HYPATIA (c. 375–415). Alexandrian scholar. Born c. 375 CE; died 415; dau. of Theon (mathematician and astronomer associated with the Museum of Alexandria, a think tank where famous artists and intellectuals came to ply their expertise). ❖ One of the most famous intellectuals in history, began schooling with father; while still in her 20s, developed such a reputation as a mathematician, astronomer and philosopher that she began to draw students to Alexandria from all over the Roman Empire; established her reputation with a commentary on Diophantus' Arithmeticonum (a work dedicated to algebraic theorems), a revision of Almagest, the 3rd book of Ptolemy the astronomer (not to be confused with the kings of Egypt), and a commentary on Conic Sections; became equally intrigued with cosmogony, and the philosophical questions concerning the origins of the universe; began a serious inquiry into the nature of humanity, its purpose, and its relative position in the cosmic hierarchy; as a result, was drawn to philosophy, especially to Plotinian neo-Platonism which in her time was the prominent philosophy of the Museum; became head of the neo-Platonic school in Alexandria at young age (c. 400), the most influential academic of her world; drew a civic salary, an unusual situation at the time, because she was a woman and because she was a staunch pagan in a city of Christians, ruled by a Christian administration; maintained a high profile throughout Alexandria—so high in fact that her detractors suggested that she was a brazen woman of loose morals; was consulted about a range of practical issues, some of which were socially volatile, including when Orestes, a prefect of Alexandria, questioned the ethics of Cyril, bishop of Alexandria, and his bid to cleanse the city of all unorthodox thinking and rid it of Jews; when Cyril lost face, became his scapegoat; was pulled from her chariot by a group of monks, led into the Caesarian Church, stripped of her clothes, and skinned alive by shells specially honed to a razor-sharpness (Cyril went on to become recognized, both in the Latin and Greek Orthodox Churches, as a saint). ❖ See also Maria Dzielska, Hypatia of Alexandria (trans. by F. JOAN OF ARC (c. 1412–1431). French military leader and saint. Name variations: Jeanne d'Arc; La Pucelle d'Orléans; La Petite Pucelle; The Maid of Orléans or The Maid of Orleans. Born and baptized c. 1412 at Domrémy in duchy of Bar in northern France; burned at stake, May 30, 1431, at Rouen; dau. of Jacques d'Arc and Isabelle (Romée) d'Arc; never married. ❖ French hero, revered as a national saint, whose achievements can now be seen as a turning point in Hundred Years' War; from age 13, reported hearing her "voices," as she called them; at 17, was ordered by "voices" to free France from the stranglehold of the English occupation and to see the dauphin crowned in Rheims Cathedral, where, by tradition, all French kings were consecrated (at the time, Rheims was under the command of the English); commanded the French troops who raised the siege of Orléans (April 1429); led Charles VII to his coronation in Rheims (July 17, 1429); captured by the Burgundians during a skirmish at Compiègne (May 23, 1430) and sold to the English (Jan 3, 1431); was imprisoned and interrogated more than 12 times by canon lawyers either in the castle chapel or in her prison (Feb 21–Mar 24); brought before the Trial of Condemnation (Mar 1341), had to answer to 70 charges which had been drawn up against her, and which were based on the contention that her behavior showed blasphemous presumption; proved to be more than a match for her inquisitors, responding to their questioning with an eloquence unexpected in one so young; was condemned to death by burning as a relapsed heretic; condemnation revoked by the pope (July 1456); beatified (1909); canonized (1920). Her trials and her execution have inspired numerous books, dramas, and poems by authors as diverse as Christine de Pisan and George Bernard Shaw; artists through the centuries have portrayed her as a warrior saint dressed in armor, carrying the banner of God and the standard of France. ❖ See also A. JUANA INÉS DE LA CRUZ (1651–1695). Mexican poet and playwright. Name variations: Sor (Sister) Juana Ines de la Cruz; the Tenth Muse; the Mexican Nun. Pronunciation: HWAH-na ee-NEYSS they la KROOTH. Born Juana Ramírez de Asuaje, frequently spelled Asbaje, near San Miguel de Nepantla, Mexico, Nov 12, 1651 (some writers, citing plausible but inconclusive evidence, have argued that it was actually 3 years earlier, in 1648); died April 17, 1695, in Mexico City; dau. of Isabel Ramírez de Santillana and Pedro Manuel de Asuaje y Vargas Machuca; never married; no children. ❖ Though recognized in her own time for her genius, nonetheless struggled against great odds to achieve the freedom to devote herself to scholarship and creative activity; entered Hieronymite convent, Mexico City (1668); had earliest known work published in Mexico (1676); had 1st collection of works published in Spain (1689); engaged in polemic on women's rights (1691); withdrew from literary life (1693); defied the limits imposed by Hispanic tradition and the Roman Catholic Church to become one of the most significant writers in the history of Spanish literature; for more than 20 years, maintained a brilliant literary career, but, shortly before death, was finally forced into silence. Wrote long poem Primero sueño (First Dream), numerous sonnets and villancicos, religious and secular plays, and an important autobiographical essay entitled Respuesta a Sor Filotea (Reply to Sister Filotea). ❖ See also A Woman of Genius: The Intellectual Autobiography of Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz [Respuesta a Sor Filotea] (Trans. and ed. by Margaret Sayers Peden, Lime Rock, 1982); Octavio Paz, Sor Juana: Or, the Traps of Faith (Trans. by Margaret Sayers Peden, Harvard U. KHADIJAH (c. 555–619). Arabian merchant and religious leader. Name variations: Kadijah or Khadija. Born Khadijah bint Khuwaylid around 555; died in 619; 3rd cousin to Muhammad once removed; m. and widowed twice by age 40; hired Muhammad to manage one of her caravans to Syria in 595, and proposed marriage to the future Prophet shortly thereafter; children: (6 with Muhammad) 2 sons, al-Qasim and Abdallah, who both died as infants; 4 daughters, Zaynab, Ruqaiyah, Umm Kulthum, and Fatimah. ❖ A wealthy merchant of the important Quraysh (or Kuraysh) clan in Arabia, played a critical role in the origin and development of Islam; as Muhammad's 1st wife and the 1st convert to Islam, supported her husband when his revelations began (610), providing him with the material resources to pursue his reflective inclinations, and supporting him emotionally in the early stages of his revelations which gave him the strength and confidence to proclaim his religion's tenets. Her prominent role as Muhammad's beloved wife and supporter suggests that pre-Islamic Arabian women were capable of significantly influencing affairs and events—a point of view that surprises some in the modern West, who hold preconceived notions about the subordinate position of females in Middle Eastern societies and assume that it was always so. ❖ See also Women in World History.

KHAIZARAN (d. 790). Arabian queen. Name variations: Khaizuran; al-Khaizuran. Birth date unknown; died in 790; m. al-Mahdi, 3rd Abbasid caliph of Baghdad (present-day Iraq); children: Musa al-Hadi (4th Abbasid caliph, r. 785–786); Harun al-Rashid also seen as Harun al-Raschid (763/5–809, 5th Abbasid caliph); and a daughter (name unknown); (stepdaughters) Ulayya and Abassa. ❖ A slave girl from Yemen, was 1st noticed by Abu Jafar (known as al-Mansur), 2nd Abbasid caliph of Baghdad, who brought her to the imperial household of his son, al-Mahdi; when al-Mahdi became caliph on death of al-Mansur (775), was freed by him; became extremely powerful, exerting considerable influence over husband; convinced him to place her favorite son Harun first in line of succession over his elder brother Musa; when plan backfired and Musa became caliph, was confined to quarters; made plans with ladies-in-waiting and was possibly involved with Musa's sudden death (786). ❖ See also Women in World History.
