Dedication

To my late father George McDonald (1918–1983) whose love of words both ancient and modern was as fine a legacy as any son could ask for.

Preface

The Oxford Dictionary of Medical Quotations is intended to be a rich source of quotations covering a variety of medically related topics. Those selected have been deliberately kept short in an effort to highlight the pithiest phrase or the sharpest insight. Some are witty, some are maudlin, some merely factual. They have been selected on the basis of their usefulness to modern medical authors, journalists, politicians, nurses, physios, lecturers, and even health managers, who will always have need to season their works with the clever or witty phrases of former colleagues whose intuitions still say as much today as when they were first published. Many reflect the compiler's tastes and prejudices but there will be something for everyone within these pages.

Browsing through many texts to find the most appropriate quotations to include in the Oxford Dictionary of Medical Quotations has afforded an insight into both medical history as well as the nature of the doctors and others who have chiselled these phrases. A glance for the casual reader not looking for a specific quote will be rewarding in itself.

Quotations are listed under author, with an index of keywords that permits the reader to access a number of quotes with the same keyword. Wherever possible, biographical information about the author and whence the quote originated are included, although it is acknowledged that there are several omissions in this regard. When the original source is not clear, the secondary source has been substituted if it was thought useful for further study for the reader. If the quotation was deemed to merit a place in the Dictionary even without full reference being available, it was included. Indeed, it is not necessary for an author to be particularly well known to be in the dictionary if he or she had given birth to a bon mot or a succinct phrase.

The majority of the quotations come from the English-speaking medical worlds of Great Britain, Ireland, and North America but several quotes from other rich medical cultures have been included in translation.

Whether readers are looking for a suitable quotation on surgery, science, kidneys, or kindness, they should find much here to satisfy. Medicine is both the narrowest and broadest of subjects, and I have included examples of both the specific and the general. If I have failed to find that favourite concise quote, please send it fully referenced and it will be included in the next edition. Any corrections of birth dates and deaths will be most welcome and acknowledged in subsequent editions.

How to Use the Dictionary

The sequence of entries is by alphabetical order of author, usually by surname but with occasional exceptions such as imperial or royal titles, authors known by a pseudonym ('Zeta') or a nickname (Caligula). In general authors' names are given in the form by which they are best known, so we have Mark Twain (not Samuel L. Clemens), and T. S. Eliot (not Thomas Stearns Eliot). Collections such as Anonymous, the Bible, the Book of Common Prayer, and so forth, are included in the alphabetical sequence.

Within each author entry, quotations are arranged by alphabetical order of the titles of the works from which they are taken: books, plays, poems. These titles are given in italic type; titles of pieces which comprise part of a published volume or collection (e.g. essays, short stories, poems not published as volumes in their own right) are given in roman type inside inverted commas. For example, Sweeney Agonistes, but 'Fragmert of an Agon'; often the two forms will be found together.

All numbers in source references are given in arabic numerals, with the exception of lower-case roman numerals denoting quotations from prefatory matter, whose page numbering is separate from that of the main text. The numbering itself relates to the beginning of the quotation, whether or not it runs on to another stanza or page in the original. Where possible, chapter numbers have been offered for prose works, since pagination varies from one edition to another. In very long prose works with minimal subdivisions, attempts have been made to provide page references to specified editions.

A date in brackets indicates first publication in volume form of the work cited. Unless otherwise stated, the dates thus offered are intended as chronological guides only and do not necessarily indicate the date of the text cited; where the latter is of significance, this has been stated. Where neither date of publication nor of composition is known, an approximate date (e.g. 'c.1625') indicates the likely date of composition. Where there is a large discrepancy between date of composition (or performance) and of publication, in most cases the former only has been given (e.g. 'written 1725', 'performed 1622').

Spellings have been Anglicized and modernized except in those cases, such as ballads, where this would have been inappropriate; capitalization has been retained only for personifications; with rare exceptions, verse has been aligned with the left hand margin. Italic type has been used for all foreign-language originals.

The Index

Both the keywords and the entries following each keyword, including those in foreign languages, are in strict alphabetical order. Singular and plural nouns (with their possessive forms) are grouped separately: for 'you choose your disease' see 'disease'; for 'coughs and sneezes spread diseases' see 'diseases'. Variant forms of common words (doctor, Dr) are grouped under a single heading: 'doctor'.

The references show the author's name, usually in abbreviated form (SHAK/Shakespeare), followed by the page number.

US journalist and author

Ignorance and credulous hope make the market for most proprietary remedies.

Collier's Weekly 7 October (1905)

With a few honorable exceptions the press of the United States is at the beck and call of the patent medicines. Not only do the newspapers modify news possibly affecting these interests, but they sometimes become their agents.

Collier's Weekly 7 October (1905)

With the exception of lawyers, there is no profession which considers itself above the law so widely as the medical profession.

The Health Master Ch. 1

Medicine would be the ideal profession if it did not involve giving pain.

The Health Master Ch. 3

Any physician who advertises a positive cure for any disease, who issues nostrum testimonials, who sells his services to a secret remedy, or who diagnoses and treats by mail patients he has never seen, is a quack.

The Great American Fraud p. 39. Collier and Sons (1905)

Thomas Addis 1881–1949

US physician, San Francisco

When the patient dies the kidneys may go to the pathologist, but while he lives the urine is ours. It can provide us day by day, month by month, and year by year, with a serial story of the major events going on within the kidney.

Glomerular Nephritis, Diagnosis and Treatment Ch. 1

A clinician is complex. He is part craftsman, part practical scientist, and part historian.

Glomerular Nephritis, Diagnosis and Treatment Ch. 5

Joseph Addison 1672–1719

English literary figure

Physick, for the most part, is nothing else but the Substitute of Exercise or Temperance.

Alexander (III) the Great of Macedon 356–323 BC

I am dying with the help of too many physicians.

Comment on his deathbed

Alexander of Tralles AD 525–605

Greek physician

The physician should look upon the patient as a besieged city and try to rescue him with every means that art and science place at his command.

Sir Thomas Clifford Allbutt 1836–1925

English physician, historian, Professor of Medicine, Cambridge, and inventor of the short thermometer

Lister saw the vast importance of the discoveries of Pasteur. He saw it because he was watching on the heights, and he was watching there alone.

Attributed

Another source of fallacy is the vicious circle of illusions which consists on the one hand of believing what we see, and on the other in seeing what we believe.

Attributed

In science, law is not a rule imposed from without, but an expression of an intrinsic process. The laws of the lawgiver are impotent beside the laws of human nature, as to his disillusion many a lawgiver has discovered.

Attributed

We are led to think of diseases as isolated disturbances in a healthy body, not as the phases of certain periods of bodily development.

Attributed

Thus we work not in the light of public opinion but in the secrecy of the bedchamber; and perhaps the best of us are apt at times to forget the delicacies and sincerities which under these conditions are essential to harmony and honour.

On Professional Education with Special Reference to Medicine

Woody Allen 1935–

US comedian and film director

I am not afraid to die. I just don't want to be there when it happens.

American proverbs

Everybody loves a fat man.

It will never get well if you pick it.

Nobody loves a fat man.

The California climate makes the sick well and the well sick, the old young and the young old.

Henri Amiel 1821–81

Swiss writer and philosopher

Health is the first of all liberties, and happiness gives us the energy which is the basis of health.

Journal Intime 3 April (1865)

Dreams are excursions into the limbo of things, a semi-deliverance from the human prison.

Journal Intime 3 December (1872)

To me the ideal doctor would be a man endowed with profound knowledge of life and of the soul, intuitively divining any suffering or disorder of whatever kind, and restoring peace by his mere presence.

Journal Intime 22 August (1873)

There is no curing a sick man who believes himself to be in health.

Journal Intime 6 February (1877)

To know how to grow old is the master-work of wisdom, and one of the most difficult chapters in the great art of living.

Journal Intime 21 September (1874)

John Allan Dalrymple Anderson

1926–

British pharmacologist

The view that a peptic ulcer may be the hole in a man's stomach through which he crawls to escape from his wife has fairly wide acceptance.

A New Look at Social Medicine. London (1965)

Sir Christopher Andrews 1903–86*Director, World Influenza Centre, London*

Influenza is something unique. It behaves epidemiologically in a way different from that of any other known infection.

Foreword to Influenza: The Last Great Plague, W.I.B. Beveridge. Heinemann, London (1977)

Professor ‘Tommy’ Annandale

1838–1907

Professor of Surgery, Edinburgh

They say it doesn't matter how long one washes one's hands, because there will still be organisms in the sweat glands and hair follicles, so I rub my hands with Vaseline.

An adult is one who has ceased to grow vertically but not horizontally.

A consultant is a man sent in after the battle to bayonet the wounded.

Penguin Dictionary of Modern Humorous Quotations p. 60, Fred Metcalf. Penguin Books, London (2001)

A doctor who cannot take a good history and a patient who cannot give one are in danger of giving and receiving bad treatment.

Clues in the Diagnosis and Treatment of Heart Diseases Introduction, Paul Dudley White

An epidemiologist is a doctor broken down by age and sex.

A faithful friend is the medicine of life.

A fool lives as long as his destiny allows him.

The Sunday Times 15 July 2001, as a phrase of the suicide Svetozar Milošević, father of Slobodan Milošević, President of Serbia on trial for war crimes

A man's liver is his carburettor.

An observant parent's evidence may be disproved but should never be ignored.

Lancet 1: 688 (1951)

A minor operation: one performed on somebody else.

Penguin Dictionary of Modern Humorous Quotations p. 191, Fred Metcalf. Penguin Books, London (2001)

A physician is someone who knows everything and does nothing.

A surgeon is someone who does everything and knows nothing.

A psychiatrist is someone who knows nothing and does nothing.

A pathologist is someone who knows everything and does everything too late.

A surgeon should give as little pain as possible while he is treating the patient, and no pain at all when he charges his fee.

'FRCS' in The Times, quoted by Reginald Pound in Harley Street. Michael Joseph, London (1967)

Abstinence is a good thing, but it should always be practised in moderation.

A rash of dermatologists, a hive of allergists, a scrub of interns, a giggle of nurses, a flood of urologists, a pile of proctologists, an eyeful of ophthalmologists, a whiff of anesthesiologists, a cast of orthopaedic rheumatologists, a gargle of laryngologists.

Asthma is a disease that has practically the same symptoms as passion except that with asthma it lasts longer.

Journal of the American Medical Association 190: 392 (1964)

By the year 2000 the commonest killers such as coronary heart disease, stroke, respiratory, diseases and many cancers will be wiped out.

Irish Times 24 April (1987)

Children are one third of our population and all our future.

US Select Panel for Promotion of Child Health (1981)

Choose your specialist and you choose your disease.

The Westminster Review 18 May (1908)

Coughs and sneezes spread diseases.

British wartime slogan (1942)

Dermatology is the best specialty. The patient never—dies and never gets well.

Medical Quotes, J. Dantith and A. Isaacs. Market House Books, Oxford (1989)

Dr Bell fell down the well
And broke his collar bone
Doctors should attend the sick
And leave the well alone

Doctor says he would be a very sick man if were still alive today.

Even a good operation done poorly is still a poor operation.

Everyone faces at all times two fateful possibilities: one is to grow older, the other not.

Exploratory operation: a remunerative reconnaissance.

Fifty years ago the successful doctor was said to need three things; a top hat to give him Authority, a paunch to give him Dignity, and piles to give him an Anxious Expression.

Lancet 1: 169 (1951)

Get up at five, have lunch at nine,
Supper at five, retire at nine,
And you will live to ninety-nine.

Have faith in the Lord but use sulphur for the itch.

Here lies one who for medicines would not give
A little gold, and so his life he lost;
I fancy now he'd wish again to live,
Could he but guess how much his funeral cost.

Homeopathy waged a war of radicalism against the profession. Very different would have been the profession's attitude toward homeopathy if it had aimed, like other doctrines advanced by physicians, to gain a foothold among medical men alone or chiefly, instead of making its appeal to the popular favour and against the profession.

*Report to the Connecticut Medical Society (1852), quoted by Coulter in *Divided Legacy

If I were summing up the qualities of a good teacher of medicine, I would enumerate human sympathy, moral and intellectual integrity, enthusiasm, and ability to talk, in addition, of course, to knowledge of his subject.

If three simple questions and one well chosen laboratory test lead to an unambiguous diagnosis, why harry the patient with more?

Editorial, Clinical decision by numbers. Lancet 1: 1077 (1975)

If you resolve to give up smoking, drinking and loving, you don't actually live longer; it just seems that way.

In diagnosis, the young are positive and the middle-aged tentative; only the old have flair.

Lancet 1: 795 (1951)

In the nineteenth century men lost their fear of God and acquired a fear of microbes.

It is better to employ a doubtful remedy than to condemn the patient to a certain death.

It is not what disease the patient has but which patient has the disease.

Late children, early orphans.

Let out the blood, let out the disease.

Popular aphorism for hundreds of years until the end of the nineteenth century

Man has an inalienable right to die of something.

Quoted by A.V. Neale in The Advancement of Child Health

No woman wants an abortion. Either she wants a child or she wishes to avoid pregnancy.

Letter to the Lancet

Palliative care should not be associated exclusively with terminal care. Many patients need it early in the course of their disease.

Report of the Expert Advisory Group on Cancer to the Chief Medical Officers of England and Wales, Calman-Hine (1995)

Parenthood is the only profession that has been left exclusively to amateurs.

Patients and their families will forgive you for wrong diagnoses, but will rarely forgive you for wrong prognoses; the older you grow in medicine, the more chary you get about offering iron clad prognoses, good or bad.

David Seegal Journal of Chronic Diseases 16: 443 (1963)

Physicians and politicians resemble one another in this respect, that some defend the constitution and others destroy it.

Action or the Circle of Life

Physicians are rather like undescended testicles, they are difficult to locate and when they are found, they are pretty ineffective.

Book of Humorous Medical Anecdotes p. 47. Springwood Books, Ascot, Berkshire, UK (1989)

Poverty is a virtue greatly exaggerated by physicians no longer forced to practise it.

The new definition of psychiatry is the care of the id by the odd.

The principal objection to old age is that there is no future in it.

The psychiatrist is the obstetrician of the mind.

The publication of a long list of authors' names after the title is a little like having all a vessel's ballast hanging from the masthead, as if to counterbalance the barnacles.

New England Journal of Medicine 271: 1068 (1964)

The reason that academic disputes are so bitter is that the stakes are so small.

There are two kinds of sleep. The sleep of the just and the sleep of the just after.

There is no bed shortage – most people have their own.

Capital Doctor Issue 5, December (2000)

There is no short cut from chemical laboratory to clinic, except one that passes too close to the morgue.

American Medical Association (1929) as quoted in Cured to Death, Arabella Melville and Colin Johnson. Secker and Warburg Ltd, London (1982)

The sick are still in General Mixed Workhouses—the maternity cases, the cancerous, the venereal, the chronically infirm, and even the infectious, all together in one building, often in the same ward where they cannot be treated.

The Failure of the Poor Law, UK National Committee to Promote the Break-up of the Poor Laws (1909)

The spine is a series of bones running down your back. You sit on one end of it and your head sits on the other.

The wound is granulating well, the matter formed is diminishing in quantity and is laudable. But the wound is still deep and must be dressed from the bottom to ensure sound healing.

They have no physicians, but when a man is ill they lay him in the public square, and the passersby come up to him, and if they have ever had his disease themselves or have known anyone who has suffered from it, they give him advice, recommending to do whatever they found good in their own case, or in the case known to them. And no-one is allowed to pass the sick man in silence without asking him what his ailment is.

Medicine with them is distributed in the following way; every physician is for one disease and not for several, and the whole country is full of physicians of the eyes; others of the head; others of the teeth; others of the belly; and others of obscure diseases.

Aphorisms I

Extreme remedies are most appropriate for extreme diseases.

Aphorisms I

When sleep puts an end to delirium, it is a good symptom.

Aphorisms II.2

Drinking strong wine cures hunger.

Aphorisms II.21 (transl. Francis Adams)

It is better that a fever succeed to a convulsion, than a convulsion to a fever.

Aphorisms II.26

When a person who is recovering from a disease has a good appetite, but his body does not improve in conditions, it is a bad symptom.

Aphorisms II.31 (transl. Francis Adams)

Sleep and watchfulness, both of them, when immoderate, constitute disease.

Aphorisms II

Old people, on the whole, have fewer complaints than young; but those chronic diseases which do befall them generally never leave them.

Aphorisms II.39

Persons who have had frequent and severe attacks of swooning, without any manifest cause, die suddenly.

Aphorisms II.41

Persons who are naturally very fat are apt to die earlier than those who are slender.

Aphorisms II.44

Sneezing coming on, in the case of a person afflicted with hiccup, removes the hiccup.

Aphorisms VI.13

Opposites are cures for opposites.

Breaths I

Science is the father of knowledge, but opinion breeds ignorance.

The Canon Law IV

In order to prognosticate correctly who will recover and who will die, in whom the days will be long, in whom short, one must know all the symptoms, and must weigh their relative value.

Corpus Hippocraticum

He who desires to practice surgery must go to war.

Corpus Hippocraticum

A great part, I believe, of the Art is to be able to observe.

Corpus Hippocraticum

Leave nothing to chance, overlook nothing; combine contradictory observations and allow yourself enough time.

Corpus Hippocraticum

I will not use the knife, not even on the sufferers from stone, but will withdraw in favour of such men as are engaged in this work.

Corpus Hippocraticum

As to diseases, make a habit of two things; to help or at least not to harm.

Corpus Hippocraticum

A physician who is a lover of wisdom is the equal to a god.

Decorum, V

Foolish the doctor who despises the knowledge acquired by the ancients.

Entering the world (M. Odent)

Use strengthens, disuse debilitates.

In the Surgery XX (transl. E. T. Witherington)

And whatsoever I shall see or hear in the course of my profession, as well as outside my profession in my intercourse with men, if it be what should not be published abroad, I will never divulge holding such things to be holy secret.

The Hippocratic Oath

Declare the past, diagnose the present, foretell the future.

Epidemics

The art has three factors, the disease, the patient, and the physician. The physician is the servant of the art. The patient must co-operate with the physician in combating the disease.

Epidemics I

Natural forces are the healers of disease.

Epidemics VI

The wasting of the brain which leads to baldness.

Epidemics VI.iii.1

What drugs fail to cure, that the knife cures not, that the fire cures; this must be called incurable.

The Oath (transl. Edelstein)

I will neither give a deadly drug to anybody if asked for it, nor will I make a suggestion to this effect.

The Oath

Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes a matter of opportunity.

Precepts 1

So do not concentrate your attention on fixing what your fee is to be. A worry of this nature is likely to harm the patient, particularly if the disease be an acute one. Hold fast to reputation rather than profit.

Precepts 1

Whenever therefore a man suffers from an ill which is too strong for the means at the disposal of medicine, he surely must not even expect that it can be overcome by medicine.

The Art VIII

Sometimes give your services for nothing. And if there be an opportunity of serving one who is a stranger in financial straits, give full assistance to all such. For where there is love of man, there is also love of the art.

The Art VI

Physicians who meet in consultation must never quarrel, or jeer at one another.

The Art VIII

Fat people who want to reduce should take their exercise on an empty stomach and sit down to their food out of breath . . . Thin people who want to get fat should do exactly the opposite and never take exercise on an empty stomach.

A Regimen for Health IV (transl. John Chadwick and W.N. Mann)

A wise man ought to realise that health is his most valuable possession.

A Regimen for Health IX (transl. John Chadwick and W.N. Mann)

The physician must have a worthy appearance; he should look healthy and be well-nourished, appropriate to his physique; for most people are of the opinion that those physicians who are not tidy in their own persons cannot look after others well.

The art of healing comes from nature not from the physician. Therefore the physician must start from nature, with an open mind.

Seven Defenses Ch. 4

There are two kinds of physician—those who work for love, and those who work for their own profit.

Seven Defenses Ch. 5

The physician is only the servant of nature, not her master. Therefore it behoves medicine to follow the will of nature.

Nurses and doctors who accompany patients on their final journey out of this life observe many ways of dying and many mechanisms of death. Some of these we understand to a greater extent than others.

Foreword in Atlas of Nutritional Support Techniques. Little, Brown and Co., Boston (1989)

One of the common mechanisms has been the accumulation of nutritional deficits leading very often to a loss of resistance to infection and the occurrence of an acute infection, such as pneumonia as the immediate prelude to death.

Modern medicine is one of those extraordinary works of reason: an elaborate system of specialised knowledge, technical procedures, and rules of behaviour.

The Social Transformation of American Medicine Introduction, p. 3, Paul Starr. Basic Books, New York (1982)

The medical profession has had an especially persuasive claim to authority. Unlike the law and the clergy, it enjoys close bonds with modern science, and at least for most of the last century, scientific knowledge has held a privileged status in the hierarchy of belief.

The Social Transformation of American Medicine Introduction, p. 4, Paul Starr. Basic Books, New York (1982)

But medicine is also, unmistakably, a world of power where some are more likely to receive the rewards of reason than are the others.

In America, no one group has held so dominant a position in this new world of rationality and power as has the medical profession.

The Social Transformation of American Medicine Introduction, p. 3, Paul Starr. Basic Books, New York (1982)

If the medical profession were merely a monopolistic guild, its position would be much less secure than it is. The basis of its high income and status, as I have argued all along, is its authority, which arises from lay deference and institutionalized forms of dependence.

The Social Transformation of American Medicine Introduction, p. 447, Paul Starr. Basic Books, New York (1982)

A corporate sector in health care is also likely to aggravate inequalities in access to health care. Profit-making enterprises are not interested in treating those who cannot pay. The voluntary hospital may not treat the poor the same as the rich, but they do treat them and often treat them well.

It is the special vocation of the doctor to grow familiar with suffering.

Motto on the seal of the New Jersey College

George F. I. Widal 1862–1929*Professor of medicine, Paris*

I want to get a job where I can learn something of general medicine; the neurologists just talk and do nothing.

Personal reply to Clovis Vincent, famous neurosurgeon

Samuel Wilberforce 1805–73*British churchman*

I would like to ask the gentleman . . . whether the ape from which he is descended was on his grandmother's or his grandfather's side of the family.

British Association for the Advancement of Science, Oxford, 30 June (1860)

Aaron Wildavsky*Contemporary US health economist*

The marginal value of one or one billion-dollars spent on medical care will be close to zero in improving health.

Doing Better and Feeling Worse, The Political Pathology of Health Policy p. 106. Daedulus Winter (1977)

Oscar Wilde 1854–1900*Irish writer and wit*

Illness is hardly a thing to be encouraged in others. Health is the primary duty of life.

The Importance of Being Earnest Act 1

One can survive everything nowadays, except death.

A Woman of No Importance I

Ah well, I suppose I shall have to die beyond my means.

Attributed

Heredity is the last of the fates, and the most terrible.

Attributed

Sir William Wilde 1815–76*ENT surgeon and father of Oscar*

There are two kinds of deafness. One is due to wax and is curable; the other is not due to wax and is not curable.

Attributed

Thornton Niven Wilder 1897–?US author and playwright

Doctors are mostly impostors. The older a doctor is and the more venerated he is, the more he must pretend to know everything. Of course, they grow worse with time. Always look for a doctor who is hated by the best doctors. Always seek out a bright young doctor before he comes down with nonsense.

John Wilkes 1727–97*English politician*

The chapter of accidents is the longest chapter in the book.

Attributed in The Doctor (Southey) Vol. IV

Wendell L. Wilkie 1892–1944

The real public health problem, of course, is poverty.

One World Ch. 2

George Wilkins 17th century*English dramatist*

Drinke makes men hungry, or it makes them lie.

The Miseries of Inforced Marriage Act II

Christopher Williams 1938–Gastroenterologist, St. Mark's Hospital, London

Children are not little adults but paediatricians are.

Quoting a Belgium professor 14 May (2000)

Guy Williams 1930–English historical writer

Death from the bubonic plague is rated, with crucifixion, among the nastiest human experiences of all.

The Age of Agony p. 68, Guy Williams. Constable and Co. Ltd, London (1975)

Leonard Williams 1861–1939*Harley Street physician and author*

The crime of our civilisation is gluttony.

Attributed

John Wilson (Christopher North)

1785–1854

Scottish poet, essayist and critic.

Doctors are generally dull dogs.

Attributed

John Rowan Wilson 1919–UK surgeon and novelist

I've always said that the most useful equipment for a successful surgeon is a pessimistic pathologist.

Hall of Mirrors Pt III, Ch. 7

Maxwell Wintrobe 1901–86*US professor of internal medicine and haematologist*

The study of blood has a long history.

Humankind probably always has been interested in the blood because it is likely that even primitive peoples realized that loss of blood, if sufficiently great, was associated with death.

Introduction to Wintrobe's Clinical Hematology. Williams and Wilkins, Baltimore, USA (1999)

William Withering 1741–99*English physician and discoverer of digitalis*

The foxglove's leaves with caution given,

Another proof of favouring Heav'n

Will happily display;

The rapid pulse it can abate;

The hectic flush can moderate

And, blest by Him whose will is fate,

May give a lengthen'd day.

Botany

It is much easier to write upon a disease than upon a remedy.

Attributed

Poisons in small doses are the best medicines; and useful medicines in too large doses are poisonous.

Attributed

P. G. Wodehouse 1881–1975*British-born US based humorist*

There is only one cure for grey hair. It was invented by a Frenchman. It is called the guillotine.

The Old Reliable

Humbert Wolfe 1885–1940*English poet and critic*

The doctors are a frightful race.

I can't see how they have the face to go on practising their base

profession; but in any case

I mean to put them in their place.

Cursory Rhymes 'Poems Against Doctors' I

Paul Hamilton Wood 1907–62*British cardiologist, London*

The best history taker is he who can best interpret the answer to a leading question.

Diseases of the Heart and Circulation (1950)

Virginia Woolf 1882–1941*British writer*

... strange indeed that illness has not taken its place with love and battle and jealousy among the prime themes of literature.

The Moment and Other Essays 'On being ill'

I am certain now that I am going mad again. It is just as it was the first time, I am always hearing voices.

Letter to her sister just before she killed herself in March 1941

World Medical Association

I will maintain the utmost respect for human life from the time of conception.

Declaration of Geneva (1948)

If at all possible, consistent with patient psychology, the doctor should obtain the patient's freely given consent after the patient has been given a full explanation.

Declaration of Helsinki (1964)

Almroth Wright 1861–1947

British immunologist, St. Mary's Hospital, London

Microbial infections are conveniently divided into septicaemias and intoxications. In the case of the former the bacteria multiply freely in the blood and produce their poisons there. In the latter case the micro-organisms do not proliferate in the blood.

British Medical Journal i: 227 (1893)

Frank Lloyd Wright 1867–1959

US architect

The physician can bury his mistakes, but the architect can only advise his client to plant vines.

New York Times Magazine 4 October (1953)

Carl August Wunderlich 1815–77

German Professor of Medicine, Leipzig

Latter-day medicine recognises its tasks and its duties as part of the immeasurably extensive and sublime science of nature. We know in addition that genuine facts and trustworthy data are solely attainable by means of the strictest attention to the methods of investigation and through continually bearing in mind the possible sources of fallacy.

Vienna and Paris Concluding paragraphs (1866)

A knowledge of the course of temperature in disease is indispensable to medical practitioners. The temperature can neither be feigned nor falsified.

The doctor says there is no hope, and as he does the killing he ought to know.

El Triunfo del Amor y de la Amistad II. 8

Zeno of Elea 5th century BC

Nature has given man one tongue, but two ears, that we may hear twice as much as we speak.

Fragments VI

Zeta (Sir (Vincent) Zachary Cope 1884–1974)

Surgeon, St. Mary's Hospital, London

The diagnostic problem of to-day
Has greatly changed—the change has come to stay;

We all have to confess, though with a sigh
On complicated tests we much rely
And use too little hand and ear and eye.

The Acute Abdomen in Rhyme Preface. H. K. Lewis (1949)

Acute abdominal disease

Is sometimes diagnosed with ease
But oft the best attempts will meet
With sad and sorrowful defeat.

The Acute Abdomen in Rhyme p. 4 Preface. H. K. Lewis (1949)

Not every acute abdomen requires
Immediate operation for its cure
And each good surgeon eagerly desires
To make the needs for operation fewer.

The Acute Abdomen in Rhyme p. 88 Preface. H. K. Lewis, London (1949)

Hans Zinsser 1878–1940

US bacteriologist

To the average professional officer, the military doctor is an unwillingly tolerated noncombatant who takes sick call, gives cathartic pills, makes transportation troubles, complicates tactical plans, and causes the water to smell bad.
