin "thing"] (17c) 1. An object, interest, or status, as opposed to a person <jurisdiction of the res — the real property in Colorado>. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 16.] 2. The subject matter of a trust; CORPUS (1) <the stock certificate is the res of the trust>. [Cases: Trusts ⇨ 1.] Pl. res.

res accessoria (rays ak-ses-or-ee-ə). [Latin] Civil law. An accessory thing; a thing that is related to a principal thing. Pl. res accessoriae.

res adjudicata (rays ə-joo-di-kay-tə or -kah-tə). See RES JUDICATA.

resale, n. (17c) 1. The act of selling goods or property — previously sold to a buyer who breached the sales contract — to someone else. UCC § 2-706. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 332-339.] 2. A retailer's selling of goods, previously purchased from a manufacturer or wholesaler, usu. to consumers or to someone else further down the chain of distribution. — resell, *vb.

resale-price maintenance. A form of price-fixing in which a manufacturer forces or persuades several different retailers to sell the manufacturer's product at the same price, thus preventing competition. • Resale-price maintenance is not per se illegal under antitrust law, but it is illegal if it produces anticompetitive effects under the rule of reason. A manufacturer may suggest a retail price as long as it does not compel retailers to sell at that price. See RULE OF REASON; vertical price-fixing under PRICE-FIXING. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 821.]

res aliena (rays ay-lee-ee-nə or al-ee-). [Latin] Archaic. The property belonging to another.

res alienari prohibita (rays ay-lee-ə-nair-ı proh-hib-i-tə). [Law Latin] Hist. A thing that cannot be alienated.

res aliena scienter legata (rays ay-lee-ee-nə [or al-ee-] si-en-tər lə-gay-tə). [Latin] Hist. The property of another knowingly bequeathed — that is, property that a testator did not own but purported to bequeath by will.

res caduca (rays kə-d[y]oo-kə). [Latin] Civil law. A fallen thing; an escheat. Pl. res caducae.

resceit (ri-seet). Hist. The admittance of an interested third party to plead in a case between two others; intervention.

rescind (ri-sind), vb. (17c) 1. To abrogate or cancel (a contract) unilaterally or by agreement. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 249.] 2. To make void; to repeal or annul <rescind the legislation>. 3. Parliamentary law. To void, repeal, or nullify a main motion adopted earlier. — Also termed annul; repeal. — rescindable, *adj.

rescind and expunge. See EXPUNGE (2).

rescissio (ri-sis[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. Annulment or voidance of a juridical act; rescission. Pl. rescissiones.

rescission (ri-sizh-ən), n. (17c) 1. A party's unilateral unmaking of a contract for a legally sufficient reason, such as the other party's material breach, or a judgment rescinding the contract; VOIDANCE. • Rescission is generally available as a remedy or defense for a non-defaulting party and is accompanied by restitution of any partial performance, thus restoring the parties to their precontractual positions. — Also termed avoidance. [Cases: Contracts ↻249.] 2. An agreement by contracting parties to discharge all remaining duties of performance and terminate the contract. — Also spelled recision; recission. — Also termed (in sense 2) agreement of rescission; mutual rescission; abandonment. Cf. REJECTION (2); REPUDIATION (2); REVOCATION (1). [Cases: Contracts ↻252.] — rescissory (ri-sis-ə-ree or ri-siz-), adj.

"The [UCC] takes cognizance of the fact that the term 'rescission' is often used by lawyers, courts and businessmen in many different senses; for example, termination of a contract by virtue of an option to terminate in the agreement, cancellation for breach and avoidance on the grounds of infancy or fraud. In the interests of clarity of thought — as the consequences of each of these forms of discharge may vary — the Commercial Code carefully distinguishes three circumstances. 'Rescission' is utilized as a term of art to refer to a mutual agreement to discharge contractual duties. 'Termination' refers to the discharge of duties by the exercise of a power granted by the agreement. 'Cancellation' refers to the putting an end to the contract by reason of a breach by the other party. Section 2-720, however, takes into account that the parties do not necessarily use these terms in this way." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21-2, at 864-65 (3d ed. 1987).

equitable rescission. (1889) Rescission that is decreed by a court of equity. [Cases: Cancellation of Instruments ↻1.]

legal rescission. (1849) 1. Rescission that is effected by the agreement of the parties. [Cases: Contracts ↻251.] 2. Rescission that is decreed by a court of law, as opposed to a court of equity.

"The modern tendency is to treat rescission as equitable, but rescission was often available at law. If plaintiff had paid money, or had delivered goods, he could rescind by tendering whatever he had received from defendant and suing at law to recover his money or replevy his goods. But if he had delivered a promissory note or securities, or conveyed real estate, rescission required the court to cancel the instruments or compel defendant to reconvey. This relief was available only in equity. Many modern courts ignore the distinction But versions of the distinction are codified in some states." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 627-28 (3d ed. 2002).

rescissory action. See ACTION (4).

rescissory damages. See DAMAGES.

res communes (rays kə-myoo-nee), n. pl. [Latin "common things"] Civil law. Things common to all; things that cannot be owned or appropriated, such as light, air, and the sea. La. Civ. Code art. 449.

rescue doctrine. (1926) Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who negligently endangered a person is liable for injuries to someone who reasonably attempted to rescue the person in danger. • The rationale for this doctrine is that an attempted rescue of someone in danger is always foreseeable. Thus, if the tortfeasor is negligent toward the rescuee, the tortfeasor is also negligent toward the rescuer. — Also termed danger-invites-rescue doctrine. Cf. EMERGENCY DOCTRINE; GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ↻510(3).]
