impartible feud. An indivisible feud; a feud not subject to partition. See feodum individuum under FEUD.

improper feud. A nonmilitary feud; a feud that is base or servile in nature.

"These were the principal, and very simple, qualities of the genuine or original feuds; being then all of a military nature, and in the hands of military persons: though the feudatories, being under frequent incapacities of cultivating and manuring their own lands, soon found it necessary to commit part of them to inferior tenants But this at the same time demolished the ancient simplicity of feuds; and an inroad being once made upon their constitution, it subjected them, in a course of time, to great varieties and innovations. Feuds came to be bought and sold, and deviations were made from the old fundamental rules of tenure and succession; which were held no longer sacred, when the feuds themselves no longer continued to be purely military. Hence these tenures began now to be divided into feoda propria et impropria, proper and improper feuds" 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 57-58 (1766).

proper feud. A feud based on military service.

2. The interest of the tenant in the land conveyed. 3. The land itself conveyed. — Also termed (in senses 1, 2 & 3) fee; fief; feod; feude; feodum. 4. An enmity or private war existing between families or clans, esp. as a result of a murder.

"Where wrong done to an individual is not regarded as an injury to the entire tribe, the wrongdoer is out of the peace only as regards the wronged party and his kin. The situation created by such wrongful deed is feud (Anglo Saxon foehth, Latin faida). The root meaning of the word is 'hatred.' Feud is legally sanctioned hostility. The recognition of feud by the law is found in the fact that revenge taken in lawful feud is not a breach of the peace. It is not a wrongful deed. It furnishes no basis for any claim for fine or punishment. The man slain in lawful feud is not to be avenged nor has compensation to be paid for his slaying." Munroe Smith, The Development of European Law 29 (1928).

blood feud. A state of hostility between families in which one family seeks to avenge the killing of one of its members by killing a member of the other family. See VENDETTA.

"Anglo-Saxon polity preserved, even down to the Norman Conquest, many traces of a time when kinship was the strongest of all bonds. Such a stage of society, we hardly need add, is not confined to any one region of the world or any one race of men. . . . When it puts on the face of strife between hostile kindreds, it is shown in the war of tribal factions, and more specifically in the blood-feud. A man's kindred are his avengers; and, as it is their right and honour to avenge him, so it is their duty to make amends for his misdeeds, or else maintain his cause in fight. Step by step, as the power of the State waxes, the self-centred and self-helping autonomy of the kindred wanes. Private feud is controlled, regulated, put, one may say, into legal harness; the avenging and the protecting clan on the slain and the slayer are made pledges and auxiliaries of public justice." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 31 (2d ed. 1898).

feudal, adj. (17c) 1. Of, relating to, or growing out of feudalism <feudal law>. 2. Of or relating to a feud <feudal tenure>. — Also spelled (archaically) feodal. Cf. ALLODIAL.

feudalism (fyood-əl-iz-əm). (19c) 1. A landholding system, particularly applying to medieval Europe, in which all are bound by their status in a hierarchy of reciprocal obligations of service and defense. • The lord was obligated to give the vassal (1) some land, (2) protection, and (3) justice. The lord guaranteed the quiet occupation of the land by the vassal and guaranteed to do right if the vassal became involved in a dispute. In return, the vassal owed the lord some type of service, called "tenure" (literally "means of holding"), because the different types of service were the methods by which the vassals held the property. 2. The social, political, and economic system of medieval Europe. — Also termed feudal system; feodal system. — feudalistic, adj.

"What do we mean by feudalism? Some such answer as the following is the best that I can give — A state of society in which the main social bond is the relation between lord and man, a relation implying on the lord's part protection and defence; on the man's part protection, service and reverence, the service including service in arms. This personal relation is inseparably involved in a proprietary relation, the tenure of land — the man holds land of the lord, the man's service is a burden on the land, the lord has important rights in the land, and (we may say) the full ownership of the land is split up between man and lord." F.W. Maitland, The Constitutional History of England 143 (1908; repr. 1955).

"Modern historical research has taught us that, while it is a mistake to speak of a feudal system, the word 'feudalism' is a convenient way of referring to certain fundamental similarities which, in spite of large local variations, can be discerned in the social development of all the peoples of western Europe from about the ninth to the thirteenth centuries." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 2 (5th ed. 1955).

feudal law. Hist. The real-property law of land tenures that prevailed in England, esp. after the Norman Conquest. See FEUDARUM CONSUETUDINES.

feudal system. See FEUDALISM.

feuda pecuniae (fyoo-də pi-kyoo-nee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. A heritable right to money.

feodarum consuetudines (fyoo-dair-əm kon-swə-t[y]oo-də-nee). [Latin] The customs of feuds. • This was the name of a compilation of feudal laws and customs made in 12th-century Milan. It is regarded as an authoritative work in continental Europe. — Also spelled feodarum consuetudines.

feudatory, adj. (16c) Hist. (Of a vassal) owing feudal allegiance to a lord.

feudatory, n. (17c) Hist. The grantee of a feud; the vassal or tenant who held an estate by feudal service. — Also termed feudary; feodatory.

"Every receiver of lands, or feudatory, was therefore bound, when called upon by his benefactor, or immediate lord of his feud or fee, to do all in his power to defend him." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 46 (1766).

feude. See FEUD.

feudee (fyoo-dee), n. Hist. The grantee of a feud; a feudal tenant.

feudist. (17c) A writer on feuds (for example, Cujacius, Spelman, Craig).

Feudorum Libri (fyoo-dor-əm li-brī). [Latin "the books of the feuds"] Hist. The Books of Feuds, a five-book compilation of Lombardic feudal law published in Milan around 1152, during the reign of Henry III. • This unofficial compilation was the main source of tenure law among the nations in Europe. It was widely used in medieval law schools and courts in Italy, France, and Germany. The Feudorum Libri were probably known in England but had little effect other than influencing English lawyers to study their own tenure system more critically. — Also termed Consuetudines Feudorum; Usus Feudorum.

feudum (fyoo-dəm). [Law Latin] A fief or feud; a feodum. — Also termed feodum; feum. Pl. feuda (fyoo-də). See FEUD (1)–(3); FIEF; FEE (2).

"The Latin equivalent of feodum or feudum is the root of the words 'feudal' and 'subinfeudation'. The French form fief is favoured by some English historians, but it was not used in law-French." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 256 n.4 (3d ed. 1990).

feudum antiquum (fyoo-dəm an-tī-kwəm), n. [Law Latin "ancient feud"] Hist. 1. A feud that passed to a vassal from an intestate ancestor. 2. A feud that ancestors had possessed for more than four generations. 3. An ancient feud. Pl. feuda antiqua (fyoo-də an-tī-kwə). — Also termed feodum antiquum (fee-ə-dəm) or fyoo-dəm. See FEUD (1).

feudum apertum (fyoo-dəm ə-pər-təm). Hist. A feud that reverted to the lord because of a tenant's failure of issue, a crime by the tenant, or some other legal cause. — Also termed feodum apertum.

feudum burgale (fyoo-dəm bər-gay-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. Land held feudally by burgage tenure — that is, tenure given in exchange for a tenant's watching and warding in a burgh. See WATCH AND WARD.

feudum ex camera aut caverna (fyoo-dəm eks kam-ər-ə awt kə-vər-nə). [Law Latin "feu from a room or hole"] Hist. An annual gift of money, grain, or other items to a deserving person, esp. a soldier.

feudum francum (fyoo-dəm frangk-əm). Hist. A free feud; a feud or fee that was noble and free from talliage and subsidies that vulgar feuds (plebeia feuda) were subject to.

feudum hauberticum (fyoo-dəm haw-bər-tə-kəm). Hist. A feud that was held on the military service of appearing fully armed when summoned by the lord. See ARRIÈRE-BAN.

feudum improprium (fyoo-dəm im-proh-pree-əm). Hist. A feud that was improper.

feudum individuum (fyoo-dəm in-də-vij-oo-əm). Hist. A feud that was indivisible and descendible only to the eldest son.

feudum laicum (fyoo-dəm lay-ə-kəm). Hist. A lay feud. — Also termed feodum laicum.

feudum ligium (fyoo-dəm lij-ee-əm). Hist. 1. A liege feud; a feud held immediately of the sovereign. 2. A feud for which the vassal owed fealty to his lord against all other persons.

feudum maternum (fyoo-dəm mə-tər-nəm). Hist. A feud that descended to the feudatory from the maternal side.

feudum militare (fyoo-dəm mil-ə-tair-ee). Hist. A knight's feud. • It was held by knight-service and esteemed the most honorable species of tenure. — Also termed feodum militis; (in Norman law) fief d'haubert or fief d'hauberk.

feudum nobile (fyoo-dəm noh-bə-lee). Hist. A feud for which the tenant did guard and owed fealty and homage. — Also termed feodum nobile.

feudum novum (fyoo-dəm noh-vəm). [Law Latin] Hist. A new fee; a fee that began with the person of the feudatory, and that was not acquired by succession. — Also spelled feodum novum.

"For if the feud, of which the son died seised, was really feudum antiquum, or one descended to him from his ancestors, the father could not possibly succeed to it, because it must have passed him in the course of descent, before it could come to the son . . . And if it were feudum novum, or one newly acquired by the son, then only the descendants from the body of the feudatory himself could succeed, by the known maxim of the early feudal constitutions . . . which was founded as well upon the personal merit of the vassal, which might be transmitted to his children but could not ascend to his progenitors . . ." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 211–12 (1766).

feudum novum ut antiquum (fyoo-dəm noh-vəm ut an-tī-kwəm). Hist. A new feud held with the qualities of an ancient feud.

feudum paternum (fyoo-dəm pə-tər-nəm). Hist. 1. A feud that the tenant's paternal ancestors had held for four generations. 2. A feud descendible only to the heirs on the paternal side. 3. A feud that could be held only by males.

feudum proprium (fyoo-dəm proh-pree-əm). Hist. An original feud that is military in nature and held by military service.

feudum rectum (fyoo-dəm rek-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. Lands held by military tenure.

feudum simplex (fyoo-dəm sim-pleks). [Law Latin] Hist. FEE SIMPLE.

feudum talliatum (fyoo-dəm tal-ee-ay-təm). See FEE TAIL.

feu duty. Scots law. The annual rent paid by the tenant of a feu. — Also termed ground annual.

feu farm. Scots law. A tenure of land held in exchange for a specified annual payment (called feu duty). • This type of tenure was converted to a freehold in 2000. — Also termed feu tenure. See FEU DUTY.

feuholding (fyoo-hohl-ding). Hist. A tenancy held by rendering produce or money instead of military service. — Also written feu holding.

feum. See FEUDUM.

feu tenure. See FEU FARM.

few. See FEU.

ff. abbr. 1. And the pages following. 2. (often cap.) FRAGMENTA.

FGA. abbr. 1. Free from general average. 2. Foreign general average.

"F.G.A. means Foreign General Average, and implies that, if goods become liable to general average, the rules to be applied will be those of the port of destination or refuge, i.e., the law of the place where the adjustment is made." 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 128 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

FGM. abbr. FEMALE GENITAL MUTILATION.

FHA. abbr. 1. FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATION. 2. FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION.

FHA mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

FHEO. abbr. OFFICE OF FAIR HOUSING AND EQUAL OPPORTUNITY.

FHLB. abbr. FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK.

FHLBB. abbr. FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD.

FHLMC. abbr. FEDERAL HOME LOAN MORTGAGE CORPORATION.

FHWA. abbr. FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION.

fiancer (fyahn-say), vb. [Law French] To pledge one's faith.

fiant, n. (16c) Hist. 1. A decree; commission. 2. A warrant to the Chancery of Ireland for a grant under the great seal.

fian, n. Scots law. One who holds an estate in fee, in contrast to a liferenter.

fiat (fee-ah or fee-at or fi-at or fi-ət), n. [Latin "let it be done"] (17c) 1. An order or decree, esp. an arbitrary one <judicial fiat>. 2. A court decree, esp. one relating to a routine matter such as scheduling <the court requires all motions to contain a fiat — to be filled in by the court — setting the hearing date>. — Also termed fiaunt.

fiat justitia (fi-at jəs-tish-ee-ə). [Latin] Hist. Let justice be done. • This phrase signaled the Crown's commission to the House of Lords to hear an appeal.

"Fiat Justitia, ruat coelum, says another maxim, as full of extravagance as it is of harmony: Go heaven to wreck — so justice be but done: — and what is the ruin of kingdoms, in comparison of the wreck of heaven?" Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 13–14 n.1 (1823).

fiat money. See MONEY.

fiat ut petitur (fi-at ut pet-ə-tər). [Latin] Let it be done as it is asked. • An order granting a petition.

FICA (fi-kə). abbr. FEDERAL INSURANCE CONTRIBUTIONS ACT.

fickle-fiduciary rule. The principle that a partner or employee who breaches a fiduciary duty should forfeit all compensation, bonuses, and other benefits received for as long as the breach continues. • The rule usu. applies to a person who engages in or assists a competing business, or resigns from employment to set up or work for a competing business. Traditionally, mitigating factors, including the absence of harm to the employer or partnership, are not considered in applying the rule. But some courts have found that if a strict application would produce unjustly harsh results, mitigating factors must be weighed.

ficta traditio (fik-tə trə-dish-ee-oh). [Latin] Scots law. A fictitious delivery. • The phrase invoked the rule that if the parties so intended, an item could be treated as having been delivered to a buyer in possession of it without the need for physical transfer. — Also termed fictio brevis manus.

fictio (fik-shee-oh), n. [Latin fr. fingere "to feign"] Roman law. A legal fiction; a legal assumption or supposition (such as that the plaintiff was a citizen) necessary to achieve certain legal results that otherwise would not be obtained. • Legal fictions allowed Roman magistrates (praetors) to expand the law beyond what was strictly allowed by the jus civile. This practice also occurred in English law — for example, the action of common recovery, which allowed a landowner to convey land that by law could not be alienated (such as land held in fee tail). Pl. fictions (fik-shee-oh-neež).

fictio brevis manus (fik-shee-oh bree-vis may-nas). [Law Latin] FICTA TRADITIO.

fictio juris. See LEGAL FICTION.

fiction. See LEGAL FICTION.

fictional action. See collusive action under ACTION (4).

fiction of law. See LEGAL FICTION.

fictitious, adj. (17c) Of or relating to a fiction, esp. a legal fiction.

fictitious action. See ACTION (4).

fictitious issue. See FEIGNED ISSUE.

fictitious name. 1. See ASSUMED NAME. 2. See ALIAS (1). 3. See JOHN DOE.

fictitious party. See PARTY (2).

fictitious-payee rule. Commercial law. The principle that if a drawer or maker issues commercial paper to a payee whom the drawer or maker does not actually intend to have any interest in the instrument, an ensuing forgery of the payee's name will be effective to pass good title to later transferees. — Also termed padded-payroll rule. [Cases: Banks and Banking ☞ 148, 174; Bills and Notes ☞ 279.]

fictitious person. See artificial person under PERSON (3).

fictitious promise. See implied promise under PROMISE.

fictitious seisin. See seisin in law under SEISIN.

fide-committee. A beneficiary; CESTUI QUE TRUST. — Also termed fidei-commissarius.

"In a particular case, a cestuy que trust is called by the Roman law, fideicommissarius. In imitation of this, I have seen him somewhere or other called in English a fide-committee. This term, however, seems not very expressive. A fide-committee, or, as it should have been, a fidei-committee, seems, literally speaking, to mean one who is committed to the good faith of another." Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 226 n.1 (1823).

fideicomiso (fee-day-koh-mee-soh). Mexican law. A trust; esp., a trust that is established for the purpose of acquiring property in Mexico with a Mexican bank as trustee and a non-Mexican (who may be the settlor) as beneficiary. • The property is held in the name of the trust, but the beneficiary has all the rights and obligations of direct ownership, including the power to lease, sell, or devise the property. A Mexican fideicomiso usu lasts 50 years and can be renewed for 50 more. Cf. FIDEICOMMISSUM.

fidei-commissarius. See CESTUI QUE TRUST.

fidei-commissary (fi-dee-i kom-ə-ser-ee). See CESTUI QUE TRUST.

fideicommissum (fi-dee-i-kə-mis-əm). [Latin] (18c) 1. Roman law. A direction to an heir asking the heir as a matter of good faith to give some part of the inheritance, such as a particular object, or all the inheritance, to a third party. • A fideicommissum was a device to overcome some of the technicalities of the Roman will. Originally it created a mere moral obligation, but Augustus made it enforceable by legal process. 2. Roman & civil law. An arrangement similar to a trust by which a testator gave property to a person for the benefit of another who could not, by law, inherit property. • Over time, this device was used to tie up property for generations, and most civil jurisdictions now prohibit or limit it. For example, in Louisiana, an arrangement in which one person bequeaths property to a second with a charge to preserve it and, at death, to restore it to a third person is a prohibited fideicommissum. — Sometimes spelled fidei-commissum. Pl. fideicommissa.

to carry out. The beginning of fideicommissa, therefore, was very like the early practice with regard to trusts in English law, and, as in the case of trusts, a time came when trusts were made binding legally as well as morally. . . . For brevity, the fideicommissum will here be called 'the trust', the person upon whom it was imposed (fiduciarius) 'the trustee', and the person in whose favour it was imposed (fideicommissarius) 'the beneficiary'." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 252 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

fidejubere (fi-dee-yə-beer-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To become a surety. • Forms of this word were spoken by the parties to a stipulatio that bound one party to become a surety for the other; the first party asked, "Do you pledge yourself?" (fidejubesne?), and the second responded, "I do pledge myself" (fidejubeo). See STIPULATIO.

fidejussio (fi-di-jəsh-ən). [fr. Latin fidejussio] (16c) Roman law. An act by which a person becomes an additional security for another. • The act does not remove the principal's liability but only adds to the surety's security. Fidejussio was one of the three types of adpromission, and the only type remaining in Justinian's law. — Also spelled fidejussio; fideiussio. See ADPROMISSION (1). — fidejussory, adj.

fidejussor (fi-dee-jəs-or or -jəs-ər). (16c) 1. Roman law. (ital.) A guarantor; a person who binds himself to pay another's debt. 2. Hist. Maritime law. A person who acts as bail for a defendant in the Court of Admiralty. — Also spelled fideiussor. Cf. ADPROMISSOR. — fidejussory, adj.

"The proceedings of the court of admiralty bear much resemblance to those of the civil law, but are not entirely founded thereon; and they likewise adopt and make use of other laws, as occasion requires; such as the Rhodian law, and the laws of Oleron. For the law of England, as has frequently been observed, doth not acknowledge or pay any deference to the civil law considered as such; but merely permits its use in such cases where it judged its determinations equitable, and therefore blends it, in the present instance, with other marine laws The first process in these courts is frequently by arrest of the defendant's person; and they also take recognizances or stipulation of certain fidejussors in the nature of bail, and in case of default may imprison both them and their principal." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 108-09 (1768).

fidelitatis sacramentum (fi-del-i-tay-tis sak-rə-men-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. The oath of fealty that a vassal owed to a lord.

fidelity and guaranty insurance. See fidelity insurance under INSURANCE.

fidelity bond. See BOND (2).

fidelity guaranty insurance. See fidelity insurance under INSURANCE.

fidelity insurance. See INSURANCE.

fidem facere iudici (fi-dəm fay-sə-ree joo-di-si). [Latin] Hist. To convince the judge. • The phrase appeared in reference to the introduction of evidence to prove a case.

fide*m mentiri* (fi-dəm men-ti-ri). [Latin] Hist. To betray faith or fealty. • The term refers to a feudal tenant who did not keep the fealty sworn to the lord.

fidepromission (fi-dee-proh-mish-ən), n. [Latin “faith-promise”] (19c) Roman law. A contract of guaranty by stipulation. • Fidepromission was one of the three types of adpromission. See ADPROMISSION (1); STIPULATION (3). — fidepromissor, n.

fides (fi-deez). [Latin] Faith.

fides facta (fi-deez fak-tə). [Latin] Hist. Faith-making; faith-pledging. • Among the Franks and Lombards, certain transactions were guaranteed by symbolic, formal acts — making one’s faith — such as the giving of a rod when property was transferred. See FESTUCA.

fiducia (fi-d[y]oo-shee-ə), n. [Latin “an entrusting”] Roman law. An early form of transfer of title by way of mortgage, deposit, etc., with a provision for reconveyance upon payment of the debt, termination of the deposit, etc.

“The Roman mortgage (fiducia) fell wholly out of use before the time of Justinian, having been displaced by the superior simplicity and convenience of the hypotheca; and in this respect modern Continental law has followed the Roman.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 443 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

fiducial, adj. (16c) Of, relating to, or characterized by confidence in and reliance on another person or thing <there must be a fiducial bond between a patient and a doctor>. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 7; Health ⇨ 578.]

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship under RELATIONSHIP.

fiduciarius heres (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-əs heer-eez). [Latin “fiduciary heir”] Roman law. A person formally named an heir in a testament, but in a fiduciary capacity, and charged to deliver the succession to the person designated by the testament.

fiduciarius tutor (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-əs t[y]oo-tər). Roman law. A fiduciary guardian; a person who by fulfilling a trust to free someone in power became his or her guardian.

fiduciary (fi-d[y]oo-shee-er-ee), n. (17c) 1. A person who is required to act for the benefit of another person on all matters within the scope of their relationship; one who owes to another the duties of good faith, trust, confidence, and candor <the corporate officer is a fiduciary to the corporation>. 2. One who must exercise a high standard of care in managing another’s money or property <the beneficiary sued the fiduciary for investing in speculative securities>. — fiduciary, adj. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 7.]

“‘Fiduciary’ is a vague term, and it has been pressed into service for a number of ends. . . . My view is that the term ‘fiduciary’ is so vague that plaintiffs have been able to claim that fiduciary obligations have been breached when in fact the particular defendant was not a fiduciary stricto sensu but simply had withheld property from the plaintiff in an unconscionable manner.” D.W.M. Waters, The Constructive Trust 4 (1964).

dilatory fiduciary (dil-ə-tor-ee). A trustee or other fiduciary who is unreasonably slow in administering an estate.

successor fiduciary. A fiduciary who is appointed to succeed or replace a prior one.

temporary fiduciary. An interim fiduciary appointed by the court until a regular fiduciary can be appointed.

fiduciary bond. See BOND (2).

fiduciary contract. Hist. An agreement by which one party delivers something to another on condition that the second party will return the thing to the first.

fiduciary debt. A debt founded on or arising from a fiduciary relationship, rather than from a solely contractual relationship.

fiduciary duty. See DUTY (2).

fiduciary heir. See HEIR.

fiduciary-out clause. Mergers & acquisitions. A merger-agreement provision that allows the target corporation to terminate the agreement without committing a breach if a specified condition occurs. • The most common condition is the receipt of a more favorable offer, but other conditions may also be specified. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 582.]

fiduciary relationship. See RELATIONSHIP.

fiduciary-shield doctrine. Corporations. The principle that a corporate officer’s act cannot be the basis for jurisdiction over the officer in an individual capacity. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 12(2.20); Federal Courts ⇨ 76.20.]

fief (feef), n. 1. See FEE. 2. See FEUD. • Metaphorically, the term refers to an area of dominion, esp. in a corporate or governmental bureaucracy.

fief d’hauberk (feef doh-bairk). See feudum militare under FEUDUM.

fief d’haubert. See feudum militare under FEUDUM.

fief-tenant. Hist. The holder of a fief or fee; a feeholder or freeholder.

field audit. See AUDIT.

field book. A log or book containing a surveyor’s notes that are made on-site and that describe by course and distance the running of the property lines and the establishment of the corners of a parcel of land.

Field Code. The New York Code of Procedure of 1848, which was the first comprehensive Anglo-American code of civil procedure and served as a model for the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. • It was drafted by David Dudley Field (1805–1894), a major law-reformer. See code pleading under PLEADING (2).

field notes. The notes in a surveyor’s field book.

field of invention. See CLASSIFICATION OF PATENTS (2).

field of search. See CLASSIFICATION OF PATENTS (2).

field-of-use restriction. Intellectual property. A license provision restricting the licensee’s use of the licensed property to a defined product or service market or to a designated geographical area.

field sobriety test. See SOBRIETY TEST.

field stop. See STOP AND FRISK.

field-warehouse financing agreement. The loan agreement in a field-warehousing arrangement.

field warehousing. An inventory-financing method by which a merchant pledges its inventory, which is in the possession of a third person (a warehouse). • This is a method of financing an inventory that cannot economically be delivered to the creditor or third party. The borrower segregates part of the inventory and places it under the nominal control of a lender or third party, so that the lender has a possessory interest. Cf. floor-plan financing under FINANCING; PLEDGE.

"Field warehousing is a way of bringing about the security relationship of a pledge. It is an arrangement for allowing the pledgor a more convenient access to the pledged goods, while the goods are actually in the custody and control of a third person on the pledgor's premises." Business Factors, Inc. v. Taylor-Edwards Warehouse & Transfer Co., 585 P.2d 825, 828 (Wash. Ct. App. 1978).

"Field warehousing is . . . an arrangement whereby a wholesaler, manufacturer, or merchant finances his business through the pledge of goods remaining on his premises. The arrangement is valid and effective where there is an actual delivery to the warehouseman by the bailor who has hired the warehouseman and given him exclusive possession of the warehouse goods." In re Covington Grain Co., 638 F.2d 1362, 1365 (5th Cir. 1981).

fierding court (fyər-ding or feer-ding). Hist. An ancient court of inferior jurisdiction. • Four courts were in each district or hundred.

fieri (fī-ə-rī). [Latin] To be made; to be done. • Fieri usu. appears as part of the phrase in fieri. See IN FIERI.

fieri facias (fī-ə-rī fay-shee-əs). [Latin "that you cause to be done"] (15c) A writ of execution that directs a marshal or sheriff to seize and sell a defendant's property to satisfy a money judgment. — Abbr. fi. fa.; Fi. Fa. Cf. LEVARI FACIAS. [Cases: Execution ↷ 1, 15.]

"It receives its name from the Latin words in the writ (quod fieri facias de bonis et catallis, that you cause to be made of the goods and chattels). It is the form of execution in common use in levying upon the judgment debtor's personal property." John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 1914).

"The writ of 'fieri facias' (commonly called a writ of 'fi fa'), which commanded literally 'that you cause to be made,' was an early common-law means of enforcing payment on a judgment; it was, in effect, an order to the sheriff of the court to enforce a judgment against the debtor by levy, seizure, and sale of his personality to the extent needed to satisfy a judgment." 30 Am. Jur. 2d Executions and Enforcement of Judgments § 14, at 50-51 (1994).

fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis (fī-ə-rī fay-shee-əs dee boh-nis e-klee-z[h]ee-as-tə-sis). [Latin "that you cause to be made of the ecclesiastical goods"] Hist. A writ of execution — used when the defendant was a beneficed clerk who had no lay fee — that commanded the bishop to satisfy the judgment from the ecclesiastical goods and chattels of the defendant within the diocese. • This was accomplished by issuing a sequestration to levy the debt out of the defendant's benefice. This writ was issued after a fieri facias had been returned nulla bona.

fieri facias de bonis propriis (fī-ə-rī fay-shee-əs dee boh-nis proh-pree-is). [Latin "that you cause to be made of his own goods"] Hist. A writ that executes on an executor's property when a writ fieri facias de bonis testatoris is returned by the sheriff nulla bona or devastavit (a wasting of the testator's goods by the executor).

fieri facias de bonis testatoris (fī-ə-rī fay-shee-əs dee boh-nis tes-tə-tor-is). [Latin "that you cause to be made of the testator's goods"] Hist. A writ of execution served on an executor for a debt incurred by the testator.

fieri feci (fī-ə-rī fee-sī). [Latin "I have caused to be made"] Hist. A sheriff's return on a fieri facias where the sheriff has collected, in whole or in part, the sum to be levied on. • The return is usu. expressed by the word "satisfied."

fi. fa. (sometimes cap.) abbr. FIERI FACIAS.

FIFO (fī-foh). abbr. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT.

FIFRA. abbr. Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act. 7 USCA §§ 136-136y.

fifteenth. Hist. A tax of one-fifteenth of all the personal property of every subject. • The tax was levied at intervals by act of Parliament. Under Edward III, the value of the fifteenth was assessed and fixed at a specific sum and did not increase as the wealth of the kingdom increased — thus the tax ceased to actually be one-fifteenth. See QUOD PERSONA NEC PREBENDARI.

Fifteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1870, guaranteeing all citizens the right to vote regardless of race, color, or prior condition of servitude. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 1482.]

Fifth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, providing that a person cannot be (1) required to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous offense unless a grand jury issues an indictment or presentment, (2) subjected to double jeopardy, (3) compelled to engage in self-incrimination on a criminal matter, (4) deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or (5) deprived of private property for public use without just compensation. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 3840-4841; Criminal Law ↷ 393; Double Jeopardy ↷ 1-7; Grand Jury ↷ 2; Witnesses ↷ 297.]

Fifth Amendment, pleading the. See TAKE THE FIFTH.

Fifty Decisions. Justinian's rulings that settled controversies and eliminated obsolete rules in the law. • The decisions were made in preparation for Justinian's Digest. — Also termed (in Latin) Quinquaginta Decisiones.

50 percent plus one. See HALF PLUS ONE.

50-percent rule. (1975) The principle that liability for negligence is apportioned in accordance with the percentage of fault that the fact-finder assigns to each party, that the plaintiff's recovery will be reduced by the percentage of negligence assigned to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff's recovery is barred if the plaintiff's percentage of fault is 50% or more. — Also termed modified-comparative-negligence doctrine. Cf. PURE-COMPARATIVE-NEGLIGENCE DOCTRINE. See comparative negligence under NEGLIGENCE; APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY. [Cases: Negligence ↻549(10).]

fighting words. (1917) 1. Inflammatory speech that might not be protected by the First Amendment's free-speech guarantee because it might incite a violent response. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1562; Disorderly Conduct ↻127, 133.] 2. Inflammatory speech that is pleadable in mitigation — but not in defense — of a suit for assault. [Cases: Assault and Battery ↻12.] — Also termed fighting talk.

fightwite (fit-wit). Hist. A fine imposed against one who participated in a breach of the peace.

filacer (fil-ə-sər). Hist. An officer of the Westminster superior courts who filed the writs on which process was made. • The office was abolished in 1837. — Also spelled filazer.

filia (fil-ee-ə), n. [Latin] A daughter. Pl. filiae.

filial consortium. See CONSORTIUM.

filiality. See FILIATION (1).

filiated father. See FATHER.

filiation (fil-ee-ay-shən), (15c) 1. The fact or condition of being a son or daughter; relationship of a child to a parent. • Despite Bentham's protest (see below), filiation is usual in this sense. — Also termed filiality.

"In English we have no word that will serve to express with propriety the person who bears the relation opposed to that of parent. The word child is ambiguous, being employed in another sense, perhaps more frequently than in this: more frequently in opposition to a person of full age, an adult, than in correlation to a parent. For the condition itself we have no other word than filiation: an ill-contrived term, not analogous to paternity and maternity; the proper term would have been filiality: the word filiation is as frequently, perhaps, and more consistently, put for the act of establishing a person in the possession of the condition of filiality." Jeremy Bentham, An Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Legislation 276 n.2 (1823).

2. Judicial determination of paternity. See PATERNITY; filiated father under FATHER. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻63.]

filibuster (fil-ə-bəs-tər), n. (18c) 1. A dilatory tactic, esp. prolonged and often irrelevant speechmaking, employed in an attempt to obstruct legislative action.

• The filibuster is common in the U.S. Senate, where the right to debate is usu. unlimited and where a filibuster can be terminated only by a cloture vote of two-thirds of all members. 2. In a deliberative body, a member in the minority who resorts to obstructive tactics to prevent the adoption of a measure or procedure that is favored by the majority. — Also termed filibusterer. 3. Hist. A person who, together with others, works to invade and revolutionize a foreign state in disregard of international law. See CLOTURE. — filibuster, vb.

filicide (fil-i-sid), (17c) 1. A person who kills his or her own child. 2. The act of killing one's own child. Cf. INFANTICIDE.

filing, n. (18c) A particular document (such as a pleading) in the file of a court clerk or record custodian <the lawyer argued that the plaintiff's most recent filing was not germane to the issue before the court>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻664; Pleading ↻331.]

filing date. See DATE.

filing fee. (1864) A sum of money required to be paid to the court clerk before a proceeding can start. [Cases: Clerks of Courts ↻17, 47.]

filing status. Tax. One of the four categories under which a person files an income tax return. • Under federal law, the four categories are: (1) single; (2) head of household; (3) married filing a joint return; and (4) married filing separate returns. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3549, 4481.]

filialus (fil-ee-oh-ləs). [Latin] Hist. A godson. — Also spelled (in old records) filious.

filius (fil-ee-əs), n. [Latin] 1. A son. 2. (pl.) Descendants. Cf. HERES. Pl. filii.

filiusfamilias (fil-ee-əs-fə-mil-ee-as), n. [Latin “the son of a family”] Roman law. An unemancipated son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter. — Also termed homo alieni juris.

“Every Roman citizen is either a paterfamilias or a filiusfamilias, according as he is free from paternal power (homo sui juris) or not (homo alieni juris). Paterfamilias is the generic name for a homo sui juris, whether child or adult, married or unmarried. Filiusfamilias is the generic name for a homo alieni juris, whether son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter, and so on.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 177 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

filius mulieratus (fil-ee-əs-myoo-lee-ə-ray-təs). [Law Latin] Hist. The eldest legitimate son of a woman who previously had an illegitimate son by the same father; a legitimate son, whose older brother is illegitimate; MULIER PUISNE. Cf. bastard eisne under EISNE.

filius nullius (fil-ee-əs-nə-lr-əs). [Latin “son of nobody”] Hist. An illegitimate child. — Also termed filius populi.

“I proceed next to the rights and incapacities which appertain to a bastard. The rights are very few, being only such as he can acquire; for he can inherit nothing, being looked upon as the son of nobody; and sometimes called filius nullius, sometimes filius populi.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 447 (1765).

filius populi. See FILIUS NULLIUS.

filla (fil-ə). Hist. The ribbon from which a seal hangs at the bottom of deeds and other legal documents.

gap financing. Interim financing used to fund the difference between a current loan and a loan to be received in the future, esp. between two long-term loans. See bridge loan under LOAN.

interim financing. A short-term loan secured to cover certain major expenditures, such as construction costs, until permanent financing is obtained. — Also termed construction financing.

internal financing. A funding method using funds generated through the company's operations rather than from stock issues or bank loans.

link financing. The obtaining of credit by depositing funds in another's bank account to aid the other in obtaining a loan.

outside financing. The raising of funds by selling stocks (equity financing) or bonds (debt financing).

permanent financing. A long-term loan obtained to repay an interim loan, such as a mortgage loan that is used to repay a construction loan.

project financing. A method of funding in which the lender looks primarily to the money generated by a single project as security for the loan. • This type of financing is usual for large, complex, and expensive single-purpose projects such as power plants, chemical-processing plants, mines, and toll roads. The lender is usual paid solely or primarily from the money generated by the contracts for the facility's output (sometimes paid by customers directly into an account maintained by the lender), such as the electricity sold by a power plant. The lender usual requires the facility to be developed and owned by a special-purpose entity (sometimes called a bankruptcy-remote entity), which can be a corporation, limited partnership, or other legal entity, that is permitted to perform no function other than developing, owning, and operating the facility. See SINGLE-PURPOSE PROJECT; SPECIAL-PURPOSE ENTITY; BANKRUPTCY-REMOTE ENTITY.

financing statement. (1954) A document filed in the public records to notify third parties, usual prospective buyers and lenders, of a secured party's security interest in goods or real property. See UCC § 9-102(a)(39). Cf. FINANCIAL STATEMENT. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↻92.]

finding of fact. (18c) A determination by a judge, jury, or administrative agency of a fact supported by the evidence in the record, usu. presented at the trial or hearing <he agreed with the jury's finding of fact that the driver did not stop before proceeding into the intersection>. — Often shortened to finding. See FACT-FINDER. Cf. CONCLUSION OF FACT; CONCLUSION OF LAW.

concurrent finding. (usu. pl.) Identical factual findings by two different tribunals on a specific issue of fact.

essential finding. Military law. A military tribunal's determination of a collateral pretrial motion.

general finding. An undifferentiated finding in favor of one party.

special finding. 1. (usu. pl.) A finding of the necessary and ultimate facts to support a judgment in favor of one party. 2. Military law. A military tribunal's finding that directly relates to the determination of guilt or innocence.

fine, n. (13c) 1. An amicable final agreement or compromise of a fictitious or actual suit to determine the true possessor of land. • The fine was formerly used as a form of conveyance to disentail an estate. — Also termed final concord; finalis concordia. See FOOT OF THE FINE.

"A peculiar and persistent use of the writ [of covenant] was in levying a fine. A fine — finalis concordia — was the compromise of a suit, settled upon terms approved by the court. The dispute, while it might be a reality, was more often fictitious, and was chiefly used as a means of conveying land. . . . Soon after [Glanvill's] book was written, an innovation was made in the procedure which endured until 1833. The terms of the compromise, agreed by the parties and approved by the judges, were entered upon a threefold indenture, one of the parts being given to each of the litigants and the third — the 'foot' or bottom of the document — being kept among the records of the court. The parties thus obtained incontestable evidence and abundant security, and either could sue the other if the agreement were not implemented." C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 256 (1949).

"Unlike the recovery, which was a real action, the fine was a compromised fictitious personal action, originally designed as a method of ensuring security in conveyancing and only later being employed for the purpose of barring estates tail. In outline, it operated in the following manner. The intending purchaser brought an action, begun by writ of covenant, against the intending vendor. The parties then applied to the court to compromise the action; by the terms of the compromise (finis) the intending vendor admitted

executed fine. Hist. A fine made on acknowledgment of the right of the grantee to land given to him as a gift from the grantor. • This was abolished in England in 1833. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 74.

2. FINE FOR ALIENATION. 3. A fee paid by a tenant to the landlord at the commencement of the tenancy to reduce the rent payments. 4. Hist. A money payment from a tenant to the tenant's lord.

common fine. A sum of money due from a tenant to a lord to defray the cost of a court leet or to allow the litigants to try the action closer to home. — Also termed head-silver.

5. A pecuniary criminal punishment or civil penalty payable to the public treasury. [Cases: Fines ◊1.5.] — fine, vb.

day fine. A fine payable over time, usu. as a percentage of the defendant's earnings on a weekly or monthly basis.

excessive fine. (16c) 1. Criminal law. A fine that is unreasonably high and disproportionate to the offense committed. • The Eighth Amendment proscribes excessive fines. An example of an excessive fine is a civil forfeiture in which the property was not an instrumentality of the crime and the worth of the property was not proportional to the owner's culpability. [Cases: Fines ◊1.3.] 2. A fine or penalty that seriously impairs one's earning capacity, esp. from a business.

fresh fine. Hist. A fine levied within the past year.

fineable. See FINABLE.

Fine and Recovery Act. Hist. An English statute, enacted in 1833, that abolished the use of fines as a method of conveying title to land. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 74. See FINE (1).

fine annullando levato de tenemento quod fuit de antiquo dominico (fi-nee a-nə-lan-doh lə-vay-toe dee ten-ə-men-toh kwod fyoo-it dee an-tri-kwoh də-min-ə-koh). [Latin "a fine to be annulled levied from a tenement which was of ancient demesne"] Hist. A writ for disannulling a conveyance of land in ancient demesne to the lord's prejudice.

fine capiendo pro terris (fi-nee kap-ee-en-doh proh ter-is). [Latin "a fine to be taken for lands"] Hist. A writ that an imprisoned felon could use in some circumstances to obtain release from jail and to recover lands and goods taken during imprisonment.

fine for alienation. Hist. A fee paid by a tenant to the lord upon the alienation of a feudal estate and substitution of a new tenant. • It was payable by all tenants holding by knight's service or tenants in capite by socage tenure. — Often shortened to fine.

fine for endowment. Hist. A fee paid by a widow of a tenant to the tenant's lord. • If not paid, the widow could not be endowed of her husband's land.

finem facere (fi-nəm fay-sə-ree). [Latin] Hist. 1. To make a composition or compromise; to relinquish a claim in exchange for consideration.

"In the thirteenth century the king's justices wield a wide and a 'common law' power of ordering that an offender be kept in custody. They have an equally wide power of discharging him upon his 'making fine with the king.' We must observe the language of the time. In strictness they have no power to 'impose a fine.' No tribunal of this period, unless we are mistaken, is ever said to impose a fine. To order the offender to pay so much money to the king — this the judge may not do. If he did it, he would be breaking or evading the Great Charter, for an amercement should be affeered, not by royal justices, but by neighbours of the wrong-doer. What the judges can do is this: — they can pronounce a sentence of imprisonment and then allow the culprit to 'make fine,' that is to make an end (finem facere) of the matter by paying or finding security for a certain sum of money. In theory the fine is a bilateral transaction, a bargain; it is not 'imposed,' it is 'made.'" 2 Frederick Poillock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1 517 (2d ed. 1899).

2. To make a settlement of a penalty. • Magna Carta (ch. 55) specifically limited "[a]ll fines which were made with us unjustly and contrary to the law of the land . . ." (Omnēs fines qui injuste et contra legem terrae facti sunt nobiscum).

fine non capiēdo pro pulchre placitādo (fi-nee non kap-ee-en-doh proh pəl-kree plas-ə-tan-doh). [Latin "a fine not to be taken for pleading fairly"] Hist. A writ prohibiting court officers from taking fines for fair pleading (i.e., beaupleader).

fine print. (1951) The part of an agreement or document — usu. in small, light print that is not easily noticeable — referring to disclaimers, restrictions, or limitations.

fine pro redisseisina capiēdo (fi-nee proh re-dis-see-zin-ə kap-ee-en-doh). [Law Latin "a fine to be taken for again disseising"] Hist. A writ that entitled a person imprisoned for twice dispossessing someone (redisseisin) to release upon payment of a reasonable fine.

fines le roy (finz læ roy). [Law French] Hist. The king's fines. • A fine or fee that was paid to the monarch for an offense or contempt.

fine sur cognizance de droit, comme ceo que il ad de son done (fin sər kon-ə-zənts də droyt, kom say-oh kweel ad də sawn dawn). [Law French "a fine upon acknowledgment of the right, as that which he has of his gift"] Hist. The most common fine of conveyance, by which the defendant (also called the deforciant) acknowledged in court that he had already conveyed the property to the cognizee. • This form of conveyance took the place of an actual livery of seisin. See FINE (1).

"But, in general, the first species of fine, 'sur cognizance de droit come ceo, etc.,' is the most used, as it conveys a clean and absolute freehold, and gives the cognizee a seisin in law, without an actual livery; and is therefore called a fine executed, whereas the others are but executory." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 353 (1766).

fine sur cognizance de droit tantum (fin sər kon-ə-zənts də droyt tan-təm). [Law French "fine upon acknowledgment of the right merely"] Hist. A fine of conveyance that does not acknowledge a prior conveyance of land. • This type of fine was used to convey reversionary interests — that is, interests that did not require acknowledgment of an earlier livery of seisin. See FINE (1).

fine sur concessit (fin sər kən-ses-it). [Law French] Hist. A species of conveyance in which the cognizor does not acknowledge the cognizee's preceding right in land but grants the cognizee an estate de novo, usu. for life or a term of years, by way of supposed composition. See FINE (1).

fine sur done, grant et render (fin sər dawn, grant ay ren-dər). [Law French "fine upon gift, grant and render"] Hist. A double conveyance, consisting of a fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo que il ad de son done and a fine sur concessit, used to convey particular limitations of estates. • For example, after acknowledgment of the cognizee's right in the land, the cognizee would grant back to the cognizor or a third party some other estate in the land. See FINE (1).

finger, vb. (1930) Slang. To identify (a person) as a perpetrator, usu. of a crime <in his grand-jury testimony, Vinson fingered Bauer as the gunman>.

fingerprint, n. (1859) 1. The distinctive pattern of lines on a human fingertip <no two fingerprints are identical>. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨475.5.] 2. The impression of a fingertip made on any surface <the detective found several fingerprints on the knife>. 3. An ink impression of the pattern of lines on a fingertip, usu. taken during the booking procedure after an arrest <after Dick had his fingerprints taken, he was put in the drunk tank>. — Also termed print; thumbprint. Cf. DNA IDENTIFICATION. — fingerprint, vb. — fingerprinting, n.

finire (fi-ni-ree), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. To fine; to pay a fine. 2. To end or finish a matter.

finis (fi-nis or fin-is). [Latin] (15c) Hist. 1. Boundary or limit. 2. The compromise of a fine of conveyance. See FINE (1).

"The parties then applied to the court to compromise the action; by the terms of the compromise (finis) the intending vendor admitted that the land belonged to the intending purchaser because he had given it to him, and the terms of the compromise were recorded in the court records." Peter Butt, Land Law 102 (2d ed. 1988).

3. A fine, or payment of money made to satisfy a claim of criminal penalty.

finitio (fi-nish-ee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. An ending; death.

finium regundorum actio (fi-nee-əm ri-gən-dor-əm ak-shee-oh). [Latin “action for regulating boundaries”] Roman law. An action for settling a boundary dispute.

FIO. abbr. Free in and out. • This bill-of-lading term means that the shipper supervises and pays for loading and unloading of cargo. [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 110.]

FIOS. abbr. Free in and out stowed. • This bill-of-lading term means that the shipper supervises and pays for loading, unloading, and stowing. [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 110.]

fire, vb. (1885) To discharge or dismiss a person from employment; to terminate as an employee. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 825.]

firearm. (17c) A weapon that expels a projectile (such as a bullet or pellets) by the combustion of gunpowder or other explosive. [Cases: Weapons ⇨ 8.]

firebote. See housebote under BOTE (1).

firefighter's rule. A doctrine holding that a firefighter, police officer, or other emergency professional may not hold a person, usu. a property owner, liable for unintentional injuries suffered by the professional in responding to the situation created or caused by the person. — Also termed fireman's rule. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 570, 1315.]

fire insurance. See INSURANCE.

fireman's rule. See FIREFIGHTER'S RULE.

fire ordeal. See ordeal by fire under ORDEAL.

fire sale. See SALE.

firming squad. (19c) 1. A group of persons assembled to carry out a capital-punishment sentence by shooting the prisoner with high-powered rifles at the same time from a short distance. 2. A military detachment that fires a salute, usu. during the burial ceremony for the person being honored.

firm, n. (18c) 1. The title under which one or more persons conduct business jointly. 2. The association by which persons are united for business purposes. • Traditionally, this term has referred to a partnership, as opposed to a company. But today it frequently refers to a company. See LAW FIRM.

firma. [Latin] 1. A lease. 2. A corporation or partnership.

firma burgi (fər-mə bər-jī). [Law Latin “the farm of the borough”] Hist. A person's right to take the profits of a borough. • The monarch or the borough's lord granted this right to a person upon payment of a fixed sum.

firma feodi. See FEE FARM.

firma noctis. See NOCTEM DE FIRMA.

firmaratio (fər-mə-ray-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. A tenant's right to the lands and tenements leased to him.

firmarius (fər-mair-ee-əs). [Law Latin] A person entitled to take rent or profits. Cf. FERMER (2).

firma social (feer-mah soh-syahl). [Spanish] Spanish law. An officially registered name of a corporation or partnership.

firm bid. See BID (2).

firm-commitment underwriting. See UNDERWRITING.

firme. See FARM.

firmitas (fər-mə-tas). [Law Latin] Hist. An assurance of some privilege by deed or charter.

firm offer. See irrevocable offer under OFFER.

firm-opportunity doctrine. See CORPORATE-OPPORTUNITY DOCTRINE.

First Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, guaranteeing the freedoms of speech, religion, press, assembly, and petition. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 1150-1205.]

first-blush rule. The common-law principle that allows a court to set aside a verdict as excessive because the verdict causes the mind to immediately conclude that it resulted from passion or prejudice on the part of the jury. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2345; New Trial ⇨ 77(2).]

first chair, n. (1952) Slang. The lead attorney in court for a given case <despite having worked at the firm for six years, the associate had yet to be first chair in a jury trial>. — first-chair, vb.

first-degree manslaughter. See MANSLAUGHTER.

first-degree murder. See MURDER.

first-degree principal. See principal in the first degree under PRINCIPAL (2).

first-degree sexual conduct. (1979) Sexual battery that involves an aggravating factor, as when the perpetrator commits the offense against a minor or when the perpetrator commits the offense in the course of committing another crime, such as a burglary. — Also termed criminal sexual conduct in the first degree. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 59.]

first devisee. See DEVISEE.

first-filed rule. See FIRST-TO-FILE RULE.

first-filing rule. See FIRST-TO-FILE RULE.

first fruits. 1. Hist. One year's profits from the land of a tenant in capite, payable to the Crown after the tenant's death. — Also termed primer seisin. 2. Hist. Eccles. law. The first year's whole profits of a clergyman's benefice, paid by the incumbent to the Pope, or (after the break with Rome) to the Crown. • This revenue was later termed "Queen Anne's Bounty" when it was converted to a fund to benefit the poor. — Sometimes written firstfruits. — Also termed primitiae; primitive; annates; annats; Queen Anne's Bounty.

firsthand knowledge. See personal knowledge under KNOWLEDGE.

first impression, case of. See CASE.

first-in, first-out. An accounting method that assumes that goods are sold in the order in which they were purchased — that is, the oldest items are sold first. — Abbr. FIFO. Cf. LAST-IN, FIRST-OUT; NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT.

first instance, court of. See trial court under COURT.

first-inventor defense. Patents. In a suit alleging infringement of a business-method patent, a statutory affirmative defense made out by showing that the defendant was using the business method commercially for at least a year before the plaintiff filed the patent application. • The First Inventor Defense Act of 1999 is codified at 35 USCA § 273. [Cases: Patents ⇨283(1).]

first lien. See LIEN.

First Lord of the Admiralty. Hist. In Britain, a minister and one of the lord commissioners who presided over the navy. • The First Lord was assisted by other lords, called Sea Lords, and various secretaries.

First Lord of the Treasury. English law. The chief officer in charge of the treasury. • Today, this position is held by the Prime Minister.

first magistrate. See MAGISTRATE (1).

first meeting. Archaic. Criminal law. The first contact between a killer and a victim after the killer has been informed of the victim's insulting words or conduct that provoked the killing. • If the killing occurred during the first meeting, a murder charge could be reduced to manslaughter. See HEAT OF PASSION.

first meeting of creditors. See creditors' meeting under MEETING.

first mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

first-mortgage bond. See BOND (3).

first name. See personal name under NAME.

first-named insured. See primary insured under INSURED.

first of exchange. Archaic. The first in a series of drafts (bills of exchange) drawn in duplicate or triplicate for safety in their delivery, the intention being that the acceptance and payment of any one of them, usu. the first to arrive, cancels the others in the set.

first offender. See OFFENDER.

first office action. See OFFICE ACTION.

first option to buy. See RIGHT OF PREEMPTION.

first-party insurance. See INSURANCE.

first-past-the-post voting. See plurality voting under VOTING.

first policy year. Insurance. The first year of a life-insurance policy that is to be automatically renewed annually. • This statutory phrase prohibits an insurer from using the policy's suicide exclusion as a defense — and refusing payment on the policy — when an insured commits suicide after the first year of the policy. The insurer can invoke the suicide exclusion as a defense to payment only if the insured commits suicide in the first policy year. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2434(1), 2594(5), 3125.]

first-sale doctrine. (1963) 1. Copyright. The rule that the purchaser of a physical copy of a copyrighted work, such as a book or CD, may give or sell that copy to someone else without infringing the copyright owner's exclusive distribution rights. • With regard to that physical copy, the copyright owner's distribution right is said to be exhausted. 17 USCA § 109(a). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨38.5.] 2. Patents. The principle that the buyer of a patented article has the right to use, repair, and resell the article without interference from the patentee. • The patentee may still retain control of the article through terms in the license or sale contract. See PATENT-EXHAUSTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ⇨191.]

first-to-file rule. (1969) Civil procedure. 1. The principle that, when two suits are brought by the same parties, regarding the same issues, in two courts of proper jurisdiction, the court that first acquires jurisdiction usu. retains the suit, to the exclusion of the other court. • The court with the second-filed suit ordinarily stays proceedings or abstains. But an exception exists if the first-filed suit is brought merely in anticipation of the true plaintiff's suit and amounts to an improper attempt at forum-shopping. See ANTICIPATORY FILING. [Cases: Courts ⇨475, 493, 514; Federal Courts ⇨1145.] 2. The doctrine allowing a party to a previously filed lawsuit to enjoin another from pursuing a later-filed action. — Also termed first-filing rule; first-filed rule; priority-jurisdiction rule. [Cases: Courts ⇨480, 507, 508, 516; Federal Courts ⇨1145.]

first-to-file system. Patents. The practice of granting priority to the first person to file a patent application. • Most of the world uses a first-to-file patent system; the only major exception is the United States, which grants priority to the first inventor. Cf. FIRST-TO-INVENT SYSTEM. [Cases: Patents ⇨90(1).]

first-to-invent system. Patents. The practice of awarding a patent to the first person to create an invention, rather than the first to file a patent application. • Because the first inventor is not necessarily the first person to file for a patent, an interference hearing is held to decide who is entitled to the patent. This system is used only

first user. See SENIOR USER.

FISA. abbr. FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE ACT.

FISC. abbr. UNITED STATES FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE COURT.

fisc (fisk), n. [Latin fiscus] The public treasury. — Also spelled fisk.

fiscal year. See YEAR.

fiscus (fis-kəs), n. [Latin "the basket" or "moneybag"] 1. Roman law. The emperor's treasury. • In later Roman times, the term also included the treasury of the state. See AERARIUM. 2. Hist. The treasury of a monarch (as the repository of forfeited property), a noble, or any private person. 3. The treasury or property of the state as distinguished from the private property of the monarch. Cf. HANAPER.

fishery. (16c) 1. A right or liberty of taking fish. • Fishery was an incorporeal hereditament under old English law. — Also termed piscary. [Cases: Fish ↻3.]

free fishery. An exclusive right of fishery, existing by grant or prescription from the monarch, to take fish in public water such as a river or an arm of the sea. — Also termed libera piscaria.

right of fishery. The right of persons to fish in public waters, subject to federal and state restrictions and regulations, such as fishing seasons, licensing, and catch limits.

several fishery. A right to fish in waters that are neither on one's own land nor on the land of a person who granted the right to fish.

2. A fishing ground.

common fishery. A fishing ground where all persons have a right to take fish. Cf. common of piscary under COMMON.

fishing expedition. An attempt, through broad discovery requests or random questions, to elicit information from another party in the hope that something relevant might be found; esp., such an attempt that exceeds the scope of discovery allowed by procedural rules. — Also termed fishing trip. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1272; Pretrial Procedure ↻28.]

"No longer can the time-honored cry of 'fishing expedition' serve to preclude a party from inquiring into the facts underlying his opponent's case." Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 507, 67 S.Ct. 385, 392 (1947).

fish royal. Hist. Whales, sturgeon, and porpoises that, when thrown ashore or caught near the English coast, become Crown property.

fitness hearing. See transfer hearing under HEARING.

fit occupantis (fit ahk-yə-pan-tis). [Latin] Hist. It becomes the property of the captor.

Five Mile Act. Hist. A 1665 English act prohibiting Puritan ministers from teaching or coming within five miles of any town where they had held office if they refused to pledge that they would not seek to overturn the Church of England. • The Act was repealed in 1689.

501(c)(3) organization. See CHARITABLE ORGANIZATION.

529 plan. A state-sponsored plan administered by certain investment companies to allow parents and others to accumulate pretax income to pay for a beneficiary's (usu. a child's) college education. • Anyone can contribute to an account set up under 529 plan guidelines. Withdrawals made for educational purposes are taxed at the beneficiary's tax rate; other withdrawals trigger an additional 10% penalty. IRC (26 USCA) § 529. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻4053.]

fix, vb. (14c) 1. To announce (an exchange price, interest rate, etc.) <interest was fixed at 6%>. 2. To establish (a person's liability or responsibility) <you cannot fix liability on the defendant without evidence>. 3. To agree with another to establish (a price for goods or services), often illegally <representatives of Acme and Widget secretly met to fix prices for their companies' products>. See PRICE-FIXING. 4. To influence (an action or outcome, esp. a sports event) by improper or illegal means <after losing the election, the challenger claimed that the incumbent had fixed the election>.

fix a day to which to adjourn. See adjourn to a day certain under ADJOURN.

fixation. Copyright. The process or result of recording a work of authorship in tangible form so that it can be copyrighted under federal law. • Fixation occurs, for instance, when a live television broadcast is transmitted and simultaneously recorded on videotape. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻12(1).]

fix bail, vb. (18c) To set the amount and terms of bail <after hearing the officer's testimony, the judge fixed bail for the defendant at $100,000>. See BAIL.

fixed asset. See capital asset (1) under ASSET.

fixed-term lease. Oil & gas. An oil-and-gas lease for a fixed period of time, lacking the indefinite "so long thereafter" provision commonly found in such leases. Cf. HABENDUM CLAUSE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 73.5.]

fixing a jury. See JURY-FIXING.

fixture. (18c) Personal property that is attached to land or a building and that is regarded as an irremovable part of the real property, such as a fireplace built into a home. See UCC § 9-102(a)(41). • Historically, personal property becomes a fixture when it is physically fastened to or connected with the land or building and the fastening or connection was done to enhance the utility of the land or building. If personal property has been attached to the land or building and enhances only the chattel's utility, it is not a fixture. For example, if bricks are purposely stacked to form a wall, a fixture results. But if the bricks are merely stacked for convenience until used for some purpose, they do not form a fixture. — Also termed permanent fixture; immovable fixture. Cf. IMPROVEMENT. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 1.]

to, or association in use with land, regarded as a part of the land. . . . The law of fixtures concerns those situations where the chattel annexed still retains a separate identity in spite of annexation, for example a furnace or a light fixture. Where the chattel annexed loses such identity, as in the case of nails, boards, etc., the problem becomes one of accession." Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 137, at 698 & n.1 (2d ed. 1955).

"Broadly, goods can be classified for the purposes of [UCC §] 9-313 into three categories: those that remain 'pure goods,' those so substantially integrated into real estate as to become real estate themselves, 'pure realty,' and those in the gray area that would pass in a deed to the real estate but that retain separate status as personal property. These last are fixtures." 4 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 33-8, at 338 (4th ed. 1995).

agricultural fixture. A fixture erected on leased land for use in agricultural pursuits, such as tilling the land or keeping farm animals. • These fixtures may or may not be removable at the end of the lease. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 16.]

domestic fixture. Removable personal property provided by a tenant for the tenant's personal comfort and convenience while occupying leased premises. • This term frequently applies to items such as large kitchen appliances. See tenant's fixture. Cf. ornamental fixture. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 17, 18.3.]

ornamental fixture. Removable personal property that a tenant attaches to leased premises to make them more attractive and comfortable. • This term sometimes overlaps with domestic fixture when an object is decorative as well as functional. See tenant's fixture. Cf. domestic fixture. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 17, 18.3.]

tenant's fixture. (1832) Removable personal property that a tenant affixes to the leased property but that the tenant can detach and take away. — Also termed movable fixture. See domestic fixture; ornamental fixture. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 13.]

trade fixture. (1839) Removable personal property that a tenant attaches to leased land for business purposes, such as a display counter. • Despite its name, a trade fixture is not usu. treated as a fixture — that is, as irremovable. [Cases: Fixtures ⇨ 15.]

fixture filing. (1972) The act or an instance of recording, in public real-estate records, a security interest in personal property that is intended to become a fixture. See UCC § 9-102(a)(40). • The creditor files a financing statement in the real-property records of the county where a mortgage on the real estate would be filed. A fixture-filing financing statement must contain a description of the real estate. [Cases: Secured Transactions ⇨ 85, 94.]

FJC. abbr. FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER.

FKA. abbr. Formerly known as. — Also rendered F/K/A; fka; f/k/a.

flag, n. (14c) 1. A usu. rectangular piece of cloth, bunting, or other material decorated with a distinctive design and used as a symbol or signal. 2. Something symbolized by the display of a flag, such as a ship or nationality. See DUTY OF THE FLAG; LAW OF THE FLAG.

flag of convenience. Int'l law. A national flag flown by a ship not because the ship or its crew has an affiliation with the nation, but because the lax controls and modest fees and taxes imposed by that nation have attracted the owner to register it there. • After World War II, shipowners began registering their ships in countries such as Panama, Liberia, and Honduras to avoid expensive and restrictive national regulation of labor, safety, and other matters. Since the late 1950s, there has been increasing international pressure to require a “genuine link” between a ship and its flag state, but this reform has been slow in coming. — Abbr. FOC. [Cases: Shipping ↻2.]

flag of truce. Int'l law. A white flag used as a signal when one belligerent wishes to communicate with the other in the field. • The bearers of such a flag may not be fired on, injured, or taken prisoner, as long as they carry out their mission in good faith.

flag desecration. The act of mutilating, defacing, burning, or flagrantly misusing a flag. • Flag desecration is constitutionally protected as a form of free speech. United States v. Eichman, 496 U.S. 310, 110 S.Ct. 2404 (1990). [Cases: United States ↻5.5.]

flagrans bellum (flay-granz bel-əm). [Latin “raging war”] A war currently being waged.

flagrans crimen (flay-granz cri-mən). [Latin] A crime in the very act of its commission or of recent occurrence; a fresh crime.

flagrante bello (flā-gran-tee bel-oh). [Latin] During an actual state of war.

flag state. Maritime law. The state under whose flag a ship is registered. • A ship may fly the flag of one state only. [Cases: Shipping ↻2.]

Hist. A leaf of a paper or parchment, numbered only on the front. • A folio includes both sides of the leaf, or two pages, with the letters “a” and “b” (or “r” and “v,” signifying recto and verso) added to show which of the two pages was intended. 2. Hist. A certain number of words in a legal document, used as a method of measurement. • In England, 72 or 90 words formed a folio; in the United States, 100 words. — folio, vb.

“Folio . . . [a] certain number of words; in conveyances, etc., and proceedings in the High Court amounting to seventy-two, and in parliamentary proceedings to ninety.” Ivan Horniman, Wharton’s Law Lexicon 368 (13th ed. 1925).

3. A page number on a printed book. 4. A large book the pages of which are formed by folding a sheet of paper only once in the binding to form two leaves, making available four pages (both sides of each leaf).

folkland. Hist. Land held by customary law, without written title. — Also spelled folcland. Cf. BOOKLAND; LOANLAND.

force, n. (14c) Power, violence, or pressure directed against a person or thing.

actual force. (16c) Force consisting in a physical act, esp. a violent act directed against a robbery victim. — Also termed physical force. [Cases: Robbery ↻ 6.]

constructive force. (1802) Threats and intimidation to gain control or prevent resistance; esp., threatening words or gestures directed against a robbery victim. [Cases: Robbery ↻ 6.]

deadly force. (16c) Violent action known to create a substantial risk of causing death or serious bodily harm. • Generally, a person may use deadly force in self-defense or in defense of another only if retaliating against another's deadly force. — Also termed extreme force. Cf. nondeadly force.

"Under the common law the use of deadly force is never permitted for the sole purpose of stopping one fleeing from arrest on a misdemeanor charge . . ." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1098 (3d ed. 1982).

excessive force. (16c) Unreasonable or unnecessary force under the circumstances.

extreme force. See deadly force.

independent force. Force not stimulated by a situation created by the actor's conduct.

intervening force. Force that actively produces harm to another after the actor's negligent act or omission has been committed.

irresistible force. (16c) Force that cannot be foreseen or controlled, esp. that which prevents the performance of a contractual obligation; FORCE MAJEURE. [Cases: Contracts ↻ 309(1).]

legal force. See reasonable force.

nondeadly force. (1961) 1. Force that is neither intended nor likely to cause death or serious bodily harm; force intended to cause only minor bodily harm. 2. A threat of deadly force, such as displaying a knife. — Also termed moderate force. Cf. deadly force.

physical force. See actual force.

reasonable force. (17c) Force that is not excessive and that is appropriate for protecting oneself or one's property. • The use of reasonable force will not render a person criminally or tortiously liable. — Also termed legal force.

"One does not use jeweller's scales to measure reasonable force." Reed v. Wastie, [1972] Crim. L.R. 221 (per Lane, J.) (as quoted in Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 451 (1978)).

unlawful force. (16c) Force that is directed against a person without that person's consent, and that is a criminal offense or an actionable tort. Model Penal Code § 3.11. [Cases: Assault and Battery ↻ 1, 47.]

force, vb. (14c) To compel by physical means or by legal requirement <Barnes used a gun to force Jillian to use her ATM card> <under the malpractice policy, the insurance company was forced to defend the doctor>.

force and arms. Hist. Violence. • The phrase was used in common-law pleading in declarations of trespass and in indictments to denote that the offending act was committed violently. See VI ET ARMIS.

force and effect, n. (16c) Legal efficacy <mailing the brief had the force and effect of filing it with the clerk>. • The term is now generally regarded as a redundant legalism.

force majeure (fors ma-zhər). [Law French "a superior force"] (1883) An event or effect that can be neither anticipated nor controlled. • The term includes both acts of nature (e.g., floods and hurricanes) and acts of people (e.g., riots, strikes, and wars). — Also termed force majesture; vis major; superior force. Cf. ACT OF GOD; VIS MAJOR (1).

force-majeure clause. (1916) A contractual provision allocating the risk of loss if performance becomes impossible or impracticable, esp. as a result of an event or effect that the parties could not have anticipated or controlled. [Cases: Contracts ↻ 309(1).]

force-the-vote provision. Mergers & acquisitions. A contractual clause requiring a company's board of directors to approve a merger transaction and submit it to the shareholders, who then vote on the merger regardless of whether the board recommends that the shareholders approve it when the vote is held.

forcible, adj. (15c) Effected by force or threat of force against opposition or resistance.

"[In the law of trespass, the] term 'forcible' is used in a wide and somewhat unnatural sense to include any act of physical interference with the person or property of another. To lay one's finger on another person without lawful justification is as much a forcible injury in the eye of the law, and therefore a trespass, as to beat him with a stick. To walk peacefully across another man's land is a forcible injury and a trespass, no less than to break into his house vi et armis. So also it is probably a trespass deliberately to put matter where natural forces will take it on to the plaintiff's land." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 5 (17th ed. 1977).

forcible detainer. 1. The wrongful retention of possession of property by one originally in lawful possession,

forcible entry. (17c) 1. The act or an instance of violently and unlawfully taking possession of lands and tenements against the will of those in lawful possession.

2. The act of entering land in another's possession by the use of force against another or by breaking into the premises.

forcible entry and detainer. (17c) 1. The act of violently taking and keeping possession of lands and tenements without legal authority. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer ↪4.]

"To walk across another's land, or to enter his building, without privilege, is a trespass, but this in itself, while a civil wrong, is not a crime. However, if an entry upon real estate is accomplished by violence or intimidation, or if such methods are employed for detention after a peaceable entry, there is a crime according to English law, known as forcible entry and detainer. This was a common-law offense in England, although supplemented by English statutes that are old enough to be common law in this country. . . . It has sometimes been said that there are two separate offenses — (1) forcible entry and (2) forcible detainer. This may be true under the peculiar wording of some particular statute, but in general it seems to be one offense which may be committed in two different ways." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 487-88 (3d ed. 1982).

2. A quick and simple legal proceeding for regaining possession of real property from someone who has wrongfully taken, or refused to surrender, possession. — Also termed forcible detainer. See EVICTION; EJECTMENT. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer ↪6; Landlord and Tenant ↪287.]

"Forcible entry and detainer is a remedy given by statute for the recovery of possession of land and of damages for its detention. It is entirely regulated by statute, and the statutes vary materially in the different states." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 74, at 188 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

foreclose, vb. (15c) To terminate a mortgagor's interest in property; to subject (property) to foreclosure proceedings. [Cases: Mortgages ↪380.]

"Should the mortgagor default in his obligations under the mortgage, the mortgagee will seek to 'foreclose', — i.e., 'end' or 'close' the mortgagor's rights in the security. After taking the appropriate statutory steps, the mortgagee will sell the mortgaged property. If the sale is to someone other than the mortgagor or the mortgagee (a 'third party' sale) the proceeds will go: first, to pay the costs of the foreclosure proceedings; second, to pay off the principal indebtedness and accrued interest; third, if there is anything left over (i.e., any 'equity' existed) this is paid to the mortgagor." Edward H. Rabin, Fundamentals of Modern Real Property Law 1087 (1974).

foreclosure (for-kloh-zhər). (18c) A legal proceeding to terminate a mortgagor's interest in property, instituted by the lender (the mortgagee) either to gain title or to force a sale in order to satisfy the unpaid debt secured by the property. Cf. REPOSSESSION. [Cases: Mortgages ↪380.]

equitable foreclosure. (1876) A foreclosure method in which the court orders the property sold, and the proceeds are applied first to pay the costs of the lawsuit and sale and then to the mortgage debt. • Any surplus is paid to the mortgagor. [Cases: Mortgages ↪386.]

judicial foreclosure. (1839) A costly and time-consuming foreclosure method by which the mortgaged property is sold through a court proceeding requiring many standard legal steps such as the filing of a complaint, service of process, notice, and a hearing. • Judicial foreclosure is available in all jurisdictions and is the exclusive or most common method of foreclosure in at least 20 states. [Cases: Mortgages ↪380.]

nonjudicial foreclosure. (1916) 1. See power-of-sale foreclosure. 2. A foreclosure method that does not require court involvement. [Cases: Mortgages ↪329.]

power-of-sale foreclosure. (1946) A foreclosure process by which, according to the mortgage instrument and a state statute, the mortgaged property is sold at a nonjudicial public sale by a public official, the mortgagee, or a trustee, without the stringent notice requirements, procedural burdens, or delays of a judicial foreclosure. • Power-of-sale foreclosure is authorized and used in more than half the states. — Also termed nonjudicial foreclosure; statutory foreclosure. [Cases: Mortgages ↪329.]

strict foreclosure. (1823) A rare procedure that gives the mortgagee title to the mortgaged property — without first conducting a sale — after a defaulting mortgagor fails to pay the mortgage debt within a court-specified period. • The use of strict foreclosure is limited to special situations except in those few states that permit this remedy generally. [Cases: Mortgages ↪384.]

tax foreclosure. (1869) A public authority's seizure and sale of property for nonpayment of taxes. [Cases: Taxation ↪2922.]

foreclosure decree. (1847) 1. Generally, a decree ordering a judicial foreclosure sale. 2. A decree ordering the strict foreclosure of a mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ↪384, 483.]

foregift. Hist. A premium paid for a lease in addition to rent; forehand rent. See FOREHAND RENT (1).

Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. A federal statute providing individuals with a right of action against foreign governments, under certain circumstances, to the extent the claim arises from the private, as opposed to the public, acts of the foreign state. 28 USCA §§ 1602-1611. — Abbr. FSIA. See RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY. [Cases: International Law ¶ 10.31-10.39.]

"The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) of 1976 was designed to provide a set of comprehensive regulations governing access to federal and state courts in this country for plaintiffs asserting claims against foreign states and instrumentalities thereof. The enactment of this legislation responded to the reality that increased contacts between American citizens and companies on the one hand, and foreign states and entities owned by foreign states on the other, as well as a constantly expanding range of government activities, had created the need for judicial fora in this country to resolve disputes arising out of these activities." 14A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 3662, at 160-61 (2d ed. 1998).

foreign state. 1. A foreign country. 2. An American state different from the one under discussion.

forest, n. (13c) Hist. A tract of land, not necessarily wooded, reserved to the king or a grantee, for hunting deer and other game.

forestall (for-stawl), vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To prevent (an event, result, etc.). 2. Hist. To intercept or obstruct (as a person on a royal highway). 3. Hist. To prevent (a tenant) from coming on the premises. 4. Hist. To intercept (as a deer reentering a forest). 5. Hist. To buy (goods) for the purpose of reselling at a higher price. • At common law, this was an indictable offense. See FORESTALLING THE MARKET. — Also spelled forstall.

"[A] growing town in England might have placed a higher value on grain than a neighboring town with a static population, yet traditional patterns of business might continue to send the same amount of grain to both towns. A forestaller would bid against the traditional buyer in the smaller town, obtain the grain, and resell it where it could command a higher price in the larger town. Forestalling did not harm allocative efficiency. Indeed, it was a highly effective means of reallocating scarce goods to their most highly valued uses — the very definition of efficiency. Rather, forestalling was objectionable, and thus prohibited as a restraint of trade, because the bidding process necessarily resulted in higher grain prices in many parts of the country." Stephen F. Ross, Principles of Antitrust Law 12 (1993). forestaller, n. 1. A person who forestalls. 2. Hist. One guilty of the offense of forestalling. See FORESTALL (5).

forestalling the market. Hist. 1. The taking possession of commodities on their way to the market. 2. The purchase of goods on their way to the market, with the intention of reselling them at a higher price. 3. The deterrence of having sellers offer their goods at market at a reasonable price; specif., the crime of inhibiting normal trading by persuading sellers to raise their prices on goods or dissuading them from offering the goods in a particular market, or by purchasing as much as possible of certain goods before they reach the market to drive up prices.

forest law. Hist. The body of law protecting game and preserving timber.

forestry right. A land interest under which a person has the right to enter the land, establish and maintain a crop of trees, harvest them, and construct works for that purpose. [Cases: Logs and Logging ↷1.]

Forest Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for managing the nation's national forests. • The Forest Service also operates the Youth Conservation Corps and the Volunteers in the National Forest programs. [Cases: Woods and Forests ↷7, 8.]

forfeiture (for-fi-chər), n. (14c) 1. The divestiture of property without compensation. 2. The loss of a right, privilege, or property because of a crime, breach of obligation, or neglect of duty. • Title is instantaneously transferred to another, such as the government, a corporation, or a private person. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷162; Forfeitures ↷1.] 3. Something (esp. money or property) lost or confiscated by this process; a penalty. — forfeit, vb. — forfeitable, adj.

civil forfeiture. (1867) An in rem proceeding brought by the government against property that either facilitated a crime or was acquired as a result of criminal activity. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷162; Forfeitures ↷1.] criminal forfeiture. (1866) A governmental proceeding brought against a person to seize property as punishment for the person's criminal behavior. [Cases: Controlled Substances ↷162; Forfeitures ↷1.]

forfeiture of marriage. Hist. A penalty exacted by a lord from a ward who married without the lord's consent. • The penalty was a money payment double the value that the marriage would otherwise have been worth to the lord.

forfeiture of pay. Military law. A punishment depriving the guilty party of all or part of his or her military pay.

4. A destruction or deprivation of some estate or right because of the failure to perform some contractual obligation or condition.

"[When a condition] is not likely to occur until the obligee has relied on the expected exchange by, for example, performing or preparing to perform, . . . nonoccurrence of the condition results in the obligee's loss of its reliance interest when the obligee loses the right to that exchange. This loss of reliance interest is often described as 'forfeiture.'" E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 8.4, at 533 (3d ed. 1999).

forfeiture clause. (1804) 1. A contractual provision stating that, under certain circumstances, one party must forfeit something to the other. • Forfeiture clauses are often held to be void, although they are similar to conditions and other qualifications of estates in land. 2. NO-CONTEST CLAUSE.

forfeiture restraint. An attempt by an otherwise effective conveyance or contract to cause a later conveyance to terminate or to make some or all of the later convey-forgery, n. (16c) 1. The act of fraudulently making a false document or altering a real one to be used as if genuine <the contract was void because of the seller's forgery>.

• Though forgery was a misdemeanor at common law, modern statutes typically make it a felony. — Also termed false making. [Cases: Forgery ↷1.] 2. A false or altered document made to look genuine by someone with the intent to deceive <he was not the true property owner because the deed was a forgery>. — Also termed fake. 3. Under the Model Penal Code, the act of fraudulently altering, authenticating, issuing, or transferring a writing without appropriate authorization. • Under the explicit terms of the Code, writing can include items such as coins and credit cards. Model Penal Code § 224.1(1). — forge, vb. — forger, n.

double forgery. A draft having a forged payor signature and a forged indorsement.

fori disputationes (for-i dis-pyoo-tay-shee-oh-nee-z). [Latin "arguments of the court"] Roman law. Arguments or discussions before a court.

forinsec service (fə-rin-sik). (18c) Hist. The feudal services owed by a mesne (i.e., intermediate) lord, esp. those of a military nature. — Also termed foreign service; forinsecum servitium. Cf. INTRINSEC SERVICE.

"The terminology of Bracton's day and of yet earlier times neatly expresses the distinction between the service which the tenant owes to his immediate lord by reason of the bargain which exists between them, and the service which was incumbent on the tenement whilst it was in the lord's hand. The former is intrinsic service, the latter forinsec service; the former is the service which is created by, which (as it were) arises within, the bargain between the two persons, A and B, whose rights and duties we are discussing; the latter arises outside that bargain, is 'foreign' to that bargain . . . [T]he term is a relative one; what is 'intrinsic' between A and B is 'forinsec' as regards C." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 238, 239 n.2 (2d ed. 1898).

forinsecus (fə-rin-sə-kəs), adv. [fr. Latin foris "without"] Hist. On the outside.

forinsecus (fə-rin-sə-kəs), n. [Latin] Hist. A foreigner; someone from another jurisdiction.

forisfacere (for-is-fay-sə-ree), vb. [fr. Latin foris "without" + facere "to make"] Hist. 1. To forfeit (an estate or other property). • Literally, this means to make the property foreign to oneself. 2. To violate the law; to do a thing against or without the law.

forisfactum (for-is-fak-təm), adj. [Law Latin] Hist. (Of property) forfeited.

forisfactus (for-is-fak-təs). [Law Latin] Hist. A criminal; esp., one who has forfeited his or her life by committing a capital offense.

forisfactus servus (for-is-fak-təs səv-vəs). [Law Latin] Hist. A freed slave who has forfeited his or her freedom by committing a crime.

forisfamiliate (for-is-fā-mil-ee-ayt), vb. [fr. Latin foris "outside" + familia "family"] (16c) Hist. To emancipate (a son) from paternal authority by a gift of land. • This act usu. rendered the son ineligible to inherit more property. — Also termed (archaically) forisfamiliare.

forisfamiliated (for-is-fā-mil-ee-aytid), adj. Hist. (Of a son) emancipated from paternal authority and in possession of a portion of family land in lieu of inheritance.

forisfiliation. (17c) Scots law. The liberation of a child from the father's tutelage, as when a child under the age of majority left home, was given seisin in a part of the father's land, or accepted something as a settled inheritance. Cf. EMANCIPATION (2).

forisjudicatio. See FORJUDGER.

forisjurare (for-is-jə-rair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To forswear; to renounce under oath. — Also termed forjurer.

forisjurare parentilam (for-is-jə-rair-ee pə-ren-tə-ləm), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To renounce parental authority. • One who did so lost all rights of heirship.

forisjurare provinciam (for-is-jə-rair-ee prə-vin-shee-əm), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To renounce under oath allegiance to one's country.

forjudge, vb. (15c) 1. Hist. To expel a person, esp. an officer or attorney, from court for some offense or misconduct. 2. To deprive (a person) of a thing by a judgment; to condemn (a person) to lose a thing. — Also spelled (loosely) forejudge.

forjudget (for-jəj-ət), n. (15c) Hist. 1. A judgment that deprives a person of a thing. 2. A judgment of expulsion or banishment. — Also termed forisjudicatio; forisjudicatus.

forjurer. See FORISJURARE.

forjurer royalme (for-zhə-ray roy-ohm), vb. [Law French] Hist. To renounce the kingdom under oath; to abjure the realm.

form, n. (13c) 1. The outer shape or structure of something, as distinguished from its substance or matter <courts are generally less concerned about defects in form than defects in substance>. 2. Established behavior or procedure, usu. according to custom or rule <the prosecutor followed the established form in her closing argument>. 3. A model; a sample; an example <attorneys often draft pleadings by using a form instead of starting from scratch>. 4. The customary method of drafting legal documents, usu. with fixed words, phrases, and sentences <Jones prepared the contract merely by following the state bar's form>. 5. A legal document with blank spaces to be filled in by the drafter <the divorce lawyer used printed forms that a secretary could fill in>.

formbook. A book that contains sample legal documents, esp. transaction-related documents such as contracts, deeds, leases, wills, trusts, and securities disclosure documents.

formed design. See DESIGN.

formedon (for-mə-don). [fr. Latin forma doni "form of the gift"] (15c) Hist. A writ of right for claiming entailed property held by another. • A writ of formedon was the highest remedy available to a tenant in tail. — Also termed writ of formedon. [Cases: Real Actions] ⇨ 4.]

"Called formedon, because the writ comprehended the form of the gift. It was of three kinds, in the descender, in the remainder, and in the reverter." 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 650 (2d ed. 1867).

formedon in the descender. A writ of formedon brought by the issue in tail to recover possession of the land.

formedon in the remainder. A writ of formedon brought by a remainderman under a grant or gift in tail to recover possession of the land.

formedon in the reverter. A writ of formedon brought by a reversioner or donor of the grant or gift in tail to recover possession of the land.

former acquittal. See autrefois acquit under AUTREFOIS.

former adjudication. (18c) A judgment in a prior action that resulted in a final determination of the rights of the parties or essential fact questions and serves to bar relitigation of the issues relevant to that determination. • Collateral estoppel and res judicata are the two types of former adjudication. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL; RES JUDICATA. [Cases: Judgment] ⇨ 540, 634.]

former jeopardy. (1870) The fact of having previously been prosecuted for the same offense. • A defendant enters a plea of former jeopardy to inform the court that a second prosecution is improper. Cf. DOUBLE JEOPARDY. [Cases: Double Jeopardy] ⇨ 132.1.]

former punishment. Military law. The rule that nonjudicial punishment for a minor offense may bar trial by court-martial for the same offense.

form of action. The common-law legal and procedural device associated with a particular writ, each of which had specific forms of process, pleading, trial, and judgment. • The 11 common-law forms of action were trespass, trespass on the case, trover, ejectment, detinue, replevin, debt, covenant, account, special assumpsit, and general assumpsit. [Cases: Action] ⇨ 29; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 71.]

"Forms of action are usually regarded as different methods of procedure adapted to cases of different kinds, but in fact the choice between forms of action is primarily a choice between different theories of substantive liability, and the scope of the actions measures the existence and extent of liability at common law. . . . The development and extension of the different forms of action is the history of the recognition of rights and liability in the law of torts, contracts, and property, and the essentials of rights of action." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading §§ 27, 30 at 54, 60 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

formula. [Latin "set form of words"] (17c) 1. Roman law. A written document, prepared by a praetor and forwarded to a judex, identifying the issue to be tried and the judgment to be given by the judex. • It was based on model pleas formulated by the praetor in his edict and adapted by him or other magistrates in civil suits for the benefit of the judex who had to try the issue. These pleas were adapted to the circumstances of the case. The usual parts of a formula were (1) the demonstratio, in which the plaintiff stated the facts of the claim; (2) the intentio, in which the plaintiff specified the relief sought against the defendant; and (3) the condemnatio, in which the judex condemned (usu. to pay the plaintiff a sum) or acquitted the defendant. Pl. formulae (for-myə-lee). — Also termed verba concepta (vər-bə kən-sɛp-tə).

"The Roman judges were not, as with us, the presiding officers in the administration of law and justice. This was the position of the magistrate, the praetor. When a suit at law was commenced, the parties appeared before the praetor, who made a preliminary examination, not to ascertain the merits of the case, but to find the precise points in controversy. He heard the statements of the plaintiff and the counter-statements of the defendant, and from the two he constructed a formula (as it was called), a brief technical expression of the disputed issues. He then appointed a judex . . . instructing him to investigate the matter, and if he found the facts to be so and so, as recited in the formula, then to condemn the accused party, but, if he did not find them so, to acquit him." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 59–60 (1881). [This quotation describes only the period of formulary procedure, ca. 150 B.C.–A.D. 300. — Ed.]

2. Common-law pleading. A set form of words (such as those appearing in writs) used in judicial proceedings.

formula deal. An agreement between a movie distributor and an independent or affiliated circuit to exhibit a feature movie in all theaters at a specified percentage of the national gross receipts realized by the theaters.

formulae (for-myə-lee). [Latin "set forms of words"] Roman law. Model pleas formulated by the praetor in his edict and adapted by him or other magistrates in civil suits for the benefit of the judex who had to try the issue. • These pleas were adapted to the circumstances of the case. — Also termed verba concepta (vər-bə kən-sep-tə).

formula instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

formulary. (16c) 1. Hist. A collection of the forms of proceedings (formulae) used in litigation, such as the writ forms kept by the Chancery. See WRIT SYSTEM. 2. A list of drugs that Medicare or a health-maintenance organization will pay for.

formulary procedure. Hist. The common-law method of pleading and practice, which required formulaic compliance with the accepted forms of action even if through elaborate fictions. • In the 19th century, this type of procedure was replaced both in the United States and in England. See code pleading under PLEADING (2).

fornication, n. (14c) 1. Voluntary sexual intercourse between two unmarried persons. • Fornication is still a crime in some states, such as Virginia. 2. Hist. Voluntary sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman. • At common law, the status of the woman determined whether the offense was adultery or fornication — adultery was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a married woman not his wife; fornication was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a single woman. Cf. ADULTERY. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 45.40; Lewdness ⇨ 1.] — fornicate, vb. — fornicator, n.

"Fornication was not a common-law crime but was made punishable by statute in a few states as a misdemeanor." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 455 (3d ed. 1982).

fornix (for-niks). [Latin] Hist. 1. A brothel. 2. Fornication.

forprise (for-priz). Hist. 1. An exception or reservation. • The term was frequently used in leases and conveyances.

"Forprise . . . [a]n exception or reservation. . . . We still use it in Conveyances and Leases, wherein Excepted and Forprised is an usual expression." Thomas Blount, Nomolexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

2. An exaction. — forprise, vb.

for-profit corporation. See CORPORATION.

forschel (for-shəl). Hist. A strip of land next to a highway. — Also termed forschet.

forspeca (for-spee-kə). 1. PROLOCUTOR (2). 2. PARONYMPHUS.

forswearing (for-swaɪ-ɪŋ), n. (14c) 1. The act of repudiating or renouncing under oath. 2. PERJURY. — forswear, vb.

fortax (for-taks), vb. Hist. To tax wrongly or extortionately.

fortior (for-shee-ər or -or), adj. [Latin "stronger"] Hist. (Of evidence) involving a presumption that, because of the strength of a party's evidence, shifts the burden of proof to the opposing party.

fortuitous (for-t[y]oo-ə-təs), adj. (17c) Occurring by chance. • A fortuitous event may be highly unfortunate. Literally, the term is neutral, despite its common misuse as a synonym for fortunate.

fortuitous collision. See COLLISION.

fortuitous event. (1856) 1. A happening that, because it occurs only by chance or accident, the parties could not reasonably have foreseen. 2. An event that, so far as contracting parties are aware, depends on chance. 3. Louisiana law. An event that could not have been reasonably foreseen at the time a contract was made. La. Civ. Code art. 1875. — Also termed cas fortuit. See FORCE MAJEURE; UNAVOIDABLE-ACCIDENT DOCTRINE.

Fortune 500. An annual compilation of the 500 largest U.S. corporations as ranked by gross revenues. • It is published in, and gets its name from, Fortune magazine.

forty, n. Archaic. Forty acres of land in the form of a square <the south forty>. • To determine a forty, a section of land (640 acres) was quartered, and one of those quarters was again quartered.

forty-days court. See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

forum, n. (15c) 1. A public place, esp. one devoted to assembly or debate. See PUBLIC FORUM; NONPUBLIC FORUM. 2. A court or other judicial body; a place of jurisdiction. Pl. forums, fora.

forum actus (for-əm ək-təs). [Latin "the forum of the act"] Hist. The place where an act was done.

forum competens (for-əm kəm-pə-tenz). [Latin] Hist. A competent court; a court that has jurisdiction over a case.

forum conscientiae (for-əm kən-shee-en-shee-ee). [Latin "the forum of conscience"] Hist. The tribunal or court of conscience. • This court was usu. a court of equity. See COURT OF CONSCIENCE.

forum contentiosum (for-əm kən-ten-shee-oh-səm). [Latin "the forum of contention"] Hist. A court of justice; a place for litigation.

forum contractus (for-əm kən-trak-təs). [Latin “the forum of the contract”] Hist. 1. The place where a contract was made, and thus the place of jurisdiction. 2. The court of the place where a contract was made.

forum conveniens (for-əm kən-vee-nee-enz). [Latin “a suitable forum”] The court in which an action is most appropriately brought, considering the best interests and convenience of the parties and witnesses. Cf. FORUM NON CONVENIENS.

forum domesticum (for-əm də-mes-ti-kəm). [Latin] Hist. A domestic court. • This type of court decides matters (such as professional discipline) arising within the organization that created it.

forum domicilii (for-əm dom-ə-sil-ee-i). [Latin] Hist. The forum or court of the domicile, usu. of the defendant.

forum ecclesiasticum (for-əm e-klee-z[h]ee-as-ti-kəm). [Latin] Hist. An ecclesiastical court. — Also termed judicium ecclesiasticum.

forum externum (for-əm ek-stər-nəm), n. [Latin “external tribunal”] Eccles. law. A court dealing with legal cases pertaining to or affecting the corporate life of the church.

forum inconveniens. See FORUM NON CONVENIENS.

forum internum (for-əm in-tər-nəm), n. [Latin “internal tribunal”] Eccles. law. A court of conscience; a court for matters of conscience or the confessional.

forum ligeantiae rei (for-əm lij-ee-an-shee-ee ree-i). [Latin] Hist. The forum of the defendant’s allegiance; the court or jurisdiction of the country to which the defendant owes allegiance.

forum non competens (for-əm non kom-pə-tenz). [Latin] Hist. An inappropriate court; a court that lacks jurisdiction over a case.

forum non conveniens (for-əm non kən-vee-nee-enz). [Latin “an unsuitable court”] Civil procedure. The doctrine that an appropriate forum — even though competent under the law — may divest itself of jurisdiction if, for the convenience of the litigants and the witnesses, it appears that the action should proceed in another forum in which the action might also have been properly brought in the first place. — Also termed forum inconveniens. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 28; Federal Courts ⇨ 45.]

“Forum non conveniens allows a court to exercise its discretion to avoid the oppression or vexation that might result from automatically honoring plaintiff’s forum choice. However, dismissal on the basis of forum non conveniens also requires that there be an alternative forum in which the suit can be prosecuted. It must appear that jurisdiction over all parties can be secured and that complete relief can be obtained in the supposedly more convenient court. Further, in at least some states, it has been held that the doctrine cannot be successfully invoked when the plaintiff is resident of the forum state since, effectively, one of the functions of the state courts is to provide a tribunal in which their residents can obtain an adjudication of their grievances. But in most instances a balancing of the convenience to all the parties will be considered and no one factor will preclude a forum non conveniens dismissal, as

forum originis (for-əm ə-rij-ə-nis). [Latin] Hist. The forum or place of a person’s birth, considered as a place of jurisdiction.

forum rei (for-əm ree-i). [Latin] Hist. 1. The forum of the defendant, i.e., the place where the defendant is domiciled or resides. 2. FORUM REI SITAE.

forum rei gestae (for-əm ree-i jes-tee). [Latin] Hist. The forum or court of a res gesta (thing done); the place where an act was done, considered as a place of jurisdiction.

forum rei sitae (for-əm ree-i si-tee). [Latin] Hist. The court where the thing or subject-matter in controversy is situated, considered as a place of jurisdiction. — Often shortened to forum rei.

forum seculare (for-əm sek-yə-lair-ee). [Latin] Hist. A secular court. — Also spelled forum saeculare.

forum-selection clause. (1970) A contractual provision in which the parties establish the place (such as the country, state, or type of court) for specified litigation between them. — Also termed choice-of-exclusive-forum clause. Cf. CHOICE-OF-LAW CLAUSE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 127(4), 206.]

forum-shopping. (1954) The practice of choosing the most favorable jurisdiction or court in which a claim might be heard. • A plaintiff might engage in forum-shopping, for example, by filing suit in a jurisdiction with a reputation for high jury awards or by filing several similar suits and keeping the one with the preferred judge. Cf. JUDGE-SHOPPING.

forum state. Conflict of laws. The state in which a suit is filed.

for use. For the benefit or advantage of another. See USE.

forward agreement. See forward contract under CONTRACT.

forward and backward at sea. Marine insurance. From port to port in the course of a voyage, and not merely from one terminus to the other and back.

forward confusion. See CONFUSION.

forward contract. See CONTRACT.

forward cover. The purchase of a cash commodity to meet the obligation of a forward contract. See forward contract under CONTRACT.

forwarding agent. See AGENT (2).

forward market. See futures market under MARKET.

forward-rate agreement. A contract that specifies what the interest rate on an obligation will be on some future date. — Abbr. FRA.

forward triangular merger. See triangular merger under MERGER.

fossage (fos-ij), n. Hist. A duty paid to maintain a moat around a fortification.

foster, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. (Of a relationship) involving parental care given by someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster home>. 2. (Of a person) giving or receiving parental care to or from someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster parent> <foster child>.

foster, vb. (12c) To give care to (something or someone); esp., to give parental care to (a child who is not one's natural or legally adopted child).

fosterage, n. (17c) 1. The act of caring for another's child. 2. The entrusting of a child to another. 3. The condition of being in the care of another. 4. The act of encouraging or promoting.

foster care. (1876) 1. A federally funded child-welfare program providing substitute care for abused and neglected children who have been removed by court order from their parents' or guardians' care or for children voluntarily placed by their parents in the temporary care of the state because of a family crisis. 42 USCA §§ 670–679a. • The state welfare agency selects, trains, supervises, and pays those who serve as foster parents. Cf. ADOPTION (1). [Cases: Infants ⇨ 226.]

long-term foster care. The placing of a child in foster care for extended periods, perhaps even for the child's entire minority, in lieu of family reunification, termination and adoption, or guardianship. • Although most courts do not generally find this arrangement to be in a child's best interests, sometimes it is the only possibility, as when the child, because of age or disability, is unlikely to be adopted or when, although the parent cannot be permanently reunited with the child, limited contact with the parent would serve the child's best interests. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the permanent placement of last resort. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 226.]

2. The area of social services concerned with meeting the needs of children who participate in these types of programs. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 17.]

foster-care drift. The phenomenon that occurs when children placed in foster care remain in that system, in legal limbo, for too many years of their developmental life before they are reunited with their parents or freed for adoption and placed in permanent homes. • The Adoption and Safe Families Act was passed in 1997 to help rectify this problem. See ADOPTION AND SAFE FAMILIES ACT. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 155.]

foster-care placement. (1968) The (usu. temporary) act of placing a child in a home with a person or persons who provide parental care for the child. Cf. OUT-OF-HOME PLACEMENT. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 226.]

foster-care review board. A panel of screened and trained volunteers who routinely review cases of children placed in foster care, examine efforts at permanency planning, and report to the court. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 17, 226.]

foster child. See CHILD.

foster father. See foster parent under PARENT.

foster home. (19c) A household in which foster care is provided to a child who has been removed from his or her birth or adoptive parents, usu. for abuse or neglect. • A foster home is usu. an individual home, but it can also be a group home. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 226.]

fosterlean (fos-tar-leen). Hist. Remuneration for rearing a foster child.

fosterling. (bef. 12c) See foster child under CHILD.

foster mother. See foster parent under PARENT.

foster parent. See PARENT.

foul bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

foundation. (14c) 1. The basis on which something is supported; esp., evidence or testimony that establishes the admissibility of other evidence <laying the foundation>. [Cases: Evidence ⇨ 117.] 2. A fund established for charitable, educational, religious, research, or other benevolent purposes; an endowment <the Foundation for the Arts>.

private foundation. A charitable organization that is funded by a single source, derives its income from investments rather than contributions, and makes grants to other charitable organizations. • A private foundation is generally exempt from taxation. IRC (26 USCA) § 509. — Also termed private nonoperating foundation.

private nonoperating foundation. See private foundation.

private operating foundation. A private foundation that conducts its own charitable program rather than making grants to other charitable organizations. • Most of the foundation's earnings and assets must be used to further its particular charitable purpose.

foundational evidence. See EVIDENCE.

foundational fact. See predicate fact under FACT.

founded on, adj. (16c) Having as a basis <the suit was founded on the defendant's breach of contract>.

founder, n. (14c) 1. A person who founds or establishes; esp., a person who supplies funds for an institution's future needs. 2. SETTLOR (1).

founder's share. (usu. pl.) In England, a share issued to the founder of a company as a part of the consideration for the business. • Now rare, a founder's share participates in profits only if the dividend on ordinary shares has been paid to a specified amount.

founding father. (1914) A prominent figure in the founding of an institution or esp. a country; specif., one who played a leading role in founding the United States of America, esp. in the Revolutionary War and the making of the U.S. Constitution.

foundling. (14c) A deserted or abandoned infant.

foundling hospital. A charitable institution, found esp. in Europe, the purpose of which is to care for abandoned children.

four, rule of. See RULE OF FOUR.

four corners. (1874) The face of a written instrument. •

The phrase derives from the ancient custom of putting all instruments (such as contracts) on a single sheet of parchment, as opposed to multiple pages, no matter how long the sheet might be. At common law, this custom prevented people from fraudulently inserting materials into a fully signed agreement. The requirement was that every contract could have only four corners. [Cases: Contracts ↻143(1), 147(2); Evidence ↻397, 448.]

four-corners rule. (1948) 1. The principle that a document's meaning is to be gathered from the entire document and not from its isolated parts. [Cases: Contracts ↻143.5; Evidence ↻448.] 2. The principle that no extraneous evidence should be used to interpret an unambiguous document. Cf. PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Evidence ↻448.]

four-folding. Hist. The quadrupling of a property's taxable value for purposes of penalizing a person who falsely underreported the property's true taxable value.

"In the State of Connecticut a number of men are chosen annually by each town, to receive from each inhabitant a list of the taxable property in his possession. This list is required by law; and is made up by the proprietor. The men, who receive it, are from their employment called Listers. If the proprietor gives in a false list, he is punished by having the falsified article increased on the list four-fold. . . . We therefore style this punishment four-folding." 4 Timothy Dwight, Travels in New-England and New-York 284 (1822).

401(k) plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

403(b) plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

457 plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

Fourteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1868, whose primary provisions effectively apply the Bill of Rights to the states by prohibiting states from denying due process and equal protection and from abridging the privileges and immunities of U.S. citizenship. • The amendment also gave Congress the power to enforce these provisions, leading to legislation such as the civil-rights acts. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻2910–2932, 3000–3833, 3840–4841.]

Fourth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, prohibiting unreasonable searches and seizures and the issuance of warrants without probable cause. See PROBABLE CAUSE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ↻23.]

fourth estate. (1821) The journalistic profession; the news media. • The term comes from the British Parliament's reporters' gallery, whose influence was said to equal Parliament's three traditional estates: the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal, and the Commons. (In fourth-sentence remand. See REMAND.

four unities. (1852) The four qualities needed to create a joint tenancy at common law — interest, possession, time, and title. See UNITY (2). [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↻1.]

fovere consimilem causam (foh-veer-ee kən-sim-ə-ləm kaw-zəm). [Law Latin] Hist. To favor a similar case.

• A judge who is disqualified for having a personal interest in a case may also be disqualified in a later case if the ruling in the former case could affect the ruling in the latter.

Fox's Libel Act. Hist. A 1792 statute that gave the jury in a libel prosecution the right of rendering a guilty or not-guilty verdict on the whole matter in issue. • The jury was no longer bound to find the defendant guilty if it found that the defendant had in fact published the allegedly libelous statement. The Act empowered juries to decide whether the defendant's statement conformed to the legal standard for libel.

foy (foy or fwah). [Law French] Faith; allegiance.

FPA. abbr. Free from particular average.

"F.P.A. means Free from Particular Average; that is to say, the insured can recover only where the loss is total or is due to a general average sacrifice. The claims under the Sue and Labour clause are not affected by this stipulation." 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 128 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

FPC clause. See AREA-RATE CLAUSE.

FPLS. abbr. FEDERAL PARENT LOCATOR SERVICE.

Fr. abbr. 1. French. 2. FRAGMENTA.

FRA. abbr. 1. FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION. 2. FORWARD-RATE AGREEMENT.

fractional, adj. (1815) (Of a tract of land) covering an area less than the acreage reflected on a survey; pertaining to any irregular division of land containing either more or less than the conventional amount of acreage.

fractional interest. See undivided interest under INTEREST (2).

fragmenta (frag-men-tə), n. pl. [Latin "fragments"] Roman law. Passages drawn from the writings of Roman jurists and compiled in Justinian's Digest. — Abbr. Fr.; Ff.

fragmented literal similarity. See SIMILARITY.

frame, vb. (14c) 1. To plan, shape, or construct; esp., to draft or otherwise draw up (a document). 2. To incriminate (an innocent person) with false evidence, esp. fabricated. — framable, frameable, adj.

frame-up, n. A plot to make an innocent person appear guilty.

framing. On the Internet, a website's display of another entity's Web page inside a bordered area, often without displaying the page's URL or domain name. • Framing may constitute a derivative work and may infringe on a copyright or trademark if done without giving credit to or obtaining permission from the other website's owner. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1435.]

francbordus. See FREE-BORD.

franchise (fran-chīz), n. (14c) 1. The right to vote. — Also termed elective franchise. [Cases: Elections ↷1.] 2. The government-conferred right to engage in a specific business or to exercise corporate powers. — Also termed corporate franchise; general franchise. [Cases: Franchises ↷1.]

"When referring to government grants (other than patents, trademarks, and copyrights), the term 'franchise' is often used to connote more substantial rights, whereas the term 'license' connotes lesser rights. Thus, the rights necessary for public utility companies to carry on their operations are generally designated as franchise rights. On the other hand, the rights to construct or to repair, the rights to practice certain professions, and the rights to use or to operate automobiles are generally referred to as licenses." 1 Eckstrom's Licensing in Foreign and Domestic Operations § 1.02[3], at 1-10 to 1-11 (David M. Epstein ed., 1998).

"In a violent conceptual collision, some franchisors maintain that a franchise is merely an embellished license and therefore revocable at will. Franchisees contend that a franchise is a license coupled with an interest, not subject to unlimited control by franchisors. As a result of this disagreement, legislative draftsmen have had difficulty defining 'franchise.'" 1 Harold Brown, Franchising Realities and Remedies § 1.03[1], at 1-17 (1998).

franchise appurtenant to land. Rare. A franchise that is used in connection with real property and thus is sometimes characterized as real property.

general franchise. A corporation's charter.

special franchise. A right conferred by the government, esp. one given to a public utility, to use property for a public use but for private profit. [Cases: Franchises ↷1.]

3. The sole right granted by the owner of a trademark or tradename to engage in business or to sell a good or service in a certain area. 4. The business or territory controlled by the person or entity that has been granted such a right.

commercial franchise. A franchise using local capital and management by contracting with third parties to operate a facility identified as offering a particular brand of goods or services.

sports franchise. 1. A franchise granted by a professional sports league to field a team in that league. 2. The team itself.

trial franchise. A franchise having an initial term of limited duration, such as one year.

franchise, vb. (14c) To grant (to another) the sole right of engaging in a certain business or in a business using a particular trademark in a certain area.

franchise agreement. (1905) The contract between a franchisor and franchisee establishing the terms and conditions of the franchise relationship. • State and federal laws regulate franchise agreements. [Cases:

franchise clause. Insurance. A provision in a casualty insurance policy stating that the insurer will pay a claim only if it is more than a stated amount, and that the insured is responsible for all damages if the claim is under that amount. • Unlike a deductible, which the insured always has to pay, with a franchise clause, once the claim exceeds the stated amount, the insurer pays the entire claim.

franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant, with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. • In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. — Also termed courts of the franchise.

"Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants . . . But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949).

franchisee. One who is granted a franchise.

franchise fee. See FEE (1).

franchiser. See FRANCHISOR.

franchise tax. See TAX.

franchisor. (19c) One who grants a franchise. — Also spelled franchiser.

francigena (fran-sə-jee-nə). [Law Latin francus "french" + Latin genitus "born"] Hist. 1. A person born in France. 2. Any alien in England; a foreigner. See FRENCHMAN.

francus (frangk-əs). [fr. French franc "free"] Hist. A freeman.

francus bancus. See FREE BENCH.

francus homo (frangk-əs hoh-moh). Hist. A free man.

francus tenens. See FRANK-TENANT.

frank, adj. [Law French] Hist. Free. — Also spelled fraunc; fraunche; fraunke.

frank, n. 1. (cap.) A member of the Germanic people who conquered Gaul in the 6th century. • France received its name from the Franks. 2. A signature, stamp, or mark affixed to mail as a substitute for postage. [Cases: Postal Service ↷15.] 3. The privilege of sending certain mail free of charge, accorded to certain government officials, such as members of Congress and federal courts. — Also termed (in sense 3) franking privilege. [Cases: United States ↷12.] — frank, vb.

frankalmoin (frangk-al-moyn). [Law French “free alms”] (16c) Hist. A spiritual tenure by which a religious institution held land, usu. with a general duty to pray for the donor. • This tenure differed from the tenure by divine service, which required specific church services, such as a certain number of masses or alms distributions. — Also spelled frankalmoign; frankalmoigne. — Also termed almoign; almoyn; free alms; libera eleemosyna. See spiritual tenure under TENURE.

“Frankalmoin, or free alms, was a survival of Anglo-Saxon law, and implied simply an indefinite promise to pray for the soul of the donor; but since it was deemed a tenure by which the land was held, the general doctrine of ‘services’ was applied. On the other hand, in the case of Divine Service, which was much less frequently met with, the tenant promised a definite number of prayers, a duty which might be enforced in the King’s courts.” A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter’s Outlines of English Legal History 210 (5th ed. 1958).

frank bank. See FREE BENCH.

frank-chase. Hist. Free chase; a person’s liberty or right to hunt or log within a certain area. • Others holding land within the frank-chase area were forbidden from hunting or logging in it. See CHASE.

frank-fee. (15c) Hist. Freehold land — land that one held to oneself and one’s heirs — exempted from all services except homage; land held other than by ancient demesne or copyhold.

frank ferm. Hist. An estate in land held in socage, the nature of the fee having been changed from knight’s service by enfeoffment for certain yearly services. — Also spelled frank-ferme.

franking privilege. See FRANK (3).

frank-law. Hist. The rights and privileges of a citizen or freeman; specif., the condition of being legally capable of giving an oath (esp. as a juror or witness). See LEGALIS HOMO.

“Frank law . . . may be understood from Bracton’s description of the consequences of losing it, among which the principal one was, that the parties incurred perpetual infamy, so that they were never afterwards to be admitted to oath, because they were not deemed to be othesworth, (that is, not worthy of making oath,) nor allowed to give testimony.” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 657-58 (2d ed. 1867).

frankmarriage. (14c) Hist. An entailed estate in which the donor retains control of the land by refusing to accept feudal services from the donee (usu. the donor’s daughter) for three generations. • If the donee’s issue fail in that time, the land returns to the donor. A donor who accepted homage (and the corresponding services arising from it) from the donee risked losing control of the land to a collateral heir. After three generations — a time considered sufficient to demonstrate that the line was well established — the donee’s heir could insist on paying homage; doing so transformed the estate into a fee simple. — Also termed liberum maritagium. See MARITAGIUM.

frankpledge. (bef. 12c) Hist. A promise given to the sovereign by a group of ten freeholders (a tithing) ensuring the group’s good conduct. • The frankpledge was of Saxon origin, but continued after the Norman Conquest. The members of the group were not liable for an injury caused by an offending member, but they did act as bail to ensure that the culprit would appear in court. They were bound to produce a wrongdoer for trial. — Also termed borrow; laughe. See VIEW OF FRANKPLEDGE. Cf. DECENARY.

Franks hearing. (1979) A hearing to determine whether a police officer’s affidavit used to obtain a search warrant that yields incriminating evidence was based on false statements by the police officer. Franks v. Delaware, 438 U.S. 154, 98 S.Ct. 2674 (1978).

frank-tenant. Hist. A freeholder. — Also termed francus tenens. See FREEHOLD.

frank-tenement. Hist. A free tenement; a freehold. • This term described both the tenure and the estate.

FRAP (frap). abbr. FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.

frater (fray-tər), n. [Latin] Roman law. A brother.

frater consanguineus (fray-tər kon-sang-gwin-ee-əs). A brother or half-brother having the same father.

frater germanus (fray-tər jər-may-nəs). A brother having both parents in common.

frater nutricius (fray-tər n[y]oo-trish-ee-əs). A foster brother who was suckled by the same wet nurse.

frater uterinus (fray-tər yoo-tə-rī-nəs). A brother or half-brother having the same mother.

fraternal, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to the relationship of brothers. 2. Of or relating to a fraternity or a fraternal benefit association.

fraternal benefit association. A voluntary organization or society created for its members’ mutual aid and benefit rather than for profit, and whose members have a common and worthy cause, objective, or interest. • These associations usu. have a lodge system, a governing body, rituals, and a benefits system for their members. — Also termed fraternal benefit society; fraternity; fraternal lodge; fraternal order. Cf. FRIENDLY SOCIETY. [Cases: Beneficial Associations ↷1.]

fraternal insurance. See INSURANCE.

fraternal lodge. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

fraternal order. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

fraternal society. See benevolent association under ASSOCIATION.

fraternity. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

frater nutricius. See FRATER.

frater uterinus. See FRATER.

fratres conjurati (fray-treez kon-jə-ray-ti). [Latin “sworn brothers”] Hist. Sworn brothers or companions for the defense of their sovereign or for other purposes.

fratriage (fra-tree-ij or fray-). Hist. 1. A younger brother’s portion of his father’s estate, received as an inheritance. • Under feudal law, even though the land was from the father’s estate, the younger brother was bound to pay homage to the older brother. 2. A portion of an inheritance given to coheirs. — Also termed fratriagium.

fratricide (fra-trə-sid or fray-). (15c) 1. The killing of one’s brother or sister. 2. One who has killed one’s brother or sister. Cf. SORORICIDE. — fratricidal, adj.

fraud, n. (14c) 1. A knowing misrepresentation of the truth or concealment of a material fact to induce another to act to his or her detriment. • Fraud is usu. a tort, but in some cases (esp. when the conduct is willful) it may be a crime. — Also termed intentional fraud. [Cases: Fraud ↷1, 3, 16, 68.] 2. A misrepresentation made recklessly without belief in its truth to induce another person to act. [Cases: Fraud ↷13(3).] 3. A tort arising from a knowing misrepresentation, concealment of material fact, or reckless misrepresentation made to induce another to act to his or her detriment. [Cases: Fraud ↷13(2), 13(3), 16.] 4. Unconscionable dealing; esp., in contract law, the unfair use of the power arising out of the parties’ relative positions and resulting in an unconscionable bargain. [Cases: Contracts ↷1.] — fraudulent, adj.

“[T]he use of the term fraud has been wider and less precise in the chancery than in the common-law courts. This followed necessarily from the remedies which they respectively administered. Common law gave damages for a wrong, and was compelled to define with care the wrong which furnished a cause of action. Equity refused specific performance of a contract, or set aside a transaction, or gave compensation where one party had acted unfairly by the other. Thus ‘fraud’ at common law is a false statement . . . : fraud in equity has often been used as meaning unconscientious dealing — ‘although, I think, unfortunately,’ a great equity lawyer has said.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 263 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

actual fraud. (17c) A concealment or false representation through a statement or conduct that injures another who relies on it in acting. — Also termed fraud in fact; positive fraud; moral fraud. [Cases: Fraud ↷3.] advance-fee fraud. A criminal fraud in which the victim is persuaded by the perpetrator to pay “fees” in anticipation of receiving a much larger benefit that is ultimately never delivered. • The perpetrator usu. claims to have, or to represent someone with, a large sum of money that must be immediately transferred out of a foreign country for some compelling reason, such as to avoid seizure by a government. The criminal promises the victim a portion of the money in return for the victim’s agreement to open a bank account in the victim’s name. The victim then must pay “upfront fees” to the designated “bank” and others. Although the Internet has become a favorite tool for this fraud, it has been around for years, beginning with handwritten or typed letters and later faxes. Because advance-fee fraud is believed to have originated in Nigeria, it is also termed 419 fraud after the section of the Nigerian penal code designed to punish those who defraud by this method. [Cases: Fraud ↷68.]

affinity fraud. A fraud in which the perpetrator tailors the fraud to target members of a particular group united by common traits or interests that produce inherent trust. • The perpetrator often is or pretends to be a member of the group. Investment scams such as Ponzi or pyramid schemes are common forms of affinity fraud. When a religious group is targeted, it is usu. called religious-affinity fraud.

bank fraud. The criminal offense of knowingly executing, or attempting to execute, a scheme or artifice to defraud a financial institution, or to obtain property owned by or under the control of a financial institution, by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises. 18 USCA § 1344. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↷509.10, 509.25.]

bankruptcy fraud. (1815) A fraudulent act connected to a bankruptcy case; esp., any of several proscribed acts performed knowingly and fraudulently in a bankruptcy case, such as concealing assets or destroying, withholding, or falsifying documents in an effort to defeat bankruptcy-code provisions. See 18 USCA § 152. — Also termed criminal bankruptcy; bankruptcy crime. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷3861.]

civil fraud. (18c) 1. FRAUD (3). 2. Tax. An intentional — but not willful — evasion of taxes. • The distinction between an intentional (i.e., civil) and willful (i.e., criminal) fraud is not always clear, but civil fraud carries only a monetary, noncriminal penalty. Cf. criminal fraud; TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷5218; Taxation ↷3563.]

click fraud. A scheme in which a person or robot repeatedly clicks on a merchant's pay-per-click advertisement on a website for purposes other than viewing the website or making a purchase. [Cases: Telecommunications ⇨1341.]

common-law fraud. See promissory fraud.

competitor click fraud. Click fraud committed by a business's competitor in order to increase the amount of money the advertising merchant must pay to the site hosting the ad. See click fraud.

constructive fraud. (18c) 1. Unintentional deception or misrepresentation that causes injury to another. — Also termed legal fraud; fraud in contemplation of law; equitable fraud; fraud in equity. 2. See fraud in law. [Cases: Fraud ⇨5.]

"In equity law the term fraud has a wider sense, and includes all acts, omissions, or concealments by which one person obtains an advantage against conscience over another, or which equity or public policy forbids as being to another's prejudice; as acts in violation of trust and confidence. This is often called constructive, legal, or equitable fraud, or fraud in equity." Encyclopedia of Criminology 175 (Vernon C. Branham & Samuel B. Kutash eds., 1949), s.v. "Fraud."

criminal fraud. (18c) Fraud that has been made illegal by statute and that subjects the offender to criminal penalties such as fines and imprisonment. • An example is the willful evasion of taxes accomplished by filing a fraudulent tax return. Cf. civil fraud; larceny by trick under LARCENY. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨5263.20; Taxation ⇨3563.]

extrinsic fraud. (1851) 1. Deception that is collateral to the issues being considered in the case; intentional misrepresentation or deceptive behavior outside the transaction itself (whether a contract or a lawsuit), depriving one party of informed consent or full participation. • For example, a person might engage in extrinsic fraud by convincing a litigant not to hire counsel or answer by dishonestly saying the matter will not be pursued. — Also termed collateral fraud. 2. Deception that prevents a person from knowing about or asserting certain rights. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2654; Judgment ⇨375, 443(1).]

fraud in contemplation of law. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in equity. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in fact. See actual fraud.

fraud in law. (17c) Fraud that is presumed under the circumstances, as when a debtor transfers assets and thereby impairs creditors' efforts to collect sums due. — Also termed constructive fraud.

fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum.

fraud in the factum. (1848) Fraud occurring when a legal instrument as actually executed differs from the one intended for execution by the person who executes it, or when the instrument may have had no legal existence. • Compared to fraud in the inducement, fraud in the factum occurs only rarely, as when a blind person signs a mortgage when misleadingly told that the paper is just a letter. — Also termed fraud in the execution; fraud in the making. Cf. fraud in the inducement. [Cases: Contracts ⇨94(1).]

fraud in the inducement. (1831) Fraud occurring when a misrepresentation leads another to enter into a transaction with a false impression of the risks, duties, or obligations involved; an intentional misrepresentation of a material risk or duty reasonably relied on, thereby injuring the other party without vitiating the contract itself, esp. about a fact relating to value. — Also termed fraud in the procurement. Cf. fraud in the factum. [Cases: Contracts ⇨94(1); Fraud ⇨3, 24.]

fraud in the procurement. See fraud in the inducement.

fraud on the community. Family law. In a community-property state, the deliberate hiding or fraudulent transfer of community assets before a divorce or death for the purpose of preventing the other spouse from claiming a half-interest ownership in the property. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⇨265.]

fraud on the court. (1810) In a judicial proceeding, a lawyer's or party's misconduct so serious that it undermines or is intended to undermine the integrity of the proceeding. • Examples are bribery of a juror and introduction of fabricated evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2654; Judgment ⇨372, 440.]

fraud on the market. 1. Fraud occurring when an issuer of securities gives out misinformation that affects the market price of stock, the result being that people who buy or sell are effectively misled even though they did not rely on the statement itself or anything derived from it other than the market price. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨60.25.] 2. The securities-law claim based on such fraud. See FRAUD-ON-THE-MARKET PRINCIPLE.

fraud on the Patent Office. Patents. A defense in a patent-infringement action, attacking the validity of the patent on the grounds that the patentee gave the examiner false or misleading information or withheld relevant information that the examiner would have considered important in considering patentability. • The scope of prohibited acts is wider than that covered by common-law fraud, and today the defense is generally called "inequitable conduct before the PTO." If the defense is established, the entire patent is rendered unenforceable. See defense of inequitable conduct under DEFENSE (1). [Cases: Patents ⇨97.]

insurance fraud. Fraud committed against an insurer, as when an insured lies on a policy application or fabricates a claim.

intrinsic fraud. (1832) Deception that pertains to an issue involved in an original action. • Examples include the use of fabricated evidence, a false return of service, perjured testimony, and false receipts or other commercial documents. [Cases: Judgment ⇨ 373, 441.]

long-firm fraud. The act of obtaining goods or money on credit by falsely posing as an established business and having no intent to pay for the goods or repay the loan.

mail fraud. (1918) An act of fraud using the U.S. Postal Service, as in making false representations through the mail to obtain an economic advantage. 18 USCA §§ 1341-1347. [Cases: Postal Service ⇨ 35.]

positive fraud. See actual fraud.

promissory fraud. (1934) A promise to perform made when the promisor had no intention of performing the promise. — Also termed common-law fraud. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 12.]

religious-affinity fraud. See affinity fraud.

tax fraud. See TAX EVASION.

wire fraud. (1955) An act of fraud using electronic communications, as by making false representations on the telephone to obtain money. • The federal Wire Fraud Act provides that any artifice to defraud by means of wire or other electronic communications (such as radio or television) in foreign or interstate commerce is a crime. 18 USCA § 1343. [Cases: Telecommunications ⇨ 1014.]

fraud, badge of. See BADGE OF FRAUD.

fraudare (fraw-dair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To defraud.

fraud by hindsight. Hist. Securities. A claim of fraud based on the assumption that a corporation deliberately misled investors by issuing optimistic financial statements or forecasts and later reporting worse-than-expected results. Suits for fraud by hindsight were common in the early 1990s. Congress eliminated this claim in the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. 15 USCA §§ 78u-4(b). [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.27.]

fraude (frawd). [French] Civil law. Fraud committed in performing a contract. Cf. DOL.

fraudfeasor (frawd-fee-zər). A person who has committed fraud. — Also termed defrauder.

fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum under FRAUD.

fraud on creditors. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE (1).

fraud on the community. In a community-property state, the deliberate hiding or fraudulent transfer of community assets before a divorce or death for the purpose of preventing the other spouse from claiming a half-interest ownership in the property.

fraud-on-the-market principle. Securities. The doctrine that, in a claim under the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, a plaintiff may presumptively establish reliance on a misstatement about a security's value — without proving actual knowledge of the fraudulent statement — if the stock is purchased in an open and developed securities market. • This doctrine recognizes that the market price of an issuer's stock reflects all available public information. The presumption is rebuttable. — Also termed fraud-on-the-market theory. See fraud on the market under FRAUD. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.25.]

fraudulent act. Conduct involving bad faith, dishonesty, a lack of integrity, or moral turpitude. — Also termed dishonest act; fraudulent or dishonest act.

fraudulent alienation. 1. The transfer of property with an intent to defraud others, esp. creditors and lienholders. 2. The transfer of an estate asset by the estate's administrator for little or no consideration.

fraudulent alienee. See ALIENEE.

fraudulent banking. The receipt of a deposit by a banker who knew that the bank was insolvent at the time of the deposit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 82(2), 83.]

fraudulent claim. A false insurance claim. See FRAUD.

fraudulent concealment. See CONCEALMENT.

fraudulent-concealment rule. See CONCEALMENT RULE.

fraudulent conveyance. (17c) 1. A transfer of property for little or no consideration, made for the purpose of hindering or delaying a creditor by putting the property beyond the creditor's reach; a transaction by which the owner of real or personal property seeks to place the property beyond the reach of creditors. — Also termed fraud on creditors. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances ⇨ 1.]

"With respect to the general power which is exercisable by deed, it seems that the principle that the donee's creditors can reach the property subject to the exercised general power will have application only to the so-called fraudulent conveyance. That is to say, if the owned assets of the donee after the donative inter vivos exercise are sufficient to satisfy the creditors, then the exercise of the power will not subject the appointive property to the claims of the creditors; if, on the other hand, the owned assets of the donee are inadequate to satisfy creditors' claims after the exercise of the power, then the transfer resulting from the exercise is likely to fall into the category of the fraudulent conveyance and the creditors will be able to reach the appointive property in the hands of the appointee." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 173 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Bankruptcy. A prebankruptcy transfer or obligation made or incurred by a debtor for little or no consideration or with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor. • A bankruptcy trustee may recover such a conveyance from the transferee if the requirements of 11 USCA § 548 are met. — Also termed fraudulent transfer. Cf. PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻2641–2651.]

fraudulent debt. See DEBT.

fraudulent joinder. See JOINDER.

fraudulent marriage. See MARRIAGE (1).

fraudulent misrepresentation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

fraudulent or dishonest act. See FRAUDULENT ACT.

fraudulent pretenses. See FALSE PRETENSES.

fraudulent representation. See fraudulent misrepresentation under MISREPRESENTATION.

fraudulent sale. See SALE.

fraudulent transfer. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE (2).

fraus (fraws). [Latin] Deceit; cheating. • For example, a debtor who conveyed property with the specific intent (fraus) of defrauding a creditor risked having the conveyance rescinded.

fraus legis (fraws lee-jis). [Latin “fraud on the law”] Roman law. Evasion of the law; specif., doing something that is not expressly forbidden by statute, but that the law does not want done.

fray. See AFFRAY.

FRB. abbr. FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD OF GOVERNORS.

FRCA. abbr. See FAIR-CREDIT-REPORTING ACT.

FRCP. abbr. FEDERAL RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

F.R.D. abbr. Federal Rules Decisions; a series of reported federal court decisions (beginning in 1938) that construe or apply the Federal Rules of Civil and Criminal Procedure. • Also included are rule changes, ceremonial proceedings of federal courts, and articles on federal-court practice and procedure. — Often written FRD.

FRE. abbr. FEDERAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

Freddie Mac. See FEDERAL HOME LOAN MORTGAGE CORPORATION.

free, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Having legal and political rights; enjoying political and civil liberty  . 2. Not subject to the constraint or domination of another; enjoying personal freedom; emancipated . 3. Characterized by choice, rather than by compulsion or constraint <free will>. 4. Unburdened <the land was free of any encumbrances>. 5. Not confined by force or restraint <free from prison>. 6. Unrestricted and unregulated <free trade>. 7. Costing nothing; gratuitous <free tickets to the game>. — freely, adv.

free, vb. 1. To liberate. 2. To remove (a person, animal, or thing) from a constraint or burden.

free agency, n. (ca. 1955) A professional athlete's ability to negotiate an employment contract with any team in the league, rather than being confined to the league's collective-bargaining system. • Free agency is usu.

granted to veteran players who have been in the league for a certain number of years. Cf. RESERVE CLAUSE. — free agent, n.

free alms. See FRANKALMOIN.

free alongside ship. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export, and deliver the goods to the wharf beside the buyer's chosen vessel. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are placed on the wharf beside the vessel. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. UCC § 2-319. — Abbr. FAS. Cf. FREE ON BOARD; DELIVERED EX QUAY. [Cases: Sales ↻201(4).] free and clear, adj. Unencumbered by any liens; marketable <free and clear title>.

free and common socage. See free socage under SOCAGE.

free and equal, adj. (Of an election) conducted so that the electorate has a reasonable opportunity to vote, with each vote given the same effect. [Cases: Elections ↻1.]

free bench. Hist. A widow's (and occasionally a widow's) interest in the deceased spouse's estate. • Free bench gave the surviving spouse a half interest in the estate until death or remarriage. — Also termed francus bancus; frank bank; liber bancus.

“The bench in question was, we may guess . . . a bench at the fireside. The surviving spouse has in time past been allowed to remain in the house along with the children. In the days when families kept together, the right of the widower or widow to remain at the fireside may have borne a somewhat indefinite character. . . . By way of ‘free bench’ the surviving spouse now has the enjoyment of one-half of the land until death or second marriage, whether there has ever been a child of the marriage or no.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 419 (2d ed. 1899).

free-bord. (17c) Hist. 1. A small strip of land (usu. 2½ feet wide and lying just outside a fence) that the owner of the fenced property was allowed to claim and use. 2. The right of claiming that quantity of land. — Also spelled freebord; free bord; freeboard. — Also termed francbordus.

free carrier. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export and deliver them to the buyer's chosen carrier at a named place. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are loaded on the collecting vehicle or otherwise placed at the carrier's disposal. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. There are no restrictions on the buyer's choice of carrier. — Abbr. FCA.

free chapel. Hist. Eccles. law. A church founded by the Crown (or by a person under royal grant) and not subject to the bishop's jurisdiction.

"[T]hose onely are Free-chappels, which are of the King's Foundation, and by him exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Ordinary; but the King may licence a Subject to found such a Chappel, and by his Charter exempt it from the Ordinaries Visitation also. . . . [I]t is called free, in respect of its exemption from the Jurisdiction of the Diocesan" Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

free chase. See CHASE.

free city. Int'l law. A country-like political and territorial entity that, although independent in principle, does not have the full capacity to act according to general international law but is nevertheless a subject of international law.

freedman (freed-mən). (16c) Hist. An emancipated slave.

freedom. (bef. 12c) 1. The state of being free or liberated. 2. A political right.

Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act. A 1994 federal statute that provides for criminal sanctions, private civil causes of action, and civil action by the U.S. Attorney General against a person who uses force, threat of force, or physical obstruction to injure, intimidate, or interfere with a provider or patient of reproductive services or who damages a reproductive-services facility. — Abbr. FACE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ↻128.]

freedom of association. (1889) The right to join with others in a common undertaking that would be lawful if pursued individually. • This right is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The government may not prohibit outsiders from joining an association, but the insiders do not necessarily have a right to exclude others. Cf. RIGHT OF ASSEMBLY. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1440–1454.]

freedom of expressive association. The constitutional right of an individual to associate with others, without undue government interference, for the purpose of engaging in activities protected by the First Amendment, such as speech, assembly, and the exercise of religion.

freedom of intimate association. The constitutional right of privacy to form and preserve certain intimate human relationships without intrusion by the state because the relationships safeguard individual freedom. • The group relationships protected by the right to freedom of intimate association are familial in nature and are characterized by deep attachments, a high degree of commitment, and the sharing of distinctly personal aspects of life. The exclusion of others is an essential characteristic of these relationships.

freedom of choice. (1817) 1. The liberty embodied in the exercise of one's rights. 2. The parents' opportunity to select a school for their child in a unitary, integrated school system that is devoid of de jure segregation. 3. The liberty to exercise one's right of privacy, esp. the right to have an abortion. — Also termed right to choose; choice. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ↻102.]

freedom of contract. (1879) The doctrine that people have the right to bind themselves legally; a judicial concept that contracts are based on mutual agreement and free choice, and thus should not be hampered by external control such as governmental interference. • This is the principle that people are able to fashion their relations by private agreements, esp. as opposed to the assigned roles of the feudal system. As Maine famously said, "[T]he movement of progressive societies has been a movement from Status to Contract." Henry Sumner Maine, Ancient Law 165 (1864). — Also termed liberty of contract; autonomy of the parties. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1118.]

"Like most shibboleths, that of 'freedom of contract' rarely, if ever, received the close examination which its importance deserved, and even today it is by no means easy to say what exactly the nineteenth-century judges meant when they used this phrase. At least it may be said that the idea of freedom of contract embraced two closely connected, but none the less distinct, concepts. In the first place it indicated that contracts were based on mutual agreement, while in the second place it emphasized that the creation of a contract was the result of a free choice unhampered by external control such as government or legislative interference." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 5 (3d ed. 1981).

freedom of expression. (1877) The freedom of speech, press, assembly, or religion as guaranteed by the First Amendment; the prohibition of governmental interference with those freedoms. Cf. FREEDOM OF SPEECH. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1290–1428, 1430, 1490–2304.]

Freedom of Information Act. The federal statute that establishes guidelines for public disclosure of documents and materials created and held by federal agencies. 5 USCA § 552. • The basic purpose of the statute, or of a state statute modeled after it, is to give the public access to official information so that the public will be better informed and the government will be more accountable for its actions. — Abbr. FOIA. See REVERSE FOIA SUIT. [Cases: Records ↻50–68.]

freedom of petition. See RIGHT TO PETITION.

freedom of religion. (16c) The right to adhere to any form of religion or none, to practice or abstain from practicing religious beliefs, and to be free from governmental interference with or promotion of religion, as guaranteed by the First Amendment and Article VI, § 3 of the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1290–1428.]

freedom of speech. (17c) The right to express one's thoughts and opinions without governmental restriction, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of speech. Cf. FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1490–2304.]

freedom of the city. Hist. An immunity or privilege from some burden, esp. from county jurisdiction and its privilege of municipal taxation and self-government, held under a royal charter.

freedom of the press. (17c) The right to print and publish materials without governmental intervention, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of the press. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻2070–2081.]

“Freedom of the press’ has less significance than meets the eye. It is true, of course, that the First Amendment specifically guarantees freedom of the press as well as free speech, and the media often ascribe the freedom they enjoy to the Press Clause. Even the Supreme Court occasionally emits rhetoric that implies as much. But as a matter of positive law, the Press Clause actually plays a rather minor role in protecting the freedom of the press. Most of the freedoms the press receives from the First Amendment are no different from the freedoms everyone enjoys under the Speech Clause. The press is protected from most government censorship, libel judgments, and prior restraints not because it is the press but because the Speech Clause protects all of us from those threats.” David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 430 (2002).

freedom of the seas. Int’l law. The principle that the seas beyond territorial waters are not subject to any country’s control. ● Ships on the high seas are subject only to the jurisdiction of the country whose flag they fly, except in cases of piracy, hijacking, hot pursuit from territorial waters, slave trading, and certain rights of approach by warships. — Also termed mare liberum. [Cases: International Law ↻7.]

freedom-to-create statute. Patents. A law restricting an employer’s ability to require employees to assign to the employer all rights to their inventions, even those independently developed. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻309.]

freedom-to-operate search. See INFRINGEMENT SEARCH.

free enterprise. (1890) A private and consensual system of production and distribution, usu. conducted for a profit in a competitive environment that is relatively free of governmental interference. See CAPITALISM.

free entry, egress, and regress (ee-gres / ree-gres). Hist. A person’s right to go on land as often as reasonably necessary. ● A tenant could go on land to gather crops still growing after the tenancy expired.

Free Exercise Clause. (1950) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. I) prohibiting the government from interfering in people’s religious practices or forms of worship. — Also termed Exercise Clause. Cf. ESTABLISHMENT CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1302.]

free fishery. See FISHERY (1).

free-gas clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease entitling the lessor or the surface owner to use gas produced from the leased property without charge. ● Used commonly in colder states, free-gas clauses usu. limit how the gas may be used (e.g., domestic heating and light), how much gas may be used (e.g., not more

freehold, n. (15c) 1. An estate in land held in fee simple, in fee tail, or for term of life; any real-property interest that is or may become possessory. ● At common law, these estates were all created by enfeoffment with livery of seisin. [Cases: Estates in Property ↻4–7, 12.] 2. The tenure by which such an estate is held. — Also termed freehold estate; estate in freehold; freehold interest; franktenement; liberum tenementum. Cf. LEASEHOLD.

movable freehold. (18c) The land a seashore owner acquires or loses as water recedes or approaches. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↻44.]

perpetual freehold. An estate given to a grantee for life, and then successively to the grantee’s heirs for life. ● The effect of this type of freehold was to keep land within a family in perpetuity, much like a fee tail.

freeholder. (15c) Hist. One who possesses a freehold.

freeholder’s court baron. See COURT BARON.

freehold estate. See FREEHOLD.

freehold interest. See FREEHOLD.

freehold land society. (usu. pl.) Hist. A society in England created to enable mechanics, artisans, and other workers to buy at the lowest possible price freehold land with a sufficient yearly value to entitle the owner to the right to vote in the county in which the land was located.

free ice. Hist. Ice in navigable streams that does not belong to the adjacent riparian owner or to another with the right to appropriate it, but that belongs to the person who first appropriates it.

free law. Hist. The civil rights enjoyed by a freeman (as opposed to a serf). ● Free law could be forfeited if the freeman was convicted of treason or an infamous crime.

freeman. (bef. 12c) 1. A person who possesses and enjoys all the civil and political rights belonging to the people under a free government. 2. A person who is not a slave. 3. Hist. A member of a municipal corporation (a city or borough) who possesses full civic rights, esp. the right to vote. 4. Hist. A freeholder. Cf.VILLEIN. 5. Hist. An allodial landowner. Cf. VASSAL. — Also written free man.

Freeman-Walter-Abele test. Patents. An outmoded two-step judicial test for determining whether a claimed invention is an unpatentable mathematical algorithm.

• The test looks first to whether an algorithm is explicit or inherent in the claim, and second to whether a patent would wholly preempt others from using the algorithm. In re Freeman, 573 F.2d 1237 (CCPA 1978); In re Walter, 618 F.2d 758 (CCPA 1980); In re Abele, 684 F.2d 902 (CCPA 1982). The Federal Circuit has said the test has “little, if any, applicability” after State St. Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 6.] free market. See open market under MARKET.

free of all average. Maritime law. Insurance that covers a total loss only. — Abbr. FAA.

free on board. (ca. 1924) A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export, and the buyer must arrange for transportation.

• The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods pass the transporter's rail. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. UCC § 2.319. — Abbr. FOB. Cf. FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP; DELIVERED EX SHIP. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 77(2).]

FOB destination. A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to pay the freight charges as far as the buyer's named destination.

FOB shipping. A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to bear the risk of placing the goods on a carrier. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 201(4).]

free ride. (19c) A benefit obtained without paying a fair price. • For example, a competitor who used aerial photographs of a plant-construction site to discover secret manufacturing techniques was judicially criticized for getting a free ride, in contrast to others who might spend time and effort legally reverse-engineering the same techniques.

free rider. One who obtains an economic benefit at another's expense without contributing to it. — Also written freerider.

free seas. See SEA.

free socage. See SOCAGE.

Freestone rider. See PUGH CLAUSE.

free trade, n. (17c) The open and unrestricted import and export of goods without barriers, such as quotas or tariffs, other than those charged only as a revenue source, as opposed to those designed to protect domestic businesses. Cf. protective tariff under TARIFF (2).

free-trade zone. A duty-free area within a country to promote commerce, esp. transshipment and processing, without entering into the country's market. — Also termed foreign trade zone; free port.

freeware. (ca. 1983) Software, esp. open-source code, that is made generally available with express or implicit permission for anyone to use, copy, modify, and distribute for any purpose, including financial gain. • The term “free” refers to usage rights rather than price — a distinction important in two respects. First, a user may purchase the initial copy of freeware. Second, software available at no cost may not include permission for the software's user to copy, modify, or give away the software. — Also termed free software. Cf. PROPRIETARY SOFTWARE; SEMI-FREE SOFTWARE; SHAREWARE.

free warren. See WARREN.

freeze, n. (1942) 1. A period when the government restricts or immobilizes certain commercial activity.

credit freeze. (1922) A period when the government restricts bank-lending.

wage-and-price freeze. (1943) A period when the government forbids the increase of wages and prices.

2. A recapitalization of a closed corporation so that the value of its existing capital is concentrated primarily in preferred stock rather than in common stock. • By freezing capital, the owner can transfer the common stock to heirs without taxation while continuing to enjoy preferred-stock income during the owner's lifetime, while the common stock grows.

freeze, vb. 1. To cause to become fixed and unable to increase <to freeze interest rates> <to freeze prices>.

2. To make immobile by government mandate or banking action <to freeze assets>. 3. To cease physical movement, esp. when ordered by a law enforcement officer <the police officer shouted at the suspect to freeze>.

freeze, n. A person or entity subjected to a freeze-out.

freezeout, n. Corporations. A transaction in which a shareholder or group of shareholders obtains the entire common-equity interest in a company while the other shareholders receive cash, debt, or preferred stock in exchange for their common-equity shares. — Also termed going-private transaction. Cf. SQUEEZE-OUT. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 182.3, 584; Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.21.]

“A ‘freeze-out’ is usually accomplished by the merger of a corporation into its parent corporation, where the parent corporation owns a large percentage of the shares of the subsidiary, and the minority shareholders are entitled to minimal distributions of cash or securities. A ‘freeze-out’ may also be used to connote the situation where so large a number of equity shares are issued to the acquiring corporation that the public shareholders own less than 10 percent of the outstanding equity securities and, therefore, have no control over the corporation or any of its decisions. In such event, a short-form merger could later be used to eliminate the minority shareholders." 69A Am. Jur. 2d Securities Regulation — State § 245, at 971 n.60 (1993).

parent-subsidiary freezeout. A transaction in which a parent company uses its majority ownership in a subsidiary to acquire the minority shareholders' interest.

pure freezeout. A transaction in which company insiders or employees acquire all the public shares of the company, often with the help of lenders. — Also termed management buyout. See management buyout under BUYOUT.

second-step freezeout. A freezeout that takes place as the final phase of a two-step takeover, after the initial phase in which a majority interest is acquired by the purchase of shares in a tender offer, on the open market, from the issuer, from a control group, or from an issuer-control-group combination.

freeze out, vb. 1. To subject one to a freeze-out. 2. To exclude a business competitor <freezing out the competition>.

freeze-out merger. See cash merger under MERGER.

freight. (15c) 1. Goods transported by water, land, or air; CARGO. 2. The compensation paid to a carrier for transporting goods. [Cases: Carriers ⇨ 189; Shipping ⇨ 144.]

"Freight, in the common acceptance of the term, means the price for the actual transportation of goods by sea from one place to another; but, in its more extensive sense, it is applied to all rewards or compensation paid for the use of ships, including the transportation of passengers." 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *219 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

dead freight. The amount paid by a shipper to a shipowner for the ship's unused cargo space. [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 144.]

freight forwarder. Maritime law. A person or company whose business is to receive and ship goods for others. • A freight forwarder may be an agent of the cargo's owner or of the carrier, or may be an independent contractor acting as a principal and assuming the carrier's responsibility for delivering the cargo. — Also termed third-party logistical service provider; forwarding agent. [Cases: Carriers ⇨ 178; Shipping ⇨ 112.]

freight rate. See RATE.

frenchman. Hist. (bef. 12c) A stranger; a foreigner. • In early English law, this term was applied to all foreigners, even those not from France.

Reorganization. See REORGANIZATION (2).

fresh, adj. (13c) Recent; not stale; characterized by newness without any material interval.

fresh complaint. (1853) A reasonably prompt lodging of a grievance; esp., a victim's prompt report of a sexual assault to someone trustworthy. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 366; Rape ⇨ 48(1)-49, 49.2.]

fresh-complaint rule. The theory that a sexual-assault victim's credibility is bolstered if the victim reports the assault soon after it occurs. • Most courts no longer recognize this theory. [Cases: Rape ⇨ 48(1)-49, 49.2.]

fresh fine. See FINE (5).

fresh force. Hist. Force, such as disseisin or deforcement, newly done. • This term refers to force used in a town, and for which a remedy (the Assize of Fresh Force) existed. See assize of fresh force under ASSIZE (8).

fresh pursuit. (17c) 1. The right of a police officer to make a warrantless search of a fleeing suspect or to cross jurisdictional lines to arrest a fleeing suspect. [Cases: Arrest ⇨ 63.3, 66(3); Automobiles ⇨ 349(12).] 2. The right of a person to use reasonable force to retake property that has just been taken. — Also termed hot pursuit.

fresh start. (1857) Bankruptcy. The favorable financial status obtained by a debtor who receives a release from personal liability on prepetition debts or who reorganizes debt obligations through the confirmation and completion of a bankruptcy plan. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2363.1.]

friendly fire. (1976) 1. A fire burning where it is intended to burn, yet capable of causing unintended damage. 2. Military or police gunfire that injures one's own side.

friendly society. (18c) In Britain, a voluntary association, supported by subscriptions or contributions, for the purpose of providing financial relief to ill members and to their widows and children upon death. • Friendly societies are regulated by statute. See benevolent association under ASSOCIATION. Cf. FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

friendly suit. (18c) A lawsuit in which all the parties have agreed beforehand to allow a court to resolve the issues.

- Friendly suits are often filed by settling parties who wish to have a judgment entered.

friendly suitor. See WHITE KNIGHT.

friendly takeover. See TAKEOVER.

friend of the court. (1816) 1. AMICUS CURIAE. 2. In some jurisdictions, an official who investigates and advises the court in domestic-relations cases involving minors.

- The friend of the court may also help enforce court orders in those cases. [Cases: Child Custody ↷417, 421, 613, 616; Infants ↷208.]

fringe benefit. See BENEFIT.

frisk, n. (18c) A pat-down search to discover a concealed weapon. — Also termed pat-down. See STOP AND FRISK.

- Cf. SEARCH (1). [Cases: Arrest ↷63.5(8); Automobiles ↷349.5(10); Searches and Seizures ↷70.]

frivolous, adj. (15c) Lacking a legal basis or legal merit; not serious; not reasonably purposeful .

frivolous appeal. See APPEAL.

frivolous claim. See CLAIM (4).

frivolous defense. See DEFENSE (1).

frivolous suit. See SUIT.

FRM. See fixed-rate mortgage under MORTGAGE.

frolic (frol-ik), n. Torts. An employee's significant deviation from the employer's business for personal reasons.

- A frolic is outside the scope of employment, and thus the employer is not vicariously liable for the employee's actions. Cf. DETOUR. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷3061(1).]

front, n. (14c) 1. The side or part of a building or lot that is open to view, that is the principal entrance, or that faces out to the open (as to a lake or ocean); the foremost part of something <the property's front was its most valuable attribute>. 2. A person or group that serves to conceal the true identity or activity of the person or group in control <the political party was a front for the terrorist group>. 3. A political association similar to a party <popular front>.

frontage (frən-tij). (17c) 1. The part of land abutting a street or highway or lying between a building's front and a street or highway <the property's value was so low because of its narrow frontage>. 2. The linear distance of a frontage <the lot's frontage was 90 feet>.

frontage assessment. See ASSESSMENT.

frontager (frən-tij-ər), n. (17c) A person owning or occupying land that abuts a highway, river, seashore, or the like.

front-end load. See loan fund under MUTUAL FUND.

front foot. (1863) A measurement used to calculate a frontage assessment. — Also termed abutting foot. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷469.]

front-foot rule. (1872) The principle that an improvement cost is to be apportioned among several properties in proportion to their frontage, without regard to the benefits conferred on each property. — Also termed front-foot plan. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷469.]

frontpay. Labor law. Court-awarded compensation for the post-judgment effects of continuing employment discrimination. Cf. BACKPAY. [Cases: Civil Rights ↷1571.]

front-running, n. Securities. A broker's or analyst's use of nonpublic information to acquire securities or enter into options or futures contracts for his or her own benefit, knowing that when the information becomes public, the price of the securities will change in a predictable manner. • This practice is illegal. Front-running can occur in many ways. For example, a broker or analyst who works for a brokerage firm may buy shares in a company that the firm is about to recommend as a strong buy or in which the firm is planning to buy a large block of shares. See INSIDER TRADING.

frottage. (ca. 1935) Sexual stimulation by rubbing the genitals against another person. • This may be accomplished without removing clothing. When a child is involved, it is a form of sexual abuse.

frozen account. See blocked account under ACCOUNT.

frozen asset. See ASSET.

frozen deposit. See DEPOSIT (2).

FRS. abbr. FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM.

FRTIB. abbr. FEDERAL RETIREMENT THRIFT INVESTMENT BOARD.

fructuarius (frək-choo-äir-ee-əs). [Latin "(one) entitled to fruits"] 1. Roman & civil law. One having the usufruct of a thing (as of land and animals); a usufructuary. See USUFRUCTUARY. 2. Hist. A lessee. Pl. fructuarii.

fructus (frək-təs). [Latin "fruits"] 1. Roman & civil law. The natural produce of land and animals; the profit or increase from land and animals. • The owner of the land or animals acquired ownership by separatio, the separation of the fruit from the parent body. A bona fide possessor or an emphyteuta also acquired ownership by separatio, which allowed a nonowner to claim title from a thief. But in Justinian's law, a bona fide possessor had to account to a successful claimant for ownership for the principal thing and any unconsumed fruits. A tenant or usufructuary acquired title only by perceptio, and cannot claim title from a thief. See PERCEPTION. Cf. FRUCTUS CIVILES. 2. USUFRUCT. Pl. fructus.

fructus civiles (fræk-təs sə-vī-leez). [Latin "civil fruits"] Roman & civil law. Income (such as rent or interest) that one receives from another for the use or enjoyment of a thing, esp. real property or loaned money. • In Roman law, fructus civiles included both minerals and the earnings of slaves.

fructus fundi (fræk-təs fən-dī). [Latin "land fruits"] The fruits or produce of land.

fructus industriales (fræk-təs in-dəs-tree-ay-leez). [Latin "industrial fruits"] See EMBLEMENTS (1).

fructus legis (fræk-təs lee-jis). [Latin "fruits of the law"] The proceeds of judgment or execution. [Cases: Execution ↷322.]

fructus naturales (fræk-təs nach-ə-ray-leez). [Latin "natural fruits"] The natural produce of land or plants and the offspring of animals. • Fructus naturales are considered part of the real property.

fructus pecudum (fræk-təs pek-yə-dəm). [Latin "fruits of the herd"] The produce or increase of flocks or herds.

fructus pendentes (fræk-təs pen-dən-teez). [Latin "hanging fruits"] Fruits not yet severed or gathered; fruits united with that which produces them.

fructus percepti (fræk-təs pər-sep-tī). [Latin "gathered fruits"] Roman & civil law. Fruits that have been gathered.

fructus rei alienae (fræk-təs ree-ī ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Latin "fruits of another's property"] The fruits of another's property; fruits taken from another's estate.

fructus separati (fræk-təs sep-ə-ray-tī). [Latin "separated fruits"] Roman & civil law. The produce of a thing after being separated from it, and so becoming in law "fruits."

fructus stantes (fræk-təs stan-teez). [Latin "standing fruits"] Fruits that have not yet been severed from the stalk or stem.

fructuum perceptio (fræk-choo-əm pər-sep-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The rightful taking of the produce of property by a person who does not own the property.

fruges (froo-jeez). [Latin "fruits" or "crops"] Roman & civil law. Edible produce or crops; esculents.

frugi aut bonae famae (froo-ji awt boh-nee fay-mee). [Latin] Hist. Frugal or of good reputation.

fruit. (14c) 1. The produce or product of something (as of land or property). 2. Civil law. Income or goods derived or produced from property without a diminution of the property's inherent value.

civil fruit. Civil law. Revenue derived from a thing by operation of law or by reason of a juridical act, such as lease or interest payments, or certain corporate distributions. La. Civ. Code art. 551. See FRUCTUS CIVILES.

natural fruit. Civil law. A product of the land or of animals. • Examples are crops and eggs. La. Civ. Code art. 2317. See FRUCTUS NATURALES.

3. Something (such as evidence) obtained during an activity or operation <the fruit of the officer's search>. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE.

fruit-and-the-tree doctrine. (1979) Tax. The rule that an individual who earns income cannot assign that income to another person to avoid taxation.

fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine. (1948) Criminal procedure. The rule that evidence derived from an illegal search, arrest, or interrogation is inadmissible because the evidence (the "fruit") was tainted by the illegality (the "poisonous tree"). • Under this doctrine, for example, a murder weapon is inadmissible if the map showing its location and used to find it was seized during an illegal search. — Also termed fruits doctrine. See EXCLUSIONARY RULE; ATTENUATION DOCTRINE; INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE; INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷394.1(3).]

fruits of a crime. The proceeds acquired through criminal acts. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷1221.]

frustration, n. (16c) 1. The prevention or hindering of the attainment of a goal, such as contractual performance.

commercial frustration. (1918) An excuse for a party's nonperformance because of some unforeseeable and uncontrollable circumstance. — Also termed economic frustration. [Cases: Contracts ↷309(1).]

self-induced frustration. (1926) A breach of contract caused by one party's action that prevents the performance. • The phrase is something of a misnomer, since self-induced frustration is not really a type of frustration at all but is instead a breach of contract.

temporary frustration. (1950) An occurrence that prevents performance and legally suspends the duty to perform for the duration of the event. • If the burden or circumstance is substantially different after the event, then the duty may be discharged.

2. Contracts. The doctrine that if a party's principal purpose is substantially frustrated by unanticipated changed circumstances, that party's duties are discharged and the contract is considered terminated. — Also termed frustration of purpose. Cf. IMPOSSIBILITY (4); IMPRACTICABILITY; MISTAKE. [Cases: Contracts ↷309.] — frustrate, vb.

frustrum terrae (frəs-trəm ter-ee). [Latin] Hist. A piece of land. • This usu. referred to a fragment of land remaining after a survey.

Frye test. The defunct federal common-law rule of evidence on the admissibility of scientific evidence.

• It required that the tests or procedures must have gained general acceptance in their particular field. Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923). In Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993), the Supreme Court held that scientific evidence must meet the requirements of the Federal Rules of Evidence, not the Frye test, to be

fuer (fyoo-ər). [Law French “to flee”] Flight from the law. — Also termed fugere.

fuer in fait (fyoo-ər in fay). [Law French “flight in fact”] Actual flight from the law. — Also termed fugere in facta.

fuer in ley (fyoo-ər in lay). [Law French “flight in law”] Legal flight from the law. • If the accused failed to appear, the law treated that failure as flight. — Also termed fugere in lege.

fuero (foo-wer-oh). Spanish law. 1. A forum; court. 2. The territory in which a court has the power to act. 3. A privilege enjoyed by some but not others. 4. A custom having the force of law. 5. Hist. A collection of local, usu. customary, laws.

Fuero Juzgo (hooz-goh). Hist. A 7th-century Visigothic code that was revised and incorporated into the laws of 13th-century Spain. • The code contains the earliest known laws of community property. In the 18th century, much of the Fuero Juzgo was incorporated into the Code Napoleon. In the 19th century, vestiges of the Fuero Juzgo were incorporated into the Spanish Civil Code.

Fuero Real (ray-ahl). Hist. A collection of the ancient customs of Castile, collected by order of Alfonso X in 1255 to produce a uniform legal code, much of which was incorporated into local fueros. • Louisiana’s system of acquets and gains was adapted from the Fuero Real.

fugam fecit (fyoo-gəm fee-sit). [Law Latin] Hist. He fled; he has made flight. • When a jury made this finding in a felony or treason trial, the defendant’s property was subject to forfeiture.

fugere. See FUER.

fugere in facta. See fuer in fait under FUER.

fugere in lege. See fuer in ley under FUER.

fugitation (fyoo-jə-tay-shən). (18c) Hist. A sentence or declaration of fugitive status that was pronounced against an accused person for failing to answer a citation and appear. • The effect was that the person forfeited his or her goods and chattels. — fugitate, vb.

fugitive. (14c) 1. A person who flees or escapes; a refugee. 2. A criminal suspect or a witness in a criminal case who flees, evades, or escapes arrest, prosecution, imprisonment, service of process, or the giving of testimony, esp. by fleeing the jurisdiction or by hiding. See 18 USCA § 1073. — Also termed (in sense 2) fugitive from justice.

fugitive-disentitlement doctrine. An equitable rule that allows a trial or appellate court to limit a fugitive’s access to civil and criminal courts in the United States. [Cases: Action ↷ 13; Criminal Law ↷ 1026.10(7).]

fugitive-dismissal rule. The principle that an appellate court may dismiss a criminal defendant’s appeal if the defendant is a fugitive. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 1131(5).]

Fugitive Felon Act. A federal statute that makes it a felony to flee across state lines to avoid state-felony prosecution or confinement, or to avoid giving testimony in a state-felony case. 18 USCA § 1073. [Cases: Escape ↷ 1.]

fugitive from justice. See FUGITIVE.

fugitive’s goods. Hist. The goods that a person forfeited as a result of fleeing.

fugitive-slave laws. Hist. Federal statutes passed in 1793 and 1850 providing for the surrender and return of slaves who had escaped and fled to a free territory or a free state. [Cases: Slaves ↷ 9.] fugitive warrant. See WARRANT (1).

fugitivus (fyoo-jə-tī-vəs), n. [Latin] Roman law. A runaway slave; a fugitive.

fugue (fyooog). (16c) An abnormal state of consciousness in which one appears to function normally but on recovery has no memory of what one did while in that condition.

full faith and credit. The recognition, acceptance, and enforcement of the laws, orders, and judgments of another jurisdiction; specif., the recognition by one state of another state's legal decisions. [Cases: Judgment ⇨815, 828.4; States ⇨5(2).]

Full Faith and Credit Act. A federal statute requiring federal courts to give a state court's judgment the same preclusive effect as the judgment would have under state law. 28 USCA § 1738. See Migra v. Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 465 U.S. 75, 81, 104 S.Ct. 892, 896 (1984). [Cases: Judgment ⇨828.4.]

full-faith-and-credit bond. See general-obligation bond under BOND (3).

Full Faith and Credit Clause. (1896) U.S. Const. art. IV, § 1, which requires states to give effect to the acts, public records, and judicial decisions of other states. [Cases: Judgment ⇨815, 828.4; States ⇨5(2).]

Full Faith and Credit for Child-Support Orders Act. A 1994 federal statute designed to facilitate interstate child-support collection. • Under the Act, the state first issuing a child-support order maintains continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify the order as long as the child or one or both of the litigants continue to reside there, unless all the contestants agree in writing to change jurisdiction. An order from one state may be registered for enforcement in another state. 28 USCA § 1738B. [Cases: Child Support ⇨501(1), 506(2), 507, 508(1).]

full value. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

fully funded, adj. 1. Having sufficient financial resources to meet current payments, even upon bankruptcy <the company's pension plan was fully funded>. 2. Having completely satisfied a funding requirement; paid <the construction loan was fully funded>. — Also termed funded.

function, n. (16c) 1. Activity that is appropriate to a particular business or profession . 2. Office; duty; the occupation of an office <presidential function>. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷110.]

functional analog. See ANALOG.

functional depreciation. See DEPRECIATION.

functional discount. See DISCOUNT.

functional disease. See DISEASE.

functional feature. Trademarks. A design element that is either physically necessary to construct an article or commercially necessary to manufacture and sell it; a product's attribute that is essential to its use, necessary for its proper and successful operation, and utilitarian rather than ornamental in every detail. • A functional feature is not eligible for trademark protection. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1064, 1065(3).]

functionality. (19c) Trademarks. The quality of having a shape, configuration, design, or color that is so superior to available alternatives that giving the first user exclusive trademark rights would hinder competition. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1064, 1065(3).]

aesthetic functionality. A doctrine that denies protection to the design of a product or its container when the design is necessary to enable the product to function as intended.

functional limitation. Patents. In a patent application, the definition of an invention by what it does rather than what it is. • A functional limitation is not inherently invalid, but it is examined closely because it tends to be too broad, claiming every possible way of doing the same thing. MPEP 2173.05(g). [Cases: Patents ↷101(3).]

functional obsolescence. See OBSOLESCENCE.

functional rejection. See REJECTION.

functionary. A public officer or employee.

functus officio (fəŋk-təs ə-fish-ee-oh). [Latin "having performed his or her office"] (19c) (Of an officer or official body) without further authority or legal competence because the duties and functions of the original commission have been fully accomplished. • The term is sometimes abbreviated to functus <the court was functus>. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷44.]

fund, n. (17c) 1. A sum of money or other liquid assets established for a specific purpose .

blended fund. A fund created by income from more than one source, usu. from the sale of a testator's real and personal property.

changing fund. A fund, esp. a trust fund, that changes its form periodically as it is invested and reinvested.

general fund. (17c) 1. A government's primary operating fund; a state's assets furnishing the means for the support of government and for defraying the legislature's discretionary appropriations. • A general fund is distinguished from assets of a special character, such as trust, escrow, and special-purpose funds. [Cases: States ↷126.] 2. A nonprofit entity's assets that are not earmarked for a specific purpose.

general revenue fund. (1855) The fund out of which a municipality pays its ordinary and incidental expenses. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷886.]

guaranty fund. A private deposit-insurance fund, raised primarily by assessments on banks, and used to pay the depositors of an insolvent bank. • Guaranty funds preceded the FDIC's federal-deposit insurance, which began in 1933, though many funds continued until the savings-and-loan crisis in the 1980s. Massachusetts has a guaranty fund for uninsured deposits (deposits above $100,000) that are not covered by federal-deposit insurance. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↷15, 504–506.]

imprest fund (im-prest). A fund used by a business for small, routine expenses.

joint-welfare fund. A fund that is established in collective bargaining to provide health and welfare benefits to union employees. • The fund is jointly managed by labor and management representatives. — Also termed Taft-Hartley fund.

paid-in fund. A reserve cash fund established by a mutual insurance company to pay unforeseen losses. • The fund is in lieu of a capital stock account.

pooled-income fund. See POOLED-INCOME FUND.

public fund. (usu. pl.) 1. The revenue or money of a governmental body. • The term includes not only coins and paper but also bank deposits and instruments representing investments of public money. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷880.] 2. The securities of a state or national government. [Cases: States ↷122.]

revolving fund. (1928) A fund whose moneys are continually expended and then replenished, such as a petty-cash fund.

sinking fund. (18c) A fund consisting of regular deposits that are accumulated with interest to pay off a long-term corporate or public debt. — Abbr. SF. [Cases: Corporations ↻486; Municipal Corporations ↻951.]

3. A pool of investments owned in common and managed for a fee; MUTUAL FUND .

fund, vb. (18c) 1. To furnish money to (an individual, entity, or venture), esp. to finance a particular project. 2. To use resources in a manner that produces interest. 3. To convert (a debt, esp. an open account) into a long-term debt that bears interest at a fixed rate.

fundamental-fairness doctrine. (1969) The rule that applies the principles of due process to a judicial proceeding. • The term is commonly considered synonymous with due process.

fundamental law. (17c) The organic law that establishes the governing principles of a nation or state; esp., CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. — Also termed organic law; ground-law. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

fundamental-miscarriage-of-justice exception. The doctrine allowing a federal court in a habeas corpus proceeding to address a claim of constitutional error that, although ordinarily unreviewable, is subject to review because of a state-court procedural default that rendered the proceedings basically unfair. • For the exception to apply, among other things, the petitioner must show by a preponderance of the evidence that constitutional error resulted in the conviction of one who is actually innocent. If the defaulted claim applies only to sentencing, the exception permits review of the claim if the petitioner shows by clear and convincing evidence that, but for the constitutional error, no reasonable judge or jury would have imposed the sentence that the petitioner received. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻401.] fundamental right. (17c) 1. A right derived from natural or fundamental law. 2. Constitutional law. A significant component of liberty, encroachments of which are rigorously tested by courts to ascertain the soundness of purported governmental justifications. • A fundamental right triggers strict scrutiny to determine whether the law violates the Due Process Clause or the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. As enunciated by the Supreme Court, fundamental rights include voting, interstate travel, and various aspects of privacy (such as marriage and contraception rights). — Also termed fundamental interest. See STRICT SCRUTINY. Cf. SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻3062, 3901.]

furigeldum (fyər-ə-jel-dəm). [Law Latin fur “theft” + geldum “payment”] Hist. A fine paid for theft.

furlong (fər-lawng). (14c) One-eighth of a mile, or forty rods. — Also termed ferlingus; ferlingum. [Cases: Weights and Measures ⇨ 3.] furlough (fər-loh). (17c) 1. A leave of absence from military or other employment duty. 2. A brief release from prison. See study release under RELEASE. — furlough, vb. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 174, 249.]

fur manifestus (fər man-ə-fes-təs). [Latin “manifest thief”] Roman law. A thief caught in the act of stealing. • A fur manifestus could be put to death on the spot in either of two circumstances: (1) if the theft occurred at night, or (2) if the thief used a lethal weapon against the person who discovered the crime. Apart from this, the manifest thief was liable to pay the owner four times the value of the stolen property. — Also termed manifest thief.

furor brevis. See HEAT OF PASSION.

furta (fər-tə). Hist. A right or privilege from the monarch to try, condemn, and execute criminals within a jurisdiction.

further advance. 1. A second or later loan to a mortgagor by a mortgagee, either on the same security as the original loan or on an additional security. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 16, 116.] 2. Equity practice. The agreed conversion of arrears of interest on a mortgage security into principal.

further assurance. See ASSURANCE.

further-exploration covenant. Oil & gas. In an oil-and-gas lease, an implied promise that once production has been obtained from the leased property, the lessee will continue to explore other parts of the property and other formations under it. • Some jurisdictions hold that the covenant for further exploration does not exist independently of the covenant for reasonable development. See also REASONABLE-DEVELOPMENT COVENANT; REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 78.1(4), 78.1(7).]

furtum (fər-təm), n. [Latin “theft”] Roman law. 1. The offense of stealing movable property. • Under Roman law, furtum included not only the taking of another’s property, but any handling of the property done with the intent of profiting by it. Furtum was not only a private wrong (delictum) prosecuted by the person suffering the loss. Cf. PECULATUS. 2. The thing stolen.

furtum conceptum (fər-təm kən-sep-təm). [Latin] Roman law. A theft in which someone is discovered in possession of stolen property after a search with witnesses. • The possessor was liable to pay the owner three times the value of the stolen property. The possessor could bring an action against the thief and recover triple damages.

furtum grave (fər-təm gray-vee or grah-vay). Hist. Scots law. An aggravated degree of theft that, in ancient times, was punishable by death.

furtum manifestum (fər-təm man-ə-fes-təm). [Latin “open theft”] Roman law. A theft in which the thief is caught in the act. • A theft was “manifest” if the thief was caught on the day of the theft with the stolen property before reaching the place where he intended to take it. Fourfold damages were available by means of actio furti. (See actio furti under ACTIO.) A theft other than this type was known as furtum nec manifestum.

furtum oblatum (fər-təm ə-blay-təm). [Latin “offered theft”] Roman law. 1. A theft in which the thief offers stolen property to a person who is then found with the goods. • The person found in possession of the stolen goods could bring an action against the true thief. 2. The planting of stolen goods.

furtum possessionis (fər-təm pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “theft of possession”] Roman law. The owner’s dishonest removal of a thing from the control of a gabel (gə-bel). Hist. 1. A tax or duty on movables. 2. GAVEL (2). — Also spelled gabelle. See LAND-GAVEL.

gabelle (gə-bel). Hist. 1. A tax or duty on merchandise. 2. A peasant villager, esp. one who pays rent or tribute. See GAVEL (1). — Also spelled gabella; gavella.

gage (gayj), n. (14c) A pledge, pawn, or other thing deposited as security for performance. • An archaic use of this word corresponded to the way wage was formerly used in legal contexts: a gager del ley, for example, was an earlier form of wager of law, while gager de deliverance had the same meaning as wager of deliverance. Cf. WAGE (2).

"A single root has sent out many branches which overshadow large fields of law. Gage, engagement, wage, wages, wager, wed, wedding, the Scottish wadset, all spring from one root. In particular we must notice that the word 'gage,' in Latin vadium, is applied indiscriminately to movables and immovables, to transactions in which a gage is given and to those in which a gage is taken. When a lord has seized his tenant's goods in distress they are in his hands a gage for the payment of the rent that is in arrear, and the sheriff is always taking gages from those who have no mind to give them. The notion expressed by the word seems to be that expressed by our 'security' . . ." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 117-18 (2d ed. 1899).

gage, vb. (14c) To pawn or pledge; to give as security for. • Gage is an older form of wage, and often appeared as a phrase, gager deliverance.

"Though the word Gage be retained, as it is a Substantive, yet as it is a verb, use hath turned the Gage into Wage so as it is oftener written Wage; as to Wage Deliverance, to give security, that a thing shall be delivered: For, if he that distrained, being sued, have not delivered the Cattle that were distrained, then he shall not onely avow the Distress, but Gager Deliverance, put in surety, that he will deliver them." Thomas Blount, Nomo Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

gager (gay-jər), n. The giving of security; the transaction in which one gives a gage. See GAGE.

gager del ley. See WAGER OF LAW.

gag order. (1952) 1. A judge's order directing parties, attorneys, witnesses, or journalists to refrain from publicly discussing the facts of a case. • When directed to the press, such an order is generally unconstitutional under the First Amendment. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 633.33; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1951; Trial ⇨ 18, 20.] 2. A judge's order that an unruly defendant be bound and gagged during trial to prevent further interruptions. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 637.]

gain, n. (14c) 1. An increase in amount, degree, or value.

pecuniary gain. (18c) 1. A gain of money or of something having monetary value. 2. Criminal law. Any monetary or economic gain that serves as an impetus for the commission of an offense. • In most states, an offense and its punishment are aggravated if the offense was committed for pecuniary gain. Murder, for example, is often aggravated to capital murder if the murderer is paid to commit the crime. See SOLICITATION (2).

2. Excess of receipts over expenditures or of sale price over cost. See PROFIT (1). 3. Tax. The excess of the amount realized from a sale or other disposition of property over the property's adjusted value. game, n. (13c) 1. Wild animals and birds considered as objects of pursuit, for food or sport; esp., animals for which one must have a license to hunt. [Cases: Game ↷ 2.] 2. A contest, for amusement or for a prize, whose outcome depends on the skill, strength, or luck of the players. [Cases: Gaming ↷ 6.]

game of chance. A game whose outcome is determined by luck rather than skill. See GAMBLING DEVICE. [Cases: Gaming ↷ 6; Lotteries ↷ 3.]

"Games of chance do not cease to be such merely because they call for the exercise of skill by the players, nor do games of skill cease to be so because at times . . . their result is determined by some unforeseen accident, usually called 'luck.' According to some cases, the test of the character of the game is not whether it contains an element of chance or an element of skill, but which of these is the dominating element that determines the result of the game. . . . And it has been said that 'it is the character of the game, and not the skill or want of skill of the player,' which determines whether a game is one of chance or skill." 38 Am. Jur. 2d Gambling § 4, at 109-10 (1968).

game of skill. A game in which the outcome is determined by a player's superior knowledge or ability, not chance. [Cases: Gaming ↷ 6.]

percentage game. A game of chance from which the house collects an amount calculated as a percentage of the wagers made or the sums won. • Percentage games are illegal in many states. [Cases: Gaming ↷ 68.]

game, vb. To gamble; to play for a stake.

game law. (18c) A federal or state law that regulates the hunting of game, esp. one that forbids the capturing or killing of specified game either entirely or seasonally, describes the means for killing or capturing game in season, or restricts the number and type of game animals that may be killed or captured in season. 16 USCA §§ 661-667; 18 USCA §§ 41-47. [Cases: Game ↷ 4.]

gamete intrafallopian transfer. (ca. 1984) A procedure in which mature eggs are implanted in a woman's fallopian tubes and fertilized with semen. — Abbr. GIFT. — Also termed gamete intrafallopian-tube transfer. Cf. ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER; ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; IN VITRO FERTILIZATION.

ganancial (gə-nan-shəl), adj. (1843) Of, relating to, or consisting of community property . See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

"The Spanish [more correctly, the Castilian] form of community property, called the 'ganancial' system, is found today in nine states of the United States, the Spanish-American republics of Central and South America, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Philippine Republic." Robert L. Menell & Thomas M. Boykoff, Community Property in a Nutshell 10 (2d ed. 1988).

G & A. abbr. See general administrative expense under EXPENSE.

gang. (15c) A group of persons who go about together or act in concert, esp. for antisocial or criminal purposes. • Many gangs have common identifying signs and symbols, such as hand signals and distinctive colors. — Also termed street gang.

gangland. (ca. 1912) The world of criminal gangs and organized crime.

gangster. A member of a criminal gang or an organized-crime syndicate.

Ganser's syndrome (gahn-zər or gan-sər). (1968) An abnormality characterized by the giving of irrelevant and nonsensical answers to questions. • Prisoners have been known to feign this syndrome in an attempt to obtain leniency.

gantlet (gawnt-lit). [fr. Swedish gata "lane" + lopp "course"] (15c) 1. Hist. A former military punishment in which the offender was stripped to the waist and forced to run between two rows of soldiers who gave him lashes as he passed. 2. A series of severe troubles or difficulties; an ordeal. — Also spelled gauntlet; (archaically) gantlope.

GAO. abbr. GENERAL ACCOUNTABILITY OFFICE.

gaol. See JAIL.

gaol delivery. See JAIL DELIVERY.

gaoler. See JAILER.

gaol liberties. See JAIL LIBERTIES.

gap. See GAP PERIOD.

gap-filler. (15c) A rule that supplies a contractual term that the parties failed to include in the contract. • For example, if the contract does not contain a sales price, UCC § 2-305(1) establishes the price as being a reasonable one at the time of delivery. Cf. DEFAULT RULE. [Cases: Sales ↷22(4), 23(4).]

"Contracts often have gaps in them, intentional or inadvertent. Gaps arise, too, out of the 'battle of the forms' under sections 2-204 and 2-207. Some gaps are more or less complete, others only partial. Article 2 of the Code includes numerous gap filler provisions which taken together constitute a kind of standardized statutory contract." 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 3-4 (4th ed. 1995).

gap period. (1978) Bankruptcy. The duration of time between the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition and the entry of the order for relief. — Often shortened to gap. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷2281.]

gap theory. Insurance. The principle that a tortfeasor will be considered underinsured if his or her liability-insurance coverage — although legally adequate — is less than the injured party's underinsured-motorist coverage. • This principle allows an injured party to invoke underinsured-motorist coverage. Cf. EXCESS THEORY. [Cases: Insurance ↷2787.] garageman's lien. See mechanic's lien under LIEN.

garandia (gə-ran-dee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. A warranty. — Also spelled garantia (gə-ran-shee-ə).

garauntor (gar-ən-tər). [Law French] Hist. A warrantor of land. • A garauntor was obligated to defend the title and seisin of the alienee. If the alienee was evicted, the garauntor had to provide the alienee with other land of equal value.

Garcia hearing (gahr-see-ə). (1981) Criminal procedure. A hearing held to ensure that a defendant who is one of two or more defendants represented by the same attorney understands (1) the risk of a conflict of interest inherent in this type of representation, and (2) that he or she is entitled to the services of an attorney who does not represent anyone else in the defendant's case.

United States v. Garcia, 517 F.2d 272 (5th Cir. 1975). See CONFLICT OF INTEREST (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷1790.]

gard (gahrđ). [Law French] Hist. 1. Wardship or custody (of a person). 2. A precinct (or ward) of a city. — Also spelled garde; gardia.

garde (gahrđ). [French] 1. Civil law. A relationship that gives rise to a person's liability when an injury is caused by a thing, whether animate or inanimate, that is considered by law to be that person's responsibility or to be in that person's custody. 2. See GARD.

gardein (gahr-deen). [Law French] Hist. A guardian or keeper. — Also spelled gardian; gardien; gardeyn.

gardia (gahr-dee-ə). GARD.

gardianus (gahr-dee-ay-nəs). [Law Latin] Hist. A guardian, defender, or protector; a warden. — Also spelled guardianus.

gardianus ecclesiae (gahr-dee-ay-nəs e-klee-z[h]ee-ee). Eccles. law. A churchwarden.

garene (gə-reen). [Law French] See WARREN.

Garmon doctrine. See Garmon preemption under PREEMPTION.

Garmon preemption. See PREEMPTION.

Garner doctrine. (1970) The rule that allows shareholder plaintiffs in a corporate derivative action to discover confidential communications between a corporate officer and the corporation's attorney. • The Garner doctrine does not apply to attorney work product, and the movant must show good cause. Garner v. Wolfenbarger, 430 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1970). See DERIVATIVE ACTION (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1604(1); Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↷113.]

garnish, n. (16c) Hist. Money exacted from a new prisoner by other prisoners or as a jailer's fee. • This practice was banned in England in 1815.

garnish, vb. [Old French garnir "to warn" "to prepare"] (16c) 1. Hist. To notify or warn (a person) of certain debts that must be paid before the person is entitled to receive property as an heir. 2. To subject (property) to garnishment; to attach (property held by a third party) in order to satisfy a debt. 3. To notify (a person, bank, etc.) that a garnishment proceeding has been undertaken and that the one receiving notice may be liable as stakeholder or custodian of the defendant's property. — Also termed garnishee; (in senses 2 & 3) factorize. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷601; Garnishment ↷1.] — garnishable, adj.

garnishee (gahr-ni-shee), n. (17c) A person or institution (such as a bank) that is indebted to or is bailee for another whose property has been subjected to garnishment. — Also termed garnishee-defendant (as opposed to the "principal defendant," i.e., the primary debtor). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷601; Garnishment ↷13-24.]

garnisher. (16c) A creditor who initiates a garnishment action to reach the debtor's property that is thought to be held or owed by a third party (the garnishee). — Also spelled garnishor. [Cases: Garnishment ↪ 11.]

garnishment, n. (16c) 1. A judicial proceeding in which a creditor (or potential creditor) asks the court to order a third party who is indebted to or is bailee for the debtor to turn over to the creditor any of the debtor's property (such as wages or bank accounts) held by that third party. • A plaintiff initiates a garnishment action as a means of either prejudgment seizure or postjudgment collection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↪ 601; Garnishment ↪ 64, 118.]

"Garnishment is a[n] . . . inquisitorial proceeding, affording a harsh and extraordinary remedy. It is an anomaly, a statutory invention sui generis, with no affinity to any action known to the common law. . . . It is a method of seizure; but it is not a 'levy' in the usual acceptance of that term. It is a proceeding by which a diligent creditor may legally obtain preference over other creditors; and it is in the nature of a creditor's bill, or a sequestration of the effects of a debtor in the hands of his debtor." 38 C.J.S. Garnishment § 3, at 248-50 (2003).

wrongful garnishment. (1896) 1. An improper or tortious garnishment. [Cases: Garnishment ↪ 122, 248.] 2. A cause of action against a garnisher for improperly or tortiously filing a garnishment proceeding. [Cases: Garnishment ↪ 248-251.]

2. The judicial order by which such a turnover is effected. Cf. ATTACHMENT (1); SEQUESTRATION (1).

garnishment lien. See LIEN.

garnishor. See GARNISHER.

Garrity statement (gar-ə-tee). (1967) A public employee's oral or written report (as of an incident) obtained under a threat of termination of employment. • A public employee usu. makes a Garrity statement in the course of an internal investigation (as by a police department). Because a Garrity statement is coerced, the statement and any evidence obtained as a result of it cannot be used in a later criminal prosecution against the public employee. The statement and evidence may be used only to evaluate the employee's performance. Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616 (1967).

gas-balancing agreement. Oil & gas. A contract among owners of the production of a gas well to balance production if one owner sells more of the gas stream than the other owners do.

"Gas balancing agreements address the problem of imbalances in production from a gas well or field. Co-owners frequently sell their share of production to different purchasers. . . . Even when co-owners sell to the same purchaser, their contracts are likely to be signed at different times and to have different price and take provisions. Thus, imbalances are inevitable." John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 385 (3d ed. 1995).

gas chamber. (ca. 1945) A small, sealed room in which a capital punishment is carried out by strapping the prisoner into a chair and releasing poisonous fumes.

gas contract. Oil & gas. An agreement for the sale of natural gas. [Cases: Gas ↪ 14.1(3).]

gas sold. Oil & gas. Natural gas that is actually sold but not necessarily all that a well produces. • The term is used in natural-gas leases.

gastonette. (1988) A dilatory "dance" in which each of the two responsible parties waits until the other party acts — so that the delay seems interminable; esp., a standoff occurring when two courts simultaneously hear related claims arising from the same bases and delay acting while each court waits for the other to act first. • The term was coined by Judge Jon O. Newman in In re McLean Industries, Inc., 857 F.2d 88, 90 (2d Cir. 1988), on the model of "After you, my dear Alphonse." "No, after you, Gaston."

gas used. Oil & gas. Natural gas that is consumed while a well is in operation but that is not necessarily sold.

GATT (gat). abbr. GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE. See TRIPS.

gauger (gay-jər). (15c) A surveying officer who examines containers of liquids to give them a mark of allowance, as containing the lawful measure.

gauntlet. See GANTLET.

gavel (gav-əl). (bef. 12c) 1. Hist. A tribute, toll, or custom paid to a superior. 2. Hist. An annual payment of rent or revenue, esp. payment in kind, such as gavel-corn, gavel-malt, or oat-gavel. — Sometimes spelled gabel. 3. A mallet used by a presiding officer, often a judge, to bring a meeting or court to order.

gavelbred (gav-əl-bred). Hist. Rent payable in bread, corn, or some other provision; rent payable in kind.

gavelet (gav-əl-it). (14c) Hist. A writ used in Kent and London to recover rent from land held in gavelkind. See CESSAVIT.

gavelgeld (gav-əl-geld). Hist. 1. Property that yields a profit or a toll. 2. The tribute or toll itself.

gavelherte (gav-əl-hərt). Hist. A service of plowing performed by a customary tenant.

gaveling man (gav-əl-ing man or mən). Hist. See GAVELMAN.

gavelkind (gav-əl-kind). (14c) Hist. 1. A species of socage tenure arising in land that has descended equally to the decedent's sons. • It was widespread before 1066, when it was mainly superseded by primogeniture. This property-division technique was then largely limited to Kent. The person holding land in this manner enjoyed several advantages not available under the common law: the land could be disposed of by will, did not escheat for felony other than treason or for want of heirs, and was alienable by an heir at age 15. Gavelkind was abolished in 1925. Although the etymology of this term was much debated in the 19th century, the explanation given in the first quotation below appears to be the true one. 2. Land that yields gavel service.

"[Gafol, or gavel, was a word of frequent use before the Norman Conquest, and signified not only a tribute, tax, or custom, but also rent in general; and . . . under this term were comprehended all socage services whatsoever which lay in render or feaseance, the word being often compounded with and applied to the particulars wherein the payment or performance of the service consisted; as corn-gavel, or gavel-corn, was a corn-rent, and gavel-earth was a service of 'earing' or ploughing. . . . The tenant from whom such services were due was called a gavel-man; and 'gavel-kind' being taken as a compound of this word 'gavel' and 'gekynde,' which is nature, kind, quality (usually appearing under the form 'gafolcund' in the most ancient records), the proper signification of the term will be land of the kind or nature which yielded rent, or 'censual land,' which may be compared to rent-service land as distinguished from knight-service land, which being held by free military service yielded no 'cens' or rent in money, provision, or works: so that the lands held by the old English tenure are known in Kent as gavelkind which in other parts of the country are distinguished by the name of socage." Charles I. Elton & Herbert J.H. Mackay, Robinson on Gavelkind 5-6 (5th ed. 1897).

"The term 'gavelkind' has by the modern usage acquired [a] signification more confined as to the properties contained under it, yet more extensive in point of place: since at this day it is generally used to denote the partibility of the land, exclusive of all other customary qualities; nor is the word 'gavelkind' in common parlance confined to Kentish lands, but is equally and indifferently applied to all partible lands wherever they lie." Id. at 9.

"Archbishop Hubert Walter, who presided in the king's court . . . obtained from King John a charter empowering him and his successors to convert into military fees the tenements that were holden of their church in gavelkind. The archbishop's main object may have been to get money in the form of rents and scutages, instead of provender and boonworks, 'gavel-corn' and 'gavel-swine,' 'gavel-erth' and 'gavel-rip'. . . ." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 273 (2d ed. 1899).

gavelman (gav-əl-mən). Hist. A tenant who is liable for money rent in addition to a customary service to the lord. • A gavelman was formerly a villein who had been released from villenage in consideration of money rent. — Also termed gaveling man.

gavelmed (gav-əl-meed). Hist. A tenant's customary service of mowing the lord's meadowland or grass for hay. — Also spelled gavelmead.

gavelrep (gav-əl-reep). Hist. A tenant's duty to reap the lord's fields at the lord's command; BEDRIP. — Also spelled gavelrip.

gavel through. Parliamentary law. To put (a question) to a vote before any member can obtain the floor. • The practice of "gaveling through" a motion is improper under parliamentary law.

"It should be noted that, under legitimate parliamentary procedure, there is no such thing as 'gaveling through' a measure. The right of members to debate or introduce secondary motions cannot be cut off by the chair's attempting to put a question to vote so quickly that no member can get the floor — either when the chair first states the question or when he believes debate is ended. Debate is not closed by the presiding officer's rising to put the question." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 43, at 374 (10th ed. 2000).

gavelwerk (gav-əl-wærk). Hist. Customary service, either by the tenant's own hands or with the aid of the tenant's carts or carriages.

gay marriage. See same-sex marriage under MARRIAGE (1).

Gazette (gə-zet). (17c) An official newspaper of the British government in which acts of State, Crown appointments, notices of bankruptcy, and other legal matters are reported. • Although the London Gazette is the most famous, there are also publications called the Edinburgh Gazette and the Belfast Gazette with similar purposes.

gazumping (gə-zəmp-ɪŋ). (20c) BrE Slang. The improper sale of a house, usu. by raising the price after accepting an offer. • Gazumping can take different forms, the usual one being when a seller raises the price after accepting the buyer's offer. But it may also occur when a competing buyer makes a higher bid than the one already accepted, thus encouraging the seller to back out of the earlier contract.

general maritime law. The body of U.S. legal precedents and doctrines developed through caselaw in maritime and admiralty litigation. • General maritime law is a branch of federal common law. It is distinguished from statutory law. Cf. MARITIME LAW; LAW OF THE SEA. [Cases: Admiralty ↷1.5.]

"The general maritime law is characterized by the expansive and dominant role played by federal courts in fashioning and applying its precepts to new situations. Large areas of maritime tort law have not been touched by legislation; these are left to the federal courts to define and fill. In areas preempted by legislation, federal courts may not establish principles in derogation of the congressional mandate. However, in the framework of admiralty jurisdiction, federal courts may still play an active role in interpreting statutes, filling gaps, and coordinating legislation with the general maritime law." Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law 122 (1987).

general trust. See passive trust under TRUST.

general usage. See USAGE.

general verdict. See VERDICT.

general-verdict rule. (1930) The principle that when a jury returns a general verdict on multiple causes of action (or theories of recovery), it is presumed on appeal that the jury found in the prevailing party's favor on each cause of action. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷930(4).]

general verdict subject to a special case. See VERDICT.

general verdict with interrogatories. See VERDICT.

general warrant. See WARRANT (1).

general warranty. See WARRANTY (1).

general warranty deed. See warranty deed under DEED.

general welfare. See WELFARE (1).

General Welfare Clause. (1898) U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1, which empowers Congress to levy taxes and pay debts in order to provide for the country's general welfare. • The Supreme Court has broadly interpreted this clause to allow Congress to create, for example, the social-security system. — Also termed Welfare Clause. [Cases: United States ↷22.]

general words. (18c) Semantically broad expression; esp., language used in deeds to convey not only the specific property described in the conveyance but also all easements, privileges, and appurtenances that may belong to the property. [Cases: Deeds ↷117.]

generation. (14c) 1. A single degree or stage in the succession of persons in natural descent. 2. The average time span between the birth of parents and the birth of their children.

generation-skipping tax. See TAX.

generation-skipping transfer. (1979) Wills & trusts. A conveyance of assets to a "skip person," that is, a person more than one generation removed from the transferor. • For example, a conveyance either directly or in trust from a grandparent to a grandchild is a generation-skipping transfer subject to a generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. See generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON.

generation-skipping transfer tax. See TAX.

generation-skipping trust. See TRUST.

generic, adj. (1846) Trademarks. 1. Common or descriptive, and thus not eligible for trademark protection; nonproprietary . [Cases: Trademarks ↷1034.] 2. Not having a trademark or brand name <generic drugs>.

genericness. See GENERICNESS.

generic burglary. See BURGLARY.

generic claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

generic drug. See DRUG.

generic-drug law. (1977) A statute that allows pharmacists to substitute a generic drug for a brand-name drug under specified conditions. • Most states have enacted generic-drug laws to ensure that less-expensive generic drugs are available to consumers.

genericide (jə-ner-ə-sid). Trademarks. The loss or cancellation of a trademark that no longer distinguishes the owner's product from others' products. • Genericide occurs when a trademark becomes such a household name that the consuming public begins to think of the mark not as a brand name but as a synonym for the product itself. Examples of trademarks that have been "killed" by genericide include aspirin and escalator. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1166.]

generic name. (1872) Trademarks. A term that describes something generally without designating the thing's source or creator, such as the word car or sink. • A generic name cannot be protected as a trademark for the thing it denotes; e.g., Apple can be a trademark for computers but not for apples. — Also termed generic term; generic mark; common descriptive name. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1034.]

genericness, n. (20c) The state or condition of being generic <an affirmative defense of genericness in a trademark suit>. — Also termed genericness; genericism.

generic swap. See plain-vanilla swap under INTEREST-RATE SWAP.

generic term. See GENERIC NAME.

genetic child. See natural child (1) under CHILD.

genetic engineering. (ca. 1951) A method of creating new life forms and organic matter by gene-splicing and other techniques. • The Supreme Court has ruled that those creations are patentable. Diamond v. Chakrabarty, 447 U.S. 303, 100 S.Ct. 2204 (1980).

genetic father. See biological father under FATHER.

genetic fingerprinting. See DNA IDENTIFICATION.

genetic-marker test. A medical method of testing tissue samples used in paternity and illegitimacy cases to determine whether a particular man could be the father of a child. • This test represents a medical advance over blood-grouping tests. It analyzes DNA and is much more precise in assessing the probability of paternity. — Abbr. GMT. See PATERNITY TEST. Cf. BLOOD-GROUPING TEST; HUMAN-LEUKOCYTE ANTIGEN TEST. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨45, 58.]

genetic mother. See biological mother under MOTHER.

genetic parent. See biological parent under PARENT.

Geneva Conventions of 1949 (jə-nee-və). Four international agreements dealing with the protection of wounded members of the armed forces, the treatment of prisoners of war, and the protection of civilians during international armed conflicts. • Common Article 3 of the Conventions proclaims certain minimum standards of treatment that are applicable to noninternational armed conflicts. The humanitarian-law protection established in these four agreements was amplified in 1977 by the two Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions. In common parlance, people refer to the Geneva Convention as if there were just one agreement. Cf. LAWS OF WAR. [Cases: Treaties ⇨8.]

Geneva Phonograms Convention. A 1971 treaty requiring signatories to protect phonorecord producers against piracy and the importation of pirated copies, by copyright protection, unfair-competition law, or criminal sanctions. • The treaty was drafted by representatives from WIPO and UNESCO to correct weaknesses in the Rome Convention. — Also termed Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Phonograms Convention.

genocide (jen-ə-sid). (ca. 1944) Int'l law. An international crime involving acts causing serious physical and mental harm with the intent to destroy, partially or entirely, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group. • The widely ratified Genocide Convention of 1948 defines the crime. The International Criminal Court has jurisdiction to try those accused of genocide. Many nations also have criminal laws providing punishment for individuals convicted of genocide. Cf. ETHNIC CLEANSING. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⇨763.]

"The . . . draft Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide was adopted by the General Assembly on December 9, 1948 and unanimously recommended for adherence to the members of the United Nations. It came into force in October, 1950 . . . The term 'genocide' was first proposed by Dr. Lemkin in the course of the war and incorporated on his suggestion into the Indictment of the Major German War Criminals. The [U.N. General] Assembly Resolution on Genocide of December 11, 1946, and the Convention of 1948, are also the result of a remarkable one-man campaign." Georg Schwarzenberger, Power Politics: A Study of International Society 634 (2d ed. 1951).

Genoese lottery (jen-oh-eez or -ees). See LOTTERY.

genotype. (19c) Patents. The genetic makeup of a living organism. • A patent on living matter must disclose its genotype rather than just describe its physical characteristics (phenotype) or behavior. Cf. PHENOTYPE. [Cases: Patents ⇨14.] — genotypic, adj.

gens (jenz), n. [Latin] (19c) Roman law. A clan or group of families who share the same name and (supposedly) a common ancestor; extended family. • Members of a gens are freeborn and possess full civic rights. Pl. gentes.

"A wider group still is the gens, of great importance in early law though its importance was gone in classical times. This consisted of all who bore the same nomen, the gentile name." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 61 (2d ed. 1953).

gentes (jen-teez), n. [Latin] (19c) Roman law. The peoples or nations of the world, particularly the civilized peoples.

gentile (jen-tīl). [fr. Latin gentilis] Roman law. A member of a gens. See GENS.

gentium privatum. See private international law under INTERNATIONAL LAW.

gentleman. (12c) Hist. 1. A man of noble or gentle birth or rank; a man above the rank of yeoman. 2. A man belonging to the landed gentry. • Today the term has no precise legal meaning.

gentleman's agreement. See GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT.

Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod. English law. An officer of the House of Lords who has various ceremonial duties, including the summoning of the members of the House of Commons to the House of Lords when a bill is to receive royal approval. • The office dates from the 14th century.

gentlemen's agreement. (1886) An unwritten agreement that, while not legally enforceable, is secured by the good faith and honor of the parties. — Also spelled gentleman's agreement. [Cases: Contracts ⇨1.]

gentrification, n. (1973) The restoration and upgrading of a deteriorated or aging urban neighborhood by middle-class or affluent persons, resulting in increased property values and often in displacement of lower-income residents. — gentrify, vb.

genuine, adj. (17c) 1. (Of a thing) authentic or real; having the quality of what a given thing purports to be or to have <the plaintiff failed to question whether the exhibits were genuine>. 2. (Of an instrument) free of forgery or counterfeiting <the bank teller could not determine whether the signature on the check was genuine>. UCC § 1-201(18).

genuine issue of material fact. (1938) Civil procedure. In the law of summary judgments, a triable, substantial, or real question of fact supported by substantial evidence.

• An issue of this kind precludes entry of summary judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2470, 2470.1; Judgment ⇨ 181(2), 185(6).]

genus (jee-nəs or jen-əs). (16c) A general class comprising several species or divisions. • In legal usage, the terms genus and (sometimes) species invoke the taxonomic classification of life forms in biological science. For example, patent law is a species within the genus of intellectual property; burglary is a species within the genus of crime. In the law of sales, genus referred to fungibles, while species referred to specific, individual items. Cf. SPECIES (2).

genus claim. See generic claim under PATENT CLAIM.

genus nunquam perit (jee-nəs nən[ɡ]-kwam per-it). [Latin] Hist. The class never perishes. • The phrase appeared in reference to a quantity of contracted-for goods of a certain class (rather than a single item), the destruction of which did not discharge the seller's obligation.

geodetic-survey system (jee-ə-det-ik). (1990) A federally created land-description method consisting of nationwide marks (or benches) made at longitude and latitude points. • The geodetic-survey system integrates most of the real property in the United States into one unified form of measurement.

geographically descriptive trademark. See TRADE-MARK.

geographic market. See MARKET.

geographic name. See NAME.

geography of crime. See environmental criminology under CRIMINOLOGY.

Georgia-Pacific analysis. Patents. A 15-factor test for setting a reasonable royalty in infringement suits. • Among other factors, the test considers what a prudent licensee would have paid while still being able to earn a profit. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. U.S. Plywood Corp., 318 F. Supp. 1116 (S.D.N.Y. 1970). [Cases: Patents ⇨ 319(1).]

german (jər-mən), adj. (14c) Having the same parents or grandparents; closely related.

brother-german. See BROTHER.

cousin-german. See COUSIN (1).

sister-german. See SISTER.

germane (jər-mayn), adj. (14c) Relevant; pertinent <the caselaw cited in the brief was not germane to the legal issue pending before the court>. • Under parliamentary law, debate and amendments are in order only if they are germane to the motion under consideration.

germanus (jər-may-nəs). [Latin] Roman law. 1. adj. Having the same father and mother. See frater germanus under FRATER. 2. n. A whole brother; a child of both of one's own parents.

gerrymandering (jer-ee-man-dər-ing or ger-ee-), n. (1812) 1. The practice of dividing a geographical area into electoral districts, often of highly irregular shape, to give one political party an unfair advantage by diluting the opposition's voting strength. • When Massachusetts Governor Elbridge Gerry ran for reelection in 1812, members of his political party, the Anti-Federalists, altered the state's voting districts to benefit the party. One newly created district resembled a salamander, inspiring a critic to coin the word gerrymander by combining the governor's name, Gerry, with the ending of salamander. Gerry was not reelected governor, but was elected as James Madison's vice president. — Also termed political gerrymandering. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3285, 3658(5); Elections ⇨ 12(6).] 2. The practice of dividing any geographical or jurisdictional area into political units (such as school districts) to give some group a special advantage. — Also termed jurisdictional gerrymandering. Cf. REAPPORTIONMENT. [Cases: Schools ⇨ 32.] — gerrymander, vb.

delineational gerrymandering. Gerrymandering by varying the districts' shape. • There are three kinds of delineational gerrymandering: cracking (or fracturing), packing, and stacking. See CRACKING; PACKING; STACKING (2).

institutional gerrymandering. Gerrymandering by means of varying the number of representatives per district.

gersum (gər-səm). Hist. 1. Money paid for a thing; specif., compensation paid by a tenant to a superior on entering a holding. 2. A penalty or amercement paid for an offense. — Also spelled garsumme; gersuma; gersume; grassum. 3. GRESSUME.

gersumarius (jər-s[y]ə-mair-ee-əs). Hist. Finable; liable to be fined at the discretion of a feudal superior. • A villein who gave his daughter in marriage was gersumarius — he was liable to pay a fine to the lord.

Geschmacksmuster. Patents. [German] See design patent under PATENT.

Gestalt factors. The criteria that a court uses in a minimum-contacts analysis to determine the reasonableness of subjecting a nonresident to personal jurisdiction. • These fairness criteria include (1) the defendant's burden of making a personal appearance, (2) the forum state's interest in adjudicating the dispute, (3) the plaintiff's interest in obtaining convenient and effective relief, (4) the judicial system's interest in arriving at the most effective resolution of the controversy, and (5) the common interests of all sovereigns in promoting substantive social policies. These factors were articulated by the United States Supreme Court in Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 478, 105 S.Ct. 2174, 2185 (1985), but the Court has never used the term Gestalt factors; it was coined in Donatelli v. National Hockey League, 893 F.2d 459, 465 (1st Cir.

1990). See MINIMUM CONTACTS. [Cases: Courts ↷ 12(2.1); Federal Courts ↷ 76.10.]

gestational mother. See birth mother under MOTHER.

gestational surrogacy. See SURROGACY.

gestational surrogate. See surrogate mother (1) under MOTHER.

gestio (jes-chee-oh), n. [Latin] (16c) Roman law. 1. Behavior or conduct. See GESTIO PRO HEREDE. 2. The management of a thing, esp. a transaction. See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO. — Also termed GESTION.

negotiorum gestio (ni-goh-shee-or-əm jes-chee-oh). See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO.

gestio pro haerede (jes-chee-oh proh her-ə-dee). [Latin “behavior as heir”] Roman & Hist. Scots law. An appointed heir’s conduct (such as selling or leasing the decedent’s property) that indicates the heir’s intent to receive the inheritance and thereby take on the estate’s debts; more broadly, any behavior as an heir. — Also spelled gestio pro haerede.

gestor (jes-tor), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. One who carries on a business. 2. NEGOTIORUM GESTOR. Pl. gestores.

gestu et fama (jes-t[y]oo et fay-mə). [Latin “demeanor and reputation”] Hist. A writ used by a person who had been imprisoned because of a poor reputation in the community to gain release from jail pending the arrival of justices with commissions of gaol delivery. See COMMISSION OF GAOL DELIVERY.

gestum (jes-təm), n. [Latin] Roman law. A deed or an act; a thing done. • Gestum is synonymous with factum. See FACTUM (2).

gesture. (15c) A motion of the body calculated to express a thought or emphasize a certain point <the prosecutor was known for her dramatic gestures during closing argument>.

get, n. (19c) 1. A rabbinical divorce; a Jewish divorce. 2. Under Jewish law, a document signed by a rabbi to grant a divorce. • Under Jewish law, a Jewish divorce can be obtained only after the husband has given the get to the wife, who must voluntarily accept it. — Also spelled gett. Pl. gittin. See rabbinical divorce under DIVORCE.

get-up. See TRADE DRESS.

gewrit. Hist. A deed, charter, or similar writing.

ghost detainee. See secret detainee under DETAINEE.

ghosting. The assumption of the identity of a deceased person to conceal one’s true identity. Cf. IDENTITY THEFT.

gibbet (jib-it), n. (13c) Hist. A post with one arm extending from the top, from which criminals are either executed by hanging or suspended after death as a warning to other potential offenders; a type of gallows.

double gibbet. A gibbet with two arms extending from its top so that it resembles a capital “T.”

gibbet law. See HALIFAX LAW.

GIC. See guaranteed investment contract under INVESTMENT CONTRACT.

GIFT. abbr. GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

gift, n. (12c) 1. The voluntary transfer of property to another without compensation. [Cases: Gifts ↷ 1.] 2. A thing so transferred. — gift, vb.

absolute gift. See inter vivos gift.

anatomical gift. (1971) A testamentary donation of a bodily organ or organs, esp. for transplant or for medical research. • The procedures for making an anatomical gift are set forth in the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act, which has been adopted in every state. [Cases: Dead Bodies ↷ 1.] antenuptial gift. See prenuptial gift.

charitable gift. An inter vivos or testamentary donation to a nonprofit organization for the relief of poverty, the advancement of education, the advancement of religion, the promotion of health, governmental, or municipal purposes, and other purposes the accomplishment of which is beneficial to the community. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 368 (1959). • When the beneficiary is a religious organization or the gift is intended for a religious purpose, it is sometimes also termed a pious gift. [Cases: Charities ↷ 1-17.]

class gift. (1949) A gift to a group of persons, uncertain in number at the time of the gift but to be ascertained at a future time, who are all to take in definite proportions, the share of each being dependent on the ultimate number in the group.

completed gift. (1952) A gift that is no longer in the donor’s possession and control. • Only a completed gift is taxable under the gift tax.

gift causa mortis (kaw-zə mor-tis). (18c) A gift made in contemplation of the donor’s imminent death. • The three essentials are that (1) the gift must be made with a view to the donor’s present illness or peril, (2) the donor must actually die from that illness or peril, without ever recovering, and (3) there must be a delivery. Even though causa mortis is the more usual word order in modern law, the correct Latin phrasing is mortis causa — hence gift mortis causa. — Also termed donatio causa mortis; donatio mortis causa; gift in contemplation of death; transfer in contemplation of death. See CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH. [Cases: Gifts ↷ 53-68.]

"[Gifts causa mortis] are conditional, like legacies; and it is essential to them that the donor make them in his last illness, or in contemplation and expectation of death; and with reference to their effect after his death, they are good, notwithstanding a previous will; and if he recovers, the gift becomes void." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *444 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

gift in contemplation of death. See gift causa mortis.

gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift.

gift in trust. (18c) A gift of legal title to property to someone who will act as trustee for the benefit of a beneficiary.

gift over. (18c) A property gift (esp. by will) that takes effect after the expiration of a preceding estate in the property (such as a life estate or fee simple determinable) <to Sarah for life, with gift over to Don in fee>. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 614(2, 3).]

gift splitting. See split gift.

gratuitous gift. A gift made without consideration, as most gifts are. • Strictly speaking, the term looks redundant, but it answers to the donum gratuitum of Roman law.

inter vivos gift (in-tər vī-vohs or vee-vohs). (1848) A gift of personal property made during the donor's lifetime and delivered to the donee with the intention of irrevocably surrendering control over the property. — Also termed gift inter vivos; lifetime gift; absolute gift. [Cases: Gifts ⇨ 1-33.]

lifetime gift. See inter vivos gift.

manual gift. Civil law. A gift of movable, tangible property, made by delivery without any formalities. La. Civ. Code art. 1539.

onerous gift (ohn-ə-rəs or on-ə-rəs). A gift made subject to certain conditions imposed on the recipient.

pious gift. See charitable gift.

prenuptial gift (pree-nəp-shəl). (1921) A gift of property from one spouse to another before marriage. • In community-property states, prenuptial gifts are often made to preserve the property's classification as separate property. — Also termed antenuptial gift. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⇨ 250.]

split gift. (1957) Tax. A gift that is made by one spouse to a third person and that, for gift-tax purposes, both spouses treat as being made one-half by each spouse; a gift in which the spouses combine their annual gift-tax exclusions. • A split gift, for example, is eligible for two annual exclusions of $10,000 each, or a total of $20,000 for one gift. — Also termed gift-splitting; gift-splitting election. See annual exclusion under EXCLUSION (1). [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4206.10.]

substitute gift. (1934) A testamentary gift to one person in place of another who is unable to take under the will for some reason. — Also termed substitutional gift.

taxable gift. (1922) A gift that, after adjusting for the annual exclusion and applicable deductions, is subject to the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2503. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4203.10, 4206.10.]

testamentary gift (tes-tə-men-tə-ree or -tree). (18c) A gift made in a will.

vested gift. (1820) An absolute gift, being neither conditional nor contingent, though its use or enjoyment might not occur until sometime in the future.

gift deed. See DEED.

gift enterprise. (1858) 1. A scheme for the distribution of items by chance among those who have purchased shares in the scheme. [Cases: Lotteries ⇨ 3.] 2. A merchant's scheme to increase sales without lowering prices by giving buyers tickets that carry a chance to win a prize. • Gift enterprises are regulated by state law. See LOTTERY.

gifting circle. See GIFTING CLUB.

gifting club. A type of pyramid scheme or Ponzi scheme in which recruits make "gifts" of money to other club members with the expectation that future recruits will make "gifts" to the present recruits. • Many gifting clubs limit membership to women. Club leaders usually try to evade income-tax laws by claiming that the money paid in by a recruit is a tax-free "gift" to a club member and warning new recruits not to expect "gifts" in the future. Some states forbid gifting clubs as illegal pyramid schemes. Other states hold that the clubs are illegal lotteries. — Also termed gifting circle; sisterhood; birthday club. See PONZI SCHEME. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 231.] gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift under GIFT.

gift in trust. See GIFT.

gift over. See GIFT.

gift splitting. See split gift under GIFT.

gift-splitting election. See split gift under GIFT.

Gifts to Minors Act. See UNIFORM TRANSFERS TO MINORS ACT.

gift tax. See TAX.

gift-tax exclusion. See annual exclusion under EXCLUSION.

gilda mercatoria (gil-də mər-kə-tor-ee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. A merchant guild; an incorporated society of merchants having exclusive trading rights within a town.

gild hall. See GUILD HALL (1).

GI loan. See veteran's loan under LOAN.

gilour (gi-lər). [Law French] Hist. A guiler; a person who cheats or deceives. • Gilour referred to a person who sold false goods, such as a person who sold pewter as silver.

gilt-edged, adj. (Of a security) having the highest rating for safety of investment; exceptionally safe as an investment.

Ginnie Mae (jin-ee may). See GOVERNMENT NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION.

GIPSA. abbr. GRAIN INSPECTION, PACKERS, AND STOCKYARD ADMINISTRATION.

girth (garth). [Old English] (13c) 1. A measure of length, equal to a yard. • This term, which was used in Saxon and early English law, was taken from the circumference of a man's body. 2. The area surrounding a church. 3. A place of sanctuary. 4. A band or strap that encircles the body of an animal to fasten something (usu. a saddle) to its back.

gisement (jɪs- or jɪz-mənt). [Law French] (16c) Archaic. See AGISTMENT.

giser (ji-sər), vb. [Law French] Hist. (Of an action) to lie; to be capable of being brought as a suit in court. • This verb, in its inflected form gist, appeared in such phrases as ou assise ne gist point ("when an assise does not lie"), le action bien gist ("the action well lies"), and gist en le bouche ("it lies in the mouth"), and cest action gist ("this action lies").

gisetaker (jɪs- or jɪz-tay-kər). Archaic. See AGISTER.

gist (jɪst). (18c) 1. The ground or essence (of a legal action) <the gist of the crime>. 2. The main point <she skimmed the brief to get the gist of it>. • This noun derives from the Law French verb giser "to lie." See GISER.

gist-of-the-action doctrine. The principle that a plaintiff who brings a tort claim arising from a contractual relationship must show that the contract and any contractual claim are collateral to the tort claim. • The doctrine prevents plaintiffs from recasting contract claims as tort claims. This term is most common in Pennsylvania but also appears in New Jersey, Delaware, the Virgin Islands, and elsewhere. [Cases: Action ⇨ 27(1).]

give, vb. (13c) 1. To voluntarily transfer (property) to another without compensation <Jack gave his daughter a car on her birthday>. 2. To confer by a formal act <the First Amendment gives all citizens the right to free speech>. 3. To present for another to consider <the witness gave compelling testimony before the jury>. 4. (Of a jury) to impose or award by verdict <the jury gave the defendant the death penalty> <the jury gave the plaintiff $1,000 in damages>.

give bail, vb. To post security for one's appearance in court <the court ordered the accused to give bail in the amount of $10,000>. — Also termed post bail.

give color, vb. Hist. To admit, either expressly or impliedly by silence, that an opponent's allegations appear to be meritorious. • In common-law pleading, a defendant's plea of confession and avoidance had to give color to the plaintiff's allegations in the complaint or the plea would be fatally defective. See COLOR (2).

give, devise, and bequeath, vb. (17c) To transfer property by will <I give, devise, and bequeath all the rest, residue, and remainder of my estate to my beloved daughter Sarah>. • This wording has long been criticized as redundant. In modern usage, give ordinarily suffices. See BEQUEST.

given name. See personal name under NAME.

give way, vb. Maritime law. (Of a vessel) to deviate from a course, or to slow down, in accordance with navigation rules, so that a second vessel may pass without altering its course. [Cases: Collision ⇨ 29, 37.]

giving in payment. Civil law. The act of discharging a debt by giving something to the creditor (with the creditor's consent) other than what was originally called for. La. Civ. Code art. 2655. • The phrase is a translation of the French dation en paiement and derives from the Roman datio in solutum. See DATION EN PAIEMENT. Cf. ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

gladius (glay-dee-əs), n. [Latin "sword"] Roman law. The emblem of the emperor's power, esp. the power to punish criminals. See JUS GLADII.

glaive (glayv). (14c) Hist. A sword, lance, or horseman's staff. • The glaive was one of the weapons allowed in a trial by combat.

glamour stock. See growth stock under STOCK.

glass ceiling. (1984) An actual or supposed upper limit of professional advancement, esp. for women, as a result of discriminatory practices. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1164.]

Glass-Steagall Act. A federal statute that protects bank depositors by restricting the securities-related business of commercial banks, specif. by prohibiting banks from owning brokerage firms or engaging in the brokerage business. 12 USCA § 378. — Also termed Banking Act of 1933.

glebae ascriptitii. See ADSCRIPTI GLEBAE.

glebe (gleeb). [fr. Latin gleba "clod of earth"] (15c) 1. Roman law. The soil of an inheritance; an agrarian estate. • Servi addicti glebae ("slaves bound to the land") were serfs attached to and passing with the estate. 2. Eccles. law. Land possessed as part of the endowment or revenue of a church or ecclesiastical benefice.

"Diocesan glebe land forms the largest section of ecclesiastical conveyancing work by virtue of the large number of glebe properties which are held in each diocese. Such land is governed primarily by the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 . . . , which in technical terms defines 'glebe land' as 'land vested in the incumbent of a benefice (when the benefice is full) as part of the endowments of the benefice other than parsonage land'; and 'diocesan glebe land' as 'glebe land acquired by a diocesan board of finance under any provision of this Measure and any other land acquired by such a board, being land which by virtue of, or of any enactment amended by, a provision of this Measure is to be held as part of the diocesan glebe land of the diocese.'" David Rees, Ecclesiastical Conveyancing 8 (1989).

global fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

Globe election. Labor law. The procedure by which a group of employees is given the opportunity to decide whether to be represented as a distinct group or to be represented as a part of a larger, existing unit. Globe Machine & Stamping Co., 3 NLRB 294 (1937). — Also termed self-determination election.

glos (glos), n. [Latin] Roman law. One's husband's sister.

gloss, n. (16c) 1. A note inserted between the lines or in the margin of a text to explain a difficult or obscure word in the text <this edition of Shakespeare's works is bolstered by its many glosses on Elizabethan English>. 2. A collection of explanations; a glossary <the hornbook's copious gloss>. 3. (usu. pl.) A pronouncement about meaning; an interpretation <the statutory language needs no gloss>.

glossators (glah-say-tərz). (15c) (usu. cap.) A group of Italian jurists who, from the 11th to the 13th centuries, were primarily responsible for the revival of the study of Roman law. • They originally worked by glossing (that is, explaining in the margin) difficult or unclear passages, and gradually their writings blossomed into full-blown commentaries and discussions. See POSTGLOSSATORS. — glossatorial, adj.

Gloucester, Statute of (glos-tər). Hist. A statute that allowed a successful plaintiff to recover costs in addition to damages. • The statute was enacted in Gloucester. 6 Edw. I, ch. 1 (1278).

glove silver. Hist. Money given as an incentive or reward to a court officer, esp. money given by a sheriff to an assize official when no prisoners were left by the assize for execution. • The name derives from the practice of giving money to servants, ostensibly to buy gloves with.

GMI. abbr. GUILTY BUT MENTALLY ILL.

GMT. abbr. GENETIC-MARKER TEST.

GNMA. abbr. GOVERNMENT NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION.

GNP. abbr. GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT.

go bail, vb. Archaic. To act as a surety on a bail bond.

Godbote. See BOTE (2).

God-gild. Hist. Money paid or something offered for the service of God; esp., a payment of money or a gift (for example, land) to a church. See FRANKALMOIN.

godparent. (1865) Eccles. law. A person, usu. a close family friend or relative, who accepts a parent's invitation to assume part of the responsibility for the religious education of a newly baptized child. • Often, too, there is an understanding that the godparent would help support and rear the child if the parents were to die or become incapacitated. The spiritual parent-child relationship creates a canonical impediment to marriage. — Also termed (more specifically) godmother; godfather; (in eccles. law) sponsor.

God's penny. Hist. Earnest money; a small sum paid on the striking of a bargain. — Also termed denarius Dei; earnest-penny; godpenny. See ARRA.

"It is among the merchants that the giving of earnest first . . . becomes a form which binds both buyer and seller in a contract of sale. To all appearances this change was not accomplished without the intermediation of a religious idea. All over western Europe the earnest becomes known as the God's penny or Holy Ghost's penny (denarius Dei) . . ." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 208 (2d ed. 1899).

go forward, vb. (1964) To commence or carry on with the presentation of a case in court <after the lunch recess, the judge instructed the plaintiff to go forward with its case>.

go hence without day. (18c) (Of a defendant to a lawsuit) to be finished with legal proceedings without any further settings on the court's calendar. • Thus, a defendant who "goes hence without day" succeeds in getting a case finally resolved, usu. by dismissal. The phrase derives from the Law French phrase aller sans jour, and over time defendants came to use it to request that the case against them be dismissed without the necessity of a day in court. — Sometimes shortened to go without day; without day. See SINE DIE.

going-and-coming rule. (1927) 1. The principle that torts committed by an employee while commuting to or from work are generally outside the scope of employment. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨3045.] 2. The principle that denies workers'-compensation benefits to an employee injured while commuting to or from work. Cf. COMMERCIAL-TRAVELER RULE. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨719-757.]

going concern. (1881) A commercial enterprise actively engaging in business with the expectation of indefinite continuance. — Also termed going business.

going-concern value. See VALUE (2).

going price, n. (18c) The prevailing or current market value of something. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

going private. The process of changing a public corporation into a close corporation by terminating the corporation's status with the SEC as a publicly held corporation and by having its outstanding publicly held shares acquired by a single shareholder or a small group. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨60.23.]

going public. The process of a company's selling stock to the investing public for the first time (after filing a registration statement under applicable securities laws), thereby becoming a public corporation. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨11.10-11.14.]

going through the bar. Hist. A daily process in which the court would ask all barristers present whether they had motions to present. • This practice, which ended in 1873, was conducted according to seniority, except for the last day of a term, when the junior barristers were asked first.

going to the country. Hist. The act of requesting a jury trial. • A defendant was said to be “going to the country” by concluding a pleading with the phrase “and of this he puts himself upon the country.” Similarly, a plaintiff would conclude a pleading with the phrase “and this the plaintiff prays may be enquired of by the country.” — Also termed go to the country. Cf. CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY.

going value. See going-concern value under VALUE (2).

gold certificate. Hist. A banknote issued by the United States Treasury from 1863 to 1934 and redeemable in gold. • When the United States abandoned the gold standard in 1933, Congress declared ownership of gold certificates illegal even though the Treasury continued to issue them until mid-1934. The certificates were legalized again in 1964, but they can no longer be redeemed for gold. They now have the same status as Federal Reserve notes, which are not redeemable for precious metal. Cf. FEDERAL RESERVE NOTE; SILVER CERTIFICATE. [Cases: United States ⇨34.]

gold clause. A provision calling for payment in gold. • Gold clauses, which are now void, were once used in contracts, bonds, and mortgages.

golden handcuffs. Remuneration set at such a high level that the employee earning it cannot leave the firm or company and receive commensurate pay elsewhere. • As a result, the employee often stays in the position even if it is otherwise unrewarding or unpleasant.

golden handshake. Corporations. A generous compensation package offered to an employee, usu. as an inducement to retire or upon dismissal.

golden parachute. (1981) Corporations. An employment-contract provision that grants an upper-level executive lucrative severance benefits — including long-term salary guarantees or bonuses — if control of the company changes hands (as by a merger). Cf. TIN PARACHUTE. [Cases: Corporations ⇨308(3).]

golden rule. The principle that, in construing written instruments, a court should adhere to the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words unless that adherence would lead to some manifest absurdity; esp., in statutory construction, the principle that if a statute’s literal meaning would lead to an absurd or unjust result, or even to an inconsistency within the statute itself, the statute should be interpreted in a way that avoids such

“[T]he ‘golden’ rule . . . allows for a departure from the literal rule when the application of the statutory words in the ordinary sense would be repugnant to or inconsistent with some other provision in the statute or even when it would lead to what the court considers to be an absurdity. The usual consequence of applying the golden rule is that words which are in the statute are ignored or words which are not there are read in. The scope of the golden rule is debatable, particularly so far as the meaning of an ‘absurdity’ is concerned.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 14 (1976).

golden-rule argument. A jury argument in which a lawyer asks the jurors to reach a verdict by imagining themselves or someone they care about in the place of the injured plaintiff or crime victim. • Because golden-rule arguments ask the jurors to become advocates for the plaintiff or victim and to ignore their obligation to exercise calm and reasonable judgment, these arguments are widely condemned and are considered improper in most states. [Cases: Trial ⇨125(1).]

goldsmiths’ notes. Hist. Bankers’ cash notes; promissory notes given by bankers to customers as acknowledgments of the receipt of money. • This term derives from the London banking business, which originally was transacted by goldsmiths.

gold standard. (19c) A monetary system in which currency is convertible into its legal equivalent in gold or gold coin. • The United States adopted the gold standard in 1900 and abandoned it in 1934. Cf. PAPER STANDARD.

good, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Sound or reliable . 2. Valid, effectual, and enforceable; sufficient under the law <good title>.

good, n. See GOODS.

good and lawful fence. See LAWFUL FENCE.

good and merchantable abstract of title. See ABSTRACT OF TITLE.

good and workmanlike. (18c) (Of a product or service) characterized by quality craftsmanship; constructed or performed in a skillful way or method <the house was built in a good and workmanlike manner>.

good behavior. (16c) 1. A standard by which judges are considered fit to continue their tenure, consisting in the avoidance of criminal behavior. [Cases: Judges ⇨7.] 2. Orderly conduct, which in the context of penal law allows a prisoner to reduce the time spent in prison. Cf. good time under TIME. [Cases: Prisons ⇨243.]

good consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

good faith, n. (18c) A state of mind consisting in (1) honesty in belief or purpose, (2) faithfulness to one's duty or obligation, (3) observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in a given trade or business, or (4) absence of intent to defraud or to seek unconscionable advantage. — Also termed bona fides. Cf. BAD FAITH. — good-faith, adj.

"The phrase 'good faith' is used in a variety of contexts, and its meaning varies somewhat with the context. Good faith performance or enforcement of a contract emphasizes faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party; it excludes a variety of types of conduct characterized as involving 'bad faith' because they violate community standards of decency, fairness or reasonableness. The appropriate remedy for a breach of the duty of good faith also varies with the circumstances." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205 cmt. a (1979).

"[G]ood faith is an elusive idea, taking on different meanings and emphases as we move from one context to another — whether the particular context is supplied by the type of legal system (e.g., common law, civilian, or hybrid), the type of contract (e.g., commercial or consumer), or the nature of the subject matter of the contract (e.g., insurance, employment, sale of goods, financial services, and so on)." Roger Brownsword et al., "Good Faith in Contract," in Good Faith in Contract: Concept and Context 1, 3 (Roger Brownsword ed., 1999).

good-faith bargaining, Labor law. Negotiations between an employer and a representative of employees, usu. a union, in which both parties meet and confer at reasonable times with open minds and with a view to reaching an agreement. • The National Labor Relations Act requires good-faith bargaining, and failure to bargain in good faith is considered an unfair labor practice. 29 USCA §§ 151–169. See UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷1114.]

good-faith exception. (1980) Criminal procedure. An exception to the exclusionary rule whereby evidence obtained under a warrant later found to be invalid (esp. because it is not supported by probable cause) is nonetheless admissible if the police reasonably relied on the notion that the warrant was valid. • The Supreme Court adopted the good-faith exception in United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 104 S.Ct. 3405 (1984). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷394.4(6).]

good-faith improver. A person who makes improvements to real property while actually and reasonably believing himself or herself to be the owner or lawful occupant. • The improver may be entitled to recover the value of the improvements from the true owner or to remove them. See IMPROVEMENT. [Cases: Improvements ↷4(2).]

good-faith purchaser. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER (1).

good-guy clause. See good-guy guaranty under GUARANTY.

good-guy guaranty. See GUARANTY.

good health, Insurance. A state of reasonable healthiness; a state of health free from serious disease. • Good health, a phrase often appearing in life-insurance policies, does not mean perfect health. — Also termed sound health. [Cases: Insurance ↷1758, 3003(8).]

"As used in policies of insurance, there is no material difference between the terms 'sound health' and 'good health,' and generally it appears that the two terms are considered to be synonymous. Such expressions are comparative terms, and the rule followed generally is that the term 'good health' or 'sound health,' when used in an insurance contract, means that the applicant has no grave, important, or serious disease, and is free from any ailment that seriously affects the general soundness or healthfulness of his system." 43 Am. Jur. 2d Insurance § 1061, at 1069 (1982).

good moral character, n. (18c) 1. A pattern of behavior that is consistent with the community's current ethical standards and that shows an absence of deceit or morally reprehensible conduct. • An alien seeking to be naturalized must show good moral character in the five years preceding the petition for naturalization. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↷703.] 2. A pattern of behavior conforming to a profession's ethical standards and showing an absence of moral turpitude. • Good moral character is usu. a requirement of persons applying to practice a profession such as law or medicine. [Cases: Licenses ↷20.]

good offices, Int'l law. The involvement of one or more countries or an international organization in a dispute between other countries with the aim of contributing to its settlement or at least easing relations between the disputing countries.

good of the order, Parliamentary law. A time scheduled, usu. late in a meeting, for informal announcements, comments, and suggestions that do not seek the meeting's immediate action. — Also termed general good and welfare; open forum; open microphone.

Goodright, Hist. A name sometimes used as a fictitious plaintiff in an ejectment action. • "John Doe" was used more frequently. — Also termed Goodtitle. Cf. JOHN DOE.

goods, (bef. 12c) 1. Tangible or movable personal property other than money; esp., articles of trade or items of merchandise <goods and services>. • The sale of goods is governed by Article 2 of the UCC. [Cases: Sales ↷10.] 2. Things that have value, whether tangible or not <the importance of social goods varies from society to society>.

"'Goods' means all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than the money in which the price is to be paid, investment securities, (Article 8), and things in action. 'Goods' also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops and other identified things attached to realty as described in the section on goods to be severed from realty (Section 2-107)." UCC § 2-105(1).

bulky goods. Goods that are obviously difficult to move because of their nature, their number, or their location.

capital goods. Goods (such as equipment and machinery) used for the production of other goods or services. — Also termed industrial goods.

consumer goods. Goods bought or used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, and not for resale or for producing other goods. UCC § 9-102(23). [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷ 15.]

customers' goods. Insurance. Goods belonging to the customers of a casualty-insurance policyholder; goods held by a policyholder as a bailee.

distressed goods. Goods sold at unusually low prices or at a loss.

durable goods. Consumer goods that are designed to be used repeatedly over a long period, such as automobiles or refrigerators. — Also termed durables; hard goods.

fungible goods (fən-jə-bəl). Goods that are interchangeable with one another; goods that, by nature or trade usage, are the equivalent of any other like unit, such as coffee or grain. UCC § 1-201(b)(18).

future goods. Goods that will come into being, such as those yet to be manufactured; goods that are not both existing and identified. • A purported present sale of future goods or any interest in them operates as a contract to sell. UCC § 2-105(2).

gray-market goods. See PARALLEL IMPORTS.

hard goods. See durable goods.

household goods. Goods that are used in connection with a home. • This term usu. arises when a warehouser claims a lien on what he or she asserts are "household" goods. According to the UCC, a warehouser may claim a lien on a depositor's furniture, furnishings, and personal effects that are used in a dwelling. UCC § 7-209(d).

industrial goods. See capital goods.

mobile goods. Goods that are normally used in more than one jurisdiction (such as shipping containers and road-construction machinery) and that are held by the debtor as equipment or leased by the debtor to others. • Under previous drafts of the Uniform Commercial Code, the procedure for perfecting a security interest in mobile goods was generally defined by the law of the state where the debtor is located. The current UCC does not distinguish mobile goods. See ordinary goods. UCC § 9-103(3).

nonconforming goods. Goods that fail to meet contractual specifications, allowing the buyer to reject the tender of the goods or to revoke their acceptance. UCC §§ 2-601, 2-608. See PERFECT-TENDER RULE. [Cases: Sales ↷ 119, 166(1).]

ordinary goods. Goods that are anything other than mobile goods, minerals, or goods covered by a certificate of title. UCC § 9-103(1)(a). • The current UCC does not distinguish between ordinary and mobile goods. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↷ 14.]

soft goods. Consumer goods (such as clothing) that are not durable goods.

Good Samaritan action. 1. A deed performed gratuitously by a person to help another who is in peril. — Also termed Good Samaritan act. See GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE; GOOD SAMARITAN LAW. 2. A lawsuit brought by a person or group for the benefit of all or part of a community.

Good Samaritan doctrine (sə-mar-i-tən). (1952) Torts. The principle that a person who is injured while attempting to aid another in imminent danger, and who then sues the one whose negligence created the danger, will not be charged with contributory negligence unless the rescue attempt is an unreasonable one or the rescuer acts unreasonably in performing the attempted rescue. Cf. EMERGENCY DOCTRINE; RESCUE DOCTRINE; LOST-CHANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Negligence ↷ 510(3).]

good-samaritan law. (1965) A statute that exempts from liability a person (such as an off-duty physician) who voluntarily renders aid to another in imminent danger but negligently causes injury while rendering the aid. • Some form of good-samaritan legislation has been enacted in all 50 states and in the District of Columbia. — Also written Good Samaritan law. — Also termed good-samaritan statute. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE. [Cases: Health ↷ 769; Negligence ↷ 284.]

"The so-called 'Good Samaritan Statutes' . . . do not require aid to be given. They merely encourage doctors to stop and give aid to strangers in emergency situations by providing that no physician who in good faith renders such aid shall be liable in civil damages as a result of acts or omissions in rendering such aid. Some states have enacted statutes that require a person who is able to do so with no danger or peril to himself to come to the aid of another who is exposed to grave physical harm." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 661 (3d ed. 1982).

goods and chattels (chat-əlz), n. (16c) Loosely, personal property of any kind; occasionally, tangible personal property only. — Also termed goods and effects; goods and merchandise.

good-soldier defense. An excuse theory based on the assertion that a defendant was following orders, esp. of a military or corporate superior. • The term is a derisive label rather than a valid defense. Following an order does not relieve a defendant of responsibility for wrongful acts unless there are circumstances that would amount to coercion.

good time. See TIME.

good-time law. A statute allowing a prisoner's sentence to be reduced by a stated number of days for each month or year of good behavior while incarcerated. — Also termed good-time statute.

goodwill. (bef. 12c) A business's reputation, patronage, and other intangible assets that are considered when appraising the business, esp. for purchase; the ability to earn income in excess of the income that would be expected from the business viewed as a mere collection of assets. • Because an established business's trademark or servicemark is a symbol of goodwill, trademark infringement is a form of theft of goodwill. By the same token, when a trademark is assigned, the goodwill that it carries is also assigned. — Also written good will. — Also termed enterprise goodwill; commercial goodwill; practice goodwill; economic goodwill. Cf. going-concern value under VALUE (2). [Cases: Good Will ⇄ 1, 2.]

"[Goodwill] is only another name for reputation, credit, honesty, fair name, reliability." Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 36 (1929).

"Good will is to be distinguished from that element of value referred to variously as going-concern value, going value, or going business. Although some courts have stated that the difference is merely technical and that it is unimportant to attempt to separate these intangibles, it is generally held that going-concern value is that which inheres in a plant of an established business." 38 Am. Jur. 2d Good Will § 2, at 913 (1968).

individual goodwill. See personal goodwill.

personal goodwill. Goodwill attributable to an individual's skills, knowledge, efforts, training, or reputation in making a business successful. — Also termed professional goodwill; separate goodwill; individual goodwill.

professional goodwill. See personal goodwill.

separate goodwill. See personal goodwill.

goose case. See WHITEHORSE CASE.

goosehorn, n. Slang. A bawdy house; a house of prostitution. See DISORDERLY HOUSE.

gore (gor), n. (bef. 12c) 1. Hist. A small, narrow slip of land. 2. A small (often triangular) piece of land, such as may be left between surveys that do not close. 3. In some New England states (such as Maine and Vermont), a county's subdivision that has little population and thus is not organized as a town.

Gothland sea laws. See LAWS OF VISBY.

go to protest. (Of commercial paper) to be dishonored by nonpayment or nonacceptance <the draft will go to protest>. See DISHONOR (1); PROTEST (2).

go to the country. See GOING TO THE COUNTRY.

govern, vb. (14c) (Of a precedent) to control a point in issue <the Smith case will govern the outcome of the appeal>.

governing body. 1. GOVERNMENT (2). 2. A group of (esp. corporate) officers or persons having ultimate control <the board of directors is the governing body of XYZ, Inc.>.

government. (14c) 1. The structure of principles and rules determining how a state or organization is regulated. 2. The sovereign power in a nation or state. 3. An organization through which a body of people exercises political authority; the machinery by which sovereign power is expressed <the Canadian government>. • In this sense, the term refers collectively to the political organs of a country regardless of their function or level, and regardless of the subject matter they deal with. Cf. NATION; STATE.

de facto government (di fak-toh). 1. A government that has taken over the regular government and exercises sovereignty over a nation. 2. An independent government established and exercised by a group of a country's inhabitants who have separated themselves from the parent state. — Also termed government de facto.

de jure government. A functioning government that is legally established. — Also termed government de jure.

federal government. 1. A national government that exercises some degree of control over smaller political units that have surrendered some degree of power in exchange for the right to participate in national political matters. — Also termed (in federal states) central government. 2. The U.S. government. — Also termed national government. [Cases: United States ⇄ 1.] government de facto. See de facto government.

government de jure. See de jure government.

local government. The government of a particular locality, such as a city, county, or parish; a governing body at a lower level than the state government. • The term includes a school district, fire district, transportation authority, and any other special-purpose district or authority. — Also termed municipal government. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇄ 6.]

mixed government. A government containing a blend of forms, as in democracy and monarchy.

municipal government. See local government.

national government. 1. See NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. 2. See federal government (2).

proprietary government. Hist. A government granted by the Crown to an individual, in the nature of a feudatory principality, with powers of legislation formerly belonging to the owner of a county palatine. Cf. COUNTY PALATINE.

provisional government. A government temporarily established to govern until a permanent one is organized to replace it.

republican government. A government in the republican form; specif., a government by representatives chosen by the people. [Cases: States ⇄ 4.3.]

state government. The government of a state of the United States. [Cases: States ⇄ 1.]

4. The executive branch of the U.S. government. 5. The prosecutors in a given criminal case <the government has objected to the introduction of that evidence>. 6. An academic course devoted to the study of government; political science <Bridges is enrolled in Government 101>.

government agency. See AGENCY (3).

government-agency defense. Torts. An affirmative defense that immunizes a contractor from liability upon proof that the contractor acted on the government's behalf as an agent or as a government officer.

• This defense is extremely limited because of the difficulty of establishing the government-agent relationship. See Yearsley v. W.A. Ross Constr. Co., 309 U.S. 18, 20–22, 60 S. Ct. 413, 414–15 (1940). Cf. GOVERNMENT-CONTRACTOR DEFENSE; CONTRACT-SPECIFICATION DEFENSE.

government-agency security. See government security under SECURITY.

government agent. See AGENT (2).

governmental act. See GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTION.

governmental activity. See GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTION.

governmental employee benefit plan. See governmental plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

governmental enterprise. See ENTERPRISE.

governmental function. (1817) Torts. A government agency's conduct that is expressly or impliedly mandated or authorized by constitution, statute, or other law and that is carried out for the benefit of the general public. • Generally, a governmental entity is immune from tort liability for governmental acts. — Also termed governmental act; governmental activity. See PUBLIC-FUNCTION TEST. Cf. PROPRIETARY FUNCTION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨724.]

governmental-function theory. (1936) Constitutional law. A principle by which private conduct is characterized as state action, esp. for due-process and equal-protection purposes, when a private party is exercising a public function. • Under this theory, for example, a political party (which is a private entity) cannot exclude voters from primary elections on the basis of race. — Also termed public-function rationale. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨1326(4, 7); Constitutional Law ⇨213(4), 254(4).]

governmental instrumentality. (1854) A constitutionally or legislatively created agency that is immune from certain kinds of liability, as for taxes or punitive damages. [Cases: United States ⇨53.]

governmental plan. See EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

governmental secret. See STATE SECRET.

governmental trust. See TRUST.

governmental unit. A subdivision, agency, department, county, parish, municipality, or other unit of the government of a country or a state. • The term includes an organization with a separate corporate existence only if the organization can legally issue debt obligations on which interest is exempt from income taxation under national law. UCC § 9-102(a)(45). [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇨6.]

government-annuity society. Hist. One of several organizations formed in England to enable the working class to provide for themselves by purchasing, on advantageous terms, a government annuity for life or for a term of years.

government bond. 1. See savings bond under BOND (3).
2. See government security under SECURITY.

government contract. See CONTRACT.

government-contractor defense. An affirmative defense that immunizes a government contractor from civil liability under state law when the contractor complies with government specifications. • Immunization is extended when two conditions are satisfied: (1) the supplier warned the government about any dangers presented by the goods about which the supplier had knowledge but the government did not, and (2) the government itself is immune from liability under the Feres doctrine. Essentially, this federal common-law defense, which has been applied in cases of negligence, strict liability, and breach of warranty, extends sovereign immunity over the contractor. The leading case on this defense is Boyle v. United Techs. Corp., 487 U.S. 500, 108 S.Ct. 2510 (1988). — Also termed Boyle defense; government-contract defense; government-contract-specification defense; (in military context) military-contractor defense. See FERES DOCTRINE. Cf. GOVERNMENT-AGENCY DEFENSE. [Cases: Aviation ⇨13; Products Liability ⇨117.] government enterprise. See governmental enterprise under ENTERPRISE.

government immunity. See sovereign immunity under IMMUNITY (1).

government-in-exile. ⇨ An individual or group of individuals residing in a foreign country while (1) claiming supreme authority over a country, (2) being recognized by the hosting country as the supreme authority over that other country, and (3) being organized to perform and actually performing some acts of state on behalf of the home country.

government insurance. See INSURANCE.

government land. See public land under LAND.

Government National Mortgage Association. A federally owned corporation in the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development responsible for guaranteeing mortgage-backed securities composed of FHA-insured or VA-guaranteed mortgage loans. • The Association purchases, on the secondary market, residential mortgages originated by local lenders; it then issues federally insured securities backed by these mortgages. — Abbr. GNMA. — Also termed Ginnie Mae. [Cases: United States ⇨53(9).]

government of laws. The doctrine that government must operate according to established, consistent legal principles and not according to the interests of those who happen to be in power at a given time; esp., the doctrine that judicial decisions must be based on the law, regardless of the character of the litigants or the personal predilections of the judge.

government plan. See governmental plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

Government Printing Office. An office in the legislative branch of the federal government responsible for printing and distributing congressional publications and publications of other agencies of the United States government. • The Office is supervised by the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing. It began operating in 1860. — Abbr. GPO.

government secret. See STATE SECRET.

government-securities interdealer broker. See BROKER.

government security. See SECURITY.

government survey. See SURVEY.

government-survey system. A land-description method that divides the United States into checks or tracts of ground, which are further broken down into smaller descriptions, such as metes and bounds.

government tort. See TORT.

governor. (14c) The chief executive official of a U.S. state.

• Governors are elected and usu. serve a two- or four-year term. [Cases: States ⇨41.]

go without day. See GO HENCE WITHOUT DAY.

GPARM. See graduated-payment adjustable-rate mortgage under MORTGAGE.

GPO. abbr. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

grab law. (1884) The various means of debt collection involving remedies outside the scope of federal bankruptcy law, such as attachment and garnishment; aggressive collection practices. [Cases: Attachment ⇨1; Garnishment ⇨1.]

grace period. (1945) 1. A period of extra time allowed for taking some required action (such as making payment) without incurring the usual penalty for being late. • Insurance policies typically provide for a grace period of 30 days beyond the premium's due date, during which the premium may be paid without the policy being canceled. And Article 9 of the UCC provides for a 10-day grace period, after the collateral is received, during which a purchase-money security interest must be perfected to have priority over any conflicting security interests. — Also termed days of grace; grace days. 2. Patents. The one-year interval allowed by the U.S. Patent Act between the time an invention is used in public, sold, offered for sale, or disclosed in a publication and the time the inventor applies for a patent. • Most countries follow the doctrine of absolute priority and do not allow a grace period. — Sometimes shortened to grace. Cf. STATUTORY BAR; absolute novelty under NOVELTY.

gradatim (grə-day-təm), adv. (16c) [Latin] Roman law. Gradually; by successive degrees of relationship. • Gradatim refers to the step-by-step admission of successors when there is no heir next in line. See GRADUS.

grade, n. Criminal law. An incremental step in the scale of punishments for offenses, based on a particular offense's seriousness <several grades of murder>. See DEGREE (2).

graded offense. See OFFENSE (1).

grading. The fixing of a criminal offense at a level of seriousness, such as first degree, second degree, or third degree (in reference to a felony), or Class A, Class B, or Class C (in reference to a misdemeanor). See DEGREE OF CRIME. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨28.]

gradual method. An intestate-inheritance scheme that gives priority to relatives who are nearest in degree of consanguinity. • This method dates back to the English Statute of Distributions (1670). Cf. PARENTELIC METHOD; UNIVERSAL INHERITANCE RULE.

graduated lease. See LEASE.

graduated mortgage. See graduated-payment mortgage under MORTGAGE.

graduated-payment adjustable-rate mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

graduated-payment mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

graduated tax. See TAX.

gradus (gray-dəs), n. [Latin "step"] 1. Roman law. A step or degree in the familial relationship. • The term identified a position in the order of succession under a will. 2. Hist. A degree, rank, or grade; specif., the rank of a master-in-chancery or a serjeant-at-law.

graffer (graf-ər). (15c) Hist. A notary or scrivener. — Also termed graffarius.

grafium (graf-ee-əm). Hist. A register or cartulary of deeds and other documents establishing title to property, esp. real property. — Also spelled grafium.

grafio (gray-fee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A baron; a viscount. • A grafio was inferior to a count. 2. A fiscal judge, responsible for collecting taxes and fines. • The term was chiefly used among early European nations.

graft, n. (14c) 1. The act of using a position of trust to gain money or property dishonestly; esp., a public official's fraudulent acquisition of public funds. 2. Money or property gained illegally or unfairly.

Graham factors. (1966) Patents. A three-part test for determining obviousness under § 103 of the Patent Act of 1952, looking at (1) the scope and content of the prior art, (2) the differences between the prior art and the patent claims, and (3) the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art. Graham v. John Deere Co. of Kansas City, 383 U.S. 1, 86 S.Ct. 684 (1966). See NONOBVIOUSNESS. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 16.]

Grain Inspection, Packers, and Stockyards Administration. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for helping to market meat, cereals, and related agricultural products, and for promoting fair trade practices. — Abbr. GIPSA.

grain rent. See crop rent under RENT (1).

granage. (16c) Hist. A duty consisting of one-twentieth of the salt imported by an alien into London.

granatarius (gran-ə-tair-ee-əs). [Law Latin] Hist. An officer in charge of a granary, esp. one in charge of a religious house's granary.

grand, adj. (17c) Of or relating to a crime involving the theft of money or property valued more than a statutorily established amount, and therefore considered more serious than those involving a lesser amount <grand theft>. See grand larceny under LARCENY. Cf. PETTY. [Cases: Larceny ⇨ 23.]

grand assize. See ASSIZE (5).

grand bill of sale. See BILL (7).

grand cape. See cape magnum under CAPE.

grand coutumier de pays et duché de Normandie (gron koo-t[y]oo-myay də pay ay də-shay də nor-man-dee). [French] Hist. A collection of the common or customary laws of the Duchy of Normandy. • The code was probably compiled in the 13th century, and it still remains the law of Jersey, except to the extent that it has been modified by later legislation and judicial decisions. See CLAMEUR DE HARO.

Grand Day. English law. 1. Hist. One of four holy days on which the courts were not in session. • Each of the four court terms had a Grand Day. The four Grand Days were Candlemas Day (February 2), Ascension Day (March 25), St. John the Baptist Day (June 24), and All Saints' Day (November 1). The Inns of Court and of Chancery ceremoniously observed each Grand Day. 2. A day in each term on which the Benchers of the Inns of Court host ceremonial dinners in their halls. See BENCHER. Cf. TERM (6).

grandfather, vb. (1953) To cover (a person) with the benefits of a grandfather clause <the statute sets the drinking age at 21 but grandfathers those who are 18 or older on the statute's effective date>.

grandfather clause. (1900) 1. Hist. A clause in the constitutions of some Southern states exempting from suffrage restrictions the descendants of men who could vote before the Civil War. • The U.S. Supreme Court held that a clause of this kind in the Oklahoma Constitution violated the 15th Amendment. Guinn v. United States, 238 U.S. 347, 35 S.Ct. 926 (1915). 2. A provision that creates an exemption from the law's effect for something that existed before the law's effective date; specif., a statutory or regulatory clause that exempts a class of persons or transactions because of circumstances existing before the new rule or regulation takes effect. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 228.] 3. In a government contract, a provision that immunizes the contractor against any changes in federal law that would otherwise adversely affect the contract. • For example, the government may promise to cover any increased costs that arise from a change in the law, even though the contractor would bear them for any other reason. 4. In a construction contract, a general and inclusive provision that makes a party responsible for dealing with risks, whether expected or unexpected.

grand inquest. See INQUEST.

grand jury. (15c) A body of (usu. 16 to 23) people who are chosen to sit permanently for at least a month — and sometimes a year — and who, in ex parte proceedings, decide whether to issue indictments. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 6. • If the grand jury decides that evidence is strong enough to hold a suspect for trial, it returns a bill of indictment (a true bill) charging the suspect with a specific crime. — Also termed accusing jury; presenting jury; jury of indictment. Cf. petit jury under JURY. [Cases: Grand Jury ⇨ 1.]

"The grand jury serves — or may serve — two distinct functions. One is a screening function; the grand jury evaluates evidence supporting possible charges and returns an indictment only in those cases in which the evidence amounts to at least probable cause. The other is an investigational function; the grand jury sometimes develops information that is of value in determining whether grounds for a charge exist and — perhaps incidentally — in proving that charge at the defendant's later criminal trial." Frank W. Miller et al., Cases and Materials on Criminal Justice Administration 546 (3d ed. 1986).

investigative grand jury. (1960) A grand jury whose primary function is to examine possible crimes and develop evidence not currently available to the prosecution. — Also termed investigatory grand jury.

runaway grand jury. (1959) A grand jury that acts essentially in opposition to the prosecution, as by calling its own witnesses, perversely failing to return an indictment that the prosecution has requested, or returning an indictment that the prosecution did not request.

screening grand jury. (1990) A grand jury whose primary function is to decide whether to issue an indictment.

special grand jury. (1854) A grand jury specially summoned, usu. when the regular grand jury either has already been discharged or has not been drawn; a grand jury with limited authority. — Also termed additional grand jury; extraordinary grand jury. [Cases: Grand Jury ↷10.]

Grand Jury Clause. (1949) The clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring an indictment by a grand jury before a person can be tried for serious offenses. [Cases: Grand Jury ↷2.]

grand-jury witness. See WITNESS.

grand larceny. See LARCENY.

grand list. See ASSESSMENT ROLL.

grandparent application. See PATENT APPLICATION.

grandparent rights. A grandfather's or grandmother's rights in seeking visitation with a grandchild. ● By statute in most states, in certain circumstances a grandparent may seek court-ordered visitation with a grandchild. Typically these circumstances include the death of the grandparents' child (the child's parent) and the divorce of the child's parents. But the United States Supreme Court has held that the primary, constitutionally protected right of decision-making regarding association with a child lies with the child's parents. As a general rule, if the parent is a fit and proper guardian and objects to visitation, the parent's will prevails. Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 120 S.Ct. 2054 (2000). [Cases: Child Custody ↷283.] grandparent visitation. See VISITATION.

Grand Remonstrance (ri-mon-strants). Hist. A protest document issued by the House of Commons in 1641, setting forth numerous political grievances against Charles I. ● The document demanded three primary remedial measures: (1) improvements in the administration of justice, (2) appointment of trustworthy ministers, and (3) enforcement of the laws against Roman Catholics. It was the first major split between the Royalist and Parliamentary parties, and it led Charles to seek the arrest of the five members who pushed the document through the Commons.

grand serjeanty. See SERJEANTY.

Grand Survey. See grand inquest (2) under INQUEST.

grange (graynj). (14c) 1. Hist. A farm furnished with all the necessities for husbandry, such as a barn, granary, and stables; esp., an outlying farm that belonged to a religious establishment or a feudal lord. 2. (cap.) A social, educational, and political organization, formally called the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, that informs its members about agriculture-related legislation and proposals, and represents farm interests in lobbying government. ● The Grange was formed in 1867 and soon became the foundation of the Granger Movement, a 19th-century political force that protested economic abuses that increased farmers' costs while forcing down prices for agricultural products. Movement followers (called Grangers) controlled several Midwest state legislatures and passed

Granger laws that set maximum rates for railroads, warehouses, and grain elevators. Railroads and other interested parties challenged the constitutionality of these laws in what have become known as the Granger Cases.

Granger Cases (grayn-jør). Six U.S. Supreme Court decisions holding that the police power of the states enabled them, through legislation, to regulate fees charged by common carriers, warehouses, and grain elevators. ● The cases, decided in 1876, arose out of grangers' (i.e., farmers') frustration with the inflated prices they were paying to store and transport their agricultural products. When several state legislatures passed laws regulating those prices, the affected businesses sued to have the laws overturned on grounds that they violated the Commerce Clause and the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment. The Court rejected these claims, holding that the activities involved affected the public interest and were therefore subject to the government's regulatory authority. See GRANGE (2).

grant, n. (13c) 1. An agreement that creates a right or interest in favor of a person or that effects a transfer of a right or interest from one person to another. ● Examples include leases, easements, charges, patents, franchises, powers, and licenses. 2. The formal transfer of real property. [Cases: Deeds ↷3.] 3. The document by which a transfer is effected; esp., DEED. 4. The property or property right so transferred.

community grant. A grant of real property made by a government (or sometimes by an individual) for communal use, to be held in common with no right to sell. ● A community grant may set out specific, communal uses for the property, such as for grazing animals or maintaining a playground. Cf. private grant. [Cases: Public Lands ↷223(4).]

imperfect grant. 1. A grant that requires the grantor to do something before the title passes to another. Cf. perfect grant. 2. A grant that does not convey all rights and complete title against both private persons and government, so that the granting person or political authority may later disavow the grant. See Paschal v. Perex, 7 Tex. 368 (1851).

inclusive grant. A deed or grant that describes the boundaries of the land conveyed and excepts certain parcels within those boundaries from the conveyance, usu. because those parcels of land are owned or claimed by others. — Also termed inclusive deed.

office grant. A grant made by a legal officer because the owner is either unwilling or unable to execute a deed to pass title, as in the case of a tax deed. See tax deed under DEED.

perfect grant. A grant for which the grantor has done everything required to pass a complete title, and the grantee has done everything required to receive and enjoy the property in fee. Cf. imperfect grant (1).

private grant. A grant of real property made to an individual for his or her private use, including the right to sell it. • Private grants made by a government are often found in the chains of title for land outside the original 13 states, esp. in former Spanish and Mexican possessions. Cf. community grant.

grantback, n. (1956) A license-agreement provision requiring the licensee to assign or license back to the licensor any improvements that the licensee might make to a patent or other proprietary right. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 213.]

grantee. (15c) One to whom property is conveyed.

grant-in-aid. (19c) 1. A sum of money given by a governmental agency to a person or institution for a specific purpose; esp., federal funding for a state public program. [Cases: United States ⇨ 82(2).] 2. Hist. AID (1).

granting clause. (18c) The words that transfer an interest in a deed or other instrument, esp. an oil-and-gas lease. • In an oil-and-gas lease, the granting clause typically specifies the rights transferred, the uses permitted, and the substances covered by the lease. [Cases: Deeds ⇨ 28-37; Mines and Minerals ⇨ 73, 73.1.]

grant of rights. Copyright. A copyright owner's pre-publication assignment to the publisher of all rights in exchange for a payment or an advance on royalties.

grantor. (17c) 1. One who conveys property to another. [Cases: Deeds ⇨ 10, 30.] 2. SETTLOR (1).

grantor-retained annuity trust. See TRUST.

grantor-retained income trust. See TRUST.

grantor-retained unitrust. See TRUST.

grantor's lien. See vendor's lien under LIEN.

grantor trust. See TRUST.

grant to uses. Hist. A conveyance of legal title to real property to one person for the benefit of another. • If, for example, A conveyed land to B and his heirs to the use of C and his heirs, B — the feoffee to uses — acquired seisin in and had possession of the land and was considered the legal owner. C — the cestui que use — was considered the equitable owner of the land and was entitled to the land's rents, profits, and benefits. Because the cestui que use did not have seisin in the land, he was not subject to feudal payments. From the 13th century forward, the grant to uses was an increasingly popular mode of conveyance. See CESTUI QUE USE; STATUTE OF USES; USE (4).

grass hearth. Hist. A tenant's customary service, consisting of the tenant's bringing his plow to the lord's land and plowing it for one day.

grassum (gras-əm). [Law Latin] 1. Scots law. A single lease payment made in addition to the periodic payments due under an agreement; a payment in addition to the rent paid by a tenant to the landlord. Pl. grassums.

"Grassum; an anticipation of rent in a gross or lump sum . . . In questions with singular successors there is no limitation of the power to take grassums, only the rent must not be thereby diminished so as to be altogether elusory. In regard, however, to lands under entail, the heir in possession must administer the estate secundum bonum et aequum, taking no more of the annually accruing rents and profits than he leaves to descend to his successors. Hence, grassums, as being, in effect, anticipations of the future rents, to the prejudice of succeeding heirs, are held to be struck at by the prohibition against alienation." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Laws of Scotland 492 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

2. GRESSUME. 3. GERSUM (1). 4. GERSUM (2).

GRAT. abbr. GRANTOR-RETAINED ANNUITY TRUST.

gratia curiae (gray-shee-ə kyoor-ee-ee or -i). [Latin] Favor of the court. Cf. RIGOR JURIS.

gratia mandatarii (gray-shee-ə man-də-tair-ee-1). [Latin] Hist. For the sake of the mandatary. • The phrase appeared in reference to the irrevocability of a mandate given solely for the mandatary's benefit.

"Gratia mandatarii . . . In the general case, a mandate, being for the benefit of the mandant, may be recalled by him at pleasure. Mandates, however, which are granted solely for the sake (or advantage) of the mandatary, such as the mandate contained in the registration clause of a deed, whereby the grantor gives authority for its registration, are not revocable." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 237 (4th ed. 1894).

gratification. (16c) Archaic. A voluntarily given reward or recompense for a service or benefit; a gratuity.

gratis (grat-is or gray-tis), adj. Free; without compensation.

gratis dictum. See DICTUM.

gratuitous (grə-t[y]oo-ə-təs), adj. (17c) 1. Done or performed without obligation to do so; given without consideration in circumstances that do not otherwise impose a duty <gratuitous promise>. Cf. ONEROUS (3). 2. Done unnecessarily <gratuitous obscenities>. — gratuity, n.

gratuitous allowance. See ALLOWANCE (1).

Greaser Law. Hist. Slang. An anti-vagrancy statute that gave law-enforcement authorities broad discretion to arrest, fine, and jail people of Hispanic appearance who had no visible means of support. • This statute was enacted in California in 1855 and repealed in the mid-20th century. The term greaser is racially derogatory. — Also termed Greaser Act.

great bodily injury. See serious bodily injury under INJURY.

great care. See CARE.

great fee. See FEE (2).

Great Inquest. See grand inquest (2) under INQUEST.

Great Lakes rule. Maritime law. The statutory provision that an admiralty litigant is entitled to a jury trial in a contract or tort action if the lawsuit arises from the operation of a commercial vessel on the Great Lakes or the navigable waters connecting them. See 28 USCA § 1873. [Cases: Admiralty ↻80.]

"The most important distinction between the law and admiralty 'sides' of federal court is that trial by jury is guaranteed for law claims through the Seventh Amendment, but where the case is maintained as an admiralty claim the litigant has neither constitutional nor statutory right to a jury trial. The one exception is the 'Great Lakes Rule'" Frank L. Maraist & Thomas C. Galligan Jr., Admiralty in a Nutshell 358 (4th ed. 2001).

Great Law, The. Hist. The first code of laws enacted in Pennsylvania. • The Great Law was passed in 1682 by an assembly that had been called by William Penn.

great pond. A body of water larger than ten acres, and thus subject to public ownership. • This term applies in Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts. — Also termed public pond. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ↻113.]

Great Survey. See grand inquest (2) under INQUEST.

great tithe. See TITHE.

Great Waters Program. A scheme created by Congress in 1990 to make the Environmental Protection Agency more directly responsible for protecting large bodies of fresh water and coastal waters from environmental harm caused by air pollution. Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, 42 USCA § 7412(m).

Great Writ. See HABEAS CORPUS.

gree (gree), n. [Law French] (13c) Hist. A satisfaction received by a party for an offense or injury against the party. See SATISFACTION (1).

"Gree comes of the French word gree, good liking; and it signifies in our law, contentment or satisfaction; as in the statute of 1 R. 2, c. 15, to make gree to the parties is to give them contentment or satisfaction for an offence done unto them." Termes de la Ley 247 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

greenback, n. (ca. 1862) Slang. A legal-tender note of the United States; any note issued by a federal reserve bank. • The term was coined in 1862 when the backs of American paper currency were first printed in green ink.

green card. (1969) A registration card evidencing a resident alien's status as a permanent U.S. resident.

green-card marriage. See MARRIAGE (1).

Green Cloth. See BOARD OF GREEN CLOTH.

greenfield site. (ca. 1962) 1. Land that has never been developed. • Such land is presumably uncontaminated. Cf. BROWNFIELD SITE. 2. Property acquired as an investment, esp. for establishing a new business.

green goods. Slang. Counterfeit money.

greenmail. (1983) 1. The act or practice of buying enough stock in a company to threaten a hostile takeover and then selling the stock back to the corporation at an inflated price. 2. The money paid for stock in the corporation's buyback. Cf. BLACKMAIL (1); FEEMAIL; GRAYMAIL. 3. A shareholder's act of filing or threatening to file a derivative action and then seeking a disproportionate settlement.

Green Paper on Copyright and the Challenge of Technology. Copyright. A 1988 European Commission publication that laid out a plan to harmonize the copyright laws of member nations, esp. laws relating to information technology. • The Green Paper was followed by a series of directives that mandated uniform policies regarding copyright and new technologies. — Usu. shortened to Green Paper.

Green River ordinance. A local licensing law that protects residents from unwanted peddlers and salespersons, typically by prohibiting door-to-door solicitations without prior consent. • The ordinance takes its name from Green River, Wyoming, which enacted the first such law in the early 20th century before others came into vogue during the 1930s and 1940s throughout the United States. [Cases: Hawkers and Peddlers ↷2.]

green wax. (pl.) Hist. An Exchequer order (an estreat) directing a sheriff to collect the fines and amercements listed in the order. • The name derives from the color of the wax the Exchequer used on the estreat to certify its authenticity. See ESTREAT.

guarantee (gar-ən-tee), n. (17c) 1. The assurance that a contract or legal act will be duly carried out. 2. GUARANTY (1).

"In practice, guarantee, n., is the usual term, seen often, for example, in the context of consumer warranties or other assurances of quality or performance. Guaranty, in contrast, is now used primarily in financial and banking contexts in the sense "a promise to answer for the debt of another." Guaranty is now rarely seen in nonlegal writing, whether in G.B. or in the U.S." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 394 (2d ed. 1995).

3. Something given or existing as security, such as to fulfill a future engagement or a condition subsequent. [Cases: Guaranty ↷1.] 4. One to whom a guaranty is made. — Also spelled guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty ↷38.]

guarantee, vb. (18c) 1. To assume a suretyship obligation; to agree to answer for a debt or default. [Cases: Guaranty ↷1.] 2. To promise that a contract or legal act will be duly carried out. [Cases: Guaranty ↷11.] 3. To give security to.

guarantee clause. (1887) 1. A provision in a contract, deed, or mortgage by which one person promises to pay the obligation of another. [Cases: Guaranty ↷33, 36.] 2. (cap.) U.S. Const. art. IV, § 4, under which the federal government ensures for the states both a republican form of government and protection from invasion or internal insurrection. • The U.S. Supreme Court has consistently treated claims under the Guarantee Clause as nonjusticiable political questions. See Pacific States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Oregon, 223 U.S. 118, 82 S.Ct. 224 (1912).

guaranteed annual wage plan. Labor law. A wage-payment method in which the employer agrees either to pay employees a predetermined minimum sum each year or to provide a minimum number of hours of employment each year. • A wide variety of guaranteed annual wage plans are used. For example, an employer may agree to pay employees wages for each week in the year, even though work may not be available at certain times of the year. The purpose of such a plan is to provide a stable labor force year-round.

guarantee of title. Property. A warranty that the title to a piece of real property is vested in a particular person, given by a title company or abstract company, and based on a title searcher's opinion of the status of the property's title. The guarantee is usu. backed by insurance to cover damages resulting from the title searcher's oversight or negligence in finding recorded legal instruments. Cf. title insurance under INSURANCE. [Cases: Abstracts of Title ↷1; Covenants ↷46.]

guarantee treaty. See TREATY (1).

guarantor. (19c) One who makes a guaranty or gives security for a debt. • While a surety's liability begins with that of the principal, a guarantor's liability does not begin until the principal debtor is in default. Cf. SURETY (1). [Cases: Guaranty ↷29, 33, 44.]

"A guarantor either guarantees payment or collection, depending on the words used. 'Payment guaranteed' or equivalent words added to a signature mean the signer will pay the instrument if it is not paid when due without a need for the holder to resort to another party. 'Collection guaranteed' means resort must first be had to others." Fred H. Miller & Alvin C. Harrell, The Law of Modern Payment Systems § 5.02, at 195 (2003).

guarantor of collectibility. (1881) One who guarantees a debtor's solvency and is under a duty to pay only if the creditor is unable to collect from the principal debtor after exhausting all legal remedies, including demand, suit, judgment, and any supplementary proceedings. [Cases: Guaranty ↷33, 45, 77(2).]

guarantor of payment. (1814) One who guarantees payment of a negotiable instrument when it is due without the holder first seeking payment from another party. • A guarantor of payment is liable only if "payment guaranteed" or equivalent words are added to the guarantor's indorsement. [Cases: Guaranty ↷35, 45, 77.]

guarantor trust. See TRUST.

guaranty (gar-ən-tee), n. (16c) 1. A promise to answer for the payment of some debt, or the performance of some duty, in case of the failure of another who is liable in the first instance. • The term is most common in finance and banking contexts. While a warranty relates to things (not persons), is not collateral, and need not be in writing, a guaranty is an undertaking that a person will pay or do some act, is collateral to the duty of the primary obligor, and must be in writing. On the spelling of guaranty vs. guarantee, see the quotation at GUARANTEE (2). — Also termed guaranty contract. [Cases: Guaranty ↷1.]

"Both guaranty and warranty are undertakings by one party to another to indemnify the party assured against some possible default or defect. But a guaranty relates to the future, as a collateral promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in case another fails to perform his duty. A warranty relates to the present or past, and is an independent promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in the event that the facts warranted are not as the promisor states them to be when the contract is made. A warranty is broken as soon as it is made if the facts are not as represented, and is enforceable though oral; whereas a guaranty is not breached until a future default occurs, and is unenforceable unless in writing." Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 23 (1950).

"A transaction of guaranty involves at least three parties: a promisor, a creditor (the person to whom the promise is made), and a debtor — although at the time the promise is made, the person denominated the 'creditor' need not have extended the credit to the person denominated as the 'debtor.' The usual guaranty situation arises when the promisor makes a promise to the creditor either as to the solvency of the debtor or as to the payment of the debt." 38 Am. Jur. 2d Guaranty § 1, at 996 (1968).

absolute guaranty. (18c) 1. An unqualified promise that the principal will pay or perform. [Cases: Guaranty ↷42(1).] 2. A guarantor's contractual promise to perform some act for the creditor — such as paying money or delivering property — if the principal debtor defaults.

conditional guaranty. (1813) A guaranty that requires the performance of some condition by the creditor

contingent guaranty. (1843) A guaranty in which the guarantor will not be liable unless a specified event occurs.

continuing guaranty. (1817) A guaranty that governs a course of dealing for an indefinite time or by a succession of credits. — Also termed open guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty ↻38.]

cross-stream guaranty. A guaranty made by a company for the obligation of another company when both are owned by the same parent company or individual.

downstream guaranty. 1. A parent corporation's guaranty of a subsidiary's obligations. 2. A guaranty made for a company by a guarantor who is also a partner, member, or stockholder of the company.

general guaranty. (17c) 1. A guaranty addressed to no specific person, so that anyone who acts on it can enforce it. 2. A guaranty for the principal's default on obligations that the principal undertakes with anyone.

good-guy guaranty. A limited guaranty by a third-person that leased property or collateral will be kept in good condition and returned to the lessor or lender if a default occurs. • Good-guy guaranties are most commonly associated with real-property leases. — Also written good-guy guarantee. — Also termed good-guy clause. [Cases: Guaranty ↻36(8).]

guaranty of collection. (1843) A guaranty that is conditioned on the creditor's having first exhausted legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of collectibility under GUARANTOR.

guaranty of payment. (1811) A guaranty that is not conditioned on the creditor's exhausting legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of payment under GUARANTOR.

irrevocable guaranty (i-rev-ə-kə-bəl). (1898) A guaranty that cannot be terminated unless the other parties consent. [Cases: Guaranty ↻24.]

limited guaranty. (1831) An agreement to answer for a debt arising from a single transaction. — Also termed noncontinuing guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty ↻38(1).]

open guaranty. See continuing guaranty revocable guaranty. (1936) A guaranty that the guarantor may terminate without any other party's consent. [Cases: Guaranty ↻24.]

special guaranty. (18c) 1. A guaranty addressed to a particular person or group of persons, who are the only ones who can enforce it. [Cases: Guaranty ↻29, 32.] 2. A guaranty that names a definite person as obligee and that can be accepted only by the person named.

specific guaranty. (18c) A guaranty of a single debt or obligation.

upstream guaranty. A guaranty made by a corporate subsidiary for the parent corporation's obligations.

guardian, n. (15c) 1. One who has the legal authority and duty to care for another's person or property, esp. because of the other's infancy, incapacity, or disability. • A guardian may be appointed either for all purposes or for a specific purpose. — Abbr. gdn. — Also termed custodian. See CONSERVATOR. Cf. WARD (1). [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↻1; Mental Health ↻101.]

chancery guardian (chan-sər-ee). A guardian appointed by a court of chancery to manage both the person and the estate of the ward. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↻10, 17, 36.]

domestic guardian. A guardian appointed in the state in which the ward is domiciled.

foreign guardian. A guardian appointed by a court in a state other than the one in which the ward is domiciled. • A foreign guardian cares for the ward's property that is located in the state of appointment. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↻166; Mental Health ↻194.]

general guardian. A guardian who has general care and control of the ward's person and estate. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↻29, 36; Mental Health ↻484.]

guardian ad litem (ad lɪ-tem or -təm). (18c) A guardian, usu. a lawyer, appointed by the court to appear in a lawsuit on behalf of an incompetent or minor party. — Abbr. GAL. — Also termed special advocate; special guardian; law guardian. Cf. NEXT FRIEND; attorney ad litem under ATTORNEY. [Cases: Infants ↻76, 205; Mental Health ↻485.]

"[I]t is necessary to determine whether the lawyer has been appointed as a guardian ad litem (GAL) charged with representing the child's best interests, or as an advocate, serving as counsel to the child . . . From the distinction between guardian and advocate flow a series of important consequences, including such matters as whether the attorney may file motions and examine witnesses, whether the attorney may file a report with the court, and whether the attorney may testify. Moreover, in most jurisdictions a GAL has an absolute quasi-judicial immunity for lawsuits for negligence Although a non-lawyer cannot serve as counsel to the child, such an individual might be a GAL or 'special advocate' in some states. Courts have struggled to clarify these roles, and define how children's representatives may participate in different types of proceedings." Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 1078 (6th ed. 2000).

guardian by custom. Hist. A person who, under local custom, had the right to act as a minor's guardian.

guardian by election. A guardian chosen by a ward who would otherwise be without one. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷19.]

guardian by estoppel. See quasi-guardian.

guardian by nature. Hist. The parental guardian of an heir apparent who has not yet reached the age of 21. • Although the common law recognized the father as a guardian by nature and the mother as one only after the father's death, most states have given both parents equal rights of guardianship over their children (see, e.g., N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law § 81). — Also termed natural guardian. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷4.]

guardian by nurture. Hist. The parental guardian of a child who is not the heir apparent, lasting until the child reaches the age of 14. — Also termed guardian for nurture.

"There are also guardians for nurture, which are, of course, the father or mother, till the infant attains the age of fourteen years and, in default of father or mother, the ordinary usually assigns some discreet persons to take care of the infant's personal estate, and to provide for his maintenance and education." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 449 (1765).

guardian by statute. See statutory guardian.

guardian de son tort (də sawn [or son] tor[t]). See quasi-guardian.

guardian for nurture. See guardian by nurture.

guardian in chivalry. Hist. A guardian who, by virtue of knight's service, had custody of the body and lands of a male heir under 21 or a female heir under 14. • This type of guardian had no accountability for profits.

guardian in socage. New York law. A guardian for a child who has acquired lands by descent. • A guardian is usu. a relative who could not possibly inherit from the child. This type of guardianship applies to both the person and the property of the child and, historically, lasted only until the child was 14, when the child was allowed to select a guardian; now it lasts until the child reaches age 18 or is emancipated.

guardian of property. See guardian of the estate.

guardian of the estate. A guardian responsible for taking care of the property of someone who is incapable of caring for his or her own property because of infancy, incapacity, or disability. — Also termed guardian of property. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷1, 36; Mental Health ↷211, 216.]

guardian of the person. A guardian responsible for taking care of someone who is incapable of caring for himself or herself because of infancy, incapacity, or disability. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷1, 29; Mental Health ↷101.]

natural guardian. 1. Hist. The eldest son's father, until the son turned 21. 2. In the absence of statute, the father of a legitimate child until the child reaches the age of 21. • A father of illegitimate children may be appointed as their guardian upon the mother's death. 3. Most commonly and by statute, either the father or the mother of a minor child — each bearing the title simultaneously. • If one parent dies, the other is the natural guardian. See guardian by nature. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷4.] partial guardian. A guardian whose rights, duties, and powers are strictly limited to those specified in a court order.

quasi-guardian. A guardian who assumes that role without any authority. • Such a person may be made to account as guardian. — Also termed guardian by estoppel; guardian de son tort. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷7.]

special guardian. (17c) 1. A guardian who has special or limited powers over the ward's person or estate. • Examples are guardians who have custody of the estate but not of the person, those who have custody of the person but not of the estate, and guardians ad litem. — Also termed (in civil law) curator ad hoc. See CURATOR (2). 2. See guardian ad litem. [Cases: Mental Health ↷495.]

standby guardian. A parent-designated guardian who is appointed to assume responsibility for a child at a future date if the child's parent becomes incapable of caring for the child but who does not divest the parent of custodial rights. • Several states have enacted statutes providing for a standby guardian in the case of a terminally ill single parent. A standby guardian assumes responsibility for a child during periods of the parent's incapacity and upon the parent's death. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷10.]

statutory guardian. A guardian appointed by a court having special statutory jurisdiction. — Also termed guardian by statute.

successor guardian. An alternate guardian named in a parent's will against the possibility that the first nominee cannot or will not serve as guardian. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↷27; Mental Health ↷178.]

testamentary guardian. A guardian nominated by a parent's will for the person and property of a child until the child reaches the age of majority.

2. Hist. A mesne lord who was entitled to treat an infant heir's lands for all practical purposes as the lord's own, enjoying fully their use and whatever profits they yielded. • At the end of the guardianship, when the heir reached majority, no accounting was owed by the mesne lord.

guardian of the poor. Hist. A person in charge of the relief and maintenance of the poor in a parish. • guardian of the spiritualities. Eccles. law. A person who exercises the spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction of a diocese during a vacancy in the see or the absence of the bishop.

guardian of the temporalities. Eccles. law. The person to whom custody of the secular possessions of a vacant see or abbey is committed by the Crown. • Temporalities (secular possessions) are the land, revenue, and tenements that archbishops and bishops have had annexed to their sees.

guardianship. (15c) 1. The fiduciary relationship between a guardian and a ward or other incapacitated person, whereby the guardian assumes the power to make decisions about the ward's person or property. • A guardianship is almost always an involuntary procedure imposed by the state on the ward. Cf. CONSERVATORSHIP; INTERDICTION. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⇨ 1; Mental Health ⇨ 101.] 2. The duties and responsibilities of a guardian. — Also termed GUARDAGE.

ancillary guardianship. A subservient and subsidiary guardianship in a state other than that in which guardianship is originally granted. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⇨ 166–172; Mental Health ⇨ 194.1.]

guardianship of the estate. A guardianship in which the guardian can make decisions only about matters regarding the ward's assets and property. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⇨ 33; Mental Health ⇨ 211.]

guardianship of the person. A guardianship in which the guardian is authorized to make all significant decisions affecting the ward's well-being, including the ward's physical custody, education, health, activities, personal relationships, and general welfare. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⇨ 29; Mental Health ⇨ 101.]

plenary guardianship. A guardianship in which the guardian can make decisions about both the ward's estate and the ward's person. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 101.]

standby guardianship. A guardianship in which a parent designates a guardian to assume responsibility for a child at a future date, if the child's parent becomes incapable of caring for the child, but without divesting the parent of custodial rights.

gubernator navis (g[y]oo-bər-nay-tər nay-vis). [Latin "ship helmsman"] Roman law. The pilot or steersman of a ship. • The gubernator navis could be sued for damages if he negligently caused a collision.

guerrilla warfare. See WARFARE.

guest. (13c) 1. A person who is entertained or to whom hospitality is extended. 2. A person who pays for services at an establishment, esp. a hotel or restaurant. [Cases: Innkeepers ⇨ 8.] 3. A nonpaying passenger in a motor vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 181(2).]

social guest. Torts. A guest who is invited to enter or remain on another person's property primarily for private entertainment as opposed to entertainment open to the general public. See LICENSEE (2). [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 1041.]

guest statute. (1914) A law that bars a nonpaying passenger in a noncommercial vehicle from suing the host-driver for damages resulting from the driver's ordinary negligence. • Though once common, guest statutes remain in force in only a few states. — Also termed automobile-guest statute. Cf. FAMILY-PURPOSE RULE. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 181.]

guilty, n. 1. A plea of a criminal defendant who does not contest the charges. 2. A jury verdict convicting the defendant of the crime charged.

guilty but mentally ill. (1977) A form of verdict in a criminal case whereby the jury rejects the defendant's insanity defense but still recommends psychiatric treatment because the defendant is mentally ill. — Abbr. GBMI; GMI. — Also termed guilty but insane; guilty of the act, but so insane as not to be responsible. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 286.10.]

guilty mind. See MENS REA.

guilty plea. See PLEA (1).

gun-control law. (1968) A statute or ordinance that regulates the sale, possession, or use of firearms. ● Gun-control laws vary widely among the states, and many cities have gun-control ordinances. Federal law restricts and regulates the illegal sale, possession, and use of firearms. 18 USCA §§ 921–930. See BRADY ACT. [Cases: Weapons ↪3.]

Gun-Free Schools Act. A federal law designed to eliminate weapons in schools. 20 USCA § 7151. ● The Gun-Free Schools Act provides that each state receiving federal funds for elementary and secondary schools must require school districts to expel for one year any student found to have brought a weapon to school. The Act does, however, provide for a case-by-gun-jumping. Slang. The act of unlawfully soliciting the public's purchase of securities before the SEC approves a registration statement; the making of offers after the filing of a registration statement, but before its effective date, when such offers violate the Securities Act. — Also termed conditioning the market. See REGISTRATION STATEMENT.

gwalstow (gwawl-stoh). [fr. Old English gwal “gallows” + stow “place”] Hist. A place where criminals were executed.

gynecocracy (gɪ-nə-kok-rə-see also jɪn-ə or jɪ-nə-). (17c) Government by a woman or by women. — Also spelled gynaecocracy.

gyve (jɪv). (14c) (usu. pl.) Hist. A shackle for the leg.

H

H. abbr. 1. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. 2. House report. 3. See house bill under BILL (3). 4. In the citation of English statutes, a king named Henry. 5. In the Year Books, the Hilary term. See YEAR BOOKS (3); HILARY SITTINGS. 6. In tax assessments and other such official reports, a house.

habe (hay-bee). [Law Latin] A form of the salutatory expression ave ("hail"). — Also termed have (hay-vee).

habeas corpora juratorum (hay-bee-əs kor-pər-ə juur-ə-tor-əm). [Law Latin "that you have the bodies of the jurors"] Hist. A writ commanding the sheriff to bring in jurors and, if necessary, to take their lands and goods as security to ensure their attendance in court for a trial setting. • This writ issued from the Court of Common Pleas and served the same purpose as a distringas juratores in the King's Bench. The writ was abolished in 1852.

habeas corpus (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs). [Law Latin "that you have the body"] (18c) A writ employed to bring a person before a court, most frequently to ensure that the person's imprisonment or detention is not illegal (habeas corpus ad subjiciendum). • In addition to being used to test the legality of an arrest or commitment, the writ may be used to obtain judicial review of (1) the regularity of the extradition process, (2) the right to or amount of bail, or (3) the jurisdiction of a court that has imposed a criminal sentence. — Abbr. H.C. — Sometimes shortened to habeas. — Also termed writ of habeas corpus; Great Writ. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻201.]

habeas corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad di-lib-ə-ran-dəm et ri-sip-ee-en-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to consider and receive"] Hist. A writ used to remove a person for trial from one county to the county where the person allegedly committed the offense. Cf. EXTRADITION.

habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad fay-shee-en-dəm et ri-sip-ee-en-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to do and receive"] Hist. A writ used in civil cases to remove the case, and also the body of the defendant, from

habeas corpus ad prosequendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad prahs-ə-kwen-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to prosecute"]. A writ used in criminal cases to bring before a court a prisoner to be tried on charges other than those for which the prisoner is currently being confined. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻243.]

habeas corpus ad respondendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad ree-spon-den-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to respond"] Hist. A writ used in civil cases to remove a person from one court's custody into that of another court, in which the person may then be sued.

habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad sat-is-fay-shee-en-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to make amends"] In England, a writ used to bring a prisoner against whom a judgment has been entered to some superior court so that the plaintiff can proceed to execute that judgment.

habeas corpus ad subjiciendum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad səb-jis-ee-en-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to submit to"] A writ directed to someone detaining another person and commanding that the detainee be brought to court. — Usu. shortened to habeas corpus. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻201.]

habeas corpus ad testificandum (hay-bee-əs kor-pəs ad tes-ti-fi-kan-dəm). [Law Latin "that you have the body to testify"] Hist. A writ used in civil and criminal cases to bring a prisoner to court to testify. [Cases: Witnesses ↻18.]

habeas corpus cum causa. See habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum.

Habeas Corpus Act. 1. One of the four great charters of English liberty (31 Car. 2. 1679), securing to English subjects speedy relief from all unlawful imprisonments. • The other three great charters are Magna Carta, the Petition of Right (3 Car. 1, 1628), and the Bill of Rights (1 Wm. & M. 1689). The Habeas Corpus Act does not apply in Scotland; the corresponding statute is the Criminal Procedure Act of 1701, ch. 6. 2. A statute deriving ultimately from the English statute and enacted in the United States as a constitutional guarantee of personal liberty. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻201-913.]

defining how long the interest granted to the lessee will extend. • Modern oil-and-gas leases typically provide for a primary term — a fixed number of years during which the lessee has no obligation to develop the premises — and a secondary term (for “so long thereafter as oil and gas produced”) once development takes place. Most jurisdictions require production of paying quantities to keep the lease in effect. — Often shortened to habendum. — Also termed term clause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻73.5.]

habendum et tenendum (hə-ben-dəm et tə-nen-dəm). [Law Latin] Hist. To have and to hold. • This formal phrase appeared in land deeds and defined the estate or interest being transferred. See HABENDUM CLAUSE; TENENDUM; TO HAVE AND TO HOLD.

habentes homines (hə-ben-teez hom-ə-neez), n. [Law Latin “men who have”] Hist. Rich men. — Also termed foesting-men.

habere (hə-beer-ee), vb. [Latin “to have”] Roman law. To have (the right to) something. • This term was sometimes distinguished from tenere (to hold) and possidere (to possess), with habere referring to the right, tenere to the fact, and possidere to both.

“Habere has two meanings; for we say that the owner of a thing ‘has’ it and also that a nonowner who holds the thing ‘has’ it. Lastly, we use the word in relation to property deposited with us.” Digest of Justinian 45.1.38.9 (Ulpian, Ad Sabinum 49).

habere facias possessionem (hə-beer-ee fay-shee-əs pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nəm), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have possession”] Hist. A writ giving a successful ejectment-action plaintiff the possession of the recovered land. • If the sheriff delivered more than the person was entitled to, a writ of rehabere facias seisinam could compel the sheriff to return the excess. — Often shortened to habere facias or hab. fa.

habere facias seisinam (hə-beer-ee fay-shee-əs see-zin-əm), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have seisin”] Hist. A writ of execution commanding the sheriff to give the applicant seisin of the recovered land. • This writ was the proper process for giving seisin of a freehold, as distinguished from giving only a chattel interest in land. See SEISIN.

habere facias visum (hə-beer-ee fay-shee-əs vi-səm or -zəm), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have a view”] Hist. A writ allowing a litigant to inspect the lands in controversy.

habere licere (hə-beer-ee li-seer-ee), vb. [Latin “to allow to have”] Roman law. To stipulate to a purchaser’s right to possess and enjoy property undisturbed. • The term denoted a seller’s duty to indemnify the purchaser if the purchaser was evicted. An evicted purchaser could raise an action on the stipulation or, under Justinian, an actio ex empto against the seller.

hab. fa. abbr. HABERE FACIAS POSSESSIONEM.

habili et competente forma (hab-ə-lɪ et kom-pə-ten-tee for-mə). [Latin] Hist. In a fit and competent manner.

habili modo (hab-ə-lɪ moh-doh). [Latin] Hist. In a fit manner; sufficiently.

habilis causa transferendi dominii (hab-ə-lis kaw-zə trans-fə-ren-dɪ də-min-ee-ɪ). [Law Latin] Hist. An adequate title for transferring the property. • The phrase appeared in reference to the grantor’s power and intention to convey the property; the title had to be sufficient to support the conveyance of property. — Also spelled habilis causa transferendi dominii.

habitability. (1890) The condition of a building in which inhabitants can live free of serious defects that might harm health and safety <lack of running water adversely affects the apartment’s habitability>.

habitability, implied warranty of. See implied warranty of habitability under WARRANTY (2).

habit and repute. [fr. Latin habitus et reputatus “held and reputed”] Scots law. A person’s reputation. • Marriage could formerly be constituted if one was generally held and reputed to be married. And it was an aggravation of theft to be held and reputed a thief.

habitant (a-bee-ton), n. [French] 1. Hist. French law. A person holding land in feudal tenure from a seignior. 2. A native of Canada of French descent, esp. one from the farming class.

habitatio (hab-ə-tay-shee-oh), n. [Latin “dwelling”] Roman law. The right to dwell (in a place); the right of free residence in another’s house; an urban servitude. • This right was usu. given by will and treated as a personal servitude. See urban servitude under SERVITUDE (2). Cf. USUFRUCT; USUS (1).

habitation. (14c) 1. The act of inhabiting; occupancy. 2. A dwelling place; a domicile. 3. Civil law. A nontransferable and nonhereditary right to dwell in the house of another. La. Civ. Code art. 630. See RESIDENCE; DOMICILE. Cf. USUFRUCT.

habit evidence. See EVIDENCE.

habitual, adj. (17c) 1. Customary; usual <habitual late sleeper>. 2. Recidivist <habitual offender>.

habitual criminal. See RECIDIVIST.

habitual drunkard. See DRUNKARD.

habitual offender. 1. See RECIDIVIST. 2. See OFFENDER.

habitual residence. See RESIDENCE.

hable (ab-əl), n. [Law French] Hist. A port or harbor; a station for ships.

hacienda particular (ah-syen-dah [or hah-see-en-də] pahr-tee-koo-lahr), n. Spanish law. Private property.

hacienda pública (ah-syen-dah [or hah-see-en-də] poo-blee-kah), n. Spanish law. 1. Public revenue or assets. 2. The public treasury; economic ministry.

hacienda social (ah-syen-dah [or hah-see-en-də] soh-syahl), n. Spanish law. Property belonging to a corporation or partnership.

hack, vb. To surreptitiously break into the computer, network, servers, or database of another person or organization. Cf. CRACK. — hacker, n.

had. Commenced or begun, as used in a statute providing that no legal proceeding may be had (usu. followed by the words or maintained) <no action for foreclosure may be had or maintained until the debtor has been given at least 30 days' notice>.

hadbote. See BOTE (2).

hadgonel (had-gə-nel), n. Hist. A tax or mulct.

Hadley v. Baxendale rule. (1930) Contracts. The principle that consequential damages will be awarded for breach of contract only if it was foreseeable at the time of contracting that this type of damage would result from the breach. Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341 (1854). • Hadley v. Baxendale is best known for its impact on a nonbreaching party's ability to recover consequential damages, but the case also confirmed the principle that the nonbreaching party may recover damages that arise naturally from the breach. See foreseeable damages under DAMAGES. [Cases: Damages ⇨23.]

"The rationale of the decision appears in Baron Alderson's noted statement of what came to be known as the two rules of Hadley v. Baxendale. The first rule was that the injured party may recover damages for loss that 'may fairly and reasonably be considered [as] arising naturally, i.e., according to the usual course of things, from such breach of contract itself.' . . . The second and more significant rule went to recovery of damages for loss other than that 'arising naturally' — to recovery of what have come to be known as 'consequential' damages. . . . By introducing this requirement of 'contemplation' for the recovery of consequential damages, the court imposed an important new limitation on the scope of recovery that juries could allow for breach of contract. The result was to impose a more severe limitation on the recovery of damages for breach of contract than that applicable to actions in tort or for breach of warranty, in which substantial or proximate cause is the test." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 12.14, at 822-23 (3d ed. 1999).

had-not test. See BUT-FOR TEST.

haec est conventio (heek est kən-ven-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. This is the agreement. • These formal words commonly prefaced written agreements.

haec est finalis concordia (heek est fi-nay-lis kən-kor-dee-ə). [Law Latin] Hist. This is the final agreement. • These were the words that began a fine, a fictitious judicial proceeding formerly in use as a mode of conveying land. See FOOT OF THE FINE; FINE.

haec verba. See IN HAEC VERBA.

haeredibus et assignatis quibuscunque (hə-red-i-bəs et as-ig-nay-tis kwib-əs-kəŋg-kwee). [Law Latin] Scots law. To heirs and assignees whomsoever. • This was a simple destination phrase.

hafne court. Hist. Haven courts; one of several courts anciently held in certain ports in England.

Hague Academy of International Law (hayg). A center for advanced studies in international law, both public and private, aimed at facilitating the comprehensive and impartial examination of problems of international legal relations. • It was founded in the Netherlands in 1923 on the initiative of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and the Institut de Droit International. — Also termed Académie de Droit International de La Haye.

Hague Convention. The short name for any one of the many numerous international conventions that address different legal issues and attempt to standardize procedures between nations. [Cases: Treaties ⇨1.]

Hague Convention on Protection of Children and Cooperation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption. A 1993 international agreement to establish uniform procedures governing intercountry adoptions. • The Convention has not been widely adopted. The U.S. has signed but not ratified it.

Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. An international convention (concluded in 1980) that seeks to counteract cross-border child-snatching by noncustodial parents. • This convention created a legal mechanism available to parents seeking the return of, or access to, their children. Its purposes are to secure the prompt return of children who have been wrongfully taken from one country to another and to enforce custody and visitation rights in the contracting countries. The procedure is summary in nature and does not contemplate continuing hearings on the merits of a dispute. More than 80 countries are parties to the Convention, including the United States. 42 USCA §§ 11601-11610. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨802; Treaties ⇨8.]

Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents. An international convention, concluded on November 15, 1965, governing procedures for effecting service of process in a foreign country. • More than 35 countries are parties to the Convention, including the United States. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨462; Process ⇨83; Treaties ⇨8.]

Hague Convention on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters. An international convention, concluded on October 26, 1968, that establishes procedures for obtaining evidence in a foreign country, such as taking a deposition abroad. • More than 27 countries are parties, including the United States. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1261; Pretrial Procedure ↷91; Treaties ↷8.]

Hague Rules. Maritime law. An international agreement adopted at the International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules of Law Relating to Bills of Lading in 1924. • Under the Hague Rules, a carrier is not liable for losses. [Cases: Shipping ↷103, 140.]

Hague Tribunal. Int'l law. A permanent court of arbitration established by the Hague Peace Conference of 1899 to facilitate immediate recourse to arbitration to settle international differences. • The court was given jurisdiction over all arbitration cases, unless the parties agreed to institute a special tribunal. An international bureau was likewise established to serve as a registry for the court and to issue communications about the court's meetings. The court is "permanent" only in the sense that there is a permanent list of members from whom arbitrators in a given case are selected. Apart from making minor changes in the court, the Second Hague Conference of 1907 provided that, of the two arbitrators appointed by each party, only one should be a national of the appointing state.

haircut. 1. Securities. The discount required by the National Association of Securities Dealers on the value of stock that a brokerage firm holds in its own account at the time of filing a monthly report about the firm's net capital condition. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↷40.13.] 2. The difference between the amount of a loan and the market value of the collateral securing the loan.

haircut reorganization. See REORGANIZATION (1).

Haitian divorce. See Mexican divorce under DIVORCE.

hale, v. To compel (a person) to go, esp. to court <hale a party into court>.

half, n. (bef. 12c) One of two equal parts into which a thing can be divided; MOIETY.

half blood. See BLOOD.

half brother. See BROTHER.

halfendal (hahv-ən-deel), n. [fr. Law Latin halfendele] Hist. Half a thing; a moiety. — Also spelled halfendeal; half-endeal.

half-mark. See DEMIMARK.

half nephew. See NEPHEW (1).

half niece. See NIECE.

half orphan. See ORPHAN (2).

half plus one. Parliamentary law. A common but inexact (and often inaccurate) approximation for a majority. • For a body with 100 members, a majority is indeed half plus one, or 51. But for a body with an odd number of members, "half plus one" would not be a whole number. So "a simple majority" is a better choice for designating majority rule. — Also termed 50 percent plus one. See MAJORITY (2).

half-proof. Civil law. 1. Proof established by one witness, or by a private instrument. See UNUS NULLUS RULE. 2. Prima facie proof that is nonetheless insufficient to support a sentence or decree.

half-seal. Hist. A seal used in the Court of Chancery to mark commissions to the Court of Delegates on the appeal of an ecclesiastical or maritime case. • The use of the seal ended when the Court of Delegates was abolished in 1832. See COURT OF DELEGATES.

half section. See SECTION.

half sister. See SISTER.

half-timer. Hist. In England, a child excused from full-time attendance at school under the Factory and Workshop Act of 1908 so that the child could work part-time in a factory or workshop. • The Factory and Workshop Acts from 1901 to 1911 were repealed by the Factory and Workshop (Cotton Cloth Factories) Act of 1929 and the Factories Act of 1937.

half-tongue. Hist. In England, a jury empaneled to try an alien, and composed half of one nationality and half of another. • The use of this type of jury ended in 1914 with the passage of the Status of Aliens Act.

halfway house. (1970) A transitional housing facility designed to rehabilitate people who have recently left a prison or medical-care facility, or who otherwise need help in adjusting to a normal life. — Also termed residential community treatment center.

half-year. See YEAR.

Halifax law. 1. LYNCH LAW; more broadly, an irrevocable punishment carried out after a summary trial. 2. The summary and unauthorized trial and execution (usu. by decapitation) of a person accused of a crime. • This term comes from the parish of Halifax, in England, where — according to custom in the forest of Hardwick — this form of private justice was anciently practiced by the free burghers against people accused of stealing. Thieves could be condemned to death by beheading on market day. The last such case is said to have occurred in 1650. — Also termed gibbet law; Halifax inquest.

hall, (bef. 12c) 1. A building or room of considerable size, used for meetings of bodies such as public assemblies, conventions, and courts. 2. Parliamentary law. The room or other space in which a deliberative assembly meets. 3. Hist. A manor house or chief mansion house. • It was called a hall because the magistrate's court was typically held there.

hallage (haw-l-ij), n. (17c) Hist. A fee or toll due for goods or merchandise sold in a hall used as a market; a toll payable to the lord of a fair or market for commodities sold in the common hall.

hallazgo (ah-yahz-goh), n. [Spanish] Spanish law. 1. The finding and taking possession of ownerless property. 2. The first occupant recognized by law.

halle-gemot (haw-l-gə-moht), n. See HALLMOTE.

halligan tool. See HOOLIGAN TOOL.

hallmark. (18c) 1. An official stamp affixed by goldsmiths and silversmiths on articles made of gold or silver to show genuineness. 2. A mark of genuineness.

hallmoot. See HALLMOTE.

hallmote (hahl-moht), n. (bef. 12c) 1. Hist. A court baron; specif., an annual court, presided over by the lord of the manor, to decide civil disputes between feudal tenants. • The court was usu. held in the manor's great hall. See COURT BARON. 2. A trade-guild's commercial court, in which guild members were tried for trade-related offenses against the guild. 3. A convention of citizens in their public hall. — Also termed folknote. 4. (Erroneously) an ecclesiastical court. • Although this definition appears in many secular legal dictionaries, it is unheard of in canon law. In sense 4, it is often (erroneously) spelled holymote. — Also spelled (in senses 1–3) hallmoot; halmote; halymote; halle-gemot; haligemote.

halmote. See HALLMOTE.

halymote (hal-ə-moht). See HALLMOTE.

ham (ham or am). (bef. 12c) 1. A place of dwelling; a village. • This word now usu. appears in compound form at the end of place names, such as Buckingham. 2. A small (esp. enclosed) pasture; a piece of land. — Also spelled hamm. Cf. HAMLET.

hamel. See HAMLET.

hamesucken (haym-sək-ən), n. (bef. 12c) Scots law. 1. Assault on a householder within the house after breaking in to commit the assault or to commit theft. 2. The crime of housebreaking or burglary accompanied by violence. • This term derives from Anglo-Saxon law (hāmsöcn), and literally meant "breaching the peace of another's home." — Also spelled hamesecken; hamesoken. — Also termed hamfare.

"Burglary, or nocturnal housebreaking, burgi latrocinium, which by our ancient law was called hamesecken, as it is in Scotland to this day, has always been looked upon as a very heinous offence. . . ." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 223 (1769).

hamfare. See HAMESUCKEN.

hamlet. (bef. 12c) A small village; a part or member of a vill. • A hamlet in a rural community might consist of no more than a store, a church, and a few residences. — Also termed hamel; hameleta; hamleta. See VILL. Cf. HAM.

hamleta. See HAMLET.

hammer, n. Slang. A forced sale; a sale at public auction <her jewelry was brought to the hammer>. See forced sale under SALE.

Hammurabi, Code of. See CODE OF HAMMURABI.

hanaper (han-ə-pər), n. [Law Latin hanaperium "hamper"] (14c) Hist. 1. A basket or hamper used by the Chancery to store writs and returns. 2. The treasury of the Chancery, funded from the fees charged for writs. Cf. FISCUS.

Hanaper Office. Hist. An office formerly belonging to the common-law jurisdiction of the Chancery Court. • The term derives from the storage of writs in a hamper (in hanaperio). Crown writs, on the other hand, were stored in the Petty Bag Office. The Hanaper Office was abolished in 1842. See BAGA.

hand, n. 1. A person's handwriting . 2. An instrumental part <he had a hand in the crime>. 3. One who performs some work or labor <Hickory was one of the Gales' hired hands>. 4. (usu. pl.) Possession <the cocaine was now in the hands of the police>. 5. Assistance <the carpenter lent a hand to the project>. 6. A measure of length equal to four inches, used in measuring the height of equines, esp. horses <the pony stood ten hands tall>. [Cases: Weights and Measures ↻3.] 7. Hist. An oath <he gave his hand on the matter>. 8. One of two sides or aspects of an issue or argument <on the one hand we can argue for imprisonment, on the other for leniency>.

hand, vb. To give; to deliver <he handed over the documents>.

handbill. (18c) A written or printed notice displayed, handed out, or posted, usu. to inform interested people of an event or of something to be done. • Posting and distribution of handbills is regulated by ordinance or statute in most localities.

hand down, vb. (17c) To announce or file (a judgment) in a case. • The term was originally used in connection with an appellate-court opinion sent to the court below; it was later expanded to include any decision by a court on a case or point under consideration. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↻1181, 1182; Federal Courts ↻921.]

handfasting. 1. See handfast marriage (3) under MARRIAGE (1). 2. See handfast marriage (4) under MARRIAGE (1).

handfast marriage. See MARRIAGE (1).

Hand formula. (1972) A balancing test for determining whether conduct has created an unreasonable risk of harm, first formulated by Judge Learned Hand in United States v. Carroll Towing Co., 159 F.2d 169 (2d Cir. 1947). • Under this test, an actor is negligent if the burden of taking adequate precautions against the harm is outweighed by the probable gravity of the harm multiplied by the probability that the harm will occur. [Cases: Negligence ↻215.]

"The legal standard applicable to most unintentional tort cases is that of negligence, defined by Judge Learned Hand as follows: the defendant is guilty of negligence if the loss caused by the accident, multiplied by the probability of the accident's occurring, exceeds the burden of the precautions that the defendant might have taken to avert it. This is an economic test. . . . Although the Hand formula is of relatively recent origin, the method that it capsulizes has been the basic one used to determine negligence ever since negligence was first adopted as the standard to govern accident cases." Richard A. Posner, Economic Analysis of Law § 6.2, at 122–23 (2d ed. 1977).

handhabend (hand-hab-ənd), adj. (14c) Hist. (Of a thief) caught in possession of a stolen item.

A bounty offered by a government for a prisoner taken at sea during a naval engagement. • This bounty is divided among the officers and crew in the same manner as prize money. See PRIZE MONEY. 3. A tax or duty on shipowners, imposed by an 1882 federal statute, for every immigrant brought into the United States. — Also termed head tax. 4. Hist. A bounty or reward paid to a person who killed a bandit or outlaw and produced the head as evidence. See BOUNTY (1); REWARD.

headnote. (1855) A case summary that appears before the printed judicial opinion in a law report, addresses a point of law, and usu. includes the relevant facts bearing on that point of law. — Also termed syllabus; synopsis; reporter's syllabus. Cf. SYLLABUS.

"The syllabus or headnote is a brief statement of the propositions of law decided in the case, being in the nature of a table of contents of the case. The modern method is to number each proposition in the syllabus, and to indicate, by corresponding figures, the exact place in the decision where the point mentioned in the syllabus can be found. Sometimes, especially in the older reports, the syllabus is inaccurate or misleading, and it is not safe to rely on it without first verifying it from the decision." Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 22 (1922).

headnote lawyer. See LAWYER.

head of family. A person who supports one or more people related by birth, adoption, or marriage and with whom those persons maintain their permanent domicile. • The phrase head of family appears most commonly in homestead law. For a person to have the status of head of family, there must, of necessity, be at least two people in the family. — Also termed head of a family. Cf. HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD. [Cases: Homestead ◊ 18.]

head of household. (1847) 1. The primary income-provider within a family. 2. For income-tax purposes, an unmarried or separated person (other than a surviving spouse) who provides a home for dependents for more than one-half of the taxable year. • A head of household is taxed at a lower rate than a single person who is not head of a household. Cf. HEAD OF FAMILY; HOUSEHOLDER. [Cases: Internal Revenue ◊ 3549.]

headright. (1930) In American Indian law, a tribemember's right to a pro rata portion of income from a tribal trust fund set up under the Allotment Act of 1906. • This type of trust fund is funded largely by mineral royalties arising from land held or once held by the tribemember's tribe. [Cases: Indians ◊ 141(2), 192.]

headright certificate. Hist. A certificate issued under authority of a Republic of Texas law of 1839 providing that a person was entitled to a grant of 640 acres if the person (1) had immigrated to the Republic between 1 October 1837 and 1 January 1840, (2) was a head of household, and (3) actually resided within the Republic with his or her family. • The grant was to be held under the certificate for three years and then conveyed by absolute deed to the settler.

to be heard. See procedural due process under DUE PROCESS. Cf. disposition hearing. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨469.] 2. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, the trial stage at which the court hears the state's allegations and evidence and decides whether the state has the right to intervene on behalf of the child. [Cases: Infants ⇨203.] 3. In a juvenile-delinquency case, a hearing at which the court hears evidence of the charges and makes a finding of whether the charges are true or not true. — Also termed adjudicatory hearing; adjudicatory proceeding.

adjudicatory hearing (ə-joo-di-kə-tor-ee). See adjudication hearing.

certification hearing. See transfer hearing.

conformity hearing. See CONFORMITY HEARING.

contested hearing. A hearing in which at least one of the parties has objections regarding one or more matters before the court.

custody hearing. (1935) Family law. A judicial examination of the facts relating to child custody, typically in a divorce or separation proceeding. • Child-neglect and dependency matters are also often dealt with in custody hearings. — Also termed custody proceeding. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨500; Infants ⇨203.]

dependency hearing. See shelter hearing.

detention hearing. (1959) 1. Criminal law. A hearing to determine whether an accused should be released pending trial. See pretrial detention under DETENTION. 2. Family law. A hearing held by a juvenile court to determine whether a juvenile accused of delinquent conduct should be detained, continued in confinement, or released pending an adjudicatory hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing; disposition hearing. [Cases: Infants ⇨192, 203.] 3. See shelter hearing.

discharge hearing. See DISCHARGE HEARING.

dispositional hearing. See disposition hearing.

disposition hearing. (1960) Family law. 1. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its allegations, a hearing at which the court hears evidence and enters orders for the child's care, custody, and control. • Typically, the judge determines a plan for services aimed at reunifying or rehabilitating the family. 2. In a juvenile-delinquency case, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its case against the juvenile or after a juvenile's pleading true to the charges against him, a hearing at which the court determines what sanctions, if any, will be imposed on the juvenile. • At a disposition hearing, the court balances the best interests of the child against the need to sanction the child for his or her actions. If the juvenile is adjudicated a delinquent, the probation staff prepares a social history of the youth and his family and recommends a disposition. After reviewing the social history and various recommendations, the court enters a disposition. Among the possible juvenile sanctions are a warning, probation, restitution, counseling, or placement in a juvenile-detention facility. Probation is the most common sanction. — Also termed dispositional hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing. 3. See permanency hearing. [Cases: Infants ⇨203.]

evidentiary hearing. (1952) 1. A hearing at which evidence is presented, as opposed to a hearing at which only legal argument is presented. 2. See ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

exclusionary hearing. (1963) A pretrial hearing conducted to review and determine the admissibility of alleged illegally obtained evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨394.6.]

fair hearing. (1831) A judicial or administrative hearing conducted in accordance with due process. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨3881, 4027.]

Fatico hearing. See FATICO HEARING.

fitness hearing. See transfer hearing.

Franks hearing. See FRANKS HEARING.

full adversary hearing. See adjudication hearing.

full hearing. (17c) 1. A hearing at which the parties are allowed notice of each other's claims and are given ample opportunity to present their positions with evidence and argument. 2. See ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDING.

Garcia hearing. See GARCIA HEARING.

hearing de novo (dee or di noh-voh). (18c) 1. A reviewing court's decision of a matter anew, giving no deference to a lower court's findings. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨892; Criminal Law ⇨1139; Federal Courts ⇨776.] 2. A new hearing of a matter, conducted as if the original hearing had not taken place.

independent-source hearing. Criminal procedure. A hearing to determine whether evidence was obtained illegally, and if so, whether the evidence is admissible. See INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨339.11(2).]

Jackson-Denno hearing. See JACKSON-DENNO HEARING.

Mapp hearing. See MAPP HEARING.

neglect hearing. (1952) Family law. A judicial hearing involving alleged child abuse or some other situation in which a child has not been properly cared for by a parent or person legally responsible for the child's care. • At issue is the civil culpability of the parent or responsible party and the possible loss of children into foster care or — in extreme cases — the termination of parental rights. [Cases: Infants ⇨203.]

omnibus hearing. (1969) Criminal procedure. A hearing designed to bring judicial oversight to a criminal case at an early stage to make certain that the case is being handled expeditiously and properly. • At an omnibus hearing, the court is primarily interested in ensuring that discovery is being conducted properly, that any necessary evidentiary hearings have been scheduled, and that all issues ripe for decision have been decided.

permanency hearing. (1832) Family law. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, a judicial proceeding to determine the future, permanent status of a child in foster care. • Under the Act, the term permanency hearing replaces the term disposition hearing. The permanency hearing must occur within 12 months of a child's being placed in foster care. The purpose of the hearing is to determine the final direction of the case, whether that means going forward with termination proceedings or continuing plans for family reunification. — Also termed permanency-planning hearing. [Cases: Infants ⇨203.] preliminary hearing. See PRELIMINARY HEARING.

preliminary protective hearing. See shelter hearing.

presentence hearing. See PRESENTENCE HEARING.

pretrial hearing. See PRETRIAL CONFERENCE.

probable-cause hearing. See shelter hearing.

public hearing. (18c) A hearing that, within reasonable limits, is open to anyone who wishes to observe. • Such a hearing is often characterized by the right to appear and present evidence in a case before an impartial tribunal. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨473.]

reaffirmation hearing. See REAFFIRMATION HEARING.

review hearing. Family law. After a finding of child abuse or neglect, a hearing to assess the progress in the case plan. See CASE PLAN. [Cases: Infants ⇨203, 231.]

revocation hearing. (1928) Criminal procedure. A hearing held to determine whether a parolee should be returned to prison for violating the terms of parole. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ⇨85.]

shelter hearing. Family law. A hearing shortly after the state's removal of a child for suspected abuse or neglect. • The hearing, generally held within 24 to 72 hours after the removal, is for the purpose of determining whether the state has adequate cause to maintain the children in protective care. — Also termed shelter-care hearing; continued-custody hearing; preliminary protective hearing; probable-cause hearing; detention hearing; dependency hearing. [Cases: Infants ⇨192, 203.]

suppression hearing. (1955) Criminal procedure. A pretrial hearing in which a criminal defendant seeks to prevent the introduction of evidence alleged to have been seized illegally. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨394.6.]

termination-of-parental-rights hearing. Family law. A trial or court proceeding, usu. initiated by a state agency, that seeks to sever the legal ties between a parent and child, usu. so that the child can be adopted.

- The standard of proof in a termination-of-parental-rights hearing is clear and convincing evidence. Santosky v. Kramer, 455 U.S. 745, 102 S.Ct. 1388 (1982). — Often shortened to termination hearing. [Cases: Infants ↷203.]

uncontested hearing. A hearing in which either (1) the parties are in agreement as to all matters before the court, or (2) one of the parties has failed to appear despite notice.

unfair hearing. (1915) A hearing that is not conducted in accordance with due process, as when the defendant is denied the opportunity to prepare or consult with counsel. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷3879, 3886.]

Wade hearing. See WADE HEARING.

waiver hearing. See transfer hearing.

hearing examiner. See ADMINISTRATIVE-LAW JUDGE.

hearsay. (16c) 1. Traditionally, testimony that is given by a witness who relates not what he or she knows personally, but what others have said, and that is therefore dependent on the credibility of someone other than the witness. • Such testimony is generally inadmissible under the rules of evidence. 2. In federal law, a statement (either a verbal assertion or nonverbal assertive conduct), other than one made by the declarant while testifying at the trial or hearing, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted. Fed. R. Evid. 801(c). — Also termed hearsay evidence; secondhand evidence. Cf. original evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷419; Evidence ↷314–324.]

double hearsay. (1921) A hearsay statement that contains further hearsay statements within it, none of which is admissible unless exceptions to the rule against hearsay can be applied to each level <the double hearsay was the report's statement that Amy had heard Joe admit running the red light>. Fed. R. Evid. 805. — Also termed multiple hearsay; hearsay within hearsay. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷419(13); Evidence ↷314–324.]

hearsay exception. Any of several deviations from the hearsay rule, allowing the admission of otherwise inadmissible statements because the circumstances

tender-years hearsay exception. A hearsay exception for an out-of-court statement by a child ten years of age or younger, usu. describing an act of physical or sexual abuse, when the child is unavailable to testify and the court determines that the time, content, and circumstances of the statement make it reliable. [Cases: Infants ↷20.]

hearsay rule. (1896) The rule that no assertion offered as testimony can be received unless it is or has been open to test by cross-examination or an opportunity for cross-examination, except as provided otherwise by the rules of evidence, by court rules, or by statute. • The chief reasons for the rule are that out-of-court statements amounting to hearsay are not made under oath and are not subject to cross-examination. Fed. R. Evid. 802. Rule 803 provides 23 explicit exceptions to the hearsay rule, regardless of whether the out-of-court declarant is available to testify, and Rule 804 provides five more exceptions for situations in which the declarant is unavailable to testify. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷419; Evidence ↷314–324.]

"[T]he great hearsay rule . . . is a fundamental rule of safety, but one overenforced and abused, — the spoiled child of the family, — proudest scion of our jury-trial rules of evidence, but so petted and indulged that it has become a nuisance and an obstruction to speedy and efficient trials." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 238 (1935).

hearsay within hearsay. See double hearsay under HEARSAY.

heartbalm statute. A state law that abolishes the rights of action for monetary damages as solace for the emotional trauma occasioned by a loss of love and relationship. • The abolished rights of action include alienation of affections, breach of promise to marry, criminal conversation, and seduction of a person over the legal age of consent. Many states today have enacted heartbalm statutes primarily because of the highly speculative nature of the injury and the potential for abusive prosecution, as well as the difficulties of determining the cause of a loss. The terminology in this field is somewhat confusing, since a heartbalm statute abolishes lawsuits that were known as heartbalm suits; some scholars therefore call the abolitionary statutes anti-heartbalm statutes. But the prevailing term is heartbalm statute. — Also written heart-balm statute. — Also termed heartbalm act; anti-heartbalm statute; anti-heartbalm act. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise ↷14; Husband and Wife ↷323, 341; Seduction ↷3.]

"Under the English common law, a broken engagement might be followed by a lawsuit for breach of promise to marry . . . [T]he action came to look more like a tort action, in which damages might be given for the injury to the plaintiff's feelings, health and reputation and for expenses such as costs incurred in preparing for a wedding. Widespread criticism of the suit for breach of promise to marry (as well as related tort actions including seduction and alienation of affections) led to the passage of 'heart balm' statutes abolishing these claims in many jurisdictions in the United States beginning in the 1930's." Homer H. Clark Jr. & Ann Laquer Estlin, Domestic Relations: Cases and Problems 47 (6th ed. 2000).

hearth money. Hist. 1. A tax of two shillings levied on every fireplace in England (14 Car. 2, ch. 10). • This extremely unpopular tax was enacted in 1662 during the reign of Charles II and abolished in 1688. 2. PETERPENCE. — Also termed (in sense 1) chimney money.

heat of passion. (bef. 12c) Rage, terror, or furious hatred suddenly aroused by some immediate provocation, usu. another person's words or actions. • At common law, the heat of passion could serve as a mitigating circumstance that would reduce a murder charge to manslaughter. — Also termed sudden heat of passion; sudden heat; sudden passion; hot blood; sudden heat and passion; furor brevis. Cf. COLD BLOOD; COOL BLOOD. [Cases: Homicide ↻666.]

"To constitute the heat of passion included in this requirement it is not necessary for the passion to be so extreme that the slayer does not know what he is doing at the time; but it must be so extreme that for the moment his action is being directed by passion rather than by reason." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 99 (3d ed. 1982).

heavy work. See WORK (1).

hebote. See HEREBOTE.

hedagium (hə-day-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A toll or custom due at a wharf for landing goods. • The Crown exempted particular persons and societies from this toll.

hedge, vb. (17c) To use two compensating or offsetting transactions to ensure a position of breaking even; esp., to make advance arrangements to safeguard oneself from loss on an investment, speculation, or bet, as when a buyer of commodities insures against unfavorable price changes by buying in advance at a fixed rate for later delivery. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ↻10.] — hedging, n.

hedgebote. See HAYBOTE.

hedge fund. (1967) A specialized investment group — usu. organized as a limited partnership or offshore investment company — that offers the possibility of high returns through risky techniques such as selling short or buying derivatives. • Most hedge funds are not registered with the SEC and are therefore restricted in marketing their services to the public.

hedonic damages. See DAMAGES.

hedonistic damages. See hedonic damages under DAMAGES.

hedonistic utilitarianism. See UTILITARIANISM.

heeding presumption. See PRESUMPTION.

heedlessness, n. (16c) The quality of being thoughtless and inconsiderate; esp., conduct involving the disregard of others' rights or safety. • Heedlessness is often construed to involve the same degree of fault as recklessness. See RECKLESSNESS. — heedless, adj.

hegemonism (hi-jem-ə-niz-əm). (19c) 1. A philosophical position advocating hegemony. 2. All forms of political extension by means of hegemony.

hegemony (hi-jem-ə-nee), n. (16c) 1. Influence, authority, or supremacy over others <the hegemony of capitalism>. 2. The striving for leadership or predominant authority of one state of a confederacy or union over the others; political domination <the former Soviet Union's hegemony over Eastern Europe>. — hegemonic (hej-ə-mon-ik), adj.

heightened scrutiny. See INTERMEDIATE SCRUTINY.

heinous (hay-nəs), adj. (14c) (Of a crime or its perpetrator) shockingly atrocious or odious. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↻82, 1684.] — heinousness, n.

heir (air). (13c) 1. A person who, under the laws of intestacy, is entitled to receive an intestate decedent's property. — Also termed legal heir; heir at law; lawful heir; heir general; legitimate heir. Cf. ANCESTOR. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻20–43; Wills ↻505.]

"Laymen — and sometimes first-year law students taking exams — wrongly assume that one who receives real property by will is an heir. Technically, the word 'heir' is reserved for one who receives real property by action of the laws of intestacy, which operate today only in the absence of a valid will." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 14 n.32 (2d ed. 1984).

afterborn heir. (18c) One born after the death of an intestate from whom the heir is entitled to inherit. See afterborn child under CHILD. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻7.] apparent heir. See heir apparent.

beneficiary heir (ben-ə-fish-ee-er-ee). Civil law. An heir who accepts an inheritance but whose liability for estate debts is limited to the value of the inheritance. — Also termed heir beneficiary. See BENEFIT OF INVENTORY. Cf. unconditional heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻119(2).]

bodily heir. See heir of the body.

coheir (koh-air). One of two or more persons to whom an inheritance descends. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻69, 72, 81, 82.]

collateral heir. (17c) One who is neither a direct descendant nor an ancestor of the decedent, but whose kinship is through a collateral line, such as a brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, or cousin. Cf. lineal heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻32, 37.]

expectant heir. (17c) An heir who has a reversionary or future interest in property, or a chance of succeeding to it. — Also termed heir expectant. See REVERSION (1); REMAINDER (1). Cf. prospective heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷68.]

"The reader should be aware that one never has an 'heir' until one is dead; one merely has an 'heir expectant' . . . Thus, to say that an heir 'owns' anything is conceptually difficult. But . . . some unborn heirs may be entitled to the protection of the courts, and thus be said to have estates." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 26 n.13 (2d ed. 1984).

fideicommissary heir (fi-dee-i kom-i-sair-ee). Roman & civil law. A beneficiary of property who succeeds the direct (original) heir. See FIDEICOMMISSUM.

fiduciary heir. Roman & civil law. An heir who takes property as a trustee on behalf of a person who is not eligible to receive the property immediately. See FIDEICOMMISSUM.

forced heir. Civil law. (1813) A person whom the testator or donor cannot disinherit because the law reserves part of the estate for that person. • In Louisiana, only descendants are forced heirs. La. Civ. Code art. 1493. See LEGITIME. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷23.]

heir apparent. (14c) An heir who is certain to inherit unless he or she dies first or is excluded by a valid will. — Also termed apparent heir. Cf. heir presumptive. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷68.]

"Heirs apparent are such, whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided they outlive the ancestor; as the eldest son or his issue, who must by the course of the common law be heirs to the father whenever he happens to die." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 208 (1766).

heir beneficiary. See beneficiary heir.

heir by adoption. A person who has been adopted by (and thus has become an heir to) the deceased. • By statute in most jurisdictions, an adopted child has the same right of succession to intestate property as a biological child unless the deceased clearly expresses a contrary intention. Jurisdictions differ on whether an adopted child may also inherit from his or her biological parents or family. The clear majority view, however, is that upon adoption, a complete severance of rights and obligations occurs and the child forfeits inheritance from all biological relatives.

heir by custom. Hist. In England, a person whose right of inheritance depends on a particular and local custom, such as gavelkind and borough English. See GAVELKIND; BOROUGH ENGLISH.

heir by devise. (1842) One to whom lands are given by will.

heir conventional. Civil law. One who takes a succession because of a contract or settlement entitling him or her to it.

heir expectant. See expectant heir.

heir in tail. See heir special.

heir male. Hist. The nearest male blood-relation of a decedent.

heir of the blood. (16c) An heir who succeeds to an estate because of consanguinity with the decedent, in either the ascending or descending line.

heir of the body. Archaic. A lineal descendant of the decedent, excluding a surviving spouse, adopted children, and collateral relations. • The term of art heirs of the body was formerly used to create a fee tail <A conveys Blackacre to B and the heirs of his body>. — Also termed bodily heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷17, 21.]

heir presumptive. (17c) An heir who will inherit if the potential intestate dies immediately, but who may be excluded if another, more closely related heir is born. — Also termed presumptive heir. Cf. heir apparent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷68.]

heirs and assigns. (16c) A term of art formerly required to create a fee simple <A conveys Blackacre to B and his heirs and assigns>.

heir special. Hist. An heir who receives property according to the nature of the estate held in fee tail. • Heirs special were said to receive property per formam doni ("by the form of the gift"). — Also termed heir in tail. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷29.]

instituted heir. See testamentary heir.

irregular heir. Hist. Louisiana law. A person or entity who has a statutory right to take property from an estate in default of the testamentary or legal heirs. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷74.]

joint heir. (16c) 1. A coheir. 2. A person who is or will be an heir to both of two designated persons at the death of the survivor of them, the word joint being here applied to the ancestors rather than the heirs.

known heir. (16c) An heir who is present to claim an inheritance, the extent of which depends on there being no closer relative.

laughing heir. (1943) Slang. An heir distant enough to feel no grief when a relative dies and leaves an inheritance (generally viewed as a windfall) to the heir.

lineal heir. (16c) A person who is either an ancestor or a descendant of the decedent, such as a parent or a child. Cf. collateral heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷20.]

natural heir. (16c) An heir by consanguinity as distinguished from an heir by adoption or a statutory heir (such as a person's spouse). [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷47(2).]

presumptive heir. See heir presumptive.

pretermitted heir (pree-tər-mit-id). (1841) A child or spouse who has been omitted from a will, as when a testator makes a will naming his or her two children and then, sometime later, has two more children who are not mentioned in the will. — Also termed (more specif.) pretermitted child; pretermitted spouse. See prospective heir. (1855) An heir who may inherit but may be excluded; an heir apparent or an heir presumptive. Cf. expectant heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷68.]

right heir. 1. Hist. The preferred heir to an estate tail, as distinguished from a general heir. • An estate tail would pass to a general heir only on the failure of the preferred heir and his line. 2. HEIR (1).

testamentary heir (tes-tə-men-tə-ree or -tree). Civil law. A person who is appointed as an heir in the decedent's will. — Also termed instituted heir.

unconditional heir. Civil law. A person who chooses — expressly or tacitly — to inherit without any reservation or without making an inventory. Cf. beneficiary heir.

heirloom. (13c) The state of being an heir; succession by inheritance.

heiress. (17c) 1. Archaic. A female heir. See HEIR (1). 2. A woman or girl who has inherited or is in line to inherit great wealth.

heir general. See HEIR (1).

heir-hunter. A person whose business is to track down missing heirs.

heirloom. (15c) 1. An item of personal property that by local custom, contrary to the usual legal rule, descends to the heir along with the inheritance, instead of passing to the executor or administrator of the last owner. • Traditional examples are an ancestor's coat of arms, family portraits, title deeds, and keys. Blackstone gave a false etymology that many have copied: "The termination, loom, is of Saxon origin; in which language it signifies a limb or member; so that an heirloom is nothing else, but a limb or member of the inheritance." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Law of England 427 (1766). In fact, loom derives from Old English geloma "utensil," and loom meant "implement, tool." 2. Popularly, a treasured possession of great sentimental value passed down through generations within a family.

"Heir-loom, strictly so called, are now very seldom to be met with. They may be defined to be such personal chattels as go, by force of a special custom, to the heir, along with the inheritance, and not to the executor or administrator of the last owner. The owner of an heir-loom cannot by his will bequeath the heir-loom, if he leave the land to descend to his heir; for in such a case the force of custom will prevail over the bequest, which, not coming into operation until after the decease of the owner, is too late to supersede the custom. . . . In popular language the term 'heir-loom' is generally applied to plate, pictures or articles of property which have been assigned by deed of settlement or bequeathed by will to trustees, in trust to permit the same to be used and enjoyed by the persons for the time being in possession, under the settlement or will, of the mansion-house in which the articles may be placed." Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 13-14 (11th ed. 1881).

heir portioner. See PORTIONER.

heirship. (13c) 1. The quality or condition of being an heir. 2. The relation between an ancestor and an heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷20-41.]

hell-or-high-water clause. (1980) A clause in a personal-property lease requiring the lessee to continue to make full rent payments to the lessor even if the thing leased is unsuitable, defective, or destroyed. [Cases: Bailment ↷20.]

hell-or-high-water rule. (1960) 1. The principle that a personal-property lessee must pay the full rent due, regardless of any claim against the lessor, unless the lessee proves unequal bargaining power or unconscionability. [Cases: Bailment ↷20.] 2. Insurance. The principle that an insured's automobile-liability policy will cover the insured while using a vehicle owned by another if the insured uses the vehicle in a manner within the scope of the permission granted. [Cases: Insurance ↷2662.]

henceforth, adv. (14c) From now on <the newly enacted rule will apply henceforth>.

henfare. Hist. A fine for flight from an accusation of murder.

Henricus Vetus (hen-rī-kəs vee-təs). [Law Latin] Henry the Old (or Elder). • This term was used in early English charters to distinguish King Henry I from later kings of the same name.

heordpenny (hərd-pen-ee), n. See PETER-PENCE.

Hepburn Act. A 1906 federal statute that amended the Interstate Commerce Act to (1) increase the (now defunct) Interstate Commerce Commission's jurisdiction to include pipelines, (2) prohibit free passes except to employees, (3) prohibit common carriers from transporting any products (except timber) in which they had an interest, and (4) require joint tariffs and a uniform system of accounts. [Cases: Carriers ↷25, 32(1); Commerce ↷85.2.]

heptarchy (hep-tahr-kee). 1. A government by seven rulers. 2. A nation divided into seven governments, specif. the seven Anglo-Saxon kingdoms of Kent, Sussex, Essex, Wessex, East Anglia, Mercia, and Northumbria existing before the Norman Conquest.

herald, n. (13c) 1. In England and Scotland, one of several officers responsible for keeping genealogical lists and tables, adjusting armorial bearings, and regulating the ceremonies at royal coronations and funerals. • There are six in England and three in Scotland. 2. Hist. A messenger who announces royal or state proclamations, and who carries diplomatic messages (esp. proclamations of war, peace, or truce) between kings or countries.

Heralds' College. A royal corporation responsible in England for granting and recording armorial insignia and genealogies, and for dealing with matters of precedence. • The College was founded by Richard III in 1484, is governed by the Earl Marshal, and consists of three kings of arms, six heralds, and four pursuivants. The heralds' books, based on family-lineage inquiries made throughout England, are considered good evidence of pedigrees. The heralds' office is still allowed to make grants of arms and to grant name changes. — Also termed College of Arms.

herbage (hər-bij). (15c) In England, an easement or liberty of pasturage on another's land.

herdwerch (hærd-wærk), n. Hist. Herdsmen's work, or customary labor, done by shepherds and inferior tenants at the lord's will. — Also spelled heordwerch.

hereafter, adv. (bef. 12c) 1. From now on; henceforth <because of the highway construction, she will hereafter take the bus to work>. 2. At some future time <the court will hereafter issue a ruling on the gun's admissibility>. 3. HEREINAFTER <the exhibits hereafter referred to as Exhibit A and Exhibit B>.

here and there. See VALUE DATE.

herebannum (her-ə-ban-əm), n. [Law Latin fr. Old English here "army" + bann "proclamation"] Hist. 1. A proclamation summoning the army into the field. 2. A mulct or fine for not joining that army when summoned. 3. A tax or tribute for the support of that army.

herebote (her-ə-boht), n. [fr. Old English here "army" + bod "command"] Hist. In England, a royal edict summoning the people to the battlefield; an edict commanding subjects into battle. — Also spelled herebode; hebote.

heredis institutio (hə-ree-dis in-sti-ti[y]oo-shee-oh). See INSTITUTIO HEREDIS.

hereditament (her-ə-dit-ə-mənt or hə-red-i-tə-mənt). (15c) 1. Any property that can be inherited; anything that passes by intestacy. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻8.] 2. Real property; land. [Cases: Property ↻4.]

corporeal hereditament (kor-por-ee-əl). A tangible item of property, such as land, a building, or a fixture. [Cases: Fixtures ↻1; Property ↻4.]

incorporeal hereditament (in-kor-por-ee-əl). An intangible right in land, such as an easement. • The various types at common law were advowsons, annuities, commons, dignities, franchises, offices, pensions, rents, tithes, and ways.

"There are two quite distinct classes of incorporeal hereditaments: 1. Those which may ripen into corporeal hereditaments. Thus a grant to A for life with remainder to B in fee simple gave B an incorporeal hereditament which becomes corporeal after A's death. 2. Those which can never become corporeal hereditaments but are merely rights over the land of another, e.g., rentcharges." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 361 (6th ed. 1993).

hereditary, adj. (15c) Of or relating to inheritance; that descends from an ancestor to an heir.

hereditas (hə-red-i-tas), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. An inheritance by universal succession to a decedent. • This succession applied whether the decedent died testate or intestate, and whether in trust (ex fideicommisso) for another or not. The comparable right under Praetorian law was bonorum possessio, possession of an inheritance that could be the basis of a right to succeed. 2. Hist. An estate transmissible by descent; an inheritance. — Also spelled haereditas.

hereditas damnosa (hə-red-i-tas dam-noh-sə). A burdensome inheritance; an inheritance whose debts exceed its assets.

hereditas jacens (hə-red-i-tas jay-senz). [Latin iaceo "to lie"] 1. Property belonging to an estate before an heir accepts it. • This term had a similar meaning at common law. See ABEYANCE (2).

"Hereditas jacens is the term applied to an inheritance which has not yet vested, an inheritance, that is to say, which has been 'delata' to a heres extraneus (i.e. voluntarius), but has not yet been acquired by him." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 512 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

2. Hist. A decedent's estate that has no heir or legatee to take it; an escheated estate. — Also termed caduca. See ESCHEAT. 3. Hist. An inheritance without legal owner and thus open to the first occupant.

hereditas legitima (hə-red-i-tas lə-jit-i-mə). A succession or inheritance devolving by operation of law rather than by will. See INTESTACY.

hereditas luctuosa (hə-red-i-tas lək-choo-oh-sə). A sad or mournful inheritance; one that disturbs the natural order of mortality (turbato ordine mortalitatis), as that of a parent inheriting a child's estate. • This term is more literary than legal. — Also termed tristis successio.

hereditas paterna (hə-red-i-tas pə-tər-nə). [Latin] Hist. A succession that descends through the father.

hereditas testamentaria (hə-red-i-tas tes-tə-men-tair-ee-ə). Testamentary inheritance; succession to an estate under a decedent's will.

heredity. (16c) 1. Archaic. Intestate succession; the taking of an inheritance by common-law succession. 2. The genetic transmission of characteristics from a parent to a child; the biological law by which characteristics of a living being tend to repeat themselves in the being's descendants.

herein, adv. (bef. 12c) In this thing (such as a document, section, or paragraph) <the due-process arguments stated herein should convince the court to reverse the judgment>. • This term is inherently ambiguous.

hereinafter, adv. (16c) Later in this document <the buyer agrees to purchase the property described hereinafter>. — Also loosely termed hereafter.

herenach (her-ə-nak), n. [fr. Old Irish airchinnich "chief man"] An archdeacon. — Also spelled erenach.

hereof, adv. (bef. 12c) Of this thing (such as a provision or document) <the conditions hereof are stated in section 3>.

heres (heer-eez), n. [Latin] Roman law. A successor to the rights and liabilities of a deceased person; an heir. • Because the heres succeeded to both the rights and the debts of the decedent, the office combined that of a modern executor with that of an heir at law. The institution of the heres was the essential characteristic of a testament; if this was not done, the instrument was called a codicillus. — Also spelled (in Law Latin) haeres. Pl. heredes (hə-ree-deez) or (for haeres) haeredes.

heres actu (heer-eez ak-t[y]oo). [Law Latin] Hist. Heir by appointment.

heres astrarius (as-trair-ee-əs). [Law Latin "heir of the hearth"] An heir who has received, by conveyance, an ancestor's estate during the ancestor's lifetime.

heres de facto (di fak-toh). [Law Latin "heir from fact"] Hist. 1. An heir whose status arises from the disseisin or other wrongful act of the heir's ancestor. See DISSEISIN. 2. An heir in fact, as distinguished from an heir by law (de jure).

heres ex asse (as-ee). [Latin "sole heir"] Roman law. An heir to the whole estate.

heres ex testamento (eks tes-tə-men-to). See heres factus.

heres extraneus (ek-stray-nee-əs). [Latin "extraneous heir"] Roman law. An external heir; one who had not been subject to the testator's power (potestas) and hence not bound to accept the inheritance. Pl. heredes extranei (hə-ree-deez ek-stray-nee-i).

heres factus (fak-təs). [Latin "made heir"] An heir appointed by will; a testamentary heir. — Also termed heres ex testamento; heres institutus. Cf. heres natus.

heres fideicommissarius (fi-dee-i-kom-ə-sair-ee-əs). [Latin] Roman law. The person for whose benefit an estate was given by will to a fiduciary heir. • This office corresponds loosely to the cestui que trust of the common law. Cf. heres fiduciarius.

heres fiduciarius (fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-ee-əs). [Latin "fiduciary heir"] Roman law. A person made heir by will, in trust for the benefit of another; an heir subject to a trust. Cf. heres fideicommissarius.

heres in mobilibus (heer-eez in moh-bil-i-bəs). [Law Latin] Hist. Heir in movables.

heres institutus (in-sti-t[y]oo-təs). See heres factus.

heres legitimus (lə-jit-i-məs). [Latin "lawful heir"] Roman law. An heir entitled to succeed (on intestacy) by the laws of the Twelve Tables.

heres natus (nay-təs). [Latin "heir by birth"] An heir by reason of birth; an heir at law or by intestacy. Cf. heres factus.

heres necessarius (nes-ə-sair-ee-əs). [Latin "necessary heir"] Roman law. A slave freed on the testator's death and thus compelled to accept the inheritance.

heres rectus (rek-təs). [Law Latin] Hist. A right or proper heir.

heres suus (s[y]oo-əs). [Latin "one's own heir"] 1. A decedent's proper or natural heir; a lineal descendant of the deceased. 2. Roman law. A free person who was subject to the testator's power (potestas) but who could exercise full legal rights upon the testator's death.

heres suus et necessarius (s[y]oo-əs et nes-ə-sair-ee-əs). [Latin "one's own and necessary heir"] A free person subject to the decedent's potestas. • These heirs were called necessary because they became heirs by law, not by the decedent's choice. But since this was also true of slaves, when named heirs in a will, the former class was designated suus et necessarius by way of distinction, the word suus denoting that the necessity arose from the relationship to the decedent.

ultimus heres (əl-ti-məs). The last or remote heir; the lord.

heresy (her-ə-see), n. (13c) 1. Opinion or doctrine contrary to (usu. Roman Catholic) church dogma. 2. Hist. In England, an offense against religion, consisting not in totally denying Christianity, but in publicly denying some of its essential doctrines; an opinion on divine subjects devised solely by human reason, openly taught, and obstinately maintained. • This offense is now subject only to ecclesiastical correction and is no longer punishable by the secular law. — heretical, adj.

heretofore, adv. (13c) Up to now; before this time .

hereunder, adv. (15c) 1. Later in this document <review the provisions hereunder before signing the consent form>. 2. In accordance with this document <notice hereunder must be provided within 30 days after the loss>.

herewith, adv. (bef. 12c) With or in this document <enclosed herewith are three copies>.

herzeld. Hist. In a feudal system, a vassal's best animal (esp. the best horse, ox, or cow), given in tribute to the superior upon the vassal's death. — Also spelled hereyeld; herield.

herield. See HERZELD.

heriot (her-ee-ət), n. [fr. Old English here "army" + geatwa "trappings"] Hist. A customary tribute of goods and chattels, payable to the lord of the fee on the tenant's death. • Heriot derives from an earlier feudal service consisting of military equipment returned to the lord on the tenant's death; over time it came to refer only to the chattel payment due at the tenant's death.

"We are told that the ancient heriot (heregeatu, military apparel) had at one time consisted of the horses and arms lent by the lord to his man which on the man's death were returned to the lord. . . . Turning to manorial surveys, we find it among the commonest of customs that when a tenant in villeinage dies, the lord shall have the best beast; sometimes a similar due is taken from the goods of the dead freeholder, and it is to these customary dues that the name 'heriot' permanently attaches itself." † Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 312, 317 (2d ed. 1898).

heriot custom. A heriot due by custom. • This term is used primarily to distinguish a heriot service from an ordinary heriot.

heriot service. A tribute arising from special reservation in a grant or lease of lands, and thus amounting to little more than rent.

herislit (her-ə-sleet or hair-), n. [Old English] Hist. 1. The act of surrendering; laying down of arms. 2. The crime of deserting from an army.

heritable (her-i-tə-bəl), adj. (14c) 1. (Of property) capable of being inherited. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻8.] 2. (Of a person) capable of inheriting. — Also termed inheritable. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻20–67.]

heritable blood. See BLOOD.

heritable bond. See BOND (2).

heritable jurisdiction. Hist. Scots law. The power of a laird to try his own people and hand down punishments, including death. • The laird or clan chief traditionally acted as a supreme court. There was no appeal from decisions and sentences were usu. carried out immediately. The Heritable Jurisdiction Act of 1748 abolished this power.

heritable obligation. See OBLIGATION.

heritable property. Scots law. See HERITAGE.

heritable security. See SECURITY.

heritage (her-i-tij), n. Scots law. Property that passed on death to the owner's heir; esp., land and all the property connected to it (such as a house). — Also termed heritable property.

high bailiff. See BAILIFF.

High Commission Court. See COURT OF HIGH COMMISSION.

High Court. 1. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE. 2. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

High Court of Admiralty. In England, a court exercising jurisdiction in matters relating to shipping, collision, and salvage cases. • The court dates from the 14th century, and much of its early history concerns prize and piracy cases. Its jurisdiction varied through the centuries, sometimes extending into criminal matters and other areas of law not related directly to maritime issues. The Judicature Acts of 1873–1875 merged the Court into the High Court as part of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division. The Administration of Justice Act of 1970 established a new Admiralty Court as part of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court. It is regulated by the Supreme Court Act of 1981. — Also termed Court of the Lord High Admiral; Court of Admiralty. Cf. ADMIRALTY (1).

"To the office of the Lord High Admiral (originally a naval official concerned with the command of the fleet and the suppression of piracy and wrecking) there was annexed a court which acquired a jurisdiction over civil cases of a maritime nature. Just how and when this happened is too cloudy and controversial for simple or even accurate summary, but by the time of Richard II (1377–1400) the admiral and vice-admiral were transacting enough judicial business to move Parliament to limit their jurisdiction by statute to 'a thing done upon the sea,' and in Tudor times the court was well established as a court of record, doing a large civil business. It slowly but surely took away most of their business from the local maritime courts in the port towns, and attracted the easily aroused jealousy of the common law courts, as well as the dislike of those who feared it as a prerogative court. . . . These factors resulted in the rather anticlimactic eclipse of the court for almost two centuries." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 1-4, at 9–10 (2d ed. 1975).

High Court of Chivalry. Hist. A court of honor having jurisdiction over matters relating to deeds of arms and war, armorial insignia, and precedence. — Also termed Court of Chivalry; Court of Earl Marshal. See COURT OF HONOR.

"This Curia Marescalli, or High Court of Chivalry, was revived by James I as a court of honour, which not only tried the right to distinctions of honour and coat armour but also redressed affronts to honour such as slander. The slander jurisdiction was later denied, leaving it with a jurisdiction probably confined to disputes over armorial bearings, which are determined according to the law of arms. The court, which has only sat once since 1737, is the last English court to use the procedure of the civil law." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 142 (3d ed. 1990).

High Court of Delegates. See COURT OF DELEGATES.

High Court of Errors and Appeals. See COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS.

High Court of Justice. The superior civil court of England and Wales. — Often shortened to High Court.

High Court of Justiciary (jə-stish-ee-er-ee). Scots law. The superior criminal court of Scotland, acting both as a trial court and as a court of final criminal appeal. • Its judges are Lords Commissioners of Justiciary. — Often shortened to High Court.

[Cases: Aviation ⇨ 16; Robbery ⇨ 1.] 3. Hist. To rob by trickery or violence; esp., to rob (a smuggler or bootlegger) and take illegal goods.

Hilary Rules. (19c) Hist. A collection of English pleading rules designed to ease the strict pleading requirements of the special-pleading system, esp. by limiting the scope of the general issue in the formed actions and by forcing the defendant to set up affirmatively all matters other than a denial of the breach of duty or of the wrongful act. • Promulgated in England in the 1834 Hilary Term, these rules followed an 1828 initiative to examine procedural laws and other subjects and to report to Parliament changes that might be enacted. The rules had the unintended effect of extending the reach of strict-pleading requirements into new areas of law. Widespread dissatisfaction with the Hilary Rules led to the liberalization of the pleading system under the 1873–1875 Judicature Acts. — Formerly also termed New Rules.

"The failure of the Hilary Rules . . . lay in their insistence on special pleading as it was understood late in the eighteenth century. That parties should plead precisely, and clarify as far as possible the issue between them, is one thing; that their endeavours to do so should be judged by the extremely artificial standards of the old system, was quite another." Theodore F.T. Plucknett, A Concise History of the Common Law 416 (5th ed. 1956).

Hilary sittings. In England, a term of court beginning on January 11 of each year and ending on the Wednesday before Easter. • The Hilary sittings were known as Hilary term until 1875. Cf. EASTER SITTINGS; MICHAELMAS SITTINGS; TRINITY SITTINGS.

hilo settlement. See HIGH-LOW AGREEMENT.

Hilton doctrine. Civil procedure. The rule that in a dispute between parties to an oil-and-gas lease, royalty owners who would lose their rights if the defendant's lease were terminated are regarded as indispensable parties to a proceeding challenging the lease. Hilton v. Atlantic Refining Co., 327 F.2d 217 (5th Cir. 1964). [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 78.7(2).]

Himalaya clause. Maritime law. A provision in a bill of lading extending the carrier's defenses and limitations under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act to third parties, typically employees, agents, and independent contractors. • The Supreme Court has held that this type of clause must be strictly construed. Robert C. Herd & Co. v. Krawill Machinery Corp., 359 U.S. 297, 79 S.Ct. 766 (1959). See CARRIAGE OF GOODS BY SEA ACT. [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 140(1).]

"The plaintiff was injured while a passenger on the cruise ship The Himalaya. She sued the master and the boatswain for their negligence because the carrier was contractually exempt from all liability. Because the contract did not have a 'Himalaya clause,' she succeeded. The carrier, having indemnified its employees, ultimately paid the damages. It thus lost its contractual exemption indirectly." Michael J. Sturley, International Uniform Law in National Courts, 27 Va. J. Int'l L. 729, 740 n.101 (1987).

hinc inde (hink in-dee). [Law Latin] Scots law. On either side. • The phrase usu. refers to the respective claims of parties to a lawsuit.

hodgepodge. (15c) 1. HOTCHPOT (1). 2. An unorganized mixture.

hodgepodge act. (1883) A statute that deals with incongruous subjects.

"Hodge-Podge Act. . . . Such acts, besides being evident proofs of the ignorance of the makers of them, or of their want of good faith, are calculated to create a confusion which is highly prejudicial to the interests of justice. . . . In many states bills, except general appropriation bills, can contain but one subject, which must be expressed in the title." 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary 1444 (8th ed. 1914).

hold, n. 1. An order to preserve something or to delay or postpone an action.

litigation hold. A notice issued in anticipation of a lawsuit or investigation, ordering employees to preserve documents and other materials relevant to that lawsuit or investigation. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1551.]

2. Archaic. In England, tenure. • This word occurs most often in conjunction with others — for example, freehold, leasehold — and rarely in its separate form. See HOLDING (4).

hold, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To possess by a lawful title <Sarah holds the account as her separate property>. 2. (Of a court) to adjudge or decide as a matter of law (as opposed to fact) <this court thus holds the statute to be unconstitutional>. Cf. FIND. 3. To direct and bring about officially; to conduct according to law <we must hold an election every two years>. 4. To keep in custody or under an obligation <I will ask the judge to hold you accountable>. 5. To take or have an estate from another; to have an estate on condition of paying rent or performing service <James holds Hungerstream Manor under lease>. 6. To conduct or preside at; to convoke, open, and direct the operations of <Judge Brown holds court four days a week>. 7. To possess or occupy; to be in possession and administration of <Jones holds the office of treasurer>.

holdback, n. An amount withheld from the full payment of a contract pending the other party's completion of some obligation, esp. to ensure that a contractor finishes the work agreed on beforehand. • The terms of a holdback are typically expressed in the contract. The device gives the contractor an incentive to finish the work, and the other party security that the work will be finished. — hold back, vb.

holder. (14c) 1. A person who has legal possession of a negotiable instrument and is entitled to receive payment on it. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻427(1).] 2. A person with legal possession of a document of title or an investment security. 3. A person who possesses or uses property.

holder for value. (18c) A person who has given value in exchange for a negotiable instrument. • Under the UCC, examples of “giving value” include acquiring a security interest in the instrument and accepting the instrument in payment of an antecedent claim. UCC § 3-303(a). — Also termed bona fide holder for value. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻352.]

holder in due course. (1882) A person who in good faith has given value for a negotiable instrument that is complete and regular on its face, is not overdue, and, to the possessor's knowledge, has not been dishonored. • Under UCC § 3-305, a holder in due course takes the instrument free of all claims and personal defenses, but subject to real defenses. — Abbr. HDC; HIDC. — Also termed due-course holder. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻327-384.]

holder in good faith. (18c) One who takes property or an instrument without knowledge of any defect in its title.

holder of record. See STOCKHOLDER OF RECORD.

hold harmless, vb. (18c) To absolve (another party) from any responsibility for damage or other liability arising from the transaction; INDEMNIFY. — Also termed save harmless. [Cases: Indemnity ↻25, 31(4).]

hold-harmless agreement. (1939) A contract in which one party agrees to indemnify the other. — Also termed save-harmless agreement. See INDEMNITY. [Cases: Indemnity ↻25-33.]

hold-harmless clause. See INDEMNITY CLAUSE.

holding, n. (15c) 1. A court's determination of a matter of law pivotal to its decision; a principle drawn from such a decision. Cf. OBITER DICTUM. [Cases: Courts ↻88.]

2. A ruling on evidence or other questions presented at trial. 3. (usu. pl.) Legally owned property, esp. land or securities. 4. Hist. In feudal law, tenure.

holding cell. See JAIL.

holding charge. (1949) A criminal charge of some minor offense filed to keep the accused in custody while prosecutors take time to build a bigger case and prepare more serious charges.

holding company. See COMPANY.

holding over. 1. A tenant's action in continuing to occupy the leased premises after the lease term has expired.

• Holding over creates a tenancy at sufferance, with the tenant being referred to as a holdover. See tenancy at sufferance under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻90, 119(2).] 2. Parliamentary law. An officer's continued tenure beyond the term for which he or she was elected, usu. because a successor has not been elected or cannot yet assume the office.

holding period. (1935) Tax. The time during which a capital asset must be held to determine whether gain or loss from its sale or exchange is long-term or short-term. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3260; Taxation ↻3465-3469.]

hold order. (1945) A notation in a prisoner's file stating that another jurisdiction has charges pending against the prisoner and instructing prison officials to alert authorities in that other jurisdiction instead of releasing the prisoner.

hold out, vb. (16c) 1. To represent (oneself or another) as having a certain legal status, as by claiming to be an agent or partner with authority to enter into transactions <even though he was only a promoter, Schwartz held himself out as the principal>. [Cases: Principal and Agent ↻99.] 2. To refuse to yield or submit; to stand firm <Womack held out for a higher salary and better benefits>.

holograph (hol-ə-graf), n. (17c) A document (such as a will or deed) that is handwritten by its author. • The majority rule is that a holographic will need not be entirely handwritten — only the “material provisions” — to take into account the popular use of fill-in-the-blank will forms. This is also the position of the Uniform Probate Code. — Also termed olograph; autograph. Cf. ONOMASTIC; SYMBOLIC. [Cases: Wills ↻ 130–135.] — holographic, adj.

holographic will. See WILL.

homage (hom-ij). (14c) In feudal times, a ceremony that a new tenant performed for the lord to acknowledge the tenure. • This was the most honorable service that a free tenant might do for a lord. In the ceremony, kneeling before the lord, the tenant placed his hands between the lord’s hands while saying, “I become your man from this day forward, of life and limb and earthly honor, and to you will be faithful and loyal, and bear you faith, for the tenements that I claim to hold of you, saving the faith that I owe unto our sovereign lord the king, so help me God.”

“Homage is an oath of fidelity, acknowledging himself to be the lord’s man: wherein the tenant must be ungiert, uncovered, kneel upon both knees, and hold both his hands together between the lord’s hands sitting before him. This is to be done only to the lord himself.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 143 (1759).

homage ancestral (hom-ij an-ses-trəl). [Law French] A type of homage in which a tenant and the tenant’s ancestors have held immemorially of another by the service of homage. • This long-standing relationship bound the lord to warrant the title and to hold the tenant clear of all services to superior lords. — Also spelled homage auncestral (aw-mahzh on-se-stral).

homage liege (hom-ij leej). Homage due the sovereign alone as supreme lord, done without any saving or exception of the rights of other lords. — Also termed homagium ligium (hə-may-jee-əm li-jee-əm).

homagio respectuando (hə-may-jee-oh ri-spek-choo-an-doh), n. [Law Latin “homage to the respected”] Hist. A writ to the escheator commanding the delivery of seisin of lands to the heir of the king’s tenant, even though the heir had not performed homage.

homagium (hə-may-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin] A formal ceremony in which a feudal tenant acknowledged the tenure granted by a lord; HOMAGE.

homagium ligium. See homage liege under HOMAGE.

homagium planum (play-nəm), n. [Law Latin “plain homage”] Hist. A type of homage binding the homager to nothing more than fidelity, without obligation either of military service or of attendance in the superior’s courts.

homagium reddere (red-ə-ree), n. [Law Latin “to renounce homage”] Hist. The process, prescribed in feudal law by a set form and method, by which a vassal disowns and defies the lord.

homagium simplex (sim-pleks), n. [Law Latin “simple homage”] Hist. A type of homage that acknowledges tenure, while reserving the rights of other lords.

hombre bueno (awm-bray bway-noh), n. Spanish law. 1. An arbitrator chosen by the parties to a suit. 2. A judge. 3. A citizen in good standing; esp., one who is competent to testify in a suit.

Home Owners Warranty. A warranty and insurance program that, among other coverage, insures a new home for ten years against major structural defects. • The program was developed by the Home Owners Warranty Corporation, a subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders. Builders often provide this type of coverage, and many states provide similar warranty protection by statute. — Also spelled Home Owners’ Warranty. — Abbr. HOW. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻ 208.]

home-port doctrine. Maritime law. The rule mandating that a vessel engaged in interstate and foreign commerce is taxable only at its home port, usu. where the vessel is registered. [Cases: Taxation ↷2212.]

home rule. (1860) A state legislative provision or action allocating a measure of autonomy to a local government, conditional on its acceptance of certain terms. Cf. LOCAL OPTION. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷65.]

"Home rule in the United States was sometimes envisioned in its early days as giving the cities to whom such rule was granted full-fledged sovereignty over local affairs, thus bringing about dual state and local sovereignty along the national plan of federal and state governments. But such local sovereignty has never developed, nor have any clear-cut distinctions between state and local power." Osborne M. Reynolds Jr., Handbook of Local Government Law § 35, at 96 (1982).

home-rule charter. See CHARTER (2).

homestall. Hist. Homestead.

home state. Family law. 1. The state where a person is domiciled. 2. In an interstate child-custody dispute governed by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, the state where a child has lived with a parent or a person acting as a parent for at least six consecutive months immediately before the proceeding. [Cases: Child Custody ↷736.]

home-state jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

homestead. (bef. 12c) 1. The house, outbuildings, and adjoining land owned and occupied by a person or family as a residence. • As long as the homestead does not exceed in area or value the limits fixed by law, in most states it is exempt from forced sale for collection of a debt. — Also termed homestead estate. See HOMESTEAD LAW. [Cases: Homestead ↷58–89.]

business homestead. (1882) The premises on which a family's business is located. • In some states, business homesteads are exempt from execution or judicial sale for most kinds of debt. [Cases: Homestead ↷36.]

constitutional homestead. (1851) A homestead, along with its exemption from forced sale, conferred on the head of a household by a state constitution. — Also termed statutory homestead; pony homestead. [Cases: Homestead ↷3, 30.]

pony homestead. See constitutional homestead.

probate homestead. (1881) A homestead created by a probate court from a decedent's estate for the benefit of the decedent's surviving spouse and minor children. • Under most statutes providing for the creation of a probate homestead, it is exempt from forced sale for the collection of decedent's debts. The family can remain in the home at least until the youngest child reaches the age of majority. Many states allow the surviving spouse to live in the home for life. In a few states, such as Texas, the right to a probate homestead is constitutional. See family allowance, spousal allowance under ALLOWANCE; HOMESTEAD LAW. Cf. life estate under ESTATE (4). [Cases: Homestead ↷134–153.] statutory homestead. See constitutional homestead.

2. A surviving spouse's right of occupying the family home for life. • In some states, the right is extended to other dependents of a decedent. [Cases: Homestead ↷140–143.]

homesteader. (1872) One who acquires or occupies a homestead. [Cases: Homestead ↷16–29; Public Lands ↷35.]

homestead estate. See HOMESTEAD.

homestead exemption. See HOMESTEAD LAW.

homestead-exemption statute. See HOMESTEAD LAW.

homestead law. (1847) A statute exempting a homestead from execution or judicial sale for debt, unless all owners, usu. a husband and wife, have jointly mortgaged the property or otherwise subjected it to creditors' claims. — Also termed homestead exemption; homestead-exemption statute; homestead right. [Cases: Homestead ↷1, 118.]

"Almost all states also have legislative provisions, commonly referred to as homestead laws, designed to protect the family home from the reach of certain classes of creditors. . . . The protection afforded by an exemption statute is not absolute. A federal tax claim may be satisfied from 'exempt property.' A number of states make similar exceptions for state taxes, claims for alimony and child support, materialmen and mechanics' liens. By statute in most states, case law in others, purchase money mortgages and security interests are generally not affected by an exemption statute." David G. Epstein & Steve H. Nickles, Consumer Law in a Nutshell 384–85 (2d ed. 1981).

home-study report. Family law. A summary of an investigation into a child's home, family environment, and background, usu. prepared by a social worker when a child has been removed from his or her home because of abuse or neglect, but also prepared after a similar investigation of the home of potential adoptive parents. — Often shortened to home study. — Also termed custody evaluation; social study. [Cases: Infants ↷208.]

home-style exemption. Copyright. A provision in the U.S. Copyright Act allowing for the public airing of radio and television broadcasts in public-accommodation establishments, such as bars and restaurants, with immunity from liability for infringement. • The exemption is so named because the equipment used for the airing must be a single receiver of the type typically found in homes. 17 USCA § 110(5). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷67.1.]

homicide (hom-ə-sīd), n. (14c) 1. The killing of one person by another. [Cases: Homicide ↷500.] 2. A person who kills another. — homicidal, adj.

"The legal term for killing a man, whether lawfully or unlawfully, is 'homicide.' There is no crime of 'homicide.' Unlawful homicide at common law comprises the two crimes of murder and manslaughter. Other forms of unlawful homicide have been created by statute: certain new forms of manslaughter (homicide with diminished responsibility, and suicide pacts), infanticide, and causing death by dangerous driving." Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 204 (1978).

criminal homicide. (1850) 1. Homicide prohibited and punishable by law, such as murder or manslaughter.

[Cases: Homicide ↪525, 656.] 2. The act of purposely, knowingly, recklessly, or negligently causing the death of another human being. Model Penal Code § 210.1.

"Criminal homicide is everywhere divided into categories that reflect the historical distinction in English law between murder and manslaughter. American statutory formations have varied the terminology and the precise classifications; many statutes create more than two forms of criminal homicide, for purposes of definition and/or punishment. These variations notwithstanding, it is usually possible to discern a category that corresponds to the common-law crime of murder, the paradigm of which is a deliberate killing without legal justification or excuse, and a category that corresponds to the common-law crime of manslaughter and comprises killings that either are committed in circumstances which substantially mitigate their intentional aspect or are not intentional. In common speech as well as in the law, murder refers to the most serious criminal homicides, and manslaughter to those that may be serious crimes for which a substantial penalty is imposed but lack the special gravity of murder." Lloyd L. Weinreb, "Homicide: Legal Aspects," in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 855, 857 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

criminally negligent homicide. See negligent homicide.

culpable homicide. Scots law. A wrongful act that results in a person's death but does not amount to murder. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER.

excusable homicide. (18c) 1. Homicide resulting from a person's lawful act, committed without intention to harm another. [Cases: Homicide ↪750.] 2. See justifiable homicide (1).

felonious homicide. (18c) Homicide committed unlawfully, without legal justification or excuse. • This is the category into which murder and manslaughter fall.

homicide by abuse. (1989) Homicide in which the perpetrator, under circumstances showing an extreme indifference to human life, causes the death of the perpetrator's dependent — usu. a child or mentally retarded person. [Cases: Homicide ↪533.]

homicide by misadventure. See ACCIDENTAL KILLING.

homicide per infortunium (pər in-for-t[y]oo-nee-əm). [Latin "homicide by misfortune"] (1856) The unintentional killing of another while engaged in a lawful act; ACCIDENTAL KILLING. See PER INFORTUNUM. [Cases: Homicide ↪762.] innocent homicide. (1884) Homicide that does not involve criminal guilt.

justifiable homicide. (18c) 1. The killing of another in self-defense when faced with the danger of death or serious bodily injury. — Also termed excusable homicide. See SELF-DEFENSE (1). 2. A killing mandated or permitted by the law, such as execution for a capital crime or killing to prevent a crime or a criminal's escape. [Cases: Homicide ↪752–756.]

"It should be noted that a justifiable homicide is not criminal, since it is a killing which the law has either commanded or permitted: the actus in such a case is not legally punishable, and therefore we may perhaps say that it is an actus of killing which is not reus. As we shall see in most cases of justifiable homicide the killing is intentional, and therefore the mental element of criminal responsibility is clearly present: but there is no crime committed since there is no actus reus." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 109 (16th ed. 1952).

"English lawyers once distinguished between 'excusable' homicide (e.g. accidental non-negligent killing) and 'justifiable' homicide (e.g. killing in self-defence or in the arrest of a felon) and different legal consequences once attached to these two forms of homicide. To the modern lawyer this distinction has no longer any legal importance: he would simply consider both kinds of homicide to be cases where some element, negative or positive, required in the full definition of criminal homicide (murder or manslaughter) was lacking. But the distinction between these two different ways in which actions may fail to constitute a criminal offence is still of great moral importance. Killing in self-defence is an exception to a general rule making killing punishable; it is admitted because the policy or aims which in general justify the punishment of killing (e.g. protection of human life) do not include cases such as this. In the case of 'justification' what is done is regarded as something which the law does not condemn, or even welcomes." H.L.A. Hart, "Prolegomenon to the Principles of Punishment," in Punishment and Responsibility 1, 13 (1968).

negligent homicide. (1859) Homicide resulting from the careless performance of a legal or illegal act in which the danger of death is apparent; the killing of a human being by criminal negligence. — Also termed criminally negligent homicide. See criminal negligence under NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Homicide ↪708.]

"There is no common-law offense known as 'negligent homicide.' As a matter of the common law of crimes any killing below the grade of manslaughter is innocent homicide. Some of the new penal codes have a classification scheme which (omitting degrees or other variations) divides criminal homicide into murder, manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide — or simply negligent homicide. For the most part, however, this has been achieved by removing from manslaughter the offense of homicide by criminal negligence and using this to constitute the newly named offense. Thus, though there are a few exceptions, most states will have no homicide offense which would be below common-law manslaughter." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 116–17 (3d ed. 1982).

nonfelonious homicide. A killing that is legally either excusable or justifiable. See excusable homicide; justifiable homicide.

reckless homicide. (1866) The unlawful killing of another person with conscious indifference toward that person's life. Cf. MANSLAUGHTER. [Cases: Homicide ↪709.]

vehicular homicide. (1952) The killing of a person as a result of the unlawful or negligent operation of a motor vehicle. — Also termed automobile homicide. [Cases: Automobiles ↪342.1.] victim-precipitated homicide. 1. See suicide-by-cop under SUICIDE. 2. A killing provoked by the victim who consciously intended to die at the hands of another person. • This term applies loosely to any assisted suicide. Unlike most types of homicide, the victim bears some of the responsibility for causing his or her own death.

willful homicide. (1860) The act of intentionally causing a person's death, with or without legal justification.

homicidium (hom-ə-sī-dee-əm), n. [Latin “felling of a person”] Homicide.

homicidium ex casu (eks kay-s[y]oo). Homicide by accident. See ACCIDENTAL KILLING.

homicidium ex justitia (eks jəs-tish-ee-ə). Homicide in the administration of justice, or in the carrying out of a legal sentence. See justifiable homicide (2) under HOMICIDE.

homicidium ex voluntate (eks vol-ən-tay-tee). Voluntary or willful homicide. See criminal homicide under HOMICIDE.

homicidium in rixa (hom-ə-sī-dee-əm in rik-sə). [Law Latin] Scots law. Homicide committed in the course of a brawl.

“Homicidium in rixa . . . Such crime amounts only to culpable homicide, and the punishment being in the discretion of the judge, varies according to the particular circumstances of each case. It is not punished capitally, because this crime lacks the previous malice essential to the crime of murder.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 244 (4th ed. 1894).

hotchpot (hoch-pot), n. (16c) 1. The blending of items of property to secure equality of division, esp. as practiced either in cases of divorce or in cases in which advancements of an intestate's property must be made up to the estate by a contribution or by an accounting. — Also termed hotchpotch; hotchpot rule. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷108; Wills ↷762.]

"In some states . . . a child who has received his advancement in real or personal estate, may elect to throw the amount of the advancement into the common stock, and take his share of the estate descended, or his distributive share of the personal estate, as the case may be: and this is said to be bringing the advancement into hotchpot, and it is a proceeding which resembles the collatio bonorum in the civil law." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *419 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

"[T]he distribution of the property among the children is subject to what is called the hotchpot rule, the purpose of which is to ensure that the shares of all the children shall be equal. The rule is that any money or property which the intestate has paid to, or settled on, or covenanted to settle on a child, either by way of advancement or in view of marriage, shall be brought into account and deducted from the share which is payable to that child under the intestacy." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 783-84 (3d ed. 1933).

housebreaking. (17c) The crime of breaking into a dwelling or other secured building, with the intent to commit a felony inside; BURGLARY. • Burglary is now used more frequently than housebreaking. In England, for example, housebreaking was replaced in 1968 with statutory burglary, though the term is still used in Scots law. In some jurisdictions, housebreaking includes "breaking out" of a house that was entered without a breaking. [Cases: Burglary ⇌ 1.] — housebreaker, n.

"The oldest term for this purpose [i.e., of distinguishing between common-law burglary and its statutory enlargements], still encountered at times, is 'housebreaking'; a more recent suggestion is 'breaking and entering,' and peace officers sometimes speak of a 'breakin.'" Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 270 (3d ed. 1982).

constructive housebreaking. A breaking made out by construction of law, as when a burglar gains entry by threat or fraud. — Also termed constructive breaking into a house. [Cases: Burglary ⇌ 9.]

housing code. See BUILDING CODE.

housing court. See COURT.

hovering act. Int'l law. A statute applying to a coastal country's criminal jurisdiction over ships, and persons aboard those ships, when the ships are outside the country's territory.

"The notion of hovering acts evolved long before that of a belt of uniform width in the form of territorial waters. Great Britain's first anti-smuggling legislation to operate at a stated distance seaward was in 1719, applying to the master of any ship 'found at anchor or hovering within two leagues from the shore.' Later enactments extended this limit to three, then four, then eight leagues. A statute of 1794 gave power to seize and confiscate customable goods in vessels 'found at anchor, or hovering' inside specific straight lines drawn between lines on the British coasts, thus resembling the 'King's Chambers' of the Stuart era. In 1805 the British Parliament extended the seizure limit to 100 leagues (300 miles) from the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland in respect of vessels 'belonging wholly or in part to His Majesty's subjects, or whereof one-half of the persons on board shall be subjects of His Majesty.' Foreign-flag vessels could have fallen within this category. In the case of Le Louis (1817) 165 E.R. 1464, the British Admiralty judge hutesium et clamor (h[y]oo-tee-z[h]ee-əm et klam-ər). [Law Latin] HUE AND CRY.

hybrid action. Labor law. A lawsuit in which a union member asserts claims against the employer for breach of a collective bargaining agreement, and against the union for breach of the duty of fair representation. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↻1219(1), 1319.]

hybrid class action. See CLASS ACTION.

hybrid mark. See composite trademark under TRADEMARK.

hybrid security. See SECURITY.

hybrid trademark. See composite trademark under TRADEMARK.

Hyde Amendment. A federal law that prohibits the use of Medicaid funds for abortions except when necessary to save the mother's life, and that prohibits federally funded family-planning programs from providing abortion counseling. • The bill was sponsored by Representative Henry Hyde of Illinois. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ↻126; Health ↻480.]

hydegeld (hīd-geld), n. Hist. 1. In England, a discharge for an assault on a trespassing servant. 2. HIDEGLD. — Also spelled hudegeld.

Hydraflow test. (1996) A principle for deciding when an inadvertent disclosure of a privileged document is a waiver of the attorney-client privilege, whereby the court considers the reasonableness of the precautions taken to prevent the inadvertent disclosure, the number of disclosures involved, the extent of the disclosure, the promptness of any efforts to remedy the disclosure, and whether justice would be best served by permitting the disclosing party to retrieve the document. Hydraflow, Inc. v. Enidine, Inc., 145 F.R.D. 626 (W.D.N.Y. 1993). — Also termed middle-of-the-road test. Cf. lenient test; strict test. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↻168.]

hyperlink. (1988) Intellectual property. An element on a Web page — usu. a word, phrase, or graphic, but sometimes a single pixel — that, when clicked on, takes the user to another part of the same website or to a different website. • A copyright violation occurs if a person knows or has reason to know that a link will be used for unauthorized copying, and creates a link to encourage or contribute to wrongful copying. — Often shortened

hypertext markup language. The programming code used on websites to format text and provide links between resources. — Abbr. HTML.

hypertext transfer protocol. The set of programmed rules that enable computers to exchange information over the Internet. • Browsers use http to contact other computers. — Abbr. http.

hypobolium (hi-pob-ə-ləm), n. [Latin fr. Greek] Civil law. A legacy given to a wife, in addition to her dowry, on the death of her husband. Pl. hypobola.

hypothec (hi-poth-ek or hi-). (16c) Civil law. A mortgage given to a creditor on property to secure a debt; HYPOTHECA.

landlord's hypothec. Scots law. The lessor's right of security for rent in articles, furniture, and equipment (other than tools of the tenant's trade) that the tenant brought onto the leased premises. • Unlike the English remedy of distress, the right of security is effected only by the lessor's application to the court for a decree of sequestration. Until 1880, a landlord could assert the lien against a tenant's crops and stock as well as personal property. See SEQUESTRATION FOR RENT.

mariner's hypothec. 1. A lien that a seaman, freighter, or repairer can assert against a ship for payment of wages or other sums due. 2. A shipowner's lien against the ship's cargo for the freight costs.

solicitor's hypothec. A legal agent's lien for costs in excess of the costs recovered from an opposing party. • The lien may also apply to the retention of some documents, such as title deeds, as security for a client's outstanding account.

hypotheca (hi-pə-thee-kə or hip-ə-), n. [Latin fr. Greek] Roman law. A mortgage of property in which the debtor was allowed to keep, but not alienate, the property.

"Yet another mode of creating a security is possible, by which not merely the ownership of a thing but its possession also remains with the debtor. This is called by the Roman lawyers and their modern followers 'hypotheca.' Hypothecs may arise by the direct application of a rule of law, by judicial decision, or by agreement." Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 235 (13th ed. 1924).

hypothecaria actio (hi-poth-ə-kair-ee-ə ak-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A hypothecary action; an action to enforce a mortgage or to obtain the surrender of the thing mortgaged. — Also termed actio hypothecaria. See hypothecary action under ACTION.

hypothecarii creditores (hi-poth-ə-kair-ee-ɪ kred-ə-tor-eez). [Latin] Roman law. Hypothecary creditors; those who lent money on the security of a hypotheca.

hypothecary (hi-poth-ə-ker-ee), adj. (17c) Of, relating to, or involving a hypothec or hypothecation.

hypothecary action. See ACTION (4).

hypothecary debt. See DEBT.

hypothecate (hi-poth-ə-kayt), vb. (17c) To pledge (property) as security or collateral for a debt, without delivery of title or possession.

hypothecation (hi-poth-ə-kay-shən), n. (17c) The pledging of something as security without delivery of title or possession. [Cases: Pledges ↻1-26; Secured Transactions ↻1.] — hypothecator (hi-poth-ə-kay-tər), n.

general hypothecation. 1. A debtor's pledge to allow all the property named in the security instrument to serve as collateral and to be used to satisfy the outstanding debt. 2. See tacit hypothecation (1), (2).

tacit hypothecation. 1. Civil law. A type of lien or mortgage that is created by operation of law and without the parties' express agreement. — Also termed tacit mortgage. 2. See maritime lien under LIEN.

hypothèque (ee-poh-tek), n. French law. Hypothecation; the right vested in a creditor by the assignment to the creditor of real estate as security for a debt, whether or not accompanied by possession. • Hypothèque may be *légal*e, as the charge that the state has over the lands of its accountants, or that a married woman has over the lands of her husband; judiciaire, when it is the result of a judgment of a court of justice; or conventionnelle, when it is the result of the parties' agreement.

hypothesis (hi-poth-ə-səs). (16c) 1. A supposition based on evidence but not proven; a proposed explanation, supported by evidence, that serves as a starting point for investigation. 2. A theory or supposition proposed for the sake of debate.

hypothetical, adj. (16c) 1. Involving tentative theory or supposition adopted provisionally; assumed or postulated merely for the sake of argument.

hypothetical, n. (17c) A proposition or statement that is presumed true for the sake of logical analysis or debate. • Hypotheticals are often used as teaching tools to illustrate the application of legal principles or to explore the potential consequences of words and actions. See HYPOTHETICAL QUESTION.

hypothetical contract. See conditional contract under CONTRACT.

hypothetical creditor. See CREDITOR.

hypothetical lien creditor. See hypothetical creditor under CREDITOR.

hypothetical negotiation. A judicial construct used to calculate damages in a patent-infringement suit by arriving at a figure that would have been reasonable royalty acceptable to both parties. [Cases: Patents ↻318(4.1).]

hypothetical-person defense. (1979) An entrapment defense in which the defendant asserts that an undercover law-enforcement officer (or person acting at the law-enforcement officer's direction) encouraged the defendant to engage in the criminal conduct either by making false representations designed to convince the defendant that the conduct was not prohibited, or by using persuasive methods that created a substantial risk that the charged offense would be committed by a person who was not otherwise inclined to commit it.

• This defense has been adopted by a minority of states and by the Model Penal Code. — Also termed objective method. See Model Penal Code § 2.13. Cf. SHERMAN-SORRELLS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 37.]

hypothetical question. (1826) A trial device that solicits an expert witness's opinion based on assumptions treated as facts established by evidence. — Also termed abstract question. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 485; Evidence ↷ 551; Witnesses ↷ 237.]

hypothetical tenant. Hist. A fictional person used for assessing property taxes, which are based on what the person would pay to lease the property.

I

IABA. abbr. INTER-AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION.

IAF. abbr. INTER-AMERICAN FOUNDATION.

IAIP. abbr. INFORMATION ANALYSIS AND INFRASTRUCTURE PROTECTION DIRECTORATE.

ibi. [Latin] There and then.

ibid. (ib-id). abbr. [Latin ibidem] (17c) In the same place.

- This abbreviation, used in citations (mostly outside law), denotes that the reference is to a work cited immediately before, and that the cited matter appears on the same page of the same book (unless a different page is specified). — Also termed ib. Cf. ID.

ICANN. abbr. INTERNET CORPORATION FOR ASSIGNED NAMES AND NUMBERS.

ICC. abbr. 1. INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION. 2. INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

ICJ. abbr. INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ICPC. abbr. INTERSTATE COMPACT ON THE PLACEMENT OF CHILDREN.

ICSID (ik-sid). abbr. INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR SETTLEMENT OF INVESTMENT DISPUTES.

ICWA. abbr. INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT.

id. (id). abbr. [Latin idem] (17c) The same. • Id. is used in a legal citation to refer to the authority cited immediately before <id. at 55>. Cf. IBID.

IDA. abbr. INVESTMENT-DIRECTION AGREEMENT.

IDEA. abbr. INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT.

idea-expression dichotomy. Copyright. The fundamental rule that copyright law protects only specific expressions of an idea, not the idea itself. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷4.5.]

idem per idem (i-dem pər i-dem). [Latin] The same for the same. • This phrase refers to an illustration that adds nothing to a matter under consideration.

idem sonans (i-dem soh-nanz), adj. [Latin] (1856) (Of words or names) sounding the same, regardless of spelling <the names Gene and Jean are idem sonans>. • In trademark law, the term designates a name that sounds close enough to a registered trademark to create confusion among consumers and infringe that mark, so the Steinway company was able to prevent a competitor from registering “Steinberg” for the name of its pianos. [Cases: Names ↷16; Trademarks ↷1098.]

“The names of parties should be correctly spelled, but misspelling which does not change the sound works no harm; it matters not how incorrectly names are spelled, if they are idem sonans (the same sound).” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 186 (2d ed. 1899).

idem sonans (i-dem soh-nanz), n. [Latin] (1848) A legal doctrine preventing a variant spelling of a name in a document from voiding the document if the misspelling is pronounced the same way as the true spelling. [Cases: Names ↷16.]

identification of goods. (1887) A process that enables a buyer to obtain an identifiable (and therefore insurable) interest in goods before taking possession from the seller. • The goods are identified in any manner agreed to by the parties. UCC § 2-501. [Cases: Sales ↷199, 208.]

identification parade. See LINEUP.

identified adoption. See private adoption under ADOPTION.

identify, vb. (18c) 1. To prove the identity of (a person or thing) <the witness identified the weapon>. 2. To look upon as being associated (with) <the plaintiff was identified with the environmental movement>. 3. To specify (certain goods) as the object of a contract <identify the appliances to the contract>. See IDENTIFICATION OF GOODS. [Cases: Sales ↷199, 208.]

identifying material. Copyright. A portion or representation of an entire work deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office. • A copyright registrant is required to deposit at least one complete copy of the work, and often two. If a trade secret would be disclosed by a deposit or the work’s nature (e.g., a holograph) makes deposit difficult, a substitution is acceptable. Common forms of identifying material are drawings, photocopies, and selected pages of software code and databases. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷50.10.]

identikit. A collection of pictures of facial features, used by police to create a composite image of a suspect from witnesses’ descriptions. • In Great Britain, the resulting image is called a photofit.

identitate nominis (i-den-ti-tay-tee nom-ə-nis). See DE IDENTITATE NOMINIS.

identity. (16c) 1. The identical nature of two or more things; esp., in patent law, the sameness in two devices of the function performed, the way it is performed, and the result achieved. • Under the doctrine of equivalents, infringement may be found even if the accused device is not identical to the claimed invention. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents ↷234-237.] 2. Evidence. The authenticity of a person or thing. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷339, 339.5; Evidence ↷102.]

identity of interests. (18c) Civil procedure. A relationship between two parties who are so close that suing one serves as notice to the other, so that the other may

identity of parties. (1803) Civil procedure. A relationship between two parties who are so close that a judgment against one prevents later action against the other because of res judicata. [Cases: Judgment ↪624–631, 665–678.]

identity theft. The unlawful taking and use of another person's identifying information for fraudulent purposes. Cf. GHOSTING. [Cases: False Pretenses ↪19.]

ideo (i-dee-oh), adv. [Latin] Therefore; for that reason.

ideo consideratum est (i-dee-oh kən-sid-ə-ray-təm est). [Latin] Hist. Therefore it is considered. • These words often prefaced a judgment at common law, and came to refer to the judgment itself. Cf. CONSIDERATUM EST PER CURIAM.

ideological aggression. 1. See hostile propaganda under PROPAGANDA. 2. See subversive propaganda under PROPAGANDA.

Ides (Idz), n. [fr. Latin idus (pl.)] Roman law. In the Roman calendar, the ninth day after the Nones, being the 15th of March, May, July, and October, and the 13th of the other months. • In the calculation of the day, Nones is the first day counted. Cf. CALENDIS; NONES.

idiochira (id-ee-oh-ki-rə). [Greek "one's own hand"] Hist. An instrument executed privately, rather than before a public officer; esp., a deed written in one's own hand.

idiocy. Archaic. The condition of a person who, from birth, has never had any glimmering of reasoning or intellectual faculties. — Also termed idiopathic insanity.

idiot. A person afflicted with profound mental retardation. • This term has largely fallen out of use in modern legal and medical contexts. Cf. IMBECILE.

idiota (id-ee-oh-tə). [Latin] Civil law. 1. An unlearned, simple person. 2. A private person; one not in public office.

idiota inquirendo (id-ee-oh-tə in-kwi-ren-doh or in-kwə-ren-doh). See DE IDIOTA INQUIRENDO.

id non agebatur (id non aj-ə-bay-tər). [Law Latin] Scots law. That was not done.

"The meaning of the words as they occur here is this: the deceased, when he valued the subjects, did not intend to depreciate their value for the purpose of benefiting the executor, — this was not in his consideration at all — this was not what he did (id non agebatur) by the valuation; therefore, the executor is bound for the true value of the subjects." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 245 (4th ed. 1894).

idoneis argumentis (i-doh-nee-is ahr-gyoo-men-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. By suitable arguments.

idoneitas (i-doh-nee-ə-tas). [fr. Latin idoneus "suitable"] Hist. A person's ability or fitness. — Also termed idoneity.

idoneum se facere; idoneare se (i-doh-nee-əm see fay-sə-ree; i-doh-nee-air-ee see). [Law Latin "to make oneself sufficient; to clear oneself"] Hist. To purge oneself, by oath, of a crime that one is accused of committing.

idoneus (i-doh-nee-əs), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person or thing) appropriate or suitable. • A responsible or solvent man, for example, was known as an idoneus homo, while a pledge of sufficient security was termed idonea cautio. — Also spelled (in English) idoneous.

IDP. abbr. INTERNALLY DISPLACED PERSON.

IDS. abbr. INFORMATION-DISCLOSURE STATEMENT.

i.e. abbr. [Latin id est] (17c) That is <the federal government's highest judicial body, i.e., the Supreme Court>. Cf. E.G.

IEP. abbr. See INDIVIDUALIZED EDUCATION PROGRAM.

IFP. abbr. IN FORMA PAUPERIS.

IFP affidavit. See poverty affidavit under AFFIDAVIT.

ignis judicium (ig-nis joo-dish-ee-əm). [Latin] Hist. Trial by fire. See fire ordeal under ORDEAL.

ignominy (ig-nə-min-ee). Public disgrace or dishonor. — ignominious, adj.

ignoramus (ig-nə-ray-məs). [Law Latin] Hist. We do not know. • This notation, when written on a bill of indictment, indicated the grand jury's rejection of the bill. See NOT FOUND; NO BILL. Cf. TRUE BILL.

"When the grand jury have heard the evidence, if they think it a groundless accusation, they used formerly to endorse on the back of the bill, 'ignoramus;' or, we know nothing of it: intimating, that, though the facts might possibly be true, that truth did not appear to them: but now they assert in English, more absolutely, 'not a true bill;' and then the party is discharged without farther answer." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 301 (1769).

ignorantia (ig-nə-ran-shee-ə). [Latin] Ignorance; esp., ignorance of the law.

"Ignorantia . . . Divided in the civil law, into ignorantia facti (ignorance of fact) and ignorantia juris (ignorance of law). Lord Coke accepts this division . . ." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 40 (2d ed. 1867).

ignorantia facti (ig-nə-ran-shee-ə fak-ti). [Latin] Ignorance of fact.

ignorantia facti excusat (ig-nə-ran-shee-ə fak-ti ek-skyoo-sat or -zat). [Latin] Ignorance of fact is an excuse; whatever is done under a mistaken impression of a material fact is excused or provides grounds for relief. • This maxim refers to the principle that acts done and contracts made under mistake or ignorance of a material fact are voidable. [Cases: Criminal Law ↪33.]

"Ignorantia facti excusat,' however, is obviously too sweeping even for a general statement of law, because it is clear (to mention only one point for the moment) that if a certain deed would constitute exactly the same crime under either of two factual situations, it will be no excuse that one was mistaken for the other." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1044 (3d ed. 1982).

ignorantia juris (ig-nə-ran-shee-ə joor-is). [Latin] 1. Ignorance of law. • Under Roman law, this type of ignorance was less likely than ignorantia facti to excuse mistaken conduct, except in the case of minors and people, such as women, under some legal disability. 2. IGNORANTIA JURIS NON EXCUSAT.

ignorantia juris non excusat (ig-nə-ran-shee-ə joor-is non ek-skyoo-sat or -zat). [Latin] Lack of knowledge about a legal requirement or prohibition is never an excuse to a criminal charge. • In English, the idea is commonly rendered ignorance of the law is no excuse. — Often shortened to ignorantia juris. — Also termed ignorantia juris neminem excusat (ignorance of the law excuses no one); ignorantia legis non excusat; ignorantia juris haud excusat. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷32.]

ignoratio elenchi (ig-nə-ray-shee-oh e-leng-ki or ig-nə-rah-tee-oh i-leng-kee). [Law Latin "ignorance of the conclusion to be proved"] (16c) An advocate's misunderstanding of an opponent's position, manifested by an argument that fails to address the opponent's point; the overlooking of an opponent's counterargument. • This fallacy of logic often involves an advocate's trying to prove something that is immaterial to the point to be decided.

ignore, vb. (1801) 1. To refuse to notice, recognize, or consider. 2. (Of a grand jury) to reject (an indictment) as groundless; to no-bill (a charge).

ignoring, n. Family law. A parent's or caregiver's pattern of depriving a child of essential intellectual or emotional stimulation or of otherwise stifling a child's emotional growth and intellectual development, essentially by being unavailable. Cf. ISOLATING; REJECTING.

IIED, abbr. INTENTIONAL INFLECTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS.

ill, adj. (Of a pleading) defective, bad, or null.

illation (i-lay-shən). (16c) 1. The act or process of inferring. 2. An inference; that which is inferred.

illegal contract. See CONTRACT.

illegal entry. (18c) 1. Criminal law. The unlawful act of going into a building with the intent to commit a crime. • In some jurisdictions, illegal entry is a lesser included offense of burglary. [Cases: Burglary ↷9.]

2. Immigration. The unauthorized entrance of an alien into the United States by arriving at the wrong time or place, by evading inspection, or by fraud.

illegality, n. (17c) 1. An act that is not authorized by law.

2. The state of not being legally authorized.

"A contract made ultra vires is void; but not [strictly speaking] on the ground of illegality. Lord Cairns . . . takes exception to the use of the term 'illegality,' pointing out that it is not the object of the contracting parties, but the incapacity of one of them, that avoids the contract." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 190 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"It must not be thought that illegality in the law of contract is co-terminous with illegality in the criminal law, for a contract may be illegal without involving any breach of the criminal law at all." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 257 (3d ed. 1981).

3. The state or condition of being unlawful. • The affirmative defense of illegality must be expressly set forth in the response to the opponent's pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c).

illegitimacy. (17c) 1. Unlawfulness. 2. The status of a person who is born outside a lawful marriage and who is not later legitimated by the parents. — Also termed bastardy. Cf. LEGITIMACY. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↷1.]

illegitimate, adj. (16c) 1. (Of a child) born out of lawful wedlock and never having been legitimated <illegitimate son>. • Under modern ecclesiastical law, a child born out of wedlock may be automatically legitimated if the parents later marry. A child conceived while the mother is married but born after she is divorced or widowed is considered legitimate. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ↷1.] 2. Against the law; unlawful <illegitimate contract for the sale of contraband>. 3. Improper <illegitimate conduct>. 4. Incorrectly inferred <illegitimate conclusion>. 5. Ecclesiastical law. (Of a child) born within a marriage that is regarded as an invalid sacrament from its inception.

illusory appointment. See APPOINTMENT (4).

Illusory Appointment Act. An 1830 English statute providing that no appointment of property is to be declared invalid on grounds that it is illusory. • This statute was repealed and reissued in 1925 as part of the Law of Property Act.

illusory contract. See CONTRACT.

illusory promise. See PROMISE.

illusory tenant. See TENANT.

illusory-transfer doctrine. The rule that the law disregards an inter vivos gift over which the donor retains so much control that there is no good-faith intent to relinquish the transferred property. • The illusory-transfer doctrine is usu. applied to inter vivos trusts in which the settlor retains an excessive control or an interest — for instance, one in which the settlor retains the income for life, the power to revoke, and substantial managerial powers. The leading case on this doctrine is Newman v. Dore, 9 N.E.2d 966 (N.Y. 1937). See colorable transfer under TRANSFER. [Cases: Trusts ↷34(1).]

IMF. abbr. INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND.

imitation. Trademarks. An item that so resembles a trademarked item as to be likely to induce the belief that it is genuine. See SIMILARITY. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1095.]

"The law of trade marks is of recent origin, and may be comprehended in the proposition that a dealer 'has a property in his trade mark.' The ownership is allowed to him, that he may have the exclusive benefit of the reputation which his skill has given to articles made by him, and that no other person may be able to sell to the public, as his, that which is not his. An imitation of his mark, with partial differences such as the public would not observe, does him the same harm as an entire counterfeit. If the wholesale buyer, who is most conversant with the marks, is not misled, but the small retailer or the consumer is, the injury is the same in law, and differs only in degree." Clark v. Clark, 25 Barb. 76 (N.Y. 1857).

"It is no excuse that one using the trade-marks of another informs his dealers of the imitation, for succeeding sellers may not make similar disclosures." James Kent, 2 Commentaries on American Law *372 n. 8 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

IMLS. abbr. INSTITUTE OF MUSEUM AND LIBRARY SERVICES.

immaterial, adj. (1893) (Of evidence) tending to prove some fact that is not properly at issue; lacking any logical connection with the consequential facts. Cf. IRRELEVANT. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷338; Evidence ↷143.] — immateriality, n.

"The rules of substantive law and of pleading are what determine immateriality; and if the probandum is immaterial, of course no evidence to prove it is wanted." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 37 (1935).

immatriculation. Int'l law. The grant of nationality to and enrollment on the national registry of a merchant ship, thereby giving the ship the right to fly the registering nation's flag.

immediate, adj. (15c) 1. Occurring without delay; instant <an immediate acceptance>. 2. Not separated by other persons or things <her immediate neighbor>. 3. Having a direct impact; without an intervening agency <the immediate cause of the accident>. Cf. PROXIMATE. [Cases: Negligence ↷385.] — immediacy, immediateness, n.

immediate annuity. See ANNUITY.

immediate cause. See CAUSE (1).

immediate control. (1962) Criminal procedure. 1. The area within an arrestee's reach. • A police officer may conduct a warrantless search of this area to ensure the officer's safety and to prevent the arrestee from destroying evidence. [Cases: Arrest ↷71.1(5); Automobiles ↷349.5(10).] 2. Vehicular control that is close enough to allow the driver to instantly govern the vehicle's movements. • A driver's failure to maintain immediate control over the vehicle could be evidence of negligence.

immediate death. See DEATH.

immediate descent. See DESCENT.

immediate family. See FAMILY.

immediately-apparent requirement. (1978) Criminal procedure. The principle that a police officer must have probable cause to believe that an item is contraband before seizing it. • This plain-view exception to the warrant requirement was first announced in Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443, 91 S.Ct. 2022 (1971).

"An object may not be seized from a car merely because the police plain view of it was lawfully acquired; there must be probable cause that the object is a fruit, instrumentality or evidence of crime. And under the 'immediately apparent' requirement of Coolidge v. New Hampshire, this probable cause must be determined without examination of the object other than is justified by the purpose underlying police entry of the vehicle." Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.7, at 201 (2d ed. 1992).

immediately harmful behavior. See HARMFUL BEHAVIOR.

immediately pending motion. See MOTION (2).

immediate notice. See NOTICE.

immediate-notice clause. Insurance. A provision in many insurance policies obligating the insured to notify the insurer as soon as possible after a claim arises. • A requirement in a policy for "prompt" or "immediate" notice — or that notice must be given "immediately," "at once," "forthwith," "as soon as practicable," or "as soon as possible" — generally means that the notice must be given within a reasonable time under the circumstances. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 3154.]

immigrant. (18c) A person who enters a country to settle there permanently; a person who immigrates. Cf. EMIGRANT.

alien immigrant. An immigrant who has not yet been naturalized.

immigration, n. (17c) The act of entering a country with the intention of settling there permanently. Cf. EMIGRATION. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↻ 100-430.] — immigrate, vb. — immigrant, n.

Immigration and Nationality Act. A comprehensive federal law regulating immigration, naturalization, and the exclusion of aliens. 8 USCA §§ 1101-1537. — Also termed Nationality Act. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ↻ 102.]

imminent danger. See DANGER.

imminent hazard. See HAZARD (1).

imminently dangerous. See DANGEROUS.

imminent-peril doctrine. See EMERGENCY DOCTRINE (1).

immiscere (i-mis-ə-ree), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To mix or mingle with; to meddle with. • This term took on the figurative sense of meddling in another's affairs (e.g., acting as if one were an heir), for which a person could be held accountable.

immobilia (im-ə-bil-ee-ə). Immovables. — Also termed res immobiles (reez i-moh-bə-leez).

immobilia situm sequuntur (im-ə-bil-ee-ə si-təm sə-kwən-tər). [Latin] Immovable things follow their site. • This principle means that immovables are governed by the law of the place where they are fixed. — Sometimes shortened to immobilia situm.

immobilis, adj. (i-moh-bə-lis). [Latin] Immovable.

immobilize, vb. (1871) To make immobile; esp., to turn (movable property) into immovable property or to turn (circulating capital) into fixed capital.

immoral consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

immoral contract. See CONTRACT.

immoral subject matter. 1. Patents. Inventions that do not have a socially beneficial use. • In the past, patents were denied for some categories of inventions, such as gambling devices and fraudulent products, esp. medicines. The doctrine is rarely used today. [Cases: Patents ↻ 46.] 2. Trademarks. SCANDALOUS SUBJECT MATTER.

immovable, n. (usu. pl.) (16c) Property that cannot be moved; an object so firmly attached to land that it is regarded as part of the land. — Also termed immovable thing. See FIXTURE. Cf. MOVABLE. [Cases: Fixtures ↻ 1; Property ↻ 4.] — immovable, adj.

"Considered in its legal aspect, an immovable, that is to say, a piece of land, includes the following elements: — 1. A determinate portion of the earth's surface. 2. The ground beneath the surface down to the centre of the world. All the pieces of land in England meet together in one terminable point at the earth's centre. 3. Possibly the column of space above the surface ad infinitum." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 428 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

immune, adj. Having immunity; exempt from a duty or liability.

immunity. (14c) 1. Any exemption from a duty, liability, or service of process; esp., such an exemption granted to a public official or governmental unit. Cf. IMPUNITY.

"An immunity is a defense to tort liability which is conferred upon an entire group or class of persons or entities under circumstances where considerations of public policy are thought to require special protection for the person, activity or entity in question at the expense of those injured by its tortious act. Historically, tort litigation against units of government, public officers, and charities, and between spouses, parents and children, has been limited or prohibited on this basis." Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 341 (2d ed. 1992).

absolute immunity. (17c) A complete exemption from civil liability, usu. afforded to officials while performing particularly important functions, such as a representative enacting legislation and a judge presiding over a lawsuit. Cf. qualified immunity. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↻114.]

congressional immunity. (1969) Either of two special immunities given to members of Congress: (1) the exemption from arrest while attending a session of the body to which the member belongs, excluding an arrest for treason, breach of the peace, or a felony, or (2) the exemption from arrest or questioning for any speech or debate entered into during a legislative session. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. See SPEECH AND DEBATE CLAUSE. [Cases: United States ↻12.]

diplomatic immunity. (1911) The general exemption of diplomatic ministers from the operation of local law, the exception being that a minister who is plotting against the security of the host nation may be arrested and sent out of the country. • A minister's family shares in diplomatic immunity to a great, though ill-defined, degree. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ↻3.]

discretionary immunity. (1965) A qualified immunity for a public official's acts, granted when the act in question required the exercise of judgment in carrying out official duties (such as planning and policy-making). 28 USCA § 2680(a). [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻728.]

"Probably no one test will control the decision on discretionary immunity. Although the fact that the government has omitted to act is not in itself a defense, the discretionary immunity is frequently emphasized in nonfeasance cases. On the other hand, where the government's activity is affirmative, specific, and in violation of a statute, regulation, or constitutional provision imposing a duty upon government, courts are often willing to say there is no room for discretion." Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 131, at 1041-42 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

executive immunity. (1941) 1. The absolute immunity of the U.S. President or a state governor from civil damages for actions that are within the scope of official responsibilities. [Cases: United States ↻26.] 2. The qualified immunity from civil claims against lesser executive officials, who are liable only if their conduct violates clearly established constitutional or statutory rights. • Executive immunity generally protects an official while carrying out clearly established responsibilities about which a reasonable person would know. Cf. executive privilege under PRIVILEGE (3).

foreign immunity. The immunity of a foreign sovereign, its agents, and its instrumentalities from litigation in U.S. courts. [Cases: International Law ↻10.31-10.39.]

government immunity. See sovereign immunity.

judicial immunity. (1850) The immunity of a judge from civil liability arising from the performance of judicial duties. [Cases: Judges ↻36.]

legislative immunity. (1890) The immunity of a legislator from civil liability arising from the performance of legislative duties. See congressional immunity. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻170.]

prosecutorial immunity. The absolute immunity of a prosecutor from civil liability for decisions made and actions taken in a criminal prosecution. [Cases: District and Prosecuting Attorneys ↻10.]

qualified immunity. (1877) Immunity from civil liability for a public official who is performing a discretionary function, as long as the conduct does not violate clearly established constitutional or statutory rights. — Also termed prima facie privilege. Cf. absolute immunity. [Cases: Civil Rights ↻1376; Officers and Public Employees ↻114.]

sovereign immunity. (1857) 1. A government's immunity from being sued in its own courts without its consent. • Congress has waived most of the federal government's sovereign immunity. See FEDERAL TORT CLAIMS ACT. [Cases: United States ↻125.] 2. A state's immunity from being sued in federal court by the state's own citizens. — Also termed government immunity; governmental immunity.

work-product immunity. See WORK-PRODUCT RULE.

2. Torts. A doctrine providing a complete defense to a tort action. • Unlike a privilege, immunity does not negate the tort, and it must be raised affirmatively or it will be waived. Cf. PRIVILEGE (2).

charitable immunity. (1935) The immunity of a charitable organization from tort liability. • This immunity has been eliminated or restricted in most states. — Also termed eleemosynary defense. [Cases: Charities ↻45(2).]

corporate immunity. A corporate officer's immunity from personal liability for a tortious act committed while acting in good faith and within the course of corporate duties.

husband-wife immunity. (1951) The immunity of one spouse from a tort action by the other spouse for personal injury. • The immunity arose from the age-old notion that a husband and wife were one in the eyes of the law, so that one could not injure the other — there being no "other." Most states and the District of Columbia have abolished interspousal tort immunity either by judicial opinion or by statute. Some states have abolished the rule only in specific instances such as intentional or vehicular torts. — Also termed interspousal immunity; interspousal tort immunity; marital immunity. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↷205(2).]

interspousal immunity. See husband-wife immunity

marital immunity. See husband-wife immunity.

parental immunity. (1930) 1. The principle that children cannot sue their parents, and that parents cannot sue their children, for tort claims. • This tort immunity did not exist at English common law; it was created by American courts, first appearing in Hewlette v. George, 9 So. 885 (Miss. 1891). Many courts have abolished the doctrine for some purposes, such as actions by unemancipated minors against parents to recover for injuries sustained in motor-vehicle accidents. See, e.g., Merrick v. Sutterlin, 610 P.2d 891 (Wash. 1980) (en banc). Nor does the immunity apply when an injury is inflicted by the parent or child through willful, wanton, or criminal conduct. See, e.g., Nudd v. Matsoukas, 131 N.E.2d 525 (Ill. 1956). — Also termed parent-child immunity; parental-immunity doctrine. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷11.] 2. The principle that parents are not liable for damages caused by the ordinary negligence of their minor child. Cf. PARENTAL-LIABILITY STATUTE. [Cases: Parent and Child ↷13.5(2).]

3. Criminal law. Freedom from prosecution granted by the government in exchange for the person's testimony. • By granting immunity, the government can compel testimony — despite the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination — because that testimony can no longer incriminate the witness. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷42.]

pocket immunity. (1983) Immunity that results from the prosecutor's decision not to prosecute, instead of from a formal grant of immunity. — Also termed informal immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷42.]

testimonial immunity. (1938) Immunity from the use of the compelled testimony against the witness. • Any information derived from that testimony, however, is generally admissible against the witness. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷42; Witnesses ↷304.]

"Testimonial immunity is a logical corollary to a person's fifth amendment right not to 'be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.' It provides that when a witness is compelled to testify for any reason, his testimony cannot be used against him in a subsequent criminal proceeding. It also follows that the immunity is not available where the witness testifies voluntarily, and that the protection applies only in a subsequent criminal prosecution in which the witness is subject to prosecution for an offense related to his earlier testimony." 2 Paul H. Robinson, Criminal Law Defenses § 205, at 482-83 (1984).

transactional immunity. (1966) Immunity from prosecution for any event or transaction described in the compelled testimony. • This is the broadest form of immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷42.]

use immunity. (1970) Immunity from the use of the compelled testimony (or any information derived from that testimony) in a future prosecution against the witness. • After granting use immunity, the government can still prosecute if it shows that its evidence comes from a legitimate independent source. — Also termed use/derivative-use immunity; derivative-use immunity. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷42.]

4. Freedom of a person against having a given legal relation altered by someone else's act or omission.

immunize, vb. (1892) To grant immunity to <the new legislation immunized the police officers from liability>.

impacted area. A region that is affected by some event; esp., a region in which the school population increases due to an influx of federal employees who are working on a federal project or activity, but the tax revenue declines due to the U.S. government's immunity from local taxes.

impact rule. (1865) Torts. The common-law requirement that physical contact must have occurred to allow damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress. • This rule has been abandoned in most jurisdictions. — Also termed physical-impact rule. [Cases: Damages ↷57.16(2).]

impair, vb. (17c) To diminish the value of (property or a property right). • This term is commonly used in reference to diminishing the value of a contractual obligation to the point that the contract becomes invalid or a party loses the benefit of the contract. See CONTRACTS CLAUSE.

impaired capital. See CAPITAL.

impairing the morals of a minor. (1931) The offense of an adult's engaging in sex-related acts, short of intercourse, with a minor. • Examples of this conduct are fondling, taking obscene photographs, and showing pornographic materials. — Also termed unlawful sexual conduct with a minor; corrupting; corruption of a minor. Cf. CONTRIBUTING TO THE DELINQUENCY OF A MINOR. [Cases: Infants ↷13.]

impairment, n. (14c) The fact or state of being damaged, weakened, or diminished <impairment of collateral>. — impair, vb.

severe impairment. In social-security or disability law, a physical or mental impairment that greatly restricts a person's ability to perform ordinary, necessary tasks of daily life. See DISABILITY (2); MAJOR LIFE ACTIVITY. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ↷140.20.]

impalement, n. (17c) Hist. An ancient mode of inflicting punishment by thrusting a sharp pole through the body. — Formerly also spelled empalement. — impale, vb.

impanel, vb. See EMPANEL.

impaneled jury. See JURY.

imparcare (im-pahr-kair-ee), vb. [Law Latin "to enclose"] Hist. To impound; to confine in prison. See CARCER.

imparl (im-pahrl), vb. 1. Hist. To request or obtain an imparlance. 2. To confer with the opposing party in an effort to settle a dispute amicably; to discuss settlement.

imparlance (im-pahr-lənts). Hist. 1. A continuance granted for the purpose of giving the requesting party (usu. the defendant) further time to answer the adversary's last pleading (esp. the plaintiff's writ, bill, or count), often so that the parties will have time to settle the dispute. • Imparlanes were abolished in England in 1853. 2. A petition for such a continuance. 3. The permission granting such a continuance. — Formerly also spelled emparlance. — Also termed licentia loquendi.

"After defence made, the defendant must put in his plea. But, before he pleads, he is entitled to demand one imparlance, or licentia loquendi, and may have more granted by consent of the plaintiff; to see if he can end the matter amicably without farther suit, by talking with the plaintiff . . ." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 298 (1768).

"An imparlance is the time allowed by the court to either party, upon request, to answer the pleading of his opponent. Imparlance, from the French 'parler' — to speak — in its most common signification, means time to plead. Formerly the parties, in the course of oral pleadings, were allowed time to speak or confer with one another, so that they might endeavor to settle the matters in dispute, and later, when the pleadings came to be in writing, the court permitted a certain time for each to plead to or answer the pleading of his opponent. In modern practice the term is rarely used . . ." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 234, at 405 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

general imparlance. The allowance of time until the court's next term, without reserving to the defendant the benefit of any exception. • With this type of imparlance, the requesting defendant cannot later object to the jurisdiction of the court or plead any matter in abatement.

general special imparlance. The allowance of time with a saving of all exceptions, so that a defendant might later plead not only in abatement but also to the jurisdiction.

special imparlance. The allowance of time with a saving only of exceptions to the writ, bill, or count, but not to the court's jurisdiction.

impartial, adj. (16c) Unbiased; disinterested.

impartial chair. (1993) 1. ARBITRATOR. 2. MEDIATOR. — Also termed impartial chairman.

impartial expert. See EXPERT.

impartial jury. See JURY.

impartible (im-pahr-tə-bəl), adj. (14c) Indivisible <an impartible estate>.

impartible feud. See FEUD (1).

impasse (im-pas). A point in negotiations at which agreement cannot be reached. • A neutral third party (such as a mediator) is often called in to help resolve an impasse.

"Not only is the employer free after impasse to implement changes already offered to the union, but either party is free after impasse to decline to negotiate further. Since impasse signifies that the parties have exhausted (at least temporarily) the avenues of bargaining, termination of bargaining at that point cannot be thought to demonstrate a cast of mind against reaching agreement." Robert A. Gorman, Basic Text on Labor Law: Unionization and Collective Bargaining 447 (1976).

impeach, vb. (14c) 1. To charge with a crime or misconduct; esp., to formally charge (a public official) with a violation of the public trust <President Nixon resigned from office to avoid being impeached>. • Impeaching a federal official, such as the President, the Vice President, or a judge, requires that a majority of the U.S. House of Representatives vote to return at least one article of impeachment to the U.S. Senate, itemizing the charges and explaining their factual grounds. Even if an official is impeached, removal from office does not occur unless two-thirds of the senators who are present vote for conviction. 2. To discredit the veracity of (a witness) <the lawyer hoped that her star witness wouldn't be impeached on cross-examination>. [Cases: Witnesses ↻311-409.] 3. To challenge the accuracy or authenticity of (a document) <the handwriting expert impeached the holographic will>.

impeachable offense. An offense for which a public official may legally be impeached, during the first step in a two-step process that may, depending on the vote in the U.S. Senate, lead to the official's removal from office. • The U.S. Constitution states that "[t]he President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." The meaning of this language was much debated during the impeachment and trial of President Bill Clinton, against whom two articles of impeachment were returned by the House of Representatives. The question arose concerning what type of misdemeanor will suffice, and whether the high in high crimes modifies misdemeanors as well. No definitive answer resulted from the proceedings.

impeachment. (16c) 1. The act (by a legislature) of calling for the removal from office of a public official, accomplished by presenting a written charge of the official's alleged misconduct; esp., the initiation of a proceeding in the U.S. House of Representatives against a federal official, such as the President or a judge. — Also termed formal impeachment. • Congress's authority to remove a federal official stems from Article II, Section 4 of the Constitution, which authorizes the removal of an official for "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." The grounds upon which an official can be removed do not, however, have to be criminal in nature. They usu. involve some type of abuse of power or breach of the public trust. Articles of impeachment — which can be approved by a simple majority in the House — serve as the charging instrument for the later trial in the Senate. If the President is impeached, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court presides over the Senate trial. The defendant can be removed from office by the vote of a two-thirds majority of the senators who are present. In the United Kingdom, impeachment is by the House of Commons and trial by the House of Lords. But no case has arisen there since 1801, and many British scholars consider impeachment obsolete. [Cases: United States ↻35.] 2. The act of discrediting a witness, as by catching the witness in a lie or by demonstrating that the witness has been convicted of a criminal offense. [Cases: Witnesses ↻311–409.] 3. The act of challenging the accuracy or authenticity of evidence.

formal impeachment. 1. The discrediting of a witness's testimony by confronting the witness with his or her specific untruthful acts, prior convictions, prior inconsistent statements, or the like. 2. See IMPEACHMENT (1).

impeachment court. See COURT FOR THE TRIALS OF IMPEACHMENT.

impeachment evidence. See EVIDENCE.

impeachment of verdict. (1821) A party's attack on a verdict, alleging impropriety by a member of the jury. [Cases: New Trial ↻44, 143; Trial ↻344.]

impeachment of waste. Hist. An action for waste against the tenant of the harmed property.

"[F]or above five hundred years past, all tenants for life or for any less estate, have been punishable or liable to be impeached for waste, both voluntary and permissive; unless their leases be made, as sometimes they are, without impeachment of waste . . ." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 283 (1766).

impechiare (im-pee-chee-air-ee), vb. [fr. Law French empescher "to impeach"] Hist. To impeach; to accuse.

impediens (im-pee-dee-enz). [Law Latin] Hist. A person who hinders. • The defendant (or deforciant) in a fine of conveyance was sometimes so called. See FINE (1).

impediment (im-ped-ə-mənt). (14c) A hindrance or obstruction; esp., some fact (such as legal minority) that bars a marriage if known beforehand and, if discovered after the ceremony, renders the marriage void or voidable.

canonical impediment. A ground for annulment recognized by canon law and developed by the ecclesiastical courts of the Roman Catholic Church. • Canonical impediments include affinity, impotence, disparity of worship, and previous religious profession.

civil impediment. A ground for annulment recognized by civil law of contracts, such as minority, unsoundness of mind, fraud, and duress. • The defects of fraud and duress may be waived, and the parties may confirm the marriage.

diriment impediment (dir-ə-mənt im-ped-ə-mənt), n. [fr. Latin dirimens impedimentum "nullifying impediment"] A fact that raises an absolute bar to marriage and renders a contracted marriage void. • Diriment impediments include consanguinity within a prohibited degree and a prior undissolved marriage. — Also termed impedimenta dirimentia.

impedimenta dirimentia. See diriment impediment under IMPEDIMENT.

impedimentum rebus agendis (im-ped-ə-men-təm ree-bəs ə-jen-dis). [Law Latin] Hist. A hindrance to the transaction of business.

impeditor (im-ped-ə-tər). [Law Latin] Hist. A person who interferes with a patron's right of advowson, i.e., the right to appoint a clerk to a benefice. — Also termed disturber. See DE CLERICO ADMITTENDO.

impensae (im-pen-see), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Expenditures made on a thing.

impensae necessariae (im-pen-see nes-ə-sair-ee-ee). Expenditures necessary to prevent deterioration, destruction, or loss of a thing — such as money expended for building repair or maintenance.

impensae utiles (im-pen-see yoo-tə-leez). Useful expenditures that improve something and increase its selling value.

impensae voluptariae (im-pen-see vol-əp-tair-ee-ee). Expenditures made on a thing for ornamental purposes only.

imperative authority. See AUTHORITY (4).

imperative law. See LAW.

imperative theory of law. (1909) The theory that law consists of the general commands issued by a country or other political community to its subjects and enforced by courts with the sanction of physical force. • Imperative theorists believe that if there are rules predating or independent of the country, those rules may closely resemble law or even substitute for it, but they are not law. imperitia (im-pə-rish-ee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. Lack of skill or competence; inexperience. • The Romans considered imperitia to be a type of culpa that gave rise to liability in tort or liability under a contract calling for the rendering of services (such as a locatio conductio operis). Imperitus could denote a person, such as a judge who was incompetent in what he undertook.

imperium (im-peer-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. Power or dominion; esp., the legal authority wielded by superior magistrates under the Republic, and later by the emperor under the Empire. • Imperium implied the right of military command, and the powers of corporal punishment, and of life and death over citizens. It was symbolized by the lictors who carried the fasces and an ax, which symbolized those powers. Imperium was also used less technically; it applied to lesser types of authority under Roman law, and thus had different meanings. For example, imperium domesticum described the power of the head of a household.

imperium merum (im-peer-ee-əm meer-əm). [Latin “bare power” or “absolute executive power”] Roman law. A higher magistrate’s power to use force to repress crime.

imperium mixtum (im-peer-ee-əm miks-təm). [Latin “mixed power”] Roman law. A magistrate’s authority to make and enforce decisions in civil and criminal matters.

impermissible comment on the evidence. See COMMENT ON THE EVIDENCE.

impersonal. See IN REM.

impersonation. (18c) The act of impersonating someone. — Also termed personation.

false impersonation. (1878) The crime of falsely representing oneself as another person, usu. a law-enforcement officer, for the purpose of deceiving someone. See 18 USCA §§ 912–917. — Also termed false personation. [Cases: False Personation ⇨ 1.]

impertinent, adj. See IRRELEVANT.

impertinent evidence. See EVIDENCE.

impertinent matter. (18c) Procedure. In pleading, matter that is not relevant to the action or defense.

• A federal court may strike any impertinent matter from a pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). Cf. SCANDALOUS MATTER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1127; Pleading ⇨ 23, 364(4).]

“The court will not strike out the matter unless its impertinence clearly appears; for if erroneously stricken out, the error is irremediable; if left to stand, the court may set the matter right in taxing the costs. Matter which is scandalous is also impertinent.” William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 526 (1889).

impescare (im-pə-skair-ee), vb. [fr. Law French empeschier “to impeach”] Hist. To impeach; to accuse.

impetito vasti (im-pə-tish-ee-oh vas-ti). See IMPEACHMENT OF WASTE.

impetrare (im-pə-trair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To obtain by request. • This word often appeared in petitions requesting a formula for an action from a praetor. It performed a similar function under English law for those seeking a writ from Chancery. The English word impetrate derives from this Latinism. Cf. FORMULA.

impetration (im-pə-tray-shən). 1. Hist. The act of petitioning for a writ. 2. Hist. Eccles. law. The act of obtaining a papal benefice for bestowal by the king or other lay patron. — impetrate, vb.

implied warranty of merchantability. See WARRANTY (2).

imply, vb. (14c) 1. To express or involve indirectly; to suggest <the opinion implies that the court has adopted a stricter standard for upholding punitive-damages awards>. Cf. INFER. 2. (Of a court) to impute or impose on equitable or legal grounds <the court implied a contract between the parties>. 3. To read into (a document) <citing grounds of fairness, the court implied a condition that the parties had not expressed>. See implied term under TERM (2). — implication, *n.

"Anglo-American judges, who continually evaluate facts, often use the phrase by implication (= by what is implied, though not formally expressed, by natural inference), along with its various cognates. Judges (by implication) draw 'natural inferences' and thereby decide that something or other was, in the circumstances, 'implied.' Through the process of hypallage — a semantic shift by which the attributes of the true subject are transferred to another subject — the word imply has come to be used in reference to what the judges do, as opposed to the circumstances. This specialized use of imply runs counter to popular lay use and is not adequately treated in English-language dictionaries.

"The lawyer's imply has directly encroached on the word infer. Whereas nonlawyers frequently use infer for imply, lawyers and judges conflate the two in the opposite direction, by using imply for infer. In analyzing the facts of a case, judges will imply one fact from certain others. (From is a telling preposition.) Nonlawyers believe they must be inferring an additional fact from those already known; if contractual terms are implied, they must surely be implied by the words or circumstances of the contract and not by the judges." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 423, 424 (2d ed. 1995).

import, n. (16c) 1. A product brought into a country from a foreign country where it originated <imports declined in the third quarter>. See PARALLEL IMPORTS. 2. The process of bringing foreign goods into a country <the import of products affects the domestic economy in significant ways>. Cf. EXPORT (1), (2). 3. The meaning; esp., the implied meaning <the court must decide the import of that obscure provision>. 4. Importance; significance <time will tell the relative import of Judge Posner's decisions in American law>.

importation. (17c) The bringing of goods into a country from another country.

imported litigation. (1927) One or more lawsuits brought in a state that has no interest in the dispute.

importer. (15c) A person or entity that brings goods into a country from a foreign country and pays customs duties.

Import-Export Clause. (1945) U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 2, which prohibits states from taxing imports or exports. • The Supreme Court has liberally interpreted this clause, allowing states to tax imports as long as the tax does not discriminate in favor of domestic goods. — Also termed Export Clause. [Cases: Customs Duties ⇨ 1, 2.]

import letter of credit. See LETTER OF CREDIT.

import quota. See QUOTA.

import recording. See BOOTLEG RECORDING (1).

importune (im-por-t[y]oon), vb. (16c) To solicit forcefully; to request persistently, and sometimes irksomely.

impose, vb. (17c) To levy or exact (a tax or duty).

imposition. (14c) An impost or tax.

factual impossibility. (1932) Impossibility due to the fact that the illegal act cannot physically be accomplished, such as trying to pick an empty pocket. • Factual impossibility is not a defense to the crime of attempt. — Also termed physical impossibility; impossibility of fact. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 31, 44.]

legal impossibility. (1831) 1. Impossibility due to the fact that what the defendant intended to do is not illegal even though the defendant might have believed that he or she was committing a crime. • A legal impossibility might occur, for example, if a person goes hunting while erroneously believing that it is not hunting season. This type of legal impossibility is a defense to the crimes of attempt, conspiracy, and solicitation. — Also termed impossibility of law; true legal impossibility. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 31, 44.] 2. Impossibility due to the fact that an element required for an attempt has not been satisfied. • This type of legal impossibility might occur, for example, if a person pulls the trigger of an unloaded gun pointed at another when the crime of attempt requires that the gun be loaded. This is a defense to the crime of attempt. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 44.]

objective impossibility. Impossibility due to the nature of the performance and not to the inability of the individual promisor. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 309.] subjective impossibility. Impossibility due wholly to the inability of the individual promisor and not to the nature of the performance. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 309.]

supervening impossibility. Impossibility arising after the formation of a contract but before the time when the promisor's performance is due, and arising because of facts that the promisor had no reason to anticipate and did not contribute to the occurrence of. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 309.]

impossibility-of-performance doctrine. (1960) The principle that a party may be released from a contract on the ground that uncontrollable circumstances have rendered performance impossible. Cf. FRUSTRATION (2); IMPRACTICABILITY. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 309(1).]

impossible contract. See CONTRACT.

impost (im-pohst). (16c) A tax or duty, esp. a customs duty <the impost was assessed when the ship reached the mainland>. See DUTY (4).

impostor (im-pos-tər). (16c) One who pretends to be someone else to deceive others, esp. to receive the benefits of a negotiable instrument. — Also spelled imposter. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 147; Bills and Notes ⇨ 201, 279.]

impostor rule. Commercial law. The principle that an impostor's indorsement of a negotiable instrument is not a forgery, and that the drawer or maker who issues the instrument to the impostor is negligent and therefore liable to the holder for payment. • If a drawer or maker issues an instrument to an impostor, any resulting forgery of the payee's name will be effective in favor of a person paying on the instrument in good faith or taking it for value or collection. UCC § 3-404. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨147; Bills and Notes ⇨201, 279.]

impotence (im-pə-tənts). (15c) 1. A man's inability to achieve an erection and therefore to have sexual intercourse. • Because an impotent husband cannot consummate a marriage, impotence has often been cited as a ground for annulment. — Also termed impotency; physical incapacity; erectile dysfunction. 2. Hist. Sterility. 3. Rare. A woman's physical inability to engage in sexual intercourse.

impound, n. The portion of a monthly mortgage payment that is earmarked to pay property taxes and the property-insurance premiums. See impound account under ACCOUNT.

impound, vb. (15c) 1. To place (something, such as a car or other personal property) in the custody of the police or the court, often with the understanding that it will be returned intact at the end of the proceeding. 2. To take and retain possession of (something, such as a forged document to be produced as evidence) in preparation for a criminal prosecution.

impound account. See ACCOUNT.

impoundment. (17c) 1. The action of impounding; the state of being impounded. See IMPOUND. 2. Constitutional law. The President's refusal to spend funds appropriated by Congress. • Although not authorized by the Constitution and seldom used, impoundment effectively gives the executive branch a line-item veto over legislative spending. [Cases: United States ⇨82(1).]

impracticability (im-prak-ti-kə-bil-ə-tee). (17c) Contracts. 1. A fact or circumstance that excuses a party from performing an act, esp. a contractual duty, because (though possible) it would cause extreme and unreasonable difficulty. • For performance to be truly impracticable, the duty must become much more difficult or much more expensive to perform, and this difficulty or expense must have been unanticipated. [Cases: Contracts ⇨309(1).] 2. The doctrine by which such a fact or circumstance excuses performance. Cf. FRUSTRATION (2); IMPOSSIBILITY (4).

commercial impracticability. (1913) The occurrence of a contingency whose nonoccurrence was an assumption in the contract, as a result of which one party cannot perform. — Also termed (in the UCC) excuse by failure of presupposed conditions. [Cases: Contracts ⇨309(1).]

impressment (im-pres-mənt), n. (18c) 1. The act of forcibly taking (something) for public service. 2. A court's imposition of a constructive trust on equitable grounds. See constructive trust under TRUST. 3. Archaic. The method by which armed forces were formerly expanded, when so-called press-gangs seized men off the streets and forced them to join the army or navy. Cf. CRIMPING. — impress, vb.

imprest fund. See FUND (1).

imprest money (im-prest). A payment made to a soldier or sailor upon enlistment or impressment.

imprimatur (im-pri-may-tər or -mah-tər). [Latin "let it be printed"] (17c) 1. A license required to publish a book. • Once required in England, the imprimatur is now encountered only rarely in countries that censor the press. 2. A general grant of approval; commendatory license or sanction.

imprimis (im-pri-mis), adv. [fr. Latin in primis "in the first"] (15c) In the first place. — Also termed in primis.

imprison, vb. (14c) To confine (a person) in prison.

imprisonment, n. (14c) 1. The act of confining a person, esp. in a prison <the imprisonment of Jackson was entirely justified>. 2. The state of being confined; a period of confinement <Jackson's imprisonment lasted 14 years>. See FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

"Imprisonment, by whatever name it is called, is a harsh thing, and the discipline that must be exercised over human beings in close confinement can never be wholly agreeable to those subject to it. When an attempt is made to hide the harsh realities of criminal justice behind euphemistic descriptions, a corrupting irony may be introduced into ordinary speech that is fully as frightening as Orwell's 'Newspeak.'" Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 57 (1968).

imprisonment for debt. Hist. Detention of a debtor by court order to force the debtor to pay certain civil obligations. • The remedy was usu. available only when the debt arose from nonpayment of taxes or fines owed to the Crown, or from the debtor's failure to pay court-ordered support or alimony, or from the debtor's failure to obey a decree ad factum praestandum. — Also termed civil imprisonment. See decree ad factum praestandum under DECREE.

improbation. Scots law. An action to prove that a document is forged or otherwise false. — Also termed proper improbation.

reduction improbation. Scots law. An action in which a person who may be hurt or affected by a document can demand the document's production in court. • The person bringing the action may ask the court either to determine the document's effects or to nullify the document. If the document is not produced, the court can automatically declare it false or forged.

improper, adj. (15c) 1. Incorrect; unsuitable or irregular. 2. Fraudulent or otherwise wrongful.

improper cumulation of actions. Hist. Under the common-law pleading system, the joining of inconsistent causes of action in one proceeding. • This is permitted under most modern pleading systems.

improper feud. See FEUD (1).

improper influence. See UNDUE INFLUENCE (2).

improper means of discovery. Trade secrets. A wrongful way of figuring out a competitor's trade secret, as by misrepresentation, eavesdropping, or stealing. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻414.]

improper motion. See MOTION (2).

improper rector. See RECTOR (1).

impropriation (im-proh-pree-ay-shən). Eccles. law. The grant of an ecclesiastical benefice to the use of a lay person, whether individual or corporate. See LAY IMPROPRIATOR. Cf. APPROPRIATION (5).

"A church might also be appropriated to a layman, and the proper word to denote this was impropriation as distinct from appropriation, which was confined to the case of an allocation to a spiritual body." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 333 (3d ed. 1933).

improve, vb. (16c) 1. To increase the value or enhance the appearance of something. 2. To develop (land), whether or not the development results in an increase or a decrease in value. — improver, n.

improved value. (1834) Real estate. In the appraisal of property, the value of the land plus the value of any improvements.

improvement. (16c) An addition to real property, whether permanent or not; esp., one that increases its value or utility or that enhances its appearance. — Also termed land improvement. Cf. FIXTURE. [Cases: Improvements ↻1.]

beneficial improvement. See valuable improvement.

general improvement. (17c) An improvement whose primary purpose or effect is to benefit the public generally, though it may incidentally benefit property owners in its vicinity.

local improvement. (1831) A real-property improvement, such as a sewer or sidewalk, financed by special assessment, and specially benefiting adjacent property. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻265.]

necessary improvement. (17c) An improvement made to prevent the deterioration of property.

public improvement. An improvement made to property owned by the state or any other political entity, such as a municipality. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻265; States ↻83.]

valuable improvement. (18c) An improvement that adds permanent value to the freehold. • Because of its nature, a valuable improvement would not typically be made by anyone other than the owner. A valuable improvement may be slight and of small value, as long as it is both permanent and beneficial to the property. — Also termed beneficial improvement.

voluntary improvement. An improvement whose only purpose is ornamental. [Cases: Improvements ↻1.] improvement bond. See revenue bond under BOND (3). improvement claim. See Jepson claim under PATENT CLAIM.

improvement invention. See INVENTION.

improvement patent. See PATENT (3).

improvidence (im-prahv-ə-dənts). (15c) A lack of foresight and care in the management of property, esp. as grounds for removing an estate administrator.

improvident (im-prahv-ə-dənt), adj. (16c) 1. Lacking foresight and care in the management of property. 2. Of or relating to a judgment arrived at by using misleading information or a mistaken assumption.

impruiare (im-proo-ee-air-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To improve land.

impubes (im-pyoo-beez), n. [Latin] Roman law. A child under the age of puberty. • Under Roman law, this term referred to a male under 14 and a female under 12. Pl. impuberes (im-pyoo-bə-reez). Cf. INFANS.

impugn (im-pyoon), vb. (14c) To challenge or call into question (a person's character, the truth of a statement, etc.). — impugment, n.

impulse, n. (17c) A sudden urge or inclination that prompts an unplanned action.

uncontrollable impulse. (1844) An impulse so overwhelming that it cannot be resisted. • In some jurisdictions, an uncontrollable impulse serves as a defense to criminal conduct committed while in the grip of the impulse. See IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻50.] impunity (im-pyoo-nə-tee). (16c) Exemption from punishment; immunity from the detrimental effects of one's actions <because she was a foreign diplomat, she was able to park illegally with impunity>. Cf. IMMUNITY (1).

imputation, n. (16c) The act or an instance of imputing something, esp. fault or crime, to a person; an accusation or charge <an imputation of negligence>.

imputation of payment. Civil law. The act of applying or directing a payment to principal or interest on a debt, or to a particular debt when there are two or more. La. Civ. Code arts. 1864, 1866.

impute (im-pyoot), vb. (14c) To ascribe or attribute; to regard (usu. something undesirable) as being done, caused, or possessed by <the court imputed malice to the defamatory statement>. — imputation, n. — imputable, adj.

"The word 'impute' comes from im (in) and putare (reckon). It means to bring into the reckoning, to attribute or to ascribe. It is sometimes used to attribute vicariously, — to ascribe as derived from another. This is included properly within the general import of the term but it is not its primary meaning. It may be used in many senses. Thus we may impute (ascribe) intent, knowledge, guilt, and so forth. Here it is used in the basic sense of imputing (ascribing) the fact itself. Harm has been done. Did the defendant do it? Usually such an inquiry is purely factual. What really happened? At times, however, when all the facts are known we have to ask: Will the law impute (attribute or ascribe) what happened to the defendant? That is what is meant here by "imputability." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 605 (3d ed. 1982).

imputed disqualification. See vicarious disqualification under DISQUALIFICATION.

imputed income. See INCOME.

imputed interest. See INTEREST (3).

imputed knowledge. See KNOWLEDGE.

imputed negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

imputed notice. See NOTICE.

in, prep. Under or based on the law of <to bring an action in contract>.

in absentia (in ab-sen-shee-ə or ab-sen-shə). [Latin] (1886) In the absence of (someone); in (someone's) absence <tried in absentia>.

inaccuracy rejection. See REJECTION.

in acquirenda possessione (in ak-wə-ren-də pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. In the course of acquiring possession.

in action. (18c) (Of property) attainable or recoverable through litigation. See chose in action under CHOSE.

inactive case. See CASE.

inactive stock. See STOCK.

inadequate assistance of counsel. See ineffective assistance of counsel under ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL.

inadequate consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

inadequate remedy at law. (1817) A remedy (such as money damages) that does not sufficiently correct the wrong, as a result of which an injunction may be available to the disadvantaged party. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction ↷ 15, 138.9.]

inadmissible, adj. (18c) 1. (Of a thing) not allowable or worthy of being admitted. 2. (Of evidence) excludable by some rule of evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 2011; Trial ↷ 43.] 3. (Of an alien) ineligible for admission into a country or (if the alien has already entered illegally) subject to removal.

inadmissible alien. See ALIEN.

in adversum (in ad-vər-səm). [Law Latin] Against an adverse party.

"Where a decree is obtained against one who resists, it is termed 'a decree not by consent but in adversum.'" 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary 1518 (8th ed. 1914).

inadvertence, n. (15c) An accidental oversight; a result of carelessness.

inadvertent discovery. (1971) Criminal procedure. A law-enforcement officer's unexpected finding of incriminating evidence in plain view. • Even though this type of evidence is obtained without a warrant, it can be used against the accused under the plain-view exception to the warrant requirement. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ↷ 48.]

inadvertent negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

inaedificatio (in-ee-di-fi-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The act of building on another's land with one's own materials, or on one's own land with another's materials. • This was a form of accessio. Regardless of the source of the materials, the building became the landowner's property. See ACCESSIO.

in aemulationem (in ee-myə-lay-shee-oh-nəm). [Latin] Hist. With a desire to injure; with an intent to annoy.

in aemulationem vicini (in ee-myə-lay-shee-oh-nəm vi-si-ni). [Latin] Hist. To the annoyance of a neighbor.

in aequali jure (in ee-kway-lī joor-ee). [Law Latin] In equal right.

in aequali manu (in ee-kway-lī man-yoo). [Law Latin] In equal hand. • This phrase refers to property held indifferently between two parties, as when the parties to an instrument deposit it in the hands of a neutral third person. — Also termed in aequa manu.

in aequo (in ee-kwoh). [Law Latin] Hist. In equity. Cf. EX AEQUO ET BONO.

inalienable, adj. (17c) Not transferable or assignable <inalienable property interests>. — Also termed unalienable.

inalienable interest. See INTEREST (2).

in alieno solo (in ay-lee- or al-ee-ee-noh soh-loh). [fr. Law French en auter soile] In another's land.

in alio loco (in al-ee-oh loh-koh). [Latin] In another's place. See CEPIT IN ALIO LOCO.

in ambiguo (in am-big-yoo-oh). [Law Latin] In doubt.

in apicibus juris (in ə-pis-ə-bəs joor-is). [Latin] Among the extremes (or most subtle doctrines) of the law.

in arbitrable, adj. (18c) 1. (Of a dispute) not capable of being arbitrated; not subject to arbitration. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ↷ 118.] 2. Not subject to being decided.

in arbitrio alieno (in ahr-bi-tree-oh ay-lee-ee-noh or al-ee-). [Law Latin] According to the judgment of another. • This term refers to property bequeathed to a trustee for the benefit of others, to be used in the trustee's discretion.

in arbitrium judicis (in ahr-bi-tree-əm joo-di-sis). [Latin] At the decision or discretion of the judge.

in arcta et salva custodia (in ahrk-tə et sal-və kə-stoh-dee-ə). [Latin] In close and safe custody.

in arrears (in ə-reerz), adj. & adv. (17c) 1. Behind in the discharging of a debt or other obligation <the tenants were in arrears with the rent>. 2. At the end of a term or period instead of the beginning <the interests, fees, and costs are payable in arrears>.

in articulo mortis (in ahr-tilk-yə-loh mor-tis). [Law Latin] At the point of death. Cf. IN EXTREMIS.

inaudita altera parte (in-aw-di-tə or in-aw-di-tə al-tə-rə pah-tee). [Latin “without hearing the other party”] Ex parte. • The term is sometimes used in decisions of the European Court of Justice. See EX PARTE.

inauguration (i-naw-gyə-ray-shən), n. (16c) 1. A formal ceremony inducting someone into office. 2. A formal ceremony introducing something into public use. 3. The formal commencement of a period of time or course of action. — inaugurate (i-naw-gyə-rayt), vb. — inauguratory (i-naw-gyə-rə-tor-ee), adj. — inaugurator (i-naw-gyə-ray-tər), n.

in autre droit (in oh-trə droyt). [Law French] See EN AUTRE DROIT.

in banc. See EN BANC.

in banco. See EN BANC.

in bank. See EN BANC.

in being. (17c) Existing in life <life in being plus 21 years>. • In property law, this term includes children conceived but not yet born. — Also termed in esse. See LIFE IN BEING.

“The intentional killing of one not ‘in being,’ i.e. an unborn child, was until 1929 punishable neither as murder nor as infanticide. There can be no murder nor manslaughter of a child which dies before being born or even whilst being born, only of one that has been born and, moreover, been born alive.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny’s Outlines of Criminal Law 104 (16th ed. 1952).

in blank. (1836) (Of an indorsement) not restricted to a particular indorsee. See blank indorsement under INDORSEMENT.

inboard, adj. Maritime law. (Of cargo) stowed between the boards (i.e., sides) of the vessel; esp., stowed inside or near the vessel’s centerline.

in bonis defuncti (in boh-nis di-fəngk-ti). [Latin] Hist. Among the property of the deceased.

in bonis esse (in boh-nis es-ee or es-ay). [Latin “to be among the goods”] Roman law. 1. To be someone’s property. 2. (Of property) held in possession without benefit of a solemn act (such as mancipatio) required to transfer ownership, until ownership might be acquired by the passage of time. See bonitary ownership under OWNERSHIP.

in bonis habere (in boh-nis hə-beer-ee). See bonitary ownership under OWNERSHIP.

Inc. abbr. Incorporated.

in cahoots. See CAHOOTS.

in camera (in kam-ə-rə), adv. & adj. [Law Latin “in a chamber”] (1872) 1. In the judge’s private chambers. 2. In the courtroom with all spectators excluded. 3. (Of a judicial action) taken when court is not in session. — Also termed (in reference to the opinion of one judge) in chambers.

in camera inspection. (1953) A trial judge’s private consideration of evidence. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure 411; Privileged Communications and Confidentiality 31.]

in camera proceeding. See PROCEEDING.

in camera sitting. See SITTING.

in campo (in kam-poh). [Latin] Hist. In the field; before the court.

incapacitated person. (1834) A person who is impaired by an intoxicant, by mental illness or deficiency, or by physical illness or disability to the extent that personal decision-making is impossible.

incapacitation, n. (18c) 1. The action of disabling or depriving of legal capacity. 2. The state of being disabled or lacking legal capacity. — incapacitate, vb.

incapacity. (17c) 1. Lack of physical or mental capabilities. 2. Lack of ability to have certain legal consequences attach to one’s actions. • For example, a five-year-old has an incapacity to make a binding contract. 3. DISABILITY (2). 4. DISABILITY (3). Cf. INCOMPETENCY.

testimonial incapacity. (1867) The lack of capacity to testify. [Cases: Witnesses 35.]

incapax doli (in-kay-paks doh-li). See CAPAX DOLI.

in capita. Individually. See PER CAPITA.

in capite (in kap-ə-tee). [Law Latin “in chief”] Hist. A type of tenure in which a person held land directly of the Crown. — Also termed tenure in capite.

incarceration, n. (16c) The act or process of confining someone; IMPRISONMENT. Cf. DISIMPRISONMENT; DECARCERATION. — incarcerate, vb. — incarcerator, n.

shock incarceration. (1985) Incarceration in a military-type setting, usu. for three to six months, during which the offender is subjected to strict discipline, physical exercise, and hard labor. See 18 USCA § 4046. • After successfully completing the program, the offender is usu. placed on probation. See BOOT CAMP. Cf. shock probation under PROBATION.

in casu consimili. See CASU CONSIMILI.

in casu proviso (in kay-s[y]oo prə-vi-zoh). See CASU PROVISO.

in causa (in kaw-zə). [Latin] Hist. In the cause <the record in causa Abercromby v. Graham is closed>.

incendiarius (in-sen-dee-air-ee-əs), n. Roman law. A fire-starter; arsonist.

incendiary (in-sen-dee-er-ee), n. (15c) 1. One who deliberately and unlawfully sets fire to property. — Also termed arsonist; firebug. 2. An instrument (such as a bomb) or chemical agent designed to start a fire. — incendiary, adj.

incendium (in-sen-dee-əm), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. Fire. 2. Hist. Arson.

incentive pay plan. (1948) A compensation plan in which increased productivity is rewarded with higher pay.

incentive stock option. See STOCK OPTION (2).

incentive theory. Intellectual property. The proposition that society grants creators exclusive rights to their intellectual property in order to stimulate further creativity. • The Patent and Copyright Clause of the U.S. Constitution declares that the purpose of exclusive-right protection is "to Promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts." U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8.

incentive-to-commercialize theory. Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on how efficient the patent system is at bringing together diverse resources such as commercial backing, manufacturing capacity, marketing know-how, and other skills that the inventor alone would be unable to handle. — Also termed incentive-to-invest theory; incentive-to-innovate theory; prospect theory. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY.

incentive-to-design-around theory. Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on their tendency to encourage others to design substitutes and improvements that are better or cheaper. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY.

incentive-to-disclose theory. Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on the social benefit of having the information enter the public domain. • Without the incentive, the argument goes, the technical advancements would remain trade secrets and the duplication of research efforts would be a waste to society. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-INVENT THEORY.

incentive-to-innovate theory. See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

incentive-to-invent theory. Patents. The economic theory justifying the grant of patent rights based on their tendency to encourage new inventions that benefit society and that may not otherwise be developed. Cf. INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DESIGN-AROUND THEORY; INCENTIVE-TO-DISCLOSE THEORY.

incentive-to-invest theory. See INCENTIVE-TO-COMMERCIALIZE THEORY.

incentive zoning. See ZONING.

incerta persona (in-sər-tə pər-soh-nə). [Latin "uncertain person"] Roman law. A person (or corporate body) that could not inherit property, such as a person whose existence was uncertain or whom the testator could not identify by name (such as the first person to appear at the testator's funeral). Pl. incertae personae.

"Another change under Justinian was of much greater importance. Gifts of all kinds could now be made to incertae personae . . ." W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 363 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

incerto patre (in-sər-toh pay-tree). [Latin] Hist. From an uncertain father. • The phrase appeared in reference to illegitimate children.

incest, n. (13c) 1. Sexual relations between family members or close relatives, including children related by adoption. • Incest was not a crime under English common law but was punished as an ecclesiastical offense. Modern statutes make it a felony. [Cases: Incest ⇨ 3.]

"Although incest under both English and American law is a distinct crime, its commission may involve any of eight different offenses: illegal marriage, consensual cohabitation by unmarried persons, fornication (consensual intercourse), forcible rape, statutory rape, child abuse, and juvenile delinquency (sexual relations between minor siblings or cousins). . . . The choice of crime charged is generally one of prosecutorial discretion. Unless one of the participants is a minor and the other an adult, both parties may be prosecuted for incest." Lois G. Forer, "Incest," in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 880, 880 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

2. Intermarriage between persons related in any degree of consanguinity or affinity within which marriage is prohibited — for example, through the uncle-niece or aunt-nephew relationship. [Cases: Incest ⇨ 3; Marriage ⇨ 10.] — incestuous, adj.

incestuosi (in-ses-choo-oh-si). [Law Latin] Hist. Children begotten incestuously. Cf. ADULTERINI.

incestuous adultery. See ADULTERY.

in chambers. See IN CAMERA.

inchartare (in-kahr-tair-ee), vb. [Law Latin "to put in charter"] Hist. To grant by written instrument.

in chief. (17c) 1. Principal, as opposed to collateral or incidental. 2. Denoting the part of a trial in which the main body of evidence is presented. See CASE-IN-CHIEF.

Inchmaree clause (inch-mə-ree). Maritime law. An insurance-policy provision that protects against risks not caused by nature, such as a sailor's negligence or a latent defect in machinery. • This term is taken from a British ship, the Inchmaree, whose sinking in 1884 gave rise to litigation that led to the clause bearing its name. See Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, Fraser & Co., [1887] L.R. 12 App. Cas. 484. — Also termed additional-perils clause. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2228, 2231.]

"The most celebrated decision of recent times under the 'general' clause was doubtless Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co. v. Hamilton, Fraser & Co., 12 App.Cas. 484 (1887). A pump, insured as part of the machinery of a vessel, clogged through valve failure and was damaged. The House of Lords held this accident arose neither through a 'peril of the sea' nor through a cause ejusdem generis with the enumerated perils. . . . This was a disquieting decision, for it more than suggested that many costly accidents that might be suffered by the expensive machinery on steam vessels were not covered by the standard marine policy. The result was the inclusion of the celebrated 'Inchmaree' clause in hull policies, extending special coverage not only to machinery breakage but to many other classes of loss not covered by the standard perils clause as restrictively construed." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 4-8, at 74 n.90 (2d ed. 1975).

inchoate (in-koh-it), adj. (16c) Partially completed or imperfectly formed; just begun. Cf. CHOATE. — inchoateness, n.

"The word 'inchoate,' not much used in ordinary discourse, means 'just begun,' 'undeveloped.' The common law has given birth to three general offences which are usually termed 'inchoate' or 'preliminary' crimes — attempt, conspiracy, and incitement. A principal feature of these crimes is that they are committed even though the substantive offence is not successfully consummated. An attempt fails, a conspiracy comes to nothing, words of incitement are ignored — in all these instances, there may be liability for the inchoate crime." Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 395 (1991).

inchoate crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE (1).

inchoate dower. See DOWER.

inchoate instrument. See INSTRUMENT (3).

inchoate interest. See INTEREST (2).

inchoate lien. See LIEN.

inchoate offense. See OFFENSE (1).

inchoate right. 1. A right that has not fully developed, matured, or vested. 2. Patents. An inventor's right that has not yet vested into a property right because the patent application is pending. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 182.]

incident, adj. (15c) Dependent upon, subordinate to, arising out of, or otherwise connected with (something else, usu. of greater importance) <the utility easement is incident to the ownership of the tract>.

incident, n. (15c) 1. A discrete occurrence or happening <an incident of copyright infringement> 2. A dependent, subordinate, or consequential part (of something else) <child support is a typical incident of divorce>.

incidental, adj. (17c) Subordinate to something of greater importance; having a minor role <the FAA determined that the wind played only an incidental part in the plane crash>.

incidental admission. See ADMISSION (1).

incidental authority. See AUTHORITY (1).

incidental beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

incidental damages. See DAMAGES.

incidental demand. See DEMAND (1).

incidental main motion. See MOTION (2).

incidental motion. See MOTION (2).

incidental power. See incident power under POWER (3).

incidental use. See USE (1).

incidenter (in-si-den-tər). [Latin] Hist. Incidentally.

rights to change the policy's beneficiaries and to borrow against, assign, and cancel the policy. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4155.]

incident to employment. Workers' compensation. A risk that is related to or connected with a worker's job duties. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 610–611.]

incidere (in-sid-ə-ree), vb. [Latin "fall into or on"] Roman law. To come within the scope of a law or to fall into a legal category; esp. to become involved in a situation that entangles a person in a legal action. • This term had a similar meaning under English law. For example, a person might become liable to (or "fall into") amercement (incidere in misericordiam). See AMERCEMENT.

incipitur (in-sip-i-tər). [Law Latin] Hist. It is begun. • This refers to the practice of entering the commencement of a pleading on the court roll.

incite, vb. (15c) To provoke or stir up (someone to commit a criminal act, or the criminal act itself). Cf. ABET.

incitee. A person who has been incited, esp. to commit a crime.

inciteful, adj. Tending to incite <inciteful speech>.

incitement, n. (15c) 1. The act or an instance of provoking, urging on, or stirring up. 2. Criminal law. The act of persuading another person to commit a crime; SOLICITATION (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 45.] — inciteful, adj.

"An inciter is one who counsels, commands or advises the commission of a crime. It will be observed that this definition is much the same as that of an accessory before the fact. What, then, is the difference between the two? It is that in incitement the crime has not (or has not necessarily) been committed, whereas a party cannot be an accessory in crime unless the crime has been committed. An accessory before the fact is party to consummated mischief; an inciter is guilty only of an inchoate crime." Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 612 (2d ed. 1961).

"Emphasis upon the theory of one offense with guilt attaching to several is quite appropriate because it is still part of the groundwork of our legal philosophy, so far as perpetrators, abettors and inciters are concerned, despite the fact that some of the statutes require lipservice to the notion of a separate substantive offense, in the effort to avoid certain procedural difficulties. It explains how one may be guilty of a crime he could not perpetrate, by having caused or procured it as a result of his abetment or incitement." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 732–33 (3d ed. 1982).

inciter. (15c) A person who incites another to commit a crime; an aider or abettor.

inciting revolt. See MUTINY.

incivile (in-siv-ə-lee), adj. [Law Latin] Irregular; out of the due course of law.

incivism (in-si-viz-əm). (18c) Unfriendliness toward one's own country or its government; lack of good citizenship.

inclausa (in-klaw-zə). [Law Latin] Hist. An enclosure near a house; a home close. See CLOSE (1).

in clientela (in klr-ən-tee-lə). [Latin] Hist. In the relation between client and patron.

inclose, vb. See ENCLOSE.

inclosure. See ENCLOSURE.

include, vb. (15c) To contain as a part of something. • The participle including typically indicates a partial list <the plaintiff asserted five tort claims, including slander and libel>. But some drafters use phrases such as including without limitation and including but not limited to — which mean the same thing. See NAMELY.

included offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE (1).

inclusionary-approach rule. (1981) The principle that evidence of a prior crime, wrong, or act is admissible for any purpose other than to show a defendant's criminal propensity as long as it is relevant to some disputed issue and its probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨369.2(1).]

inclusio unius est exclusio alterius. See EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS.

inclusive deed. See inclusive grant under GRANT.

inclusive grant. See GRANT.

inclusive legal positivism. See INCORPORATIONISM.

incognito (in-kog-nee-toh or in-kog-ni-toh), adj. or adv. [Latin "unknown"] (17c) Without making one's name or identity known <Binkley flew incognito to France>.

incola (in-kə-lə), n. [Latin "an inhabitant"] Roman law. A foreign resident without full civil rights; the inhabitant of a foreign colony. • The term is used particularly for provincial residents who were not Roman citizens. — Also termed (in English) incolant. Cf. PEREGRINUS.

income. (16c) The money or other form of payment that one receives, usu. periodically, from employment, business, investments, royalties, gifts, and the like. See EARNINGS. Cf. PROFIT.

accrued income. (1869) Money earned but not yet received.

accumulated income. Income that is retained in an account; esp., income that a trust has generated, but that has not yet been reinvested or distributed by the trustee. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨4008.]

accumulated taxable income. The income of a corporation as adjusted for certain items (such as excess charitable contributions), less the dividends-paid deduction and the accumulated-earnings credit. • It serves as the base upon which the accumulated-earnings tax is imposed. See accumulated-earnings tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3833.]

active income. (1972) 1. Wages; salary. 2. Income from a trade or business.

adjusted gross income. (1940) Gross income minus allowable deductions specified in the tax code. — Abbr. AGI. [Cases: Taxation ⇨3447.]

adjusted ordinary gross income. A corporation's gross income less capital gains and certain expenses. •

The IRS uses this calculation to determine whether a corporation is a personal holding company. If 60% or more of a corporation's AOGI consists of certain passive investment income, the company has met the test for personal-holding-company classification. IRC (26 USCA) § 543(b). — Abbr. AOGI. See personal holding company under COMPANY. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3853–3858.]

aggregate income. (1926) The combined income of a husband and wife who file a joint tax return. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3566.1, 4481.]

blocked income. Money earned by a foreign taxpayer but not subject to U.S. taxation because the foreign country prohibits changing the income into dollars.

current income. Income that is due within the present accounting period. — Also termed current revenue.

deferred income. (1918) Money received at a time later than when it was earned, such as a check received in January for commissions earned in November.

disposable income. (1960) Income that may be spent or invested after payment of taxes and other primary obligations. — Also termed disposable earnings.

distributable net income. (1918) The amount of distributions from estates and trusts that the beneficiaries will have to include in income. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3173, 4018.]

dividend income. (1930) The income resulting from a dividend distribution and subject to tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3743–3774; Taxation ⇨3458.]

earned income. (1894) Money derived from one's own labor or active participation; earnings from services. Cf. unearned income (2).

exempt income. (1947) Income that is not subject to income tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨4045–4071; Taxation ⇨3518.]

fixed income. Money received at a constant rate, such as a payment from a pension or annuity.

gross income. (1843) Total income from all sources before deductions, exemptions, or other tax reductions. See IRC (26 USCA) § 61. — Also termed gross earnings. [Cases: Taxation ⇨3447.]

imputed income. (1948) The benefit one receives from the use of one's own property, the performance of one's services, or the consumption of self-produced goods and services.

income in respect of a decedent. (1945) Income earned by a person, but not collected before death. • This income is included in the decedent's gross estate for estate-tax purposes. For income-tax purposes, it is taxed to the estate or, if the estate does not collect the income, it is taxed to the eventual recipient. — Abbr. IRD. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨4035–4039; Taxation ⇨3495.]

"If a decedent has earned income that he or she had not received before death and was not entitled to receive before death, such income is known — for Federal Income Tax purposes -- as 'income in respect of a decedent' (I.R.D.). For example, if the decedent earned fees or salary or wages for work done before death but not payable until later, and if decedent was a cash method taxpayer (versus an accrual method taxpayer), that earned but unpaid income would not properly be shown on the final income tax return filed for the decedent, for that taxable period ends with the date of death. Rather it is I.R.D. that becomes taxable to the estate of the decedent." John K. McNulty, Federal Estate and Gift Taxation in a Nutshell 89 (5th ed. 1994).

investment income. See unearned income (1).

net income. (18c) Total income from all sources minus deductions, exemptions, and other tax reductions.

• Income tax is computed on net income. — Also termed net earnings. [Cases: Taxation ⇨ 3448.]

net operating income. Income derived from operating a business, after subtracting operating costs.

nonoperating income. Business income derived from investments rather than operations.

operating income. See ordinary income (1).

ordinary income. (1860) 1. For business-tax purposes, earnings from the normal operations or activities of a business. — Also termed operating income. 2. For individual income-tax purposes, income that is derived from sources such as wages, commissions, and interest (as opposed to income from capital gains). [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 3230.1-3257; Taxation ⇨ 3454, 3466.]

other income. Income not derived from an entity's principal business, such as earnings from dividends and interest.

passive income. (1958) Income derived from a business, rental, or other income-producing activity that the earner does not directly participate in or has no immediate control over. See PASSIVE ACTIVITY. Cf. portfolio income.

passive investment income. Investment income that does not involve or require active participation, such as gross receipts from royalties, rental income, dividends, interest, annuities, and gains from the sale or exchange of securities. IRC (26 USCA) § 1362(d). [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 3892.]

personal income. (1851) The total income received by an individual from all sources.

portfolio income. (1978) Income not derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business, such as interest earned on savings, dividends, royalties, capital gains, or other investment sources. • For tax purposes, losses on passive activities cannot be used to offset net portfolio income. Cf. passive income.

prepaid income. (1935) Income received but not yet earned. — Also termed deferred revenue.

previously taxed income. An S corporation's undistributed taxable income taxed to the shareholders as of the last day of the corporation's tax year. • This income could usu. be withdrawn later by the shareholders without tax consequences. PTI has been replaced by the accumulated adjustments account. — Abbr. PTI.

real income. Income adjusted to allow for inflation or deflation so that it reflects true purchasing power.

regular income. Income that is received at fixed or specified intervals.

split income. (1949) An equal division between spouses of earnings reported on a joint tax return, allowing for equal tax treatment in community-property and common-law states.

taxable income. (1856) Gross income minus all allowable deductions and exemptions. • Taxable income is multiplied by the applicable tax rate to compute one's tax liability. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4529; Taxation ⇨ 3448.] unearned income. (1921) 1. Earnings from investments rather than labor. — Also termed investment income. 2. Income received but not yet earned; money paid in advance. Cf. earned income.

unrelated-business income. (1952) Tax. Gross income earned by a nonprofit corporation from activities unrelated to its nonprofit functions. • A nonprofit corporation's income is tax-exempt only to the extent that it is produced by activities directly related to its nonprofit purpose. — Also termed unrelated-business taxable income. IRC (26 USCA) § 512(a)(3)(A). [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4068.]

"The [Internal Revenue] Service has justified the unrelated business income tax as a means of preventing unfair competition between tax-exempt and for-profit providers. Thus, part of the analysis of whether income from a business venture is unrelated business taxable income focuses on the impact of the activity on competitors by inquiring whether the activity at issue is one generally offered by commercial enterprise. The categorization of a business activity of an exempt organization as related or unrelated to the exempt purpose of the organization follows very few bright-line rules. Approaches to the question of exempt purposes within the context of unrelated business income differ substantially from those used in the context of the qualification of an entity for exempt status itself." Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 8-1, at 419 (2d ed. 2000).

income-and-expense declaration. Family law. In child-support litigation, a document that contains information on a parent's income, assets, expenses, and liabilities. — Also termed financial statement. [Cases: Child Support ⇨ 183.]

income approach. (1951) A method of appraising real property based on capitalization of the income that the property is expected to generate. — Also termed income-capitalization approach. Cf. MARKET APPROACH; COST APPROACH. [Cases: Taxation ⇨ 2517.]

income averaging. Tax. A method of computing tax by averaging a person's current income with that of preceding years. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 3092.]

"A distinct departure from the strict annual system of taxing income is the concept of averaging income, allowed until repeal by the 1986 T.R.A. . . . [T]he rate at which the item was taxed was made to depend not only on the rates and level of income for that year, but upon the taxpayer's experience over the past four years. The item was (sometimes) taxed as if it had been received over a four-year period. Especially for authors, actors, athletes, and other taxpayers who have fluctuating or bunched income and face graduated tax rates that apply on an annual basis, income averaging was most important." John K. McNulty, Federal Income Taxation of Individuals in a Nutshell 353 (5th ed. 1995).

income-basis method. A method of computing the rate of return on a security using the interest and price paid rather than the face value.

income-shifting. (1957) The practice of transferring income to a taxpayer in a lower tax bracket, such as a child, to reduce tax liability. • Often this is accomplished by forming a Clifford trust. See Clifford trust under TRUST; kiddie tax under TAX.

income statement. (1863) A statement of all the revenues, expenses, gains, and losses that a business incurred during a given period. — Also termed statement of income; profit-and-loss statement; earnings report. Cf. BALANCE SHEET.

income stock. See STOCK.

income tax. See TAX.

income-tax deficiency. See DEFICIENCY (2).

income-tax return. See TAX RETURN.

income-tax withholding. See WITHHOLDING.

income-withholding order. (1986) A court order providing for the withholding of a person's income by an employer, usu. to enforce a child-support order. — Also termed wage-withholding order; wage-assignment order; wage assignment. Cf. ATTACHMENT OF WAGES.

income yield. See CAPITALIZATION RATE.

in commendam (in kə-men-dəm). [Law Latin] Civil law. In trust. • The phrase typically refers to property held in a limited partnership. See limited partnership under PARTNERSHIP. [Cases: Partnership ↷349.]

in common. (16c) Shared equally with others, undivided into separately owned parts. — Also termed in communi. See tenancy in common under TENANCY.

in communi (in kə-myoo-ni). [Law Latin] In common.

incommunicado (in-kə-myoo-ni-kah-doh), adj. [Spanish] (1844) 1. Without any means of communication. 2. (Of a prisoner) having the right to communicate with only a few designated people.

in communi forma (in kə-myoo-ni for-mə). [Law Latin] Hist. In common form; in general form rather than special form. — Also written in forma communi.

incommutable (in-kə-myoot-ə-bəl), adj. (18c) (Of an offense) not capable of being commuted. See COMMUTATION.

incompatibility, n. (1875) Conflict in personality and disposition, usu. leading to the breakup of a marriage. • Every state now recognizes some form of incompatibility as a no-fault ground for divorce. See no-fault divorce under DIVORCE. Cf. IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCES; IRRETRIEVABLE BREAKDOWN OF THE MARRIAGE.

Incompatibility Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution prohibiting a person from simultaneously holding offices in both the executive and legislative branches of the federal government. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, par. 2, cl. 2. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ↷30.3.]

incompetence, n. (17c) 1. The state or fact of being unable or unqualified to do something <the dispute was over her alleged incompetence as a legal assistant>. 2. INCOMPETENCY <the court held that the affidavit was inadmissible because of the affiant's incompetence>.

incompetency, n. (17c) Lack of legal ability in some respect, esp. to stand trial or to testify <once the defense lawyer established her client's incompetency, the client did not have to stand trial>. — Also termed incompetence; mental incompetence. Cf. INCAPACITY. [Cases: Mental Health ↷432; Witnesses ↷35.] — incompetent, adj.

incompetency hearing. See PATE HEARING.

incompetent, adj. (16c) 1. (Of a witness) unqualified to testify. [Cases: Witnesses ↷35.] 2. (Of evidence) inadmissible. • This sense is often criticized, as in the quotation below. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷385; Evidence ↷148.]

"[Incompetent] is constantly used loosely as equivalent to 'inadmissible' on any ground. This use should be avoided." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 36 (1935).

incompetent evidence. See EVIDENCE.

incomplete instrument. See INSTRUMENT (3).

incompleteness rejection. See REJECTION.

incomplete transfer. See TRANSFER.

in computo (in kəm-pyoo-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. In computation.

inconclusive, adj. (18c) (Of evidence) not leading to a conclusion or definite result.

in confinio majoris aetatis (in kən-fin-ee-oh mə-jor-is ee-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. Having nearly attained majority. • A person that undertook an obligation in confinio majoris aetatis could be held liable despite the fact that the person pleaded minority status. See MAJORENNITATI PROXIMUS. Cf. IN CONFINIO MINORIS AETATIS.

in confinio minoris aetatis (in kən-fɪn-ee-oh mi-nor-is ee-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. Having nearly attained minority. Cf. IN CONFINIO MAJORIS AETATIS.

in consequentiam (in kən-sə-kwen-shee-əm). [Latin] Hist. As a consequence.

in consideratione inde (in kən-sid-ə-ray-shee-oh-nee in-dee). [Law Latin] In consideration thereof.

in consideratione legis (in kən-sid-ə-ray-shee-oh-nee lee-jis). [Law Latin] 1. In consideration or contemplation of law. 2. In abeyance.

in consideratione praemissorum (in kən-sid-ə-ray-shee-oh-nee pree-mi-sor-əm). [Law Latin] In consideration of the premises.

in consimili casu (in kən-sim-ə-lɪ kay-s[y]oo). See CASU CONSIMILI.

inconsistent, adj. (17c) Lacking agreement among parts; not compatible with another fact or claim <inconsistent statements>.

inconsistent defense. See DEFENSE (1).

inconsistent presumption. See conflicting presumption under PRESUMPTION.

inconsistent statement. See prior inconsistent statement under STATEMENT.

in conspectu ejus (in kən-spek-t[y]oo ee-jəs). [Law Latin] In his sight or view.

in contemplation of death. See CONTEMPLATION OF DEATH.

incontestability clause. Insurance. An insurance-policy provision (esp. found in a life-insurance policy) that prevents the insurer, after a specified period (usu. one or two years), from disputing the policy's validity on the basis of fraud or mistake; a clause that bars all defenses except those reserved (usu. conditions and the payment of premiums). • Most states require that a life-insurance policy contain a clause making the policy incontestable after it has been in effect for a specified period, unless the insured does not pay premiums or violates policy conditions relating to military service. Some states also require similar provisions in accident and sickness policies. — Also termed noncontestability clause; incontestable clause; uncontestable clause. Cf. CONTESTABILITY CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 3121.]

incontestability status. Trademarks. A classification of a trademark that meets certain criteria — including commercial use for five years after being placed on the Principal Register — as immune from legal challenge. • Although incontestability does not confer absolute immunity, it makes a challenge much more difficult. 15 USCA § 1065. [Cases: Trademarks ⇨ 1352.] incontestable policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

incontinenti (in-kon-ti-nen-ti), adv. [Law Latin] Immediately; without any interval or intermission. — Also spelled in continenti.

incontrovertible-physical-facts doctrine. See PHYSICAL-FACTS RULE.

inconvenience. See RULE OF INCONVENIENCE.

inconvenient forum. See FORUM NON CONVENIENS.

incorporamus (in-kor-pə-ray-məs). [Law Latin] Hist. We incorporate. • This word indicated an intent to incorporate.

"All the other methods therefore whereby corporations exist, by common law, by prescription, and by act of parliament, are for the most part reducible to this of the king's letters patent, or charter of incorporation. The king's creation may be performed by the words 'creamus, erigimus, fundamus, incorporamus,' or the like." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 461 (1765).

incorporate, vb. (14c) 1. To form a legal corporation <she incorporated the family business>. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 1.] 2. To combine with something else <incorporate the exhibits into the agreement>. 3. To make the terms of another (esp. earlier) document part of a document by specific reference <the codicil incorporated the terms of the will>; esp., to apply the provisions of the Bill of Rights to the states by interpreting the 14th Amendment's Due Process Clause as encompassing those provisions.

incorporation, n. (15c) 1. The formation of a legal corporation. See ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 1.] 2. Constitutional law. The process of applying the provisions of the Bill of Rights to the states by interpreting the 14th Amendment's Due Process Clause as encompassing those provisions. • In a variety of opinions since 1897, the Supreme Court has incorporated the First, Fourth, Sixth, and Ninth Amendments into the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3850.]

selective incorporation. Incorporation of certain provisions of the Bill of Rights. • Justice Benjamin Cardozo, who served from 1932 to 1938, first advocated this approach. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3850.]

total incorporation. Incorporation of all of the Bill of Rights. • Justice Hugo Black, who served on the U.S. Supreme Court from 1937 to 1971, first advocated this approach. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3850.]

incorporation by reference. (1886) 1. A method of making a secondary document part of a primary document by including in the primary document a statement that the secondary document should be treated as if it were contained within the primary one. • With a contract, the document to be incorporated must be referred to and described in the contract in such a way that the document's identity is clear beyond doubt. With a will, the rule applies only to clearly identified writings that existed when the testator signed the will. Unif. Probate Code § 2-510. Not all jurisdictions follow this rule for either contracts or wills. — Often shortened to incorporation. — Also termed adoption by reference. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 166; Wills ⇨ 98.] 2. Patents. The explicit inclusion in one patent application of information already contained in another document, such as another patent or patent application. • Generally, the reference must be to a U.S. patent or application if the information is essential (i.e., the description, enabling disclosure, or best mode), but otherwise it may be to a foreign patent or a nonpatent publication. Incorporation by reference is often used in a continuing application to cite the disclosure contained in a parent application. Cf. CROSS-REFERENCE. [Cases: Patents ↷ 99.] 3. Patents. The inclusion in a patent claim of information from an external drawing or table. • Incorporation by reference is a necessity doctrine, available when there is no other practical way to convey the information in words, and when it is more concise and clear to refer the examiner to the graphic element. [Cases: Patents ↷ 100.]

incorporationism. The philosophical view that (1) law is made possible by an interdependent convergence of behavior and attitude, esp. in agreements that take the form of social conventions or rules; (2) authoritative legal pronouncements must distinguish some situations from others; and (3) the legality of norms can depend on their substantive moral merit, not just on their pedigree or social source. See Jules Coleman, The Practice of Principle (2001); W.J. Waluchow, Inclusive Legal Positivism (1994). — Also termed soft positivism; inclusive legal positivism.

incorporator. (1883) A person who takes part in the formation of a corporation, usu. by executing the articles of incorporation. — Also termed corporator.

"An 'incorporator' must be sharply distinguished from a 'subscriber.' The latter agrees to buy shares in the corporation; in other words, a subscriber is an investor and participant in the venture. An 'incorporator' on the other hand serves the largely ceremonial or ministerial functions described in this section. At one time many states required that an incorporator also be a subscriber of shares; however, such requirement appears to have disappeared in all states." Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 34 (3d ed. 1991).

in corpore (in kor-pə-ree). [Latin] In body or substance; in a material thing or object.

incorporeal (in-kor-por-ee-əl), adj. (15c) Having a conceptual existence but no physical existence; INTANGIBLE <copyrights and patents are incorporeal property>. Cf. CORPOREAL. — incorporeality, n.

incorporeal chattel. See incorporeal property under PROPERTY.

incorporeal hereditament. See HEREDITAMENT.

incorporeal ownership. See OWNERSHIP.

incorporeal possession. See POSSESSION.

incorporeal property. See PROPERTY.

incorporeal thing. 1. See incorporeal property under PROPERTY. 2. See THING.

in corporibus sed non in quantitibus (in kor-por-ə-bəs sed non in kwon-ti-tay-tə-bəs). [Law Latin] Hist. In separate and distinct subjects, but not in things estimated in quantities. • The phrase appeared in reference to the best of a decedent's movable property to which an heir had a right. This property typically included animals and equipment but not wine or grain because wine and grain were estimated in quantities.

incorrigibility (in-kor-ə-jə-bil-ə-tee or in-kahr-), n. (14c) Serious or persistent misbehavior by a child, making reformation by parental control impossible or unlikely. Cf. JUVENILE DELINQUENCY. [Cases: Infants ↷ 151.] — incorrigible, adj.

incorrigible (in-kor-ə-jə-bəl or in-kahr-), adj. (14c) Incapable of being reformed; delinquent.

incorrigible child. See CHILD.

Incoterm (in[g]-koh-tərm). A standardized shipping term, defined by the International Chamber of Commerce, that apportions the costs and liabilities of international shipping between buyers and sellers. See EX WORKS; COST, INSURANCE, AND FREIGHT; COST AND FREIGHT; FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP; FREE ON BOARD. [Cases: Shipping ↷ 104.]

increase (in-krees), n. (14c) 1. The extent of growth or enlargement. 2. Archaic. The produce of land or the offspring of human beings or animals. — increase (in-krees), vb.

increase, costs of. See COSTS OF INCREASE.

increased-risk-of-harm doctrine. See LOSS-OF-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

increment (in[g]-krə-mənt), n. (15c) A unit of increase in quantity or value. — incremental, adj.

unearned increment. An increase in the value of real property due to population growth.

incremental cash flow. See CASH FLOW.

incrementum (in-krə-men-təm). [Latin] Hist. Increase. • This term appeared in various phrases, such as costs de incremento ("costs of increase"). See COSTS OF INCREASE.

increscitur (in-kres-i-tər). See ADDITUR.

incriminate (in-krim-ə-nayt), vb. (18c) 1. To charge (someone) with a crime <the witness incriminated the murder suspect>. 2. To identify (oneself or another) as being involved in the commission of a crime or other wrongdoing <the defendant incriminated an accomplice>. — Also termed criminate. — incriminatory, adj.

incriminating, adj. (18c) Demonstrating or indicating involvement in criminal activity <incriminating evidence>.

incriminating admission. See ADMISSION (1).

incriminating circumstance. See CIRCUMSTANCE.

incriminating evidence. See EVIDENCE.

incriminating statement. See STATEMENT.

incrimination. (18c) 1. The act of charging someone with a crime. 2. The act of involving someone in a crime. — Also termed crimination. See SELF-INCRIMINATION.

incroach, vb. Archaic. See ENCROACH.

incroachment. Archaic. See ENCROACHMENT.

in cuius rei testimonium (in kyoo-jās ree-I tes-tə-moh-nee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. In witness whereof. • These words were used to conclude deeds. The modern phrasing of the testimonium clause in deeds and other instruments — beginning with in witness whereof — is a loan translation of the Latin.

inculpatae tutelae moderatio. See MIDERAMEN INCULPATAE TUTELAE.

inculcate (in-kəl-payt or in-kəl-payt), vb. (18c) 1. To accuse. 2. To implicate (oneself or another) in a crime or other wrongdoing; INCRIMINATE. — inculpation, n. — inculpatory (in-kəl-pə-tor-ee), adj.

inculpatory evidence. See EVIDENCE.

incumbent (in-kəm-bənt), n. (15c) One who holds an official post, esp. a political one. — incumbency, n. — incumbent, adj.

incumbrance. See ENCUMBRANCE.

incur, vb. (15c) To suffer or bring on oneself (a liability or expense). — incurrence, n. — incurable, adj.

incurrumentum (in-kə-rə-men-təm). [fr. Latin in "upon" + currere "to run"] Hist. The incurring of a fine or penalty.

incurred risk. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK (2).

in cursu diligentiae (in kər-s[y]oo dil-ə-jen-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. In the course of doing diligence — i.e., executing a judgment.

in cursu rebellionis (in kər-s[y]oo ri-bel-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. In the course of rebellion.

"In cursu rebellionis . . . All persons were formerly regarded as in rebellion against the Crown who had been put to the horn for non-fulfilment of a civil obligation; their whole moveable estate fell to the Crown as escheat; they might be put to death with impunity; and lost all their legal privileges. If the denunciation remained unrelaxed for year and day (which was the time known as the cursus rebellionis), the rebel was esteemed civiliter mortuus, and his heritage reverted to the superior . . . Denunciation for civil obligation and its consequences were in effect abolished by the Act 20 Geo. II. c. 50." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 257 (4th ed. 1894).

in custodia legis (in kə-stoh-dee-ə lee-jis). [Latin] In the custody of the law <the debtor's automobile was in custodia legis after being seized by the sheriff>. • The phrase is traditionally used in reference to property taken into the court's charge during pending litigation over it. — Also termed in legal custody. [Cases: Attachment ↷ 64; Execution ↷ 55; Garnishment ↷ 58.] in damno vitando (in dam-noh vi-tan-doh). [Latin] Hist. In endeavoring to avoid damage (or injury).

inde (in-dee), adv. [Latin] Hist. Thence; thereof. • This word appeared in several Latin phrases, such as quod eat inde sine die ("that he go thence without day").

indebitatus (in-deb-i-tay-təs), p.pl. [Law Latin] Indebted. See NUNQUAM INDEBITATUS.

indebitatus assumpsit (in-deb-i-tay-təs ə-səm[p]-sit). See ASSUMPSIT.

indebiti solutio (in-deb-i-ti sə-l[y]oo-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman & Scots law. Payment of what is not owed. • Money paid under the mistaken belief that it was owed could be recovered by condictio indebiti. See condictio indebiti under CONDICTIO.

"Indebiti Solutio — When a person has paid in error what he was not bound to pay the law lays upon the person who has received payment a duty of restitution. . . . Payment (solutio) includes any performance whereby one person has been enriched at the expense of another. Usually it will be the handing over of money or of some other thing, but it may also consist in undertaking a new liability or in discharging an existing liability." R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 373-74 (4th ed. 1956).

indebitum (in-deb-i-təm), n. & adj. Roman law. A debt that in fact is not owed. • Money paid for a nonexistent debt could be recovered by the action condictio indebiti. Cf. DEBITUM.

"A conditional debt if paid could be recovered as an indebitum, so long as the condition was outstanding." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 255 (2d ed. 1939).

indebtedness (in-det-id-nis). (17c) 1. The condition or state of owing money. 2. Something owed; a debt.

indecency, n. (16c) The state or condition of being outrageously offensive, esp. in a vulgar or sexual way. • Unlike obscene material, indecent speech is protected under the First Amendment. Cf. OBSCENITY. [Cases: Obscenity ↷ 1.] — indecent, adj.

"Obscenity is that which is offensive to chastity. Indecency is often used with the same meaning, but may also include anything which is outrageously disgusting. These were not the names of common-law crimes, but were words used in describing or identifying certain deeds which were." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 471 (3d ed. 1982).

indecent advertising. 1. Signs, broadcasts, or other forms of communication that use grossly objectionable words, symbols, pictures, or the like to sell or promote goods, services, events, etc. 2. Archaic. In some jurisdictions, the statutory offense of advertising the sale of abortifacients and (formerly) contraceptives.

indecent assault. See sexual assault (2) under ASSAULT.

indecent assault by contact. See sexual assault (2) under ASSAULT.

indecent assault by exposure. See INDECENT EXPOSURE.

indecent exhibition. The act of publicly displaying or offering for sale something (such as a photograph or book) that is outrageously offensive, esp. in a vulgar or sexual way. [Cases: Obscenity ↷ 6, 7.]

indecent exposure. (1828) An offensive display of one's body in public, esp. of the genitals. — Also termed indecent assault by exposure; exposure of person. Cf. LEWDNESS; OBSCENITY. [Cases: Obscenity ↷ 3.]

"Indecent exposure of the person to public view is also a common-law misdemeanor. Blackstone did not deal with it separately. 'The last offense which I shall mention,' he said, 'more immediately against religion and morality, and cognizable by the temporal courts, is that of open and notorious lewdness; either by frequenting houses of ill fame, which is an indictable offense; or by some grossly scandalous and public indecency, for which the punishment is by fine and imprisonment.' In other words private indecency was exclusively under the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court but public indecency of an extreme nature was indictable." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 473 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 64 (1769)).

indecent liberties. (18c) Improper behavior, usu. toward another person, esp. of a sexual nature. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 13.]

indecimable (in-des-ə-mə-bəl), adj. Hist. Not titheable; not liable for tithes.

indefeasible (in-də-feez-ə-bəl), adj. (16c) (Of a claim or right) not vulnerable to being defeated, revoked, or lost <an indefeasible estate>.

indefeasible remainder. See REMAINDER.

indefeasibly vested remainder. See indefeasible remainder under REMAINDER.

indefensus (in-də-fen-səs), n. [Latin "undefended"] Roman law. A person who fails to make a defense or plea to an action. • The term later acquired a similar meaning in English law.

indefinite detainee. See NONREMOVABLE INMATE.

indefinite failure of issue. See FAILURE OF ISSUE.

indefinite payment. See PAYMENT.

indefinite postponement. See postpone indefinitely under POSTPONE.

indefinite sentence. See indeterminate sentence under SENTENCE.

indefinite sentencing. See INDETERMINATE SENTENCING.

in Dei nomine (in dee-ɪ nahm-ə-nee). [Latin] Hist. In the name of God. • The opening phrase of certain writs.

in delicto (in də-lik-toh). [Latin] In fault. See IN PARI DELICTO. Cf. EX DELICTO (1).

indemnification (in-dem-nə-fi-kay-shən), n. (18c) 1. The action of compensating for loss or damage sustained. 2. The compensation so made. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 20.] — indemnificatory, adj.

indemnifier. See INDEMNITOR.

indemnify (in-dem-nə-fi), vb. (17c) 1. To reimburse (another) for a loss suffered because of a third party's or one's own act or default; HOLD HARMLESS. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 20–84.] 2. To promise to reimburse (another) for such a loss. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 25.] 3. To give (another) security against such a loss. — indemnifiable, adj.

indemnis (in-dem-nis), adj. [Latin] Hist. Free from loss or damage; harmless.

indemnitee (in-dem-nə-tee). (1884) One who receives indemnity from another. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 31(3), 33, 63.]

indemnitor (in-dem-nə-tər or -tor). (1827) One who indemnifies another. — Also termed indemnifier. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 31(3), 33, 63.]

indemnity (in-dem-nə-tee), n. (15c) 1. A duty to make good any loss, damage, or liability incurred by another. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 20, 25, 50–61.] 2. The right of an injured party to claim reimbursement for its loss, damage, or liability from a person who has such a duty. 3. Reimbursement or compensation for loss, damage, or liability in tort; esp., the right of a party who is secondarily liable to recover from the party who is primarily liable for reimbursement of expenditures paid to a third party for injuries resulting from a violation of a common-law duty. Cf. CONTRIBUTION. — indemnitory, adj.

contractual indemnity. Indemnity that is expressly provided for in an agreement. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 25.]

double indemnity. (1859) The payment of twice the basic benefit in the event of a specified loss, esp. as in an insurance contract requiring the insurer to pay twice the policy's face amount in the case of accidental death. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2599.]

equitable indemnity. 1. A doctrine allowing a defendant in a tort action to allocate blame to a codefendant or cross-defendant, and thereby to proportionally reduce legal responsibility, even in the absence of contractual indemnity. — Also termed implied indemnity; doctrine of equitable indemnity. 2. See implied contractual indemnity. 3. See implied indemnity. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 51.]

implied contractual indemnity. Indemnity that is not expressly provided for by an indemnity clause in an agreement but is nevertheless determined to be reasonably intended by the parties, based on equitable considerations. — Also termed equitable indemnity. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 54.]

implied indemnity. Indemnity arising from equitable considerations and based on the parties' relationship, as when a guarantor pays a debt to a creditor that the principal debtor should have paid. — Also termed equitable indemnity. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 54.]

indemnity against liability. (1838) A right to indemnity that arises on the indemnitor's default, regardless of whether the indemnitee has suffered a loss. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 31(4), 42.]

"Indemnity against Liability — Where the indemnity is against liability, the cause of action is complete and the indemnitee may recover on the contract as soon as his liability has become fixed and established, even though he has sustained no actual loss or damage at the time he seeks to recover. Thus, under such a contract, a cause of action accrues to the indemnitee on the recovery of a judgment against him, and he may recover from the indemnitor without proof of payment of the judgment." 42 C.J.S. Indemnity § 22 (1991).

indemnity clause. (1860) A contractual provision in which one party agrees to answer for any specified or unspecified liability or harm that the other party might incur. — Also termed hold-harmless clause; save-harmless clause. Cf. EXEMPTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Indemnity ⇨ 25, 31(4).]

indemnity contract. See CONTRACT.

indemnity insurance. See first-party insurance under INSURANCE.

indemnity land. 1. Public land granted to a railroad company to help defray the cost of constructing a right-of-way. • This land indemnifies a railroad company for land given in a previous grant but later rendered unavailable for railroad use by a disposition or reservation made after the original grant. [Cases: Public Lands ⇨ 70.] 2. Federally owned land granted to a state to replace previously granted land that has since been rendered unavailable for the state's use. — Also termed place land.

indemnity mortgage. See deed of trust under DEED.

indemnity principle. Insurance. The doctrine that an insurance policy should not confer a benefit greater in value than the loss suffered by the insured. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2104.]

indenization (in-den-i-zay-shən), n. See DENIZATION.

indenizen. See ENDENIZEN.

indent, n. 1. Hist. An indented certificate of indebtedness issued by the U.S. government or a state government in the late 18th or early 19th century. 2. A contract or deed in writing.

indent (in-dent), vb. Hist. 1. To cut in a serrated or wavy line; esp., to sever (an instrument) along a serrated line to create multiple copies, each fitting into the angles of the other. See CHIROGRAPHER; INDENTURE (1).

"If a deed be made by more parties than one, there ought to be regularly as many copies of it as there are parties, and each should be cut or indented (formerly in acute angles instar dentium, but at present in a waving line) on the top or side, to tally or correspond with the other; which deed, so made, is called an indenture. . . . Deeds thus made were denominated syngrapha by the canonists; and with us chirographa, or hand-writings; the word chirographum or cyrographum being usually that which is divided in making the indenture. . . ." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 295–96 (1766).

2. To agree by contract; to bind oneself. 3. To bind (a person) by contract.

indenture (in-den-chər), n. (14c) 1. A formal written instrument made by two or more parties with different interests, traditionally having the edges serrated, or indented, in a zigzag fashion to reduce the possibility of forgery and to distinguish it from a deed poll. — Also termed indented deed. Cf. deed poll under DEED. [Cases: Deeds ⇨ 3.] 2. A deed or elaborate contract signed by two or more parties.

"The distinction between a deed poll and an indenture is no longer important since 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, § 5. Formerly a deed made by one party had a polled or smooth-cut edge, a deed made between two or more parties was copied for each on the same parchment, and the copies cut apart with indented edges, so as to enable them to be identified by fitting the parts together. Such deeds were called indentures. An indented edge is not now necessary to give the effect of an indenture to a deed purporting to be such." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 84 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"An indenture was a deed with the top of the parchment indented, i.e., having an irregular edge. The deed was written out twice on a single sheet of parchment, which was then severed by cutting it with an irregular edge; the two halves of the parchment thus formed two separate deeds which could be fitted together to show their genuineness. This contrasted with a 'deed poll,' a deed to which there was only one party, which at the top had been polled, or shaved even." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 129 (6th ed. 1993).

corporate indenture. A document containing the terms and conditions governing the issuance of debt securities, such as bonds or debentures. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 471.]

debenture indenture. (1938) An indenture containing obligations not secured by a mortgage or other collateral. • It is a long-term financing vehicle that places the debenture holder in substantially the same position as a bondholder secured by a first mortgage. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 470.]

trust indenture. 1. A document containing the terms and conditions governing a trustee's conduct and the trust beneficiaries' rights. — Also termed indenture of trust. [Cases: Trusts ⇨ 19–29.] 2. See deed of trust under DEED.

3. Hist. A contract by which an apprentice or other person, such as a servant, is bound to a master, usu. for a term of years or other limited period. — indentured, adj.

indentured servant. See SERVANT.

indenture of a fine. Hist. A document engrossed by the chirographer of fines to reflect penalties assessed by the court. • The chirographer prepared indentures in duplicate on the same piece of parchment, then split the parchment along an indented line through a word, sentence, or drawing placed on the parchment to help ensure its authenticity. See CHIROGRAPHER OF FINES.

indenture of trust. See trust indenture under INDENTURE.

indenture trustee. See TRUSTEE (1).

independence, n. (17c) The state or quality of being independent; esp., a country's freedom to manage all its affairs, whether external or internal, without control by other countries.

independent, adj. (17c) 1. Not subject to the control or influence of another <independent investigation>. 2. Not associated with another (often larger) entity <an independent subsidiary>. 3. Not dependent or contingent on something else <an independent person>.

independent adjuster. See ADJUSTER.

independent adoption. See private adoption under ADOPTION.

independent advice. (1871) Counsel that is impartial and not given to further the interests of the person giving it. • Whether a testator or donor received independent advice before making a disposition is often an important issue in an undue-influence challenge to the property disposition. — Also termed proper independent advice.

independent agency. See AGENCY (3).

independent agent. See AGENT (2).

independent audit. See AUDIT.

independent claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

independent conception. See INDEPENDENT DEVELOPMENT.

independent contractor. (1841) One who is entrusted to undertake a specific project but who is left free to do the assigned work and to choose the method for accomplishing it. • It does not matter whether the work is done for pay or gratuitously. Unlike an employee, an independent contractor who commits a wrong while carrying out the work usu. does not create liability for the one who did the hiring. — Also termed contract labor. Cf. EMPLOYEE. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨29, 3125.]

independent creation. Copyright. A defense asserting that a later work is not a derivative of an allegedly infringed work, but is a product of coincidentally parallel labor. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨75.]

independent development. Intellectual property. A defense against an industrial-espionage charge wherein the user shows that the property was independently discovered or conceived. • Trademarks, symbols, inventions, and other types of intellectual property are all subject to independent development. — Also termed independent conception.

independent executor. See EXECUTOR.

independent force. See FORCE.

independent intervening cause. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

independent invention. See INVENTION.

independent investigation committee. See SPECIAL LITIGATION COMMITTEE.

independent-living program. Family law. A training course designed to enable foster children who are near the age of majority to leave the foster-care system and manage their own affairs as adults. • Independent living programs provide education, training, and financial and employment counseling. They also help many foster youth in locating suitable post-foster-care housing. Permanency planning orders or case plans can — but are not required to — provide for independent living as a goal for a child in long-term foster care and describe how it is to be accomplished. See AGING-OUT; PERMANENCY PLAN.

independent medical examination. An assessment of a person's physical condition and health that is made by an impartial healthcare professional, usu. a physician. — Abbr. IME. [Cases: Damages ⇨206.]

independent mental evaluation. An assessment of a person's mental and emotional condition that is made by an impartial mental-health professional, such as a psychologist or psychiatrist. Cf. PSYCHIATRIC EXAMINATION. — Abbr. IME. [Cases: Damages ⇨206.]

independent-practice association. A network of independent healthcare providers who contract with a health-maintenance organization (HMO) to provide services to the HMO's subscribers at negotiated rates.

• Independent-practice associations generally remain free to accept patients who subscribe to other HMOs or who are not members of an HMO. — Abbr. IPA.

independent probate. See informal probate under PROBATE.

independent promise. See unconditional promise under PROMISE.

independent regulatory agency. See independent agency under AGENCY (3).

independent regulatory commission. See independent agency under AGENCY (3).

independent retirement account. See INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT.

independent-significance doctrine. (1968) Wills & estates. The principle that effect will be given to a testator's disposition that is not done solely to avoid the requirements of a will. • An example is a will provision that gives the contents of the testator's safe-deposit box to his niece. Because the safe-deposit box has utility ("significance") independent of the will, the gift of its contents at the testator's death is valid.

independent-source rule. (1968) Criminal procedure. The rule providing — as an exception to the fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine — that evidence obtained by illegal means may nonetheless be admissible if that evidence is also obtained by legal means unrelated to the original illegal conduct. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. Cf. INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨394.1(3).]

independent state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

independent union. See UNION.

indestructible trust. See TRUST.

indeterminate, adj. (14c) Not definite; not distinct or precise.

indeterminate bond. See BOND (3).

indeterminate conditional release. A release from prison granted once the prisoner fulfills certain conditions. • The release can be revoked if the prisoner breaches other conditions. [Cases: Prisons ⇨248.]

indeterminate damages. See discretionary damages under DAMAGES.

indeterminate obligation. See OBLIGATION.

indeterminate sentence. See SENTENCE.

indeterminate sentencing. See SENTENCING.

indeterminate sentencing. (1941) The practice of not imposing a definite term of confinement, but instead prescribing a range for the minimum and maximum term, leaving the precise term to be fixed in some other way, usu. based on the prisoner's conduct and apparent rehabilitation while incarcerated. — Also termed indefinite sentencing. See indeterminate sentence under SENTENCE. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷ 1124.]

in detrimentum animi (in de-trə-men-təm an-ə-mī). [Latin] Hist. To the injury of the soul. • The phrase appeared in reference to the ground upon which a person was prohibited from questioning a legal document that the person had sworn to never question.

index, n. (14c) 1. An alphabetized listing of the topics or other items included in a single book or document, or in a series of volumes, usu. found at the end of the book, document, or series <index of authorities>.

grantee-grantor index. (1961) An index, usu. kept in the county clerk's or recorder's office, alphabetically listing by grantee the volume and page number of the grantee's recorded property transactions. • In some jurisdictions, the grantee-grantor index is combined with the grantor-grantee index. [Cases: Records ↷ 8.]

grantor-grantee index. (1944) An index, usu. kept in the county clerk's or recorder's office, alphabetically listing by grantor the volume and page number of the grantor's recorded property transactions. [Cases: Records ↷ 8; Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 231.]

tract index. (1858) An index, usu. kept in the county clerk's or recorder's office, listing, by location of each parcel of land, the volume and page number of the recorded property transactions affecting the parcel. [Cases: Records ↷ 8; Vendor and Purchaser ↷ 231.]

2. A number, usu. expressed in the form of a percentage or ratio, that indicates or measures a series of observations, esp. those involving a market or the economy <cost-of-living index> <stock index>.

advance-decline index. A stock-market indicator showing the cumulative net difference between stock-price advances and declines.

index animi sermo (in-deks an-ə-mī sər-moh). [Latin] Speech is the index of the mind. • This maxim supports the concept that the language of a statute or instrument is the best guide to the drafter's intent.

indexation. See INDEXING.

index crime. See index offense under OFFENSE (1).

index fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

indexing. 1. The practice or method of adjusting wages, pension benefits, insurance, or other types of payments to compensate for inflation. 2. The practice of investing funds to track or mirror an index of securities. — Also termed indexation.

index lease. See LEASE.

index of authorities. (1881) An alphabetical list of authorities cited in a book or brief, usu. with subcategories for cases, statutes, and treatises. — Also termed table of authorities; table of cases. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷ 756.]

index offense. See OFFENSE (1).

Index of Patents. An annual two-part publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, containing the year's List of Patentees (Part I) and Index to Subjects of Inventions (Part II), arranged by class and subclass.

Index of Trademarks. An annual publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, listing all trademarks registered in a given year.

Index to the U.S. Patent Classification System. An entry-level aid to using the Patent Office's classification system, comprising an estimated 65,000 common terms and phrases and referring each entry to a class and subclass within the system.

Indian child. Under the Indian Child Welfare Act, any unmarried person under the age of 18 who either is a member of an Indian tribe or is both eligible for membership in an Indian tribe and the biological child of a member of an Indian tribe. See INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT. [Cases: Indians ↷ 132.]

Indian Child Welfare Act. A federal act that governs child-custody proceedings — including foster-care placement, preadoptive placement, adoptive placement, and termination of parental rights — in cases involving a child of American Indian descent. 25 USCA §§ 1911 et seq. • Congress enacted the Act to help protect the best interests of Indian children, to promote the stability and security of Indian tribes and families, and to counteract the disproportionate foster-care placement and adoption of Indian children by non-Indians. The Act provides minimum federal standards for removing Indian children from their families and for placing them in foster or adoptive homes that will provide an environment reflecting the values of the Indian culture. The Act has an important jurisdictional feature: in a custody dispute involving an Indian child who resides in or is domiciled within an Indian reservation, the tribe and its tribal courts have exclusive jurisdiction. And in a custody dispute involving an Indian child who lives off a reservation, upon petition, any state court should usu. defer and transfer the case to the tribal court unless a party demonstrates good cause to the contrary. — Abbr. ICWA. [Cases: Indians ↷ 213.]

Indian Claims Commission. A federal agency — dissolved in 1978 — that adjudicated claims brought by American Indians, a tribe, or another identifiable group of Indians against the United States. • The U.S. Court of Federal Claims currently hears these claims.

Indian country. 1. The land within the borders of all Indian reservations, the land occupied by an Indian community (whether or not located within a recognized reservation), and any land held in trust by the United States but beneficially owned by an Indian or tribe. 2. Hist. Any region (esp. during the U.S. westward migration) where a person was likely to encounter Indians.

Indian gambling. See GAMBLING.

Indian land. Land owned by the United States but held in trust for and used by American Indians. — Also termed Indian tribal property. Cf. TRIBAL LAND. [Cases: Indians ⇨ 150, 151.]

Indian law. See NATIVE AMERICAN LAW.

Indian reservation. An area that the federal government has designated for use by an American Indian tribe, where the tribe generally settles and establishes a tribal government. [Cases: Indians ⇨ 156.]

Indian Territory. A former U.S. territory — now a part of the state of Oklahoma — to which the Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, and Seminole tribes were forcibly removed between 1830 and 1843. • In the late 19th century, most of this territory was ceded to the United States, and in 1907 the greater part of it became the State of Oklahoma.

Indian title. A right of occupancy that the federal government grants to an American Indian tribe based on the tribe's immemorial possession of the area. • Congress does not recognize tribal ownership of the land, only possession. A tribe or nation must actually, exclusively, and continuously use the property to establish that it is the ancestral home. An individual may claim Indian title by showing that the individual or his or her lineal ancestors continuously occupied a parcel of land, as individuals, before the land was closed to settlers. — Also termed aboriginal title; right of occupancy. Cf. aboriginal title (1) under TITLE (2). [Cases: Indians ⇨ 151.]

Indian tribal property. See INDIAN LAND.

Indian tribe. A group, band, nation, or other organized group of indigenous American people, including any Alaskan native village, that is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the U.S. government because of Indian status (42 USCA § 9601(36)); esp., any such group having a federally recognized governing body that carries out substantial governmental duties and powers over an area (42 USCA § 300f(14); 40 CFR § 146.3). • A tribe may be identified in various ways, esp. by past dealings with other tribes or with the federal, state, or local government, or by recognition in historical records. [Cases: Indians ⇨ 102.]

"The Indian tribe is the fundamental unit of Indian Law; in its absence there is no occasion for the law to operate. Yet there is no all-purpose definition of an Indian tribe. A group of Indians may qualify as a tribe for the purpose of one statute or federal program, but fail to qualify for others. Definitions must accordingly be used with extreme

indicare (in-di-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] 1. Roman law. To accuse (someone) of a crime; to provide evidence against someone. 2. Civil law. To show or discover. 3. Civil law. To fix or tell the price of a thing. See INDICIUM.

indicator. (17c) Securities. An average or index that shows enough of a correlation to market trends or economic conditions that it can help analyze market performance.

coincident indicator. An economic or market-activity index or indicator that shows changing trends near the same time that overall conditions begin to change.

economic indicator. See ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

lagging indicator. 1. An index that indicates a major stock-market change sometime after the change occurs. 2. See lagging economic indicator under ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

leading indicator. 1. A quantifiable index that predicts a major stock-market change. 2. See leading economic indicator under ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

indicavit (in-di-kay-vit). [Law Latin "he has indicated"] Hist. A writ of prohibition by which a church patron removes to a common-law court an ecclesiastical-court action between two clerics who dispute each other's right to a benefice. • The writ was long available — nominally up to the 20th century — under the 1306 statute De Coniunctim Feoffatis (34 Edw. I). Actions concerning clerics' rights to a benefice were usu. tried in ecclesiastical courts, but they could be removed to a common-law court if the action involved a church patron in some way, as when one cleric was appointed by a certain patron and the other cleric was appointed by another patron. Cf. ADVOWSON.

indicia (in-dish-ee-ə), n. pl. (17c) 1. Roman law. Evidence. 2. (pl.) Signs; indications <the purchase receipts are indicia of ownership>.

indicia of title. A document that evidences ownership of personal or real property. [Cases: Property ⇨ 9.]

indicium (in-dish-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The act of providing evidence against an accused. 2. The act of promising recompense for a certain service. 3. A sign or mark; esp., something used as a type of proof. See INDICARE.

indict (in-dit), vb. (17c) To charge (a person) with a crime by formal legal process, esp. by grand-jury presentation. — Also formerly spelled endite; indite.

indictable misdemeanor. See serious misdemeanor under MISDEMEANOR.

indictable offense. See OFFENSE (1).

indicttee (in-di-tee). (16c) A person who has been indicted; one officially charged with a crime.

indictio (in-dik-shee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. An imperial proclamation establishing a 15-year period for the reassessment of property values for tax purposes.

• Indictio also referred to the 15-year cycle itself. 2. A declaration or proclamation, such as a declaration of war (indictio belli). 3. An indictment. Pl. indictiones (in-dik-shee-oh-nee-z).

indictment (in-dīt-mənt), n. (14c) 1. The formal written accusation of a crime, made by a grand jury and presented to a court for prosecution against the accused person. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 7. [Cases: Indictment and Information ⇨ 17.] 2. The act or process of preparing or bringing forward such a formal written accusation. Cf. INFORMATION; PRESENTMENT (2).

barebones indictment. (1963) An indictment that cites only the language of the statute allegedly violated; an indictment that does not provide a factual statement.

"What has been called 'a bare bones indictment using only statutory language' is quite common, and entirely permissible so long as the statute sets forth fully, directly, and expressly all essential elements of the crime intended to be punished." 1 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 125, at 558-59 (3d ed. 1999).

duplicitous indictment (d[y]oo-plis-ə-təs). (1914) 1. An indictment containing two or more offenses in the same count. [Cases: Indictment and Information ⇨ 125.] 2. An indictment charging the same offense in more than one count.

joint indictment. (17c) An indictment that charges two or more people with an offense.

indictor (in-dīt-ər or in-dī-tor). (17c) A person who causes another to be indicted.

in diem (in dī-əm or dee-əm). [Latin] For each day; per day. Cf. PER DIEM.

in diem addictio. See ADDICTIO IN DIEM.

indifference. (15c) A lack of interest in or concern about something; apathy.

conscious indifference. 1. Criminal law. See deliberate indifference (2). 2. Torts. See deliberate indifference (3).

deliberate indifference. 1. Criminal law. (1951) The careful preservation of one's ignorance despite awareness of circumstances that would put a reasonable person on notice of a fact essential to a crime. See JEWELL INSTRUCTION. 2. Criminal law. Awareness of and disregard for the risk of harm to another person's life, body, or property. 3. Torts. Conscious disregard of the harm that one's actions could do to the interests or rights of another. — Also termed reckless indifference; conscious avoidance; conscious indifference.

reckless indifference. See deliberate indifference.

indigena (in-dij-ə-nə). [Latin "native"] Hist. A subject born within the English realm or naturalized by act of Parliament. Cf. ALIENIGENA.

indigency, n. (17c) The state or condition of a person who lacks the means of subsistence; extreme hardship or neediness; poverty. • For purposes of the Sixth Amendment right to appointed counsel, indigency refers to a defendant's inability to afford an attorney. — Also termed indigence. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 1766.] — indigent, adj. & n.

"Supreme Court opinions speak generally of the rights of an 'indigent defendant' without offering any specific definition of 'indigency.' . . . The appellate courts agree that indigency is not a synonym for 'destitute.' . . . Among the factors to be considered in evaluating the individual's financial capacity are: (1) income from employment and such governmental programs as social security and unemployment compensation; (2) real and personal property; (3) number of dependents; (4) outstanding debts; (5) seriousness of the charge (which suggests the likely fee of a retained attorney); and (6) other legal expenses (such as bail bond)." Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 11.3(g), at 544 (2d ed. 1992).

indigent (in-di-jənt), n. (15c) 1. A poor person. 2. A person who is found to be financially unable to pay filing fees and court costs and so is allowed to proceed in forma pauperis. • The Supreme Court has recognized an indigent petitioner's right to have certain fees and costs waived in divorce and termination-of-parental-rights cases. Boddie v. Connecticut, 401 U.S. 371, 91 S.Ct. 780 (1971); M.L.B. v. S.L.J., 519 U.S. 102, 117 S.Ct. 555 (1996). See PAUPER; IN FORMA PAUPERIS. — indigent, adj.

indigent defendant. (1882) A person who is too poor to hire a lawyer and who, upon indictment, becomes eligible to receive aid from a court-appointed attorney and a waiver of court costs. See IN FORMA PAUPERIS. Cf. PAUPER. [Cases: Costs ⇨ 301.1; Criminal Law ⇨ 1766.]

indignity (in-dig-ni-tee), n. (16c) Family law. A ground for divorce consisting in one spouse's pattern of behavior calculated to humiliate the other. — Also termed personal indignity. Cf. CRUELTY. [Cases: Divorce ⇨ 29.]

indirect aggression. See AGGRESSION.

indirect attack. See COLLATERAL ATTACK.

indirect confession. See CONFESSION.

indirect contempt. See CONTEMPT.

indirect cost. See COST (1).

indirect damages. See consequential damages under DAMAGES.

indirect evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1) under EVIDENCE.

indirect loss. See consequential loss under LOSS.

indirect notice. See implied notice under NOTICE.

indirect possession. See mediate possession under POSSESSION.

indirect-purchaser doctrine. (1976) Antitrust. The principle that in litigation for price discrimination, the court will ignore sham middle parties in determining whether different prices were paid by different customers for the same goods. • This doctrine gives standing to bring an antitrust action to a party who is not an immediate purchaser of a product. Thus, if a manufacturer sells a product to a retailer, but dictates the terms by which the retailer must sell the product to a consumer, a court will ignore the retailer and treat the consumer as the direct purchaser of the product. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻967.]

indiscriminate attack. Int'l law. An aggressive act that (1) is not carried out for a specific military objective, (2) employs a means of combat not directed at a specific military objective, or (3) employs a means of combat the effects of which cannot be limited in accordance with an international protocol such as the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and their protocols or the Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907.

indispensable-element test. Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, based on whether the defendant acquires control over any thing that is essential to the crime. • Under this test, for example, a person commits a crime by buying the explosives with which to detonate a bomb. See ATTEMPT (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↻44.]

indispensable evidence. See EVIDENCE.

indispensable instrument. See INSTRUMENT (3).

indispensable party. See PARTY (2).

indistanter (in-di-stan-tər), adv. [Law Latin “immediately”] Forthwith; without delay.

indite. See INDICT.

individual, adj. (15c) 1. Existing as an indivisible entity.
2. Of or relating to a single person or thing, as opposed to a group.

individual account plan. See defined-contribution plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

individual asset. See ASSET.

individual contract. See CONTRACT.

individual debt. See DEBT.

individual goodwill. See personal goodwill under GOODWILL.

individualized educational placement. See INDIVIDUALIZED EDUCATION PROGRAM.

individualized education program. Family law. A specially designed plan of educational instruction for a child with disabilities. • The individualized education program is a written plan that details the particular child's abilities, the child's educational goals, and the services to be provided. — Abbr. IEP. — Also termed individualized educational placement. See child with disabilities under CHILD; INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT.

individual liberty. See personal liberty under LIBERTY.

individual property. See SEPARATE PROPERTY (1).

individual proprietorship. See SOLE PROPRIETORSHIP.

individual retirement account. (1974) A savings or brokerage account to which a person may contribute up to a specified amount of earned income each year. • The contributions, along with any interest earned in the account, are not taxed until the money is withdrawn after a participant reaches 59½ (or before then, if a 10% penalty is paid). — Abbr. IRA. — Also termed independent retirement account. Cf. KEOGH PLAN. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3594.]

education individual retirement account. An individual retirement account from which withdrawals may be made tax-free if the withdrawn funds are used for education costs. • Before 2002, annual contributions were limited to $500. In 2002, the contribution limit increased to $2,000 per year for families with incomes under $190,000.

Roth IRA. (1991) An IRA in which contributions are nondeductible when they are made. • No further taxes are assessed on the contributions (or accrued interest) when the money is withdrawn (if all applicable rules are followed). This term takes its name from Senator William Roth, who sponsored the legislation creating this type of IRA.

Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. A federal statute that governs the public education of children with physical or mental handicaps and attempts to ensure that these children receive a free public education that meets their unique needs. • The Education of All Handicapped Children Act (enacted in 1975) was renamed the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act in 1990, and this Act was substantially amended in 1997. All states currently participate in this joint federal-state initiative. 20 USCA §§ 1400–1485. — Abbr. IDEA.

individual voluntary arrangement. English law. A formal out-of-court arrangement between a debtor and two or more lenders to freeze the interest rate of a debt and pay off a percentage of the debt over an agreed period, at the end of which time the remaining debt is canceled. • The arrangement is an alternative to filing for bankruptcy. It must be set up by an authorized insolvency practitioner but does not require court approval. — Abbr. IVA.

indivisible, adj. (14c) Not separable into parts; held by two or more people in undivided shares <an indivisible debt>.

indivision. Civil law. Undivided ownership of property; the condition of being owned by coowners each having an undivided interest in the property. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↻1.]

indivisum (in-di-vi-səm or -zəm), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of property) held in common; not divided.

indorse, vb. (16c) To sign (a negotiable instrument), usu. on the back, either to accept responsibility for paying an obligation memorialized by the instrument or to make the instrument payable to someone other than the payee. — Also spelled endorse.

indorsee (in-dor-see). (18c) A person to whom a negotiable instrument is transferred by indorsement. — Also spelled endorsee.

indorsee in due course. An indorsee who, in the ordinary course of business, acquires a negotiable instrument in good faith for value, before its maturity, and without knowledge of its dishonor.

indorsement, n. (16c) 1. The placing of a signature, sometimes with an additional notation, on the back of a negotiable instrument to transfer or guarantee the instrument or to acknowledge payment. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨176.] 2. The signature or notation itself. — Also spelled endorsement. — indorse, vb.

"The clever indorser can subscribe his or her name under a variety of magic phrases. The Code specifies the legal effect of some of these phrases. Qualified indorsements ('without recourse') limit the liability of the indorser if the instrument is dishonored. Restrictive indorsements such as 'for deposit only,' 'pay any bank,' and the like set the terms for further negotiation of the instrument. Their main purpose is to prevent thieves and embezzlers from cashing checks." 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-7, at 92-93 (4th ed. 1995).

accommodation indorsement. (1888) An indorsement to an instrument by a third party who acts as surety for another party who remains primarily liable. See ACCOMMODATION PAPER. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨236.]

anomalous indorsement. See irregular indorsement.

blank indorsement. An indorsement that names no specific payee, thus making the instrument payable to the bearer and negotiable by delivery only. UCC § 3-205(b). — Also termed indorsement in blank; general indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨188, 288.]

collection indorsement. See restrictive indorsement.

conditional indorsement. (1894) An indorsement that restricts the instrument in some way, as by limiting how the instrument can be paid or transferred; an indorsement giving possession of the instrument to the indorsee, but retaining title until the occurrence of some condition named in the indorsement. • Wordings that indicate this type of indorsement are "Pay to Brad Jones when he becomes 18 years of age" and "Pay to Brigitte Turner, or order, unless before payment I give you notice to the contrary." — Also termed restricted indorsement; restrictive indorsement. Cf. special indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨190, 199, 290.] full indorsement. 1. See irregular indorsement. 2. See special indorsement.

general indorsement. See blank indorsement.

indorsement in blank. See blank indorsement.

indorsement in full. See special indorsement.

indorsement without recourse. See qualified indorsement.

irregular indorsement. (1842) An indorsement by a person who signs outside the chain of title and who therefore is neither a holder nor a transferor of the instrument. • An irregular indorser is generally treated as an accommodation party. — Also termed anomalous indorsement; full indorsement. See qualified indorsement. (1806) An indorsement that passes title to the instrument but limits the indorser's liability to later holders if the instrument is later dishonored. • Typically, a qualified indorsement is made by writing "without recourse" or "sans recourse" over the signature. UCC § 3-415(b). — Also termed indorsement without recourse. See WITHOUT RECOURSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨293.]

restrictive indorsement. (18c) An indorsement that includes a condition (e.g., "pay Josefina Cardoza only if she has worked 8 full hours on April 13") or any other language restricting further negotiation (e.g., "for deposit only"). — Also termed collection indorsement. See conditional indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨190, 199, 290.]

special indorsement. (18c) An indorsement that specifies the person to receive payment or to whom the goods named by the document must be delivered. UCC § 3-205(a). — Also termed indorsement in full; full indorsement. Cf. conditional indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨189, 289.]

trust indorsement. (1945) An indorsement stating that the payee becomes a trustee for a third person (e.g., "pay Erin Ray in trust for Kaitlin Ray"); a restrictive indorsement that limits the instrument to the use of the indorser or another person.

unauthorized indorsement. (1840) An indorsement made without authority, such as a forged indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨239, 279.]

unqualified indorsement. (1839) An indorsement that does not limit the indorser's liability on the paper. • It does not, for example, include the phrase "without recourse." [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨281, 287, 293.]

unrestrictive indorsement. (1844) An indorsement that includes no condition or language restricting negotiation. — Also termed unrestricted indorsement. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨190, 199, 290.]

inevitability doctrine. See INEVITABLE-DISCLOSURE DOCTRINE.

inevitable accident. See unavoidable accident under ACCIDENT.

inevitable-accident doctrine. See UNAVOIDABLE-ACCIDENT DOCTRINE.

inevitable-disclosure doctrine. Trade secrets. The legal theory that a key employee, once hired by a competitor, cannot avoid misappropriating the former employer's trade secrets. • To justify an injunction, the plaintiff must prove that the former employee has confidential information and will not be able to avoid using that knowledge to unfairly compete against the plaintiff. Most courts have rejected this controversial doctrine on grounds that it effectively turns a nondisclosure agreement into a disfavored noncompetition agreement. The leading case upholding the doctrine is PepsiCo, Inc. v. Redmond, 54 F.3d 1262 (7th Cir. 1995), where the court quipped: "PepsiCo finds itself in the position of a coach, one of whose players has left, playbook in hand, to join the opposing team before the big game." — Also termed inevitable disclosure rule; inevitability doctrine; inevitable misappropriation doctrine. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻414.]

inevitable-discovery rule. (1873) Criminal procedure. The rule providing — as an exception to the fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine — that evidence obtained by illegal means may nonetheless be admissible if the prosecution can show that the evidence would eventually have been legally obtained anyway. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. Cf. INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻394.1(3).]

inevitable-misappropriation doctrine. See INEVITABLE-DISCLOSURE DOCTRINE.

infans (in-fanz), n. [Latin] Roman law. A child under seven years old. • On turning seven years old, an infans became known as an impubes. An infans had no capacity in the law. Cf. IMPUBES.

infant, n. (14c) 1. A newborn baby. 2. MINOR (1).

"An infant in the eyes of the law is a person under the age of twenty-one years, and at that period (which is the same in the French and generally in the American law) he or she is said to attain majority; and for his torts and crimes an infant may be liable; but for his contracts, as a general rule, he is not liable, unless the contract is for necessities." John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 195 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

"[I]nfant — the one technical word that we have as a contrast for the person of full age — stands equally well for the new-born babe and the youth who is in his twenty-first year." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 439 (2d ed. 1899).

"The common-law rule provided that a person was an infant until he reached the age of twenty-one. The rule continues at the present time, though by statute in some jurisdictions the age may be lower." John Edward Murray Jr., Murray on Contracts § 12, at 18 (2d ed. 1974).

infantia (in-fan-shee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. The period of a person's life from birth to seven years; early childhood.

ciple of ERISA, without applying it to a specific factual situation.

information of intrusion. Hist. A proceeding for trespass upon real property owned or held by a sovereign, such as a state or federal government. • This was a common-law remedy for purpresture. See PURPRESTURE. Cf. INFORMATION IN EQUITY.

"In England it [an information of intrusion] is filed by the king's attorney general for any trespass committed upon the lands of the crown. It is founded on no writ under seal, but merely on intimation of the king's officer who 'gives the court to understand and be informed' of the matter in question. 3 Bl. Com. 261; Cro. Jac. 212. In America — In Massachusetts and Virginia — the remedy is resorted to in case of an intrusion on escheated lands. Com. v. Andre, 20 Mass. (3 Pick.) 224; Com. v. Hite, 6 Leigh (Va.) 588. Massachusetts Gen. St. 141 authorizes information of intrusion to be filed by the district attorney in case of any intrusion upon lands held by the State in this county for the benefit or use of any tribe of Indians or any individual thereof, or any descendants of them." 10 The American and English Encyclopedia of Law 711 n.1 (John Houston Merrill et al. eds., 1889) (s.v. information of intrusion).

"An information of intrusion, it may be added, was in the nature of an action for trespass quare clausum fregit." R.E. Megarry, A New Miscellany-at-Law 141 (2005).

informed intermediary. See INTERMEDIARY.

informer. (14c) 1. INFORMANT. 2. A private citizen who brings a penal action to recover a penalty. • Under some statutes, a private citizen is required to sue the offender for a penalty before any criminal liability can attach. — Also termed common informer. See COMMON INFORMER. [Cases: Penalties ⇨ 24.]

informer's privilege. See informant's privilege under PRIVILEGE (3).

in foro (in for-oh), adv. [Latin] In a forum, court, or tribunal; in the forum.

in foro conscientiae (in for-oh kon-shee-en-shee-ee), adv. [Latin "in the forum of conscience"] Privately or morally rather than legally <this moral problem cannot be dealt with by this court, but only in foro conscientiae>.

in foro contentioso (in for-oh kən-ten-shee-oh-soh), adv. [Latin] Hist. In the forum of contention or litigation; in a contested action. — Also termed in foro contradictorio.

"A decree is said to be granted in foro contentioso where the action in which it is pronounced has been litigated, and parties fully heard on the merits of the case. But it is not necessary that parties should be fully heard to make the decree pronounced in the case a decree in foro." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 261 (4th ed. 1894).

in foro ecclesiastico (in for-oh e-klee-z[h]ee-as-ti-koh), adv. [Law Latin] In an ecclesiastical court.

in foro externo (in for-oh ek-stər-noh), adv. [Latin "in an external forum"] Eccles. law. In a court that is handling a case pertaining to or affecting the corporate life of the church. See FORUM EXTERNUM.

in foro humano (in for-oh hyoo-may-noh), adv. In a human as opposed to a spiritual forum.

"[T]his may be murder or manslaughter in the sight of God, yet in foro humano it cannot come under the judgment of felony . . ." 1 Hale P.C. 429.

in foro interno (in for-oh in-tər-noh), adv. [Latin "in an internal forum"] Eccles. law. In a court of conscience; in a court for matters of conscience or the confessional. See FORUM INTERNUM.

in foro saeculari (in for-oh sek-yə-lair-i), adv. [Law Latin] In a secular court.

infra (in-frə), adv. & adj. [Latin "below"] (18c) Later in this text. • Infra is used as a citational signal to refer to a later-cited authority. In medieval Latin, infra also acquired the sense "within." Cf. INTRA; SUPRA.

infra aetatem (in-frə ee-tay-təm), adj. [Latin] Underage. — Also spelled infra etatem.

infra annos nobiles (in-frə an-ohs n[y]oo-bə-leez), adj. [Law Latin] Hist. Under marriageable years; i.e., not old enough to wed.

infra annum (in-frə an-əm), adv. [Law Latin] Under a year; within a year.

infra annum luctus (in-frə an-əm lək-təs), adv. [Latin] Hist. Within the year of mourning. • This referred to the one-year period of mourning during which a widow was prohibited from remarrying.

infra civitatem (in-frə siv-i-tay-təm), adv. [Law Latin] Within the state.

infra corpus comitatus (in-frə kor-pəs kom-ə-tay-təs), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Hist. Within the body of a county. • In English law, this phrase referred to a body of water that was completely enclosed by land, and therefore exempt from admiralty jurisdiction. See CORPUS COMITATUS.

infraction, n. (17c) A violation, usu. of a rule or local ordinance and usu. not punishable by incarceration. See VIOLATION (1). — infract, vb.

civil infraction. An act or omission that, though not a crime, is prohibited by law and is punishable. • In some states, many traffic violations are classified as civil infractions.

infra dignitatem curiae (in-frə dig-ni-tay-təm kyoor-ee-ee), adj. [Law Latin "beneath the dignity of the court"] (Of a case) too trifling in amount or character to be entertained by a court.

infra furorem (in-frə fyə-ror-əm), adv. [Law Latin] During madness; while in a state of insanity.

infra hospitium (in-frə hah-spish-ee-əm), [Law Latin] "within the inn" The doctrine that an innkeeper is liable for goods deposited by a guest. [Cases: Innkeepers ↷ 11.]

infra jurisdictionem (in-frā joor-is-dik-shee-oh-nəm), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Within the jurisdiction.

infra praesidia (in-frā prā-sid-ee-ə). [Latin “within the defenses”] Hist. The international-law doctrine that someone who captures goods will be considered the owner of the goods if they are brought completely within the captor’s power. • This term is a corruption of the Roman-law term infra praesidia, which referred to goods or persons taken by an enemy during war. Under the principle of postliminium, the captured person’s rights or goods were restored to prewar status when the captured person returned. See POSTLIMINIUM.

infrastructure. The underlying framework of a system; esp., public services and facilities (such as highways, schools, bridges, sewers, and water systems) needed to support commerce as well as economic and residential development.

in fraudem creditorum (in fraw-dəm kre-di-tor-əm), adv. [Latin] In fraud of creditors.

in fraudem legis (in fraw-dəm lee-jis), adv. [Latin] In fraud of the law. • With an intent to evade the law.

infringement, n. (1861) Intellectual property. An act that interferes with one of the exclusive rights of a patent, copyright, or trademark owner. See INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY. Cf. PLAGIARISM. — infringe, vb.

contributory infringement. 1. The act of participating in, or contributing to, the infringing acts of another person. • The law imposes vicarious liability for contributory infringement. 2. Patents. The act of aiding or abetting another person’s patent infringement by knowingly selling a nonstaple item that has no substantial noninfringing use and is esp. adapted for use in a patented combination or process. • In the patent context, contributory infringement is statutorily defined in the Patent Act. 35 USCA § 271(c). [Cases: Patents ↷ 259.] 3. Copyright. The act of either (1) actively inducing, causing, or materially contributing to the infringing conduct of another person, or (2) providing the goods or means necessary to help another person infringe (as by making facilities available for an infringing performance). • In the copyright context, contributory infringement is a common-law doctrine. 4. Trademarks. A manufacturer’s or distributor’s conduct in knowingly supplying, for resale, goods bearing an infringing mark. [Cases: Trademarks ↷ 1566.]

copyright infringement. The act of violating any of a copyright owner’s exclusive rights granted by the federal Copyright Act, 17 USCA §§ 106, 602. • A copyright owner has several exclusive rights in copyrighted works, including the rights (1) to reproduce the work, (2) to prepare derivative works based on the work, (3) to distribute copies of the work, (4) for certain kinds of works, to perform the work publicly, (5) for certain kinds of works, to display the work publicly, (6) for sound recordings, to perform the work publicly, and (7) to import into the United States copies acquired elsewhere. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷ 53.]

criminal infringement. The statutory criminal offense of either (1) willfully infringing a copyright to obtain a commercial advantage or financial gain (17 USCA § 506; 18 USCA § 2319), or (2) trafficking in goods or services that bear a counterfeit mark (18 USCA § 2320). • Under the second category, the law imposes criminal penalties if the counterfeit mark is (1) identical with, or substantially indistinguishable from, a mark registered on the Principal Register of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, and (2) likely to confuse or deceive the public. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷ 70; Trademarks ↷ 1786, 1787.] direct infringement. 1. Patents. The act of making, using, selling, offering for sale, or importing into the United States, without the patentee’s permission, a product that is covered by the claims of a valid patent. 35 USCA § 271(a). [Cases: Patents ↷ 226.] 2. Trademarks. The use of a mark in trade when that use causes a likelihood of confusion about the source of goods or services already identified by a similar mark. 3. Copyright. The unauthorized copying, distributing, or displaying of — or the adapting of a derivative work from — a copyrighted work. Cf. contributory infringement; infringement in the inducement.

domain-name infringement. Infringement of another’s trademark or servicemark by the use of a confusingly similar Internet domain name. [Cases: Trademarks ↷ 1116, 1435.] infringement by sale. Patents. The unauthorized sale, resale, or offer of a possessory interest in a patented invention. — Also termed infringement through sale. [Cases: Patents ↷ 226.]

infringement in the inducement. Patents. The act of actively and knowingly aiding and abetting direct infringement by another person. • Although sometimes used in copyright and trademark law to mean contributory infringement, the term is usu. reserved for the patent context. — Also termed inducing infringement. Cf. direct infringement. [Cases: Patents ↷ 259.]

innocent infringement. The act of violating an intellectual-property right without knowledge or awareness that the act constitutes infringement. • An innocent infringer may, in limited circumstances, escape liability for some or all of the damages. In the copyright context, damages may be limited if (1) the infringer was misled by the lack of a copyright notice on an authorized copy of the copyrighted work, distributed under the owner’s authority before March 1989 (the effective date of the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988), and (2) the infringing act occurred before the infringer received actual notice of the copyright. 17 USCA § 405(b). In the trademark context, publishers and distributors of paid advertisements who innocently infringe a mark have no liability for damages. 15 USCA § 1114. In both contexts, the innocent infringer is immunized only from an award of monetary damages, not from injunctive relief. Cf. willful infringement. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷52.]

literal infringement. Patents. Infringement in which every element and every limitation of a patent claim is present, exactly, in the accused product or process. Cf. DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS. [Cases: Patents ↷226.]

nonliteral infringement. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.

patent infringement. The unauthorized making, using, offering to sell, selling, or importing into the United States of any patented invention. 35 USCA § 271(a). [Cases: Patents ↷226.]

"In determining whether an accused device or composition infringes a valid patent, resort must be had in the first instance to the words of the claim. If accused matter falls clearly within the claim, infringement is made out and that is the end of it." Graver Tank & Mfg. Co. v. Linde Air Prods. Co., 339 U.S. 605, 607, 70 S.Ct. 854, 855 (1950) (Jackson, J.).

trademark infringement. The unauthorized use of a trademark — or of a confusingly similar name, word, symbol, or any combination of these — in connection with the same or related goods or services and in a manner that is likely to cause confusion, deception, or mistake about the source of the goods or services. See LIKELIHOOD-OF-CONFUSION TEST. [Cases: Trademarks ↷1421.]

vicarious infringement. A person's liability for an infringing act of someone else, even though the person has not directly committed an act of infringement. • For example, a concert theater can be vicariously liable for an infringing performance of a hired band. [Cases: Patents ↷287(2).]

willful infringement. An intentional and deliberate infringement of another person's intellectual property. Cf. innocent infringement. [Cases: Patents ↷227.]

infringement opinion. See OPINION (2).

infringement search. Patents. A patent search aimed at discovering whether a product or method infringes any in-force patent. • An infringement search is usually limited to the political territory where the patent is to be relied on. — Also termed clear-to-use search; freedom-to-operate search; FTO search. Cf. PATENTABILITY SEARCH; VALIDITY SEARCH.

infringement test. Patents. A means of determining whether a patent claim is dependent by asking if the claim would always be infringed if the independent claim on which it rests were infringed. • Since a dependent claim must incorporate all the elements of the independent claim, an infringement of the independent claim must also be an infringement of the dependent claim. [Cases: Patents ↷165(5).] infringement through sale. See infringement by sale under INFRINGEMENT.

infringer. (16c) A person who interferes with one of the exclusive rights of a patent, copyright, or trademark owner. See INFRINGEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↷77; Patents ↷287(1); Trademarks ↷1564.]

in fructu (in fræk-t[y]oo). [Latin] Hist. Among the fruit.

• A bona fide possessor owned the fruits of the subject possessed but not the subject itself because the subject was not in fructu. For example, a person who possessed but did not own a goat was entitled to the goat's milk, wool, and offspring, but not the goat's meat.

in full. Constituting the whole or complete amount <payment in full>.

in full life. (Of a person) alive in fact and in law; neither naturally nor civilly dead.

in futuro (in fyə-tyoor-oh), adv. [Latin] In the future. Cf. IN PRAESENTI.

in generali passagio (in jen-ə-ray-lī pə-say-jee-oh), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. In the general passage (to the holy land with a company of Crusaders). • This type of pilgrimage excused an absence from court during the Crusades. Cf. SIMPLEX PASSAGIUM.

in genere (in jen-ər-ee). [Latin "in kind"] Belonging to the same class, but not identical.

ingenuitas (in-jə-n[y]oo-ə-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. The condition or status of a free-born person.

ingenuitas regni (in-jə-n[y]oo-ə-tas reg-nī). [Law Latin] Hist. The freemen, yeomanry, or commonalty of the kingdom. • This term was occasionally applied to the nobility.

ingenuus (in-jen-yoo-əs), n. [Latin] Roman law. A free-born person. • This term, denoting freeborn persons, was commonly opposed to libertini (people born into slavery and later emancipated). Cf. LATINI JUNIANI; SERVUS.

in globo (in glōh-boh), adv. [Latin "in a mass"] As an undivided whole rather than separately <settlement paid in globo to the three defendants>.

ingratitude, n. Civil law. Lack of appreciation for a generous or kind act, esp. for a gift received. • Under Louisiana law, a gift may be reclaimed on grounds of ingratitude if the recipient mistreats the giver by, for example, attempting to murder the giver or refusing to provide the giver with needed food. La. Civ. Code art. 1560. [Cases: Gifts ↷41.]

ingratus (in-gray-təs), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person) ungrateful; (of conduct) marked by ingratitude.

• Ungrateful acts or words (such as spiteful comments from a freedman toward a former master) could form the basis for a return to a prior inferior status.

in gremio juris (in gree-mee-oh joor-is), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Civil & Scots law. In the bosom of the right. • This phrase describes a clause formerly inserted in an instrument to bind holders to its terms.

in gremio legis (in gree-mee-oh lee-jis), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In the bosom of the law. • This is a figurative expression for something that is under the protection of the law, such as a land title that is in abeyance.

ingress (in-gres). (15c) 1. The act of entering. 2. The right or ability to enter; access. Cf. EGRESS.

ingress, egress, and regress. (17c) The right of a lessee to enter, leave, and reenter the land in question.

ingressus (in-gres-əs). [Latin "ingress, entry"] Hist. The fee paid by an heir to a feudal lord to enter the estate of a decedent.

in gross. 1. Undivided; still in one large mass. — Also termed en gros; en grosse. 2. (Of a servitude) personal as distinguished from appurtenant to land. See easement in gross under EASEMENT.

ingross, vb. See ENGRASS.

ingrossator (in-groh-say-tər). [Law Latin] Hist. An engrosser; a clerk who writes records or instruments on parchment. • The Engrosser of the Great Roll, for example, was known as the Ingrossator Magni Rotuli. See CLERK OF THE PIPE.

inhabit, vb. (14c) To dwell in; to occupy permanently or habitually as a residence.

in hac parte (in hak pahr-tee). [Latin] On this part or side.

in haec verba (in heek vər-bə). [Latin] In these same words; verbatim.

in haereditate jacente (in hə-red-i-tay-tee jə-sen-tee). [Latin] Hist. In the estate of a person deceased.

inhaerere jurisdictioni (in-hi-reer-ee juur-is-dik-shee-oh-ni). [Latin] Civil law. To be necessarily connected with jurisdiction. • The phrase typically referred to a judge's inherent powers, such as the power to inflict punishment or to enforce a judgment.

inhere (in-heer), vb. (15c) To exist as a permanent, inseparable, or essential attribute or quality of a thing; to be intrinsic to something.

inherency doctrine. Patents. The rule that anticipation can be inferred despite a missing element in a prior-art reference if the missing element is either necessarily present in or a natural result of the product or process and a person of ordinary skill in the art would know it. • On one hand, the doctrine precludes patenting an existing invention by merely claiming an inherent element. On the other hand, it allows the later patentability of a substance, usu. a chemical compound, that was inadvertently created but not recognized or appreciated. See INHERENT ANTICIPATION. [Cases: Patents ↻65.]

inherent anticipation. Patents. An invention's lack of novelty arising from the existence of prior-art products or processes that necessarily possess the same characteristics. • Inherency differs from obviousness in that a lack of novelty must be based on fact, not mere possibility or probability. See DOCTRINE OF INHERENCY. [Cases: Patents ↻65.]

inherent condition. See CONDITION (2).

inherent covenant. See COVENANT (1).

inherent defect. See hidden defect under DEFECT.

inherently dangerous. See DANGEROUS.

inherently dangerous activity. An activity that can be carried out only by the exercise of special skill and care and that involves a grave risk of serious harm if done unskillfully or carelessly.

inherently dangerous work. See WORK (1).

inherent-powers doctrine. The principle that allows courts to deal with diverse matters over which they are thought to have intrinsic authority, such as (1) procedural rulemaking, (2) internal budgeting of the courts, (3) regulating the practice of law; and (4) general judicial housekeeping. • The power is based on interpretations of art. I, § 8, cl. 18 of the Constitution. [Cases: Courts ↻1.]

inherit, vb. (14c) 1. To receive (property) from an ancestor under the laws of intestate succession upon the ancestor's death. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻1.] 2. To receive (property) as a bequest or devise.

inheritable, adj. See HERITABLE.

inheritable blood. See heritable blood under BLOOD.

inheritable obligation. See heritable obligation under OBLIGATION.

inheritable security. See heritable security under SECURITY.

inheritance. (14c) 1. Property received from an ancestor under the laws of intestacy. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻1, 8.] 2. Property that a person receives by bequest or devise.

dual inheritance. An adopted child's intestate inheritance through both his adopted family and his natural parent. • The problem of dual inheritance occurs only if a relative of the birth parent adopts the child. For instance, if a child's mother dies and the maternal grandparents adopt the grandchild, and if a grandparent then dies intestate, the child qualifies for two separate shares — one as a child and the other as a grandchild. In some jurisdictions, by statute, such a child is allowed to inherit only the adopted child's share. Under the Uniform Probate Code, the child takes the larger of the two shares. [Cases: Adoption ↻21.]

several inheritance. An inheritance that descends to two persons severally, as by moieties.

shifting inheritance. Under intestacy laws, an inheritance that is transferred from an heir who was living when the intestate died to an afterborn heir who is more closely related to the intestate. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷42.]

universal inheritance. A system by which an intestate's estate escheats to the state only if the decedent leaves no surviving relatives, no matter how distant. • Universal inheritance has been almost universally abandoned in Anglo-American jurisdictions. See UNIVERSAL-INHERITANCE RULE.

inheritance tax. See TAX.

inheritor (in-hair-i-tər), n. (15c) A person who inherits; HEIR.

inheritor (in-hair-i-triks), n. Archaic. A female heir; HEIRESS.

inhibition (in-hi-bish-ən), n. 1. Eccles. law. A writ issued by a superior ecclesiastical court, forbidding a judge from proceeding in a pending case. 2. Eccles. law. An order issuing from an ecclesiastical court, prohibiting a member of the clergy from taking office or performing an unlawful action. 3. Hist. A writ of prohibition. 4. Scots law. An order issued by the Court of Session to prohibit a debtor from encumbering or alienating the debtor's heritable property to the prejudice of a creditor. See EX CAPITE INHIBITIONIS; (in senses 3 & 4) PROHIBITION (2).

in hoc (in hok), adv. [Latin] In this; in respect to this.

in hoc statu (in hok stay-t[y]oo). [Latin] Hist. In this position.

inhonestus (in-hə-nes-təs), adj. [Latin] Roman law. 1. (Of a person) of ill repute. 2. (Of conduct) morally shameful.

in-house counsel. See COUNSEL.

inhuman treatment. Family law. Physical or mental cruelty so severe that it endangers life or health. • Inhuman treatment is usu. grounds for divorce. See CRUELTY. [Cases: Divorce ↷27(1, 3).]

in hypothesi (in hi-pahth-ə-si). [Latin] Hist. In a supposed case; in a hypothetical case. Cf. IN THESI.

in iisdem terminis (in ee-ɪs-dem tər-mə-nis), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. In the same terms.

inimicitia capitalis (i-nim-ə-sish-ee-ə kap-i-tay-lis). [Latin] Hist. Deadly enmity.

in individuo (in in-di-vid-yoo-oh), adv. [Law Latin] In the distinct, identical, or individual form. See IN SPECIE.

in infinitum (in in-fə-ni-təm). [Latin "in infinity"] To infinity. • This phrase was in reference to a line of succession that is indefinite.

in initialibus (in i-nish-ee-al-ə-bəs). [Law Latin] Hist. In the preliminary stage. • The phrase appeared in reference to the point in the examination when the initialia testimonii took place to determine the witness's competence to testify. See INITIALIA TESTIMONII.

in initio (in i-nish-ee-oh). [Latin "in the beginning"] At the beginning or outset. Cf. AB INITIO.

in initio litis (in i-nish-ee-oh li-tis). [Latin] Hist. In the beginning of the suit. • Many defenses had to be raised at this stage of a case.

in integrum (in in-teg-rəm). [Latin] Hist. Entire; wholly undamaged.

in invitum (in in-vi-təm). [Latin] Against an unwilling person <the nonparty appealed after being compelled to participate in the proceedings in invitum>. Cf. AB INVITO.

in ipso termino (in ip-soh tər-mi-noh). [Latin] Hist. At the very end; on the last day, as of a prescriptive period.

initial public offering. See OFFERING.

initial surplus. See SURPLUS.

initiation of charges. Military law. The first report to the proper military authority of an alleged commission of an offense by a person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Cf. PREFERRING OF CHARGES. [Cases: Military Justice ↷950.]

initiative (i-nish-ə-tiv or i-nish-ee-ə-tiv). (1889) An electoral process by which a percentage of voters can propose legislation and compel a vote on it by the legislature or by the full electorate. • Recognized in some state constitutions, the initiative is one of the few methods of direct democracy in an otherwise representative system. Cf. PLEBISCITE; REFERENDUM. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↷108; Statutes ↷301-327.]

in itinere (in i-tin-ər-ee), adv. [Latin] Hist. On a journey; on the way. • This term referred to the justices in eyre (justices in itinere) and to goods en route to a buyer. See EYRE; IN TRANSITU.

initium possessionis (i-nish-ee-əm pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Latin "the beginning of the possession"] Hist. The right by which possession was first held.

injoin, vb. Archaic. See ENJOIN.

in judicio (in joo-dish-ee-oh), adv. & adj. [Latin] Before the judge. • The phrase is still sometimes used.

Originally, in Roman law, in judicio referred to the second stage of a Roman formulary trial, held before a private judge known as a judex. — Also termed apud judicem. See FORMULA (1). Cf. IN JURE (2).

in judicio possessorio (in joo-dish-ee-oh pah-ses-sor-ee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. In a possessory action.

injunction (in-jəŋk-shən), n. (16c) A court order commanding or preventing an action. • To get an injunction, the complainant must show that there is no plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law and that an irreparable injury will result unless the relief is granted. — Also termed writ of injunction. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction ↪1.]

"In a general sense, every order of a court which commands or forbids is an injunction; but in its accepted legal sense, an injunction is a judicial process or mandate operating in personam by which, upon certain established principles of equity, a party is required to do or refrain from doing a particular thing. An injunction has also been defined as a writ framed according to the circumstances of the case, commanding an act which the court regards as essential to justice, or restraining an act which it esteems contrary to equity and good conscience; as a remedial writ which courts issue for the purpose of enforcing their equity jurisdiction; and as a writ issuing by the order and under the seal of a court of equity." 1 Howard C. Joyce, A Treatise on the Law Relating to Injunctions § 1, at 2-3 (1909).

affirmative injunction. See mandatory injunction.

antisuit injunction. An injunction prohibiting a litigant from instituting other, related litigation, usu. between the same parties on the same issues. [Cases: Injunction ↪33.]

ex parte injunction. (1854) A preliminary injunction issued after the court has heard from only the moving party. — Also termed temporary restraining order.

final injunction. See permanent injunction.

head-start injunction. Trade secrets. An injunction prohibiting the defendant from using a trade secret for a period of time equal to the time between the date of the secret's theft and the date when the secret became public. • So named since that period is the "head start" the defendant unfairly gained over the rest of the industry. [Cases: Injunction ↪56, 138.33.]

injunction pendente lite. See preliminary injunction.

interlocutory injunction. See preliminary injunction.

mandatory injunction. (1843) An injunction that orders an affirmative act or mandates a specified course of conduct. — Also termed affirmative injunction. Cf. prohibitory injunction. [Cases: Injunction ↪5, 133.]

permanent injunction. (1846) An injunction granted after a final hearing on the merits. • Despite its name, a permanent injunction does not necessarily last forever. — Also termed perpetual injunction; final injunction. [Cases: Injunction ↪1.]

perpetual injunction. See permanent injunction.

preliminary injunction. (1828) A temporary injunction issued before or during trial to prevent an irreparable injury from occurring before the court has a chance to decide the case. • A preliminary injunction will be issued only after the defendant receives notice and an opportunity to be heard. — Also termed interlocutory injunction; temporary injunction; provisional injunction; injunction pendente lite. Cf. ex parte injunction; TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. [Cases: Injunction ↪132.]

preventive injunction. (1882) An injunction designed to prevent a loss or injury in the future. Cf. reparative injunction.

prohibitory injunction. (1843) An injunction that forbids or restrains an act. • This is the most common type of injunction. Cf. mandatory injunction.

provisional injunction. See preliminary injunction.

quia-timet injunction (kwī-ə tī-mət or kwē-ə tim-et). [Latin "because he fears"] (1913) An injunction granted to prevent an action that has been threatened but has not yet violated the plaintiff's rights. See QUIA TIMET.

reparative injunction (ri-par-ə-tiv). (1955) An injunction requiring the defendant to restore the plaintiff to the position that the plaintiff occupied before the defendant committed a wrong. Cf. preventive injunction.

special injunction. Hist. An injunction in which the prohibition of an act is the only relief ultimately sought, as in prevention of waste or nuisance.

temporary injunction. See preliminary injunction.

injunction bond. See BOND (2).

injunctive, adj. (15c) That has the quality of directing or ordering; of or relating to an injunction. — Also termed injunctional.

in jure (in joor-ee). [Latin "in law"] 1. According to the law. 2. Roman law. Before the praetor or other magistrate. • In jure referred to the first stage of a Roman formulary trial, held before the praetor or other judicial magistrate for the purpose of establishing the legal issues and their competence. Evidence was taken in the second stage, which was held before a judex. See FORMULA (1). Cf. IN JUDICIO.

in jure alterius (in joor-ee al-teer-ee-əs), adv. [Latin] In another's right.

in jure cessio (in joor-ee sesh-ee-oh). [Latin "a surrender in law"] Roman law. A fictitious trial held to transfer ownership of property; a collusive claim to formally convey property, esp. incorporeal property, by a court's assignment of ownership. • At trial, the transferee appeared before a praetor and asserted ownership of the property. The actual owner also appeared, but did not contest the assertion, and so allowed the transfer of the property to the plaintiff. In jure cessio was most often used to convey incorporeal property. — Also spelled in iure cessio.

in jure proprio (in joor-ee proh-pree-oh), adv. [Latin] In one's own right.

injuria (in-joor-ee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. See WRONG. Cf. DAMNUM INJURIA DATUM; actio injuriarum under ACTIO. 2. An assault on a person's reputation or body. Pl. injuriae (in-joor-ee-ee).

"By injuria (or outrage), as the fourth ground of delict obligation, is meant some affronting wrong, calculated to wound the self-respect and touch the honor of the person injured, to humiliate or degrade him in the view of others." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 243 (N.Y., D. Appleton & Co. 1881).

"The term injuria [is best] used in its original and proper sense of wrong (in jus, contrary to law). The modern use of 'injury' as a synonym for damage is unfortunate but inveterate." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 nn.51-52 (17th ed. 1977).

injuria absque damno (in-joor-ee-ə abs-kwee dam-noh). [Latin "injury without damage"] A legal wrong that will not sustain a lawsuit because no harm resulted from it. — Also termed injuria sine damno. Cf. DAMNUM SINE INJURIA.

"Just as there are cases in which damage is not actionable as a tort (damnum sine injuria), so conversely there are cases in which behaviour is actionable as a tort, although it has been the cause of no damage at all (injuria sine damno). Torts are of two kinds — namely, those which are actionable per se, and those which are actionable only on proof of actual damage resulting from them. Thus the act of trespassing upon another's land is actionable even though it has done the plaintiff not the slightest harm. Similarly, a libel is actionable per se, while slander (that is to say, oral as opposed to written defamation) is in most cases not actionable without proof of actual damage." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 14 (17th ed. 1977).

injurious, adj. (15c) Harmful; tending to injure.

injurious exposure. Workers' compensation. Contact with a substance that would cause injury if the person were repeatedly exposed to it over time. • An employer may be found liable for harm resulting from injurious exposure. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 201, 517, 1074.]

injurious falsehood. 1. See DISPARAGEMENT (3). 2. See TRADE DISPARAGEMENT.

injurious words. Louisiana law. Slanderous or libelous language. See SLANDER; LIBEL (1), (2).

injury, n. (14c) 1. The violation of another's legal right, for which the law provides a remedy; a wrong or injustice. See WRONG. 2. Scots law. Anything said or done in breach of a duty not to do it, if harm results to another in person, character, or property. • Injuries are divided into real injuries (such as wounding) and verbal injuries (such as slander). They may be criminal wrongs (as with assault) or civil wrongs (as with defamation). 3. Any harm or damage. • Some authorities distinguish harm from injury, holding that while harm denotes any personal loss or detriment, injury involves an actionable invasion of a legally protected interest. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 7, cmt. a (1965). [Cases: Torts ⇨ 117.] — injure, vb. — injurious, adj.

accidental injury. (1800) An injury resulting from external, violent, and unanticipated causes; esp., a bodily injury caused by some external force or agency operating contrary to a person's intentions, unexpectedly, and not according to the usual order of events. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2590.]

advertising injury. Harm resulting from (1) oral or written speech that slanders or libels a person, or disparages a person's goods, products, or services; (2) oral or written speech that violates a person's right of privacy; (3) misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business; or (4) infringement of copyright, esp. in a name or slogan. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2297.]

bodily injury. (16c) Physical damage to a person's body. — Also termed physical injury. See serious bodily injury. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 30, 32; Insurance ⇨ 2276.]

civil injury. (17c) Physical harm or property damage caused by breach of a contract or by a criminal offense redressable through a civil action.

compensable injury (kəm-pen-sə-bəl). Workers' compensation. An injury caused by an accident arising from the employment and in the course of the employee's work, and for which the employee is statutorily entitled to receive compensation. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 511-770.] consequential injury. See consequential loss under LOSS.

continual injury. An injury that recurs at repeated intervals. — Also termed (but improperly) continuous injury.

continuing injury. (1824) An injury that is still in the process of being committed. • An example is the constant smoke or noise of a factory. — Also termed continuing harm. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 110.]

direct injury. (17c) 1. An injury resulting directly from violation of a legal right. 2. An injury resulting directly from a particular cause, without any intervening causes. [Cases: Damages ⇨ 16.]

great bodily injury. See serious bodily injury.

injury in fact. (1809) An actual or imminent invasion of a legally protected interest, in contrast to an invasion that is conjectural or hypothetical. • An injury in fact gives the victim standing to bring an action for damages. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 103.2.]

irreparable injury (i-rep-ər-ə-bəl). (17c) An injury that cannot be adequately measured or compensated by money and is therefore often considered remediable by injunction. — Also termed irreparable harm; nonpecuniary injury. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction ⇨ 14, 138.6.]

"The term 'irreparable injury,' however, is not to be taken in its strict literal sense. The rule does not require that the threatened injury should be one not physically capable of being repaired. If the threatened injury would be substantial and serious — one not easily to be estimated, or repaired by money — and if the loss or inconvenience to the plaintiff if the injunction should be refused (his title proving good) would be much greater than any which can be suffered by the defendant through the granting of the injunction, although his title ultimately prevails, the case is one of such probable great or 'irreparable' damage as will justify a preliminary injunction." Elias Merwin, Principles of Equity and Equity Pleading 426-27 (H.C. Merwin ed., 1896).

legal injury. (18c) Violation of a legal right.

malicious injury. (16c) 1. An injury resulting from a willful act committed with knowledge that it is likely to injure another or with reckless disregard of the consequences. 2. MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

nonpecuniary injury. See irreparable injury.

pecuniary injury. An injury that can be adequately measured or compensated by money.

permanent injury. (17c) 1. A completed wrong whose consequences cannot be remedied for an indefinite period. 2. Property. A lasting injury to land that causes it to revert to the grantor or vests immediate right of possession in a remainderman. Cf. temporary injury.

personal injury. (16c) Torts. 1. In a negligence action, any harm caused to a person, such as a broken bone, a cut, or a bruise; bodily injury. 2. Any invasion of a personal right, including mental suffering and false imprisonment. — Also termed private injury. [Cases: Insurance ↻2306.] 3. For purposes of workers' compensation, any harm (including a worsened pre-existing condition) that arises in the scope of employment. — Abbr. Pl. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↻552-566, 604-770.] physical injury. See bodily injury.

private injury. See personal injury (2).

public injury. A loss or an injury stemming from a breach of a duty or violation of a right that affects the community as a whole.

reparable injury (rep-ər-ə-bəl). (1832) An injury that can be adequately compensated by money.

scheduled injury. A partially disabling injury for which a predetermined amount of compensation is allowed under a workers'-compensation statute. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↻869-902.]

serious bodily injury. (1843) Serious physical impairment of the human body; esp., bodily injury that creates a substantial risk of death or that causes serious, permanent disfigurement or protracted loss or impairment of the function of any body part or organ. Model Penal Code § 210.0(3). • Typically, the fact-finder must decide in any given case whether the injury meets this general standard. Generally, an injury meets this standard if it creates a substantial risk of fatal consequences or, when inflicted, constitutes mayhem. Cf. MAYHEM (1). — Also termed serious bodily harm; grievous bodily harm; great bodily injury. [Cases: Homicide ↻530; Assault and Battery ↻55.]

temporary injury. An injury that may be abated or discontinued at any time by either the injured party or the wrongdoer. Cf. permanent injury. [Cases: Damages ↻109.]

willful and malicious injury. Bankruptcy. Under the statutory exception to discharge, damage to another entity (such as a creditor) caused by a debtor intentionally performing a wrongful act — without just cause or excuse — that the debtor knew was certain or substantially certain to cause injury. 11 USCA § 523(a)(6). [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻3374.]

injury-in-fact trigger. See ACTUAL-INJURY TRIGGER.

injustice. (15c) 1. An unjust state of affairs; unfairness. 2. An unjust act.

in jus vocare (in jəs voh-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To summon a defendant to court.

in kind, adv. (17c) 1. In goods or services rather than money <payment in cash or in kind>. 2. In a similar way; with an equivalent of what has been offered or received <returned the favor in kind>. — in-kind, adj. <in-kind repayment>.

INL. abbr. BUREAU OF INTERNATIONAL NARCOTICS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT.

inlagare (in-lə-gair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To restore (an outlaw) to the protection of the law. Cf. UTLAGARE.

inlagation (in-lə-gay-shən), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The act of restoring an outlaw to the protection of the law; inlawry. Cf. UTLAGATION.

inlagh (in-law). Hist. A person within the protection of the law, in contrast to an outlaw. Cf. UTLAGH.

inland. (15c) 1. The interior part of a country or region, away from the coast or border. 2. Hist. The portion of a feudal estate lying closest to the lord's manor and dedicated to the support of the lord's family. — Also termed (in sense 2) inlantal. Cf. UTLAND.

inland bill of exchange. See domestic bill (2) under BILL (6).

inland draft. See DRAFT.

inland marine insurance. See INSURANCE.

inland revenue. See INTERNAL REVENUE.

inland trade. See TRADE.

inland waters. See INTERNAL WATERS.

inlantal (in-lan-təl). Hist. See INLAND (2). — Also spelled inlantale.

in law. (15c) Existing in law or by force of law; in the contemplation of the law. Cf. IN FACT.

in-law, n. (1894) A relative by marriage.

inlaw, vb. Archaic. To place (an offender) under the protection of the law. Cf. OUTLAW (1).

"The outlaw's life is insecure. . . . If the king inlaws him, he comes back into the world like a new-born babe, quasi modo genius, capable indeed of acquiring new rights, but unable to assert any of those that he had before his outlawry. An annihilation of the outlawry would have a different operation, but the inlawed outlaw is not the old person restored to legal life; he is a new person." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 477 (2d ed. 1898).

inlawry. The restoration of an outlawed person's rights and protections under the law. See INLAGATION.

in lecto aegritudinis (in lek-toh ee-gri-t[y]oo-di-nis). [Law Latin] Scots law. On a bed of sickness. • The phrase appeared in reference either to the deathbed or to periods of illness that excused a person from fulfilling an obligation. See LIEGE POUSTI.

in lecto mortali (in lek-toh mor-tay-li), adv. & adj. [Latin] On the deathbed.

in legal custody. See IN CUSTODIA LEGIS.

in liberam baroniam (in lib-ər-əm bə-roh-nee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. Into a free barony.

"In former times, many persons holding certain feudal rights from the Crown were called barons, but in the strict legal sense, the title was only due to him whose lands had been erected or confirmed by the king in liberam baroniam. The advantages conferred by the right of barony were considerable. Such a right conferred on the baron both civil and criminal jurisdiction within his barony; and under the clause of union contained in his charter, he was enabled to take infefment in the whole lands and rights of the barony in, what was at that time, an easy and inexpensive mode." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 264 (4th ed. 1894).

in liberam elemosinam (in lib-ər-əm el-ə-mə-si-nəm). [Latin "in free alms"] Hist. Land given away for a charitable purpose; land given away to be held in frankalmoin. — Also spelled in liberam elemosinam. — Also termed in libera elemosina. See FRANKALMOIN.

in liberam regalitatem (in lib-ər-əm ri-gal-ə-tay-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. Into a free regality. • The phrase appeared in reference to feudal land grants that were made by the Crown and that gave the grantees jurisdiction over criminal and civil matters in their territory equivalent to that of the Crown.

in libero sochagio (in lib-ər-oh sə-kay-jee-oh), adv. [Law Latin] In free socage. See SOCAGE.

in lieu of. (13c) Instead of or in place of; in exchange or return for <the creditor took a note in lieu of cash> <the defendant was released in lieu of $5,000 bond>.

in lieu tax. See TAX.

in limine (in lim-ə-nee), adv. [Latin "at the outset"] (18c) Preliminarily; presented to only the judge, before or during trial . See MOTION IN LIMINE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 632(4); Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 927.5; Pretrial Procedure ⇨ 3.]

in-limine, adj. (Of a motion or order) raised preliminarily, esp. because of an issue about the admissibility of evidence believed by the movant to be prejudicial <in-limine motion>.

in linea recta (in lin-ee-ə rek-tə). [Latin] Hist. In the direct line (of succession).

in litem (in li-tem or -təm), adv. [Latin] For a suit; to the suit. See AD LITEM.

in loco (in loh-koh). [Latin] In the place of.

in loco parentis (in loh-koh pə-ren-tis), adv. & adj. [Latin "in the place of a parent"] (1818) Of, relating to, or acting as a temporary guardian or caretaker of a child, taking on all or some of the responsibilities of a parent.

• The Supreme Court has recognized that during the school day, a teacher or administrator may act in loco parentis. See Vernonia Sch. Dist. v. Acton, 515 U.S. 646, 115 S.Ct. 2386 (1995). See PERSON IN LOCO PARENTIS. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨ 274; Child Support ⇨ 31; Parent and Child ⇨ 15.]

in loco parentis, n. Supervision of a young adult by an administrative body such as a university. [Cases: Schools ⇨ 169.]

in lucro captando (in loo-kroh kap-tan-doh). [Latin] Hist. In endeavoring to gain an advantage.

in majorem cautelam (in mə-jor-əm kaw-tee-ləm), adv. [Latin] Hist. For a greater security.

in majorem evidentiā (in mə-jor-əm ev-ə-den-shee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. For more certain proof; for more sure evidence.

in mala fide (in mal-ə fi-dee). [Latin] Hist. In bad faith.

"A possessor in mala fide is one who holds possession of a subject, in the knowledge that it is not his own, on a title which he knows, or has reasonable ground for believing to be a bad one." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 266 (4th ed. 1894).

in mancipio (in man-sip-ee-oh), adj. [Latin] Roman law. In a state of civil bondage. • This status applied to a son whose father was sued in a noxal action and settled the claim by handing over his son. See NOXAL ACTION (1).

in manu mortua. See IN MORTUA MANU.

in-marriage. See MARRIAGE (1).

inmate. (16c) 1. A person confined in a prison, hospital, or similar institution. [Cases: Prisons ⇨ 110.] 2. Archaic. A person living inside a place; one who lives with others in a dwelling.

in medias res (in mee-dee-əs reez or in me-dee-ahs rays), adv. [Latin] Into the middle of things; without preface or introduction.

in medio (in mee-dee-oh). [Law Latin] Scots law. In the middle; intermediate. • The phrase appeared in reference to a fund in controversy.

in meditatione fugae (in med-i-tay-shee-oh-nee f[y]oo-jee). [Law Latin] Scots law. Meditating flight; contemplating leaving the country. • Formerly, a debtor could be detained under a fugae warrant if the debtor had sufficient debt to warrant imprisonment, and if the debtor was attempting to leave the country. This type of warrant became obsolete when imprisonment for debt was abolished.

in mercy, adv. (17c) At a judge's discretion concerning punishment. • A judgment formerly noted (using the Law Latin phrase in misericordia) which litigant lost by stating that the unsuccessful party was in the court's mercy. A plaintiff held in mercy for a false claim, for example, was said to be in misericordia pro falso clamore suo.

in misericordia (in miz-ə-ri-kor-dee-ə). [Law Latin] See IN MERCY.

in mitiori sensu (in mish-ee-or-i sens-[y]oo), adv. [Law Latin] In a milder or more favorable sense. • This phrase appeared as part of the former rule applied in slander actions. A word capable of two meanings would be given the one more favorable to the defendant. Cf. INNOCENT-CONSTRUCTION RULE. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷19.]

"Within half a century of its first appearance, the action for words had become part of the everyday business of the common-law courts, in particular the King's Bench. In the early days there were often more slander cases in the rolls than assumpsit. . . . The judges apparently came to regret this aspect of their increased jurisdiction, especially since juries frequently awarded sums of money quite disproportionate to the harm and to the ability of the wrongdoer to pay. . . . [T]he principal effect of the judicial reaction was that a spirit of repression began to manifest itself. . . . The . . . most effective attack was launched in the 1570s, when the courts began the policy of construing ambiguous or doubtful words in the milder sense (in mitiori sensu) so that they would not be actionable." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 500-01 (3d ed. 1990).

in modum adminiculi (in moh-dəm ad-mi-nik-yə-lı). [Law Latin] Hist. As corroborating evidence.

in modum assisae (in moh-dəm ə-si-zee), adv. [Law Latin] In the manner or form of an assize. See ASSIZE.

in modum juratae (in moh-dəm juu-ray-tee), adv. [Law Latin] In the manner or form of a jury.

in modum poenae (in moh-dəm pee-nee). [Latin] Hist. By way of penalty. • The phrase appeared in reference to the basis for charging interest.

in modum probationis (in moh-dəm proh-bay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. In the form of proof. • The phrase appeared in reference to documents that a party provided to support a claim.

in modum simplicis querelae (in moh-dəm sim-plə-sis kwə-ree-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. By way of summary complaint.

in mora (in mor-ə), adv. & adj. [Latin] Roman law. In delay; in default. • This was said of a debtor who delayed performance or failed to perform.

in mortua manu (in mor-choo-ə man-yoo), adj. & adv. [Law Latin "in a dead hand"] Hist. (Of property) perpetually controlled according to a decedent's directions. • Land held by a religious society was described this way because the church could hold property perpetually without rendering feudal service. — Also termed in manu mortua. See DEADHAND CONTROL; MORTMAIN.

in mundo (in mən-doh or muun-doh). [Law Latin "in the world"] Hist. In a clean, fair copy.

"Papers written 'in mundo,' are what are usually termed extended, or clean copies." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 268 (4th ed. 1894).

innavigable (in-nav-i-gə-bəl), adj. 1. (Of a body of water) not capable of, or unsuitable for, navigation. [Cases: Navigable Waters ↷1.] 2. Marine insurance. (Of a vessel) unfit for service. — Also termed unnavigable.

inner bar. English law. The group of senior barristers, called the Queen's Counsel or King's Counsel, who are admitted to plead within the bar of the court. Cf. OUTER BAR.

inner barrister. See BARRISTER.

inner cabinet. See CABINET.

inner-city post-traumatic-stress defense. See URBAN-SURVIVAL SYNDROME.

Inner House. Scots law. The appellate jurisdiction of the Court of Session. See COURT OF SESSION (1).

inning. (pl.) Land reclaimed from the sea.

innkeeper. (15c) A person who, for compensation, keeps open a public house for the lodging and entertainment of travelers. • A keeper of a boarding house is usu. not considered an innkeeper. — Also termed hotelkeeper. [Cases: Innkeepers ↷3.]

"The innkeeper is the person who on his own account carries on the business of an inn. In other words, he is the proprietor of the establishment. The person actually employed as manager, though he has the whole direction of the enterprise, is not an innkeeper if he is acting on behalf of someone else. Thus the salaried manager of a hotel owned or operated by a corporation is not held responsible as an innkeeper; the corporation is the innkeeper." John H. Sherry, The Laws of Innkeepers § 2.6, at 15 (rev. ed. 1981).

innkeeper's lien. See hotelkeeper's lien under LIEN.

innocence, n. (14c) The absence of guilt; esp., freedom from guilt for a particular offense. Cf. GUILT.

actual innocence. (1839) Criminal law. The absence of facts that are prerequisites for the sentence given to a defendant. • In death-penalty cases, actual innocence is an exception to the cause-and-prejudice rule, and can result in a successful challenge to the death sentence on the basis of a defense that was not presented to the trial court. The prisoner must show by clear and convincing evidence that, but for constitutional error in the trial court, no reasonable judge or juror would find the defendant eligible for the death penalty. See Sawyer v. Whitley, 505 U.S. 333, 112 S.Ct. 2514 (1992). Cf. CAUSE-AND-PREJUDICE RULE. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↷401, 462.]

legal innocence. (1813) Criminal law. The absence of one or more procedural or legal bases to support the sentence given to a defendant. • In the context of a petition for writ of habeas corpus or other attack on the sentence, legal innocence is often contrasted with actual innocence. Actual innocence, which focuses on the facts underlying the sentence, can sometimes be used to obtain relief from the death penalty based on trial-court errors that were not objected to at trial, even if the petitioner cannot meet the elements of the cause-and-prejudice rule. But legal innocence, which focuses on the applicable law and procedure, is not as readily available. Inadvertence or a poor trial strategy resulting in the defendant's failure to assert an established legal principle will not ordinarily be sufficient to satisfy the cause-and-prejudice rule or to establish the right to an exception from that rule. See CAUSE-innocent, adj. (14c) Free from guilt; free from legal fault. See NOT GUILTY (2).

innocent agent. See AGENT (2).

innocent-construction rule. The doctrine that an allegedly libelous statement will be given an innocuous interpretation if the statement is either ambiguous or harmless. Cf. IN MITIORI SENSU. [Cases: Libel and Slander ↷ 19.] innocent conversion. See technical conversion under CONVERSION (2).

innocent converter. See CONVERTER.

innocent conveyance. See CONVEYANCE.

innocent homicide. See HOMICIDE.

innocent infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

innocent junior user. See JUNIOR USER.

innocent misrepresentation. See MISREPRESENTATION.

innocent passage. Int'l law. The right of a foreign ship to pass through a country's territorial waters; the right of a foreign vessel to travel through a country's maritime belt without paying a toll. • The right of innocent passage is guaranteed in Article 17 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. Passage is considered innocent as long as it is not prejudicial to the peace, good order, and security of the coastal country. — Also termed right of innocent passage. Cf. TRANSIT PASSAGE. [Cases: International Law ↷ 5.]

"The term 'innocent passage' accurately denotes the nature of the right as well as its limitations. In the first place it is a right of 'passage,' that is to say, a right to use the waters as a thoroughfare between two points outside them; a ship proceeding through the maritime belt to a port of the coastal state would not be exercising a right of passage. In the second place the passage must be 'innocent'; a ship exercising the right must respect the local regulations as to navigation, pilotage, and the like, and, of course, it must not do any act which might disturb the tranquillity of the coastal state." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 188-89 (5th ed. 1955).

innocent purchaser. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER (1).

innocent purchaser for value. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER (1).

innocent spouse. See SPOUSE.

innocent trespass. See TRESPASS.

innocent trespasser. See TRESPASSER.

innocuae utilitatis (i-nok-yoo-[w]ee yoo-til-ə-tay-tis). [Latin "useful without harming"] Hist. An act that is beneficial to one person and harmful to no one.

Inn of Chancery. Hist. Any of nine collegiate houses where students studied either to gain entry into an Inn of Court or to learn how to frame writs in order to serve in the chancery courts. • Over time, the Inns — Clement's, Clifford's, Lyon's, Furnival's, Thavies', Symond's, Barnard's, Staples', and the New Inn — became little more than dining clubs, and never exercised control over their members as the Inns of Court did. The Inns of Chancery were all dissolved in the 19th century. Cf. INN OF COURT.

Inn of Court. 1. Any of four autonomous institutions, one or more of which English barristers must join to receive their training and of which they remain members for life: The Honourable Societies of Lincoln's Inn, the Middle Temple, the Inner Temple, and Gray's Inn. • These powerful bodies examine candidates for the Bar, "call" them to the Bar, and award the degree of barrister.

"It is impossible to fix with certainty the period when the professors and students of the common law first began to associate themselves together as a society, and form themselves into collegiate order; or to assign an exact date to the foundation of the Inns of Court, the original institution of which nowhere precisely appears. . . . After the fixing of the Court of Common Pleas by Magna Charta, the practitioners of the municipal law took up their residence in houses between the king's courts at Westminster and the city of London — forming then one community; and before the end of the reign of Edward II, they appear to have divided themselves into separate inns or colleges, at Temple Bar, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn." Robert H. Pearce, A Guide to the Inns of Court and Chancery 1-2 (1855).

2. (pl.) In the United States, an organization (formally named the American Inns of Court Foundation) with more than 100 local chapters, whose members include judges, practicing attorneys, law professors, and law students. • Through monthly meetings, the chapters emphasize practice skills, professionalism, and ethics, and provide mentors to train students and young lawyers in the finer points of good legal practice.

innominate (i-nom-ə-nət), adj. (17c) Civil law. Unclassified; having no special name or designation. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.

innominate action. See ACTION (4).

innominate contract. See CONTRACT.

innominate obligations. (1949) Obligations having no specific classification or name because they are not strictly contractual, delictual, or quasi-contractual. • An example is the obligation of a trustee to a beneficiary. — Also termed obligationes innominati.

innominate real contract. See innominate contract under CONTRACT.

in nomine Dei, Amen (in nahm-ə-nee dee-ī, ay-men). [Latin] Hist. In the name of God, Amen. • This phrase formerly appeared at the beginning of a will or other instrument.

innotescimus (in-oh-tes-ə-məs). [Law Latin "we make known"] Hist. A certification, in the form of letters patent, of a charter of feoffment or other instrument not filed of record. • This term derives from the word of emphasis appearing at the end of the document. Cf. EXEMPLIFICATION.

innovata lite dependente (in-oh-vay-tə li-tee dee-pen-den-tee). [Law Latin] Hist. Innovations during the pendency of a suit. • The phrase appeared in reference to the interference with something that is the subject of a lawsuit. See PENDENTE LITE.

innovation. Scots law. See NOVATION.

innoxiare (i-nok-shee-air-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To purge (a person) of fault.

in nubibus (in n[y]oo-bi-bās), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In the clouds. • An expression for something that is under the protection of the law.

in nudis finibus contractus (in n[y]oo-dis fin-ə-bās kan-trak-tās). [Law Latin] Hist. In the bare terms of a contract.

in nudis terminis (in n[y]oo-dis tər-mə-nis). [Law Latin] “with bare limits” Hist. In its bare terms. • The phrase appeared in reference to the simple terms of an instrument. See NUDUM PACTUM.

innuendo (in-yoo-en-doh). [Latin “by hinting”] (17c)

“It is not a true innuendo to repeat the obvious meaning of defamatory words in other language, or in an embroidered or exaggerated way. Otherwise an ingenious pleader could perplex the judge and jury and harry the defendant by ringing the changes on the same words, creating numerous different causes of action, each requiring a separate verdict. A true innuendo relies on a conjunction of the words used and some extrinsic fact. Thus it is defamatory in itself to say that a man’s affairs are being investigated by the Fraud Squad; but the statement does not support the innuendo that those affairs are being carried on fraudulently. Conversely, the statement ‘X is a good advertiser’ is innocent in itself, but carries a libellous innuendo if published to persons who know the extrinsic fact that X is an eminent member of the Bar.” R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 149 (17th ed. 1977). [The example about lawyers’ advertising no longer has relevance to American law. — Eds.]

in nullius bonis (in nə-lī-əs boh-nis). See NULLIUS IN BONIS.

in nullo est erratum (in nə-lō est i-ray-təm), adj. [Law Latin “in nothing is there error”] Hist. Of or relating to a demurrer that denies any error and at once refers a question of law to the court.

in obligatione (in ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Hist. Under an obligation.

in odium (in oh-dee-əm). [Latin] Hist. In detestation.

• For example, a gift made to a woman who was later divorced for committing adultery was revoked in odium of her guilt.

in odium corruptentis (in oh-dee-əm kor-əm-pen-tis). [Latin] Hist. In detestation of the person corrupting.

inofficiosus (in-ə-fish-ee-oh-səs), adj. [Latin “inofficialous”] Roman law. Contrary to a natural duty of affection, used esp. of a will that unjustly disinherits a child or close relative. See QUERELA INOFFICIOSI TESTAMENTI.

inofficious testament. See TESTAMENT.

inofficious will. See inofficious testament under TESTAMENT.

in omnibus (in ahm-ni-bās). [Latin] In all things; on all points .

inoperable mode. Patents. In a patent application, a disclosed way of working an invention that is not the best mode. • The term usu. designates a mode that is intended to misrepresent or deliberately conceal the best mode. That misrepresentation or concealment is inequitable conduct that will bar patentability or render an issued patent unenforceable. [Cases: Patents ↷98.]

inoperative, adj. (17c) 1. Having no force or effect; not operative <an inoperative statute>. 2. Patents. (Of an invention), the condition of not being capable of functioning as described in the patent application.

“An invention is inoperative if an exemplification, built exactly as described in the patent, won’t operate, or if further experiment and invention are required to make it operate.” Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 37 (3d ed. 1950).

inops consilii (in-ahps kən-sil-ee-ī), adj. [Latin] Destitute of counsel; without legal counsel. • This term described actions taken without benefit of legal advice, as when a testator drafts a will without the help of an attorney.

“[T]hat in devises by last will and testament, (which, being often drawn up when the party is inops consilii, and are always more favoured in construction than formal deeds, which are presumed to be made with great caution, forethought, and advice) in these devises, I say, remainders may be created in some measure contrary to the rules before laid down . . .” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 172 (1766).

in order. 1. Ready for business <the meeting is in order>. 2. Available and appropriate for consideration under the applicable rules <the motion is in order>. Cf. OUT OF ORDER (1).

inordinatus (in-or-də-nay-təs), n. [Latin “disorderly; unordained”] Hist. See INTTESTATE.

in pacato solo (in pə-kay-toh soh-loh), adv. [Latin] In a country that is at peace.

in pace Dei et regis (in pay-see dee-i et ree-jis), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. In the peace of God and the king. • This phrase was used in an appeal from a murder conviction.

in pais (in pay or pays). [Law French “in the country”] Outside court or legal proceedings. See equitable estoppel (1) under ESTOPPEL.

in paper. Hist. Of a proceeding that is within the jurisdiction of the trial court; that is, before the record is prepared for an appeal.

in pari causa (in par-i kaw-zə), adv. [Latin “in an equal case”] In a case affecting two parties equally or in which they have equal rights <in pari causa, the possessor ordinarily defeats the nonpossessory claimant>.

in pari delicto (in par-i də-lik-toh), adv. [Latin “in equal fault”] Equally at fault <the court denied relief because both parties stood in pari delicto>. [Cases: Action ⇨ 4; Equity ⇨ 65.]

in pari delicto doctrine, n. [Latin] (1917) The principle that a plaintiff who has participated in wrongdoing may not recover damages resulting from the wrongdoing. [Cases: Action ⇨ 4; Contracts ⇨ 139; Equity ⇨ 65.]

in pari materia (in par-i mə-teer-ee-ə). [Latin “in the same matter”] 1. adj. On the same subject; relating to the same matter. • It is a canon of construction that statutes that are in pari materia may be construed together, so that inconsistencies in one statute may be resolved by looking at another statute on the same subject. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 223.2(1)–223.2(35).]

“[I]t seems that the present position is that, when an earlier statute is in pari materia with a later one, it is simply part of its context to be considered by the judge in deciding whether the meaning of a provision in the later statute is plain.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 128 (1976).

2. adv. Loosely, in conjunction with <the Maryland constitutional provision is construed in pari materia with the Fourth Amendment>.

in patiendo (in pash-ee-en-doh), adv. & adj. [fr. Latin patior “suffer”] In suffering or permitting.

in patria potestate (in pay-tree-ə [or pə-tree-ə] poh-tes-tay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person) in the power of the father or a senior male ascendant; subject to patria potestas. • Uncles and brothers never had power over nephews or younger brothers. See patria potestas under POTESTAS; SUB POTESTATE. Cf. SUI JURIS.

in patrimonio principis (in pə-trə-moh-nee-oh prin-sipis). [Latin] See INTER REGALIA.

in pectore judicis (in pek-tə-ree joo-di-sis), adv. & adj. [Latin] In the breast of the court. See BREST OF THE COURT.

in peiorem partem (in pə-jor-əm pahr-təm), adv. [Law Latin] In the worst part; on the worst side.

in pendente (in pen-den-tee). [Latin] Hist. In suspension; in abeyance.

inpenny and outpenny. Hist. A customary payment of a penny on entering into and going out of a tenancy.

in periculo constitutus (in pə-rik-yə-loh kon-sti-t[y]oo-təs). [Latin] Hist. Standing in danger.

in perpetuam commendam (in pər-pech-oo-əm kə-men-dəm). [Law Latin] Hist. In perpetual trust. • Something given in perpetuam commendam was equivalent to a gift.

in perpetuam rei memoriam (in pər-pech-oo-əm [or pər-pe-tyoo-əm] ree-i mə-mor-ee-əm), adv. [Latin] In perpetual memory of a matter. • This phrase refers to a deposition taken to preserve the deponent’s testimony. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 1291; Pretrial Procedure ⇨ 61.]

in perpetuity (in pər-pə-t[y]oo-ə-tee). (14c) Forever. See PERPETUITY.

in perpetuum (in pər-pech-oo-əm or pər-pe-tyoo-əm), adv. [Latin] Forever; perpetually. — Sometimes spelled imperpetuum.

in perpetuum rei testimonium (in pər-pech-oo-əm [or pər-pe-tyoo-əm] ree-i tes-ti-moh-nee-əm), adv. [Law Latin] In perpetual testimony of a matter. • This phrase refers to a statute that confirms existing common law.

“Statutes also are either declaratory of the common law, or remedial of some defects therein. Declaratory, where the old custom of the kingdom is almost fallen into disuse, or become disputable; in which case the parliament has thought proper, in perpetuum rei testimonium, and for avoiding all doubts and difficulties, to declare what the common law is and ever hath been.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 86 (1765).

in personam (in pər-soh-nəm), adj. [Latin “against a person”] (18c) 1. Involving or determining the personal rights and obligations of the parties. 2. (Of a legal action) brought against a person rather than property. — Also termed personal. See action in personam under ACTION (4). Cf. IN REM. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 10.] — in personam, adv.

in personam judgment. See personal judgment under JUDGMENT.

in personam jurisdiction. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

in pessima fide (in pes-ə-mə fi-dee). [Latin] Hist. In the worst faith; dishonestly.

in petitorio (in pet-ə-tor-ee-oh). [Latin] Hist. In a petitory action.

in pios usus (in pi-əs yoo-səs), adv. [Law Latin] Hist. For pious uses; for religious purposes. • This phrase referred to property used by, or claimed by, the church, such as the property of an intestate who had no known heirs.

in placito (in plas-ə-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. In a suit.

in plena vita (in plee-nə vi-tə), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In full life.

in pleno comitatu (in plee-noh kahm-i-tay-t[y]oo), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In full county court.

in pleno lumine (in plee-noh loo-mə-nee), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In the light of day; in common knowledge; in public.

in poenam (in pee-nəm). [Latin] Hist. As a penalty; as a punishment.

in point. See ON POINT.

in posse (in pos-ee). [Latin] Not currently existing, but ready to come into existence under certain conditions in the future; potential <the will contemplated both living children and children in posse>. Cf. IN ESSE.

in possessorio (in pah-ses-sor-ee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. In a possessory suit.

in potestate parentis (in poh-tes-tay-tee pə-ren-tis), adv. & adj. [Latin] Hist. In the power of a parent. See PATRIA POTESTAS.

in potestate patris (in poh-tes-tay-tee pay-tris or pa-tris). [Latin] Roman law. Under the power of the father. • The phrase appeared in reference to the position of a child in power. See patria potestas under POTESTAS; SUB POTESTATE. Cf. SUI JURIS.

in potestate viri (in poh-tes-tay-tee veer-i). [Latin] Hist. Under the power of the husband. • Formerly, this phrase appeared in reference to the position of a wife in legal matters because the husband was the guardian of the wife.

in praemissorum fidem (in pree-mə-sor-əm [or prem-ə-fi-dəm]), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Hist. In confirmation or attestation of the premises. • This phrase commonly appeared in notarized documents.

in praesenti (in pri-zen-ti or pree-). [Latin] At present; right now. Cf. IN FUTURO.

in praesentia dominorum (in pri-zen-shee-ə dom-ə-nor-əm). [Latin] Hist. In presence of the lords. • The phrase was added to the presiding judge's signature to indicate that the remaining judges did not have to sign the document because the presiding judge had signed the writing in their presence. — Abbr. IPD.

in prender (in pre-n-dər), adj. [Law French "in taking"] Hist. (Of a right) consisting in property taken to fulfill a claim to it, such as an incorporeal hereditament (as a heriot custom) that a lord had to seize in order to exercise the right to it. Cf. IN RENDER.

in-presence rule. The principle that a police officer may make a warrantless arrest of a person who commits a misdemeanor offense not only in the officer's actual presence but also within the officer's immediate vicinity.

"The common law rule with respect to misdemeanors was quite different; a warrant was required except when a breach of the peace occurred in the presence of the arresting officer. . . . Though the 'in presence' rule might be construed as requiring that the misdemeanor in fact have occurred in the officer's presence, the modern view is that the officer may arrest if he has probable cause to believe the offense is being committed in his presence." Wayne R. LaFare & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.5, at 169-70 (2d ed. 1992).

in primis (in pri-mis). See IMPRIMIS.

in principio (in prin-sip-ee-oh), adv. [Latin] At the beginning.

in privato patrimonio (in pri-vay-toh pa-trə-moh-nee-oh). [Latin] Hist. Among private property.

in promptu (in promp-t[y]oo), adv. & adj. [Latin "at hand"] Archaic. Impromptu.

in propria persona (in proh-pree-ə pər-soh-nə). [Latin "in one's own person"] See PRO SE.

in proximo gradu (in prok-sə-moh gray-d[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. In the nearest degree. • The phrase appeared in reference to a child's relationship to the father or to a grandchild's relation to a grandfather if the grandchild represented his or her deceased father. See PER STIRPES.

in publica custodia (in pəb-li-kə kəs-toh-dee-ə). [Latin] Hist. In the public custody. • The phrase appeared in reference to public records.

in publicam vindictam (in pəb-li-kəm vin-dik-təm). [Latin] Hist. For vindicating public right.

in puram eleemosynam (in pyoor-əm el-ə-mos-ə-nəm). [Law Latin] Hist. In pure charity. • Gifts were sometimes made to churches in puram eleemosynam, requiring nothing but prayers for the grantor in return.

in quantum locupletiores facti sumus ex damno alterius (in kwon-təm lok-yoo-plee-shee-or-eez fak-ti s[y]oo-məs eks dam-noh al-teer-ee-əs). [Latin] Roman law. Insofar as we have been enriched to the loss or by the damage of another. • The phrase appeared in reference to the rule by which certain persons were bound in restitution to the extent of their enrichment. See NEGOTIORUM GESTIO.

in quantum lucratus est (in kwon-təm loo-kray-təs est). [Latin] Hist. Insofar as he has gained or profited.

in quantum valeat (in kwon-təm vay-lee-at or -ət). [Latin] Hist. For what it is worth.

inquest. (13c) I. An inquiry by a coroner or medical examiner, sometimes with the aid of a jury, into the manner of death of a person who has died under suspicious circumstances, or who has died in prison. — Also termed coroner's inquest; inquisition after death. [Cases: Coroners ↷9; Homicide ↷1110.] 2. An inquiry into a certain matter by a jury empaneled for that purpose. 3. The finding of such a specially empaneled jury. 4. A proceeding, usu. ex parte, to determine, after the defendant has defaulted, the amount of the plaintiff's damages. Cf. INQUISITION.

grand inquest. 1. An impeachment proceeding. 2. Hist. (cap.) The survey of the lands of England in 1085–1086, by order of William the Conqueror, and resulting in the Domesday Book — Also termed Great Inquest; Grand Survey; Great Survey. See DOMESDAY BOOK. 3. Hist. Grand jury.

inquest of office. Hist. An inquest conducted by a coroner, sheriff, or other royal officer into the Crown's right to property by reason of escheat, treason, or other ground of forfeiture.

5. WARDMOTE.

inquest jury. See JURY.

in quibus infitiando lis crescit (in kwib-əs in-fish-ee-an-doh lis kres-it). [Latin] Roman law. In which the suit increases by denial. • The phrase appeared in reference to the measure of damages in a legal action when, if the defendant wrongfully denied a claim for damages, the defendant could be penalized by a multiple of the original claimed amount, usu. double, triple, or quadruple. — Also spelled inficiando.

inquilinus (in-kwə-lī-nəs), n. [Latin] Roman law. A person who leases or lives in another's house or apartment; esp., an urban tenant.

inquirendo (in-kwə-ren-doh). [Latin] Hist. An inquiry or investigation; esp., an inquiry into a matter concerning the Crown's interests, such as lands that are forfeited to the Crown.

inquiry. (15c) 1. Int'l law. FACT-FINDING (2). 2. Parliamentary law. A request for information, either procedural or substantive. See REQUEST; POINT (2).

parliamentary inquiry. An inquiry that asks a question about procedure.

3. Hist. A writ to assess damages by the sheriff or sheriff's deputies.

inquiry notice. See NOTICE.

inquisitio (in-kwə-zish-ee-oh). [Latin] Inquisition or inquest. See INQUISITION (1).

inquisitio post mortem (in-kwə-zish-ee-oh pohst mor-təm). [Latin] See inquest of office under INQUEST.

inquisition. (14c) 1. The record of the finding of the jury sworn by the coroner to inquire into a person's death. [Cases: Coroners ↷18.] 2. A judicial inquiry, esp. in a derogatory sense. 3. A persistent, grueling examination conducted without regard for the examinee's dignity or civil rights. Cf. INQUEST.

inquisition after death. See INQUEST (1).

inquisitor. (16c) 1. An officer who examines and inquires, such as a coroner or sheriff. 2. A person who inquires; esp., one who examines another in a harsh or hostile manner. 3. Hist. Eccles. law. An officer authorized to inquire into heresies; esp., an officer of the Spanish Inquisition.

inquisitorial court. See COURT.

inquisitorial system. (1846) A system of proof-taking used in civil law, whereby the judge conducts the trial, determines what questions to ask, and defines the scope and the extent of the inquiry. • This system prevails in most of continental Europe, in Japan, and in Central and South America. Cf. ADVERSARY SYSTEM.

INR. abbr. BUREAU OF INTELLIGENCE AND RESEARCH.

in re (in ree or ray). [Latin "in the matter of"] (1877) (Of a judicial proceeding) not formally including adverse parties, but rather involving something (such as an estate). • The term is often used in case citations, esp. in uncontested proceedings <In re Butler's Estate>. — Also termed matter of <Matter of Butler's Estate>.

in rebus (in ree-bəs), adv. [Latin] In things, cases, or matters.

in rebus litigiosis (in ree-bəs li-tij-ee-oh-sis). [Latin] Hist. In things subject to litigation.

in rem (in rem), adj. [Latin "against a thing"] (18c) Involving or determining the status of a thing, and therefore the rights of persons generally with respect to that thing. — Also termed (archaically) impersonal. See action in rem under ACTION (4). Cf. IN PERSONAM. [Cases: Admiralty ↷48; Courts ↷16.] — in rem, adv.

"An action in rem is one in which the judgment of the court determines the title to property and the rights of the parties, not merely as between themselves, but also as against all persons at any time dealing with them or with the property upon which the court had adjudicated." R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 98 (7th ed. 1974).

quasi in rem (kway-sī in rem or kway-zī). [Latin "as if against a thing"] (1804) Involving or determining the rights of a person having an interest in property located within the court's jurisdiction. See action quasi in rem under ACTION (4). [Cases: Courts ↷16.]

in re mercatoria (in ree mər-kə-tor-ee-ə). [Latin] Scots law. In a mercantile transaction. • Documents made in or connected with a mercantile transaction did not require the typical formalities in order to be binding.

"All writings in re mercatoria are privileged, and are held valid and binding, although wanting the solemnities common and necessary to ordinary deeds . . . This privilege has been given to these documents, because of the rapidity with which, in most cases, they have to be prepared, and the immediate use to which they have to be put, and also because, from the necessity of the case, they are generally prepared by those who are not supposed to be acquainted with the formalities and solemnities of deeds." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 273 (4th ed. 1894).

in rem judgment. See judgment in rem under JUDGMENT.

in rem jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

in rem suam (in rem s[ly]oo-əm). [Latin] Hist. Regarding one's own property; for one's own advantage.

in rem versum (in rem vər-səm). [Latin] Roman law. Employed in one's own matter; used to one's own advantage. See ACTION DE IN REM VERSO.

in render (in ren-dər), adj. [Law French "in yielding or paying"] Hist. (Of property) required to be given or rendered. Cf. IN PRENDER.

in re propria (in ree proh-pree-ə). [Latin] Hist. In one's own affairs.

in rerum natura (in reer-əm nə-tyuur-ə), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Hist. In the nature of things; in existence.
 • This phrase was used in a dilatory plea alleging that the plaintiff was a fictitious person, and therefore not capable of bringing the action.

in retentis (in ri-ten-tis). [Law Latin "among things withheld"] Scots law. Subject to reservation. • Evidence might be taken in retentis if, for example, the witness were mortally ill, and then be set aside until the proper time to produce it.

in rigore juris (in rig-ər-ee joor-is). [Latin] Hist. According to strict law.

in rixa (in rik-sə). [Latin] Scots law. In an altercation or brawl. • Words spoken in rixa were usu. not actionable as defamation.

in rixa per plures commissa (in rik-sə pər pluur-eez [or ploo-reez] kə-mis-ə). [Latin] Scots law. An offense committed in the course of a quarrel involving several persons.

inroll, vb. See ENROLL (1).

inrollment. See ENROLLMENT.

INS. abbr. IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE.

in sacris (in say-kris). [Latin] Scots law. In sacred matters.
 • The phrase appeared in reference to the supremacy of ecclesiastical-court jurisdiction in certain matters, esp. those involving church doctrine and discipline.

insane, adj. (16c) Mentally deranged; suffering from one or more delusions or false beliefs that (1) have no foundation in reason or reality, (2) are not credible to any reasonable person of sound mind, and (3) cannot be overcome in a sufferer's mind by any amount of evidence or argument. See INSANITY. [Cases: Mental Health ↷3.]

insane delusion. (1838) An irrational, persistent belief in an imaginary state of facts resulting in a lack of capacity to undertake acts of legal consequence, such as making a will. See CAPACITY (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷49.]

insanity, n. (16c) Any mental disorder severe enough that it prevents a person from having legal capacity and excuses the person from criminal or civil responsibility. • Insanity is a legal, not a medical, standard. — Also termed legal insanity; lunacy. Cf. SANITY. [Cases:

Criminal Law ↷47; Homicide ↷817; Mental Health ↷3.]

"The lawyers refer to 'insanity.' This is a legal term only, and one that is not used by the psychiatrist; the latter prefers to speak of mental disorder, mental illness, or of psychosis or neurosis." Winfred Overholser, Psychiatry and the Law, 38 Mental Hygiene 243, 244 (1954).

"The word 'insanity' is commonly used in discussions of this problem although some other term would seem to be preferable such as 'mental disease or defect,' — which may be shortened to 'mental disorder' in general discussions if this is clearly understood to include disease of the mind, congenital lack, and damage resulting from traumatic injury, but to exclude excitement or stupefaction resulting from liquor or drugs. Apart from its uses in the law 'insanity' is usually employed to indicate mental disorder resulting from deterioration or damage as distinguished from congenital deficiency. Criminal incapacity may result as readily from one as from the other, but while the earlier authorities spoke of the 'idiot' and the 'madman,' . . . the more recent tendency in the law has been to include both under the 'insanity' label." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 952 (3d ed. 1982).

"Another objection to the word 'insanity' is the unwarranted assumption that it refers to a very definite mental condition, seldom put into words but apparent in many discussions of the problem." Id.

emotional insanity. (1872) Insanity produced by a violent excitement of the emotions or passions, although reasoning faculties may remain unimpaired; a passion that for a period creates complete derangement of intellect. • Emotional insanity is sometimes described as an irresistible impulse to do an act. See IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷51; Homicide ↷818.]

temporary insanity. (18c) Insanity that exists only at the time of a criminal act.

insanity defense. Criminal law. (1912) An affirmative defense alleging that a mental disorder caused the accused to commit the crime. See 18 USCA § 17; Fed. R. Crim. P. 12.2. • Unlike other defenses, a successful insanity defense may not result in an acquittal but instead in a special verdict ("not guilty by reason of insanity") that usu. leads to the defendant's commitment to a mental institution. — Also termed insanity plea. See MCNAGHTEN RULES; SUBSTANTIAL-CAPACITY TEST; IRRESISTIBLE-IMPULSE TEST; DURHAM RULE; APPRECIATION TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷47; Homicide ↷817.] black-rage insanity defense. An insanity defense based on an African-American's violent eruption of anger induced at least partly by racial tensions. • This defense was first used in the mid-1990s.

Insanity Defense Reform Act of 1984 test. See APPRECIATION TEST.

insanity plea. See INSANITY DEFENSE.

inscriptio (in-skrip-shee-oh), n. [Latin] In later Roman law, a written accusation detailed in an official register.
 • The accuser was liable to punishment if the accused was acquitted. See INSCRIPTION (3). Pl. inscriptiones (in-skrip-shee-oh-nee-z). — inscribere, vb.

inscription, n. (14c) 1. The act of entering a fact or name on a list, register, or other record. 2. An entry so recorded. 3. Civil law. An agreement whereby an accuser must, if the accusation is false, receive the same punishment that the accused would have been given if found guilty. — inscribe, vb. — inscriptive, adj.

inscriptiones (in-skrip-shee-oh-nee-z). [Latin] Hist. Title deeds; written instruments by which rights or interests are granted.

inscrutable fault. See FAULT.

insecure, adj. (17c) Having a good-faith belief that the possibility of receiving payment or performance from another party to a contract is unlikely.

insecurity clause. (1872) A loan-agreement provision that allows the creditor to demand immediate and full payment of the loan balance if the creditor has reason to believe that the debtor is about to default, as when the debtor suddenly loses a significant source of income. Cf. ACCELERATION CLAUSE. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 129(1); Secured Transactions ⇨ 221.]

in separali (in sep-ə-ray-lī), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] In several; in severalty.

insert, vb. Parliamentary law. To amend (a motion) by placing new wording within or around the current wording. • Some authorities distinguish amendment by adding, which places new wording after the current wording, from amendment by inserting. See ADD; AMENDMENT (3).

inside director. See DIRECTOR.

inside information. Information about a company's financial or market situation obtained not from public disclosure, but from a source within the company or a source that owes the company a duty to keep the information confidential. — Also termed insider information. See INSIDER TRADING. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.28.]

insider. (1848) 1. Securities. A person who has knowledge of facts not available to the general public. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.28.]

temporary insider. A person or firm that receives inside information in the course of performing professional duties for a client. • Generally, that person or firm is subject to the same proscriptions as an insider.

2. One who takes part in the control of a corporation, such as an officer or director, or one who owns 10% or more of the corporation's stock. 3. Bankruptcy. An entity or person who is so closely related to a debtor that any deal between them will not be considered an arm's-length transaction and will be subject to close scrutiny. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2827.]

insider dealing. See INSIDER TRADING.

insider information. See INSIDE INFORMATION.

insider preference. See PREFERENCE.

insider report. See REPORT (1).

insider trading. The use of material, nonpublic information in trading the shares of a company by a corporate insider or other person who owes a fiduciary duty to the company. • This is the classic definition. The Supreme Court has also approved a broader definition, known as the "misappropriation theory": the deceitful acquisition and misuse of information that properly belongs to persons to whom one owes a duty. Thus, under the misappropriation theory, it is insider trading for a lawyer to trade in the stock of XYZ Corp. after learning that a client of the lawyer's firm is planning a takeover of XYZ. But under the classic definition, that is not insider trading because the lawyer owed no duty to XYZ itself. — Also termed insider dealing. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.28.]

"What is insider trading? The term is probably best defined, to the extent any definition is adequate, as 'the purchase or sale of securities on the basis of material, non-public information.' What counts as 'non-public information'? What non-public information can be deemed 'material'? When is a trader who is in possession of material, non-public information trading 'on the basis of' that information? Must the information be about the company whose securities are being purchased or sold? What characteristics establish 'insider' status sufficient to warrant legal proscriptions of trading? These are all questions that are derived from the definition of insider trading just offered . . ." C. Edward Fletcher, Materials on the Law of Insider Trading 3 (1991).

insidiatio viarum (in-sid-ee-ay-shee-oh vi-air-əm). [Latin "ambush on the highway"] Hist. The crime of waylaying someone along the roadway. See LATROCINATION; HIGHWAYMAN.

insilium (in-sil-ee-əm). [Law Latin] Hist. Pernicious advice or counsel.

in simili materia (in sim-ə-lī mə-teer-ee-ə), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Of the same or a similar subject matter.

insimul (in-sim-əl or in-si-məl), adv. [Latin] Together, jointly.

insimul computassent (in-sim-əl or in-si-məl kahm-pyoo-tas-ənt). [Law Latin "they accounted together"] Hist. A count in an assumpsit action asserting that the parties had reviewed their accounts and that the defendant voluntarily agreed to pay the amount sought by the plaintiff. • This term derives from the initial words of the count.

insimul tenuit (in-sim-əl or in-si-məl ten-yoo-it). [Law Latin “he held together”] Hist. A writ brought by a coparcener to recover a fee tail alienated by an earlier tenant; a type of formedon in the descender. See formedon in the descender under FORMEDON.

insinuare (in-sin-yoo-air-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman & civil law. To register; to deposit (an instrument) with a public registry.

insinuatio (in-sin-yoo-ay-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. Information or suggestion. • This term sometimes appeared in the phrase ex insinuatione (“on the information”), which is the precursor to the modern on information and belief. See INFORMATION AND BELIEF.

insinuation (in-sin-yoo-ay-shən). Civil law. 1. The act of depositing (an instrument) with a public registry for recording. 2. A document that evidences a donation of property.

insinuation of a will. Civil law. The first production of a will for probate.

insist, vb. (Of a house in a bicameral legislature) to reaffirm (an amendment) that the other house has considered but in which it has not concurred, or to reaffirm nonconcurrence in an amendment from which the other house has not receded. • An insistence often results in a request for a conference. See CONCUR (4); CONFERENCE (2); RECEDE. — insistence, n.

in solido (in sol-ə-doh). [Latin “as a whole”] (Of an obligation) creating joint and several liability. • The term is used in most civil-law jurisdictions, but no longer in Louisiana. — Also termed in solidum. See SOLIDARY.

in solidum (in sol-ə-dəm). See IN SOLIDO.

in solo (in soh-loh), adv. & adj. [Latin] In the soil or ground.

in solo alieno (in soh-loh ay-lee-ee-noh or al-ee-), adv. & adj. [Latin] In another’s ground.

in solo proprio (in soh-loh proh-pree-oh), adv. & adj. [Latin] In one’s own ground.

in solutum (in sə-loo-təm). [Latin] Hist. In payment.

insolvency, n. (17c) 1. The condition of being unable to pay debts as they fall due or in the usual course of business. 2. The inability to pay debts as they mature. — Also termed failure to meet obligations; failing circumstances. See BANKRUPTCY (2). Cf. SOLVENCY.

balance-sheet insolvency. Insolvency created when the debtor’s liabilities exceed its assets. • Under some state laws, balance-sheet insolvency prevents a corporation from making a distribution to its shareholders. — Also termed balance-sheet test.

equity insolvency. Insolvency created when the debtor cannot meet its obligations as they fall due. • Under most state laws, equity insolvency prevents a corporation from making a distribution to its shareholders.

insolvency law. A statute that provides relief to a debtor who lacks the means to pay creditors. • The term is sometimes used interchangeably with bankruptcy law because legislative drafting may not produce a bright-line distinction. — Also termed insolvent law. Cf. BANKRUPTCY LAW (2).

insolvency proceeding. Archaic. A bankruptcy proceeding to liquidate or rehabilitate an estate. See BANKRUPTCY (1).

insolvent, adj. (16c) (Of a debtor) having liabilities that exceed the value of assets; having stopped paying debts in the ordinary course of business or being unable to pay them as they fall due. — insolvent, n.

insolvent law. See INSOLVENCY LAW.

in spe (in spee). [Latin] Hist. In hope.

in specie (in spee-shee-ee or spee-shee). [Latin “in kind”] In the same or like form; IN KIND <the partners were prepared to return the borrowed items in specie>.

inspector. Archaic. A prosecutor, adversary, or inspector.

inspectio corporis (in-spek-shee-oh kor-pər-is). [Latin] Hist. An inspection of the person. • An inspectio corporis was an actual physical examination, the performance of which was rarely allowed except in extreme cases, such as one involving the concealment of pregnancy.

inspection. (14c) A careful examination of something, such as goods (to determine their fitness for purchase) or items produced in response to a discovery request (to determine their relevance to a lawsuit). [Cases: Inspection ⇨ 1-7; Sales ⇨ 168.]

inspection right. (1898) The legal entitlement in certain circumstances to examine articles or documents, such as a consumer’s right to inspect goods before paying for them. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 168.]

inspection search. See administrative search under SEARCH.

inspector. (17c) 1. A person authorized to inspect something. 2. A police officer who ranks below a superintendent or deputy superintendent, and who is in charge of several precincts.

inspector general. (often cap.) 1. One of several federal officials charged with supervising a particular agency’s audits or investigations. 2. A governor-appointed state official who oversees internal review within executive agencies to ensure that there is no waste or abuse of resources.

inspeximus (in-spek-si-məs), vb. [Latin “we have inspected”] Hist. A charter in which the grantor confirms an earlier charter. • Inspeximus was the opening word of the charter. — Also termed vidimus.

install, vb. (16c) To induct (a person) into an office or a rank <the newly elected governor was soon installed in office>.

installment, n. (18c) A periodic partial payment of a debt.

(14c) 1. The commencement of something, such as a civil or criminal action. 2. An elementary rule, principle, or practice. 3. An established organization, esp. one of a public character, such as a facility for the treatment of mentally disabled persons. — Also termed public institution. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 31–37.] 4. Civil law. A testator's appointment of an heir; the designation of an institute. See INSTITUTE (5). 5. Eccles. law. The investiture of a cleric with a benefice, by which the cleric becomes responsible for the spiritual needs of the members of a parish. Cf. PRESENTATION (2); ADVOWSON.

institutional broker. See BROKER.

institutional gerrymandering. See GERRYMANDERING.

institutional investor. See INVESTOR.

institutionalize, vb. (1865) 1. To place (a person) in an institution. 2. To give (a rule or practice) official sanction.

institutional lender. A business, esp. a bank, that routinely makes loans to the general public.

"Our second observation relates to what has been called the 'institutional litigant.' There are organized groups, such as labour unions or trade associations, that have a continuing interest in the development of the common law. A group of this sort may take a case to litigation, not so much for the sake of a determination of the case itself, but for the purpose of bringing about a change in the law or of defending an existing rule against a change sought by some other group. When such groups are involved, the usual arguments against prospective changes in the law through judicial decisions lose much of their force. Indeed, when the litigants have this sort of long-term interest, a judicial proceeding may take on, with the assent of all involved, something of the nature of a legislative hearing." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 163 (1968).

institutional market. See MARKET.

institutiones (in-sti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-nee), n. [Latin] Roman law. Elementary works of law; institutes. See INSTITUTE.

instruct, vb. See JURY CHARGE (3).

instruct down. Missouri law. (Of a court) to give jurors an instruction on a lesser included offense. ● A court must instruct down only if the jury could find the defendant not guilty of the higher offense but guilty of the lesser one.

instructed delegate. See DELEGATE.

instructed verdict. See directed verdict under VERDICT.

instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

instructional text. Copyright. A literary, graphic, or pictorial work designed and prepared for use in ordinary teaching activities. See 17 USCA § 101.

instruction directive. A document that contains specific directions concerning the declarant's wishes for health-care decisions. Cf. ADVANCE DIRECTIVE; LIVING WILL; PROXY DIRECTIVE.

instrument. (15c) 1. A written legal document that defines rights, duties, entitlements, or liabilities, such as a contract, will, promissory note, or share certificate. — Also termed legal instrument.

"An 'instrument' seems to embrace contracts, deeds, statutes, wills, Orders in Council, orders, warrants, schemes, letters patent, rules, regulations, bye-laws, whether in writing or in print, or partly in both; in fact, any written or printed document that may have to be interpreted by the Courts." Edward Beal, Cardinal Rules of Legal Interpretation 55 (A.E. Randall ed., 3d ed. 1924).

statutory instrument. See STATUTORY INSTRUMENT.

testamentary instrument. See WILL.

2. Commercial law. An unconditional promise or order to pay a fixed amount of money, with or without interest or other fixed charges described in the promise or order. ● Under the UCC, a promise or order must meet several other specifically listed requirements to qualify as an instrument. UCC § 3-104(a). See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. 3. A means by which something is achieved, performed, or furthered <an instrument of social equality>.

inchoate instrument. (1834) An unrecorded instrument that must, by law, be recorded to serve as effective notice to third parties. ● Until the instrument is recorded, it is effective only between the parties to the instrument.

incomplete instrument. (1822) A paper that, although intended to be a negotiable instrument, lacks an essential element. ● An incomplete instrument may be enforced if it is subsequently completed. UCC § 3-115. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 144.]

indispensable instrument. The formal written evidence of an interest in intangibles, so necessary to represent the intangible that the enjoyment, transfer, or enforcement of the intangible depends on possession of the instrument.

perfect instrument. (18c) An instrument (such as a deed or mortgage) that is executed and filed with a public registry.

sealed instrument. At common law and under some statutes, an instrument to which the bound party has affixed a personal seal, usu. recognized as providing indisputable evidence of the validity of the underlying obligations. ● Many states have abolished the common-law distinction between sealed and unsealed instruments. The UCC provides that the laws applicable to sealed instruments do not apply to negotiable instruments or contracts for the sale of goods. UCC § 2-203. Cf. contract under seal under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 36; Seals ⇨ 1.]

"At common law, the seal served to render documents indisputable as to the terms of the underlying obligation, thereby dispensing with the necessity of witnesses; the sealed instrument was considered such reliable evidence that it actually became the contract itself — called a 'specialty' — the loss of which meant loss of all rights of the obligee against the obligor. The seal also had many other consequences at common law, some of which have been retained in jurisdictions which still recognize the seal . . . In states where the seal is still recognized, its primary legal significance is often the application of a longer statute of limitations to actions on sealed instruments." 69 Am. Jur. 2d Seals § 2, at 617-18 (1993).

instrumental crime. See CRIME.

instrumentality, n. 1. A thing used to achieve an end or purpose. 2. A means or agency through which a function of another entity is accomplished, such as a branch of a governing body.

instrumentality rule. The principle that a corporation is treated as a subsidiary if it is controlled to a great extent by another corporation. — Also termed instrumentality theory.

instrumenta noviter reperta (in-strə-men-tə nōh-və-tər ri-pər-tə). [Law Latin] Hist. Instruments newly discovered. See EX INSTRUMENTIS DE NOVO REPERTIS.

instrument of accession. Int'l law. A document formally acknowledging the issuing state's consent to an existing treaty, and exchanged with the treaty parties or deposited with a designated state or international organization. See ACCESSION (3).

instrument of appeal. Hist. English law. A document used to appeal a judgment of divorce rendered by a trial judge of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division to the full panel of the court. • The use of the instrument of appeal ended in 1881, when appeals were taken to the Court of Appeal rather than the full panel of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

instrument of crime. See CRIMINAL INSTRUMENT.

instrument of ratification. Int'l law. A document formally acknowledging the issuing state's confirmation and acceptance of a treaty, and exchanged by the treaty parties or deposited with a designated state or international organization. See RATIFICATION (4). [Cases: Treaties ⇨ 3.]

instrumentum (in-stroo-men-təm). [Latin] Hist. A document, deed, or instrument; esp., a document that is not under seal, such as a court roll.

insubordination. (18c) 1. A willful disregard of an employer's instructions, esp. behavior that gives the employer cause to terminate a worker's employment. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 766.] 2. An act of disobedience to proper authority; esp., a refusal to obey an order that a superior officer is authorized to give.

in subsidium (in səb-sid-ee-əm). [Latin] Hist. In aid of.

insufficient evidence. See EVIDENCE.

insufficient funds. See NOT SUFFICIENT FUNDS.

insula (in-s[y]ə-lə), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. An island. 2. A detached house or block of apartments leased to tenants.

insular, adj. (17c) 1. Of, relating to, from, or constituting an island <insular origin>. 2. Isolated from, uninterested in, or ignorant of things outside a limited scope <insular viewpoint>.

insular area. A territory or commonwealth. • This phrase is used by some writers to denote the genus of which the terms territory and commonwealth are species. See COMMONWEALTH (2); TERRITORY (1).

insular court. See COURT.

insular possession. See POSSESSION.

in suo (in s[y]oo-oh). [Latin] Hist. In reference to one's own affairs.

in suo genere (in s[y]oo-oh jen-ər-ee). [Latin] Hist. Of their own kind. • The phrase usu. referred to certain writings that were binding even though they lacked the formal requirements.

in suo ordine (in s[y]oo-oh ər-də-nee). [Latin] Hist. In his order.

"In suo ordine . . . A cautioner who is entitled to the benefit of discussion can only be called upon, for fulfilment of the obligation which he guaranteed, in his order — that is, after the principal creditor has been discussed. So, also, an heir can only be made liable for the moveable debts of his ancestor, after the executor who succeeded to the moveable estate has been discussed, and where the moveable estate has proved insufficient to meet those debts." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 277 (4th ed. 1894).

insurable, adj. Able to be insured <an insurable risk>. — insurability, n.

insurable value. The worth of the subject of an insurance contract, usu. expressed as a monetary amount. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2171.]

insurance. (17c) 1. A contract by which one party (the insurer) undertakes to indemnify another party (the insured) against risk of loss, damage, or liability arising from the occurrence of some specified contingency, and usu. to defend the insured or to pay for a defense regardless of whether the insured is ultimately found liable. • An insured party usu. pays a premium to the insurer in exchange for the insurer's assumption of the insured's risk. Although indemnification provisions are most common in insurance policies, parties to any type of contract may agree on indemnification arrangements. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1001.] 2. The amount for which someone or something is covered by such an agreement. — insure, vb.

"Insurance, or as it is sometimes called, assurance, is a contract by which one party, for a consideration, which is usually paid in money either in one sum or at different times during the continuance of the risk, promises to make a certain payment of money upon the destruction or injury of something in which the other party has an interest. In fire insurance and in marine insurance the thing insured is property; in life or accident insurance it is the life or health of the person." 1 George J. Couch, Couch on Insurance § 1.2, at 4-5 (2d ed. 1984).

accident and health insurance. See health insurance.

- accident insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against bodily injury caused by an accident. • Covered losses may include expenses, time, suffering, or death. Cf. casualty insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1012.]
- accounts-receivable insurance. 1. Insurance against losses resulting from the insured's inability to collect outstanding accounts receivable because of damage to or destruction of records. 2. See credit insurance.
- additional insurance. Insurance added to an existing policy.
- all-risk insurance. Insurance that covers every kind of insurable loss except what is specifically excluded.
- annuity insurance. An agreement to pay the insured (or annuitant) for a stated period or for life. [Cases: Annuities ⇨ 15.]
- assessable insurance. 1. Insurance in which the insured is liable for additional premiums if a loss is unusually large. 2. See assessable policy (1) under INSURANCE POLICY.
- assessment insurance. A type of mutual insurance in which the policyholders are assessed as losses are incurred; a policy in which payments to an insured are not unalterably fixed, but are dependent on the collection of assessments necessary to pay the amount insured.
- automobile insurance. An agreement to indemnify against one or more kinds of loss associated with the use of an automobile, including damage to a vehicle and liability for personal injury. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1015.]
- aviation insurance. Insurance that protects the insured against a loss connected with the use of an aircraft. • This type of insurance can be written to cover a variety of risks, including bodily injury, property damage, and hangarkeepers' liability. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2329.]
- broad-form insurance. (1959) Comprehensive insurance. • This type of insurance usu. takes the form of an endorsement to a liability or property policy, broadening the coverage that is typically available.
- bumbershoot insurance. 1. Marine insurance that provides broad coverage for ocean marine risks. 2. See umbrella insurance. • This term derives from the British slang term for umbrella. The term applies esp. to a policy insured through the London insurance market. See umbrella policy under INSURANCE POLICY.
- burial insurance. Insurance that pays for the holder's burial and funeral expenses.
- business-interruption insurance. An agreement to protect against one or more kinds of loss from the interruption of an ongoing business, such as a loss of profits while the business is shut down to repair fire damage. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2163, 2179.]
- business-partner insurance. See partnership insurance.
- captive insurance. 1. Insurance that provides coverage for the group or business that established it. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1192.] 2. Insurance that a subsidiary provides to its parent company, usu. so that the parent company can deduct the premiums set aside as loss reserves.
- cargo insurance. An agreement to pay for damage to freight damaged in transit. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2137(3), 2217.]
- casualty insurance. An agreement to indemnify against loss resulting from a broad group of causes such as legal liability, theft, accident, property damage, and workers' compensation. • The meaning of casualty insurance has become blurred because of the rapid increase in different types of insurance coverage. Cf. accident insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1008; Workers' Compensation ⇨ 1061.]
- coinsurance. (1889) 1. Insurance provided jointly by two or more insurers. 2. Insurance under which the insurer and insured jointly bear responsibility. • An example is commercial insurance under which only a portion of a property's value is covered, and the property owner assumes liability for any loss in excess of the policy limits. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2170.]
- collision insurance. (1921) Automobile insurance that covers damage to the insured's vehicle resulting from a rollover or collision with any object, but does not cover a personal injury or damage to other property. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2704.]
- commercial insurance. 1. An indemnity agreement in the form of a deed or bond to protect against a loss caused by a party's breach of contract. 2. A form of coverage that allows an insurer to adjust the premium rates at will, and doesn't require the insured to accept the premium or renew the coverage from period to period.
- "Commercial insurance is a popular and very elastic term, having reference to indemnity agreements issued in the form of an insurance bond or policy, whereby parties to commercial contracts are, to a designated extent, guaranteed against loss by reason of a breach of contractual obligations on the part of the other contracting party. To this class belong policies of 'contract,' 'credit,' and 'title' insurances." Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 3, at 14 (2d ed. 1909).
- comprehensive general-liability insurance. Insurance that broadly covers an insured's liability exposure, including product liability, contractual liability, and premises liability. — Abbr. CGL insurance.
- comprehensive insurance. (1924) Insurance that combines coverage against many kinds of losses that may also be insured separately. • This is commonly used, for example, in an automobile-insurance policy.
- compulsory insurance. (1887) Statutorily required insurance; esp., motor-vehicle liability insurance that a state requires as a condition to register the vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 43.]

convertible collision insurance. Collision insurance that carries a low premium until a claim is made against the policy.

convertible insurance. (1926) Insurance that can be changed to another form without further evidence of insurability, usu. referring to a term-life-insurance policy that can be changed to permanent insurance without a medical examination. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 1908–1911.]

credit insurance. An agreement to indemnify against loss that may result from the death, disability, or insolvency of someone to whom credit is extended. ● A debtor typically purchases this type of insurance to ensure the repayment of the loan. — Also termed accounts-receivable insurance.

credit life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

crime insurance. Insurance covering losses occasioned by a crime committed by someone other than the insured.

crop insurance. Insurance that protects against loss to growing crops from natural perils such as hail and fire. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2203–2208.]

D&O insurance. See directors' and officers' liability insurance.

decreasing term insurance. Insurance that declines in value during the term; esp., life insurance that lessens in value to zero by the end of the term.

deposit insurance. (1933) A federally sponsored indemnification program to protect depositors against the loss of their money, up to a specified maximum, if the bank or savings-and-loan association fails or defaults. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↻ 506.]

directors and officers' liability insurance. An agreement to indemnify corporate directors and officers against judgments, settlements, and fines arising from negligence suits, shareholder actions, and other business-related suits. — Often shortened to D&O liability insurance; D&O insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2377.]

disability insurance. Coverage purchased to protect a person from a loss of income during a period of incapacity for work. See general-disability insurance; occupational-disability insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 1012, 2534–2579.]

double insurance. (18c) Insurance coverage by more than one insurer for the same interest and for the same insured. ● Except with life insurance, the insured is entitled to only a single indemnity from a loss, and to recover this, the insured may either (1) sue each insurer for its share of the loss, or (2) sue one or more of the insurers for the entire amount, leaving any paying insurers to recover from the others their respective shares of the loss.

dread-disease insurance. Health insurance that covers medical expenses arising from the treatment of any of several specified diseases.

e-commerce insurance. Insurance that covers a business's computer-related damages and losses caused by computer hackers and Internet viruses. ● Covered damages usu. include physical destruction or harm to computer circuitry, loss of access, loss of use, loss of functionality, and business interruption.

employers'-liability insurance. 1. An agreement to indemnify an employer against an employee's claim not covered under the workers'-compensation system. 2. An agreement to indemnify against liability imposed on an employer for an employee's negligence that injures a third party. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2317.]

employment-practices liability insurance. Insurance that provides coverage for claims arising from an insured's injury-causing employment practice, such as discrimination, defamation, or sexual harassment. — Abbr. EPL insurance.

endowment insurance. A type of life insurance that is payable either to the insured at the end of the policy period or to the insured's beneficiary if the insured dies before the period ends. See endowment life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

errors-and-omissions insurance. An agreement to indemnify for loss sustained because of a mistake or oversight by the insured — though not for loss due to the insured's intentional wrongdoing. ● For example, lawyers often carry this insurance as part of their malpractice coverage to protect them in suits for damages resulting from inadvertent mistakes (such as missing a procedural deadline). While this insurance does not cover the insured's intentional wrongdoing, it may cover an employee's intentional, but unauthorized, wrongdoing. — Often shortened to E&O insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2383.] excess insurance. (1916) An agreement to indemnify against any loss that exceeds the amount of coverage under another policy. — Also termed excess policy. Cf. primary insurance. See EXCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2110, 2394.]

excess-lines insurance. See surplus-lines insurance.

extended insurance. Insurance that continues in force beyond the date that the last premium was paid by drawing on its cash value.

extended-term insurance. (1925) Insurance that remains in effect after a default in paying premiums, as long as the policy has cash value to pay premiums. ● Many life-insurance policies provide this feature to protect against forfeiture of the policy if the insured falls behind in premium payments.

family-income insurance. An agreement to pay benefits for a stated period following the death of the insured. ● At the end of the payment period, the face value is paid to the designated beneficiary.

fidelity insurance. An agreement to indemnify an employer against a loss arising from the lack of integrity or honesty of an employee or of a person holding a position of trust, such as a loss from embezzlement. — Also termed fidelity guaranty insurance; fidelity and guaranty insurance; surety and fidelity insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1014.]

fire insurance. An agreement to indemnify against property damage caused by fire, wind, rain, or other similar disaster. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1009.]

first-party insurance. (1953) A policy that applies to an insured or the insured's own property, such as life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, and fire insurance. — Also termed indemnity insurance; self-insurance.

fleet insurance. Insurance that covers a number of vehicles owned by the same entity.

floater insurance. An agreement to indemnify against a loss sustained to movable property, wherever its location within the territorial limit set by the policy.

flood insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against a loss caused by a flood. • This type of insurance is often sold privately but subsidized by the federal government. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2209–2213.]

fraternal insurance. Life or health insurance issued by a fraternal benefit society to its members.

general-disability insurance. Disability insurance that provides benefits to a person who cannot perform any job that the person is qualified for. — Also termed total-disability insurance. Cf. occupational-disability insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2561.]

group insurance. A form of insurance offered to a member of a group, such as the employees of a business, as long as that person remains a member of the group. • Group insurance is typically health or life (usu. term life) insurance issued under a master policy between the insurer and the employer, who usu. pays all or part of the premium for the insured person. Other groups, such as unions and associations, often offer group insurance to their members.

“‘Group Insurance’ refers to a method of marketing standard forms of insurance, such as life insurance, whereby a master policy is issued to the party negotiating the contract with the insurer (frequently an employer), and certificates of participation are issued to the individual insured members of the group (frequently employees).” John F. Dobbyn, Insurance Law in a Nutshell 13 (2d ed. 1989).

guaranty insurance (gar-ən-tee). An agreement to cover a loss resulting from another's default, insolvency, or specified misconduct. — Also termed surety insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1014.]

“The term ‘guaranty insurance’ is generic in its scope and signification, and embraces within it those subsidiary species of insurance contracts known as ‘fidelity,’ ‘commercial,’ and ‘judicial’ insurances In legal acceptance guaranty insurance is an agreement whereby one party (called the ‘insurer’) for a valuable consideration (termed the ‘premium’) agrees to indemnify another (called the ‘insured’) in a stipulated amount against loss or damage arising through dishonesty, fraud, unfaithful performance of duty or breach of contract on the part of a third person . . . sustaining a contractual relationship to the party thus indemnified.” Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 1, at 11 (2d ed. 1909).

health insurance. Insurance covering medical expenses resulting from sickness or injury. — Also termed accident and health insurance; sickness and accident insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1012.]

homeowner's insurance. Insurance that covers both damage to the insured's residence and liability claims made against the insured (esp. those arising from the insured's negligence).

indemnity insurance. See first-party insurance.

industrial life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

inland marine insurance. An agreement to indemnify against losses arising from the transport of goods on domestic waters (i.e., rivers, canals, and lakes). Cf. ocean marine insurance.

insurance of the person. Insurance intended to protect the person, such as life, accident, and disability insurance.

interinsurance. See reciprocal insurance.

joint life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

judicial insurance. Insurance intended to protect litigants and others involved in the court system.

“By judicial insurance reference is had to insurance bonds or policies issued, in connection with the regular course of judicial or administrative procedure, for the purpose of securing the faithful performance of duty on the part of court appointees, to guarantee due compliance with the terms of undertakings entered into by parties litigant before the courts, and to secure proper administration of statute law.” Thomas Gold Frost, A Treatise on Guaranty Insurance § 3, at 14 (2d ed. 1909).

key-employee insurance. See key-employee life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

last-survivor insurance. See last-survivor life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

lease insurance. An agreement to indemnify a leaseholder for the loss of a favorable lease terminated by damage to the property from a peril covered by the policy. • The amount payable is the difference between the rent and the actual rental value of the property, multiplied by the remaining term of the lease.

level-premium insurance. Insurance whose premiums remain constant throughout the life of the agreement. • Most whole life policies are set up this way.

liability insurance. An agreement to cover a loss resulting from the insured's liability to a third party, such as a loss incurred by a driver who injures a pedestrian. • The insured's claim under the policy arises once the insured's liability to a third party has been asserted. — Also termed third-party insurance; public-liability insurance. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1010.]

life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

limited-policy insurance. Insurance that covers only specified perils; esp., health insurance that covers a specific type of illness (such as dread-disease insurance) or a risk relating to a stated activity (such as travel-accident insurance).

Lloyd's insurance. (1897) Insurance provided by insurers as individuals, rather than as a corporation.

• The insurers' liability is several but not joint. Most states either prohibit or strictly regulate this type of insurance. See LLOYD'S OF LONDON. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 1220.]

loss insurance. Insurance purchased by a person who may suffer a loss at the hands of another. • This is the converse of liability insurance, which is purchased by potential defendants.

malpractice insurance (mal-prak-tis). (1943) An agreement to indemnify a professional person, such as a doctor or lawyer, against negligence claims. See errors-and-omissions insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2389.]

"Most contemporary lawyers regard malpractice insurance as an expensive, but essential, part of law practice. Its cost, along with other costs of the lawyer's trade, is ultimately borne by the consumer, the client who pays the lawyer's fees. . . . Neither the ABA Code nor the ABA Model Rules impose an ethical obligation to carry adequate malpractice insurance. But contemporary lawyers have found it prudent to do so, both to protect their personal assets and to promote their public image as reliable professionals who are financially responsible." Mortimer D. Schwartz & Richard C. Wydick, Problems in Legal Ethics 127-28 (2d ed. 1988).

manual-rating insurance. A type of insurance whereby the premium is set using a book that classifies certain risks on a general basis, rather than evaluating each individual case.

marine insurance. An agreement to indemnify against injury to a ship, cargo, or profits involved in a certain voyage or for a specific vessel during a fixed period, or to protect other marine interests. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2214-2256.]

medigap insurance. See MEDIGAP INSURANCE.

mortgage insurance. 1. An agreement to pay off a mortgage if the insured dies or becomes disabled. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2405; Mortgages ↻ 201.] 2. An agreement to provide money to the lender if the mortgagor defaults on the mortgage payments. — Also termed private mortgage insurance (abbr. PMI).

mutual insurance. A system of insurance (esp. life insurance) whereby the policyholders become members of the insurance company, each paying premiums into a common fund from which each can draw in the event of a loss.

national-service life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

no-fault auto insurance. An agreement to indemnify for a loss due to personal injury or property damage arising from the use of an automobile, regardless of who caused the accident. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2817-2856.]

nonassessable insurance. Insurance in which the premium is set and the insurer is barred from demanding additional payments from the insured.

occupational-disability insurance. Disability insurance that provides benefits to a person who cannot perform his or her regular job. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2561(2).]

occurrence-based liability insurance. Insurance that covers bodily injuries or property damage suffered during the policy period. • Each instance of injury or damage is an "occurrence" that may trigger an insured's entitlement to benefits. The terms of occurrence-based liability insurance policies are usu. broad, limited only by specific exclusions. — Also termed accident-based insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2264, 2265.]

ocean marine insurance. Insurance that covers risks arising from the transport of goods by sea. Cf. inland marine insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2214-2256.]

old-age and survivors' insurance. See OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS' INSURANCE.

ordinary insurance. See ordinary life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

ordinary life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

overinsurance. See OVERINSURANCE.

paid-up insurance. (1871) Insurance that remains in effect even though no more premiums are due.

participating insurance. A type of insurance that allows a policyholder to receive dividends. • This insurance is invariably issued by a mutual company.

partnership insurance. 1. Life insurance on the life of a partner, purchased to ensure the remaining partners' ability to buy out a deceased partner's interest. — Also termed partnership life insurance. 2. Health insurance for a partner, payable to the partnership to allow it to continue to operate while the partner is unable to work due to illness or injury. — Also termed (in both senses) business-partner insurance.

patent insurance (pat-ənt). 1. Insurance against loss from an infringement of the insured's patent. 2. Insurance against a claim that the insured has infringed another's patent. 3. Insurance that funds a claim against a third party for infringing the insured's patent.

port-risk insurance. Insurance on a vessel lying in port. Cf. time insurance; voyage insurance.

primary insurance. Insurance that attaches immediately on the happening of a loss; insurance that is not contingent on the exhaustion of an underlying policy. Cf. excess insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↻ 2110.] private mortgage insurance. See mortgage insurance.

products-liability insurance. An agreement to indemnify a manufacturer, supplier, or retailer for a loss arising from the insured's liability to a user who is harmed by any product manufactured or sold by the insured. [Cases: Insurance ↷2296, 2359.]

profit insurance. Insurance that reimburses the insured for profits lost because of a specified peril.

property insurance. An agreement to indemnify against property damage or destruction. — Also termed property-damage insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↷1009.]

public-liability insurance. See liability insurance.

reciprocal insurance. A system whereby several individuals or businesses act through an agent to underwrite one another's risks, making each insured an insurer of the other members of the group. — Also termed interinsurance. [Cases: Insurance ↷1204.]

reinsurance. See REINSURANCE.

renewable term insurance. Insurance that the insured may continue at the end of a term, but generally at a higher premium. • The insured usu. has the right to renew for additional terms without a medical examination.

replacement insurance. (1938) Insurance under which the value of the loss is measured by the current cost of replacing the insured property. See replacement cost under COST. [Cases: Insurance ↷2172, 2184.]

retirement-income insurance. An agreement whereby the insurance company agrees to pay an annuity beginning at a certain age if the insured survives beyond that age, or the value of the policy if the insured dies before reaching that age.

self-insurance. A plan under which a business maintains its own special fund to cover any loss. • Unlike other forms of insurance, there is no contract with an insurance company. — Also termed first-party insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↷1004.]

sickness and accident insurance. See health insurance.

single-premium insurance. See single-premium life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

social insurance. Insurance provided by a government to persons facing particular perils (such as unemployment or disability) or to persons who have a certain status (such as the elderly or the blind). • Social insurance — such as that created by the Social Security Act of 1935 — is usu. part of a government's broader social policy. See WELFARE STATE. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ↷121-149.5, 174-182; Unemployment Compensation ↷1.]

split-dollar insurance. See split-dollar life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

step-rate-premium insurance. Insurance whose premiums increase at times specified in the policy.

stop-loss insurance. Insurance that protects a self-insured employer from catastrophic losses or unusually large health costs of covered employees. • Stop-loss insurance essentially provides excess coverage for a self-insured employer. The employer and the insurance carrier agree to the amount the employer will cover, and the stop-loss insurance will cover claims exceeding that amount. [Cases: Insurance ↷2523, 2525(1).]

straight life insurance. See whole life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

surety and fidelity insurance. See fidelity insurance.

surety insurance. See guaranty insurance.

surplus-lines insurance. Insurance with an insurer that is not licensed to transact business within the state where the risk is located. — Also termed excess-lines insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↷1330.]

term life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

terrorism insurance. Insurance that indemnifies against losses sustained because of an act of terrorism. • Terrorism insurance has been available since the 1970s; it was (and is) required for U.S. airports of almost all sizes. In the mid-1980s, terrorism insurance was offered to individuals, originally as a form of travel insurance that provided compensation for terrorism-related cancellations or changes in itinerary when traveling to or in certain countries. See TERRORISM.

third-party insurance. See liability insurance.

time insurance. Marine insurance. Insurance covering the insured for a specified period. Cf. voyage insurance.

title insurance. (1889) An agreement to indemnify against loss arising from a defect in title to real property, usu. issued to the buyer of the property by the title company that conducted the title search. Cf. GUARANTEE OF TITLE. [Cases: Insurance ↷1013.]

"Title insurance is normally written by specialized companies that maintain tract indexes; companies involved in writing life or casualty usually are not involved in title insurance. Title insurance is an unusual type of insurance in a few respects. For one thing, it is not a recurring policy: There is only a single premium, and a title insurance policy written on behalf of an owner theoretically remains outstanding forever to protect him or her from claims asserted by others. It is more similar to an indemnification agreement than to an insurance policy. For another, title insurance companies generally do not take risks that they know about. If the title search shows that a risk exists, the company will exclude that risk from the coverage of the policy." Robert W. Hamilton, Fundamentals of Modern Business 84 (1989).

total-disability insurance. See general-disability insurance.

travel-accident insurance. Health insurance limited to injuries sustained while traveling.

umbrella insurance. Insurance that is supplemental, providing coverage that exceeds the basic or usual limits of liability. — Also termed bumbershoot insurance. [Cases: Insurance ↷2110, 2394.]

underinsurance. See UNDERINSURANCE.

unemployment insurance. (1897) A type of social insurance that pays money to workers who are unemployed for reasons unrelated to job performance. •

Individual states administer unemployment insurance, which is funded by payroll taxes. — Also termed unemployment compensation. [Cases: Taxation ↷ 3260; Unemployment Compensation ↷ 1, 40, 60.]

universal life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

variable life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

valuable-papers insurance. Insurance covering the cost of research, labor, and materials necessary to reconstruct damaged or lost documents and records — written, printed, or otherwise inscribed — including books, maps, manuscripts, legal documents, drawings, and films. • This insurance does not cover cash or securities. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 2136.]

voyage insurance. Marine insurance. Insurance covering the insured between destinations. Cf. time insurance.

war-risk insurance. 1. Insurance covering damage caused by war. • Ocean marine policies are often written to cover this type of risk. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 2159, 2223.] 2. Life and accident insurance provided by the federal government to members of the armed forces. • This type of insurance is offered because the hazardous nature of military service often prevents military personnel from obtaining private insurance. [Cases: Armed Services ↷ 55.]

whole life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

insurance adjuster. (1934) A person who determines the value of a loss to the insured and settles the claim against the insurer. — Also termed claims adjuster. See ADJUSTER. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 3222.]

insurance agent. (1866) A person authorized by an insurance company to sell its insurance policies. — Also termed producer; (in property insurance) recording agent; record agent. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1604.]

general agent. An agent with the general power of making insurance contracts on behalf of an insurer. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1634(2).]

special agent. An agent whose powers are usu. confined to soliciting applications for insurance, taking initial premiums, and delivering policies when issued. — Also termed local agent; solicitor. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1634(2).]

insurance broker. See BROKER.

insurance certificate. (1865) 1. A document issued by an insurer as evidence of insurance or membership in an insurance or pension plan. 2. A document issued by an insurer to a shipper as evidence that a shipment of goods is covered by a marine insurance policy.

insurance commissioner. (1889) A public official who supervises the insurance business conducted in a state. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1029.]

insurance company. (18c) A corporation or association that issues insurance policies. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1003.] captive insurance company. A company that insures the liabilities of its owner. • The insured is usu. the

mixed insurance company. An insurance company having characteristics of both stock and mutual companies in that it distributes part of the profits to stockholders and also makes distributions to the insureds.

mutual insurance company. An insurance company whose policyholders are both insurers and insureds because they pay premiums into a common fund, from which claims are paid; an insurer whose policyholders are its owners, as opposed to a stock insurance company owned by outside shareholders. Cf. stock insurance company. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1121.]

"Mutual insurance companies are organized by a number of persons for the purpose of transacting some particular insurance business A company is a mutual one when the persons constituting the company contribute either cash or assessable premium notes, or both, to a common fund, out of which each is entitled to indemnity in case of loss. The distinguishing feature is mutuality, evidenced by the co-operation of members, uniting for that purpose, each taking a proportionate part in the management of its affairs and being at once insurer and insured, contributing to a fund from which all losses are paid Democratic ownership and control is a fundamental characteristic of a mutual insurance company." 18 John Alan Appleman, Insurance Law and Practice § 10041, at 79-80 (1945).

stock insurance company. An insurance company operated as a private corporation and owned by stockholders who share in the company's profits and losses.

stock life-insurance company. A stock insurance company that does life-insurance business.

insurance fraud. See FRAUD.

insurance of the person. See INSURANCE.

insurance policy. (1869) 1. A contract of insurance. 2. A document detailing such a contract. — Often shortened to policy. — Also termed policy of insurance; contract of insurance.

assessable policy. 1. A policy under which a policyholder may be held liable for losses of the insurance company beyond its reserves. — Also termed assessable insurance. 2. See assessable insurance (1) under INSURANCE.

bailee policy. A floating policy that covers goods in a bailee's possession but does not particularly describe the covered goods.

basic-form policy. (1997) A policy that offers limited coverage against loss. • A basic-form policy generally covers damages from fire, windstorm, explosion, riot, aircraft, vehicles, theft, or vandalism. — Also termed limited policy; specific policy.

blanket policy. (1894) An agreement to indemnify all property, regardless of location. — Also termed compound policy; floating policy.

block policy. An all-risk policy that covers groups of property (such as property held in bailment or a business's merchandise) against most perils. See all-risk insurance under INSURANCE.

broad-form policy. (1950) A policy that offers broad protection with few limitations. • This policy offers greater coverage than a basic-form policy, but less than an open-perils policy.

claims-made policy. (1974) An agreement to indemnify against all claims made during a specified period, regardless of when the incidents that gave rise to the claims occurred. — Also termed discovery policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1153.]

closed policy. An insurance policy whose terms cannot be changed. • A fraternal benefit society is not permitted to write closed policies. — Also termed closed insurance contract.

commercial general-liability policy. A comprehensive policy that covers most commercial risks, liabilities, and causes of loss. • This type of policy covers both business losses and situations in which a business is liable to a third party for personal injury or property damage. First introduced in 1986, this policy has largely replaced comprehensive general-liability policies. — Abbr. CGL policy. Cf. comprehensive general-liability policy.

completed-operations policy. A policy usu. purchased by a building contractor to cover accidents arising out of a job or an operation that the contractor has completed. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2296.]

compound policy. See blanket policy.

comprehensive general-liability policy. (1943) A broad-coverage commercial insurance policy covering a variety of general risks, esp. bodily injury and property damage to a third party for which the business entity is liable. • This policy was first offered in 1940. It has largely been replaced by the commercial-general liability policy. — Also termed CGL policy; general-liability policy. Cf. commercial general-liability policy.

concurrent policy. (1937) One of two or more insurance policies that cover the same risk. • Concurrent insurance policies are stated in almost identical terms so that liability can be apportioned between the insurers. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2107.]

continuous policy. See perpetual policy.

corrected policy. A policy issued after a redetermination of risk to correct a misstatement in the original policy.

deferred-dividend insurance policy. Hist. A life insurance policy that accumulated a fixed percentage of the insurer's surplus profits, payable as a lump sum on a certain date or at the insured's death, whichever came first. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1153.] discovery policy. See claims-made policy.

drummer floater policy. Hist. A policy that covered the goods carried by a commercial salesperson while traveling.

endowment policy. A life-insurance policy payable at the end of a specified period, if the insured survives that period, or upon the insured's death if death occurs before the end of the period.

excess policy. See excess insurance under INSURANCE.

extended policy. A policy that remains in effect beyond the time when premiums are no longer paid.

flier policy. Hist. A policy issued at a very low rate near the end of the year for the purpose of swelling the insurance agent's annual-sales figures. — Also spelled flyer policy.

floating policy. An insurance policy covering property that frequently changes in quantity or location, such as jewelry. — Also termed running policy; blanket policy.

following-form policy. An insurance policy that adopts the terms and conditions of another insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨3615.]

gambling policy. See wager policy.

graveyard insurance. See wager policy.

group policy. See master policy.

homeowner's policy. A multiperil policy providing coverage for a variety of risks, including loss by fire, water, burglary, and the homeowner's negligent conduct.

incontestable policy. (1897) A policy containing a provision that prohibits the insurer from contesting or canceling the policy on the basis of statements made in the application. [Cases: Insurance ⇨3121.]

interest policy. A policy whose terms indicate that the insured has an interest in the subject matter of the insurance. Cf. wager policy.

joint life policy. (1927) A life-insurance policy that matures and becomes due upon the death of any of those jointly insured.

lapsed policy. (1873) 1. An insurance policy on which there has been a default in premium payments. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2039.] 2. An insurance policy that, because of statutory provisions, remains in force after a default in premium payments. • Statutes normally provide a 30- or 31-day grace period after nonpayment of premiums. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2018.]

level-rate legal-reserve policy. A policy that seeks to build a reserve equal to the policy's face value by the end of the insured's life.

life policy. A life-insurance policy that requires lifetime annual fixed premiums and that becomes payable only on the death of the insured. — Also termed regular life policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1011, 1716.]

limited policy. (1884) 1. An insurance policy that specifically excludes certain classes or types of loss. 2. See basic-form policy.

nonmedical policy. An insurance policy issued without a prior medical examination of the applicant.

occurrence policy. An agreement to indemnify for any loss from an event that occurs within the policy period, regardless of when the claim is made. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2264.]

open-perils policy. (1997) A property insurance policy covering all risks against loss except those specifically excluded from coverage.

open policy. See unvalued policy.

package policy. An insurance policy providing protection against multiple perils and losses of both the insured and third parties. • A homeowner's policy is usu. a package policy.

paid-up policy. A policy that remains in effect after premiums are no longer due.

participating policy. A policy that allows the holder a right to dividends or rebates from future premiums. • This type of policy is issued by a mutual company.

permanent policy. A renewable policy that is effective for a specified period and is terminable by either the insurer or the insured after giving express notice.

perpetual policy. An insurance policy that remains effective without renewal until one of the parties terminates it according to its terms. — Also termed continuous policy.

regular life policy. See life policy.

running policy. See floating policy.

specific policy. See basic-form policy.

standard policy. (1893) 1. An insurance policy providing insurance that is recommended or required by state law, usu. regulated by a state agency. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1775.] 2. An insurance policy that contains standard terms used for similar insurance policies nationwide, usu. drafted by an insurance industrial association such as Insurance Services Office.

survivorship policy. A joint life policy that is payable after all the insureds have died.

term policy. A life-insurance policy that gives protection for a specified period, but that does not have a cash value or reserve value.

time policy. (1852) An insurance policy that is effective only during a specified period.

tontine policy (tahn-teen or tahn-teen). An insurance policy in which a group of participants share advantages so that upon the default or death of any participant, his or her advantages are distributed among the remaining participants until only one remains, whereupon the whole goes to that sole participant. • Under the tontine plan of insurance, no accumulation or earnings are credited to the policy unless it remains in force for the tontine period of a specified number of years. Thus, those who survive the period and keep their policies in force share in the accumulated funds, and those who die or permit their policies to lapse during the period do not. This type of policy takes its name from Lorenzo Tonti, an Italian who invented it in the 17th century. Today, newer and more ingenious forms of insurance have largely made tontine policies defunct. See TONTINE. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2441.] umbrella policy. An insurance policy covering losses that exceed the basic or usual limits of liability provided by other policies. See umbrella insurance under INSURANCE. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2110, 2394.] unvalued policy. A policy that does not state a value of the insured property but that, upon loss, requires proof of the property's worth. — Also termed open policy.

valued policy. An insurance policy in which the sum to be paid when a loss occurs is fixed by the terms of the contract. • The value agreed on is conclusive for a total loss and provides a basis for determining recovery in cases of partial loss. This value is in the nature of liquidated damages. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2171.]

voyage policy. A marine-insurance policy that insures a vessel or its cargo during a specified voyage.

wager policy. An insurance policy issued to a person who is shown to have no insurable interest in the person or property covered by the policy. • Wager policies are illegal in most states. — Also termed gambling policy; graveyard insurance. See insurable interest under INTEREST (2). Cf. interest policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1784.]

insurance pool. (1935) A group of several insurers that, to spread the risk, combine and share premiums and losses.

insurance premium. See PREMIUM (1).

insurance rating. (1905) The process by which an insurer arrives at a policy premium for a particular risk. — Often shortened to rating. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1541.]

Insurance Services Office. A nonprofit organization that provides analytical and decision-support services and tools to the insurance industry, including statistical, actuarial, underwriting, and claims data, and drafts of model insurance policy forms and coverage provisions.

• The organization is composed of member insurers. It provides data and information to its members and also to nonmember subscribers, such as risk managers, insurance regulators, and self-insureds. — Abbr. ISO.

insurance trust. See TRUST.

insurance underwriter. See UNDERWRITER.

insurant, n. A person who obtains insurance or to whom an insurance policy is issued. • This term is much less common than the attributive noun insured.

insure, vb. (17c) 1. To secure, by payment of a premium, the payment of a sum of money in the event of a loss. [Cases: Insurance ⇨1001.] 2. To issue or procure an insurance policy on or for (someone or something).

insured, n. (17c) A person who is covered or protected by an insurance policy. — Also termed assured. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2100.]

additional insured. (1929) A person who is covered by an insurance policy but who is not the primary insured. • An additional insured may, or may not, be specifically named in the policy. If the person is named, then the term is sometimes named additional insured. — Also termed secondary insured. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2100.]

class-one insured. (1982) In a motor-vehicle policy, the named insured and any relative residing with the named insured. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2660.]

class-two insured. (1985) In a motor-vehicle policy, a person lawfully occupying a vehicle at the time of an accident. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2660.]

first-named insured. See primary insured.

named insured. (1899) A person designated in an insurance policy as the one covered by the policy. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2100.]

primary insured. The individual or entity whose name appears first in the declarations of an insurance policy. — Also termed first-named insured.

insurer. (17c) One who agrees, by contract, to assume the risk of another's loss and to compensate for that loss. — Also termed underwriter; insurance underwriter; carrier; assurer (for life insurance). [Cases: Insurance ⇨1002.]

excess insurer. An insurer who is liable for settling any part of a claim not covered by an insured's primary insurer. — Also termed secondary insurer. See primary insurer. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2110.]

primary insurer. An insurer who is contractually committed to settling a claim up to the applicable policy limit before any other insurer becomes liable for any part of the same claim. See excess insurer. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2110.]

quasi-insurer. (1830) A service provider who is held to strict liability in the provision of services, such as an innkeeper or a common carrier.

secondary insurer. See excess insurer.

insurgent, n. (18c) A person who, for political purposes, engages in armed hostility against an established government. — insurgent, adj. — insurgency, n.

insuring agreement. See INSURING CLAUSE.

insuring clause. A provision in an insurance policy or bond reciting the risk assumed by the insurer or establishing the scope of the coverage. — Also termed insuring agreement. [Cases: Insurance ⇨2097.]

insurrection. (15c) A violent revolt against an oppressive authority, usu. a government.

"[Insurrection is distinguished from rout, riot, and offense connected with mob violence by the fact that in insurrection there is an organized and armed uprising against authority or operations of government, while crimes growing out of mob violence, however serious they may be and however numerous the participants, are simply unlawful acts in disturbance of the peace which do not threaten the stability of the government or the existence of political society." 77 C.J.S. Riot; Insurrection § 29, at 579 (1994).

intact family. See FAMILY.

in tail. See TAIL.

intake, n. (1943) 1. The official screening of a juvenile charged with an offense in order to determine where to determine where to place the juvenile pending formal adjudication or informal disposition. 2. The body of officers who conduct this screening. 3. Hist. English law. A piece of land temporarily taken from a common or moorland by a tenant to raise a crop.

intake day. (1985) The day on which new cases are assigned to the courts.

intaker. Hist. See FENCE (1).

intangible, adj. (17c) Not capable of being touched; impalpable; INCORPOREAL.

intangible, n. (1914) Something that lacks a physical form; an abstraction, such as responsibility; esp., an asset that is not corporeal, such as intellectual property.

general intangible. (1935) Any personal property other than goods, accounts, chattel paper, documents, instruments, investment property, rights to proceeds of written letters of credit, and money. • Some examples are goodwill, things in action, and literary rights. UCC § 9-102(a)(42). See intangible property under PROPERTY. [Cases: Secured Transactions ⇨11.1, 14.1, 115.1.]

payment intangible. (1996) A general intangible under which the account debtor's principal obligation is a monetary obligation. UCC § 9-102(a)(61).

intangible asset. 1. See ASSET. 2. See INTANGIBLE TRADE VALUE.

intangible drilling cost. Oil & gas. An expense that is incident to and necessary for drilling and completing an oil or gas well and that has no salvage value. • Intangible drilling costs may be deducted in the year they are incurred rather than capitalized and depreciated. 26 USCA § 612.

intangible movable. See MOVABLE.

intangible property. See PROPERTY.

intangible-rights doctrine. The rule that a person is entitled to receive honest services from those in the public sector or in the private sector who have fiduciary duties to the person. • Public-sector intangible rights derive from public officials' implied fiduciary duty to make governmental decisions in the public interest. Private-sector intangible rights arise out of fiduciary relationships. The intangible-rights doctrine is codified at 18 USCA § 1346. — Also termed honest-services doctrine. [Cases: Postal Service ⇨35(9).] intangible tax. See TAX.

intangible thing. See incorporeal thing under THING.

intangible trade property. See INTANGIBLE TRADE VALUE.

intangible trade value. Intellectual property. The measure of an enterprise's proprietary information, ideas, goodwill, and other nonphysical commercial assets. • The law of misappropriation provides some protection against the taking of intangible trade values to compete unfairly with their original owner. — Also termed intangible asset; intangible trade property.

in tantum (in tan-təm). [Latin] Hist. To that extent; insofar. Cf. PRO TANTO.

integer (in-tə-jər), adj. [Latin] Archaic. Whole; untouched. See RES NOVA.

integrated agreement. See INTEGRATED CONTRACT.

integrated bar. See BAR.

integrated contract. (1930) One or more writings constituting a final expression of one or more terms of an agreement. — Also termed integrated agreement; integrated writing. See INTEGRATION (2). [Cases: Contracts ⇨245; Evidence ⇨397(2).]

completely integrated contract. (1950) An integrated agreement adopted by the parties as a full and exclusive statement of the terms of the agreement. • The parties are therefore prohibited from varying or supplementing the contractual terms through parol (extrinsic) evidence. [Cases: Evidence ⇨397(2).]

partially integrated contract. (1958) An agreement in which some, but not all, of the terms are integrated; any agreement other than a completely integrated agreement. [Cases: Evidence ⇨397(2).]

integrated writing. See INTEGRATED CONTRACT.

integration. (17c) 1. The process of making whole or combining into one. 2. Contracts. The full expression of the parties' agreement, so that all earlier agreements are superseded, the effect being that neither party may later contradict or add to the contractual terms. — Also termed merger. See PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨245; Evidence ⇨397(2).]

complete integration. (1930) The fact or state of fully expressing the intent of the parties. • Parol evidence is therefore inadmissible. [Cases: Evidence ⇨397(2).]

partial integration. (1910) The fact or state of not fully expressing the parties' intent. • Parol (extrinsic) evidence is admissible to clear up ambiguities with respect to the terms that are not integrated. [Cases: Evidence ⇨397(2).]

backward integration. A firm's acquisition of ownership of facilities that produce raw materials or parts for the firm's products.

6. Securities. The requirement that all security offerings over a given period are to be considered a single offering for purposes of determining an exemption from registration. • The Securities and Exchange Commission and the courts apply five criteria to determine whether two or more transactions are part of the same offering of securities: (1) whether the offerings are part of a single plan of financing, (2) whether the offerings involve issuance of the same class of securities, (3) whether the offerings are made at or about the same time, (4) whether the same type of consideration is received, and (5) whether the offerings are made for the same general purpose. 17 CFR § 230.502. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨18.14.]

integration clause. (1941) A contractual provision stating that the contract represents the parties' complete and final agreement and supersedes all informal understandings and oral agreements relating to the subject matter of the contract. — Also termed merger clause; entire-agreement clause. See INTEGRATION (2); PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨245; Evidence ⇨397(2).] integration rule. (1899) The rule that if the parties to a contract have embodied their agreement in a final document, any other action or statement is without effect and is immaterial in determining the terms of the contract. See PAROL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Contracts ⇨245; Evidence ⇨397(2).]

integrity right. Copyright. The right of authors and artists to insist that their creative works not be changed without their authorization. • Integrity is one of the moral rights of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries, including much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. Cf. MORAL RIGHT; ATTRIBUTION RIGHT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻6.]

intellectual property. (1808) 1. A category of intangible rights protecting commercially valuable products of the human intellect. • The category comprises primarily trademark, copyright, and patent rights, but also includes trade-secret rights, publicity rights, moral rights, and rights against unfair competition. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻1.] 2. A commercially valuable product of the human intellect, in a concrete or abstract form, such as a copyrightable work, a protectable trademark, a patentable invention, or a trade secret. — Abbr. IP.

"While there is a close relationship between intangible property and the tangible objects in which they are embodied, intellectual property rights are distinct and separate from property rights in tangible goods. For example, when a person posts a letter to someone, the personal property in the ink and parchment is transferred to the recipient. . . . [T]he sender (as author) retains intellectual property rights in the letter." Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 1-2 (2001).

intemperance. (15c) A lack of moderation or temperance; esp., habitual or excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages. [Cases: Chemical Dependents ↻1.]

in tempus indebitum (in tem-pəs in-deb-i-təm). [Law Latin] Hist. At an undue time.

intend, vb. (14c) 1. To have in mind a fixed purpose to reach a desired objective; to have as one's purpose <Daniel intended to become a lawyer>. 2. To contemplate that the usual consequences of one's act will probably or necessarily follow from the act, whether or not those consequences are desired for their own sake <although he activated the theater's fire alarm only on a dare, the jury found that Wilbur intended to cause a panic>. 3. To signify or mean <the parties intended for the writing to supersede their earlier handshake deal>.

intendant (in-ten-dənt). A director of a government agency, esp. (as used in 17th- and 18th-century France) a royal official charged with the administration of justice or finance.

intended beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

intended child. See CHILD.

intended parent. See intentional parent under PARENT.

intended to be recorded. (18c) (Of a deed or other instrument) not yet filed with a public registry, but forming a link in a chain of title. [Cases: Deeds ↻88; Records ↻19.]

intended-use doctrine. (1967) Products liability. The rule imposing a duty on a manufacturer to develop a product so that it is reasonably safe for its intended or foreseeable users. • In determining the scope of responsibility, the court considers the defendant's marketing scheme and the foreseeability of the harm. [Cases: Products Liability ↻151.]

intendment (in-tend-mənt). (14c) 1. The sense in which the law understands something <the intendment of a contract is that the contract is legally enforceable>. — Also termed intendment of law. 2. A decision-maker's inference about the true meaning or intention of a legal instrument <there is no need for intendment, the court reasoned, when the text of the statute is clear>. — Formerly also spelled entendment.

common intendment. The natural or common meaning in legal interpretation.

3. A person's expectations when interacting with others within the legal sphere.

"Our institutions and our formalized interactions with one another are accompanied by certain interlocking expectations that may be called intendments, even though there is seldom occasion to bring these underlying expectations across the threshold of consciousness. In a very real sense when I cast my vote in an election my conduct is directed and conditioned by an anticipation that my ballot will be counted in favor of the candidate I actually vote for. This is true even though the possibility that my ballot will be thrown in the wastebasket, or counted for the wrong man, may never enter my mind as an object of conscious attention. In this sense the institution of elections may be said to contain an intendment that the votes cast will be faithfully tallied, though I might hesitate to say, except in a mood of rhetoric, that the election authorities had entered a contract with me to count my vote as I had cast it." Lon L. Fuller, The Morality of Law 217 (rev. ed. 1969).

intent. (13c) 1. The state of mind accompanying an act, esp. a forbidden act. • While motive is the inducement to do some act, intent is the mental resolution or determination to do it. When the intent to do an act that violates the law exists, motive becomes immaterial. Cf. MOTIVE; SCIENTER.

"The phrase 'with intent to,' or its equivalents, may mean any one of at least four different things: — (1) That the intent referred to must be the sole or exclusive intent; (2) that it is sufficient if it is one of several concurrent intents; (3) that it must be the chief or dominant intent, any others being subordinate or incidental; (4) that it must be a determining intent, that is to say, an intent in the absence of which the act would not have been done, the remaining purposes being insufficient motives by themselves. It is a question of construction which of those meanings is the true one in the particular case." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 383-84 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

constructive intent. (1864) A legal principle that actual intent will be presumed when an act leading to the result could have been reasonably expected to cause that result.

"Constructive intent is a fiction which permits lip service to the notion that intention is essential to criminality, while recognizing that unintended consequences of an act may sometimes be sufficient for guilt of some offenses." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 835 (3d ed. 1982).

criminal intent. (17c) 1. MENS REA. 2. An intent to commit an actus reus without any justification, excuse, or other defense. — Also termed felonious intent. See specific intent. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 20.]

"The phrase 'criminal intent' is one that has been bandied about with various meanings not carefully distinguished. At times it has been used in the sense of the 'intent to do wrong' (the outline of the mental pattern which is necessary for crime in general), — as, for example, in the phrase 'the mental element commonly called criminal intent.' At times it has been used in the sense of mens rea as the mental element requisite for guilt of the very offense charged, 'a varying state of mind which is the contrary of an innocent state of mind, whatever may be pointed out by the nature of the crime as an innocent state of mind.' Often it is used to include criminal negligence as well as an actual intent to do the harmful deed, although at other times such negligence is referred to as a substitute, so to speak, for criminal intent in connection with certain offenses. Occasionally it is found in the sense of an intent to violate the law, — implying a knowledge of the law violated. On the other hand, as such knowledge is a factor not ordinarily required for conviction it has been pointed out that to establish ignorance of the law does not disprove criminal intent. Thus it has been said (assuming the absence of any circumstance of exculpation) 'whenever an act is criminal, the party doing the act is chargeable with criminal intent.' . . . This suggests a helpful guide for the use of the phrase 'criminal intent.' Some other term such as mens rea or guilty mind should be employed for more general purposes, and 'criminal intent' be restricted to those situations in which there is (1) an intent to do the actus reus, and (2) no circumstance of exculpation." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 832-34 (3d ed. 1982).

donative intent. The intent to surrender dominion and control over the gift that is being made. [Cases: Gifts ↻ 15, 60.]

felonious intent. See criminal intent.

general intent. (17c) The intent to perform an act even though the actor does not desire the consequences that result. • This is the state of mind required for the commission of certain common-law crimes not requiring a specific intent or not imposing strict liability. General intent usu. takes the form of recklessness (involving actual awareness of a risk and the culpable taking of that risk) or negligence (involving blameworthy inadvertence). — Also termed general criminal intent; general mens rea. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 20, 23.]

immediate intent. (18c) The intent relating to a wrongful act; the part of the total intent coincident with the wrongful act itself.

implied intent. (18c) A person's state of mind that can be inferred from speech or conduct, or from language used in an instrument to which the person is a party.

intent to kill. (16c) An intent to cause the death of another; esp., a state of mind that, if found to exist during an assault, can serve as the basis for an aggravated-assault charge. [Cases: Assault and Battery ↻ 49; Homicide ↻ 526.]

larcenous intent. (1832) A state of mind existing when a person (1) knowingly takes away the goods of another without any claim or pretense of a right to do so, and (2) intends to permanently deprive the owner of them

manifest intent. (17c) Intent that is apparent or obvious based on the available circumstantial evidence, even if direct evidence of intent is not available. • For example, some fidelity bonds cover an employer's losses caused by an employee's dishonest or fraudulent acts committed with a manifest intent to cause a loss to the employer and to obtain a benefit for the employee. Establishing manifest intent sufficient to trigger coverage does not require direct evidence that the employee intended the employer's loss. Even if the employee did not actively want that result, but the result was substantially certain to follow from the employee's conduct, the requisite intent will be inferred.

predatory intent. Antitrust. A business's intent to injure a competitor by unfair means, esp. by sacrificing revenues to drive a competitor out of business. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻ 537.]

specific intent. (18c) The intent to accomplish the precise criminal act that one is later charged with. • At common law, the specific-intent crimes were robbery, assault, larceny, burglary, forgery, false pretenses, embezzlement, attempt, solicitation, and conspiracy. — Also termed criminal intent. See SPECIFIC-INTENT DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 20.]

testamentary intent. (1830) A testator's intent that a particular instrument function as his or her last will and testament. • Testamentary intent is required for a will to be valid. [Cases: Wills ↻ 438.]

transferred intent. (1932) Intent that the law may shift from an originally intended wrongful act to a wrongful act actually committed. • For example, if a person intends to kill one person but kills another inadvertently, the intent may be transferred to the actual act. See TRANSFERRED-INTENT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻ 25; Homicide ↻ 555, 702, 731.]

ulterior intent. (1848) The intent that passes beyond a wrongful act and relates to the objective for the sake of which the act is done; MOTIVE. • For example, a thief's immediate intent may be to steal another's money, but the ulterior intent may be to buy food with that money.

2. A lawmaker's state of mind and purpose in drafting or voting for a measure. [Cases: Statutes ↻ 181(1), 184.]

legislative intent. See LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

original intent. (17c) The mental state of the drafters or enactors of the U.S. Constitution, a statute, or another document.

intentio (in-ten-shee-oh), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The part of a formula in which the plaintiff's claim against the defendant is stated. See FORMULA (1). 2. Hist. A count or declaration in a real action. • Intentio was an earlier name for narratio. See NARRATIO. Pl. intentiones (in-ten-shee-oh-nee-z).

intention, n. (14c) The willingness to bring about something planned or foreseen; the state of being set to do something. — intentional, adj.

"Intention is the purpose or design with which an act is done. It is the foreknowledge of the act, coupled with the desire of it, such foreknowledge and desire being the cause of the act, inasmuch as they fulfil themselves through the operation of the will. An act is intentional if, and in so far as, it exists in idea before it exists in fact, the idea realising itself in the fact because of the desire by which it is accompanied." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 378 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"Intention. — This signifies full advertence in the mind of the defendant to his conduct, which is in question, and to its consequences, together with a desire for those consequences." P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 10, at 19 (5th ed. 1950).

intentional, adj. (17c) Done with the aim of carrying out the act.

intentional act. See ACT.

intentional father. See intentional parent under PARENT.

intentional fraud. See FRAUD (1).

intentional infliction of emotional distress. (1958)

The tort of intentionally or recklessly causing another person severe emotional distress through one's extreme or outrageous acts. • In a few jurisdictions, a physical manifestation of the mental suffering is required for the plaintiff to recover. — Abbr. IIED. — Also termed (in some states) outrage. See EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. Cf. NEGLIGENCE INFLECTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. [Cases: Damages ↷ 57.19.]

intentional-injury exclusion. See expected/intended exclusion under EXCLUSION (3).

intentional invasion. See INVASION.

intentional manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter under MANSLAUGHTER.

intentional mother. See intentional parent under PARENT.

intentional parent. See PARENT.

intentional tort. See TORT.

intentional wrong. See WRONG.

intent of the legislature. See LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

intent to kill. See INTENT (1).

intent to publish. Defamation. The intent to communicate (defamatory words, etc.) to a third person or with knowledge that the communication will probably reach third persons. See PUBLISH (2).

intent to use. See BONA FIDE INTENT TO USE.

intent-to-use application. See TRADEMARK APPLICATION.

inter (in-tər), prep. [Latin] Among.

inter alia (in-tər ay-lee-ə or ah-lee-ə), adv. [Latin] (17c) Among other things.

inter alios (in-tər ay-lee-as or ah-lee-əs), adv. [Latin] (17c) Among other persons.

Inter-American Bar Association. An organization of lawyers from North America, Central America, and South America whose purpose is to promote education, cooperation, and professional exchanges among lawyers from different American countries. — Abbr. IABA.

Inter-American Foundation. An independent federal foundation that supports social and economic development in Latin America and the Caribbean by making grants to private, indigenous organizations that carry out self-help projects benefiting poor people. • The agency is governed by a nine-member board — six from the private sector and three from the government. It was created in 1969 as an experimental foreign-assistance program. 22 USCA § 290f. — Abbr. IAF.

inter apices juris (in-tər ay-pə-seez [or ap-ə-seez] joor-is), adv. [Law Latin] Among the subtleties of the law. See APEX JURIS.

intercalare (in-tər-kə-lair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To introduce or insert among others; esp., to introduce a day or month into the calendar. • From this Latin term derives the rare English word intercalate, roughly synonymous with interpolate.

intercedere (in-tər-see-də-ree), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To assume another's debt; esp., to act as surety for another.

intercept, n. Family law. A mechanism by which a portion of an obligor's unemployment benefits, disability income, income-tax refund, or lottery winnings is automatically diverted to a child-support-enforcement agency to satisfy past-due support obligations. [Cases: Child Support ↷ 442, 467.]

intercept, vb. (15c) 1. To divert (money) from a payee to satisfy a financial obligation of the payee. 2. To covertly receive or listen to (a communication). • The term usu. refers to covert reception by a law-enforcement agency. See WIRETAPPING. [Cases: Telecommunications ↷ 1435.]

interchangeable bond. See BOND (3).

intercommon, vb. 1. To share in the rights to a common. 2. Hist. Scots law. To communicate or deal with (criminals or others). 3. Hist. Scots law. To prohibit (a person) from communicating or dealing with a criminal.

inter conjuges (in-tər kahn-jə-gee-z), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Between husband and wife.

inter conjunctas personas (in-tər kən-jəngk-təs pər-soh-nəs), [Latin] Hist. Between conjunct persons. • Generally, conveyances between certain family members were void if designed to defraud.

intercountry adoption. See international adoption under ADOPTION.

intercourse. (15c) 1. Dealings or communications, esp. between businesses, governmental entities, or the like. 2. Physical sexual contact, esp. involving the penetration of the vagina by the penis.

interdependence. Int'l law. The reliance of countries on each other to ensure their mutual subsistence and advancement.

interdict (in-tər-dikt), n. (15c) Roman & civil law. 1. An injunction or other prohibitory, exhibitory, or restitutory decree.

decretal interdict (di-kreet-əl). An interdict that signified the praetor's order or decree by applying the remedy in a pending case.

edictal interdict (ee-dik-təl). An interdict that declared the praetor's intention to give a remedy in certain cases, usu. in a way that preserves or restores possession.

exhibitory interdict. An interdict by which a praetor compelled a person or thing to be produced.

possessory interdict. An interdict that protected a person whose possession was disturbed without due process. • A possessor in bad faith could obtain a possessory interdict because the interdict did not depend on title. It would, however, establish whether the possessor would be the defendant or the plaintiff in any subsequent claim. See INTERDICTUM.

prohibitory interdict. An interdict by which a praetor forbade something to be done.

restitutory interdict (ri-stich-ə-tor-ee or res-ti-t[y] oo-tə-ree). An interdict by which a praetor directed something to be restored to someone who had been dispossessed of it.

2. Civil law. A person who has been interdicted; a natural person who, because of an infirmity, cannot make reasoned decisions about personal care or property or communicate those decisions; a person deprived of the capacity to make juridical acts. La. Civ. Code arts. 389, 390, 394.

limited interdict. A person whose right to care for himself or herself is restricted by a court decision because of mental incapacity; a person subject to limited interdiction. La. Civ. Code art. 390. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 36.]

interdict (in-tər-dikt), vb. (15c) 1. To forbid or restrain. 2. To intercept and seize (contraband, etc.). 3. Civil law. To remove a person's right to handle personal affairs because of mental incapacity. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 36.]

interdiction. 1. The act of forbidding or restraining.

interdiction of commercial intercourse. Int'l law. A governmental prohibition of commercial trade.

2. The interception and seizure of something, esp. contraband. 3. Civil law. The act of depriving a person of the right to handle his or her own affairs because of mental incapacity. See EX CAPITE INTERDICTIONIS. Cf. GUARDIANSHIP (1); CURATORSHIP; CURATOR (2).

"Interdiction, now scarcely known in practice, was a means formerly adopted for the protection of those who were weak, facile, and easily imposed upon, and also for the protection of those who, being reckless and profuse, were unable to manage their estate with care and prudence.

Interdiction was either judicial or voluntary: and in whichever of these modes the interdiction was effected and imposed, any disposition of heritage thereafter by the interdicted, without the consent of his interdictors, was liable to reduction on the ground of interdiction, except where the conveyances were onerous and rational." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 193 (4th ed. 1894).

complete interdiction. See full interdiction.

full interdiction. The complete removal of one's right to care for oneself and one's affairs or estate because of mental incapacity. La. Civ. Code art. 389. — Also termed complete interdiction. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 101.]

limited interdiction. See partial interdiction.

partial interdiction. The partial removal of one's right to care for oneself and one's affairs or estate because of mental incapacity. — Also termed limited interdiction. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 101.]

interdictory (in-tər-dik-tər-ee), adj. 1. Of or relating to an interdiction. 2. Having the power to interdict. — Also termed interdictive.

interdictum (in-tər-dik-təm), n. [Latin] Roman law. A summary order to secure the applicant's rights by preventing something from being done (prohibitory interdict) or requiring property to be produced (exhibitory interdict) or restored (restitutory interdict). • A party might apply for an interdictum when some wrong had been done, or was likely to be done, and it was necessary either to redress or to prevent the wrong at once, without waiting for the ordinary legal processes; often it was a preliminary to an ordinary action (e.g., by settling which party was entitled to be defendant in the action). Pl. interdicta.

interdictum quod vi aut clam (in-tər-dik-təm kwod vī awt klam). [Latin "interdict because of force or stealth"] Roman law. An interdict issued against a person who forcibly (vi) or secretly (clam) altered or occupied the claimant's property. • The interdict required the defendant to restore the property to its previous condition. Cf. actio vi bonorum raptorum under ACTIO.

inter eosdem (in-tər ee-ahs-dəm). [Latin] Hist. Between the same persons.

interesse (in-tər-es-ee). [Latin] 1. Monetary interest. 2. A legal interest in property.

interessee (in-tə-re-see). See real party in interest under PARTY (2).

interesse termini (in-tər-es-ee tər-mə-nī). [Latin "interest of term or end"] Archaic. A lessee's right of entry onto the leased property; esp., a lessee's interest in real property before taking possession. • An interesse termini is not an estate; it is an interest for the term. It gives the lessee a claim against any person who prevents the lessee from entering or accepting delivery of the property. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨ 1, 20, 70.]

"[The interesse termini's] essential qualities, as a mere interest, in contradistinction to a term in possession, seems to arise from a want of possession. It is a right or interest only, and not an estate, and it has the properties of a right. It may be extinguished by a release to the lessor, and it may be assigned or granted away, but it cannot, technically considered, be surrendered; for there is no reversion before entry, in which the interest may drown. Nor will a release from the lessor operate by way of enlargement, for the lessee has no estate before entry." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *97 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

"There was a troublesome doctrine of the common law which established, in the case of a lease not operating under the Statute of Uses, that the lessee acquired no estate in the land until he actually entered into possession. Until that time he was said to have a mere right to take possession, and this right was called an interesse termini. This requisite of entry to perfect a lease has, however, been swept away by the Law of Property Act, 1925, and all terms of years absolute, whether created before or after the commencement of the Act, can take effect from the date fixed for the commencement of the term without actual entry." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 128-29 (3d ed. 1933).

interest, n. (15c) 1. The object of any human desire; esp., advantage or profit of a financial nature <conflict of interest>. 2. A legal share in something; all or part of a legal or equitable claim to or right in property <right, title, and interest>. • Collectively, the word includes any aggregation of rights, privileges, powers, and immunities; distributively, it refers to any one right, privilege, power, or immunity.

beneficial interest. (18c) A right or expectancy in something (such as a trust or an estate), as opposed to legal title to that thing. • For example, a person with a beneficial interest in a trust receives income from the trust but does not hold legal title to the trust property. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↷73; Trusts ↷140(1).]

carried interest. 1. The share of any profits produced by a partnership's investment, paid to the general partner as compensation for managing the investment. • The general partner often contributes little or no capital to acquire the investment but gains an interest in it by providing time and skill. The general partner's interest in the property is "carried" with the property until it is liquidated. 2. Oil & gas. In an oil-and-gas lease, a fractional interest that is free of some or all costs of exploring, drilling, and completing the well. • The owner of a carried lease may earn royalties on production but does not have a working interest, at least until all costs are recouped by the working-interest owner or owners, and often until some multiple of those costs are paid.

contingent interest. (18c) An interest that the holder may enjoy only upon the occurrence of a condition precedent.

controlling interest. Sufficient ownership of stock in a company to control policy and management; esp., a greater-than-50% ownership interest in an enterprise. [Cases: Corporations ↷180.]

defeasible interest. An interest that the holder may enjoy until the occurrence of a condition. [Cases: Wills ↷602.]

direct interest. (17c) A certain, absolute interest <the juror was disqualified because she had a direct interest in the lawsuit>.

entailed interest. An interest that devolves through lineal descendants only as a result of a fee tail. [Cases: Estates in Property ↷12.]

entire interest. (17c) A whole interest or right, without diminution. See FEE SIMPLE.

equitable interest. (17c) An interest held by virtue of an equitable title or claimed on equitable grounds, such as the interest held by a trust beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts ↷139.]

executory interest. See EXECUTORY INTEREST.

expectation interest. (1836) The interest of a nonreaching party in being put in the position that would have resulted if the contract had been performed. See expectation damages under DAMAGES; BENEFIT-OF-THE-BARGAIN RULE. [Cases: Damages ↷117; Fraud ↷59(2).]

financial interest. An interest involving money or its equivalent; esp., an interest in the nature of an investment. — Also termed pecuniary interest.

fractional interest. See undivided interest.

future interest. (17c) A property interest in which the privilege of possession or of other enjoyment is future and not present. • A future interest can exist in either the grantor (as with a reversion) or the grantee (as with a remainder or executory interest). Today, most future interests are equitable interests in stocks and debt securities, with power of sale in a trustee. — Also termed future estate; expectant estate; estate in expectancy. Cf. present interest under INTEREST (2). [Cases: Estates in Property ↷1.]

"[T]he interest is an existing interest from the time of its creation, and is looked upon as a part of the total ownership of the land or other thing [that] is its subject matter. In that sense, future interest is somewhat misleading, and it is applied only to indicate that the possession or enjoyment of the subject matter is to take place in the future." Lewis M. Simes & Allan F. Smith, The Law of Future Interests § 1, at 2-3 (2d ed. 1956).

"To own a future interest now means not only to be entitled now to judicial protection of one's possible future possession, but also (in most cases) to be able to make transfers now of that right of possible future possession." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 56 (2d ed. 1984). "When O transfers today 'to A for five years,' we can say either that O has a future interest or that he has a 'present' estate subject to a term for years in A. Similarly, when O transfers today his entire estate in fee simple absolute by a conveyance 'to A for five years, then to B and his heirs,' we can say either that B has a future interest or that he has a 'present' estate subject to a term for years in A. Unhappily, the fact that we have two locutions available to us can be a source of confusion . . ." Id. at 42.

inalienable interest. (1848) An interest that cannot be sold or traded.

inchoate interest. (1800) A property interest that has not yet vested. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ↷ 29–53.]

insurable interest. (18c) A legal interest in another person's life or health or in the protection of property from injury, loss, destruction, or pecuniary damage. • To take out an insurance policy, the purchaser or the potential insured's beneficiary must have an insurable interest. If a policy does not have an insurable interest as its basis, it will usu. be considered a form of wagering and thus be held unenforceable. See wager policy under INSURANCE POLICY. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1779–1795.]

interest in the use and enjoyment of land. The pleasure, comfort, and advantage that a person may derive from the occupancy of land. • The term includes not only the interests that a person may have for residential, agricultural, commercial, industrial, and other purposes, but also interests in having the present-use value of the land unimpaired by changes in its physical condition. [Cases: Nuisance ↷ 1.]

joint interest. An interest that is acquired at the same time and by the same title as another person's. See joint tenancy under TENANCY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↷ 1.]

junior interest. An interest that is subordinate to a senior interest.

legal interest. (17c) 1. An interest that has its origin in the principles, standards, and rules developed by courts of law as opposed to courts of chancery. 2. An interest recognized by law, such as legal title.

legally protected interest. A property interest that the law will protect against impairment or destruction, whether in law or in equity.

liberty interest. (1960) An interest protected by the due-process clauses of state and federal constitutions. See FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT (2). [Cases: Constitutional Law ↷ 3873.]

multiple interest. A property interest that is good against an indefinitely large number of people.

pecuniary interest. See financial interest.

possessory interest. See POSSESSORY INTEREST.

present interest. (17c) 1. A property interest in which the privilege of possession or enjoyment is present and not merely future; an interest entitling the holder to immediate possession. — Also termed present estate. Cf. FUTURE INTEREST. [Cases: Estates in Property ↷ 1.] 2. A trust interest in which the beneficiary has the immediate beneficial enjoyment of the trust's proceeds. 3. A trust interest in which the trustee has the immediate right to control and manage the property in trust.

proprietary interest. (17c) A property right; specif., the interest held by a property owner together with all appurtenant rights, such as a stockholder's right to vote the shares. [Cases: Corporations ↷ 635.]

reliance interest. (1936) The interest of a nonbreaching party in being put in the position that would have resulted if the contract had not been made, including out-of-pocket costs. [Cases: Damages ↷ 117.]

restitution interest. A nonbreaching party's interest in preventing the breaching party from retaining a benefit received under the contract and thus being unjustly enriched. • The benefit may have been received from the nonbreaching party or from a third party. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ↷ 4.]

reversionary interest. A future interest left in the transferor or successor in interest. See REVERSION. [Cases: Reversions ↷ 1.]

senior interest. An interest that takes precedence over others; esp., a debt security or preferred share that has a higher claim on a corporation's assets and earnings than that of a junior obligation or common share.

terminable interest. (1883) An interest that may be terminated upon the lapse of time or upon the occurrence of some condition.

undivided interest. (18c) An interest held under the same title by two or more persons, whether their rights are equal or unequal in value or quantity. — Also termed undivided right; undivided title; fractional interest. See joint tenancy and tenancy in common under TENANCY. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ↷ 1; Tenancy in Common ↷ 1.]

vested interest. (18c) An interest for which the right to its enjoyment, either present or future, is not subject to the happening of a condition precedent.

working interest. See WORKING INTEREST.

3. The compensation fixed by agreement or allowed by law for the use or detention of money, or for the loss of money by one who is entitled to its use; esp., the amount owed to a lender in return for the use of borrowed money. — Also termed finance charge. See USURY. [Cases: Interest ↷ 1, 8.]

accrued interest. (18c) Interest that is earned but not yet paid, such as interest that accrues on real estate and that will be paid when the property is sold if, in the meantime, the rental income does not cover the mortgage payments.

add-on interest. (1952) Interest that is computed on the original face amount of a loan and that remains the same even as the principal declines. • A $10,000 loan with add-on interest at 8% payable over three years would require equal annual interest payments of $800 for three years, regardless of the unpaid principal amount. With add-on interest, the effective rate of interest is typically about twice the stated add-on interest rate. In the example just cited, then, the effective rate of interest would be about 16%. — Also termed block interest. See add-on loan under LOAN.

Boston interest. Interest computed by using a 30-day month rather than the exact number of days in the month. — Also termed New York interest.

compound interest. (17c) Interest paid on both the principal and the previously accumulated interest. Cf. simple interest. [Cases: Interest ↷60; Usury ↷49.]

conventional interest. (1878) Interest at a rate agreed to by the parties themselves, as distinguished from that prescribed by law. Cf. interest as damages. [Cases: Interest ↷4, 32.]

discount interest. The interest that accrues on a discounted investment instrument (such as a government bond) as it matures. • The investor receives the interest when the instrument is redeemed. [Cases: United States ↷91.]

gross interest. (1884) A borrower's interest payment that includes administrative, service, and insurance charges.

imputed interest. (1968) Interest income that the IRS attributes to a lender regardless of whether the lender actually receives interest from the borrower. • This is common esp. in loans between family members. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3132.20.]

interest as damages. (1841) Interest allowed by law in the absence of a promise to pay it, as compensation for a delay in paying a fixed sum or a delay in assessing and paying damages. Cf. conventional interest.

lawful interest. 1. A rate of interest that is less than or equal to the statutory maximum. [Cases: Usury ↷42; Wills ↷602.] 2. See legal interest.

legal interest. 1. Interest at a rate usu. prescribed by statute. • Courts often order monetary judgments to accumulate legal interest until paid. Cf. legal rate under interest rate. [Cases: Interest ↷31, 39(3).] 2. See legal interest.

illegal interest. See USURY.

moratory interest. See prejudgment interest.

New York interest. See Boston interest.

prejudgment interest. Statutorily prescribed interest accrued either from the date of the loss or from the date when the complaint was filed up to the date the final judgment is entered. • Prejudgment interest is usu. calculated only for liquidated sums. Depending on the statute, it may or may not be an element of damages. — Also termed moratory interest. [Cases: Interest ↷39(2.5).]

prepaid interest. (1887) Interest paid before it is earned. [Cases: Usury ↷44.]

qualified residence interest. (1993) Tax. Interest paid on debt that is secured by one's home and that was incurred to purchase, build, improve, or refinance the home. • This type of interest is deductible from adjusted gross income. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3282.]

simple interest. (17c) Interest paid on the principal only and not on accumulated interest. • Interest accrues only on the principal balance regardless of how often interest is paid. — Also termed straight-line interest. Cf. compound interest. [Cases: Interest ↷60.]

straight-line interest. See simple interest.

unearned interest. (1880) Interest received by a financial institution before it is earned.

unlawful interest. See USURY.

interest-analysis technique. (1964) Conflict of laws. A method of resolving choice-of-law questions by reviewing a state's laws and the state's interests in enforcing those laws to determine whether that state's laws or those of another state should apply. — Also termed governmental-interest-analysis technique. [Cases: Action ↷17.]

"Professor Brainerd Currie gets the major credit for developing the interest analysis, or governmental interest analysis, technique. Interest analysis requires an examination into competing laws to determine their underlying policies and the strength of the relative interests the competing sovereigns have in the application of their respective laws in the particular situation. The facts will vary and the strength of the relevant policies will wax and wane accordingly." David D. Siegel, Conflicts in a Nutshell 237 (2d ed. 1994).

interest arbitration. See ARBITRATION.

interest as damages. See INTEREST (3).

interest-based quorum. See QUORUM.

interest bond. See BOND (3).

interest coupon. See COUPON.

interest-coverage ratio. The ratio between a company's pretax earnings and the annual interest payable on bonds and loans.

interested party. See PARTY (2).

interested person. See PERSON (1).

interested shareholder. See SHAREHOLDER.

interested stockholder. See interested shareholder under SHAREHOLDER.

interested witness. See WITNESS.

interest-equalization tax. See TAX.

interest factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, an estimate of the interest or rate of return that the insurer will earn on premium payments over the life of a policy.

• The interest factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See PREMIUM RATE; gross premium (1) under PREMIUM (1). Cf. MORTALITY FACTOR; RISK FACTOR. [Cases: Insurance ↷1542(1).]

interest-free loan. See LOAN.

Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts. A program that allows a lawyer or law firm to deposit a client's retained funds into an interest-bearing account that designates the interest payments to charitable, law-related purposes, such as providing legal aid to the poor. • Almost all states have either a voluntary or mandatory IOLTA program. — Abbr. IOLTA. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↷120.]

interest-only loan. See LOAN.

interest-only mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

interest policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

interest rate. (1886) The percentage that a borrower of money must pay to the lender in return for the use of the money, usu. expressed as a percentage of the principal payable for a one-year period. — Often shortened to rate. — Also termed rate of interest. [Cases: Interest ↻27–38.]

annual percentage rate. (1941) The actual cost of borrowing money, expressed in the form of an annualized interest rate. — Abbr. APR.

bank rate. The rate of interest at which the Federal Reserve lends funds to member banks.

contract rate. (1856) The interest rate printed on the face of a bond certificate.

coupon rate. 1. The specific interest rate for a coupon bond. — Also termed coupon interest rate. See coupon bond under BOND (3). 2. See nominal rate.

discount rate. (1913) 1. The interest rate at which a member bank may borrow money from the Federal Reserve. • This rate controls the supply of money available to banks for lending. Cf. rediscount rate. 2. The percentage of a commercial paper's face value paid by an issuer who sells the instrument to a financial institution. 3. The interest rate used in calculating present value.

effective rate. (1912) The actual annual interest rate, which incorporates compounding when calculating interest, rather than the stated rate or coupon rate.

face rate. See nominal rate.

floating rate. (1921) A varying interest rate that is tied to a financial index such as the prime rate.

illegal rate. (1867) An interest rate higher than the rate allowed by law. See USURY. [Cases: Usury ↻42.]

legal rate. (1857) 1. The interest rate imposed as a matter of law when none is provided by contract. [Cases: Interest ↻31.] 2. The maximum interest rate, set by statute, that may be charged on a loan. See legal interest under INTEREST (3). Cf. USURY. [Cases: Usury ↻42.]

lock rate. (2000) A mortgage-application interest rate that is established and guaranteed for a specified period. — Also termed locked-in rate.

nominal rate. (1872) The interest rate stated in a loan agreement or on a bond, with no adjustment made for inflation. — Also termed coupon rate; face rate; stated rate; stated interest rate.

prime rate. (1952) The interest rate that a commercial bank holds out as its lowest rate for a short-term loan to its most creditworthy borrowers, usu. large corporations. • This rate, which can vary slightly from bank to bank, often dictates other interest rates for various personal and commercial loans. — Often shortened to prime. — Also termed prime lending rate.

real rate. (1895) An interest rate that has been adjusted for inflation over time.

rediscount rate. The interest rate at which a member bank may borrow from the Federal Reserve on a loan secured by commercial paper that has already been resold by the bank.

stated rate. See nominal rate.

variable rate. (1970) An interest rate that varies at preset intervals in relation to the current market rate (usu. the prime rate).

interest-rate swap. An agreement to exchange interest receipts or interest-payment obligations, usu. to adjust one's risk exposure, to speculate on interest-rate changes, or to convert an instrument or obligation from a fixed to a floating rate — or from a floating to a fixed rate. • The parties to such an agreement are termed "counterparties."

generic swap. See plain-vanilla swap.

plain-vanilla swap. A typical interest-rate swap that involves one counterparty's paying a fixed interest rate while the other assumes a floating interest rate based on the amount of the principal of the underlying debt. • The underlying debt, called the "notional" amount of the swap, does not change hands — only the interest payments are exchanged. — Also termed generic swap.

interest unity. See unity of interest under UNITY.

interferant. 1. Something that interferes with the proper function of a chemical analysis; specif., a chemical contaminant that renders the results of a blood, breath, or urine test unreliable. 2. Patents. A party to an interference proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • This term declined in use after the 1960s; today the PTO and courts use the term "contestant." — Also termed (in sense 2) contestant. See CONTESTANT (3). [Cases: Patents ↻106(1).]

interference, n. (18c) 1. The act of meddling in another's affairs. 2. An obstruction or hindrance. 3. Patents. An administrative proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine who is entitled to the patent when two or more applicants claim the same invention, or when an application interferes with an existing patent. • This proceeding occurs when the same invention is claimed (1) in two pending applications, or (2) in one pending application and a patent issued within a year of the pending application's filing date. — Also termed priority contest. [Cases: Patents ↻106.] 4. Trademarks. An administrative proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine whether a mark one party wants to register will cause confusion among consumers with another party's mark. • An administrative hearing may be held to determine whose mark prevails, but applicants usu. withdraw their applications and devise new marks instead. [Cases: Trademarks ↻1289.] — interfere, vb.

interference-estoppel rejection. See REJECTION.

interference with a business relationship. See TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH PROSPECTIVE ADVANTAGE.

interference with a contractual relationship. See TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.

interference with contract. See TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.

intergenerational love. 1. Affection between adults and children. • This sense usu. refers to interfamilial affection, as between grandparents and grandchildren, and does not include sexual feelings. 2. Romance or sexual contact between a child below the age of consent and an adult. • Pedophiles use the term as a euphemism to assert that sexual contact between adults and children is consensual.

intergovernmental immunity. See IMMUNITY (1).

intergovernmental-immunity doctrine. (1939) Constitutional law. The principle that both the federal government and the states are independent sovereigns, and that neither sovereign may intrude on the other in certain political spheres. Cf. PREEMPTION (5). [Cases: States ⇨ 18.93.]

Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization. A unit of the United Nations charged with setting international standards for vessel safety and personnel training for shipping on the open seas. — Abbr. IMCO.

interim, adj. (16c) Done, made, or occurring for an intervening time; temporary or provisional <an interim director>.

interim bond. See BOND (2).

interim committitur (in-tə-rim kə-mit-ə-tər). [Latin “in the meantime, let him be committed”] A court order directing that a defendant be incarcerated pending further action.

interim curator. See CURATOR (2).

interim dominus (in-tər-im dōm-ə-nəs). [Law Latin] Hist. Proprietor in the meantime. • The feminine form is domina.

“A widow is interim domina of terce lands after her service, and in virtue thereof may either possess them herself, or let them out to tenants.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 286 (4th ed. 1894).

interim financing. See FINANCING.

interim measure of protection. Int’l law. An international tribunal’s order to prevent a litigant from prejudicing the final outcome of a lawsuit by arbitrary action before a judgment has been reached. • This measure is comparable to a temporary injunction in national law.

interim-occupancy agreement. (1962) A contract governing an arrangement (called a leaseback) whereby the seller rents back property from the buyer. See LEASEBACK.

interim order. See ORDER (2).

interim receipt. See RECEIPT.

interim relief. See RELIEF.

interim statement. Accounting. A periodic financial report issued during the fiscal year (usu. quarterly) that indicates the company’s current performance. • The SEC requires the company to file such a statement if it is distributed to the company’s shareholders. — Also termed interim report.

interim trustee. See TRUSTEE (2).

interim zoning. See ZONING.

interinsurance. See reciprocal insurance under INSURANCE.

interinsurance exchange. See RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE.

Interior Department. See DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

interlineation (in-tər-lin-ee-ay-shən), n. (15c) 1. The act of writing something between the lines of an earlier writing. 2. Something written between the lines of an earlier writing. Cf. INTERPOLATION (1). — interline, vb.

interlining. A carrier’s practice of transferring a shipment to another carrier to reach a destination not served by the transferring carrier.

interlocking confessions. See CONFESSION.

interlocking director. See DIRECTOR.

interlocutor (in-tər-lək-yə-tər). Scots law. A nonfinal judicial order disposing of any part of a case.

interlocutory (in-tər-lək-yə-tər-ee), adj. (15c) (Of an order, judgment, appeal, etc.) interim or temporary; not constituting a final resolution of the whole controversy. — Also termed medial. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 66–84; Criminal Law ⇨ 1023(3); Federal Courts ⇨ 572–583.]

interlocutory appeal. See APPEAL.

Interlocutory Appeals Act. A federal statute, enacted in 1958, that grants discretion to a U.S. court of appeals to review an interlocutory order in a civil case if the trial judge states in writing that the order involves a controlling question of law on which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion, and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the termination of the litigation. 28 USCA § 1292(b). Cf. FINALITY DOCTRINE; FINAL-JUDGMENT RULE. [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨ 660.1.] interlocutory application. See APPLICATION.

interlocutory costs. See COSTS (3).

interlocutory decision. See interlocutory order under ORDER (2).

interlocutory decree. See interlocutory judgment under JUDGMENT.

interlocutory injunction. See preliminary injunction under INJUNCTION.

interlocutory judgment. See JUDGMENT.

interlocutory order. See ORDER (2).

interloper, n. (16c) 1. One who interferes without justification. 2. One who trades illegally. — interlope, vb.

intermeddler. See OFFICIOUS INTERMEDDLER.

intermediary (in-tər-mee-dee-er-ee), n. (18c) A mediator or go-between; a third-party negotiator. Cf. FINDER (1). — intermediate (in-tər-mee-dee-ayt), vb.

informed intermediary. Products liability. A person who is in the chain of distribution from the manufacturer to the consumer and who knows the risks of the product. — Also termed learned intermediary. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨136.]

intermediary bank. See BANK.

intermediate account. See ACCOUNT.

intermediate casing. See CASING.

intermediate court. See COURT.

intermediate order. See interlocutory order under ORDER (2).

intermediate scrutiny. (1974) Constitutional law. A standard lying between the extremes of rational-basis review and strict scrutiny. • Under the standard, if a statute contains a quasi-suspect classification (such as gender or legitimacy), the classification must be substantially related to the achievement of an important governmental objective. — Also termed middle-level scrutiny; mid-level scrutiny; heightened scrutiny. Cf. STRICT SCRUTINY; RATIONAL-BASIS TEST. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨3061.]

intermediation. (17c) 1. Any process involving an intermediary. 2. The placing of funds with a financial intermediary that reinvests the funds, such as a bank that lends the funds to others or a mutual fund that invests the funds in stocks, bonds, or other instruments.

in terminis (in tər-mə-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. In express terms; expressly.

in terminis terminantibus (in tər-mə-nis tər-mə-nan-ti-bəs), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Hist. In terms of determination; in express or determinate terms.

intermittent easement. See EASEMENT.

intermittent sentence. See SENTENCE.

intermixture of goods. See CONFUSION OF GOODS.

intermodal transport. See MULTIMODAL SHIPPING.

intermunicipal law. See private international law under INTERNATIONAL LAW.

intern, n. (1889) An advanced student or recent graduate who is apprenticing to gain practical experience before entering a specific profession. See CLERK (4). — internship, n.

intern, vb. (1866) 1. To segregate and confine a person or group, esp. those suspected of hostile sympathies in time of war. See INTERNMENT. [Cases: War and National Emergency ⇨51.] 2. To work in an internship.

internal act. See ACT.

internal-affairs doctrine. Conflict of laws. The rule that in disputes involving a corporation and its relationships with its shareholders, directors, officers, or agents, the law to be applied is the law of the state of incorporation.

• This doctrine applies in the majority of states. In a few states, notably California and New York, foreign corporations must meet state-law requirements in specified circumstances. [Cases: Corporations ⇨640.]

"Broadly speaking, 'corporate internal affairs' refers to the powers and obligations of a corporation's manager vis-a-vis the corporation and its shareholders, and the rights and duties of the corporation's shareholders vis-a-vis the corporation, its management and the other shareholders. Put differently, corporate internal affairs pretty much encompass the subject matter of those state laws typically referred to as corporate law. In dealing with a corporation's internal affairs, courts . . . have looked to the law of the state of incorporation for the governing rule. Courts often refer to this choice of law principle as the 'internal affairs doctrine.'" Franklin A. Gevurtz, Corporation Law 36 (2000).

internal affairs of a foreign corporation. Conflict of laws. Matters that involve only the inner workings of a corporation, such as dividend declarations and the selection of officers. [Cases: Corporations ⇨640.]

"The old statement that a court will not hear cases involving the internal affairs of a foreign corporation has been practically dropped from the law today, and the result when appropriate is achieved under the forum non conveniens rule. Modern courts recognize their jurisdiction to entertain such suits, and insist only upon a discretionary power to refuse to exercise the existent jurisdiction when the facts make it both feasible and more desirable for the case to be heard by a court of the state of incorporation." Robert A. Leflar, American Conflicts Law § 255, at 512-13 (3d ed. 1977).

internal attack. A beneficiary's questioning of the propriety of a trust's continuance, the purpose being to terminate the trust and receive from the trustee the interests held for the beneficiary's benefit.

internal audit. See AUDIT.

internal commerce. See intrastate commerce under COMMERCE.

internal financing. See FINANCING.

internal law. See LAW.

internal litigation-hold letter. See LITIGATION-HOLD LETTER.

internally displaced person. See displaced person under PERSON (1).

internal rate of return. See RATE OF RETURN.

internal revenue. Governmental revenue derived from domestic taxes rather than from customs or import duties. — Also termed (outside the United States) inland revenue.

Internal Revenue Code. Title 26 of the U.S. Code, containing all current federal tax laws. — Abbr. IRC. — Also termed tax law.

Internal Revenue Service. A unit in the U.S. Department of the Treasury responsible for enforcing and administering the internal-revenue laws and other tax laws except those relating to alcohol, tobacco, firearms, and explosives. — Abbr. IRS. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨3003, 4440-4443.]

internal security. The field of law dealing with measures taken to protect a country from subversive activities.

internal-security act. (1950) A statute illegalizing and controlling subversive activities of organizations whose purpose is believed to be to overthrow or disrupt the government. • In the United States, many provisions in such statutes have been declared unconstitutional. One such law was repealed in 1993. See 50 USCA § 781. [Cases: Treason ↪ 1.]

internal sovereignty. See SOVEREIGNTY (3).

internal waters. Any natural or artificial body or stream of water within the territorial limits of a country, such as a bay, gulf, river mouth, creek, harbor, port, lake, or canal. — Also termed inland waters.

"Waters on the landward side of the baseline of the territorial sea form part of the internal waters of a State." Geneva Convention on the Territorial Sea and the Contiguous Zone, Apr. 29, 1958, art. 5, ¶ 1.

international administrative law. See ADMINISTRATIVE LAW.

international agreement. (1871) A treaty or other contract between different countries, such as GATT or NAFTA. See GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE; NORTH AMERICAN FREE TRADE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Treaties ↪ 1-14.]

"Though international agreements are known by a variety of titles, such as treaties, conventions, pacts, acts, declarations, protocols, accords, arrangements, concordats, and modi vivendi, none of these terms has an absolutely fixed meaning. The more formal political agreements, however, are usually called treaties or conventions." Oscar Svarlien, An Introduction to the Law of Nations 261 (1955).

international application. See PATENT APPLICATION.

international application designating the United States. See PATENT APPLICATION.

international application originating in the United States. See PATENT APPLICATION.

International Association. See L'ASSOCIATION LITTÉRAIRE ET ARTISTIQUE INTERNATIONALE.

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. See WORLD BANK.

international bill of exchange. See foreign draft under DRAFT.

International Bureau for the Protection of Intellectual Property. Copyright. A predecessor of the World Intellectual Property Organization. • The bureau was created by combining the Paris Convention's Secretariat (the International Bureau for the Paris Convention) with the Berne Copyright Convention of 1886. It was supervised by the Swiss government until 1970, when the bureau became part of WIPO. — Also termed Bureaux Internationaux Reunis pour la Protection de la Propriété Intellectuelle; BIRPI.

International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes. An autonomous division of the World Bank consisting of an international three-member tribunal that presides over arbitrations affecting the rights of foreign investors. • The center was created in 1966 under the Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes Between States and Nationals of Other States.

It provides services for the conciliation and arbitration of international investment and trade disputes. — Abbr. ICSID.

international commerce. See COMMERCE.

international control. Int'l law. The supervision over countries and their subdivisions for the purpose of ensuring the conformity of their conduct with international law.

"[S]upervision is exercised increasingly not only over the conduct of governmental and intergovernmental institutions, but also over the acts and omissions of individuals to establish their conformity with requirements of public international law. Yet even where supranational entities, notably the European Communities, exercise international control over the conduct of individuals and corporate bodies, generally the supervision is destined to verify or secure conformity of governmental measures with relevant rules of law." Hugo J. Hahn, "International Controls," in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1079-80 (1995).

International Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations. See ROME CONVENTION.

International Court of Justice. The 15-member permanent tribunal that is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. • The Court sits in the Hague, Netherlands. It has jurisdiction to decide disputes submitted to it by nations, and to render advisory opinions requested by the United Nations and its specialized agencies. The U.N. Security Council has the express power to enforce the Court's judgments. — Abbr. ICJ. — Also termed World Court. [Cases: International Law ↪ 10.45.]

international crime. Int'l law. A grave breach of international law, such as genocide or a crime against humanity, made a punishable offense by treaties or applicable rules of customary international law. • An international crime occurs when three conditions are satisfied: (1) the criminal norm must derive either from a treaty concluded under international law or from customary international law, and must have direct binding force on individuals without intermediate provisions of municipal law, (2) the provision must be made for the prosecution of acts penalized by international law in accordance with the principle of universal jurisdiction, so that the international character of the crime might show in the mode of prosecution itself (e.g., before the International Criminal Court), and (3) a treaty establishing liability for the act must bind the great majority of countries. — Also termed international offense.

International Criminal Court. A court established by a treaty known as the Statute of the International Criminal Court (effective 2002), with jurisdiction over genocides, crimes against humanity, war crimes, and aggression. It sits in The Hague, Netherlands. — Abbr. ICC.

International Criminal Police Organization. An international law-enforcement group founded in 1923 and headquartered in Lyons, France. • The organization gathers and shares information on transnational criminals for more than 180 member nations. — Also termed Interpol.

"Interpol is something of a legal curiosity: it engages in intergovernmental activities and yet is not based on any treaty, convention, or other similar instrument. Its founding document is a constitution, drawn up by a group of police officers, that has neither been submitted for diplomatic signatures nor ratified by governments. Nevertheless, the organization received de facto recognition from the outset. . . . Interpol was formally granted the status of an 'intergovernmental agency' by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations in 1971, and this is regarded as a form of de jure legitimization." Michael Fooner, "Interpol," in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 910, 910 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

international economic law. (1939) International law relating to investment, economic relations, economic development, economic institutions, and regional economic integration.

international enclave. See ENCLAVE.

international extradition. See EXTRADITION.

international filing date. See PCT FILING DATE.

international fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

internationalization. The act or process of bringing a territory of one country under the protection or control of another or of several countries.

"[T]he concept of internationalization is characterized by three elements: the abolition or limitation of the sovereignty of a specific State; the serving of community interests or at least the interests of a group of States; and the establishment of an international institutional framework, not necessarily involving an international organization." Rüdiger Wolfrum, "Internationalization," in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1395 (1995).

international jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

international law. (18c) The legal system governing the relationships between nations; more modernly, the law of international relations, embracing not only nations but also such participants as international organizations and individuals (such as those who invoke their human rights or commit war crimes). — Also termed public international law; law of nations; law of nature and nations; jus gentium; jus gentium publicum; jus inter gentes; foreign-relations law; interstate law; law between states (the word state, in the latter two phrases, being equivalent to nation or country). Cf. TRANSNATIONAL LAW. [Cases: International Law ⇨ 1–13.]

"[I]nternational law or the law of nations must be defined as law applicable to states in their mutual relations and to individuals in their relations with states. International law may also, under this hypothesis, be applicable to certain interrelationships of individuals themselves, where such interrelationships involve matters of international concern." Philip C. Jessup, A Modern Law of Nations 17 (1949).

customary international law. International law that derives from the practice of states and is accepted by them as legally binding. • This is one of the principal sources or building blocks of the international legal system.

private international law. International conflict of laws. • Legal scholars frequently lament the name "private international law" because it misleadingly suggests a body of law somehow parallel to public international law, when in fact it is merely a part of each legal system's private law. — Also termed international private law; jus gentium privatum; inter-municipal law; comity; extraterritorial recognition of rights. See CONFLICT OF LAWS (2).

"[A] word must be said about the name or title of the subject. No name commands universal approval. The expression 'Private International Law,' coined by Story in 1834 [Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Conflict of Laws § 9 (1834)], and used on the Continent by [Jean Jacques Gaspard] Foelix in 1838, has been adopted by Westlake and Foote and most French authors. The chief criticism directed against its use is its tendency to confuse private international law with the law of nations or public international law, as it is usually called. There are obvious differences between the two. The latter primarily governs the relations between sovereign states and it may perhaps be regarded as the common law of mankind in an early state of development; the former is designed to regulate disputes of a private nature, notwithstanding that one of the parties may be a private state. There is, at any rate in theory, one common system of public international law . . . ; but . . . there are as many systems of private international law as there are systems of municipal law." G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 15 (6th ed. 1961).

International Law Commission. A body created in 1947 by the United Nations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development and codification of international law. • The Commission is composed of experts in international law. It has drafted many important treaties that have become binding treaty law, including the Vienna Convention on the Law on Treaties.

international legal community. (1928) 1. The collective body of countries whose mutual legal relations are based on sovereign equality. 2. More broadly, all organized entities having the capacity to take part in international legal relations. 3. An integrated organization on which a group of countries, by international treaty, confer part of their powers for amalgamated enterprise. • In this sense, the European Union is a prime example.

international legislation. Int'l law. 1. Law-making among countries or intergovernmental organizations, displaying structural and procedural characteristics that are the same as national legislation. 2. The product of any concerted effort to change international law by statute. 3. The process of trying to change international law by statute. 4. Loosely, the adoption by international bodies of binding decisions, other than judicial and arbitral decisions, concerning specific situations or disputes.

International Monetary Fund. A U.N. specialized agency established to stabilize international exchange rates and promote balanced trade. — Abbr. IMF. [Cases: International Law ⇨ 10.10.]

international offense. See INTERNATIONAL CRIME.

international organization. (1907) Int'l law. 1. An intergovernmental association of countries, established by and operated according to multilateral treaty, whose purpose is to pursue the common aims of those countries. • Examples include the World Health Organization, the International Civil Aviation Organization, and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

[Cases: International Law ↻10.45.] 2. Loosely, an intergovernmental or nongovernmental international association.

International Parental Kidnapping Crime Act of 1993.

A federal statute that implemented the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. 18 USCA § 1204. See HAGUE CONVENTION ON THE CIVIL ASPECTS OF INTERNATIONAL CHILD ABDUCTION. [Cases: Kidnapping ↻24.]

international person. Int'l law. An entity having a legal personality in international law; one who, being a subject of international law, enjoys rights, duties, and powers established in international law and has the ability to act on the international plane.

international private law. 1. See private international law under INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2. See CONFLICT OF LAWS (2).

international regime. See REGIME.

International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea. See INTERNATIONAL RULES OF THE ROAD.

international relations. (1880) 1. World politics. 2. Global political interaction, primarily among sovereign nations. 3. The academic discipline devoted to studying world politics, embracing international law, international economics, and the history and art of diplomacy.

international river. See RIVER.

International Rules of the Road. Maritime law. A set of statutes designed to promote navigational safety. • The International Rules were formalized at the convention on the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972. The rules set requirements for navigation lights, day shapes, steering and sailing rules, sound signals in good and restricted visibility condition, and distress signals, among other things. Congress adopted the rules and enacted them in statutory form. 33 USCA § 1602. — Also termed 72 COLREGS; International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972.

International Schedule of Classes of Goods and Services. Trademarks. A nearly worldwide classification system that enhances organization and retrieval of registered marks within a category of goods or services. — Abbr. ISCGS.

international seabed. The seabed and ocean floor, as well as the subsoil, lying beyond the territorial limits of nations. — Also termed international seabed area.

international terrorism. See TERRORISM.

International Trade Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for promoting world trade and strengthening the international trade and investment position of the United States. • Created in 1980, the agency operates through three offices: the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Import Services, the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Market Access and Compliance, and the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Trade Development. — Abbr. ITA. [Cases: Customs Duties ↻53, 54.]

International Trade Commission. See UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION.

International Trade Court. See UNITED STATES COURT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

international union. See UNION.

international will. See WILL.

inter naturalia feudi (in-tər nach-ə-ray-lee-ə [fyoo-dī]). [Law Latin] Scots law. Among the things naturally arising from a feu. • Such items include payment of duties and stipulated services to be performed for the superior. — Sometimes shortened to inter naturalia.

internecine (in-tər-nee-sin or in-tər-nee-sin or in-tər-nes-eeen), adj. (17c) 1. Deadly; characterized by mass slaughter. 2. Mutually deadly; destructive of both parties <an internecine civil war>. 3. Loosely, of or relating to conflict within a group <internecine faculty politics>.

Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers. A nonprofit corporation established in 1998 to assign and manage the system of Internet domain names and to allocate Internet-protocol (IP) address space. — Abbr. ICANN. [Cases: Telecommunications ↻1330.]

Internet patent. See PATENT (3).

Internet payment. See CYBERPAYMENT.

Internet payment service. An enterprise that offers electronic transfers of money.

Internet-protocol address. The 10-digit identification tag used by computers to locate specific websites.

Internet scrip. See SCRIP.

Internet service provider. A business or other organization that offers Internet access, typically for a fee. — Abbr. ISP. [Cases: Telecommunications ↻1320.]

internment (in-tər-nənt), n. The government-ordered detention of people suspected of disloyalty to the government, such as the confinement of Japanese Americans during World War II. [Cases: War and National Emergency ↻51.] — intern, vb.

internuncio (in-tər-nən-shee-oh), n. [fr. Latin internuntius] 1. A messenger between two parties. 2. A broker who serves as agent of both parties to a transaction. — Also termed internuncius. 3. A papal representative at a foreign court, ranking below a nuncio. Cf. NUNCIO (1); LEGATE (3). — internuncial, adj.

inter pares (in-tər pair-eez), adv. & adj. [Latin] Between peers; between people in an equal position.

inter partes (in-tər pahr-teez), adv. [Latin “between parties”] (1816) Between two or more parties; with two or more parties in a transaction. — inter partes, adj.

inter partes reexamination. See REEXAMINATION.

interpel. See INTERPELLATE.

interpellate (in-tər-pel-ayt), vb. 1. (Of a judge) to interrupt, with a question, a lawyer's argument. 2. (Of a legislator) to interrupt a legislature's calendar by bringing into question a ministerial policy, esp. in the legislature of France, Italy, or Germany. — Also termed (in Scots law) interpel (in-tər-pel). — interpellation, n.

interpellatio (in-tər-pə-lay-shee-oh), n. [Latin "a demand, interruption"] Roman law. 1. A demand for payment of a debt or for desistance from a course of action. 2. The interruption of a process, e.g., of the acquisition of title by possession. 3. The institution of a legal process or appeal. Pl. interpellationes (in-tər-pə-lay-shee-oh-nee-z).

interplea. (17c) A pleading by which a stakeholder places the disputed property into the court's registry; the plea made by an interpleader. See INTERPLEADER.

interplead, vb. (16c) 1. (Of a claimant) to assert one's own claim regarding property or an issue already before the court. 2. (Of a stakeholder) to institute an interpleader action, usu. by depositing disputed property into the court's registry to abide the court's decision about who is entitled to the property. Cf. IMPLEAD. [Cases: Interpleader ↻1.]

interpleader, n. (16c) 1. A suit to determine a right to property held by a usu. disinterested third party (called a stakeholder) who is in doubt about ownership and who therefore deposits the property with the court to permit interested parties to litigate ownership. • Typically, a stakeholder initiates an interpleader both to determine who should receive the property and to avoid multiple liability. Fed. R. Civ. P. 22. See STAKEHOLDER (1). Cf. IMPLEADER; INTERVENTION (1). [Cases: Interpleader ↻1.] 2. Loosely, a party who interpleads. — Also termed (in civil law) concursum.

"Interpleader is a form of joinder open to one who does not know to which of several claimants he or she is liable, if liable at all. It permits him or her to bring the claimants into a single action, and to require them to litigate among themselves to determine which, if any, has a valid claim. Although the earliest records of a procedure similar to interpleader were at common law, it soon became an equitable rather than a legal procedure." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 74, at 531 (5th ed. 1994).

Interpol (in-tər-pohl). See INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION.

interpolation (in-tər-pə-lay-shən), n. (17c) 1. The act of inserting words into a document to change or clarify the meaning. • In a negative sense, interpolation can refer to putting extraneous or false words into a document to change its meaning. Cf. INTERLINEATION. 2. (often pl.) Roman law. An editorial change made by one of the compilers of the Digests and the Justinian Code. • The compilers made insertions, deletions, and juxtapositions in the texts, but made few real changes to the substantive law. — interpolate, vb. — interpolative, adj. — interpolator, n.

interposition, n. (14c) 1. The act of submitting something (such as a pleading or motion) as a defense to an opponent's claim. 2. Archaic. The action of a state, while exercising its sovereignty, in rejecting a federal mandate that it believes is unconstitutional or overreaching. • The Supreme Court has declared that interposition is an illegal defiance of constitutional authority. — interpose, vb.

interpretatio (in-tər-pri-tay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An opinion of a Roman jurist (an interpreter of the law, not an advocate) who did not usu. appear in court. • Such an opinion was not originally binding, but by the Law of Citations (A.D. 426), the opinions of five jurists acquired binding force. See CITATIONS, LAW OF, Pl. interpretationes (in-tər-pri-tay-shee-oh-nee-z).

interpretatio limitata. See restrictive interpretation under INTERPRETATION.

interpretation, n. (14c) 1. The process of determining what something, esp. the law or a legal document, means; the ascertainment of meaning to be given to words or other manifestations of intention. [Cases: Contracts ↻143.]

"Interpretation, as applied to written law, is the art or process of discovering and expounding the intended significance of the language used, that is, the meaning which the authors of the law designed it to convey to others." Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 1 (1896).

"There is more to interpretation in general than the discovery of the meaning attached by the author to his words. Even if, in a particular case, that meaning is discoverable with a high degree of certitude from external sources, the question whether it has been adequately expressed remains." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 149 (1976).

administrative interpretation. An interpretation given to a law or regulation by an administrative agency. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻413; Statutes ↻219.]

authentic interpretation. (1967) An interpretation arrived at by asking the drafter or drafting body what the intended meaning was.

"The procedure of referring the doubtful statute to its author has acquired a name in the literature of jurisprudence. It is called 'authentic interpretation.' . . . [Although] this device has been tried in . . . recent times in certain European countries, . . . [it] has always failed, and no thoughtful adviser would recommend it to any government today." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 29-30 (1968).

comparative interpretation. (1933) A method of statutory construction by which parts of the statute are compared to each other, and the statute as a whole is compared to other documents from the same source on a similar subject.

customary interpretation. (1902) Interpretation based on earlier rulings on the same subject. [Cases: Customs and Usages ↻15.] extensive interpretation. (17c) A liberal interpretation that applies a statutory provision to a case not falling within its literal words.

grammatical interpretation. (1830) Interpretation that is based exclusively on the words themselves. [Cases: Statutes ↻189.]

liberal interpretation. (18c) Interpretation according to what the reader believes the author reasonably intended, even if, through inadvertence, the author failed to think of it. — Also termed mixed interpretation. [Cases: Statutes ↷235.]

limited interpretation. See restrictive interpretation.

logical interpretation. (1870) Interpretation that departs from the literal words on the ground that there may be other, more satisfactory evidence of the author's true intention. — Also termed rational interpretation.

mixed interpretation. See liberal interpretation.

practical interpretation. See contemporaneous construction under CONSTRUCTION.

rational interpretation. See logical interpretation.

restrictive interpretation. (17c) An interpretation that is bound by a principle or principles existing outside the interpreted text. — Also termed restricted interpretation; limited interpretation; interpretatio limitata. Cf. unrestrictive interpretation.

statutory interpretation. See STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

strict interpretation. (16c) Interpretation according to what the reader believes the author must have been thinking at the time of the writing, and no more. • Typically, this type of reading gives a text a narrow meaning. [Cases: Statutes ↷174.]

unrestrictive interpretation. (1968) Interpretation in good faith, without reference to any specific principle. Cf. restrictive interpretation.

2. The understanding one has about the meaning of something. [Cases: Statutes ↷174–278.] 3. A translation, esp. oral, from one language to another. 4. CHARACTERIZATION (1). See CONSTRUCTION (2). — interpret, vb. — interpretative, interpretive, adj.

interpretation clause. (1827) A legislative or contractual provision giving the meaning of frequently used words or explaining how the document as a whole is to be construed. [Cases: Statutes ↷179.]

interpretatio viperina (in-tər-pri-tay-shee-oh vī-pə-rī-nə). [Law Latin "a viper's interpretation"] Hist. A disapproved method of construction, by which ambiguous documents are interpreted in a way that destroys their effectiveness.

interpretative rule. Administrative law. 1. The requirement that an administrative agency explain the statutes under which it operates. 2. An administrative rule explaining an agency's interpretation of a statute. — Also termed interpretive rule. Cf. LEGISLATIVE RULE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↷382.1.]

interpreted testimony. See TESTIMONY.

interpreter. (14c) A person who translates, esp. orally, from one language to another; esp., a person who is sworn at a trial to accurately translate the testimony of a witness who is deaf or who speaks a foreign language.

[Cases: Criminal Law ↷642; Trial ↷22; Witnesses ↷230.]

interpretive rule. See INTERPRETATIVE RULE.

interpretivism. (1978) A doctrine of constitutional interpretation holding that judges must follow norms or values expressly stated or implied in the language of the Constitution. Cf. NONINTERPRETIVISM; ORIGINALISM.

"A long-standing dispute in constitutional theory has gone under different names at different times, but today's terminology seems as helpful as any. Today we are likely to call the contending sides 'interpretivism' and 'noninterpretivism' — the former indicating that judges deciding constitutional issues should confine themselves to enforcing norms that are stated or clearly implicit in the written Constitution, the latter the contrary view that courts should go beyond that set of references and enforce norms that cannot be discovered within the four corners of the instrument." John Hart Ely, Democracy and Distrust 1 (1980).

inter quattuor parietes (in-tər kwah-too-ər pə-rī-ə-teez), adv. & adj. [Law Latin] Within the four walls.

interracial adoption. See transracial adoption under ADOPTION.

interracial marriage. See MISCEGENATION.

inter regalia (in-tər ri-gay-lee-ə), adj. [Latin] Included in the royal powers or prerogatives; among other things belonging to the sovereign. — Also termed in patrimonio principis. See REGALIA.

interregnum (in-tə-reg-nəm). (16c) 1. An interval between reigns; the time when a throne is vacant between the reign of a sovereign and the accession of a successor. 2. Archaic. Authority exercised during a temporary vacancy of the throne or a suspension of the regular government. 3. A break or pause in a continuous event.

interrogatee (in-ter-ə-gə-tee). A person who is interrogated. — Also termed interrogee (in-ter-ə-gee).

interrogation, n. (15c) The formal or systematic questioning of a person; esp., intensive questioning by the police, usu. of a person arrested for or suspected of committing a crime. • The Supreme Court has held that, for purposes of the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, interrogation includes not only express questioning but also words or actions that the police should know are reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response. Rhode Island v. Innis, 446 U.S. 291, 100 S.Ct. 1082 (1980). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷412.1(4).] — interrogate, vb. — interrogative, adj.

custodial interrogation. (1966) Police questioning of a detained person about the crime that he or she is suspected of having committed. • Miranda warnings must be given before a custodial interrogation. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷412.1(4).]

investigatory interrogation. (1962) Routine, nonaccusatory questioning by the police of a person who is not in custody.

noncustodial interrogation. (1966) Police questioning of a suspect who has not been detained and can leave at will. • Miranda warnings are usu. not given before a noncustodial interrogation. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻412.1(4).]

interrogative question. Civil law. In a criminal trial, a question asked of a witness to elicit inadmissible evidence relating to the crime at issue in the case. Cf. ASSERTIVE QUESTION.

interrogator (in-ter-ə-gay-tər). (18c) One who poses questions to another.

interrogatory (in-tə-rog-ə-tor-ee), n. (16c) A written question (usu. in a set of questions) submitted to an opposing party in a lawsuit as part of discovery. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 33. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1471-1542; Pretrial Procedure ↻241-316.]

contention interrogatory. An interrogatory designed to discover the factual basis of the allegations in a complaint, answer, or counterclaim, or to determine the theory of the opposing party's case. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1506; Pretrial Procedure ↻276.]

cross-interrogatory. (17c) An interrogatory from a party who has received a set of interrogatories. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure ↻241, 246.]

identification interrogatory. A request for the responding party to identify relevant documents, tangible objects, or individuals who have knowledge of facts relating to the lawsuit. — Also termed fact interrogatory; state-all-facts interrogatory.

special interrogatory. (18c) A written jury question whose answer is required to supplement a general verdict. • This term is not properly used in federal practice, which authorizes interrogatories and special verdicts, but not special interrogatories. Fed. R. Civ. P. 49. The term is properly used, however, in the courts of some states. — Also termed special issue. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2211-2220; Trial ↻346-366.]

state-all-facts interrogatory. See identification interrogatory.

interrogee. See INTERROGATEE.

inter se (in-tər see or say). [Latin “between or among themselves”] (1845) (Of a right or duty) owed between the parties rather than to others. — Also termed inter sese (in-tər see-see).

“[T]he law of nations is, or at least includes, a branch of natural law, namely, the rules of natural justice as applicable to the relations of states inter se.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 32 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

intersection. (16c) A place where two roads meet or form a junction.

inter se doctrine. Int'l law. The now-defunct doctrine that relations between members of the British Commonwealth were in no circumstances international and were incapable of giving rights and duties under international law.

inter sese. See INTER SE.

interspousal, adj. (1906) Between husband and wife.

interspousal immunity. See husband-wife immunity under IMMUNITY (2).

interspousal tort immunity. See husband-wife immunity under IMMUNITY (2).

interstate, adj. (1844) Between two or more states or residents of different states.

interstate adoption. See ADOPTION.

interstate agreement. (1876) An agreement between states. Cf. interstate compact under COMPACT. [Cases: States ↻6.]

Interstate Agreement on Detainers Act. A law, originally enacted in 1956, that allows the federal government, certain states, and the District of Columbia to temporarily obtain custody of a prisoner for trial even though the prisoner is already incarcerated elsewhere. • Under the Act, if a prisoner makes a written request for a disposition of the untried charges in the second forum, the government obtaining custody must try the prisoner within 180 days of the request. 18 USCA App. arts. 1-9. See UNIFORM MANDATORY DISPOSITION OF DETAINERS ACT.

interstate commerce. See COMMERCE.

Interstate Commerce Commission. The now-defunct federal agency established by the Interstate Commerce Act in 1887 to regulate surface transportation between states by certifying carriers and pipelines and by monitoring quality and pricing. • In December 1995, when Congress eliminated this agency, the Surface Transportation Board (STB) — a three-member board that is a division of the Department of Transportation — assumed most of the agency's duties. — Abbr. ICC. See SURFACE TRANSPORTATION BOARD. [Cases: Commerce ↻83.]

interstate compact. See COMPACT.

Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children. An agreement whose purpose is to ensure that when states are involved in the placement or adoption of children across state lines, the states cooperate with each other to facilitate the process and to protect the children. • This compact is intended to secure states' cooperation in investigating the suitability of proposed adoptive homes in an interstate adoption and also to alleviate conflicts that often occur when the agencies and courts of more than one state are involved. The compact has been enacted in almost identical form in all 50 states as well as in the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands. — Abbr. ICPC. — Often shortened to Interstate Compact. [Cases: Infants ↻229.] interstate extradition. See EXTRADITION.

interstate income-withholding order. (1994) A court order entered to enforce a support order of a court of another state by withholding income of the defaulting person. [Cases: Child Support ↻442, 508(1).] interstate law. (1866) 1. INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2. The rules and principles used to determine controversies between residents of different states.

interstate rendition. See RENDITION (2).

interstate trade. See interstate commerce under COMMERCE.

intersubjective zap. In critical legal studies, a so-called spontaneous moment of shared intuition. — Also termed zap.

intertwining doctrine. The principle that if arbitrable and nonarbitrable claims arise from a single transaction and the claims are factually and legally mingled, a court can refuse to compel arbitration of any claims. • This doctrine is of limited effect because the Federal Arbitration Act usu. preempts it. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ↻155.]

intervener. See INTERVENOR.

intervening act. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

intervening agency. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

intervening cause. See CAUSE (1).

intervening force. 1. See FORCE. 2. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1).

intervening rights. Patents. An infringement defense based on the right of a person who practiced a patent's broadened claims to continue practicing an invention, even though the invention's patent was reissued because of inadvertent claim errors in the original patent. 35 USCA § 252, second paragraph. — Also termed doctrine of intervening rights. [Cases: Patents ↻138(2).]

intervenor. (17c) One who voluntarily enters a pending lawsuit because of a personal stake in it. — Also spelled intervener. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻311; Parties ↻37.]

intervention, n. (1860) 1. The entry into a lawsuit by a third party who, despite not being named a party to the action, has a personal stake in the outcome. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 24. • The intervenor sometimes joins the plaintiff in claiming what is sought, sometimes joins the defendant in resisting what is sought, and sometimes takes a position adverse to both the plaintiff and the defendant. Cf. IMPLEADER; INTERPLEADER. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻311; Parties ↻37.] 2. The legal procedure by which such a third party is allowed to become a party to the litigation. — Formerly also termed (in senses 1 & 2) trial of right of property. 3. Int'l law. One nation's interference by force, or threat of force, in another nation's internal affairs or in questions arising between other nations. — intervene, vb. — interventionary, adj.

"Intervention may or may not involve the use of force. It is frequently possible for a powerful state to impair the political independence of another weaker state without actually utilizing its armed forces. This result may be accomplished by lending open approval, as by the relaxation of an arms embargo, to a revolutionary group headed by individuals ready to accept the political or economic dominance of the intervening state. It may be accomplished by the withholding of recognition of a new government, combined with various forms of economic and financial pressure until the will of the stronger state prevails through the resignation or overthrow of the government disapproved." Philip C. Jessup, A Modern Law of Nations 172-73 (1949).

humanitarian intervention. An intervention by the international community to curb abuses of human rights within a country, even if the intervention infringes the country's sovereignty.

intervention duty. Maritime law. A shipowner's obligation to remedy hazardous working conditions for longshore workers, even though the shipowner did not create the condition, when the shipowner knows of a nonobvious condition arising in an area that cannot be avoided by the longshore workers in performing their duties. Cf. ACTIVE-OPERATIONS DUTY; TURNOVER DUTY. [Cases: Shipping ↻84(3).]

intervertere possessionem (in-tər-vər-tər-ee pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nəm). [Latin] Scots law. To intercept possession; to alter the possession. • If a bailee received an item under a bailment and then stole the item, the bailee changed the nature of the possession.

interview-summary form. Patents. A U.S. Patent and Trademark Office form for noting in the record the contents of a conversation, by phone or in person, between a patent examiner and an applicant.

intoximeter (in-tok-sim-ə-tər). See BREATHALYZER.

intra (in-trə), adv. & adj. [Latin] Within. Cf. INFRA.

"The use of infra (below) in the sense and place of intra (within) is a corruption of very ancient date. . . . The expression 'under age' (the correct literal translation of infra aetatem) indeed, is of more common occurrence than 'within age.' But the use of infra in the sense of intra, as expressive of place, is an undoubted barbarism." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 75 (2d ed. 1867).

intra anni spatium (in-trə an-ī spay-shee-əm), adv. & adj. [Latin] Within the space of a year.

A patentable device or process created through independent effort and characterized by an extraordinary degree of skill or ingenuity; a newly discovered art or operation. • Invention embraces the concept of nonobviousness. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 16(1).] 2. The act or process of creating such a device or process. 3. Generally, anything that is created or devised. — invent, vb.

"The truth is, the word cannot be defined in such manner as to afford any substantial aid in determining whether a particular device involves an exercise of the inventive faculty or not. In a given case we may be able to say that there is present invention of a very high order. In another we can see that there is lacking that impalpable something that distinguishes invention from simple mechanical skill. Courts, adopting fixed principles as a guide, have by a process of exclusion determined that certain variations in old devices do or do not involve invention; but whether the variation relied upon in a particular case is anything more than ordinary mechanical skill is a question which cannot be answered by applying the test of any general definition." McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U.S. 419, 427, 12 S.Ct. 76, 78 (1891).

"An 'invention' is any art, machine, manufacture, design, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, or any variety of plant, which is or may be patentable under the patent laws. 37 C.F.R. § 501.3(d)." 60 Am. Jur. 2d Patents § 894, at 601 n. 98 (1987).

abandoned invention. An invention that an inventor has either deliberately stopped trying to exploit, or has otherwise treated in a way that precludes claiming the invention in a later patent. • Under § 102(c) of the Patent Act, abandonment bars a patent on that invention. But abandonment of an imperfect form of an invention does not bar a patent on a later-perfected form. Unless publicly known, an abandoned invention is not prior art to a later inventor. Under § 102(g) of the Patent Act, abandonment of the same invention by a first inventor also prevents the first inventor from blocking the second inventor's patent application in an interference. Cf. ABANDONED APPLICATION. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 82.]

distinct invention. One part of an invention that can be used on its own, and the absence of which will not prevent the remainder of the invention from working. • When the subject matter of a patent application is found to be multiple distinct inventions, the examiner requires the inventor to restrict the application to a single invention. See RESTRICTION (4). Cf. independent invention.

improvement invention. A nontrivial and nonobvious betterment of an existing device or process. • The improvement may be patented, but the protection applies only to the improvement, not to the invention improved on.

independent invention. An invention that bears no relation to another invention, esp. to another invention covered in the same patent application. • A single patent may not cover multiple independent inventions; the applicant must elect one and drop any others from the application. See RESTRICTION (4). Cf. distinct invention.

new-use invention. Discovery of a new use for an existing invention. • As long as the new use is non-obvious — and actually useful — it may be patented. 35 USCA §§ 101–03.

small invention. See UTILITY MODEL.

software-based invention. A device or machine that uses innovative software to achieve results. • A software-based invention, process, or method may qualify for a patent, but the physical components and the underlying software are usu. not separately patentable.

inventively new. Patents. Original in any way. • The phrase is sometimes used to distinguish "new" in the usual sense from the term of art in patent law.

inventive step. Patents. In an invention, some advancement that is not obvious to a person reasonably skilled in the art. • The European Patent Convention requires an inventive step to qualify for a patent. The term is roughly equivalent to nonobviousness in American patent practice.

was suspiciously low>. 3. Raw materials or goods in stock <the dealership held a sale to clear out its October inventory>. 4. Bankruptcy. Personal property leased or furnished, held for sale or lease, or to be furnished under a contract for service; raw materials, work in process, or materials used or consumed in a business, including farm products such as crops or livestock <the debtor was found to have inventory that was valued at $300,000>. — inventory, vb.

"Section 547 itself defines 'inventory' and 'receivable.' Do not use the U.C.C. definitions of these terms, or the definitions of them learned in business law classes. It is especially important to note that, for purposes of section 547, 'inventory' includes 'farm products such as crops or livestock . . .'" David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 6-35, at 351 (1993).

inventory fee. A probate court's fee for services rendered to a decedent's estate.

inventory search. See SEARCH.

inventory-turnover ratio. Accounting. The result of dividing the cost of goods sold by the average value of inventory. • This calculation is used to determine the effectiveness of the company's inventory-management policy.

in ventre sa mere (in ven-tree sa mer). See EN VENTRE SA MERE.

inventus (in-ven-təs), p.pl. [Latin] Found. • This word appears in various phrases, such as thesaurus inventus ("treasure trove") and non est inventus ("he is not found").

inveritare (in-ve-rə-tair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] To make proof of a thing.

inverse condemnation. See CONDEMNATION.

inverse-Erie doctrine. See REVERSE-ERIE DOCTRINE.

inverse floater. See inverse-floating-rate note under NOTE (1).

inverse-floating-rate note. See NOTE (1).

inverse-order-of-alienation doctrine. The principle that if a secured creditor has not collected on the mortgage or lien on a property sold off in successive parcels, the purchaser of the encumbered property may require the creditor to collect first from any parcel still held by the original owner, then from the parcel sold last, then next to last, and so on until the amount has been satisfied. • The creditor must exhaust an asset before attempting to recover the balance of the mortgage or lien from the next most recently transferred asset. — Also termed rule of marshaling liens. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor ⇨ 13; Mortgages ⇨ 290.] inverse zoning. See ZONING.

inverso ordine (in-vər-soh or-də-nee). [Latin] Hist. Contrary to rule.

inverted market. See BACKWARDATION.

invest, vb. (17c) 1. To supply with authority or power <the U.S. Constitution invests the President with the power to conduct foreign affairs>. See INVESTITURE (1). 2. To apply (money) for profit <Jillson invested her entire savings in the mutual fund>. 3. To make an outlay of money for profit <Baird invested in stocks>.

investigate, vb. (16c) 1. To inquire into (a matter) systematically; to make (a suspect) the subject of a criminal inquiry <the police investigated the suspect's involvement in the murder>. 2. To make an official inquiry <after the judge dismissed the case, the police refused to investigate further>.

investigating bureau. See CREDIT-REPORTING BUREAU.

investigating magistrate. See MAGISTRATE.

investigative detention. See DETENTION.

investigative grand jury. See GRAND JURY.

investigatory detention. See STOP AND FRISK.

investigatory interrogation. See INTERROGATION.

investigatory power. See POWER (3).

investigatory stop. See STOP AND FRISK.

investitive fact. See FACT.

investitive publication. See PUBLICATION.

investiture (in-ves-tə-chuur). (14c) 1. The act of formally installing a person in a ceremony in which the person is clothed in the insignia of the office's position or rank; esp., the installation of a cleric in office. — Also termed investment. 2. LIVERY OF SEISIN.

investment. (16c) 1. An expenditure to acquire property or assets to produce revenue; a capital outlay. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 193.]

fixed-dollar investment. An investment whose value is the same when sold as it was when purchased. • Examples are bonds held to maturity, certain government securities, and savings accounts.

fixed-income investment. An investment (including preferred stock) that pays a fixed dividend throughout its life and is not redeemable unless the corporation makes a special call.

net investment. 1. The net cash required to start a new project. 2. The gross investment in capital goods less capital consumption, including depreciation.

2. The asset acquired or the sum invested. 3. INVESTITURE (1). 4. LIVERY OF SEISIN.

investment adviser. A person who, for pay, advises others, either directly or through publications or writings, about the value of securities or the advisability of investing in, purchasing, or selling securities, or who is in the business of issuing reports on securities. • The term generally excludes an employee of an investment adviser; a depository institution, such as a bank; lawyers, accountants, engineers, and teachers whose investment advice is solely incidental to the practice of their profession; a broker-dealer whose advice is incidental to the conduct of business and who receives no special compensation for that advice; and publishers of bona fide newspapers, newsmagazines, or business or financial publications of general, regular, or paid circulation. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 223, 224.]

Investment Advisers Act. A 1940 federal statute — administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission — that regulates investment advisers. 15 USCA §§ 80b-1 et seq. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨223, 224.] investment bank. See BANK.

investment banker. A person or institution that underwrites, sells, or assists in raising capital for businesses, esp. for new issues of stocks or bonds; a trader at an investment bank. See investment bank under BANK.

investment banking. The business of underwriting or selling securities; esp., the marketing of new stocks or bonds.

"The term 'investment banking' can be used to encompass [underwriting, and acting as a dealer, broker, and market maker], and any person in a firm performing any of those functions could be called an investment banker. By convention, however, those terms are used less broadly. In large securities firms, for example, there are a number of departments. The one most visible to the public handles trades for individuals. The technical term for the persons working with customers in that department is 'registered representative,' but those persons are often called brokers or stockbrokers. Insiders would not call them investment bankers. A department almost invisible to the public handles underwritings and performs a wide range of services primarily for client companies. Among those are: (1) assisting companies in the sale of securities, almost always in large amounts, to such private purchasers as insurance companies; (2) finding acquisition partners for companies that wish to acquire or be acquired by others; and (3) giving financial advice of various sorts to client companies. That department is likely to be called the investment banking department. In any case, its functions are at the heart of the insiders' conception of investment banking." Larry D. Soderquist & Theresa A. Gabaldon, Securities Law 30 (1998).

investment bill. See BILL (6).

investment company. See COMPANY.

Investment Company Act. A 1940 federal statute enacted to curb financial malpractices and abuses by regulating investment-company activities and transactions — specifically, by requiring registration of investment companies and prohibiting transactions by unregistered companies; by making certain persons ineligible as affiliated persons or underwriters; by regulating affiliations of directors, officers, and employees; by barring changes in investment policy without shareholder approval; and by regulating contracts of advisers and underwriters. 15 USCA §§ 80a-1 et seq. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨211-222.]

investment contract. 1. A contract in which money is invested in a common enterprise with profits to come solely from the efforts of others; an agreement or transaction in which a party invests money in expectation of profits derived from the efforts of a promoter or other third party. 2. A transaction in which an investor furnishes initial value or risk capital to an enterprise, a portion of that amount being subjected to the risks of the enterprise. • In such an arrangement, the investor typically does not receive the right to exercise control over the managerial decisions of the enterprise. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨5.10, 252.]

"[A]n investment contract for purposes of the Securities Act means a contract, transaction or scheme whereby a person invests his money in a common enterprise and is led to expect profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party. . . . It embodies a flexible rather than a static principle, one that is capable of adaptation to meet the countless and variable schemes devised by those who seek the use of the money of others on the promise of profits." SEC v. Howey Co., 328 U.S. 293, 298-99, 66 S.Ct. 1100, 1103 (1946).

guaranteed investment contract. An investment contract under which an institutional investor invests a lump sum (such as a pension fund) with an insurer that promises to return the principal (the lump sum) and a certain amount of interest at the contract's end. — Abbr. GIC.

investment-direction agreement. A contract by which a trustee agrees not to diversify the trust's assets, even though the trustee has the legal right to do so, and the beneficiary agrees to hold the trustee harmless for any losses resulting from not diversifying. — Abbr. IDA. [Cases: Trusts ⇨217.3.]

investment discretion. The ability of a person to (1) determine what will be purchased or sold by or for another person's account, (2) decide what will be purchased or sold by or for the account even though another may have the responsibility, or (3) influence the purchase or sale of securities or property in a way that, according to an administrative agency such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, should be subject to the agency's governing rules and regulations.

investment-grade bond. See BOND (8).

investment-grade rating. Any of the top four symbols given to a bond after an appraisal of its quality by a securities-evaluation agency such as Moody's. • The rating indicates the degree of risk in an investment in the bond. See A (8).

investment income. See unearned income (1) under INCOME.

investment indebtedness. Tax. Debt incurred by a taxpayer to acquire or carry assets that may produce income. • The Internal Revenue Code limits the amount of deductible interest on this type of debt.

investment property. Any asset purchased to produce a profit, whether from income or resale.

investment security. See SECURITY.

investment tax credit. See TAX CREDIT.

investment trust. See investment company under COMPANY.

investor. (17c) 1. A buyer of a security or other property who seeks to profit from it without exhausting the principal. 2. Broadly, a person who spends money with an expectation of earning a profit.

accredited investor. An investor treated under the Securities Act of 1933 as being knowledgeable and sophisticated about financial matters, esp. because of the investor's large net worth. • In a securities offering that is exempt from registration, an accredited investor (either a person or an entity) is not entitled to protection under the Act's disclosure provisions, although the investor does keep its remedies for fraud. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻ 18.11.]

angel investor. A person — usu. an experienced and successful entrepreneur, professional, or entity — that provides start-up or growth financing to a promising company, often together with advice and contacts. — Also termed business angel.

institutional investor. One who trades large volumes of securities, usu. by investing other people's money into large managed funds. • Institutional investors are often pension funds, investment companies, trust managers, or insurance companies. See MUTUAL FUND.

qualified investor. Securities. An investor who is an individual and has an investment portfolio worth at least $5 million, or a company that owns or manages investments worth at least $25 million.

sophisticated investor. Securities. An investor who has sufficient knowledge and experience of financial matters to be capable of evaluating a security's qualities. • Sophisticated investors do not require the full protection of securities laws. [Cases: Securities Regulation ↻ 18.13.]

invidious discrimination (in-vid-ee-əs di-skrim-ə-nay-shən). See DISCRIMINATION.

in vinculis (in-ving-kyə-lis). [Latin "in chains"] In actual custody.

"The engagement of a magistrate to an accomplice, that if he will give his evidence, he will experience favor, is merely in the nature of a recommendation to mercy, for no authority is given to a justice of the peace to pardon an offender, and to tell him that he shall be a witness against others. He is not therefore assured of his pardon, but gives his evidence in vinculis, in custody; and it depends on his behaviour, whether he shall or shall not be admitted to mercy." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 82-83 (2d ed. 1826).

inviolability (in-vi-ə-lə-bil-ə-tee), n. The quality or fact of being safe from violation.

invulnerable (in-vi-ə-lə-bəl), adj. (15c) Safe from violation; incapable of being violated. — invulnerability, n.

involute (in-vi-ə-lit), adj. (15c) Free from violation; not broken, infringed, or impaired.

in viridi observantia (in vir-ə-dī ob-zər-van-shee-ə), adj. [Latin "in fresh observance"] Present to the minds of people, and in full force and operation.

invisible, adj. Accounting. Not reported in a financial statement <invisible earnings>.

invitation, n. Torts. In the law of negligence, the enticement of others to enter, remain on, or use property or its structures; conduct that justifies others in believing that the possessor wants them to enter. Cf. PERMISSION (3). [Cases: Negligence ↻ 1037.] — invite, vb.

invitation to negotiate. (1902) Contracts. A solicitation for one or more offers, usu. as a preliminary step to forming a contract. — Also termed invitation seeking offers; invitation to bid; invitation to treat; solicitation for bids; preliminary letter; offer to chaffer. Cf. OFFER. [Cases: Contracts ↻ 16.]

invited error. See ERROR (2).

invitee (in-vi-tee). (1837) A person who has an express or implied invitation to enter or use another's premises, such as a business visitor or a member of the public to whom the premises are held open. • The occupier has a duty to inspect the premises and to warn the invitee of dangerous conditions. — Also termed licensee with an interest. Cf. LICENSEE (2); TRESPASSER; BUSINESS VISITOR (1). [Cases: Negligence ↻ 1037(2).]

public invitee. (1937) An invitee who is invited to enter and remain on property for a purpose for which the property is held open to the public. [Cases: Negligence ↻ 1037(5).]

inviter. (16c) One who expressly or impliedly invites another onto the premises for business purposes. — Also spelled invitor. Cf. INVITEE.

invito debitor (in-vi-toh deb-i-tor-ee). [Latin] Roman law. Without the consent of a debtor. • A creditor could assign and a third party could pay a debt invito debitor.

invito domino (in-vi-toh dom-ə-noh). [Latin] Roman law. Against the will of the owner. • The common-law doctrine of theft was that the taking must be invito domino.

invitor. See INVITER.

invito superiore (in-vi-toh s[y]oo-peer-ee-or-ee). [Law Latin] Scots law. Without the consent of the superior. • Ordinarily, a vassal could not renounce a fee without the superior's consent.

in vitro fertilization. A procedure by which an egg is fertilized outside a woman's body and then inserted into the womb for gestation. — Abbr. IVF. Cf. ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER; GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER. [Cases: Child Custody ↻ 274.5; Child Support ↻ 63; Children Out-of-Wedlock ↻ 15; Parent and Child ↻ 20.]

in vivo fertilization. The process in which an egg is fertilized inside a woman's body. Cf. ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER; GAMETE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

invocation. (14c) 1. The act of calling upon for authority or justification. 2. The act of enforcing or using a legal right <an invocation of the contract clause>.

invoice, n. (16c) An itemized list of goods or services furnished by a seller to a buyer, usu. specifying the price and terms of sale; a bill of costs. [Cases: Evidence ↻ 355(3).] — invoice, vb.

consular invoice. An invoice used to hasten the entry of goods into a country by bearing the signature of the country's consul as assurance that the shipment's contents have been preverified for quantity and value. [Cases: Customs Duties ↻ 64.]

sales invoice. A document showing details of a purchase or sale, including price and quantity of merchandise. [Cases: Sales ↷ 28.]

invoice book. A journal into which invoices are copied.

involuntary, adj. (15c) Not resulting from a free and unrestrained choice; not subject to control by the will. — involuntariness, n.

"[T]he law, like everyday thought, usually confines the notion of involuntary to that subclass of cases which involve purely physical, physiological, or psychological movements of our limbs, like reflexes and convulsions, movements in sleep, during sleepwalking, or under hypnosis, or due to some disease of the brain, lunacy, or automatism." Alan R. White, Grounds of Liability 60–61 (1985).

iron-safe clause. A provision in a fire-insurance policy requiring the insured to preserve the books and inventory records of a business in a fireproof safe. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 3054.]

IRR. See internal rate of return under RATE OF RETURN.

irrational, adj. Not guided by reason or by a fair consideration of the facts <an irrational ruling>. See ARBITRARY.

irrebuttable presumption. See conclusive presumption under PRESUMPTION.

irreconcilable differences. (1975) Persistent and unresolvable disagreements between spouses, leading to the breakdown of the marriage. • These differences may be cited — without specifics — as grounds for no-fault divorce. At least 33 states have provided that irreconcilable differences are a basis for divorce. Cf. IRRETRIEVABLE BREAKDOWN OF THE MARRIAGE; INCOMPATIBILITY. [Cases: Divorce ↷ 34.]

irrecusable, adj. (18c) (Of an obligation) that cannot be avoided, although made without one's consent, such as the obligation to not strike another without some lawful excuse. Cf. RECUSABLE (1).

irredeemable bond. See annuity bond under BOND (3). irredeemable ground rent. See ground rent (2) under RENT (1).

irrefragable (i-ref-rə-gə-bəl), adj. (16c) Unanswerable; not to be controverted; impossible to refute <the defense feebly responded to the prosecution's irrefragable arguments>.

irregular, adj. (14c) Not in accordance with law, method, or usage; not regular.

irregular heir. See HEIR.

irrelevant (i-rel-ə-vənt), adj. (16c) 1. (Of evidence) having no probative value; not tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue. — Also termed impertinent. Cf. IMMATERIAL. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 338(1); Evidence ↷ 99.] 2. (Of a pleaded allegation) having no substantial relation to the action, and will not affect the court's decision. — irrelevance, n.

irrelevant evidence. See EVIDENCE.

irremediable breakdown of the marriage. See IRRETRIEVABLE BREAKDOWN OF THE MARRIAGE.

irreparable damages. See DAMAGES.

irreparable harm. See irreparable injury under INJURY.

irreparable injury. See INJURY.

irreparable-injury rule (i-rep-ə-rə-bəl). (1969) The principle that equitable relief (such as an injunction) is available only when no adequate legal remedy (such as monetary damages) exists. • Although courts continue to cite this rule, they do not usu. follow it literally in practice. — Also termed adequacy test. [Cases: Injunction ↷ 14, 138.6.]

"The irreparable injury rule has received considerable scholarly attention. In 1978, Owen Fiss examined the possible reasons for the rule and found them wanting. A vigorous debate over the economic wisdom of applying the rule to specific performance of contracts began about the same time, and soon came to center on the transaction costs of administering the two remedies. Both Fiss and Dan Dobbs have noted that the rule does not seem to be taken very seriously, and in a review of Fiss's book, I argued that the definition of adequacy pulls most of the rule's teeth. The Restatement (Second) of Torts dropped the rule from the blackletter and condemned it as misleading, but replaced it only with a long and unstructured list of factors to be considered. . . . [M]any sophisticated lawyers believe that the rule continues to reflect a serious preference for legal over equitable remedies." Douglas Laycock, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule 9 (1991).

irrepleviable (i-rə-plev-ee-ə-bəl), adj. (Of property) not capable of being replevied. — Formerly also spelled irreplevisable. Cf. REPLEVIABLE.

irresistible force. See FORCE.

irresistible-impulse test. (1892) Criminal law. A test for insanity, holding that a person is not criminally responsible for an act if mental disease prevented that person from controlling potentially criminal conduct. • The few jurisdictions that have adopted this test have combined it with the McNaghten rules. — Also termed control test; volitional test. See INSANITY DEFENSE; MCNAGHTEN RULES. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 50.]

"The first reaction of the legal profession to the irresistible impulse defense, when it was introduced to the law many years ago, was inclined to be favorable. Then a change set in and for many years the prevailing view was strongly against its recognition. Present indications are that the tide is changing again. There seems to be a growing belief to the effect that ignoring the possibility of such a defense fails to give full recognition to the fundamental concept of mens rea." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 975 (3d ed. 1982).

irresistible superhuman cause. See ACT OF GOD.

irresistible violence. Archaic. See VIS MAJOR.

irretrievable breakdown of the marriage. (1973) Family law. A ground for divorce that is based on incompatibility between marriage partners and in many states is the sole ground for no-fault divorce. — Also termed irretrievable breakdown; irremediable breakdown of the marriage; irremediable breakdown. Cf. IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCES; INCOMPATIBILITY. [Cases: Divorce ↷ 12.]

irrevocable (i-rev-ə-kə-bəl), adj. (14c) Unalterable; committed beyond recall. — irrevocability, n.

irritancy, n. Civil law. The action of rendering void or the state of being rendered void.

irritant, adj. Civil law. Rendering void.

irritant clause. Civil law. A deed term providing that if the deed's holder performs an act specifically prohibited by the deed, the act or deed is automatically nullified.

irrogare (i-rə-gair-ee), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To inflict a penalty; to make or ordain, as a law.

irrotulatio (i-rah-chə-lay-shee-oh). [Law Latin] An enrollment; an entry on a record.

IRS. abbr. INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.

IRV. See instant-runoff voting under VOTING.

ISCGS. abbr. INTERNATIONAL SCHEDULE OF CLASSES OF GOODS AND SERVICES.

ish. Scots law. 1. An exit. • This appears in the phrase "ish and entry," often used in a lease, license, etc., to give someone the right to use necessary ways and passages to pass through another's property, esp. to reach a church or marketplace. 2. The expiration of a lease, license, etc.; the end of a period of time.

island. (bef. 12c) A tract of land surrounded by water but smaller than a continent; esp., land that is continually surrounded by water and not submerged except during abnormal circumstances.

ISO. abbr. 1. Incentive stock option. See STOCK OPTION (2). 2. INSURANCE SERVICES OFFICE.

isolated sale. See SALE.

isolating, n. Family law. A parent's or caregiver's pattern of cutting a child off from normal social experiences, preventing the child from forming friendships, or making the child believe that he or she is alone in the world. Cf. IGNORING; REJECTING.

ISP. abbr. INTERNET SERVICE PROVIDER.

is qui cognoscit (is kwi cog-nos-it). [Latin "he who recognizes"] The cognizor in a fine. See COGNIZOR; FINE (1).

is qui cognoscitur (is kwi cog-nos-ə-tər). [Latin "he who is recognized"] A cognizee in a fine. See COGNIZEE; FINE (1).

is qui omnino desipit (is kwi om-ni-noh dee-sip-it). [Latin] Hist. One who is completely void of reason. •

The phrase appeared in reference to an insane person, not an idiot.

issuable, adj. 1. Capable of being issued <an issuable writ>. 2. Open to dispute or contention <an issuable argument>. 3. Possible as an outcome <an award as high as $5 million is issuable in this case>.

issuable defense. See DEFENSE (1).

issuable plea. See PLEA (3).

issue, n. (16c) 1. A point in dispute between two or more parties. • In an appeal, an issue may take the form of a separate and discrete question of law or fact, or a combination of both.

"In federal civil procedure, an issue is a single, certain, and material point arising out of the allegations and contentions of the parties; it is matter affirmed on one side and denied on the other, and when a fact is alleged in the complaint and denied in the answer, the matter is then put in issue between the parties." 35A C.J.S. Federal Civil Procedure § 357, at 541 (1960).

collateral issue. (18c) A question or issue not directly connected with the matter in dispute. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻338(1); Evidence ↻99; Witnesses ↻405.]

deep issue. (1944) The fundamental issue to be decided by a court in ruling on a point of law. • A deep issue is usu. briefly phrased in separate sentences, with facts interwoven (in chronological order) to show precisely what problem is to be addressed. Cf. surface issue.

"Essentially, a deep issue is the ultimate, concrete question that a court needs to answer to decide a point your way. Deep refers to the deep structure of the case — not to deep thinking. The deep issue is the final question you pose when you can no longer usefully ask the follow-up question, 'And what does that turn on?'" Bryan A. Garner, The Winning Brief 56 (2d ed. 2004).

fact issue. See issue of fact.

general issue. (16c) 1. A plea (often a general denial) by which a party denies the truth of every material allegation in an opposing party's pleading. 2. The issue arising from such a plea. [Cases: Pleading ↻115.]

"The general issue is a denial of the legal conclusion sought to be drawn from the declaration. It denies by a general form of expression the defendant's liability, and enables the defendant to contest, without specific averments of the defense to be asserted, most of the allegations which the plaintiff may be required to prove to sustain his action, and in some actions to raise also various affirmative defenses. It fails to perform the functions of pleading, either in giving notice or in reducing the case to specific issues." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 169, at 304 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

immaterial issue. (18c) An issue not necessary to decide the point of law. Cf. material issue.

informal issue. Rare. An issue that arises when a defendant does not properly or fully plead in answer to a material allegation.

issue of fact. (17c) A point supported by one party's evidence and controverted by another's. — Also termed fact issue.

issue of law. (18c) A point on which the evidence is undisputed, the outcome depending on the court's interpretation of the law. — Also termed legal issue.

legal issue. (17c) 1. A legal question, usu. at the foundation of a case and requiring a court's decision. 2. See issue of law.

material issue. An issue that must be decided in order to resolve a controversy. • The existence of a material issue of disputed fact precludes summary judgment. Cf. immaterial issue. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2470.1; Judgment ↻181(2).]

multifarious issue. An issue that inquires about several different points (esp. facts) when each one should be inquired about in a separate issue.

special issue. (17c) 1. At common law, an issue arising from a specific allegation in a pleading. • Special issues are no longer used in most jurisdictions. 2. See special interrogatory under INTERROGATORY.

surface issue. A superficially stated issue phrased in a single sentence, without many facts, and usu. beginning with the word whether. Cf. deep issue.

ultimate issue. (17c) A not-yet-decided point that is sufficient either in itself or in connection with other points to resolve the entire case. — Also termed ultimate question.

2. A class or series of securities that are simultaneously offered for sale. — Also termed bond issue; stock issue. See OFFERING.

hot issue. A security that, after an initial or secondary offering, is traded in the open market at a substantially higher price. — Also termed hot stock.

new issue. A stock or bond sold by a corporation for the first time, often to raise working capital. See BLUE-SKY LAW.

original issue. The first issue of securities of a particular type or series.

shelf issue. An issue of securities that were previously registered but not released at the time of registration.

3. Wills & estates. Lineal descendants; offspring.

issue female. 1. Female descendants. 2. A female whose descent from a specified ancestor is traceable through the direct female line. See tail female under TAIL. [Cases: Wills ↻498.]

issue male. 1. Male descendants. 2. A male whose descent from a specified ancestor is traceable through the direct male line. See tail male under TAIL. [Cases: Wills ↻498.]

lawful issue. (16c) Descendants, including descendants more remote than children. • At common law, the term included only those who were children of legally recognized subsisting marriages. See DESCENDANT; HEIR. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻25.]

4. Commercial law. The first delivery of a negotiable instrument by its maker or holder.

issue, vb. (14c) 1. To accrue <rents issuing from land> 2. To be put forth officially <without probable cause, the search warrant will not issue> 3. To send out or distribute officially <issue process> <issue stock>. — issuance, n.

issued stock. See STOCK.

issue estoppel. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

issue fee. Patents. The charge that an inventor must pay the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office before an allowed patent application can be issued as a patent. [Cases: Patents ↻103.]

issue pleading. See PLEADING (2).

issue preclusion. See COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL.

issuer. 1. A person or entity (such as a corporation or bank) that issues securities, negotiable instruments, or letters of credit. 2. A bailee that issues negotiable or nonnegotiable documents of title.

nonreporting issuer. An issuer not subject to the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act because it (1) has not voluntarily become subject to the reporting requirements, (2) has not had an effective registration statement under the Securities Act within the fiscal year, and (3) did not, at the end of its last fiscal year, meet the shareholder or asset tests under the Exchange Act registration requirements.

issue roll. Hist. English law. A court record on which the issues in contested matters are briefly noted. • This practice was abolished in 1834. See INCIPITUR.

ITA. abbr. INTERNATIONAL TRADE ADMINISTRATION.

ita lex scripta est (i-tə leks skrip-tə est). [Latin] So the law is written. • This expression means that the law must be obeyed despite the apparent rigor of its application. The idea is that we must be content with the law as it stands, without inquiring into its reasons. — Sometimes shortened to ita scripta est ["so it is written"].

"If practice be the whole he is taught, practice must also be the whole he will ever know: if he be uninstructed in the elements and first principles upon which the rule of practice is founded, the least variation from established precedents will totally distract and bewilder him: ita lex scripta est is the utmost his knowledge will arrive at; he must never aspire to form, and seldom expect to comprehend, any arguments drawn a priori, from the spirit of the laws and the natural foundations of justice." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 32 (1765).

ita te Deus adjuvet (i-tə tee dee-əs əj-ə-vet). [Latin] So help you God. • An old form of administering an oath in England, usu. in connection with other words, such as: Ita te Deus adjuvet, et sacrosancta Dei Evangelia ("So help you God, and God's holy gospels"), and Ita te Deus adjuvet et omnes sancti ("So help you God and all the saints").

ITC. See investment tax credit under TAX CREDIT.

item. (16c) 1. A piece of a whole, not necessarily separated. 2. Commercial law. A negotiable instrument or a promise or order to pay money handled by a bank for collection or payment. • The term does not include a payment order governed by division 11 of the UCC.

or a credit- or debit-card slip. UCC 4-104(a)(9). [Cases: Banks and Banking ↻137, 158-168.]

par item. An item that a drawee bank will remit to another bank without charge.

line item. Accounting. In a financial statement, a single entry or notation to which a particular dollar amount is attached.

3. In drafting, a subpart of text that is the next smaller unit than a subparagraph. • In federal drafting, for example, “(4)” is the item in the following citation: Rule 19(a)(1)(B)(4). — Also termed (in sense 3) clause.

itemize, vb. To list in detail; to state by items <an itemized bill>.

itemized deduction. See DEDUCTION.

item veto. See line-item veto under VETO.

iter (i-tər or it-ər), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A rural servitude that allowed the holder to walk or ride on horseback (but not drive a draft animal) through another's land. — Also termed servitus itineris (sər-vi-təs i-tin-ər-is). Cf. ACTUS (3); VIA (2). 2. Hist. A journey; esp., a circuit made by an eyre justice. See EYRE.

itinerant vendor. See VENDOR.

itinerate (i-tin-ə-rayt), vb. (Of a judge) to travel on a circuit for the purpose of holding court. See CIRCUIT. — itineration, n. — itinerant, adj. & n.

JA. abbr. 1. JUDGE ADVOCATE. 2. See joint account under ACCOUNT.

Jac. abbr. Jacobus — the Latin form of the name James, used principally in citing statutes enacted during the reigns of English kings of that name (e.g., “St. 1, Jac. 2”).

jacens (jay-senz). [Latin] Lying; fallen; in abeyance. See hereditas jacens under HEREDITAS.

jackpot justice. Slang. The awarding of enormous and apparently arbitrary damages to plaintiffs, thereby making the plaintiffs wealthy and encouraging others to file lawsuits seeking excessive damages for even minor actual harm.

Jackson–Denno hearing. (1965) A court proceeding, held outside the jury’s presence to determine whether the defendant’s confession was voluntary and therefore admissible as evidence. Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 84 S.Ct. 1774 (1964). — Also termed Jackson v. Denno hearing. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨531, 532.]

Jackson standard. (1980) Criminal law. The principle that the standard of review on appeal — when a criminal defendant claims that there is insufficient evidence to support the conviction — is to determine whether, after considering the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307, 99 S.Ct. 2781 (1979). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨1144.1(3), 1159.2(7).]

Jackson v. Denno hearing. See JACKSON–DENNO HEARING.

Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Act. A 1989 federal statute requiring each state to create a sex-offender registry of sexually violent offenders, particularly those who have been convicted of sex crimes against minors, and to disclose information about registered sex offenders for public-safety purposes. • The Act mandates a minimum registration period of 10 years, beginning on the offender’s date of release from custody or supervision. It was amended in 1996 by Megan’s Law, which added the disclosure requirement. See 42 USCA § 14071. The Act was named for 11-year-old Jacob Wetterling of Minnesota, who was abducted by a stranger in 1989. During the immediate search for Jacob, law-enforcement officers discovered that many of the county’s halfway houses sheltered sex offenders from another county. Jacob was never found. — Often shortened to Jacob Wetterling Act or Wetterling Act. Cf. MEGAN’S LAW. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨469.] jactitation (jak-ti-tay-shən). (17c) 1. A false boasting or claim that causes injury to another. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨140.] 2. Civil law. SLANDER OF TITLE.

jactitation of marriage. Hist. 1. False and actionable boasting or claiming that one is married to another. 2. An action against a person who falsely boasts of being married to the complainant.

“Jactitation of marriage is a cause of action which arises when a person falsely alleges that he or she is married to the petitioner, and the remedy sought is a perpetual injunction against the respondent to cease making such allegations. The cause is now uncommon in English municipal law and almost unknown in the conflict of laws.” R.H. Graveson, Conflict of Laws 349 (7th ed. 1974).

jactitation of title. See SLANDER OF TITLE.

jactura (jak-t[y]oor-ə), n. [Latin] Civil law. 1. A throwing of goods overboard to lighten or save a vessel; JETTISON. 2. A loss incurred from this; general average. See general average under AVERAGE. — Also termed jactus.

jactus lapilli (jak-təs lə-pil-i). [Latin “the throwing down of a stone”] Roman law. A landowner’s throwing of a small stone onto a neighbor’s land to symbolically protest construction that could threaten the thrower’s interest. Cf. NOVI OPERIS NUNTIATIO.

jactus mercium navis levandae causa (jak-təs mər-shee-əm nay-vis lə-van-dee kaw-zə). [Latin “the throwing of goods into the sea for the purpose of lightening the ship”] Roman law. JETTISON. See LEX RHODIA.

jactus retis (jak-təs ree-tis). [Latin] Roman law. The casting of a net in the context of emptio spei. See emptio spei under EMPTIO.

JAG Manual. See MANUAL OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL.

jail, n. (13c) A local government’s detention center where persons awaiting trial or those convicted of misdemeanors are confined. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) gaol. — Also termed holding cell; lockup; jailhouse; house of detention; community correctional center. Cf. PRISON. [Cases: Prisons ⇨213.] — jail, vb.

jail credit. (1950) Time spent by a criminal defendant in confinement while awaiting trial. • This time is usually deducted from the defendant’s final sentence (if convicted). — Also termed jail-credit time. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨1158.]

jail delivery. 1. An escape by several prisoners from a jail. 2. Archaic. A clearing procedure by which all prisoners at a given jail are tried for the offenses that they are accused of having committed.

general jail delivery. Collectively, acquittals in high numbers as a result of either lax or reckless administration of the law or defects in the law.

3. Archaic. The commission issued to judges of assize, directing them to clear a jail by trying — and either acquitting or condemning — all the inmates. 4. Archaic. The court charged with the trial of all ordinary criminal cases. — Also written gaol delivery. See COMMISSION OF GAOL DELIVERY.

jailer. A keeper, guard, or warden of a prison or jail. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) gaoler. [Cases: Prisons ↷ 390.]

jailhouse. See JAIL.

jailhouse lawyer. A prison inmate who seeks release through legal procedures or who gives legal advice to other inmates. — Also termed guardhouse lawyer.

jail liberties. Bounds within which a jail or prison lies and throughout which certain prisoners are allowed to move freely, usu. after giving bond for the liberties. • The bounds are considered an extension of the prison walls. Historically, jail liberties were given in England to those imprisoned for debt. The prisoners were allowed to move freely within the city in which the prison was located. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) gaol liberties. — Also termed jail limits. See BOUND (2).

"[S]tatutes were from time to time passed enlarging the gaol liberties, in order to mitigate the hardships of imprisonment: thus, the whole city of Boston was held the 'gaol liberties' of its county gaol. And so with a large part of New York City. . . . The prisoner, while within the limits, is considered as within the walls of the prison." 1 John Bouvier, Bouvier's Law Dictionary 1333-34 (8th ed. 1914).

jail mail. Slang. Correspondence sent by or to an incarcerated person. • It is often screened by prison personnel.

Jamaican switch. An illegal scheme whereby one conspirator convinces the victim of a need for help in handling a large sum of money, usu. by claiming to have found the money or by claiming to be an unsophisticated foreigner, and promises to share part of the money with the victim or asks the victim for help in finding a suitable charity to donate to, at which time the other conspirator appears and promises to assist if both the victim and first conspirator provide good-faith money, the intent being for the two conspirators to leave with all the money, including the victim's. • The name given to this scheme is likely to be considered offensive by some. — Also termed pigeon drop. [Cases: False Pretenses ↷ 16.]

James hearing. (1981) A court proceeding held to determine whether the out-of-court statements of a coconspirator should be admitted into evidence, by analyzing whether there was a conspiracy, whether the declarant and the defendant were part of the conspiracy, and whether the statement was made in furtherance of the conspiracy. United States v. James, 590 F.2d 575 (5th Cir. 1979); Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 427.]

Jane Doe. A fictitious name for a female party to a legal proceeding, used because the party's true identity is unknown or because her real name is being withheld. — Also termed Jane Roe; Mary Major. Cf. JOHN DOE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 101; Parties ↷ 73.]

Janus-faced (jay-nəs fayst), adj. (17c) Having two contrasting or contradictory aspects; two-faced .

Jason clause. Maritime law. A bill-of-lading clause requiring contribution in general average even when the peril that justified the sacrifice was the result of the carrier's negligence, for which the carrier is otherwise exempt from liability by statute. • The clause is named after the Supreme Court case that upheld its enforceability, The Jason, 225 U.S. 32, 32 S.Ct. 560 (1912). See general average under AVERAGE. [Cases: Shipping ↷ 189.]

jaywalking, n. (1919) The act or instance of crossing a street without heeding traffic regulations, as by crossing between intersections or at a place other than a crosswalk. [Cases: Automobiles ↷ 217; Municipal Corporations ↷ 707.] — jaywalk, vb.

Jedwood justice (jed-wəd). See Jedburgh justice under JUSTICE (1).

Jencks material. (1961) Criminal procedure. A prosecution witness's written or recorded pretrial statement that a criminal defendant, upon filing a motion after the witness has testified, is entitled to have in preparing to cross-examine the witness. • The defense may use a statement of this kind for impeachment purposes. Jencks v. United States, 353 U.S. 657, 77 S.Ct. 1007 (1957); Jencks Act, 18 USCA § 3500. Cf. BRADY MATERIAL. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 627.7.]

reverse Jencks material. Criminal procedure. A defense witness's written or recorded pretrial statement that a prosecutor is entitled to have in preparing to cross-examine the witness. • Reverse Jencks material may be obtained during pretrial discovery. Discoverable statements include a witness's signed or adopted written statement, and transcripts or recordings of the witness's oral statements, including grand-jury testimony. United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 231-34, 95 S. Ct. 2160, 2166-68 (1975); Fed. R. Crim. P. 26.2. — Also termed reverse Jencks; reverse discovery; reciprocal discovery. [Cases: Criminal Law ↷ 627.7(2).]

Jensen doctrine. Maritime law. The principle that a state statute may not apply in a maritime case if to do so would “work material prejudice to the characteristic features of the general maritime law or interfere with the proper harmony and uniformity of that law.” Southern Pac. Co. v. Jensen, 244 U.S. 205, 37 S.Ct. 524 (1917). [Cases: Workers’ Compensation ↻262.]

jeofail (jef-ayl), n. [fr. French j’ay faillé] Archaic. 1. A pleading error or oversight that results in a misjoined issue and requires a repleader. 2. The acknowledgment of such an error. — Also spelled jeofaile.

jeopardy. (14c) The risk of conviction and punishment that a criminal defendant faces at trial. • Jeopardy attaches in a jury trial when the jury is empaneled, and in a bench trial when the first witness is sworn. — Also termed legal jeopardy. See DOUBLE JEOPARDY. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ↻59.]

jeopardy assessment. See ASSESSMENT.

Jepson claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

jerk note. Hist. Maritime law. A permit, issued by a customs collector to the ship’s master, authorizing the master to receive cargo for an outbound voyage.

jetsam (jet-səm). (16c) The portion of a ship’s cargo and equipment that is (1) thrown overboard in an effort to save the ship from a perilous condition, and that (2) either sinks beneath the surface or is washed ashore. — Also termed jettison. Cf. FLOTSAM; LAGAN (1); WAVESON.

jettison (jet-ə-sən), n. (15c) Maritime law. 1. The act of voluntarily throwing cargo overboard to lighten or stabilize a ship that is in immediate danger. — Also termed equitable jettison; jactura; jactus mercium navis levandae causa. See general average under AVERAGE. 2. JETSAM. — jettison, vb.

jeux de bourse (zhoo də bɔrs), n. [French “games of the stock exchange”] Speculation in stocks or bonds, as by dealing in options or futures.

Jewell instruction (joo-wəl). (1977) Criminal procedure. A court’s instruction to the jury that the defendant can be found to have the requisite criminal mental state despite being deliberately ignorant of some of the facts surrounding the crime. • If a defendant claims ignorance of some fact essential to the crime, such as not knowing that a particular bag contained drugs, but the surrounding circumstances would put a reasonable person on notice that there was a high probability of illegality, as when the defendant has taken the bag from a known drug-dealer and has noticed the smell of marijuana coming from the bag, then the court may instruct the jury that it is entitled to infer the defendant’s guilty knowledge if the defendant deliberately avoided knowledge of the critical facts. United States v. Jewell, 532 F.2d 697 (9th Cir. 1976). — Also termed deliberate-indifference instruction. Cf. ostrich instruction under JURY INSTRUCTION. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻772(5).]

Jim Crow law. (1891) Hist. A law enacted or purposely interpreted to discriminate against blacks, such as a law requiring separate restrooms for blacks and whites. • Jim Crow laws are unconstitutional under the 14th Amendment.

jocus partitus (joh-kəs pahr-tī-təs), n. [Law Latin “divided game”] Hist. A gambling arrangement made by the parties on a lawsuit’s outcome.

John-a-Nokes. Archaic. A fictitious name for an unknown party to a legal proceeding, esp. the first party. • The name is short for “John who dwells at the oak.” — Abbr. J.N. — Also spelled John-a-Noakes.

John-a-Stiles. Archaic. A fictitious name for an unknown party to a legal proceeding, esp. the second party. • The name is short for “John who dwells at the stile.” — Abbr. J.S. — Also spelled John-a-Styles.

John Doe. A fictitious name used in a legal proceeding to designate a person whose identity is unknown, to protect a person’s known identity, or to indicate that a true defendant does not exist. • In England, "William Styles" was also used. Cf. JANE DOE; RICHARD ROE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻101; Parties ↻67, 73.]

"Sheriffs in time growing remiss in their duty, allowed of any persons as pledges, sometimes returning the names of fictitious persons as pledges, at others, neglecting to require or return any at all. . . . And the legislature, to supply the want of real persons as pledges, and recompense the defendant where he has been unjustly or vexatiously sued, has by various statutes, either given him the costs he has incurred in making his defence; or else deprived the plaintiff of recovering those costs he is entitled to by law, in cases of obtaining a verdict, by leaving it to the judge at the trial to certify on the record, that he had little or no cause of action. Since these statutes for allowing the defendant his costs, where the plaintiff fails, or is nonsuited, the writ to the coroner to affect the pledges has fallen into disuse, and two good-natured personages, John Doe and Richard Roe, from their universal acquaintance and peculiar longevity, have become the ready and common pledges of every suitor." 1 George Crompton, Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas xlvii (3d ed. 1787).

"The fictitious names John Doe and Richard Roe regularly appeared in actions of ejectment . . . at common law. Doe was the nominal plaintiff, who by a fiction was said to have entered land under a valid lease; Roe was said to have ejected Doe, and the lawsuit took the title Doe v. Roe. These fictional allegations disappeared upon the enactment of the Common Law Procedure Act of 1852. . . . Beyond actions of ejectment, and esp. in the U.S., John Doe, Jane Doe, Richard Roe, Jane Roe, and Peter Poe have come to identify a party to a lawsuit whose true name is either unknown or purposely shielded." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 290-91 (2d ed. 1995).

joinder, n. (17c) The uniting of parties or claims in a single lawsuit. Cf. CONSOLIDATION (3). [Cases: Action ↻39-52; Federal Civil Procedure ↻81, 201-267; Parties ↻49.] — join, vb.

collusive joinder. (1883) Joinder of a defendant, usu. a nonresident, in order to have a case removed to federal court. See manufactured diversity under DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP. [Cases: Removal of Cases ↻36.]

compulsory joinder. (1901) The necessary joinder of a party if either of the following is true: (1) in that party's absence, those already involved in the lawsuit cannot receive complete relief; or (2) the absent party claims an interest in the subject of an action, so that party's absence might either impair the protection of that interest or leave some other party subject to multiple or inconsistent obligations. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). — Also termed mandatory joinder. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻201; Parties ↻17, 28.]

fraudulent joinder. (1836) The bad-faith joinder of a party, usu. a resident of the state, to prevent removal of a case to federal court. [Cases: Removal of Cases ↻36.]

joinder in demurrer. Common-law pleading. A set form of words by which either party accepts or joins in a legal issue; esp., the plaintiff's acceptance of the defendant's issue of law.

joinder in issue. See joinder of issue.

joinder in pleading. Common-law pleading. One party's acceptance of the opposing party's proposed issue and mode of trial.

joinder of error. A written denial of the errors alleged in an assignment of errors in a criminal case.

joinder of issue. 1. The submission of an issue jointly for decision. 2. The acceptance or adoption of a disputed point as the basis of argument in a controversy. — Also termed joinder in issue; similiter. 3. The taking up of the opposite side of a case, or of the contrary view on a question.

joinder of offenses. The charging of an accused with two or more crimes as multiple counts in a single indictment or information. • Unless later severed, joined offenses are tried together at a single trial. Fed. R. Crim. P. 8(a). [Cases: Indictment and Information ↻125, 126.]

joinder of remedies. The joinder of alternative claims, such as breach of contract and quantum meruit, or of one claim with another prospective claim, such as a creditor's claim against a debtor to recover on a loan and the creditor's claim against a third party to set aside the transfer of the loan's collateral. [Cases: Action ↻43; Federal Civil Procedure ↻81.]

mandatory joinder. See compulsory joinder.

misjoinder. See MISJOINER.

nonjoinder. See NONJOINER.

permissive joinder. (1903) The optional joinder of parties if (1) their claims or the claims asserted against them are asserted jointly, severally, or in respect of the same transaction or occurrence, and (2) any legal or factual question common to all of them will arise. Fed. R. Civ. P. 20. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻241; Parties ↻13, 24.]

pretensive joinder. Joinder of defendants solely to obtain venue in a jurisdiction in which the action could not otherwise be tried. [Cases: Venue ↻22(3).]

joint, adj. (14c) 1. (Of a thing) common to or shared by two or more persons or entities <joint bank account>. 2. (Of a person or entity) combined, united, or sharing with another <joint heirs>.

joint account. See ACCOUNT.

joint action. See ACTION (4).

joint activity. See JOINT PARTICIPATION.

joint administration. Bankruptcy. The management of two or more bankruptcy estates, usu. involving related debtors, under one docket for purposes of handling various administrative matters, including notices to creditors, to conclude the cases more efficiently. • A bankruptcy court can order a joint administration when there are two or more cases pending involving a husband and wife, a partnership and at least one partner, two or more business partners, or a business and an affiliate. The intent should be to increase the administrative efficiency of administering the two cases; the substantive rights of creditors should not ordinarily be affected. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1015. — Also termed procedural consolidation. See ADMINISTRATION (3). Cf. substantive consolidation under CONSOLIDATION. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2311.]

joint annuity. See ANNUITY.

joint authors. Copyright. Two or more authors who collaborate in producing a copyrightable work, each author intending to merge his or her respective contributions into a single work, and each being able to exploit the work as desired while remaining accountable for a pro rata share of the profits to the coauthor or coauthors. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 41(3).] joint ballot. See BALLOT (2).

joint board. Labor law. A committee — usu. made up of an equal number of representatives from management and the union — established to conduct grievance proceedings or resolve grievances.

joint bond. See BOND (3).

joint-check rule. The principle that when an owner or general contractor issues a check that is made jointly payable to a subcontractor and the subcontractor's materialman supplier, the materialman's indorsement on the check certifies that all amounts due to the materialman, up to the amount of the check, have been paid. • This rule protects the owner or general contractor from lien foreclosure by a materialman who was not paid by the subcontractor. By issuing a joint check, the owner or general contractor is not left merely to hope that the subcontractor pays all the materialmen. And the materialman is protected because it can refuse to indorse the check until it is satisfied that the subcontractor will pay it the appropriate amount. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens ⇨ 115(5).]

joint inventor. Patents. A person who collaborates with another or others in developing an invention. • All joint inventors must be identified on a patent application. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 92.]

"Employing a friend, mechanic, model maker or other person to do work for one on an idea does not, as a rule, make him a joint inventor with the originator. One has a right to employ someone else to do one's work. There are conditions, however, where such person would become a joint inventor, or even sole inventor. It is best to play safe and consult an experienced patent lawyer, laying before him all of the facts." Richard B. Owen, Patents, Trademarks, Copyrights, Departmental Practice 7 (1925).

jointure (joyn-chər). (15c) 1. Archaic. A woman's freehold life estate in land, made in consideration of marriage in lieu of dower and to be enjoyed by her only after her husband's death; a settlement under which a wife receives such an estate. • The four essential elements are that (1) the jointure must take effect immediately upon the husband's death, (2) it must be for the wife's own life, and not for another's life or for a term of years, (3) it must be held by her in her own right and not in trust for her, and (4) it must be in lieu of her entire dower. See DOWER. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ⇨ 29, 40.]

equitable jointure. A premarital arrangement for a woman to enjoy a jointure, accepted by the woman in lieu of dower. — Also termed equitable dower. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ⇨ 40.]

2. A settlement under which a wife receives such an estate. — Also termed legal jointure. 3. An estate in lands given jointly to a husband and wife before they marry. See JOINTRESS. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ⇨ 40.]

jointress. See JOINTRESS.

joint venture. (18c) A business undertaking by two or more persons engaged in a single defined project. • The necessary elements are: (1) an express or implied agreement; (2) a common purpose that the group intends to carry out; (3) shared profits and losses; and (4) each member's equal voice in controlling the project. — Also termed joint adventure; joint enterprise. Cf. PARTNERSHIP; STRATEGIC ALLIANCE; VENTURE [Cases: Joint Ventures ⇨ 1.1, 1.2.]

"There is some difficulty in determining when the legal relationship of joint venture exists, with authorities disagreeing as to the essential elements. . . . The joint venture is not as much of an entity as is a partnership." Henry G. Henn & John R. Alexander, Laws of Corporations § 49, at 106 (3d ed. 1983).

joker. (1904) 1. An ambiguous clause inserted in a legislative bill to render it inoperative or uncertain in some respect without arousing opposition at the time of passage. 2. A rider or amendment that is extraneous to the subject of the bill.

Jones Act. Maritime law. A federal statute that allows a seaman injured during the course of employment to recover damages for the injuries in a negligence action against the employer. • If a seaman dies from such injuries, the seaman's personal representative may maintain an action against the employer. 46 USCA app. § 688. [Cases: Seamen ⇨ 29.]

Jones Act vessel. See VESSEL.

jour (zhoor), n. [French] Day <jour en banc>.

journal. (15c) 1. A book or record kept, usu. daily, as of the proceedings of a legislature or the events of a ship's voyage. — Also termed log; logbook. See MINUTES (2). 2. Accounting. In double-entry bookkeeping, a book in which original entries are recorded before being transferred to a ledger. 3. A periodical or magazine, esp. one published for a scholarly or professional group. — Abbr. J.

journal entry. See ENTRY (2).

journalist's privilege. See PRIVILEGE (3).

journal of notarial acts (noh-tair-ee-əl). The notary public's sequential record of notarial transactions, usu. a bound book listing the date, time, and type of each official act, the type of instrument acknowledged or verified before the notary, the signature of each person whose signature is notarized, the type of information used to verify the identity of parties whose signatures are notarized, and the fee charged. • This journal, required by law in many states, provides a record that may be used as evidence in court. — Also termed notarial record; notarial register; notary record book; sequential journal.

journeys accounts. Hist. The number of days (usu. 15) after the abatement of a writ within which a new writ could be obtained. • This number was based on how many days it took for the plaintiff to travel (or journey) to the court.

joyriding, n. (1909) The illegal driving of someone else's automobile without permission, but with no intent to deprive the owner of it permanently. • Under the Model Penal Code, the offender's reasonable belief that the owner would have consented is an affirmative defense. See Model Penal Code § 223.9. — Also termed unauthorized use of a vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨ 339.] — joyride, vb. — joyrider, n.

"When the automobile began to appear and was limited to the possession of a few of the more fortunate members of the community, many persons who ordinarily respected the property rights of others, yielded to the temptation to drive one of these new contrivances without the consent of the owner. This became so common that the term 'joyrider' was coined to refer to the person who indulged in such unpermitted use of another's car. For the most part it was a relatively harmless type of trespass . . ." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 333 (3d ed. 1982).

judex ordinarius (or-də-nair-ee-əs). Civil law. A judge having jurisdiction in his own right rather than by delegated authority. • The judge was typically a provincial governor.

judex pedaneus (pə-day-nee-əs). Roman law. A judex to whom petty cases are delegated; an inferior or deputy judge under cognitio extraordinaria. — Also termed judex specialis.

judex quaestionis (kwes-chee-oh-nis or kwes-tee-). Roman law. The chairman of the jury in a criminal case, either a praetor or a magistrate of lower rank.

judex selectus (sə-lek-tas). Civil law. A judge selected to hear the facts in a criminal case.

judex specialis (spesh-ee-ay-lis). Roman law. See judex pedaneus.

judge, n. (14c) A public official appointed or elected to hear and decide legal matters in court. • The term is sometimes held to include all officers appointed to decide litigated questions, including a justice of the peace and even jurors (who are judges of the facts). But in ordinary legal usage, the term is limited to the sense of an officer who (1) is so named in his or her commission, and (2) presides in a court. Judge is often used interchangeably with court. See COURT (2). — Abbr. J. (and, in plural, JJ. [Cases: Judges ⇨ 1.] administrative-law judge. See ADMINISTRATIVE-LAW JUDGE.

administrative patent judge, Patents. A U.S. Patent and Trademark Office adjudicator charged with conducting interference and appeal proceedings. — Abbr. APJ. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 111.]

associate judge. (18c) An appellate judge who is neither a chief judge nor a presiding judge. — Also termed puisne judge.

bankruptcy judge. (1873) A judicial officer appointed by a U.S. Court of Appeals to preside over cases filed under the Bankruptcy Code and proceedings related to bankruptcy cases that are referred by the U.S. district court. • A bankruptcy judge is appointed for a term of 14 years. 28 USCA §§ 151 et seq. See ARTICLE I JUDGE. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2123.]

chief administrative patent judge, Patents. The supervisor of administrative patent judges at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. — Abbr. CAPJ.

chief judge. (15c) The judge who presides over the sessions and deliberations of a court, while also overseeing the administration of the court. — Abbr. C.J.

circuit judge. (18c) 1. A judge who sits on a circuit court; esp., a federal judge who sits on a U.S. court of appeals. 2. Hist. A special judge added to a court for the purpose of holding trials, but without being a regular member of the court. — Abbr. C.J.

puisne judge (pyoo-nee). [Law French puisné "later born"] 1. A junior judge; a judge without distinction or title. ● This was the title formerly used in English common-law courts for a judge other than the chief judge. Today puisne judge refers to any judge of the English High Court, apart from the Chief Justice. 2. See associate judge.

senior administrative patent judge. Patents. A semiretired administrative patent judge who remains active in hearing interferences in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. — Abbr. SAPJ.

senior judge. (18c) 1. The judge who has served for the longest time on a given court. 2. A federal or state judge who qualifies for senior status and chooses this status over retirement. See SENIOR STATUS.

side judge. Archaic. A judge — or one of two judges — of inferior rank, associated with a judge of a higher rank for the purpose of constituting a court.

special judge. (17c) A judge appointed or selected to sit, usu. in a specific case, in the absence or disqualification of the regular judge or otherwise as provided by statute. [Cases: Judges ↷13-19, 25.]

"Many, if not all, jurisdictions have made provision for the selection of a substitute or special judge to serve in place of the regular judge in the event of disqualification, voluntary recusal, disability, or other absence of the regular judge. The circumstances under which a special or substitute judge may act in place of the regular judge, and the manner in which such a judge may be chosen, are matters of purely local regulation, entirely dependent on local constitutions and statutes." 46 Am. Jur. 2d Judges § 248, at 331 (1994).

temporary judge. See visiting judge.

trial judge. (17c) The judge before whom a case is tried. ● This term is used most commonly on appeal from the judge's rulings.

United States Magistrate Judge. See UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

visiting judge. (1888) A judge appointed by the presiding judge of an administrative region to sit temporarily on a given court, usu. in the regular judge's absence. — Also termed temporary judge; judge pro tempore. [Cases: Judges ⇨ 13–19, 25.]

judge advocate. (17c) Military law. 1. An officer of a court-martial who acts as a prosecutor. 2. A legal adviser on a military commander's staff. 3. Any officer in the Judge Advocate General's Corps or in a department of a U.S. military branch. — Abbr. JA.

staff judge advocate. A certified military lawyer with the staff of a convening or supervisory authority that exercises general court-martial jurisdiction.

Judge Advocate General. Military law. The senior legal officer and chief legal adviser of the Army, Navy, or Air Force. — Abbr. JAG.

Judge Lynch. See LYNCH LAW.

judge-made law. (1817) 1. The law established by judicial precedent rather than by statute. See COMMON LAW. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 88.] 2. The law that results when judges construe statutes contrary to legislative intent. — Also termed (in sense 2) judicial legislation; bench legislation; judicial law. See JUDICIAL ACTIVISM.

judgement. See JUDGMENT.

judge-shopping. (1962) The practice of filing several lawsuits asserting the same claims — in a court or a district with multiple judges — with the hope of having one of the lawsuits assigned to a favorable judge and of nonsuiting or voluntarily dismissing the others. Cf. FORUM-SHOPPING.

judge trial. See bench trial under TRIAL.

judgment. (13c) 1. A court's final determination of the rights and obligations of the parties in a case. ● The term judgment includes an equitable decree and any order from which an appeal lies. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54. — Also spelled (esp. in BrE) judgement. — Abbr. J. — Also termed (historically) judgment ex cathedra. Cf. RULING (1); OPINION (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2391–2628; Judgment ⇨ 1.] 2. English law. An opinion delivered by a member of the appellate committee of the House of Lords; a Law Lord's judicial opinion. — Also termed (in sense 2) speech.

"An action is instituted for the enforcement of a right or the redress of an injury. Hence a judgment, as the culmination of the action declares the existence of the right, recognizes the commission of the injury, or negatives the allegation of one or the other. But as no right can exist without a correlative duty, nor any invasion of it without a corresponding obligation to make amends, the judgment necessarily affirms, or else denies, that such a duty or such a liability rests upon the person against whom the aid of the law is invoked." 1 Henry Campbell Black, A Treatise on the Law of Judgments § 1, at 2 (2d ed. 1902).

accumulative judgment. (1921) A second or additional judgment against a person who has already been convicted, the execution of which is postponed until the completion of any prior sentence.

agreed judgment. (1945) A settlement that becomes a court judgment when the judge sanctions it. ● In effect, an agreed judgment is merely a contract acknowledged in open court and ordered to be recorded, but it binds the parties as fully as other judgments. — Also termed consent judgment; stipulated judgment; judgment by consent. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2397; Judgment ⇨ 71–91.]

alternative judgment. A determination that gives the losing party options for satisfying that party's duties.

cognovit judgment (kog-noh-vit). A debtor's confession of judgment; judgment entered in accordance with a cognovit. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT; COGNOVIT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2396; Judgment ⇨ 54.]

conditional judgment. A judgment whose force depends on the performance of certain acts to be done in the future by one of the parties. ● For example, a conditional judgment may order the sale of mortgaged property in a foreclosure proceeding unless the mortgagor pays the amount decreed within the time specified. — Also termed common order. [Cases: Judgment ⇨ 229.]

confession of judgment. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

consent judgment. See agreed judgment.

contradictory judgment. Civil law. A judgment that has been given after the court has heard the parties make their claims and defenses. ● In Louisiana, this term is opposed to default judgment. Cf. contradictory motion under MOTION.

declaratory judgment. (1886) A binding adjudication that establishes the rights and other legal relations of the parties without providing for or ordering enforcement. ● Declaratory judgments are often sought, for example, by insurance companies in determining whether a policy covers a given insured or peril. — Also termed declaratory decree; declaration. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment ⇨ 1.]

default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

deferred judgment. (1896) A judgment placing a convicted defendant on probation, the successful completion of which will prevent entry of the underlying judgment of conviction. ● This type of probation is common with minor traffic offenses. — Also termed deferred adjudication; deferred-adjudication probation; deferred prosecution; probation before judgment; probation without judgment; pretrial intervention; adjudication withheld. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 2050.] deficiency judgment. (1865) A judgment against a debtor for the unpaid balance of the debt if a foreclosure sale or a sale of repossessed personal property fails to yield the full amount of the debt due. — Also termed deficiency decree. [Cases: Mortgages ↷375, 559; Secured Transactions ↷240.]

definitive judgment. See final judgment.

determinative judgment. See final judgment.

domestic judgment. A judgment rendered by the courts of the state or country where the judgment or its effect is at issue.

dormant judgment. (18c) A judgment that has not been executed or enforced within the statutory time limit. • As a result, any judgment lien may have been lost and execution cannot be issued unless the judgment creditor first revives the judgment. See REVIVAL (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2621; Judgment ↷853.]

erroneous judgment. (17c) A judgment issued by a court with jurisdiction to issue it, but containing an improper application of law. • This type of judgment is not void, but can be corrected by a trial court while the court retains plenary jurisdiction, or in a direct appeal. — Also termed judgment in error. See ERROR (2).

excess judgment. Insurance. A judgment that exceeds all of the defendant's insurance coverage. [Cases: Insurance ↷2934(3), 3346, 3374.]

executory judgment (eg-zek-yə-tor-ee). (18c) A judgment that has not been carried out, such as a yet-to-be fulfilled order for the defendant to pay the plaintiff.

final appealable judgment. See final judgment.

final judgment. (18c) A court's last action that settles the rights of the parties and disposes of all issues in controversy, except for the award of costs (and, sometimes, attorney's fees) and enforcement of the judgment. — Also termed final appealable judgment; final decision; final decree; definitive judgment; determinative judgment; final appealable order. See FINAL-JUDGMENT RULE. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷76(1); Criminal Law ↷1023(2); Federal Civil Procedure ↷2579; Federal Courts ↷571.]

foreign judgment. A decree, judgment, or order of a court in a state, country, or judicial system different from that where the judgment or its effect is at issue. [Cases: Judgment ↷813-832.7.]

in personam judgment. See personal judgment.

in rem judgment. See judgment in rem.

interlocutory judgment (in-tər-lok-[y]ə-tor-ee). (17c) An intermediate judgment that determines a preliminary or subordinate point or plea but does not finally decide the case. • A judgment or order given on a provisional or accessory claim or contention is generally interlocutory. — Also termed interlocutory decree. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↷68; Federal Civil Procedure ↷2578; Federal Courts ↷572; Judgment ↷216.]

irregular judgment. A judgment that may be set aside because of some irregularity in the way it was rendered, such as a clerk's failure to send a defendant notice that a default judgment has been rendered. [Cases: Judgment ↷353.]

judgment as a matter of law. (1873) A judgment rendered during a jury trial — either before or after the jury's verdict — against a party on a given issue when there is no legally sufficient basis for a jury to find for that party on that issue. • In federal practice, the term judgment as a matter of law has replaced both the directed verdict and the judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Fed. R. Civ. P. 50. Cf. SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷2111, 2601; Judgment ↷199; Trial ↷167.] judgment by confession. See CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT.

judgment by consent. See agreed judgment.

judgment homologating the tableau (hə-mahl-ə-gay-ting / ta-bloh or tab-loh). Civil law. A judgment approving a plan for distributing property of a decedent's estate. • The distribution plan is known as the tableau of distribution. La. Code Civ. Proc. art. 3307. See HOMOLOGATION.

judgment in error. See erroneous judgment.

judgment in personam. See personal judgment.

judgment in rem (in rem). (18c) A judgment that determines the status or condition of property and that operates directly on the property itself. • The phrase denotes a judgment that affects not only interests in a thing but also all persons' interest in the thing. — Also termed in rem judgment. [Cases: Judgment ↷803.]

judgment in retraxit. See judgment of retraxit.

judgment inter partes. See personal judgment.

judgment nil capiat per billa (nil kap-ee-ət pər bil-ə). (1816) Judgment that the plaintiff take nothing by the bill; a take-nothing judgment in a case instituted by a bill.

judgment nil capiat per breve (nil kap-ee-ət pər breev or bree-vee). (1916) Judgment that the plaintiff take nothing by the writ; a take-nothing judgment in a case instituted by a writ.

judgment nisi (ni-si). (18c) A provisional judgment that, while not final or absolute, may become final on a party's motion. See NISI.

judgment notwithstanding the verdict. (18c) A judgment entered for one party even though a jury verdict has been rendered for the opposing party. — Also termed judgment non obstante verdicto (non ahb-stan-tee ver-ə-dik-toh). — Abbr. JNOV; judgment N.O.V. See judgment as a matter of law. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻977(4); Federal Civil Procedure ↻2601–2610; Judgment ↻199.]

judgment nunc pro tunc. A judgment entered on a day after the time when it should have been entered, as of the earlier date. — Also termed decree nunc pro tunc. See NUNC PRO TUNC. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2625; Judgment ↻273.]

judgment of acquittal. (17c) A judgment, rendered on the defendant's motion or court's own motion, that acquits the defendant of the offense charged when the evidence is insufficient. Fed. R. Crim. P. 29. See directed verdict under VERDICT. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻753.2.]

judgment of blood. See death sentence under SENTENCE.

judgment of cassetur billa. See CASSETUR BILLA.

judgment of cassetur breve. See CASSETUR BREVE.

judgment of conviction. (1806) 1. The written record of a criminal judgment, consisting of the plea, the verdict or findings, the adjudication, and the sentence. Fed. R. Crim. P. 32(d)(1). 2. A sentence in a criminal case. See SENTENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻990.1.]

judgment of discontinuance. 1. A judgment dismissing a plaintiff's action based on interruption in the proceedings occasioned by the plaintiff's failure to continue the suit at the appointed time or times. 2. NONSUIT (1). — Often shortened to discontinuance. See DISCONTINUANCE. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure ↻501–581.]

judgment of dismissal. (1809) A final determination of a case (against the plaintiff in a civil action or the government in a criminal action) without a trial on its merits. See DISMISSAL. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1837; Pretrial Procedure ↻694.]

judgment of nolle prosequi (nah-lee prahs-ə-kwī). (1869) A judgment entered against a plaintiff who, after appearance but before judgment on the merits, has decided to abandon prosecution of the lawsuit. See NOLLE PROSEQUI.

judgment of nonsuit. 1. Hist. The judgment given against a plaintiff who fails to be present in court to hear the jury render its verdict or who, after issue is joined, fails to bring the issue to be tried in due time. • This judgment does not prevent the plaintiff from filing the same case again. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2116.] 2. NONSUIT (2).

judgment of repleader. See REPLEADER.

judgment of retraxit (ri-trak-sit). Hist. A judgment against a plaintiff who has voluntarily retracted the claim. • Such a judgment bars the plaintiff from relitigating the claim. — Also termed judgment in retraxit. See RETRAXIT.

judgment on the merits. (18c) A judgment based on the evidence rather than on technical or procedural grounds. — Also termed decision on the merits.

judgment on the pleadings. (18c) A judgment based solely on the allegations and information contained in the pleadings, and not on any outside matters. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(c). Cf. SUMMARY JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1041–1068; Pleading ↻342.]

judgment on the verdict. (17c) A judgment for the party receiving a favorable jury verdict.

judgment quasi in rem (kway-sī [or-zī] in rem). (1905) A judgment based on the court's jurisdiction over the defendant's interest in property rather than on its jurisdiction over the defendant or the property. • Such a judgment affects only particular persons' interests in a thing — that is, only the persons who are named or described in the proceeding. [Cases: Judgment ↻805.]

judgment quod billa cassetur (kwod bil-ə kə-see-tər). (18c) Judgment that the bill be quashed. • This is a judgment for the defendant.

judgment quod breve cassetur (kwod breev or bree-vee kə-see-tər). Judgment that the writ be quashed. • This is a judgment for the defendant.

judgment quod computet. See QUOD COMPUTET.

judgment quod recuperet (kwod ri-kyoo-pər-it). Judgment that the plaintiff recover.

judgment respondeat ouster (ri-spon-dee-at ows-tər). Hist. An interlocutory judgment requiring the defendant who has made a dilatory plea to give a more substantial defense.

junior judgment. A judgment rendered or entered after the rendition or entry of another judgment, on a different claim, against the same defendant.

money judgment. (1869) A judgment for damages subject to immediate execution, as distinguished from equitable or injunctive relief. — Also termed judgment for money.

nunc pro tunc judgment (nəngk proh təngk). (1828) A procedural device by which the record of a judgment is amended to accord with what the judge actually said and did, so that the record will be accurate. • This device is often used to correct defects in real-estate titles. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2625; Judgment ↻273, 326.]

personal judgment. (1829) 1. A judgment that imposes personal liability on a defendant and that may therefore be satisfied out of any of the defendant's property within judicial reach. 2. A judgment resulting from an action in which a court has personal jurisdiction over the parties. 3. A judgment against a person as distinguished from a judgment against a thing, right, or status. — Also termed judgment in personam (in par-soh-nəm); in personam judgment; judgment inter partes (in-tər pahr-teez).

simulated judgment. Civil law. A judgment that, although founded on an actual debt and intended for collection by the usual legal processes, is actually entered into by the parties to give one of them an undeserving advantage or to defraud third parties.

stipulated judgment. See agreed judgment.

summary judgment. See SUMMARY JUDGMENT.

suspension of judgment. See STAY.

take-nothing judgment. (1938) A judgment for the defendant providing that the plaintiff recover nothing in damages or other relief. — Also termed (in some states) no cause of action.

valid judgment. 1. A judgment that will be recognized by common-law states as long as it is in force in the state where the judgment was rendered. [Cases: Judgment ⇨815.] 2. A judicial act rendered by a court having jurisdiction over the parties and over the subject matter in a proceeding in which the parties have had a reasonable opportunity to be heard. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2393.]

voidable judgment. (17c) A judgment that, although seemingly valid, is defective in some material way; esp., a judgment that, although rendered by a court having jurisdiction, is irregular or erroneous. [Cases: Judgment ⇨27, 353, 501.]

void judgment. (18c) A judgment that has no legal force or effect, the invalidity of which may be asserted by any party whose rights are affected at any time and any place, whether directly or collaterally. • From its inception, a void judgment continues to be absolutely null. It is incapable of being confirmed, ratified, or enforced in any manner or to any degree. One source of a void judgment is the lack of subject-matter jurisdiction. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2392; Judgment ⇨5-27, 346, 486.]

judgmental immunity. See ERROR-OF-JUDGMENT RULE.

judgment book. See judgment docket under DOCKET (1).

judgment by comparison. Patents. Allowance of a patent claim because a similar claim has been allowed before. • There is no stare decisis doctrine in patent prosecutions, but examiners may consider allowance of similar claims as a decision-making aid.

judgment creditor. (18c) A person having a legal right to enforce execution of a judgment for a specific sum of money.

bona fide judgment creditor. One who recovers a judgment without engaging in fraud or collusion.

judgment debt. See DEBT.

judgment debtor. (18c) A person against whom a money judgment has been entered but not yet satisfied.

judgment of cassetur breve. See CASSETUR BREVE.

judgment of repleader. See REPLEADER.

judgment-proof, adj. (18c) (Of an actual or potential judgment debtor) unable to satisfy a judgment for money damages because the person has no property, does not own enough property within the court's jurisdiction to satisfy the judgment, or claims the benefit of statutorily exempt property. — Also termed execution-proof.

judgment quod computet. See QUOD COMPUTET.

judgment receiver. See RECEIVER.

judgment record. See judgment docket under DOCKET (1).

judgment roll. See judgment docket under DOCKET (1).

"As the pleadings constitute part of the record, it is indispensable that they be filed. In some of the codes they must be filed at the institution of the action; in others, by or before the first day of the term; in others, at or before the trial. They must be used in making the 'judgment roll,' and in the practice of each State (not here considered) procedure is provided to procure filing." Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 179 (2d ed. 1899).

judgment-roll appeal. See APPEAL.

judgment sale. See execution sale under SALE.

judicatory (joo-di-kə-tor-ee), adj. (17c) 1. Of or relating to judgment. 2. Allowing a judgment to be made; giving a decisive indication.

judicatory (joo-di-kə-tor-ee), n. (16c) 1. A court; any tribunal with judicial authority .

2. The administration of justice <working toward a more efficient judicatory>.

judicatum solvi (joo-di-kay-təm sol-vi). [Latin “that the judgment will be paid”] 1. Roman law. The payment of the sum awarded by way of judgment. 2. Roman law. Security for the payment of the sum awarded by way of judgment. • This applied when a representative appeared on the defendant’s behalf at the trial. 3. Civil law. A court-ordered caution given by the defendant in a maritime case. See CAUTION.

judicature (joo-di-kə-chər). (16c) 1. The action of judging or of administering justice through duly constituted courts. 2. JUDICIARY (3). 3. A judge’s office, function, or authority.

judicia (joo-dish-ee-ə). [Latin] pl. JUDICIUM.

judicable, adj. See JUDICABLE.

judicial (joo-dish-əl), adj. (14c) 1. Of, relating to, or by the court or a judge <judicial duty> <judicial demeanor>. 2. In court <the witness’s judicial confession>. 3. Legal <the Attorney General took no judicial action>. 4. Of or relating to a judgment <an award of judicial interest at the legal rate>. Cf. JUDICIOUS.

quasi-judicial. See QUASI-JUDICIAL.

judicial activism, n. (1949) A philosophy of judicial decision-making whereby judges allow their personal views about public policy, among other factors, to guide their decisions, usu. with the suggestion that adherents of this philosophy tend to find constitutional violations and are willing to ignore precedent. Cf. JUDICIAL RESTRAINT (3). — judicial activist, n.

judicial activity report. A regular report, usu. monthly or quarterly, on caseload and caseload within a given court or court system.

judicial administration. The process of doing justice through a system of courts.

judicial admission. See ADMISSION (1).

judicial arbitration. See ARBITRATION.

Judicial Article. (1881) Article III of the U.S. Constitution, which creates the Supreme Court, vests in Congress the right to create inferior courts, provides for life tenure for federal judges, and specifies the powers and jurisdiction of the federal courts. [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨4.]

judicial assize. See ASSIZE (6).

judicial-authority justification. See JUSTIFICATION.

judicial bias. See BIAS.

judicial bond. See BOND (2).

judicial branch. (18c) The branch of government consisting of the courts, whose function is to ensure justice by interpreting, applying, and generally administering the laws; JUDICIARY (1). Cf. LEGISLATIVE BRANCH; EXECUTIVE BRANCH. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨2450–2609.]

judicial bypass. (1977) A procedure permitting a person to obtain a court’s approval for an act that would ordinarily require the approval of someone else, such as a law that requires a minor to notify a parent before obtaining an abortion but allows an appropriately qualified minor to obtain a court order permitting the abortion without parental notice. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ⇨116.]

judicial-bypass provision. Family law. 1. A statutory provision that allows a court to assume a parental role when the parent or guardian cannot or will not act on behalf of a minor or an incompetent. 2. A statutory provision that allows a minor to circumvent the necessity of obtaining parental consent by obtaining judicial consent. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ⇨116.]

judicial cognizance. See JUDICIAL NOTICE.

judicial combat. See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

judicial comity. See COMITY.

Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. A United Kingdom tribunal, created in 1833, with jurisdiction to hear certain admiralty and ecclesiastical appeals, and certain appeals from the Commonwealth. • From the 16th century until the 19th, the Court of Delegates was the final court of appeal in England for ecclesiastical suits. During the reign of William IV, the power to hear final appeals was transferred to the Privy Council, and then to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The committee consists entirely of lay people; ecclesiastics become members of the court only if an appeal is brought under the Church Discipline Act. Even then the ecclesiastics must be episcopal privy counselors. The Judicial Committee’s decisions are not treated as binding precedent in the United Kingdom, but they are influential because of the overlapping composition of members of the Privy Council and the House of Lords in its judicial capacity. — Also termed Court of Final Appeal.

judicial compensation. 1. The remuneration that judges receive for their work. [Cases: Judges ⇨22.] 2. Civil law. A court's judgment finding that two parties are mutually obligated to one another and crafting the amount of the judgment in accordance with the amount that each party owes. • A claim for compensation is usu. contained in a reconventional demand. La. Code Civ. Proc. 1902. See reconventional demand under DEMAND (1). [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim ⇨8.]

Judicial Conference of the United States. The policy-making body of the federal judiciary, responsible for surveying the business of the federal courts, making recommendations to Congress on matters affecting the judiciary, and supervising the work of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. • The Conference was originally established in 1923 as the Conference of Senior Circuit Judges. 28 USCA § 331. See ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES COURTS.

judicial confession. See CONFESSION.

judicial contempt. See CONTEMPT (2).

judicial control. Civil law. A doctrine by which a court can deny cancellation of a lease if the lessee's breach is of minor importance, is not caused by the lessee, or is based on a good-faith mistake of fact. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨34.]

judicial council. (1925) A regularly assembled group of judges whose mission is to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the courts on which they sit; esp., a semiannual assembly of a federal circuit's judges called by the circuit's chief judge. 28 USCA § 332.

judicial day. See judicial day under DAY.

judicial economy. (1942) Efficiency in the operation of the courts and the judicial system; esp., the efficient management of litigation so as to minimize duplication of effort and to avoid wasting the judiciary's time and resources. • A court can enter a variety of orders to promote judicial economy. For instance, a court may consolidate two cases for trial to save the court and the parties from having two trials, or it may order a separate trial on certain issues if doing so would provide the opportunity to avoid a later trial that would be more complex and time-consuming.

judicial-economy exception. (1981) An exemption from the final-judgment rule, by which a party may seek immediate appellate review of a nonfinal order if doing so might establish a final or nearly final disposition of the entire suit. See FINAL-JUDGMENT RULE. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨68; Federal Courts ⇨572.]

Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. A panel of federal judges responsible for transferring civil actions having common questions of fact from one district court to another to consolidate pretrial proceedings. • The panel was created in 1968. The Chief Justice appoints its members. 28 USCA § 1407. — Abbr. JPML. [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨ 151–157.]

judicial power. (16c) 1. The authority vested in courts and judges to hear and decide cases and to make binding judgments on them; the power to construe and apply the law when controversies arise over what has been done or not done under it. • Under federal law, this power is vested in the U.S. Supreme Court and in whatever inferior courts Congress establishes. The other two great powers of government are the legislative power and the executive power. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 2450–2609; Federal Courts ⇨ 1.1; Judges ⇨ 24.] 2. A power conferred on a public officer involving the exercise of judgment and discretion in deciding questions of right in specific cases affecting personal and proprietary interests. • In this sense, the phrase is contrasted with ministerial power.

judicial privilege. 1. See PRIVILEGE (1). 2. See litigation privilege under PRIVILEGE (1).

judicial record. See DOCKET (1).

judicial remedy. See REMEDY.

judicial restraint. (18c) 1. A restraint imposed by a court, as by a restraining order, injunction, or judgment. 2. The principle that, when a court can resolve a case based on a particular issue, it should do so, without reaching unnecessary issues. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 843; Federal Courts ⇨ 756.] 3. A philosophy of judicial decision-making whereby judges avoid indulging their personal beliefs about the public good and instead try merely to interpret the law as legislated and according to precedent. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) judicial self-restraint. Cf. JUDICIAL ACTIVISM.

judicial review. (1851) 1. A court's power to review the actions of other branches or levels of government; esp., the courts' power to invalidate legislative and executive actions as being unconstitutional. 2. The constitutional doctrine providing for this power. 3. A court's review of a lower court's or an administrative body's factual or legal findings. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨ 651–821.]

de novo judicial review. (1955) A court's nondeferential review of an administrative decision, usu. through a review of the administrative record plus any additional evidence the parties present. — Also termed de novo review. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨ 744.]

plenary review. Appellate review by all the members of a court rather than a panel.

judicial robe. See ROBE (1).

judiciary (joo-dish-ee-er-ee or joo-dish-ə-ree), n. (18c) 1. The branch of government responsible for interpreting the laws and administering justice. Cf. EXECUTIVE (1); LEGISLATURE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 2450–2609; Judges ⇨ 1.] 2. A system of courts. 3. A body of judges. — Also termed (in sense 3) judicature. — judiciary, adj.

judicia summaria (joo-dish-ee-ə sə-mair-ee-ə). [Law Latin “summary proceedings”] Scots law. Actions that can be summarily disposed of.

judicio de amparo. See AMPARO.

judicio sisti (joo-dish-ee-oh sis-tī). [Latin “to be present in court”] 1. Roman law. Appearance in court. 2. Roman law. Security for appearance in court; VADIMONIUM. 3. Scots law. A type of caution requiring a claimant or the principal debtor to appear in court whenever the opponent demanded it. • This type of caution was used in some criminal cases and in cases involving defendants who were foreigners or posed a flight risk. See CAUTION.

judicious (joo-dish-əs), adj. (16c) Well-considered; discreet; wisely circumspect <the court's judicious application of the rules of evidence>. Cf. JUDICIAL. — judiciousness, n.

judicium (joo-dish-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. A judgment. 2. A judicial proceeding; a trial. 3. A court or tribunal. • In Roman law, the plural judicia refers to criminal courts. Pl. judicia.

judicium capitale (kap-i-tay-lee). [Latin] Hist. A judgment of death; a capital sentence.

judicium parium (par-ee-əm). [Latin] Hist. A judgment of one's peers; a jury trial or verdict.

judicium publicum (pəb-li-kəm). [Latin “public trial”] A criminal proceeding under a public statute. • The term derived from the Roman rule allowing any member of the public to initiate a prosecution. See COMITIA.

judicium Dei (joo-dish-ee-əm dee-1). Hist. God’s supposed judgment on the merits of the case, made manifest by the outcome of an observable event. • Examples dating from Norman times were the trial by combat and the ordeal. See ORDEAL; TRIAL BY COMBAT.

judicium ecclesiasticum. See FORUM ECCLESIASTICUM.

judicium parium. See JUDICIUM.

judicium publica. See JUDICIUM.

judicium rejectio (joo-di-kəm ri-jek-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A litigant’s right to exercise peremptory challenges against a judge or a certain number of jurors.

judicium sortitio (joo-di-kəm sor-tish-ee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The practice of choosing jurors by drawing from an urn the names of eligible participants. • The English word sortition (meaning “the drawing or casting of lots”) derives from the Latin sortitio.

judicium subsortitio (joo-di-kəm səb-sor-tish-ee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The practice of choosing supplemental jurors (when necessary after peremptory challenges have been exercised) by drawing from an urn the names of eligible participants.

judge (zhoozh), n. [French] French law. A judge.

judge de paix (zhoozh də pe or pay). An inferior judge; esp., a police magistrate.

judge d’instruction (zhoozh dan-strook-syawn). A magistrate who conducts preliminary criminal proceedings, as by taking complaints, interrogating parties and witnesses, and formulating charges.

juicio (hwee-syoh). Spanish law. 1. A trial or suit; litigation. 2. Wisdom; prudence. 3. The capacity to distinguish right from wrong and truth from falsehood.

juise (juu-iz) Hist. 1. A judgment, sentence, or penalty. 2. By extension, the instrument of punishment, esp. a gibbet.

Julian calendar. See OLD STYLE.

jumbo certificate. A certificate of deposit of $100,000 or more. — Also termed jumbo.

jumbo mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

jump bail, vb. (1889) (Of an accused) to fail to appear in court at the appointed time after promising to appear and posting a bail bond. — Also termed skip bail. See BAIL-JUMPING. [Cases: Bail ⇨ 97.]

jump citation. See pinpoint citation under CITATION (3).

jumping a claim. Hist. The act of taking possession of public land to which another has previously acquired a claim. • The first occupant has the right to the land both under squatter law and custom and under pre-emption laws of the United States.

- jura regalia. See JURA.
- jura rerum. See JURA.
- jura summi imperii. See JURA.
- jurat (joor-at). (18c) 1. [fr. Latin jurare “to swear”] A certification added to an affidavit or deposition stating when and before what authority the affidavit or deposition was made. • A jurat typically says “Subscribed and sworn to before me this ____ day of [month], [year],” and the officer (usu. a notary public) thereby certifies three things: (1) that the person signing the document did so in the officer's presence, (2) that the signer appeared before the officer on the date indicated, and (3) that the officer administered an oath or affirmation to the signer, who swore to or affirmed the contents of the document. — Also termed jurata. Cf. VERIFICATION. [Cases: Affidavits ⇨ 12.]
- witness jurat. A subscribing witness's certificate acknowledging the act of witnessing. • Even though this certificate is technically an acknowledgment and not a true jurat, the phrase witness jurat is commonly used. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT.
- 2. [fr. Latin juratus “one sworn”] In France and the Channel Islands, a municipal officer or magistrate.
- jurata (juu-ray-tə), n. 1. Hist. A jury of 12 persons; esp., a jury existing at common law. 2. JURAT (1).
- juration (juu-ray-shən). Archaic. 1. The act of administering an oath. 2. The act of swearing on oath.
- jurative. See JURATORY.

- juratorial (joor-ə-toh-ri-əl) adj. Of or pertaining to a jury.
- juratory (joor-ə-tor-ee), adj. Of, relating to, or containing an oath. — Also termed jurative.
- juratory caution. 1. Maritime law. A court's permission for an indigent to disregard filing fees and court costs. • A suit upon a juratory caution is the equivalent of a suit in forma pauperis. The right was first recognized in United States admiralty courts in Bradford v. Bradford, 3 F. Cas. 1129 (1878). See IN FORMA PAUPERIS. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 123.] 2. Scots law. A security given on oath, such as a bond.
- jure (joor-ee), adv. [Latin] 1. By right; in right. 2. By law. See DE JURE.
- jure accessionis (joor-ee ak-sesh-ee-oh-nis). By the law of natural accession. • For example, the fruits of trees on one's land are one's property jure accessionis.
- jure accretionis (ə-kree-shee-oh-nis). By right of accretion.
- jure belli (bel-i). By the right or law of war.
- jure civili (sə-vī-lī). By the civil law.
- jure coronae (kə-roh-nee). In right of the Crown.
- jure devolutionis (dev-ə-loo-shee-oh-nis). By right of devolution.
- jure divino (di-vī-noh). By divine right.
- jure ecclesiae (e-klee-z[h]ee-ee). By right of the church.
- jure gentium (jen-shee-əm). By the law of nations.
- jure officii (ə-fish-ee-i). By right of office.
- jure proprietatis (prə-prī-ə-tay-tis). By right of property.

jure proprio (proh-pree-oh). By one's own proper right.

jure repraesentationis (rep-rə-zen-tay-shee-oh-nis). By right of representation; in the right of another person.

jure sanguinis (sang-gwi-nis). By right of blood.

jure uxoris (ək-sor-is). In right of a wife.

jure gestionis (joo-ee jes-chee-oh-nis), n. [Latin "by way of doing business"] A nation's acts that are essentially commercial or private, in contrast to its public or governmental acts. • Under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, a foreign country's immunity is limited to claims involving its public acts. The statutory immunity does not extend to claims arising from the private or commercial acts of a foreign state. 28 USCA § 1605. Cf. JURE IMPERII. See COMMERCIAL-ACTIVITY EXCEPTION; RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.

jure imperii (joo-ee im-peer-ee-i), n. [Latin "by right of sovereignty"] The public acts that a nation undertakes as a sovereign state, for which the sovereign is usu. immune from suit or liability in a foreign country. Cf. JURE GESTIONIS; COMMERCIAL-ACTIVITY EXCEPTION. See RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY.

jure naturae. 1. See EX JURE NATURAE. 2. See NATURAL LAW.

judicial (juu-rid-i-kəl), adj. (16c) 1. Of or relating to judicial proceedings or to the administration of justice. 2. Of or relating to law; legal. — Also termed judic. Cf. NONJUDICIAL.

judicial act. See ACT.

judicial day. See DAY.

judicial double taxation. See double taxation (3) under TAXATION.

judicial link. (1947) A legal relationship between members of a group, such as those in a potential class action, sufficient to make a single suit more efficient or effective than multiple suits. — Also termed judicial relationship. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷ 165; Parties ↷ 35.13.]

judicial person. See artificial person under PERSON (3).

jurimetrics (joo-ə-me-triks), n. (1949) The use of scientific or empirical methods, including measurement, in the study or analysis of legal matters. — jurimetrician (joo-ə-me-trish-ən), jurimetricist (joo-ə-me-trə-sist), n.

"A variety of contextual frames of reference have been employed by commentators to explain and clarify the basis for judicial decision-making, the most fundamental aspect of the judge's job. These range from exploration of the judge's personality to the employment of small group theory, game theory and Guttman scaling to measure and apprehend the nature of judicial decision-making. Indeed, the disciplined effort to identify with mathematical precision the decision process has been dubiously termed 'jurimetrics.'" Alexander B. Smith & Abraham S. Blumberg, "The Problem of Objectivity," in 2 Crime and Justice 485-86 (1971).

juris (joo-r-is), adj. [Latin] 1. Of law. 2. Of right.

juris divini (di-vi-ni). Roman law. Of divine right; subject to divine law. • The phrase appeared in reference to churches or to religious items that could not be privately sold.

juris positivii. Of positive law.

juris privati (pri-vay-ti). Of private right; relating to private property or private law.

juris publici (pəb-li-si). Of public right; relating to common or public use, or to public law.

juriscenter (joo-ə-sen-tər or joo-ə-sen-tər), n. Conflict of laws. The jurisdiction that is most appropriately considered a couple's domestic center of gravity for matrimonial purposes. [Cases: Divorce ↷ 2; Marriage ↷ 3.]

jurisconsult (joo-r-is-kon-səlt or -kən-səlt). One who is learned in the law, esp. in civil or international law; JURIST.

jurisdictio contentiosa (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh kən-ten-shee-oh-sə). [Latin] Roman law. Contentious as opposed to voluntary jurisdiction. See contentious jurisdiction (1) under JURISDICTION.

jurisdictio emanata (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh em-ə-nay-tə). [Law Latin "a jurisdiction emanating from the court"] Hist. A court's inherent jurisdiction, esp. to punish a contemner. See CONTEMNER.

jurisdictio in consentientes (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh in kən-sen-shee-en-teez). [Law Latin "jurisdiction over parties by virtue of their consent"] Scots law. Consensual jurisdiction. See consent jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction, n. (14c) 1. A government's general power to exercise authority over all persons and things within its territory; esp., a state's power to create interests that will be recognized under common-law principles as valid in other states <New Jersey's jurisdiction>. [Cases: States ↷ 1.] 2. A court's power to decide a case or issue a decree <the constitutional grant of federal-question jurisdiction>. — Also termed (in sense 2) competent jurisdiction; (in both senses) coram judge. [Cases: Courts ↷ 3; Federal Courts ↷ 3.1, 161.]

"Rules of jurisdiction in a sense speak from a position outside the court system and prescribe the authority of the courts within the system. They are to a large extent constitutional rules. The provisions of the U.S. Constitution specify the outer limits of the subject-matter jurisdiction of the federal courts and authorize Congress, within those limits, to establish by statute the organization and jurisdiction of the federal courts. Thus, Article III of the Constitution defines the judicial power of the United States to include cases arising under federal law and cases between parties of diverse state citizenship as well as other categories. The U.S. Constitution, particularly the Due Process Clause, also establishes limits on the jurisdiction of the state courts. These due process limitations traditionally operate in two areas: jurisdiction of the subject matter and jurisdiction over persons. Within each state, the court system is established by state constitutional provisions or by a combination of such provisions and implementing legislation, which together define the authority of the various courts within the system." Fleming James Jr., Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & John Leubsdorf, Civil Procedure § 2.1, at 55 (5th ed. 2001).

3. A geographic area within which political or judicial authority may be exercised <the accused fled to another jurisdiction>. 4. A political or judicial subdivision within such an area <other jurisdictions have decided the issue differently>. Cf. VENUE. — jurisdictional, adj.

agency jurisdiction. The regulatory or adjudicative power of a government administrative agency over a subject matter or matters. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻303, 447.]

ancillary jurisdiction. (1835) A court's jurisdiction to adjudicate claims and proceedings related to a claim that is properly before the court. • For example, if a plaintiff brings a lawsuit in federal court based on a federal question (such as a claim under Title VII), the defendant may assert a counterclaim over which the court would not otherwise have jurisdiction (such as a state-law claim of stealing company property). The concept of ancillary jurisdiction has now been codified, along with the concept of pendent jurisdiction, in the supplemental-jurisdiction statute. 28 USCA § 1367. See supplemental jurisdiction. Cf. pendent jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty ↻1(3); Courts ↻27, 201; Equity ↻35; Federal Courts ↻20.]

anomalous jurisdiction. (1864) 1. Jurisdiction that is not granted to a court by statute, but that is inherent in the court's authority to govern lawyers and other officers of the court, such as the power to issue a preindictment order suppressing illegally seized property. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻394.5(1); Federal Courts ↻7; Searches and Seizures ↻84.] 2. An appellate court's provisional jurisdiction to review the denial of a motion to intervene in a lower-court case, so that if the court finds that the denial was correct, then its jurisdiction disappears — and it must dismiss the appeal for want of jurisdiction — because an order denying a motion to intervene is not a final, appealable order. See ANOMALOUS-JURISDICTION RULE. [Cases: Federal Courts ↻555.] appellate jurisdiction. (18c) The power of a court to review and revise a lower court's decision. • For example, U.S. Const. art. III, § 2 vests appellate jurisdiction in the Supreme Court, while 28 USCA §§ 1291–1295 grant appellate jurisdiction to lower federal courts of appeals. Cf. original jurisdiction. [Cases: Appeal and Error ↻17; Courts ↻203–209; Federal Courts ↻541.]

arising-in jurisdiction. A bankruptcy court's jurisdiction over issues relating to the administration of the bankruptcy estate, and matters that occur only in a bankruptcy case. 28 USCA §§ 157, 1334. [Cases: Bankruptcy ↻2043–2063.]

assistant jurisdiction. The incidental aid provided by an equity court to a court of law when justice requires both legal and equitable processes and remedies. — Also termed auxiliary jurisdiction.

common-law jurisdiction. 1. A place where the legal system derives fundamentally from the English common-law system <England, the United States, Australia, and other common-law jurisdictions>. 2. A court's jurisdiction to try such cases as were cognizable under the English common law <in the absence of a controlling statute, the court exercised common-law jurisdiction over those claims>.

complete jurisdiction. A court's power to decide matters presented to it and to enforce its decisions. [Cases: Admiralty ↻5(3); Courts ↻1; Equity ↻39.]

concurrent jurisdiction. (17c) 1. Jurisdiction that might be exercised simultaneously by more than one court over the same subject matter and within the same territory, a litigant having the right to choose the court in which to file the action. [Cases: Admiralty ↻1(1); Courts ↻472, 489, 510; Federal Courts ↻1131.] 2. Jurisdiction shared by two or more states, esp. over the physical boundaries (such as rivers or other bodies of water) between them. — Also termed coordinate jurisdiction; overlapping jurisdiction. Cf. exclusive jurisdiction.

"In several cases, two States divided by a river exercise concurrent jurisdiction over the river, no matter where the inter-state boundary may be; in some cases by the Ordinance of 1787 for organizing Territories northwest of the Ohio River, in some cases by Acts of Congress organizing Territories or admitting States, and in some cases by agreements between the States concerned." 1 Joseph H. Beale, A Treatise on the Conflict of Laws § 44.3, at 279 (1935).

consent jurisdiction. (1855) Jurisdiction that parties have agreed to, either by accord, by contract, or by general appearance. • Parties may not, by agreement, confer subject-matter jurisdiction on a federal court that would not otherwise have it. [Cases: Courts ↻22.]

contentious jurisdiction. 1. A court's jurisdiction exercised over disputed matters. 2. Eccles. law. The branch of ecclesiastical-court jurisdiction that deals with contested proceedings.

continuing jurisdiction. (1855) A court's power to retain jurisdiction over a matter after entering a judgment, allowing the court to modify its previous rulings or orders. See CONTINUING-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Courts ↻30; Federal Courts ↻26.1.]

coordinate jurisdiction. See concurrent jurisdiction.

criminal jurisdiction. (16c) A court's power to hear criminal cases. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻83.]

default jurisdiction. Family law. In a child-custody matter, jurisdiction conferred when it is in the best interests of the child and either (1) there is no other basis for jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act or the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act, or (2) when another state has declined jurisdiction in favor of default jurisdiction. • Jurisdiction is rarely based on default because either home-state jurisdiction or significant-connection jurisdiction almost always applies, or else emergency jurisdiction is invoked. Default jurisdiction arises only if none of those three applies, or a state with jurisdiction on any of those bases declines to exercise it and default jurisdiction serves the best interests of the child. [Cases: Child Custody ↷730, 731.]

delinquency jurisdiction. The power of the court to hear matters regarding juvenile acts that, if committed by an adult, would be criminal. Cf. status-offense jurisdiction. [Cases: Infants ↷196.]

diversity jurisdiction. (1927) A federal court's exercise of authority over a case involving parties who are citizens of different states and an amount in controversy greater than a statutory minimum. 28 USCA § 1332. See DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP; AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷281-360.]

emergency jurisdiction. Family law. A court's ability to take jurisdiction of a child who is physically present in the state when that child has been abandoned or when necessary to protect the child from abuse. • Section 3(a)(3) of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act allows for emergency jurisdiction. It is usu. temporary, lasting only as long as is necessary to protect the child. [Cases: Child Custody ↷753.]

equity jurisdiction. (18c) In a common-law judicial system, the power to hear certain civil actions according to the procedure of the court of chancery, and to resolve them according to equitable rules. [Cases: Equity ↷1; Federal Courts ↷7.]

"[T]he term equity jurisdiction does not refer to jurisdiction in the sense of the power conferred by the sovereign on the court over specified subject-matters or to jurisdiction over the res or the persons of the parties in a particular proceeding but refers rather to the merits. The want of equity jurisdiction does not mean that the court has no power to act but that it should not act, as on the ground, for example, that there is an adequate remedy at law." William Q. de Funiak, Handbook of Modern Equity 38 (2d ed. 1956).

exclusive jurisdiction. (18c) A court's power to adjudicate an action or class of actions to the exclusion of all other courts <federal district courts have exclusive jurisdiction over actions brought under the Securities Exchange Act>. Cf. concurrent jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↷472, 489, 510; Equity ↷44; Federal Courts ↷1131.]

extraterritorial jurisdiction. (1818) A court's ability to exercise power beyond its territorial limits. See LONG-ARM STATUTE. [Cases: Courts ↷29; Federal Courts ↷76.]

federal jurisdiction. (1800) 1. The exercise of federal-court authority. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷3.1.] 2. The area of study dealing with the jurisdiction of federal courts.

federal-juvenile-delinquency jurisdiction. A federal court's power to hear a case in which a person under the age of 18 violates federal law. • In such a case, the federal court derives its jurisdictional power from 18 USCA §§ 5031 et seq. The Act severely limits the scope of federal-juvenile-delinquency jurisdiction because Congress recognizes that juvenile delinquency is essentially a state issue. The acts that typically invoke federal jurisdiction are (1) acts committed on federal lands (military bases, national parks, Indian reservations), and (2) acts that violate federal drug laws or other federal criminal statutes.

federal-question jurisdiction. (1941) The exercise of federal-court power over claims arising under the U.S. Constitution, an act of Congress, or a treaty. 28 USCA § 1331. [Cases: Federal Courts ↷161-247.]

foreign jurisdiction. (16c) 1. The powers of a court of a sister state or foreign country. 2. Extraterritorial process, such as long-arm service of process.

general jurisdiction. (16c) 1. A court's authority to hear a wide range of cases, civil or criminal, that arise within its geographic area. [Cases: Courts ↷117.5-158.1; Federal Courts ↷3.1, 76.5.] 2. A court's authority to hear all claims against a defendant, at the place of the defendant's domicile or the place of service, without any showing that a connection exists between the claims and the forum state. Cf. limited jurisdiction; specific jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↷12(2.5); Federal Courts ↷76.10.]

general personal jurisdiction. Jurisdiction arising when a person's continuous and systematic contacts with a forum state enable the forum state's courts to adjudicate a claim against the person, even when the claim is not related to the person's contacts with the forum state. Cf. personal jurisdiction; specific personal jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↷12(2.5); Federal Courts ↷76.5.]

home-state jurisdiction. Family law. In interstate child-custody disputes governed by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act, jurisdiction based on the child's having been a resident of the state for at least six consecutive months immediately before the commencement of the suit. See HOME STATE. [Cases: Child Custody ↷736.]

in personam jurisdiction. See personal jurisdiction.

in rem jurisdiction (in rem). (1930) A court's power to adjudicate the rights to a given piece of property, including the power to seize and hold it. — Also termed jurisdiction in rem. See IN REM. Cf. personal jurisdiction; subject-matter jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↷18-19; Federal Courts ↷93.]

international jurisdiction. A court's power to hear and determine matters between different countries or persons of different countries.

judicial jurisdiction. The legal power and authority of a court to make a decision that binds the parties to any matter properly brought before it.

jurisdiction in personam. See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction in rem. See in rem jurisdiction.

jurisdiction loci. See spatial jurisdiction.

jurisdiction of the person. See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction over the person. See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction quasi in rem. See quasi-in-rem jurisdiction.

jurisdiction razione materiae. See subject-matter jurisdiction.

jurisdiction razione personae. See personal jurisdiction.

jurisdiction razione temporis. See temporal jurisdiction.

legislative jurisdiction. A legislature's general sphere of authority to enact laws and conduct all business related to that authority, such as holding hearings. [Cases: States ↻1.]

limited jurisdiction. (16c) Jurisdiction that is confined to a particular type of case or that may be exercised only under statutory limits and prescriptions. — Also termed special jurisdiction. Cf. general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↻159; Federal Courts ↻5.]

"It is a principle of first importance that the federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. . . . The federal courts . . . cannot be courts of general jurisdiction. They are empowered to hear only such cases as are within the judicial power of the United States, as defined in the Constitution, and have been entrusted to them by a jurisdictional grant by Congress." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 7, at 27 (5th ed. 1994).

long-arm jurisdiction. Jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who has had some contact with the jurisdiction in which the petition is filed. [Cases: Courts ↻12(2); Federal Courts ↻76.]

original jurisdiction. (17c) A court's power to hear and decide a matter before any other court can review the matter. Cf. appellate jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↻117.5–158.1, 206; Federal Courts ↻3.1.]

overlapping jurisdiction. See concurrent jurisdiction.

pendent jurisdiction (pen-dant). (1942) A court's jurisdiction to hear and determine a claim over which it would not otherwise have jurisdiction, because the claim arises from the same transaction or occurrence as another claim that is properly before the court. • For example, if a plaintiff brings suit in federal court claiming that the defendant, in one transaction, violated both a federal and a state law, the federal court has jurisdiction over the federal claim (under federal-question jurisdiction) and also has jurisdiction over the state claim that is pendent to the federal claim. Pendent jurisdiction has now been codified as supplemental jurisdiction. 28 USCA § 1367. — Also termed pendent-claim jurisdiction. See supplemental jurisdiction. Cf. ancillary jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ↻27; Equity ↻35; Federal Courts ↻14.]

pendent-party jurisdiction. (1973) A court's jurisdiction to adjudicate a claim against a party who is not otherwise subject to the court's jurisdiction, because the claim by or against that party arises from the same transaction or occurrence as another claim that is properly before the court. • Pendent-party jurisdiction has been a hotly debated subject, and was severely limited by the U.S. Supreme Court in Finley v. United States, 490 U.S. 545, 109 S.Ct. 2003 (1990).

The concept is now codified in the supplemental-jurisdiction statute, and it applies to federal-question cases but not to diversity-jurisdiction cases. 28 USCA § 1367. Neither pendent-party jurisdiction nor supplemental jurisdiction may be used to circumvent the complete-diversity requirement in cases founded on diversity jurisdiction. See supplemental jurisdiction. [Cases: Federal Courts ↻23.]

personal jurisdiction. A court's power to bring a person into its adjudicative process; jurisdiction over a defendant's personal rights, rather than merely over property interests. — Also termed in personam jurisdiction; jurisdiction in personam; jurisdiction of the person; jurisdiction over the person; jurisdiction razione personae. See IN PERSONAM. Cf. in rem jurisdiction; general personal jurisdiction; specific personal jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty ↻5; Constitutional Law ↻3963–3965; Courts ↻10; Federal Courts ↻71–97.]

plenary jurisdiction (plee-nə-ree or plen-ə-ree). A court's full and absolute power over the subject matter and the parties in a case.

primary jurisdiction. The power of an agency to decide an issue in the first instance when a court, having concurrent jurisdiction with the agency, determines that it would be more pragmatic for the agency to handle the case initially. See PRIMARY-JURISDICTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻3228.1.]

"The doctrine of primary jurisdiction typically is raised, not in a proceeding before an administrative agency, but in litigation before a court. Agency and court jurisdiction to resolve disputes and issues frequently overlap. Primary jurisdiction is a concept used by courts to allocate initial decision-making responsibility between agencies and courts where such overlaps exist. . . . A holding that an agency has primary jurisdiction to resolve an issue raised in a judicial proceeding has two important consequences. First, it transfers some of the power to resolve that issue to the agency. . . . Second, if the issues referred to the agency as within its primary jurisdiction are critical to judicial resolution of the underlying dispute, the court cannot proceed with the trial of the case until the agency has resolved those issues and the agency's decision has been either affirmed or reversed by a reviewing court." Richard J. Pierce Jr. et al., Administrative Law Process 206, 207–08 (3d ed. 1999).

probate jurisdiction. Jurisdiction over matters relating to wills, settlement of decedents' estates, and (in some states) guardianship and the adoption of minors. [Cases: Courts ↻198; Federal Courts ↻9.]

prorogated jurisdiction. Civil law. Jurisdiction conferred by the express consent of all the parties on a judge who would otherwise be disqualified. Cf. tacit prorogation under PROROGATION.

quasi-in-rem jurisdiction (kway-si in rem or kway-zi). (1918) Jurisdiction over a person but based on that person's interest in property located within the court's territory. — Also termed jurisdiction quasi in rem. See quasi in rem under IN REM. [Cases: Courts ↻16; Federal Courts ↻93.]

significant-connection jurisdiction. Family law. In a child-custody matter, jurisdiction based on (1) the best interests of the child, (2) at least one parent's (or litigant's) significant connection to the state, and (3) the presence in the state of substantial evidence about the child's present or future care, protection, training, and personal relationships. • This type of jurisdiction is conferred by both the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act and the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. Generally, the home state will also be the state with significant connections and substantial evidence. Jurisdiction based on a significant connection or substantial evidence alone is conferred only when the child has no home state. — Also termed significant-connection/substantial-evidence jurisdiction; significant connection-substantial evidence jurisdiction; substantial-evidence jurisdiction. See HOME STATE. [Cases: Child Custody ⇨735.]

spatial jurisdiction. Jurisdiction based on the physical territory that an entity's authority covers. — Also termed jurisdiction loci.

special jurisdiction. See limited jurisdiction.

specific jurisdiction. (1828) Jurisdiction that stems from the defendant's having certain minimum contacts with the forum state so that the court may hear a case whose issues arise from those minimum contacts. Cf. general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ⇨12(2.10); Federal Courts ⇨76.10.]

specific personal jurisdiction. Jurisdiction based on a person's minimum contacts with the forum state when the claim arises out of or is related to those contacts. See MINIMUM CONTACTS. Cf. personal jurisdiction; general personal jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ⇨12(2.10); Federal Courts ⇨76.10.]

state jurisdiction. 1. The exercise of state-court authority. 2. A court's power to hear all matters, both civil and criminal, arising within its territorial boundaries.

status-offense jurisdiction. The power of the court to hear matters regarding noncriminal conduct committed by a juvenile. See status offense under OFFENSE (1). Cf. delinquency jurisdiction.

subject-matter jurisdiction. (1936) Jurisdiction over the nature of the case and the type of relief sought; the extent to which a court can rule on the conduct of persons or the status of things. — Also termed jurisdiction of the subject matter; jurisdiction of the cause; jurisdiction over the action; jurisdiction ratione materiae. Cf. personal jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ⇨4; Federal Courts ⇨3.1.]

summary jurisdiction. (18c) 1. A court's jurisdiction in a summary proceeding. 2. The court's authority to issue a judgment or order (such as a finding of contempt) without the necessity of a trial or other process. 3. English law. A court's power to make an order immediately, without obtaining authority or referral, as in a magistrate's power to dispose of a criminal case without referring it to the Crown Court for a formal trial or without drawing a jury.

supplemental jurisdiction. (1836) Jurisdiction over a claim that is part of the same case or controversy as another claim over which the court has original jurisdiction. • Since 1990, federal district courts have had supplemental jurisdiction which includes jurisdiction over both ancillary and pendent claims. 28 USCA § 1367. See ancillary jurisdiction; pendent jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts ⇨27; Equity ⇨35; Federal Courts ⇨14.]

temporal jurisdiction. Jurisdiction based on the court's having authority to adjudicate a matter when the underlying event occurred. — Also termed jurisdiction ratione temporis.

territorial jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction over cases arising in or involving persons residing within a defined territory. [Cases: Courts ⇨29, 171; Federal Courts ⇨71.] 2. Territory over which a government, one of its courts, or one of its subdivisions has jurisdiction.

transient jurisdiction (tran-shənt). Personal jurisdiction over a defendant who is served with process while in the forum state only temporarily (such as during travel). [Cases: Courts ⇨13.]

voluntary jurisdiction. 1. Jurisdiction exercised over unopposed matters. 2. Eccles. law. Jurisdiction that does not require a judicial proceeding, as with granting a license or installing a nominee to a benefice.

jurisdictional amount. See AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

jurisdictional discovery. See DISCOVERY.

jurisdictional fact. See FACT.

jurisdictional-fact doctrine. Administrative law. The principle that if evidence is presented challenging the factual findings that triggered an agency's action, then a court will review the facts to determine whether the agency had authority to act in the first place. • This doctrine is generally no longer applied. Cf. CONSTITUTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ⇨795.]

jurisdictional gerrymandering. See GERRYMANDERING (2).

jurisdictional limits. (1800) The geographic boundaries or the constitutional or statutory limits within which a court's authority may be exercised.

jurisdiction loci. See spatial jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdictional plea. See PLEA (3).

jurisdictional statement. See JURISDICTION CLAUSE (1).

jurisdictional strike. See STRIKE.

jurisdiction clause. (1861) 1. At law, a statement in a pleading that sets forth the court's jurisdiction to act in the case. — Also termed jurisdictional statement. 2. Equity practice. The part of the bill intended to show that the court has jurisdiction, usu. by an averment that adequate relief is unavailable outside equitable channels.

jurisdiction in personam. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction in rem. See in rem jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdictionis fundandae (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh-nis fən-dan-dee). [Law Latin] Scots law. For the purpose of founding jurisdiction. See ARRESTUM JURISDICTIONIS FUNDANDAE CAUSA.

jurisdiction of the cause. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction of the person. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction of the subject matter. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction over the action. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction over the person. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction quasi in rem. See quasi-in-rem jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction ratiōe materiae. See subject-matter jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction ratiōe personae. See personal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdiction ratiōe temporis. See temporal jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

jurisdictio voluntaria (joo-r-is-dik-shee-oh vol-ən-tair-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. Voluntary jurisdiction. See voluntary jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

Juris Doctor (joo-r-is dok-tər). (1895) Doctor of law — the law degree most commonly conferred by an American law school. — Abbr. J.D. — Also termed Doctor of Jurisprudence; Doctor of Law. Cf. MASTER OF LAWS; LL.B.; LL.D.; DOCTOR OF LAWS.

juris et de jure (joo-r-is et dee joo-ee). [Latin] Of law and of right .

jurisinceptor (joo-r-is-in-sep-tər). [Latin] Hist. A student of the civil law.

jurisperitus (joo-r-is-pə-ri-təs), adj. [Latin] (Of a person) skilled or learned in law. See LEGISPERITUS.

juris positivii. See JURIS.

juris privati. See JURIS.

jurisprude (joo-r-is-prood), n. (1937) 1. A person who makes a pretentious display of legal knowledge or who is overzealous about the importance of legal doctrine. 2. JURISPRUDENT.

jurisprudence (joo-r-is-prood-ənts), n. (17c) 1. Originally (in the 18th century), the study of the first principles of the law of nature, the civil law, and the law of nations. — Also termed jurisprudentia naturalis (joo-r-is-proo-dən-shee-ə nach-ə-ray-lis). 2. More modernly, the study of the general or fundamental elements of a particular legal system, as opposed to its practical and concrete details. 3. The study of legal systems in general. 4. Judicial precedents considered collectively. 5. In German literature, the whole of legal knowledge. 6. A system, body, or division of law. 7. CASELAW.

"Jurisprudence addresses the questions about law that an intelligent layperson of speculative bent — not a lawyer — might think particularly interesting. What is law? . . . Where does law come from? . . . Is law an autonomous discipline? . . . What is the purpose of law? . . . Is law a science, a humanity, or neither? . . . A practicing lawyer or a judge is apt to think questions of this sort at best irrelevant to what he does, at worst naive, impractical, even childlike (how high is up?)." Richard A. Posner, The Problems of Jurisprudence 1 (1990).

analytical jurisprudence. (1876) A method of legal study that concentrates on the logical structure of law, the meanings and uses of its concepts, and the formal terms and the modes of its operation.

censorial jurisprudence. See LAW REFORM.

comparative jurisprudence. See COMPARATIVE LAW.

equity jurisprudence. (1826) 1. The legal science treating the rules, principles, and maxims that govern the decisions of a court of equity. 2. The cases and controversies that are considered proper subjects of equity. 3. The nature and form of the remedies that equity grants.

ethical jurisprudence. (1826) The branch of legal philosophy concerned with the law from the viewpoint of its ethical significance and adequacy. • This area of study brings together moral and legal philosophy. — Also termed (in German) Rechtsphilosophie; (in French) philosophie du droit.

expository jurisprudence. (18c) The scholarly exposition of the contents of an actual legal system as it now exists or once existed. — Also termed systematic jurisprudence.

feminist jurisprudence. (1978) A branch of jurisprudence that examines the relationship between women and law, including the history of legal and social biases against women, the elimination of those biases in modern law, and the enhancement of women's legal rights and recognition in society.

"The first published use of the phrase 'feminist jurisprudence' occurred in 1978 when Professor Ann Scales published an article called Toward a Feminist Jurisprudence. Feminist legal theory is diverse, and anything but monolithic. Many feminists believe that it is difficult to generalize about feminist jurisprudence. It is, however, possible to understand feminist legal theory as a reaction to the jurisprudence of modern legal scholars (primarily male scholars) who tend to see law as a process for interpreting and perpetuating a universal, gender-neutral public morality. Feminist legal scholars, despite their differences, appear united in claiming that 'masculine' jurisprudence of 'all stripes' fails to acknowledge, let alone respond to, the interests, values, fears, and harms experienced by women." Gary Minda, Postmodern Legal Movements 129-30 (1995).

general jurisprudence. (18c) 1. The scholarly study of the fundamental elements of a given legal system. — Also termed jurisprudentia generalis.

"The term 'general jurisprudence' involves the misleading suggestion that this branch of legal science is that which relates not to any single system of law, but to those conceptions and principles that are to be found in all developed legal systems, and which are therefore in this sense general. It is true that a great part of the matter with which it is concerned is common to all mature systems of law. All of these have the same essential nature and purposes, and therefore agree to a large extent in their first principles. But it is not because of universal reception that any principles pertain to the theory or philosophy of law. For this purpose such reception is neither sufficient nor necessary. Even if no system in the world save that of England recognised the legislative efficacy of judicial precedents, the theory of case-law would none the less be a fit and proper subject of general jurisprudence. Jurisprudentia generalis is not the study of legal systems in general, but the study of the general or fundamental elements of a particular legal system." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 3 n.(b) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

2. The scholarly study of the law, legal theory, and legal systems generally. — Also termed jurisprudentia universalis; philosophy of law; legal philosophy.

"According to Austin (1790–1859), general jurisprudence is the study of the 'principles, notions and distinctions' common to the maturer systems of law." Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 2 (4th ed. 1991).

historical jurisprudence. (1823) The branch of legal philosophy concerned with the history of the first principles and conceptions of a legal system, dealing with (1) the general principles governing the origin and development of law, and (2) the origin and development of the legal system's first principles.

"Historical jurisprudence was a passive restraining mode of thought on legal subjects by way of reaction from the active creative thought of the era of philosophy. It was a reaction, too, from the confident disregard of traditional legal institutions and conditions of time and place which characterized the French Revolution. We were not ready for it in the fore part of the last century. But we accepted it eagerly toward the end of that century when it was already moribund in Europe." Roscoe Pound, The Formative Era of American Law 113 (1938).

jurisprudence constante (kən-stan-tee). Civil law. The doctrine that a court should give great weight to a rule of law that is accepted and applied in a long line of cases, and should not overrule or modify its own decisions unless clear error is shown and injustice will arise from continuation of a particular rule of law. ● Civil-law courts are not bound by the common-law doctrine of stare decisis. But they do recognize the doctrine of jurisprudence constante, which is similar to stare decisis, one exception being that jurisprudence constante does not command strict adherence to a legal principle applied on one occasion in the past. Cf. STARE DECISIS. [Cases: Courts ⇨89.]

jurisprudence of conceptions. (1908) The extension of a maxim or definition, usu. to a logical extreme, with relentless disregard for the consequences. ● The phrase appears to have been invented by Roscoe Pound. See Mechanical Jurisprudence, 8 Colum. L. Rev. 605, 608 (1908).

normative jurisprudence. See NATURAL LAW (2).

particular jurisprudence. (18c) The scholarly study of the legal system within a particular jurisdiction, the focus being on the fundamental assumptions of that system only.

positivist jurisprudence. (1931) A theory that denies validity to any law that is not derived from or sanctioned by a sovereign or some other determinate source. — Also termed positivistic jurisprudence.

sociological jurisprudence. (1907) A philosophical approach to law stressing the actual social effects of legal institutions, doctrines, and practices. ● This influential approach was started by Roscoe Pound in 1906 and became a precursor to legal realism. — Also termed sociology of law. See LEGAL REALISM.

systematic jurisprudence. See expository jurisprudence.

therapeutic jurisprudence. The study of the effects of law and the legal system on the behavior, emotions, and mental health of people; esp., a multidisciplinary examination of how law and mental health interact.

● This discipline originated in the late 1980s as an academic approach to mental-health law.

jurisprudent, n. (17c) A person learned in the law; a specialist in jurisprudence. — Also termed jurisprude.

jurisprudentia generalis. See general jurisprudence (1) under JURISPRUDENCE.

jurisprudential (joo-ris-proo-den-shəl), adj. Of or relating to jurisprudence.

jurisprudentia naturalis. See JURISPRUDENCE (1).

jurisprudentia universalis. See general jurisprudence (2) under JURISPRUDENCE.

juris publici. See JURIS.

jurist. (15c) 1. A person who has thorough knowledge of the law; esp., a judge or an eminent legal scholar. — Also termed legist. 2. JURISPRUDENT.

juristic, adj. (1831) 1. Of or relating to a jurist <juristic literature>. 2. Of or relating to law . — Also termed juristical.

juristic act. See act in the law under ACT.

juristic person. See artificial person under PERSON (3).

Juris utriusque Doctor. See J.U.D.

juror (joo-r or also joo-or). (14c) A person serving on a jury panel. — Also formerly termed layperson.

grand juror. A person serving on a grand jury.

petit juror (pet-ee). A trial juror, as opposed to a grand juror.

presiding juror. The juror who chairs the jury during deliberations and speaks for the jury in court by announcing the verdict. ● The presiding juror is usu. elected by the jury at the start of deliberations. — Also termed foreman; foreperson; (in Scots law) jury chancellor. [Cases: Jury ⇨147.]

stealth juror. A juror, esp. one in a high-profile case, who deliberately fails to disclose a relevant bias in order to qualify as a juror and bases a decision on that bias rather than on the facts and law. • Although a stealth juror may be fined or prosecuted for perjury based on a lie or omission, the usual penalty is only removal from the jury.

tales-juror (tay-leez- or taylz-joor-ər). See TALESMAN.

juror misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

jury, n. (15c) A group of persons selected according to law and given the power to decide questions of fact and return a verdict in the case submitted to them. • In certain contexts, jury embraces any fact-trier, including an arbitrator or a trial judge sitting in a nonjury proceeding. — Also termed empaneled jury; impaneled jury.

advisory jury. (1892) A jury empaneled to hear a case when the parties have no right to a jury trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 39(c). • The judge may accept or reject the advisory jury's verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2252; Trial ↻369.]

blue-ribbon jury. (1940) A jury consisting of jurors who are selected for their special qualities, such as advanced education or special training, sometimes used in a complex civil case (usu. by stipulation of the parties) and sometimes also for a grand jury (esp. one investigating governmental corruption). • A blue-ribbon jury is not allowed in criminal trials because it would violate the defendant's right to trial by a jury of peers. An even more elite group of jurors, involving specialists in a technical field, is called a blue-blue-ribbon jury.

common jury. See petit jury.

coroner's jury. (17c) A jury summoned by a coroner to investigate the cause of death. [Cases: Coroners ↻12.]

deadlocked jury. See hung jury.

death-qualified jury. Criminal law. A jury that is fit to decide a case involving the death penalty because the jurors have no absolute ideological bias against capital punishment. Cf. life-qualified jury. [Cases: Jury ↻33(2.15).]

fair and impartial jury. See impartial jury.

foreign jury. A jury obtained from a jurisdiction other than that in which the case is brought. [Cases: Jury ↻7.]

good jury. See special jury.

grand jury. See GRAND JURY.

homage jury. Hist. A jury in a court baron, consisting of tenants who made homage to the lord. See COURT BARON.

hung jury. (1854) A jury that cannot reach a verdict by the required voting margin. — Also termed deadlocked jury.

impartial jury. (17c) A jury that has no opinion about the case at the start of the trial and that bases its verdict on competent legal evidence. — Also termed fair and impartial jury. [Cases: Jury ↻33(2.10).]

inquest jury. (1873) A jury summoned from a particular district to appear before a sheriff, coroner, or other ministerial officer and inquire about the facts concerning a death. See INQUEST. — Also termed jury of inquest. [Cases: Coroners ↻12.]

jury de medietate linguae (dee mee-dee-ə-tay-tee ling-wee). [Latin "jury of halfness of language"] Hist. A jury made up of half natives and half aliens, allowed when one of the parties is an alien.

jury of indictment. See GRAND JURY.

jury of inquest. See inquest jury.

jury of matrons. Hist. A jury of "discreet and lawful women" impaneled to try a question of pregnancy, as when a woman sentenced to death pleads, in stay of execution, that she is pregnant.

jury of the vicinage (vis-ə-nij). 1. At common law, a jury from the county where the crime occurred. 2. A jury from the county where the court is held. See VICINAGE. [Cases: Jury ↻33(3).]

life-qualified jury. Criminal law. In a case involving a capital crime, a jury selected from a venire from which the judge has excluded anyone unable or unwilling to consider a sentence of life imprisonment, instead of the death penalty, if the defendant is found guilty. Cf. death-qualified jury. [Cases: Jury ↻33(2.15).]

mixed jury. (1878) A jury composed of both men and women or persons of different races. [Cases: Jury ↻8.]

petit jury (pet-ee). (15c) A jury (usu. consisting of 6 or 12 persons) summoned and empaneled in the trial of a specific case. — Also termed petty jury; trial jury; common jury; traverse jury. Cf. GRAND JURY.

police jury. See POLICE JURY.

presenting jury. See GRAND JURY.

rogue jury. A jury that ignores the law and evidence in reaching a capricious verdict. • Rogue juries include those that base their verdicts on unrevealed, deeply held prejudices; on undue sympathy or antipathy toward a party; or on chance (as by tossing a coin). The verdicts often result in inappropriate awards, punishments, convictions, or acquittals. Unlike jury nullification, a rogue jury's verdict is not based on a desire to achieve a just, fair, or moral outcome. Cf. JURY NULLIFICATION.

shadow jury. (1974) A group of mock jurors paid to observe a trial and report their reactions to a jury consultant hired by one of the litigants. • The shadow jurors, who are matched as closely as possible to the real jurors, provide counsel with information about the jury's likely reactions to the trial. — Also termed phantom jury.

sheriff's jury. Hist. A jury selected and summoned by a sheriff to hold inquests for various purposes, such as assessing damages in an action in which the defendant makes no defense or ascertaining the mental condition of an alleged lunatic.

special jury. (17c) 1. A jury chosen from a panel that is drawn specifically for that case. • Such a jury is usu. empaneled at a party's request in an unusually important or complicated case. — Also termed struck jury. See STRIKING A JURY. [Cases: Jury ⇨6, 71.] 2. At common law, a jury composed of persons above the rank of ordinary freeholders, usu. summoned to try more important questions than those heard by ordinary juries. — Also termed good jury.

struck jury. (18c) 1. A jury selected by allowing the parties to alternate in striking from a list any person whom a given party does not wish to have on the jury, until the number is reduced to the appropriate number (traditionally 12). See STRIKING A JURY. 2. See special jury (1). [Cases: Jury ⇨6, 71.]

traverse jury. See petit jury.

trial jury. See petit jury.

jury box. The enclosed part of a courtroom where the jury sits. — Also spelled jury-box.

jury challenge. See CHALLENGE (2).

jury chancellor. See presiding juror under JUROR.

jury charge. (1883) 1. JURY INSTRUCTION. 2. A set of jury instructions. — Often shortened to charge.

jury commissioner. See COMMISSIONER.

jury direction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

jury duty. (1829) 1. The obligation to serve on a jury. 2. Actual service on a jury. — Also termed jury service.

jury fee. See FEE (1).

jury-fixing. (1887) The act or an instance of illegally procuring the cooperation of one or more jurors who actually influence the outcome of the trial. — Also termed fixing a jury. Cf. EMBRACERY; JURY-PACKING. — jury-fixer, n.

jury instruction. (usu. pl.) (1943) A direction or guideline that a judge gives a jury concerning the law of the case. — Often shortened to instruction. — Also termed jury charge; charge; jury direction; direction. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨769; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2171–2185; Trial ⇨182.]

additional instruction. (1821) A jury charge, beyond the original instructions, that is usu. given in response to the jury's question about the evidence or some point of law. — Also termed further instruction. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨863; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨1975; Trial ⇨312, 314(1).]

affirmative converse instruction. (1966) An instruction presenting a hypothetical that, if true, commands a verdict in favor of the defendant. • An affirmative converse instruction usu. begins with language such as "your verdict must be for the defendant if you believe . . ." [Cases: Trial ⇨203(3).]

affirmative instruction. (1835) An instruction that removes an issue from the jury's consideration, such as an instruction that whatever the evidence, the defendant cannot be convicted under the indictment count to which the charge is directed. — Also termed affirmative charge. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨754; Trial ⇨194, 234(4), 253.]

argumentative instruction. (1888) An instruction that assumes facts not in evidence, that singles out or unduly emphasizes a particular issue, theory, or defense, or that otherwise invades the jury's province regarding the weight, probative value, or sufficiency of the evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨807; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2173.1; Trial ⇨240.]

binding instruction. See mandatory instruction.

cautionary instruction. (1881) 1. A judge's instruction to the jurors to disregard certain evidence or consider it for specific purposes only. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨673, 783, 783.5; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2173; Trial ⇨133.6(2), 207, 208.] 2. A judge's instruction for the jury not to be influenced by outside factors and not to talk to anyone about the case while the trial is in progress. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨768, 852; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2173; Trial ⇨201, 217.] conscious-avoidance instruction. See willful-blindness instruction.

curative instruction. (1890) A judge's instruction that is intended to correct an erroneous instruction. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2184; Trial ⇨296.] deliberate-indifference instruction. See JEWELL INSTRUCTION.

disparaging instruction. A jury charge that discredits or defames a party to a lawsuit.

formula instruction. (1927) A jury charge derived from a standardized statement of the law on which the jury must base its verdict.

further instruction. See additional instruction.

general instruction. Any jury instruction that does not present a question or issue to be answered.

Jewell instruction. See JEWELL INSTRUCTION.

mandatory instruction. (1895) An instruction requiring a jury to find for one party and against the other if the jury determines that, based on a preponderance of the evidence, a given set of facts exists. — Also termed binding instruction. [Cases: Trial ⇨234(3, 4), 253.]

model jury instruction. (1964) A form jury charge usu. approved by a state bar association or similar group regarding matters arising in a typical case. • Courts usu. accept model jury instructions as authoritative. — Also termed pattern jury instruction; pattern jury charge; model jury charge. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨805(1); Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2173.1; Trial ⇨228(1).]

ostrich instruction. (1966) Criminal procedure. Slang. An instruction stating that a defendant who deliberately avoided acquiring actual knowledge can be found to have acted knowingly. Cf. JEWELL INSTRUCTION. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨772(5).]

- pattern jury instruction. See model jury instruction.
- peremptory instruction. (1829) A court's explicit direction that a jury must obey, such as an instruction to return a verdict for a particular party. See directed verdict under VERDICT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2173.1, 2174; Trial ⇨ 167, 234, 253.]
- single-juror instruction. (1980) An instruction stating that if any juror is not reasonably satisfied with the plaintiff's evidence, then the jury cannot render a verdict for the plaintiff.
- special instruction. (1807) An instruction on some particular point or question involved in the case, usu. in response to counsel's request for such an instruction. — Also termed special charge.
- standard instruction. (1914) A jury instruction that has been regularly used in a given jurisdiction.
- willful-blindness instruction. An instruction that an otherwise culpable defendant may be held accountable for a crime if the defendant deliberately avoided finding out about the crime. — Also termed conscious-avoidance instruction. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 772(5).]
- jury list. A list of persons who may be summoned to serve as jurors. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 60.]
- jurymen. Archaic. See JUROR.
- jury nullification. (1982) A jury's knowing and deliberate rejection of the evidence or refusal to apply the law either because the jury wants to send a message about some social issue that is larger than the case itself or because the result dictated by law is contrary to the jury's sense of justice, morality, or fairness. Cf. verdict contrary to law under VERDICT; rogue jury under JURY. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 731; Trial ⇨ 128, 304.]
- jury of indictment. See GRAND JURY.
- jury-packing. (1887) The act or an instance of contriving to have a jury composed of persons who are predisposed toward one side or the other. — Also termed packing a jury. Cf. EMBRACERY; JURY-FIXING.
- jury panel. See VENIRE (1).
- jury pardon. (1974) A rule that permits a jury to convict a defendant of a lesser offense than the offense charged if sufficient evidence exists to convict the defendant of either offense.
- jury pool. See VENIRE (1).
- jury process. (18c) 1. The procedure by which jurors are summoned and their attendance is enforced. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 67.] 2. The papers served on or mailed to potential jurors to compel their attendance.
- jury question. (18c) 1. An issue of fact that a jury decides. See QUESTION OF FACT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2141.] 2. A special question that a court may ask a jury that will deliver a special verdict. See special interrogatory under INTERROGATORY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2231; Trial ⇨ 350.]
- jury sequestration. See SEQUESTRATION (8).
- jury service. See JURY DUTY.
- jury shuffle. Texas law. A process for rearranging a venire whereby the cards with the veniremembers' names on them are shuffled so that the veniremembers will be seated in a different order. • The prosecution and the defense may each request a jury shuffle once before voir dire begins. No reason for the request need be given. After voir dire begins, neither party may request a shuffle. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 64.]
- jury summation. See CLOSING ARGUMENT.
- jury-tampering. See EMBRACERY.
- jury trial. See TRIAL.
- jury waiver. See WAIVER (2).
- jury wheel. (1873) A physical device or electronic system used for storing and randomly selecting names of potential jurors. [Cases: Jury ⇨ 65.]
- jurywoman. Archaic. A female juror; esp., a member of a jury of matrons. See jury of matrons under JURY.
- jus (jəs also joos or yoos), n. [Latin "law, right"] 1. Law in the abstract. 2. A system of law. 3. A legal right, power, or principle. 4. Roman law. Man-made law. • The term usu. refers to a right rather than a statute. — Abbr. J. — Also spelled ius. Cf. FAS. Pl. юра (joor-ə also yoor-ə).
"Ius, when used in a general sense, answers to our word Law in its widest acceptation. It denotes, not one particular law nor collection of laws, but the entire body of principles, rules, and statutes, whether written or unwritten, by which the public and the private rights, the duties and the obligations of men, as members of a community, are defined, inculcated, protected and enforced." William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 285–86 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).
- jus abstinenti (jəs ab-stə-nen-dī), n. [Law Latin "right of abstaining"] Roman & civil law. The right of an heir to renounce or decline an inheritance, as when it would require taking on debt.
- jus abutendi (jəs ab-yə-ten-dī), n. [Latin "right of abusing"] Roman & civil law. The right to make full use of property, even to the extent of wasting or destroying it. Cf. JUS UTENDI.
- jus accrescendi (jəs ak-rə-sen-dī), n. [Latin "right of accretion"] A right of accrual; esp., the right of survivorship that a joint tenant enjoys. See RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP. Cf. JUS NON DECRESCENDI. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⇨ 6.]
- jus actionis (jəs ak-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. A right of action.
- jus actus (jəs ak-təs). [Latin] Roman law. A rural servitude giving a person the right of passage for a carriage or cattle. See ACTUS (3).
- jus administrationes (jəs ad-mi-ni-stray-shee-oh-neez). [Latin] Scots law. Hist. The outmoded right by which a husband had unfettered control of his wife's heritable property.
- jus ad rem (jəs ad rem), n. [Law Latin "right to a thing"] A right in specific property arising from another person's duty and valid only against that person; an inchoate or incomplete right to a thing. Cf. JUS IN RE.

jus aedilium (jæs ee-dil-ee-əm). [Latin "law of the aediles"] Roman law. The body of law developed through the edicts of aediles. — Also termed jus aedilicium (jæs ee-dī-līsh-ee-əm). See AEDILE; JUS HONORARIUM.

Jus Aelianum (jæs ee-lee-ay-nəm). [Latin] Roman law. A manual of laws drawn up in the second century B.C. by the consul Sextus Aelius, consisting of three parts: (1) the laws of the Twelve Tables; (2) a commentary on them; and (3) the forms of procedure. See TWELVE TABLES.

jus aequum (jæs ee-kwəm). [Latin "law that is equal or fair"] Roman law. Law characterized by equity, flexibility, and adaptation to the circumstances of a particular case. Cf. JUS STRICTUM.

jus aesneiciae (jæs ees-neesh-ee-ee). [Latin] Hist. The right of primogeniture. — Also spelled esneiciae.

jus agendi (jæs ə-jen-dī). [Latin] Scots law. One's power to take action to pursue one's rights.

jus albanagii (jæs al-bə-nay-jee-i), n. [Law Latin "confiscating the goods of aliens"] See DROIT D'AUBAINE.

jus albinatus (jæs al-bi-nay-təs), n. [Law Latin "right of alien confiscation"] See DROIT D'AUBAINE.

jus angariae (jæs ang-gair-ee-ee), n. [Latin "right of angary"] See ANGARY.

jus antiquum (jæs an-tī-kwəm). [Latin] Roman law. The old law. — Also termed jus vetus. Cf. JUS NOVUM.

"In the later Empire (which dates from the fourth century) there were two groups of sources of law: first, the 'jus vetus', or 'jus' simply, i.e. the old traditional law, the development of which was completed in the classical period of Roman Jurisprudence (in the course of the second and the beginning of the third century); secondly, the 'leges' or 'jus novum', i.e. the later law which had sprung from imperial legislation. These two classes of law, 'jus' and 'leges', mutually supplementing each other, constituted the whole body of law as it existed at the time, and, taken together, represented the result of the entire development of Roman law from the earliest times down to . . . the epoch of the later Empire." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 116-17 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

jus apparentiae (jæs ap-ə-ren-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Scots law. The right of apparenacy. • An heir who was open to a succession but not fully vested in title had the right of apparenacy, a right that allowed the heir to take certain actions on behalf of the estate, such as defending the ancestor's title.

jus aquaeductus (jæs ak-wə-dək-təs), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A servitude that gives a landowner the right to conduct water from another's land through pipes or channels.

jus aquaehaustus (jæs ak-wee-haws-təs). [Latin] Roman law. See AQUAEHAUSTUS.

jus aucupandi (jæs awk-yuu-pan-dī). [Latin] Scots law. The right of catching birds; the right of fowling.

jus banci (jæs ban-sī), n. [Law Latin "right of bench"] Hist. The right or privilege of having an elevated and separate seat of judgment, formerly allowed only to the king's judges, who administered what was from then on called "high justice."

jus belli (jæs bel-ī), n. [Latin "law of war"] The law of nations as applied during wartime, defining in particular the rights and duties of the belligerent powers and of neutral nations.

jus bellum dicendi (jæs bel-əm di-sen-dī), n. [Latin] The right of proclaiming war.

jus canonicum (jæs kə-non-i-kəm), n. [Law Latin] See CANON LAW (1).

jus capiendi (jæs kap-ee-en-dī). [Latin "the right to take or receive"] Roman law. The right of taking property under a will.

jus civile (jæs si-vī-lee). [Latin] Roman law. The traditional law of the city of Rome, beginning with the Twelve Tables and developed by juristic interpretation. • It covered areas of law restricted to Roman citizens, such as the formalities of making a will. Over time, the jus civile was modified by, for example, the jus honorarium (which modified the requisites for a valid will) and the jus sentium (which modified the stipulation). The original jus civile was eventually absorbed into a general Roman law. See CIVIL LAW (1); JUS QUIRITUM.

jus civitatis (jæs siv-i-tay-təs). [Latin] Roman law. The right of citizenship; the right of a Roman citizen.

jus cloacae (jæs kloh-ay-see), n. [Latin "right of sewer or drain"] Civil law. An easement consisting in the right of having a sewer or conducting surface water over or through the land of one's neighbor.

jus cogens (jæs koh-jenz), n. [Latin "compelling law"]
1. Int'l law. A mandatory or peremptory norm of general international law accepted and recognized by the international community as a norm from which no derogation is permitted. • A peremptory norm can be modified only by a later norm that has the same character. Cf. JUS DISPOSITIVUM. [Cases: International Law ◊ 1.] 2. Civil law. A mandatory rule of law that is not subject to the disposition of the parties, such as an absolute limitation on the legal capacity of minors below a certain age. — Also termed (in sense 2) peremptory norm.

jus commercii (jæs kə-mər-shee-ī), n. [Latin "right of commerce"] Roman & civil law. The right to make contracts, acquire and transfer property, and conduct business transactions.

jus commune (jæs kə-myoo-nee), n. 1. Roman & civil law. The common or public law or right, as opposed to a law or right established for special purposes. Cf. JUS SINGULARE. 2. The common law of England. See COMMON LAW (3). 3. The shared law of much of continental Western Europe during the Middle Ages, consisting of a blend of canon law and rediscovered Roman law.

"[Jus commune is a phrase well known to the canonists. They use it to distinguish the general and ordinary law of the universal church both from any rules peculiar to this or that provincial church, and from those papal privilegia which are always giving rise to ecclesiastical litigation." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 176 (2d ed. 1898).

jus compascuum (jəs kəm-pas-kyoo-əm), n. [Latin "the right to feed together"] Hist. The right of common pasture. Cf. COMMON (1).

jus connubii (jəs kə-n[y]oo-bee-i), n. [Latin "right of marriage"] See CONNUBIUM.

jus coronae (jəs kə-roh-nee), n. [Latin "right of the Crown"] The right of succession to the English throne.

jus crediti (jəs kred-i-ti). [Latin "the right of credit"] Roman & Scots law. A creditor's right to a debt; a creditor's right to recover a debt through legal process. Cf. JUS EXIGENDI.

"[T]he term is frequently used in contradistinction to a mere spes, or defeasible expectancy. This jus crediti is often of great importance; for although a person may not be entitled to be put in immediate possession of a subject, yet the obligation to deliver it to him at some future time creates in him a vested right, which forms part of his estate." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 620 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

jus cudendae monetae (jəs kyoo-den-dee mā-nee-tee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The right of coining money.

jus curialitatis (jəs kyoor-ee-al-ə-tay-tis), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The right of curtesy.

jus dare (jəs dair-ee), vb. [Latin] To give or make the law. • This is the function and prerogative of the legislature. Cf. JUS DICERE.

jus delatum (jəs di-lay-təm). [Law Latin] Scots law. A transferred right.

jus deliberandi (jəs di-lib-ə-ran-di), n. [Latin "right of deliberating"] Roman & civil law. A right granted to an heir to take time to consider whether to accept or reject an inheritance. Cf. tempus deliberandi under TEMPUS.

jus de non appellando (jəs dee non ap-ə-lan-doh). [Latin] Hist. The supreme judicial power.

jus devolutum (jəs dev-ə-loo-təm). [Law Latin "a devolved right"] Scots law. The right of the presbytery to appoint a minister to a vacant church if a patron failed to present a fit minister within six months of the vacancy. Cf. TANQUAM JURE DEVOLUTO.

jus dicere (jəs di-sər-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To declare or decide the law. • This is the function and prerogative of the judiciary. Cf. JUS DARE.

jus disponendi (jəs dis-pə-nen-di), n. [Latin "right of disposing"] The right to dispose of property; the power of alienation.

jus dispositivum (jəs dis-poz-ə-ti-vəm), n. [Latin "law subject to the disposition of the parties"] Int'l law. A norm that is created by the consent of participating nations, as by an international agreement, and is binding only on the nations that agree to be bound by it. Cf. JUS COGENS (1).

jus distrahendi (jəs dis-trə-hen-di), n. [Latin "right of distraining"] The right to sell pledged goods upon default.

jus dividendi (jəs div-i-den-di), n. [Latin "right of dividing"] The right to dispose of real property by will.

jus divinum (jəs di-vi-nəm). 1. See DIVINE LAW. 2. See NATURAL LAW.

jus domino proximum (jəs dom-ə-noh prok-sə-məm). [Law Latin] Scots law. A right nearly equal to that of absolute property; a feuholder's right. See FEU.

"Jus domino proximum . . . Such a right is enjoyed by one who holds lands in feu, for he is entitled to sell the subjects, or alter or use them in any way he thinks proper. And yet the property is not absolutely his — that is, he does not hold the property so absolutely as did the superior from whom he acquired, because the land is burdened with the feu-duty payable to the superior, and to this extent the absolute right of property is restricted. Similar to the right of a feu under our law, was that of the emphyteuta under the civil law." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 304-05 (4th ed. 1894).

jus duplicatum (jəs d[y]oo-ply-kay-təm). See DROIT-DROIT.

jus ecclesiasticum (jəs e-kee-z[h]ee-as-ti-kəm). [Law Latin] See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

jus edicendi (jəs ed-i-sen-di or ee-di-). [Latin "right of decreeing"] Roman law. The right (esp. of the praetors) to issue edicts. See JUS PRAETORIUM.

jus et norma loquendi (jəs et nor-mə loh-kwen-di). [Latin "the law and rule of speech"] Idiomatic language, including speech and pronunciation, as established by the custom of a particular nation.

jus exigendi (jəs ek-si-jen-di). [Latin] Scots law. A creditor's right to enforce immediate payment of a debt. Cf. JUS CREDITI.

"For example, where a testator directs his testamentary trustees to pay a certain legacy, which he has unconditionally bequeathed to the legatee, six months after his (the testator's) death, the legacy vests on the death of the testator, and the legatee acquires then the jus crediti, but he cannot enforce payment of the legacy until after the expiry of the six months; he acquires the jus exigendi when the debt has become prestable." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 305 (4th ed. 1894).

jus ex non scripto (jəs eks non skrip-toh). See unwritten law under LAW.

jus falcandi (jəs fal-kan-di), n. [Latin] Hist. The right of mowing or cutting.

jus fetiale (jəs fee-shee-ay-lee), n. [Latin] 1. FETIAL LAW. 2. The law of negotiation and diplomacy. • This phrase captured the classical notion of international law. — Also spelled jus feziale.

jus fiduciarium (jəs fi-d[y]oo-shee-air-əm), n. [Latin] Civil law. A right in trust. Cf. JUS LEGITIMUM.

jus fluminum (jəs floo-mə-nəm), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to use rivers.

jus fodiendi (jəs foh-dee-en-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to dig on another's land.

jus fruendi (jəs froo-en-dī), n. [Latin "right of enjoying"] Roman & civil law. The right to use and enjoy another's property without damaging or diminishing it. See USUFRUCT.

jus futurum (jəs fyoo-t[y]oor-əm), n. [Latin "future right"] Civil law. A right that has not fully vested; an inchoate or expectant right.

jus gentium (jəs jen-shee-əm). [Latin "law of nations"] 1. INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2. Roman law. The body of law, taken to be common to all civilized peoples, and applied in dealing with the relations between Roman citizens and foreigners. — Also termed jus inter gentes.

"The early Roman law (the jus civile) applied only to Roman citizens. It was formalistic and hard and reflected the status of a small, unsophisticated society rooted in the soil. It was totally unable to provide a relevant background for an expanding, developing nation. This need was served by the creation and progressive augmentation of the jus gentium. This provided simplified rules to govern the relations between foreigners, and between foreigners and citizens. . . . The progressive rules of the jus gentium gradually overrode the narrow jus civile until the latter system ceased to exist. Thus, the jus gentium became the common law of the Roman Empire and was deemed to be of universal application." Malcolm N. Shaw, International Law 15 (4th ed. 1997).

jus gentium privatum (jəs jen-shee-əm pri-vay-təm). See private international law under INTERNATIONAL LAW.

jus gentium publicum (jəs jen-shee-əm pəb-li-kəm). See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

jus gladii (jəs glad-ee-ī). [Latin "right of the sword"] Roman law. The executory power of the law, esp. for provincial governors; the power or right to inflict the death penalty. • This term took on a similar meaning under English law. — Also termed potestas gladii.

"And the prosecution of these offences is always at the suit and in the name of the king, in whom, by the texture of our constitution, the jus gladii, or executory power of the law, entirely resides." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 177 (1765).

jus habendi (jəs hə-ben-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to have a thing; the right to be put in actual possession of property.

jus haereditatis (jəs hə-red-ə-tay-tis), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right of inheritance.

jus hauriendi (jəs haw-ree-en-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right of drawing water.

jus honorarium (jəs [h]on-ə-rair-ee-əm). [Latin "magisterial law"] Roman law. The body of law established by the edicts of magistrates, esp. the praetors (jus praetorium) and the aediles (jus aedilium). • In the Roman Republic, the term sometimes referred collectively to all the proclamations of magistrates of the Roman Republic, such as the consuls, praetors, aediles, quaestors, censors, provincial governors, and pontifices. Although these magistrates were not legislators, they were entitled and indeed bound to declare by edict how they proposed to administer justice, and their edicts were a supplementary source of law. — Also termed edicta magistratum.

jus honorum (jəs [h]ə-nor-əm). [Latin] Roman law. The right of a citizen to hold public office, whether civil, military, or sacred. Cf. JUS SUFFRAGII.

jus imaginis (jəs ə-maj-ə-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The right to use or display pictures or statues of ancestors. • The right was restricted to upper-class Roman citizens.

jus immunitatis (jəs i-myoo-nə-tay-tis), n. [Latin "law of immunity"] Civil law. Exemption from the burden of public office.

jus incognitum (jəs in-kog-nə-təm), n. [Latin] Civil law. An unknown or obsolete law.

jus incorporale (jəs in-kor-pə-ray-lee). [Latin] Hist. An incorporeal right. See INCORPOREAL.

jus individuum (jəs in-də-vij-oo-əm), n. [Latin] An individual or indivisible right; a right that cannot be divided.

jus in personam (jəs in pər-soh-nəm), n. [Latin "right against a person"] A right of action against a particular person to enforce that person's obligation. — Also termed jura in personam. See right in personam under RIGHT.

jus in re (jəs in ree), n. [Law Latin "right in or over a thing"] A right in property valid against anyone in the world; a complete and perfect right to a thing. — Also termed jus in rem; jura in rem. Cf. JUS AD REM.

jus in re aliena (jəs in ree ay-lee-ee-nə or al-ee-), n. [Latin] An easement or right in or over another's property; ENCUMBRANCE. — Also termed right in re aliena.

jus in rem (jəs in rem), n. [Latin "right to a thing"] See JUS IN RE.

jus in re propria (jəs in ree proh-pree-ə), n. [Latin] The right of enjoyment that is incident to full ownership of property; full ownership itself. — Also termed right in re propria.

jus inter gentes (jəs in-tər jen-teez), n. [Latin "law among nations"] See JUS GENTIUM.

jus Italicum (jəs i-tal-ə-kəm). [Latin] Roman law. A privilege granted by the emperor to cities outside Italy, giving them the status of communities within Italy. • This privilege included the right to own land by quiritarian title.

jus itineris (jəs i-tin-ə-ris). [Latin] Roman law. A rustic praedial servitude granting the right to pass over an adjoining property on foot or horseback.

jusjurandum (jəs-juu-ran-dəm), n. [Latin] An oath. See JURAMENTUM.

jus Latii (jəs lay-shee-ī). [Latin] Roman law. Rights granted to a citizen of a Roman colony. • The colonial citizen's status was midway between peregrine and full citizen of Rome. — Also termed jus Latium.

jus legitimum (jəs lə-jit-ə-məm), n. [Latin] Civil law. A right enforceable in law. Cf. JUS FIDUCIARIUM.

jus liberorum (jəs lib-ə-ror-əm). [Latin “right of children”] Roman law. A privilege conferred on a parent who has several children; esp., the immunity from compulsory guardianship (tutela) given to a woman with three or more children. — Also termed jus trium liberorum.

jus liquidissimum (jəs lik-wi-dis-i-məm). [Latin] Maritime law. The principle that a salvager is entitled to a reward for saving life or property imperiled at sea.

jus mariti (jəs mah-ree-ti or mə-ri-ti). [Law Latin] Scots law. Hist. The outmoded right under which a husband acquired ownership of all his wife’s movable property.

jus merae facultatis (jəs meer-ee fak-əl-tay-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. A right of mere power; a right of power merely to act.

jus merum (jəs meer-əm). See MERE RIGHT.

jus moribus constitutum (jəs mor-ə-bəs kon-stə-t[y]oo-təm). [Latin] See unwritten law under LAW.

jus naturae (jəs nə-t[y]oor-ee). [Latin] See NATURAL LAW.

jus naturale (jəs nach-ə-ray-lee). [Latin] See NATURAL LAW.

jus navigandi (jəs nav-ə-gan-dı), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right of navigation; the right of commerce by sea.

jus necessitatis (jəs nə-ses-i-tay-tis), n. [Latin] A person’s right to do what is required for which no threat of legal punishment is a dissuasion. • This idea implicates the proverb that necessity knows no law (necessitas non habet legem), so that an act that would be objectively understood as necessary is not wrongful even if done with full and deliberate intention.

jus nobilium (jəs noh-bil-ee-əs). [Law Latin] Hist. A superior right.

jus non decrescendi (jəs non dee-kre-sen-dı). [Law Latin] Scots law. The right of not suffering diminution. Cf. JUS ACCRESCENDI.

jus non sacrum (jəs non say-krəm). [Latin “nonsacred law”] Hist. The body of law regulating the duties of a civil magistrate in preserving the public order. Cf. JUS SACRUM.

jus non scriptum (jəs non skrip-təm). See unwritten law under LAW.

jus novum (jəs noh-vəm). [Latin] Roman law. The new law; the law of the later Roman empire. — Also termed leges. See LEX. Cf. JUS ANTIQUUM.

jus obligationis (jəs ob-li-gay-shee-oh-nis). [Law Latin “a right of obligation”] Hist. A personal right. See JUS AD REM.

jus offerendi (jəs ahf- or awf-ə-ren-dı). [Latin] Roman law. The right of subrogation; the right to succeed to a senior creditor’s lien and priority upon tendering the amount due to that creditor. — Also termed jus offerendae pecuniae.

jus oneris ferendi (jəs on-ə-ris fə-ren-dı). [Latin] Roman law. An urban praedial servitude granting the right for one’s own house to be supported by a neighbor’s. • The servitude was exceptional in requiring a positive duty of the servient owner.

jus pascendi (jəs pə-sen-dı). See servitus pascendi under SERVITUS.

jus patronatus (jəs pa-trə-nay-təs), n. [Latin] Eccles. law. The right of patronage; the right to present a clerk to a benefice.

jus persequendi in judicio quod sibi debetur (jəs pər-sə-kwen-dı in joo-dish-ee-oh kwod sib-ı deb-ə-tər). [Latin] Roman law. The right of suing before a court for that which is due to us. • The phrase is Justinian’s definition of an action.

jus personarum (jəs pər-sə-nair-əm), n. [Latin “law of persons”] Civil law. The law governing the rights of persons having special relations with one another (such as parents and children or guardians and wards) or having limited rights (such as aliens or incompetent persons). See LAW OF PERSONS. Cf. JUS RERUM.

jus pignoris (jəs pig-nə-ris). [Latin “the right of pledge”] Roman law. A creditor’s right in the property that a debtor pledges to secure a debt.

jus poenitendi (jəs pen-i-ten-dı), n. [Latin] The right to rescind or revoke an executory contract when the other party defaults.

jus portus (jəs por-təs), n. [Latin] Civil & maritime law. The right of port or harbor.

jus positivum (jəs poz-i-tiv-əm). See POSITIVE LAW.

jus possessionis (jəs pə-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis), n. [Latin] Civil law. A right of which possession is the source or title; a possessor’s right to continue in possession. Cf. JUS PROPRIETATIS.

jus possidendi (jəs pos-ə-den-dı), n. [Latin] Civil law. A person’s right to acquire or to retain possession; an owner’s right to possess.

jus postliminii (jəs pohst-lə-min-ee-ı). [Latin] See POSTLIMINIUM.

jus praesens (jəs pree-senz or -senz), n. [Latin “present right”] Civil law. A right that has been completely acquired; a vested right.

jus praetorium (jəs pri-tor-ee-əm). [Latin “law of the praetors”] Roman law. The body of law developed through the edicts of the praetors. • This was the main-spring of Republican reform. See PRAETOR; EDICTUM PRAETORIS; JUS HONORARIUM.

jus praeventionis (jəs pree-ven-shee-oh-nis). [Law Latin “a right of preference”] Scots law. A court’s jurisdictional superiority by virtue of being the first court to exercise its jurisdiction in a case.

jus precarium (jəs pri-kair-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Civil law. A right to a thing held for another, for which there was no remedy by legal action but only by entreaty or request.

jus presentationis (jəs prez-ən-tay-shee-oh-nis), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to present a clerk to a church.

jus primae noctis (jəs pri-mee nok-tis). [Latin "right of first night"] See DROIT DU SEIGNEUR.

jus privatum (jəs pri-vay-təm), n. [Latin "private law"]
1. Roman & civil law. Private law, consisting of all the branches of law that regulate the relations of citizens to one another, including family law, property, obligations, and testate and intestate succession. 2. The right, title, or dominion of private ownership. See PRIVATE LAW. Cf. JUS PUBLICUM.

jus projiciendi (jəs prə-jish-ee-en-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. A servitude granting the right to build a projection (such as a balcony) from one's house in the open space belonging to a neighbor.

jus proprietatis (jəs prə-pri-ə-tay-tis), n. [Latin] Civil law. A right in property based on ownership rather than actual possession. Cf. JUS POSSESSIONIS.

jus protegendi (jəs proh-tə-jen-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. A servitude granting the right to make the roof or tiling of one's house extend over a neighbor's house.

jus provocacionis (jəs prov-ə-kay-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The right possessed by every Roman citizen to appeal to the people in their Comitia, or later the emperor, from the infliction of summary punishment by a magistrate (coercitio). • Modern romanists disagree about the precise meaning of this term. — Also termed jus provocatio.

jus publicum (jəs pəb-li-kəm), n. [Latin "public law"] 1. Roman & civil law. Public law, consisting of constitutional law, administrative law, criminal law and procedure, and the law relating to sacred rites (jus sacrum). 2. The right, title, or dominion of public ownership; esp., the government's right to own real property in trust for the public benefit. See PUBLIC LAW. Cf. JUS PRIVATUM.

jus quaesitum (jəs kwi-si-təm or -zi-təm), n. [Latin] Civil law. 1. A right to ask or recover, as from one who is under an obligation. 2. An acquired right.

jus quaesitum tertio (jəs kwi-si-təm tər-shee-oh). [Law Latin] Scots law. A contractual right conferred on a third party. • A third-party right may be conferred on a specified individual or on an identifiable class of people.

"Where, in a contract between two parties, a stipulation is introduced in favour of a third, who is not a contracting party, the right thus created is said to be jus quaesitum tertio. Such a right, generally speaking, cannot be recalled by the contracting parties, and the third party, so far as he is concerned, may require exhibition and implement of the contract." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Laws of Scotland 622 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

jus quiritium (jəs kwi-ri-shee-əm). [Latin] Roman law. The ancient, primitive law of the Romans before the development of the jus praetorium and the jus gentium; the original jus civile.

jus recuperandi (jəs ri-k[y]oo-pə-ran-dī), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right of recovering, esp. lands.

jus regale (jəs ri-gay-lee). [Law Latin] Scots law. A royal right; a sovereign's right.

jus regendi (jəs ri-jen-dī), n. [Law Latin] A proprietary right vested in a sovereign.

jus relictae (jəs ri-lik-tee), n. [Law Latin "right of a widow"] Civil & Scots law. A widow's claim to her share of her deceased husband's movable estate. • If the widow has children, her share is one-third; if not, her share is one-half.

jus relicti (jəs ri-lik-tī), n. [Law Latin "right of a widower"] Civil & Scots law. A widower's right in his deceased wife's separate movable estate, historically two-thirds if there were surviving children, and otherwise one-half. Under the Married Women's Property Act of 1881, the amount became one-third in the case of surviving children, and otherwise one-half.

jus repraesentationis (jəs rep-ri-zen-tay-shee-oh-nis), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to represent or be represented by another.

jus rerum (jəs reer-əm), n. [Latin "law of things"] Civil law. The law regulating the rights and powers of persons over things, as how property is acquired, enjoyed, and transferred. See LAW OF THINGS. Cf. JUS PERSONARUM.

jus respondendi (jəs ree-spon-den-dī). [Latin "the right of responding"] Roman law. The authority conferred on certain jurists when delivering legal opinions. • Modern romanists disagree about the precise meaning of this term.

jus retentionis (jəs ri-ten-shee-oh-nis), n. [Latin] Civil law. The right to retain a thing until the delivery of something else that the person retaining the thing is entitled to.

jus retinendi et insistendi (jəs ret-i-nen-dī et in-sis-ten-dī). [Law Latin] Scots law. A right of retention and of insisting. • The phrase usu. referred to a seaman's right to recover wages both by taking a lien against the ship and by proceeding against the owner for payment.

jus retractus (jəs ri-trak-təs), n. [Latin "the right of retraction"] Civil law. 1. The right of certain relatives of one who has sold immovable property to repurchase it. 2. A debtor's right, upon sale of the debt by the creditor, to have a third person redeem it within a year for the price paid by the purchaser.

jus rusticorum praediorum. See rural servitude under SERVITUDE (2).

jus sacrum (jəs say-krəm). [Latin "sacred law"] Roman law. The body of law regulating matters of public worship, such as sacrifices and the appointment of priests. Cf. JUS NON SACRUM.

jus sanguinis (jəs sang-gwə-nis), n. [Latin "right of blood"] The rule that a child's citizenship is determined by the parents' citizenship. • Most nations follow this rule. Cf. JUS SOLI.

jus scriptum (jəs skrip-təm). [Latin] See written law under LAW.

jus sibi dicere (jəs sib-ɪ dɪ-sər-ee). [Latin] Hist. To declare the law for oneself; to take the law into one's own hand.

jus singulare (jəs sing-gyə-lair-ee), n. [Latin "individual law"] Roman & civil law. A law or right established for special purposes, as opposed to the common or public law or right. Cf. JUS COMMUNE (1).

jus soli (jəs soh-lɪ), n. [Latin "right of the soil"] The rule that a child's citizenship is determined by place of birth. • This is the U.S. rule, as affirmed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. Cf. JUS SANGUINIS.

jus spatianti (jəs spay-shee-an-dɪ), n. [Latin "right of walking about"] Civil law. The public's right-of-way over specific land for purposes of recreation and instruction.

jus stapulae (jəs stay-pyə-lee), n. [Law Latin "right of staple"] Civil law. A town's right or privilege of stopping imported merchandise and forcing it to be offered for sale in its own market. See STAPLE.

jus strictum (jəs strik-təm). [Latin "strict law"] Roman law. Law rigorously interpreted according to the letter. — Also termed strictum jus. See STRICTI JURIS. Cf. JUS AEQUUM.

jus suffragii (jəs sə-fray-jee-ɪ). [Latin] Roman law. The right of a citizen to vote. Cf. JUS HONORUM.

just, adj. (14c) Legally right; lawful; equitable.

justa causa (jəs-tə kaw-zə), n. [Latin] Civil law. A just cause; a lawful ground. See good cause under CAUSE (2).

justae nuptiae (jəs-tee nəp-shee-ee). [Latin "legal marriage"] Roman law. A marriage between two persons who had the legal capacity to wed. • Justae nuptiae was the only union that created the familial relationship known as patria potestas. — Also termed justum matrimonium. See patria potestas under POTESTAS. Cf. CONCUBINATUS.

"Justae nuptiae is such a marriage as satisfies all the rules of civil law. Any marriage between two persons who had the capacity of civil marriage with each other (conubium) was necessarily justae nuptiae, for if the union was defective in any other respect it was no marriage at all. On the other hand, if there was no conubium between the parties it might still be actually a marriage (nuptiae, nuptiae non justae), the wife being uxor non iusta, the children liberi non iusti. Such a marriage, in which one party at least would not be a civis, did not produce patria potestas over children . . ." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 63-64 (2d ed. 1953).

jus talionis. See LEX TALIONIS.

just-as-probable rule. Workers' compensation. A doctrine whereby a workers'-compensation claim will be denied if it is equally likely that the injury resulted from a non-work-related cause as from a work-related cause. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 1487-1492.]

just cause. See good cause under CAUSE (2).

just compensation. See COMPENSATION.

Just Compensation Clause. See TAKINGS CLAUSE.

just deserts (di-zɔrts). (16c) What one really deserves; esp., the punishment that a person deserves for having committed a crime. — Also termed deserts.

jus tertii (jəs tər-shee-ɪ), n. [Latin] 1. The right of a third party. [Cases: Action ⇨ 13; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 103.4.]

"[N]o defendant in an action of trespass can plead the jus tertii — the right of possession outstanding in some third person — as against the fact of possession in the plaintiff." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 46 (17th ed. 1977).

2. The doctrine that, particularly in constitutional law, courts do not decide what they do not need to decide.

"Jus tertii . . . says nothing about the nature of legal argument on the merits of a case once formed, but as a symbol for the separability of cases is a useful term of art. Translated, however, it reads 'right of a third person.' It may once have been associated with a presumption of common-law jurisprudence that one cannot be harmed by an action that achieves its effect through effects upon others, cannot be 'indirectly' harmed." Joseph Vining, Legal Identity 120 (1978).

justice. (17c) 1. The fair and proper administration of laws.

commutative justice (kə-myoo-tə-tiv or kəm-yə-tay-tiv). (1856) Justice concerned with the relations between persons and esp. with fairness in the exchange of goods and the fulfillment of contractual obligations.

condign justice. An outcome according to what the litigants deserve; esp., justice based on the kind and degree of punishment that is appropriate for a given offense.

distributive justice. (16c) Justice owed by a community to its members, including the fair allocation of common advantages and sharing of common burdens.

Jedburgh justice (jed-bər-ə). A brand of justice involving punishment (esp. execution) first and trial afterwards. • The term alludes to Jedburgh, a Scottish border town where in the 17th century raiders were said to have been hanged without the formality of a trial. Jedburgh justice differs from lynch law in that the former was administered by an established court (albeit after the fact). — Also termed Jeddart justice; Jedwood justice. Cf. LIDFORD LAW; LYNCH LAW.

justice in personam. See personal justice.

justice in rem. See social justice.

natural justice. Justice as defined in a moral, as opposed to a legal, sense. — Also termed justitia naturalis. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

"Although the judges have frequently asserted that a foreign judgment which contravenes the principles of natural justice cannot be enforced in England, it is extremely difficult to fix with precision the exact cases in which the contravention is sufficiently serious to justify a refusal of enforcement. Shadwell V.-C. once said that 'whenever it is manifest that justice has been disregarded, the court is bound to treat the decision as a matter of no value and no substance.' [Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim 279, 302 (1837).] But this goes too far. . . . The expression 'contrary to natural justice' has, however, figured so prominently in judicial statements that it is essential to fix, if possible, its exact scope. The only statement that can be made with any approach to accuracy is that in the present context, the expression is confined to something glaringly defective in the procedural rules of the foreign law. . . . In other words, what the courts are vigilant to watch is that the defendant has not been deprived of an opportunity to present his side of the case." G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 675 (6th ed. 1961).

personal justice. (16c) Justice between parties to a dispute, regardless of any larger principles that might be involved. — Also termed justice in personam; popular justice; social justice.

popular justice. (17c) Demotic justice, which is usu. considered less than fully fair and proper even though it satisfies prevailing public opinion in a particular case. Cf. social justice.

"Nothing is more treacherous than popular justice in many of its manifestations, subject as it is to passion, to fallacy, and to the inability to grasp general notions or to distinguish the essential from the inessential." Carleton K. Allen, Law in the Making 387 (7th ed. 1964).

positive justice. (17c) Justice as it is conceived, recognized, and incompletely expressed by the civil law or some other form of human law. Cf. POSITIVE LAW.

preventive justice. Justice intended to protect against probable future misbehavior. • Specific types of preventive justice include appointing a receiver or administrator, issuing a restraining order or injunction, and binding over to keep the peace.

social justice. (1902) 1. Justice that conforms to a moral principle, such as that all people are equal. 2. One or more equitable resolutions sought on behalf of individuals and communities who are disenfranchised, underrepresented, or otherwise excluded from meaningful participation in legal, economic, cultural, and social structures, with the ultimate goal of removing barriers to participation and effecting social change. — Also termed justice in rem. Cf. personal justice; CAUSE LAWYERING.

substantial justice. (17c) Justice fairly administered according to rules of substantive law, regardless of any procedural errors not affecting the litigant's substantive rights; a fair trial on the merits.

2. A judge, esp. of an appellate court or a court of last resort. — Abbr. J. (and, in plural, JJ). [Cases: Judges ⇨ 1.]

associate justice. (18c) An appellate-court justice other than the chief justice.

chief justice. (15c) The presiding justice of an appellate court, usu. the highest appellate court in a jurisdiction and esp. the U.S. Supreme Court. — Abbr. C.J.]

circuit justice. (18c) 1. A justice who sits on a circuit court. 2. A U.S. Supreme Court justice who has jurisdiction over one or more of the federal circuits, with power to issue injunctions, grant bail, or stay execution in those circuits. [Cases: Federal Courts ⇨ 446.]

circuit-riding justice. Hist. A U.S. Supreme Court justice who, under the Judiciary Act of 1789, was required to travel within a circuit to preside over trials. • In each of three circuits that then existed, two justices sat with one district judge. See CIRCUIT-RIDING.

3. Hist. Judicial cognizance of causes or offenses; jurisdiction.

high justice. Hist. Jurisdiction over crimes of every kind, including high crimes.

low justice. Hist. Jurisdiction over petty offenses.

justice-broker. Archaic. A judge who sells judicial decisions.

justice court. See COURT.

justice ejection. See EJECTION.

justice in eyre (air). Hist. One of the itinerant judges who, in medieval times, investigated allegations of wrongdoing, tried cases, and levied fines. — Also termed justicia errante; justiciar in itinere. See EYRE.

justicement. Archaic. 1. The administration of justice. 2. (pl.) All things relating to justice.

justice of the peace. (15c) A local judicial officer having jurisdiction over minor criminal offenses and minor civil disputes, and authority to perform routine civil functions (such as administering oaths and performing marriage ceremonies). — Abbr. J.P. Cf. MAGISTRATE (3). [Cases: Justices of the Peace ⇨ 1, 31.]

justice-of-the-peace court. See justice court under COURT.

justice of the quorum. 1. A judge on a panel designated to hear appeals. • In Massachusetts, the panel is sometimes called a quorum. 2. Hist. A county justice or justice of the peace, designated by the governor in a commission of peace, who had to be present or else a court could not sit. 3. Hist. A distinction conferred on a justice of the peace by directing — in the commission authorizing the holding of quarter sessions — that from among those holding court must be two or more specially so named. • The distinction was conferred on some, or occasionally all, of the justices of the peace of a county in England.

justicer, n. Archaic. One who administers justice; a judge.

justiceship. 1. The office or authority of a justice. 2. The period of a justice's incumbency.

justice's warrant. See peace warrant under WARRANT (1).

justiciability (jə-stish-ee-ə-bil-ə-tee or jə-stish-ə-bil-ə-tee), n. (15c) The quality or state of being appropriate or suitable for adjudication by a court. See MOOTNESS DOCTRINE; RIPENESS. Cf. STANDING. [Cases: Action ⇨ 6; Federal Courts ⇨ 12.1.]

"Concepts of justiciability have been developed to identify appropriate occasions for judicial action. . . . The central concepts often are elaborated into more specific categories of justiciability — advisory opinions, feigned and collusive cases, standing, ripeness, mootness, political questions, and administrative questions." 13 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 3529, at 278-79 (2d ed. 1984).

justiciable (jə-stish-ee-ə-bəl or jəs-tish-ə-bəl), adj. (Of a case or dispute) properly brought before a court of justice; capable of being disposed of judicially . [Cases: Action ⇨ 6; Federal Courts ⇨ 12.1.]

justicia errante. See JUSTICE IN EYRE.

justiciar (jə-stish-ee-ər), n. 1. Hist. A royal judicial officer in medieval England; esp., a justice presiding over a superior court. 2. JUSTICIARY (2). — Also spelled justicier.

justiciarii itinerantes (jəs-tish-ee-air-ee-1 1-tin-ə-ran-teez), n. [Latin "itinerant justices"] Justices in eyre. See JUSTICE IN EYRE.

justiciarii residentes (jəs-tish-ee-air-ee-1 rez-i-den-teez), n. [Latin "resident justices"] Hist. Justices who usu. held court in Westminster, as opposed to traveling with the eyre. Cf. EYRE.

justiciar in itinere. See JUSTICE IN EYRE.

justiciary (jə-stish-ee-er-ee), adj. Of or relating to the administration of justice; pertaining to the law. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

justiciary (jə-stish-ee-er-ee), n. 1. A justice or judge. 2. Hist. The chief administrator of both government and justice. • From the time of the Norman Conquest in 1066 until the reign of Henry III (1216–1272), the justiciary presided in the King's Court and in the Exchequer, supervising all governmental departments and serving as regent in the king's absence. These functions were later divided among several officials such as the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justice, and the Lord High Treasurer. — Also termed justiciar; chief justiciar; capitulis justiciarius. 3. Scots law. The administration of justice, esp. of criminal law.

justicier. See JUSTICIAR.

justicies (jə-stish-ee-eez). Hist. A writ empowering the sheriff to allow certain debt cases in a county court. • The writ was so called because of the significant word in the writ's opening clause, which stated in Latin, "We command you that you do justice to [a person named]."

justicing room. Hist. A room in which cases are heard and justice is administered; esp., such a room in the house of a justice of the peace.

justifiable, adj. Capable of being legally or morally justified; excusable; defensible.

justifiable homicide. See HOMICIDE.

justifiable war. See BELLUM JUSTUM.

justification, n. (14c) 1. A lawful or sufficient reason for one's acts or omissions; any fact that prevents an act from being wrongful. 2. A showing, in court, of a sufficient reason why a defendant acted in a way that, in the absence of the reason, would constitute the offense with which the defendant is charged. • Under the Model

Penal Code, the defendant must show that the harm or evil that resulted from taking the action was less than the harm or evil that the law creating the offense charged was seeking to prevent. Model Penal Code § 3.02. — Also termed justification defense; necessity defense. — See lesser-evils defense under DEFENSE (1). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 38.] 3. A surety's proof of having enough money or credit to provide security for the party for whom it is required. — justify, vb. — justificatory (jəs-ti-fi-kə-tor-ee), adj.

"A little bit of history: the term 'justification' was formerly used for cases where the aim of the law was not frustrated, while 'excuse' was used for cases where it was not thought proper to punish. Killing a dangerous criminal who had tried to avoid arrest was justified, since the law (if one may personify) wished this to happen, whereas killing in self-defense was merely excused. The distinction was important because justification was a defence to the criminal charge while an excuse was not, being merely the occasion for a royal pardon. By the end of the middle ages (it is difficult to assign a fixed date) even excuses were recognised by the courts, since when there has been no reason to distinguish between justification and excuse." Glanville Williams, Textbook of Criminal Law 39 (1978).

defensive-force justification. A justification defense available when an aggressor has threatened harm to the particular interest that is the subject of the defense — usu. to the actor (self-defense), to other persons (defense of others), or to property (defense of property). [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 67, 68; Homicide ⇨ 757, 758, 766–809.]

imperfect justification. (1853) A reason or cause that is insufficient to completely justify a defendant's behavior but that can be used to mitigate criminal punishment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⇨ 72.]

judicial-authority justification. A justification defense available when an actor has engaged in conduct constituting an offense in order to comply with a court order. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 64; Homicide ⇨ 756.]

public-authority justification. A justification defense available when an actor has been specifically authorized to engage in the conduct constituting an offense in order to protect or further a public interest. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 64; Homicide ⇨ 752–756.]

justification defense. Criminal & tort law. A defense that arises when the defendant has acted in a way that the law does not seek to prevent. • Traditionally, the following defenses were justifications: consent, self-defense, defense of others, defense of property, necessity (choice of evils), the use of force to make an arrest, and the use of force by public authority. — Sometimes shortened to justification. Cf. EXCUSE (2). [Cases: Action ⇨ 12; Criminal Law ⇨ 38; Torts ⇨ 121.]

justificator (jəs-tə-fi-kay-tər). Hist. 1. A compurgator; a person who testifies under oath in defense of an accused person. 2. A juror.

Justinian Code (jəs-tin-ee-ən). Roman law. A collection of imperial constitutions drawn up by a commission of ten persons appointed by the Roman emperor Justinian, and published in A.D. 529. • Ten jurists, headed by Tribonian, carried out the project beginning in February A.D. 528 and ending in April 529. It replaced all prior imperial law, but was in force only until A.D. 534, when it was supplanted by a revision, the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis. The precise contents of the first work are unknown. But the second work, containing the 12 books of the revised code, includes the imperial constitutions of the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian Codes, together with later legislation, revised and harmonized into one systematic whole. It deals with ecclesiastical law, criminal law, administrative law, and private law. In modern writings, the A.D. 534 version is the work referred to as the Justinian Code. — Also termed Justinianean Code (jəs-tin-ee-ən-ee-ən); Code of Justinian; Codex Justinianus (kəh-deks-jəs-tin-ee-ay-nəs); Codex Vetus ("Old Code"); Codex Justinianus Repetitae Praelectionis.

"By the time when the Digest and Institutes had been completed it was obvious that the Codex, published little more than four years earlier, was incomplete, since in the interval Justinian . . . had promulgated other new constitutions. Tribonian, therefore, was appointed to revise the Code, so as to bring it fully up to date, and at the end of the year A.D. 534 this new Code, known as the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis, was promulgated, and is the only Code which survives to the present day. Justinian seem to have laboured under the erroneous impression that the system he had framed would be adequate for all time. But as there is nothing static about law, further legislative enactments, termed Novellae Constitutiones, were issued during his reign. . . . In modern times Justinian's various compilations came to be called collectively the Corpus Juris Civilis: the Corpus being regarded as a single work, made up of the Institutes, the Digest, the Codex Repetitae Praelectionis, and the Novels." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 44 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

Justinianist (jə-stin-ee-ə-nist), n. 1. One who is knowledgeable about the Institutes of Justinian. 2. One who has been trained in civil law.

Justinian's Institutes. See INSTITUTE.

justitia (jəs-tish-ee-ə), n. [Latin] Justice.

justitia denegata (jəs-tish-ee-ə dee-nə-gay-tə). See DENIAL OF JUSTICE.

justitia naturalis (jəs-tish-ee-ə nach-ə-ray-lis). See natural justice under JUSTICE (1).

justitium (jəs-tish-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Civil law. A suspension or intermission of the administration of justice in the courts, as for vacation time.

justo tempore (jəs-toh tem-pə-ree). [Latin "at the right time"] Hist. In due time.

jus tripartitum (jəs tri-pər-ti-təm). [Latin "law in three parts"] Roman law. The law of wills in the time of Justinian, deriving from the praetorian edicts, from the civil law, and from the imperial constitutions. See testamentum tripartitum under TESTAMENTUM.

jus trium liberorum (jəs tri-əm lib-ə-ror-əm). [Latin] See JUS LIBERORUM.

just title. See TITLE (2).

justum matrimonium. See JUSTAE NUPTIAE.

just value. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

just war. 1. BELLUM JUSTUM. 2. See JUST-WAR DOCTRINE.

just-war doctrine. Int'l law. The principle that a war should have a morally and legally sufficient cause, and must be conducted with restraint. • Precisely what is morally or legally sufficient depends on the norms of a time and place. Over the centuries the doctrine has been invoked to justify wars waged in self-defense, to avenge injuries and punish wrongs, and over religious differences. Restraint means that the least amount of force possible under the circumstances should be used and only when necessary. — Also termed just-war theory. See BELLUM JUSTUM.

jus urbanorum praediorum. See urban servitude (2) under SERVITUDE (2).

jus utendi (jəs yoo-ten-dī), n. [Latin "right of using"] Roman & civil law. The right to use another's property without consuming it or destroying its substance. See USUFRUCT. Cf. JUS ABUTENDI.

jus vindicandi (jəs vin-di-kan-dī). Roman law. An owner's right to recover lost possession even from a bona fide possessor who has given value. • This right, which generally does not exist under modern law, had many exceptions. See R.W. Lee, An Introduction to Roman-Dutch Law 433 (4th ed. 1946).

jus vitae necisque (jəs vi-tee ni-sis-kwee). [Latin "right of life and death"] Roman law. The power held by the head of the household over persons under his paternal power and over his slaves. • This right was greatly diminished under later Roman law. See patria potestas under POTESTAS.

juvenile (joo-və-nəl or -nīl), n. (18c) A person who has not reached the age (usu. 18) at which one should be treated as an adult by the criminal-justice system; MINOR. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 68.5.] — juvenile, adj. — juvenility (joo-və-nīl-ə-tee), n.

certified juvenile. (1971) A juvenile who has been certified to be tried as an adult.

juvenile court. See COURT.

juvenile-court judge. See JUDGE.

juvenile delinquency. (1816) Antisocial behavior by a minor; esp., behavior that would be criminally punishable if the actor were an adult, but instead is usu. punished by special laws pertaining only to minors. Cf. INCORRIGIBILITY. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 153.]

"Juvenile delinquency," when employed as a technical term rather than merely a descriptive phrase, is entirely a legislative product . . . Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 940 (3d ed. 1982).

Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Act. A federal statute whose purpose is (1) to help states and local communities provide preventive services to youths who are in danger of becoming delinquent, (2) to help in training personnel employed in or preparing for employment in occupations that involve the provision of those services, and (3) to give technical assistance in this field. 42 USCA §§ 3801 et seq.

juvenile delinquent. (1816) A minor who is guilty of criminal behavior, usu. punishable by special laws not pertaining to adults. — Sometimes shortened to delinquent. — Also termed juvenile offender; youthful offender; delinquent minor. See OFFENDER. Cf. delinquent child under CHILD. [Cases: Infants ↻153.]

Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act.

A federal statute that provides funding, assistance, training, and support to state-operated juvenile-justice programs, initiatives, and court systems. 42 USCA §§ 5601–5785.

juvenile-justice system. The collective institutions through which a youthful offender passes until any charges have been disposed of or the assessed punishment has been concluded. • The system comprises juvenile courts (judges and lawyers), law enforcement (police), and corrections (probation officers and social workers).

juvenile offender. See JUVENILE DELINQUENT.

keelhaul (keel-hawl), vb. (17c) 1. Hist. To drag (a person) through the water under the bottom of a ship as punishment or torture. 2. To rebuke or reprimand harshly.

Keeling Schedule. English law. A device that shows how an existing statute will read if a proposed amendment is adopted. • A Keeling Schedule is usu. included as an appendix to the proposed amendment. The schedule is named for E.H. Keeling, a member of Parliament who began promoting the use of schedules in 1938 as a way to avoid amending legislation by reference. It is rarely used today.

keeper. (15c) One who has the care, custody, or management of something and who usu. is legally responsible for it  .

Keeper of the Briefs. See CUSTOS BREVIVM.

Keeper of the Broad Seal. See KEEPER OF THE GREAT SEAL.

Keeper of the Great Seal. In England and Scotland, an officer who has custody of the Great Seal and who authenticates state documents of the highest importance. • In England, the duties of the Keeper of the Great Seal are now discharged by the Lord Chancellor. — Also termed Lord Keeper of the Great Seal; Lord Keeper; Keeper of the Broad Seal; Custos Sigilli.

Keeper of the Hanaper. Hist. The head of the receiving and accounting department in Chancery. • The Hanaper received fees collected on charters and letters granted under the Great Seal and fines for Chancery writs, paid Chancery staff wages, purchased office supplies, and accounted for the Chancery's revenues and expenses.

Keeper of the King's Conscience. See LORD CHANCELLOR.

Keeper of the Privy Seal (priv-ee). 1. LORD PRIVY SEAL. 2. In Scotland and Cornwall, an officer similar to the English Lord Privy Seal.

Keeper of the Rolls. See CUSTOS ROTULORUM.

Kellogg-Briand Pact. Int'l law. A 1928 treaty under which the United States, France, and (by 1933) 63 other nations purported to outlaw war and pledged to settle future differences through diplomacy. • Among the signatories were Germany, Japan, and Italy — nations whose acts of aggression lead to World War II. 46 Stat. 2343, T.S. No. 796. — Also termed Pact of Paris.

kenning to a terce. Hist. Scots law. The sheriff's determination of which tracts or parts of a decedent's land belong to a widow; esp., a sheriff's assignment of dower.

Keogh plan (kee-oh). (1952) A tax-deferred retirement program developed for the self-employed. • This plan is also known as an H.R. 10 plan, after the House of Representatives bill that established the plan. — Also termed self-employed retirement plan. Cf. INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 4381.]

Ker-Frisbie rule. (1974) The principle that the government's power to try a criminal defendant is not impaired by the defendant's having been brought back illegally to the United States from a foreign country. Ker v. Illinois, 119 U.S. 436, 7 S.Ct. 225 (1886); Frisbie v. Collins, 342 U.S. 519, 72 S.Ct. 509 (1952).

Ketubah (ke-too-vah), n. Jewish law. A prenuptial agreement, signed by at least two independent witnesses, in which a husband promises to support his wife and to pay her a certain sum of money if the couple divorces. • If the couple is still married when the husband dies, the sum promised upon divorce becomes the primary debt to be paid out of the husband's estate. The terms of a Ketubah are often enforceable in secular courts under general contract-law principles.

keyage (kee-əj). See QUAYAGE.

KeyCite, vb. (1997) To determine the subsequent history of (a case, statute, etc.) by using the online citator of the same name to establish that the point being researched is still good law. — KeyCiting, n.

key-employee life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

key encryption. A software-cryptography system that generates and employs a secure key pair, one public key and one private key, to verify a digital signature and decipher a secure, coded document. • The public key is known to all possible receivers of a message. The private key is known only to the message's sender. Key encryption transforms the message's characters into an indecipherable "hash." A person who has the signer's public key can decipher the message and detect whether it has been altered and whether it was transmitted using the sender's private key. It does not necessarily identify the sender; identity is verified using a digital certificate. — Also termed public-key encryption. — Abbr. PKE. See DIGITAL CERTIFICATE; HASH.

key-executive insurance. See key-employee insurance under INSURANCE.

key man. See KEY PERSON.

key-man insurance. See key-employee life insurance under LIFE INSURANCE.

key money. (1948) 1. Payment (as rent or security) required from a new tenant in exchange for a key to the leased property. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻ 88(2).] 2. Payment made (usu. secretly) by a prospective tenant to a landlord or current tenant to increase the chance of obtaining a lease in an area where there is a housing shortage. • Key money in the first sense is a legal transaction; key money in the second sense is usu. an illegal bribe that violates housing laws.

key-number system. (1909) A legal-research indexing system developed by West Publishing Company (now the West Group) to catalogue American caselaw with headnotes. • In this system, a number designates a point of law, allowing a researcher to find all reported cases addressing a particular point by referring to its number.

key person. An important officer or employee; a person primarily responsible for a business's success. — Also termed key man.

key-person insurance. See key-employee insurance under INSURANCE.

kickback, n. (1920) A return of a portion of a monetary sum received, esp. as a result of coercion or a secret agreement <the contractor paid the city official a 5% kickback on the government contract>. — Also termed payoff. Cf. BRIBERY.

kicker. 1. An extra charge or penalty, esp. a charge added to a loan in addition to interest. 2. An equity participation that a lender seeks as a condition for lending money, so that the lender may participate in rentals, profits, or extra interest.

kickout clause. (1983) A contractual provision allowing a party to end or modify the contract if a specified event occurs <under the kickout clause, the company could refuse to sell the land if it were unable to complete its acquisition of the new headquarters>.

kiddie tax. See TAX.

kidnap, vb. (17c) To seize and take away (a person) by force or fraud, often with a demand for ransom.

kidnapping. (17c) 1. At common law, the crime of forcibly abducting a person from his or her own country and sending the person to another. • This offense amounted to false imprisonment aggravated by moving the victim to another country. 2. The crime of seizing and taking away a person by force or fraud. — Also termed simple kidnapping; (loosely) abduction; (archaically) manstealing. See ABDUCTION. [Cases: Kidnapping ↻ 14.]

"At early common law, kidnapping required a forcible asportation of the victim to another country. Under modern statutes, the asportation need not be this extensive." Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 64 (2d ed. 1987).

aggravated kidnapping. (1943) Kidnapping accompanied by some aggravating factor (such as a demand for ransom or injury of the victim).

child-kidnapping. (1978) The kidnapping of a minor, often without the element of force or fraud (as when someone walks off with another's baby). — Also termed child-stealing; baby-snatching; childnapping.

kidnapping by cesarean. The kidnapping of a newborn baby by a person who causes the unlawful and forcible delivery of the baby by cesarean section without the mother's consent. • The kidnapper is usu. a woman of childbearing age who has lost a baby or is unable to bear one. — Also termed newborn kidnapping by cesarean section.

kidnapping for ransom. (1909) The offense of unlawfully seizing a person and then confining the person, usu. in a secret place, while attempting to extort ransom. • This grave crime is sometimes made a capital offense. In addition to the abductor, a person who acts as a go-between to collect the ransom is generally considered guilty of the crime. [Cases: Kidnapping ↻ 19.]

newborn-kidnapping by cesarean section. See kidnapping by cesarean.

parental kidnapping. (1984) The kidnapping of a child by one parent in violation of the other parent's custody or visitation rights. See PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT.

simple kidnapping. (1943) Kidnapping not accompanied by an aggravating factor.

kidnapping by cesarean. See KIDNAPPING.

kill, vb. (14c) To end life; to cause physical death. • The word is also used figuratively in putting an end to something <opponents were able to kill the proposed amendment>.

killer amendment. See AMENDMENT (3).

killing by misadventure. See ACCIDENTAL KILLING.

killing with malice. See MALICIOUS KILLING.

kin, n. (bef. 12c) 1. One's relatives; family. — Also termed kindred. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻ 20–43; Wills ↻ 508.] 2. A relative by blood, marriage, or adoption, though usu. by blood only; a kinsman or kinswoman. See NEXT OF KIN.

kinbote. See manbote under BOTE (2).

kind arbitrage. See ARBITRAGE.

kindlie (kind-lee). Scots law. A tenant's right to a lease's renewal.

kindred. 1. See KIN. 2. See KINSHIP.

king. 1. A man who possesses, in his own right, the sovereignty and royal power in a monarchy. Cf. QUEEN (1). 2. (cap.) English law. The British government; the Crown. See CROWN.

"In modern times it has become usual to speak of the Crown rather than of the King, when we refer to the King in his public capacity as a body politic. We speak of the property of the Crown, when we mean the property which the King holds in right of his Crown. So we speak of the debts due by the Crown, of legal proceedings by and against the Crown, and so on. The usage is one of great convenience, because it avoids a difficulty which is inherent in all speech and thought concerning corporations sole, the difficulty, namely, of distinguishing adequately between the body politic and the human being by whom it is represented and whose name it bears." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 341-42 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

King's advocate. See LORD ADVOCATE.

King's Bench. Historically, the highest common-law court in England, presided over by the reigning monarch. • When a queen begins to reign, the name automatically changes to Queen's Bench. In 1873, during Queen Victoria's reign, the court's jurisdiction was transferred to the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice. — Abbr. K.B. — Also termed Court of King's Bench; Coram Rege Court. Cf. QUEEN'S BENCH; QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

"The court of King's Bench is the highest court of ordinary justice in criminal cases within the realm, and paramount to the authority of justices of gaol delivery, and commissions of oyer and terminer. It has jurisdiction over all criminal causes, from high treason down to the most trivial misdemeanor or breach of the peace." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 156 (2d ed. 1826).

King's Chambers. In the United Kingdom, waters lying within an imaginary line drawn from headland to headland around the coast of Great Britain.

King's Counsel. In the United Kingdom, Canada, and territories that have retained the rank, an elite, senior-level barrister or advocate. • Originally, a King's Counsel was appointed to serve as counsel to the reigning monarch. — Also termed senior counsel. — Abbr. K.C. Cf. QUEEN'S COUNSEL.

King's Court. See CURIA REGIS.

King's evidence. See Queen's evidence under EVIDENCE.

King's Great Sessions in Wales. See COURT OF GREAT SESSIONS IN WALES.

King's peace. Hist. A royal subject's right to be protected from crime (to "have peace") in certain areas subject to the king's immediate control, such as the king's palace or highway. • A breach of the peace in one of these areas subjected the offender to punishment in the King's Court. Over time, the area subject to the King's peace grew, which in turn increased the jurisdiction of the royal courts. — Also written King's Peace. Cf. AGAINST THE PEACE AND DIGNITY OF THE STATE.

"A breach of the King's Peace was at one time the most comprehensive of all offences against the Crown; it indeed included, and still includes, all the more serious crimes. At one time, in fact, every indictment charged the accused with an offence 'against the peace of our Sovereign Lord the King'; and, though this form is no longer employed, that is mainly because the imperative duty of not disturbing the King's Peace has by now evolved into an elaborate system of Criminal Law." Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 134 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

King's proctor. See QUEEN'S PROCTOR.

King's silver. Hist. Money paid in the Court of Common Pleas for a license to levy a feudal fine; an amount due on granting a congé d'accorder in levying a fine of lands. • It amounted to three-twentieths of the supposed annual value of the land, or ten shillings for every five marks of land. — Also termed post-fine. See CONGÉ D'ACCORDER; FINE (1).

kinship. Relationship by blood, marriage, or adoption. — Also termed kindred.

kinsman. See RELATIVE.

kintal. See QUINTAL.

kissing the Book. Hist. The practice of touching one's lips to a copy of the Bible (esp. the New Testament) after taking an oath in court. • This practice — formerly used in England — was replaced by the practice of placing one's hand on the Bible while swearing.

kitchen cabinet. See CABINET.

kiting. 1. CHECK-KITING. 2. Slang. Commercial law. Raising money on credit, often by using accommodation paper.

Klaxon doctrine (klak-sən). (1966) Conflict of laws. The principle that a federal court exercising diversity jurisdiction must apply the choice-of-law rules of the state where the court sits. • In Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., the Supreme Court extended the rule of Erie v. Tompkins to choice-of-law issues. 313 U.S. 487, 61 S.Ct. 1020 (1941). — Also termed Erie/Klaxon doctrine. See ERIE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts 409.1.] kleptomania (klep-tə-may-nee-ə), n. (1830) A compulsive urge to steal, esp. without economic motive. — kleptomaniac, n. & adj.

knight. (bef. 12c) 1. Hist. In the Middle Ages, a person of noble birth who, having been trained in arms and chivalry, was bound to follow an earl, baron, or other superior lord into battle. 2. In modern Britain, a man upon whom the monarch has bestowed an honorary dignity (kighthood) as a reward for personal merit of some kind. • The status of kighthood no longer relates to birth or possessions and does not involve military service.

knight bachelor. See BACHELOR (3).

knight of the post. Hist. A hired perjurer.

knight-service. Hist. A type of lay tenure in which a knight held land of another person or the Crown in exchange for a pledge of military service. — Also termed knight's service; (Scots law) ward holding. Cf. BASE SERVICE; SOCAGE; VILLEINAGE.

"By far the greater part of England is held of the king by knight's service (per servitium militare): it is comparatively rare for the king's tenants in chief to hold by any of the other tenures. In order to understand this tenure we must form the conception of a unit of military service. That unit seems to be the service of one knight or fully armed horseman (servitium unius militis) to be done to the king in his army for forty days in the year, if it be called for." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 254 (2d ed. 1898).

knight's fee. Hist. The amount of land that gave rise to the obligation of knight-service. • The amount varied from less than a hide to more than six hides. See HIDE.

knight's service. See KNIGHT-SERVICE.

knock-and-announce rule. (1969) Criminal procedure. The requirement that the police knock at the door and announce their identity, authority, and purpose before entering a residence to execute an arrest or search warrant. — Also termed knock-and-notice rule. Cf. no-knock search warrant under SEARCH WARRANT; no-knock search under SEARCH. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ↻54, 143.1.]

knock-for-knock agreement. (1949) An arrangement between insurers whereby each will pay the claim of its insured without claiming against the other party's insurance.

knock in, vb. To rap on the courtroom door to announce the entry of (one or more judges) <the law clerk, acting as bailiff, knocked in the judges>.

knock off, vb. (1879) 1. To make an unauthorized copy of (another's product), usu. for sale at a substantially lower price than the original <the infringer knocked off popular dress designs>. 2. Slang. To murder <the gang leader was knocked off by one of his lieutenants>. 3. Slang. To rob or burglarize <the thieves knocked off the jewelry store in broad daylight>.

knockoff, n. (1966) Intellectual property. An unauthorized counterfeit and usu. inferior copy of another's product, esp. one protected by patent, trademark, trade dress, or copyright, usu. passed off at a substantially lower price than the original.

knock-out auction. See AUCTION.

know all men by these presents. (16c) Take note. • This archaic form of address — a loan translation of the Latin noverint universi per praesentes — was traditionally used to begin certain legal documents such as bonds and powers of attorney, but in modern drafting style the phrase is generally considered deadwood. See NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES. Cf. PATEAT UNIVERSIS PER PRAESENTES.

know-how. (1838) The information, practical knowledge, techniques, and skill required to achieve some practical end, esp. in industry or technology. • Know-how is considered intangible property in which rights may be bought and sold. See TRADE SECRET.

knowing, adj. (14c) 1. Having or showing awareness or understanding; well-informed . 2. Deliberate; conscious . — knowingly, adv.

knowing consent. See informed consent under CONSENT (1).

knowledge. (14c) 1. An awareness or understanding of a fact or circumstance; a state of mind in which a person has no substantial doubt about the existence of a fact. Cf. INTENT (1); NOTICE (1), (2); SCIENTER.

"It is necessary . . . to distinguish between producing a result intentionally and producing it knowingly. Intention and knowledge commonly go together, for he who intends a result usually knows that it will follow, and he who knows the consequences of his act usually intends them. But there may be intention without knowledge, the consequence being desired but not foreknown as certain or even probable. Conversely, there may be knowledge without intention, the consequence being foreknown as the inevitable concomitant of that which is desired, but being itself an object of repugnance rather than desire, and therefore not intended. When King David ordered Uriah the Hittite to be set in the forefront of the hottest battle, he intended the death of Uriah only, yet he knew for a certainty that many others of his men would fall at the same time and place." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 380-81 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"'Knowingly' or 'knowledge' has a broad sweep when used in connection with the element of a crime, and an untrue representation has been 'knowingly' made if by one who knows it is untrue, believes it is untrue or is quite aware that he has not the slightest notion whether it is true or not." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 379 (3d ed. 1982).

"[B]ecause there are several areas of the criminal law in which there may be good reason for distinguishing between one's objectives and [one's] knowledge, the modern approach is to define separately the mental states of knowledge and intent . . . This is the approach taken in the Model Penal Code [§ 2.02(2)(a) & (b)]." Wayne R. LaFare & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law 218 (2d ed. 1986).

actual knowledge. (16c) 1. Direct and clear knowledge, as distinguished from constructive knowledge <the employer, having witnessed the accident, had actual knowledge of the worker's injury>. — Also termed express actual knowledge. 2. Knowledge of information that would lead a reasonable person to inquire further <under the discovery rule, the limitations period begins to run once the plaintiff has actual knowledge of the injury>. — Also termed (in sense 2) implied actual knowledge.

"The third issue in section 523(a)(3) is the meaning of 'notice or actual knowledge.' Under the Uniform Commercial Code knowledge means actually knowing something; notice means having received information from which one could infer the existence of the relevant fact. What the adjective 'actual' adds to the idea of 'knowledge' is unclear." David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-27, at 516 (1993).

common knowledge. See COMMON KNOWLEDGE.

constructive knowledge. (18c) Knowledge that one using reasonable care or diligence should have, and therefore that is attributed by law to a given person <the court held that the partners had constructive knowledge of the partnership agreement even though none of them had read it>.

express actual knowledge. See actual knowledge (1).

firsthand knowledge. See personal knowledge.

implied actual knowledge. See actual knowledge (2).

imputed knowledge. (18c) Knowledge attributed to a given person, esp. because of the person's legal responsibility for another's conduct <the principal's imputed knowledge of its agent's dealings>.

personal knowledge. (17c) Knowledge gained through firsthand observation or experience, as distinguished from a belief based on what someone else has said. • Rule 602 of the Federal Rules of Evidence requires lay witnesses to have personal knowledge of the matters they testify about. An affidavit must also be based on personal knowledge, unless the affiant makes it clear that a statement relies on "information and belief." — Also termed firsthand knowledge. [Cases: Witnesses ⇨ 37(2).]

reckless knowledge. (1911) A person's awareness that a prohibited circumstance may exist, regardless of which the person accepts the risk and goes on to act.

scientific knowledge. (17c) Evidence. Knowledge that is grounded on scientific methods that have been supported by adequate validation. • Four primary factors are used to determine whether evidence amounts to scientific knowledge: (1) whether it has been tested;

(2) whether it has been subjected to peer review and publication; (3) the known or potential rate of error; and (4) the degree of acceptance within the scientific community. See DAUBERT TEST; SCIENTIFIC METHOD. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 486; Evidence ⇨ 555.]

superior knowledge. (17c) Knowledge greater than that of another person, esp. so as to adversely affect that person <in its fraud claim, the subcontractor alleged that the general contractor had superior knowledge of the equipment shortage>. [Cases: Fraud ⇨ 7, 17, 23; Negligence ⇨ 1088, 1286(2).]

2. Archaic. CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.

knowledge-of-falsity exclusion. See EXCLUSION (3).

known creditor. See CREDITOR.

known heir. See HEIR.

known-loss doctrine. Insurance. A principle denying insurance coverage when the insured knows before the policy takes effect that a specific loss has already happened or is substantially certain to happen. — Also termed known-risk doctrine. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2101, 2261.]

koop (kə-wəp), n. [Dutch] Dutch law. Purchase; bargain.

koopbrief (kə-wəp-breef). [Dutch] Dutch law. A deed of sale.

L

L. abbr. 1. LAW (5). 2. LORD (1). 3. LOCUS. 4. LATIN.

L. A measure of the money supply, including M3 items plus banker's acceptances, T-bills, and similar long-term investments. See M3.

label, n. (17c) 1. Trademarks. An informative display of written or graphic matter, such as a logo, title, or similar marking, affixed to goods or services to identify their source. • A label may be put on the packaging or container of a manufactured product, or on the packaging or surface of a natural substance. [Cases: Trademarks ⇨ 1057(1).] 2. Any writing (such as a codicil) attached to a larger writing. 3. A narrow slip of paper or parchment attached to a deed or writ in order to hold a seal.

label-and-significant-characteristics test. Securities. The rule that an instrument will be governed by the securities laws if it is labeled a stock and has the significant characteristics typically associated with shares of stock.

labeling. Under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, any label or other written, printed, or graphic matter that is on a product or its container, or that accompanies the product. • To come within the Act, the labeling does not need to accompany the product. It may be sent before or after delivery of the product, as long as delivery of the product and the written material are part of the same distribution program. [Cases: Food ⇨ 15; Health ⇨ 311.] label license. See LICENSE.

labes realis quae rei inhaeret (lay-beez ree-ay-lis kwee ree-i in-heer-it). [Latin] Scots law. A real defect that attaches to the thing. Cf. VITIUM REALE.

"Theft, also, constitutes a labes realis in the title of any one holding the subject stolen, no matter how honestly he may have acquired it; and on this defect, which attaches to it until it return to his possession, the true owner may vindicate his right, and recover his subject wherever it can be found." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 312 (4th ed. 1894).

labina (lə-bī-nə), n. Archaic. Land covered by water; swampland.

la bomba (lə bom-bə). (sometimes cap.) An incendiary device consisting of a plastic bag filled with fuel and placed inside a paper bag stuffed with tissue and rigged with a fuse. • A person who uses such a device to start a fire violates the federal arson statute. See 18 USCA § 844(j). [Cases: Explosives ⇨ 4.]

labor, n. 1. Work of any type, including mental exertion <the fruits of one's labor>. • The term usu. refers to work for wages as opposed to profits.

child labor. See CHILD LABOR.

spousal labor. See SPOUSAL LABOR.

2. Workers considered as an economic unit or a political element . 3. A Spanish land measure equal to 177¹/₇ acres. • This measure has been used in Mexico and was once used in Texas.

labor, vb. (14c) 1. To work, esp. with great exertion <David labored long and hard to finish the brief on time>. 2. Archaic. To tamper with or improperly attempt to influence (a jury). • This sense derives from the idea that the tamperer "endeavors" to influence the jury's verdict. See EMBRACERY. — laborer, n.

labor agreement. See COLLECTIVE-BARGAINING AGREEMENT.

laborarii (lay-bə-rair-ee-is), n. [Latin "about laborers"] Hist. An ancient writ against a person who had no other means of support but refused to work throughout the year.

laboratory conditions. Labor law. The ideal conditions for a union election, in which the employees may exercise free choice without interference from the employer, the union, or anyone else. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 1193.]

labor contract. See COLLECTIVE-BARGAINING AGREEMENT.

labor-desert model. The view that the inventive process results from the inventor's labor to create something of added value to society, and that this added value justifies some social reward ("just deserts") to the inventor. — Also termed value-added model. Cf. EUREKA MODEL; LABOR MODEL.

labor dispute. (1907) A controversy between an employer and its employees concerning the terms or conditions of employment, or concerning the association or representation of those who negotiate or seek to negotiate the terms or conditions of employment. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 1340.]

Labor Disputes Act. See NORRIS-LAGUARDIA ACT.

laborer. (14c) 1. A person who makes a living by physical labor. 2. WORKER.

laborer's lien. See mechanic's lien under LIEN.

laboring a jury. See EMBRACERY.

labor law. The field of law governing the relationship between employers and employees, esp. law governing the dealings of employers and the unions that represent employees. — Also termed industrial law. See NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 960.]

la chambre des esteilles (lə shahm-brə də zes-tay), n. [French] Hist. The Star Chamber. See STAR CHAMBER, COURT OF.

laches (lach-iz). [Law French "remissness; slackness"] (14c) 1. Unreasonable delay in pursuing a right or claim — almost always an equitable one — in a way that prejudices the party against whom relief is sought. — Also termed sleeping on rights. [Cases: Equity ↷67.]

"Early in its history, Chancery developed the doctrine that where the plaintiff in equity delayed beyond the period of the statute applicable at law, relief would be refused on the ground of laches even though no specific prejudice to the defendant was shown. Today, in most states, there are statutes of limitations applying to suits in equity. Despite these, however, the doctrine still holds that even if the delay is for a shorter period of time than that of the statute, it may still bar equitable relief if it is unreasonable and prejudicial to the defendant." John F. O'Connell, Remedies in a Nutshell 16 (2d ed. 1985).

prosecution laches. Patents. In a claim for patent-infringement, the equitable defense that the patentee did not timely enforce the patent rights. [Cases: Patents ↷289(2).]

2. The equitable doctrine by which a court denies relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed in asserting the claim, when that delay has prejudiced the party against whom relief is sought. Cf. LIMITATION (3). [Cases: Equity ↷67.]

"The doctrine of laches . . . is an instance of the exercise of the reserved power of equity to withhold relief otherwise regularly given where in the particular case the granting of such relief would be unfair or unjust." William F. Walsh, A Treatise on Equity 472 (1930).

laches, estoppel by. See estoppel by laches under ESTOPPEL.

Lackey claim. A prisoner's assertion that incarceration on death row for a protracted period is cruel and unusual punishment. Lackey v. Texas, 514 U.S. 1045, 115 S.Ct. 1421 (1995) (denying cert.). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ↷1795.]

laenland. See LOANLAND.

laesa majestas (lee-zə mə-jes-tas). See LESE MAJESTY.

laesio enormis (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis). [Law Latin "excessive loss" or "abnormal loss of more than half"] Roman & civil law. 1. The sale of a thing for which the buyer paid less than half of its real value. • The seller could rescind the sale, but the buyer could keep the item purchased by paying the full value. Generally, this doctrine was limited to land sales. 2. The injury sustained by one party to an onerous contract when the overreaching party receives twice the value of that party's money or property, such as a purchaser who pays less than half of the value of the property sold, or a seller who receives more than double the property's value. • If coowner coheirs partition or sell property, laesio enormis may exist when the purchaser pays less than one-fourth of the value rather than one-half. See La. Civ. Code arts. 824, 1406. — Also spelled lesio enormis. — Also termed lesion; enorm lesion; (in full) laesio enormis vel ultra dimidium (lee-shee-oh i-nor-mis vel əl-trə di-mid-ee-əm); (in Louisiana) lesion beyond moiety.

"Lesion (laesio enormis) was the rule, established very late, that a seller could rescind a contract if he had received less than half its real value. . . . [I]n spite of its imperfections, lesion not only was adopted in all modern civilian systems (French Code Civil 1674-1683), but became the means of testing the validity of contracts generally by their fairness, a principle embodied in the German Civil Code (section 138) and the Swiss Code of Obligations (section 21). Such a test is no more difficult to apply in law than in equity, where it has long been established in our system. As the Romans applied it, it was a clumsy and inadequate way of reaching this result. In modern courts, in civil-law countries, it invests judges with a discretion not very likely to be abused, but sufficient to act as a deterrent to the grosser forms of economic exploitation." Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 233-34 (1927).

laesio ultra dimidium vel enormis. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

laesiwerp (lee-zə-wərp), n. [Saxon fr. laisus "bosom" + werpire "to surrender"] Hist. A thing surrendered to another's hands or power; a thing given or delivered.

Lamb-Weston rule. Insurance. The doctrine that, when two insurance policies provide coverage for a loss, and each of them contains an other-insurance clause — creating a conflict in the order or apportionment of coverage — both of the other-insurance clauses will be disregarded and liability will be prorated between the insurers. Lamb-Weston, Inc. v. Oregon Auto. Ins. Co., 341 P.2d 110 (Or. 1959). [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2112, 2762.]

lame duck. (1910) An elected official serving out a term after a successor has been elected. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 50.]

lame-duck amendment. See TWENTIETH AMENDMENT.

lame-duck session. See SESSION (1).

Lammas. See quarter day under DAY.

lammas land. See LAND.

land, n. (bef. 12c) 1. An immovable and indestructible three-dimensional area consisting of a portion of the earth's surface, the space above and below the surface, and everything growing on or permanently affixed to it. 2. An estate or interest in real property. [Cases: Estates in Property ↷1.]

"In its legal significance, 'land' is not restricted to the earth's surface, but extends below and above the surface. Nor is it confined to solids, but may encompass within its bounds such things as gases and liquids. A definition of 'land' along the lines of 'a mass of physical matter occupying space' also is not sufficient, for an owner of land may remove part or all of that physical matter, as by digging up and carrying away the soil, but would nevertheless retain as part of his 'land' the space that remains. Ultimately, as a juristic concept, 'land' is simply an area of three-dimensional space, its position being identified by natural or imaginary points located by reference to the earth's surface. 'Land' is not the fixed contents of that space, although, as we shall see, the owner of that space may well own those fixed contents. Land is immovable, as distinct from chattels, which are moveable; it is also, in its legal significance, indestructible. The contents of the space may be physically severed, destroyed or consumed, but the space itself, and so the 'land', remains immutable." Peter Butt, Land Law 9 (2d ed. 1988).

accommodation land. (1843) Land that is bought by a builder or speculator who erects houses or improvements on it and then leases it at an increased rent.

acquired federal land. (usu. pl.) Federal land that was never in the public domain. See federal land.

acquired land. Land acquired by the government from private hands or from another governmental entity; esp., property acquired by the federal government from private or state ownership. • This term is frequently contrasted with public domain. — Also termed acquired lands. See PUBLIC DOMAIN (1). [Cases: Public Lands ↷4.]

"Acquired lands' are lands the United States acquired from private or state owners by gift, purchase, exchange, or condemnation. In most but not all cases, such lands actually have been 'reacquired,' because the United States previously had purchased or won them from foreign and Indian sovereigns. Distinguishing between lands because of ownership origins that go back over a century is a policy with little to recommend it, but some statutes and judicial opinions maintain the distinction." George Cameron Coggins, Public Natural Resources Law § 1.02[1] (1990).

arable land (ar-ə-bəl). (16c) Land fit for cultivation. — Formerly also termed araturia; aralia; aratia. bounty land. A portion of public land given or donated as a reward, esp. for military service. See MILITARY BOUNTY LAND. [Cases: Public Lands ↷46.]

certificate land. Land in the western part of Pennsylvania set apart after the American Revolution to be bought with certificates that the soldiers received in lieu of pay. Cf. donation land.

Crown land. Demesne land of the Crown; esp., in England and Canada, land belonging to the sovereign personally, or to the government, as distinguished from land held under private ownership. — Also termed demesne land of the Crown. See demesne land.

demesne land (di-mayn or di-meen). Hist. Land reserved by a lord for personal use.

donation land. Land granted from the public domain to an individual as a gift, usu. as a reward for services or to encourage settlement in a remote area. • The term was initially used in Pennsylvania to reward Revolutionary War soldiers. Cf. certificate land. [Cases: Public Lands ↷45.]

earned land. Public land that is conveyed by a land patent to a private person who has performed a certain condition, usu. one spelled out in an earlier grant. See PATENT (2).

enclosed land. (17c) Land that is actually enclosed and surrounded with fences.

fabric land. Hist. Land given toward the maintenance, repair, or rebuilding of a cathedral or other church. • This term derives from funds given ad fabricam ecclesiae reparandam ("to repair the fabric of the church").

"Fabrick-Lands are lands given towards the maintenance, rebuilding, or repair of Cathedrals or other churches . . . In antient time almost every one gave by his Will more or less to the Fabrick of the Cathedral or Parish-Church where he liv'd." Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

fast land. (often pl.) (16c) Land that is above the high-water mark and that, when flooded by a government project, is subjected to a governmental taking. • Owners of fast lands are entitled to just compensation for the taking. See TAKING (2). [Cases: Eminent Domain ↷2.17(5).]

federal land. (usu. pl.) Land owned by the United States government. • Federal lands are classified as public lands (also termed "lands in the public domain") or acquired federal lands, depending on how the land was obtained. See acquired federal land. [Cases: Public Lands ↷4.] government land. See public land.

hide land. Hist. See HIDE.

improved land. (17c) Land that has been developed; esp., land occupied by buildings and structures. • The improvements may or may not enhance the value of the land.

indemnity land. See INDEMNITY LAND.

lammas land (lam-əs). Hist. Land over which persons other than the owner have the right of pasturage during winter, from lammas (reaping time) until sowing time.

lieu land (loo). Public land within indemnity limits granted in lieu of those lost within place limits. [Cases: Public Lands ↷53, 81.]

life land. Hist. Land leased for a term measured by the life of one or more persons. — Also termed life-hold.

made land. Artificially formed land, usu. land that has been reclaimed by filling or created by dredging.

mineral land. (18c) Land that contains deposits of valuable minerals in quantities justifying the costs of extraction and using the land for mining, rather than agricultural or other purposes.

place land. See INDEMNITY LAND.

public land. (17c) Lands or land interests held by the government, without regard to how the government acquired ownership; unappropriated land belonging to the federal or state government. — Also termed public lands; government land; public ground. [Cases: Public Lands ↷1.]

"The terms 'public lands' and 'federal lands' may . . . include less than full fee interests, such as severed mineral estates. They usually do not, however, refer to submerged lands off the seacoasts (over which the United States asserts jurisdiction but not title), or lands held in trust for Indians." George Cameron Coggins et al., Federal Public Land and Resources Law 3 (3d ed. 1993).

reserved land. See RESERVATION (3).

riparian land. 1. Land that includes part of the bed of a watercourse or lake. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ↷40, 89, 109, 111.] 2. Land that borders on a public watercourse or public lake whose bed is owned by the public. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses ↷39.]

school land. (18c) Public real estate set apart for sale or exploitation by a state to establish and fund public schools. [Cases: Public Lands ↷51.]

seated land. (1822) Land that is occupied, cultivated, improved, reclaimed, farmed, or used as a place of residence, with or without cultivation.

settled land. Any land — or any interest in it — that is the subject of any document that limited it to, or put it into trust for, a person by way of succession.

swamp and overflowed land. (1853) Land that, because of its boggy, marshy, fenlike character, is unfit for cultivation, requiring drainage or reclamation to render it available for beneficial use. • Such lands were granted out of the U.S. public domain to the littoral states by acts of Congress in 1850 and thereafter. 43 USCA §§ 981 et seq. [Cases: Public Lands ↷58.]

tideland. See TIDELAND.

unimproved land. 1. Raw land that has never been developed, and usu. that lacks utilities. 2. Land that was formerly developed but has now been cleared of all buildings and structures.

withdrawn land. See RESERVATION (3).

Land Titles and Transfer Act. Hist. An 1875 statute establishing a registry for titles to real property, and providing for the transfer of lands and recording of those transfers. 38 & 39 Vict., ch. 87. • The act is analogous in some respects to American recording laws, such as those providing for a registry of deeds. A system of title registration superseded this registry system in 1925.

land trust. See TRUST.

land trust certificate. An instrument granting the holder a share of the benefits of property ownership, while the trustee retains legal title. See land trust under TRUST.

land-use planning. (1939) The deliberate, systematic development of real estate through methods such as zoning, environmental-impact studies, and the like. — Also spelled landuse planning. — Also termed urban planning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↻1.]

land-use regulation. An ordinance or other legislative enactment governing the development or use of real estate. — Also spelled landuse regulation. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ↻1.]

land waiter. English law. A customs officer with the responsibility of examining, tasting, weighing, measuring, and accounting for merchandise landing at any port.

land warfare. See WARFARE.

land warrant. See LAND CERTIFICATE.

Langdell system. See CASEBOOK METHOD.

langeman (lan-jə-mən), n. Hist. A lord of a manor. Pl. langemanni (lan-jə-man-i).

language. (14c) 1. Any organized means of conveying or communicating ideas, esp. by human speech, written characters, or sign language <what language did they speak?>. 2. The letter or grammatical import of a document or instrument, as distinguished from its spirit <the language of the statute>.

languidus (lang-gwi-dəs), n. [Law Latin “sick”] Hist. At common law, a return of process made by the sheriff when a defendant whom the sheriff had taken into custody was too sick to be removed.

Lanham Act (lan-əm). A federal trademark statute, enacted in 1946, that provides for a national system of trademark registration and protects the owner of a federally registered mark against the use of similar marks if any confusion might result or if the strength of a strong mark would be diluted. • The Lanham Act’s scope is independent of and concurrent with state common law. 15 USCA §§ 1051 et seq. — Also termed Federal Trademark Act; Trademark Act of 1946.

lapidation (lap-ə-day-shən), n. An execution by stoning a person to death. — lapidate (lap-ə-dayt), vb.

lappage (lap-ij). Interference; lap and overlap; conflict. • Lappage applies when two different owners claim under deeds or grants that, in part, cover the same land.

lapping. (1939) An embezzlement technique by which an employee takes funds from one customer’s accounts receivable and covers it by using a second customer’s payment to pay the first account, then a third customer’s payment to pay the second account, and so on. [Cases: Embezzlement ↻12.]

lapse, n. (16c) 1. The termination of a right or privilege because of a failure to exercise it within some time limit or because a contingency has occurred or not occurred. 2. Wills & estates. The failure of a testamentary gift, esp. when the beneficiary dies before the testator. See ANTILAPSE STATUTE. Cf. ADEMPMENT. [Cases: Wills ↻774–777.]

lapse, vb. (18c) 1. (Of an estate or right) to pass away or revert to someone else because conditions have not been fulfilled or because a person entitled to possession has failed in some duty. See lapsed policy under INSURANCE POLICY. 2. (Of a devise, grant, etc.) to become void.

lapsed devise. See DEVISE.

lapsed legacy. See LEGACY.

lapsed policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

lapse patent. See PATENT (2).

lapse statute. See ANTILAPSE STATUTE.

lapsus bonis (lap-səs boh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. Reduced in worldly circumstances. • The phrase appeared in reference to a person who was having temporary financial difficulties.

larcenable (lahr-sə-nə-bəl), adj. (1920) Subject to larceny <because it cannot be carried away, real estate is not larcenable>. [Cases: Larceny ↻4-10.]

larcenist, n. (1803) One who commits larceny. See LARCENY.

larcenous (lahr-sə-nəs), adj. (18c) 1. Of, relating to, or characterized by larceny . 2. (Of a person) contemplating or tainted with larceny; thievish .

larcenous intent. See INTENT (1).

larceny (lahr-sə-nee), n. (15c) The unlawful taking and carrying away of someone else's personal property with the intent to deprive the possessor of it permanently. • Common-law larceny has been broadened by some statutes to include embezzlement and false pretenses, all three of which are often subsumed under the statutory crime of "theft. Cf. ROBBERY. [Cases: Larceny ↻1.]

"The criminal offence of larceny or theft in the Common Law was intimately connected with the civil wrong of trespass. 'Where there has been no trespass,' said Lord Coleridge, 'there can at law common be no larceny.' Larceny, in other words, is merely a particular kind of trespass to goods which, by virtue of the trespasser's intent, is converted into a crime. Trespass is a wrong, not to ownership but to possession, and theft, therefore, is not the violation of a person's right to ownership, but the infringement of his possession, accompanied with a particular criminal intent." 4 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 72-73 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

"[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of 'larceny.' This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated larceny. (1831) Larceny accompanied by some aggravating factor (as when the theft is from a person). — Also termed compound larceny. [Cases: Larceny ↻23.]

complicated larceny. See mixed larceny.

compound larceny. 1. See aggravated larceny. 2. See mixed larceny.

constructive larceny. (1827) Larceny in which the perpetrator's felonious intent to appropriate the goods is construed from the defendant's conduct at the time of asportation, although a felonious intent was not present before that time. [Cases: Larceny ↻3(2).]

grand larceny. (1828) Larceny of property worth more than a statutory cutoff amount, usu. $100. Cf. petit larceny. [Cases: Larceny ↻23.]

"The English law, as the result of an early statute [the Statute of Westminster I, ch. 15 (1275)], classified this offense [larceny] as either (1) grand larceny or (2) petit larceny (now frequently written petty larceny), the former being a capital offense and the latter punishable by forfeiture of goods and whipping, but not death. Both, as mentioned earlier, were felonies. The offense was grand larceny if the value of the property stolen exceeded twelve pence and petit larceny if it did not. Modern statutes very generally retain this same classification (sometimes without using these labels) but with different penalties and different values set as the dividing line." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 335 (3d ed. 1982).

larceny by a constructive trespass. Larceny that occurs when a property owner mistakenly gives another person more property than is due, and the recipient knows about the error but does not disclose it before taking the excess property with the intent of converting it to his or her own use.

larceny by bailee. Larceny committed by a bailee who converts the property to personal use or to the use of a third party. [Cases: Embezzlement ↻16; Larceny ↻15.]

larceny by extortion. See theft by extortion under THEFT.

larceny by fraud and deception. See larceny by trick.

larceny by trick. (1898) Larceny in which the taker misleads the rightful possessor, by misrepresentation of fact, into giving up possession of (but not title to) the goods. — Also termed larceny by trick and deception; larceny by trick and device; larceny by fraud and deception. Cf. FALSE PRETENSES; cheating by false pretenses under CHEATING. [Cases: Larceny ↻14.]

larceny from the person. (18c) Larceny in which the goods are taken directly from the person, but without violence or intimidation, the victim usu. being unaware of the taking. • Pickpocketing is a typical example. This offense is similar to robbery except that violence or intimidation is not involved. Cf. ROBBERY. [Cases: Larceny ↻19.]

larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. See theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake under THEFT.

mixed larceny. (18c) 1. Larceny accompanied by aggravation or violence to the person. Cf. simple larceny. 2. Larceny involving a taking from a house. — Also termed compound larceny; complicated larceny.

petit larceny. (16c) Larceny of property worth less than an amount fixed by statute, usu. $100. — Also spelled petty larceny. Cf. grand larceny. [Cases: Larceny ↻23.]

simple larceny. (18c) Larceny unaccompanied by aggravating factors; larceny of personal goods unattended by an act of violence. Cf. mixed larceny (1).

larger parcel. (1895) Eminent domain. A portion of land that is not a complete parcel, but is the greater part of a bigger tract, entitling the owner to damages both for the parcel taken and for its severance from the larger tract. • To grant both kinds of damages, a court generally requires the owner to show unity of ownership, unity of use, and contiguity of the land. But some states and the federal courts do not require contiguity when there is strong evidence of unity of use. See ECONOMIC UNIT. [Cases: Eminent Domain ↻96, 135.]

laron (lar-ən), n. [Law French] Hist. A thief.

Larrison rule (lar-ə-sən). (1952) Criminal law. The doctrine that a defendant may be entitled to a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence of false testimony by a government witness if the jury might have reached a different conclusion without the evidence and it unfairly surprised the defendant at trial. Larrison v. United States, 24 F.2d 82 (7th Cir. 1928). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷942.]

"The most usual rule in cases in which it is claimed that there was false testimony at the trial or that the witness has since recanted is the 'Larrison rule,' taking its name from the Seventh Circuit case in which it was announced. This is that three requirements must be met before a new trial will be granted on this ground: '(a) [That the] the court is reasonably well satisfied that the testimony given by a material witness [was] false. (b) That without it the jury might have reached a different conclusion. (c) That the party seeking the new trial was taken by surprise when the false testimony was given and was unable to meet it for it did not know of its falsity until after the trial.'" 3 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 557.1, at 343 (2d ed. 1982) (quoting Larrison, 24 F.2d at 87-88).

lascivious (lə-siv-ee-əs), adj. (15c) (Of conduct) tending to excite lust; lewd; indecent; obscene.

lascivious cohabitation. See illicit cohabitation under COHABITATION.

L'Association Littéraire et Artistique Internationale. Copyright. An organization of authors, artists, and other supporters of international copyright protection.

• In 1878, the Association drafted five resolutions that would become the starting point for the Berne Convention. In 1883, the organization called the first meeting in Berne, Switzerland for the purpose of creating a union to enforce international copyrights. — Often shortened to the International Association. — Abbr. ALAI.

last, n. Hist. 1. A burden. 2. A measure of weight used for bulky commodities.

last antecedent, rule of the. See RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT.

last-clear-chance doctrine. (1904) Torts. The rule that a plaintiff who was contributorily negligent may nonetheless recover from the defendant if the defendant had the last opportunity to prevent the harm but failed to use reasonable care to do so (in other words, if the defendant's negligence is later in time than the plaintiff's). • This doctrine allows the plaintiff to rebut the contributory-negligence defense in the few jurisdictions where contributory negligence completely bars recovery. — Also termed discovered-peril doctrine; humanitarian doctrine; last-opportunity doctrine; subsequent-negligence doctrine; supervening-negligence doctrine; doctrine of ultimate negligence; doctrine of discovered peril; doctrine of subsequent negligence. [Cases: Automobiles ↷227; Negligence ↷530, 1297.]

last-employer rule. The doctrine that liability for an occupational injury or illness falls to the employer who exposed the worker to the injurious substance just before the first onset of the disease or injury. — Also termed last-injurious-exposure rule. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↷201.]

last heir. Hist. The person — either the lord of the manor or the sovereign — to whom lands come by escheat when there is no lawful heir.

last illness. (1904) The sickness ending in the person's death. — Also termed last sickness.

last-in, first-out. (1934) An accounting method that assumes that the most recent purchases are sold or used first, matching current costs against current revenues. — Abbr. LIFO. Cf. FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT; NEXT-IN, FIRST-OUT. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷3105.1.]

last-injurious-exposure rule. See LAST-EMPLOYER RULE.

last-in-time-marriage presumption. Family law. A presumption that the most recently contracted marriage is valid. • This presumption generally arises in a situation similar to this: A person, believing himself or herself to be divorced, remarries. This person dies, and the new spouse makes a claim for the decedent's pension benefits. Then a former spouse, claiming that there was never a valid divorce, also claims the right to receive the benefits. The last-in-time-marriage presumption operates so that the former spouse bears the burden of proving that there was no valid divorce. [Cases: Marriage ↷40(5).]

last-link doctrine. (1985) The rule that an attorney need not divulge nonprivileged information if doing so would reveal information protected by the attorney-client privilege, particularly if the information would provide essential evidence to support indicting or convicting the client of a crime. • This doctrine is often relied on as an exception to the rule that a client's identity is not privileged. For example, if divulging the client's name would supply the last link of evidence to indict or convict that client, the attorney need not disclose the client's name. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↷146.]

last-opportunity doctrine. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

last-proximate-act test. (1961) Criminal law. A common-law test for the crime of attempt, based on whether the defendant does the final act necessary to commit an offense (such as pulling the trigger of a gun, not merely aiming it). • Most courts have rejected this test as being too lenient. See ATTEMPT (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ↷44.]

last resort, court of. See court of last resort under COURT.

last sickness. See LAST ILLNESS.

last-straw doctrine. Employment law. The rule that the termination of employment may be justified by a series of incidents of poor performance, not one of which alone would justify termination, followed by a final incident showing a blatant disregard for the employer's interests.

last-survivor life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

last-treatment rule. The doctrine that, for an ongoing physician-patient relationship, the statute of limitations on a medical-malpractice claim begins to run when the treatment stops or the relationship ends. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 55(3).]

last will. See WILL.

last will and testament. See last will under WILL.

lata culpa. See CULPA.

lata negligentia (lay-tə neg-lə-jen-shee-ə). See NEGLE-GENTIA.

latching. A survey of a mine; an underground survey.

late, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Tardy; coming after an appointed or expected time . 2. (Of a person) only recently having died <the late Secretary of State>.

late charge. See CHARGE.

latecomer. See JUNIOR USER.

latens (lay-tenz), adj. [Latin] Hidden or unapparent.

latent (lay-tənt), adj. (15c) Concealed; dormant . Cf. PATENT.

latent ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.

latent deed. See DEED.

latent defect. See hidden defect under DEFECT.

latent equity. See EQUITY.

latent intent. See dormant legislative intent under LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

latent intention. See dormant legislative intent under LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

lateral departure. See DEPARTURE.

lateral sentencing. See lateral departure under DEPARTURE.

lateral support. See SUPPORT (4).

laterare (lat-ə-rair-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. To lie sideways, rather than endways. • This term was formerly used in land descriptions.

late-term abortion. See ABORTION.

latifundium (lat-ə-fən-dee-əm), n. [Latin fr. latus "broad" + fundus "land"] Roman law. A large private estate, common in the late Republic.

Latin. The language of the ancient Romans and a primary language of the civil and canon law, and formerly of the common law.

"The value of the Latin has always consisted in its peculiar expressiveness as a language of law terms, in its superior conciseness which has made it the appropriate language of law maxims, and in its almost unlimited capacity of condensation by means of abbreviations and contractions, many of which are retained in popular use at the present day." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 131 (2d ed. 1867).

"The Latin maxims have largely disappeared from arguments and opinions. In their original phraseology they convey no idea that cannot be well expressed in modern English." William C. Anderson, Law Dictionaries, 28 Am. L. Rev. 531, 532 (1894).

latinarius (lat-ə-nair-ee-əs), n. [Latin] Hist. An interpreter of Latin.

Latini Juniani (lə-ti-ni joo-nee-ay-ni), n. pl. [Latin "Junian Latins"] Roman law. Informally manumitted slaves who acquired some rights and privileges as free people, but not Roman citizenship. • They were a special class of freedmen (libertini) who could become citizens. If a Latinus Junianus did not become a citizen, then upon death that person's status reverted to slavery, and his or her patron acquired all the decedent's property. — Also termed libertine Junian Latins. See LEX JUNIA NORBANA. Cf. INGENUUS; SERVUS.

latitat (lat-ə-tat), n. [Law Latin "he lurks"] Hist. A writ issued in a personal action after the sheriff returned a bill of Middlesex with the notation that the defendant could not be found. • The writ was called latitat because of its fictitious recital that the defendant lurks about in the county. It was abolished by the Process in Courts of Law at Westminster Act of 1832 (St. 2, Will. 4, ch. 39). See BILL OF MIDDLESEX; TESTATUM.

"Latitat is a writ by which all men in personal actions are originally called in the king's bench to answer. And it is called latitat, because it is supposed by the writ that the defendant cannot be found in the county of Middlesex, as it appears by the return of the sheriff of that county, but that he lurks in another county: and therefore to the sheriff of that county is this writ directed to apprehend him." Termes de la Ley 277 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

latitatio (lat-ə-tay-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin] Civil law. A lurking; a hiding; a concealment, esp. to avoid a trial.

Latium majus (lay-shee-əm may-jəs). [Latin] Roman law. The greater rights conferred on the inhabitants of Latium and, later, of colonies outside Italy, giving citizenship to all members of the local curia or town council and their children. Cf. LATIUM MINUS.

"Under the Principate there is a distinction between Latium maius and Latium minus. The former referred to the rights granted to colonies founded as a coloniae Latinae outside Italy, combined with the concession of Roman citizenship to a larger group of individuals than Latium minus, in which only the municipal magistrates and members of the municipal council . . . were rewarded with Roman citizenship." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 537-38 (1953).

Latium minus (lay-shee-əm mi-nəs). [Latin] Roman law. The right of citizenship granted to the superior magistrates of provincial colonies. — Also termed minus Latium. Cf. LATIUM MAIUS.

lator (lay-tər), n. [Latin "a bearer, proposer"] Civil law. 1. A bearer; a messenger. 2. A maker or giver of laws.

latori praesentium (lay-tor-1 or læ-tor-1 pri-sen-shee-əm). [Law Latin] Scots law. To the bearer of these presents.

- The phrase appeared in reference to written notes or bonds made payable to an unnamed creditor.

lato sensu (lay-toh sen-s[y]oo). [Latin] Hist. In a wide sense; in a broad sense.

latro (la-troh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A robber; a brigand.

latrocination (la-trə-sə-nay-shən). [fr. Latin latrocinium "highway robbery"] Archaic. The act of robbing; a depredation; a theft. — Also termed latrocinium; latrocinium. See LARCENY; THEFT.

latrocinium (la-trə-sin-ee-əm), n. [Latin fr. latro "a robber"] Hist. 1. LATROCINATION. 2. Something stolen. 3. The right to judge and execute thieves.

latrocinium (la-trə-sə-nee). See LATROCINATION.

laudamentum (law-də-men-təm), n. Hist. A jury award.

laudare (law-dair-ee), vb. [Latin] 1. Civil law. To name; to cite or quote as authority. 2. Hist. To determine or pass upon (a case, etc.) judicially.

laudatio (law-day-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. Court testimony concerning an accused person's good behavior and integrity of life. • This testimony resembles the practice in modern criminal trials of calling persons to speak favorably about a defendant's character. Pl. laudationes (law-day-shee-oh-nee).

laudator (law-day-tər), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A character witness in a criminal trial. 2. Hist. An arbitrator. Pl. laudatores (law-də-tor-eez).

laudatory words. Patents. In a patent claim, descriptive but self-serving and conclusory words about the invention's quality or features, such as "faster" or "more effective." • Laudatory words are usu. not allowed in the claims of utility-patent applications, but they are allowed in plant-patent applications.

laudemium (law-dee-mee-əm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A sum paid to a landowner by a person succeeding to a particular form of land contract by gift, devise, exchange, or sale; HERIOT. • The payment equaled 2% of the purchase money, and was paid to the landowner for acceptance of the successor. — Also termed (in old English law) acknowledgment money. See EMPHYTEUSIS.

laudere auctorem (law-deer-ee awk-tor-əm). See NOMINATIO AUCTORIS.

laudum (law-dəm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. An arbitrament. See ARBITRAMENT.

laughe, n. See FRANKPLEDGE.

laughing heir. See HEIR.

launch, n. (18c) 1. The movement of a vessel from the land into the water, esp. by sliding along ways from the stocks on which the vessel was built. 2. A large open boat used in any service; LIGHTER.

laundering, n. See MONEY-LAUNDERING.

laundry list. (1958) Slang. An enumeration of items, as in a statute or court opinion <Texas's consumer-protection law contains a laundry list of deceptive trade practices>.

laureate (lor-ee-it), n. (16c) 1. Hist. An officer of the sovereign's household, who composed odes annually on the sovereign's birthday, on the new year, and occasionally on the occurrence of a remarkable victory. 2. A person honored for great achievement in the arts and sciences, and esp. in poetry.

laus Deo (laws dee-oh or lows day-oh). [Latin] Archaic. Praise be to God. • This was a heading to a bill of exchange.

law. (bef. 12c) 1. The regime that orders human activities and relations through systematic application of the force of politically organized society, or through social pressure, backed by force, in such a society; the legal system <respect and obey the law>. 2. The aggregate of legislation, judicial precedents, and accepted legal principles; the body of authoritative grounds of judicial and administrative action; esp., the body of rules, standards, and principles that the courts of a particular jurisdiction apply in deciding controversies brought before them <the law of the land>. 3. The set of rules or principles dealing with a specific area of a legal system <copyright law>. 4. The judicial and administrative process; legal action and proceedings <when settlement negotiations failed, they submitted their dispute to the law>. 5. A statute <Congress passed a law>. — Abbr. L. 6. COMMON LAW <law but not equity>. 7. The legal profession <she spent her entire career in law>.

"Some twenty years ago I pointed out two ideas running through definitions of law: one an imperative idea, an idea of a rule laid down by the lawmaking organ of a politically organized society, deriving its force from the authority of the sovereign; and the other a rational or ethical idea, an idea of a rule of right and justice deriving its authority from its intrinsic reasonableness or conformity to ideals of right and merely recognized, not made, by the sovereign." Roscoe Pound, "More About the Nature of Law," in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray at 513, 515 (1935).

"All law is the law of a group of individuals or of groups made up of individuals. No one can make a law purely for himself. He may form a resolution, frame an ambition, or adopt a rule, but these are private prescriptions, not laws." Tony Honoré, Making Law Bind: Essays Legal and Philosophical 33 (1987).

"It will help to distinguish three senses of the word 'law.' The first is law as a distinctive social institution; that is the sense invoked when we ask whether primitive law is really law. The second is law as a collection of sets of propositions — the sets we refer to as antitrust law, the law of torts, the Statute of Frauds, and so on. The third is law as a source of rights, duties, and powers, as in the sentence 'The law forbids the murdering heir to inherit.'" Richard A. Posner, The Problems of Jurisprudence 220–21 (1990).

consuetudinary law (kon-swə-t[y]oo-də-ner-ee). [fr. Latin consuetudo "custom"] Hist. Ancient customary law that is based on an oral tradition.

conventional law. See CONVENTIONAL LAW.

customary law. See CUSTOMARY LAW.

divine law. See DIVINE LAW.

enacted law. Law that has its source in legislation; WRITTEN LAW.

federal law. See FEDERAL LAW.

general law. 1. Law that is neither local nor confined in application to particular persons. • Even if there is only one person or entity to which a given law applies when enacted, it is general law if it purports to apply to all persons or places of a specified class throughout the jurisdiction. — Also termed general statute; law of a general nature. Cf. special law. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 68.] 2. A statute that relates to a subject of a broad nature.

imperative law. A rule in the form of a command; a rule of action imposed on people by some authority that enforces obedience.

"Strictly speaking, it is not possible to say that imperative law is a command in the ordinary sense of the word. A 'command' in the ordinary meaning of the word is an expression of a wish by a person or body as to the conduct of another person, communicated to that other person. But (1) in the case of the law there is no determinate person who as a matter of psychological fact commands all the law. We are all born into a community in which law already exists, and at no time in our lives do any of us command the whole law. The most that we do is to play our part in enforcing or altering particular portions of it. (2) Ignorance of the law is no excuse; thus a rule of law is binding even though not communicated to the subject of the law." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 21 n.(c) (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

internal law. 1. Law that regulates the domestic affairs of a country. Cf. INTERNATIONAL LAW. 2. LOCAL LAW (3).

local law. See LOCAL LAW.

moral law. See MORAL LAW.

natural law. See NATURAL LAW.

partial law. A statute designed (usu. intentionally) to affect the rights of only one particular person or only certain classes of people, rather than all people. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 77.]

permanent law. A statute that continues in force for an indefinite time.

positive law. See POSITIVE LAW.

procedural law. See PROCEDURAL LAW.

prospective law. See prospective statute under STATUTE.

special law. A law that pertains to and affects a particular case, person, place, or thing, as opposed to the general public. — Also termed special act; private law. Cf. general law (1). [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 77.]

state law. See STATE LAW.

sumptuary law. See SUMPTUARY LAW.

tacit law. A law that derives its authority from the people's consent, without a positive enactment.

unenacted law. Law that does not have its source in legislation; UNWRITTEN LAW (1).

unwritten law. A rule, custom, or practice that has not been enacted in the form of a statute or ordinance. • The term traditionally includes caselaw. — Also termed jus non scriptum; jus ex non scripto; lex non scripta; jus moribus constitutum. See CASELAW. Cf. written law.

"[T]he very words of the court promulgating the opinion and making the decision do not determine absolutely the rule of law but . . . the rule of law is ascertained by discovering what general proposition was essential to the result reached, and by using the words of the opinion as a mere aid in the ascertaining of that rule, so that, although opinions are written, the authoritative rules derived from them are sometimes not written, but are ascertained by the use of reason, causing case law to be classed as unwritten law — lex non scripta, to use the Latin phrase." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 335 (3d ed. 1914).

"In the common law it is not too much to say that the judges are always ready to look behind the words of a precedent to what the previous court was trying to say, or to what it would have said if it could have foreseen the nature of the cases that were later to arise, or if its perception of the relevant factors in the case before it had been more acute. There is, then, a real sense in which the written words of the reported decisions are merely the gateway to something lying behind them that may be called, without any excess of poetic license, 'unwritten law.'" Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 145 (1968).

written law. Statutory law, together with constitutions and treaties, as opposed to judge-made law. — Also termed jus scriptum; lex scripta. Cf. unwritten law.

law agent. Scots law. See SOLICITOR (4).

law and economics. (often cap.) (1979) 1. A discipline advocating the economic analysis of the law, whereby legal rules are subjected to a cost-benefit analysis to determine whether a change from one legal rule to another will increase or decrease allocative efficiency and social wealth. • Originally developed as an approach to antitrust policy, law and economics is today used by its proponents to explain and interpret a variety of legal subjects. 2. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this discipline. 3. The body of work produced by these scholars.

law and literature. (often cap.) (1997) 1. Traditionally, the study of how lawyers and legal institutions are depicted in literature; esp., the examination of law-related fiction as sociological evidence of how a given culture, at a given time, views law. — Also termed law in literature. 2. More modernly, the application of literary theory to legal texts, focusing esp. on lawyers' rhetoric, logic, and style, as well as legal syntax and semantics. — Also termed law as literature. 3. The field or movement in which scholars devote themselves to this study or application. 4. The body of work produced by these scholars.

law arbitrary. A law not found in the nature of things, but imposed by the legislature's mere will; a bill not immutable.

law as literature. See LAW AND LITERATURE (2).

law between states. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

lawbook. (16c) A book, usu. a technical one, about the law; esp., a primary legal text such as a statute book or book that reports caselaw. — Also written law book.

lawbreaker, n. (15c) A person who violates or has violated the law.

lawburrows (law-bär-ohz). Scots law. 1. An action requiring security for the peaceable behavior of a party. 2. Security obtained by a party apprehensive of danger to safeguard the peace.

law clerk. 1. See CLERK (4). 2. See PARALEGAL (2).

law commission. (often cap.) An official or quasi-official body of people formed to propose legal reforms intended to improve the administration of justice. • Such a body is often charged with the task of reviewing the law with an eye toward systematic development and reform, esp. through codification.

law court. 1. See COURT (1). 2. See COURT (2). — Also written law-court.

law court of appeals. Hist. An appellate tribunal, formerly existing in South Carolina, for hearing appeals from the courts of law.

law-craft, n. (16c) The practice of law.

"This quest for ever-broader empirical understanding must, of course, be kept under reasonable control in practical law-craft, lest it delay necessary decisions in a continually expanding and pointlessly expensive fact-finding spiral." Bruce A. Ackerman, Reconstructing American Law 30 (1984).

law day. 1. Archaic. The yearly or twice-yearly meeting of one of the early common-law courts. 2. Archaic. The day appointed for a debtor to discharge a mortgage or else forfeit the property to the lender. [Cases: Mortgages ↻301, 335, 599(1).] 3. (cap.) A day on which American schools, public assemblies, and courts draw attention to the importance of law in modern society. • Since 1958, the ABA has sponsored Law Day on May 1 of each year.

law department. A branch of a corporation, government agency, university, or the like charged with handling the entity's legal affairs.

law enforcement. (1895) 1. The detection and punishment of violations of the law. • This term is not limited to the enforcement of criminal laws. For example, the Freedom of Information Act contains an exemption from disclosure for information compiled for law-enforcement purposes and furnished in confidence. That exemption is valid for the enforcement of a variety of noncriminal laws (such as national-security laws) as well as criminal laws. See 5 USCA § 552(b)(7). 2. CRIMINAL JUSTICE (2). 3. Police officers and other members of the executive branch of government charged with carrying out and enforcing the criminal law.

Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. A former federal agency (part of the Department of Justice) that was responsible for administering law-enforcement grants under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968. • It has been replaced by a variety of federal agencies, including the National Institute of Corrections and National Institute of Justice. — Abbr. LEAA.

Law Enforcement Information Network. A computerized communications system that some states use to document driver's-license records, automobile registrations, wanted-persons' files, and the like. — Abbr. LEIN.

law-enforcement officer. A person whose duty is to enforce the laws and preserve the peace. See PEACE OFFICER; SHERIFF. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻180(1).]

law-enforcement system. See CRIMINAL-JUSTICE SYSTEM.

law firm. (1852) An association of lawyers who practice law together, usu. sharing clients and profits, in a business organized traditionally as a partnership but often today as either a professional corporation or a limited-liability company. • Many law firms have a hierarchical structure in which the partners (or shareholders) supervise junior lawyers known as "associates," who are usu. employed on a track to partnership. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻30.]

captive law firm. A law firm staffed by employees of an insurance company. • These lawyers typically defend insureds in lawsuits covered under the insurer's liability policies. The insurer's use of a captive firm to defend an insured raises ethical questions about whether the lawyers will act in the insured's best interests. — Often shortened to captive firm. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻32(4), 32(9).]

Law French. (17c) The corrupted form of the Norman French language that arose in England in the centuries after William the Conqueror invaded England in 1066 and that was used for several centuries as the primary language of the English legal system; the Anglo-French used in medieval England in judicial proceedings, pleadings, and lawbooks. — Also written law French. — Abbr. L.F. See NORMAN FRENCH.

"To the linguist, law French is a corrupt dialect by definition. Anglo-French was in steady decline after 1300. Lawyers such as Fortescue, on the other hand, were probably serious in maintaining that it was the vernacular of France which was deteriorating by comparison with the pristine Norman of the English courts. That Fortescue could make such a claim, while living in France, is in itself a clear demonstration that by the middle of the fifteenth century there was a marked difference between the French of English lawyers and the French of France." J.H. Baker, A Manual of Law French 11 (1979).

"Law French refers to the Anglo-Norman patois used in legal documents and all judicial proceedings from the 1260s to the reign of Edward III (1327-1377), and used with frequency in legal literature up to the early 18th century.

When first introduced into England, this brand of French was the standard language used in Normandy; by the 1300s, through linguistic isolation, it became a corrupted language — by French standards, at any rate." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 504-05 (2d ed. 1995).

"That Law French was barbarous in its decrepitude does not in the least diminish the value of it to our law when it was full of vitality. It helped to make English law one of the four indigenous systems of the civilized world, for it exactly expressed legal ideas in a technical language which had no precise equivalent." Percy H. Winfield, The Chief Sources of English Legal History 14 (1925).

lawful, adj. (13c) Not contrary to law; permitted by law <the police officer conducted a lawful search of the premises>. See LEGAL.

lawful admission. (1899) Immigration. Legal entry into the country, including under a valid immigrant visa. • Lawful admission is one of the requirements for an immigrant to receive a naturalization order and certificate. 8 USCA §§ 1101(a)(20), 1427(a)(1), 1429.

lawful money. See MONEY.

lawful process. See legal process under PROCESS.

lawful representative. See REPRESENTATIVE.

lawgiver. (14c) 1. A legislator, esp. one who promulgates an entire code of laws. 2. A judge with the power to interpret law. — lawgiving, adj. & n.

"John Chipman Gray in his The Nature and Sources of the Law (1921) repeats a number of times a quotation from Bishop Hoadley [1676-1761]: 'Whoever hath an absolute authority to interpret any written or spoken laws, it is he who is truly the Law-giver to all intents and purposes, and not the person who first wrote or spoke them.'" Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 23-24 (1968).

law guardian. See guardian ad litem under GUARDIAN.

law-hand. Hist. An outmoded rococo method of handwriting once used by scribes in preparing legal documents.

law in action. The law as applied in the day-to-day workings of the legal system, as opposed to the law found in books. — Sometimes written law-in-action. See LEGAL REALISM. Cf. LAW IN BOOKS.

law in books. The legal rules to be found in texts; esp., sterile, oft-repeated rules that seem to depart from the way in which the law actually operates in the day-to-day workings of the legal system. — Sometimes written law-in-books. Cf. LAW IN ACTION.

law in literature. See LAW AND LITERATURE (1).

law journal. 1. A legal periodical or magazine, esp. one published by a bar association. — Abbr. L.J. 2. LAW REVIEW (1).

Law Latin. (16c) A corrupted form of Latin formerly used in law and legal documents, including judicial writs, royal charters, and private deeds. • It primarily consists of a mixture of Latin, French, and English words used in English sentence structures. — Abbr. L.L.; L. Lat. — Also written law Latin.

"LAW LATIN. A technical kind of Latin, in which the pleadings and proceedings of the English courts were enrolled and recorded from a very early period to the reign of George II . . . The principal peculiarities of this language consist first, in its construction, which is adapted so closely to the English idiom as to answer to it sometimes word for word; and, secondly, in the use of numerous words 'not allowed by grammarians nor having any countenance of Latin,' but framed from the English by merely adding a Latin termination, as murdrum from murder . . ." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 135 (2d ed. 1867).

"Law Latin, sometimes formerly called 'dog Latin,' is the bastardized or debased Latin formerly used in law and legal documents. For the most part, we have escaped its clutches. In 1730, Parliament abolished Law Latin in legal proceedings, but two years later found it necessary to allow Latin phrases that had previously been in common use, such as feri facias, habeas corpus, ne exeat, and nisi prius. As Blackstone would later say, some Latinisms were 'not . . . capable of an English dress with any degree of seriousness.' 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries 323 (1768)." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 505 (2d ed. 1995).

law list. (18c) 1. A published compilation of the names and addresses of practicing lawyers and other information of interest to the profession, such as legal organizations, court calendars, rosters of specialists, court reporters, and the like. 2. A legal directory that provides biographical information about lawyers, such as Martindale-Hubbell. • Many states and large cities have law lists or directories. See MARTINDALE-HUBBELL LAW DIRECTORY.

Law Lord. (18c) A member of the appellate committee of the House of Lords, consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the salaried Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, and any peer who holds or has held high judicial office. — Also written law lord.

lawmaker. See LEGISLATOR.

lawmaking. See LEGISLATION (1).

law martial. See MARTIAL LAW.

law merchant. A system of customary law that developed in Europe during the Middle Ages and regulated the dealings of mariners and merchants in all the commercial countries of the world until the 17th century. • Many of the law merchant's principles came to be incorporated into the common law, which in turn formed the basis of the Uniform Commercial Code. — Also termed commercial law; lex mercatoria.

law of competence. A law establishing and defining the powers of a government official, including the circumstances under which the official's pronouncements constitute laws. — Also termed power-delegating law. See jural act under ACT; JURAL AGENT. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 103.]

law of deceit. Hist. The body of 19th-century common-law torts that developed into the modern laws of trademark, securities fraud, deceptive trade practices, and unfair competition.

law of evidence. See EVIDENCE (4).

law officer. 1. A police officer, sheriff, or other person with law-enforcement authority. 2. In most common-law jurisdictions, a senior administrator of justice, such as an attorney general, solicitor general, or other high-level minister or officer of justice.

law of Langobardi. See LOMBARD LAW.

law of Lombardy. See LOMBARD LAW.

law of marque (mahrk). A rule of reprisal allowing one who has been wronged but cannot obtain justice to take the goods of the wrongdoer found within the wronged person's precinct, in satisfaction of the wrong.

law of nations. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

law of nature. See NATURAL LAW.

law of nature and nations. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

law of obligations. The category of law dealing with proprietary rights in personam — namely, the relations between obligor and obligee. • It is one of the three departments into which civil law was traditionally divided. See IN PERSONAM. Cf. LAW OF PROPERTY; LAW OF STATUS.

law of persons. (17c) The law relating to persons; the law that pertains to the different statuses of persons. • This is also commonly known as the jus personarum, a shortened form of jus quod ad personas pertinet ("the law that pertains to persons"). See JUS PERSONARUM.

law of property. The category of law dealing with proprietary rights in rem, such as personal servitudes, predial servitudes, and rights of real security. • It is one of the three departments into which civil law was traditionally divided: persons, property, and modes of acquiring property (obligations). In modern civil codes that follow the model of the German Civil Code, civil law is divided into five books: general principles, obligations, family law, property, and succession. See IN REM. Cf. LAW OF OBLIGATIONS; LAW OF STATUS.

law of remedy. See REMEDY.

law of shipping. The part of maritime law relating to the building, equipping, registering, owning, inspecting, transporting, and employing of ships, along with the laws applicable to shipmasters, agents, crews, and cargoes; the maritime law relating to ships. — Also termed shipping law. See MARITIME LAW; JONES ACT.

law of status. The category of law dealing with personal or nonproprietary rights, whether in rem or in personam. • It is one of the three departments into which civil law is divided. Cf. LAW OF OBLIGATIONS; LAW OF PROPERTY.

law of the apex. Mining law. The principle that title to a given tract of mineral land, with defined mining rights, goes to the person who locates the surface covering the outcrop or apex.

law of the case. (18c) 1. The doctrine holding that a decision rendered in a former appeal of a case is binding in a later appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 1097; Courts ⇨ 99, 917.] 2. An earlier decision giving rise to the application of this doctrine. Cf. LAW OF THE TRIAL; RES JUDICATA; STARE DECISIS.

law of the circuit. (1861) 1. The law as announced and followed by a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 96(4).] 2. The rule that one panel of judges on a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals should not overrule a decision of another panel of judges on the same court. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 90(2).] 3. The rule that an opinion of one U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is not binding on another circuit but may be considered persuasive. [Cases: Courts ⇨ 96(5).]

law of the flag. Maritime law. The law of the nation whose flag is flown by a particular vessel where it is registered. • That nation's laws govern the ship's internal affairs. See McCulloch v. Sociedad de Marineros de Honduras, 372 U.S. 10 (1963). [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 2.]

law of the forum. See LEX FORI.

Law of The Hague. The first widely accepted body of international law of war, as approved by conventions in The Hague in 1899 and 1907. • The Law of The Hague set up procedures for mediation and arbitration of disputes to avoid war, and attempted to regulate the type and use of weapons in warfare. See LIEBER CODE.

law of the land. (15c) 1. The law in effect in a country and applicable to its members, whether the law is statutory, administrative, or case-made. 2. Due process of law. See DUE PROCESS. — Also termed lex terrae; ley de terre. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 3840–4841.]

law of the partnership. The rule that the parties' agreement controls the features of a partnership.

law of the place. (1947) Under the Federal Tort Claims Act, the state law applicable to the place where the injury occurred. • Under the Act, the federal government waives its sovereign immunity for specified injuries, including certain wrongful acts or omissions of a government employee causing injury that the United States, if it were a private person, would be liable for under the law of the state where the incident occurred. 28 USCA § 1346(b). [Cases: United States ⇨78(14).]

law of the road. The collective statutes, rules, and customs that regulate travel on public highways and streets.

law of the sea. The body of international law governing how nations use and control the sea and its resources. Cf. GENERAL MARITIME LAW; MARITIME LAW. [Cases: International Law ⇨7.]

law of the staple. Hist. The law administered in the court of the mayor of the staple; the law merchant. See STAPLE (1), (2).

law of the trial. A legal theory or court ruling that is not objected to and is used or relied on in a trial <neither party objected to the court's jury instruction, so it became the law of the trial>. Cf. LAW OF THE CASE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨847; Trial ⇨284.]

law of things. The law pertaining to things; the law that is determined by changes in the nature of things. • This is also commonly known as the jus rerum, a shortened form of jus quod ad res pertinet ("the law that pertains to things"). See JUS RERUM.

law practice. (17c) An attorney's professional business, including the relationships that the attorney has with clients and the goodwill associated with those relationships. Cf. PRACTICE OF LAW. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨30.]

law question. See QUESTION OF LAW.

law reform. (1846) The process of, or a movement dedicated to, streamlining, modernizing, or otherwise improving a body of law generally or the code governing a particular branch of the law; specif., the investigation and discussion of the law on a topic (e.g., bankruptcy), usu. by a commission or expert committee, with the goal of formulating proposals for change to improve the operation of the law. — Also termed science of legislation; ensorial jurisprudence.

law report. See REPORT (3).

law reporter. See REPORT (3).

law review. (1845) 1. A journal containing scholarly articles, essays, and other commentary on legal topics by professors, judges, law students, and practitioners. • Law reviews are usu. published at law schools and edited by law students <law reviews are often grossly overburdened with substantive footnotes>. 2. The law-student staff and editorial board of such a journal <she made law review>. — Abbr. L. Rev. — Also termed law journal. See LAW JOURNAL.

law Salique (sə-leek). See SALIC LAW.

law school. (17c) An institution for formal legal education and training. • Graduates who complete the standard program, usu. three years in length, receive a Juris Doctor (or, formerly, a Bachelor of Laws).

accredited law school. (1905) A law school approved by the state and the Association of American Law Schools, or by the state and the American Bar Association. • In all states except California, only graduates of an accredited law school may take the bar examination. [Cases: Colleges and Universities ⇨1.]

Law School Admissions Test. A standardized examination purporting to measure the likelihood of success in law school. • Most American law schools use the results of this examination in admissions decisions. — Abbr. LSAT.

Law Society. A professional organization in England, chartered in 1845, governing the education, practice, and conduct of articulated clerks and solicitors. • A clerk or solicitor must be enrolled with the Law Society to be admitted to the legal profession.

certified military lawyer. A person qualified to act as counsel in a general court-martial. • To be qualified, the person must be (1) a judge advocate of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine Corps, or a law specialist of the Coast Guard, (2) a graduate of an accredited law school, or a member of a federal-court bar or the bar of the highest court of a state, and (3) certified as competent to perform such duties by the Judge Advocate General of the armed force that the person is a member of. [Cases: Military Justice ⇨1240.]

criminal lawyer. (18c) A lawyer whose primary work is to represent criminal defendants. • This term is rarely if ever applied to prosecutors despite their integral involvement in the criminal-justice system.

guardhouse lawyer. See JAILHOUSE LAWYER.

headnote lawyer. Slang. A lawyer who relies on the headnotes of judicial opinions rather than taking the time to read the opinions themselves.

jailhouse lawyer. See JAILHOUSE LAWYER.

public-interest lawyer. An attorney whose practice is devoted to advocacy on behalf of a public institution or nongovernmental organization, or to advising and representing indigent clients and others who have limited access to legal aid. • Public-interest lawyers often practice in fields such as civil rights and immigration law.

transactional lawyer. (1990) A lawyer who works primarily on transactions such as licensing agreements, mergers, acquisitions, joint ventures, and the like.

lawyer, vb. (18c) 1. To practice as a lawyer <associates often spend their days and nights lawyering, with little time for recreation>. 2. To supply with lawyers <the large law-school class will certainly help lawyer the state>. — lawyering, n.

lawyer-client privilege. See attorney-client privilege under PRIVILEGE (3).

lawyer-referral and information service. See LAWYER-REFERRAL SERVICE.

lawyer-referral service. A program, usu. offered by a bar association, that helps nonindigent clients clarify their legal problems and provides either contact information for lawyers who practice in the appropriate field or information about government agencies or consumer organizations that may be able to provide services. — Also termed lawyer referral and information service.

lawyer-witness rule. (1982) The principle that an attorney who will likely be called as a fact witness at trial may not participate as an advocate in the case, unless the testimony will be about an uncontested matter or the amount of attorney's fees in the case, or if disqualifying the attorney would create a substantial hardship for the client. • The rule permits an attorney actively participating in the case to be a witness on merely formal matters but discourages testimony on other matters on behalf of a client. Model Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 3.7 (1983). — Also termed advocate-witness rule; attorney-witness rule. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨22; Witnesses ⇨67.]

lay, adj. (14c) 1. Not ecclesiastical; not of the clergy. 2. Not expert, esp. with reference to law or medicine; non-professional.

lay, vb. (14c) To allege or assert.

"The Laying of Damages. — At common law the declaration must 'lay damages.'" Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 209 (2d ed. 1899).

layaway. An agreement between a retail seller and a consumer to hold goods for future sale. • The seller sets the goods aside and agrees to sell them to the consumer at an agreed price in the future. The consumer deposits with the seller some portion of the price of the goods, and may agree to other conditions with the seller, such as progress payments. The consumer receives the goods once the full purchase price has been paid.

lay corporation. See CORPORATION.

lay damages, vb. To allege damages, esp. in the complaint. See AD DAMNUM CLAUSE.

layday. Maritime law. A day allowed by a voyage charterparty for the charterer to load or unload cargo. • If more time is used, the vessel's owner is entitled to compensation for the delay, usu. in the form of demurrage. If less time is used, the owner may pay dispatch. — Also written lay day. See DEMURRAGE; DISPATCH; LAYTIME. Cf. day of demurrage under DAY. [Cases: Shipping ⇨45, 47.]

lay fee. See FEE (2).

lay impropiator (im-proh-pree-ay-tər). Eccles. law. A layperson holding a benefice or other spiritual impropriation.

laying a foundation. Evidence. Introducing evidence of certain facts needed to render later evidence relevant, material, or competent. • For example, propounding a hypothetical question to an expert is necessary before the expert may render an opinion. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨404.10, 444, 485; Evidence ⇨117, 366-381.]

laying of the venue. (18c) A statement in a complaint naming the district or county in which the plaintiff proposes that any trial of the matter should occur. See VENUE. [Cases: Pleading ↷45.]

lay investiture. Eccles. law. The ceremony by which a layperson places a bishop in possession of lands, money revenues, and other diocesan temporalities.

lay judge. See JUDGE.

mass layoff. Labor law. Under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, a reduction in force that results in the loss of work at a single site, of 30 days or more, for at least 500 full-time employees, or 50 or more full-time employees if they make up at least 33% of the employees at that site. 29 USCA § 2101(a)(3). See WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷3220.] layoff bet. See BET.

layoff bettor. A bookmaker who accepts layoff bets from other bookmakers. See layoff bet under BET. [Cases: Gaming ↷62, 73.]

lay on the table. Parliamentary law. 1. To postpone the consideration of (a matter before a deliberative assembly); TABLE. • Some parliamentary writers prefer the form "to lay on the table" and disapprove of the form "to table." 2. British English. To schedule for consideration.

lay opinion testimony. See TESTIMONY.

layperson. 1. See LAYMAN. 2. Hist. See JUROR.

lay system. Maritime law. A system in which a fishing vessel's catch is sold by contract or at auction, and after costs are paid and the shipowner is compensated, the net profits are divided among the crew members according to agreed-on percentages.

lay tenure. See TENURE.

laytime. Maritime law. Time allowed by a voyage charterparty for the charterer to load or unload cargo. • If more time is used, the vessel's owner is entitled to compensation for the delay, usu. in the form of demurrage. If less time is used, the owner may pay dispatch. — See DEMURRAGE; DISPATCH; LAYDAY. [Cases: Shipping ↷47, 181.]

lay witness. See WITNESS.

LBO. See leveraged buyout under BUYOUT.

LC. abbr. 1. LETTER OF CREDIT. 2. LETTER OF CREDENCE. — Also written L/C.

L-Claim proceeding. (1997) A hearing under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, intended to ensure that property ordered to be forfeited belongs solely to the defendant. • A petition for an L-Claim proceeding is filed by a third party who claims an interest in the property. The purpose is not to divide the assets among competing claimants, and general creditors of the defendant are not be allowed to maintain an L-Claim petition. The name refers to its legal basis in subsection l of RICO's penalty provision. 18 USCA § 1963(l)(2). [Cases: Forfeitures ↷5.]

LEAA. abbr. LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ADMINISTRATION.

leaching (leech-ing). (18c) The process by which moving fluid separates the soluble components of a material. • Under CERCLA, leaching is considered a release of contaminants. The term is sometimes used to describe the migration of contaminating materials, by rain or groundwater, from a fixed source, such as a landfill. 42 USCA § 9601(22).

lead counsel. See COUNSEL.

leader. See LOSS LEADER.

leading case. (17c) 1. A judicial decision that first definitively settled an important legal rule or principle and that has since been often and consistently followed. • An example is Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602 (1966) (creating the exclusionary rule for evidence improperly obtained from a suspect being interrogated while in police custody). Cf. LANDMARK DECISION. 2. An important, often the most important, judicial precedent on a particular legal issue. 3. Loosely, a reported case that is cited as the dispositive authority on an issue being litigated. — Also termed (in sense 3) ruling case.

leading counsel. See lead counsel under COUNSEL.

leading economic indicator. See ECONOMIC INDICATOR.

leading indicator. See INDICATOR.

leading-object rule. See MAIN-PURPOSE RULE.

leading of a use. Hist. In a deed, the specification, before the levy of a fine of land, of the person to whose use the fine will inure. • If the deed is executed after the fine, it "declares" the use.

"As if A., tenant in tail, with reversion to himself in fee, would settle his estate on B. for life, remainder to C. in tail, remainder to D. in fee . . . He therefore usually, after making the settlement proposed, covenants to levy a fine . . . and directs that the same shall enure to the uses in such settlement mentioned. This is now a deed to lead the uses of the fine or recovery, and the fine when levied, or recovery when suffered, shall enure to the uses so specified, and no other." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 363 (1766).

leading question. (1824) A question that suggests the answer to the person being interrogated; esp., a question that may be answered by a mere "yes" or "no." • Leading questions are generally allowed only in cross-examination. — Also termed categorical question; suggestive question; suggestive interrogation. [Cases: Witnesses ↻239.]

lead-lag study. A survey used to determine the amount of working capital that a utility company must reserve and include in its rate base, by comparing the time the company has to pay its bills and the time taken by its customers to pay for service. • The term comes from the phrases “lead time” and “lag time.” Lead time is the average number of days between the company’s receipt and payment of invoices it receives. Lag time is the average number of days between the company’s billing of its customers and its receipt of payment. By analyzing the difference in timing between inward cash flow and outward cash flow, the company can calculate the amount of necessary reserves. [Cases: Electricity ↻11.3(2), 11.3(4).]

leads doctrine. Tax. In a tax-evasion case, the rule that the government must investigate all the taxpayer’s leads that are reasonably accessible and that, if true, would establish the taxpayer’s innocence, or the government risks having the trial judge presume that any leads not investigated are true and exonerating. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻5312.] league. (15c) 1. A covenant made by nations, groups, or individuals for promoting common interests or ensuring mutual protection. 2. An alliance or association of nations, groups, or individuals formed by such a covenant. 3. A unit of distance, usu. measuring about three miles (chiefly, nautical). [Cases: Weights and Measures ↻3.]

marine league. A geographical measure of distance equal to one-twentieth part of a degree of latitude, or three nautical miles. [Cases: Weights and Measures ↻3.]

League of Nations. An organization of nations formed in 1919 to promote international cooperation and peace. • President Woodrow Wilson endorsed the League in an address to Congress, but the United States never joined. The League dissolved in 1946 and turned its assets over to the United Nations.

leakage. (15c) 1. The waste of a liquid caused by its leaking from a storage container. 2. An allowance against duties granted by customs to an importer of liquids for losses sustained by this waste. 3. Intellectual property. Loss in value of a piece of intellectual property because of unauthorized copying. • The types of intellectual property most susceptible to leakage are recordable media such as compact discs and videotapes. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻87(1).]

leal (leel), adj. [Law French] Hist. Loyal.

lean, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To incline or tend in opinion or preference. • A court is sometimes said to “lean toward” or “lean against” an advocate’s position, meaning that the court regards that position favorably or unfavorably. 2. To yield; to submit.

leapfrog development. (1976) An improvement of land that requires the extension of public facilities from their current stopping point, through undeveloped land that may be scheduled for future development, to the site of the improvement.

leap year. See YEAR.

learned (lær-nid), adj. (14c) 1. Having a great deal of learning; erudite. • A lawyer might refer to an adversary as a “learned colleague” or “learned opponent” — a comment that, depending on the situation and tone of voice, may be either a genuine compliment or a sarcastic slight. 2. Well-versed in the law and its history. • Statutes sometimes require that judges be “learned in the law,” a phrase commonly construed as meaning that they must have earned a law degree and been admitted to the bar.

learned intermediary. See informed intermediary under INTERMEDIARY.

learned-intermediary doctrine. The principle that a prescription-drug manufacturer fulfills its duty to warn of a drug’s potentially harmful effects by informing the prescribing physician, rather than the end-user, of those effects. [Cases: Products Liability ↻136.]

learning, n. 1. Hist. Legal doctrine. 2. The act of acquiring knowledge.

lease, n. (14c) 1. A contract by which a rightful possessor of real property conveys the right to use and occupy the property in exchange for consideration, usu. rent. • The lease term can be for life, for a fixed period, or for a period terminable at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻20.] 2. Such a conveyance plus all covenants attached to it. 3. The written instrument memorializing such a conveyance and its covenants. — Also termed lease agreement; lease contract. 4. The piece of real property so conveyed. 5. A contract by which the rightful possessor of personal property conveys the right to use that property in exchange for consideration. [Cases: Bailment ↻1.] assignable lease. (1915) A lease that the lessee can transfer to a successor. See SUBLEASE. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻74.]

building lease. A long-term lease of land that includes a covenant to erect or alter a building or other improvement. Cf. ground lease. [Cases: Estates in Property ↻13.]

capital lease. See LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

commercial lease. (1909) A lease for business purposes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨20.]

community lease. (1919) A lease in which a number of lessors owning interests in separate tracts execute a lease in favor of a single lessee.

concurrent lease. (1946) A lease that begins before a previous lease ends, entitling the new lessee to be paid all rents that accrue on the previous lease after the new lease begins, and to remedies against the holding tenant.

"A landlord who has granted a lease may nevertheless grant another lease of the same land for all or some of the period of the first lease. The second lease does not deprive the lessee under the first lease of the right to possession of the property, but is, in reality, a lease of the reversion. Because the two leases operate concurrently during at least some part of their respective durations, they are known as 'concurrent leases.'" Peter Butt, Land Law 233 (2d ed. 1988).

consumer lease. (1972) 1. A lease of goods by a person who is in the business of selling or leasing a product primarily for the lessee's personal or household use. UCC § 2A-103(1)(e). [Cases: Bailment ⇨2.] 2. A residential — rather than commercial — lease.

derivative lease. See SUBLEASE.

durable lease. (1816) A lease that reserves a rent payable annually, usu. with a right of reentry for nonpayment.

edge lease. Oil & gas. A lease located on the edge of a field.

finance lease. (1966) A fixed-term lease used by a business to finance capital equipment. • The lessor's service is usu. limited to financing the asset, and the lessee pays maintenance costs and taxes and has the option of purchasing the asset at lease-end for a nominal price. Finance leases strongly resemble security agreements and are written almost exclusively by financial institutions as a way to help a commercial customer obtain an expensive capital item that the customer might not otherwise be able to afford. UCC § 2A-103(1)(g). — Also termed full payout lease; tripartite lease. [Cases: Bailment ⇨2.]

"By carving out the 'finance lease' for special treatment, the drafters of Article 2A have recognized a distinct species of lease that is written almost exclusively by financial institutions and — although treated as a true lease — does not normally carry with it certain of the responsibilities that the typical lessor bears under Article 2A." 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 13-3, at 4 (4th ed. 1995).

"A finance lease is the product of a three-party transaction. The supplier manufactures or supplies the goods pursuant to the lessee's specification, perhaps even pursuant to a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement between the supplier and the lessee. After the prospective finance lease is negotiated, a purchase order, sales agreement, or lease agreement is entered into by the lessor (as buyer or prime lessee) or an existing order, agreement, or lease is assigned by the lessee to the lessor, and the lessor and the lessee then enter into a lease or sublease of the goods. Due to the limited function usually performed by the lessor, the lessee looks almost entirely to the supplier for representations, covenants, and warranties. If a manufacturer's warranty carries through, the lessee may also look to that. Yet, this definition does not restrict the lessor's function solely to the supply of funds; if the lessor undertakes or performs other functions, express warranties, covenants, and the common law will protect the lessee." UCC § 2A-102 cmt. at 14-15 (Proposed Final Draft, 30 Apr. 1999).

full-service lease. (1967) A lease in which the lessor agrees to pay all maintenance expenses, insurance premiums, and property taxes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨148(1), 156.]

graduated lease. (1930) A lease in which rent varies depending on future contingencies, such as operating expenses or gross income.

gross lease. (1939) A lease in which the lessee pays a flat amount for rent, out of which the lessor pays all the expenses (such as fuel, water, and electricity).

ground lease. (1840) A long-term (usu. 99-year) lease of land only. • Such a lease typically involves commercial property, and any improvements built by the lessee usu. revert to the lessor. — Also termed ground-rent lease; land lease. [Cases: Estates in Property ⇨13.]

headlease. See HEADLEASE.

index lease. A lease that provides for increases in rent according to the increases in the consumer price index. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨200.7.]

land lease. See ground lease.

leveraged lease. (1972) A lease that is collateral for the loan through which the lessor acquired the leased asset, and that provides the lender's only recourse for nonpayment of the debt; a lease in which a creditor provides nonrecourse financing to the lessor (who has substantial leverage in the property) and in which the lessor's net investment in the lease, apart from nonrecourse financing, declines during the early years and increases in later years. — Also termed third-party equity lease; tax lease.

master lease. (1935) A contract that establishes a leasehold's basic terms and conditions applicable to all related contracts for rental properties.

mineral lease. A lease in which the lessee has the right to explore for and extract oil, gas, or other minerals. • The rent usu. is based on the amount or value of the minerals extracted. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨56-81.]

mining lease. A lease of a mine or mining claim, in which the lessee has the right to work the mine or claim, usu. with conditions on the amount and type of work to be done. • The lessor is compensated with either fixed rent or royalties based on the amount of ore mined. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨62-71.]

month-to-month lease. (1914) A tenancy with no written contract. • Rent is paid monthly, and usu. one month's notice by the landlord or tenant is required to terminate the tenancy. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨113.]

net lease. A lease in which the lessee pays rent plus property expenses (such as taxes and insurance).

net-net-net lease. A lease in which the lessee pays all the expenses, including mortgage interest and amortization, leaving the lessor with an amount free of all claims. — Also termed triple net lease.

oil-and-gas lease. (1892) A lease granting the right to extract oil and gas from a specified piece of land. ● Although called a “lease,” this interest is typically considered a determinable fee in the minerals rather than a grant of possession for a term of years. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻73–81.]

operating lease. A lease of property (esp. equipment) for a term that is shorter than the property’s useful life. ● Under an operating lease, the lessor is typically responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. Cf. capital lease; LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT.

“or” lease. Oil & gas. A mineral lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured so that the lessee promises to start drilling operations or to pay delay rentals from time to time during the primary term. ● If the lessee fails to do one or the other, the lease does not automatically terminate, but the lessee is liable for the delay-rental amount.

parol lease (pə-rohl or par-əl). A lease based on an oral agreement; an unwritten lease. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻23.]

percentage lease. A lease in which the rent is based on a percentage of gross (or net) sales or profits, typically with a set minimum rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻200.1.]

perpetual lease. 1. An ongoing lease not limited in duration. 2. A grant of lands in fee with a reservation of a rent in fee; a fee farm. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻87.]

perpetually renewable lease. Hist. A lease that a tenant may renew for another period as often as it expires, usu. by making a payment upon exercising the right. ● In 1922, this type of lease was effectively abolished in England by the Law of Property Act, which provided for the conversion of existing and future perpetually renewable leases to term-of-years leases, and set the maximum term at 2000 years.

proprietary lease. A lease between a cooperative apartment association and a tenant.

reversionary lease. A lease that will take effect when a prior lease terminates.

sandwich lease. (1976) A lease in which the lessee subleases the property to a third party, esp. for more rent than under the original lease.

short lease. (17c) A lease of brief duration, often less than six months.

sublease. See SUBLEASE.

synthetic lease. A method for financing the purchase of real estate, whereby the lender creates a special-purpose entity that buys the property and then leases it to the ultimate user (usu. a corporation). ● A synthetic lease is treated as a loan for tax purposes and as an operating lease for accounting purposes, so that the “lessee” can deduct the property’s depreciation and the loan’s interest yet keep both the asset and the debt off its balance sheet.

tax lease. 1. The instrument or estate given to the purchaser of land at a tax sale when the law does not permit the sale of an estate in fee for nonpayment of taxes but instead directs the sale of an estate for years. 2. See leveraged lease.

third-party equity lease. See leveraged lease.

timber lease. (1853) A real-property lease that contemplates that the lessee will cut timber on the leased premises. [Cases: Logs and Logging ↻3.]

top lease. Oil & gas. A lease granted on property already subject to an oil-and-gas lease. ● Generally, any rights granted by a top lease grants are valid only if the existing lease ends. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻56, 73.]

tripartite lease. See finance lease.

triple net lease. See net-net-net lease.

“unless” lease. Oil & gas. An oil-and-gas lease with a drilling-delay rental clause structured as a special limitation to the primary term. ● Unless delay rentals are paid or drilling operations are started from time to time as specified, an “unless” lease automatically terminates, and the lessee has no liability for its failure to perform. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻78.1(3, 9).]

lease, vb. (16c) 1. To grant the possession and use of (land, buildings, rooms, movable property, etc.) to another in return for rent or other consideration <the city leased the stadium to the football team>. [Cases: Bailment ↻1; Landlord and Tenant ↻20.] 2. To take a lease of; to hold by a lease <Carol leased the townhouse from her uncle>.

lease agreement. See LEASE (3).

lease and release. Hist. A method of transferring seisin without livery, whereby the owner and the transferee would enter into a lease for a term of years, to take effect only when the transferee entered the property, whereupon the owner would release all interest in the property to the transferee by written instrument. ● Once the transferee owned both the term and the freehold interest, the two interests would merge to form one estate in fee simple. This lease-and-release procedure was fully acceptable to the courts, on the theory that livery of seisin to one already occupying the land was unnecessary.

leaseback, n. (1947) The sale of property on the understanding, or with the express option, that the seller may lease the property from the buyer immediately upon the sale. — Also termed sale and leaseback; sale-leaseback. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻1.]

lease for life. Hist. A lease of land for the duration of a specified number of lives instead of for a specified term of years. • Unlike a tenant for a term of years, a lessee for life could recover the land if dispossessed.

"The rent payable was usually fairly small, but a fine was paid when the lease was granted; a further fine was payable when, on the termination of the lives, the tenant exercised the right the lease gave him to replace them and so extend the lease. If the lessor was a corporation such as a monastery or college, the fines were treated as income by the then members of the corporation, to the disadvantage of their successors. Leases for life finally lost their popularity when legislation in the first half of the nineteenth century compelled corporations to add such fines to their capital." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 306 (6th ed. 1993).

lease for years. See tenancy for a term under TENANCY.

leasehold, n. (18c) A tenant's possessory estate in land or premises, the four types being the tenancy for years, the periodic tenancy, the tenancy at will, and the tenancy at sufferance. • Although a leasehold has some of the characteristics of real property, it has historically been classified as a chattel real. — Also termed leasehold estate; leasehold interest. See TENANCY. Cf. FREEHOLD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨70, 113, 117.]

leaseholder royalty. See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY (2).

leasehold improvements. (1845) Beneficial changes to leased property (such as a parking lot or driveway) made by or for the benefit of the lessee. • The phrase is used in a condemnation proceeding to determine the share of compensation to be allocated to the lessee.

leasehold interest. (18c) 1. LEASEHOLD; esp., for purposes of eminent domain, the lessee's interest in the lease itself, measured by the difference between the total remaining rent and the rent the lessee would pay for similar space for the same period. [Cases: Eminent Domain ⇨147.] 2. A lessor's or lessee's interest under a lease contract. UCC § 2A-103. [Cases: Bailment ⇨7. 3. WORKING INTEREST. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⇨20.]

leasehold mortgage. See MORTGAGE.

leasehold-mortgage bond. See BOND (3).

leasehold royalty. See landowner's royalty under ROYALTY (2).

leasehold value. The value of a leasehold interest. • This term usu. applies to a long-term lease when the rent paid under the lease is lower than current market rates. Some states permit the lessee to claim the leasehold interest from the landlord in a condemnation proceeding, unless the lease prohibits such a claim. Other states prohibit these claims by statute. See LEASEHOLD INTEREST; NO-BONUS CLAUSE.

lease insurance. See INSURANCE.

lease-lend. See LEND-LEASE.

lease option. See OPTION.

lease-purchase agreement. (1939) A rent-to-own purchase plan under which the buyer takes possession of the goods with the first payment and takes ownership with the final payment; a lease of property (esp. equipment) by which ownership of the property is transferred to the lessee at the end of the lease term. • Such a lease is usu. treated as an installment sale. Under a capital lease, the lessee is responsible for paying taxes and other expenses on the property. — Also termed lease-to-purchase agreement; hire-purchase agreement; capital lease. Cf. operating lease under LEASE. [Cases: Bailment ⇨22; Sales ⇨5.] lease with an option to purchase. See lease option under OPTION.

leasing-making. Hist. Scots law. Oral sedition.

least-intrusive-means doctrine. (1978) A doctrine requiring the government to exhaust all other investigatory means before seeking sensitive testimony, as by compelling an attorney to testify before a grand jury on matters that may be protected by the attorney-client privilege.

least-intrusive-remedy doctrine. (1989) The rule that a legal remedy should provide the damaged party with appropriate relief, without unduly penalizing the opposing party or the jurisdiction's legal system, as by striking only the unconstitutional portion of a challenged statute while leaving the rest intact. [Cases: Statutes ⇨64(1).]

least-restrictive educational environment. See LEAST-RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT.

least-restrictive environment. Under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, the school setting that, to the greatest extent appropriate, educates a disabled child together with children who are not disabled. 20 USCA § 1412(5). — Also termed least-restrictive-educational environment. Cf. MAINSTREAMING. [Cases: Schools ⇨148(2).]

least-restrictive-means test. (1972) The rule that a law or governmental regulation should be crafted in a way that will protect individual civil liberties as much as possible and should be only as restrictive as necessary to accomplish a legitimate governmental purpose.

leaute (low-tay), n. [Law French "legality"] Hist. Legality; the condition of a lawful man (legalis homo). See LEGALIS HOMO.

leave, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Departure; the act of going away <took his leave>. 2. Extended absence for which one has authorization; esp., a voluntary vacation from military duties with the chance to visit home; furlough <on a three-month leave from the Army>. 3. Permission <by leave of court>.

leave, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To give by will; to bequeath or devise <she left her ranch to her stepson>. • This usage has historically been considered loose by the courts, and it is not always given testamentary effect. 2. To be survived by <he left no brothers or sisters>. 3. To depart; voluntarily go away; quit (a place). 4. To depart willfully with the intent not to return <Nelson left Texas and became a resident of Massachusetts>. 5. To deliver (a summons, money, an article, etc.) by dropping off at a certain place, esp. to await the return of someone; esp., to post (a copy of a writ, etc.).

leave and license. In an action for trespass to land, the defense that the plaintiff consented to the defendant's presence.

leave no issue, vb. (16c) To die without any surviving child or other descendant. • The spouse of a deceased child is usu. not issue. See FAILURE OF ISSUE. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 545.]

leave of absence. (18c) A worker's temporary absence from employment or duty with the intention to return. • Salary level and seniority typically are unaffected by a leave of absence.

leave of court. (18c) Judicial permission to follow a non-routine procedure <the defense sought leave of court to allow the defendant to exit the courtroom when the autopsy photographs are shown>. — Often shortened to leave.

leave to sit. Parliamentary law. Permission from a deliberative assembly for a committee or other subordinate body to meet while the assembly is meeting.

LEC. abbr. LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER.

leccator (lə-kay-tər). [Latin] Archaic. A debauched person; a lecher. — Also termed leccator.

lecherwite (lech-ər-wit). See LAIRWITE.

lecture method. See HORNBOOK METHOD.

ledger (lej-ər). (16c) 1. A book or series of books used for recording financial transactions in the form of debits and credits. — Also termed general ledger. [Cases: Evidence ⇨ 354(5).] 2. Archaic. A resident ambassador or agent. — Also termed (in sense 2) leger; lieger.

ledo (lee-doh), n. [Latin] Hist. The rising water of the sea; neap tide. See neap tide under TIDE.

leet (leet). Hist. A criminal court. • The last leets were abolished in England in 1977.

"Leet is a court derived out of the sheriff's turn, and inquires of all offences under the degree of high treason that are committed against the crown and dignity of the king. But those offences which are to be punished with loss of life or member, are only inquirable there, and to be certified over to the justices of assise. See stat. 1 E. 3, c. 17." Termes de la Ley 278-79 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

legabilis (lə-gay-bə-lis), n. [Latin] Hist. Property or goods that may be given by will. • As an adjective, the term also meant "bequeathable."

legable, adj. (Of property) capable of being bequeathed.

legacy (leg-ə-see), n. (15c) A gift by will, esp. of personal property and often of money. Cf. BEQUEST; DEVISE. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 565.]

absolute legacy. A legacy given without condition and intended to vest immediately. Cf. vested legacy.

accumulated legacy. A legacy that has not yet been paid to a legatee.

accumulative legacy. See additional legacy.

additional legacy. A second legacy given to a legatee in the same will (or in a codicil to the same will) that gave another legacy. • An additional legacy is supplementary to another and is not considered merely a repeated expression of the same gift. — Also termed accumulative legacy; cumulative legacy. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 585.]

alternate legacy. (1983) A legacy by which the testator allows the legatee to choose one of two or more items.

conditional legacy. (17c) A legacy that will take effect or be defeated subject to the occurrence or nonoccurrence of an event. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 639-668.]

contingent legacy. (18c) A legacy that depends on an uncertain event and thus has not vested. • An example is a legacy given to one's granddaughter "if she attains the age of 21. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 628-638.] cumulative legacy. See additional legacy.

demonstrative legacy (di-mon-strə-tiv). (18c) A legacy paid from a particular source if that source has enough money. • If it does not, the amount of the legacy not paid from that source is taken from the estate's general assets. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 755.]

failed legacy. See lapsed legacy.

general legacy. (18c) 1. A gift of personal property that the testator intends to come from the estate's general assets, payable in money or items indistinguishable from each other, such as shares of publicly traded stock. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 756.] 2. Civil law. A testator's gift of a fraction or proportion of the estate remaining after particular legacies have been satisfied. 3. Civil law. A testator's gift of all, a fraction, or a proportion of one of certain categories of property, as specified by statute. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1586, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a general title. Cf. particular legacy; universal legacy.

lapsed legacy. (18c) A legacy to a legatee who dies either before the testator dies or before the legacy is payable. • It falls into the residual estate unless the jurisdiction has an antilapse statute. — Also termed failed legacy; failed gift. See ANTILAPSE STATUTE. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 774-777.] legacy under a general title. See general legacy.

legacy under a particular title. See particular legacy.

legacy under a universal title. Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all immovable property, or all movable property, or a fixed proportion of all immovable property or of all movable property. La. Civ. Code art. 1612. Cf. general legacy; particular legacy; universal legacy. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 583.]

modal legacy (moh-dəl). A legacy accompanied by directions about the manner in which it will be applied to the legatee's benefit .

particular legacy. Civil law. A testamentary gift that is not expressed as a fraction or proportion and is less than all the estate; any testamentary gift that does not meet the definition of a general legacy or a universal legacy. See La. Civ. Code arts. 1587, 3506(28). — Also termed legacy under a particular title. Cf. general legacy; universal legacy. [Cases: Wills ↻586.]

pecuniary legacy (pi-kyoo-nee-er-ee). (18c) A legacy of a sum of money. [Cases: Wills ↻567.]

residuary legacy (ri-zij-oo-er-ee). (18c) A legacy of the estate remaining after the satisfaction of all claims and all specific, general, and demonstrative legacies. [Cases: Wills ↻586.]

special legacy. See specific legacy.

specific legacy. (18c) A legacy of a specific or unique item of property, such as any real estate or a particular piece of furniture. — Also termed special legacy. [Cases: Wills ↻753, 754.]

substitutional legacy. (1894) A legacy that replaces a different legacy already given to a legatee.

trust legacy. A legacy of personal property to trustees to be held in trust, with the income usu. paid to a specified beneficiary.

universal legacy. Louisiana law. A testamentary disposition of all property, movable and immovable, to one or more persons. La. Civ. Code art. 1585. Cf. general legacy; legacy under a universal title; particular legacy. [Cases: Wills ↻583.]

vested legacy. (18c) A legacy given in such a way that the legatee has a fixed, indefeasible right to its payment. • A legacy is said to be vested when the testator's words making the bequest convey a transmissible interest, whether present or future, to the legatee. Thus, a legacy to be paid when the legatee reaches the age of 21 is a vested legacy because it is given unconditionally and absolutely. Although the legacy is vested, the legatee's enjoyment of it is deferred. Cf. absolute legacy; contingent legacy. [Cases: Wills ↻628–638.]

void legacy. (18c) A legacy that never had any legal existence. • The subject matter of such a legacy is treated as a part of the estate and passes under the residuary clause of a will or (in the absence of a residuary clause) under the rules for intestate succession. [Cases: Wills ↻849–872.] legacy duty. See legacy tax under TAX.

legacy tax. See TAX.

legal, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to law; falling within the province of law <pro bono legal services>. 2. Established, required, or permitted by law; LAWFUL <it is legal to carry a concealed handgun in some states>. 3. Of or relating to law as opposed to equity. [Cases: Action ↻21.]

legal act. (15c) 1. Any act not condemned as illegal. • For example, a surgeon's incision is a legal act, while stabbing is an illegal one. 2. An action or undertaking that creates a legally recognized obligation; an act that binds a person in some way.

"A lunatic, though capable of holding property, was in Roman law incapable of any legal act." Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 354 (13th ed. 1924).

3. See act in the law under ACT. 4. See act of the law under ACT.

legal-acumen doctrine (lee-gəl ə-kyoo-mən). (1905) The principle that if a defect in, or the invalidity of, a claim to land cannot be discovered without legal expertise, then equity may be invoked to remove the cloud created by the defect or invalidity.

legal-advice exception. 1. The rule that an attorney may withhold as privileged the client's identity and information regarding fees, if there is a strong probability that disclosing the information would implicate the client in the criminal activity for which the attorney was consulted. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ↻146.] 2. An exemption contained in open-meetings legislation, permitting a governmental body to meet in closed session to consult with its attorney about certain matters. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↻124.]

legal age. (18c) 1. See age of capacity under AGE. 2. See age of majority (1) under AGE.

legal aid. (1890) Free or inexpensive legal services provided to those who cannot afford to pay full price. • Legal aid is usu. administered locally by a specially established organization. See LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION.

legal analyst. See PARALEGAL.

legal capital. See CAPITAL.

legal cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE (1).

legal centralism. The theory suggesting that state-constructed legal entities form the center of legal life and control lesser normative systems (such as the family or business networks) that define appropriate behavior and social relationships. — Also termed legal centrism; legocentrism (lee-goh-sen-triz-əm).

legal-certainty test. (1964) Civil procedure. A test designed to determine whether the amount in controversy satisfies the minimum needed to establish the court's jurisdiction. • The amount claimed in the complaint will control unless there is a "legal certainty" that the claim is actually less than the minimum amount. See AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY. [Cases: Federal Courts ↻350, 359; Removal of Cases ↻75, 107(7).]

legal citology (si-tol-ə-jee). (1996) The study of citations (esp. in footnotes) and their effect on legal scholarship. — Often shortened to citology. — legal citologist (si-tol-ə-jist), n.

Legal Code. See CODE (2).

legal conclusion. (17c) A statement that expresses a legal duty or result but omits the facts creating or supporting the duty or result. Cf. CONCLUSION OF LAW; CONCLUSION OF FACT; FINDING OF FACT.

legal consideration. See valuable consideration under CONSIDERATION (1).

legal correlative. A legal status that has a corresponding or reciprocal status, such as a right that corresponds to a duty. • Wesley Newcomb Hohfeld of Yale Law School first introduced the bases for the concept of legal correlatives in two articles published in the Yale Law Journal in 1913 and 1917. He polished the concept in the book Fundamental Legal Conceptions, as Applied in Judicial Reasoning and Other Legal Essays, published posthumously in 1919.

"Rights and duties have a distinct relationship and are called legal correlatives by Hohfeld. In terms of intellectual property, the right is a right to do certain things, such as making copies of a work of copyright, making articles to a design covered by a design right, or making products in accordance with a patented invention. The correlative duty is a duty owed by all others not to infringe the right. This duty exists even if the person infringing the right does not know of it. Looking at Hohfeld's scheme again, it can be seen that there are associated privileges and 'no rights.' The right resulting from the operation of intellectual property gives the owner of that right a corresponding privilege, that is the privilege to exploit the work. The correlative 'no right' is to the effect that persons other than the owner do not have this privilege." David Bainbridge, Intellectual Property 11 (5th ed. 2002).

legal cruelty. See CRUELTY.

legal custody. 1. See CUSTODY (2). 2. See CUSTODY (3). 3. See DECISION-MAKING RESPONSIBILITY.

legal demand. See DEMAND (1).

legal dependent. See DEPENDENT.

legal description. (18c) A formal description of real property, including a description of any part subject to an easement or reservation, complete enough that a particular piece of land can be located and identified. • The description can be made by reference to a government survey, metes and bounds, or lot numbers of a recorded plat. — Also termed land description. [Cases: Deeds ⇨ 37.]

legal detriment. See DETRIMENT (2).

legal discretion. See judicial discretion under DISCRETION.

legal distributee. See DISTRIBUTEE.

legal drafting. See DRAFTING.

legal duty. See DUTY (1).

legal-elements test. (1980) Criminal law. A method of determining whether one crime is a lesser included offense in relation to another crime, by examining the components of the greater crime to analyze whether a person who commits the greater crime necessarily commits the lesser one too. — Also termed same-elements test. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ⇨ 162; Indictment and Information ⇨ 189, 191.]

legal entity. (18c) A body, other than a natural person, that can function legally, sue or be sued, and make decisions through agents. • A typical example is a corporation. Cf. artificial person under PERSON (3).

legalese (lee-gə-leez). (1914) The jargon characteristically used by lawyers, esp. in legal documents <the partner chided the associate about the rampant legalese in the draft sublease>. — Also termed law-talk. See PLAIN-LANGUAGE MOVEMENT.

legal estate. See ESTATE (1).

legal estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

legal ethics. (1828) 1. Standards of professional conduct applicable to members of the legal profession. • Ethical rules consist primarily of the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct and the earlier ABA Model Code of Professional Responsibility, together with related regulatory judgments and opinions. The Model Rules of Professional Conduct have been enacted into law, often in a modified form, in most states. 2. The study of such standards. 3. A lawyer's practical observance of or conformity to established standards of professional conduct. See MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨ 32(2).]

"In one sense, the term 'legal ethics' refers narrowly to the system of professional regulations governing the conduct of lawyers. In a broader sense, however, legal ethics is simply a special case of ethics in general, as ethics is understood in the central traditions of philosophy and religion. From this broader perspective, legal ethics cuts more deeply than legal regulation: it concerns the fundamentals of our moral lives as lawyers." Deborah L. Rhode & David Luban, Legal Ethics 3 (1992).

legal etiquette. The professional courtesy that lawyers have traditionally observed in their professional conduct, shown through civility and a strong sense of honor. — Also termed etiquette of the profession.

legal evidence. See EVIDENCE.

legal excuse. See EXCUSE (2).

legal fact. See FACT.

legal father. See FATHER.

legal fence. See LAWFUL FENCE.

legal fiction. (17c) An assumption that something is true even though it may be untrue, made esp. in judicial reasoning to alter how a legal rule operates; specif., a device by which a legal rule or institution is diverted from its original purpose to accomplish indirectly some other object. • The constructive trust is an example of a legal fiction. — Often shortened to fiction. — Also termed fiction of law; fictio juris. [Cases: Trusts ⇨ 91.]

"I . . . employ the expression 'Legal Fiction' to signify any assumption which conceals, or affects to conceal, the fact that a rule of law has undergone alteration, its letter remaining unchanged, its operation being modified. . . .

It is not difficult to understand why fictions in all their forms are particularly congenial to the infancy of society. They satisfy the desire for improvement, which is not quite wanting, at the same time that they do not offend the superstitious disbelief for change which is always present." Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 21–22 (17th ed. 1901).

"Legal fiction is the mask that progress must wear to pass the faithful but blear-eyed watchers of our ancient legal treasures. But though legal fictions are useful in thus mitigating or absorbing the shock of innovation, they work havoc in the form of intellectual confusion." Morris R. Cohen, Law and the Social Order 126 (1933).

legal force. See reasonable force under FORCE.

legal formalism, n. (1895) The theory that law is a set of rules and principles independent of other political and social institutions. • Legal formalism was espoused by such scholars as Christopher Columbus Langdell and Lon Fuller. Cf. LEGAL REALISM. — legal formalist, n.

legal fraud. See constructive fraud (1) under FRAUD.

legal heir. See HEIR (1).

legal holiday. (1867) A day designated by law as exempt from court proceedings, issuance of process, and the like. • Legal holidays vary from state to state. — Sometimes shortened to holiday. — Also termed nonjudicial day. [Cases: Holidays ↻1.]

legal hybrid. Property. A cooperative housing unit in which the same person holds a lease and also owns stock in the cooperative association that owns or leases the unit. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻350.]

legal impossibility. See IMPOSSIBILITY.

legal inconsistency. See legally inconsistent verdict under VERDICT.

legal injury. See INJURY.

legal-injury rule. (1956) The doctrine that the statute of limitations on a claim does not begin to run until the claimant has sustained some legally actionable damage. • Under this rule, the limitations period is tolled until the plaintiff has actually been injured. — Also termed damage rule. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ↻43.]

legal innocence. See INNOCENCE.

legal insanity. See INSANITY.

legal investments. See LEGAL LIST.

legalis homo (lə-gay-lis hoh-moh). [Latin "lawful man"] Hist. A person who has full legal capacity and full legal rights; one who has not been deprived of any rights in court by outlawry, excommunication, or infamy. • A legalis homo was said to stand rectus in curia ("right in court"). A lawful man was able to serve as a juror and to swear an oath. Pl. legales homines (lə-gay-leez hom-ə-nee-z). — Also termed legal man; lawful man; lageman; liber et legalis homo. See RECTUS IN CURIA.

legalism, n. (1928) 1. Formalism carried almost to the point of meaninglessness; an inclination to exalt the importance of law or formulated rules in any area of action.

"What is legalism? It is the ethical attitude that holds moral conduct to be a matter of rule following, and moral relationships to consist of duties and rights determined by rules." Judith N. Shklar, Legalism: Law, Morals, and Political Trials 1 (1964).

"If . . . the law and the lawyer are to make a socially valuable contribution to the operation of the social security system, there must be abandoned old-established habits of thought as to the nature of law and the whole gamut of practices summed up in the layman's word of deadly insult, 'legalism' — his word for rigid attachment to legal precedent, the substitution of legal rule for policy, the fettering of discretion, the adversary style, the taking of technical points, formality." Leslie Scarman, English Law — The New Dimension 43 (1974).

2. A mode of expression characteristic of lawyers; a jargonistic phrase characteristic of lawyers, such as "pursuant to."

legalis moneta Angliae (lə-gay-lis mə-nee-tə ang-lee-ee), n. [Latin] Lawful money of England.

legal issue. See ISSUE (1).

legalist, n. (1829) A person who views things from a legal or formalistic standpoint; esp., one who believes in strict adherence to the letter of the law rather than its spirit.

legalistic, adj. (17c) Characterized by legalism; exalting the importance of law or formulated rules in any area of action .

legality. (15c) 1. Strict adherence to law, prescription, or doctrine; the quality of being legal. 2. The principle that a person may not be prosecuted under a criminal law that has not been previously published. — Also termed (in sense 2) principle of legality.

legalize, vb. (18c) 1. To make lawful; to authorize or justify by legal sanction <the bill to legalize marijuana never made it to the Senate floor>. 2. To imbue with the spirit of the law; to make legalistic <as religions age, they tend to become legalized>. — legalization, n.

legal malpractice. See MALPRACTICE.

legal man. See LEGALIS HOMO.

legal maxim. See MAXIM.

legal memory. (1882) The period during which a legal right or custom can be determined or established. • Traditionally, common-law legal memory began in the year 1189, but in 1540 it became a steadily moving period of 60 years. Cf. TIME IMMEMORIAL (1).

"Because of the importance to feudal landholders of seisin and of real property in general, the writ of right has been called 'the most solemn of all actions.' Nevertheless, it was believed that the time within which such a complainant would be allowed to prove an ancestor to have been seised of the estate in question must be limited. At first this was done by selecting an arbitrary date in the past, before which 'legal memory' would not run. The date initially was Dec. 1, 1135 (the death of Henry I); in 1236 it was changed by statute to Dec. 19, 1154 (the coronation of Henry II); and in 1275 it became Sept. 3, 1189 (the coronation of Richard I). Finally, in 1540, an arbitrary period of sixty years was set as the period of 'legal memory.' The latter change was probably made because it was felt that a 350-year statute of limitations was somewhat awkward." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 45 n.65 (2d ed. 1984).

legal mind. (18c) The intellect, legal capacities, and attitudes of a well-trained lawyer — often used as a personified being <although this distinction occurs naturally to the legal mind, it is too technical to be satisfactory>.

legal portion. See LEGITIME.

legal positivism, n. (1939) The theory that legal rules are valid only because they are enacted by an existing political authority or accepted as binding in a given society, not because they are grounded in morality or in natural law. • Legal positivism has been espoused by such scholars as H.L.A. Hart. See POSITIVE LAW. Cf. LOGICAL POSITIVISM. — legal positivist, n.

"[I]t will be helpful to offer some comparisons between legal positivism and its counterpart in science. Scientific positivism condemns any inquiry projecting itself beyond observable phenomena; it abjures metaphysics, it renounces in advance any explanation in terms of ultimate causes. Its program of research is to chart the regularities discernible in the phenomena of nature at the point where they become open to human observation, without asking — as it were — how they got there. In the setting of limits to inquiry there is an obvious parallel between scientific and legal positivism. The legal positivist concentrates his attention on law at the point where it emerges from the institutional processes that brought it into being. It is the finally made law itself that furnishes the subject of his inquiries. How it was made and what directions of human effort went into its creation are for him irrelevancies." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 177–78 (1968).

legal possessor. See POSSESSOR.

legal practice. See PRACTICE OF LAW.

legal practitioner. 1. A lawyer. 2. In the traditional English system, a member of one of the recognized branches of practice.

"Legal practitioners may be either barristers, special pleaders not at the bar, certified conveyancers, or solicitors. The three latter may recover their fees, but the first may not, their acting being deemed of a voluntary nature, and their fees merely in the light of honorary payments; and it follows from this, that no action lies against them for negligence or unskilfulness." John Indermaur, Principles of the Common Law 169 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

legal prejudice. See PREJUDICE.

legator (lə-gay-tər or leg-ə-tor), n. Rare. One who bequeaths a legacy; TESTATOR.

legatory (leg-ə-tor-ee), n. Hist. The one-third portion of a freeman's estate in land that he could dispose of by will. • The other two portions of the estate were subject to claims of the wife and children.

legatum (lə-gay-təm), n. [Latin fr. legare "to bequeath"] 1. Roman law. A special bequest; a gift left by a deceased person to be paid from the estate by the heir. • Unlike an heir, a legatee acquired a benefit and no duties attached. 2. Hist. A legacy or bequest to the church, esp. for tithes not paid while the donor lived. See MORTUARY.

legatum debiti (lə-gay-təm deb-ə-tɪ). [Latin "legacy of debt"] Roman law. A legacy to the decedent's creditor of what the decedent owes. • This type of legacy was void unless it bettered the creditor's position in some way, as by removing a valid defense that the debtor had to the creditor's claim.

legatum dotis (lə-gay-təm doh-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of dowry. • A husband might bequeath a dowry back to his wife, the result being that the husband's heirs were not entitled to retain the usual deductions for children, and the widow could receive her dowry immediately.

legatum generis (lə-gay-təm jen-ə-ris). [Latin "legacy of a genus"] Roman law. A legacy of a subject of a general class; a legacy of a kind of thing, rather than a specifically named item. • For example, the testator might make a gift of a horse without specifically naming which one of ten horses in the estate.

"Legatum generis . . . Normally the testator set in his testament who had to make the choice from among the things of the same kind (slaves, horses) belonging to the estate: the heir, the legatee or a third person. The jurists did not agree about the solution [when] . . . the testator did not entitle any person to make the selection. Apparently the rules varied according to the form in which such a legacy (legatum) was left. The Justinian law favored the choice by the legatee." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 540 (1953).

legatum liberationis (lə-gay-təm lib-ə-ray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin "legacy of a discharge"] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator released the indebted legatee from a debt. — Also termed liberatio legata (lib-ə-ray-shee-oh lə-gay-tə).

legatum nominis (lə-gay-təm nahm-ə-nis). [Latin "legacy of a name"] Roman law. A legacy by which a testator willed to the legatee a debt owed to the testator from a third party. • The heir was obliged to hand over the relevant documents and cede any rights of action on them.

legatum optionis (lə-gay-təm op-shee-oh-nis). [Latin "legacy of an option"] Roman law. A legacy of one of several items that the designated beneficiary chooses from the testator's estate. • Originally, if the legatee died after the testator but before making the selection, the legacy failed. Justinian later changed the law to make selection by the legatee's representative under these circumstances valid.

legatum peculii (lə-gay-təm pi-kyoo-lee-i). [Latin] Roman law. A legacy of a peculium to a free person or to a manumitted slave; a legacy of a slave's peculium with or without the slave. See PECULIUM.

legatum quantitatis (lə-gay-təm kwon-ti-tay-tis). [Latin "a legacy of quantity"] Roman law. A general legacy of a certain amount, such as a legacy of two horses.

legatum rei alienae (lə-gay-təm ree-ī ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-). [Latin "a legacy of something belonging to another"] Roman law. A legacy of an item that belongs to a third party. • The heir was obliged to purchase the item from the third party, if that was possible, and give it to the legatee or otherwise pay its value to the legatee.

legatum universitatis (lə-gay-təm yoo-ni-vər-sə-tay-tis). [Latin "a universal legacy"] Hist. A legacy of the testator's entire estate.

legatus (lə-gay-tās), n. A legate. Pl. legati (lə-gay-ti) See LEGATE.

legatus a latere (ay lat-ə-ree). [Latin "legate from the (Pope's) side"] A papal legate (esp. a cardinal) appointed for a special diplomatic mission and not as a permanent representative. • This is a type of legatus missus. — Also termed legate a latere. Cf. NUNCIO.

legatus datus (day-tās). See legatus missus.

legatus missus (mis-əs). [Latin "legate sent"] A legate sent on a special mission. — Also termed legate missus; legatus datus (day-tās).

legatus natus (nay-tās). [Latin "legate born"] A bishop or archbishop who claims to be a legate by virtue of office in an important see, such as Canterbury. — Also termed legate natus.

legem amittere (lee-jəm ə-mit-ə-ree), vb. [Latin "to lose one's law"] Hist. To lose the privilege of taking an oath, usu. because of a criminal conviction.

legem facere (lee-jəm fay-sə-ree), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To make an oath; to wage law.

legem ferre (lee-jəm fer-ee), vb. [Latin "to carry the proposal"] Roman law. 1. To propose a law to the popular assembly. 2. To enact a law.

legem habere (lee-jəm hə-beer-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To be able to testify under oath. • In England, witnesses with criminal convictions were unable to testify until the 19th century, by the Evidence Act of 1843 (6 & 7 Vict., ch. 85).

legem jubere (lee-jəm jə-beer-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To pass a proposed law.

legem ponere (lee-jəm poh-nə-ree), vb. [Latin] Hist. 1. To propound a law. 2. To pay in cash.

legem sciscere (lee-jəm sis-ə-ree), vb. [Latin] Roman law. (Of the people) to consent to a proposed law.

legem vadiare (lee-jəm vad-ee-air-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To wage law; to offer to make a sworn defense to an action for debt, accompanied by 11 neighbors as character witnesses. See COMPURGATION.

legenita. See LAIRWITE.

leger, n. Archaic. See LEDGER (2).

legerwite. See LAIRWITE.

leges (lee-jeez), n. pl. [Latin] 1. See LEX. 2. See LEGES PUBLICAE.

leges Angliae (lee-jeez ang-glee-ee). [Latin] Hist. The laws of England, as distinguished from the civil law and other legal systems.

leges barbarorum (lee-jeez bah-r-bə-ror-əm). [Latin "laws of the barbarians"] Hist. The customary laws of medieval European law; esp., the customary laws of Germanic tribes during the Middle Ages. • These include the lex romana Visigothorum, the lex Burgundionum, and the lex Salica. — Also termed folk laws. See SALIC LAW.

"Many of the conquering Germanic tribes sought to state their own tribal customs in writing. Several of these so-called codes or leges barbarorum were published from time to time shortly after the fall of the Western Empire in the middle of the fifth century until about the time of Charlemagne, 800. The most famous is a Frankish one, the Lex Salica, which probably dates from the second half of the fifth century." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 1 (2d ed. 1949).

leges centuriatae. See LEX CENTURIATA.

leges curiatae. See LEX CURIATA.

leges de imperio. See LEGES IMPERII.

leges Edwardi Confessoris (lee-jeez ed-wahr-dī kon-fā-sor-is), n. [Latin "Laws of Edward the Confessor"] Hist. A legal treatise written between 1130 and 1135, of dubious authority, compiling English law as it stood at the end of the reign of Henry 1.

"[W]e have a book [leges Edwardi Confessoris] written in Latin which expressly purports to give us the law of Edward as it was stated to the Conqueror in the fourth year of his reign by juries representing the various parts of England. . . . It is a private work of a bad and untrustworthy kind. It has about it something of the political pamphlet and is adorned with pious legends. The author, perhaps a secular clerk of French parentage, writes in the interest of the churches, and, it is to be feared, tells lies for them." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1 103 (2d ed. 1898).

leges et consuetudines regni (lee-jeez et kon-swə-t[y] oo-də-nee-z reg-ni), n. [Latin "laws and customs of the kingdom"] Hist. The common law. • This was the accepted term for the common law since at least the late 12th century.

leges Henrici (lee-jeez hen-ri-si), n. [Latin] Hist. A book anonymously written between 1114 and 1118 containing Anglo-Saxon and Norman law. • The book lends insight to the period before the full development of Norman law in England. — Also termed leges Henrici Primi.

"Closely connected with the Quadripartitus is a far more important book, the so-called Leges Henrici. It seems to have been compiled shortly before the year 1118. After a brief preface, it gives us Henry's coronation charter (this accounts for the name which has unfortunately been given in modern days to the whole book), and then the author makes a gallant, if forlorn, attempt to state the law of England. At first sight the outcome seems to be a mere jumble of fragments. . . . But the more closely we examine the book, the more thoroughly convinced we shall be that its author has undertaken a serious task in a serious spirit; he means to state the existing law of the land. . . ." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1 99 (2d ed. 1898).

leges imperii (lee-jeez im-peer-ee-i). [Latin] Roman law.

Laws conferring lawmaking and other powers on the emperor. — Also termed leges de imperio.

leges Juliae (lee-jeez joo-lee-ee). See lex Julia iudiciorum publicorum under LEX JULIA.

leges non scriptae (lee-jeez non skrip-tee). [Latin] Hist. Unwritten or customary laws, including ancient acts of Parliament. Cf. LEGES SCRIPTAE.

leges publicae (lee-jeez pab-lə-see). [Latin] Roman law. Statutes passed by the vote of the Roman people in popular assemblies. • Most leges publicae were of temporary political interest but some, such as the lex Aquilia or the lex Falcidia, had a long life. — Often shortened to leges.

Leges regiae (lee-jeez ree-ji-ee). [Latin] Roman law. Fragments of customary law relating mostly to religious rites and traditionally attributed to Roman kings.

leges sacratae (lee-jeez sə-kray-tee). [Latin] Roman law. Laws whose violation was punished by devoting the offender to the infernal gods.

leges scriptae (lee-jeez skrip-tee), n. [Latin] Hist. Written laws; esp., statutory laws or acts of Parliament that are reduced to writing before becoming binding. Cf. LEGES NON SCRIPTAE.

leges sub graviore lege (lee-jeez səb grav-ee-or-lee-jee). [Latin] Laws under a weightier law.

leges tabellariae (lee-jeez tab-ə-lair-ee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. Laws that regulated voting by ballot.

leges tributae (lee-jeez tri-byoo-tee). [Latin] Roman law. Laws passed in the comitia tributa. See comitia tributa under COMITIA.

legibus solutus (lee-jə-bəs sə-loo-təs), adj. [Latin “released from the laws”] Roman law. (Of the emperor or other designated person) not bound by the law.

legiosus (lee-jee-oh-səs), adj. [Law Latin] Hist. Litigious.

legis actio (lee-jis ak-shee-oh). Roman law. A legal or lawful action; an action at law requiring the use of a fixed form of words. • These actions were abolished by the leges Juliae. — Also termed actio legis. Pl. legis actiones (lee-jis ak-shee-oh-nee-z).

legis actio sacramento. See SACRAMENTO.

legislate, vb. (180) 1. To make or enact laws <the role of our lawmakers is to legislate, not to adjudicate>. 2. To bring (something) into or out of existence by making laws; to attempt to control (something) by legislation <virtually every attempt to legislate morality has failed>.

legislation. (17c) 1. The process of making or enacting a positive law in written form, according to some type of formal procedure, by a branch of government constituted to perform this process. — Also termed lawmaking; statute-making. 2. The law so enacted. 3. The whole body of enacted laws.

ancillary legislation. (1860) Legislation that is auxiliary to principal legislation.

antideficiency legislation. 1. Legislation enacted to provide revenue to cover a budget deficiency. 2. Legislation enacted to limit the rights of secured creditors to recover in excess of the security. — Also termed (in sense 2) antideficiency statute.

bare-bones legislation. See skeletal legislation.

class legislation. See local and special legislation.

general legislation. (18c) Legislation that applies to the community at large. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 68.]

judicial legislation. (18c) The making of new legal rules by judges; JUDGE-MADE LAW (2).

local and special legislation. (1853) Legislation that affects only a specific geographic area or a particular class of persons. • Such legislation is unconstitutional if it arbitrarily or capriciously distinguishes between members of the same class. — Also termed class legislation. [Cases: Statutes ⇨ 76–104.] pork-barrel legislation. (1961) Legislation that favors a particular local district by allocating funds or resources to projects (such as constructing a highway or a post office) of economic value to the district and of political advantage to the district’s legislator.

skeletal legislation. Basic legislation that broadly states objectives and standards rather than prescribing precise and definite rules, usu. with the expectation that it will be amplified by a body other than the legislature. • Administrative and regulatory agencies are usu. authorized to interpret the legislation and create rules and regulations for its application and enforcement. But the executive branch may also be called upon to flesh out the law. — Also termed skeleton legislation; bare-bones legislation.

subordinate legislation. (18c) 1. Legislation that derives from any authority other than the sovereign power in a state and that therefore depends for its continued existence and validity on some superior or supreme authority. 2. REGULATION (3).

supreme legislation. (17c) Legislation that derives directly from the supreme or sovereign power in a state and is therefore incapable of being repealed, annulled, or controlled by any other legislative authority.

4. A proposed law being considered by a legislature <gun-control legislation was debated in the House>.

5. The field of study concentrating on statutes.

legislative, adj. Of or relating to lawmaking or to the power to enact laws.

legislative apportionment. See APPORTIONMENT (3).

legislative assembly. See LEGISLATURE.

legislative branch. (18c) The branch of government responsible for enacting laws; LEGISLATURE. Cf. EXECUTIVE BRANCH; JUDICIAL BRANCH.

legislative committee. See COMMITTEE.

legislative council. 1. A state agency that studies legislative problems and plans legislative strategy between regular legislative sessions. 2. In some English-speaking jurisdictions, the upper house of a legislature (corresponding to an American Senate). 3. In some English-speaking jurisdictions, the lower house of a legislature (corresponding to an American House of Representatives).

legislative counsel. (1839) A person or group charged with helping legislators fulfill their legislative duties, such as by performing research, drafting bills, and the like.

legislative court. See COURT.

legislative day. See DAY.

legislative district. See DISTRICT.

legislative districting. (1962) The process of dividing a state into territorial districts to be represented in the state or federal legislature. See APPORTIONMENT (3); REAPPORTIONMENT; GERRYMANDERING. Cf. MALAPPORTIONMENT. [Cases: States ↷27.]

legislative divorce. See DIVORCE.

legislative-equivalency doctrine. (2003) The rule that a law should be amended or repealed only by the same procedures that were used to enact it. [Cases: Statutes ↷129, 149.]

legislative fact. See FACT.

legislative function. 1. The duty to determine legislative policy. 2. The duty to form and determine future rights and duties. See LEGISLATIVE POWER.

legislative history. (1844) The background and events leading to the enactment of a statute, including hearings, committee reports, and floor debates. • Legislative history is sometimes recorded so that it can later be used to aid in interpreting the statute. [Cases: Statutes ↷216–217.4.] legislative immunity. See IMMUNITY (1).

legislative intent. (1812) The design or plan that the legislature had at the time of enacting a statute. — Also termed intention of the legislature; intent of the legislature; congressional intent; parliamentary intent. [Cases: Statutes ↷181(1).]

"The intention of the legislature is a common but very slippery phrase, which, popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a court of law or equity, what the legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication." Saloman v. Saloman & Co., [1897] A.C. 22, at 38 (as quoted in Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 36–37 (1976)).

dormant legislative intent. The intent that the legislature would have had if a given ambiguity, inconsistency, or omission had been called to the legislators' minds. — Sometimes shortened to dormant intent. — Also termed latent intent; latent intention.

legislative investigation. A formal inquiry conducted by a legislative body incident to its legislative authority. • A legislature has many of the same powers as a court to support a legislative inquiry, including the power to subpoena and cross-examine a witness and to hold a witness in contempt. [Cases: United States ↷23.]

legislative jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

legislative law. See STATUTORY LAW.

legislative officer. See OFFICER (1).

legislative privilege. See PRIVILEGE (1).

Legislative Reference Service. Hist. See CONGRESSIONAL RESEARCH SERVICE.

legislative rule. An administrative rule created by an agency's exercise of delegated quasi-legislative authority. • A legislative rule has the force of law. — Also termed substantive rule. Cf. INTERPRETATIVE RULE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ↷382.1.]

legislative veto. See VETO.

legislator, n. (17c) One who makes laws within a given jurisdiction; a member of a legislative body. — Also termed lawmaker. — legislatorial (lej-is-lə-tor-ee-əl), adj.

legislature. (17c) The branch of government responsible for making statutory laws. • The federal government and most states have bicameral legislatures, usu. consisting of a house of representatives and a senate. — Also termed legislative assembly. Cf. EXECUTIVE (1); JUDICIARY (1). [Cases: States ↷24.]

legisperitus (lee-jis-per-ə-təs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A lawyer or advocate; one skilled in the law. Cf. JURISPERITUS.

legisprudence (lee-jis-proo-dənts). (1950) The systematic analysis of statutes within the framework of jurisprudential philosophies about the role and nature of law.

legist (lee-jist). (15c) 1. One learned or skilled in the law; a lawyer. 2. JURIST. — Formerly also termed legister.

legitim. Scots law. The right of any surviving lawful issue to share in the movable estate of the father. • The legitim comprised third of the estate if there was a surviving spouse, or one-half otherwise. — Also termed the bairn's part. Cf. LEGITIME.

legitimacy. (17c) 1. Lawfulness. 2. The status of a person who is born within a lawful marriage or who acquires that status by later action of the parents; legal kinship between a child and its parent or parents. Cf. ILLEGITIMACY. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨ 1.]

legitimacy presumption. See PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY.

legitima gubernatio (lə-jit-ə-mə g[y]oo-bər-nay-shee-oh). [Latin "lawful government"] See RECTA GUBERNATIO.

legitima potestas (lə-jit-ə-mə pə-tes-təs or -tas). [Latin] Scots law. The lawful power, esp. to dispose of one's property. Cf. LIEGE POUSTIE.

legitima remedia (lə-jit-ə-mə ri-mee-dee-ə). [Law Latin] Scots law. Lawful remedies.

legitima successio (lə-jit-ə-mə sək-ses-ee-oh). [Latin] Scots law. Legal succession.

legitimate (lə-jit-ə-mət), adj. (15c) 1. Complying with the law; lawful . 2. Genuine; valid . 3. Born of legally married parents . [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨ 1.] legitimate child. See CHILD.

legitimate heir. See HEIR (1).

legitimate portion. See LEGITIME.

legitimation, n. (16c) 1. The act of making something lawful; authorization. 2. The act or process of authoritatively declaring a person legitimate, esp. a child whose parentage has been unclear. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⇨ 8.] 3. Hist. Proof of a person's identity and of legal permission to reside in a certain place or engage in a certain occupation. Cf. ADOPTION. — legitimate (lə-jit-ə-mayt), vb.

legitimatō per subsequens matrimonium (lə-jit-ə-may-shee-oh pər səb-see-kwenz ma-trə-moh-nee-əm), n. [Latin] The legitimation of a child born outside wedlock by the later marriage of the parents.

legitime (lej-ə-tim), n. Civil law. The part of a testator's property that his or her children (and occasionally other heirs) are legally entitled to regardless of the will's terms. See La. Civ. Code art. 1494. • The legitime cannot be denied the children without legal cause. In Roman law, the amount of the legitime was one-fourth of the claimant's share on intestacy. — Also spelled (esp. in Scotland) legitim. — Also termed legal portion; legitimate portion; forced portion. See forced heir under HEIR; (for Scots law) LEGITIM. Cf. PORTIO LEGITIMA. [Cases: Wills ⇨ 11.]

legitimi heredes (lə-jit-ə-mi hə-ree-deez), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Heirs on intestacy, as determined by the Twelve Tables; specif., the Praetor's second rank of claimants to an intestate's estate, comprising the agnates of the Twelve Tables order and some others, such as the decedent's patron. See TWELVE TABLES.

legitimo modo (lə-jit-ə-mə moh-doh). [Latin] Scots law. In legal form.

legitimum tempus restitutionis (lə-jit-ə-məm tem-pəs res-ti-t[y]oo-shee-oh-nis). [Law Latin "the legal period for restitution"] Hist. The time during which a claim can be made for restitution.

legitimus (lə-jit-ə-məs), adj. [Latin] Roman law. (Of a person) legitimate; lawful.

legit vel non (lee-jit vel non). [Latin] Eccles. law. Does he read or not. • This was the formal question propounded by a secular court to an ordinary (an ecclesiastical official) when an accused person claimed exemption from the court's jurisdiction by benefit of clergy. If the ordinary found that the accused was entitled to exemption, he responded "legit ut clericus," or, "he reads like a clerk." See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

lego (lee-goh), vb. [Latin] Roman law. I bequeath. • This was a common term for designating a legacy in a will.

legocentrism. See LEGAL CENTRALISM.

lego-literary (lee-goh-lit-ər-er-ee), adj. Rare. Of or relating to law and literature. See LAW AND LITERATURE.

legruita. See LAIRWITE.

leguleian (leg-yə-lee-ən), n. Rare. A pettifogging lawyer. — Also termed leguleius (leg-yoo-lee-əs). — leguleian, adj.

LEIN. abbr. LAW ENFORCEMENT INFORMATION NETWORK.

leipa (li-pə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A runaway or fugitive.

leirwita. See LAIRWITE.

Leistungsschutzrecht. [German] NEIGHBORING RIGHT.

lemon law. (18c) 1. A statute designed to protect a consumer who buys a substandard automobile, usu. by requiring the manufacturer or dealer either to replace the vehicle or to refund the full purchase price. • Almost all states have lemon laws in effect. — Also termed lemon protection. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 206.] 2. By extension, a statute designed to protect a consumer who buys any product of inferior quality. — Also termed (in sense 2) quality-of-products legislation.

Lemon test. (1971) A legal standard for judging the state's violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. • The Lemon test has most often been used in school-related cases. It employs a three-pronged test to determine the state's action: (1) Does the state's action have a religious purpose? (2) Does the state's action have the primary effect of either promoting or inhibiting religion? (3) Does the state's action create an "excessive entanglement" between church and state? Lemon v. Kurtzman, 403 U.S. 602, 91 S.Ct. 2105 (1971). In recent years, the Court has not overturned Lemon but has declined to apply it when deciding Establishment Clause cases.

le mort saisit le vif doctrine (lə mɔr se-zee læ veef). [French "the dead seizes the living"] The principle requiring that there be no gap in the possession of a freehold estate in land, so that legal title vests immediately in the heirs upon the death of the person through whom they claim title. • The doctrine does not exclude unknown heirs or heirs absent at the date of death.

lend, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To allow the temporary use of (something), sometimes in exchange for compensation, on condition that the thing or its equivalent be returned. 2. To provide (money) temporarily on condition of repayment, usu. with interest. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 194.]

lender. A person or entity from which something (esp. money) is borrowed.

lending right. Copyright. The power of a copyright owner to control the use of copies of the work beyond the first sale, when that use involves offering the copy to the public for temporary use with no consideration required. • Lending rights are recognized among members of the European Union. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 38.5.]

lend-lease. (1941) A mutually beneficial exchange made between friendly parties; esp., an arrangement made in 1941, under the Lend-Lease Act, whereby U.S. destroyers were lent to Great Britain in exchange for Britain's leasing of land to the United States for military bases. — Also termed lease-lend.

lenient, adj. Tolerant; mild; merciful <lenient sentence>.

lenient test. (1996) The principle that the attorney-client privilege applicable to a document or other communication will be waived only by a knowing or intentional disclosure, and will not usu. be waived by an inadvertent disclosure. Cf. strict test; Hydraflow test. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ⇨ 168.]

lenity (len-ə-tee). (16c) The quality or condition of being lenient; mercy or clemency. See RULE OF LENITY.

lenity rule. See RULE OF LENITY.

lenocinium (lee-noh-sin-ee-əm), n. [Latin "pandering, brothel-keeping"] 1. Roman law. The crime of prostituting for gain. 2. Roman & Scots law. A husband's scheming in his wife's adultery, as by encouraging another man to seduce her. • The wife could assert this claim as a defense in a divorce action brought by the husband.

leodes (lee-oh-deez), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A vassal. 2. Service to be provided to another. 3. Compensation to be paid by one who killed or seriously injured a vassal, divided among the sovereign, the vassal's lord, and the vassal's next of kin; WERGILD.

leonina societas (lee-ə-ni-nə sə-si-ə-tas). See SOCIETAS LEONINA.

leonine contract (lee-ə-nin). See adhesion contract under CONTRACT.

leproso amovendo (lep-roh-soh ay-moh-ven-doh), n. [Latin "for removing a leper"] Hist. A writ to remove a leper who participated in public gatherings, such as church or meetings.

le roy (ləɾ wəh or læ rɔj), n. [Law French] The king. — Also spelled le roi.

le roy le veut (ləɾ wəh læ voo). [Law French] Hist. The king (or the queen) wills it. • This is the form of the king's or queen's approval to a public bill passed by Parliament. For a queen, the sentence is la reine le veut.

"If the king consents to a public bill, the clerk usually declares, 'le roy le veut, the king wills it so to be:' if to a private bill, 'soit fait comme il est désiré, be it as it is desired.' If the king refuses his assent, it is in the gentle language of 'le roy s'avisera, the king will advise upon it.'" 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 184 (1765).

le roy remercie ses loyal sujets, accepte leur benevolence, et ainsi le veut (ləɾ wəh ruu-mair-see say lwi-ahl soo-zhay, ak-sept luu[r] bay-nay-voh-lawns, ay an-see læ vuu). [Law French] Hist. The king thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence, and therefore wills it to be so. • This is a form of the royal assent to a bill of supply, authorizing money for public purposes. For a queen, the sentence was la reine remercie ses loyal sujets le roy s'avisera (ləɾ wəh sa-veez-rah). [Law French] The king will advise upon it. • This is a form of the refusal of royal assent to a public bill in Parliament (not exercised since 1713). It corresponds to the judicial phrase curia advisari vult. For a queen, the sentence was la reine s'avisera. See CURIA ADVISARI VULT.

lese majesty (leez maj-əs-tee). [Law French "injured majesty"] (16c) 1. A crime against the state, esp. against the ruler. — Also termed laesa majestas; crimen laesae majestatis; crimen majestatis. See crimen majestatis under CRIMEN; high treason under TREASON. 2. An attack on a custom or traditional belief. — Also spelled lèse-majesté; lèse majesty; leze majesty.

lesio enormis. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

lesion (lee-zhən). (15c) 1. An injury or wound; esp., an area of wounded tissue. 2. Civil law. Loss from another's failure to perform a contract; the injury suffered by one who did not receive the equivalent value of what was bargained for. La. Civ. Code art. 2589. — Also spelled (in sense 2) lésion. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 89.] 3. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

"The concept of lésion, unknown as such to the common law, may be defined as a detriment to one of the parties to a contract which results from an imbalance or disparity between the performance promised on the two sides. Down through the ages, civilians have differed over whether it gave the injured party a right of avoidance or rescission. Classical Roman law, designed for a society whose members were strong enough to protect their own interests, denied the right, but by the time of the French Revolution the right had come to be recognized, particularly by the canonists and Pothier. But the Revolution, both because of its emphasis on individual will and because of economic reasons, was hostile to the concept of lésion and the Civil Code provided that it did not affect the validity of a contract except in certain prescribed instances, most notably the case of the vendor of real property. The number of exceptions was enlarged both by subsequent legislation and, at least indirectly, by judicial decision, and this raised a question of the reversal of the general principle that rejected the concept." Allan Farnsworth, "The Development of the Civil Law of Obligations in New States: Senegal, Madagascar, and Ethiopia," in Essays on the Civil Law of Obligations 64 (Joseph Dainow ed., 1969).

lesion beyond moiety. See LAESIO ENORMIS.

less-developed country. See DEVELOPING COUNTRY.

lessee (le-see). (15c) One who has a possessory interest in real or personal property under a lease; TENANT. [Cases: Bailment ↻1; Landlord and Tenant ↻1.]

lessee in the ordinary course of business. A person that, in good faith and without knowledge that the lease is in violation of a third party's ownership rights, security interest, or leasehold interest, leases in the ordinary course from a person in the business of selling or leasing goods of that kind. UCC § 2A-102(a) (26). • The UCC specifically excludes pawnbrokers from the definition.

merchant lessee. A lessee who is a merchant of goods similar to those being leased. UCC § 2A-102(a)(31).

lessee's interest. The appraised value of leased property from the lessee's perspective for purposes of assignment or sale. • The value is usu. the property's market value minus the lessor's interest. Cf. LESSOR'S INTEREST. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻74.]

lesser-evils defense. See DEFENSE (1).

lesser included offense. See OFFENSE (1).

lesser-interest clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease allowing the lessee to reduce payments proportionately if the lessor turns out to own less than 100% of the mineral interest. — Also termed proportionate-reduction clause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻79.3.] lesser offense. See lesser included offense under OFFENSE (1).

less-lethal, n. Jargon. A weapon that inflicts pain or discomfort short of death, as by firing bean bags or rubber bullets, or by discharging electromagnetic, acoustic, or other energy so that the target may be incapacitated but usu. not seriously injured. — Also termed less-lethal force; nonlethal weapon; nondeadly weapon.

less-lethal force. See LESS-LETHAL.

lessor (les-or or le-sor). (14c) One who conveys real or personal property by lease; esp., LANDLORD. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻1.]

lessor of the plaintiff. Hist. The true party in interest prosecuting an action for ejectment. • At common law, an ejectment action theoretically was only for the recovery of the unexpired term of the lease. Conventions of pleadings at the time required the true plaintiff to grant a fictitious lease, thereby becoming a lessor, to an equally fictitious plaintiff in whose name the action would be prosecuted.

lessor's interest. (1821) The present value of the future income under a lease, plus the present value of the property after the lease expires. Cf. LESSEE'S INTEREST.

let, n. (12c) An impediment or obstruction <free to act without let or hindrance>.

let, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To allow or permit <the court, refusing to issue an injunction, let the nuisance continue>. 2. To offer (property) for lease; to rent out <the hospital let office space to several doctors>. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻20.] 3. To award (a contract), esp. after bids have been submitted <the federal agency let the project to the lowest bidder>. [Cases: Public Contracts ↻11.]

lethal, adj. (16c) Deadly; fatal .

lethal injection. (1898) An injection of a deadly substance into a prisoner in order to carry out a sentence of capital punishment.

lethal weapon. See deadly weapon under WEAPON.

letter. (13c) 1. A written communication that is usu. enclosed in an envelope, sealed, stamped, and delivered (esp., an official written communication) <an opinion letter>. 2. (usu. pl.) A written instrument containing or affirming a grant of some power or right <letters testamentary>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻27.] 3. Strict or literal meaning <the letter of the law>. • This sense is based on the sense of a letter of the alphabet. Cf. SPIRIT OF THE LAW.

letter-book. A merchant's book for holding correspondence.

letter contract. See CONTRACT.

letter missive. 1. Hist. A letter from the king (or queen) to the dean and chapter of a cathedral, containing the name of the person whom the king wants elected as bishop. 2. Hist. After a lawsuit is filed against a peer, peeress, or lord of Parliament, a request sent to the defendant to appear and answer the suit. 3. Civil law. The appellate record sent by a lower court to a superior court. — Also termed letter dimissory.

letter of advice. Commercial law. A notice that a draft has been sent by the drawer to the drawee. UCC § 3-701.

letter of advocacy. Hist. Scots law. A warrant, issued by the Court of Session, discharging an inferior court from further proceedings in a matter and transferring the action to the issuing superior court. • In a criminal case, the High Court of Justiciary could issue a letter to call up a case for review from an inferior court. The letter of advocacy was abolished in 1868 and replaced by appeal.

letter of attorney. 1. See POWER OF ATTORNEY (1). 2. See ATTORNEY (1).

letter of attornment. A grantor's letter to a tenant, stating that the leased property has been sold and directing the tenant to pay rent to the new owner. See ATTORNMENT (1).

letter of comfort. See COMFORT LETTER.

letter of comment. See DEFICIENCY LETTER.

letter of commitment. See COMMITMENT LETTER.

letter of credence. Int'l law. A document that accredits a diplomat to the government of the country to which he or she is sent. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Also termed letters of credence.

letter of credit. (17c) Commercial law. An instrument under which the issuer (usu. a bank), at a customer's request, agrees to honor a draft or other demand for payment made by a third party (the beneficiary), as long as the draft or demand complies with specified conditions, and regardless of whether any underlying agreement between the customer and the beneficiary is satisfied. • Letters of credit are governed by Article 5 of the UCC. — Abbr. LC; L/C. — Often shortened to credit. — Also termed circular letter of credit; circular note; bill of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 191.]

"There is some confusion over the exact nature of credits. They resemble a number of commercial devices that are not credits. Often, there is confusion between letters of credit and guaranties, and occasionally between letters of credit and lines of credit. In the credit transaction itself, it is important to distinguish the credit from other contracts and from the acceptance. Generally, the broad credit transaction consists of three separate relationships. These include those that are (1) between the issuer and the beneficiary; (2) between the beneficiary and the account party; and (3) between the account party and the issuer. The first is the letter-of-credit engagement. The second is usually called the underlying contract, and the third is called the application agreement." John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 2.01, at 2-2 (1984).

"A credit is an original undertaking by one party (the issuer) to substitute his financial strength for that of another (the account party), with that undertaking to be triggered by the presentation of a draft or demand for payment and, often, other documents. The credit arises in a number of situations, but generally the account party seeks the strength of the issuer's financial integrity or reputation so that a third party (the beneficiary of the credit) will give value to the account party." John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 2.02, at 2-3 (1984).

"A seller hesitates to give up possession of its goods before it is paid. But a buyer wishes to have control of the goods before parting with its money. To relieve this simple tension, merchants developed the device known as the 'letter of credit' or simply the 'credit' or the 'letter.' Today, letters of credit come in two broad varieties. The 'commercial' letter dates back at least 700 years. It is a mode of payment in the purchase of goods, mostly in international sales. The 'standby' letter of credit is a much more recent mutant. It 'backs up' obligations in a myriad of settings. In the most common standby a bank promises to pay a creditor upon documentary certification of the applicant's clean letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable on its presentation. • No document needs to be presented along with it. — Also termed suicide letter of credit. Cf. documentary letter of credit.

commercial letter of credit. A letter of credit used as a method of payment in a sale of goods (esp. in an international transaction), with the buyer being the issuer's customer and the seller being the beneficiary, so that the seller can obtain payment directly from the issuer instead of from the buyer.

confirmed letter of credit. A letter of credit that directly obligates a financing agency (such as a bank) doing business in the seller's financial market to a contract of sale. UCC § 2-325(3).

documentary letter of credit. A letter of credit that is payable when presented with another document, such as a certificate of title or invoice. — Abbr. DL/C. Cf. clean letter of credit.

export letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a foreign bank, at a foreign buyer's request, in favor of a domestic exporter.

general letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to any and all persons without naming anyone in particular. Cf. special letter of credit.

guaranty letter of credit. See standby letter of credit.

import letter of credit. A commercial letter of credit issued by a domestic bank, at an importer's request, in favor of a foreign seller.

irrevocable letter of credit (i-rev-ə-kə-bəl). 1. A letter of credit that the issuing bank guarantees will not be withdrawn or canceled before the expiration date. 2. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or revoked without the customer's consent. 3. A letter of credit that cannot be modified or canceled without the consent of all parties.

negotiation letter of credit. A letter of credit in which the issuer's engagement runs to drawers and indorsers under a standard negotiation clause.

"Letter-of-credit law has long distinguished the straight credit from the negotiation credit. The engagement of the former runs to the beneficiary; the engagement of the latter runs to 'drawers, endorsers, and bona fide holders.' This quoted phrase is the traditional negotiation clause. The significance of it is that it obviously extends the credit engagement to parties other than the person with whom the account party is doing business." John F. Dolan, The Law of Letters of Credit ¶ 8.02[6], at 8-11 (1984).

open letter of credit. A letter of credit that can be paid on a simple draft without the need for documentary title.

revocable letter of credit (i-rev-ə-kə-bəl). A letter of credit in which the issuing bank reserves the right to cancel and withdraw from the transaction upon appropriate notice. • The letter cannot be revoked if the credit has already been paid by a third party. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨ 191.10.]

revolving letter of credit. A letter of credit that self-renews by providing for a continuing line of credit that the beneficiary periodically draws on and the bank customer periodically repays. • A revolving letter of credit is used when there will be multiple drafts under a single transaction or multiple transactions under a single credit. — Abbr. RL/C.

special letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed to a particular individual, firm, or corporation. Cf. general letter of credit.

standby letter of credit. A letter of credit used to guarantee either a monetary or a nonmonetary obligation (such as the performance of construction work), whereby the issuing bank agrees to pay the beneficiary if the bank customer defaults on its obligation. — Abbr. SL/C. — Also termed guaranty letter of credit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↻191.10.]

straight letter of credit. A letter of credit requiring that drafts drawn under it be presented to a specified party.

suicide letter of credit. See clean letter of credit.

time letter of credit. A letter of credit that is duly honored by the issuer accepting drafts drawn under it. — Also termed acceptance credit; usance credit.

transferable letter of credit. A letter of credit that authorizes the beneficiary to assign the right to draw under it. [Cases: Banks and Banking ↻191.10.]

traveler's letter of credit. 1. A letter of credit addressed to a correspondent bank, from which one can draw credit by identifying oneself as the person in whose favor the credit is drawn. 2. A letter of credit used by a person traveling abroad, by which the issuing bank authorizes payment of funds to the holder in the local currency by a local bank. • The holder signs a check on the issuing bank, and the local bank forwards it to the issuing bank for its credit.

letter of exchange. See DRAFT (1).

letter of intent. (1942) A written statement detailing the preliminary understanding of parties who plan to enter into a contract or some other agreement; a noncommittal writing preliminary to a contract. • A letter of intent is not meant to be binding and does not hinder the parties from bargaining with a third party. Business people typically mean not to be bound by a letter of intent, and courts ordinarily do not enforce one; but courts occasionally find that a commitment has been made. — Abbr. LOI. — Also termed memorandum of intent; memorandum of understanding; term sheet; commitment letter. Cf. precontract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ↻25.]

letter of license. English law. An agreement signed by all the creditors of a financially troubled business that does the following: (1) grants the debtor more time to pay debts, (2) permits the debtor to continue business in the hope of overcoming its financial distress, and (3) protects the debtor from arrest, lawsuit, or other interference while the letter is in effect. See ARRANGEMENT WITH CREDITORS.

letter of recall. 1. A document sent from one nation's executive to that of another, summoning a minister back to his or her own country. 2. A manufacturer's letter to a buyer of a particular product, asking the buyer to bring the product back to the dealer for repair or replacement. — Also termed recall letter.

letter of recredentials (ree-krə-den-shəlz). A formal letter from a host country's diplomatic secretary of state to a minister or ambassador who has been recalled by his or her own country. • The letter officially accredits the foreign minister back to his or her home country.

letter of request. 1. A document issued by one court to a foreign court, requesting that the foreign court (1) take evidence from a specific person within the foreign jurisdiction or serve process on an individual or corporation within the foreign jurisdiction and (2) return the testimony or proof of service for use in a pending case. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 28. — Also termed letter rogatory (rog-ə-tor-ee); rogatory letter; requisitory letter (ri-kwiz-ə-tor-ee). Cf. COMMISSION TO EXAMINE A WITNESS. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻1312.] 2. An instrument by which an inferior court withdraws or waives jurisdiction so that a matter can be heard in the court immediately above. Pl. letters of request.

letter of the law. (17c) The strictly literal meaning of the law, rather than the intention or policy behind it. — Also termed litera legis. Cf. SPIRIT OF THE LAW. [Cases: Statutes ↻189.] letter of undertaking. An agreement by which a shipowner — to avoid having creditors seize the ship and release it on bond — agrees to post security on the ship, and to enter an appearance, acknowledge ownership, and pay any final decree entered against the vessel whether it is lost or not. • A letter of undertaking is often issued by the shipowner's liability insurer. [Cases: Admiralty ↻57.]

"Such informal or extra-legal agreements save court costs and the marshal's fees, avoid the annoyance of having the vessel even temporarily arrested and may well be cheaper than the usual surety bond In Continental Grain Co. v. Federal Barge Lines, Inc., [268 F.2d 240 (5th Cir. 1959), aff'd, 364 U.S. 19, 80 S.Ct. 1470 (1960)], Judge Brown commented that a letter of undertaking given by a shipowner would be treated 'as though, upon the libel being filed, the vessel had actually been seized, a claim filed, a stipulation to abide decrees with sureties executed and filed by claimant, and the vessel formally released. Any other course would imperil the desirable avoidance of needless cost, time and inconvenience to litigants, counsel, ships, clerks, marshals, keepers and court personnel through the ready acceptance of such letters of undertakings.' [268 F.2d at 243]. If, as Judge Brown suggests, the informal agreement is treated as having the same effect as a formal release under bond or stipulation, few questions relating to their use will ever have to be litigated." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 9-89, at 800-01 (2d ed. 1975).

letter rogatory. See LETTER OF REQUEST.

letter ruling. (1950) Tax. A written statement issued by the IRS to an inquiring taxpayer, explaining the tax implications of a particular transaction. — Also termed private letter ruling. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3049.]

letters. (16c) Wills & estates. A court order giving official authority to a fiduciary to conduct appointed tasks. • Examples are letters of administration, letters of conservatorship, letters of guardianship, and letters testamentary. Unif. Probate Code § 1-201(23). See LETTER (2). [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻27; Guardian and Ward ↻16.]

letters ad colligendum bona defuncti (ad kol-ə-jen-dəm boh-nə di-fungk-ti), n. [Law Latin] Hist. An authorization from a judicial officer to an approved person to collect and maintain the goods of a person who died intestate. • These letters were issued only if no representative or creditor existed to exercise this function.

letters close. See LETTERS SECRET.

letter security. See restricted security under SECURITY.

letters of absolution. Hist. Letters issued by an abbot releasing a member of his order from his vows of obedience to that order, thus permitting entry into another order.

letters of administration. (16c) A formal document issued by a probate court to appoint the administrator of an estate. • Letters of administration originated in the Probate of Testaments Act of 1357 (31 Edw. 3, ch. 4), which provided that in case of intestacy the ordinary (a high-ranking ecclesiastical official within a territory) should depute the decedent's closest friends to administer the estate; a later statute, the Executors Act of 1529 (21 Hen. 8, ch. 4), authorized the ordinary to grant administration to the surviving spouse, to next of kin, or to both of them jointly. — Also termed administration letters. See ADMINISTRATION (4). Cf. LETTERS TESTAMENTARY. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻27.]

letters of administration c.t.a. (1894) Letters of administration appointing an administrator cum testamento annexo (with the will annexed) either because the will does not name an executor or because the named executor does not qualify. See administration cum testamento annexo under ADMINISTRATION.

letters of administration d.b.n. (1877) Letters of administration appointing an administrator de bonis non (concerning goods not yet administered) because the named executor failed to complete the estate's probate. See administration de bonis non under ADMINISTRATION.

letters of credence. See LETTER OF CREDENCE.

letters of guardianship. (18c) A court order appointing a guardian to care for the well-being, property, and affairs of a minor or an incapacitated adult. • It defines the scope of the guardian's rights and duties, including the extent of control over the ward's education and medical issues. See GUARDIAN. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ↻16.]

letters of horning. Hist. Scots law. An execution process in which the creditor holding a decree obtained royal letters commanding the debtor to either perform or be outlawed. See HORNING.

letters of marque (mahrk). A license authorizing a private citizen to engage in reprisals against citizens or vessels of another nation. • Congress has the exclusive power to grant letters of marque (U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 11), but it has done so only once since the 19th century. — Also termed letters of marque and reprisal.

"[F]ormerly it was not uncommon for a state to issue 'letters of marque' to one of its own subjects, who had met with a denial of justice in another state, authorizing him to redress the wrong for himself by forcible action, such as the seizure of the property of subjects of the delinquent state." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 321 (5th ed. 1955).

letters of safe conduct. Hist. Formal written permission from the English sovereign to a citizen of a nation at war with England, permitting that person to travel and ship goods, to England or on the high seas, without risk of seizure. • Passports or licenses from foreign ambassadors now may serve the same purpose. See SAFE CONDUCT.

letters of slains. Hist. Letters to the Crown from the relatives of a slain person concurring with the offender's application for a royal pardon. • A pardon could not be granted without the family's concurrence. — Also spelled letters of slanes.

letters patent. (15c) 1. Hist. A document granting some right or privilege, issued under governmental seal but open to public inspection. — Also termed litterae patentes (lit-ər-ee pə-ten-teez). Cf. LETTERS SECRET. 2. A governmental grant of the exclusive right to use an invention or design. — Also termed (in both senses) patent deed. See PATENT (2). [Cases: Patents ↻1.]

letters rogatory. See LETTER OF REQUEST.

letters secret. Hist. A governmental document that is issued to a private person, closed and sealed, and thus not made available for public inspection. — Also termed letters close. Cf. LETTERS PATENT (1).

letters testamentary. (17c) A probate-court order approving the appointment of an executor under a will and authorizing the executor to administer the estate. Cf. LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻27, 32.]

ancillary letters testamentary. Letters testamentary issued at a place where the testator owned property but did not have a domicile. • The executor or administrator is not authorized to act outside the issuing court's territorial jurisdiction. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ↻518.]

domiciliary letters testamentary. Letters testamentary issued at the place where the testator was domiciled.

letter stock. See restricted security under SECURITY.

lettre (le-trə), n. [French "letter"] Hist. A formal instrument granting some authority.

lettre de cachet (le-trə də ka-shay), [French "letter with a seal"] A royal warrant issued for the imprisonment of a person without trial.

leuca (loo-kə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. French law. A league, consisting of 1,500 paces. 2. A league, consisting of 1,000 paces. 3. A privileged space of one mile around a monastery.

levance and couchance (lev-ənts / kow-chənts), Hist. The state or condition of being levant and couchant. See LEVANT AND COUCHANT.

levandae navis causa (lə-van-dee nay-vis kaw-zə), n. [Latin “for the sake of lightening the ship”] Maritime law. The practice of throwing goods overboard to avoid total loss, entitling the owner to compensation from other participants in the maritime venture. See JETTISON; general average under AVERAGE.

levant and couchant (lev-ənt / kow-chənt), adj. [Law French couchant et levant “lying down and rising up”] Hist. (Of cattle and other beasts) trespassing on land for a period long enough to have lain down to rest and risen to feed (usu. at least one night and one day). • This period was the minimum required as grounds for distraint. — Also termed couchant and levant.

levari facias (lə-vair-ī fay-shee-əs). [Law Latin “that you cause to be levied”] A writ of execution ordering a sheriff to seize a judgment debtor’s goods and income from lands until the judgment debt is satisfied. • This writ is now used chiefly in Delaware. Cf. FIERI FACIAS. [Cases: Execution ⇨ 15.]

levari facias damna de disseisitoribus (lə-vair-ī fay-shee-əs dam-nə dee dis-see-zə-tor-ə-bəs), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to be levied the damages from the disseisors”] Hist. A writ directing the sheriff to levy property to pay damages owed to one wrongfully dispossessed of a freehold estate. See DISSEISIN.

levari facias quando vicecomes returnavit quod non habuit emptores (lə-vair-ī fay-shee-əs kwon-doh vi-see-koh-meez ree-tər-nay-vit kwod non hay-byoo-it emp-tor-eez), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to be levied when the sheriff has returned that it had no buyers”] Hist. A writ directing a sheriff, who had already seized some of the debtor’s property and found it unsalable, to sell as much additional property as necessary to pay the entire debt.

levari facias residuum debiti (lə-vair-ī fay-shee-əs ri-zij-oo-əm deb-ə-ti), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to be levied the rest of the debt”] Hist. A writ directing the sheriff to levy upon a debtor’s lands or goods to pay the remainder of a partially satisfied debt.

levato velo (lə-vay-toh vee-loh). [Latin “with the curtain raised”] Roman law. The principle, applied to cases of wreck and salvage, and later to all maritime matters, that cases should be heard in public. • Although commentators disagree about the origin of the expression, it probably refers to the place where causes were heard. A sail was spread before the door, and when the cases were heard, the sail was raised, allowing the proceedings to be open to the public.

levee (lev-ee), n. (17c) 1. An embankment constructed along the edge of a river to prevent flooding. 2. A landing place on a body of navigable water for loading and unloading goods or receiving and delivering passengers and boats.

levee district. See DISTRICT.

levée en masse. See LEVY EN MASSE.

level of abstraction. Copyright. The degree to which a work describes an idea or process in a general rather than concrete way. • Judge Learned Hand posited that from any work one can restate the idea in more and more abstract ways, omitting more and more details, until one is left with an uncopyrightable idea rather than a protectable work of originality. See Nichols v. Universal Pictures Corp., 45 F.2d 119 (1930). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 4.5.]

level-premium insurance. See INSURANCE.

level-rate legal-reserve policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

leverage, n. (1830) 1. Positional advantage; effectiveness. 2. The use of credit or borrowed funds (such as buying on margin) to improve one’s speculative ability and to increase an investment’s rate of return. 3. The advantage obtained from using credit or borrowed funds rather than equity capital. 4. The ratio between a corporation’s debt and its equity capital. — Also termed leverage ratio. 5. The effect of this ratio on common-stock prices.

leverage, vb. (1957) 1. To provide (a borrower or investor) with credit or funds to improve speculative ability and to seek a high rate of return. 2. To supplement (available capital) with credit or outside funds. 3. To fund (a company) with debt as well as shareholder equity. 4. Antitrust. To use power in one market to gain an unfair advantage in another market. 5. Insurance. To manipulate two coverages, as by an insurer’s withholding settlement of one claim to influence a claim arising under another source of coverage.

leverage contract. (1975) An agreement for the purchase or sale of a contract for the future delivery of a specified commodity, usu. silver, gold, or another precious metal, in a standard unit and quantity, for a particular price, with no right to a particular lot of the commodity. • A leverage contract operates much like a futures contract, except that there is no designated contract market for leverage contracts. The market sets the uniform terms of a futures contract. But in a leverage contract, the individual merchant sets the terms, does not guarantee a repurchase market, and does not guarantee to continue serving or acting as the broker for the purchaser. Leverage contracts are generally forbidden for agricultural commodities. 7 USCA § 23(a). Cf. FUTURES CONTRACT. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ⇨ 10.] leveraged buyout. See BUYOUT.

leveraged lease. See LEASE.

leveraged recapitalization. See RECAPITALIZATION.

leverage fund. See dual fund under MUTUAL FUND.

lewd, adj. (14c) Obscene or indecent; tending to moral impurity or wantonness <lewd behavior>.

lewd and lascivious cohabitation. See illicit cohabitation under COHABITATION.

lewd house. See DISORDERLY HOUSE (2).

lewdness. (16c) Gross, wanton, and public indecency that is outlawed by many state statutes; a sexual act that the actor knows will likely be observed by someone who will be affronted or alarmed by it. See Model Penal Code § 251.1. — Also termed open lewdness. Cf. INDECENT EXPOSURE; OBSCENITY. [Cases: Lewdness ⇨1; Obscenity ⇨1.1.]

lex (leks), n. [Latin “law”] 1. Law, esp. statutory law. 2. Positive law, as opposed to natural law. • Strictly speaking, lex is a statute, whereas jus is law in general

(as well as a right). 3. A system or body of laws, written or unwritten, that are peculiar to a jurisdiction or to a field of human activity. 4. A collection of uncodified laws within a jurisdiction. 5. LEX PUBLICA. 6. LEX PRIVATA. 7. Civil law. A legislative bill. Pl. leges (lee-jeez). Cf. JUS. 8. The acquisition of property under some specific law, when the property is made over by a magistrate to the claimant. 9. A term of a contract, treaty, or other agreement.

lex actus (leks ak-təs). See LEX LOCI ACTUS.

lex Aebutia (leks i-byoo-shee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A statute that introduced simplified forms of pleading and procedure. • This was probably enacted in the later part of the second century B.C. See lex Julia iudiciorum publicorum under LEX JULIA.

lex Aelia Sentia (leks ee-lee-ə sen-tee-ə). Roman law. A law that set minimum age requirements for an owner and a slave in a valid manumission, voided manumissions made to defraud creditors, and created the status of dediticii for some manumitted slaves, esp. criminals. See DEDITICII; LATINI JUNIANI.

lex aeterna (leks ee-tər-nə). [Latin] Eternal law. See NATURAL LAW (1).

lex Anastasiana (leks an-ə-stay-shee-ay-nə). [Latin] Roman law. 1. A law establishing that emancipated brothers and sisters receive an intestate inheritance equal to those not emancipated. See AGNATI. 2. A law providing that a person purchasing a debt from the original creditor for less than its nominal value was not entitled to recover from the debtor more than the amount paid with lawful interest.

lex Angliae (leks ang-gee-ee), n. [Latin] Hist. The law of England; the common law.

lex annua. See edictum perpetuum under EDICTUM.

lex apparens (leks ə-par-enz), n. [Law Latin “apparent law”] Hist. The legal processes of trial by ordeal or wager of battle. • The plaintiff could not summon the defendant for trial by these processes before establishing a clear or apparent right through testimony. See ORDEAL.

lex Apuleia (leks ap-yə-lee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law giving a coguarantor, who had paid more than the proper share of debt, an action of reimbursement against the remaining guarantors. — Also spelled lex Appuleia.

lex Aquilia (leks ə-kwil-ee-ə). [Latin “Aquilian law”] Roman law. A Roman statute imposing liability for pecuniary loss tortiously caused and generally regulating loss caused by damage to property, including compensation to be paid for injury to another’s slave or livestock. • A loss had to be financially measurable and caused wrongfully. If the liable party denied liability, then damages were doubled. This law applied to negligence as well as dolus. The law, enacted around 287 B.C., superseded the earlier provisions of the Twelve Tables. — Also termed Aquilian law. See DAMNUM lex Atilia (leks ə-til-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law granting to magistrates the right to appoint guardians. • The law is named after the person who proposed it, perhaps the tribune L. Atilius Regulus. It was enacted about 210 B.C. — Also termed Atilian law.

INJURIA DATUM; DOLUS. See actio legis Aquiliae under ACTIO.

lex Atinia (leks ə-tin-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law declaring that a prescriptive right cannot be acquired in stolen property. • It was enacted in the late third or early second century B.C. — Also termed Atinian law.

lex Baiuvariorum (leks bay-ə-vair-ee-or-əm). [Latin] Hist. The law of Bavaria, a barbarian nation in the Early Middle Ages, first collected (together with the law of the Franks and Alemanni) by Theodoric (ca. 454–526), and finally completed and promulgated by Dagobert (ca. 612–639). — Also termed lex Baiorum; lex Boiorum.

lex barbara (leks bahr-bə-rə). [Latin] Roman law. The law of barbarian nations, i.e., those that were not subject to the Roman Empire.

lex Boiorum. See LEX BAIUVARIORUM.

lex Burgundionum (leks bər-gən-dee-oh-nəm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The law of the Burgundians, first published about A.D. 495.

lex Calpurnia (leks kal-pər-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law extending the lex Silia by establishing procedures to recover goods other than money. • This affected the actiones legis. See LEX SILIA; LEGIS ACTIO.

lex Canuleia (leks kan-yoo-lee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 445 B.C. granting plebeians the right to marry patricians.

lex causae (leks kaw-zee). [Latin] The legal system that governs a dispute.

lex centuriata (lee-jeez sen-tyoor-ee-ay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. A law passed in the comitia centuriata. Pl. leges centuriatae. See comitia centuriata under COMITIA.

lex Cincia (leks sin-shee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 204 B.C. prohibiting certain types of gifts and all gifts or donations of property beyond a certain measure, except to a near relative.

lex Claudia (leks klaw-dee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law that abolished the ancient guardianship of adult women by their male agnate relatives. • This became effective in the first century A.D. — Also termed lex Claudia de tutela.

lex comitatus (leks kom-ə-tay-təs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The law of the county; the law administered in the county court before the earl and his deputies.

lex commercii (leks kə-mər-shee-i), n. [Latin] The law of business or commerce; commercial law. — Also termed lex commissoria (leks kom-ə-sor-ee-ə). See LEX COMMISSORIA.

lex commissoria (leks kom-i-sor-ee-ə). [Latin] “forfeiture clause” or “cancellation clause” Roman law. 1. A term in a contract of sale allowing the seller to rescind the sale if the price was not paid by the agreed time. 2. A clause by which, in a pledge agreement, a debtor and creditor could agree that if the debtor fails to timely pay the debt, the creditor obtains absolute title of the pledged property.

“By the lex commissoria at Rome, the debtor and creditor might agree that if the debtor did not pay at the day, the pledge should become the absolute property of the creditor. But a law of Constantine abolished this power, as unjust and oppressive, and having a growing asperity in practice.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law “583 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3. An agreement in which such a failure-to-timely-pay clause appears. — Also written commissoria lex. 3. LEX COMMERCII.

“But the position of the seller was a good deal more awkward, especially if he had sold a unique object, such as a piece of land, for, apart from express agreement, he would have to retain the land or other object in case the buyer later came along with the price and demanded delivery. The difficulty could be avoided by the insertion of a term known as lex commissoria, which gave the seller an option of declaring the contract at an end if the buyer did not pay within the agreed time. This term probably became common form in Roman law, but was never implied. It always had to be expressly inserted in the contract Not until the time of Lord Mansfield was a similar development complete in English law, though in the end we carried it much further than the Romans.” W.W. Buckland & Arnold D. McNair, Roman Law & Common Law: A Comparison in Outline 231 (F.H. Lawson ed., 2d ed. 1952).

lex communis (leks kə-myoo-nis), n. [Latin] The common law. See JUS COMMUNE.

lex contractus (leks kən-trak-təs). See LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS.

lex Cornelia (leks kor-nee-lee-ə or kor-neel-yə). [Latin] Roman law. One of several laws passed by the dictator L. Cornelius Sulla in 82–81 B.C. — Also termed Cornelian law.

lex Cornelia de edictis (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee ee-dik-təs). See lex Cornelia de iurisdictione.

lex Cornelia de falsis (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee fal-soh or fawl-sis). [Latin] Roman law. See lex cornelia nummaria testamentaria.

lex Cornelia de iniuriis (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee injoor-ee-is). [Latin] Roman law. The Cornelian law providing a civil action for the recovery of a penalty in certain cases of bodily injury and violent invasion of property. • The precise boundary between the crime and the delict is not clear. But the two procedures probably existed side by side.

“Lex Cornelia de iniuriis . . . Punished three kinds of injury committed by violence: pulsare (beating), verberare (striking, causing pains) and domum introire (forcible invasion of another’s domicile).” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 549 (1953).

lex Cornelia de jurisdictione (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee joor-is-dik-shee-oh-nee). [Latin] Roman law. The law forbidding a praetor from departing, during his term of office, from the edict he had promulgated at the term's commencement. • It did not, however, forbid the offer of new remedies. — Also termed lex Cornelia de edictis.

lex Cornelia de sicariis et veneficis (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee si-kair-ee-is et və-nee-fə-sis). [Latin] Roman law. A law combining jurisdiction over gangster-type killings and poisoning, or attempts at such crimes, and addressing the bringing of false witness and bribery of a judge or juror, if those actions brought about a person's death. • The statute was soon extended to cover murder generally when committed within or close to Rome. Emperor Antoninus Pius added a provision for murder to include a slave owner who deliberately killed his own slave.

lex Cornelia de sponsu (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee spon-s[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting a person from acting as surety for the same debtor to the same creditor in the same year for more than a specified amount.

lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria (leks kor-nee-lee-ə nə-mair-ee-ə tes-tə-men-tair-ee-ə). Roman law. A statute making forgery (falsum) a crime, and creating a special court to try forgery cases. • Until the later Roman Empire, falsum included both coining and document forgery. — Also termed lex Cornelia de falsis (leks kor-nee-lee-ə dee fal-soh or fawl-sis). See FALSUM (2).

"It is not absolutely clear whether Sulla passed two laws, one on forging wills and the other on forging money, or whether the one lex Cornelia nummaria testamentaria provided for both sorts of offence to be heard by the quaestio de falsis which it created." O.F. Professor Robinson, The Criminal Law of Ancient Rome 36 (1995).

lex curiata (lex kyoor-ee-ay-tə). [Latin] Roman law. Laws passed in the comitia curiata. Pl. leges curiatae (lee-jeez kyoor-ee-ay-tee). See comitia curiata under COMITIA.

lex Danorum (leks dan-ør-əm). See DANELAW.

lex delicti (leks də-lik-ti). See LEX LOCI DELICTI.

lex deraisnia (leks də-rayn-ee-ə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A law by which a party denies an accusation, showing it to be against reason or probability.

lex de responsis prudentium (leks dee ri-spon-sis prooden-shee-əm). [Latin "law on the replies of the jurists-prudents"] See CITATIONS, LAW OF.

lex domicilii (leks dom-ə-sil-ee-i). [Latin] (18c) 1. The law of the country where a person is domiciled. 2. The determination of a person's rights by establishing where, in law, that person is domiciled. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §§ 11 et seq. (1971).

Lex Duodecim Tabularum (leks d[y]oo-ə-des-əm tab-yə-lair-əm). See TWELVE TABLES.

lex et consuetudo parliamenti (leks et kon-swə-t[y]oo-doh parl-[y]ə-men-ti), n. [Latin] Hist. The law and custom (or usage) of Parliament.

lex Fabia de plagiariis (leks fay-bee-ə dee plaj-ee-air-ee-əs), n. [Latin] Hist. A law directed against kidnapping and harboring of slaves.

lex Falcidia (leks fal-sid-ee-ə). See FALCIDIAN LAW.

lex feudi (leks fyoo-dr). [Law Latin] Scots law. The law of the feu; the law pertaining to feudal title.

lex fori (leks for-i). [Latin] (1803) The law of the forum; the law of the jurisdiction where the case is pending <the lex fori governs whether the death penalty is a possible punishment for a first-degree-murder conviction>. — Also termed lex ordinandi. Cf. LEX LOCI (1). [Cases: Action ☞ 17.]

lex Francorum (leks frang-kor-əm), n. [Law Latin] The law of the Franks, promulgated by Theodoric I, son of Clovis I, at the same time as the law of Alemanni and Bavaria.

lex Frisionum (leks frizh-ee-oh-nəm), n. [Law Latin] The law of the Frisians, promulgated in the middle of the eighth century.

lex Fufia Caninia (leks foof-ee-ə kə-ni-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting owners from freeing by will more than a certain number or proportion of their slaves. • Justinian later abrogated this law. — Also termed lex Fufia Caninia; Fufian Caninian law; Fufian Caninian law.

lex Furia testamentaria (leks fyoor-ee-ə tes-tə-men-tair-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting a testator from bequeathing more than 1,000 asses (i.e., 722 pounds) of copper or the equivalent. • This law, dating from the middle of the republic, was one of the first to restrict legacies. It was passed between 204 and 169 B.C.

"The lex Furia . . . provided that no one except [close] relatives . . . should take by will or gift in view of death more than 1000 asses [copper coins]. It did not rescind the disposition, but enacted a penalty of four times the amount, recoverable by a stringent procedure from anyone who took such a legacy or gift, contrary to the law. But this law left it open to a testator to leave nothing to the heir, supposing he made a sufficient number of legatees up to the statutable limit." 1 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 344-45 (1902).

lex Fusia Caninia. See LEX FUFIA CANINIA.

lex Gabinia (leks gə-bin-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law introducing popular election by secret ballot. • Secret ballots were also used in judicial meetings. — Also termed lex Gabinia tabellaria (leks gə-bin-ee-ə tab-ə-lair-ee-ə).

lex generalis (leks jen-ə-ray-lis). A law of general application, as opposed to one that affects only a particular person or a small group of people.

lex Genucia (leks jə-n[y]oo-shee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law prohibiting the charging of interest on loans between Roman citizens. • The statute was proposed in the 4th century B.C., but it is uncertain when, if ever, it was enacted. If enacted, it was not enforced.

lex Gothica (leks goth-ik-ə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The law of the Goths. • It was first promulgated in writing in A.D. 466.

lex Horatia Valeria. See LEX VALERIA HORATIA.

lex Hortensia (leks hor-ten-s[h]ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law extending to the plebeians full participation in public laws of government and worship; specif., an important constitutional law that made laws passed by the assemblies of the common people (the plebeians) binding on all citizens. • Previously, plebeian assemblies could not bind the patrician class. This statute put enactments of the concilium plebis on the same footing as leges. See JUS PUBLICUM; JUS SACRUM.

lex Hostilia de furtis (leks hos-til-ee-ə dee fər-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A law of the early Republic providing that the state could prosecute a person for theft on behalf of an owner when the owner was captive or abroad. • This affected the actiones legis. See LEGIS ACTIO.

lexical definition. See DEFINITION.

lex judicialis (leks joo-dish-ee-ay-lis), n. [Latin “judicial law”] An ordeal. See ORDEAL.

lex Julia (leks joo-lee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. One of several Roman statutes dating from the reign of the Emperor Augustus (27 B.C.–A.D. 14) or sometimes from Julius Caesar (47–44 B.C.).

lex Julia de adulteriis coercendis (leks joo-lee-ə dee ə-dəl-tər-ee-is koh-ər-sə-ren-dəs). [Latin] Roman law. A statute of 18 B.C. making adultery a public crime, justiciable before a quaestio perpetua. — Sometimes shortened to lex Julia de adulteriis.

lex Julia de ambitu (leks joo-lee-ə dee əm-bi-t[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 18 B.C. discouraging electoral corruption by a would-be magistrate.

lex Julia de annonae (leks joo-lee-ə dee ə-noh-nə). [Latin] Roman law. A law against business combinations that negatively affected the grain supply, esp. attempts to raise the price of corn.

lex Julia de cessione bonorum (leks joo-lee-ə dee ses[h]-ee-oh-nee bə-nor-əm). [Latin] Roman law. A law governing bankruptcies allowing a debtor to avoid further adverse action by ceding all the debtor's property to the creditors.

lex Julia de majestate (leks joo-lee-ə dee maj-ə-stay-tee). [Latin] Roman law. A treason law imposing capital punishment on a person acting against the emperor or state. • Enacted about 8 B.C., this was the last specific law on treason.

lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus (leks joo-lee-ə dee mar-ə-tan-dis or-din-ə-bəs). [Latin] Roman law. A law regulating marriages, imposing a duty to be married on all men between 25 and 60, and on all women between 20 and 50, and forbidding marriages between senators and freedwomen, and forbidding senators and all other freeborn citizens from marrying actresses, prostitutes, and the like. • This 18 B.C. statute is usu. considered as one law with the lex Papia Poppea of A.D. 9, which exempted women with three children or more from being placed under guardianship.

lex Julia de peculatu (leks joo-lee-ə dee pek-yə-lay-t[y]oo). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing the embezzlement of public monies. • Originally a magistrate determined the punishment. The same court had jurisdiction for transgressions under lex Julia de residuis and for sacrilege, the wrongful taking of money dedicated to sacred or religious purposes. See lex Julia de residuis.

lex Julia de residuis (leks joo-lee-ə dee ri-zij-oo-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law punishing persons who could not account for public money lawfully in their charge. See lex Julia de peculatu.

lex Julia judiciorum privatorum (leks joo-lee-ə joo-dish-ee-or-əm pri-və-tor-əm). See lex Julia judiciorum publicorum.

lex Julia judiciorum publicorum (leks joo-lee-ə joo-dish-ee-or-əm pə-bli-kor-əm). [Latin] Roman law. An Augustan law that, with the lex Julia judiciorum privatorum, reformed various aspects of civil procedure. • The two laws are often referred to together as leges Juliae, or duae Juliae. Together with the lex Aebutia, the leges Juliae largely abolished the legis actiones, the ancient form of Roman civil procedure that relied on fixed oral forms.

lex Junia Norbana (leks joo-nee-ə nor-bay-nə). [Latin] Roman law. A law creating the status of Junian Latin for informally manumitted slaves. — Often shortened to lex Junia. See LATINI JUNIANI.

“After the lex Junia Norbana, we find the following classes of persons, under the division of the law of persons into free men or slaves: 1. Ingenui, or persons born free. 2. Libertini . . . ex-slaves who, on gaining their freedom, became cives. 3. Latini Juniani . . . ex-slaves who, on manumission and by reason of some defect therein, became something short of full citizens. 4. Dediticii . . . 5. Slaves proper.” R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 70 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

lex Junia Velleia (leks joo-nee-ə və-lee-yə). [Latin] Roman law. A law providing that certain kinds of descendants must be treated as posthumously born children of a decedent for purposes of heirship. • This probably was enacted in A.D. 26.

lex Kantiae (leks kan-shee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. A body of customs, mainly concerning land tenure, prevailing in Kent during the time of Edward I.

lex Langobardorum. See LEX LONGOBARDORUM.

lex ligeantiae (leks lij-ee-an-shee-ee). [Law Latin] The law of the country to which a person owes national allegiance. • Some jurists have thought that this law ought to decide many of the questions that have usu. been determined by the lex domicilii.

lex loci (leks loh-si). [Latin] (18c) 1. The law of the place; local law. Cf. LEX FORI. 2. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS.

lex loci actus (leks loh-si ak-təs). [Law Latin] The law of the place where an act is done or a transaction is completed. — Often shortened to lex actus.

lex loci celebrationis (leks loh-si sel-ə-bray-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “law of the place of the ceremony”] The law of the place where a contract, esp. of marriage, is made. • This law usu. governs when the validity of a marriage is at issue. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 283(2) (1971).

lex loci contractus (leks loh-si kən-trak-təs). [Latin] The law of the place where a contract is executed or to be performed. • Lex loci contractus is often the proper law by which to decide contractual disputes. — Often shortened to lex loci; lex contractus. [Cases: Contracts ↻144.]

“The lex loci contractus controls the nature, construction, and validity of the contract; and on this broad foundation the law of contracts, founded on necessity and commercial convenience, is said to have been originally established. If the rule were otherwise, the citizens of one country could not safely contract, or carry on commerce, in the territories of another.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *454 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

lex loci delicti (leks loh-si də-lik-ti). [Latin] The law of the place where the tort or other wrong was committed. — Often shortened to lex delicti. — Also termed lex loci delictus; lex loci delicti commissi; place-of-wrong rule; place-of-wrong law. Cf. LOCUS DELICTI. [Cases: Torts ↻103.]

lex loci rei sitae (leks loh-si ree-i si-tee). [Latin] LEX SITUS.

lex loci solutionis (leks loh-si sə-loo-shee-oh-nis). [Latin “law of the place of solution”] The law of the place where a contract is to be performed (esp. by payment). — Often shortened to lex solutionis.

lex Longobardorum (leks long-goh-bahr-dor-əm). [Latin “law of the Lombards”] Hist. An ancient legal code developed between the fifth and eighth centuries, in force until the reign of Charlemagne; the laws of the Lombards, seen cumulatively from the Edict of Rothari in A.D. 643, and added to by Liutprand. • It was a subject of study in the early law school at Pavia. — Also spelled lex Langobardorum; lex Langobardica.

lex majoris partis [Latin “law of the major party”] Majority rule. See MAJORITY RULE.

“The voice of the majority decides. For the lex majoris partis is the law of all councils, elections, &c. where not otherwise expressly provided. But if the house be equally divided, ‘semper presumatur pro negante:’ that is, the former law is not to be changed but by a majority.” Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 105 (1801) (citation omitted).

lex manifesta (leks man-ə-fes-tə). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Open law; manifest law. 2. Trial by duel or ordeal. — Also termed manifest law.

lex maritima. Hist. The body of customs, usage, and local rules governing seagoing commerce that developed in the maritime countries of medieval Europe.

lex mercatoria (leks mər-kə-tor-ee-ə). [Latin “mercantile law”] See LAW MERCHANT.

lex merciorum (leks mər-shee-or-əm). See MERCEN-LAGE.

lex monetae (leks mə-nee-tee). [Latin] The law of the country whose money is in question.

lex naturae (leks nə-tyoor-ee). See NATURAL LAW.

lex naturale (leks nach-ə-ray-lee). [Law Latin] See NATURAL LAW.

lex non scripta (leks non skrip-tə). [Latin “unwritten law”] See unwritten law under LAW. Pl. leges non scriptae.

lex Papia Poppea (leks pay-pee-ə pah-pee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law proposed by the consuls Papius and Poppeus at the request of Augustus. • It is usu. considered with the lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus as one law. — Also termed Papian law; Poppean law. See lex Julia de maritandis ordinibus under LEX JULIA.

lex patriae (leks pay-tree-ee or pa-tree-ee). [Latin] National law; the law of one’s country. See PERSONAL LAW.

lex Petronia (leks pə-troh-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law forbidding masters from sending their slaves to fight wild beasts in the arena, without a magistrate’s authorization. • This law was enacted sometime before A.D. 79.

lex Plaetoria (leks pli- or plee-tor-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law protecting minors against frauds and probably permitting them to apply for a guardian or curator to assist them.

lex Poetelia (leks poh-ə-tee-lee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law abolishing a creditor’s right to reduce his debtor to slave-like treatment. • This law was enacted sometime before 300 B.C.

lex Pompeia de parricidiis (leks pom-pee-ə dee par-ə-si-dee-is). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 70 or 55 B.C. defining what murders amounted to parricide and establishing a special expiatory punishment, in which the offender was executed by being sewn up in a sack with a dog, a rooster, a viper, and a monkey, and thrown into the sea or a river.

lex posterior derogat priori (leks pah-steer-ee-ər der-ə-gat pri-or-i). [Latin “a later law prevails over an earlier one”] The principle that a later statute negates the effect of a prior one if the later statute expressly repeals, or is obviously repugnant to, the earlier law.

lex praetoria (leks pri- or pree-tor-ee-ə). [Latin "praetorian law"] 1. Roman law. Law laid down in the praetor's edict. Cf. JUS PRAETORIUM. 2. Hist. The applicable rules in a court of equity.

lex privata (leks pri-vay-tə). [Latin "private law"] Roman law. A term in a private contract. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

lex publica (leks pəb-li-kə). [Latin "public law"] Roman law. 1. A law passed by a popular assembly and binding on all people. 2. A written law. — Sometimes shortened to lex.

lex Publilia (leks p[ɹi]oo-blil-ee-ə). [Latin "Publilian law"] Roman law. A law dispensing with senatorial approval for the enactments of the plebs (common citizens). • In 339 B.C. these laws strengthened the force of the plebiscita and indirectly weakened the patrician element in the Senate by permitting auctoritas patrum to be given in advance for some legislation, and requiring one of the censors to be a plebeian. — Also termed leges Publiliae Philonis.

lex regia (leks ree-jee-ə). [Latin "royal law"] Roman law. A law ostensibly enacted by the Roman people granting wide legislative and executive powers to the emperor, later interpreted as providing that the emperor was a source of law, the emperor had full legislative powers, and the emperor's will or pleasure had the full force of law. See LEX IMPERII.

lex rei sitae (leks ree-i st-tee). [Law Latin] Scots law. The law of the place where the property is situated.

lex Rhodia (leks roh-dee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. The Rhodian law governing the subject of jettison. • This began as the common law of the ancient Mediterranean Sea. It required that all consignors and the shipmaster share losses equally. — Also termed lex Rhodia de jactu. See RHODIAN LAW.

lex Romana (leks rə-may-nə). [Latin] ROMAN LAW.

Lex Romana Visigothorum (leks rə-may-nə viz-ə-gah-thor-əm). See BREVIARIUM ALARICIANUM.

lex Salica (leks sal-ə-kə). [Latin] See SALIC LAW.

lex Scribonia (leks skri-boh-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law of the late Republic abolishing the acquisition of praedial servitudes through prescription.

lex scripta (leks skrip-tə). [Latin "written law"] See unwritten law under LAW. Pl. leges scriptae.

lex Sempronia (leks sem-proh-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law of 122 B.C. transferring the duty of jury service from the senators to the equestrians (knights). • The control of the juries in the quaestiones perpetuae, particularly in extortion (repetundae) trials, was one of the key areas of political conflict in the late Republic.

lex Silia (leks sil-ee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law providing for personal actions for a fixed sum of money; specif., a law from perhaps 250 B.C. introducing the legis actio per condictionem to claim a fixed sum of money.

lex situs (leks si-təs. [Law Latin] The law of the place where property is located. — Also termed lex loci rei sitae. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §§ 222 et seq. (1971).

lex solutionis. See LEX LOCI SOLUTIONIS.

lex talionis (leks tal-ee-oh-nis). [Law Latin] The law of retaliation, under which punishment should be in kind — an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and so on — but no more. — Also termed eye for an eye; jus talionis; principle of retribution.

"Kant, for example, expresses the opinion that punishment cannot rightly be inflicted for the sake of any benefit to be derived from it either by the criminal himself or by society, and that the sole and sufficient reason and justification of it lies in the fact that evil has been done by him who suffers it. Consistently with this view, he derives the measure of punishment, not from any elaborate considerations as to the amount needed for the repression of crime, but from the simple principle of lex talionis: 'Thine eye shall not pity; but life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot' [Deuteronomy, xix 21]. No such principle, indeed, is capable of literal interpretation; but subject to metaphorical and symbolical applications it is in Kant's view the guiding rule of the ideal scheme of criminal justice." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 118 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"But if the old form of the lex talionis, an eye for an eye or a tooth for a tooth, sounds too barbaric today, may we not reformulate the retributive theory and put it thus: Everyone is to be punished alike in proportion to the gravity of his offense or to the extent to which he has made others suffer?" Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 53 (1961).

lex terrae (leks ter-ee). [Law Latin] See LAW OF THE LAND.

lex Theodosiana (leks thee-ə-doh-see-an-ə). See THEODOSIAN CODE.

lex Valeria Horatia (leks və-leer-ee-ə hə-ray-shee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law making enactments by the assembly of the people in tribes binding on all citizens. • Several laws of this name were passed in 449 B.C. One was aimed at strengthening the force of plebiscita. Another protected plebeian tribunes with sacrosanctity. A third, more dubious, law falls between the lex Valeria of 509 B.C. and the lex Valeria of 300 B.C. in granting the right of provocatio to the Roman citizen oppressed by a magistrate. Cf. LEX HORTENSIA.

lex validitatis (leks val-ə-day-tis). [Latin] Conflict of laws. The presumption of validity given to marriages, contracts, and other matters.

lex Visigothorum (leks viz-ə-gah-thor-əm). [Latin "law of the Visigoths"] The law of a division of the Goths (a Germanic tribe) known as the Visigoths, who conquered Spain in the 5th century. • In the late 7th century, Kings Recceswinth and Erwig imposed a Visigothic common law, and it is to this law that the phrase lex Visigothorum usu. applies. — Also spelled lex Wisigothorum. — Also termed liber iudiciorum.

lex Voconia (leks və-koh-nee-ə). [Latin] Roman law. A law enacted in 169 B.C. to regulate inheritance (esp. by women) by capping the amount receivable by anyone as legacy or gift in view of death at no more than the heirs took. • The Falcidian law superseded the lex Voconia. — Also termed Voconian law. See FALCIDIAN LAW.

"Lex Voconia . . . Contained several provisions concerned with the law of succession: (1) No woman could be heir . . . to an estate having a value greater than a fixed amount . . . (2) Admitted among female agnates only the sisters of the deceased to intestate succession. (3) No one person — male or female — could receive by legacy more than the heir (or all heirs together) instituted in the last will." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 561 (1953).

lex Wallensica (leks waw]-en-zə-kə), n. [Latin] Welsh law.

ley (lay), n. [Law French] Hist. Law.

ley civile (lay see- or sə-veel), n. [Law French] Hist. 1. The civil law. 2. The Roman law. — Also termed ley escripte.

ley de terre (lay də tair). [Law French] See LAW OF THE LAND.

leyerwite. See LAIRWITE.

ley escripte (lay es-kript). See LEY CIVILE.

ley gager (lay gay-jər), n. [Law French] Hist. Wager of law; the defendant's giving of security to make law on a particular day. See WAGER OF LAW.

leze majesty. See LESE MAJESTY.

L.F. abbr. LAW FRENCH.

LHWCA. abbr. LONGSHORE AND HARBOR WORKERS' COMPENSATION ACT.

liability, n. (18c) 1. The quality or state of being legally obligated or accountable; legal responsibility to another or to society, enforceable by civil remedy or criminal punishment <liability for injuries caused by negligence>. — Also termed legal liability; subjection. Cf. FAULT. 2. (often pl.) A financial or pecuniary obligation; DEBT <tax liability> <assets and liabilities>.

"The term 'liability' is one of at least double signification. In one sense it is the synonym of duty, the correlative of right; in this sense it is the opposite of privilege or liberty. If a duty rests upon a party, society is now commanding performance by him and threatening penalties. In a second sense, the term 'liability' is the correlative of power and the opposite of immunity. In this case society is not yet commanding performance, but it will so command if the possessor of the power does some operative act. If one has a power, the other has a liability. It would be wise to adopt the second sense exclusively. Accurate legal thinking is difficult when the fundamental terms have shifting senses." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 9 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"Liability or responsibility is the bond of necessity that exists between the wrongdoer and the remedy of the wrong. This vinculum juris is not one of mere duty or obligation; it pertains not to the sphere of ought but to that of must." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 364 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

absolute liability. See strict liability.

accomplice liability. (1958) Criminal responsibility of one who acts with another before, during, or (in some jurisdictions) after a crime. See 18 USCA § 2. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 59.]

accrued liability. (1877) A debt or obligation that is properly chargeable in a given accounting period but that is not yet paid.

alternative liability. (1929) Liability arising from the tortious acts of two or more parties — when the plaintiff proves that one of the defendants has caused harm but cannot prove which one caused it — resulting in a shifting of the burden of proof to each defendant. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 433B(3) (1965). [Cases: Torts ⇨ 130.]

civil liability. (1817) 1. Liability imposed under the civil, as opposed to the criminal, law. 2. The state of being legally obligated for civil damages.

contingent liability. (18c) A liability that will occur only if a specific event happens; a liability that depends on the occurrence of a future and uncertain event. • In financial statements, contingent liabilities are usually stated in footnotes.

current liability. A business liability that will be paid or otherwise discharged with current assets or by creating other current liabilities within the next year (or operating cycle). — Also termed short-term debt.

derivative liability. (1886) Liability for a wrong that a person other than the one wronged has a right to redress. • Examples include liability to a widow in a wrongful-death action and liability to a corporation in a shareholder's derivative suit.

enterprise liability. (1941) 1. Liability imposed on each member of an industry responsible for manufacturing a harmful or defective product, allotted by each manufacturer's market share of the industry. — Also termed industry-wide liability. See market-share liability. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 164, 165.] 2. Criminal liability imposed on a business (such as a corporation or partnership) for certain offenses, such as public-welfare offenses or offenses for which the legislature specifically intended to impose criminal sanctions. See Model Penal Code § 2.07. See public-welfare offense under OFFENSE (1).

fault liability. Liability based on some degree of blameworthiness. — Also termed fault-based liability. Cf. strict liability.

joint and several liability. (1819) Liability that may be apportioned either among two or more parties or to only one or a few select members of the group, at the adversary's discretion. • Thus, each liable party is individually responsible for the entire obligation, but a paying party may have a right of contribution and indemnity from nonpaying parties. See solidary liability. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 181; Negligence ⇨ 484; Torts ⇨ 135.]

joint liability. (18c) Liability shared by two or more parties. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 484; Torts ⇨ 135.] liability in solido. See solidary liability.

liability without fault. See strict liability.

limited liability. (1833) Liability restricted by law or contract; esp., the liability of a company's owners for nothing more than the capital they have invested in the business. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 215.]

market-share liability. (1980) Liability that is imposed, usu. severally, on each member of an industry, based on each member's share of the market or respective percentage of the product that is placed on the market. • This theory of liability usu. applies only in the situation in which a plaintiff cannot trace the harmful exposure to a particular product, as when several products contain a fungible substance. For example, it is sometimes applied to a claim that the plaintiff was harmed by exposure to asbestos. See enterprise liability. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 114; Products Liability ⇨ 166; Receivers ⇨ 168.]

official liability. Liability of an officer or receiver for a breach of contract or a tort committed during the officer's or receiver's tenure, but not involving any personal liability.

penal liability. Liability arising from a proceeding intended at least partly to penalize a wrongdoer. Cf. remedial liability.

personal liability. (18c) Liability for which one is personally accountable and for which a wronged party can seek satisfaction out of the wrongdoer's personal assets.

premises liability. See PREMISES LIABILITY.

primary liability. (1834) Liability for which one is directly responsible, as opposed to secondary liability.

products liability. See PRODUCTS LIABILITY.

remedial liability. Liability arising from a proceeding whose object contains no penal element. • The two types of proceedings giving rise to this liability are specific enforcement and restitution. Cf. penal liability.

secondary liability. (1830) Liability that does not arise unless the primarily liable party fails to honor its obligation.

several liability. (1819) Liability that is separate and distinct from another's liability, so that the plaintiff may bring a separate action against one defendant without joining the other liable parties. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 484; Torts ⇨ 135.]

shareholder's liability. 1. The statutory, added, or double liability of a shareholder for a corporation's debts, despite full payment for the stock. 2. The liability of a shareholder for any unpaid stock listed as fully owned on the stock certificate, usu. occurring either when the shareholder agrees to pay full par value for the stock and obtains the certificate before the stock is paid for, or when partially paid-for stock is intentionally issued by a corporation as fully paid, the consideration for it being entirely fictitious. — Also termed stockholder's liability. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 215, 227.]

solidary liability (sol-ə-dair-ee). Civil law. The liability of any one debtor among two or more joint debtors to pay the entire debt if the creditor so chooses. La. Civ. Code art. 1794. • This is equivalent to joint and several liability in the common law. — Also termed liability in solido. See joint and several liability. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 484; Torts ⇨ 135.]

statutory liability. Liability that is created by a statute (or regulation) as opposed to common law.

stockholder's liability. See shareholder's liability.

strict liability. (1844) Liability that does not depend on actual negligence or intent to harm, but that is based on the breach of an absolute duty to make something safe. • Strict liability most often applies either to ultrahazardous activities or in products-liability cases. — Also termed absolute liability; liability without fault. Cf. fault liability; OUTCOME RESPONSIBILITY. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 301–307; Products Liability ⇨ 113.]

tortious liability. Liability that arises from the breach of a duty that (1) is fixed primarily by the law, (2) is owed to persons generally, and (3) when breached, is redressable by an action for unliquidated damages.

vicarious liability (vi-kair-ee-əs). (1890) Liability that a supervisory party (such as an employer) bears for the actionable conduct of a subordinate or associate (such as an employee) based on the relationship between the two parties. See RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 3026; Negligence ⇨ 483.]

"The vicarious liability of an employer for torts committed by employees should not be confused with the liability an employer has for his own torts. An employer whose employee commits a tort may be liable in his own right for negligence in hiring or supervising the employee. If in my business I hire a truck driver who has a record of drunk driving and on whom one day I detect the smell of bourbon, I (along with my employee) may be held liable for negligence if his driving causes injury. But that is not 'vicarious' liability—I am held liable for my own negligence in hiring that employee or letting him drive after I know he has been drinking." Kenneth S. Abraham, The Forms and Functions of Tort Law 166 (2002).

liability bond. See BOND (2).

liability dividend. See scrip dividend under DIVIDEND.

liability in solido. See solidary liability under LIABILITY.

liability insurance. See INSURANCE.

liability limit. Insurance. The maximum amount of coverage that an insurance company will provide on a single claim under an insurance policy. — Also termed limit of liability; policy limits. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2105.] liability without fault. See strict liability under LIABILITY.

liable (lī-ə-bəl also lī-bəl), adj. (15c) 1. Responsible or answerable in law; legally obligated. 2. (Of a person) subject to or likely to incur (a fine, penalty, etc.). — Also termed legally liable. See LIABILITY.

liar's loan. See LOAN.

libel (lɪ-bəl), n. (14c) 1. A defamatory statement expressed in a fixed medium, esp. writing but also a picture, sign, or electronic broadcast. • Libel is classified as both a crime and a tort but is no longer prosecuted as a crime. — Also termed defamatory libel. 2. The act of making such a statement; publication of defamatory matter by written or printed words, by its embodiment in physical form or by any other form of communication that has the potentially harmful qualities characteristic of written or printed words. See DEFAMATION. Cf. SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 1, 14, 25.]

"Libel is written or visual defamation; slander is oral or aural defamation." Robert D. Sack & Sandra S. Baron, Libel, Slander, and Related Problems § 2.3, at 67 (2d ed. 1994).

"The distinction itself between libel and slander is not free from difficulty and uncertainty. As it took form in the seventeenth century, it was one between written and oral words. But later on libel was extended to include pictures, signs, statues, motion pictures, and even conduct carrying a defamatory imputation, such as hanging the plaintiff in effigy, erecting a gallows before his door, dishonoring his valid check drawn upon the defendant's bank, or even . . . following him over a considerable period in a conspicuous manner. From this it has been concluded that libel is that which is communicated by the sense of sight, or perhaps also by touch or smell, while slander is that which is conveyed by the sense of hearing." W. Page Keeton et al., The Law of Torts § 112, at 786 (5th ed. 1984).

criminal libel. At common law, a malicious libel that is designed to expose a person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule and that may subject the author to criminal sanctions. • Because of constitutional protections of free speech, libel is no longer criminally prosecuted. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 141.]

false-implication libel. Libel that creates a false implication or impression even though each statement in the article, taken separately, is true. See FALSE LIGHT; INVASION OF PRIVACY.

group libel. (1940) Libel that defames a class of persons, esp. because of their race, sex, national origin, religious belief, or the like. • Civil liability for group libel is rare because the plaintiff must prove that the statement applied particularly to him or her. Cf. hate speech under SPEECH. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 21.]

libel per quod (pər kwɒd). (1927) 1. Libel that is actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not recognize libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel in which the defamatory meaning is not apparent from the statement on its face but rather must be proved from extrinsic circumstances. See INNUENDO (2). [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 1, 6–13, 32, 33.]

libel per se (pər say). (1843) 1. Libel that is actionable in itself, requiring no proof of special damages. • Most jurisdictions do not distinguish between libel per se and libel per quod, holding instead that general damages from libel are presumed. 2. Libel that is defamatory on its face, such as the statement "Frank is a thief." [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 33.]

obscene libel. Hist. 1. The common-law crime of publishing, with the intent to corrupt, material (esp. sexual words or pictures) that tends to deprave or corrupt those whose minds are open to immoral influences. 2. A writing, book, picture, or print that is so obscene that it shocks the public sense of decency.

sedition libel. Libel made with the intent of inciting sedition. • Like other forms of criminal libel, seditious libel is no longer prosecuted. See SEDITION. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 141, 145.]

trade libel. Trade defamation that is written or recorded. See trade defamation under DEFAMATION; DISPARAGEMENT (3). Cf. trade slander under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 130.]

3. The complaint or initial pleading in an admiralty or ecclesiastical case. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 60.] — Also termed (in sense 3) libel of information.

libel, vb. (16c) 1. To defame (someone) in a permanent medium, esp. in writing. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 1, 25.] 2. Hist. Maritime law. To sue in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. • This use of the term was eliminated with the merging of the Admiralty Rules into the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in 1986.

libellant (lɪ-bəl-ənt). (16c) 1. The party who institutes a suit in admiralty or ecclesiastical court by filing a libel. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 41.] 2. LIBELER. — Also spelled libellant.

libelee (lɪ-bəl-ee). The party against whom a libel has been filed in admiralty or ecclesiastical court. — Also spelled libellee. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 42.]

libeler. One who publishes a written defamatory statement. — Also spelled libeller. — Also termed libellant. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 25.]

libellary procedure (lɪ-bəl-er-ee). Roman law. The preliminary proceedings in a lawsuit, initiated by a plaintiff's written claims (in a libellus) to the magistrate.

libellos agere (lə-bel-əs əj-ə-ree), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To assist the emperor in responding to petitions. — Also termed libellum agere.

libellous, adj. See LIBELOUS.

libellus (lə-bel-əs), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A small book; a written statement to a court; a petition. 2. Hist. An instrument conveying all or part of land. 3. Any one of a number of legal petitions or documents, such as a bill of complaint.

libellus accusatorius (lə-bel-əs ə-kyoo-zə-tor-ee-əs). [Latin] Roman law. A criminal accusation in writing.

libellus appellatorius (lə-bel-əs ə-pel-ə-tor-ee-əs). [Latin] Roman law. A written appeal in cognitio proceedings.

libellus conventionis (lə-bel-əs kən-ven-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The statement of a plaintiff's claim in a petition sent to the magistrate, who directs its delivery to the defendant.

"The libellus conventionis was very like the intentio of the formulary system, and the modern statement of claim, since it set forth in a succinct manner the nature of the plaintiff's right and the circumstances attending its alleged violation." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 417 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

libellus divortii (lə-bel-əs di-vor-shee-ı). [Latin] Roman law. A bill of divorce. — In the later Roman empire, also termed libellus repudii.

libellus famosus (lə-bel-əs fə-moh-səs). [Latin] Roman law. A defamatory publication.

"Libellus famosus . . . According to the Lex Cornelia de iniuriis punishment was inflicted on the person who wrote (scripserit), composed (composuerit) or edited (ediderit) such a lampoon, even if the publication was made under another name or anonymously (sine nomine)." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 562 (1953).

libellus repudii (lə-bel-əs ri-pyoo-dee-ı). See LIBELLUS DIVORTII.

libellus rerum (lə-bel-əs reer-əm), n. [Latin] Hist. An inventory.

libellus supplex (lə-bel-əs səp-leks). [Latin] Roman law. A petition, esp. to the emperor. • All petitions to the emperor had to be in writing.

libel of accusation. Scots law. The instrument stating the criminal charge against an accused person.

libel of information. Maritime law. See LIBEL (3).

libel of review. Maritime law. A new proceeding attacking a final decree after the right to appeal has expired. See LIBEL (3).

libelous, adj. Constituting or involving libel; defamatory . — Also spelled libellous. [Cases: Libel and Slander ◊6-14.]

libel per quod. See LIBEL.

libel per se. See LIBEL.

liber (li-bər), adj. [Latin "free"] 1. (Of courts, public places, etc.) open and accessible. 2. (Of a person) having the state or condition of a freeman. 3. (Of a person) free from another's service or authority.

liber (li-bər), n. [Latin "book"] 1. A book of records, esp. of deeds. 2. A main division of a literary or professional work.

libera batella (lib-ər-ə bə-tel-ə), n. [Latin "free boat"] Hist. The right to have a boat fish in certain waters; free fishery.

libera chasea habenda (lib-ər-ə chay-see-ə hə-ben-də), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A judicial writ granting a person the right to a free chase after game belonging to the person's manor, after the jury's verdict granting that right. See CHASE.

libera eleemosyna (lib-ər-ə el-ə-mos-ə-nə). See FRANKALMOIN.

libera falda (lib-ər-ə fal-də or fawl-də). See DE LIBERA FALDA.

liberal, adj. (14c) 1. (Of a condition, state, opinion, etc.) not restricted; expansive; tolerant <liberal policy>. 2. (Of a person or entity) opposed to conservatism; advocating expansive freedoms and individual expression <liberal party>. 3. (Of an act, etc.) generous . 4. (Of an interpretation, construction, etc.) not strict or literal; loose .

liberal construction. See CONSTRUCTION.

libera lex (lib-ər-ə leks), n. [Latin "free law"] Hist. Free law; the law of the land. • This phrase referred to the law enjoyed by free and lawful men, as opposed to men who had lost the benefit and protection of the law as a result of committing crimes. See LIBERAM LEGEM AMITTERE.

liberal interpretation. See INTERPRETATION.

liberam legem amittere (lib-ər-əm lee-jəm ə-mit-ə-ree). [Latin] Hist. To lose one's free law. • This phrase refers to falling, by crime or infamy, from the status of libera lex. By what was known as a "villenous judgment," a person would be discredited as juror and witness, would forfeit goods and chattels and lands for life, would have his houses razed and trees uprooted, and would go to prison. This was the ancient punishment of a conspirator and of a party involved in a wager of battle who cried "craven." — Also termed amittere liberam legem; amittere legem terrae ("to lose the law of the land"). See VILLENOUS JUDGMENT.

libera piscaria (lib-ər-ə pis-kair-ee-ə). See free fishery under FISHERY (1).

liberare (lib-ə-ray-ee), vb. 1. Civil law. To set (a person) free. 2. Hist. To deliver or transfer (a writ, etc.).

liberari facias (lib-ə-ray-ee fay-shee-əs). [Law Latin "that you cause to be delivered"] Hist. A writ of execution ordering a sheriff to seize the debtor's unsalable real property and deliver it to the creditor to satisfy the creditor's claim. Cf. LEVARI FACIAS; FIERI FACIAS.

liber assisarum (li-bər as-ı-zair-əm), n. [Law Latin "Book of Assizes"] Hist. A collection of cases arising in assizes and other country trials. • It was the fourth volume of the reports of the reign of Edward III.

liberate (lib-ə-ray-tee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A chancery writ to the Exchequer ordering the payment of an annual pension or other sum. 2. A writ to the sheriff authorizing delivery of any property given as bond and then taken when a defendant forfeited a recognizance. 3. A writ to a jailer ordering delivery of a prisoner who had paid bail. 4. A writ to a sheriff commanding him to deliver to the plaintiff lands or goods pledged as part of a commercial trade loan arrangement (a statute staple) available in certain merchant towns in England. • If a debtor defaulted on this obligation, the creditor could obtain a writ of extent, which directed the sheriff to take an inventory and entitled the creditor to keep the debtor's property for a time until the rentals on the property equaled the amount due. The writ of liberate was issued after the inventory had been performed under the writ of extent. See EXTENT; STAPLE (1), (2).

liberate, vb. (17c) To set (a person) free, as from slavery, bondage, or hostile control.

liberatio (lib-ə-ray-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Money paid for the delivery or use of a thing; a payment.

liberatio legata (lib-ə-ray-shee-oh lə-gay-tə). See LEGATUM LIBERATIONIS.

liberation. (15c) 1. The act or an instance of freeing someone or something. 2. Civil law. Final payment under a contract, thereby extinguishing the debt.

liberation movement. Int'l law. An organized effort to achieve the political independence of a particular nation or people.

liberatio nominis (lib-ə-ray-shee-oh nahm-ə-nis). [Latin] Roman law. The discharge of a debt.

liberative, adj. Serving or tending to free or release.

liberative prescription. See PRESCRIPTION.

Liber Authenticorum (lɪ-bər aw-then-tə-kor-əm). [Latin] Roman law. A translated, unabridged collection of Justinian's Greek Novels, assembled between A.D. 535 and 556. • This collection is distinguished from the similar work, the Epitome Juliani. — Also termed Authenticum.

libera warrena (lib-ər-ə wor-ee-nə). See free warren under WARREN.

liber bancus (lɪ-bər bang-kəs). See FREE BENCH.

liber et legalis homo (lɪ-bər et lə-gay-lis). See LEGALIS HOMO.

liberi (lib-ər-i), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. 1. Children. 2. Descendants. • In the praetorian rules of intestate succession, liberi were the first rank of claimants, comprising the sui heredes of the Twelve Tables, and some others, such as emancipated children. Cf. LEGITIMI HEREDES.

liberis nascituris (lib-ər-is nas-ə-t[y]uur-is). [Latin] Hist. To children yet to be born. • The phrase usu. referred to designations made in marriage contracts.

liber iudiciorum. See LEX VISIGOTHORUM.

liber judicialis of Alfred (lɪ-bər joo-dish-ee-ay-lis), n. [Law Latin] See DOOMBOOK.

liber niger (lɪ-bər ni-jər), n. [Latin “black book”] Hist. An ancient record, such as the register in the Exchequer and the register of charters of abbeys and cathedrals.

Liber Niger Parvus (lɪ-bər ni-jər pah-rvəs). See BLACK BOOK OF THE EXCHEQUER.

liber ruber scaccarii (lɪ-bər roo-bər skə-kair-ee-i), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Red book of the Exchequer. • This was an ancient register of the names of those holding land per baroniam during the reign of Henry II.

libertas (li-bər-tas or lib-ər-tas), n. [Latin “liberty, freedom”] Hist. A privilege or franchise.

libertas ecclesiastica (li-bər-tas e-klee-z[h]ee-as-ti-kə), n. [Law Latin “church liberty”] Hist. Immunity from secular law, enjoyed by the church and the clergy, who are subject to ecclesiastical law. • This immunity was created in Magna Carta (1215).

libertatibus allocandis (lib-ər-tay-tə-bəs al-ə-kan-dis). See DE LIBERTATIBUS ALLOCANDIS.

libertatibus exigendis in itinere (lib-ər-tay-tə-bəs ek-sə-jen-dis in i-tin-ə-ree), n. [Latin] Hist. A writ from the king to one of a panel of itinerant judges (the justices in eyre) ordering them to admit an attorney to represent a criminal defendant. See EYRE.

liberti (li-bər-tɪ), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Manumitted slaves, considered in their relation with their former masters, who were known as patrons. Cf. INGENUUS; LIBERTINI.

liberticide (lə-bər-tə-sid), n. 1. The destruction of liberty. 2. A destroyer of liberty. — liberticidal, adj.

liberties. Hist. 1. Privileged districts exempt from the sheriff's jurisdiction. 2. In American colonial times, laws. 3. Political subdivisions of Philadelphia.

libertini (lib-ər-tɪ-nɪ), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. See LATINI JUNIANI.

liberty. (14c) 1. Freedom from arbitrary or undue external restraint, esp. by a government <give me liberty or give me death>. 2. A right, privilege, or immunity enjoyed by prescription or by grant; the absence of a legal duty imposed on a person <the liberties protected by the Constitution>. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇨ 1079, 3873.]

“[Liberty] denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized at common law as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men.” Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 399, 43 S.Ct. 625, 626 (1923).

“The sphere of my legal liberty is that sphere of activity within which the law is content to leave me alone.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 239 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“The word liberty has become a symbol around which have clung some of the most generous human emotions. We have been brought up to thrill with admiration at the men who say, Give me liberty or give me death. But the philosopher asks whether all those who are devoted to liberty mean the same thing. Does liberty or freedom, for instance, involve free trade? Does it involve freedom to preach race hatred or the overthrow of all that we regard as sacred? Many who believe in liberty characterize the freedom which they are not willing to grant, as license, and they do it so often that one may be inclined to think that what we really need is less liberty and more license. Moreover, there is a confusion between the absence of legal restraint and the presence of real freedom as positive power to do what we want. The legal freedom to earn a million dollars is not worth a cent to one who has no real opportunity. It is fashionable to assert that men want freedom above all other things, but a strong case may be made out for the direct contrary. Absolute freedom is just what people do not want . . .” Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 101-02 (1961).

civil liberty. See CIVIL LIBERTY.

individual liberty. See personal liberty.

natural liberty. (16c) The power to act as one wishes, without any restraint or control, unless by nature.

“This natural liberty . . . being a right inherent in us by birth . . . But every man, when he enters into society, gives up a part of his natural liberty, as the price of so valuable a purchase, and, in consideration of receiving the advantages of mutual commerce, obliges himself to conform to those laws, which the community has thought proper to establish." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 121 (1765).

personal liberty. (16c) One's freedom to do as one pleases, limited only by the government's right to regulate the public health, safety, and welfare. — Also termed individual liberty. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1079.]

political liberty. (17c) A person's freedom to participate in the operation of government, esp. in elections and in the making and administration of laws.

religious liberty. (17c) Freedom — as guaranteed by the First Amendment — to express, without external control other than one's own conscience, any or no system of religious opinion and to engage in or refrain from any form of religious observance or public or private religious worship, as long as it is consistent with the peace and order of society. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1290–1428.]

Liberty Clause. (1971) The Due Process Clause in the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. See DUE PROCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻3840–4841.]

liberty interest. See INTEREST (2).

liberty not. See NO-DUTY.

liberty of a port. Marine insurance. A license incorporated in a marine policy allowing the vessel to dock and trade at a designated port other than the principal port of destination.

liberty of contract. See FREEDOM OF CONTRACT.

liberty of speech. See FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

liberty of the globe. Marine insurance. A license incorporated in a marine policy authorizing the vessel to go to any part of the world, rather than be confined to a particular port of destination. [Cases: Insurance ↻2214.]

liberty of the press. See FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

liberum maritadium (lib-ər-əm mar-ə-tay-jee-əm). See FRANKMARRIAGE.

liberum servitium (lib-ər-əm sər-vish-ee-əm), n. [Law Latin] See SERVITIUM LIBERUM.

liberum socagium (lib-ər-əm sok-ay-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin] See free socage under SOCAGE.

liberum tenementum (lib-ər-əm ten-ə-men-təm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A plea of freehold; a defensive common-law pleading in an action for trespass to lands. • The defendant pleaded either ownership of the land in question or authorization from the freehold owner. [Cases: Trespass ↻27.] 2. FREEHOLD.

liberum veto. See VETO.

LIBOR. abbr. See LONDON INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

libra (lɪ-brə), n. [Latin] Hist. An English pound; a sum of money equal to a pound sterling. Pl. librae.

libra arsa (lɪ-brə ahr-sə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A pound melted to test its purity.

libra numerata (lɪ-brə n[y]oo-mə-ray-tə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A pound of money that has been counted.

libra pensa (lɪ-brə pen-sə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A pound of money by weight.

librarian. Parliamentary law. An officer charged with custody of an organization's books, periodicals, and other published matter, and sometimes of the organization's own archives and files as well.

Library of Congress. A library on the U.S. Capitol grounds responsible for conducting research for members of Congress and congressional committees.

• The Library maintains collections of materials that in many areas are the world's most extensive. Headed by a Librarian appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, it was established in 1860. 2 USCA §§ 131 et seq.

libripens (lib-rə-penz), n. [Latin] Roman law. A person who holds a bronze balance during actual or ritual sales, such as the ceremonies of emancipating a son from his father or conveying important property; a scale-holder. • The purchaser strikes the balance with a piece of bronze to symbolize completion of the sale. The seller then receives the bronze as a sign of the purchase money. See MANCIPATION.

liceity. (lɪ-say-tee or li-) Ecclesiastical law. The legality of an act, esp. of a sacrament. • Licity is distinguished from validity in ecclesiastical law. Although an act or some part of it may be illegal, its performance or effects may be valid. For example, Roman Catholic law requires that the Eucharist be celebrated with unleavened wheat bread. If leavened bread is used, the bread would be an illegal substance, but the sacrament's validity would not be affected.

license, n. (15c) 1. A permission, usu. revocable, to commit some act that would otherwise be unlawful; esp., an agreement (not amounting to a lease or profit à prendre) that it is lawful for the licensee to enter the licensor's land to do some act that would otherwise be illegal, such as hunting game. See SERVITUDE (1). [Cases: Licenses ↻43.]

"[A] license is an authority to do a particular act, or series of acts, upon another's land, without possessing any estate therein. It is founded in personal confidence, and is not assignable, nor within the statute of frauds." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *452-53 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

2. The certificate or document evidencing such permission. — license, vb.

artistic license. An open-source license that prohibits the sale of modified software unless it is included in a package with other software.

bare license. (17c) A license in which no property interest passes to the licensee, who is merely not a trespasser. • It is revocable at will. — Also termed naked license; mere license. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻48.]

blanket license. Copyright. A license granted by a performing-rights society, such as ASCAP or BMI, to use all works in the society's portfolio in exchange for a fixed percentage of the user's revenues.

box-top license. See shrink-wrap license.

BSD license. A form of open-source license that allows users to incorporate the source code into proprietary products as long as the names of the original creator or contributors are not used to endorse or promote the products without permission. • It was originally created for the Berkeley Software Distribution operating system developed at the University of California. — Also termed BSD-style license.

click-wrap license. See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT.

compulsory license. 1. Copyright. A statutorily created license that allows certain parties to use copyrighted material without the explicit permission of the copyright owner in exchange for a specified royalty. — Also termed equitable remuneration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 48.1.] 2. Patents. A statutorily created license that allows certain people to pay a royalty and use an invention without the patentee's permission. • While some nations currently recognize compulsory licenses, the United States never has.

cross-license. Patents. An agreement between two or more patentees to exchange licenses for their mutual benefit and use of the licensed products. [Cases: Patents ↻ 206.]

distribution license. A marketing license, usu. limited by geography.

exclusive license. (18c) A license that gives the licensee the sole right to perform the licensed act, often in a defined territory, and that prohibits the licensor from performing the licensed act and from granting the right to anyone else; esp., such a license of a copyright, patent, or trademark right. [Cases: Patents ↻ 211(1).]

general-public license. See open-source license.

implied license. A royalty-free license arising from a property owner's conduct regarding another person's use of the property even though the owner has not expressly consented to the property's use. • In a patent context, for example, the circumstances surrounding the conduct give rise to an affirmative grant of consent or permission to infringe a patent's claims. For example, the conduct of a patentee who encourages the manufacture of infringing products may be construed as an implied license to use the patent. An implied license may also arise when a patentee authorizes the sale or express grant of a license to a buyer, who then resells the license to a third party; the third party is the patentee's implied licensee. [Cases: Patents ↻ 210.]

implied license by acquiescence. An implied license that arises from the patentee's tacit or passive acceptance of or implied consent to an otherwise infringing act.

implied license by conduct. An implied license based on the patentee's course of conduct, including language, from which another person could properly infer that the patentee consented to the other's use of the patent. See implied license by equitable estoppel; implied license by legal estoppel.

implied license by equitable estoppel. An implied license usu. based on the patentee's failure to take timely action to enforce patent rights against an infringer after objecting to the infringer's actions, thereby misleading the infringer to believe that the patentee will not act. See A.C. Aukerman Co. v. R.L. Chaides Constr. Co., 960 F.2d 1020, 1042–43 (Fed. Cir.1992).

implied license by legal estoppel. An implied license usu. based on the patentee's broadcast grant of a right or interest that cannot be derogated by the patentee's later acts.

label license. A notice on an item's package granting the purchaser a license to practice the process by using the item without additional payments to the licensor.

license coupled with an interest. (1836) An irrevocable license in real estate that confers the right (not the mere permission) to perform an act or acts upon the property; esp., a license incidental to the ownership of an interest in a chattel located on the land with respect to which the license exists. • This type of license is considered an interest in the land itself. An injunction may be obtained to prevent the wrongful revocation of such a license. — Also termed license coupled with the grant of an interest. [Cases: Licenses ↻ 43, 58(2).]

"A licence may be coupled with some interest in the land or chattels thereon. Thus the right to enter another man's land to hunt and take away the deer killed, or to cut down a tree and remove it, involves the grant of an interest in the deer or tree and also a licence annexed to it to come on the land. The interest must be a recognised interest in the property, and it must have been validly created. Thus at law a right to take game or minerals, being a profit à prendre, must have been created by deed or prescription, whereas no formalities are required for the grant of a right to take away chattels, such as felled or cut hay. Equity will give effect to a specifically enforceable agreement to grant an interest, so that a licence coupled with a profit à prendre granted merely in writing but for value may be protected by injunction." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 428 (6th ed. 1993).

limited license. A license that is narrow in scope or narrower than another license granted for the same purpose, or a license subject to conditions or limitations.

mechanical license. A grant of the right to produce and release a copyrighted work in exchange for a royalty based on the number of units manufactured and sold. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 48.]

mere license. See bare license.

Mozilla public license. An open-source license that allows software users to modify and publicly distribute the software, but requires users to release the changed source under the same copyright as the original source code, and to release all claims to patent rights. • The Mozilla public license was developed for the Netscape and Netscape Communicator browsers but is not limited to use with them. — Abbr. MPL.

naked license. 1. A license allowing a licensee to use a trademark on any goods and services the licensee chooses. [Cases: Trademarks ↻1208.] 2. See bare license.

nonexclusive license. A license of intellectual-property rights that gives the licensee a right to use, make, or sell the licensed item on a shared basis with the licensor and possibly other licensees.

nonmetered license. Patents. An agreement to allow a patent's use in exchange for a flat percentage of sales, regardless of how much the patent is actually used. • The Supreme Court rejected a nonmetered license as patent misuse, saying the buyer has a right to insist on paying only for actual use. Zenith Radio Co. v. Hazeltine Research, Inc., 395 U.S. 100, 89 S.Ct. 1562 (1969). See PATENT-MISUSE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ↻218(5).]

off-sale license. A state-issued permit to sell alcoholic beverages that may be taken away from and consumed off the premises. — Also termed off-premises license. Cf. on-sale license. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ↻59.]

on-sale license. A state-issued permit to sell alcoholic beverages to be consumed on the premises only. — Also termed on-premises license. Cf. off-sale license. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ↻59.]

open-source license. A license that allows open-source software users to copy, distribute, or modify the source code, and publicly distribute derived works based upon the source code. • Open-source licenses usu. do not require royalty or other fees on distribution. The license typically requires a user who redistributes original or modified software that was received under an open-source license to provide the original license terms, including all disclaimers, to all future users, and to distribute the source code with any machine-executable software. It is unclear who has the right or power to enforce the terms of an open-source license. — Sometimes termed general-public license. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻107.] proprietary license. A license that restricts a software user's ability to copy, distribute, or modify the software.

shrink-wrap license. (1984) A license printed on the outside of a software package to advise the buyer that by opening the package, the buyer becomes legally bound to abide by the terms of the license. • Shrink-wrap licenses usu. seek to (1) prohibit users from making unauthorized copies of the software, (2) prohibit modifications to the software, (3) limit use of the software to one computer, (4) limit the manufacturer's liability, and (5) disclaim warranties. — Also written shrinkwrap license. — Also termed box-top license; tear-me-open license. See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻107.]

site license. Copyright. A software license that allows a company to install a set number of copies on individual computers within the company.

synchronization license. A license to reproduce and synchronize a copyrighted musical composition with visual images that are not covered by the musical work's copyright. • Synchronization rights are commonly associated with audiovisual productions, such as music videos or movies. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻48, 107.]

tear-me-open license. See shrink-wrap license.

use-based license. An open-source software license to which the user assents by acting according to the license's terms, namely by using, modifying, or distributing the licensed software. • Unlike a point-and-click agreement, the user does not have to expressly declare acceptance of the license terms before using the software. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻107.]

license coupled with the grant of an interest. See license coupled with an interest under LICENSE.

licensee. (1864) 1. One to whom a license is granted. 2. One who has permission to enter or use another's premises, but only for one's own purposes and not for the occupier's benefit. • The occupier has a duty to warn the licensee of any dangerous conditions known to the occupier but unknown to the licensee. An example of a licensee is a social guest. Cf. INVITEE; TRESPASSER. [Cases: Licenses ↻43.]

bare licensee. (1864) A licensee whose presence on the premises the occupier tolerates but does not necessarily approve, such as one who takes a shortcut across another's land. — Also termed naked licensee; mere licensee. [Cases: Licenses ↻43.]

licensee by invitation. (1894) One who is expressly or impliedly permitted to enter another's premises to transact business with the owner or occupant or to perform an act benefiting the owner or occupant. [Cases: Licenses ↻43.]

licensee by permission. (1894) One who has the owner's permission or passive consent to enter the owner's premises for one's own convenience, curiosity, or entertainment. [Cases: Licenses ↻43.]

licensee with an interest. See INVITEE.

mere licensee. See bare licensee.

naked licensee. See bare licensee.

license fee. 1. A monetary charge imposed by a governmental authority for the privilege of pursuing a particular occupation, business, or activity. — Also termed license tax. [Cases: Licenses ⇨ 1.] 2. A charge of this type accompanied by a requirement that the licensee take some action, or be subjected to regulations or restrictions. [Cases: Licenses ⇨ 1.]

license in amortization. Hist. A license authorizing the conveyance of property otherwise invalid under the statutes of mortmain. See MORTMAIN.

licenser. See LICENSOR.

license tax. See LICENSE FEE (1).

licensing. (15c) 1. The sale of a license authorizing another to use something (such as computer software) protected by copyright, patent, or trademark. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⇨ 48; Patents ⇨ 206; Trademarks ⇨ 1202.] 2. A governmental body's process of issuing a license. — Also termed licensure. [Cases: Licenses ⇨ 1.] licensor. One who grants a license to another. — Also spelled licenser. [Cases: Licenses ⇨ 43.]

licensure. See LICENSING (2).

licentia (li-sen-shee-ə), n. [fr. Latin licere "to be lawful"] Hist. License; permission.

licentia concordandi (li-sen-shee-ə kon-kor-dan-di), n. [Law Latin "license to agree"] Hist. One of the proceedings on levying a fine of lands. See CONGÉ D'ACCORDER.

"The licentia concordandi, or leave to agree the suit. For, as soon as the action is brought, the defendant knowing himself to be in the wrong, is supposed to make overtures of peace and accommodation to the plaintiff. Who, accepting them, but having, upon suing out the writ, given pledges to prosecute his suit, which he endangers if he now deserts it without license, he therefore applies to the court for leave to make the matter up." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 350 (1766).

licentia loquendi (li-sen-shee-ə loh-kwen-di). [Latin "license to speak"] See IMPARLANCE.

licentia surgendi (li-sen-shee-ə sər-jen-di), n. [Law Latin "license to arise"] Hist. Permission or writ from the court to a tenant in a real action to get out of bed and appear in court, following the tenant's earlier plea of inability to appear because of illness that confined the tenant to bed. • The tenant could lose the case by default for falsely claiming illness. See DE MALO; ESSOIN.

licentiate (li-sen-shee-ət), n. (16c) One who has obtained a license or authoritative permission to exercise some function, esp. to practice a profession .

licentia transfretandi. See DE LICENTIA TRANSFRETANDI.

licentious (li-sen-shəs), adj. (16c) Lacking or ignoring moral or legal restraint, esp. in sexual activity; lewd; lascivious. — licentiousness, n. licere (li-seer-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To be allowed by law. • The stipulation habere licere guaranteed the buyer indemnity from eviction.

liceri. See LICITARI.

licet (li-set or lis-ət). [Latin] Hist. 1. It is permitted; it is lawful. 2. It is conceded; it is granted.

licit (lis-it), adj. (15c) Not forbidden by law; permitted; legal. — licitly, adv.

licitari (lis-ə-tair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To bid for an item, esp. repeatedly during the same sale. — Also termed liceri.

licitation (lis-ə-tay-shən). (17c) 1. The offering for sale or bidding for purchase at an auction; esp., in civil law, a judicial sale of property held in common. See La. Civ. Code art. 811. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⇨ 272(4), 272(5); Partition ⇨ 99.] 2. CANT.

licitator (lis-ə-tay-tər), n. [Latin] Roman law. The bidder at a sale.

lictor (lik-tər), n. [Latin] Roman law. An officer who accompanied a magistrate having imperium and traditionally carried a bundle of rods and an ax, symbolizing the magistrate's powers of life and death and of corporal punishment over citizens. See IMPERIUM.

Lidford law (lid-fərd). Hist. A form of lynch law permitting a person to be punished first and tried later. • The term took its name from the English town of Lidford (now Lydford) where this type of action supposedly took place. Cf. Jedburgh justice under JUSTICE (1).

lie, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To tell an untruth; to speak or write falsely <she lied on the witness stand>. See PERJURY. Cf. FABRICATE. [Cases: Perjury ⇨ 12.] 2. To have foundation in the law; to be legally supportable, sustainable, or proper <in such a situation, an action lies in tort>. 3. To exist; to reside <final appeal lies with the Supreme Court>.

Lieber Code. A codification of rules and customs of warfare, which set out the humane and ethical treatment of persons. • It was first developed by Francis Lieber during the American Revolution, formally adopted as law by Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War, and used as the basis for the first codified international rules of law at The Hague Peace Conference of 1899. The rules were extended and refined in another Hague convention in 1907, and became known as the Law of The Hague. See LAW OF THE HAGUE.

lie detector. See POLYGRAPH.

liege (leej), adj. (14c) Hist. 1. Entitled to feudal allegiance and service. 2. Bound by feudal tenure to a lord paramount; owing allegiance and service. 3. Loyal; faithful. — Also termed ligius.

liege, n. Hist. 1. A vassal bound to feudal allegiance. — Also termed liege man; liege woman. 2. A loyal subject of a monarch or other sovereign. 3. A feudal lord entitled to allegiance and service; a sovereign or superior lord. — Also termed (in sense 3) liege lord.

liegeance. See LIGEANCE.

liege homage, n. Hist. Homage paid by one sovereign to another, including pledges of loyalty and services.

liege lord, n. Hist. See LIEGE (3).

liege man, n. Hist. See LIEGE (1).

liege poustie (leej pow-stee). [Law French "liege power" fr. Latin legitima potestas "lawful power"] Scots law. The lawful power of one in good health, as a result of which the person might dispose of heritable property. • The phrase often appeared attributively, as in liege poustie conveyance. Cf. LEGITIMA POTESTAS.

"LIEGE POUSTIE; is that state of health which gives a person full power to dispose mortis causa, or otherwise, of his heritable property. The term, according to our institutional writers, is derived from the words legitima potestas, signifying the lawful power of disposing of property at pleasure. It is used in contradistinction to deathbed — a liege poustie conveyance being a conveyance not challengeable on the head of deathbed. . . . The tests of liege poustie, opposed to the presumption of deathbed, are survivance during sixty days, and going to kirk or market unsupported." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 662 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

"[A] liege poustie conveyance being one not challengeable by the heir on the ground of death-bed. This condition of health the granter of a deed was held to have enjoyed, if at the time of granting it he was not affected by the disease of which he died, or if, after executing it, he attended kirk or market, unsupported, or survived for sixty days." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 329 (4th ed. 1894).

lieger, n. Archaic. See LEDGER (2).

liege subject. See natural-born subject under SUBJECT.

liege woman, n. Hist. See LIEGE (1).

lie in franchise, vb. Hist. (Of wrecks, waifs, strays, etc.) to be seizable without judicial action.

lie in grant, vb. Hist. (Of incorporeal hereditaments) to be passable by deed or charter without the ceremony of livery of seisin.

lie in livery, vb. Hist. (Of corporeal hereditaments) to be passable by livery of seisin rather than by deed.

lien (leen or lee-ən), n. (16c) A legal right or interest that a creditor has in another's property, lasting usu. until a debt or duty that it secures is satisfied. • Typically, the creditor does not take possession of the property on which the lien has been obtained. Cf. PLEDGE (3). [Cases: Liens ⇨1.] — lien, vb. — lienable, liened, adj.

accountant's lien. The right of an accountant to retain a client's papers until the accountant's fees have been paid.

agent's lien. A lien against property of the estate, in favor of an agent, to secure the agent's compensation as well as all necessary expenses incurred under the agent's power. [Cases: Principal and Agent ⇨90.]

agister's lien (ə-jis-tərz). A lien on the animals under an agister's care, to secure payment of the agister's fee. See AGISTER; AGISTMENT. [Cases: Animals ⇨26.]

agricultural lien. 1. A statutory lien that protects a seller of farming equipment by giving the seller a lien on crops grown with the equipment. [Cases: Agriculture ⇨10.] 2. Secured transactions. An interest (other than a security interest) in farm products having three characteristics: (1) it must secure payment or performance of an obligation for goods or services furnished in connection with a debtor's farming operation, or of an obligation for rent on real property leased by a debtor in connection with farming; (2) it must be created by statute in favor of a person either who in the ordinary course of business furnished goods or services to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming, or who leased real property to a debtor in connection with the debtor's farming; and (3) the effectiveness of the interest must not depend on the person's possession of the personal property. UCC § 9-102(a)(5).

architect's lien. A statutory lien on real property in favor of an architect who has drawn the plans for and supervised the construction of improvements on the property. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens ⇨36.]

artisan's lien. See mechanic's lien.

attachment lien. A lien on property seized by prejudgment attachment. • Such a lien is initially inchoate but becomes final and perfected upon entry of a judgment for the attaching creditor and relates back to the date when the lien first arose. — Also termed lien of attachment. See ATTACHMENT. [Cases: Attachment ⇨177; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨589.]

attorney's lien. The right of an attorney to hold or retain a client's money or property (a retaining lien) or to encumber money payable to the client (a charging lien) until the attorney's fees have been properly determined and paid. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨171.]

banker's lien. The right of a bank to satisfy a customer's matured debt by seizing the customer's money or property in the bank's possession. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇨134, 136.]

blanket lien. A lien that gives a creditor the entitlement to take possession of any or all of the debtor's real property to cover a delinquent loan.

carrier's lien. A carrier's right to retain possession of cargo until the owner of the cargo pays its shipping costs. [Cases: Carriers ⇨197.]

charging lien. 1. An attorney's lien on a claim that the attorney has helped the client perfect, as through a judgment or settlement. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨171.] 2. A lien on specified property in the debtor's possession.

chattel lien. See mechanic's lien.

choate lien (koh-it). A lien in which the lienholder, the property, and the monetary amount are established so that the lien is perfected and nothing else needs to be done to make it enforceable. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨4781; Liens ⇨1, 12.]

common-law lien. 1. A lien granted by the common law, rather than by statute, equity, or agreement by the parties. [Cases: Liens ⇨1.] 2. The right of one person to retain possession of property belonging to another until certain demands of the possessing party are met. • This type of lien, unlike an equitable lien, cannot exist without possession.

concurrent lien. One of two or more liens of equal priority attaching to the same property.

construction lien. See mechanic's lien.

consummate lien (kən-səm-it). A judgment lien arising after the denial of a motion for a new trial. Cf. inchoate lien.

conventional lien. A lien that is created by the express agreement of the parties, in circumstances in which the law would not create a lien.

deferred lien. A lien effective at a future date, as distinguished from a present lien that is currently possessory.

demurrage lien (di-mər-ij). A carrier's lien on goods for any unpaid demurrage charges. See DEMURRAGE. [Cases: Shipping ↻185.]

dragnet lien. A lien that is enlarged to cover any additional credit extended to the debtor by the same creditor. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↻114.]

equitable lien. A right, enforceable only in equity, to have a demand satisfied from a particular fund or specific property, without having possession of the fund or property. • It arises mainly in four circumstances: (1) when an occupant of land, believing in good faith to be the owner of that land, makes improvements, repairs, or other expenditures that permanently increase the land's value, (2) when one of two or more joint owners makes expenditures of that kind, (3) when a tenant for life completes permanent and beneficial improvements to the estate begun earlier by the testator, and (4) when land or other property is transferred subject to the payment of debts, legacies, portions, or annuities to third persons. — Also termed equitable levy. [Cases: Liens ↻7.] execution lien. A lien on property seized by a levy of execution. • Such a lien gives the execution creditor priority over later transferees of the property and over prior unrecorded conveyances of interests in the property. See EXECUTION (3). [Cases: Execution ↻106.]

factor's lien. A lien, usu. statutory, on property held on consignment by a factor. • It allows the factor to keep possession of the property until the account has been settled. See UCC § 9-102(2). See FACTOR (2). [Cases: Factors ↻47.]

first lien. A lien that takes priority over all other charges or encumbrances on the same property and that must be satisfied before other charges may share in proceeds from the property's sale.

floating lien. 1. A lien that is expanded to cover any additional property obtained by the debtor while the debt is outstanding. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↻116.] 2. A lien that continues to exist even when the collateral changes in character, classification, or location. — Also termed floating charge.

garnishment lien. A lien on a debtor's property held by a garnishee. • Such a lien attaches in favor of the garnishing creditor when a garnishment summons is served and also impounds any credits the garnishee owes the debtor so that they must be paid to the garnishing creditor. — Also termed lien of garnishment. See GARNISHMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻609; Garnishment ↻106.]

general lien. A possessory lien by which the lienholder may retain any of the debtor's goods in the lienholder's possession until any debt due from the debtor, whether in connection with the retained goods or otherwise, has been paid. • Factors, insurance brokers, packers, stockbrokers, and bankers have a general lien over the property of their clients or customers. Cf. particular lien.

"The usage of any trade sufficient to establish a general lien, must . . . have been so uniform and notorious, as to warrant the inference that the party against whom the right is claimed had knowledge of it. This general lien may also be created by express agreement; as, where one or more persons give notice that they will not receive any property for the purpose of their trade or business, except on condition that they shall have a lien upon it, not only in respect to the charges arising on the particular goods, but for the general balance of account. All persons who afterwards deal with them, with the knowledge of such notice, will be deemed to have acceded to that agreement." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *637 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

grantor's lien. See vendor's lien (1).

healthcare lien. A statutory lien asserted by an HMO, insurer, medical group, or independent practice association against those liable to the patient for damages, to recover money paid or claim money payable for healthcare services provided under a healthcare service plan or a disability insurance policy. — Also termed medical lien. Cf. hospital lien; workers'-compensation lien.

hospital lien. A statutory lien asserted by a hospital to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any judgment, compromise, or settlement received by a hospital patient either from a third person who caused the patient's injuries or from the third person's insurer. See healthcare lien. [Cases: Health ↻961.]

hotelkeeper's lien. A possessory or statutory lien allowing an innkeeper to hold, as security for payment, personal property that a guest brought into the hotel. — Also termed innkeeper's lien. [Cases: Innkeepers ↻13.]

inchoate lien (in-koh-it). A judgment lien that may be defeated if the judgment is vacated or a motion for new trial is granted. Cf. consummate lien.

innkeeper's lien. See hotelkeeper's lien.

involuntary lien. A lien arising without the debtor's consent.

judgment lien. A lien imposed on a judgment debtor's nonexempt property. • This lien gives the judgment creditor the right to attach the judgment debtor's property. — Also termed lien of judgment. See EXEMPT judicial lien. A lien obtained by judgment, levy, sequestration, or other legal or equitable process or proceeding. • If a debtor is adjudged to owe money to a creditor and the judgment has not been satisfied, the creditor can ask the court to impose a lien on specific property owned and possessed by the debtor. After the court imposes the lien, it usu. issues a writ directing the local sheriff to seize the property, sell it, and turn over the proceeds to the creditor. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2671; Judgment ↻752.] junior lien. A lien that is subordinate to one or more other liens on the same property.

PROPERTY. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↻2671; Judgment ↻752-802.]

laborer's lien. See mechanic's lien.

landlord's lien. 1. At common law, a lien that gave a landlord the right to seize a tenant's property and sell it publicly to satisfy overdue rent. See DISTRESS. 2. Generally, a statutory lien on a tenant's personal property at the leased premises in favor of a landlord who receives preferred-creditor status on that property. • Such a lien usu. secures the payment of overdue rent or compensation for damage to the premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻239-257.] lien of attachment. See attachment lien.

lien of factor at common law. Hist. A lien not created by statute; a common-law lien. [Cases: Factors ↻47.]

lien of garnishment. See garnishment lien.

lien of judgment. See judgment lien.

manufacturer's lien. A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials expended in producing goods for another.

maritime lien. A lien on a vessel, given to secure the claim of a creditor who provided maritime services to the vessel or who suffered an injury from the vessel's use. — Also termed tacit hypothecation. [Cases: Maritime Liens ↻1.]

"The maritime lien has been described as one of the most striking peculiarities of Admiralty law, constituting a charge upon ships of a nature unknown alike to common law and equity. It arises by operation of law and exists as a claim upon the property, secret and invisible. A maritime lien may be defined as: (1) a privileged claim, (2) upon maritime property, (3) for service done to it or injury caused by it, (4) accruing from the moment when the claim attaches, (5) travelling with the property unconditionally, (6) enforced by means of an action in rem." Griffith Price, The Law of Maritime Liens 1 (1940).

mechanic's lien. A statutory lien that secures payment for labor or materials supplied in improving, repairing, or maintaining real or personal property, such as a building, an automobile, or the like. — Also termed artisan's lien; chattel lien (for personal property); construction lien (for labor); garageman's lien (for repaired vehicles); laborer's lien (for labor); materialman's lien (for materials). [Cases: Bailment ↻18(2); Mechanics' Liens ↻1.]

medical lien. See healthcare lien.

mortgage lien. A lien on the mortgagor's property securing the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ↻145.]

municipal lien. A lien by a municipal corporation against a property owner for the owner's proportionate share of a public improvement that specially and individually benefits the owner. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ↻519.]

particular lien. A possessory lien by which the possessor of goods has the right to retain specific goods until a debt incurred in connection with those goods has been paid. — Also termed special lien. Cf. general lien.

"A general lien is the right to retain the property of another, for a general balance of accounts; but a particular lien is a right to retain it only for a charge on account of labor employed or expenses bestowed upon the identical property detained. The former is taken strictly, but the latter is favored in law. The right rests on principles of natural equity and commercial necessity, and it prevents circuitry of action, and gives security and confidence. . . ." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *634 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

possessory garageman's lien. A lien on a vehicle in the amount of the repairs performed by the garage. [Cases: Automobiles ↻374.]

possessory lien. A lien allowing the creditor to keep possession of the encumbered property until the debt is satisfied. • A power of sale may or may not be combined with this right of possession. Examples include pledges of chattels, the liens of innkeepers, garageman's liens, and vendor's liens. See PLEDGE.

prior lien. A lien that is superior to one or more other liens on the same property, usu. because it was perfected first. — Also termed priority lien.

retaining lien. An attorney's right to keep a client's papers until the client has paid for the attorney's services. • The attorney's retaining lien is not recognized in some states. [Cases: Attorney and Client ↻171, 182(3).]

second lien. A lien that is next in rank after a first lien on the same property and therefore is next entitled to satisfaction out of the proceeds from the property's sale.

secret lien. A lien not appearing of record and unknown to purchasers; a lien reserved by the vendor and kept hidden from third parties, to secure the payment of goods after delivery.

senior lien. A lien that has priority over other liens on the same property.

special lien. See particular lien.

specific lien. A lien secured on a particular thing by a contract or by a judgment, execution, attachment, or other legal proceeding.

statutory lien. 1. A lien arising solely by force of statute, not by agreement of the parties. • Examples are federal tax liens and mechanic's liens. 2. Bankruptcy. Either of two types of liens: (1) a lien arising solely by force of a statute on specified circumstances or conditions, or (2) a lien of distress for rent, whether or not statutory. • For bankruptcy purposes, a statutory lien does not include a security interest or judicial lien, whether or not the interest or lien arises from or is made effective by a statute. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2580, 2583.]

superlien. See SUPERLIEN.

tax lien. 1. A lien on property, and all rights to property, imposed by the federal government for unpaid federal taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⇨ 4765–4806.] 2. A lien on real estate in favor of a state or local government that may be foreclosed for nonpayment of taxes. • A majority of states have adopted the Uniform Federal Tax Lien Registration Act. [Cases: Taxation ⇨ 2730, 3553, 3696.]

vendee's lien. Real estate. A buyer's lien on the purchased land as security for repayment of purchase money paid in, enforceable if the seller does not or cannot convey good title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 337.]

vendor's lien. 1. Real estate. A seller's lien on land as security for the purchase price. • This lien may be foreclosed in the same way as a mortgage: the buyer usu. has a redemption period within which to pay the full purchase price. — Also termed grantor's lien. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 246.] 2. A lien held by a seller of goods, who retains possession of the goods until the buyer has paid in full. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 300.] voluntary lien. A lien created with the debtor's consent.

warehouse's lien. A lien covering storage charges for goods stored with a bailee. — Also termed warehouseman's lien. [Cases: Warehousemen ⇨ 29.]

workers'-compensation lien. 1. A statutory lien, asserted by a healthcare provider, to recover the costs of emergency and ongoing medical and other services. • The lien applies against any workers'-compensation benefits paid to a patient. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 986.] 2. A statutory lien, asserted by a workers'-compensation insurance carrier, against an insured worker's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor, to recover benefits paid to the injured worker. — Also termed workers'-compensation subrogation lien. Cf. healthcare lien. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 2252.]

lienable, adj. (Of property) legally amenable to a lien; capable of being subject to a lien.

lien account. See ACCOUNT.

lien avoidance. Bankruptcy. A debtor's depriving a creditor of a security interest in an asset of the bankruptcy estate. 11 USCA §§ 506(d), 522(f). [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2571–2588, 2784.]

lien creditor. See CREDITOR.

lienee (leen-ee or lee-ən-ee). 1. One whose property is subject to a lien. 2. An encumbrancer who holds a lien; LIENHOLDER.

"[A] mortgagee is the owner of the property, while a pledgee or other lienee is merely an encumbrancer of it." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 440 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

lienholder. (1830) A person having or owning a lien. — Also termed lienor; lienee.

lien of a covenant. (1916) The beginning portion of a covenant, stating the names of the parties and the character of the covenant.

lien of factor at common law. See LIEN.

lien of garnishment. See garnishment lien under LIEN.

lien of judgment. See judgment lien under LIEN.

lienor. See LIENHOLDER.

lien-stripping. Bankruptcy. The practice of splitting a mortgagee's secured claim into secured and unsecured components and reducing the claim to the market value of the debtor's residence, thereby allowing the debtor to modify the terms of the mortgage and reduce the amount of the debt. • The U.S. Supreme Court has prohibited lien-stripping in all Chapter 7 cases (Nobelman v. American Savs. Bank, 508 U.S. 324, 113 S.Ct. 2106 (1993)) and in Chapter 13 cases involving a debtor's principal residence (Dewsnup v. Timm, 502 U.S. 410, 112 S.Ct. 773 (1992)), and the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994 modified the Bankruptcy Code to prohibit lien-stripping in Chapter 11 cases involving an individual's principal residence. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⇨ 2575.]

lien theory. (1882) The idea that a mortgage resembles a lien, so that the mortgagee acquires only a lien on the property and the mortgagor retains both legal and equitable title unless a valid foreclosure occurs. • Most American states — commonly called lien states, lien jurisdictions, or lien-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. TITLE THEORY. [Cases: Mortgages ⇨ 136.]

lieu conus ([l]yoo kon-yoo), n. [Law French] Hist. A place generally known and noticed by those in the area of it, such as a castle or manor.

limit, n. (14c) 1. A restriction or restraint. 2. A boundary or defining line. 3. The extent of power, right, or authority. — limit, vb. — limited, adj.

limitation. (14c) 1. The act of limiting; the state of being limited. 2. A restriction. 3. A statutory period after which a lawsuit or prosecution cannot be brought in court. — Also termed limitations period; limitation period; limitation of action See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Cf. LACHES. [Cases: Criminal Law ↻145.5–160; Limitation of Actions ↻1.] 4. Property. The restriction of the extent of an estate; the creation by deed or devise of a lesser estate out of a fee simple. See WORDS OF LIMITATION. [Cases: Deeds ↻124–134; Wills ↻616.]

collateral limitation. Hist. A limitation that makes the duration of an estate dependent on another event (other than the life of the grantee), such as an estate to A until B turns 21.

conditional limitation. (18c) 1. See executory limitation. 2. A lease provision that automatically terminates the lease if a specified event occurs, such as if the lessee defaults. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ↻103(1).]

executory limitation. (18c) A restriction that causes an estate to automatically end and revert in a third party upon the happening of a specified event. • This type of limitation, which was not recognized at common law, can be created only as a shifting use or an executory devise. It is a condition subsequent in favor of someone other than the transferor. — Also termed conditional limitation. See fee simple subject to an executory limitation under FEE SIMPLE.

"When a condition subsequent is created in favor of someone other than the transferor, the Restatement of Property calls the condition subsequent an executory limitation. It calls A's estate an estate in fee simple subject to an executory limitation." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 52 (2d ed. 1984).

limitation over. (17c) An additional estate created or contemplated in a conveyance, to be enjoyed after the first estate expires or is exhausted. • An example of language giving rise to a limitation over is "to A for life, remainder to B." [Cases: Deeds ↻124–134.]

special limitation. (17c) A restriction that causes an estate to end automatically and revert to the grantor upon the happening of a specified event. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE. [Cases: Deeds ↻125, 126, 130.]

"[I]f a deed or will uses such words as 'for so long as,' 'while,' 'during,' or 'until' to introduce the circumstances under which an estate may end prior to its running its maximum course, it is generally assumed that a special limitation was intended." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 50 (2d ed. 1984).

supplanting limitation. A limitation involving a secondary gift that is expressed in a clause following the original gift and that is typically introduced by the words "but if," "and if," or "in case."

one-month liquidation. A special election, available to certain shareholders, that determines how the distributions received in liquidation by electing shareholders will be treated for federal income-tax purposes. • To qualify for the election, the corporation must be completely liquidated within one month. IRC § 333.

partial liquidation. A liquidation that does not completely dispose of a company's assets; esp., a liquidation occurring when some corporate assets are distributed to shareholders (usu. on a pro rata basis) and the corporation continues to operate in a restricted form. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3820.]

twelve-month liquidation. A liquidation occurring within 12 months from adoption of the liquidation plan to complete liquidation, subject to a tax law prohibiting the company from recognizing any gains or losses on property sold within that time frame. • Generally, inventory will not be included unless a bulk sale occurs. IRC § 337. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↷ 3698, 3711.]

4. Bankruptcy. The process — under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code — of collecting a debtor's nonexempt property, converting that property to cash, and distributing the cash to the various creditors. • Upon liquidation, the debtor hopes to obtain a discharge, which releases the debtor from any further personal liability for prebankruptcy debts. See CHAPTER 7. Cf. REHABILITATION (3). [Cases: Bankruptcy ↷ 2251.]

liquidation bankruptcy. See CHAPTER 7 (2). lister. A person authorized to compile lists of taxable property for assessment and appraisal; an assessor.

listing. (1891) 1. Real estate. An agreement between a property owner and an agent, whereby the agent agrees to try to secure a buyer or tenant for a specific property at a certain price and terms in return for a fee or commission. — Also termed listing agreement; authorization to sell. [Cases: Brokers ↷40.]

exclusive-agency listing. A listing providing that one agent has the right to be the only person, other than the owner, to sell the property during a specified period. — Also termed exclusive listing; exclusive-authorization-to-sell listing. [Cases: Brokers ↷40, 46.]

general listing. See open listing.

multiple listing. A listing providing that the agent will allow other agents to try to sell the property. • Under this agreement, the original agent gives the selling agent a percentage of the commission or some other stipulated amount. [Cases: Brokers ↷40, 66.]

net listing. A listing providing that the agent agrees to sell the owner's property for a set minimum price, any amount over the minimum being retained by the agent as commission. — Also termed net sale contract. [Cases: Brokers ↷40.]

open listing. A listing that allows selling rights to be given to more than one agent at a time, obligates the owner to pay a commission when a specified broker makes a sale, and reserves the owner's right to personally sell the property without paying a commission. — Also termed nonexclusive listing; general listing; simple listing. [Cases: Brokers ↷46.]

2. Securities. The contract between a firm and a stock exchange by which the trading of the firm's securities on the exchange is handled. See listed security under SECURITY. [Cases: Exchanges ↷13.10.]

litem (lɪ-tem or -təm). See AD LITEM.

litem denuntiari (lɪ-tem də-nən-shee-air-ee). [Latin "to announce a suit"] Roman law. 1. The summoning of a defendant by a magistrate exercising cognitio in the late classical period. 2. The notification by a buyer to the seller of a claim by a third party to the things sold. — Also spelled litem denunciare. Cf. LITIS DENUNTIATIO.

litem suam facere (lɪ-tem s[y]oo-əm fay-sə-ree). [Latin "to make a suit one's own"] Roman law. (Of a judex) to fail in his official duty through imprudence, such as not adhering to the formula, or not following due procedure. • This failure amounted to misconduct in the judex's duties, and a litigant was given a private action against him. The scope of actionable misconduct is not certain. It included not obeying the formula and not adjourning the trial properly, but it may also have included overt acts of corruption, such as accepting bribes.

litera (lit-ər-ə), n. [Latin "letter"] Hist. 1. A letter. 2. The letter of a law, as distinguished from its spirit. Pl. literae. — Also spelled littera. See LETTER (3).

literacy test. Hist. A test of one's ability to read and write, formerly required in some states as a condition for registering to vote. • Literacy tests were abused at various times in United States history to preclude minorities from exercising the right to vote. This practice was prohibited by the Voting Rights Act of 1965. 42 USCA §§ 1971–1974. See South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301, 86 S.Ct. 8 (1966). [Cases: Elections ↷59.]

literae mortuae (lit-ər-ee mor-choo-ee), n. [Latin] Hist. Dead letters; filler words in a statute.

literae patentes (lit-ər-ee pə-ten-teez), n. [Latin "open letters"] Hist. A public grant from the sovereign to a subject, conferring the right to land, a franchise, a title, liberty, or some other endowment. • The modern "patent" and, more closely, "letters patent" derive from this term. See LETTERS PATENT (1).

"The term 'patent' is short for 'letters patent,' derived from the Latin literae patentes, meaning open letters. Generally, letters patent were letters addressed by the sovereign 'to all whom these presents shall come,' reciting a grant of some dignity, office, franchise, or other privilege that has been given by the sovereign to the patentee." Donald S. Chisum et al., Principles of Patent Law 2 (1998).

literae procuratoriae (lit-ər-ee prok-yə-rə-tor-ee-ee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Letters of procuration; letters of attorney; power of attorney. See POWER OF ATTORNEY.

self-represented litigant. See PRO SE.

vexatious litigant. A litigant who repeatedly files frivolous lawsuits. • Many jurisdictions have statutes or local rules requiring a vexatious litigant to obtain the court's permission to file any further lawsuits or pleadings. The litigant may also be subject to sanctions. [Cases: Action ↷13; Injunction ↷26(4), 26(5).]

litigation, n. (17c) 1. The process of carrying on a lawsuit <the attorney advised his client to make a generous settlement offer in order to avoid litigation>. 2. A lawsuit itself <several litigations pending before the court>. — litigate, vb. — litigatory, litigational, adj.

complex litigation. Litigation involving several parties who are separately represented, and usu. involving multifarious factual and legal issues.

"What exactly is 'complex litigation'? The problem is that no one really knows — or, more accurately perhaps, various definitions don't agree. Complex civil litigation has an 'I-know-it-when-I-see-it' quality. Nearly everyone agrees that matters like the massive asbestos litigation, the AT&T antitrust suit, or the remedial phase of a school desegregation case are complex. But trying to find a common thread that both describes these cases and distinguishes them from the run-of-the-mill car crash is difficult." Jay Tidmarsh & Roger H. Transgrud, Complex Litigation 1 (2002).

litigation costs. See COST (3).

litigation hold. See HOLD.

litigation-hold letter. A writing that orders the segregation and retention of certain documents and data that are or may be relevant to a threatened or pending litigation or an official investigation.

internal litigation-hold letter. A litigation-hold letter sent by a company, directly or through its attorneys, to its own employees.

litigation privilege. See PRIVILEGE (1).

litigator. (16c) 1. A trial lawyer. 2. A lawyer who prepares cases for trial, as by conducting discovery and pretrial motions, trying cases, and handling appeals. 3. Archaic. A party to a lawsuit; a litigant.

litigious (li-tij-əs), adj. (14c) 1. Prone to legal disputes; contentious <our litigious society>. 2. Archaic. Of or relating to the subject of a lawsuit <the litigious property>. 3. Archaic. Of or relating to lawsuits; litigatory <they couldn't settle the litigious dispute>. — litigiousness, litigosity (li-tij-ee-os-ə-tee), n.

litigious right. Civil law. A right that cannot be exercised without first being determined in a lawsuit. La. Civ. Code art. 2652. • If the right is sold, it must be in litigation at the time of sale to be considered a litigious right.

litis aestimatio (li-tis es-tə-may-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The judicial estimate of the measure of damages.

litis contestatio (li-tis kon-tes-tay-shee-oh). [Latin] 1. Roman law. The final agreement of the parties to a suit on the formula the praetor would issue to the judex. — Also termed contestatio litis. See FORMULA.

"Both parties being present, or represented, before the praetor, the plaintiff stated the nature of his claim and asked for an action. It lay in the discretion of the praetor to give or to refuse it. . . . If, in the event, the praetor refused any action at all, or any action which the plaintiff was willing to accept, the matter was at an end. . . . If, on the other hand, subject to the direction and approval of the praetor, the parties agreed upon the issues to be referred. . . . [a] document framed in identical terms was issued to the judex by the praetor as his authority to act. This ceremonial in which three persons concurred (plaintiff, defendant, praetor) was the litis contestatio." R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 179-80 (4th ed. 1956).

2. Hist. A contested point in a lawsuit; a litigable issue developed by the litigants' alternating statements. 3. CONTESTATION OF SUIT.

litis denuntiatio (li-tis də-nən-s[h]ee-ay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Civil law. The process by which a land purchaser, sued for possession of the land by a third party, notified the land seller and demanded aid in defending the suit under the seller's warranty of title. — Also spelled litis denunciatio. Cf. LITEM DENUNTIARE.

litis dominium (li-tis də-min-ee-əm), n. [Latin] See DOMINUS LITIS.

litis ordinatio (li-tis or-di-nay-shee-oh). [Latin "the order or regulation of a lawsuit"] Scots law. The form under which a lawsuit is conducted.

litispence (li-tis-pen-dənts). Archaic. The time during which a lawsuit is pending.

litteris obligatio (lit-ər-is ob-lə-gay-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. An obligation arising from formal, written entries in account books; an obligation arising from a literal contract. See literal contract under CONTRACT.

Little FTC Act. See UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES AND CONSUMER PROTECTION LAW.

littoral (lit-ər-əl), adj. (17c) Of or relating to the coast or shore of an ocean, sea, or lake <the littoral right to limit others' consumption of the water>. Cf. RIPARIAN. — littoral, n.

littus maris (lit-əs mar-is) [Law Latin "shore of the sea"]
1. Ordinary tides or neap tides that occur between the full moon and dark of the moon. 2. The shore between the normal high-water and low-water marks.

litura (li-t[y]oor-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. A blot or erasure in a will or other instrument.

livelihood. (15c) A means of supporting one's existence, esp. financially.

livelode. Archaic. Livelihood; maintenance. — Also termed lifelode.

livery (liv-ə-ree or liv-ree). (15c) 1. The delivery of the possession of real property. Cf. DELIVERY. 2. Hist. An heir's writ, upon reaching the age of majority, to obtain seisin of his lands from the king. 3. The boarding and care of horses for a fee. 4. A business that rents vehicles.

livery in chivalry. Hist. The delivery of possession of real property from a guardian to a ward in chivalry when the ward reached majority.

livery office. An office designated for the delivery of lands.

livery of seisin. Hist. The ceremony by which a grantor conveyed land to a grantee. • Livery of seisin involved either (1) going on the land and having the grantor symbolically deliver possession of the land to the grantee by handing over a twig, a clod of dirt, or a piece of turf (called livery in deed) or (2) going within sight of the land and having the grantor tell the grantee that possession was being given, followed by the grantee's entering the land (called livery in law). See INVESTITURE; SEISIN. [Cases: Deeds ⇨21.]

"[W]e may now pause to wonder how transfer of these potentially infinite interests was accomplished. Without a modern system of land records, it would be desirable that the transfer be effected with sufficient ceremony not only to mark itself indelibly in the memories of the participants, but also to give notice to interested persons such as the mesne lord above the transferor. The central idea was to make ritual livery (meaning 'delivery,' from the Old French livrer) of seisin (meaning, roughly, 'possession,' from the Old French saisir or seisir). The transferor and transferee would go to the land to be transferred, and the transferor would then hand to the transferee a lump of soil or a twig from a tree — all the while intoning the appropriate words of grant, together with the magical words 'and his heirs' if the interest transferred was to be a potentially infinite one." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 10-11 (2d ed. 1984).

lives in being. See LIFE IN BEING.

livestock, n. (18c) Domestic animals and fowls that (1) are kept for profit or pleasure. (2) can normally be confined within boundaries without seriously impairing their utility, and (3) do not normally intrude on others' land in such a way as to harm the land or growing crops. [Cases: Animals ⇨1.5(5).]

live storage. The storage of cars in active daily use, rather than cars put away for an extended period. • A garage owner's responsibility sometimes depends on whether a car is in live or dead storage. Cf. DEAD STORAGE. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨370.]

live thalweg. See THALWEG.

living, n. One's source of monetary support or resources; esp., one's employment.

living separate and apart. (18c) Of spouses) living away from each other, along with at least one spouse's intent to dissolve the marriage. • One basis for no-fault divorce in many states exists if the spouses have lived apart for a specified period. — Sometimes shortened to separate and apart. [Cases: Divorce ⇨36, 37; Husband and Wife ⇨272(1).]

living-together agreement. See COHABITATION AGREEMENT.

living trust. See inter vivos trust under TRUST.

living will. (1972) An instrument, signed with the formalities statutorily required for a will, by which a person directs that his or her life not be artificially prolonged by extraordinary measures when there is no reasonable expectation of recovery from extreme physical or mental disability. • Most states have living-will legislation. — Also termed declaration of a desire for a natural death; directive to physicians. See NATURAL-DEATH ACT; UNIFORM HEALTH-CARE DECISION ACT. Cf. ADVANCE DIRECTIVE (1), (2); INSTRUCTION DIRECTIVE. [Cases: Health ⇨916.]

Lloyd's. See LLOYD'S OF LONDON.

Lloyd's association. See LLOYD'S UNDERWRITERS.

Lloyd's bond. See BOND (3).

Lloyd's insurance. See INSURANCE.

Lloyd's of London. Insurance. 1. A London insurance mart where individual underwriters gather to quote rates and write insurance on a wide variety of risks. 2. A voluntary association of merchants, shipowners, underwriters, and brokers formed not to write policies but instead to issue a notice of an endeavor to members who may individually underwrite a policy by assuming shares of the total risk of insuring a client. • The names of the bound underwriters and the attorney-in-fact appear on the policy. — Also termed Lloyd's; London Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1220.]

"[I]t is not the corporation of Lloyd's which undertakes insurance risks and enters into policies of insurance; that is done by the individual members of Lloyd's, acting usually in groups or 'syndicates,' which are not partnerships or companies but merely fortuitous aggregations of, say, five, ten, or more members represented in common by one underwriting agent having power to bind them each individually and separately to contracts of insurance. These members are frequently referred to as 'names'; and their agent is said to 'write' for them. If, as is commonly the case, he also is a member of Lloyd's, then he will 'write' for himself, too." 2 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 237 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

Lloyd's underwriters. An unincorporated association of underwriters who, under a common name, engage in the insurance business through an attorney-in-fact having authority to obligate the underwriters severally, within specified limits, on insurance contracts that the attorney makes or issues in the common name. — Also termed Lloyd's association; American Lloyd's. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 1220.]

load, n. An amount added to a security's price or to an insurance premium in order to cover the sales commission and expenses <the mutual fund had a high front-end load>. — Also termed sales load; acquisition cost.

load factor. 1. The ratio of a utility customer's usage levels during a given period compared to the customer's demand during peak periods. [Cases: Electricity ⇨ 11.3.] 2. An analysis of the number of passengers on an airplane or other common carrier compared to available capacity.

load fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

loading. Insurance. An amount added to a life-insurance premium to cover the insurer's business expenses and contingencies. — Also termed expense loading. See gross premium (1) under PREMIUM (1). [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2000, 2005.]

load line. Maritime law. 1. The depth to which a safely loaded ship will sink in salt water. 2. One of a set of graduated marks on the side of a ship, indicating the depth to which the ship can be loaded in varying waters (such as salt water or freshwater) and weather conditions. • Load lines must, by law in most maritime countries, be cut and painted amidships. — Also termed (in sense 2) load-line marks; Plimsoll marks.

"The interest of shipowners led them, in early times, to load vessels to a point beyond safety; the greater the weight of the vessel's load, of course, the lower she rides in the water, and the more vulnerable she is to heavy seas. Many seamen consequently lost their lives. Britain led the way in establishing standards of depth in the water believed to be safe; Samuel Plimsoll, M.P., was the moving spirit, and gave his name to the Plimsoll mark, now seen on the side of all large vessels, which marks the limits of safety for different seas and seasons. Since 1929, the United States has made mandatory the placing of and compliance with loadline marks . . ." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 11-12, at 987 (2d ed. 1975).

loadmanage. Hist. 1. The fee paid to loadsmen, who sail in small vessels acting as pilots for larger ships. 2. The hiring of a pilot for a vessel. 3. A pilot's or loadsmen's skill. — Also spelled lodemanage; lode manage.

loadman. Hist. 1. A person who directs a ship's course from a small boat traveling in front of the larger ship rather than from the ship itself. • The loadsmen had a monopoly on piloting in the cinque ports. See CINQUE PORTS. 2. A person who took the ship to a berth after a pilot had brought it into port. — Also spelled loadman; lodeman; lodesman.

loan, n. (12c) 1. An act of lending; a grant of something for temporary use <Turner gave the laptop as a loan, not a gift>. [Cases: Contracts ⇨ 194.] 2. A thing lent for the borrower's temporary use; esp., a sum of money lent at interest <Hull applied for a car loan>.

accommodation loan. (1834) A loan for which the lender receives no consideration in return. See ACCOMMODATION.

add-on loan. (1972) A loan in which the interest is calculated at the stated rate for the loan agreement's full term for the full principal amount, and then the interest is added to the principal before installment payments are calculated, resulting in an interest amount higher than if it were calculated on the monthly unpaid balance. • Consumer loans are typically add-on loans. — Also termed contract loan. See add-on interest under INTEREST (3).

amortized loan. (1930) A loan calling for periodic payments that are applied first to interest and then to principal, as provided by the terms of the note. See AMORTIZATION (1).

back-to-back loan. A loan arrangement by which two firms lend each other funds denominated in different currencies for a specified period. • The purpose is usu. to protect against fluctuations in the currencies' exchange rates.

balloon loan. An installment loan in which one or more of the later repayments are much larger than earlier payments; esp., a loan featuring a string of payments that are too small to amortize the entire loan within the loan period, coupled with a large final lump-sum payment of the outstanding balance.

below-market loan. See interest-free loan.

bridge loan. A short-term loan that is used to cover costs until more permanent financing is arranged or to cover a portion of costs that are expected to be covered by an imminent sale. — Also termed bridge financing; swing loan.

broker call loan. See call loan.

building loan. A type of bridge loan used primarily for erecting a building. • The loan is typically advanced in parts as work progresses and is used to pay the contractor, subcontractors, and material suppliers. — Also termed construction loan. See interim financing under FINANCING.

call loan. (1869) A loan for which the lender can demand payment at any time, usu. with 24 hours' notice, because there is no fixed maturity date. — Also termed broker call loan; demand loan. Cf. term loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↻129(3).]

character loan. A loan made in reliance on the borrower's character and stable earnings. • Character loans are usu. secured by a mortgage or by other property, but sometimes they are unsecured.

clearing loan. A loan made to a bond dealer pending the sale of a bond issue.

collateral loan. See secured loan.

commercial loan. (1875) A loan that a financial institution gives to a business, generally for 30 to 90 days.

commodity loan. A loan secured by a commodity (such as cotton or wool) in the form of a warehouse receipt or other negotiable instrument.

consolidation loan. (1875) A loan whose proceeds are used to pay off other individual loans, thereby creating a more manageable debt.

construction loan. See building loan.

consumer loan. (1957) A loan that is given to an individual for family, household, personal, or agricultural purposes and that is generally governed by truth-in-lending statutes and regulations. [Cases: Consumer Credit ↻1.] contract loan. See add-on loan.

Crown loan. Tax. An interest-free demand loan, usu. from parent to child, in which the borrowed funds are invested and the income from the investment is taxed at the child's rate. • This type of loan is named for one Harry Crown of Chicago, reputedly one of the first persons to use it. See kiddie tax under TAX.

day loan. A short-term loan to a broker to finance daily transactions.

demand loan. See call loan.

discount loan. A loan in which interest is deducted in advance, at the time the loan is made.

doorstep loan. A loan offered by a door-to-door solicitor, usu. for home repairs at a high interest rate and under misleading or fraudulent terms. • The term is used primarily in the United Kingdom.

GI loan. See veteran's loan.

home-equity loan. (1984) A line of bank credit given to a homeowner, using as collateral the homeowner's equity in the home. — Often shortened to equity loan. — Also termed home-equity line of credit. See EQUITY (7).

installment loan. (1916) A loan that is to be repaid in usu. equal portions over a specified period.

interest-free loan. (1946) Money loaned to a borrower at no charge or, under the Internal Revenue Code, with a charge that is lower than the market rate. IRC (26 USCA) § 7872. — Also termed (in the IRC) below-market loan.

interest-only loan. A loan for which the borrower pays only the interest on the principal balance of the loan for a stated period, usu. a few years. • At the end of the stated period, the principal balance is unchanged. An interest-only loan features low initial payments in return for significantly larger payments later or a balloon payment at the end of the term.

liar's loan. 1. A loan that involves no background check and can be obtained by claiming that one meets the lender's income and other requirements. 2. See no-doc loan (1). 3. See stated-income loan (1). Cf. NINJA loan.

maritime loan. A loan providing that a lender will not be repaid if the cargo is damaged or lost because of a navigational peril, but that the lender will be repaid plus interest if the cargo arrives safely or is damaged because of the carrier's negligence. — Also termed marine loan.

mortgage loan. (1846) A loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real property. [Cases: Mortgages ↻14.]

NINJA loan. abbr. No-income, no-job, no-assets loan. Cf. liar's loan (1); no-doc loan (1); stated-income loan (1).

no-doc loan. 1. A loan for which a borrower provides only minimal proof of ability to repay. • The name is short for "no documentation." 2. See liar's loan (1). Cf. NINJA loan.

nonperforming loan. (1984) An outstanding loan that is not being repaid.

nonrecourse loan. (1941) A secured loan that allows the lender to attach only the collateral, not the borrower's personal assets, if the loan is not repaid. [Cases:

Bills and Notes ↪44; Secured Transactions ↪227, 240.]

participation loan. (1928) A loan issued by two or more lenders. See LOAN PARTICIPATION. [Cases: Contracts ↪194.]

policy loan. An insurer's loan to an insured, secured by the policy's cash reserve. [Cases: Insurance ↪1868.]

precarious loan. 1. A loan that may be recalled at any time. 2. A loan in danger of not being repaid.

premium loan. A loan made to an insured by the insurer to enable the insured to pay further premiums. • The reserve value of the policy serves as collateral. [Cases: Insurance ↪1868, 2037.]

recourse loan. A loan that allows the lender, if the borrower defaults, not only to attach the collateral but also to seek judgment against the borrower's (or guarantor's) personal assets. [Cases: Secured Transactions ↪227, 240.]

revolver loan. (1985) A single loan that a debtor takes out in lieu of several lines of credit or other loans from various creditors, and that is subject to review and approval at certain intervals. • A revolver loan is usu. taken out in an attempt to resolve problems with creditors. Cf. revolving credit under CREDIT (4).

revolving loan. (1927) A loan that is renewed at maturity.

scratch-and-dent loan. A loan made to a borrower who was able to repay when the loan was made but has since fallen behind on payments.

secured loan. (1862) A loan that is secured by property or securities. — Also termed collateral loan.

short-term loan. (1902) A loan with a due date of less than one year, usu. evidenced by a note.

signature loan. An unsecured loan based solely on the borrower's promise or signature. • To obtain such a loan, the borrower must usu. be highly creditworthy.

stated-income loan. 1. A loan extended to a borrower who claimed a certain income but has not verified the claim. 2. See liar's loan (1). Cf. NINJA loan.

subprime loan. A loan, esp. a mortgage or home-equity loan, made to one whose financial condition and creditworthiness are poor, creating a high risk of default. • A subprime loan usu. has an adjustable interest rate that is low at inception, to help a financially weak borrower qualify, then rises over the life of the loan.

swing loan. See bridge loan.

term loan. A loan with a specified due date, usu. of more than one year. • Such a loan typically cannot be repaid before maturity without incurring a penalty. — Also termed time loan. Cf. call loan. [Cases: Bills and Notes ↪129(1).]

veteran's loan. A federally guaranteed loan extended to armed-forces veterans for the purchase of a home. — Also written veterans' loan; veteran loan. — Also termed VA loan; GI loan. [Cases: Armed Services ↪108.]

loan, vb. To lend, esp. money.

loan-amortization schedule. (1958) A schedule that divides each loan payment into an interest component and a principal component. • Typically, the interest component begins as the largest part of each payment and declines over time. See AMORTIZATION (1).

loan association. See SAVINGS-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION.

loan broker. See BROKER.

loan-brokerage fee. See MORTGAGE DISCOUNT.

loan certificate. A certificate that a clearinghouse issues to a borrowing bank in an amount equal to a specified percentage of the value of the borrowing bank's collateral on deposit with the clearinghouse's loan committee.

loan commitment. (1940) A lender's binding promise to a borrower to lend a specified amount of money at a certain interest rate, usu. within a specified period and for a specified purpose (such as buying real estate). See MORTGAGE COMMITMENT. [Cases: Contracts ↪194.]

loaned employee. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

loaned servant. See borrowed employee under EMPLOYEE.

loan for consumption. (1840) An agreement by which a lender delivers goods to a borrower who consumes them and who is obligated to return goods of the same quantity, type, and quality. [Cases: Contracts ↪194.]

loan for exchange. (1915) A contract by which a lender delivers personal property to a borrower who agrees to return similar property, usu. without compensation for its use.

loan for use. (1837) An agreement by which a lender delivers an asset to a borrower who must use it according to its normal function or according to the agreement, and who must return it when finished using it. • No interest is charged.

loanland. Hist. A tenancy involving the loan of land by one person to another. — Also spelled laenland. Cf. BOOKLAND; FOLKLAND.

loan-origination fee. See FEE.

loan participation. (1934) The coming together of multiple lenders to issue a large loan (called a participation loan) to one borrower, thereby reducing each lender's individual risk. [Cases: Contracts ↷ 194.]

loan ratio. See LOAN-TO-VALUE RATIO.

loan-receipt agreement. (1943) Torts. A settlement agreement by which the defendant lends money to the plaintiff interest-free, the plaintiff not being obligated to repay the loan unless he or she recovers money from other tortfeasors responsible for the same injury. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement ↷ 7.1; Insurance ↷ 3524.]

loansharking, n. (1914) The practice of lending money at excessive and esp. usurious rates, and often using threats or extortion to enforce repayment. — Also termed extortionate credit transaction. — loan-shark, vb. — loan shark, n.

loan society. English law. A club organized to collect deposits from and make loans to industrial workers. • The loan societies were forerunners of the American savings-and-loan associations.

loan-to-value ratio. The ratio, usu. expressed as a percentage, between the amount of a mortgage loan and the value of the property pledged as security for the mortgage. • For example, an $80,000 loan on property worth $100,000 results in a loan-to-value ratio of 80% — which is usu. the highest ratio that lenders will agree to without requiring the debtor to buy mortgage insurance. — Often shortened to LTV ratio. — Also termed loan ratio. [Cases: Mortgages ↷ 145.]

loan value. Insurance. 1. The maximum amount that may be lent safely on property or life insurance without jeopardizing the lender's need for protection from the borrower's default. 2. The amount of money an insured can borrow against the cash value of his or her life-insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ↷ 1868.]

lobby, vb. (1837) 1. To talk with or curry favor with a legislator, usu. repeatedly or frequently, in an attempt to influence the legislator's vote <she routinely lobbies for tort reform in the state legislature>. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 24.] 2. To support or oppose (a measure) by working to influence a legislator's vote <the organization lobbied the bill through the Senate>. 3. To try to influence (a decision-maker) <the lawyer lobbied the judge for a favorable ruling>. — lobbying, n. — lobbyist, n.

lobbying act. (1948) A federal or state law governing the conduct of lobbyists, usu. by requiring them to register and file activity reports. • An example is the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act, 12 USCA § 261. [Cases: Statutes ↷ 24.]

local-exchange carrier. Telecommunications law. An entity that provides telephone service, usu. on a local basis, through a local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 153(26). — Abbr. LEC. See LOCAL-EXCHANGE NETWORK. [Cases: Telecommunications ↷ 854.]

local-exchange network. Telecommunications law. A system for providing telephone service on a local basis. • A local-exchange network usu. consists of such elements as switches, local loops, and transport trunks, and capabilities such as billing databases and operator services. Switches are pieces of equipment that direct calls to the appropriate destination. Local loops are the wires that connect telephones to the switches. Transport trunks are the wires that carry calls from switch to switch. All the elements of a local-exchange network are often referred to as a bundle, and there are federal requirements that a local-exchange carrier who controls a local-exchange network permit competition by selling some access, including unbundled access, to its local-exchange network. 47 USCA § 251(c). See LOCAL-EXCHANGE CARRIER; UNBUNDLING RULES. [Cases: Telecommunications ↷ 854.] local government. See GOVERNMENT.

local improvement. See IMPROVEMENT.

local-improvement assessment. See local assessment under ASSESSMENT.

locality, n. (17c) 1. A definite region; vicinity; neighborhood; community. 2. Hist. Scots law. The land held by a widow in usufruct under the terms of her marriage contract. • If a widow has locality lands, she cannot assert her statutory claim to a one-third share of her husband's real property.

locality of a lawsuit. (1939) The place where a court may exercise judicial authority.

locality-plus test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, not only must the alleged wrong occur on navigable waters, it must also relate to a traditional maritime activity Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality-plus rule; maritime-connection doctrine. [Cases: Admiralty ↷ 17.]

locality rule. 1. The doctrine that, in a professional-malpractice suit, the standard of care applicable to the professional's conduct is the reasonable care exercised by similar professionals in the same vicinity and professional community. [Cases: Health ⇨620.]

"With respect to medical doctors (and sometimes dentists and others), the standard of care has been further limited by the so-called 'locality rule.' A physician historically was required only to possess and apply the knowledge and use the skill and care that is ordinarily used by reasonably well-qualified physicians in the locality in which he practices, or, usually, in 'similar localities.' This frequently made it difficult or impossible for a plaintiff to prove the applicable standard since other doctors in the same locality are notoriously reluctant to testify against their professional colleagues. However, with the advent of improved communication and continuing medical education, the reason for the rule has abated, and today the trend is toward its abolition." Edward J. Kionka, Torts in a Nutshell 270-71 (2d ed. 1992).

2. The doctrine that, in determining the appropriate amount of attorney's fees to be awarded in a suit, the proper basis is the rate charged by similar attorneys for similar work in the vicinity. [Cases: Costs ⇨194.18; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2737.4.]

locality test. Maritime law. The requirement that, for a federal court to exercise admiralty tort jurisdiction, the alleged wrong must have occurred on navigable waters. • The test was replaced by the locality-plus test in Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland, 409 U.S. 249, 93 S.Ct. 493 (1972). — Also termed locality rule. See LOCALITY-PLUS TEST. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨17.]

localization doctrine. The doctrine that a foreign corporation, by doing sufficient business in a state, will subject itself to that state's laws. [Cases: Corporations ⇨661.]

local law. 1. A statute that relates to or operates in a particular locality rather than the entire state. 2. A statute that applies to particular persons or things rather than an entire class of persons or things. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) local act; local statute. [Cases: Statutes ⇨76-104.] 3. The law of a particular jurisdiction, as opposed to the law of a foreign state. — Also termed internal law. 4. Conflict of laws. The body of standards, principles, and rules — excluding conflict-of-laws rules — that the state courts apply to controversies before them. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 4(1) (1971). [Cases: Action ⇨17.]

local-law theory. Conflict of laws. The view that, although a court of the forum recognizes and enforces a local right (that is, one created under its own law), in a foreign-element case it does not necessarily apply the rule that would govern an analogous case of a purely domestic character, but instead takes into account the law of the foreign country by fashioning a local right as nearly as possible upon the law of the country in which the decisive facts have occurred. • This theory is credited to Walter Wheeler Cook, who expounded it in the first chapter of his Logical and Legal Bases of the Conflict of Laws (1949). [Cases: Action ⇨17.]

"Since the court of the forum adopts the view that the chosen law would have taken not of the actual case, but of an equivalent domestic case, it does not necessarily recognize the right that would have been vested in the plaintiff according to that law. . . . It is scarcely deniable, however, that this local law theory is little more than what a learned writer has stigmatized as a sterile truism — sterile because it affords no basis for the systematic development of private international law. To remind an English judge, about to try a case containing a foreign element, that whatever decision he gives he must enforce only the lex fori, is a technical quibble that explains nothing and solves nothing. It provides no guidance whatever upon the limits within which he must have regard to the foreign law." G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 35 (6th ed. 1961).

local option. An option that allows a municipality or other governmental unit to determine a particular course of action without the specific approval of state officials. — Also termed local veto. Cf. HOME RULE. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ⇨24-43; Municipal Corporations ⇨65.]

local receiver. See RECEIVER.

local rule. (1819) 1. A rule based on the physical conditions of a state and the character, customs, and beliefs of its people. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨25.]

2. A rule by which an individual court supplements the procedural rules applying generally to all courts within the jurisdiction. • Local rules deal with a variety of matters, such as requiring extra copies of motions to be filed with the court or prohibiting the reading of newspapers in the courtroom. Fed. R. Civ. P. 83. [Cases: Courts ⇨85; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨25.]

local statute. 1. See LOCAL LAW (1). 2. See LOCAL LAW (2).

local union. See UNION.

local usage. See USAGE.

local veto. See LOCAL OPTION.

locare (lə-kair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To let or hire out. See LOCATOR.

locare aliquid faciendum (lə-kair-ee al-i-kwid fay-shee-en-dəm). [Latin] Roman law. To contract to have someone perform work for remuneration. Cf. CONDUCTERE ALIQUID FACIENDUM.

locare aliquid utendum (lə-kair-ee al-i-kwid yoo-ten-dəm). [Latin] Roman law. To let something on hire for the use of the lessee; to accept consideration for the use of an object. Cf. CONDUCTERE ALIQUID UTENDUM.

locarium (lə-kair-ee-əm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Rent.

locatarius (loh-kə-tair-ee-əs), n. [Latin] Hist. A person with whom something is deposited; a deposittee.

locatio (lə-kay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. Any contract by which the use of the thing bailed, or the use of the labor or services, is agreed to be given for a compensation. • This type of contract benefits both parties. — Also termed lease; hiring. Cf. ABLOCATION. Pl. locationes (lə-kay-shee-oh-neež).

locatio conductio (lə-kay-shee-oh kən-duk-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A letting for hire; specif., a contract by which one person agreed to give to another the use, or the use and enjoyment, of a thing or of services or labor in return for remuneration, usu. money. • In Roman law, it covered a broad range of circumstances in return for a merces or rent.

locatio custodiae (lə-kay-shee-oh kəs-toh-dee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. The hiring of care or service, as when the bailee is to protect the thing bailed.

locatio mercium vehendarum. See locatio operis mercium vehendarum.

locatio operarum (lə-kay-shee-oh op-ə-rair-əm). [Latin "the letting of services"] Roman & civil law. A contract of employment; specif., contract in which someone, usu. a day laborer, hires out his services for a specified price. — Also termed locatio operis faciendi. Cf. REDEMPTIO OPERIS.

locatio operis faciendi (lə-kay-shee-oh op-ə-ris fay-shee-en-dt). [Latin "the letting of a job to be done"] Roman law. A contract by which someone hires a contractor (conductor) to undertake work (e.g., to build a home or teach a slave to read) on behalf of the hirer. — Sometimes shortened to locatio operis. See locatio operarum.

locatio operis mercium vehendarum (lə-kay-shee-oh op-ə-ris mər-shee-əm vee-hən-dair-əm). [Latin "the letting of the job of carrying goods"] Roman law. A bailment in which goods are delivered to the bailee for transport elsewhere, esp. by sea. — Also termed locatio mercium vehendarum.

locatio rei (lə-kay-shee-oh ree-i). [Latin "letting of a thing"] Roman law. The hiring of a thing for use, by which the hirer gains the temporary use of the thing for a fee.

"Locatio rei was the letting of a res for hire. Roman law differed in several aspects from the relevant rules of English law. Firstly, there was not in Roman law a fundamental distinction between the hiring of personal property and the lease of real property: locatio rei applied both to land and movables. Secondly, in Roman law the hirer did not obtain possession. Thirdly, the locatio was a mere contract and even the tenant of land did not have a right to be restored if he were [wrongfully] ejected, his sole remedy being an action for breach of contract. Fourthly, the Roman contract gave more consideration to the tenant or hirer than does English law." G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 53 (1952).

location. (16c) 1. The specific place or position of a person or thing. 2. The act or process of locating. 3. Real estate. The designation of the boundaries of a particular piece of land, either on the record or on the land itself. [Cases: Boundaries ↷7-9.] 4. Mining law. The act of appropriating a mining claim. — Also termed mining location. See MINING CLAIM. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↷9-38.] 5. The claim so appropriated. 6. Civil law. A contract for the temporary use of something for hire; a leasing for hire. See LOCATIO.

location-damage clause. See SURFACE-DAMAGE CLAUSE.

locative calls (lok-ə-tiv). (1807) Property. In land descriptions, specific descriptions that fix the boundaries of the land. • Locative calls may be marks of location, landmarks, or other physical objects. If calls in a description conflict, locative calls control over those indicating a general area of a boundary. See CALL (5); DIRECTORY CALLS. [Cases: Boundaries ↷1-23.]

locator (loh-kay-tər), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. (usu. ital.) One who lets out property or services for reward, or who contracts to have another person (the conductor) perform work for reward; a lessor or landlord. See CONDUCTOR (2).

locator operarum, n. One who offers one's labor for hire, esp. as a day laborer.

locator operas faciendi, n. One who employs contract labor.

locator rei, n. A lessor or landlord.

2. One who is entitled to locate land or set the boundaries of a mining claim.

locatum (lə-kay-təm), n. [Latin] Hist. A hiring. See BAILMENT.

Lochnerize (lok-nər-iz), vb. (1976) To examine and strike down economic legislation under the guise of enforcing the Due Process Clause, esp. in the manner of the U.S. Supreme Court during the early 20th century. • The term takes its name from the decision in Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45, 25 S.Ct. 539 (1905), in which the Court invalidated New York's maximum-hours law for bakers. — Lochnerization, n.

lockbox. (1872) 1. A secure box, such as a post-office box, strongbox, or safe-deposit box. 2. A facility offered by a financial institution for quickly collecting and consolidating checks and other funds from a party's customers.

lockdown. (1977) The temporary confinement of prisoners in their cells during a state of heightened alert caused by an escape, riot, or other emergency. [Cases: Prisons ↷233.]

Lockeanism. See LOCKEAN LABOR THEORY.

Lockean labor theory. The philosopher John Locke's justification of private property, based on the natural right of one's ownership of one's own labor, and the right to nature's common property to the extent that one's labor can make use of it. • Locke's theory, from the fifth chapter of his Second Treatise on Civil Government, is often used to analyze the natural rights of inventors, authors, and artists in their own creations. — Also termed labor theory; Lockeanism. Cf. PERSONALITY THEORY; UTILITARIANISM.

locked in, adj. 1. (Of a person) unable to sell appreciated securities and realize the gain because of liability for capital gains taxes <my accountant advised me not to sell the stock because I am locked in>. 2. (Of a price, rate, etc.) staying the same for a given period <the 7% mortgage rate is locked in for 30 days>.

locked-in rate. See lock rate under INTEREST RATE.

lockout. (1854) 1. An employer's withholding of work and closing of a business because of a labor dispute. [Cases: Labor and Employment ↷1392.]

defensive lockout. A lockout that is called to prevent imminent and irreparable financial harm to the company or to protect a legal right. • Defensive lockouts were legal, but the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the distinction between defensive and offensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

offensive lockout. A lockout called by management to assert economic pressure on workers and thereby gain a bargaining advantage over a union. • Offensive lockouts were illegal before the U.S. Supreme Court abolished the legal distinction between offensive and defensive lockouts in favor of a balancing test. American Ship Bldg. Co. v. NLRB, 380 U.S. 300, 85 S.Ct. 955 (1965).

2. Loosely, an employee's refusal to work because the employer unreasonably refuses to abide by an expired employment contract while a new one is being negotiated. Cf. STRIKE; BOYCOTT; PICKETING.

lock rate. See INTEREST RATE.

lockup, n. 1. See JAIL. 2. See LOCKUP OPTION.

lockup agreement. Securities. A contract between an underwriter and a corporation's insiders that prohibits the insiders from selling any personal stockholdings for a specified time after the corporation makes a public offering of securities. Cf. MARKET-STANDOFF AGREEMENT. [Cases: Corporations ↷310(1).]

lockup option. A defense against a corporate takeover, in which a friendly party is entitled to buy parts of a corporation for a set price when a person or group acquires a certain percentage of the corporation's shares. • An agreement of this kind may be illegal, to the extent it is not undertaken to serve the best interests of the shareholders. — Often shortened to lockup. [Cases: Corporations ↷312(5).]

loco parentis. See IN LOCO PARENTIS.

loco rerum immobilium (loh-koh reer-əm im-ə-bil-ee-əm). [Latin] Scots law. Treated as immovable things. • The phrase appeared in reference to a determination of whether certain items (such as shares of stock) should be treated as movable or immovable property.

loco tutoris (loh-koh t[y]oo-tor-is). [Latin] Scots law. In the place of a tutor.

"The Court of Session is in the practice of appointing, on application made for such appointment, a factor loco tutoris on the estates of pupils not having tutors. Such an appointment places the factor in the same position towards the pupil, both as regards his person and the administration of his estate, as if he held the office by virtue of relationship and was tutor-at-law, or had received the appointment of tutor from the pupil's father under his testamentary settlement, the only difference being that the office of a tutor appointed by the Court is not gratuitous." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 336-37 (4th ed. 1894).

locum tenens (loh-kəm tee-nenz or ten-ənz), n. [Law Latin "holding the place"] Hist. A deputy; a substitute; a representative.

locuples (lok-yə-pleez), adj. [Latin] Civil law. Having the means to pay any amount that the plaintiff might recover. — Also termed locuplete.

locupletari cum damno alterius (lok-yuu-plə-tair-ɪ kəm dām-noh al-teer-ee-əs). [Latin] To be enriched through the damage sustained by another.

locus (loh-kəs). [Latin "place"] (18c) The place or position where something is done or exists. — Abbr. L. See SITUS.

locus actus (loh-kəs ak-təs). [Latin "place of the act"] The place where an act was done; the place of performance.

locus contractus (loh-kəs kən-trak-təs). [Latin "place of the contract"] The place where a contract was made. Cf. LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS. [Cases: Contracts ↷144, 145.]

locus criminis (loh-kəs krim-ə-nis), n. [Latin] The place where a crime was committed.

locus delicti (loh-kəs də-lik-ti). [Latin "place of the wrong"] The place where an offense was committed; the place where the last event necessary to make the actor liable occurred. Cf. LEX LOCI DELICTI. [Cases: Torts ↷103.]

"When a statute does not indicate where Congress considered the place of committing the crime to be, the site or locus delicti must be determined from the nature of the crime and the location of the acts or omissions constituting the offense." United States v. Clinton, 574 F.2d 464, 465 (9th Cir. 1978).

locus in quo (loh-kəs in kwoh). [Latin "place in which"] (18c) The place where something is alleged to have occurred.

locus partitus (loh-kəs pah-r-ti-təs), n. [Latin "a place divided"] Hist. The act of dividing two towns or counties to determine which of them contains the land or place in question.

locus poenitentiae (loh-kəs pen-ə-ten-shee-ee). [Latin "place of repentance"] 1. A point at which it is not too late for one to change one's legal position; the possibility of withdrawing from a contemplated course of action, esp. a wrong, before being committed to it.

"The requirement of an overt act before conspirators can be prosecuted and punished exists . . . to provide a locus poenitentiae — an opportunity for the conspirators to reconsider, terminate the agreement, and thereby avoid punishment." People v. Zamora, 557 P.2d 75, 82 n.8 (Cal. 1976).

2. The opportunity to withdraw from a negotiation before finally concluding the contract. [Cases: Contracts ↷138(3).]

locus publicus (loh-kəs pəb-li-kəs). [Latin] Roman law. A public place.

"Locus publicus . . . A parcel of public land. It is property of the Roman people and is protected by various interdicts . . . against violation by private individuals who might endanger its public character or its use by the people." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 568 (1953).

locus regit actum (loh-kəs ree-jit ak-təm), n. [Latin "the place rules the act"] Int'l law. The rule that a transaction complying with the legal formalities of the country where it is created will be considered valid in the country where it is to be effective, even if that country requires additional formalities.

locus rei sitae (loh-kəs ree-ī sī-tee), n. [Latin “place where a thing is situated”] Civil law. The rule that the place where the land is located is the proper forum in a case involving real estate.

locus sigilli (loh-kəs si-jil-ī), n. [Latin] The place of the seal. • Today this phrase is almost always abbreviated “L.S.” These are the traditional letters appearing on many notarial certificates to indicate where the notary public’s embossed seal should be placed. If a rubber-stamp seal is used, it should be placed near but not over this abbreviation. See NOTARY SEAL. [Cases: Seals ⇨ 3.]

locus solutionis (loh-kəs sə-loo-shee-oh-nis). [Latin] Hist. The place of performance.

locus standi (loh-kəs stan-dī or -dee). [Latin “place of standing”] (1835) The right to bring an action or to be heard in a given forum; STANDING.

lode, n. 1. MINERAL LODE. 2. LADE.

lode claim. See MINING CLAIM.

lodeman. See LOADSMAN.

lodemanage, n. See LOADMANAGE.

lodesman. See LOADSMAN.

lodestar. (14c) 1. A guiding star; an inspiration or model. 2. A reasonable amount of attorney’s fees in a given case, usu. calculated by multiplying a reasonable number of hours worked by the prevailing hourly rate in the community for similar work, and often considering such additional factors as the degree of skill and difficulty involved in the case, the degree of its urgency, its novelty, and the like. • Most statutes that authorize an award of attorney’s fees use the lodestar method for computing the award. [Cases: Costs ⇨ 194.18; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 2737.4.] lodge. See FILE (1).

lodger. (16c) 1. A person who rents and occupies a room in another’s house. [Cases: Innkeepers ⇨ 8; Landlord and Tenant ⇨ 1.] 2. A person who occupies a designated area in another’s house but acquires no property interest in that area, which remains in the owner’s legal possession.

log, n. 1. See ARREST RECORD. 2. JOURNAL (1).

logan. See LAGAN.

logbook. (17c) 1. A ship’s or aircraft’s journal containing an account of each trip, often with a history of events during the voyage; JOURNAL (1). 2. Any journal or record of events.

loggia (loj-ee-ə), n. [Latin] Hist. A small house or cottage.

logical-cause doctrine. (1980) The principle that, if the plaintiff proves that an injury occurred and proves a logical cause of it, a party desiring to defeat the claim cannot succeed merely by showing that there is another imaginable cause, but must also show that the alternative cause is more probable than the cause shown by the plaintiff. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation ⇨ 1356.]

logical interpretation. See INTERPRETATION.

logical positivism. (1931) A philosophical system or movement requiring that meaningful statements be in principle verifiable. Cf. LEGAL POSITIVISM.

logical-relationship standard. (1976) Civil procedure. A test applied to determine whether a defendant’s counterclaim is compulsory, by examining whether both claims are based on the same operative facts or whether those facts activate additional rights, otherwise dormant, for the defendant. • One of the most important factors considered is whether hearing the claims together would promote judicial economy and efficiency. Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⇨ 776; Set-off and Counterclaim ⇨ 60.]

“[U]nder the fourth test — frequently referred to as the ‘logical relationship’ standard — the principal consideration in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory rests on the efficiency or economy of trying the counterclaim in the same litigation as the main claim. As a result, the convenience of the court, rather than solely the counterclaim’s relationship to the facts or issues of the opposing claim, is controlling. The hallmark of this approach is flexibility. Although the fourth test has been criticized for being overly broad in scope and uncertain in application, it has by far the widest acceptance among the courts.” Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 6.7, at 352 (2d ed. 1993).

logic bomb. Destructive or disruptive computer software that is planted on a computer, server, or network and waits until a certain time to activate itself.

logium (loj-ee-əm), n. [Latin] Hist. A lodge, hovel, or outhouse.

logographer (log-ə-graf-əs), n. [Latin fr. Greek] Roman law. A bookkeeper or public clerk.

LOI. abbr. LETTER OF INTENT.

loitering, n. (14c) The criminal offense of remaining in a certain place (such as a public street) for no apparent reason. • Loitering statutes are generally held to be unconstitutionally vague. Cf. VAGRANCY. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct ↷122; Vagrancy ↷1.] — loiter, vb.

lollipop syndrome. (1986) Family law. A situation in which one or both parents, often in a custody battle, manipulate the child with gifts, fun, good times, and minimal discipline in an attempt to win over the child. See Disneyland parent under PARENT. Cf. RESCUE SYNDROME.

Lombard law. A Germanic customary law based primarily on a code called the Edict of Rothar, published in A.D. 643. • Rothar was the King of the Lombards at the time (A.D. 636–652), and his code (written in Latin) was more complete than the Germanic leges barbarorum. — Also termed law of Lombardy; law of Langobardi. Cf. LEGES BARBARORUM.

London commodity option. An agreement to buy or sell a futures contract for a commodity traded on the London markets, for a particular price and within a particular time.

London Interbank Offered Rate. A daily compilation by the British Bankers Association of the rates that major international banks charge each other for large-volume, short-term loans of Eurodollars, with monthly maturity rates calculated out to one year. • These daily rates are used as the underlying interest rates for derivative contracts in currencies other than the euro. — Abbr. LIBOR. Cf. EURO INTERBANK OFFERED RATE.

London Lloyd's. See LLOYD'S OF LONDON.

Lone Pine order. A case-management order in a toxic-tort lawsuit involving many plaintiffs, establishing procedures and deadlines for discovery, including requiring the plaintiffs to timely produce evidence and expert opinions to substantiate each plaintiff's exposure to the hazardous substance, the injury suffered, and the cause of the injury. Lore v. Lone Pine Corp., No. L-33606-85 (N.J. Super. Ct. Nov. 18, 1986). • Although the Lone Pine opinion is unreported, it has become famous for the kind of case-management order involved, in part because the plaintiffs' claims were dismissed for failure to timely provide expert opinions. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ↷1925.1; Pretrial Procedure ↷747.1.]

long, adj. 1. Holding a security or commodity in anticipation of a rise in price . 2. Of or relating to a purchase of securities or commodities in anticipation of rising prices . Cf. SHORT.

long, adv. By a long purchase; into or in a long position <bought the wheat long>.

long account. See ACCOUNT.

longa manu (long-gə man-yoo), adv. [Latin "with a long hand"] Roman & civil law. Indirectly; by the longest route. • This described the transfer of ownership by pointing out, at some distance, the thing to the transferee and authorizing its taking. This could be done, for example, by handing over the keys at the door of a warehouse, or by pointing out the boundaries of land. See CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM. Cf. BREVI MANU.

long-arm, adj. Of, relating to, or arising from a long-arm statute <long-arm jurisdiction>. [Cases: Courts ↷12(2); Federal Courts ↷76.1.]

long-arm jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

long-arm statute. (1951) A statute providing for jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant who has had contacts with the territory where the statute is in effect. • Most state long-arm statutes extend this jurisdiction to its constitutional limits. — Also termed single-act statute. See long-arm jurisdiction under JURISDICTION. [Cases: Courts ↷12(2); Federal Courts ↷76.1.]

long-firm fraud. See FRAUD.

long-form bill of lading. See BILL OF LADING.

longi temporis praescriptio (long-gi tem-pə-ris pri-skrip-shee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. The prescriptive period after which a possessor of property could defeat any challenge to his title. See USUCAPTION.

Long Parliament. Hist. 1. The English Parliament of Charles I meeting between 1640 and 1653, dissolved by Oliver Cromwell in 1653, then recalled and finally dissolved in 1660. 2. The English Parliament that met between 1661 and 1678, after the restoration of the monarchy. • This Parliament is sometimes called the "Long Parliament of Charles II" to distinguish it from that of sense 1.

long robe. Hist. The legal profession <gentlemen of the long robe>. See ROBE.

long-run incremental cost. Antitrust. A cost threshold for determining whether predatory pricing has occurred, consisting of all costs that, over a several-year period, would not be incurred if the product in question were not offered. • It differs from average variable cost because it includes some costs that do not vary in the short run but that do vary over a longer period, depending on whether a particular product is offered. — Abbr. LRIC. Cf. average variable cost under COST (1).

Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act. A federal law designed to provide workers' compensation benefits to persons, other than seamen, who work in maritime occupations, esp. stevedoring and ship service. 33 USCA § 901–50. — Abbr. LHWCA. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ↷93, 260, 262, 2085.]

"Employees who are engaged in maritime-related activities but who do not qualify as 'seamen' may be classified as 'maritime workers' entitled to the benefits provided by the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act . . . Persons covered by the act, which has the attributes of the usual workers' compensation law, include (1) employees injured on the Outer Continental Shelf in the course of mineral exploration and production activities, and (2) employees within American territorial waters who fall within the Congressional definition of a 'maritime worker,' and who are injured on 'navigable waters.'" Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 44 (2d ed. 1988).

longshoreman. (1811) A maritime laborer who works on the wharves in a port; esp., a person who loads and long-term capital gain. See CAPITAL GAIN.

long-term capital loss. See LOSS.

long-term debt. See DEBT.

long-term foster care. See FOSTER CARE.

long-term security. See SECURITY.

long title. See TITLE (3).

long ton. See TON.

look and feel. See TRADE DRESS.

look-and-feel protection. Copyright protection of the images generated or revealed when one activates a computer program. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ↻ 10.4.] lookout, n. (17c) A careful, vigilant watching <the motorist's statutory duty of proper lookout>. [Cases: Automobiles ↻ 150; Collision ↻ 77.]

look-through principle. (1993) Tax. A doctrine for allocating transfer-gains taxes on real estate by looking beyond the entity possessing legal title to identify the beneficial owners of the property. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻ 3071.]

loose construction. See liberal construction under CONSTRUCTION.

looseleaf service. (1927) A type of lawbook having pages that are periodically replaced with updated pages, designed to cope with constant change and increasing bulk.

"The first loose leaf service covered the federal income tax, and was published in 1913 shortly after the Federal Income Tax Law of 1913 went into effect. It was followed in 1914 by a service reporting on the activities of the Federal Trade Commission, which had just been established. The loose leaf method was, therefore, first used as a means of reporting new tax and business laws which were to be subject to administrative interpretation . . . These first loose leaf services were designed . . . not to reprint just the bare text of the revenue and commission acts, but to follow up and report each new development on these new laws as it occurred." Arthur Sydney Beardsley, Legal Bibliography and the Use of Law Books § 185, at 313-14 (1937).

loquela (lə-kwee-lə), n. [Law Latin "talk"] Hist. 1. The oral discussions between the parties to a lawsuit leading to the issue, now called the pleadings. 2. Settlement discussions.

Cf. ADVOCATE GENERAL.

lord-and-master rule. See HEAD-AND-MASTER RULE.

Lord Campbell's Act. 1. The 1846 English statute that created a wrongful-death claim for the relatives of a decedent when the decedent would have had a claim if he or she had been merely injured and not killed. • Technically known as the Fatal Accidents Act of 1846, this statute changed the earlier rule, under which a tortfeasor who would have been liable to another escaped liability if the victim died. Cf. WRONGFUL-DEATH ACTION.

"The common law not only denied a tort recovery for injury once the tort victim had died, it also refused to recognize any new and independent cause of action in the victim's dependents or heirs for their own loss at his death. . . . The result was that it was cheaper for the defendant to kill the plaintiff than to injure him, and that the most grievous of all injuries left the bereaved family of the victim, who frequently were destitute, without a remedy. Since this was intolerable, it was changed in England by the passage of the Fatal Accidents Act of 1846, otherwise known as Lord Campbell's Act, which has become a generic name for similar statutes." Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 127, at 945 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984).

2. An American state's wrongful-death statute patterned after the original English act.

Lord Chamberlain. The second officer of the royal household in England, who serves as a peer, a privy councilor, and a member of the ruling government. — Also termed Lord Chamberlain of the Household.

loser-pays rule. See ENGLISH RULE.

loss. (bef. 12c) 1. An undesirable outcome of a risk; the disappearance or diminution of value, usu. in an unexpected or relatively unpredictable way. • When the loss is a decrease in value, the usual method of calculating the loss is to ascertain the amount by which a thing's original cost exceeds its later selling price. 2. Tax. The excess of a property's adjusted value over the amount realized from its sale or other disposition. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001. — Also termed realized loss. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3178.] 3. Insurance. The amount of financial detriment caused by an insured person's death or an insured property's damage, for which the insurer becomes liable. 4. The failure to maintain possession of a thing.

actual loss. (18c) A loss resulting from the real and substantial destruction of insured property.

actual total loss. 1. See total loss. 2. Marine insurance. The total loss of a vessel covered by an insurance policy (1) by its real and substantive destruction, (2) by injuries that destroy its existence as a distinct individual of a particular class, (3) by its being reduced to a wreck irretrievably beyond repair, or (4) by its being placed beyond the insured's control and beyond the insured's power of recovery. [Cases: Insurance ↻2235.]

business loss. See ordinary loss.

capital loss. (1921) The loss realized upon selling or exchanging a capital asset. Cf. CAPITAL GAIN.

casualty loss. (1934) For tax purposes, the total or partial destruction of an asset resulting from an unexpected or unusual event, such as an automobile accident or a tornado. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3416; Taxation ↻3510.]

consequential loss. (1829) A loss arising from the results of damage rather than from the damage itself. • A consequential loss is proximate when the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, under the circumstances, is to set in operation the intervening cause from which the loss directly results. When the loss is not the natural and probable effect of the wrongful conduct, the loss is remote. — Also termed indirect loss; consequential injury. Cf. direct loss. [Cases: Damages ↻15–23.]

constructive total loss. (1805) 1. Such serious damage to the insured property that the cost of repairs would exceed the value of the thing repaired. — Also termed constructive loss. [Cases: Insurance ↻2176.] 2. Marine underwriting. According to the traditional American rule, such serious damage to the insured property that the cost of repairs would exceed half the value of the thing repaired. See total loss. [Cases: Insurance ↻2236.]

direct loss. (18c) A loss that results immediately and proximately from an event. Cf. consequential loss.

disaster loss. A casualty loss sustained in a geographic area that the President designates as a disaster area. • It may be treated as having occurred during the previous tax year so that a victim may receive immediate tax benefits.

economic loss. See ECONOMIC LOSS.

extraordinary loss. (17c) A loss that is both unusual and infrequent, such as a loss resulting from a natural disaster.

general average loss. Marine underwriting. A loss at sea usu. incurred when cargo is thrown overboard to save the ship; a loss due to the voluntary and intentional sacrifice of part of a venture (usu. cargo) to save the rest of the venture from imminent peril. • Such a loss is borne equally by all the interests concerned in the venture. See AVERAGE (3). [Cases: Insurance ↻2240.]

hobby loss. A nondeductible loss arising from a personal hobby, as contrasted with an activity engaged in for profit. • The law generally presumes that an activity is engaged in for profit if profits are earned during at least three of the last five years. IRC (26 USCA) § 183. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3396, 3397.]

indirect loss. See consequential loss.

long-term capital loss. A loss on a capital asset held for an extended period, usu. at least 12 months. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3260.]

net loss. The excess of all expenses and losses over all revenues and gains.

net operating loss. (1921) The excess of operating expenses over revenues, the amount of which can be deducted from gross income if other deductions do not exceed gross income. — Abbr. NOL. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3399.]

ordinary loss. (1850) Tax. A loss incurred from the sale or exchange of an item that is used in a trade or business. • The loss is deductible from ordinary income, and thus is more beneficial to the taxpayer than a capital loss. — Also termed business loss.

out-of-pocket loss. (1921) The difference between the value of what the buyer paid and the market value of what was received in return. • In breach-of-contract cases, out-of-pocket loss is used to measure restitution damages. [Cases: Damages ↻36; Fraud ↻59(3).] paper loss. (1924) A loss that is realized only by selling something (such as a security) that has decreased in market value. — Also termed unrealized loss.

partial loss. A loss of part of the insured property; damage not amounting to a total loss. Cf. total loss. [Cases: Insurance ↻2177.]

particular average loss. Marine underwriting. A loss suffered by and borne alone by particular interests in a maritime venture. • Such a loss is usu. a partial loss. [Cases: Insurance ↻2241.]

passive loss. A loss, with limited tax deductibility, from an activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate, from a rental activity, or from a tax-shelter activity. [Cases: Internal Revenue ↻3418.]

pecuniary loss. A loss of money or of something having monetary value. [Cases: Damages ↻1.]

product-liability loss. The total of a taxpayer's product-liability expenses up to the amount of the taxpayer's net operating loss. IRC (26 USCA) § 172(j)(1). — Abbr. PLL. See net operating loss. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 3438.]

progressive loss. 1. Loss that spreads or becomes more expensive to repair over time. 2. Late-manifesting harm that is related to an event that caused immediate harm, worsens over time, and is not catalyzed by any additional causative agent. • A classic example is asbestosis, a disease that manifests long after exposure to asbestos fibers.

recognized loss. Tax. The portion of a loss that is subject to income taxation. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001(c).

salvage loss. 1. Generally, a loss that presumptively would have been a total loss if certain services had not been rendered. 2. Marine underwriting. The difference between the salvage value, less the salvage charges, and the original value of the insured property. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 2233.]

total loss. (1924) The complete destruction of insured property so that nothing of value remains and the subject matter no longer exists in its original form. • Generally, a loss is total if, after the damage occurs, no substantial remnant remains standing that a reasonably prudent uninsured owner, desiring to rebuild, would use as a basis to restore the property to its original condition. — Also termed actual total loss. Cf. partial loss; constructive total loss. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 2175.]

unrealized loss. See paper loss.

loss carryback. See CARRYBACK.

loss carryforward. See CARRYOVER.

loss carryover. See CARRYOVER.

loss insurance. See INSURANCE.

loss leader. (1922) A good or commodity sold at a very low price, usu. below cost, to attract customers to buy other items. — Sometimes shortened to leader. See BAIT AND SWITCH.

loss-of-bargain damages. See benefit-of-the-bargain damages under DAMAGES.

loss-of-bargain rule. (1903) The doctrine that damages for a breach of a contract should put the injured party in the position it would have been in if both parties had performed their contractual duties. [Cases: Damages ☞ 117, 120(1).]

loss-of-chance doctrine. (1987) A rule in some states providing a claim against a doctor who has engaged in medical malpractice that, although it does not result in a particular injury, decreases or eliminates the chance of surviving or recovering from the preexisting condition for which the doctor was consulted. — Also termed lost-chance doctrine; increased-risk-of-harm doctrine. [Cases: Health ☞ 833.]

loss of consortium (kən-sor-shee-əm). (1878) 1. A loss of the benefits that one spouse is entitled to receive from the other, including companionship, cooperation, aid, affection, and sexual relations. • Loss of consortium can be recoverable as damages from a tortfeasor in a personal-injury or wrongful-death action. Originally, only the husband could sue for loss of consortium. But in 1950, nearly a century after the enactment of the married women's property acts, a wife's action for negligent impairment of consortium was first recognized. Hittaffer v. Argonne Co., 183 F.2d 811 (D.C. Cir. 1950). Today 48 states and the District of Columbia recognize both a husband's and a wife's right to sue for loss of consortium (Utah and Virginia do not). [Cases: Husband and Wife ☞ 209(3, 4).] 2. A similar loss of benefits that one is entitled to receive from a parent or child. See CONSORTIUM.

loss-of-use exclusion. See failure-to-perform exclusion under EXCLUSION (3).

loss-payable clause. Insurance. An insurance-policy provision that authorizes the payment of proceeds to someone other than the named insured, esp. to someone who has a security interest in the insured property. • Typically, a loss-payable clause either designates the person as a beneficiary of the proceeds or assigns to the person a claim against the insurer, but the clause usu. does not treat the person as an additional insured. See MORTGAGE CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 3450.]

loss payee. Insurance. A person or entity named in an insurance policy (under a loss-payable clause) to be paid if the insured property suffers a loss. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 3450.]

loss ratio. 1. Insurance. The ratio between premiums paid and losses incurred during a given period. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 1540.] 2. A bank's loan losses compared to its loan assets; a business's receivable losses compared to its receivables.

loss reserve. See RESERVE.

lost, adj. (16c) 1. (Of property) beyond the possession and custody of its owner and not locatable by diligent search <lost at sea> <lost papers>. 2. (Of a person) missing <lost child>. 3. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) rejected; not adopted <the motion is lost>.

lost boundary. See BOUNDARY.

lost-chance doctrine. (1985) 1. LOSS-OF-CHANCE DOCTRINE. 2. A rule permitting a claim, in limited circumstances, against someone who fails to come to the aid of a person who is in imminent danger of being injured or killed. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE.

lost corner. See CORNER.

lost earning capacity. (1908) A person's diminished earning power resulting from an injury. • This impairment is recoverable as an element of damages in a tort action. Cf. lost earnings under EARNINGS. [Cases: Damages ☞ 38.]

"To some extent the phrases 'loss of earnings' and 'loss of earning capacity' are used interchangeably. But the preferred view is that they are different concepts. The former covers real loss which can be proved at the trial; the latter covers loss of the chances of getting equivalent work in the future." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 572 (17th ed. 1977).

lost earnings. See EARNINGS.

lost-expectation damages. See expectation damages under DAMAGES.

lost or not lost. Marine insurance. A policy provision fixing the effective date of the policy to a time preceding the policy date, even if the insured ship has already been lost when the policy is executed, as long as neither party then knows, or has means of knowing, that the ship has been lost.

lost profits. 1. Contracts. A measure of damages that allows a seller to collect the profits that would have been made on the sale if the buyer had not breached. UCC § 2-708(2). [Cases: Damages ⇨ 40; Sales ⇨ 384(1).] 2. Patents. A measure of damages set by estimating the net amount lost by a plaintiff-inventor because of the infringing defendant's actions. • The plaintiff can ask for a lost-profits recovery by showing that the patent is in demand, that the plaintiff is able to meet the demand, and that there are no acceptable noninfringing alternatives on the market. — Also termed (redundantly) lost-profits damages. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 318.]

lost property. See PROPERTY.

lost-sales-of-unpatented-items theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy whereby compensation is sought for sales of unpatented items that the plaintiff would have sold along with patented items but for the defendant's infringement.

lost-volume seller. (1974) A seller of goods who, after a buyer has breached a sales contract, resells the goods to a different buyer who would have bought identical goods from the seller's inventory even if the original buyer had not breached. • Such a seller is entitled to lost profits, rather than contract price less market price, as damages from the original buyer's breach. UCC § 2-708(2). [Cases: Sales ⇨ 384(7).]

lost will. See WILL.

lot. (bef. 12c) 1. A tract of land, esp. one having specific boundaries or being used for a given purpose.

minimum lot. A lot that has the least amount of square footage allowed by a local zoning law. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ⇨ 63, 254.]

nonconforming lot. A previously lawful lot that now violates an amended or newly adopted zoning ordinance. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ⇨ 321.]

2. An article that is the subject of a separate sale, lease, or delivery, whether or not it is sufficient to perform the contract. UCC §§ 2-105(5); 2A-103(1)(s). 3. A specified number of shares or a specific quantity of a commodity designated for trading.

odd lot. A number of shares of stock or the value of a bond that is less than a round lot.

round lot. The established unit of trading for stocks and bonds. • A round lot of stock is usu. 100 shares, and a round lot of bonds is usu. $1,000 or $5,000 par value. — Also termed even lot; board lot.

lot and scot. Hist. A collection of duties paid by voters before voting in certain cities and boroughs.

lot line. (1829) A land boundary that separates one tract from another <from the street to the alley, the lot line is 150 feet>.

lottery. (16c) A method of raising revenues, esp. state-government revenues, by selling tickets and giving prizes (usu. cash prizes) to those who hold tickets with winning numbers that are drawn at random. — Also termed lotto. [Cases: Lotteries ⇨ 3.]

Dutch lottery. A lottery in which tickets are drawn from classes, and the number and value of prizes are fixed and increasing with each class. • This type of lottery originated in Holland in the 16th century. — Also termed class lottery.

Genoese lottery (jen-oh-eez or -ees). A lottery in which, out of 90 consecutive numbers, five are drawn by lot, each player wagering that one or more of the numbers they have chosen will be drawn. • This type of lottery originated in Genoa in about 1530. — Also termed number lottery; numerical lottery.

love day. See DAY.

Lovely claim. Hist. Property. An entitlement to settle on and take ownership of public land in Arkansas, created by the federal government for Lovely County settlers who were displaced by an 1828 treaty that gave the settlers' land to the Cherokee nation. • The term gets its name from Lovely County in the Arkansas territory, which straddled what is now the Oklahoma-Arkansas border. The treaty divided the county, granted the portion west of the Mississippi River to the Cherokee nation, and required the settlers in that territory to relocate. On May 24, 1828, Congress passed an act granting relief to Lovely County settlers who were forced to leave the Cherokee land and granted them land on the eastern side of the river. Lovely claims are found in chains of title in Arkansas. [Cases: Public Lands ⇨ 45.]

lowbote (loh-boht). Hist. Compensation paid for the death of one killed in a disturbance.

low diligence. See slight diligence under DILIGENCE.

luce clarius (loo-see klair-ee-əs). [Latin] Scots law. Clearer than light. • The phrase expresses the idea that the evidence is very clear, usu. in circumstances necessary to support a conviction in a criminal case. — Also termed luce meridiana clariores.

lucid, adj. (16c) 1. Understandable. 2. Rational. 3. Sane.

lucid interval. (17c) 1. A brief period during which an insane person regains sanity sufficient to have the legal capacity to contract and act on his or her own behalf. [Cases: Mental Health ⇨ 3.1, 371; Wills ⇨ 37.] 2. A period during which a person has enough mental capacity to understand the concept of marriage and the duties and obligations it imposes. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 7.] 3. A period during which an otherwise incompetent person regains sufficient testamentary capacity to execute a valid will. — Also termed lucid moment.

lucid moment. See LUCID INTERVAL.

lucra nuptialia (loo-krə nəp-shee-ay-lə). [Latin] Roman law. The property that one spouse receives from another, whether by gift, marriage-gift, dos, or testamentary disposition. See POENAE SECUNDARUM NUPTIARUM.

lucrative causa (loo-krə-ti-və kaw-zə). [Latin] Roman law. Enrichment for which the acquirer pays nothing (e.g., a bequest). — Also termed causa lucrativa.

lucrative usucapio pro herede (loo-krə-ti-və yoo-z[y]oo-kay-pee-oh or -kap-ee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. A means of acquiring title to land that an heir has not possessed and excluding the rightful heirs by holding it for one year after the death of the landowner. • There was no requirement that the possessor act in good faith. This practice survived from primitive law. — Also termed lucrative usucapio pro herede. See USUCAPIO.

lucrative (loo-krə-tiv), adj. (15c) 1. Profitable; remunerative . 2. Civil law. Acquired or held without accepting burdensome conditions or giving consideration <lucrative ownership>.

lucrative office. See OFFICE.

lucrative succession. See PRAECEPTIO HAEREDITATIS.

lucrative title. See TITLE (2).

lucre (loo-kər), n. Monetary gain; profit.

lucri causa (loo-krī kaw-zə). [Latin] For the sake of gain. • Lucri causa was formerly an essential element of larceny, but today the thief's intent to deprive the possessor of property is generally sufficient. See LARCENY.

"Lucri causa' literally means for the sake of gain. On rare occasions the suggestion has been made that no taking is with intent to steal unless the thief is motivated by some purpose of gain or advantage. Even those advancing this suggestion have not insisted upon an intent to gain a pecuniary advantage. An intent to take away property and destroy it for the purpose of destroying evidence has been held to be sufficient even by those who have been inclined to insist upon lucri causa as essential to an intent to steal. The generally accepted view does not include this element at all. It regards intent to deprive the owner of his property permanently, or an intent to deal with another's property unlawfully in such a manner as to create an obviously unreasonable risk of permanent deprivation, as all that is required to constitute the animus furandi — or intent to steal." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 332-33 (3d ed. 1982).

lucro captando. 1. See CERTANS DE LUCRO CAPTANDO. 2. IN LUCRO CAPTANDO.

lucrum (loo-krəm), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. Gain; profit. 2. Hist. A small parcel of land.

lucrum cessans (loo-krəm ses-anz). [Law Latin "ceasing gain"] Hist. Damages awarded to include a loss of anticipated profit in addition to an actual realizable loss. — Also termed lucrum interceptum. See DAMNUM EMERGENS.

lucrum interceptum (loo-krəm in-tər-sep-təm). See LUCRUM CESSANS.

luctuosa hereditas (lək-choo-oh-sə hə-red-i-tas), n. [Latin "mournful inheritance"] See hereditas luctuosa under HEREDITAS.

luctus (lək-təs), n. [Latin] Roman law. Mourning. — Also termed tempus lugendi.

ludere in extremis (loo-də-ree in ek-stree-mis). [Latin] Hist. To make sport on deathbed. • A person was presumed never to trifle at the point of death.

lukewarm bench. See BENCH.

luminar (loo-mə-nair-ee), n. [Latin "lamp"] Hist. A small lamp or candle set burning on a church altar, the maintenance of which was provided by lands and rents. Pl. luminaria.

lumping. Criminal procedure. The imposition of a general sentence on a criminal defendant. See general sentence under SENTENCE.

lumping sale. See SALE.

lump-sum agreement. Int'l law. An agreement for one nation that caused injuries to another nation's citizens to make a single payment to the other nation to settle outstanding claims for those injuries. • The recipient nation has the power to decide how the settlement funds should be distributed. This method of settling claims has become increasingly common since the mid-20th century as an alternative to submitting the claims to an international tribunal.

lump-sum alimony. See alimony in gross under ALIMONY.

lump-sum payment. See PAYMENT.

lunacy. See INSANITY.

Mad Parliament. In 1258, a commission of 24 barons summoned to Oxford by Henry III to carry out certain reforms and settle differences between the king and the barons. • The assembly was called the Mad Parliament because it ultimately abridged the king's power and gave unprecedented powers to the barons. The commission produced the Provisions of Oxford. — Also termed parliamentum insanum. See PROVISIONS OF OXFORD.

Madrid Agreement. Trademarks. 1. An 1890 treaty establishing a system for the international registration of trademarks. • The agreement's official name is the Madrid Arrangement Concerning the International Registration of Marks. A product of the Madrid Revision Conference of the Paris Convention in 1890, it was last revised in 1967. Under this treaty's registration system, called the Madrid Union, a mark registered in a treaty nation that is also registered (in French) with the World Intellectual Property Organization receives equal protection in all signatory nations. The United States ratified the treaty in 2002. 2. An 1890 treaty designed to discourage false indications of geographic source by permitting member nations to seize falsely marked imported goods. — Also termed Madrid Arrangement; Madrid Registration of Marks Treaty; Madrid Union. • Also a product of the Madrid Revision Conference of the Paris Convention in 1890, the treaty's official name is the Madrid Arrangement Concerning the Prevention of False or Deceptive Indications of Source. It applies to manufactured and handmade goods, and agricultural products. — Also termed (in sense 2) Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source of Goods.

Madrid Protocol. Trademarks. 1. A 1996 international agreement that allows citizens of a Madrid Agreement signatory nation to apply for a single international trademark through the World Intellectual Property Organization instead of registering the trademark in each individual nation. • An applicant must apply for the trademark's registration in a treaty-member nation before applying for international trademark protection. 2. A 1989 international trademark-registration agreement that supplements the Madrid Agreement on trademark registration, harmonizes the Agreement's registration system with that of the European Union, and allows citizens of nonmember nations to apply for international trademark registration without first registering the trademark in a member nation. • When referred to along with the Madrid Registration of Marks Treaty, it is sometimes also termed the Madrid System. district-court magistrate. (1932) In some states, a quasi-judicial officer given the power to set bail, accept bond, accept guilty pleas, impose sentences for traffic violations and similar offenses, and conduct informal hearings on civil infractions. [Cases: Justices of the Peace ⇨ 31.]

investigating magistrate. (1908) A quasi-judicial officer responsible for examining and sometimes ruling on certain aspects of a criminal proceeding before it comes before a judge.

“The institution of the investigating magistrate is another measure for preserving the integrity of the law at the level of enforcement. In this case the measure is directed not toward curing the evils of a lax or sporadic enforcement, but toward the evils of an opposite nature, those resulting from an excess of zeal on the part of the prosecutor. Under the system in question, before a criminal charge may be brought before the regular courts it must be investigated by a special official and, in effect, certified as deserving trial in court. The investigating magistrate is thus a kind of quasi-judge standing halfway between the prosecutor and the regular court. The danger of the institution lies precisely in this twilight zone of function which it occupies. The certification of a case for trial inevitably tends to confirm the criminal charge against the suspect, thus creating what may amount in practice to a strong presumption of guilt. The element of prejudgment involved constitutes a threat to the integrity of the trial in open court; the accused has, in effect, had a kind of half-trial in advance of the real trial, and this half-trial is conducted, not before but by a kind of half-judge who acts essentially as an inquisitorial court. In those countries where it is a part of the legal system, the role of the investigating magistrate continues to be a subject of some debate, and even where it is generally accepted, there is always some lingering concern lest it become the subject of inconspicuous abuse." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 38–39 (1968).

metropolitan stipendiary magistrate (stī-pen-dee-er-ee). English law. A stipendiary magistrate with jurisdiction in inner London areas. • Under the Access to Justice Act 1999, these magistrates have been renamed district judges (magistrates' courts). See stipendiary magistrate.

magistratic, adj. See MAGISTERIAL.

magistratus (maj-ə-stray-təs), n. [fr. Latin magister "a master"] Roman law. 1. A magistrate. 2. A magistrate's office.

"Magistratus. Denotes both the public office and the official himself. Magistracy was a Republican institution; under the Principate some magistratus continued to exist but with gradually diminishing importance; in the post-Diocletian Empire some former magistracies still exist but reduced nearly completely to an honorific title The most characteristic features of the Republican magistracy were the limited duration (one year) and collegialship since each magistracy was covered by at least two persons . . . with equal power. . . . Magistrates were elected by the people During his year of service a magistratus could not be removed. Misdemeanor in office could be prosecuted only after the term, hence the tenure of an office for two consecutive years was prohibited The tenure of a public office was considered an honor; for that reason the magistrates did not receive any compensation. Their political influence was, however, of greatest importance" Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 571-72 (1953).

magistratus majores (maj-ə-stray-təs mə-jor-eez). [Latin "superior magistrates"] Roman law. Magistrates with superior powers, including the power to review their own judgments. Cf. MAGISTRATUS MINORES.

magistratus minores (maj-ə-stray-təs mi-nor-eez). [Latin "lesser magistrates"] Roman law. Magistrates with limited powers. Cf. MAGISTRATUS MAJORES.

"The magistratus minores were officials of minor importance, they had no imperium and were vested with a restricted jurisdiction and some functions in specific fields The tenure of a minor magistracy opened the way for the quaestorship, the first step in the career of magistratus maiores." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 572 (1953).

magna assisa (mag-nə ə-si-zə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The grand assize. See grand assize under ASSIZE (5).

magna assisa eligenda (mag-nə ə-si-zə el-ə-jen-də). See DE MAGNA ASSISA ELIGENDA.

Magna Carta (mag-nə kahr-tə). [Latin "great charter"] The English charter that King John granted to the barons in 1215 and that Henry III and Edward I later confirmed. • It is generally regarded as one of the great common-law documents and as the foundation of constitutional liberties. The other three great charters of English liberty are the Petition of Right (3 Car. (1628)), the Habeas Corpus Act (31 Car. 2 (1679)), and the Bill of Rights (1 Will. & M. (1689)). — Also spelled Magna Charta.

"The history of Magna Carta is the history not only of a document but also of an argument. The history of the document is a history of repeated re-interpretation. But the history of the argument is a history of a continuous element of political thinking. In this light there is no inherent reason why an assertion of law originally conceived in aristocratic interests should not be applied on a wider scale." J.C. Holt, Magna Carta 16 (1965).

"Magna Carta came to be reckoned as the beginning of English statute law; it was printed as the first of the statutes of the realm. But to explain this we have first to remark that of Magna Carta there are several editions. We have four versions of the charter, that of 1215, that of 1216, that of 1217 and that of 1225, and between them there are important differences. Several clauses which were contained in the charter of 1215 were omitted in that of 1216 and were never again inserted. It seems to have been thought inadvisable to bind the young king to some of the more stringent conditions to which John had been subjected. The charter of 1217 again differs from that of 1216. Substantially it is in 1217 that the charter takes its final form; still it is the charter of 1225 which is the Magna Carta of all future times. That there were four versions is a fact to be carefully remembered; it is never enough to refer to Magna Carta without saying which edition you mean." F.W. Maitland, The Constitutional History of England 15 (1908, repr. 1955).

magna centum (mag-nə sen-təm), n. [Law Latin "great hundred"] Six score, or 120.

magna culpa (mag-nə kəl-pə). [Latin "great fault"] Roman law. Gross fault. • This is sometimes equivalent to dolus. See DOLUS.

Magnuson–Moss Warranty Act (mag-nə-sən-maws or -mos). A federal statute requiring that a written warranty of a consumer product fully and conspicuously disclose, in plain language, the terms and conditions of the warranty, including whether the warranty is full or limited, according to standards given in the statute. 15 USCA §§ 2301–2312. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ↻204.]

magnus rotulus statutorum (mag-nəs roch-ə-ləs stach-ə-tor-əm). [Law Latin "the great statute roll"] The first of the English statute rolls, beginning with Magna Carta and ending with Edward III.

mahr, n. Islamic law. A gift of money or property that must be made by a man to the woman he marries. • The parties agree to the mahr's amount and time of payment before marrying. If the time of payment is indefinite or if the mahr's outstanding balance is not paid sooner, the agreed amount or outstanding balance becomes due on divorce or the husband's death. Despite the religious basis for a mahr, secular courts may uphold the agreement if its secular terms are enforceable as a prenuptial contract. — Also termed sadaq. Cf. NIKAH.

maiden. (bef. 12c) 1. A young unmarried woman. 2. Scots law. An instrument used to behead criminals. • The Earl of Morton, who had introduced the instrument to Scotland, was the first to be executed by it, in 1581. It was the prototype of the guillotine. Hence, "to kiss the maiden was to be put to death." H. Percy Smith, Glossary of Terms and Phrases 307 (1883).

[Cases: Postal Service ↻13.] 2. An official system for delivering such items; the postal system. [Cases: Postal Service ↻3.] 3. One or more written or oral messages sent electronically (e.g., through e-mail or voicemail). [Cases: Telecommunications ↻1343.]

certified mail. Mail for which the sender requests proof of delivery in the form of a receipt signed by the addressee. • The receipt (a green card, which is usu. referred to as such) must be signed before the mail will be delivered. — Also termed certified mail, return receipt requested. [Cases: Postal Service ↻19, 22, 23.]

registered mail. Mail that the U.S. Postal Service records at the time of mailing and at each point on its route so as to guarantee safe delivery. [Cases: Postal Service ↻19, 22, 23.]

mail, vb. (1827) 1. To deposit (a letter, package, etc.) with the U.S. Postal Service; to ensure that a letter, package, etc. is properly addressed, stamped, and placed into a receptacle for mail pickup. [Cases: Postal Service ↻19.] 2. To deliver (a letter, package, etc.) to a private courier service that undertakes delivery to a third person, often within a specified time.

mailable, adj. (Of a letter or package) lawful to send through a postal service. [Cases: Postal Service ↻13.]

mailbox rule. (1975) 1. Contracts. The principle that an acceptance becomes effective — and binds the offeror — once it has been properly mailed. • The mailbox rule does not apply, however, if the offer specifies that an acceptance is not effective until received. [Cases: Contracts ↻22(1).] 2. The principle that when a pleading or other document is filed or served by mail, filing or service is deemed to have occurred on the date of mailing. • The mailbox rule varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. It may apply only to certain types of filings, or it may apply to the use of an overnight courier instead of the U.S. mail. — Also termed dispatch rule. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ↻603; Pleading ↻40, 333; Process ↻82; Time ↻3.5.]

mail cover. (1959) A process by which the U.S. Postal Service provides a government agency with information on the face of an envelope or package (such as a postmark) for the agency's use in locating a fugitive, identifying a coconspirator, or obtaining other evidence necessary to solve a crime. [Cases: Postal Service ↻47.] mail fraud. See FRAUD.

mail-order divorce. See DIVORCE.

maim, n. (14c) Archaic. The type of strength-diminishing injury required to support a charge of mayhem; esp., serious injury to a body part that is necessary for fighting. — Also termed maihem; maihemium. See MAYHEM. [Cases: Mayhem ↻1.] — maim, vb.

"Maihem or maim is where by the wrongful act of another any member is hurt or taken away, whereby the party is made unperfect to fight: as if a bone be taken out of the hand . . . But the cutting of an ear or nose, or breaking of the hinder teeth, or such like, is no maihem, because it is rather a deformity of body than diminishing of strength; and that is commonly tried by the justices beholding the party. And if the justices stand in doubt whether the hurt be a maihem or not, they use and will of their own discretion take the help and opinion of some skilful chirurgeon, to consider thereof, before they determine upon the cause." Termes de la Ley 283-84 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

"'Maim' is the modern equivalent of the old word 'mayhem,' and some have long been inclined to abandon the earlier word entirely. There is a tendency, on the other hand, to retain 'mayhem' for the offense and to use 'maim' for the type of injury originally required for such a crime. This usage has a distinct advantage because statutory enlargements have included another type of injury within the scope of this offense, and today mayhem (the offense) may involve something other than maim (the injury)." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 239 (3d ed. 1982).

majestas (mə-jes-tas), n. [Latin “supreme power”] Roman law. 1. The majesty, sovereign authority, or supreme prerogative of the state or sovereign; the supreme power of the people, esp. as represented by their highest representatives, the consuls, or the emperor. 2. The crime of high treason. See crimen majestatis under CRIMEN.

“Majestas . . . From being an attribute of the princeps, the word ‘majesty’ came to be an honorific title confined, at first, to the Roman emperors of the West but later extended to all kings. From the time of Henry II, it has been used in England, the full form being ‘Her Most Gracious Majesty’. The usual form is ‘Her Majesty’.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 798 (1980).

major (may-jər). [Latin] (17c) 1. Roman law. An older person, esp. one older than 25 and hence of full capacity. 2. Roman law. An ascendant; an ancestor. 3. Hist. A mayor. 4. ADULT. 5. In the U.S. Army, U.S. Air Force, or U.S. Marine Corps, a commissioned officer who ranks above a captain and below a lieutenant-colonel.

major action. Environmental law. An undertaking that may have a significant impact on the environment, triggering the need for an environmental assessment under the National Environmental Policy Act and some state laws. Cf. MAJOR-FEDERAL ACTION. [Cases: Environmental Law ↷587.]

major-and-minor fault rule. See MAJOR-MINOR FAULT RULE.

major annus (may-jər an-əs). [Latin “the greater year”] A leap year, made up of 366 days.

majora regalia (mə-jər-ee ri-gay-lee-ə). See regalia majora under REGALIA.

major crime. See FELONY (1).

major disaster. A catastrophe, such as a hurricane, tornado, storm, flood, earthquake, drought, or fire, so severe that it warrants disaster assistance from the federal government. • When the President declares a major disaster, the federal government supplements the efforts and resources of states, local governments, and relief organizations to alleviate the damage, loss, hardship, and suffering caused by the catastrophe. 40 CFR § 109. [Cases: United States ↷82(5).]

major dispute. See DISPUTE.

majorennitati proximus (may-jər-en-ə-tay-ti prok-sə-məs). [Law Latin] Scots law. Near majority. • Minors who were near the age of majority had difficulty arguing that a contracting party had taken advantage of their age and inexperience. See IN CONFINIO MAJORIS AETATIS.

maiores (mə-jər-eez), n. [Latin “greater persons”] 1. Roman law. Ancestors; forebears. 2. Hist. Greater persons; persons of a higher status.

major federal action. Environmental law. An undertaking, either carried out by a federal agency or approved by a federal agency, that may have a significant impact on the environment. • Examples include constructing an aqueduct or dam, constructing a highway through wetlands, or adopting certain agency regulations. • Under the National Environmental Policy Act, a federal agency that plans to take a major federal action that may significantly affect the environment is required to prepare and file an environmental-impact statement, along with any public comments, with the Environmental Protection Agency. 40 CFR §§ 1506.9, 1508. [Cases: Environmental Law ↷587.]

majori minus inest (mə-jər-i mi-nəs in-est). [Latin] Scots law. The greater includes the less. • The phrase refers to the principle that any conveyance of a primary right to property includes any lesser rights to that property.

majority. (16c) 1. The status of one who has attained the age (usu. 18) at which one is entitled to full civic rights and considered legally capable of handling one’s own affairs. See AGE OF MAJORITY. Cf. MINORITY (1). [Cases: Infants ↷1.] 2. A number that is more than half of a total; a group of more than 50 percent <the candidate received 50.4 percent of the votes — barely a majority>. • A majority always refers to more than half of some defined or assumed set. In parliamentary law, that set may be all the members or some subset, such as all members present or all members voting on a particular question. A “majority” without further qualification usu. means a simple majority. See simple majority. Cf. PLURALITY; MINORITY (2); HALF PLUS ONE.

absolute majority. A majority of all those who are entitled to vote in a particular election, regardless of how many voters actually cast ballots. See QUORUM. [Cases: Elections ↷126(6), 215.]

constitutional majority. See majority of all the members.

extraordinary majority. See supermajority.

majority of all the members. A majority of all the actual members, disregarding vacancies. — Also termed constitutional majority; majority of the entire membership; majority of the membership.

majority of all the memberships. A majority of all the possible memberships, including vacancies. — Also termed majority of the fixed membership.

majority of the entire membership. See majority of all the members.

majority of the fixed membership. See majority of all the memberships.

majority of the membership. See majority of all the members.

ordinary majority. See simple majority.

plural majority. See PLURALITY.

simple majority. A numerical majority of those actually voting. • Absent members, members who are present but do not vote, blanks, and abstentions are not counted. — Also termed ordinary majority. [Cases: Elections ⇨ 126(6), 215.]

supermajority. A fixed proportion greater than half (often two-thirds or a percentage greater than 50%), required for a measure to pass. • Such a majority is needed for certain extraordinary actions, such as ratifying a constitutional amendment or approving a fundamental corporate change. — Also termed extraordinary majority.

veto-proof majority. A legislative majority large enough that it can override an executive veto.

majority-consent procedure. Corporations. A statutory provision allowing shareholders to avoid a shareholders' meeting and to act instead by written consent of the holders of a majority of shares. • Delaware and a few other states have enacted such procedures. [Cases: Corporations ⇨ 191.]

majority-minority district. See DISTRICT.

majority opinion. See OPINION (1).

majority report. See REPORT (1).

majority rule. (1848) 1. The principle that a majority of a group has the power to make decisions that bind the group; the principle that in the choice of alternatives, the one preferred by the greater number is selected. • It is governance by the majority of those who actually participate, regardless of the number entitled to participate. 2. The constitutional principle "that a majority of the people of a State . . . elect a majority of that State's legislators," Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 583–84, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1393 (1964), from which it follows that each voter is entitled to a share of the franchise equal to that of each other voter. See ONE-PERSON, ONE-VOTE RULE. 3. Corporations. The common-law principle that a director or officer owes no fiduciary duty to a shareholder with respect to a stock transaction. • This rule has been restricted by both federal insider-trading rules and state-law doctrine. Cf. SPECIAL-FACTS RULE.

majority shareholder. See SHAREHOLDER.

majority verdict. See VERDICT.

majority vote. See MAJORITY.

majority voting. See VOTING.

major life activity. (1979) A basic activity that an average person in the general population can perform with little or no difficulty, such as seeing, hearing, sleeping, eating, walking, traveling, or working. • A person who is substantially limited in a major life activity is protected from discrimination under a variety of disability laws, most significantly the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act. 42 USCA § 12102(2); 29 USCA § 705(9)(B). See AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1019(2), 1218(2).]

major-minor fault rule. Maritime law. The principle that if the fault of one vessel in a collision is uncontradicted and sufficient to account for the accident, then the other vessel is presumed not to have been at fault and therefore not to have contributed to the accident. • The elimination of the divided-damages rule has made this rule obsolete. — Also termed major-and-minor fault rule. [Cases: Collision ⇨ 19, 122.]

major offense. See OFFENSE (1).

major trend. See TREND.

majus jus (may-jəs jəs). [Law Latin "a greater right"] Hist. A greater right. • This was a plea in a real action.

make, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To cause (something) to exist <to make a record>. 2. To enact (something) <to make law>. 3. To acquire (something) <to make money on execution>. 4. To legally perform, as by executing, signing, or delivering (a document) <to make a contract>.

make default. 1. DEFAULT (1). 2. DEFAULT (2).

make law. 1. To legislate. 2. To issue a legal precedent, esp. a judicial decision, that establishes a new rule of law on a particular subject. 3. Hist. To deny a plaintiff's charge under oath, in open court, with compurgators.

make purpart (pər-pahrt), vb. To divide and apportion property formerly held in common. See PURPART.

maker. (14c) 1. One who frames, promulgates, or ordains (as in lawmaker). 2. A person who signs a promissory note. See NOTE (1). Cf. COMAKER. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 48, 118.] 3. DRAWER.

accommodation maker. (1829) One who signs a note as a surety. See ACCOMMODATION (2); accommodation indorser under INDORSER. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⇨ 49, 122.]

prime maker. (1972) The person who is primarily liable on a note or other negotiable instrument.

makeup gas. Oil & gas. Natural gas that has been paid for by the purchaser, usu. under a take-or-pay contract, but that is to be delivered in the years following payment. See take-or-pay contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Gas ⇨ 13(1).]

make-whole doctrine. Insurance. The principle that, unless the insurance policy provides otherwise, an insurer will not receive any of the proceeds from the settlement of a claim, except to the extent that the settlement funds exceed the amount necessary to fully compensate the insured for the loss suffered. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 3514(2).]

mal (mal), adj. [Law French “bad; wrong; against”] Bad; wrong. • In Law French, mal was a separable word, equivalent to the Latin male (“badly”). In its modern uses, mal- is a prefix in terms such as maladministration and malpractice.

mala antiqua (mal-ə an-tr-kwə). Old crimes; offenses that date back to antiquity.

mala demonstratio (mal-ə dem-ən-stray-shee-oh). [Latin] Hist. Erroneous description.

maladministration. Poor management or regulation by a public officer; specif., an official’s abuse of power. — Also termed misadministration; breach of trust.

mala fides (mal-ə fr-deez), n. See BAD FAITH (1).

mala in se (mal-ə in say or see). See MALUM IN SE.

malandrinus (mal-ən-dri-nəs), n. [Law Latin “brigand”] Hist. A thief; a pirate.

malapportionment, n. (1959) The improper or unconstitutional apportionment of a legislative district. See APPORTIONMENT (3); GERRYMANDERING; LEGISLATIVE DISTRICTING. [Cases: Elections ⇨ 12(6).] — malapportion, vb.

mala praxis (mal-ə prak-sis). [Law Latin] Hist. Malpractice; unskillful treatment, esp. by a doctor.

“Injuries, affecting a man’s health, are where by any unwholesome practices of another a man sustains any apparent damage in his vigor or constitution. As by selling him bad provisions or wine . . . or by the neglect or unskillful management of his physician, surgeon, or apothecary. For it hath been solemnly resolved . . . that mala praxis is a great misdemeanor and offence at common law, whether it be for curiosity and experiment, or by neglect, because it breaks the trust which the party had placed in his physician, and tends to the patient’s destruction.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 122 (1768).

mala prohibita (mal-ə proh-hib-i-tə). See MALUM PROHIBITUM.

malconduct in office. See official misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

male creditus (mal-ee kred-ə-təs). [Law Latin] Hist. (Of a person) in bad repute; untrusted.

malediction (mal-ə-dik-shən). Hist. A curse placed on property donated to a church to protect it against anyone attempting to violate the church’s rights.

malefaction (mal-ə-fak-shən), n. [Latin malefacere “to do evil”] (15c) Archaic. An evil deed; a crime or offense. — Also termed maleficium. — malefactor, adj.

malefactor (mal-ə-fak-tər), n. [Latin] (15c) A wrongdoer; a criminal.

maleficium (mal-ə-fish-ee-əm), n. [Latin “a misdeed”] Roman law. A delict. See MALEFACTION.

maleson. See MALISON.

malesworn (mayl-sworn), p.pl. Forsworn. — Also spelled malsworn.

malfeasance (mal-fee-zənts), n. (17c) A wrongful or unlawful act; esp. wrongdoing or misconduct by a public official; MISFEASANCE IN PUBLIC OFFICE. Cf. MISFEASANCE; NONFEASANCE. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 121.] — malfeasant (mal-fee-zənt), adj. — malfeasor (mal-fee-zər), n.

malfunction theory. (1979) Products-liability law. A principle permitting a products-liability plaintiff to prove that a product was defective by proving that the product malfunctioned, instead of requiring the plaintiff to prove a specific defect. • A plaintiff relying on the malfunction theory usu. must also prove that the product was not misused, and must disprove all reasonable explanations for the occurrence other than a defect. [Cases: Products Liability ⇨ 358.]

mal gree (mal gree). [Law French “against the will”] Hist. Against the will; without consent.

malice, n. (14c) 1. The intent, without justification or excuse, to commit a wrongful act. 2. Reckless disregard of the law or of a person’s legal rights. 3. Ill will; wickedness of heart. • This sense is most typical in nonlegal contexts.

“[M]alice in the legal sense imports (1) the absence of all elements of justification, excuse or recognized mitigation, and (2) the presence of either (a) an actual intent to cause the particular harm which is produced or harm of the same general nature, or (b) the wanton and wilful doing of an act with awareness of a plain and strong likelihood that such harm may result. . . . The Model Penal Code does not use ‘malice’ because those who formulated the Code had a blind prejudice against the word. This is very regrettable because it represents a useful concept despite some unfortunate language employed at times in the effort to express it.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 860 (3d ed. 1982).

actual malice. (18c) 1. The deliberate intent to commit an injury, as evidenced by external circumstances. — Also termed express malice; malice in fact. Cf. implied malice. 2. Defamation. Knowledge (by the person who utters or publishes a defamatory statement) that a statement is false, or reckless disregard about whether the statement is true. • To recover for defamation, a plaintiff who is a public official or public figure must overcome the defendant’s qualified privilege by proving the defendant's actual malice. And for certain other types of claims, a plaintiff must prove actual malice to recover presumed or punitive damages. — Also termed New York Times malice; constitutional malice; common-law malice. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 51.]

common-law malice. See actual malice (2).

constructive malice. See implied malice.

express malice. (17c) 1. Criminal law. The intent to kill or seriously injure arising from a deliberate, rational mind. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 49; Homicide ⇨ 529.] 2. See actual malice (1). 3. Defamation. The bad-faith publication of defamatory material. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⇨ 4, 51.]

general malice. (17c) Malice that is necessary for any criminal conduct; malice that is not directed at a specific person. Cf. particular malice. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 20.]

implied malice. (17c) Malice inferred from a person's conduct. — Also termed constructive malice; legal malice; malice in law. Cf. actual malice (1).

malice in fact. See actual malice (1).

particular malice. (16c) Malice that is directed at a particular person. — Also termed special malice.

transferred malice. (1961) Malice directed to one person or object but instead harming another in the way intended for the first. [Cases: Assault and Battery ⇨ 49; Homicide ⇨ 555.]

"[I]f A shoots at B intending to kill him, but the shot actually kills C, this is held to be murder of C. So also if A throws a stone at one window and breaks another, it is held to be malicious damage to the window actually broken. This doctrine, which is known as the doctrine of transferred malice, applies only where the harm intended and the harm done are of the same kind. If A throws a stone at a human being and unintentionally breaks a window, he cannot be convicted of malicious damage to the window." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 382 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

universal malice. (17c) The state of mind of a person who determines to take a life on slight provocation, without knowing or caring who may be the victim.

malice aforethought. (17c) The requisite mental state for common-law murder, encompassing any one of the following: (1) the intent to kill, (2) the intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, (3) extremely reckless indifference to the value of human life (the so-called "abandoned and malignant heart"), or (4) the intent to commit a dangerous felony (which leads to culpability under the felony-murder rule). — Also termed premeditated malice; preconceived malice; malice prepense; malitia praecogitata. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 529, 541, 546.]

"Malice aforethought is the term which came into use during medieval times to indicate the mental element necessary in the felony of murder. It has been the subject of voluminous jurisprudential enquiry . . ." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 27 (16th ed. 1952).

"Every intentional killing is with malice aforethought unless under circumstances sufficient to constitute (1) justification, (2) excuse, or (3) mitigation." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 58 (3d ed. 1982).

malice exception. (1977) A limitation on a public official's qualified immunity, by which the official can face civil liability for willfully exercising discretion in a way that violates a known or well-established right. See qualified immunity under IMMUNITY (1). [Cases: Civil Rights ⇨ 1376.]

malice in fact. See actual malice (1) under MALICE.

malice in law. See implied malice under MALICE.

malice prepense. See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT.

malicious, adj. (13c) 1. Substantially certain to cause injury. 2. Without just cause or excuse.

malicious abandonment. See ABANDONMENT (3).

malicious abuse of legal process. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

malicious abuse of process. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

malicious accusation. See ACCUSATION.

malicious act. (17c) An intentional, wrongful act done willfully or intentionally against another without legal justification or excuse.

malicious arrest. See ARREST.

malicious assault with a deadly weapon. See ASSAULT.

malicious bankruptcy. See BANKRUPTCY.

malicious damage. See MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

malicious defense. See DEFENSE (2).

malicious execution. See EXECUTION.

malicious injury. See INJURY.

malicious institution of civil proceedings. See MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

malicious killing. (17c) An intentional killing without legal justification or excuse. — Also termed killing with malice. Cf. ACCIDENTAL KILLING. [Cases: Homicide ⇨ 529, 546.]

maliciously damaging the property of another. See MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

malicious mischief. (18c) The common-law misdemeanor of intentionally destroying or damaging another's property. • Although modern statutes predominantly make this offense a misdemeanor, a few make it a felony (depending on the nature of the property or its value). See Model Penal Code § 220.3. — Also termed malicious mischief and trespass; malicious injury; malicious trespass; malicious damage; maliciously damaging the property of another; (in the Model Penal Code) criminal mischief. [Cases: Malicious Mischief ⇨ 1.]

"Such phrases as 'malicious mischief and trespass,' 'malicious injury,' and 'maliciously damaging the property of another,' are merely additional labels used at times to indicate the same offense. It was a misdemeanor according to the common law of England, although some confusion has resulted from Blackstone's statement that it was 'only a trespass at common law.' Before the word 'misdemeanor' became well established the old writers tended to use the word 'trespass' to indicate an offense below the grade of felony. And it was used at times by Blackstone for this purpose, as in the phrase 'treason, felony, or trespass.'" Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 405 (3d ed. 1982).

malicious motive. See MOTIVE.

malicious prosecution. (17c) 1. The institution of a criminal or civil proceeding for an improper purpose and without probable cause. • The tort requires proof of four elements: (1) the initiation or continuation of a lawsuit; (2) lack of probable cause for the lawsuit's initiation; (3) malice; and (4) favorable termination of the original lawsuit. Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 674–81B (1977). 2. The tort claim resulting from the institution of such a proceeding. • Once a wrongful prosecution has ended in the defendant's favor, he or she may sue for tort damages. — Also termed (in the context of civil proceedings) malicious use of process; (archaically) malicious institution of civil proceedings. Cf. ABUSE OF PROCESS; VEXATIOUS SUIT; MALICIOUS DEFENSE. [Cases: Malicious Prosecution ⇨ 0.5.]

"The distinction between an action for malicious prosecution and an action for abuse of process is that a malicious prosecution consists in maliciously causing process to be issued, whereas an abuse of process is the employment of legal process for some purpose other than that which it was intended by the law to effect — the improper use of a regularly issued process. For instance, the initiation of vexatious civil proceedings known to be groundless is not abuse of process, but is governed by substantially the same rules as the malicious prosecution of criminal proceedings." 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 2, at 187 (1970).

malicious technology. Any electronic or mechanical means, esp. software, used to monitor or gain access to another's computer system without authorization for the purpose of impairing or disabling the system. • Examples of malicious technology are Trojan horses, time-outs, keystroke logging, and data-scrambling devices. — Also termed malware.

malicious trespass. See MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

malicious use of process. See MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

malignare (mal-æg-nair-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. 1. To malign; to slander. 2. To maim.

malinger, vb. (1820) To feign illness or disability, esp. in an attempt to avoid an obligation or to continue receiving disability benefits.

malison (mal-ə-zən or -sən). [fr. Latin malum "evil" + sonus "a sound"] Hist. A curse. — Also spelled maleson.

malitia (mə-lish-ee-ə). [Latin "malice"] Hist. An actual evil design; express malice. • Malitia originally signified general wrongdoing, and did not describe a wrongdoer's state of mind; malitia praecogitata, for example, indicated only the seriousness of the offense, though it was eventually rendered malice aforethought.

malitia capitalis (mə-lish-ee-ə kap-i-tay-lis). [Latin] Hist. Deadly malice.

malitia excogitata (eks-koj-ə-tay-tə). See malitia praecogitata.

malitia praecogitata (pree-koj-ə-tay-tə). See MALICE AFORETHOUGHT. — Also termed malitia excogitata.

"[T]he word felony is often coupled with what will in the future be another troublesome term of art, to wit, malice aforethought or malice prepense (malitia excogitata, praecogitata). . . . When it first came into use, it hardly signified a state of mind; some qualifying adjective such as praemeditata or excogitata was needed if much note was to be taken of intention or of any other psychical fact. When we first meet with malice prepense it seems to mean little more than intentional wrong-doing; but the somewhat weighty adjectives which are coupled with malitia in its commonest context — adjectives such as excogitata — are, if we mistake not, traces of the time when forsteal, guetapens, waylaying, the setting of ambush, was (what few crimes were) a specially reserved plea of the crown to be emended, if indeed it was emendable, by a heavy wite." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 468-69 (2d ed. 1899).

malleable, adj. (14c) 1. (Of an object) capable of extension by hammering <the metal was malleable>. 2. (Of a person) capable of being influenced <the young student was malleable>.

Malleus Maleficarum (mal-ee-əs mal-ə-fi-kair-əm). [Latin "Hammer of Witches"] Hist. An encyclopedic work of demonology and witchcraft, prepared in 1486 by two Dominican friars (Heinrich Kraemer and Johann Sprenger) as part of their efforts to eradicate witchcraft in Germany. • The Malleus Maleficarum was based largely on folk beliefs, but it was relied on for several centuries as an authoritative source on how to detect, extract confessions from, and prosecute witches.

Mallory rule. See MCNABB–MALLORY RULE.

mallum (mal-əm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A superior court among the Salian Franks, with criminal jurisdiction; a high court that handles important business. 2. A public national assembly. — Also termed mallus.

mallus. See MALLUM.

malo animo (mal-oh an-ə-moh), adv. [Latin] With evil intent; with malice.

malo grato (mal-oh gray-toh), adv. [Latin] Unwillingly.

Maloney Act. A 1938 amendment to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, providing for broker registration in over-the-counter markets.

malpractice (mal-prak-tis). (17c) An instance of negligence or incompetence on the part of a professional. • To succeed in a malpractice claim, a plaintiff must also prove proximate cause and damages. — Also termed professional negligence. [Cases: Negligence ⇨ 321.]

legal malpractice. A lawyer's failure to render professional services with the skill, prudence, and diligence that an ordinary and reasonable lawyer would use under similar circumstances. — Also termed attorney malpractice. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⇨ 107.]

medical malpractice. A doctor's failure to exercise the degree of care and skill that a physician or surgeon of the same medical specialty would use under similar circumstances. — Often shortened to med. mal.

[Cases: Health ⇨ 600–835.]

malpractice insurance. See INSURANCE.

malsworn. See MALESWORN.

maltreatment. (18c) Bad treatment (esp. improper treatment by a surgeon) resulting from ignorance, neglect, or willfulness. See MALPRACTICE.

malum (mal-əm also may-ləm), n. [Latin] Something bad or evil. Pl. mala.

malum in se (mal-əm in say or see), n. [Latin “evil in itself”] (17c) A crime or an act that is inherently immoral, such as murder, arson, or rape. — Also termed malum per se. Cf. MALUM PROHIBITUM. Pl. mala in se. — malum in se, adj.

“The basis for the distinction between mala in se and mala prohibita, between what one might call a crime and an offence — or between what one might call a felony and a misdemeanour, if one could modernize those terms so that the latter was given its natural meaning — is that crime means to the ordinary man something that is sinful or immoral, and an offence at worst a piece of misbehaviour.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 33 (1968).

“The distinction between offenses mala in se and offenses mala prohibita was recognized at least as early as the fifteenth century. It has been criticized repeatedly. About a century and a half ago the distinction was said to be one ‘not founded upon any sound principle’ and which had ‘long since been exploded.’ [Quoting Bensley v. Bignold, 5 B. & A. 335, 341, 106 Eng. Rep. 1214, 1216 (1822); other citations omitted.] The Supreme Court, however, has shown that it is just as firmly entrenched today as it was in 1495.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 880 (3d ed. 1982).

malum prohibitum (mal-əm proh-ib-i-təm), n. [Latin “prohibited evil”] (18c) An act that is a crime merely because it is prohibited by statute, although the act itself is not necessarily immoral. • Misdemeanors such as jaywalking and running a stoplight are mala prohibita, as are many regulatory violations. Cf. MALUM IN SE. Pl. mala prohibita. — malum prohibitum, adj.

“Much of the criminal law that is regulatory in character — the part of it that deals with malum prohibitum rather than malum in se — is based upon the . . . principle . . . that the choice of the individual must give way to the convenience of the many.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 16 (1968).

“As customarily used these phrases are mutually exclusive. An offense malum prohibitum is not a wrong which is prohibited, but something which is wrong only in the sense that it is against the law. This is emphasized at times by such phrases as ‘malum prohibitum only’ or ‘but malum prohibitum,’ although it is understood without any such qualification. A failure to understand this usage of the terms has led some to assume that all statutory additions to the common law of crimes are mala prohibita. One writer emphasized his confusion by speaking of embezzlement as malum prohibitum. This assumption is utterly without foundation. An act may be malum in se although no punishment is provided by law. If this defect is corrected by appropriate legislation, what previously was malum in se does not cease to be so by reason of having been defined and made punishable by law.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 884–85 (3d ed. 1982).

malum regimen (mal-əm rej-ə-men). [Law Latin] Scots law. Bad medical treatment. • A defendant in a homicide case may assert as a defense that the decedent actually died as a result of bad medical treatment, not the defendant’s actions.

malus animus (mal-əs an-ə-məs). [Latin] Scots law. Bad intention. • This intention, coupled with a prohibited act carrying it out, resulted in a crime. See DOLE; MENS REA.

malveilles (mal-vay also mal-vayls), n. [French “misdemeanors”] Hist. 1. Ill will. 2. Crimes; misdemeanors; malicious acts.

malveis procurors (mal-vay prə-kyoor-ərz). [Law French “defective procurers”] Hist. Persons who pack juries, as by nomination or other practice.

malversation (mal-vər-say-shən), n. [French “ill behavior”] Official corruption; misbehavior by an official in the exercise of the duties of the office. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇨ 121.] — malverse, vb.

malware. (1990) Slang. See MALICIOUS TECHNOLOGY.

managing conservatorship. See CUSTODY (2).

managium (mə-nay-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin, fr. Law French manage “a dwelling”] Hist. A dwelling; a mansion house. — Also termed mensa (men-sə).

Manahan-type carried interest. Oil & gas. A transaction in which the owner of a lease assigns all the working interest to someone else — who takes on specified costs of drilling and development — and the assignor retains a reversionary interest in part of the working interest, which reverts to the assignor once the assignee has recovered the specified costs during the payout period. Manahan Oil Co. v. Commissioner, 8 T.C. 1159 (1947). [Cases: Mines and Minerals ↻ 74.] manbote. See BOTE (2).

manceps (man-seps), n. [Latin “an agent”] 1. Roman law. A purchaser of something at a state auction, esp. a right or advantage, as in the right to farm taxes. See CONDUCTOR (2).

“Manceps. One who at a public auction, conducted by a magistrate, through the highest bid obtained the right to collect taxes (a tax farmer) or custom duties, the lease of public land (ager publicus) or other advantages (a monopoly). — In postal organization manceps was a post-station master.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 573 (1953).

2. A person who undertakes to perform a task and gives security for the performance. 3. Roman law. A state postmaster.

manche-present (mah-nsh-pray-zon). [Law French “a present from the donor’s own hand”] A bribe.

mancipable (man-si-pə-bəl), adj. Capable of mancipation.

mancipant (man-si-pant), n. One who transfers property by mancipation.

mancipare (man-sə-pair-ee), vb. [fr. Latin manus “hand” + capere “to take”] Roman law. 1. To alienate (a thing) through mancipation. 2. To sell (esp. a person) fic-titiously as part of the emancipation process. See MANCIPATION.

mancipatio (man-sə-pay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] See MANCIPATION.

mancipation (man-si-pay-shən), n. [fr. Latin mancipatio “hand-grasp”] 1. Roman law. A legal formality for transferring property by either an actual or a simulated purchase; a formal conveyance in the guise of a sale. • The formality required the presence of the thing being conveyed (res Mancipi), and of five adult male citizens acting as witnesses. Another person (the libripens) held the bronze scales with which the purchase price had been weighed out. The buyer made an assertion of ownership, struck the scales with a piece of bronze or copper, then gave the metal piece to the seller as a symbolic price. In Roman classical law, either this procedure or cessio in jure was necessary to pass legal title. This form of sale was abolished by Justinian. 2. A similar form used for making a will, adoption, emancipation of children, etc. — Also termed mancipatio. See RES MANCIPI. Cf. EMANCIPATION. — mancipate, vb. — mancipatory (man-si-pə-tohr-ee), adj.

“Mancipatio is the solemn sale per aes et libram. In the presence of five witnesses (cives Romani puberes) a skilled weighmaster (libripens) weighs out to the vendor a certain amount of uncoined copper (aes, raudus, raudusculum) which is the purchase-money, and the purchaser, with solemn words, takes possession with his hand — hence the description of the act as ‘hand-grasp’ — of the thing purchased as being his property.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 48 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

mancipatory will. See WILL.

mancipi res (man-sə-pi reez). See RES MANCIPI.

mancipium (man-sip-ee-əm), n. [Latin “a slave”] Roman law. 1. A slave, esp. by virtue of being captured by an enemy in war. 2. A temporary quasi-servile status, necessarily occurring in an emancipation, and also when a master or father noxally surrendered a slave or son to an injured party to answer for an offense committed by the slave or son against that party. See EMANCIPATION; NOXAL ACTION (1).

“But if the patria potestas could be created, it could also be terminated, by an artificial process . . . The father could not by a simple act of his own will release the son from his control. For this purpose he must sell him out of his own hands into that state of mancipium or qualified slavery of which we have spoken. Even then the father’s power was not destroyed: it was suspended during the existence of the mancipium; but if the mancipium ceased, if the son was set free by the person who held him in that condition, the father’s right revived . . . It was not until he had sold him three times over, that he used up his right of control beyond the possibility of a revival. This, then, was the form by which the son was liberated from the patria potestas.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 126-27 (1881).

3. MANCIPATION (1).

M & A. abbr. Mergers and acquisitions. See MERGER.

mandamus (man-day-məs), n. [Latin “we command”] (16c) A writ issued by a court to compel performance of a particular act by a lower court or a governmental officer or body, usu. to correct a prior action or failure to act. — Also termed writ of mandamus; mandate; (in BrE) order. [Cases: Mandamus ⇨ 1.] Pl. mandamus. — mandamus, vb.

alternative mandamus. A writ issued upon the first application for relief, commanding the defendant either to perform the act demanded or to appear before the court at a specified time to show cause for not performing it. [Cases: Mandamus ⇨ 158.]

peremptory mandamus. An absolute and unqualified command to the defendant to do the act in question. ● It is issued when the defendant defaults on, or fails to show sufficient cause in answer to, an alternative mandamus. [Cases: Mandamus ⇨ 179.]

mandans (man-danz), n. [Latin] Roman law. The principal for whom a mandated person undertakes to perform a gratuitous service. See MANDATOR (2). mandant (man-dänt), n. [French] French & Scots law. The principal in a contract of mandate, such as a bailor in a bailment. See MANDATOR.

mandatary (man-dä-ter-ee), n. (15c) 1. A person to whom a mandate is given. See MANDATE (5). 2. An agent, esp. one who acts gratuitously but is entitled to be indemnified for expenses incurred in carrying out the mandate. — Also termed (in Roman law) mandatarius. 3. Civil law. The person who is employed to a mandator in a gratuitous agency. — Also termed mandatee; mandatarius. See MANDATE (5). — mandatary, adj.

mandate, n. (16c) 1. An order from an appellate court directing a lower court to take a specified action. — Also termed (in BrE) order. See MANDAMUS. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 1186.1; Federal Courts ⇨ 949.1.] 2. A judicial command directed to an officer of the court to enforce a court order. 3. In politics, the electorate's overwhelming show of approval for a given political candidate or platform. 4. Roman & civil law. A written command given by a principal to an agent; specif., a commission or contract by which one person (the mandator) requests someone (the mandatary) to perform some service gratuitously, the commission becoming effective when the mandatary agrees. La. Civ. Code art. 2989. ● In this type of contract, no liability is created until the service requested has begun. The mandatary is bound to use reasonable care in performance, while the mandator is bound to indemnify against loss incurred in performing the service. — Also termed mandatum. 5. Louisiana law. A contract by which one person, the principal, confers authority on another person, the mandatary, to transact one or more affairs for the principal. La. Civ. Code arts. 2989 et seq. ● The contract of mandate may be either onerous or gratuitous. It is gratuitous if the parties do not state otherwise. 6. Hist. Int'l law. An authority given by the League of Nations to certain governments to take over the administration and development of designated territories. Cf. TRUSTEESHIP (2). — mandate, vb.

mandate rule. (1958) The doctrine that, after an appellate court has remanded a case to a lower court, the lower court must follow the decision that the appellate court has made in the case, unless new evidence or an intervening change in the law dictates a different result. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 1195(1); Federal Courts ⇨ 950.]

mandator (man-day-tər or man-day-tər). (17c) 1. A person who delegates the performance of a mandate to another. 2. Civil law. The person who employs another (called a mandatary or mandatarius) in a gratuitous agency. See MANDATE (5). — Also termed mandant. 3. BAILOR (1).

mandatory, adj. (15c) Of, relating to, or constituting a command; required; preemptory.

"A provision in a statute is said to be mandatory when disobedience to it, or want of exact compliance with it, will make the act done under the statute absolutely void." Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 334 (1896).

mandatory commitment. See COMMITMENT.

mandatory injunction. See INJUNCTION.

mandatory instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

mandatory joinder. See compulsory joinder under JOINER.

mandatory penalty. See mandatory sentence under SENTENCE.

mandatory power. See POWER (5).

mandatory presumption. See conclusive presumption under PRESUMPTION.

mandatory punishment. See mandatory sentence under SENTENCE.

mandatory rule. See RULE (1).

mandatory sentence. See SENTENCE.

mandatory sentencing. See SENTENCING.

mandatory statute. See STATUTE.

mandatory subject of bargaining. Labor law. A topic that is required by the National Labor Relations Act to be discussed in good faith by the parties during labor negotiations; an essential employment matter, including wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, about which management and the union are required to negotiate in good faith, and that can lawfully form the basis of a collective-bargaining impasse. 29 USCA § 158(d). — Often shortened to mandatory subject. Cf. PERMISSIVE SUBJECT OF BARGAINING. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇨ 1125.] mandatory trust. See TRUST.

mandatory waiver. The mandatory transfer, without judicial discretion, of a case from juvenile court to criminal court once the prosecutor has charged a juvenile with one of certain statutorily enumerated serious crimes. See TRANSFER STATUTE. Cf. STATUTORY EXCLUSION. [Cases: Infants ⇨ 68.7.]

mandatum (man-day-təm). Roman & civil law. A bailment in which the bailee will, without recompense, perform some service relating to the goods; MANDATE mandavi ballivo (man-day-vī bā-ll-voh). [Law Latin "I have commanded the bailiff"] Hist. A sheriff's return stating that the sheriff ordered a bailiff to execute a writ.

(4). • This type of bailment is for the sole benefit of the bailor.

man-endangering state of mind. See PERSON-ENDANGERING STATE OF MIND.

manerium (mə-neer-ee-əm), n. [Law Latin, fr. Latin manere "to remain"] Hist. A manor.

"The term manerium seems to have come in with the Conqueror, though other derivatives from the Latin verb manere, in particular mansa, mansio, mansiuncula had been freely employed by the scribes of the land-books. But these had as a rule been used as representatives of the English hide, and just for this reason they were incapable of expressing the notion that the Normans desired to express by the word manerium. In its origin that word is but one more name for a house. Throughout the Exeter Domesday the word mansio is used instead of the manerium of the Exchequer record, and even in the Exchequer record we may find these two terms used interchangeably . . ." Frederic W. Maitland, Domesday Book and Beyond 108-09 (1921).

mangonare (mang-gə-nair-ee), vb. [fr. Latin mango "a dealer"] To buy in a market; to deal.

manhood. (13c) 1. A male person's majority. 2. Hist. A ceremony of a vassal paying homage to the vassal's lord. — Also termed homagium.

"Besides an oath of fealty, or profession of faith to the lord, which was the parent of our oath of allegiance, the vassal or tenant upon investiture did usually homage to his lord; openly and humbly kneeling, being ungirt, uncovered, and holding up his hands both together between those of the lord, who sat before him; and there professing that 'he did become his man, from that day forth, of life and limb and earthly honour;' and then he received a kiss from his lord. Which ceremony was denominated homagium, or manhood, by the feudists." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 53 (1766).

mania a potu. See DELIRIUM TREMENS.

mania transitoria. Hist. Insanity of brief duration, experienced while committing a criminal act. • In a memorandum opinion, the Supreme Court used the term to mean emotional insanity. See Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 82 U.S. 580, 583-84 (1872). But other courts have applied the literal meaning (temporary insanity). See, e.g., Rush v. Megee, 36 Ind. 69 (1871). Cf. emotional insanity and temporary insanity under INSANITY.

manifest, n. (16c) A document listing the cargo or passengers carried on a ship, airplane, or other vehicle; esp., a shipping or warehousing document containing a list of the contents, value, origin, carrier, and destination of the goods. Cf. CONTENT.

manifestation of intention. (1826) Wills & estates. The external expression of the testator's intention, as distinguished from an undisclosed intention. — Also termed manifestation of intent.

manifestation theory. Insurance. The doctrine that coverage for an injury or disease falls to the policy in effect when the symptoms of the covered injury or disease first appear. Cf. EXPOSURE THEORY; ACTUAL-

INJURY TRIGGER; TRIPLE TRIGGER. [Cases: Insurance ⇨ 2265.]

manifest-disregard doctrine. (1983) The principle that an arbitration award will be vacated if the arbitrator knows the applicable law and deliberately chooses to disregard it, but will not be vacated for a mere error or misunderstanding of the law. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution ⇨ 329.]

manifest error. See ERROR (2).

manifest-error-or-clearly-wrong rule. (1981) In some jurisdictions, the doctrine that an appellate court cannot set aside a trial court's finding of fact unless a review of the entire record reveals that the finding has no reasonable basis. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⇨ 999(1), 1008.1(5, 7).]

manifest injustice. A direct, obvious, and observable error in a trial court, such as a defendant's guilty plea that is involuntary or is based on a plea agreement that the prosecution has rescinded. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 273.1(2), 274(3.1).]

manifest intent. See INTENT (1).

manifest law. See LEX MANIFESTA.

manifest necessity. See NECESSITY.

manifesto. (17c) A written statement publicly declaring the issuer's principles, policies, or intentions; esp. a formal document explaining why a state or nation declared war or took some other significant international action.

manifest thief. See FUR MANIFESTUS.

manifest weight of the evidence. A deferential standard of review under which a verdict will be reversed or disregarded only if another outcome is obviously correct and the verdict is clearly unsupported by the evidence. Cf. WEIGHT OF THE EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 549; Evidence ⇨ 584.]

manipulation. Securities. (1888) The illegal practice of raising or lowering a security's price by creating the appearance of active trading. • Manipulation is prohibited by section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. 15 USCA § 78j(b). — Also termed market manipulation; stock manipulation. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 60.25.]

mankind. See MAN (2).

Mann Act. A federal law, enacted originally in 1910, making it illegal to transport an individual in interstate or foreign commerce for prostitution or other criminal sexual activity. • It is named its sponsor, Rep. James Robert Mann. 18 USCA § 2421–2424. — Also termed White Slave Traffic Act. [Cases: Prostitution ⇨15.]

manner and form. See MODO ET FORMA.

mannire (mə-ni-ree), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To summon (an adverse party) to court; to prosecute (a case).

mannopus (man-oh-pəs). [fr. Latin manus “hand” + opus “work”] Hist. 1. Manual labor. 2. A day’s work. 3. Goods taken from the hands of an apprehended thief; MAINOUR.

manor. (14c) 1. A feudal estate, usu. granted by the king to a lord or other high person and cultivated as a unit. • In more ancient times, the lord’s manor included a village community, usu. composed of serfs.

“[T]o ask for a definition of a manor is to ask for what can not be given. We may however draw a picture of a typical manor, and, this done, we may discuss the deviations from this type . . . [W]e may regard the typical manor (1) as being, qua vill, a unit of public law, of police and fiscal law, (2) as being a unit in the system of agriculture, (3) as being a unit in the management of property, (4) as being a jurisdictional unit. But we . . . see that hardly one of these traits can be considered as absolutely essential. The most important is the connection between the manor and the vill . . .” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 596–97 (2d ed. 1898).

“The term [manor] applied, after the Norman conquest, to estates organized under knights, ecclesiastical corporations, or otherwise. and managed and cultivated as units. By the end of the 11th century, the main element was the feudal lord, and soon he came to be regarded as the owner of the manor, and to have authority over the tenants, and the right to hold a court for them . . . In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, a manor also implied a right of jurisdiction exercised through a court baron, attended by both freeholders and villein tenants . . . In the eighteenth century the manorial court decayed rapidly, cases being generally brought in the King’s courts, the only surviving business being copyhold conveyancing.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 803 (1980).

reputed manor. A manor in which the lands not granted in tenancy but reserved for the lord’s own use (demesne lands) and services become absolutely separated. • The manor is no longer a manor in actuality, only in reputation. — Also termed seignior in gross.

2. A jurisdictional right over tenants of an estate, usu. exercised through a court baron. 3. Hist. In the United States, a tract of land occupied by tenants who pay rent to a proprietor. 4. A mansion on an estate.

manorial extent. Hist. A survey of a manor by a jury of tenants, giving the numbers and names of tenants, the size of their holdings, the kind of tenure, and the kind and amount of the tenants’ services.

manorial system. The medieval system of land ownership in which serfs and some freemen cultivated the soil of a manor in return for a lord’s protection. See MANOR (1).

manse (mans), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A portion of land large enough to maintain one family; a sufficient amount of land to be worked by a yoke of oxen for a year. 2. A house without land; MESSUAGE. 3. The residence of a minister, esp. a Presbyterian minister. 4. A large, imposing residence. — Also termed mansus.

manser (man-sər), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A bastard.

Mansfield rule. (1968) The doctrine that a juror’s testimony or affidavit about juror misconduct may not be used to challenge the verdict. • This Mansfield rule is intended to ensure that jurors are heard through their verdict, not through their postverdict testimony. In practice, the rule lessens the possibility that losing parties will seek to penetrate the secrets of the jury room. The rule was first announced in Vaise v. Delaval, 99 Eng. Rep. 944 (K.B. 1785), in an opinion by William Murray, first Earl of Mansfield, the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King’s Bench. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨957; Federal Civil Procedure ⇨2371; New Trial ⇨143; Trial ⇨344.]

mansio (man-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. An inn. 2. A house.

mansion-house. 1. Hist. The residence of the lord of a manor. 2. DWELLING-HOUSE.

mansion-house rule. The doctrine that a tract of land lying in two counties will be assessed, for property-tax purposes, in the county in which the house is located. [Cases: Taxation ⇨2216.]

manslaughter, n. (15c) The unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought. — Also termed (in some jurisdictions) culpable homicide. Cf. MURDER. [Cases: Homicide ⇨654.] — manslaughter, vb.

first-degree manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter.

intentional manslaughter. See voluntary manslaughter.

intoxication manslaughter. An unintentional homicide committed by an intoxicated person while operating a vehicle or some other type of machinery. [Cases: Automobiles ⇨344.]

involuntary manslaughter. (18c) Homicide in which there is no intention to kill or do grievous bodily harm, but that is committed with criminal negligence or during the commission of a crime not included within the felony-murder rule. — Also termed negligent manslaughter; second-degree manslaughter; manslaughter in the second degree. Cf. ACCIDENTAL KILLING. [Cases: Homicide ⇨659.]

“Involuntary manslaughter is a ‘catch-all’ concept. It includes all manslaughter not characterized as voluntary.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 104 (3d ed. 1982).

“The only differences between the legal use and the everyday use of ‘voluntary,’ ‘not voluntary,’ and ‘involuntary’ seem to be (a) a more frequent use of ‘involuntary’ as a synonym of ‘not voluntary’ and (b) a technical use of ‘involuntary’ in the crime of ‘involuntary manslaughter,’ where it seems to have the meaning of ‘unintentional.’ Thus, as contrasted with ‘voluntary manslaughter,’ there is no suggestion that death, as contrasted with harm, was intended or foreseen. Though it is often confined to cases of assault and battery where death results, for example either from the withholding of food or from excessive chastisement of a child, some jurists say that it can be due to any unlawful and dangerous action causing death." Alan R. White, Grounds of Liability 61-62 (1985).

manslaughter in the first degree. See voluntary manslaughter.

manslaughter in the second degree. See involuntary manslaughter.

misdemeanor manslaughter. (1947) Unintentional homicide that occurs during the commission of a misdemeanor (such as a traffic violation). [Cases: Homicide ↷661.]

negligent manslaughter. See involuntary manslaughter.

second-degree manslaughter. See involuntary manslaughter.

voluntary manslaughter. (18c) An act of murder reduced to manslaughter because of extenuating circumstances such as adequate provocation (arousing the "heat of passion") or diminished capacity. — Also termed intentional manslaughter; first-degree manslaughter; manslaughter in the first degree; unintentional murder. [Cases: Homicide ↷658.]

manstealing. See KIDNAPPING.

mansuetae naturae (man-swee-tee nə-tyoor-ee), adj. [Latin "of a tamable nature"] Civil law. (Of animals) tame or tamable. [Cases: Animals ↷1.5.]

mansuetae naturae (man-swee-tee nə-tyoor-ee), n. Civil law. Tame, domesticated animals. See domestic animal under ANIMAL. [Cases: Animals ↷1.5.]

manual labor. Work performed chiefly through muscular exertion, with or without tools or machinery.

Manual of Classification. Patents. The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office's official looseleaf publication describing the patent classification system and giving brief explanations of each class and subclass within the system.

Manual of Patent Examining Procedure. The book of substantive law (judicial and administrative-law precedents) and procedural rules for patent examiners at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • The MPEP is the primary resource that patent examiners use to process patent applications. — Abbr. MPEP. [Cases: United States ↷97.]

Manual of the Judge Advocate General. The Secretary of the Navy's directive on military justice, with minor variations between rules applicable to the Navy and those applicable to the Marine Corps. — Also termed JAG Manual. [Cases: Military Justice ↷510.]

manual-rating insurance. See INSURANCE.

manu brevi (man-yoo bree-vi). See BREVI MANU.

manu captio (man-yə-kap-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. Surety; security; bail. 2. A writ allowing a person to be admitted to bail, when the person had been arrested for a felony but could not be admitted to bail by the sheriff. See MAINPRISE.

manu captio (man-yoo-kap-shən), n. Hist. 1. MAINPRISE. 2. A writ ordering someone to produce an alleged felon in court.

manufacture, n. (16c) Patents. A thing that is made or built by a human being (or by a machine), as distinguished from something that is a product of nature; esp. any material form produced by a machine from an unshaped composition of matter. • Manufactures are one of the statutory categories of inventions that can be patented. Examples of manufactures are chairs and tires. 35 USCA § 101. — Also termed article of manufacture. Cf. MACHINE; PROCESS (3). [Cases: Patents ↷13.]

"A manufacture must have a definable structure that is claimed as its patentable characteristic. Manufactures are, after all, a category of product patents, and therefore must be 'things,' as opposed to ways or means. In summary, a patentable manufacture is any human-made structure that has inventive characteristics." Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 30 (2d ed. 1990).

manufactured diversity. See DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP.

manufactured home. See HOME.

manufacturer. (17c) A person or entity engaged in producing or assembling new products. • A federal law has broadened the definition to include those who act for (or are controlled by) any such person or entity in the distribution of new products, as well as those who import new products for resale. 42 USCA § 4902(6).

manufacturer's liability. See PRODUCTS LIABILITY.

manufacturer's lien. See LIEN.

manufacturing clause. Hist. 1. A component of the Copyright Act of 1976 prohibiting imports of more than 2,000 copies of a nondramatic English-language literary work by an American author, unless the material was manufactured in Canada or the U.S. • The manufacturing clause expired in 1986. 2. A component of the Copyright Act of 1909 limiting copyright protection for English-language books and periodicals to those printed in the U.S. manufacturing cost. See COST (1).

manufacturing defect. See DEFECT.

manu forti (man-yoo for-tī). [Latin] With strong hand. • This term was used in old writs of trespass to allege forcible entry, as in manu forti et cum multitudine gentium ("with strong hand and multitude of people").

manu longa (man-yoo long-gə). See LONGA MANU.

manu militari (man-yoo mil-ə-tair-i). [Latin] Hist. By military force.

manumission (man-yə-mish-ən), n. [Latin manumissio "I send out of hand"] (15c) Roman law. The granting of freedom to a slave. • In the Republic and early Empire, there were three usual methods, all of which made the freed slave a citizen. These were (1) manumission vindicta (by the rod), a fictitious lawsuit in which a liberator touched the slave with a wand or rod in the presence of the praetor and alleged that he was free; (2) manumission censu, by which the slave's name was enrolled in the census as a citizen; and (3) manumission testamento, by will. Under Justinian, a grant of freedom in any form (except in fraud of creditors) made the slave free and a citizen. — Also termed manumissio. [Cases: Slaves ⇨ 22.]

"Manumission is a kind of new birth. The master (patronus) therefore stands to his freedman in a relation analogous to the relation between father and son. The patron, as such, is entitled, as against his libertus, to a father's rights of succession and guardianship. He has the right of moderate chastisement (levis coercitio). He has the same claim to be treated with respect as he has against his son. He can claim to be supported by the libertus, if he falls into poverty. He is, lastly, entitled to certain services on the part of the freedman, which he can, if necessary, enforce by action, provided only the freedman had promised them after his manumission and in a manner not derogatory to his liberty." Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 170 (James Crawford Ledlie trans., 3d ed. 1907).

manumission censu. The freeing of a slave by having the censor enter the slave's name on the census roll, the slave professing to be a freeman in the presence of the master. • Once the censor entered the slave's name on the census roll, the slave became a freeman and a citizen — by a simple stroke of the pen. — Also termed manumissio censu.

manumission sacrorum causa. The freeing of a slave by the master's solemnly declaring that the slave was to be free while holding a limb of the slave and promising to pay a sum of money if the freedman later departs from the sacra (family rites). • The master then turned around and released the slave, who became free but was bound to perform the family rites. — Also termed manumissio sacrorum causa.

manumission testamento. The freeing of a slave by will in either of two ways: (1) the master's granting the slave freedom outright in the will, or (2) the master's imposing on an heir the obligation of freeing the slave, in which case the slave became the freedman of the heir. — Also termed manumissio testamento.

manumission vindicta. The ceremonial freeing of a slave whereby a third party, in the presence of the praetor, placed a rod (vindicta) on the slave while claiming that the slave was a freedman, whereupon the master admitted the slave's freedom and the praetor then declared the slave to be free. • This ceremony was actually a fictitious action at law. — Also termed manumissio vindicta.

manumit (man-yə-mit), vb. To free (a slave). — manumitter, n.

manung (man-əng). Hist. An official's jurisdictional district. — Also spelled monung.

manuopus (man-yoo-oh-pəs). See MAINOUR.

manupes (man-yə-pee-z), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A full 12-inch foot as a legal measure.

manupretium (man-yoo-pree-shee-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. Wages for performed labor or services.

manu propria (man-yoo proh-ree-ə). [Latin] Hist. By one's own hand.

manurable (mə-n[ɪ]oor-ə-bəl), adj. [Law French fr. Old French main "hand"] Hist. (Of a thing) capable of being held in hand; capable of being touched.

manure (mə-nyoor), vb. [Law French fr. Old French main "hand"] Hist. To use (something) manually; to perform manual labor on (something).

manus (may-nəs), n. [Latin "hand"] 1. Roman law. The power exercised by the head of a family over all its members and slaves; esp. a husband's power over his wife; marital subordination, which accompanied most marriages in early Rome. 2. Hist. A compurgator, or the oath taken. • This usage of manus may stem from the affiant's placing a hand on the Bible while taking the oath. See COMPURGATOR.

manuscript. (16c) An unpublished writing; an author's typescript or written work product that is proposed for publication.

manuscript policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

manus mortua (may-nəs mor-choo-ə). [Latin "dead hand"] See MORTMAIN.

manutenentia (man-yə-tə-nen-shee-ə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The old writ of maintenance. See MAINTENANCE.

manworth. Hist. The value of a person's life.

Mapp hearing. (1971) Criminal procedure. A hearing held to determine whether evidence implicating the accused was obtained as the result of an illegal search and seizure, and should therefore be suppressed. Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 81 S.Ct. 1684 (1961). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇨ 394.6.]

maquiladora (mah-kee-lə-dohr-ə), n. [fr. Spanish maquilar "gristmill"] (1976) A Mexican corporation, esp. one that holds a permit to operate under a special customs regime that temporarily allows the corporation to import duty-free into Mexico various raw materials, equipment, machinery, replacement parts, and other items needed for the assembly or manufacture of finished goods for export. — Often shortened to maquila.

mara (mair-ə), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A lake; a pool; a body of water that cannot be drained.

MARAD. abbr. MARITIME ADMINISTRATION.

maraud (mə-rawd), vb. (18c) To rove about to pillage or plunder; to loot. — marauder, n.

marcatus (mahr-kay-təs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The yearly rent of a tract of land.

march. Hist. A boundary between countries or territories, esp. the border between England and Wales or between England and Scotland.

Marchers. Hist. Lords who lived on the borders of Scotland and Wales, and operated, with the permission of the English sovereigns, under their own private laws.

- The laws were eventually abolished by the statute 27 Hen. 8, ch. 26. — Also termed Lords Marchers.

"Thus the Lords Marchers were practically independent potentates of a kind very unusual in England. From this two consequences flowed. In the first place there grew up in their jurisdictions a mixture of Welsh custom and English law known as the custom of the Marches. In the second place, although they held of the king, their allegiance sat so lightly upon them that it was necessary to declare in 1354 that 'all the Lords of the Marches of Wales shall be perpetually attending and annexed to the crown of England, and not to the principality of Wales, in whose hands so ever the same principality be.'" 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 121 (7th ed. 1956).

marchet (mahr-chet), Hist. A fee paid by a feudal tenant to the lord so that the tenant's daughter could marry someone outside the lord's jurisdiction or so that the lord would waive the droit du seigneur. — Also termed marsheta; marshetum; merchet; mercheta; merchetum; maiden rent. See DROIT DU SEIGNEUR.

"Any service which stamps the tenant as an unfree man, stamps his tenure as unfree, and in common opinion such services there are, notably the merchetum. Now among the thousands of entries in English documents relating to this payment, it would we believe be utterly impossible to find one which gave any sanction to the tales of a ius primae noctis. The context in which this duty is usually mentioned explains at least one of the reasons which underlie it. The tenant may not give his daughter (in some cases his son or daughter) in marriage — at least not outside the manor . . . No doubt a subjection to this restraint was regarded as very base, and sometimes it is described in vigorous words which express a free man's loathing for servility: — 'he must buy, he must make ransom for, his flesh and blood.'" 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 372 (2d ed. 1898).

march-in rights. Patents. The government's right to step in and grant a new license or revoke an existing license if the owner of a federally funded invention (or the owner's licensee) has not adequately developed or applied the invention within a reasonable time. 35 USCA § 203. [Cases: Patents ⇨ 221.]

marchioness (mahr-shə-nis or mahr-shə-nes), n. [fr. Law Latin marchionissa, the feminine counterpart to marchio "marquess"] A female dignity, equivalent to a marquis, conferred by creation or by marriage with a marquis. See MARQUIS.

Marcus model. Labor law. A method for determining whether a union member's state-law claim against the employer is preempted by federal law, by focusing on whether the state-law claim can be maintained independently of an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. • In Lingle v. Norge Div. of Magic Chef, Inc., 486 U.S. 399, 108 S.Ct. 1877 (1988), the Supreme Court held that a union member's state-law retaliatory-discharge claim was not preempted by the Labor-Management Relations Act because the claim could be resolved without interpreting the collective-bargaining agreement. There are at least two models for applying the Lingle test: the White model, which focuses on whether the claim is negotiable or nonnegotiable (that is, whether state law allows the claim to be waived by a private contract), and the Marcus model, which focuses on the independence of the claim in relation to the collective-bargaining agreement. Under the Marcus model, if the claim can be maintained separately from an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement, it is not preempted regardless of whether the claim is generally waivable in contract. The Marcus model is named for the author of the law-review note in which it was proposed. Stephanie R. Marcus, Note, The Need for a New Approach to Federal Preemption of Union Members' State Law Claims, 99 Yale L.J. 209 (1989). See LINGLE TEST. Cf. WHITE MODEL.

mare (mair-ee or mahr-ee), n. Hist. [Latin] The sea. See SEA.

mare clausum (mair-ee or mahr-ee klaw-zəm), [Latin "closed sea"] A sea or other body of navigable water that is under the jurisdiction of a particular nation and is closed to other nations.

mare liberum (mair-ee or mahr-ee lib-ər-əm or ɪ-bər-əm), [Latin "free sea"] 1. A sea or other body of navigable water that is open to all nations. 2. FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

marescallus (mar-ə-skal-əs), n. [Law Latin] 1. A marshal; a high royal officer. — Also termed mareschal. 2. A master of the stables. 3. A military officer, similar to a constable, who acted as quartermaster. 4. An officer of the Court of Exchequer. 5. A state officer. 6. An officer of a manor.

marettum (mə-ret-əm), n. [fr. Latin mare "the sea" + tegere "to cover"] Hist. Marshy ground flooded by the sea.

margin, n. (14c) 1. A boundary or edge. 2. A measure or degree of difference. 3. PROFIT MARGIN. 4. The difference between a loan's face value and the market value of the collateral that secures the loan. 5. Cash or collateral required to be paid to a securities broker by an investor to protect the broker against losses from securities bought on credit. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.10, 45.11.] 6. The amount of an investor's equity in securities bought on credit through the broker. — margin, vb. — marginal, margined, adj.

good-faith margin. The amount of margin that a creditor exercising good judgment would customarily require for a specified security position. • This amount is established without regard to the customer's other assets or securities positions held with respect to unrelated transactions.

marginable security. See SECURITY.

margin account. See ACCOUNT.

marginal cost. See COST (1).

marginal note. A brief notation, in the nature of a sub-heading, placed in the margin of a printed statute to give a brief indication of the matters dealt with in the section or subsection beside which it appears. • For ease of reference, marginal notes are usu. in distinctive print. Many jurisdictions hold that notes of this kind cannot be used as the basis for an argument about the interpretation of a statute. — Also termed sidenote. [Cases: Statutes ⇨211.] marginal release. See RELEASE (2).

marginal revenue. See REVENUE.

marginal tax rate. See TAX RATE.

margin call. See CALL (2).

margin deficiency. Securities. The extent to which the amount of the required margin exceeds the equity in a margin account. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.11.]

margined security. See SECURITY.

margin list. A Federal Reserve Board list limiting the loan value of a particular bank's stock to a certain percentage (e.g., 50%) of its market value. • When a bank is not on the list, no limit is placed on the loan value of stock used as collateral.

margin requirement. Securities. The percentage of the purchase price that a buyer must deposit with a broker to buy a security on margin. • This percentage of the purchase price is set and adjusted by the Federal Reserve Board. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.11.]

"Margin requirements are the statutory and administrative restrictions placed upon the percentage of the value of securities that may be borrowed for the purpose of the purchase of such securities, the term 'margin' referring to the percentage of the value that must be paid in cash by the purchaser. Such requirements have been implemented for the purposes of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities, and of reducing the aggregate amount of the national credit resources, which are directed by speculation into the stock market, and of achieving a more balanced use of such resources." 69 Am. Jur. 2d Securities Regulation — Federal § 481 (1993).

initial margin requirement. The minimum percentage of the purchase price that a buyer must deposit with a broker. • The Federal Reserve Board establishes minimum margin requirements to prevent excessive speculation and price volatility. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.11.]

maintenance margin requirement. The minimum equity that a buyer must keep in a margin account, expressed as a percentage of the account value. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.11.]

margin stock. See marginable security under SECURITY.

margin transaction. A securities or commodities transaction made through a broker on a margin account. — Also termed buying on margin. See MARGIN (5). [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨45.11.]

mariage de convenue. See marriage of convenience under MARRIAGE (1).

marinarius (mar-ə-nair-ee-əs), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A seaman; a mariner. • Marinarius capitaneus (kap-ə-tay-nee-əs) was the admiral or warden of the ports.

marine, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to the sea <marine life>. 2. Of or relating to sea navigation or commerce <marine insurance> <marine interest>.

marine belt. See territorial waters under WATER.

marine carrier. See CARRIER.

marine contract. See maritime contract under CONTRACT.

Marine Court in the City of New York. The New York City court, originally created to resolve seamen's disputes, that was the predecessor of the City Court of New York.

marine insurance. See INSURANCE.

marine interest. See MARITIME INTEREST.

marine league. See LEAGUE.

marine loan. See maritime loan under LOAN.

marine peril. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

marine protest. A writing attested by a justice of the peace, a notary public, or a consul, made or verified by the master of a vessel, stating that the vessel has suffered a severe voyage and that the master has engaged in neither misconduct nor negligence. See PROTEST.

mariner. (14c) A person employed on a vessel in sea navigation; SEAMAN. [Cases: Seamen ⇨2.]

marine-rescue doctrine. The rule that when a person on a ship goes overboard, the ship must use all reasonable means to retrieve the person from the water if the person can be seen, and, if the person cannot be seen, must search for the person as long as it is reasonably possible that the person is still alive. [Cases: Seamen ⇨29(1).]

marine risk. See PERIL OF THE SEA.

mariner's will. See soldier's will under WILL.

marine rule. The doctrine that if the cost of restoring damaged property would exceed one-half the value of the property before the damage, then the property is deemed to be totally destroyed. • The marine rule developed in the context of applying marine insurance to damaged ships, but it has also been applied to other property, including buildings.

mariner's hypothec. See HYPOTHEC.

marine service. See MARITIME SERVICE.

marriage (ma-ri-tij), n. See DOWRY.

maritagium (mar-ə-tay-jee-əm), n. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A lord's right to arrange a marriage for his infant ward; specif., the power of a feudal lord to give his infant ward or a vassal's heiress, minor heir, or widow in marriage, or to extract a fine from a vassal upon the vassal's marriage. 2. Hist. The income derived from fines paid by vassals for the lord's permission to marry. 3. DOWER. 4. A marriage gift; DOWRY. See DOS. — Also termed (in sense 4) maritage.

"[W]hile to the common lawyer dos meant dower, in other systems it meant dowry: a gift to the wife, or to husband and wife, by the bride's parents or other relatives. In England this was called the 'marriage-gift' or maritagium. Marriage-gifts were commonly made either to establish a cadet branch of a family or to assist a daughter who was not an heiress to make a good match." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 310 (3d ed. 1990).

maritagium habere (mar-ə-tay-jee-əm hə-beer-ee). [Law Latin] To have the right of arranging a woman's marriage. • This was a privilege granted by the Crown to favored subjects. See MARITAGIUM.

marital, adj. (17c) Of or relating to the marriage relationship <marital property>. [Cases: Divorce ↻248; Husband and Wife ↻1-354.]

marital agreement. (1866) An agreement between spouses or two people engaged to be married concerning the division and ownership of marital property during marriage or upon dissolution by death or divorce; esp. a premarital contract or separation agreement primarily concerned with dividing marital property in the event of divorce. — Also termed marriage settlement; property settlement. See PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT; POSTNUPTIAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↻1.]

marital-communications privilege. See marital privilege (1) under PRIVILEGE (3).

marital deduction. See DEDUCTION.

marital-deduction trust. See TRUST.

marital dissolution. See DIVORCE.

marital domicile. See matrimonial domicile under DOMICILE.

marital estate. See marital property under PROPERTY.

marital home. See FAMILY HOME.

marital immunity. See husband-wife immunity under IMMUNITY (2).

marital life-estate trust. See bypass trust under TRUST.

marital misconduct. Any of the various statutory grounds for a fault divorce, such as adultery or cruelty. See fault divorce under DIVORCE. [Cases: Divorce ↻12-38, 252.2.]

marital portion. 1. Civil law. The portion of a deceased spouse's estate to which the surviving spouse is entitled. 2. Louisiana law. The portion of a deceased spouse's estate to which the surviving spouse is entitled if the spouse died "rich in comparison with the surviving spouse." La. Civ. Code art. 2432. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ↻52(1).]

marital-privacy doctrine. A principle that limits governmental intrusion into private family matters, such as those involving sexual relations between married persons. • The marital-privacy doctrine was first recognized in Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 85 S.Ct. 1678 (1965). The doctrine formerly deterred state intervention into incidents involving domestic violence. Today, with the trend toward individual privacy rights, the doctrine does not discourage governmental protection from domestic violence. — Also termed doctrine of marital privacy. [Cases: Constitutional Law ↻1247.] marital privilege. See PRIVILEGE (3).

marital property. See PROPERTY.

marital rape. See RAPE.

marital residence. See FAMILY HOME.

marital rights. (18c) Rights and incidents (such as property or cohabitation rights) arising from the marriage contract. [Cases: Husband and Wife ↻1-25(6).]

marital status. The condition of being single, married, legally separated, divorced, or widowed.

marital tort. See TORT.

maritare (mar-ə-tair-ee), vb. Hist. To marry.

mariticide. (1992) 1. The murder of one's husband. 2. A woman who murders her husband. Cf. UXORICIDE. — mariticial, adj.

maritima Angliae (mə-rit-ə-mə ang-gee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. The seacoast. 2. The Crown's sea revenue, as from wreckage and from whales or sturgeons cast ashore. • The revenue was formerly collected by sheriffs and later by the Lord High Admiral.

maritima incrementa (mə-rit-ə-mə in-krə-men-tə). [Latin "marine increases"] Hist. Alluvion caused by the sea; land gained from the sea.

maritime (mar-i-tim), adj. (16c) 1. Connected with or situated near the sea. 2. Of or relating to sea navigation or commerce.

"The word 'maritime' has in the Constitution its appropriate meaning, i.e., relating to the sea, and 'sea' is a word of wide extension and application . . . Its classical and scriptural equivalents are applied to all sorts of navigable waters. It is not restricted, even in common speech, to waters where the tide ebbs and flows, for the Baltic Sea, the Black Sea, the Sea of Azof, the Sea of Marmora, the Mediterranean Sea, the great scenes of early maritime enterprise, have no visible tide." 1 Steven F. Friedell, Benedict on Admiralty § 103, at 7-5 (7th ed. 1996).

Maritime Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for subsidizing certain costs of operating ships under the U.S. flag; constructing or supervising the construction of merchant-type ships for the U.S. government; administering the War Risk Insurance Program; and operating the Merchant Marine Academy, which trains merchant-marine officers. — Abbr. MARAD. [Cases: Shipping ⇨ 3, 14.]

maritime belt. See territorial waters under WATER.

Maritime Commission. See FEDERAL MARITIME COMMISSION.

maritime-connection doctrine. See LOCALITY-PLUS TEST.

maritime contract. See CONTRACT.

maritime court. See ADMIRALTY (1).

maritime employment. Under the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, a job that is related to the loading, unloading, construction, or repair of a vessel. 33 USCA § 902(3). [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇨ 260, 262.]

maritime flavor. The relation of a given case to shipping concerns. • This is a factor used in determining federal admiralty jurisdiction over a particular matter by analyzing whether the matter sufficiently relates to marine and shipping concerns and whether there is need for a federal response. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 10(2), 18.]

"There is perhaps no more elusive concept in the law of admiralty than 'maritime flavor.' . . . While 'maritime flavor' is incapable of precise definition, certain observations may be helpful. Generally, courts find 'maritime flavor' in those events and transactions which are major concerns of the shipping industry. This is tempered by the realization that exercise of federal control will not necessarily promote maritime shipping with the same vigor as control by a coastal or predominantly maritime state. Since federal law will not necessarily be more favorable, courts may find 'maritime flavor' only when there is a perceived need for a uniform national rule, which can only be provided by the federal sovereign." Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 23 (2d ed. 1988).

maritime interest. Interest charged on a loan secured by a sea vessel or its cargo, or both. • Because of the lender's considerable risk, the interest rate may be extraordinarily high. — Also termed marine interest.

maritime jurisdiction. See ADMIRALTY AND MARITIME JURISDICTION.

maritime law. The body of law governing marine commerce and navigation, the carriage at sea of persons and property, and marine affairs in general; the rules governing contract, tort, and workers'-compensation claims or relating to commerce on or over water. — Also termed admiralty; admiralty law; sea law. Cf. GENERAL MARITIME LAW; LAW OF THE SEA. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 1.5.]

maritime lien. See LIEN.

maritime loan. See LOAN.

maritime peril. A danger or risk arising from navigating or being at sea. [Cases: Salvage ⇨ 5.]

maritime service. Maritime law. Work performed in connection with a ship or commerce on navigable waters, such as service to preserve a ship's crew, cargo, or equipment. — Also termed marine service. [Cases: Admiralty ⇨ 13.]

maritime state. Hist. The collective officers and mariners of the British navy.

Friday market. The normal tendency for stock prices to decline on Fridays. • The tendency occurs because many investors balance their accounts before the weekend to avoid any adverse changes in market prices over the weekend.

futures market. A commodity exchange in which futures contracts are traded; a market for a trade (e.g., commodities futures contracts and stock options) that is negotiated at the current price but calls for delivery at a future time. — Also termed forward market. See FUTURES CONTRACT. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation ⇨6.]

geographic market. Antitrust. The part of a relevant market that identifies the regions in which a firm might compete. • If a firm can raise prices or cut production without causing a quick influx of supply to the area from outside sources, that firm is operating in a distinct geographic market. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨558.]

"For purposes of [the Sherman Act], the relevant geographic market comprises the area in which the defendant effectively competes with other individuals or businesses for distribution of the relevant product. Stated differently, the relevant geographic market consists of the area from which the sellers of a particular product derive their customers, and the area within which the purchasers of the product can practically seek the product." 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 57, at 119-20 (1996).

gray market. A market in which the seller uses legal but sometimes unethical methods to avoid a manufacturer's distribution chain and thereby sell goods (esp. imported goods) at prices lower than those envisioned by the manufacturer. See PARALLEL IMPORTS.

"One of the most controversial areas of customs law concerns 'gray market goods,' goods produced abroad with authorization and payment but which are imported into unauthorized markets. Trade in gray market goods has increased dramatically in recent years, in part because fluctuating currency exchange rates create opportunities to import and sell such goods at a discount rate from local price levels." Ralph H. Folsom & Michael W. Gordon, International Business Transactions § 20.8 (1995).

institutional market. The demand among large investors and corporations for short-term funds and commercial paper.

market overt. An open, legally regulated public market where buyers, with some exceptions, acquire good title to products regardless of any defects in the seller's title. Cf. FAIR. [Cases: Sales ⇨234(2).]

money market. The financial market for dealing in short-term negotiable instruments such as commercial paper, certificates of deposit, banker's acceptances, and U.S. Treasury securities. See financial market.

negotiated market. A market (such as an over-the-counter securities market) in which buyers and sellers seek each other out and negotiate prices. Cf. auction market.

open market. A market in which any buyer or seller may trade and in which prices and product availability are determined by free competition. — Also termed free market.

original market. See primary market.

over-the-counter market. See OVER-THE-COUNTER MARKET.

paper market. See derivative market.

primary market. The market for goods or services that are newly available for buying and selling; esp. the securities market in which new securities are issued by corporations to raise capital. — Also termed original market.

product market. Antitrust. The part of a relevant market that applies to a firm's particular product by identifying all reasonable substitutes for the product and by determining whether these substitutes limit the firm's ability to affect prices. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨557.]

"For purposes of an antitrust claim under . . . the Sherman Act, the relevant product market includes those services or commodities which are reasonably interchangeable by consumers for the same purposes. In order to establish the relevant product market, therefore, a plaintiff must sufficiently identify what types of products are reasonably interchangeable substitutes for the defendant's product within the appropriate area of competition." 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 58, at 121 (1996).

public market. A market open to both buyers and sellers.

receding market. See bear market.

recognized market. A market where the items bought and sold are numerous and similar, where competitive bidding and bartering are not prevalent, and where prices paid in sales of comparable items are publicly quoted. • Examples of recognized markets include stock and commodities exchanges. Under the UCC, a secured creditor may, upon the debtor's default, sell the collateral in a recognized market without notifying the debtor. Such a sale is presumed to be commercially reasonable.

relevant market. Antitrust. A market that is capable of being monopolized — that is, a market in which a firm can raise prices above the competitive level without losing so many sales that the price increase would be unprofitable. • The relevant market includes both the product market and the geographic market. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 556.]

secondary market. The market for goods or services that have previously been available for buying and selling; esp. the securities market in which previously issued securities are traded among investors. — Also termed aftermarket.

seller's market. A market in which demand exceeds (or approaches) supply, resulting in raised prices.

soft market. A market (esp. a stock market) characterized by falling or drifting prices and low volume.

spot market. A market (esp. in commodities) in which payment or delivery is immediate <the spot market in oil>.

strong market. See bull market.

thin market. A market in which the number of bids or offerings is relatively low.

marketability. (1877) Salability; the probability of selling property, goods, securities, or services at specified times, prices, and terms. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 272; Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 130(5).]

marketability test. Mining law. The principle that, for someone to obtain a patent on a mining claim on federal land, there must be a showing that a reasonably prudent person could extract and market the claimed mineral at a profit, and that at the time of discovery, a large enough market for the mineral existed to attract the efforts of a reasonably prudent person. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 39.]

marketable, adj. (16c) Of commercially acceptable quality; fit for sale and in demand by buyers. — Also termed merchantable. [Cases: Sales ⇨ 272.]

marketable-product rule. Oil & gas. For royalty-calculation purposes, the doctrine that "production" occurs when oil or gas is pumped up, stored, and made marketable through processing. • Until producing a marketable product, the lessee bears all costs of capturing and handling oil and gas. Cf. CAPTURE-AND-HOLD RULE.

marketable security. See SECURITY.

marketable title. See TITLE (2).

marketable-title act. (1957) A state statute providing that a person can establish good title to land by searching the public records only back to a specified time (such as 40 years). See marketable title under TITLE (2). [Cases: Limitation of Actions ⇨ 19(1); Vendor and Purchaser ⇨ 231(1).]

market activity. See MARKET VOLUME.

market approach. (1958) A method of appraising real property, by surveying the market and comparing the property to similar pieces of property that have been recently sold, and making appropriate adjustments for differences between the properties, including location, size of the property, and the dates of sale. — Also termed comparative-sales approach; market-comparison approach; market-data approach; market-comparables analysis; comparable-sales approach; comparables analysis. Cf. COST APPROACH; INCOME APPROACH.

market average. A price level for a specific group of stocks.

market-comparables analysis. See MARKET APPROACH.

market-comparison approach. See MARKET APPROACH.

market correction. See DOWN REVERSAL.

market-data approach. See MARKET APPROACH.

market equity. The percentage of the total market value that a particular company's securities account for, represented by each class of security. Cf. BOOK EQUITY.

marketing, n. (16c) 1. The act or process of promoting and selling, leasing, or licensing products or services.

2. The part of a business concerned with meeting customers' needs. 3. The area of study concerned with the promotion and selling of products or services.

marketing contract. See CONTRACT.

marketing covenant. Oil & gas. In a mineral lease, the implied promise that the lessee will market the production from the lease within a reasonable time and at a reasonable price. See REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇨ 78.1(8).]

marketing defect. See DEFECT.

market intermediary. Securities. A person whose business is to enter into transactions on both sides of the market. Investment Company Act, 15 USCA § 80a-3(c)(2)(B)(i).

market-maker. Securities. One who helps establish a market for securities by reporting bid-and-asked quotations. • A market-maker is typically a specialist permitted to act as a dealer, a dealer acting in the capacity of block positioner, or a dealer who, with respect to a security, routinely enters quotations in an interdealer communication system or otherwise and is willing to buy and sell securities for the dealer's own account. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 53.17(3).]

market-making, n. The practice of establishing prices for over-the-counter securities by reporting bid-and-asked quotations. • A broker-dealer engaged in this practice, which is regulated by both the NASD and the SEC, buys and sells securities as a principal for its own account, and thus accepts two-way bids (both to buy and to sell). See BID AND ASKED. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⇨ 53.17(3).] market manipulation. See MANIPULATION.

market order. See ORDER (8).

market-out clause. Oil & gas. A contract provision permitting a pipeline purchaser of natural gas to lower the purchase price if market conditions make it uneconomical to continue buying at the contract price, and permitting the well owner to respond by accepting the lower price or by rejecting it and canceling the contract. • Market-out clauses often refer to competing fuels such as fuel oil. — Also termed economic-out clause. [Cases: Gas ⇨ 13(1).] market overt. See MARKET.

market-participant doctrine. (1983) The principle that, under the Commerce Clause, a state does not discriminate against interstate commerce by acting as a buyer or seller in the market, by operating a proprietary enterprise, or by subsidizing private business. • Under the Dormant Commerce Clause principle, the Commerce Clause — art. I, § 8, cl. 3 of the U.S. Constitution — disallows most state regulation of, or discrimination against, interstate commerce. But if the state is participating in the market instead of regulating it, the Dormant Commerce Clause analysis does not apply, and the state activity will generally stand. See Dormant Commerce Clause under COMMERCE CLAUSE. [Cases: Commerce ⇨ 56.]

marketplace of ideas. (1949) A forum in which expressions of opinion can freely compete for acceptance without governmental restraint. • Although Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was the first jurist to discuss the concept as a metaphor for explaining freedom of speech, the phrase marketplace of ideas dates in American caselaw only from 1954.

market portfolio. See PORTFOLIO.

market power. (1915) The ability to reduce output and raise prices above the competitive level — specif., above marginal cost — for a sustained period, and to make a profit by doing so. • In antitrust law, a large amount of market power may constitute monopoly power. See MONOPOLIZATION. Cf. MARKET SHARE.

"In economic terms, market power is the ability to raise prices without a total loss of sales; without market power, consumers shop around to find a rival offering a better deal." 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices § 49, at 110 n.87 (1996).

market price. See PRICE.

market quotation. See QUOTATION.

market-recovery program. See JOB-TARGETING PROGRAM.

market share. (1954) The percentage of the market for a product that a firm supplies, usu. calculated by dividing the firm's output by the total market output. • In antitrust law, market share is used to measure a firm's market power, and if the share is high enough — generally 70% or more — then the firm may be guilty of monopolization. See MONOPOLIZATION. Cf. MARKET POWER. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 553.]

market-share liability. See LIABILITY.

market-share theory. Antitrust. 1. A method of determining damages for lost profits by calculating the impact of the defendant's violation on the plaintiff's output or market share. Cf. BEFORE-AND-AFTER THEORY; YARDSTICK THEORY. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇨ 553.] 2. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy offered when the patentee and the infringer share the market with a noninfringing competitor. • Using this method, the court assumes that the percentage of the market that the patentee holds is the same as the percentage of the infringer's market that the patentee would have captured but for the infringement.

market stand-off agreement. Securities. A provision in a stock-purchase contract in which the stockholder promises not to sell or otherwise transfer any securities during a specified period after the corporation makes a public stock offering. Cf. LOCKUP AGREEMENT.

market structure. The broad organizational characteristics of a particular market, including seller concentration, product differentiation, and barriers to entry.

market trend. See TREND.

market value. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

market value at the well. Oil & gas. The value of oil or gas at the place where it is sold, minus the reasonable cost of transporting it and processing it to make it marketable.

market volume. 1. The total number of shares traded on one day on a stock exchange. 2. The total number of shares of one stock traded on one day. — Also termed market activity.

Mark Hopkins doctrine. The principle that when an employee leaves a job because of a labor dispute, any later employment the employee has must be bona fide and intended as permanent for the employee to avoid a labor-dispute disqualification from unemployment benefits if the employee leaves the later job. Mark Hopkins, Inc. v. Employment Comm'n, 151 P.2d 229 (Cal. 1944). [Cases: Unemployment Compensation ⇨ 172.]

marking estoppel. See ESTOPPEL.

Markman hearing. (1996) Patents. A hearing at which the court receives evidence and argument concerning the construction to be given to terms in a patent claim at issue. Markman v. Westview Instruments, Inc., 52 F.3d 967, 984-85 (Fed. Cir. 1995) (en banc), aff'd, 517 U.S. 370, 116 S.Ct.1384 (1996). • In the namesake decision, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held that the construction of patent claims — and therefore the scope of the patentee's rights — is a question of law. In a Markman hearing, the court interprets the claims before the question of infringement is submitted to the fact-finder. [Cases: Patents ↷314.]

markmoot (mahrk-moot), n. Hist. An early English or Scottish court that held hearings on a territorial border (i.e., a march or mark) between counties, hundreds, or countries. — Also spelled markmote.

markon. An amount (usu. expressed as a percentage) initially added to a product's cost to obtain the list price. • Further increases or decreases in price are called markups or markdowns, respectively.

marksman. 1. A person who signs documents with some kind of character or symbol instead of writing his or her name. [Cases: Signatures ↷5.] 2. A highly skilled shooter.

Marks rule. The doctrine that, when the U.S. Supreme Court issues a fractured, plurality opinion, the opinion of the justices concurring in the judgment on the narrowest grounds — that is, the legal standard with which a majority of the Court would agree — is considered the Court's holding. Marks v. United States, 430 U.S. 188, 97 S.Ct. 990 (1977). [Cases: Courts ↷90(2).]

mark-to-market accounting method. See fair-value accounting method under ACCOUNTING METHOD.

mark up, vb. (1868) 1. To increase (the price of goods, etc.) 2. To revise or amend (a legislative bill, a rule, etc.) 3. To place (a case) on the trial calendar.

markup, n. (1916) 1. An amount added to an item's cost to determine its selling price. See PROFIT MARGIN. 2. A session of a congressional committee during which a bill is revised and put into final form before it is reported to the appropriate house. [Cases: United States ↷23(3).]

Markush claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

Markush doctrine (mahr-kəsh). Patents. An exception to the policy against the use of alternative language in claims, by which in certain claims (esp. those involving chemical components) a claimant can use an alternative, subgeneric phrase when there is no applicable, commonly accepted generic expression. • Characterized by a phrase such as "selected from the group consisting of," the claim includes a group of substances any one of which could serve the same function in the process. The term Markush comes from Dr. Eugene A. Markush, who was granted a dye-preparation patent in 1923. Ex parte Markush, 1925 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 126. See MARKUSH GROUP. [Cases: Patents ↷101(7).]

"The Patent Office early adopted a policy against use of alternative language in claims. Thus, a claimant could not use the specific alternative phrase 'glass or plastic' but could use a generic phrase (such as 'impervious transparent material') that would cover effectively the desired alternatives. The Markush doctrine developed as an exception . . . With chemical compounds there may be no suitable phrase to cover the alternatives. Under limited circumstances a claimant could use an artificial or coined subgeneric group in the form of 'material selected from the group consisting of X, Y, and Z.'" 2 Donald S. Chisum, Patents § 8.06[2], at 8-119 to 8-120 (1992).

Markush group. Patents. A limited form of generic claim that recites an element, states the element is a member of a group, and names the other group members, any of which could substitute for the first recited element. • All Markush group members must have at least one common property that is mainly responsible for their function in the claimed relationship. Although each material in the group is different, each must be able to serve the same function. See MARKUSH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ↷101(7).] marque (mahrk). Archaic. Reprisal. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

marque, law of. Archaic. A reprisal entitling one who has been wronged and is unable to receive ordinary justice to take the goods of the wrongdoer (if they can be found within one's own precinct) in satisfaction for the wrong. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

marquis (mahr-kwis or mahr-kee). (14c) An English nobleman below and next in order to a duke. — Also termed marquess.

marquisate (mahr-kwi-sit or -zit), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The seigniorship of a marquis.

marriage, n. (13c) 1. The legal union of a couple as spouses. • The essentials of a valid marriage are (1) parties legally capable of contracting to marry, (2) mutual consent or agreement, and (3) an actual contracting in the form prescribed by law. Marriage has important consequences in many areas of the law, such as torts, criminal law, evidence, debtor-creditor relations, property, and contracts. — Also termed matrimony; conjugal union. [Cases: Marriage ↷1.12.]

attempted marriage. See void marriage.

clandestine marriage (klan-des-tin). 1. A marriage that rests merely on the agreement of the parties. 2. A marriage entered into in a secret way, as one solemnized by an unauthorized person or without all required formalities. See Fleet marriage. [Cases: Marriage ↷20(1).]

common-law marriage. (17c) A marriage that takes legal effect, without license or ceremony, when two people capable of marrying live together as husband and wife, intend to be married, and hold themselves out to others as a married couple. • The common-law marriage traces its roots to the English ecclesiastical courts, which until 1753 recognized a kind of informal marriage known as sponsalia per verba de praesenti, which was entered into without ceremony. Today a common-law marriage, which is the full equivalent of a ceremonial marriage, is authorized in 11 states and in the District of Columbia. If a common-law marriage is established in a state that recognizes such marriages, other states, even those that do not authorize common-law marriage, must give full faith and credit to the marriage. A common-law marriage can be dissolved only by annulment, divorce, or death. — Also termed consensual marriage; informal marriage. See common-law husband under HUSBAND; common-law wife under WIFE. See PER VERBA DE FUTURO CUM COPULA; SPONSALIA PER VERBA DE PRAESENTI. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 13, 22.]

confidential marriage. In some jurisdictions (such as California), a marriage between a man and a woman in which only the two parties and the officiant are present at the ceremony. • Confidential marriages are neither witnessed nor recorded in public records. They are recorded in nonpublic records. Although rarely performed, they are generally legal. To obtain a confidential marriage, the parties must each be at least 18, must be of the opposite sex, and usu. must have lived together for an extended period. In ecclesiastical law, such a marriage is termed an occult marriage or, if performed in the strictest secrecy, a marriage of conscience.

"A few states provide for confidential marriages. This allows parties to go through all the formalities but have the records of the marriage, including the license, remain confidential. . . . A key practical effect of confidential marriage is to allow parties who have been living as husband and wife in a jurisdiction that does not recognize informal marriages to achieve marital status without publicity. However, it does not relate back to the time when the parties started holding themselves out as a married couple and thus it can have consequences in determining the extent of marital or community property or various other rights." Walter Wadlington & Raymond C. O'Brien, Family Law in Perspective 26 (2001).

consensual marriage. Marriage by consent alone, without any formal process. See common-law marriage. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 18.]

consular marriage. A marriage solemnized in a foreign country by a consul or diplomatic official of the United States. • Consular marriages are recognized in some jurisdictions. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 27.]

covenant marriage. (1990) A special type of marriage in which the parties agree to more stringent requirements for marriage and divorce than are otherwise imposed by state law for ordinary marriages. • In the late 1990s, several states (beginning with Louisiana: see Acts 1997, No. 1380, § 5) passed laws providing for covenant marriages. The requirements vary, but most of these laws require couples who opt for covenant marriage to undergo premarital counseling. A divorce will be granted only after the couple has undergone marital counseling and has been separated for a specified period (usu. at least 18 months). The divorce prerequisites typically can be waived with proof that a spouse has committed adultery, been convicted of a felony, abandoned the family for at least one year, or physically or sexually abused the other spouse or a child. — Also termed (in slang) high-test marriage.

cross-marriage. A marriage by a brother and sister to two people who are also brother and sister.

dead marriage. A marriage whose substance has disintegrated; a marriage that has irretrievably broken down. [Cases: Divorce ⇨ 12.]

de facto marriage (di fak-toh). A marriage that, despite the parties' living as husband and wife, is defective for some reason. [Cases: Marriage ⇨ 12.]

defunct marriage. A marriage in which both parties, by their conduct, indicate their intent to no longer be married. [Cases: Divorce ⇨ 12.]

Fleet marriage. Hist. 1. A clandestine ceremonial marriage performed in the 17th or 18th century in the Fleet prison in London by a chaplain who had been imprisoned for debt. 2. A clandestine ceremonial marriage performed by an unscrupulous itinerant clergymen in the area in London near the Fleet Prison. • Parliament attempted to stop the practice, but it was not until the statute of 26 George 2, ch. 33, declaring marriages performed outside public chapels or churches to be void and punishable as a felony, that the practice ceased.

fraudulent marriage. A marriage based on a misrepresentation regarding some issue of fundamental importance to the innocent party, who relies on the misrepresentation in the decision to marry. • The misrepresentation must concern something of fundamental importance to a marriage, such as religious beliefs, the ability to have sexual relations, or the ability or desire to have children. Cf. sham marriage. [Cases: Divorce ⇨ 34.]

green-card marriage. Slang. A sham marriage in which a U.S. citizen marries a foreign citizen for the sole purpose of allowing the foreign citizen to become a permanent U.S. resident. • The Marriage Fraud Amendments were enacted to regulate marriages entered into for the purpose of circumventing U.S. immigration laws. 8 USCA §§ 1154 (h), 1255(e). See sham marriage.

Gretna-Green marriage. A marriage entered into in a jurisdiction other than where the parties reside to avoid some legal impediment that exists where they live; a runaway marriage. • Gretna Green, a Scottish village close to the English border, served as a convenient place for eloping English couples to wed since in Scots law parties over 16 did not need parental consent.

"A 'Gretna-Green marriage' was a marriage solemnized in Scotland by parties who went there to avoid the delay and formalities required in England. . . . In the United States, the term describes marriages celebrated between residents of a State who go to a place beyond and yet near to the boundary line of an adjoining State, on account of some advantage afforded by the law of that State." William C. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 496 (1889).
