CLEOPATRA (fl. 1st c. BCE). Egyptian physician and author. Fl. in the 1st century BCE. ❖ Is known from references in the work of Galen. Since Galen confused her with Cleopatra VII of Egypt (in fact, crediting the latter as the author of the texts he cites), it is probable that she lived and worked as a medical authority in Alexandria in the 1st century BCE, and that she was associated with the Ptolemaic court. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA I (c. 210–176 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Born c. 210 BCE in Syria; died in 176 BCE; dau. of Antiochus III, a Seleucid king, and his cousin-wife, Laodice III; m. Ptolemy V Epiphanes, king of Egypt, 196 BCE; children: Ptolemy VI Philometor; Cleopatra II (c. 183–116 BCE); Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II. ❖ Betrothed to Ptolemy V Epiphanes, when both were about 14 (196 BCE); married (193) for the benefit of Antiochus who returned Palestine to Ptolemy as her marriage dower (though she, not her husband, controlled the region's revenues until her death); when Ptolemy V died (180), seized the reigns of power and ruled, without male oversight, as the 1st female regent in Ptolemaic history; reigned supreme—coining money in her own name and generally ruling well. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA II (c. 183–116 BCE). Co-ruler of Egypt. Name variations: Cleopatra II Philometor or Philomater (“Mother-loving”). Born c. 183 BCE; died in 116 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy V Epiphanes and Cleopatra I (c. 210–176 BCE); sister of Ptolemy VI Philometor and Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II; m. brother Ptolemy VI Philometor, 176 BCE (died 145 BCE); m. brother Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II, 144 BCE; children: (1st m.) Ptolemy Eupator; Ptolemy VII Neos Philometor; Cleopatra III Euergetis; Cleopatra Thea; (2nd m.) Ptolemy Memphites. ❖ Co-ruler of Egypt (176–130 BCE and 118–116 BCE) and sole ruler of Upper Egypt (130–118 BCE). ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA III (c. 155–101 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Name variations: Cleopatra III Euergetis. Born c. 155 BCE in Egypt; died in 101 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy VI Philometor and Cleopatra II (c. 183–116 BCE); m. her uncle-stepfather Ptolemy VIII Euergetes; children: two sons, Ptolemy IX Philometor Soter II and Ptolemy X Alexander I; three daughters, Cleopatra Selene, Cleopatra IV, and Cleopatra Tryphaena (d. after 112 BCE). ❖ An imperious queen whose career did little to foster the health and well-being of Egypt, had enormous rivalry with her mother. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA IV (c. 135–112 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Born c. 135 BCE; died in 112 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II and Cleopatra III (c. 155–101 BCE); sister of Cleopatra Selene and Cleopatra Tryphaena; m. full brother, Ptolemy IX Philometor Soter II (div. 115 BCE); m. Antiochus IX Philopator Cyzicenus, a Seleucid king, 113 BCE; children: (1st m.) possibly Cleopatra Berenice III. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA V SELENE (c. 40 BCE–?). Queen of Cyrene and Numidia. Name variations: Cleopatra of Cyrene. Born c. 40 BCE; dau. of Cleopatra VII (69–30 BCE, queen of Egypt) and Marc Antony; m. Rome's Mauritanian client king, Juba II, king of Numidia; children: Ptolemy Caesarion. Ruled Cyrene around 33–31 BCE. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA V TRYPHAENA (c. 95–c. 57 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Name variations: Cleopatra VI Tryphaena or Tryphaena. Born c. 95 BCE; died c. 57 BCE; illeg. dau. of Ptolemy IX Philometor Soter II Lathyros of Egypt and an unknown mother; m. possibly full-brother Ptolemy XII Theos Philopator Philadelphus Neos Dionysus, in 80 BCE; children: possibly 2 sons, Ptolemy XIII and Ptolemy XIV; and 3 daughters, Berenice IV (d. 55

CLEOPATRA VI TRYPHAENA

BCE), Arsinoe IV (d. 41 BCE), and Cleopatra VII (69–30 BCE). ❖ Is a shadowy figure throughout most of husband's reign because she maintained a low profile, unlike other women of her line. Since Auletes was a noted womanizer, there is no way to know how many children she had; in lieu of better evidence, it is possible that she was the mother of Cleopatra VII (the identity of whose mother is nowhere revealed), the most famous queen produced by the Ptolemaic dynasty. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA VI TRYPHAENA (c. 95–c. 57 BCE). See Cleopatra V Tryphaena.

CLEOPATRA VII (69–30 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Name variations: sometimes known as Cleopatra VI. Born in 69 BCE; committed suicide, Aug 10, 30 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy XII (king of Egypt) and possibly Cleopatra V Tryphaena (c. 95–c. 57 BCE); sister of Ptolemy XIII, Ptolemy XIV, Berenice IV (d. 55 BCE) and Arsinoe IV (d. 41 BCE); m. brother Ptolemy XIII, in 51 BCE; m. brother Ptolemy XIV, in 47 BCE; children: (with Julius Caesar) Ptolemy XV Caesar (Caesarion); (with Marc Antony) twins Alexander Helios and Cleopatra V Selene (b. around 40 BCE) and another Ptolemy (b. 36 BCE). ❖ A mistress of Julius Caesar and eventual wife of Mark Antony, was the last—but certainly not the least—of the Ptolemaic dynasty to rule Egypt; ascended to the throne (51 BCE) as co-ruler with brother-husband, Ptolemy XIII; became lover of Caesar; was pregnant with Caesar's child and married brother Ptolemy XIV (47 BCE); traveled to Rome to be with Caesar (46 BCE), but remained no more than his mistress at the time of his assassination (44 BCE); returned to Egypt; seeing her salvation in Antony, seduced him; with Antony, was in open war against Octavian, concluding in Octavian's victory (31 BCE); along with Antony, forced into suicide (30 BCE). ❖ See also Michael Grant, Cleopatra (Macmillan, 1974); Jack Lindsay, Cleopatra (Coward, 1970); and Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA BERENICE III (c. 115–80 BCE). Queen of Egypt. Name variations: Berenice III; born Berenice but took the name Cleopatra when she married. Born Berenice around 115 BCE; murdered in 80 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy IX Philometor Soter II Lathyros (meaning Ptolemy the Mother Loving; also known by the population of Alexandria as "Physcon," that is, the "Pot-Bellied") and Cleopatra IV or Cleopatra Selene; m. her uncle Ptolemy X Alexander I, 102 or 101 BCE (died 88 BCE); m. her father Ptolemy IX (died 80 BCE); m. Ptolemy XI Alexander II, in 80 BCE; children: (1st m.) one daughter. ❖ Was one of the most beloved Ptolemies of the last century of that dynasty's rule in Egypt; when her increasing unpopular uncle-husband was at last driven from Egypt and killed (88 BCE), remained so popular that her father Ptolemy IX married her to renew his claim to the Egyptian throne; continued a popular joint rule with father-husband until his death (80 BCE); thereafter, ruled Egypt alone for about 6 months before tradition made her marry yet again; was murdered by last husband (Ptolemy XI) after a marriage of only 19 days (he was then killed by an angry mob). ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA SELENE (c. 130–69 BCE). Queen of Egypt and Syria. Born c. 130 BCE; died in 69 BCE; youngest dau. of Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II and Cleopatra III Euergetis (c. 155–101 BCE) of Egypt; sister of Cleopatra IV (c. 135–112 BCE) and Cleopatra Tryphaena (d. after 112 BCE); m. Ptolemy IX Philometor Soter II, 115 BCE (div. 107 BCE); m. Antiochus VIII Grypus, 103 BCE (killed 96 BCE); m. Antiochus IX Cyzicenus, in 96 BCE (killed 95 BCE); m. Antiochus X Eusebes Philopator; children: (1st m.) probably 2 sons, possibly Cleopatra Berenice III; (3rd m.) 2 sons, including Antiochus XIII Asiaticus. ❖ Began political career as the pawn of her mother, Cleopatra III. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA THEA (c. 165–121 BCE). Queen of Syria. Born c. 165 BCE; died in 121 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy VI and Cleopatra II (c. 183–116 BCE) of Egypt; probably the older sister of Cleopatra III; m. Alexander Balas, pretender to the Seleucid throne (r. 150–145 BCE), 150 BCE (died 145 BCE); m. Demetrius II Nicator, Seleucid king (r. 145–138), 146 BCE (died 125 BCE); m. Antiochus VII Sideres (died 129); children: (1st m.) Antiochus VI Epiphanes; (2nd m.) sons Antiochus VIII Philometor Grypus and Seleucus V, and a daughter Laodice (fl. 129 BCE); (3rd m.) Antiochus IX Philopator Cyzicenus (r. 96–95 BCE). ❖ Renewed the link between Ptolemaic and Seleucid interests; as a result, made her mark in Syria, where she wed 3 Seleucid monarchs in succession. ❖ See also Women in World History.

CLEOPATRA TRYPHAENA (d. after 112 BCE). Queen of Syria. Condemned to death by Antiochus IX Cyzicenus after 112 BCE; dau. of Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II and Cleopatra III Euergetis (c. 155–101 BCE) of Egypt; sister of Cleopatra IV and Cleopatra Selene; m. Antiochus VIII Grypus, Seleucid king (r. 125–96 BCE); children: Seleucus VI and Antiochus X Eusebes Philopator. ❖ See also Women in World History.
