

CBS News Admits Navy Yard Shooter Possibly a Victim of Mind Control

CBS Evening News with Bob Orr in their Washington Newsroom:

Sources say Aaron Alexis left behind two short phrases on the on the side of the shotgun used in the massacre. One of the messages scratched into the guns metal reads “better off this way”. The other is more cryptic, “My ELF” Weapon. Investigators don’t know what the etchings mean. ELF might be a reference to extremely low frequency radio waves used by the Navy to communicate with submarines.

It may also, though, relate to a strange incident which happened six weeks ago in Newport, Rhode Island. Alexis complained to police that stalkers were using a microwave type machine to send “vibrations into his body”. Newport investigators took a report and gave it to local Navy police. It apparently was never passed up the chain of command.

After the Newport episode, Alexis sought help at two hospitals operated by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Government records show that on August 23rd Alexis visited a VA emergency room in Providence complaining of insomnia. He received medication to help him sleep. Then five days later on August 28th he refilled the sleep aid prescription at a VA Medical center in Washington.

The Department of Veterans Affairs also revealed that Alexis was on partial disability for orthopedic issues and ringing in his ears. He received disability benefits totaling $395 a month.

His family has claimed that Alexis had also sought and received treatment for mental health issues. But the VA said it had no record of Alexis receiving that kind of care. In a statement the VA said, “He never sought an appointment from a mental health specialist”.

Now the FBI still does not have a motive for the shootings, Scott, and investigators say so far they’ve found no clear connections between Alexis and any of his victims
